Rebels blow up plane loaded with ballots

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Commanders throughout El Salvador ordered government troops on full alert after leftist rebels blew up an air force plane loaded with hundreds of ballot boxes for Sunday's presidential election, authorities said.

The C-123K troop transport blew up as it landed Thursday at an airstrip near San Miguel, 82 miles east of the capital, which the guerrillas had mined, wounding the pilot and co-pilot.

Col. Domingo Monterrosa, military commander for the eastern region, said destruction of the plane would make it difficult for him to deploy troops to guard polling places. But he said the ballot boxes aboard the aircraft were not damaged and will be distributed on schedule.

The plane, which can carry up to 58 soldiers with combat gear, was given to the Salvadoran air force by the United States in 1982 as part of a military assistance program.

Authorities canceled all leaves for the nation's 41,000-member military and police forces and said they took other top-priority alert measures which could not be disclosed for security reasons.

National Police chief Col. Carlos Lopez Nuila said in an interview, "The armed forces will be on the streets during and after the voting to allow the people to exercise the right to vote."

The country's police forces have been under military command since a January 1980 state of emergency imposed because of the civil war.

The formal end of campaigning came at midnight Wednesday, and coincided with a violent clash between supporters of the Christian Democratic Party, the Republican Nationalist Alliance and the National Conciliation Party in San Vicente, 37 miles east of the capital. One man was hospitalized with a gunshot wound and several others were stabbed or beaten.

Although eight parties are running candidates, the race is believed to be between the centrist Christian Democrats and the far-right Republican Nationalist Alliance.

Neither Christian Democratic presidential candidate Jose Napoleón Duarte nor the alliance's

Roberto d'Aubuisson, a former army major accused by U.S. officials of involvement with rightist death squads, are expected to get a majority of votes. In that case, a runoff election would take place a month later.

Although it has been urging the election, the Reagan administration is now worried it could lead to new political turmoil but is determined nonetheless to continue aid to the Salvadoran army.

U.S. officials say congressional support for military assistance could be endangered if d'Aubuisson wins the five-year term.

In Washington, the administration Thursday bowed to Democratic demands to delay congressional action on such aid until after the election and accepted a compromise on the amount of assistance.

The agreement calls for the Senate to act Tuesday or Wednesday on an aid package providing an additional $61.7 million for El Salvador in the current fiscal year.

Price rise slight in February

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose a modest 0.4 percent in February, as a moderation in food price increases gave economists fresh support for their predictions that inflation this year will be in the range of 5 percent.

Food prices rose 0.6 percent, well under the sharp 1.6 percent gain in January, as damage from several months of severe weather began to ease.

Energy prices were also up. Fuel oil prices rose 6.9 percent, their biggest jump in three years, while gasoline costs, off for the fifth straight month, fell 1.5 percent.

But the overall gain in the Consumer Price Index was less than January's 0.6 percent.

Reflecting the fresh moderation in food prices, cost increases slowed for such staples as meat, eggs, fruits and vegetables.

Beef and veal prices rose 1.7 percent after a 3.5 percent jump in January. Pork prices edged up 0.4 percent after soaring 5.2 percent. Egg prices advanced 2.2 percent, down dramatically from the 21.3 percent gain in the previous month. Fresh fruit prices rose just 0.3 percent following a sharp 7.8 percent gain in January. Vegetable prices, which shot up 7 percent in the previous month, rose 3.3 percent.

Local telephone service, which posted its sharpest-ever gain in January, 8.5 percent, still rose substantially last month with a gain of 3.0 percent. But the cost of all phone service moderated, rising 1.9 percent, down from the previous month's record 5.2 percent gain.

The increases generally are attributable to regulatory changes accompanying the breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Medical care costs jumped 0.8 percent, up from the 0.7 percent gain of January and above the average monthly increase of 0.5 percent last year. Physicians' fees soared 1.2 percent while hospital room charges rose 0.7 percent.

Last month's increases had been expected by analysts who are carefully watching the Labor Department's index for any signs that inflation may be heating up again.

In advance of today's report, David Wyss, economist at the consulting firm of Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said, "Inflation looks under control."

And Donald Ratajczak, forecaster at Georgia State University, agreed. "There is little evidence at this time that inflation is accelerating," he said.

Widow has 'little' reminder of husband

KILGORE, Texas (AP) — Six months ago Lana Maxwell's husband was kidnapped and killed, and life did not mean much to the 19-year-old widow. But today, a smile graces her face.

At 1:52 a.m. Thursday, Mrs. Maxwell gave birth to David Wayne Maxwell II, an 8½ pound baby boy.

"This is a part of David nobody can take away," she said. "He's all mine."

Six months ago on the same date, her husband David Maxwell, 20, was kidnapped along with four others from a Kilgore restaurant and shot in the head, execution style.

Sitting on her hospital bed at the Roy H. Laird Memorial Hospital in Kilgore, Mrs. Maxwell points to a single red rose on her nightstand. The card is signed "David."

"Mom and dad (her in-laws) brought me this rose from David," Mrs. Maxwell said in an interview with Tyler Morning Telegraph. "They thought he would have sent me one, he's the only boy I ever dated who sent me roses."

A photograph of Maxwell, wearing his high school graduation gown, is propped on the window sill of her hospital room.

At the time of her husband's murder, Mrs. Maxwell had less than $10 in her checking account. She was unemployed and unskilled. But with what her father-in-law dubs the "spirit of real trooper," she refused to sink.

Even now, while confronted with hospital bills and the challenge of caring for a newborn, Mrs. Maxwell says she has faced the toughest obstacle.

"When you have a baby coming, it's hard not to be excited," she said.

Before her husband died, she and her husband's parents, who have four grandsons, had hoped for a girl. But that changed with Maxwell's death.

"The day David died a boy is what we wanted," she said. "Dad (Maxwell's father) said, 'it's going to be a boy.' That was God's kind of justice. That's what I thought," she says referring to her baby's birth.

On Sept. 22, Maxwell, Joy Johnson, Monte Landers, all 20, Mary Tyler, and Opie Hughes were forced from the Kilgore restaurant and taken to a deserted field about 18 miles south in Rusk County.

The next day, their bodies were discovered face down with bullet wounds in their skulls.

Police still have no suspects in the case.

Mrs. Maxwell's plans are still on the drawing board. But she seems to want to do it all: work fulltime, continue college and bring up her baby. She admits, however, she doesn't know if she'll be able to carry the full load.

Friends have offered to rent a trailer in Joinville to Mrs. Maxwell for $100 a month. Others are cleaning the home before she leaves the hospital so it will be ready for the mother and son homecoming.

"I don't know how I'd ever made it without knowing David's in a better place," she said.

Teachers arrested for child molesting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Five nursery school teachers accused of molesting children as young as 2, then silencing them with threats acted out by torturing small animals, were in jail today following a grand jury's 109-count indictment, the district attorney said.

The mayor of the town where the offenses allegedly occurred expressed relief, but some parents of pupils at the privately run school said there were other perpetrators yet to be charged.

An estimated 100 children were sexually abused over 10 years at the Virginia McMartin Pre-School in suburban Manhattan Beach, District Attorney Robert Philibosian said after the indictments were returned Thursday.

The charges, based on testimony from nine boys and nine girls now aged 2 to 13, named three relatives of founder and owner Virginia McMartin, plus two other women. The school closed in January when parents began withdrawing children amid police warnings.

Philibosian said investigators worked with a child psychologist in questioning the youngsters, whom he said were frightened by teachers' threats.

"In order to back those threats, small animals were actually slaughtered in their presence," he said. He declined to give details, but investigators have said children were forced to watch while a turtle's head was crushed and a rabbit's ears were cut off.

The indictment included allegations of "rape, sodomy, oral copulation and fondling," Philibosian said. He said there were instances when "more than one of the defendants was involved with more than one of the children."

Charged in the 109 counts of felony child abuse are the owner's grandson, Raymond Charles Buckley, 25; his mother, Peggy McMartin Buckley, 57, who managed the school; his sister, Peggy Ann Buckley, 28; Betty Raidor, 64; and Babbette Spitzer, 36.

All were arrested and jailed on bails ranging from $50,000 to $1 million, pending Superior Court arraignment today, Philibosian said.

"My reaction is one of relief," Manhattan Beach Mayor Bob

Holmes said. "No one thinks such a heinous crime would happen in Manhattan Beach, but apparently it has. At least now the rumors and speculations can be laid to rest."

A group of parents whose children attended the school said in a statement that they felt relief, but now it should "be made clear that these indictments do not go far enough. Dimensions of this case still need to be more closely explored," it said, and other perpetrators "have not been exposed."

Philibosian said the probe continues, but declined to say if more arrests were expected. He said his estimate that 100 children were abused was based on testimony from the 18 youngsters.

Mondale accuses Hart of being confused, uncertain on issues

By The Associated Press

Walter F. Mondale, taking his presidential campaign to New York, accuses Gary Hart of being confused and uncertain on issues while Hart is aiming his rival's now-famous line back at him, saying voters want to know "what the Mondale beef is."

The two leading contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination are focusing on New York's big-stakes primary April 3 and, as a prelude, Tuesday's Connecticut primary, where Hart expects to complete a six-state New England sweep.

But first, three states are holding weekend caucuses: Virginia on Saturday and Monday, Kansas on Saturday, and Montana on Sunday.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who took Thursday off, was planning to return to Virginia on Saturday in search of delegates.

All three candidates were converging today in Baltimore for the funeral of civil rights lobbyist Clarence Mitchell Jr.

Mondale flew Thursday night to New York, where he opened his latest attack on Hart and where he plans to spend most of the next week and a half. He stopped at a bowling alley in Queens and, shedding his coat and tie, rolled a couple frames — his first try a gutter ball.

New York is the second biggest delegate prize, with 252 of its 285 nominating votes at stake in the primary.

Mondale accused the Colorado senator of "a pattern of inconsistency and uncertainty, a record that is at war with itself."

He charged Hart has flip-flopped on two issues — arms control and the question of moving the U.S. Embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

The latter issue is important in New York, since Jewish voters comprise up to 40 percent of the Democratic electorate there.

Hart, also in New York on Thursday, apologized to a Jewish group for what he said was an unauthorized letter from his Senate office suggesting the move only was part of an overall effort to negotiate a Middle East peace treaty. He said flatly, "as president, I will" move the embassy without preconditions.

But Mondale, hoping to cripple Hart's candidacy after a week of primary and caucus victories, raised the issue of the letter. And earlier in California he said Hart had made a "blatant flip-flop" on the issue.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 7 a.m. EST
Saturday, March 24
Low Temperatures

National Weather Service
NOAA U.S. Dept. of Commerce

The National Weather Service forecasts rain for Saturday for most of the southeast and northwest.

Cooler temperatures, brisk winds forecast for Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Cooler temperatures and brisk winds are expected to continue in the Permian Basin, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight partly cloudy skies are forecast along with lows in the middle 30s. Saturday should be fair with highs in the middle 60s. Northwest winds of 10 to 20 mph tonight are expected to increase to 20 to 30 mph.

Thursday's high reached 82, nine degrees below the record high of 91 set in 1934. The overnight low of 43 was 23 degrees warmer than the 20-degree mark recorded on this date in 1952.

STATE

Golfball-size hail pummelled parts of North Central Texas early today as a line of severe thunderstorms, associated with a low-pressure air mass, moved southeastward across the state.

