Earth, wind and fire

Midland firefighters overcome wind and smoke in extinguishing a grass fire along the railroad right of way in the 2800 block of West Front Avenue at mid-afternoon Friday. Firemen responded to five grass fires Friday, when winds were gusting up to 41 mph, blowing dust and increasing fire hazards.

Reagan denies 'disarray'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan declared Friday that his administration is not in disarray and said the problem is not in the White House, but "in those stories that seem to be going around" that portray him as foundering.

Reagan, who began with his week with an order barring his own staff from leaking information, ended it by insisting to the press corps and a national broadcast audience that "I make the decisions."

Reports about mid-term changes in policy and disorganization in completing the budget "are not based on fact," he said.

"I do not believe that philosophically I have changed at all. This has been very inaccurate," the president said during a quickly scheduled 15-minute visit to the White House press room. The session was carried live by all major networks.

The president's remarks followed a spate of editorials, columns and front-page stories picturing the White House in confusion as Reagan tries to cope with questions over the budget, the deficit, taxes and Social Security; a sudden shakeup of his arms negotiating team, and the departure of two Cabinet members to private jobs.

"Our allies should not, from the things that they read, be concerned about whether we're lacking in determination or whether we are indeed in disarray," Reagan said. "We are not."

Reagan opened his visit with remarks about arms control, saying:

"There has been such disarray, approaching chaos, in the press corps with regard to the subject of arms control that I thought before you unraveled into complete disorder that maybe we should straigten out the entire subject."

But, asked about reports of disarray within the White House, Reagan said "that's why I came in, to point out to you accurately where the disarray lies. It's in those stories that seem to be going around. They are not based on fact."

He said that he asks for "differing viewpoints on things. But then I make the decisions. This has been working very well and we've had a very heavy agenda for the last few weeks. We've been working long hours on a number of things that are before us here."

He complained that he asks for "the widest range of options" and then finds them "announced as rumored that I have made decisions."

"The leaks have been very inaccurate," he said.

His spokesman, Larry Speakes, the chief deputy White House press secretary, had other words for reports of disarray.

"Untrue. Foolishness. Misconceived," he said earlier.

"Poppycock?" suggested a reporter. "Poppycock," Speakes replied, adding that he thought one report was prompting the next, becoming, in his phrase, "journalistic spinoffs."

But the problem came up in a meeting with Reagan on Thursday, the spokesman acknowledged.

He said Reagan was "not at all" frustrated by the problems he is facing.

Throughout the week, the president has been showing some sensitivity in the wake of public criticism.

The New York Times began an editorial on Sunday by saying "The stench of failure hangs over Ronald Reagan's White House."

Midlanders among Texans 'calling' bingo

To play or not to play bingo may be decided today, as Midlanders cast ballots on whether or not to legalize bingo for charitable purposes in Midland County.

If approved by the electorate under the state's Bingo Enabling Act, bingo could be operated by non-profit ogranizations licensed by the State Comptroller Office. Net proceeds would go charities.

Polls will be open today from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Midland isn't alone in making its decision. Voters in 24 other Texas jurisdictions go to the polls today to decide whether bingo games will be legal in their county, city or precinct.

The 1981 Legislature approved bingo on a local-option basis. Elections are held if enough residents sign a petition. If approved by voters, bingo can be played only to benefit charitable organizations.

Since January 1982, there have been 306 bingo elections, says state Comptroller Bob Bullock. He said his office had issued 2,132 bingo licenses as of this week.

Voters will go to the polls in the counties of Culberson, Franklin, Hall, Midland, Parker and Somervell; the cities of Plano, Lucas, Denton, Lake Dallas, South Houston and San Angelo and in justice precincts in 13 other counties.

Midland's 13 polling places, preceded by the voting precinct numbers which appear on voters' registration cards, are:

Regents approve area health center

From Staff Reports

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech Regents on Friday approved varying phases of proposed building projects to serve expanding programs, including construction of a planned regional academic health center in Odessa.

The regents voted to proceed with the renovation and building program which could cost more than $28.6 million with about $20.7 million earmarked for TTU Health Sciences Center facilities in Lubbock, Amarillo and the Permian Basin.

With board approval, planning will move forward on $20.3 million in projects for which funding is sought from the 68th Legislature.

The Permian Basin request will be for $4.5 million to construct the first phase of a regional academic health center building on land deeded by Ector County and the city of Odessa in 1981. The 35,000 square foot building will provide academic quarters for programs planned by Tech schools of medicine and allied health.

The concept for a regional health center was started in the mid-1970s with a Carnegie Foundation study which recommended medical schools get in touch with communities and provide those areas with new resources. Texas Tech School of Medicine planned to set up four centers: Lubbock, El Paso, Amarillo and the Permian Basin. The only one not in operation is the Permian Basin center.

Five years ago Odessa was selected as the site for the health center, winning out over Midland, Big Spring and Andrews. It had been a major battle primarily between Midland and Odessa.

Representatives from Midland had cited $1 million that would be raised for stipends for residents, scholarships and lectureships, and a commitment of $3 million from the city's lending institutions so that construction could start at once on the facility.

Odessa had said it had 6.1 acres of land available adjoining Medical Center Hospital and about 1,200 indigent patients a year.

But during the 1979 session of the State Legislature, $1.9 million requested for constructing the facility was deleted from the budget.

Then in June 1981, Gov. Bill Clements approved funding the residency program.

The action Friday by regents is another step in the long process of trying to obtain construction funds.

White finds TV stations reluctant to air his ads

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov.-elect Mark White has run into some snags in his attempt to buy television ads to "mobilize" public support for utility regulation reform.

Some television executives have expressed reluctance to run the ads, in which White will ask Texans to contact legislators to support revamping of utility regulation.

Betsy Todd of GSD&M advertising agency in Austin, which is handling the ad campaign, said Friday the ads would show only White.

"We were trying to get them on the air Jan. 20. I don't think that's going to happen," she said, referring to television stations' reluctance to accept them.

"The reason he is doing them is he wants to take his message on utility policy to the people of Texas," she said. "It's not an attack on anybody. It's very positive."

White used utility regulation reform as a major plank in his campaign platform.

"This is the first time a governor has requested to purchase time to talk to the people about legislative issues. I don't think it will be the last time," said Ms. Todd.

The ads will be financed by White's campaign committee, she said.

The Texas Association of Broadcasters, in a release to its members, said it checked with the Federal Communications Commission for an opinion on the White ads.

The federal officials said the ads would not be "political time" entitled to the lowest rates charged by a station, according to TAB.

"However, the content may be such that you will face a possible Fairness Doctrine situation and requests for time to respond. And, of course, you do not have to carry the spots at all if you do not wish to do so," the TAB said.

Ms. Todd acknowledged the ads would be in a "very gray" area of laws regulating political and issue-type ads.

"There is some resistance from some of the stations," she said.

Charlie King, advertising manager for KTBC-TV Austin, said Friday the White ads are a "strange animal."

"It doesn't come under anything I've dealt with before," he said. "It's like an issue ad ... but people don't come to the polls and vote on it."

King said the station's lawyers were researching the matter.

Spokesmen for several utility companies said they would not decide whether to respond to the White ads until they saw them.

"We have some concern about it," said Jim Parsons, vice president for public affairs at Houston Lighting & Power.

"We would have to wait and see what he's going to put on. We have always been in favor of an open forum discussion of utility regulation," said Joe McNamara, Southwestern Bell public relations official.

Ann Arnold, White's press secretary, said the ads would "lay out some proposals and urge the public to express their concerns about utility problems and about seeing that something is done."

"He doesn't intend to take office and sit back and wait for something to happen on this issue," she said.

Mrs. Arnold said Friday the ad campaign — if it gets off the ground — would open with a news conference here.

"The reason we are purchasing time on television is to be able to mobilize public support to get action on the changes in public utility policy that Mark thinks are important," she said.

"You seek to spread that message with the normal news media. To mobilize a lot of public support quickly it's helpful to be able to reach people through broadcast outlets," she said.

Water, aliens among challenges

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Water, transportation and relations with Mexico are major challenges facing Texans as the energy industry becomes less important and manufacturing more critical to the state's economy over the next two decades, a business expert said Friday.

Dr. Victor Arnold, director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research, reported on trends and forecasts based on the Texas 2000 study he headed and on data gathered by the university's Institute of Constructive Capitalism.

Talks by former Gov. John Connally and Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger are highlights of Saturday's concluding program of the 1983 Texas Lyceum.

The organization, designed as a think tank of young Texans, was founded in 1980 by the Texas Lyceum Association, Texas Business Magazine and the University of Texas Graduate School of Business.

Arnold told about 300 delegates that water use by the turn of the century, projected to be 21.6 million acre feet, could exceed dependable supplies in Texas by 2.5 million acre feet, even with cutbacks in irrigation, and by 8.5 million acre feet if irrigation demand is met.

At the same time, he projected vehicular traffic would more than double in Texas by the year 2000, while highway, rail and waterway maintenance is not keeping pace with the increased use and need.

"Changing economic and demographic conditions — the rising costs of inputs to the transportation such as fuel and materials, pollution, expansion of freight service to meet the needs of a growing economy, 8 million more Texans by the year 2000, and increased population densities — will severely tax the transportation system," the report said.

Arnold also said Texas' economy is closely linked to happenings in Mexico, where population is expected to double by the year 2000 and agriculture productivity is declining rapidly.

He projected the natural resource portion of Texas' gross state product — agriculture and energy combined — will decline from 18.3 percent in 1981 to 5.7 percent in 2006.

During the same period, his study predicts the largest increase in the percentages of economic output for the rest of the 20th century will come in manufacturing.

By 2006, Arnold predicted, construction and private servies will make up 57.3 percent and manufacturing will produce 25.2 percent of the gross state product.

Also appearing on Friday's program were Mayor Henry Cisneros, former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Texas Business publisher E.J. Martin, pollster Lance Tarrance Jr, oilmen Wales Madden Jr. and George Mitchell, and Tony Bonilla, national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Bonilla looked out into the audience and said he saw not many women, few Hispanics and even fewer blacks taking part in the "Texas in Transition" discussion, although he contended minorities provided the electoral edge in November to put Gov.-elect Mark White into office.

"Let us share with you the unfullfilled dream of greatness of this state and its people," Bonilla said.

Sims will co-sponsor funding bill

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Sen. Bill Sims of San Angelo says he is co-sponsoring a proposed constitutional amendment which lawmakers hope will resolve the controversial college funding issue.

The bill would make the University of Texas at the Permian Basin and other UT System schools eligible for increased proceeds from the Permanent University Fund.

SJR 4 also seeks a guaranteed annual $125 million appropriation divided among 17 state universities, which saw their constitutionally-dedicated fund eliminated last year when voters repealed the state property tax.

The repeal sparked renewed interest in dividing the PUF, which currently funds the University of Texas and A&M University Systems, according to Sims' ofice.

Sen. Carl Parker of Port Arthur, who chairs the Senate Education Committee, is sposoring SJR 4.

Sims, who serves on the committee, said he decided to co-sponsor the resolution after talking with the presidents of Angelo State University and Sul Ross State University, two of the 17 institutions which would share $125 millin if the measure is approved by the Legislature and voters.

The proposed amendment would face voter approval in November if it is approved by lawmakers.

Trial moved to Midland

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — A San Angelo district judge has signed a change-of-venue order moving a Lubbock man's second capital murder trial to Midland.

Clarence Allen Lackey will be tried a second time in Midland for the July 1977 murder and sexual assault of Texas Tech University student Diane Kumph.

State District Judge Royal Hart approved Thursday the change of venue request from Lackey's defense attorney, Jack Stoffreten. The date of the new trial has not yet been set.

In February 1978, after a lengthy trial that was moved from Lubbock to San Angelo, a Tom Green County jury sentenced Lackey to die.

In September, Lackey's capital murder conviction was thrown out by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, which ruled a potential juror had been improperly excused by the court.

Baytown boy gored to death

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — A 16-year-old high school sophomore gored to death by a 1,700-pound Brangus bull was described Friday as a "ball of fire" who had a "want and a yearn" to ride bulls.

"He had a lot of ability," said Johnny Ludtke, owner of the feed store where the Baytown teen-ager worked. "More than anything else was just the want to do it. You know how some people are."

Peter J. Belknap Jr. was pronounced dead at Bayshore Hospital at 11:06 p.m. Thursday after being injured about 10:15 p.m., police Sgt. O.J. Miller said.

"The bull bucked him off. The bull then hooked him in the side, causing a large laceration," Miller said. "As far as I know, this is the first serious incident they've had at the rodeo arena."

Ludtke said the boy's weight and the force of him coming down across the bull's horn punctured the teen-ager's side.

Attorney says judge lacks jurisdiction in old Mexico-Texas land dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lawyer for the Mexican government has cautioned a U.S. District Court judge not to "move into a diplomatic thicket" by trying to force Mexico to pay $1 billion to descendants of former Texas landowners who lost their land.

"It just isn't wise on balance for our courts to question the acts of a foreign government that take place in a foreign jurisdiction," John H. Shenefield told Judge Thomas F. Hogan on Thursday.

Shenefield asked Hogan to dismiss a suit that revives a century-old battle over 12 million acres of Texas land taken in the late 1800s from its original settlers.

Mexico agreed in 1941 to compensate descendants of the landowners for their loss, but the descendants say no payment has been made.

"Your honor, we have waited 42 years," Vicki Jackson, an attorney for the descendants, told Hogan. "There are some reasonable limits."

After two hours of arguments witnessed by nearly 100 of the descendants, Hogan gave both sides two weeks to file additional comments.

Robert Salazar, another lawyer for the descendants, said that though 2,500 heirs have been identified, more than 20,000 could eventually benefit from a settlement.

Among those at the hearing was Artemio Torres, 53, of Corpus Christi, who said he was seeking payment for hundreds of thousands of acres once owned by his ancestors in the Nacogdoges and San Antonio areas.

Torres said he thinks Mexico's current economic problems "would make it difficult" for the Mexican government to pay the claims. But he said, "At least maybe they will come up with a set date that they'll settle this."

Al Rodriguez, 48, of Houston, who is seeking payment for 5,700 acres, said the Mexican government could afford to pay and "they should have done it 42 years ago."

Most of the 12 million acres is located between the Nueces and Rio Grande rivers in south Texas, and was deeded by the Mexican and Spanish governments to settlers in the 1600s and 1700s. Texas won independence from Mexico in 1836 and was an independent republic until 1845, when it became a state.

When Mexico officially dropped its claims to Texas territory in an 1848 treaty with the United States, American officials agreed to honor the settlers' claims to the land.

But the original occupants were driven off over the next several decades, largely by Anglo-American settlers, the descendants say.

Mexico tried to get the United States to return or pay compensation for the land, then in 1941 agreed to settle the claims itself if the United States would settle certain claims against Mexico.

But descendants say Mexico never paid, and in 1981 they filed suit here seeking to force a $1 billion settlement.

Shenefield told Hogan that the Mexican government "feels a responsibility to these claimants."

But he said the only legal question at issue was whether the District Court had jurisdiction under a 1977 law spelling out the circumstances under which U.S. courts can handle claims against foreign governments.

Shenefield argued that under that law, Hogan has no such jurisdiction.

"There's no question in my mind that they (the descendants) have not been treated as they should be," Hogan commented.

Judge denies Autry stay of execution

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A federal judge Friday set aside a stay of execution for condemned killer James Autry and cleared the way for a state judge to schedule another execution date.

U.S. District Judge Robert Parker, in a lengthy opinion, said he had reviewed the arguments outlined in the Death Row inmate's appeal and "found them to be without merit."

The ruling permits state District Judge Leonard Giblin, who presided at Autry's capital murder trial in October 1980, to schedule another execution. Autry could be put to death 31 days later.

Giblin said he would meet with prosecutors and defense attorneys later to discuss the matter.

The inmate's attorney, Charles Carver, said he "wasn't totally surprised" by the judge's decision and vowed to appeal.

Autry, 28, of Port Arthur, was convicted of killing convenience store clerk Shirley Drouet during an April 1980 robbery. He was ordered to die by injection Dec. 17, but Parker granted a stay of execution until he could hear arguments in the case.

Autry was to have been the second man put to death in Texas under a revised death penalty statute.

Charlie Brooks Jr. died Dec. 7 in the Texas death house in Huntsville. Three other Death Row inmates are scheduled to die between Jan. 25 and March 10.

Autry's attorney, Charles Carver, argued in hearings last week that an oral confession overheard by a police officer was tainted. Parker ruled the confession was admissible.

Carver also claimed his client's defense was deprived of the testimony of John Alton Sandifer because the state threatened to try him for capital murder. Sandifer was with Autry when Mrs. Drouet, 43, and customer Joseph Broussard were killed.

Sandifer's attorney, Ronald Piessala, said his client never was granted immunity from prosecution on capital murder charges and could still be reindicted and tried.

Autry's attorneys had asked Parker to grant Sandifer immunity from prosecution so he would testifiy about the slayings.

Parker refused the immunity request, saying "an accused has no constitutional right to, and the court has not power to, order use immunity for a witness, the discretion being soley with the prosecution."

Sandifer, along with Autry, was indicted for capital murder in the slayings of Mrs. Drouet and Broussard.

But Sandifer pleaded guilty to an unrelated burglary charge and is serving a seven-year sentence. He refused to testify at Autry's trial, again citing his 5th Amendment privilege.

But a statement he gave to police after Autry's arrest said the pair took a six-pack of beer to the store counter and were told the price was $2.70.

"James pulled a gun from somewhere and said, 'Here's your $2.70,'" the statement said.

Social Security reformers get more time

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan offered the National Commission on Social Security Reform "a few more days" on Friday to come up with a rescue plan for the retirement system, saying it was still struggling over choices between higher taxes and reduced benefits.

But the commission's chairman, Republican economist Alan Greenspan, said that talks scheduled with White House officials on Saturday, the day the panel is scheduled to expire, is still likely to prove an all-or-nothing showdown.

Greenspan, in a telephone interview from New York, said that session looms as "a critical one...it just doesn't strike me as feasible to go on negotiating" beyond that.

But he said the panel's staff may need a "technical" extension until Thursday to wrap up the details of producing the panel's final report.

Reagan refused, meanwhile, to commit himself on recommendations said to be in the works. They would freeze this July's cost-of-living increase for six months, raise the payroll tax and make half of the benefits taxable for middle- and upper-income retirees.

The package would generate new revenues or savings for Social Security to the tune of $168 billion between now and 1990, which is within the range the commission set for its target. Most of the money would come in the form of higher payroll or income taxes, and some would come indirectly from the general treasury.

Greenspan, in an earlier interview, expressed optimism that a majority of the commission could support a compromise. But he said, "There's no way to get (all) 15 members of this commission on any single package."

Reagan renewed his oft-repeated promise not to cut existing Social Security benefits. "I've said it over and over again, but somehow it does not get as much attention as the lies that have been told by those who want to portray us as somehow out to destroy Social Security," he said.

White House Chief of Staff James Baker III, budget director David Stockman and presidential aide Richard Darman have been conducting the talks with Greenspan, former Social Security Commissioner Robert M. Ball and congressional leaders on the commission.

Baker said publicly for the first time Thursday that Reagan may be willing to support a speed-up of payroll tax hikes already scheduled between now and 1990 if they are "tied to reforms on the spending side."

Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., said Friday that he thinks the package Baker has discussed with commission leaders will not prevail.

"History may well show even as we sit here and talk that the deal is made, that the package is set in cement, and that I'm nuts, but I'm going to guess that history will not show that...." he said in an interview. "There's quite a gap to be bridged before we're ready to put it together."

Armstrong and five other conservatives on the panel began their own campaign Thursday to head off any higher taxes.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., told the White House that he could not support the six-month benefit freeze unless a provision to increase the penalty for early retirement in the next century was dropped.

Reagan told his news conference that if the panel needs "a few more days before they come to such a decision, then we'll give them those few more days.

"But whatever time this takes, we must resolve this problem. I know that some of the dispute centers on the subject of whether increased tax revenues should be the answer to the some-30 years' imbalance of Social Security, or whether it should be made with cutting some costs in other areas," the president said.

"And that's where they're in disagreement," he said. "I'm not going to make a choice on this until I see what the entire thing is that they recommend."

Some Democratic congressional sources, who asked not to be identified, said they feared that Reagan would be reluctant to make the deal because of its heavy emphasis on new revenues, including billions of dollars that would come indirectly from the general Treasury.

The sources said the snag for the Republicans in general and the White House in particular is a plan to give workers and the self-employed tax credits to offset the extra payroll taxes they would pay.

Man saves fiancee from intruder

Larry Villalobos

HOUSTON (AP) — When a 19-year-old man awoke his fiancee with a telephone call, she told him she saw a stranger armed with a screwdriver in the house. He rushed home, kicked the front door open and shot the intruder dead.

"He stabbed her in the face with the screwdriver and she had a couple of scratches on her, but he didn't get to rape her or nothing. I got there just in time," Larry Villalobos said Friday.

The dead man, who was not immediately identified, was shot with a .25-caliber pistol Villalobos pulled from under a couch cushion where it is kept.