Widespread showers and thunderstorms, some producing hail, developed along the low-pressure ridge, while snow fell in the Panhandle and drizzle was reported in the Hill Country, the National Weather Service said.

Low-level moisture feeding northward from the Gulf of Mexico combined with the upper-level disturbance from the southern Rockies to blanket the Lone Star State with cloudy skies.

The weather service said the weak, migratory surface low was centered near Abilene, moving to the east southeast at 15-20 mph. A cold front associated with the low trailed southward into Mexico, while a warm front stretched northeast across southern Oklahoma.

A high-pressure ridge was building southward over the Panhandle, falling over the Panhandle.

Over the southern two-thirds of the state, warm, humid conditions prevailed.

Winds were southerly at 10 to 20 mph across the eastern half of the state, becoming east and northeasterly near the low-pressure center, and northerly at 20 to 30 mph over the Panhandle and south plains.

Temperatures ranged from the low and mid 30s over the Panhandle and the low and mid 50s across the south plains and far West Texas to the low to mid 60s through central and eastern portions of the state.

Readings in the upper 60s prevailed along the Gulf coast and into the lower Rio Grande valley. Extremes were 30 degrees at Amarillo and 70 at Brownsville.

NATION

A spring storm over the southern Plains lingered today in parts of Texas and Oklahoma, spitting rain and large hailstones and spreading snow over parts of Colorado, New Mexico and western Kansas.

At 1 a.m. EST today, the heaviest rainfall was 1.9 inches at Fort Sill, Okla., while 16 inches of snow was expected in the Colorado Rockies and from 2 to 4 inches in the Arkansas River Valley.

A storm warning was issued for southern Colorado, a severe thunderstorm watch for central and southwest Texas and travelers' advisories for the mountains and plains of New Mexico due to blowing and drifting snow.

Denver was covered with 3 inches of new snow by 1 a.m. EST and stockmen's advisories were posted for the eastern plains of Colorado and western Kansas.

Meanwhile, light snow fell across much of Ohio and West Virginia, lower Michigan, western Pennsylvania and western New York.

Strong winds blew across the Great Lakes region and the Ohio Valley, with gale warnings in effect for Lake Erie.

Jury believes defendant was guilty

From Staff and Wire Reports

ODESSA — A lack of evidence led to the acquittal of a 21-year-old man charged with killing a topless dancer, even though jurors in an Ector County district court believed he was guilty, the jury foreman said.

Michael Gordon, 21, was acquitted Wednesday of the November 1981 slaying of Yolanda Huxley, who had a record of prostitution in Snyder.

A prosecution witness testified Ms. Huxley was the target of a gang rape before she was killed near a pump jack in southwest Ector County.

"I'm happy I'm free," said Gordon, who had been jailed since his indictment last December. "I didn't want to go to the penitentiary for something I didn't do." He was prosecuted under a Texas law which makes accomplices equally responsible.

Jury foreman Keith Johnson said Thursday that the jurors were not convinced of Gordon's innocence, but instead believed they had to acquit him because of a lack of evidence.

"All of us thought he was guilty," Johnson said. "All of us on the jury felt the same way, but due to the evidence we had to let him go. We just didn't have a chance to make a decision other than innocent."

Defense attorneys had attacked the credibility of two key prosecution witnesses and twice called for an instructed verdict from McKim acquitting Gordon.

One witness, Daniel Phillips, claimed he was present as six men drove Ms. Huxley to a remote spot in southwest Ector County. Phillips said she was raped twice and beaten by six men — including Gordon.

Ms. Huxley was killed when she was run over with a pickup truck, Phillips said.

Another prosecution witness, Sharon Wilcox, testified Gordon came to her home in November 1981 "and asked me if I would hide him. He said he had just killed someone."

Two more men guilty in rape case

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — The convictions of two more Portuguese immigrants in a barroom gang rape drew sobs from defendants and protests from 5,000 marchers, but women's groups hailed the verdicts as offering a "ray of hope" for other rape victims.

Two other men were acquitted Thursday and two had been found guilty earlier in the case, in which a 22-year-old mother of two testified she had been dragged to a tavern pool table, held down and repeatedly raped while a leering crowd cheered "like a baseball game."

The case became a rallying point both for women's rights groups, which decried the abuse detailed by the victim, and the Portuguese community, which alleged authorities were prejudiced against the six defendants, who are all Portuguese immigrants.

On Thursday, John Cordeiro, 24, and Victor Raposo, 23, wept as jurors found them guilty of aggravated rape in the March 6, 1983, attack at Big Dan's tavern in New Bedford. Witnesses testified the two tried to have oral sex with the woman while she was pinned to the pool table.

At the same time, Jose Medeiros, 23, and Vergilio Medeiros, 24, who are not related, embraced their lawyers and were mobbed by friends as they were acquitted. Witnesses testified they kept others from helping the woman and cheered their friends, but did not join in the physical assault.

Cordeiro and Raposo, along with Daniel Silva, 27, and Joseph Vieira, 28, who were found guilty of aggravated rape Saturday in a separate trial, face a maximum penalty of life imprisonment when sentenced sometime next week. They also face possible deportation.

"This is justice," Raposo said bitterly, his tears turning to anger as he was led out of the courtroom. "We're Portuguese immigrants. That's why we were convicted."

Jose Medeiros, his eyes reddened by tears, said his friends' conviction "wasn't fair, it wasn't fair at all."

Vergilio Medeiros said he lost two jobs and went into debt during the year it took to bring the case to trial. "I'm just so messed up," he said. "In one year they did so much to me."

Two women's groups expressed satisfaction with the verdicts. Priscilla Trudeau, head of the New Bedford Rape Crisis Center, which was formed following the Big Dan's incident, said she thought the convictions "may give future rape victims a ray of hope that the system does work in these cases."

Jose Medeiros is hoisted on the shoulders of supporters during a candlelight vigil after his acquittal on rape charges from the Big Dan's gang rape in New Bedford, Mass.

"Our criminal justice system may have some flaws, but basically it's a good one," agreed Darlene Wheeler of the Coalition Against Sexist Violence, which represents 13 community organizations in southeastern Massachusetts.

However, Ms. Wheeler said her group was unhappy with the cross-examination of the woman, who the defense argued was a willing participant and lied to save herself embarrassment. She said the group would make recommendations to the state legislature about laws to protect rape victims.

Scott Charnas, the victim's attorney, said his client felt justice had been done.

The woman, who along with a prosecutor and five jurors is also Portuguese-American, felt the verdicts "should show everyone that this is not or was not a case of a vendetta against Portuguese people — that Portuguese people who the jury found to be guilty were convicted and Portuguese people who the jury found to be innocent were acquitted."

The case "has never revolved around the issue of Portuguese people," he added. "It revolves around the issue of rapists and rape."

However, 5,000 people who marched later Thursday in New Bedford disagreed. The marchers, mostly Portuguese-Americans, carried candles and wore badges reading "Justica Crucificada," Portuguese for "justice crucified."

A larger rally was called for today in Fall River, 12 miles away, where the trials were moved because of heavy publicity. The case was split into two trials because some defendants gave police statements implicating Silva and Vieira, who witnesses said took turns having sex with the woman.

Seventy-five counts, carrying a maximum penalty of 156 years in prison, were against Buckley, who may have been involved in criminal activity "when he was as young as 16 years old," Philibosian said.

Buckley, held on $1 million bail, had been arrested by Manhattan Beach police in September after the mother of a 2-year-old pupil complained. He was never charged because there was no immediate corroboration of the toddler's claim, Philibosian said.

The state Department of Social Services, which suspended the school's license on Feb. 9, contended that Buckley molested 25 children aged 2 to 5 between 1982 and September 1983.

The department also alleged that Buckley photographed at least two children nude, said Larry Bolton, the assistant chief counsel.

A telephone call to Buckley's attorney, Daniel Davis, was not returned Thursday. Virginia McMartin was not listed in area telephone books, and her lawyer would not say where she could be reached.

Buckley's mother, held on $350,000 bail, is charged with 15 counts of child abuse punishable by up to 36 years in prison.

Peggy Ann Buckley, jailed on $50,000 bail, was arrested at a La Palma high school where she teaches deaf children and was charged with one count of child molestation, which carries a maximum 8-year sentence.

Ms. Rador was jailed on $250,000 bail. She was charged with 12 counts carrying a maximum 30-year sentence.

Ms. Spitzer was arrested at the Manhattan Beach School District offices, where she works as a typist, and charged with six counts carrying a maximum 18-year sentence. Bail was set at $125,000.

Authorities conducted raids March 6 at the school, the home of Raymond Buckley and his mother and the home of Virginia McMartin. An affidavit then quoted a child as saying Buckley had molested and bound him, put makeup on his face and photographed him.

Parents have filed "seven or eight" lawsuits of about $1 million each against the school, said attorney George Ellis, who represents Virginia McMartin.

The prospect of a d'Aubuisson victory and curtailment of U.S. aid has sparked speculation that the army might stage a coup to keep d'Aubuisson out, although U.S. and Salvadoran officials say this is unlikely.

A Salvadoran military official, who spoke on condition he not be named, said that if d'Aubuisson loses, the army could begin a serious investigation into the longstanding allegations that he helped direct death squads accused of murdering thousands of people during the 4½-year civil war.

Roberto Meza, vice president of the Central Election Council, said 300 observers from 28 countries will watch the polling and more than 1,000 foreign journalists have applied for credentials to cover the election.

The council, composed of one representative from each participating party, is organizing the election and will certify the results.

Meza said Britain, Canada, the United States, Italy, France, China,

West Germany and Israel — among others — are sending observers.

The United States' delegation includes representatives of the clergy, academia, organized labor, and 19 members of Congress led by Sen. William Roth, R-Del., and House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas.

Leftists are boycotting the election, claiming their candidates would be targets for the death squads, and rebels in the east have confiscated voter identification cards from hundreds of motorists.

But guerrilla leader Joaquin Villalobos on Thursday reiterated the rebels' pledge not to attack voters.

However, Col. Nicolas Carranza, chief of the Treasury Police, said he expects the rebels to attack some small towns to "interfere with the election to make their presence known."

On Thursday, government soldiers retook La Palma, a northern city of 12,000 the rebels controlled for two years, and there was scattered fighting elsewhere. Reporters said the soldiers took La Palma without a fight.

Mondale: Hart confused, uncertain on issues

On nuclear arms control, Mondale said Hart was "delayed and confused," and that Hart first "opposed the nuclear freeze idea."

"Then, in 1983 he finally endorsed the freeze," Mondale said. "But two months later he endorsed the build-down proposal, which is entirely inconsistent with the freeze."

The new wave of attacks came on a day filled with explanations and clarifications by Hart and his aides, and in which Hart sought to regain the offensive. He seized on Mondale's line, taken from a popular restaurant commercial that asks, "Where's the beef?" in questioning Hart's "new ideas" theme Protesters wait outside the Lyndon B. Johnson Auditorium on the University of Texas at Austin campus Thursday. Former secretary of state Henry Kissinger was appearing on a panel at a conference on nuclear arms and national security.

Demonstrators arrested after violating rules

AUSTIN (AP) — Demonstrators who screamed at Henry Kissinger and were arrested as the former secretary of state attempted to speak at a campus auditorium violated the rules set for the protest, University of Texas officials said.

About 50 people were arrested Thursday, some inside the auditorium and some nearby, as Kissinger participated in a panel discussion on nuclear arms.

Kissinger, who sat with his arms folded as a woman screamed at him, said protesters who question the morals of the nation's leaders are "bound to ruin us."

"I have a question for you, Dr. Kissinger," the woman yelled as Kissinger was introduced. "What about Vietnam? What about Cambodia? What about Chile?"

She continued screaming until campus police pulled her out of the auditorium at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at UT.

Other protesters in the auditorium were arrested for unrolling a huge banner that said, in part, "Kissinger kills." Some of the sign-holders were dragged out.

Much of the audience cheered as the arrests were made and when Kissinger began speaking.

"This has been going on now since the 1960s," he said of the tactic. "These measures, which were refined in the 1960s, attack the motives and purposes of leaders of whatever administration and are bound to ruin us."

Earlier Thursday, U.S. District Judge Jim Nowlin of Austin set rules for the demonstrators, including the Committee for Solidarity With the People of El Salvador, who challenged campus restrictions.

Ronald Brown, UT vice president of student affairs, said the court order was violated.

"The group violated this understanding, including the court's determination that there should be no signs, no placards or other disruption in the auditorium," he said.

"The group was warned that they were being disruptive and were subject to arrest. They were arrested and will be subject to appropriate civil law and, if students, to university disciplinary proceedings."

Campus Police Capt. H.J. Eastman said the protesters would be charged with "disruptive activity." Some of the arrests were made outside the auditorium, where a group of about 200 demonstrators chanted anti-Kissinger slogans.

At a news conference before the discussion, Kissinger said he was aware of a possible protest.

"I would hope our domestic dialogue would avoid these constant implications that there are easy answers, that the people one disagrees with somehow have immoral purposes in mind," he said. "We all want to promote freedom in the world. We all want peace. We all want social progress."

"I did not seek to get involved in Central America," he said of his role as chairman of President Reagan's special commission on the region.

Grand jury indicts state legislator

EL PASO (AP) — A grand jury has indicted State Rep. Bob Valles in charges of official misconduct, theft and bribery in connection with four checks totaling more than $9,000 in state funds that he allegedly paid to the wife of a man he owed money.

Two sheriff's officers arrested Valles on Thursday afternoon in the El Paso County Courthouse, shortly after he testified before the grand jury that was investigating him.

Valles, a four-term Democrat who is seeking a fifth 2-year term in Austin, was released on $20,000 bond. He had declined to comment on the charges during the grand jury investigation, and could not be reached Thursday night. He has an unlisted telephone number.

Grand jurors returned 16 separate indictments — four on each of the four dates that Valles is alleged to have given checks to Laurinda Christensen over a six-month period in 1982.

The indictments said each of the checks were given to him by the State of Texas.

The El Paso Times said Mrs. Christensen and her husband, Dana, testified before the grand jury earlier in the month in exchange for dismissal of gambling and drugs charges filed against the couple last December.

Prosecutors allege Valles gave Mrs. Christensen checks of $3,473.77 on April 5, 1982; $1,204.04 on May 3, 1982; $2,185.40 on Aug. 5, 1982; and $2,185.40 on Nov. 3, 1982.

The indictments alleged two counts of official misconduct, one count of theft and one count of bribery for each of the four dates.

A decision would be made later on which counts Valles would stand trial on, said District Attorney Steve Simmons.

The official misconduct charges alleged he knowingly misapplied state funds by using the state checks to reduce a personal debt. The second official misconduct charge on each date was the same except it specifically named Mrs. Christensen as the recipient.

The grand jury said Valles was guilty of bribery by agreeing to put Mrs. Christensen on the state payroll as an employee in return for elimination of a portion of his debts to her husband.

Theft was alleged on grounds the lawmaker tried to "unlawfully, intentionally and knowingly appropriate" the money without the effective consent of Erika Lacey, the payroll clerk for the House of Representatives, who issued the checks.

Public employees PAC issues endorsements

AUSTIN (AP) — The political action committee of the Texas Public Employees Association said Thursday it has endorsed 120 candidates for the Texas House and 13 Senate candidates in the May 5 primaries.

The endorsements Thursday included Margaret Moore and Ed Small, both of Austin, for Dist. 15, State Senate, Austin.

House endorsements included Dist. 15, Mike McKinney, Centerville;

Dist. 33, Grady Hogue, Beeville; Dist. 49, Pat Cole and Bob Richardson, both of Austin; Dist. 51, Lee Polanco and Brad Wiewel, both of Austin; Dist. 52, Noel Grisham, Round Rock; Rick Perry, Haskell, Dist. 64, and Johnnie B. Lee, Fort Worth, Dist. 91.

Big Dan's rape victim fears for her safety

BOSTON (AP) — A woman who was gang-raped on a bathroom pool table while a crowd cheered is satisfied with the convictions of four men, but her ordeal has not yet ended because of rumors that make her fear for her safety, her attorney says.

"I think it's a very unfortunate situation when the victim in a rape case cannot go home after the trial," Scott Charnas said Thursday, "but apparently that's the way it has to be, at least temporarily."

Charnas said he spoke with the woman Thursday shortly after a jury convicted two men of aggravated rape and acquitted two others in the March 1983 attack at Big Dan's tavern in New Bedford. A separate jury convicted two other men of aggravated rape last Saturday.

The case has been an emotionally charged one, with some defendants insisting the woman was a willing participant who lied to save herself embarrassment.

In addition, all six defendants are Portuguese immigrants, and New Bedford's large Portuguese-American community has protested the verdicts as prejudicial — even though the victim, a prosecutor and five jurors are also Portuguese-Americans.

Charnas would not disclose the woman's whereabouts, but said she would not be at her home in the immediate future because she fears for her safety.

She has received no direct threats, he said. "But there are unsubstantiated rumors in the community of people taking up collections in cafes to hire somebody to assassinate her," he said.

"There was another rumor about a march that was going to start at the New Bedford jail and end up at her house, where they were going to trash her house," he added.

Vessel sinks

HONOLULU (AP) — Twelve Korean fishermen found adrift in the Pacific Ocean after their vessel apparently sank have been airlifted to safety, military officials said.

The fishermen were found floating in a life raft about 200 miles northwest of the island of Hawaii on Thursday, said Lt. William Sore, a spokesman for the Naval Air Station at Barbers Point.

They were crewmembers of the 140-foot Korean fishing vessel "Pioneer No. 7" which apparently sank sometime between Wednesday night and Thursday morning, Sore said.

defendants staged a demonstration Thursday night in New Bedford and planned another today in Fall River.

Of the trials, he said, "I'm very glad that it's over — at least her participation in the process. And I just hope that she can return to as normal a life as possible."

"She was satisfied with the jury's verdict," Charnas said.

"She and I both feel that the verdict should show everyone that this is not or was not a case of a vendetta against Portuguese people — that Portuguese people who the jury found to be guilty were convicted and Portuguese people who the jury found to be innocent were acquitted," Charnas said.

"The case has never revolved around the issue of Portuguese people. It revolves around the issue of rapists, and rape," Charnas said.

Prospective jurors too eager in DeLorean case

Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — Defense lawyers for automaker John DeLorean, accused of drug trafficking, are worried that many prospective jurors are not only willing but a little too eager to sit in the jury box during what promises to be a sensational trial.

Some prospects reportedly are so intent on making it past the "first cut" in the jury selection process that they have been "prepping" themselves and perhaps other jurors on the best answers to give to defense attorneys' questions. That would violate the trial judge's order not to discuss the case.

Apparently, word has leaked out to at least one panel of potential jurors that defense attorneys are rigorously questioning prospects about their attitudes toward DeLorean, and if a juror wants to get on the jury he or she had better give the "right" answers.

Several potential jurors questioned admitted that discussions about the case took place among jurors waiting to be called for questioning. One woman acknowledged that, contrary to the judge's instructions, she had read newspaper accounts of the questioning of jurors. Defense attorney Donald Re later speculated that she may have tipped off other jurors about what questions to expect from the attorneys.

"There are a lot of people who want to be on this jury and I think they feel that if they don't know a lot about the case we will select them," defense attorney Howard Weitzman said. Consequently, Weitzman said, some potential jurors have been untruthful when questioned about their knowledge of the case.

Reporters are not permitted to interview potential jurors, so there is no direct way to learn why some of the potential jurors are so eager to sit in a jury box for at least the next two months. There currently are no plans to sequester the jury, which may in part account for their eagerness.

Fraternity blamed for prank

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Two women were greeted by something other than the rising sun as they took a morning stroll on the beach on nearby Sullivan's Island.

The two were walking their dog Thursday near Fort Moultrie when a naked young man ran out from behind the dunes.

One of the women, who asked not to be identified, said the fellow asked for their signatures on his bare posterior. He told them he was from a college fraternity and had to get eight such autographs, she said.

"I can't imagine why he would run up to two females of our age. If he had approached younger ladies, they just might have obliged him," the woman said.

Salvadoran runoff election possible

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Salvadorans already are looking beyond Sunday's presidential election, wondering what will happen if the two bitter rivals who now lead the eight-man field are matched in a runoff.

Some polls show moderate Jose Napoleon Duarte ahead of his more conservative competitors, but the Christian Democrat candidate could face trouble in a runoff.

To win outright in Sunday's election — the first presidential vote since 1977 — one candidate must receive more than 50 percent of the total votes cast.

Falling that, the top two vote-getters will compete in a second round of balloting within a month. The polls close Sunday evening, but election officials say it may be three days before final results are known.

In the 1982 Constituent Assembly races, with six parties on the ballot, Christian Democrats led with 40 percent of the vote. With eight parties on the ballot this time, most political analysts believe a runoff will be needed.

If there is a second round of voting, most likely it would pit Duarte against Roberto d'Aubuisson, the candidate for the far-right Republican Nationalist Alliance, known by its Spanish acronym ARENA.

Informal polls taken by ARENA, the Christian Democrats and the U.S. Embassy show Duarte with 45 percent to 55 percent of the decided vote. About half of those polled showed no preference.

If the pattern of two years ago holds, the smaller rightist parties would back ARENA over the Christian Democrats in a runoff, making Duarte's outside chance at a first-round victory even more important to him.

In the 1982 vote for the 60-member assembly, the Christian Democrats won 24 seats and ARENA 19, but — with the support of the smaller rightist parties — d'Aubuisson became assembly president and ARENA was able to control the constitution-writing assembly.

This time the stakes are higher.

D'Aubuisson's reputed ties with rightist death squads, which he denies, have caused the United States to hint strongly that his presidency could end the military aid on which the government depends to fight the 4½-year war against leftist guerrillas. Last year U.S. military aid to El Salvador amounted to $81.3 million.

The possibility of a d'Aubuisson victory also has fueled speculation that the army might stage a coup to keep him out of office in order to continue the flow of U.S. military aid.

The Reagan administration is worried that fallout from the election could lead to new turmoil. But U.S. officials in Washington sought to discourage speculation about an army coup in the event of a d'Aubuisson victory. They say the United States will accept the choice of Salvadoran voters.

Leftist groups are boycotting the elections, but rebel leaders say they plan no concerted attack against the voting.

"Without the American aid, we would become another Nicaragua, that's for sure," said Francisco Jose Guerrero, the presidential candidate of the National Conciliation Party.

He was referring to the ouster of Nicaraguan rightist strongman Anastasio Somoza by the left-wing Sandinistas in 1979.