Villalobos said his 16-year-old fiancee, Sonia Flores, had been staying at his family's home since Monday. They plan to be married in September.

The intruder apparently broke into the house by prying open a window with a screwdriver about 10:30 a.m. Thursday. Villalobos said Miss Flores had fallen asleep on the living room couch while watching television.

"I don't usually go home to lunch, but for some reason I just decided to call and go home," he said. "When she answered the phone, she looked over at the bedroom and she said, 'There's a man in there.'"

Villalobos told her no one had any business being there at that hour and said he'd be there in less than 10 minutes.

"I made it in about seven minutes," he said.

While he was trying to get in, he heard his fiancee's voice.

"She was just saying, 'Larry, be careful when you're coming in. He's going to try to stab you.'"

He used his key to open the front door, but "when I opened it it shut back on me and I had to kick it open to get in."

Teacher charged for force-feeding child

HOUSTON (AP) — A teacher was arrested and charged with injury to a child Thursday after allegedly force-feeding a 9-year-old boy who wouldn't eat his vegetables. A second woman, a teacher's aide, is being sought in connection with the incident.

Rosemarie Barbalato, 22, the boy's homeroom teacher, was arrested Thursday and spent the night in jail. She was released Friday morning after posting an $800 bond. Patricia Williams, the aide, did not report for work Friday and is being sought by police. They are both charged with a Class A misdemeanor punishable by up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Juvenile division Sgt. Paul Lindsey said the two woman, plus another who was not charged, held 9-year-old Calvin Charles Herring on the floor of a classroom and attempted to force feed him broccoli.

The police officer said the child later vomited and was treated for strained ligaments in his right arm at a Houston hospital.

Geri Konigsberg, a spokeswoman for the Houston Independent School District, said the incident is being investigated by two district committees, but she said no action would be taken until the investigations are complete.

"We do not approve or disapprove of what she (the teacher) did," said Ms. Konigsberg. "We do not condone force feeding a child on a regular basis."

Asked if forced feeding was approved on occasions, she declined to comment.

Sgt. Lindsey gave this account:

The Herring boy purchased two lunches at the school cafeteria. The servings on both plates included pizza, macaroni and broccoli. The boy ate the pizza, but not the broccoli.

One of the women told him he should not have bought two lunches, but since he did so then he had to eat all of each.

The boy was taken to a classroom and forced to sit on the floor. Then, while two of the women held him, the third force fed him the broccoli for more than an hour. Two other students were in the room.

Afterward, the boy was sent home with a note to his parents from Ms. Barbalato. The teacher recounted what happened and explained: "This will make following my directions more clear."

The boy was treated by a physician on Thursday morning and the parents called police.

Ms. Konigsberg denied that the child was injured by the incident or that he was forced to vomit.

"One (of the teaching personnel) held his wrist," said Ms. Konigsberg. "The other spoon fed him. He would just spit it out. He did not vomit."

Ms. Konigsberg said the boy was enrolled in a special education class for disruptive or disturbed students and that the curriculum includes very strict rules. One of these rules is that children must eat all of the lunches purchased in the school cafeteria.

The spokeswoman said it is common in the school for children to sit on the floor. She also said that she has no information about a third woman involved in the incident.

An Israeli army jeep drives through the headquarters of the U.N. peacekeeping force in Naqoura, Lebanon, which has been left far behind the lines after the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

UNIFIL searches for mission

NAQOURA, Lebanon (AP) — The 6,300 U.N. troops in southern Lebanon, whose current mandate expires Wednesday, are a peacekeeping army in search of a mission.

In all likelihood their mandate will be renewed, but only for a transitional period of two to three months and without any new orders beyond watching and waiting in their present positions.

Sent to Lebanon after Israel's 1978 invasion to provide a buffer between Yasser Arafat's Palestinian guerrillas and the Jewish state, the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon — UNIFIL — was brushed aside by the Israelis last June when they pushed north again and routed the Palestine Liberation Organization from its 12-year power base in southern Lebanon.

Now the lightly armed U.N. soldiers are more than 30 miles behind the Israeli occupation army's front line and about twice that far from the bulk of the estimated 6,000 to 10,000 PLO guerrillas left in Lebanon.

As the U.N. Security Council prepares to vote on an extension of the UNIFIL mandate, the question is what role the peacekeeping force should play in this nation's rearranged patchwork of local and foreign military powers.

"UNIFIL could participate in many tasks to support the progress of peace in Lebanon, because the U.N. has experience in a wide variety of peacekeeping operations," the UNIFIL commander, Lt. Gen. William Callaghan of Ireland, said a few hours before leaving for New York to await the Security Council's decision.

The general, in an interview at his headquarters in Naqoura, said that with a revised mandate his soldiers could take up new chores in other parts of Lebanon, "such as the separation of forces, providing buffer and security zones, establishing observation (posts) and many others."

Lebanese and Western officials, declining to be named, said the question of using U.N. troops outside southern Lebanon has taken on new urgency during the negotiations by the United States, Israel and Lebanon to bring about the withdrawal of all Israeli, Syrian and PLO forces from Lebanon.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel and Defense Minister Issam Khoury say at least 12,000 foreign peacekeepers are needed to help their fledgling 21,600-man army regain control of the country.

A 4,200-member non-U.N. peacekeeping force composed of U.S. Marines and French and Italian soldiers has been deployed in Beirut since late September following the massacre by Christian militiamen of hundreds of Palestinians in the Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps. But so far Gemayel has been unsuccessful in his efforts to persuade the United States and other nations to increase the size of this force.

Therefore, the Lebanese and Western officials said, two main jobs are envisioned for UNIFIL in the future:

—Guarding the Palestinian refugee camps scattered along the Mediterranean coast. The PLO has said a guarantee of safety for the camps' inhabitants is a main condition for the withdrawal of its remaining guerrillas, who are centered around the northern city of Tripoli and in the eastern Bekaa Valley.

—Separating Israeli and Syrian troops along the Damascus highway that runs east out of Beirut and bisects Lebanon into an Israeli-occupied south and a Syrian-controlled north. A mutual pullback by Israel and Syria from the highway has been suggested as the first stage of a total withdrawal.

In the immediate future, however, UNIFIL is most likely to receive what U.N. Undersecretary-General Brian Urquhart recently called a "transitional" mandate of two to three months. And U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar on Friday ruled out extending UNIFIL's role beyond southern Lebanon.

But if UNIFIL does take on new duties, Callaghan said, it needs "a clear mandate and above all the cooperation of the parties involved" — Israel and Syria.

"This has been the weakness of UNIFIL," the general added, referring to infiltration attempts in the past from both sides of the buffer zone.

Habib wants withdrawal agreement

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib arrived in Beirut Friday, reportedly to prod Israeli and Lebanese negotiators toward an agreement to begin withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon by Feb. 12.

However, a Lebanese government spokesman warned that "long and difficult talks were still ahead."

Habib came from Jerusalem as police reported a grenade attack on a Syrian patrol in Tripoli, Lebanon's third largest city, and Christian and Druse militiamen in the Chouf Mountains south of Beirut exchanged more artillery and rocket fire.

Habib returned to the Middle East from Washington Tuesday with instructions from President Reagan to expedite the lagging, twice-a-week Israeli-Lebanese negotiations U.S. envoy Morris Draper is mediating.

On Thursday, Israel and Lebanon put aside their dispute over priorities in the negotiations and accepted Draper's proposal that they bargain concurrently on the withdrawal of the estimated 60,000 Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian troops in Lebanon, which is Lebanon's chief concern, and future relations between Israel and Lebanon, the crux of the matter for Israel.

The negotiators are to get down to business in their seventh meeting Monday, to be held at a beach hotel in the south Beirut suburb of Khalde. Habib and Draper on their arrival went to the residence of U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon, and there was no indication when they would meet President Amin Gemayel or any other Lebanese leaders.

The Tel Aviv newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth and the privately owned Lebanese Central News Agency said in separate reports that Habib proposed to both the Israeli and Lebanese governments that they set Feb. 12 as the deadline for foreign troops to begin withdrawing.

Since all negotiations with the Syrians and the Palestine Liberation Organization have to be handled through the Lebanese, it appeared that the most that could be arranged in the four weeks remaining would be a previously proposed pullback of nine miles on each side of the Beirut-Damascus highway.

Marcos refuses retirement

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Philippines' 84-year-old foreign minister, Carlos P. Romulo, offered his resignation in tears Friday, saying he would give way to younger men. But President Ferdinand E. Marcos turned him down.

"He is an indispensable servant of our republic," Marcos told a gathering of 300 people at Romulo's lavish 84th birthday celebration.

Marcos extended Romulo's 14 years in office "for at least one year," saying he hoped Romulo could achieve planned reorganization of the Foreign Ministry.

"I'm tired but what can I do?" Romulo said to reporters after seeing the president and Mrs. Marcos to their limousine outside the Manila Hotel Intercontinental.

"Night, night, general. See you tomorrow," Mrs. Marcos shouted across the roof of the car.

Romulo said he seriously thought Marcos would accept his resignation.

"I thought he would let me retire. I have seen eight U.S. secretaries of state come and go," said Romulo, whose long diplomatic, military and journalistic career has given him close ties with the United States.

Romulo, who has the rank of brigadier general in the Philippine army, waded ashore at Leyte Gulf with Gen. Douglas MacArthur to begin liberation of the Philippines from the Japanese. He won the Pulitzer Prize in Journalism for reports on the Japanese prior to World War II.

He was twice ambassador to Washington, president of the University of the Philippines, education minister, three times president of the U.N. Security Council and the first Filipino to preside over the General Assembly.

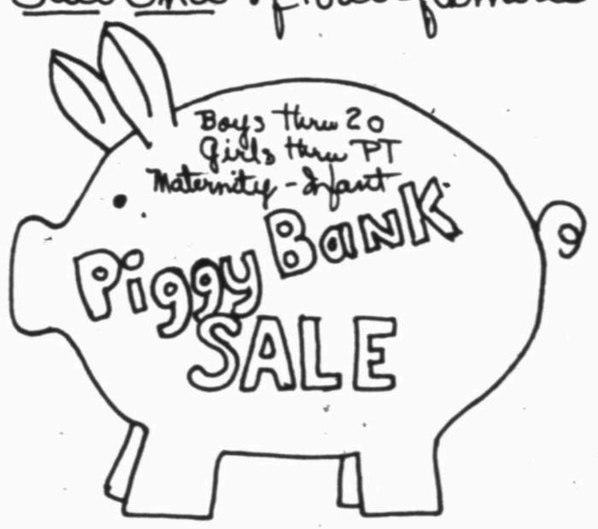

Romulo broke into tears as he announced his resignation but said he had assured Marcos that "should a call to duty come in any area of endeavor, I shall be prepared to abide by his wishes."

Prior to his speech, there were several indications the resignation was serious, although Romulo had tried to resign before. His official spokesman called news media to announce the move which was for the first time to be made before an audience.

Jamie the pelican lost the artificial beak he received following a mutilation in 1982. Doctors aren't sure what caused the bird's beak to drop off.

Pelicans losing their artificial beaks

Hearst Feature Service

There's only one problem with the artifical beaks that have been surgically attached to a group of maimed pelicans: They fall off.

A prosthetic device belonging to Jamie the pelican dropped to the bottom of a penguin bay at Sea World in San Diego the other day, the second time in less than a week that a pelican has lost its beak.

"The pelican was swimming and he shook his head from side to side and it fell off," said Diane Wolfe, a spokeswoman for the marine park.

Jamie, who was residing in a penguin bay because he found other pelicans "intimidating," seems unaffected by his loss.

He's moved in with some ducks and geese and is being hand-fed, Wolfe said.

"He doesn't appear to notice his beak is missing," Wolfe said.

Jamie, one of 19 pelicans found along Southern California beaches in recent months with their upper beaks sawed off, was outfitted with the fiberglass beak at Crown Valley Animal Hospital in Laguna Niguel. Three other mutilated birds were also fitted with new beaks there.

Last week another mutiliated pelican, Cathy Lee, lost her artifical beak when she collided with one of her handlers at the animal hospital.

In both cases, the beak broke off slightly above where it was attached.

Pelican experts say the problem may be with the cement used to keep the device in place. Tests on Cathy Lee and Jamie show bone deterioration underneath the beak.

"It could be that the cement is interfering with the healing process by blocking off oxygen to the beak," said Dr. Gail Roberts of the animal hospital.

Vocalist makes it to top with 'squeaks'

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Missing Persons' Dale Bozzio — a trim, alluring blonde — showed up for an interview at a fashionable restaurant wearing the top half of the homemade Plexiglass bikini that she wears on stage. Fortunately she was wearing a jacket that mostly covered the see-through top.

Her provocative top wasn't all that the people in the cocktail lounge were staring at. Her multicolored hair attracted just as much attention. Styled in a wild, wind-swept look, her blonde hair was decorated with a streak of fuchsia on top and a patch of blue on one side, making her head look somewhat like an Easter egg.

She was accompanied by her husband, Terry, the leader of Missing Persons. The 31-year-old drummer was also dressed like a merry punkster, but his attire and hairdo seemed sedate next to hers.

Dale has a Boston accent nearly as quirky as her vocal style. Though 27, she has a little-girl singing voice that makes her sound like a punk Betty Boop. Her trademark is cutesy squeaks. But those are commercial squeaks. Her vocals probably are the main attraction of Missing Persons' Top 20 Capitol album, "Spring Session M."

Where did she learn to squeak? "It just happened naturally," explained the young singer, who seemed quite cool next to her hyperactive husband. "I have growls and strange inflections too. They just come out of me when I sing."

"WHEN I FIRST heard her squeak," her husband said, "I told her not to do it. The words don't come out right when she squeaks. But she kept on squeaking. People like the squeaks. They're the thing everyone notices."

An untrained singer, she initially talked her lyrics. "I wasn't singing melodies," she said. "But we finally realized we had to start using melodies. It's limiting to use just a talking style. We wanted to expand our music so I had to sing. But I didn't really know how. Terry worked with me and I came up with this unique style."

Her singing career is an accident. She started out to be an actress and while waiting for her big break worked as a model and spent two years as a Playboy Bunny.

"When I was a Bunny I was a teen-ager looking for direction in how to be beautiful," she said. "I got direction from my Bunny Mother (the woman who supervises the Bunnies). She told me I could be beautiful if I did this with my nails or that with my hair. That woman probably taught me more than anyone else back then."

She came to Hollywood looking for acting and modeling jobs but was sidetracked into singing by avant-garde rock musician Frank Zappa, who had a hunch she could be a unique vocalist. While recording with Zappa, she met Terry, a former jazz and classical drummer who was then in Zappa's band. She married him three and a half years ago.

MISSING PERSONS originated when Warren Cucurullo, a guitarist in Zappa's band, asked her to sing vocals on a tape of "I Like Boys." They recruited Terry, who had left Zappa to work in other bands. The current Missing Persons lineup includes another Zappa alumnus, bassist Patrick O'Hearn, and keyboards player Chuck Wild.

At first it seemed like they might be stuck in the crowded L.A. band scene for years without a record contract. Many record companies were put off by their similarity to the band Blondie.

"One record company guy said we could get away from the Blondie image by having Dale dye her hair," Terry recalled. "He suggested we call the band Joan of Arc. But that didn't sound right to us."

Major labels didn't want Missing Persons so the band put out its own seven-inch, four-song EP in April of last year. "We had to prove to the big companies that there was a market for us," he said. "We borrowed money, pressed our own EP, did our own artwork, promotion, distribution and marketing. The important thing was that we got some radio stations to play it. We sold 10,000 copies of the EP. Capitol was impressed, and they signed us."

Last March, Capitol released a 12-inch version of the EP, with one change: "Words" replaced the Doors' oldie, "Hello I Love You." Sparked by "Words" and "Destination Unknown," the new EP sold over 200,000, mostly in Los Angeles. When Capitol released the band's debut album, "Spring Session M," two months ago, it had a ready-made market.

MISSING PERSONS isn't what you would call a critics' favorite, which continually irritates Terry: "It really hurts me. I think they misunderstand us. They say we're too contrived, too commercial. Some of them have grown to like 'Words' and 'Destination Unknown' but they say the rest of the material is empty power pop."

Missing Persons is frequently branded as sexist and lumped in with the Plasmatics, who are lead by sex-siren Wendy O. Williams. "We're not in that category," Terry insisted. "We don't flaunt sex. We're not pornographic. It's safe for kids to see us. Dale wears provocative outfits but it's nothing you can't wear on a public beach. We're not into the exploitation of sex like the Plasmatics are."

There's a difference, he stressed, in the exploitation of sex and the shrewd use of good, old-fashioned, all-American marketing and advertising tactics. It wasn't a very convincing argument: "In this country pretty girls are used to sell products. You see it everywhere. We're using that idea in Missing Persons. It's not exploitation of women. Everybody does it. When you do things with taste, it's OK, and we do things with taste."

VIGOROUSLY SUPPORTING her husband's argument, Dale denied that Missing Persons was guilty of sexism, contending she's merely making practical, innocent use of God-given attributes: "God gave me a beautiful bosom. Why should I try to hide it? I wear these fishbowls on my bosom and I thank God he gave me a bosom that people find attractive. I don't think there's anything wrong with having a nice bosom and a nice bottom."

Whether she acknowledges it or not, peforming nearly nude really is a form of "sexploitation." If exposing her body wasn't important to her success then she could perform in a trench coat and have the same effect on an audience.

"But working in a trench coat isn't any fun," she contended teasingly. "Besides, it would bother the audience. They would be constantly wondering what I had on under it."

Network programming doesn't improve in 1983

By GUS STEVENS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — People who make the big network decisions profess to wonder why the networks' share of the total television pie is getting smaller. The answer is simple: The network programming isn't getting any better.

Case in point: NBC's list of new series, miniseries and TV movies scheduled for early 1983. The roster contains the same old people doing the same old things.

Here are some examples of what's cooking (or going up in flames) on the NBC early-year schedule. Read fast, for some may be gone before today's newspaper begins to turn yellow. Some of these shows have debut dates, others are more vague. None is going to cause you to turn off the heat at home so you can pay your cable-TV bill.

A couple of familiar faces are coming back to the screen with the return (after several trial segments last year) of "Teachers Only," an NBC series "that takes an adult look at the lifestyles of the faculty of an inner-city high school in New York."

Here we have Lynn Redgrave, as unfunny as ever, still trying to play the comedian, as she did without success in "House Calls." With Redgrave is Norman Fell, old saddle face, who plays the high school principal, while Redgrave is a guidance counselor.

"Teachers Only" has a laugh track, a gasp track, a whistle track, anything to help keep audiences from falling asleep and to help them identify any possibly funny parts.

The show makes its debut sometime in March.

Next up is "Mama's Family," the Vicki Lawrence thing in which she digs up her role as the cranky countrified mother in the old "Carol Burnett Show."

The Newspaper BIBLE

I WASN'T LOST; YOU WERE!

When Jesus' parents had fulfilled all the requirements of the law of God they returned home to Nazareth in Galilee.

There the child became a strong, robust lad, and was known for wisdom beyond his years; and God poured out His blessings on Him.

When Jesus was 12 years old he accompanied His parents to Jerusalem for the annual Passover Festival, which they attended each year.

After the celebration was over they started home to Nazareth, but Jesus stayed behind in Jerusalem. His parents didn't miss Him the first day, for they assumed He was with friends and among the other travelers. But when He didn't show up that evening, they started to look for Him among their relatives and friends; and when they couldn't find Him, they went back to Jerusalem to search for Him there.

Three days later they finally discovered Him. He was in the Temple, sitting among the teachers of Law, discussing deep questions with them and amazing everyone with His understanding and answers.

His parents didn't know what to think when they saw Him sitting there so calmly. "Son!"-His mother said to Him, "why have you done this to us? Your father and I Have been frantic, searching for You everywhere."

"But why did you need to search?" He asked. "Didn't you realize that I would be here in the Temple, in My Father's House?"

But they didn't understand what He meant.

Then He returned to Nazareth with them and was obedient to them; and His mother stored away all these things in her heart.

So Jesus grew both tall and wise, and He was loved by God and man.

Documents alter views of emancipation

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Civil War, as every former high school student knows, ended slavery — but perhaps not quite the way the story was always told in high school.

Before Abraham Lincoln and the federal government had come to a final judgment on the slavery question, tens of thousands of blacks had enlisted in the Union Army and made the Civil War a "self-liberating experience," says historian Ira Berlin. Black soldiers who started out calling every white man "boss" or "captain" gradually learned, according to Berlin, "that not every white man is a captain — some are corporals and some are sergeants." They also learned all the laws, rules and customs that insulate a soldier from the whims of his superiors, and they carried that sophistication back with them into the fight to gain freedom and full citizenhood for the still-enslaved.

This is the view of emancipation that emerges from an extraordinary book of documents unearthed over the last several years by a team of scholars from the University of Maryland. "We think this is going to change the kind of history that's written at all levels," says Berlin, who headed the project with Joseph P. Reidy and Leslie S. Rowland.

"They have done something which no individual historian has ever done or could ever do," says Columbia University historian Eric Foner. "It's absolutely indispensable for anyone interested in the history of this period...Probably three-quarters or more of the material they published has never been seen by anybody since it was written."