While the Christian Democrats are moderate by most standards, they are far to the left of most parties opposing them. Independent political sources here say a low-key Christian Democrat attempt to set up a small, more liberal party to deflect some of the conservative wrath failed.

Hijacker may have feared Communism

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A friend of the Hong Kong man who hijacked a British Airways jumbo jet to Taiwan said today that Liang Weijang was upset by the prospect of China regaining sovereignty over Hong Kong.

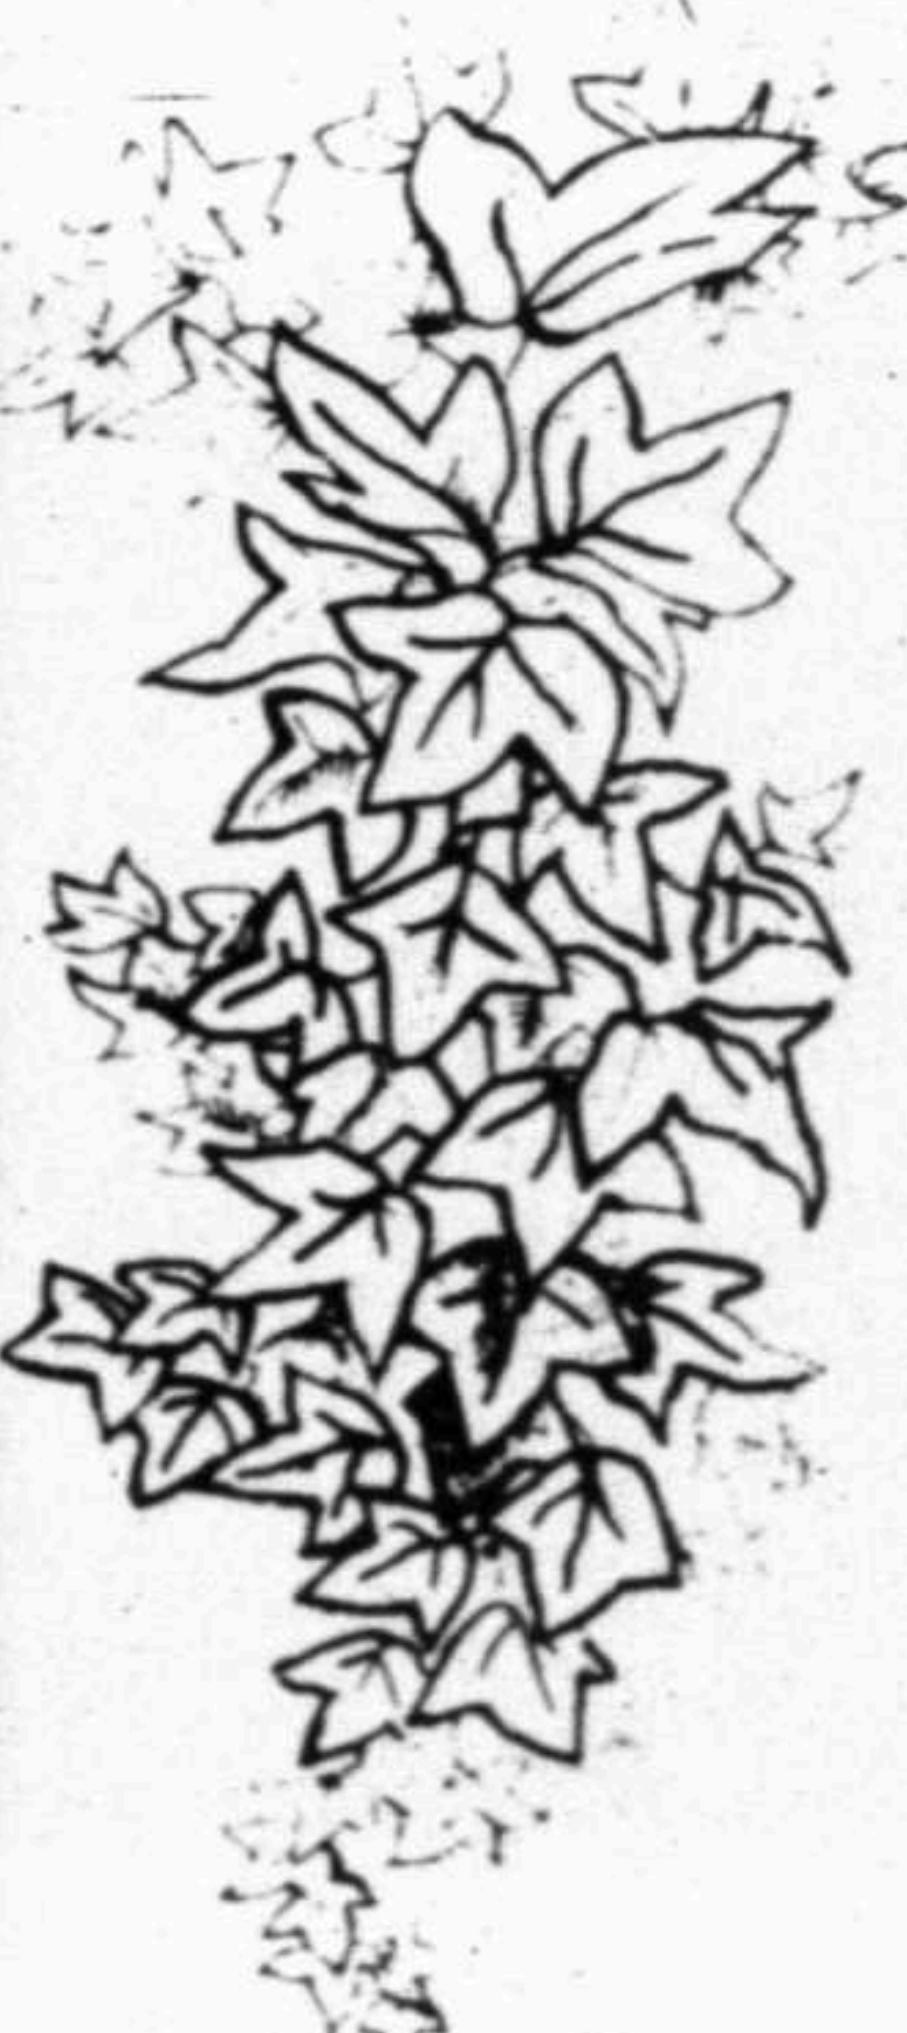

The friend, Lai Sheng-chuan, said Liang applied last December to resettle his family in Taiwan, but the Nationalist Chinese rejected his application.

Lai, 26, an employee of a Taipei trading firm, told The Associated Press he went to high school in Taipei with Liang's wife, Tze-lin, 26, and had known Liang for three years.

Government officials here declined to comment on Liang's reported application, but immigration sources said Liang, 28, could have legally settled here without trouble.

After the hijacked plane landed here Thursday, Liang denounced communism and told Taiwan authorities he wanted to apply for political asylum.

The hijacked flight originated in London and was flying from Hong Kong to Peking when Liang passed a note to a stewardess saying he had explosives and wanted the plane diverted to Taiwan.

Geter hopes prosecutors 'learn lesson'

DALLAS (AP) — A black engineer who prosecutors admitted spent 16 months in prison for a crime he didn't commit says he hopes his case leads to improvements in the criminal judicial system.

"I hope they learn the lesson," Lenell Geter said Thursday, his first day of complete freedom in more than 1½ years. "There was no reason for me to be a suspect, for me to be convicted and for me to be sentenced to life."

"Nobody believed I was innocent. There was no presumption of innocence," he said.

District Attorney Henry Wade announced Wednesday that another suspect had been arrested in the $615 holdup of a fast-food restaurant and said his office was dismissing armed robbery charges against Geter.

He had been sentenced to life in prison, but was released in December when news accounts raised doubts about his guilt. Wade agreed at the time to a new trial, which was scheduled to begin April 9.

Wade claimed Geter's time behind prison bars were the result of mistaken identity.

But Geter and his attorneys say the case resulted from racism in the small, predominantly white Texas town of Greenville, shoddy police work and overzealous prosecutors.

"I was railroaded," Geter said Thursday. "I hope that as a result of my case, the judicial system will become well-oiled."

The 26-year-old black engineer said he can forgive those who sent him to prison.

"I hope that the system will be more careful to presume innocence instead of guilt," he said.

Geter spent Thursday morning in a limousine, driving back and forth between appearances on national news shows and accepting the congratulations of well-wishers. At one TV studio, two employees stopped in a hallway and asked to shake his hand.

Meanwhile, prosecutors defended their actions in the controversial case while other attorneys raised a key question: "Did the system work?"

Kerry Fitzgerald, a defense attorney and former prosecutor under Wade, said the case raised some fundamental questions about the effectiveness of prosecution techniques.

"I'm beginning to wonder if there is really a presumption of innocence in the courts," Fitzgerald said. "The system scares me. I am beginning to think that we really better start testing this business of, 'I'm sure it's so-and-so. I'd never forget that face.' Apparently jurors put a lot of stock in that and it's highly questionable in many cases."

Estes links LBJ to killing, say papers' sources

DALLAS (AP) — Convicted swindler Billie Sol Estes told a grand jury that Lyndon B. Johnson ordered the 1961 murder of a federal official who could have tied the late president to Estes' illegal activities, according to anonymous sources quoted by three newspapers today.

Two former Johnson associates denied the charges, and one of them branded Estes a publicity-seeking "pathological liar." A former aide to Johnson's widow said the charges were "scurrilous," and the sources stressed that Estes' secret testimony Tuesday had not been verified by other evidence.

The reports were published in today's editions of the Dallas Morning News and the Dallas Times Herald. The Bryan-College Station Eagle also published a copyright report on Estes' grand jury testimony in today's editions.

The three newspapers all quoted anonymous sources close to the grand jury investigation. Reporting of such testimony is unusual and the newspapers did not explain how they obtained the information.

Estes, testifying under a grant of immunity, said that when Johnson was vice president he met with Estes and other officials before the killing of U.S. Department of Agriculture official Henry M. Marshall, the three newspapers said.

Marshall was shot to death with a 22-caliber rifle on his farm in Franklin, 120 miles south of Dallas, on June 3, 1961. Estes claims Malcolm Wallace, who died in 1971, was responsible, the newspapers said.

Marshall's death stood on official records as a suicide for 23 years until the Robertson County grand jury ruled it a homicide Tuesday after hearing testimony from Estes. The grand jury also said there was no one left alive to indict.

Lady Bird Johnson, the president's widow, could not be reached for comment on the testimony Thursday, the Morning News said in its copyright story.

"All we will say is that Mrs. Johnson does not answer scurrilous attacks and comments such as that," said Liz Carpenter, who served as Mrs. Johnson's press secretary when Johnson was president.

The Times Herald said former aides to Johnson who were contacted Thursday night denied the allegations. Walter Jenkins, once Johnson's top assistant, told the newspaper Johnson met Estes only twice and not in the instances Estes reportedly described in his testimony.

"I just think that Billie Sol Estes is a con man and a pathological liar. He's just looking for publicity," said Robert Hardesty, another Johnson adviser and now president of Southwest Texas State University.

"It's just the word of an admitted con man," one grand juror told The Dallas Times Herald.