BESIDES OFFERING an unprecedented look at what ordinary people, white and black, thought and did as they saw slavery grinding to an end, "The Black Military Experience" — the first published volume of a planned series with the overall title, "Freedom: A Documentary History of Emancipation" — shows how slaves and free blacks, in Foner's words, "seized the opportunity presented by the war to unravel the institution of slavery..."

In the fall of 1863, black soldiers from the North began agitating for the same $13-a-month pay as whites, often flatly refusing the $7 the War Department had decided to offer them ($10 minus a $3 clothing deduction). Later, the protest spread to ex-slave soldiers from the South, and "for most slaves," says Berlin, "probably the first political act that they engage in is this struggle over equal pay."

It was a hard struggle. Many black soldiers went months without pay to press their claims, even though they had families at home depending on them for support. A few who took more active steps actually lost their lives as a result. The book includes the court-martial testimony of a black sergeant, William Walker of the Third Regiment of South Carolina Volunteers, accused of urging mass-desertion over the pay issue. Walker reminded the "honorable court" that he had been pressed into enlisting on the promise of equal pay, and he pleaded for "an enlightened understanding of the matter." But the next document in the book is the order for Walker to be "shot to death with musketry" on Feb. 29, 1864 — an order carried out on schedule.

OTHER SOLDIERS took the less risky route of writing to politicians, military commanders or President Lincoln himself. As Cpl. James Henry Gooding put the case in a letter to Lincoln: "Now the main question is. Are we Soldiers, or are we Labourers ... Today, the Anglo Saxon Mother, Wife, or Sister, are not alone, in tears for departed Sons, Husbands, and Brothers. The patient Trusting Decendants of Africs Clime, have dyed the ground with blood, in defense of the Union, and Democracy...We appeal to You, Sir: as the Executive of the Nation, to have us Justly Dealt with..."

Gooding's letter wound up in the annals of the Army's Bureau of Colored Troops, one of about two dozen major groups of papers screened by Berlin and his team during the three years they camped out in the National Archives. They also looked at, among other records, those of the Freedmen's Bureau, the Treasury Department (which supervised the management of abandoned plantations in the occupied South), and various units of the defeated Confederacy, since one of the lesser-known fruits of war, as Berlin notes, is that "the winners get the losers' records."

From all those documents, "you get a sense of what people standing on the edge (between slavery and freedom) thought at that moment," Berlin says. "This is the fullest record that exists anywhere in the world of a people going from being slaves to being free."

IN THE COURSE of their labors, Berlin and his comrades occasionally made finds so stunning that all work would come to a halt and "we'd have public readings in the archives," he says. Sometimes a series of documents from separate sources, found at separate times, could be linked up to tell a single story.

The correspondence of Pvt. Spotswood Rice offers a powerful glimpse into an ex-slave's attitudes toward his former masters, and vice versa. Rice had gained his freedom by enlisting, but he had been forced to leave his family in slavery.

From a military hospital in St. Louis, Rice wrote his daughters promising to return to them with "8 hundred White and 8 hundred blacke solders" and secure their freedom.

"Be assured that I will have you if it cost me my life," he wrote. "If Diggs dont give you up this Government will...Your Miss Kaitty said that I tried to steal you But I let her know that god never intended for man to steal his own flesh and blood...I once thought that I had some respect for them but now my respects is worn out and have no sympathy for Slaveholders...You tell her from me that She is the first Christian that I ever hard say that a man could Steal his own child especially out of human bondage."

He also wrote to the wife of his former owner, telling her: "I offered once to pay you forty dollars for my own Child but I am glad now that you did not accept it ...Just hold on now as long as you can and the worse it will be for you...if your conchosence tells thats the road go that road..."

THESE LETTERS WERE seized by Mrs. Diggs' husband, postmaster F.W. Diggs, who angrily forwarded them to the army command, demanding Rice's removal from the state for the sake of the Diggs family's security. Diggs complained that he had been loyal to the Union, but all his property was tied up in slaves and "to be thus insulted by such a black scoundrel is more than I can stand."

Other black soldiers — there would be 179,000 of them by the spring of 1865, representing 21 percent of all black men in America between the ages of 18 and 45 — raised their sights beyond the goal of emancipation itself.

Sgt. John Sweeny, a former Kentucky slave, wrote to Brig. Gen. Clinton Fisk proposing a school for the "moral and literary elevation" of his regiment. "...We stand deeply in need of instruction the majority of us having been slaves..." Sweeny noted. "My home is in Kentucky Where Prejudice reigns like the Mountain Oak and I do lack that cultivation of mind that would have an attendency To cast a cloud over my future life after have been in the United States service..."

Much of the spelling and punctuation in "The Black Military Experience" is haphazard, but there is no "minstrel speech — no 'dems' and 'dese,'" according to Berlin. "This kind of book tends to do away with stereotypes of one kind and another," adds Benjamin Quarles, emeritus professor of history at Morgan State University in Baltimore. "We would never have dreamed there were that many articulate blacks, literate blacks," says Quarles, "and we didn't believe that the black issue was so dominant in the military and in Washington."

THE BOOK ALSO illuminates the response of whites to the approach of emancipation. The first black troops were raised in Massachusetts and other abolitionist strongholds, and their commanders — all white — were usually avowed abolitionists. But later, as the Union became more broadly committed to the idea of using black soldiers and began offering freedom to slaves who enlisted, commanders were chosen by a more random process, and opportunists saw such assignments as the route to a quick promotion.

Initially, many of these commanders treated their subordinates with open hostility. But as time went by and the black units gained experience in battle, "some of these guys begin to change, and you begin to see some identification with their soldiers," says Berlin.

Abacus popular in Japan despite fancy calculators

TOKYO (AP) — The ancient "soroban," or abacus, is holding its own in Japan's schools and offices, virtually unaffected by the onslaught of fancy electronic calculators.

Educators hail them as effective tools to teach children basic math concepts. Ticket-sellers swear by them, tax accountants wield them, shopowners keep them beside cash registers, and many banks require job applicants to demonstrate their proficiency in using the abacus.

The rectangular computing tray, usually framed with wood, has several rows of five beads — one in its upper section, four on the bottom. By sliding the beads back and forth, users can add, subtract, multiply or divide.

Japanese merchants first brought abacuses here from China around the 16th century. The device, originally using bamboo rods, was developed in China as early as the 6th century B.C. The Egyptians used pebbles to calculate in the same manner during the 5th century B.C.

Today, in Tokyo's bustling Ginza district, 10 workers issue 30,000 subway tickets a month with the aid of the abacus.

"It's faster than modern gadgets for figuring out the change," said Kinya Egawa of the Teito Rapid Transit Authority. "Once you are accustomed to the abacus, it's very reliable," he said.

He and his colleagues use computer-aided calculators to issue long-term commuter tickets between various destinations over Tokyo's maze of criss-crossing subways.

But when it's time to hand over the change, he says he always uses his abacus as a "double-check."

Takashi Ono of the Bank of Tokyo said almost half of the 6,000 workers there regularly finger their abacus beads — simply because "it's faster" than using electronic calculators.

Attachment to the abacus is deeply entrenched even in the nation's electronics industry — Koichi Ozaki, spokesman for Matsushita Electric, said numerical calculations in many clerical jobs are still done with the abacus. Workers at Matsushita, Japan's largest electric appliance enterprise, have organized a "soroban club" to keep their calculating skills honed.

"Parents and teachers consider the abacus the best means for children to learn math concepts," said Hiroshi Mizumura, chairman of the non-profit League for Soroban Education of Japan Inc. "Most Japanese mothers are very enthusiastic about teaching their children to do simple addition and subtraction."

The League's 10,000 abacus teachers offer private courses in the ancient calculating art here. Eleven of its members staff branch offices in California, Sao Paulo, Brazil and San Rafael, Mexico, said Mizumura.

Michio Nanjo of the National Abacus Education Federation said 3.2 million students — most still in primary school — took the proficiency tests for the abacus last year.

Abacus training is part of the national school curriculum for third- and fourth-graders.

Austinites call on Boy Scouts for home burglary prevention

AUSTIN (AP) — Austinites who want to give their houses that lived-in look that discourages burglars can call on the Boy Scouts.

Members of the Law Enforcement Explorer Post 26 will come to the home, check security, pin windows, record the make and serial numbers of your valuables, inscribe your driver's license number on televisions and stereos and — while you are out of town — check your house and pick up mail and newspapers.

At no charge.

Kathe Maroney several months ago had the Explorers mark her property and put pins in her windows. The pins are nails or screws, removable only from the inside, that prevent windows from being opened more than a few inches. She paid the scouts a small fee to put a peephole in her door.

The local post, sponsored by the Austin Police Department and affiliated with the Boy Scouts of America, has been helping with home security for 14 months.

Members, ages 15 to 21, must pass a police security check and attend a 40-hour training session. After passing several tests, they get a city-issued uniform.

Ohio center set up for agricultural research

WOOSTER, Ohio (AP) — Nestled in the quiet of northern Ohio's rolling farmland, scientists at a century-old research center are using germ-free bubbles and genetic research to isolate livestock disease and double farmers' crop yields.

From a plot of 30 acres a century ago, the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center has grown to more than 7,000 acres at a dozen sites across the state.

First known as the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, the center was created in 1882 by the Ohio General Assembly with a yearly appropriation of $3,000.

Its current operating budget is about $20.1 million, with about one-third coming from state funds, one-quarter from federal appropriations and the rest from grants and gifts.

After operating independently for years in cooperation with Ohio State University, the center recently became a branch of OSU. The center claims a number of research gains, but its officials say budget cutbacks threaten to slow or stop some projects.

"This year it's not so much a cutback as it is no expansion," said Dr. Richard Cooper, a U.S. Department of Agriculture soybean breeder at the center. "The program is just beginning to pay off."

Cooper, who works in cooperation with a state scientist, said the soybean program has created five new varieties in the past five years. Four of the new varieties are "semidwarfs," bred for high yields, while the other is bred to thrive in marginal growing conditions. The high-protein soybean is among the top cash crops in the nation.

Also under state-federal cooperation is maize virus research, begun in 1963 after a corn virus was discovered in southern Ohio.

The virus spread until 1965, causing estimated losses of as much as $6 million a year. But researchers at the center found a resistant genetic seed line, for which a sizable amount of seed already existed. Seed companies worked the resistance into hybrids, and farmers were able to avert further losses.

The researchers eventually isolated a half-dozen strains of the virus, went on to discover new virus-like organisms, and the center has become an international leader in corn virus research.

Republican contenders waiting, watching New Hampshire

By GARY LANGER
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.H. — While Democrats hoping to be president openly pursue New Hampshire's primary voters, Republicans with the same idea are waiting, watching President Reagan — and quietly keeping their own interests known.

Many GOP losers in the 1980 primary have maintained political contacts, made campaign donations and visited the state in recent months, at least partly with an eye toward succeeding Reagan in 1988, if not next year, state Republicans say.

"They all have been here before, so it's like dropping by and saying, 'Hi friends, I'm still in it. Don't forget me,'" said former state Sen. Raymond Conley. "It's low-key but it's here."

Among the 1980 losers making themselves known are Vice President George Bush, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, who said he won't seek re-election, reportedly so he can aim for the presidency after Reagan leaves office.

There are new names as well. Although a funeral forced Sen. Robert Packwood of Oregon to cancel a visit to New Hampshire this week, some state GOP leaders saw a familiar pattern in his plan to visit the home of the nation's earliest primary.

"I can't think of any conceivable reason for Senator Packwood to be in New Hampshire at this time unless he was considering the possibility of running for president," said former Gov. Hugh Gregg. "Why else would he come?"

Aides to Packwood said he wanted to discuss commerce and women's issues and had no other motive for the trip.

"And if you believe that..." said state GOP chairwoman Donna Sytek, trailing off with a laugh.

"I don't think anybody at this point would put their head above the parapet because they all want President Reagan to run again," said Gregg, who ran Bush's 1980 campaign.

But for 1988 — or 1984 if Reagan does not seek a second term — "As far as Bush people are concerned, yes, we're in touch with each other," said Gregg. "We know who we are, and we are around."

The same is true for Dole's backers. "He's maintained contact as a personal friend to myself and other friends he made in the state," said Gerald Nash, a leader of Dole's 1980 primary campaign. "I assume anybody that's ever thought of being president would want to keep friends in the state in the event they ran again."

Many Republicans have buttressed their friendships with visits to New Hampshire, and with money:

—Bush attended a fund-raiser last October to help John Sununu's successful campaign for governor. The dinner raised $170,000, nearly a third of Sununu's total campaign expense. Bush is expected to return to the state in April.

—Baker, who visited the state last spring, gave $2,000 through his political action committee to Sununu and $2,000 to Robert Smith, the losing GOP nominee in the 1st Congressional District. Baker's Republican Senate Majority Fund gave $200 each to the five GOP candidates for Executive Council.

—Dole attended a Sununu fund-raiser and gave $2,500 to Sununu's campaign and $1,000 to Smith's campaign through a political action committee.

"The primary purpose (of the donations) is to help Republicans," said Joanne Coe, an aide to Dole. "But obviously you derive some benefit."

Ms. Sytek, a state representative from Salem, said other Republicans with possible presidential hopes also have been to the state — Reps. Jack Kemp of New York and Trent Lott of Mississippi and Delaware Gov. Pierre du Pont.

"If you're going to be running for president it doesn't hurt to come into a state where you have some friends in high places," she said.

On the Democratic side, Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina was in New Hampshire this week to meet corporate leaders, talk with party leaders and shake hands with North Country mill workers. Aides say he'll be back at least once a month.

Other Democratic visitors have included Sens. Alan Cranston of California, John Glenn of Ohio and Gary Hart of Colorado; former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew; and former Vice President Walter Mondale, who has opened an office in Manchester and may visit the state next week.

"The Democrats are being more open about it: 'I'm running, wham,'" said Conley, a Dole backer in 1980.

"Any top man in the Republican Party that starts showing up in New Hampshire could be showing the flag," he said. "It depends on what President Reagan decides to do. They don't want to be a quarter mile away. They want to be near the post — and I don't blame them."

> "They all have been here before, so it's like dropping by and saying, 'Hi friends, I'm still in it. Don't forget me.'"

School names Mrs. Bush to board

ATLANTA (AP) — Barbara Bush, wife of Vice President George Bush, has been named to the board of trustees of the Morehouse School of Medicine, officials announced Friday.

Dr. Clinton E. Warner, chairman of the board, said, "The board and all members of the medical school are honored that Mrs. Bush accepted our invitation. Among her many interests, she brings to us a strong commitment to education and to volunteer services."

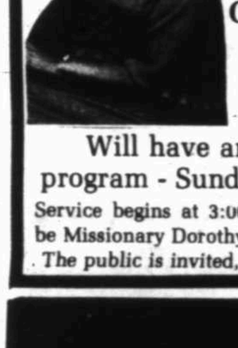

Bush dedicated the school's first permanent facility in July. Morehouse's medical school is the first minority medical school to be established in the 20th century.

Court overturns Sears judgment

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal appeals court on Friday overturned an $8 million patent infringement judgment against Sears, Roebuck and Co. that had been awarded to the inventor of a quick-release socket wrench.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that Peter Roberts, 37, of Red Bank, Tenn., was not entitled to a patent for the wrench, because "we think it would have been made anyway, and soon."

Roberts' attorney, Louis G. Davidson, said he will either ask the appeals court to reconsider its decision or appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Roberts was 18 when he devised the wrench in 1964 while working at a Sears store in Gardner, Mass.,

Sears attorney James Hunter said that while Roberts will not get the $8 million, he is free to keep $1 million he won in a January 1977 judgment against the company, in which a federal court ruled that Sears fraudulently obtained the patent from Roberts.

In appealing the $1 million ruling, Sears argued that the patent was invalid since the design of the wrench was obvious and predictable.

But the appeals court rejected the argument, saying fraud was the issue in that matter, not whether the wrench ultimately would have been invented by someone else.

"That case is closed," said Hunter.

Roberts was awarded $5 million on April 2, 1982, when a federal court jury determined that Sears had infringed on the patent Roberts proved he owned. On May 14, Roberts was awarded an additional $3.2 million as a share in profits from sales of the wrench.

But in overturning the $8 million judgment, the appeals court ruled Roberts was not entitled to the patent since it was obvious the same argument Sears had used in trying to overturn the previous fraud ruling.

Judge Richard A. Posner, writing for the majority, said the invention "was genuine, but it was entitled to patent protection only if it was the kind of contribution unlikely to be induced except by the promise of a monopoly, and we do not think it was that kind of invention, because we think it would have been made anyway and soon."

In seeking the award, Davidson asked that Roberts be compensated for royalties he would have received on the invention. He contended that Sears earned $172 million from wrench sales since 1977, when Roberts' patent took effect.

Davidson asked for a $19 million award. Sears attorneys called that figure "totally out of line," and said the company earned no more than $5 million on the device after 1977.

"Sears Roebuck did all the work, Sears Roebuck took all the risks ...and generated a profit of about $5 million," the company's lawyer, Dugald S. McDougall, said in closing arguments.

After inventing the device, which allows the user to change sockets with one hand, Roberts took The design to the manager of the Sears store where he worked. Sears bought it For $10,000, allegedly telling Roberts the wrench would not sell while actually planning to manufacture 50,000 a week, according to court testimony.

Roberts entered the Army shortly afterward. Eventually, he saw the wrench prominently displayed in a Sears catalog, and a military attorney advised Roberts to sue Sears. He filed suit in 1969 to regain rights to his invention.

After years of litigation, Roberts was granted a patent retroactive to 1977.

Government seeks recall of 320,000 cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government said Friday it believes the brakes of 320,000 General Motors Corp. front-wheel drive cars are defective and asked the manufacturer to show why they should not be recalled for repairs.

The cars involved are all of the 1980 models in the X-body series with manual transmissions as well about 100,000 from the same model year with automatic transmissions but similar brake shoes, officials said.

The cars are the Chevrolet Citation, Pontiac Phoenix, Oldsmobile Omega, and Buick Skylark built in 1979 and 1980, the government said.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration set a hearing for Feb. 14 for GM to produce evidence to dispute the agency's initial finding that the cars have a defect in the braking system that poses a safety hazard.

If the initial finding stands up, the agency can order GM to recall the cars and fix them.

NHTSA and GM have received several hundred complaints during the past three hears from motorists who said the brakes on their 1980 X-body cars have a tendency to lock prematurely, causing the vehicles to go into a dangerous spin.

The front-wheel compacts were introduced with great fanfare in April 1979, just as gasoline lines began to appear in the wake of the reduction in crude oil production in Iran caused by the downfall of the shah.

General Motors recalled 47,000 of them in August 1981 because of complaints about brakes locking. Since then, NHTSA investigators have determined that the correction made in 1981 was inadequate and more cars are involved, officials said.

GM said in a statement issued in Detroit and Washington it had not had a chance to review the data on which the agency made its decision. "We are continuing our evaluations of the cars in question and, as previously stated, are prepared to make corrections if necessary," the statement said.

Cranston seeking support

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Calling himself the "peace candidate" for president in 1984, U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston sought crucial home state support Friday from California Democrats for his dark horse campaign.

The 68-year-old California Democrat was rated the favorite to win a straw poll of 1,700 delegates to the California Democratic Party annual convention this weekend. Party leaders agreed Cranston must decisively win that poll or suffer a major setback in his Presidential campaign.

Richard O'Neill, former head of the state Democratic Party, said if Cranston loses the straw poll it "would be the end of him."

Cranston ranks far behind former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. John Glenn of Ohio in national polls for the Democratic nomination, but he has collected endorsements of nearly all of California's Democratic Party leaders.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Baseball great Jerome Hanna "Dizzy" Dean, singer Ethel Merman, auto racing star A. J. Foyt, author Norman Podhoretz and country singer Ronnie Milsap were born on this date. You and your family will be much happier if you learn to strike a better balance between work and home life. A romantic relationship continues to grow. A trip you take later this year could rekindle feelings you no longer thought existed. Be open about your goals and dreams. You could come into a large amount of money. Your business competitors are unable to keep up with your resourceful thinking and quick maneuvers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Call family members together and settle a difficult problem once and for all. A romance gets a boost when loved ones approve.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A romantic decision you make this weekend gives you new power. Let mate and children know the true state of your finances. A daughter is a special source of pride.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make home improvements you have been promising for weeks. If you continue to relegate romance to second place in your life, partner will turn to someone else. Speak up!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Those away at school are adjusting nicely. You eliminate a source of anxiety by budgeting your income and expenses. Romance becomes more meaningful when you speak from the heart.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Wait a while before becoming entangled in a new romantic liaison. Acts of revenge will hurt you more than the one you want to punish. Forget the past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good luck is linked to your relationship with a sibling. Do not tempt fate when it comes to love and marriage. Spontaneous dates and activities prove to be the most fun this weekend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A financial situation begins to turn around. You find yourself surrounded by romance. Compromises are not necessary to get loved ones to do what is best for the whole family.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Reconciliations between estranged family members make this a happy day. Diet and exercise programs should not be postponed. Start today with your loved ones' support. An old love returns.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There is instant rapport between you and a member of the opposite sex you meet at a party. Rectify past mistakes. Stop imposing on your friends and neighbors.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your past efforts bring new rewards today. A family member heaps honors on you. Your understanding of people helps you in everything you do. A romantic interlude leaves you walking on air.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be straightforward in romance. Eventually you will get the kind of commitment you want. Do not let a cancelled date upset you. It could be a blessing in disguise.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are the star of a family social event. Be on time. Someone you have admired for a long time suddenly finds you quite attractive. Grant a child's request.