The three newspapers quoted sources as saying Estes testified that Johnson met with Estes, Wallace and an aide shortly before Marshall's death to discuss fears that Marshall could link Johnson to illegal dealings involving Estes and the USDA.

Estes was eventually convicted of a multi-million dollar fertilizer tank swindle that involved federal agricultural loans.

Estes told the grand jury that he and Marshall conducted more than 130 illegal cotton allotment transfers with Johnson's knowledge between January 1961 and the time Marshall was killed, the Times Herald and the Eagle quoted their sources as saying.

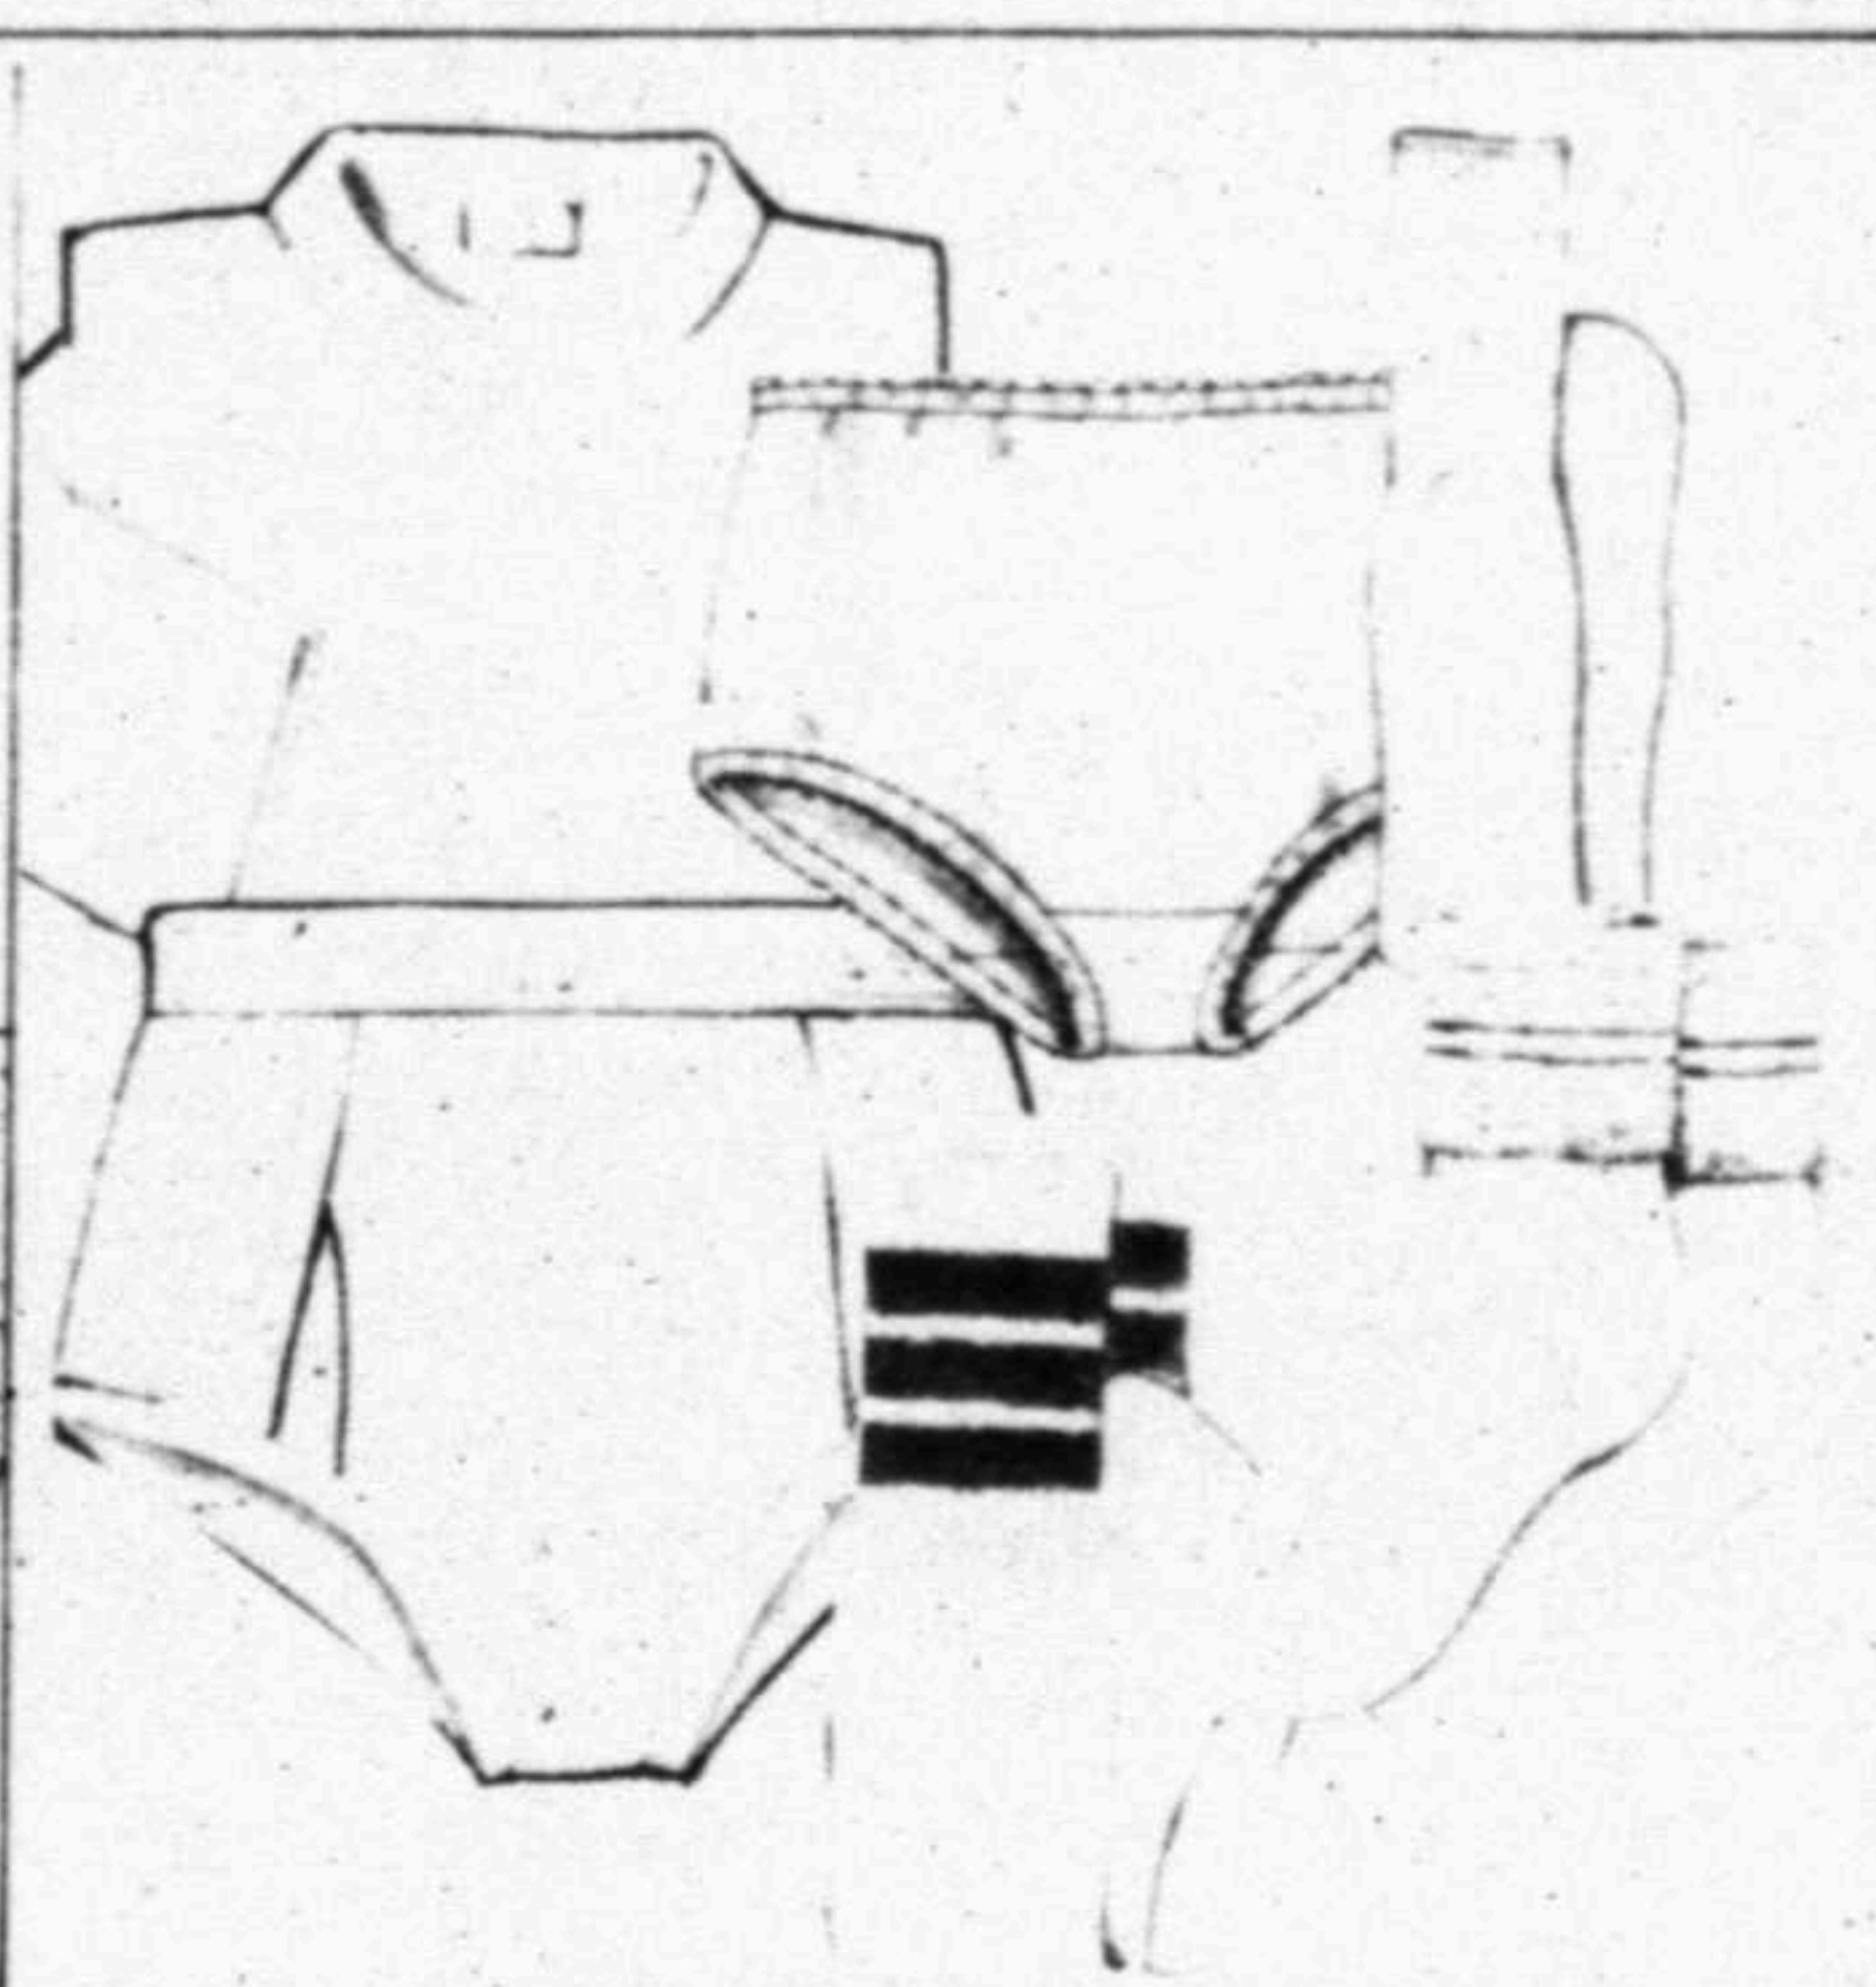

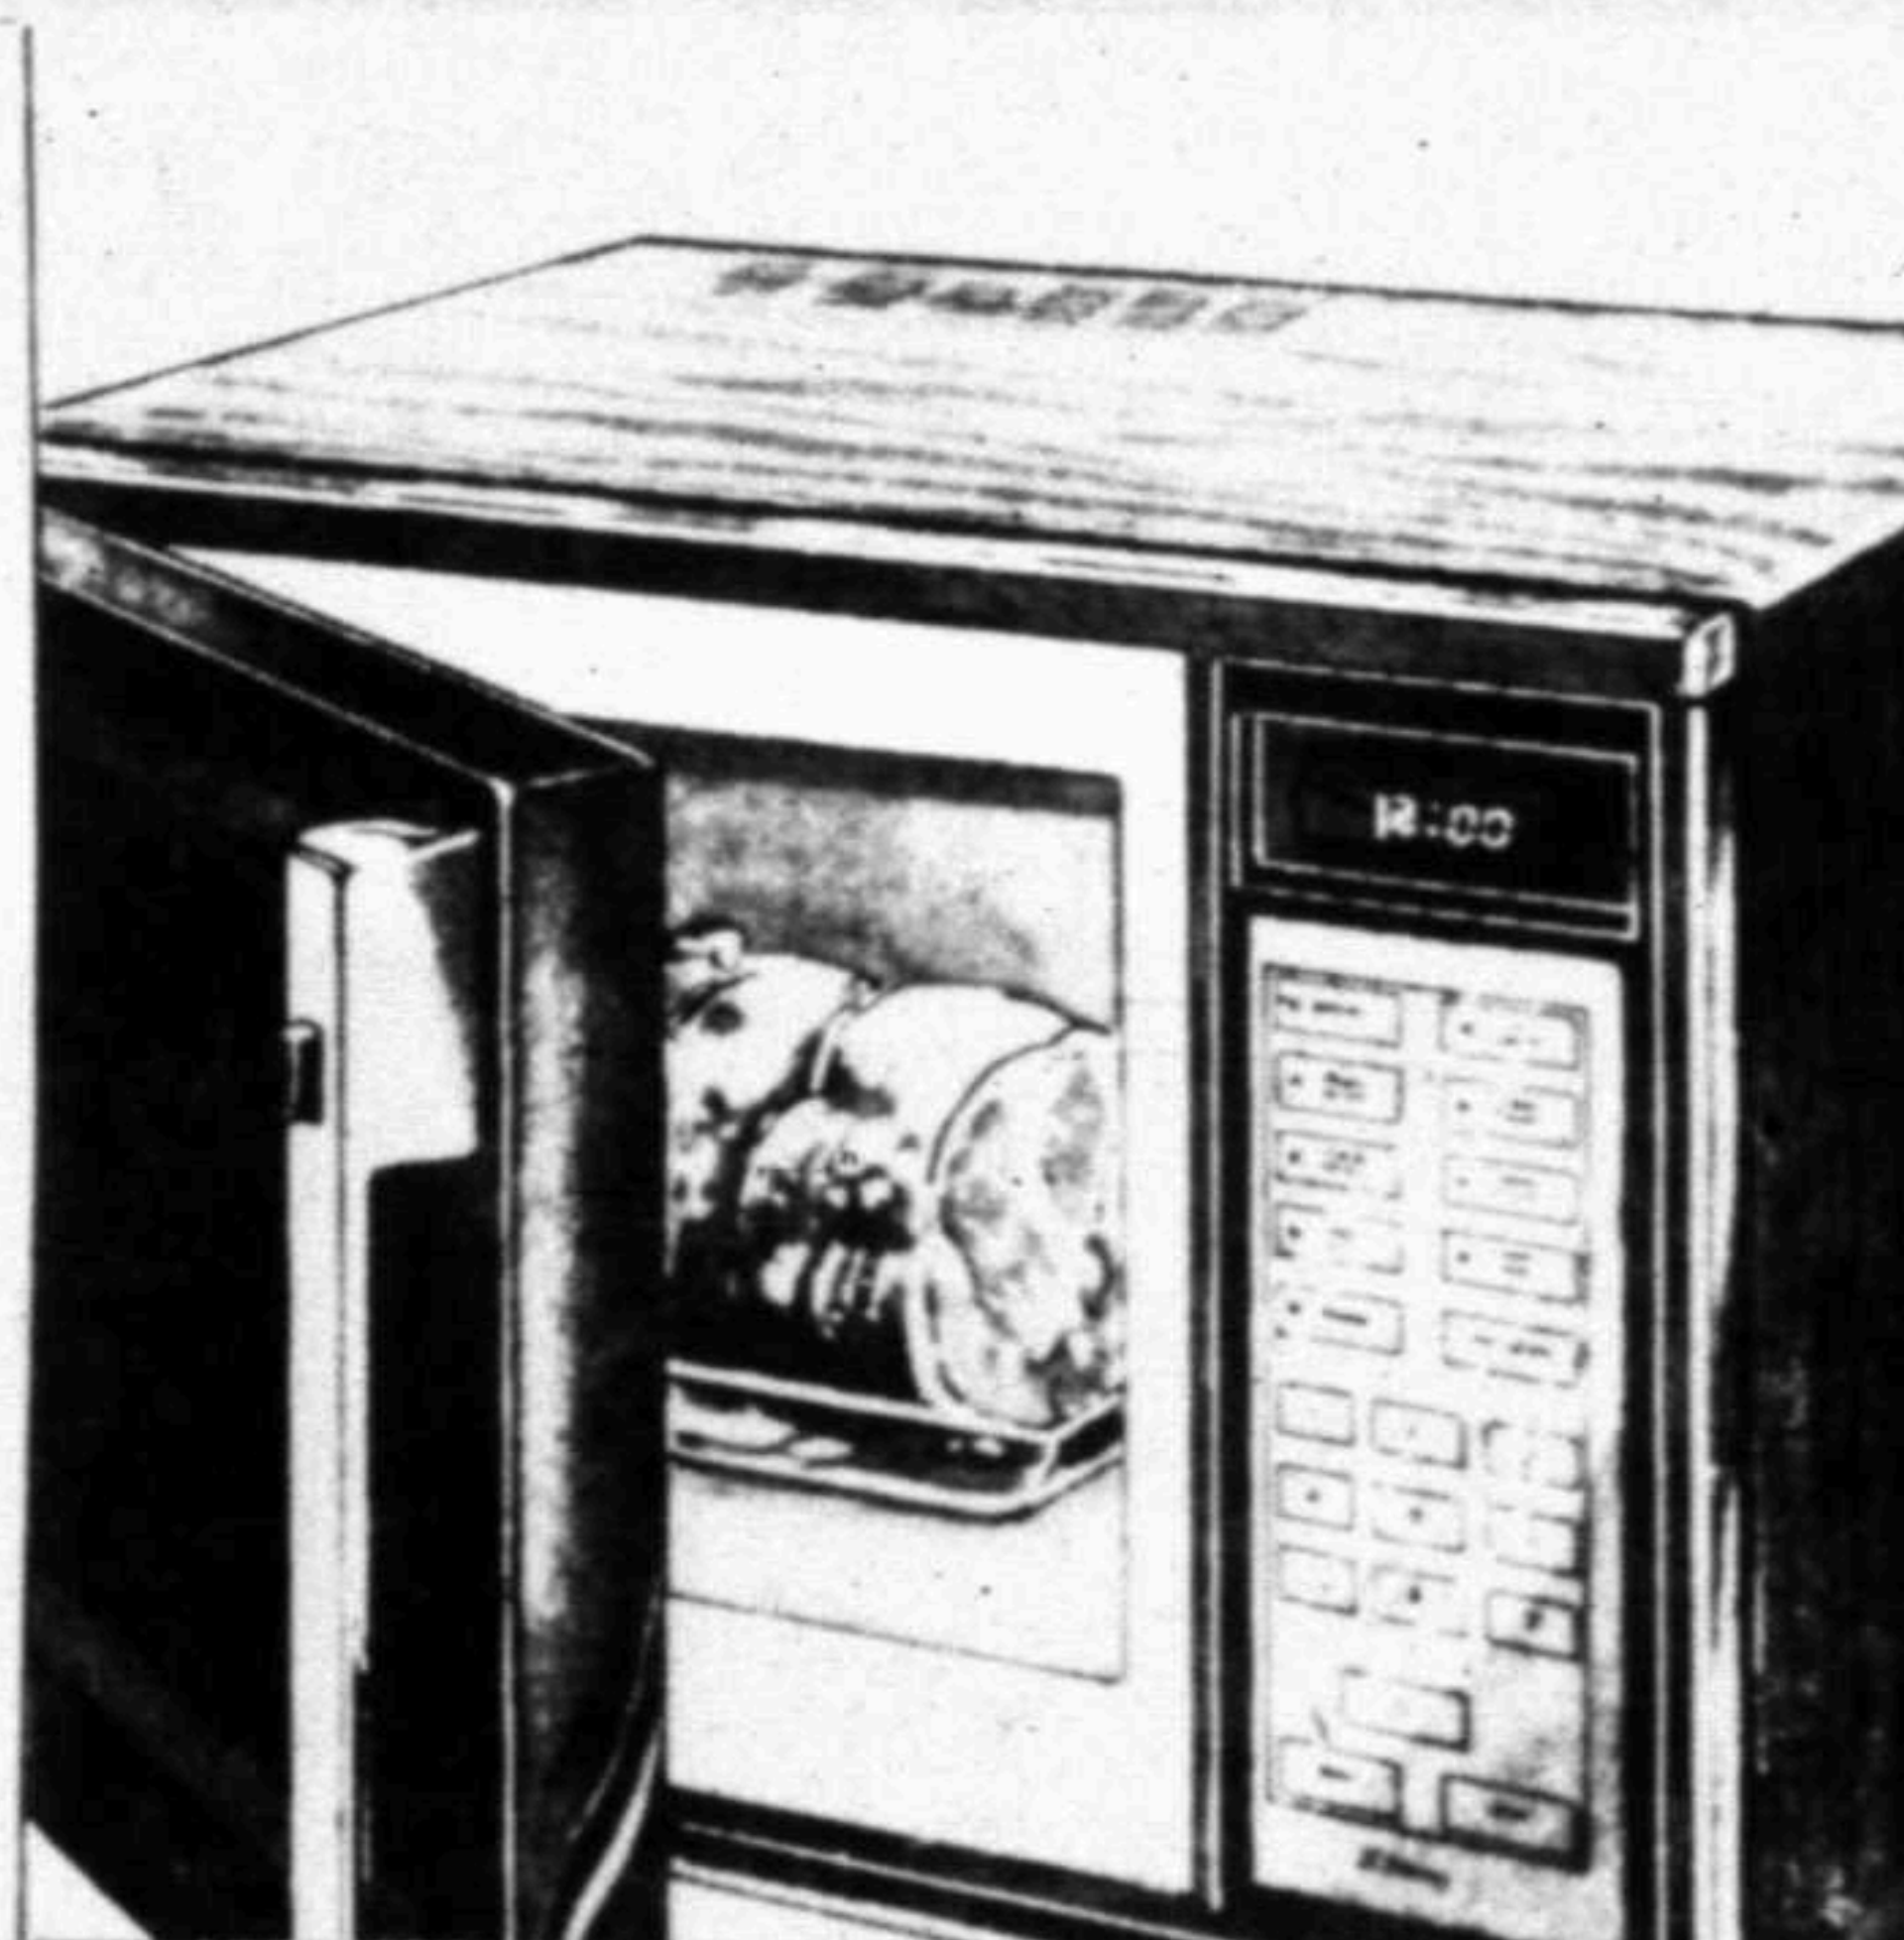

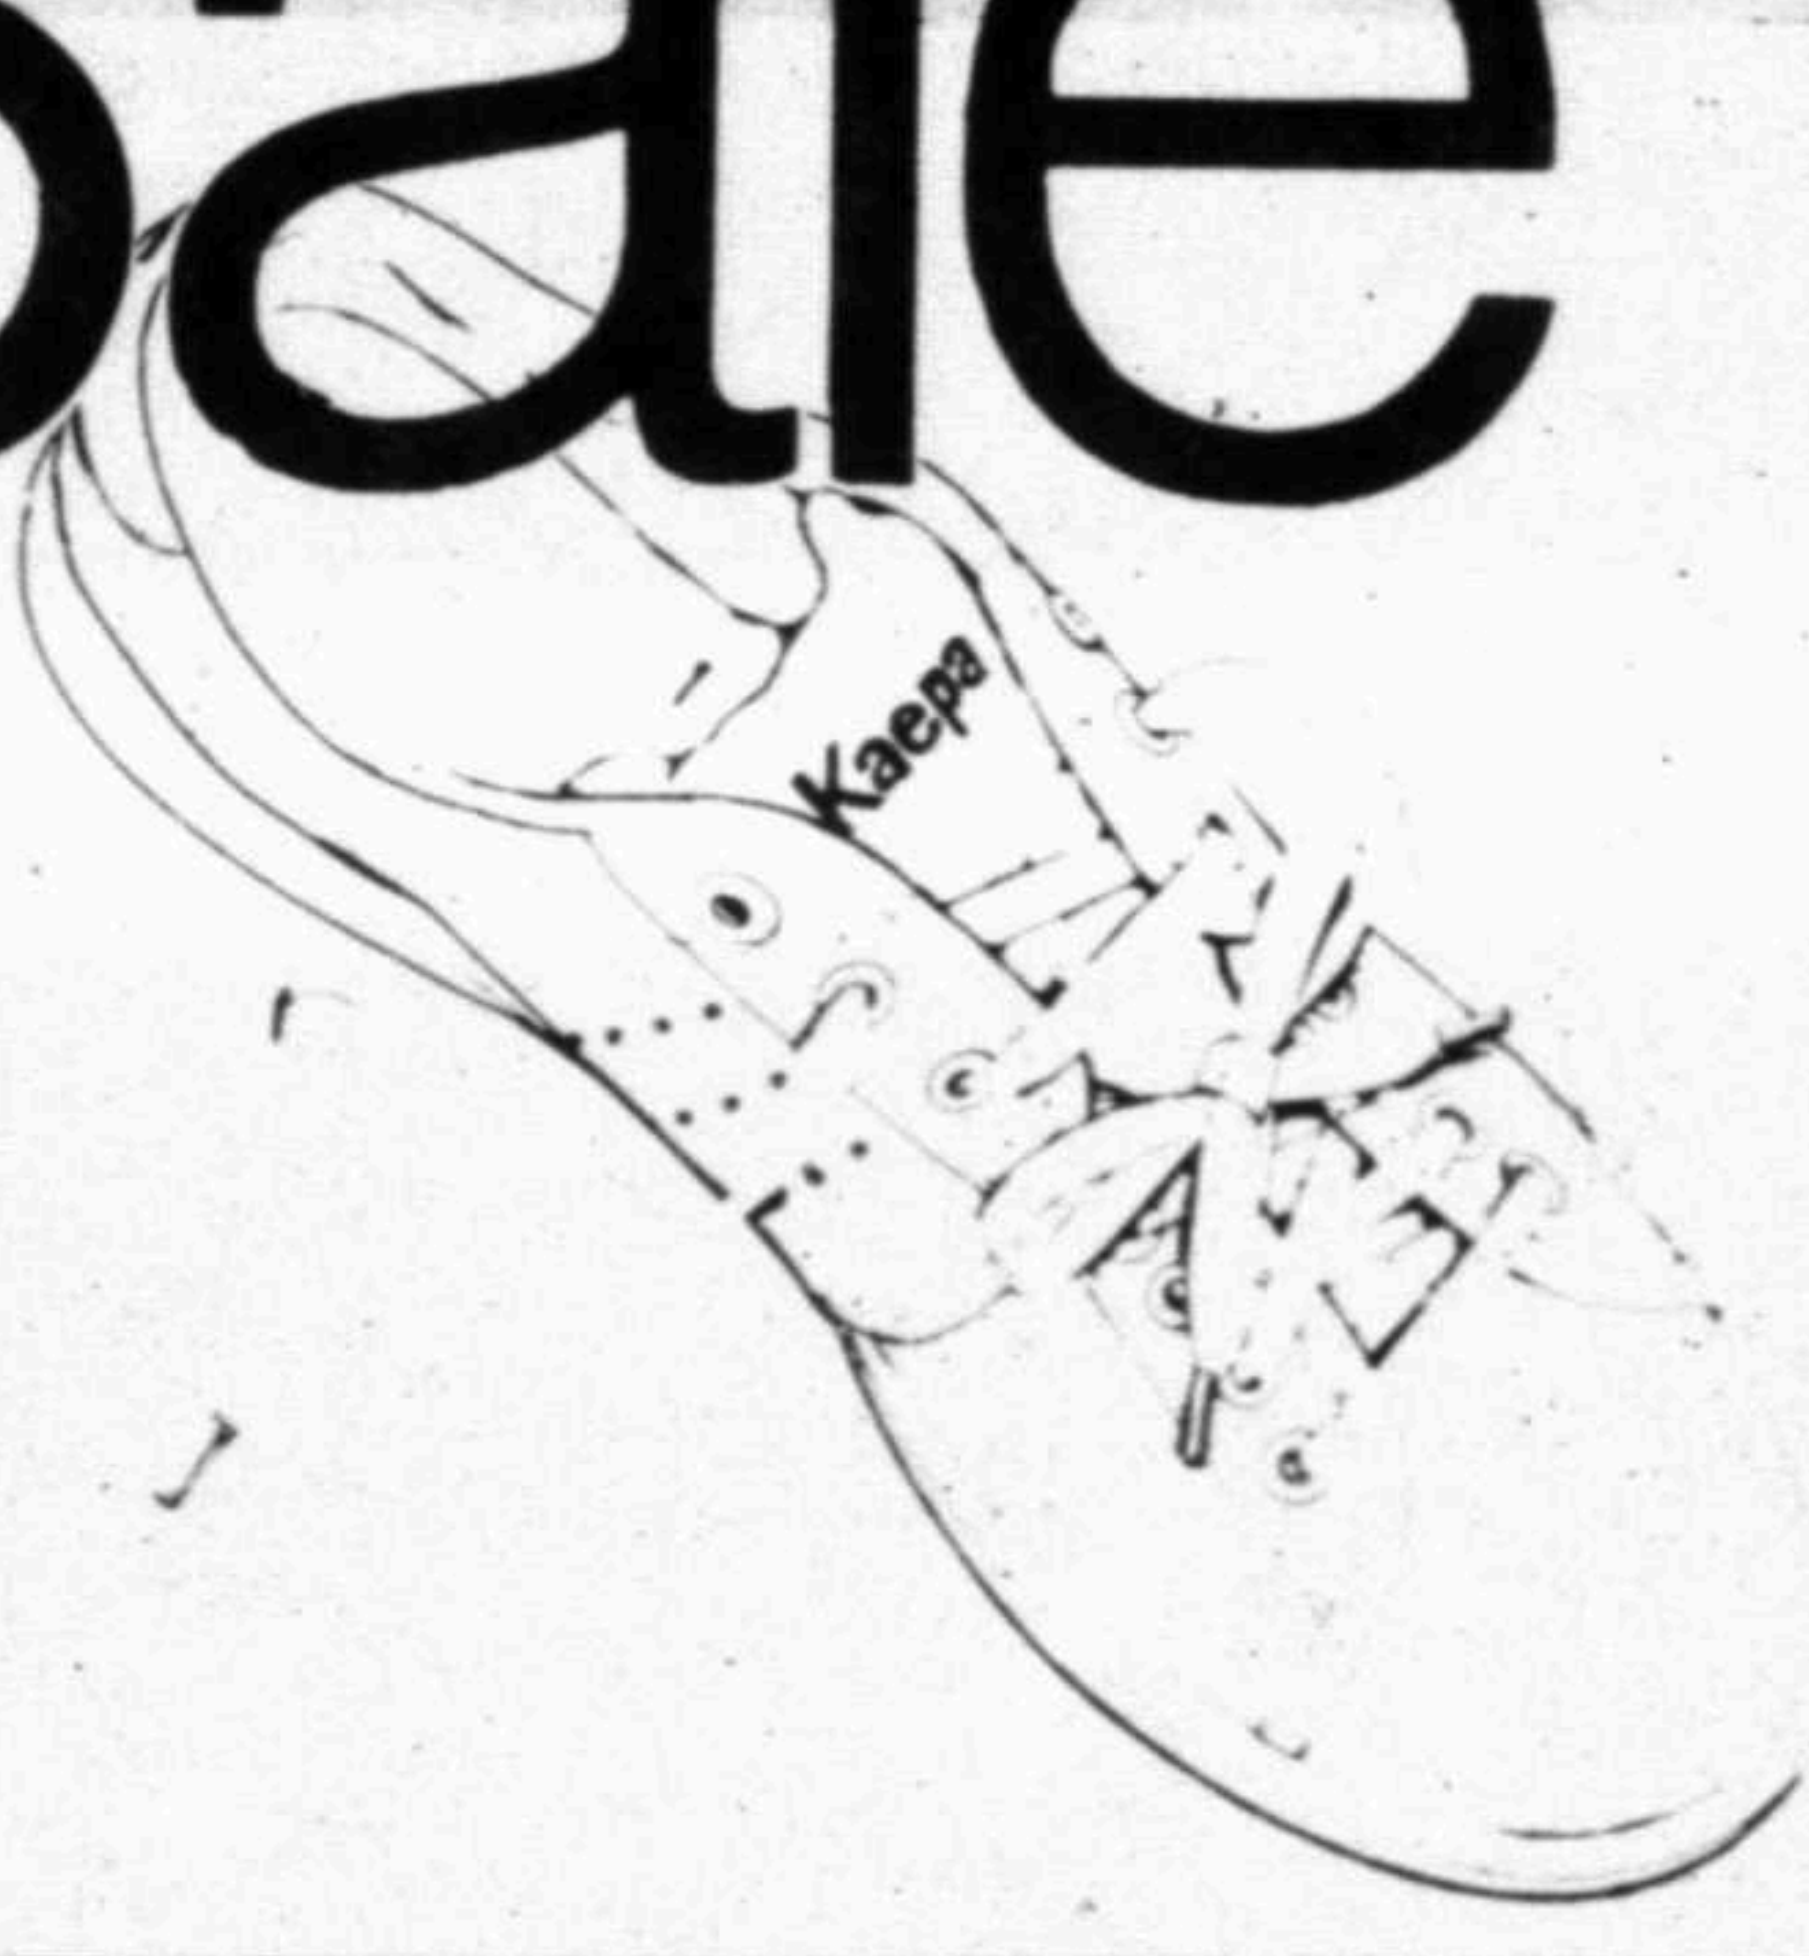

Estes alleged the illegal transfers were a method Johnson used to pay Estes off in exchange for the financial contributions he made to Johnson's political campaigns, the sources were quoted as saying.