Lions roar with delight over grotto

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — George and Jerry roared with delight.

The two 4-year-old lions had never seen anything like it: grass, trees, African daisies, passion vine and giant honeysuckle.

All they'd ever seen were grey slabs of concrete in the Lion Grotto at the San Francisco Zoo.

George and Jerry were the first of the zoo's colony of big cats to be introduced this week to the newly renovated and landscaped Lion House and Grotto.

Zoo Director Saul Kitchener was pleased with the way things turned out. There was no way to predict how the tawny, carnivorous cats would react to their new gardens.

"I was afraid they might do some damage to the plants and hurt themselves," he said.

For the past six months, the old WPA-built concrete grottos were being landscaped as part of the San Francisco Zoological Society's $350,000 restoration of the Lion House and Grotto.

The grotto is divided into four compartments. The male and female lions are kept apart. "We keep them separated," said keeper Jack Castor, who has been handling the big cats for 30 years at the zoo.

Seems lions are a glut in the zoo market. "You can't give them away," he said. And male lions eat 14 pounds of horsemeat a day, while the females stow away 10 pounds a day.

George and Jerry, after sniffing at a bamboo-lined tree and poking at a sandbox and scratching poles, sat and stared at the crowd, side by side, like the stone lions in front of the New York Public Library.

In another compartment, Trouble, the son of Tagore, was playing coy, acting like the cat doing that cha-cha-cha commerical, one step forward and one step back, before making his grand entrance.

Letting out what sounded like a yawn or an imitation of the MGM lion, he padded out from his lair, smelling the pampas grass, rearing on his hind legs and hugging the scratching pole, a slender tree stump.

The 11-year-old cat operated on instinct and left its marking on a tree and on a rock. "He's a smart cat," Castor said. "Why do we call him 'Trouble'? He's been nothing but trouble since the day he was born."

All the grottos have a bathing pool, but the female lions have a new waterfall. Frolicking around it were three generations of lionesses. They had never heard the sound of splashing water before and were fascinated.

"There's Virginia, the grandmother. The daughter, Tanya, and the granddaughter, Sandy," he said. The grandmother is 20 and Sandy is three.

"Right now, they're all curious about the new surroundings. Later, they'll start tearing things up," he said.

But the Bermuda grass bounces right back, the shrubs easily reseed themselves and others are unpleasant to touch.

Sandboxes are something new, too. Castor's hoping they might learn to use them as litterboxes.

The $350,000 remodeling project was funded by contributions from thousand of Zoo Parents to the Adopt an Animal Fund and matching grants.

Soviet magazine claims China fosters hostility

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet magazine on Friday accused China of attempting to retard normalization talks and of fostering hostility toward the Soviets by resurrecting old land claims.

"Peking is evidently not inclined to resume the frontier talks," the weekly New Times said. "The impression is that the Chinese side is keeping the border issue 'in reserve' as a ready-made sure expedient for retarding the process of normalization. To this end, the border settlement is replaced by territorial claims on the U.S.S.R."

New Times also condemned "unwarranted attacks on various aspects of Soviet policy" and accusations of "Soviet hegemonism" by Chinese leaders and press commentators.

The official Tass news agency carried the text of the piece, which was published the same day a Chinese Foreign Ministry official in Peking said a second round of Chinese-Soviet consultations will be held in March.

The first round was held in Peking in October and both sides have expressed desires for ending the decades of estrangement due to territorial and ideological disputes. Border talks were suspended when the Soviets sent troops into Afghanistan in December 1979.

The New Times piece focused on what it called the "systematic circulation of articles and other materials...(that) misrepresent the history of the demarcation of our frontier with China."

The article found particularly irksome the publication of geographical dictionaries and maps claiming that more than 930,000 square miles of territory in northeast and northwest China was seized by czarist Russia.

"There is no need to conjecture about the purpose of such maps," New Times said. "The idea is to bring up the rising generation in a spirit of distrust and enmity toward" the Soviet Union.

"The territories which Peking qualifies as Chinese lands lost as a result of 'seizures' by Russia actually never were part of the Chinese state nor was their population Chinese," New Times said. "The question of where they belong, the people of the U.S.S.R. long ago resolved once and for all through the exercise of their own free will on the basis of self-determination."

Politburo orders stores to open at practical times

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet workers have been slipping away from their jobs to get their errands and shopping done, so the Politburo is ordering stores to open at more practical times, state radio reports.

Thousands of man-hours are lost in the Soviet Union daily as workers slip away from offices and factories to do chores that can't be done before or after work because the shops are closed then.

"It has been noted that a large number of public service enterprises are open only when the working people are on the job and this is the reason many people can't shop and use public services," the radio said.

The report did not detail how shop hours would change, but said implementation of the order was up to the council of ministers.

The Politburo, under the leadership of Yuri V. Andropov, is tackling one of the major causes of slipping labor productivity.

The Soviet press has been conducting a major campaign on the subject, evidently preparing managers and employees of shops and service establishments for the upcoming changes.

The Soviet Union is a tradition-bound society and changing shop hours will be a difficult adjustment.

Since taking over as Communist Party general secretary two months ago, Andropov has launched a tough campaign on worker discipline in an effort to boost productivity.

Soviet sources report raiding parties of local police and party functionaries visiting bars, restaurants, barber shops and stores looking for workers who have ducked out of the office.

The raiding parties inspect the documents of patrons. If they show the person should be at work, he is ordered to return to the job. The authorities then write a letter to the offending worker's superior explaining he was caught away from the job on state time.

The report on the Politburo meeting is one of several that have been issued since Andropov took over. Previously, under the chairmanship of the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev, the meetings were kept secret.

The Politburo also issued orders for boosting the productivity of the food industry by installing new technology, the radio said.

English schoolboys predict time of satellite breakup

KETTERING, England (AP) — Two teenage members of the spacewatching team of Kettering Boys School predict the stricken Soviet satellite Cosmos 1402 will re-enter the Earth's atmosphere and break up next Thursday "at teatime."

Canada's Defense Department, however, forecast a re-entry on Jan. 24 — give or take 54 hours. Canadian and U.S. Defense officials have been tracking the satellite but say they will not be able to pinpoint where or when it will fall until a few hours beforehand.

The youthful members of Kettering's respected part-time spacewatching team have been plotting satellites — American, Chinese and Soviet — for more than 10 years with remarkable accuracy.

On Thursday, Thomas Sharpling, 17, and John Corvesor, 14 — members of the team run by physics teacher Geoffrey Perry — announced their calculations.

Said John, "We have worked out that the satellite will come down next Thursday at tea-time but there is a margin of error of two days either side."

Tea-time in England is 4 p.m.

On Jan. 5, the boys announced that Cosmos 1402 was malfunctioning and falling slowly to earth, a claim at first denied and then admitted by Moscow. It was the second time in five years the schoolboys announced the fall of a Soviet satellite.

The first one landed in Canada causing an estimated $4.8 million damage. But this time the boys say there is only slight chance of similar damage.

"The Russians have had plenty of time to improve their technology and the chances of anything landing on earth are very slight," Thomas told The Standard newspaper.

"If anything did land, our calculations show that there is less than a thousand (to one) chance of it falling in a densely populated area."

In Washington on Thursday, a top Pentagon official said there is a "very small chance" that the nuclear fuel would survive intact to the surface of the Earth.

Cuba attempts to renegotiate $2.6 billion in foreign debt

MIAMI (AP) — Cuban officials have had encouraging meetings in Panama with economic ministers from several Western nations in efforts to renegotiate payments on $2.6 billion in foreign debt, Havana Radio reported Friday.

Raul Leon Torras, president of Cuba's National Bank, said governments and private banks have appreciated the frank assessments given by Cuban ministers, according to the broadcast monitored in Miami.

Leon Torres said he met with Panamanian President Ricardo de la Espriella, various economic ministers, representatives of the United Nations Commerce and Development Organization and officials of about 20 banks in the International Financial Center.

Much of Cuba's foreign debt comes due next year, but drastic drops in prices for sugar, the island nation's biggest crop, have hindered efforts to make payments.

Financial experts involved in the renegotiation toured Cuba in November. None of the reports has indicated what countries are involved.

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM THE IRS WITH AN IRA. FROM FIRST CITY.

Why pay more now when you can pay less later?

With a First City Individual Retirement Account (IRA), you can set aside tax-deductible funds now to use for your retirement years later, when your taxes should be much lower.

As an individual wage earner, you can make a tax-deductible IRA contribution of up to $2,000 a year, $2,250 if your non-working spouse is included, or $4,000 when both spouses work and file a joint return. Deposits made during 1982 are deductible on your 1982 return. And the tax will be deferred on the interest earned as long as it's reinvested in your IRA.

What's more, unlike arrangements with brokerage firms or regular money market funds, your First City IRA is insured up to $100,000 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. This is in addition to the insurance you may have on other deposits.

So what it all boils down to is this: You can continue to pay the IRS more in taxes right now. Or you can save now, earn a higher interest rate, and pay a lot less later on. All you need is an Individual Retirement Account from First City.

Offensive Jets-Raiders may decide it with defense

Marcus Allen
...Raiders all-around threat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The explosive offenses of the New York Jets and Los Angeles Raiders have received a lot of attention, and deservedly so.

However, the defenses of the two teams aren't bad, either.

So the Jets and Raiders will have a lot to be concerned about when they meet Saturday in a second-round National Football League playoff game at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

"They have a great front four, super linebackers and an aggressive secondary," said running back Marcus Allen of the Raiders, referring to the Jets' defense. "I think their strength lies in the front four."

Cincinnati quarterback Ken Anderson would agree with Allen. The Jets sacked him four times and intercepted three of his passes last Sunday as New York trounced Cincinnati 44-17 in a first-round playoff game.

While the Jets gained 517 yards in total offense against the Bengals, the Raiders amassed 510 yards in eliminating the Cleveland Browns 27-10 in another opening-round game.

The Raiders sacked Cleveland quarterback Paul McDonald six times and intercepted him once.

Two of the key players the defenses will be keying on Saturday have played against each other at the Coliseum before: Allen attended the University of Southern California and New York running back Freeman McNeil starred at UCLA.

Allen, the NFL's leading scorer and a unanimous selection as the league's outstanding rookie on offense, and McNeil, a second-year pro who was the NFL's top rusher, were All-Pro selections this season.

Just two years ago, they were on opposite sides of the field when Southern Cal faced UCLA. McNeil's 58-yard touchdown reception late in the final period gave the Bruins a 20-17 victory over the Trojans.

Both Allen and McNeil played down the significance of their first game against each other as pros.

"Marcus is a great running back, but I don't think that's the issue here," said McNeil. "The incentive is not whether Marcus or I does better. The incentive is the Super Bowl."

"There's never been one individual who has won a ball game," said Allen. "Both teams have a lot of talent."

The Raiders, whose 9-1 record is the best in the American Football Conference, were listed as 4-point favorites over the Jets, 7-3.

Because the game wasn't sold out as of Thursday afternoon, it won't be televised locally.

Allen, McNeil and the quarterbacks of the respective teams had big days in last weekend's opening playoff games.

Allen, who rushed for 697 yards on 160 carries during the regular season, gained 72 yards on 17 carries and caught six passes for 75 yards against Cleveland, while quarterback Jim Plunkett completed 24 of 37 passes for a career-high 386 yards.

McNeil, who gained 786 yards on 151 carries during the regular season, rushed for 202 yards in New York's triumph over Cincinnati, while quarterback Richard Todd hit 20 of 28 passes for 269 yards.

Temperatures have been in the 80s in the Los Angeles area this week, meaning the game will be played in conditions the Jets haven't experienced for a while But New York Coach Walt Michaels isn't concerned about that.

"We've played enough games that we should be in condition to play, no matter what the weather is like," he said.

Rather than coming to Southern California early in the week to prepare for the game and adjust to the three-hour time difference, the Jets weren't due to arrive until Friday.

"It's just a business venture, we'll just pack our briefcases, conduct our business on Saturday and come back to New York," said Michaels. "I want no distractions. We've got players from California. I want them in surroundings where they can work best. I want to go in, play, and get out."

The winner will face the winner of Sunday's San Diego-Miami game for the AFC championship Jan. 23. The winner of that contest will represent the AFC in Super Bowl XVII at the Rose Bowl Jan. 30.

"I'd be lying if I said I didn't enjoy being the favorite," said Raiders Coach Tom Flores. "I don't know anyone who likes being an underdog. But when the ball is kicked off, reputations and odds don't mean a thing."

Michaels agreed, saying, "In playoff games, you take all the rankings, records and statistics and throw them all out the window. It's comes down to who is best on a given afternoon."

Skins, Vikes to tangle

Is it really 'just another game'?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The trick to winning today's playoff game against Minnesota, says Washington tackle George Starke, is to treat it as a regular-season game. The idea, counters Vikings quarterback Tommy Kramer, is to treat it as a home game.

"It's just one football game, the same as any other one," Starke said during a break in the Redskins' practice for the National Football League second-round postseason game. "We have to prepare for it the way we'd prepare for any other game and play it like it was a game against them six weeks ago.

"You can't go crazy because it's a playoff game," Starke added. "You have to keep doing what you're good at and not think about the fact that there's a chance it'll be the last game of the season."

The Vikings defeated Atlanta 30-24 in the opening round of the playoffs last Sunday, the day after Washington routed Detroit 31-7. The Vikings won at home. They haven't won elsewhere very often, losing eight of the past nine road games.

"I don't know why we play better at home," said Kramer. "I guess you perform better in more comfortable surroundings. But, regardless, I don't think that should have much effect in the playoffs. Everybody knows it's the last shot. The effort will be there."

The key to beating the Redskins is simple, Kramer said. "We have to control the ball and keep their offense from getting it. We can't give up points like we have on interceptions. Our defense has to shut down their passing game and put pressure on (Joe) Theismann."

Theismann threw three touchdown passes, all to seldom-used wide receiver Alvin Garrett, in the victory over the Lions, while Kramer had two TD passes — 36 yards to Sammy White, 11 yards to Sam McCullum — in the triumph over the Falcons.

The game between the teams is the first since Minnesota trampled the Redskins 39-14 in Washington in 1980. The Vikings also have won the teams' only two playuoff meetings, 27-20 in 1973 and 35-20 in 1976, both played in Minnesota.

Saturday's winner will advance to the National Football Conference championship game against the winner of Sunday's meeting between the Green Bay Packers and Dallas Cowboys. If Washington wins, it will be the home team for the NFC title game Saturday, Jan. 22. If Minnesota wins, it will be on the road again.

Tod Brown sinks deciders

Rebels' upset Odessa Permian

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

With 34 seconds remaining on the scoreboard clock and the game tied at 33-33, Midland Lee's Tod Brown was fouled by Odessa Permian's Orlando Ontiveroz. He hit both ends of the one-and-one to give Lee a two-point advantage.

Twelve seconds later, Rebel Sylvester Johnson stole the ball under the Permian basket only to lose control of it and give the Panthers a second chance. They failed to get off a shot when Troy Nini was called for traveling, leaving 12 seconds on the clock.

Lee was able to get the ball inbounds on the ensuing play and with Tyrone Thurman handling the ball at midcourt, Paul Logan became the fourth Panther to foul out of the game when he tried for the steal and missed. When Thurman hit his first free throw, Lee had a three-point lead and head coach Paul Stueckler, standing by scorers table, yelled to his only rebounder, postman Johnson "Don't foul."

THURMAN'S second free throw missed the mark and Permian brought the ball down court with Stueckler still yelling "Don't foul, don't foul." The Rebels didn't, Permian missed the final shot and Lee had its first District 4-5A victory, 36-33.

Shooting the key free throws in the final seconds proved to be a different experience for the two Rebels. Brown, the 6-foot-1 senior postman, was confident of his aim at the line while 5-foot-6 Thurman was "well past nervous. Right now that's the most important free throw of my life."

"I really wasn't nervous," said Brown of his two shots. "I knew I'd already missed three free throws (in the fourth quarter) and I knew I couldn't miss any more."

WHILE THE game had a dramatic finish, the first three quarters were anything but. Lee won the opening jump ball and immediately went into a "Domino Offense," an attack Stueckler's troops use to slow down a game's tempo when their opponent likes to run the ball and has more board strength than his Rebels.

"We needed a win so bad tonight, no matter how we played them," said Brown who led the Rebels with 11 points and 11 rebounds. "They're (the Panthers) a fast break, pressing team and if we would have tried to play their game they would have beaten us. This is the best I've ever played. We were all working hard for this one and we put it all together tonight. We've been working on the Dornino game since November and working on it hard all week.

In the "Domino Offense," turnovers and impatience can be a killer. If a team can't keep the lead or stay close and if a team takes poor shots, the game plan falls apart. In the first half, Lee played it perfectly.

It took Lee 3:24 to score the first bucket of the game and another minute for Permian to start pulling out of the two-three zone the Panthers employed at the onset. Lee picked up two more field goals to lead 6-0 and nothing Permian put up seemed to know where the basket was at as the Rebels held that score until the start of the second quarter.

PERMIAN'S Logan finally found the mark with 10 seconds gone in the second quarter to cut the margin to 6-2, but the Panthers continued to play erratic while Lee stayed in the Domino and played it about as perfectly as could be expected to build up an 16-6 lead at the half.

Turnovers and missed free throws in the second half started bringing the Panthers back into the game as they cut the margin to eight, 24-14 at the end of three and tied the game at 33-33 with 54 seconds left to play.

"We had 75 fouls, 15 players with five fouls each, we were going to throw at them (Lee)," said Permian head coach Charles Pattillo. "We were going to foul them and make them put it in the hole and get the ball back, not let them hold on to it."

It nearly worked and the strategy gave Stueckler something to worry about. "I thought our inability to hit free throws down the stretch might get us beat," he said.

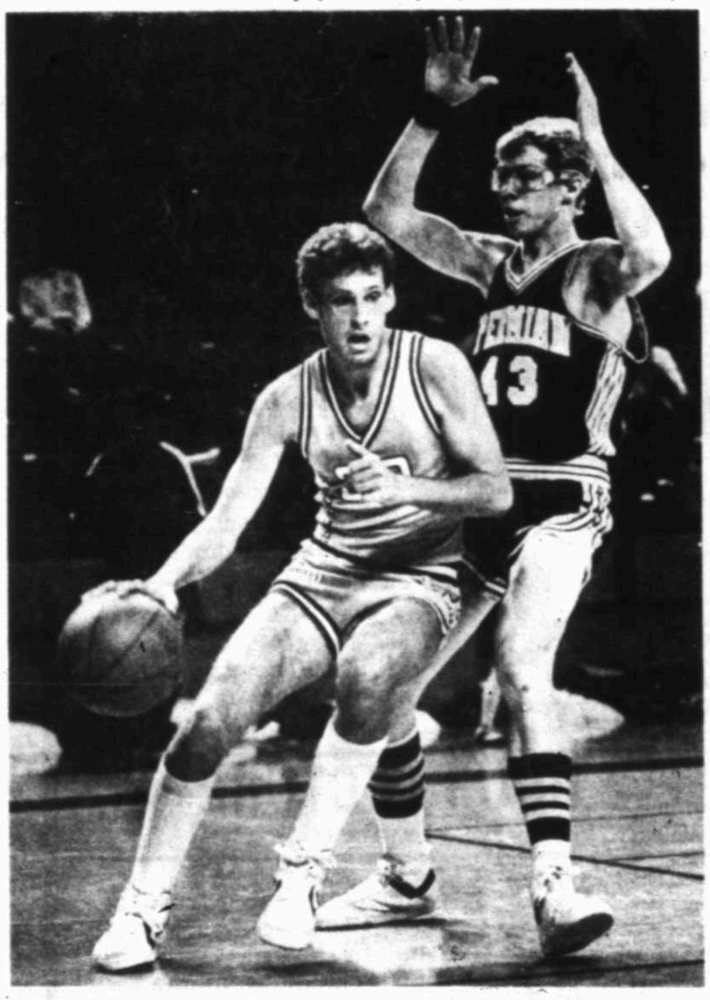

In sophomore action, Lee was a 62-43 winner over Permian with Paul Eldridge scoring 13 and Cary Brown and Clay Floyd adding 12 each. The Lee junior varsity fell suffered an 85-52 defeat with Victor Brown leading the Lee scorers with 12 points.

Bulldogs get physical to beat Bronchos, 61-50

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Olivia Newton-John should have been the guest of honor at the OHS gym Friday night as the Odessa High Bronchos and Midland High Bulldogs put on a little four quarter District 4-5A basketball rendition of "Lets Get Physical."

Physical is the term often used to describe the crew from OHS, but the Bulldogs of Midland High know the tune too. When the smoke cleared in this only knives barred brawl, the Bulldogs out-physicaled Odessa High, 61-50, leaping into the league lead with the once proud and unbeaten Bronchos.

The Bulldog victory left both teams with 3-1 district marks, ending a three-game winning streak by OHS and giving the Bulldogs a three-game win streak to work with against San Angelo in a key 4-5A outing Tuesday at Chaparral Center.

Entering the game, MHS coach Jack Stephenson thought his Bulldogs would have to do two things to beat the Bronchos — get better rebounding and fewer turnovers. The Bulldogs did both in addition to playing hard-ball with the football oriented Bronchos.

"Coach Stephenson said before the game that if we could control the boards, we would win the game," explained Doug Hixon, who led the Dogs with 10 rebounds. "We did and we won. He was right."

"Boards. That was the key and that's what we had to have to win," said David McFarland.

The Bulldogs ripped down 32 rebounds to 22 for OHS and it proved to be good for a share of the district lead. The Bulldogs also committed only 15 turnovers to Odessa's 24. MHS had 26 turnovers against Cooper Tuesday.

"I knew we could win the game if we reduced the turnovers and got the rebounds," Stephenson said. "This may be our best effort of the year. We got the big rebounds and Odessa High picked up the trash. It was a big, big win for us and we should have another big battle with San Angelo Tuesday. I said from the start that no one would go undefeated in this league and no one even made it through the first half without a loss."

Odessa High took a 1-0 lead to start the game, but after Blake Liberty canned a shot early for a 2-1 lead, the Bulldogs never trailed again although the score was tied three times in the first period.

Jumpers by Liberty and Pitts and two free throws by Liberty in the first period broke open a 10-10 game as the Bulldogs raced to a 16-10 lead. Liberty, who had 13 points, 11 in the first half and eight in the first period also had eight rebounds.

The Bulldogs led twice by 12 points, 27-15 early in the second period and 41-29 in the third quarter. But just as it seemed the Bulldogs were ready to romp, OHS would make a charge.

The Bronchos moved to within three with 1:59 in the third period, 41-38, when Joe Terry, who led the Bronchos with 14 points, hit a layup. That's the way it remained until Hixon hit two free throws and Johnny Pannell answered with a bomb for a 49-42 margin with over six minutes left to play. It was Midland's game from there on out.

"I did some bad coaching in the third quarter when they got close because we were attacking their half court trap all wrong. But we were fine when we got things straightened out," Stephenson said.

Pannell, who had seven rebounds, led the Bulldog scoring with 14 points, but he did not have a good shooting night. He hit six of 18 shots from the floor. McFarland had a 12 point night with four of eight from the field and Liberty's 13 came on four of seven shots.

Terry hit four of seven for OHS and Charles Hunter had 10 points with five of 11 from the field. When OHS got close to MHS in the third quarter, they also were feeling the foul pinch. Willie Adams and Howard Harris both fouled out of the game, and OHS showed it weakness in depth. That was another area superior for the Bulldogs. The OHS bench scored four points while the MHS bench ripped off 13 points.

OHS did get some revenge with victories in both the sophomore and junior varsity games. The OHS sophs took a 55-50 win over the Bullpups as Allan Bailey hit for 12 and Lorenzo Navarrette 11 points. Gil Brassard had 10 for MHS.

Sammy Lopez' 13 and tommy Olivas' 10 led the OHS JV to a 61-57 victory over MHS. Todd Shiplett had 12 for MHS while Dennis Cano added 11 and Kyle Kitto 10.

Mark Medal stops Linson in sixth

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Medal, a junior middleweight, stopped Chris Linson at 25 seconds of the sixth round of the featured 10-round fight Friday night at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum.

The win was the 15th in a row, 14 by KOs, for the 25-year-old Medal, a 154-pounder from Jersey City, N.J., who is now 16-1.

Linson, 152½, of Santa Fe, N.M., was never knocked down, but was totally outclassed and offered no resistance when Medal, trained by five-time former world champion Emil Griffith, landed a series of lefts and rights to the head. Referee Herbie Kronowitz stopped the bout.

The loss was the sixth against 10 victories for the 22-year-old Linson.

Unbeaten welterweight Pedro Vilella registered a unanimous 10-round decision over Bruce Finch of Las Vegas, Nev., who lost a title bout to the now retired Sugar Ray Leonard last February.

The 21-year-old Vilella, 144½, a native of Arecibo, P.R., scored a knockdown with a left jab and right uppercut in the sixth round. Finch, 146½, took a four-count before the bell ended the round.

Vilella boosted his record to 11-0-1 with four knockouts. Finch, in his 10th year as a pro, is now 30-6-1 with 24 knockouts.

Undefeated Eddie Gregg of Kew Gardens, N.Y., stopped Barry Funches at 2:44 of the eighth round of their scheduled 10-rounder to improve his record to 13-0-1.

Cox, Malone share honors

By CHAD PUERLING

Keith Cox and Sandra Malone of Midland Lee took top honors in the diving competition during the opening day of the Midland Invitational High School Swim meet.

Cox headed a group of four Midlanders that swept the boy's diving with a 333.10 total. Ken Mechler of Midland High finished second with a 306.25 and Brian Ameel, also from MHS, was third. Rebel Tim Smith completed the Tall City sweep by capturing fourth place.

MALONE OUTDISTANCED Cooper's Jennifer Brightwell 267.80-224.05 in copping the girl's springboard title.

The event includes more than 200 swimmers representing 12 Texas high school teams.

In the swimming preliminaries, San Angelo showed the greatest versitility by qualifying 25 (14 girls, 11 boys) in individual races while Midland High has 22 (10 girls, 12 boys). San Angelo also qualified seven relay teams and MHS had five. Lee had two relay squads, one boy and five girls that made the final eight.

No record times were recorded as most swimmers were just trying to make one of the top eight places, a requirement for gaining berth in the finals.

"MOST OF the better swimmers are just going to place during prelims," COM coach Paul Bridges, who is serving as meet director, said. "Both Midland schools are in good shape, especially the MHS boys."

The Bulldog girls have a chance to sweep the 200-freestyle as Debbie Fleeger, Brandie Schafer and Michelle Craig all qualified. But Cassidy Burdine (San Angelo) and Mary Ann Martinez (Amarillo Tascosa) were a full eight seconds faster than the rest of the field.

Fleeger also qualified for the 100-free and Schaffer will be doubling in the 100-butterfly.

Suzi Simpson and Tina Stephens of MHS qualified for the grueling 500-free and 200-individual medley. Rachael Fink finished third to gain entry into the finals of the 100-backstroke.

Jana Housman, the workhorse of the Lee girls team, qualified in two individual events, the 100 and 50-free. Sandra Malone will join Housman in the short course event. Other Lee qualifiers were Julie Mathis, who finished fourth in the 100-breastroke and Karen Eberly in the 500-free.

Chris White, who finished fifth in the 100-back, was the only male Rebel to qualify for todays' finals.

THE BULLDOGS on the other hand, had six swimmers advanced to the finals. All six will double in individual events along with their team relay duties.

Mike Seay set the pace in the 100-back and took third in the 200-free. Andrew Jordan and Steve Davis qualified in the 100 and 50-free. Andrews finished first in both prelims.

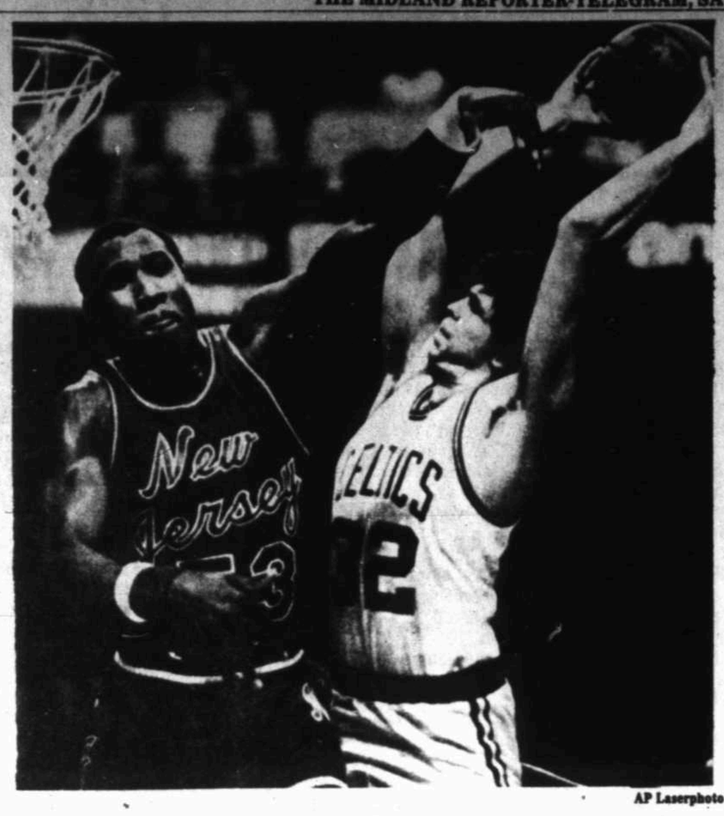

The Bulldogs could sweep the 200-IM as David Hartman, Pat Rhamey and John Brenner all made the final eight. Hartman and Brenner also qualified for the 500-free and Rhamey will swim in the 100-breast finals.

Today's finals and consolations finals are scheduled to begin at noon in the COM pool.

Does the NCAA mean it?

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

The NCAA didn't go as far Father Loschiavo in its endeavor to eliminate collegiate athletic abuses in tightening up admission policies, but it may be a step toward restoring sanity to college athletics.

Father Loschiavo last summer decided enough was enough as indiscretions continued to pop out of the University of San Francisco woodwork and in attempt to save the academic reputation of the school, he simply abolished the basketball program, a successful big-time operation in every respect.

It may have been the most significant action of the year.

IT PERHAPS shamed college presidents into action at the NCAA convention. At any rate, it was the presidents who apparently pushed through the stiffer admission requirements, which has brought a howl of protest.

Arkansas' Lou Holtz, for example, feels the standards are discriminatory to both Blacks and Whites, contending between a third and quarter of SWC athletes would have been ineligible as freshmen under the new rules.

"I don't think there's a correlation between test scores and success in college. I think it's more important how many get out of college, not how they get in," Holtz said.

That's the problem, Lou. A disgracefully small percentage of the athletes are graduating and if the college athletic departments had demonstrated concern over the the academic progress of athletes for whom they have been responsible, the subject never would have come up.

THE ABUSES have been as blatant, unfair and discriminatory as the counter steps taken correct them.

There are conditions under which certain students who would not otherwise qualify for college admission are accepted. Unfortunately, in too many cases these scholarships have been a loophole by which to admit the gifted athlete. If he makes the most of the opportunity in the classroom, it's well worth it. But when he doesn't, he's depriving an underprivileged non-athlete, who might have gotten that scholarship, an opportunity to become a community leader.

The intentions of the NCAA convention apparently were well meant, but the question remains as to how much weight the decisions will carry. Are the college administrators as powerless as the commissioners of pro baseball and football when it comes to enforcing the rules? Will it be business as usual after the flurry of protest dies down?

HOPEFULLY, IT will all work out, but the suspicion here is that raising entrance requirements still won't get the job done.

Big time college athletics announced to the world why athletes were in college when they abolished the rule that made freshmen ineligible for varsity competition. It whisked away the last shred of legitimacy cloaking the student-athlete. It announced loud and clear, "Hey, kid, if you are coming to State U., we're going to get the full four years out of you."

Not only should the freshman rule be reinstated, but strict restrictions should be placed on the amount of time allotted to practice, say 90 minutes a day. And perhaps athletes again should be required to toe the mark academically each week, as it once was.

Of course, it would be impossible to enforce. So pardon us if we are skeptical.

A LEGITIMATE protest over the more stringent entrance requirements which will bring into play SAT and ACT tests as a basis for admission, is that youngsters raised in conducive home environments will naturally do better. Although the tests reflect capability, they still favor the privileged.

Although we never went to school in New York, the state's Regents system of exams might be the answer. At the end of a school year, students, as we understand, take a three-hour exam in each course. The A a student received at his school might be a D, compared statewide...the D also might be a B.

Such a system might be a fairer reflection of the student's learning capabilities, and also would show what kind of a job the school was doing.

Of course, the colleges could give up the sham and simply declare the athletic teams representing the schools professional and employ the athletes on a full-time seasonal basis.

In that case, it really wouldn't be necessary to have a college to be represented by a team. Any community could recruit, finance and support a team. In fact, it is being done even now. They call it minor league baseball.

Patrick sparks Sabres over Caps

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Buffalo right wing Steve Patrick scored two goals to lead the Sabres past the Wshington Capitals 3-2 in the National Hockey League Friday night.

Andre Savard added a shorthanded goal for Buffalo. Ken Houston and Scott Stevens scored for the Capitals.

After Houston gave Washington an early 1-0 lead, Patrick fired a 15-footer from the slot past Capitals goalie Al Jensen. Savard then scored while the Sabres were shorthanded as he wheeled around Jensen and tucked the puck into the far corner.

Patrick scored his second of the game midway through the second period on a rebound. Stevens tallied with 2:13 left in the game to close the scoring.

Gil Perreault assisted on Patrick's second goal, his 1,046th NHL career point, placing him 14th on the all-time NHL scoring list ahead of Montreal's Henri Richard.

ABC to wire coaches

DENVER (AP) — ABC Television hopes to outfit head coaches with microphones and make its instant replay facilities available to settle disputes over officiating calls as part of its coverage of the United States Football League this spring.

"Our innovative ideas are clearly preliminary, and whatever we do will be with the blessing of the league," said Jim Spence, senior vice president of ABC Sports, at a Friday news conference. "We won't get involved in anything that will adversely affect the game."

Mike Pearl, the producer of ABC's USFL coverage, said the network also proposes to conduct a 15-second interview on the sidelines with a player who scores a touchdown as a means of "giving viewers new insight into the game."

Craig Janoff, director of the series, said greater use will be made of videotape replay sources, perhaps focusing on a defensive back as he attempts to cover a receiver.

The proposals are part of ABC's overall philosophy of "acquainting the public with the new names and faces in this league," said Spence.

Dodgers receive 'drug' treatment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles relief pitcher Steve Howe underwent a five-week program for "chemical dependency" late last year and center fielder Ken Landreaux is currently being treated, the Dodgers said Friday.

Responding to a published report in the Daily Breeze of Torrance earlier in the day, the Dodgers released a statement confirming that Howe has completed a program at The Meadows in Wickenburg, Ariz., and Landreaux is under treatment there.

However, the Dodgers denied a part of the Daily Breeze story which said the team will approach at least three other players on the subject in the near future.

"There is no truth whatsoever to this report," said Dodgers' Vice President Al Campanis in the team's statement. "We have an on-going program that is available to everyone in our organization.

"The Dodgers have had an employees assistance program since 1979. We care about all of the people who make up our organization and fortunately we have had a program in place for several years that has been able to assist the well-being of our people."

Wilhelm strikes out with Hall of Fame electors

Los Angeles Times and Washington Post News Service

Hoyt Wilhelm didn't look like a major league ballplayer. Hoyt Wilhelm looked as if he had been put together by someone who had lost the instructions.

First of all, as someone said, Hoyt Wilhelm looked as if his head had been screwed on sideways. It gave him perpetually the look of a guy who was cocking his head to overhear something said in the next booth.

Then, there was that minor league ballplayer who once observed that Hoyt Wilhelm's knuckleball didn't move that much. What happened was that someone went out to centerfield and juggled the fences and the scenery when he pitched.

Hoyt didn't talk much, and he smiled even less. He never looked pained, exactly, just remote. When he dispatched the hitter, it looked as if it hurt him more than it did them. Hoyt didn't exactly have an apologetic air about him, just a kind of a resigned reaction of a guy who mans the electric chair at Sing Sing. His attitude seemed to be, well, it's a living.

HOYT WILHELM pitched in more major league games than any pitcher who ever lived. The legendary Cy Young didn't come within a hundred of him. Which is astonishing. Because, it took Hoyt Wilhelm 10 years to even get to the big leagues. He won 107 games down there, which may be a record. He spent three years in World War II, getting wounded in Germany, in the process, and when he finally made the big leagues, in 1952, a decade after he signed his first contract, he was almost 30 years old, and no one could predict he would appear in 1,070 major league games in the next 21 years.

He even pitched a no-hitter in 1958, against the New York Yankees no less, and that was an era when the Yankees were still the Yankees — Mantle, Berra, Bauer, Skowron, Howard, the world champs that year.

YOU NOT only couldn't hit Hoyt Wilhelm's knuckleball, you couldn't even catch it. Most of the past-ball records set in this century were set by receivers trying to hang onto Hoyt Wilhelm's ball in the face of the changing backdrop scenery. In 1965, J.C. Martin, a pretty fair receiver for the Chicago White Sox, set a modern record of 33 passed balls for the season. Guess who was pitching for Chicago that year?

In 1960, Gus Triandos and Joe Ginsberg set and then tied the major league record for most passed balls in an inning (three) in the same month (May). Guess who was pitching? Bob Uecker, the humorist receiver, wasn't being entirely funny when he said the best way to catch Wilhelm's knuckleball was "to wait till it stops rolling and pick it up." In the 1961 All-Star Game at Candlestick Park, Yogi Berra, the catcher of record, disappeared from the dugout in the bottom of the ninth inning when Hoyt Wilhelm came out of the bullpen in relief for the American League. Yep. His replacement, Elston Howard, came up with a passed ball.

THEY EVEN changed the dimensions of the catcher's mitt for Hoyt. The so-called "Pizza mitt" was invented, a 41-inch pie with everything on it. It was briefly used to slow the knuckler down on its way to the backstop. It was later outlawed, and a reasonably enlarged 38-incher agreed upon, but it is still Wilhelm's monument to the grand old game.

Wilhelm won more games in relief (123) than any pitcher who ever lived, and he appeared in more games in relief, 1,018. Rollie Fingers has more "saves," but that's because the art of the "save" wasn't categorized till Hoyt Wilhelm was in his dotage.

Hoyt Wilhelm pitched in the major till he was 49. But Hoyt Wilhelm apparently has no chance of getting in baseball's Hall of Fame. The electorate must be waiting for him to change water into wine or mutiply loaves or walk the waves. If the best player in history at what he does can't make it, neither should Babe Ruth.

Paterno summons coaches to arms

FOOTBALL— Penn State's Joe Paterno says college coaches should refuse to play schools which fire coaches indiscriminately and said it is time coaches fought for tenure and pensions. "A university can't arbitrarily fire a professor because the American Association of University Presidents wants to know why and can demand an accounting of a university's actions. But coaches get no respect when it comes to people shoving us around. I can fire an assistant coach easier than I can fire a secretary:"...

Bennett

Paterno shocked many black educators at the NCAA convention when he told them they were "selling kids down the river" by opposing minimum SAT and ACT scores as prerequisites for eligibility... "We've got 3½ years to find out whether we can get the high schools to do a better job. There will be three more conventions to find out what has to be done... a 700 SAT score may be too high. Nobody wants to work a hardship on people who have made our sport the great sport it is, and who have made basketball the great sport it is. We're not telling black universities we know what their problem is; we're telling them we know what our problem is."...

Leeman Bennett, after six seasons, has been fired as Atlanta Falcons' coach. Owner Rankin Smith Sr. said the Falcons' late season slump was the reason. "We thought this team had arrived. For whatever reason, it has not arrived ... The situation was one in which we were going backwards instead of forward."

Smith, asked what qualities will be sought in the new coach, said, "Leeman Bennett is the type of gentleman I certainly respect and have great admiration for. I would hope he (Bennett's replacement) would have some of the same qualities," but added Bennett was a "low-key" coach who might not have been firm enough with his players...

Iowa State is looking for a new coach because Donnie Duncan was made a business offer he couldn't refuse. Duncan will join a commercial investments and industrial real estate firm in Dallas Feb...Jim Mora, defensive coordinator at New England, signed a three-year contract to coach the USLF Philadelphia Stars...

TENNIS—Chris Lewis beat Bernie Mitton 6-7, 6-4, 7-5 and advancing to the semifinals of the Benson & Hedges Open at Auckland, N.Z against top seeded John Alexander, 6-1, 6-4 winner over David Seigler. Russell Simpson-Rod Frawley meet in the other semi...

BOXING—Junior middleweight Tony Ayala, Jr., behind bars since New Year's Day after being accused of sexually assaulting a woman, was released from the Passaic, N.J., County Jail after posting $75,000 bond. Ayala,19, faces unrelated legal problems in Texas where authorities are seeking to imprison him because they say he might have violated his probation on a 1978 assault charge. "He's going to be staying here in New Jersey," said promoter Dan Duva, "He'll be working with his attorneys here to prepare his defense."...

In East-West Shrine game

Elway, Simmons lead West squad

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — The East-West Game, an annual postseason showcase for many All-American football players, offers the college stars an uplifting experience rather than glamor.

"Obviously, the Hula Bowl might be considered more glamorous because it is in Hawaii. That usually attracts the upper echelon guys at each position," Southern California's Jeff Simmons admitted while preparing to play in Saturday's 58th East-West Game.

The Hula Bowl, also scheduled Saturday, has been in competition with the East-West Game for players several years now, and the lure of the islands has proven to be very strong in comparison to that of the San Francisco area.

"But believe me, the guys here are not second rate," says Simmons, a wide receiver who caught 56 passes for Southern Cal this season and will be a target for John Elway, Stanford's All-American quarterback, in the East-West Game.

About 65,000 fans are expected to watch the game at Stanford Stadium. The game is played for the benefit of Shriners' hospitals for crippled children.

San Jose State's Gil Byrd, a defensive back for the West, is from San Francisco and was aware of the East-West Game's concept at an early age.

"I read about the game and what it meant not only to the kids but to San Francisco," he said. "I've had two knee operations, and I'd have them again if it meant I could be here."

Elway will share West passing duties with San Jose State's Steve Clarkson. Both quarterbacks have an "in" with the team's head coach, San Jose's Jack Elway, father of John.

Hayden Fry of Iowa, who was head coach of the West once while working for Southern Methodist, is directing the East team this year. His players include quarterback Tony Eason, who had two 3,000-yard passing seasons for Illinois, and several seniors from Penn State's national championship team.

Many of the East-West Game players will be performing before pro scouts for the last time, and many of the players are considered pro prospects.

Cowboys' Wall could foil Packers

DALLAS (AP) — If the Green Bay Packers try for the big play Sunday against the Dallas Cowboys in the National Football League playoffs, they must deal with an Everson Walls-led secondary that has intercepted 18 passes this year.

And cornerback Walls expects them to try.

"Why shouldn't they?" asked Walls. "They have two of the best receivers of all time (John Jefferson and James Lofton). I'm sure they will go deep at any time during the game."

WALLS, WHO intercepted seven passes to led the NFL in that category for the second consecutive season, said, "We can't be dumb about it. Those guys (Jefferson and Lofton) can burn you."

Asked if thought Green Bay would stay away from his area because of his 17 interceptions in just two years, Walls said, "A team like Green Bay will come at you regardless of who you are. Sure, they'll come at me without wondering who I am."

Walls, a free agent find out of Grambling in 1981, said he was set for an exciting time starting with the 3 p.m. kickoff Sunday in Texas Stadium.

"It won't be a boring game," Walls said.

Walls will be covering Jefferson most of the game while Dennis Thurman will be responsible for Lofton.

Thurman said the pair reminded him of Lynn Swann and John Stallworth of Pittsburgh.

"There are a lot of good receivers in the league and I'd say Jefferson and Lofton are right up there," Thurman said. "We'll be OK if we get a good pass rush on (quarterback) Lynn Dickey."

DALLAS was rated a touchdown favorite over the Packers, who are in the playoffs for the first time since 1972.

It is Dallas' 16th playoff appearance in the last 17 years.

The winner will play the winner of Saturday's Minnesota-Washington game in the NFC championship game.

The NFC survivor plays the AFC champion Jan. 30 in the Super Bowl in Pasadena.

Sometimes the Packers use three wide receivers in the game, bringing in rookie Phillip Epps, a speedster free agent from Texas Christian, who has two touchdown pass receptions.

"We've got to watch out for Epps, too," Walls said. "He can fly."

Dallas and Green Bay haven't met in the playoffs since the 1967 "Ice Bowl" NFL championship game that the Packers won 21-17 on a Bart Starr sneak.

County to investigate death of Rams' owner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn called Friday for a federal investigation into allegations that former Los Angeles Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbloom may have been murdered.

Rosenbloom drowned in the surf off Golden Beach, Fla., in April 1979. A public service documentary to be televised Monday night intimates the drowning was not accidental.

Hahn's press deputy, Dan Wolf said, the supervisor "is asking U.S. Attorney William French Smith to convene a special session of the federal grand jury in Florida to look into the allegations.

"He also is asking Los Angeles County District Attorney Robert Philibosian to look into (the program's) further allegations that the Rams were involved in ticket scalping prior to the 1980 Super Bowl," Wolf said.

That National Football League championship game was played in the Rose Bowl at nearby Pasadena between the Rams and the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The story that Rosenbloom apparently was grabbed from below the surface of the water by a swimmer in a black wetsuit and held under until he drowned is based on the word of a Canadian tourist, Raymond Tanguay, who was on the beach at the time.

Tanguay, who is said to have gone into hiding after the incident, was tracked down by a private detective hired by the show's producers.

66 by Gibby good for 3-stroke lead

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Gibby Gilbert, with a 66 that included a birdie set up by a lucky bounce off a spectator's knee, moved into a 3-stroke lead and Arnold Palmer remained in contention Friday in the second round of the $300,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open Golf.

"I'm probably more surprised than anybody," Gilbert said after posting his 36-hole total of 131, 11 shots under par on the 6,655-yard Rancho Park Municipal course.

"This is probably the best two rounds I've put together on the Tour," said Gilbert, who was celebrating his 42nd birthday. He has won three times in 15 years of Tour activity.

Palmer, 53, spiced his round of 69 with an eagle-3 and remained within striking distance of his first PGA Tour title in 10 years with a 135 total, seven under par.

"I felt like my game was better (than when he shot 66 in the opening round). I was striking the ball better. I drove a little better. The irons were a little better. The putting was considerably worse."

His two bogeys both came on 3-putts. The eagle was set up by a 240-yard 1-iron shot that left him with a 2-foot putt.

Fuzzy Zoeller, a former Masters champion and the first-round leader, scrambled to an erratic 70 that left him second at 134.

Palmer was next and was tied at 135 with Tom Watson, Lanny Wadkins, Canadian Jim Nelford and Payne Stewart. Nelford, who plays right-handed and putts left-handed, shot a 66 in the bright, warm sunshine.

Gilbert, a journeyman tourist who describes himself as "a club pro who's trying to buy a golf course and still wants to play the Tour a little," reached all three of the par-5s in two and birdied them all.

Although he hasn't won on the PGA Tour since the Bob Hope Classic of 1973, Palmer still drew the largest gallery of the day. He disappointed them with a three-putt bogey on the first hole, and then followed with six routine pars.

Dan Fouts
...admits he's guy to stop

How do you stop the Chargers?...
Fouts says get quarterback

MIAMI (AP) — San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts doesn't claim to be a defensive genius, but he offers a simple solution to stopping the Chargers' offense — one he's already proven is easier said than done.

"No. 1, I'd stop the quarterback," said Fouts, who averaged a record 325.9 yards per game during the strike-shortened National Foootball League season. "After that, I'd try to find a way to stop (running back) Chuck Muncie. If you can do both of those, you're going to stop this Chargers offense."

THE TASK of shutting down, or at least containing, the NFL's most potent offense this weekend lies with the Miami Dolphins, who host San Diego in an American Conference playoff semi-final at 11:30 p.m. Sunday.

"This, of course, will be the big test, to see our improvement against the No. 1 offensive team," said Miami Coach Don Shula, whose club dropped a memorable 41-38 overtime decision to the Chargers in an AFC semifinal a year ago.

"This is the classic rematch that didn't happen during the season like it was supposed to," Shula added, referring to the scheduled Nov. 8 meeting that was wiped out by the NFL players strike.

IF IT'S any consolation to Shula — whose team ranks first in the NFL in total defense and against the pass — Fouts and San Diego Coach Don Coryell believe the Dolphins potentially present more problems than any defense the Chargers have met this season.

"They are the best group of athletes we've faced. They're all big and run very well," said Coryell. "I think they are by far the best defense we've faced. They are well coached, very disciplined and physical.

"There's nobody in that lineup that we see as a weakness that we can capitalize on. We're just going to have to go in, call the plays and hope they work."

SHULA CONCEDED that shutting down San Diego's passing game might be expecting a little too much — even of a secondary that yielded only 114.1 yards per outing.

The Miami coach said, however, that the key on Sunday could be the Dolphins' ability to contain Muncie and James Brooks, the Chargers' shifty, all-purpose backs.

"The premium they've placed on the pass in the last four or five years is more than anybody else," said Shula. "But by the same token, even San Diego has realized in the last two or three years the importance of the run."

San Diego's defense, meanwhile, will have to concern itself with an improved Miami offense that rediscovered its passing game during the past two weeks.

THIRD-YEAR quarterback David Woodley struggled when the season resumed after the eight-week strike, but found the mark in the regular-season finale at Baltimore and in the Dolphins' 28-13 opening-round playoff victory over New England. Against the Patriots, he hit 16 of 19 passes for 246 yards and two touchdowns.

Hula Bowl tough on defense

HONOLULU (AP) — The West team in today's Hula Bowl game will field an offensive line that averages 6-foot-5 and 270 pounds. But some of the biggest men of college football may not have much time to show their prowess.

That's because of a Hula Bowl rule which says the team that's behind after a score receives the kickoff. The rule has been criticized, partly because it can leave the winning team's defense on the field for long periods.

But West Coach Don James of Washington says he generally thinks it's a good rule.

The West offensive line includes 6-foot-3, 285-pound center Dave Rimington of Nebraska, the two-time Outland Trophy winner.

The West backfield includes Eric Dickerson of Southern Methodist, Stan Wilson of Oklahoma and Jessie CLark of Arkansas, with Tom Ramsey of UCLA as starting quarterback.

Dickerson also will be used as a receiver, James said.

East Coach Jackie Sherrill will start quarterback Dan Marino of Pittsburgh, who will work with running back Curt Warner of Penn State and wide receiver Anthony Carter of Michigan.

Judge ridiculed Piazza

NEW YORK (AP) — The primary source for a public television study of gambling and fixes in professional football appears to be the same witness whose testimony in a Florida drug smuggling case two years ago was ridiculed by a federal judge.

John Charles Piazza III was a witness in the West Palm Beach, Fla., trial of reputed crime figure Tom Farese of Fort Lauderdale on drug smuggling charges in 1980.

Farese was convicted and is serving 30 years, but the jury said it relied on taped evidence and not on Piazza's testimony. And at the time, Judge Norman Roettger said of the witness, "He has admitted just about everything under the sun. I think his testimony is impeached."

However, producers of the TV show would not confirm Friday that the jailed gambler interviewed on their program and identified as John Piazza is the same person involved in the Florida drug case.

Cowboys' Harvey Martin denies charges

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys defensive end Harvey Martin said an admitted drug dealer's court testimony that he used cocaine with the National Football League standout is "all a lie."

Former north Dallas barber Danny Stone testified Thursday in the trial of four accused cocaine dealers that he and Martin "were in on some deals together, where he would come over and we'd do some (cocaine) and he would pay for his part."

Stone said he used cocaine with Martin "two or three times."

Martin, reached after practice Thursday, acknowledged he knew Stone, but denied any dealings with him in cocaine.

"Since Danny Stone is going to the penitentiary, he really didn't mind perjuring himself," Martin said. "For him to really lie on me like that, I think he would have to think he had nothing to lose, so why not perjure himself.

"It's all a lie," Martin said. "I never thought he would lie about me like that."

Stone, who also said he was friends with Cowboys President Tex Schramm and Vice President Gil Brandt because he cut their hair, originally faced several federal drug charges. He pleaded guilty to a single charge of conspiracy and agreed to testify against his co-defendants in the case.

Stone testified about Martin outside the jury's presence, and Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert R. Smith successfully objected the statements were irrelevant.

Stone said outside the courtroom that he was concerned his testimony would hurt Martin's career.

Schramm, reached in San Francisco, also acknowledged knowing Stone. But Schramm said that "other than him being a barber in a barbershop, I wouldn't know anything else about it."

Schramm declined to comment on Stone's testimony.

Smith said he could not comment on whether Martin was investigated, or why he was not prosecuted after Stone made his allegations, but the prosecutor said that the amount of cocaine Stone said was involved was probably not enough to warrant an investigation.

On trial are John Russell Webster Jr., 40, and John Caperton, 33, both of Dallas; Delbert Paul Hoskins, 50, of Gainesville, Fla., and Robert Bode, 36, of Philadelphia. All are charged with conspiring to distribute cocaine.

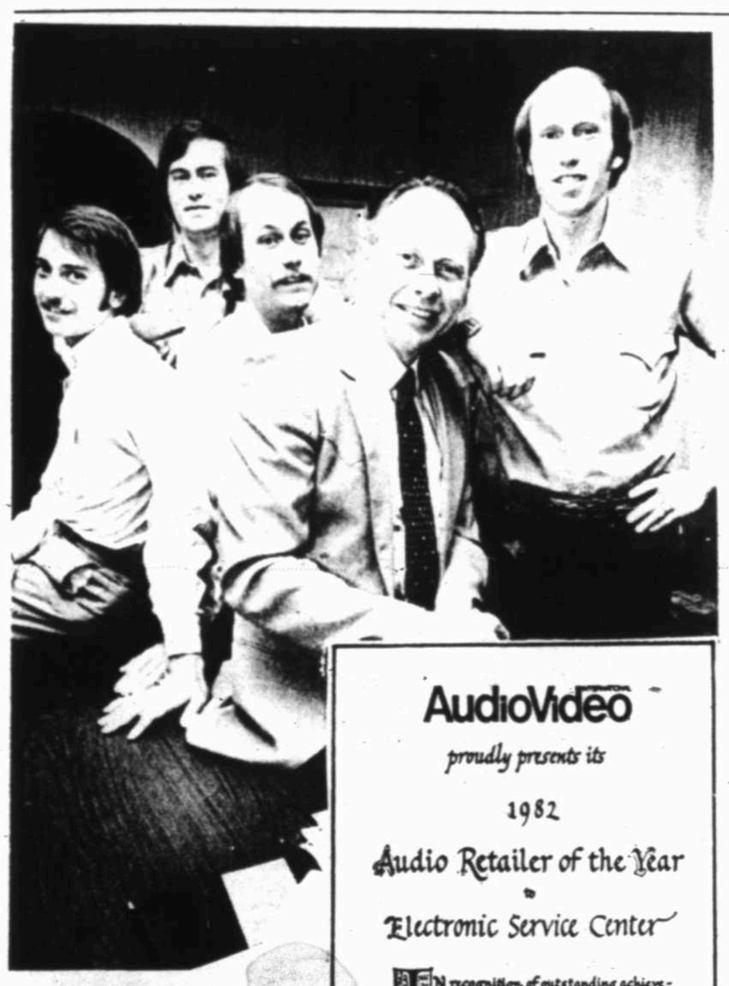

Virginia, UNC risk streaks

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia, ranked No. 2 and hoping to be No. 1 next week, faces North Carolina, the defending NCAA champion and ranked 11th, 1:30 p.m. (NBC-TV) today.

Two streaks are on the line in this contest. The host Cavaliers have a 34-game home court winning streak, while North Carolina's Tar Heels have won seven in a row. They shared the ACC title last season.

Virginia, led by 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson, feels a win will put the Cavs back in the top spot, a place they held in the preseason rankings and several weeks thereafter until upset by Chaminade in Hawaii in late December.

The top spot may be theirs for the offering since No. 1 Memphis State was upset by Virginia Tech Monday night.

ELECTRONIC SERVICE CENTER
WINS "Audio Retailer of the Year" AWARD

Electronic Service Center has been notified that they were the recipient of the coveted "Audio Retailer of the Year" award. This is a distinguished award and would have been an honorable achievement had it of been just for the West Texas area, but the AVI survey is conducted nationwide.

The ground rules for the 1982 Retailers of the Year start with sending ballots to manufacturers and reps who are asked to submit the names of dealers they felt met the standards for Retailer of the Year honors. While sales volume is not a criterion, voters are requested to make recommendations on the basis of the store's strength in the areas of service and management. The service aspects are covered under headings such as "knowledgeable sales force, consumer education and customer service", while under the management umbrella fall "financial stability, sales growth and advertising/promotion."

Winners are elected by the votes of more than 325 manufacturers and more than 1,100 representatives. Retailers of the Year were selected from about 500 dealers across the United States, and from these 500, Electronic Service Center was voted in the top twenty-three.

Audio Video International notified Electronic Service Center of their top award with a certificate that reads as follows:

"Audio Video International proudly presents its 1982 Audio Retailer of the Year to Electronic Service Center, Odessa/Midland, Texas. In recognition of outstanding achievement in sales performance, customer service, and professionalism in the conduct of business during the past year, as verified by AVI's annual national survey among leading manufacturers of hi-fi equipment."

Mr. Milt Thornton, president of Electronic Service Center, expressed his gratitude to staff and customers that made such an award possible.

Midland and Odessa have the right to be proud of a home grown business achievement such as this, because it's not often a business with roots in West Texas gets nationwide recognition.

Mr. Milt Thornton gives a large portion of credit for the Retailer of the Year award to his staff and particularly his store managers.
Pictured in top photo is Kevin Crosson, manager of the Midland Electronic Service Center, located at Wadley and Midkiff.
In the next photo is Jerry Putman, manager of the Odessa Electronic Service Center which is located at 2727 Andrews Highway.

Mr. Milt Thornton, president of Electronic Service Center, began his business in 1959. Since that time, his customer services have expanded and as they did, so did sales performances.
When Mr. Thornton reflects on the growth of Electronic Service Center, with stores in Midland and Odessa, he credits the professionalism of his staff and the good folks of West Texas.
Pictured above is Mr. Thornton with his four sons, from left to right: Weldon, Gary, Robert and on his left, Larry Thornton.

Rebels claim they inflicted heavy casualties

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Left-wing guerrillas on Friday claimed they have inflicted heavy casualties on government troops as they pressed a five-day-old offensive in northern El Salvador.

The rebels' Radio Venceremos said the guerrillas have killed or wounded 46 soldiers and captured 90 since their "Revolutionary Heroes of January" offensive started Sunday. The broadcast said 135 rifles also were seized.

One of the chief targets of the campaign appeared to be San Francisco Gotera, the capital of embattled Morazan province.

A military source who asked not to be named reported fighting at Sociedad, six miles east of the provincial capital. The insurgents seized Cacaopera, five miles north of San Francisco Gotera, earlier this week.

Morazan, some 100 miles northeast of San Salvador, is a rugged, undeveloped mountainous area where the guerrillas have long been strong.

SOUTH OF MORAZAN, a Defense Ministry source reported heavy fighting in Chalatenango province, another rebel stronghold. The source said 700 government troops were operating in an area 50 miles northeast of San Salvador, between the towns of San Francisco Morazan and La Laguna, and two soldiers were killed and 11 were wounded Thursday.

Other sources said guerrillas attacked Nueva Granada, 67 miles east of San Salvador, and fought civil defense and national guard troops for four hours, but no casualties were reported.

Meanwhile, mutinous Col. Sigifredo Ochoa Perez, 40, who capitulated Wednesday after a five-day attempt to force Defense Minister Jose Guillermo Garcia to resign, told reporters he was delighted by his assignment to Washington. He will take a one-year course at the Inter-American Defense College, one of six Pentagon war colleges.

"I think it will be a great experience," he said. "It's a very prestigious school. It's the culmination of an officer's career. It's an honor to be part of it."

A DIPLOMATIC source said attendance at the war college is a choice assignment.

The assignment was one more indication of Ochoa's high standing within the Salvadoran military establishment even though Gen. Garcia prevailed in the showdown this week. Military sources say the confrontation weakened Garcia's authority, and his days in power are numbered.

Ochoa, the commander in Cabanas province, was considered one of the army's best field commanders. He is close to the right wingers who are now the dominant political force in the government and has been critical of the army's dependence on the United States.

Garcia, who became defense minister in the October 1979 coup and survived all the numerous government upheavals since then, considered Ochoa a threat and ordered him to Uruguay as a military attache. The colonel refused to go and demanded that Garcia resign.

After the standoff, which demonstrated that neither man was strong enough to get rid of the other, the colonel accepted an order from President Alvaro Magana to give up his command. The president said no disciplinary action would be taken against him.

A TOP-LEVEL government source said Ochoa's Cabanas command would be given to another rightist who is one of his closest friends, Col. Roberto Rodriguez Murcia.

The right-wing Association of Patriotic Women called a rally in San Salvador Friday to protest conditions placed on U.S. military and economic aid by Washington. The group is linked to Roberto D'Aubuisson, the ultra-rightist who is president of the constitutent assembly.

The right wing's increasing political power has emboldened it to oppose publicly U.S. demands for social and economic reforms and the punishment of human rights violators. To get the approval of the U.S. Congress for continued aid, the Reagan administration must certify to Congress by Jan. 28 that the Salvadoran government is making progress in these fields.

At least 17 American delegations, including three groups of congressmen, are expected for inspection visits in the two weeks before the deadline. Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., and Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., were scheduled to arrive Friday.

Quotas on Chinese textiles stopgap measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Import restrictions imposed by the United States on Chinese textiles are probably only a stopgap measure until the two countries reach agreement on a new quota, observers in the labor movement, the academic world and Congress said Friday.

"My impression is that this is just a bargaining ploy," said Robert M. Dunn Jr., an economics professor at George Washington University and a student of international trade.

Dr. Herman Starobin, research director of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, predicted the subject will be discussed when Secretary of State George Shultz visits China Feb. 2-6.

"If he doesn't bring it up, the Chinese will bring it up," Starobin said.

John Keyserling, director of a caucus of members of Congress from textile-producing states, said, "I would anticipate we would leave the avenue open for future negotiations. Neither the president nor the Chinese wanted unilateral controls."

The observers differed on the effect of the restrictions, which were published Thursday when Chinese and U.S. negotiators in Peking failed to reach agreement.

"If they stay in effect for any period of time, there will be an increase in prices," said Dunn. "It would definitely have an inflationary impact on a wide range of relatively inexpensive clothes."

Starobin, however, said that despite lower wages, "Somehow at retail the prices of imports are at least equal to the prices of domestic production and in some cases are even higher."

Keyserling said the actual amount of imports from the Chinese is unlikely to be affected and added, "I don't see it hurting the America consumer at all."

Mark Goodin, press aide to Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said the senator was "satisfied this is going to be stringent enough to keep any flood of Chinese goods out of the market until we can negotiate a bilateral agreement."

U.S. negotiator Peter Murphy told reporters in Peking that the restrictions would not reduce China's existing trade. China is guaranteed at least the current annual level of $700 million in textile trade, he said.

The import restrictions actually will go into effect Saturday, retroactive to the Dec. 31 expiration date of an earlier two-year, bilateral textile agreement. The New Year's Eve deadline was extended until Jan. 15 in hopes that further negotiations would produce a new pact.

China wants a larger share of the American textile market to help overcome its trade deficit, while the United States reportedly is under pressure from American manufacturers to limit textile imports.

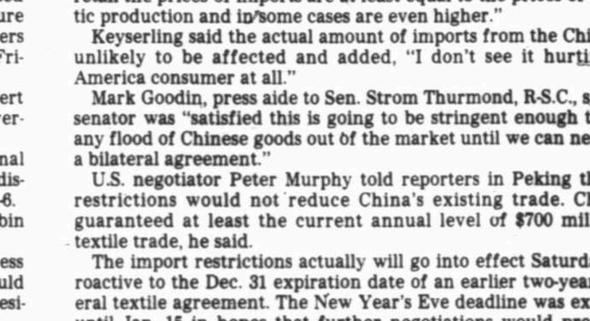

U.S. textile industry sources say China wanted a sales-growth rate of about 6 percent a year.

Counties will forfeit SMSA status

By The Associated Press

Four Texas counties will be dropped from urban statistical areas by federal budget director David Stockman, a move that has angered officials in at least one city affected by his decision.

Modified federal guidelines effective June 30 would drop Harrison County, including the city of Marshall, from the Longview-Marshall Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area, leaving a new "Longview SMSA."

U.S. Rep. Sam B. Hall, a Marshall Democrat, said he has "complained bitterly" to Stockman's office and pledged to get the guidelines changed.

Howard Coghlan, president of the Longview Chamber of Commerce, said the decision could cause many "national business firms" to change plans about locating plants and offices in Harrison County.

Other changes Stockman is making would delete Clay County, whose county seat is Henrietta, from the Wichita Falls SMSA; and Callahan County, county seat Baird, and Jones County, county seat Anson, from the Abilene SMSA, a spokesman for the federal Office of Management and Budget says.

Standard Metropolian Statistical Areas have been set up around the nation during the past 30 years to create standard definitive areas for federal and state agencies to obtain and publish statistics, said Richard Forstall of Washington, secretary for the Committee on Metropolitan Statistical Areas.

New guidelines adopted by the OMB in 1980 require a city — such as Longview, Abilene or Wichita Falls — to have at least 2,500 residents in a contigious county for that county to be designated as part of the city's SMSA.

Many firms just won't locate plants in a city if it isn't in an SMSA, Coghlan said.

"Many businesses and industries have located in this area since the Longview-Marshall SMSA was established," Coghlan said.

The loss of a city or county from the statistical area also will mean lower totals in such areas as bank deposits, construction permits, and population — which industries examine when planning relocation, he said.

Americans to save their money in 1983, study says

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Americans plan to keep a tight hold on the pursestrings during 1983, according to a new public opinion sampling which says consumers believe the economy will improve, but still prefer to save instead of spend.

"We think that there is a feeling of optimism, but...people want to protect themselves financially," said Karen Olshan, vice president and manager of special projects for BBDO, the advertising agency which conducted the survey.

Ms. Olshan said the ups and downs of the past year have left people uncertain about the future and reluctant to commit themselves to purchases that are not necessary.

The telephone survey was conducted Jan. 3 and 4 and involved a national sample of 200 adults — 100 men and 100 women.

Slightly more than half those questioned indicated they had money troubles last year. When given a list of choices and asked which one best described their houshold financial situation in 1982, 35 percent said they felt some financial pressure and 22 percent said they found it difficult to make ends meet. Six percent described themselves as well-off and 37 percent said they were reasonably comfortable.

Asked what they thought would happen to their household financial situation in 1983, 39 percent of the survey respondents said it would improve, 42 percent said it would stay the same, 16 percent said it would get worse and 3 percent had no opinion. People with higher incomes were more cheerful than those with lower incomes; 49 percent of those with a household income of $20,000 or more said their personal finances would improve, while only 23 percent of those in the under-$20,000 category looked for an upturn.

The people surveyed also were optimistic about the U.S. economy as a whole. Forty-seven percent said economic conditions in the country would improve in 1983; 22 percent said they would stay the same; 27 percent said they would get worse; and 4 percent had no opinion.

At the same time, however, amost nine people in 10 — 88 percent of those surveyed — said that if they had any money left over after paying for essentials they would save or invest it. Only 12 percent said they would spend it.

"Apparently the inflation-induced mentality of 'buy now because it's bound to cost more later' has largely disappeared," the BBDO report said.

If people were going to spend, their first choice would be a car.

Men and women were asked separately to select one item from a list that they would like to buy if money were no object. Fifty-four percent of the men picked a new car, 22 percent picked a vacation, 13 percent said a new wardrobe, 4 percent said jewelry, 6 percent said season tickets to professional sports events and 1 percent had no choice. The answers from the women — who were given the choice of a fur coat instead of sports tickets — were similar: 54 percent picked a new car, 28 percent a vacation, 13 percent a new wardrobe, 2 percent jewelry, 2 percent a fur coat and 1 percent said no choice.

Mickey Rooney files suit for firm's use of likeness on collector plate

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Actor Mickey Rooney is suing the successor to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios for $6 million, alleging the company allowed his name and picture to be used in a set of collectors' wall plates without his permission.

Rooney filed the suit in U.S. District Court against MGM-UA Entertainment Co., the successor to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc., which featured Rooney in several motion pictures.

The set of collector plates, titled "The Golden Age of Cinema," depict Rooney and Judy Garland, Clark Gable and Jean Harlow, and Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

The suit alleges that although Rooney never gave MGM or its successor permission to use his name or likeness on merchandise for sale, he has reason to believe that MGM-UA granted a license for "worldwide commercial exploitation" of his "name and fame."

"They are causing to use Mickey Rooney's name and fame to sell merchandise," Rooney's attorney, David Berger, said at a news conference Thursday.

The plates, marketed by Calhoun's Collector's Society of Minneapolis, sell for $37.50 each.

Sales of the plates began in 1978, according to the suit, which asks $1 million in compensatory and $5 million in punitive damages.

"I don't believe that it has any dignity," Rooney said. "I believe that it takes away the dignity of every one's individuality."

Although Rooney's name is used in promoting acting schools and restaurants, he said those are all his own investments.

Spokesmen for the legal department at MGM-UA Entertainment in Culver City, Calif., said the company would not comment on the suit.

MANAHAWKIN, N.J. (AP) — Lester F. Byerley is running for president, and one of his campaign promises is to give every American $10,000.

The government should print new money for a form of federal revenue sharing to spur buying, increase demand for goods, create jobs and pour money into the ailing economy, Byerley added.

"This will create, more or less, trickle-up economics," said the 38-year-old house painter and the father of one.

"This is to increase productivity in the United States. It is to create jobs in the United States, and to bring interest rates down in the United States, hopefully to 3 percent or 4 percent levels," said Byerley, who has never held office before.

He is one of the 34 people nationwide who have filed applications as of Thursday with the Federal Election Commission to be placed on the 1984 ballot for president.

The Democrat said he'd like Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who has bowed out of the presidential race, to be his running mate.

He also says he's for an immediate nuclear weapons freeze, that nuclear power plants should be dismantled slowly, and that the nation should become more dependent on solar and coal-fired power.

The FEC only recognizes candidates who have spent more than $5,000 on their campaigns by the time ballot assignments are drawn. Byerley said he's not sure how much money he plans to spend on his bid for the White House, and he hasn't put together a campaign organization.

"I don't have all the answers, and when I don't know something, I obtain the information I don't know from the best people," he said.

King's birthday celebrated by thousands

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

Tens of thousands of schoolchildren too young to remember Martin Luther King Jr. were given a holiday Friday to celebrate his 54th birthday and his legacy — in the words of a 10-year-old in San Diego — of "how not to fight and get along with each other."

Public schools were closed in several states, including California and metropolitan counties in Maryland, to commemorate the slain civil rights leader's birthday on Saturday, during a long weekend of parades, rallies, memorial services, tree-plantings, seminars and other public events in King's honor across America.

Marion Barry, the black mayor of Washington who once was a student activist in the South, led singer Stevie Wonder and hundreds of marchers Friday down Martin Luther King Avenue in the predominantly black Anacostia neighborhood.

Elsewhere in the capital, an oak tree was planted in King's memory on the Mall near the Washington Monument. At a rally at the Agriculture Department, comedian Richard Pryor, visibly overcome with emotion, said that "I know in my heart I wouldn't be here today" except for the courage of King and other civil rights activists in the 1960s.

A march was planned Saturday in Los Angeles to celebrate the renaming of a city street to Luther King Boulevard, and a week of special observances in Atlanta will climax on King's birthday with a march to the Georgia Capitol for a rally. Vice President George Bush will lay a wreath at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change and give a speech that night.

Among several memorial marches conducted Thursday by schoolchildren was a 1½-mile trek by 2,000 pupils through a predominantly black section of San Diego. Accompanying them was city school board member Bob Filner, a former "freedom rider" in the South and a veteran of King's famous march from Selma to Montgomery, Ala., in March 1965.

"It helps us to not forget," Filner said.

Amos Williams, 10, who is too young to remember King, said, "We're marching for freedom. Added Melvin Churchill, also 10: "We are also learning how not to fight and get along with each other."

Pryor said in Washington that "we will not be satisfied" until Congress declares King's birthday on Jan. 15 a national holiday.

Although King's birthday is an official holiday in 17 states, the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands and many major cities, legislation making it a national holiday has failed in every session of Congress since King was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., and Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., plan to introduce a new King holiday bill later this month, and Conyers predicts it will pass the House this time.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. gestures during an April 1967 sermon at the Atlanta church where he was co-pastor with his father. The 54th anniversary of the birth of the slain civil rights leader will be celebrated throughout the nation today.

Some opponents say it would hurt the economy during a recession to give American workers another holiday off.

President Reagan, without committing himself on the issue, said last May that honoring King's memory with a new national holiday might lead to "an awful lot of holidays if we start down that road."

Ailing youths given 'dream trip'

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Eight-year-old Marty Dassie Jr. suffers from a brain tumor that has nearly robbed him of his sight and threatens to claim his life. But Friday, Marty's thoughts weren't on his illness. He was thinking about a very special weekend ahead, a dream come true.

The Florida youngster was being flown to Texas to watch his heroes, the Dallas Cowboys, in a Sunday's National Football League playoff game.

Marty, a Cowboys fan "for as long as I know," says he hasn't told any of his classmates of his trip.

"I'm going to wait until Monday when the teacher asks everyone what they did this weekend," he says.

Another 8-year-old, Trevor Ray of Salt Lake City, who also is afflicted with a brain tumor, will be making the trip, too. Doug Todd, Cowboys public relations director, says children from across the country with incurable diseases often are guests at Cowboys home games.

Marty and Trevor fly to Texas Friday to meet their idols. They will attend the Cowboys practice Saturday, then Sunday's matchup with the Green Bay Packers.

"We'll usually have one or two at every game," Todd said. "That's not unusual. But it is unusual to have two of similar age with the same problem."

Marty's trip was made possible by Ted Aggelis, a member of the Polk County School Board in his hometown of Lakeland.

Doctors say Marty may not live into his teens because of a tumor at the base of his brain. It has practically robbed him of his vision in one eye and left the other strong enough only to discern movement and shadings. He's undergone surgery twice, but the tumor keeps growing.

Marty got a gift for the trip, a Cowboy jersey emblazoned with the number 33. He quickly identified the number as belonging to running back Tony Dorsett.

He's convinced his team will win, by 30-27.

Trevor's mother, Larri Ray of Salt Lake City, said her son was looking foward to the trip.

"It will be a thrill for him to meet quarterback Danny White and the Cowboys," said Mrs. Ray, who was born and raised in Dallas. Her son received pictures of the team while he was in the hospital undergoing laser surgery.

Mrs. Ray said he son's condition deteoriated last summer and doctors at Primary Children's Medical Center in Salt Lake say they consider the tumor to be inoperable.

Marty's mother said this will be her son's first airplane flight. He is scheduled to fly to Boston next month to visit doctors and said he wouldn't get on a plane. "But he'll get on a plane to see the Cowboys," she said.

Marty, the oldest of three children, can rattle off the names of the Dallas team like most children blurt out their own name and address.

Last week, Marty pressed his face up near his TV screen and watched Dallas beat the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in the first round of the playoffs.

In school, Anna Aggelis, one of his second-grade teachers, noted how excited he was that the Cowboys beat the Bucs. She told her father, Ted Aggelis.

"All dad said was: 'That's neat,' and he left the room," she said. "Next thing I know he's putting together the trip for Marty."

Ted Aggelis, manager of safety and public relations for a construction firm, put the trip together Tuesday and collected donations to cover expenses for Marty and his father.

Actress, playwright arrested

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor-playwright Miguel Pinero and actress Valentina Quinn were arrested and booked for investigation of being under the influence of drugs, police said Friday.

Pinero, 36, whose best-known play is "Short Eyes," and Ms. Quinn, the 30-year-old daughter of actor Anthony Quinn, on Friday denied having used any illicit drugs.

They were arrested at the Rampart Division police station about 5 p.m. Thursday after they came in to report a stolen car, said Sgt. Richard Roach.

"The officer on the desk happened to be a qualified narcotics expert" and made the arrest based on their's behavior, Roach said, adding that the booking charge is a misdemeanor and no drugs were recovered.

The two were released later on $1,000 bail each, officers said.

"She was scared half to death," Pinero said of Ms. Quinn.

Coed fraternity 'resigns'

Hearst Feature Service

Stanford University's only coed fraternity has resigned its national charter after refusing to expel its women members or reinstate traditional "rush" activities.

The Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity, which selects members through a computer lottery, was suspended by the national organization in 1981 after electing a female president.

Local members this week notified the national chapter they would give up their affiliation after a unanimous vote of 30 members Jan. 5.

Officials of the national organization, based in Delaware, Ohio, said they would have no statement until its leaders met to discuss the matter.

Stanford's Alpha Sigma Phi chapter, which has 25 male and 25 female members at its university-owned house, now plans to call itself Alpha Sigma and operate as a student living group.

"Obviously we're not like a traditional fraternity," said treasurer Jimmy Kimzey, a sophomore economics major from Farmersville, Texas. "Women here are members, and they're treated equally at every social function."

Alpha Sigma's admission policies are also unusual. Rather than hold traditional "rush" parties, the fraternity receives new members through the university's computerized lottery system for residential housing.

Initiations are unique, as well.

"We don't get our kicks by hazing and scaring someone to death," Kimzey said. "We don't have forced drinking games or anything like that."

The fraternity's initiation rites, he said, are a secret but are designed to make new members feel welcome.

"They're an exemplary group in a lot of ways," said Diana Conklin, assistant dean of student affairs. "It's a close knit, very popular house, and they run their own affairs with great skill."

Conklin said the fraternity "combines the best of all worlds" through its coed housing, unity and non-exclusive membership.

"To me it's a fascinating combination," she said. "They're a great bunch of students."

Alpha Sigma Phi, which has operated at Stanford since 1917, began admitting women as members in 1973 but did not run afoul of the national organization for eight years.

"They didn't figure it out for awhile," Kimzey said. "When they finally did, they weren't too pleased about it but they didn't cause us any trouble."

But in 1981 the fraternity elected a woman president. When the woman, Dana Goldfine, attended the fraternity's national convention and proposed giving local chapters the option of admitting women, the national group put its foot down.

Stanford's chapter was suspended over its admission policies that year. Although several compromises have since been discussed and the national organization was scheduled to review the case this month, the local chapter voted to bow out.

"Our chapter wants to take charge of its own affairs rather than be governed by the national fraternity," a statement mailed to the national organization and to alumni said.

"While we believe that an all-male system works for some chapters of Alpha Sigma Phi, we feel that at Stanford the addition of women as full and equal members of Alpha Sigma Phi vastly enhances the experience of fraternity life."

Kimzey said the letter was not meant as a statement against fraternities.

"We're not saying it's better our way," he said. "We're just saying that it's another alternative, and we like it this way."

Conklin said the decision won't affect the fraternity's standing on campus.

"It really doesn't make any difference to us. We're pretty proud of their reaffirming their local autonomy," she said.

David Nini, son of Jack and Barbara Nini of 1703 Huntington, has been named Junior Lion of the Week by the Midland Downtown Lions Club. A senior at Midland High School, he is active in National Honor Society, student council, varsity baseball and serves as chairman of public relations for the President's Cabinet. He plans to attend The University of Texas and major in business.

Odessa developer applies for wastewater disposal OK

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Fred C. Gage Development, Inc., Odessa, has applied to the Texas Water Commission for a permit authorizing disposal by irrigation of treated domestic wastewater effluent from a plant site in Ector County.

The discharge will not exceed 1 million gallons per day average and will be released from a wastewater plant to be built by Gage.

The effluent will be used to irrigate a 290-acre golf course. Application rates for the land will not exceed 5.3 acre-feet per acre per year.

The plant is to be approximately 375 feet south-southeast of the intersection of West 16th Street and Tesco right-of-way, and approximately 2,250 feet west-southwest of Moss Avenue and West 16th Street.

The irrigated land is between Damascus Drive and Knox Drive and between West Third Street and West 16th Street.

The plant and irrigated land are in the drainage area of the Colorado River system.

No public hearing will be held unless requested by an affected person.

Bernardin meets with Vatican

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago and church leaders from Britain, France and West Germany will hold two days of "informal meetings" in the Vatican next week to discuss nuclear disarmament, the Vatican announced Friday.

The Rev. Romeo Panciroli, Vatican press spokesman, said the bishops would meet Tuesday and Wednesday in the Synod Hall of the Apostolic Palace.

He said the bishops would be joined by representatives of two Vatican offices: the Council on Public Affairs and the Justice and Peace Commission.

Panciroli said the meetings would be private and no final document was expected to be released.

On Top Of The World

A little child doesn't understand bigness. Nor does he understand height and depth and length or any other proportions. But he knows love. He has trust.

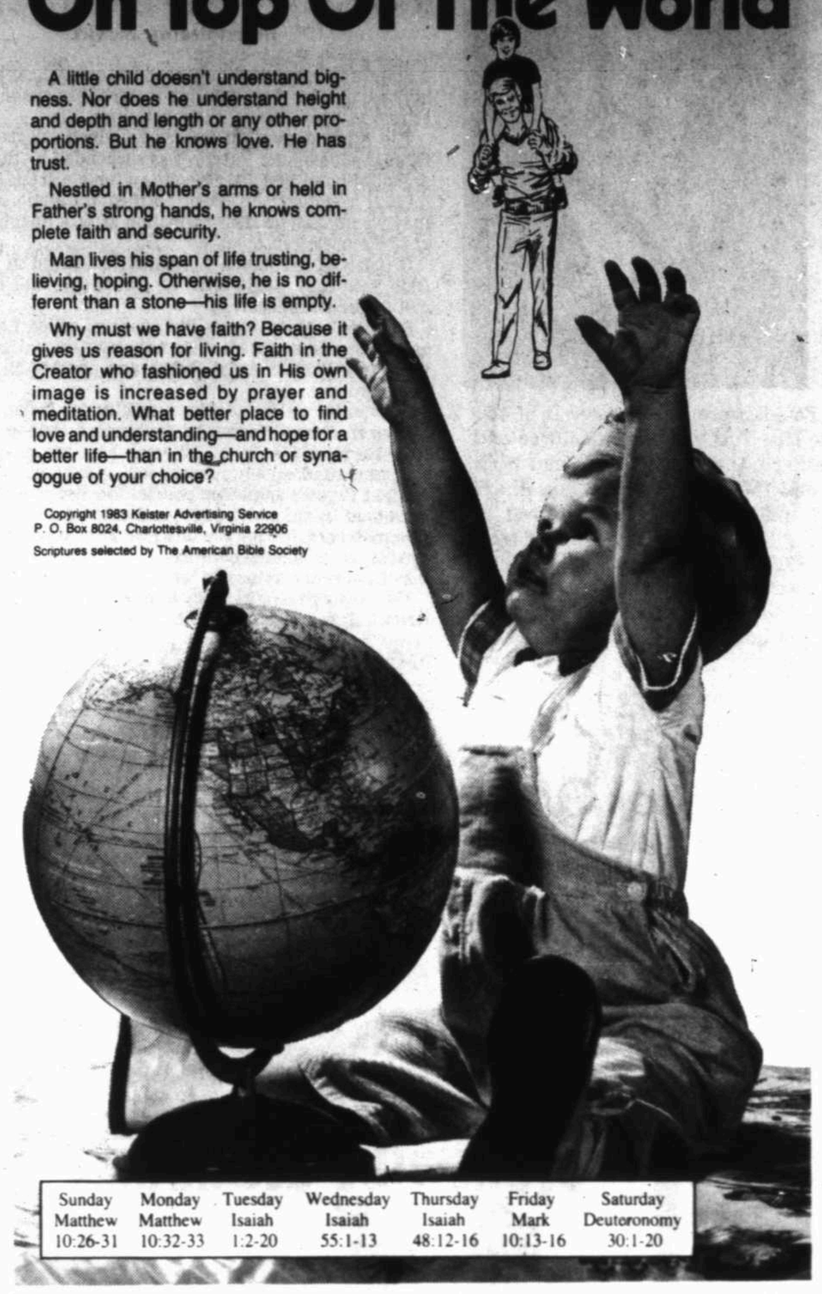

Nestled in Mother's arms or held in Father's strong hands, he knows complete faith and security.

Man lives his span of life trusting, believing, hoping. Otherwise, he is no different than a stone—his life is empty.

Why must we have faith? Because it gives us reason for living. Faith in the Creator who fashioned us in His own image is increased by prayer and meditation. What better place to find love and understanding—and hope for a better life—than in the church or synagogue of your choice?

Checking over the material before class begins are, fron left, Annalon Gilbreath, the Rev. Steve Church of First Christian Church and Chuck Logue. Two sessions of The Trinity Bible Studies, presented at First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., will begin this week with Ms. Gilbreath teaching the Tuesday 10 to 11:30 a.m. session and Logue conducting the Thursday 7 to 8:30 p.m. session. For more information call Cynthia Williams at 682-2541.

First Christian Church has Bible study for laymen

A program of disciplined Bible study for laymen, emphasizing "knowing what the Bible says as a basis for what it means," begins the third week in January at First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., and ends the last week in March. It is a 10-week study.

Not intended as "merely devotional or occasional" material, these studies call for a disciplined commitment. The student is expected to attend weekly classes and complete daily assignments; however, the approach is neither heavy nor scholastic. Unique visual learning aids, cartoons and memory techniques present abstract Biblical concepts in memorable form.

Two sessions will be offered. Tuesday's session, taught by Annalon Gilbreath, will be held from 10 to 11:30 a.m. and Thursday's session, Chuck Logue's, will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Registration fee is $10 for new students and $8 for returning students. A nursery will be provided.

Each student will receive a study guide and notebook.

For more information call Cynthia Williams at 682-2541.

The Blackwood Brothers will perform at the Westside Baptist Church in Odessa Monday at 7:30 p.m. Winners of seven Grammy awards and voted by the Gospel Music Association as the best male group, the Blackwood Brothers also have performed on numerous television shows. Their Odessa performance is free and open to the public.

Rev. Tinsley to be ordained as priest

The Rev. Fred H. Tinsley Jr. will be ordained as a priest in the Episcopal Church Jan. 21 at 7 p.m. at The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois Ave.

The ordination ceremony will be conducted by the Right Rev. Sam B. Hulsey, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Northwest Texas.

Tinsley is a 1972 graduate of the University of Oklahoma, where he obtained his bachelor of science degree in pharmacy. After eight years in the practice of pharmacy, he enrolled in the School of Theology at the University of the South in Sewanee, Tenn. He graduated with a master of divinity degree in 1982 and joined the staff of The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity in May 1982. Shortly thereafter, he was ordained deacon in the church and has served in that capacity to the present.

Chinese woman persecuted for faith

Very few people face a firing squad and live to tell about it. Chinese evangelist Nora Lam did.

As the adopted daughter of the wealthy, influential Sung family, she was marked for persecution by the Chinese communists unless she would completely capitulate to their demands. Refusing to denounce both her heritage and her Christian religion, she was taken before a firing squad. But she didn't die.

After years of persecution and hard labor, she was exiled to Hong Kong. She is now a naturalized citizen of the United States.

Ms. Lam will tell her story at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at Midland's First Assembly of God Church, 100 W. Wadley Ave.

The public is invited to attend.

'Greater than Gold' to be shown

"Greater than Gold," a film about how a single parent father and his daughter resolve their communication problems, will be shown at 7 p.m. Sunday at Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, 2800 Mogford St.

"Greater than Gold" underlines the fact that communication is essential to a good marriage and family. It shows how family relationships can go wrong and how they can be healed.

The public is invited to attend this 65-minute film.

'Focus on the Family' films begin Wednesday

The first film of "Focus on the Family," a series featuring psychologist Dr. James Dobson, will be shown at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave., Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall.

The film series will launch St. Luke's "Wednesday Night Genesis," a mid-week, all church fellowship. The first film is "The Strong-Willed Child."

Wednesday Night Genesis begins with a meal, served from 5:30 to 6:20 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall. Cost of the meal is $2 for adults and $1.50 for children 12 and younger. The mid-week event will continue through May 25.

The remaining films in the series and their dates are: Jan. 26, "Shaping the Will Without Breaking the Spirit"; Feb. 2, "Christian Fathering"; Feb. 9, "Preparing for Adolescence: The Origins of Self-Doubt"; Feb. 16, "Preparing for Adolescence: Peer Pressure and Sexuality"; Feb. 23, "What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Women: The Lonely Housewife"; and March 2, "What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Women: Money, Sex and Children."

Dobson is the author of seven books. He is associate clinical professor of Pediatrics at the University of Southern California School of Medicine and a member of the attending staff of Children's Hospital of Los Angeles in the division of medical genetics.

There is no charge for viewing the films. The public is invited.

Lutherans, Episcopalians to celebrate together

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top Lutheran and Episcopal leaders will jointly celebrate Holy Communion Sunday at Washington National Cathedral to inauguate formally their historic, new compact in worship.

The service, expected to provide a model for other such joint rites across the country in the future, carries out agreement by three Lutheran denominations and the Episcopal Church for sharing in the eucharist.

It is the central act of Christian worship, with the consecrated bread and wine regarded as linking worshippers with their Lord and each other.

National governing conventions of the four denominations last September approved the basic, new ecumenical tie between traditions separated since the 16th century.

While Lutheran and Episcopal churches in several communities already have held such joint celebrations, the Washington service will mark the first time heads of the four denominations have done so.

Since the new agreement, previous joint services have been held in numerous places.

Catholic urges respect for rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Catholic Conference official urges that the United States continue to insist on respect for human rights as a condition for American aid in Latin America.

The Rev. J. Bryan Hehir, the conference's international affairs expert, says such criteria for U.S. aid "is the surest guarantor of our own national interest." He quoted a 1979 declaration of the U.S. Catholic bishops, saying:

"From the depths of the countries that make up Latin America, a cry is rising to heaven...It is the cry of suffering people who demand justice, freedom and respect for the basic rights of human beings."

How are they going to learn right from wrong?

At the Christian Science Sunday School, young people are helped to seek their values in the Bible.

In this great book they find parables, prayers, life stories, and clear teachings to help them move toward the right choices. And Jesus' unselfish, powerful example to be their model for right actions.

Anyone through age 19 is welcome . . . every Sunday, all year long.

Bernardin applauded by Jews

CHICAGO (AP) — A Jewish leader says the designation of Chicago's Roman Catholic Archbishop Joseph Bernardin to become a cardinal "is good" for Catholics, Jews, Catholic-Jewish relations and the American people.

Robert S. Jacobs, chairman of the American Jewish Commdittee, applauded Bernardin's "friendship and constructive cooperation with the Jewish community and his commitment to improving Catholic-Jewish understanding."

Jailed priests won't be let go, says minister

MANILA (AP) — Philippine defense minister Juan P. Enrile has turned down leaders of the country's Roman Catholic bishops conference that priests arrested on subversion charges be released.

Releasing them would "appear to the world that we are buckling under pressure," he says. The bishops had asked that the priests be released.

Longevity more curse than blessing to 102-year-old man

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

PASADENA, Calif. — His father's father, they say, was George Washington's water boy in the Revolutionary War.

His own father was in the Civil War.

But as for himself, Floyd T. Case never served. He missed the Spanish-American War because he was needed on the farm, missed World War I because the Armistice came sooner than anyone expected, and because he was 60 at the start of World War II, he missed that, too.

It might be that escaping battle is one reason he's lived as long as he has, Case surmised last week, a few days after his 102nd birthday on Jan. 1.

Or, he said, he thought it might be because he never smoked. Nor drank. Nor married, he added with a wry laugh.

But mostly, Case — a healthy centenarian who still drives a car and walks a mile every day — regards his longevity as a puzzlement. And a disappointment.

SITTING IN A thin rectangle of light in his friends' kitchen, he replayed mental tapes of events past and talked about having lived too long.

"All my friends are pretty near dead now. All my hunter-fisher pals are dead. That one fellow, what was his name?" He rested thick-veined and spotted fingers to his forehead for a moment. "Zack. Zack Jennings." White-rimmed blue eyes brightened behind rimless bifocals. "He was a wonderful fellow. Zack was a plumber. He and his wife were good people. I miss those people even yet."

Case has survived not only all his old pals, but also his seven brothers and sisters. Both parents died at age 90, and one sister lived to 93. No one else in his family had ever reached the century mark.

Yet at 102, his hair has almost as much pepper as salt. The only thing that bothers him is dimmed hearing, helped now by a hearing aid. And he is one of only two centenarians in the state granted a license to drive by the Department of Motor Vehicles. (Until he turned 100, he was receiving a four-year license. Now, it's renewable yearly.)

Case was born in 1881, the penultimate child of Nebraska homesteaders. "I came close to being born in a covered wagon," he said. On their way to their homestead, he said, his mother "slept under a wagon with a harness for a pillow and me under her arm." As a boy, he helped plant and harvest corn and wheat until he was old enough to make his way to Los Angeles in 1902. He worked for a market, delivering groceries in a horse-drawn wagon for $7 a week.

Case has survived not only all his old pals, but also his seven brothers and sisters. Both parents died at age 90, and one sister lived to 93.

DISCOURAGED BY LOW pay and high rents — $5 a week for room and board — he returned to the homestead where he remained for many years to run the farm and care for a mother who had "lost her mind."

He was so busy, he said, he had no time then for romance.

Eventually, he returned to California where he bought, farmed and sold several small acreages in the San Fernando Valley, Fillmore and Orange County. For fun, he hunted deer and fished with friends who, unlike himself, were "all Democrats who smoked and drank."

When he started thinking about retiring in his mid-80s, he looked at the new retirement community, Leisure World. "I was offered a place to buy for $10,000," he said. "I don't know. I didn't think I'd like it. They have certain rules you know. It's like living in a small town."

Instead, he sold his 10-acre ranch in Orange for development, retaining the right to live rent-free in the on-site garage for as long as he lived. Case sold his property for $57,000 and made a profit of $47,000 — not much compared to what might have been.

THE ONLY REAL mistake of his life, he says, was not marrying and having children to take care of him in his old age.

"I kept company with two sisters in Fillmore," he said. "I wanted one of them, but the other one wanted me and I didn't want her. I proposed to the one, but she turned me down. And I didn't want to marry a woman I didn't love," he said, tapping the table top for emphasis.

He still talks about getting married — maybe to a widow he knows. On the plus side, the 70-year-old woman has a nice house, he said. But she has a serious flaw. She smokes cigarettes. "I as much as told her we could get together if she'd quit."

"I guess she likes cigarettes better than she likes you, Floyd," said his friend Elmer Smith, 85, laughing. Smith's wife Matilda and Case all laughed too.

The Smiths, who live in Pasadena, adopted Case as a special friend after meeting him 23 years ago on an airplane bound for Hawaii. Since then, they've traveled the world together and heard each other's stories so often they can exchange the narrator's role in mid-story. The Smiths like his tales so much, in fact, they sometimes tell them for him.

ABOUT SIX TIMES a year, he drives his car up the freeway from Orange to Pasadena to visit the Smiths and laugh about the old stories: About how his father was shot in the heel, running away at the battle of Bull Run; about the woman he didn't marry because her pet quail left "quail manure" all over the table.

"I guess they kind of adopted me," said Case, laughing again.

But the Smiths aren't just doling out charity. He's good company for them, too. "It's good for both of us," said Smith. "It's one of those things. You have friends."

Book drive begun

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Books for Texans, an organization of leaders in statewide library groups, has set a goal of 100,000 books by Texans or about Texas for the state's libraries in March.

Wayne C. Sellers, Palestine Carnegie Library trustee and chairman of the organization, says Amarillo businessman Wales Madden III will chair the drive, with Temple Mayor John F. Sammons Jr. as vice chairman.

Madden notes that Texas has "nationally known publishing houses and thousands of published authors, many of whom have won international acclaim."

In addition, he notes, "there are Texas authors who have earned distinction in their fields, but whose works are not widely known.

"While many Texas authors have not yet earned the fame of a Walter Prescott Webb, J. Frank Dobie, Katherine Anne Porter or Fred Gipson, their works deserve recognition and appreciation," he says.

Madden says a "vigorous campaign" will be conducted through the 10 public library systems in Texas and through city and county civic groups.

Texans will be urged in March to make gifts of Texas books or of money to public libraries.

Seletions may be made from a list prepared by State Librarian Dorman Winfrey, which will be available in public libraries.

"We hope, also," Madden said, "to help libraries acquire histories of Texas countes and cities, and biographies of Texas citizens not now widely known."

Settlement conditions censored

From Wire Reports

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia — In a move to tighten conditions on the way foreigners in the country live, Saudi Arabia has banned unmarried men and women from inhabiting the same residential compounds, Saudi press reports said this week.

The reports said that Interior Minister Prince Najif has sent a message to all foreign companies as well as to all authorities, universities, and other places employing foreigners calling on them to adhere strictly to the moral values in the holy tradition of the Prophet Mohammed.

Recently, the Saudis ruled that unmarried persons could not live together in the same compounds with married couples. But this has been tightened further to prohibit unmarried persons from living in the same compounds.

The separation of the sexes also prohibits the use of Common Swimming pools in the compounds, the report said.

Actor Alan Alda shares a laugh with fellow 'M-A-S-H' stars during the final day of filming the long-running television series.

'M-A-S-H' shoots its final scene

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — "Hawkeye" signed autographs, "Hot Lips" broke into tears and cast members hugged each other on the "M-A-S-H" set Friday during the final filming for the last half-hour episode of the popular television series.

"That's a print!" exclaimed producer-director Burt Metcalfe as filming was completed for one portion of the series' last scene. The segment had to be shot several times after actress Loretta Swit, who plays Maj. Margaret "Hot Lips" Houlihan, flubbed her lines.

The scene showed the surgeons and nurses of the 4077th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital burying a foot locker containing mementos of their service during the Korean War.

During Friday's rehearsals, Miss Swit broke into tears, dabbing her eyes with tissue as she was comforted by Metcalfe and actor Harry Morgan, who plays Col. Sherman Potter.

When filming of the segment was complete, everyone on the set applauded Miss Swit, who let out a loud "whoop."

But a somber mood prevailed Friday on Stage 9 at 20th Century-Fox Studios during the last day of filming for the offbeat, anti-war series that drew honors and high ratings in its 11 years on the air.

"I can't talk about it now," actor Alan Alda, who portrays Capt. "Hawkeye" Pierce, said as he signed autographs for crew members. "I'd be in tears all day."

Metcalfe also was emotional about the show, which lasted eight years longer than the Korean War.

"Today it's really hitting me," said Metcalfe. "I had so much to do in the past few weeks, I didn't have to confront it. And I thought post production would keep my mind off of it. But I was wrong.

"A sweet warmth has come over us. Everyone is very nostalgic, and there's a lot of hugging and sighing."

Actor William Christopher, who plays Father John Mulcahy, said that with the series ending, "We begin to feel we are making history. But we don't want to get carried away. 'M-A-S-H' is only a television show."

Filming already has been completed for a two-hour TV movie in which the Korean War ends and the war-weary denizens of the 4077th M-A-S-H head home. The movie will be broadcast Feb. 28.

CBS-TV has yet to schedule a date for the series-ending episode that was completed Friday, although it will be shown before the movie.

Alda and the others agreed last year to do one more season. Many cast members said they were anxious to do other things and that all the story possibilities had been exhausted.

The two-hour movie is expected to earn $10 million for CBS. Each 30-second commercial during it sells for $450,000, a higher price than the Super Bowl commands. It cost more than $1 million to produce.

The series will then go into reruns for the rest of the season. Both CBS and Fox are considering a post-Korean War, civilian "M-A-S-H" series with some of the same cast. Alda, who was also a writer and director for "M-A-S-H," won't be involved because he is adapting his movie "The Four Seasons" as a series.

"Truthfully, it's not ending," said Larry Gelbart, who wrote of most of the early "M-A-S-H" shows and appeared on the set Friday. "Although they won't be shooting any new ones, with 250 shows it's going to go on (in reruns) for a long, long time."

"M-A-S-H," adapted from the book by Richard Hooker and tHE movie directed by Robert Altman, made its debut on Sept. 17, 1972. Gelbart wrote the TV adaptation and producer Gene Reynolds was one of its guiding creative spirits. Metcalfe, who was with thE show from the beginning, later replaced Reynolds as executive producer.

For the first three years, Hawkeye's sidekick was "Trapper John" McIntyre, played by Wayne Rogers. Lt. Col. Henry Blake, played by McLean Stevenson, was in charge and "Radar" O'Reilly, played by Gary Burghoff, was company clerk. The comic heavies were Larry Linville as Maj. Frank Burns and Miss Swit as "Hot Lips."

Rogers and Stevenson left the show in 1975. Mike Farrell, as B.J. Hunnicut, became Hawkeye's pal, and Morgan became the new commanding officer as Col. Sherman Potter. Linville left in 1977 and David Ogden Stiers portrayed the comic heavy as Maj. Charles Emerson Winchester III.

Burghoff quit in 1979 and Jamie Farr, as Cpl. Max Klinger, became the company clerk.

Trainer jet crashes into residential area

ENID, Okla. (AP) — An Air Force T-38 trainer jet crashed in a field in the middle of a subdivision Friday, setting two houses on fire, but both pilots parachuted to safety and no one on the ground was injured.

The plane went down at 4:01 p.m. in the La Mesa West housing development, said Police Capt. Larry Nichols.

One of the burned homes was vacant but Beverly Melvin was in the other when the plane crashed, police said. She ran from the house with a trouser leg on fire but quickly beat out the flames and was not injured, officers said.

Firefighters quickly extinguished the flames caused by burning wreckage strewn over an area 300 to 400 yards wide.

The main body of the airplane came down in a field, said Betty Waddell, spokeswoman for Vance Air Force Base, about a mile from the crash site. "It was very close to houses."

LEGAL NOTICES

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS

You are hereby notified of the opportunity to request a public hearing and/or submit written comment concerning construction permit applications C-9101 and PSD-TX-466 by L&B Oil Company, Incorporated, to construct a natural gas sweetening plant near Garden City, Glasscock County, Texas. The proposed location is about 14 miles north-northwest of Garden City. The proposed facility will emit sulfur dioxide in amounts significant enough to require a Prevention of Significant Deterioration (PSD) permit review. Other pollutants to be emitted are: volatile organic compounds and nitrogen oxides. Emissions of these compounds did not trigger PSD review.

The Executive Director of the Texas Air Control Board has determined that the proposed source will not violate any state or federal air quality regulations and will not have any significant adverse impact on soils, vegetation or visibility. He, therefore, has made the preliminary determination to issue this permit.

The degree of PSD increment predicted to be consumed by the proposed facility and other increment consuming sources in the area are as follows:

	Averaging Time	Maximum Increment Consumed (ug/m3)	Maximum Allowable Increment (ug/m3)
Sulfur Dioxide	3-hr.	115	512
	24-hr.	29	91
	Annual	16	20

Particulate matter is not emitted from this facility.

A copy of the administrative record, including all materials submitted by the applicant and additional information, are available at the office of Mr. Charley Sims, Acting Regional Supervisor, Texas Air Control Board Region VI, at 1901 East 37th Street, Suite 101, Odessa, Texas 79762 telephone number (915) 367-3871 and at the Texas Air Control Board at 6330 Highway 290 East, Austin, Texas 78723. Comments should be limited to the air pollution aspects of the proposed project and should not concern land use aspects which are beyond the jurisdiction of the Texas Air Control Board. All air pollution related comments received in writing by Febuary 13, 1983 will be considered by the Board in making its final decision on these applications. The 1st year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8 3/8% loan to value interest will be charged at a rate of 12 3/8% for the 1st 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payment 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period the graduation in payment will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 12.875%. *Principle and Interest only is calculated in monthly payment.