The case, long a subject of intense gossip and rumor in Texas political circles, was reopened after Estes agreed to break his silence at the urging of U.S. Marshal Clint Peoples, 73, who has pursued the case for more than two decades, the Times Herald said.

Princess complains of morning sickness

LEICESTER, England (AP) — Expecting her second baby in late September, Princess Diana told sympathetic women workers during a visit to a babywear factory here that she's having a miserable time with morning sickness.

The 22-year-old princess, who had the same problem before the birth of her son Prince William on June 21, 1982, smiled and looked radiant during the visit Thursday in this midlands city.

But when she was asked how she felt, she told the factory workers:

"Not very well. I haven't felt well since day one. I don't think I'm made for the production line, but it's worthwhile in the end."

Her husband Prince Charles, currently on a two-week business trip in Africa, recently jokingly referred to the royal couple's family plans as "the production line."

The princess also said she's "hoping for a girl this time...I haven't got around yet to thinking of names."

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Cliff Robertson will head the American Cancer Society's 1984 fund-raising drive, first lady Nancy Reagan will again be honorary chairman, and for the second year actress Nancy Walker will head the society's door-to-door drive.

Robertson, 58, will appear next month on a cancer quiz program on cable television designed to help viewers determine whether they are at risk of developing cancer.

"Knowing when and how you are at risk is an important first step to personal control of this disease," Robertson said Thursday at a news conference.

He called it an encouraging record that "close to 3 million Americans throughout our nation have been cured of cancer."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Penthouse magazine Pets of the Month may be a far cry from Jerry Lewis and his kids, but that isn't stopping the regional Muscular Dystrophy Association from raffling off dates with models Barbara Corser or Heather Lynn to raise money.

"I consider myself an ardent feminist, but I don't think this is offensive," says Jo Goeldner, MDA district director. "It's for a very, very good cause. The bottom line is that we've got to have money for research."

For a tax-deductible $3 cover charge and $1 per raffle ticket, male customers will get a chance to win a chaperoned date with either of the two Penthouse models. Women could win a date — unchaperoned — with either Dwaine Board or Ronnie Lott of the San Francisco 49ers football team.

The March 30 raffle at the Nob Hill Cafe in Millbrae's Clarion Hotel is expected to raise between $500 and $1,500. Winners will get a dinner date at the Clarion.

Ms. Goeldner described the event as the "epitome of beauty and gorgeous muscles helping to stop muscle diseases."

She added, "Jerry Lewis and the Muscular Dystrophy telethon appeal to a wholesome, middle-class crowd, but we've got to go after these other people."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Actor Clint Eastwood has the go-ahead for a $10 million dollar suit against the National Enquirer.

Eastwood, 53, charges that an April 1982 story about his alleged romantic involvement with two other celebrities was false and that the use of his picture damaged his ability to control the commercial exploitation of his name.

Desert

sets record

BARSTOW, Calif. (AP) — In the middle of the desolate Mojave Desert, 90 dusty miles northeast of Los Angeles and just this side of the Calico ghost town, golden arches mark the fast-food world's national pace-setter.

The McDonald's restaurant in Barstow fed burgers and fries to more hungry people last year than any of the 6,200 McDonald's in the United States.

"It's not unusual for us to sell 15,000 sandwiches daily," says Fred Rosenberg, co-owner with George Feldman of the bustling franchise that employs about 130 people and has 17 very busy cash registers.

How did the McDonald's in Barstow, population 19,000, outdo franchises in New York, Los Angeles, Dallas or Chicago as tops in the nation's biggest fast-food chain? Location.

It's situated in the Barstow Station, a tourist attraction "right there on the off-ramp" from Interstate 15, fastest route between Los Angeles and Las Vegas' casinos, Barstow Chamber of Commerce spokeswoman Candy Purdy notes.

The collection of souvenir shops, an ice cream parlor and snack stores is the preferred halfway stop for gamblers and tourists — up to 15 million cross that point on the freeway annually — according to chamber estimates.

"There are always busloads of tourists parked at Barstow Station," Ms. Purdy said. "They've got a gold mine there."

Rosenberg wouldn't reveal his McDonald's sales in dollars and Feldman declined comment on its best-selling items, citing "internal security."

But Bob Kaiser, spokesman for McDonald's headquarters in Oak Brook, Ill., confirmed they hold the 1983 record for U.S. sales.

And the international record? It's held by a McDonald's in Singapore, Kaiser said.

Things are just ducky

WHEELING, W. Va. (AP) — Life is just ducky along Wheeling Creek these days — too ducky for some residents who say their one-time feathered friends are fouling the neighborhood.

"Have you ever tried to take a walk in the summertime after 200 ducks have been on the street, waiting to be fed?" Nancy Riser complained this week to the city Health Committee.

The committee was taking up a petition asking the city to remove the ducks, which residents said were hanging around and multiplying because of food handouts from duck-fancying neighbors.

One woman, who did not give her name, rose to defend the ducks, which she said were neater than dogs and cats.

"Over 50 percent of the people that signed that petition at one time or another have fed the ducks themselves," she said.

Jim Palmer admitted he was one of those who formerly fed the ducks, but he said their numbers have got out of hand.

"I don't hate ducks," Palmer said. However, he pointed out, "I like dogs and I have a dog, but I don't have 400 of them."

Animal Control Officer William Custer said he would arrange a meeting with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service about trapping and moving the ducks. He said his department cannot trap them because many are mallards, protected by federal law.

The trapping program was endorsed by City Councilman Lloyd Stenger as the best alternative.

'Data-link' pod
gouges divot

FRUITLAND, Fla. (AP) — The Live Oaks Golf and Country Club has the Navy to thank for what may be one of the largest divots in golfing history.

Golfers were on the course in Putnam County in Northeast Florida Wednesday when a module containing electronic equipment "data-link" pod dropped from a Navy A-7 attack jet and slammed into the third fairway.

The impact gouged a hole about 3 feet deep, 8 feet long and 4 feet wide, said clubhouse manager Pat Reddish.

Freedom regained

Lenell Geter's story is a prime example of how the American legal system can entangle an individual and turn him into a victim. It's the story of an innocent man wrongly convicted of a crime and imprisoned.

In that regard, his is a horror story — the nightmare of all those who truly believe in freedom and justice. But it's also a story of perseverance and courage.

Convicted in the October 1982 robbery of a Balch Springs fast-food restaurant, Geter served 16 months of a life prison sentence prior to being released in December after news reports raised questions of his guilt. He was scheduled to be re-tried for the robbery April 9, but now the prosecutor says four of the five witnesses who originally identified Geter as the man who held up the restaurant in Balch Springs have now identified a Harris County Jail inmate as the robber.

Furthermore, the prosecutor in the case has said the charge against Geter will be dismissed. That is the correct decision.

There are any number of reasons to suspect a mistake was made in Geter's case. One is the simple fact that Geter's co-workers said he was at work 50 miles from the robbery site at the time the robbery occurred. Another is the fact that with a number of witnesses now identifying another suspect as the man who committed the robbery, there certainly appears to be reasonable doubt that Geter should have been convicted.

Geter always maintained his innocence, but how often is a suspected criminal heard to confess his guilt?

Yes, in one regard the evidence now surfacing lends credence to Geter's charge that he was railroaded into prison and that, perhaps, officers on his case were too quick to accept at face-value his guilt because he is a young black man and the robber was also. But no one has ever claimed the American system of law enforcement and justice is foolproof. Geter's case proves it isn't.

An even greater lesson from the Geter case is that the system does work. It may be slow, it may be costly, some innocent individuals may get hurt from time to time — but it works.

That's wonderful! Don't take our word for it. Ask Lenell Geter.

Another View:

Protected piracy

While the Defense Department worries about all the high-tech hardware being illegally shipped into the Soviet Union, the civilian sector is chewing its nails about the specter of legal poaching of its software.

Hardware in computer lingo is machinery or equipment. Software is the programming or intelligence with which equipment performs specific tasks. The Japanese are among the leading manufacturers of hardware but are laggards in developing software, a process requiring time-consuming and costly research.

A bill prepared for the Japanese parliament would enable Japanese manufacturers to ignore international copyright laws governing software.

Most countries, the United States included, give software the same long-term copyright protection as books and movies — from 50 to 75 years in most cases. The Japanese want to categorize software as industrial goods and recognize only a 15-year hands-off policy.

That alone has U.S. firms worried, but there's more. A cozy loophole in the proposed legislation would allow the Japanese government to declare that it is in the national interest to have a particular piece of software and thereby force American firms to license Japanese companies to copy and produce the software. There goes any determined period of protection.

And if, indeed, it did become in the "national interest" to legally pirate U.S.-developed software, Japanese firms could sell their production on the world market, knocking the financial props out from under U.S. manufacturers.

A Commerce Department negotiating team has been in Tokyo since January trying to head off the software raid. Efforts are coming to a climax because the legislation must go to the parliament by March 27.

If the measure is approved, not only just the computer field will turn nasty. The whole gamut of U.S.-Japanese trade relations may well be affected. The give-and-take that consumed old agreements might be jeopardized by hostile retaliation.

At home, supporters of steel and auto import controls will march on Congress, demanding the same kind of government protection that Japanese industry seeks for software and that Japanese industry got earlier for autos, electronics and steel. Organized labor has claimed all along that government protection, not quality or price differential, is what put the Japanese in a position to devastate the American auto industry.

The Japanese are taking the low road, trying to make things easy for themselves at the expense of U.S. competitors. In the process they are making it mighty difficult for the defenders of free trade and open markets.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, March 23, the 83rd day of 1984. There are 283 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On March 23, 1775, in a speech at a provincial convention in Virginia, statesman Patrick Henry made a plea for American freedom from Britain, saying "Give me liberty, or give me death."

On this date: In 1823, the 17th vice president of the United States, Schuyler Colfax, was born in New York.

In 1857, cooking expert Fannie Farmer was born in Boston.

In 1908, the late actress Joan Crawford was born in San Antonio, Texas.

In 1933, the German Reichstag granted Adolf Hitler dictatorial powers.

And in 1942, the United States began moving Japanese-Americans from their West Coast homes to inland camps.

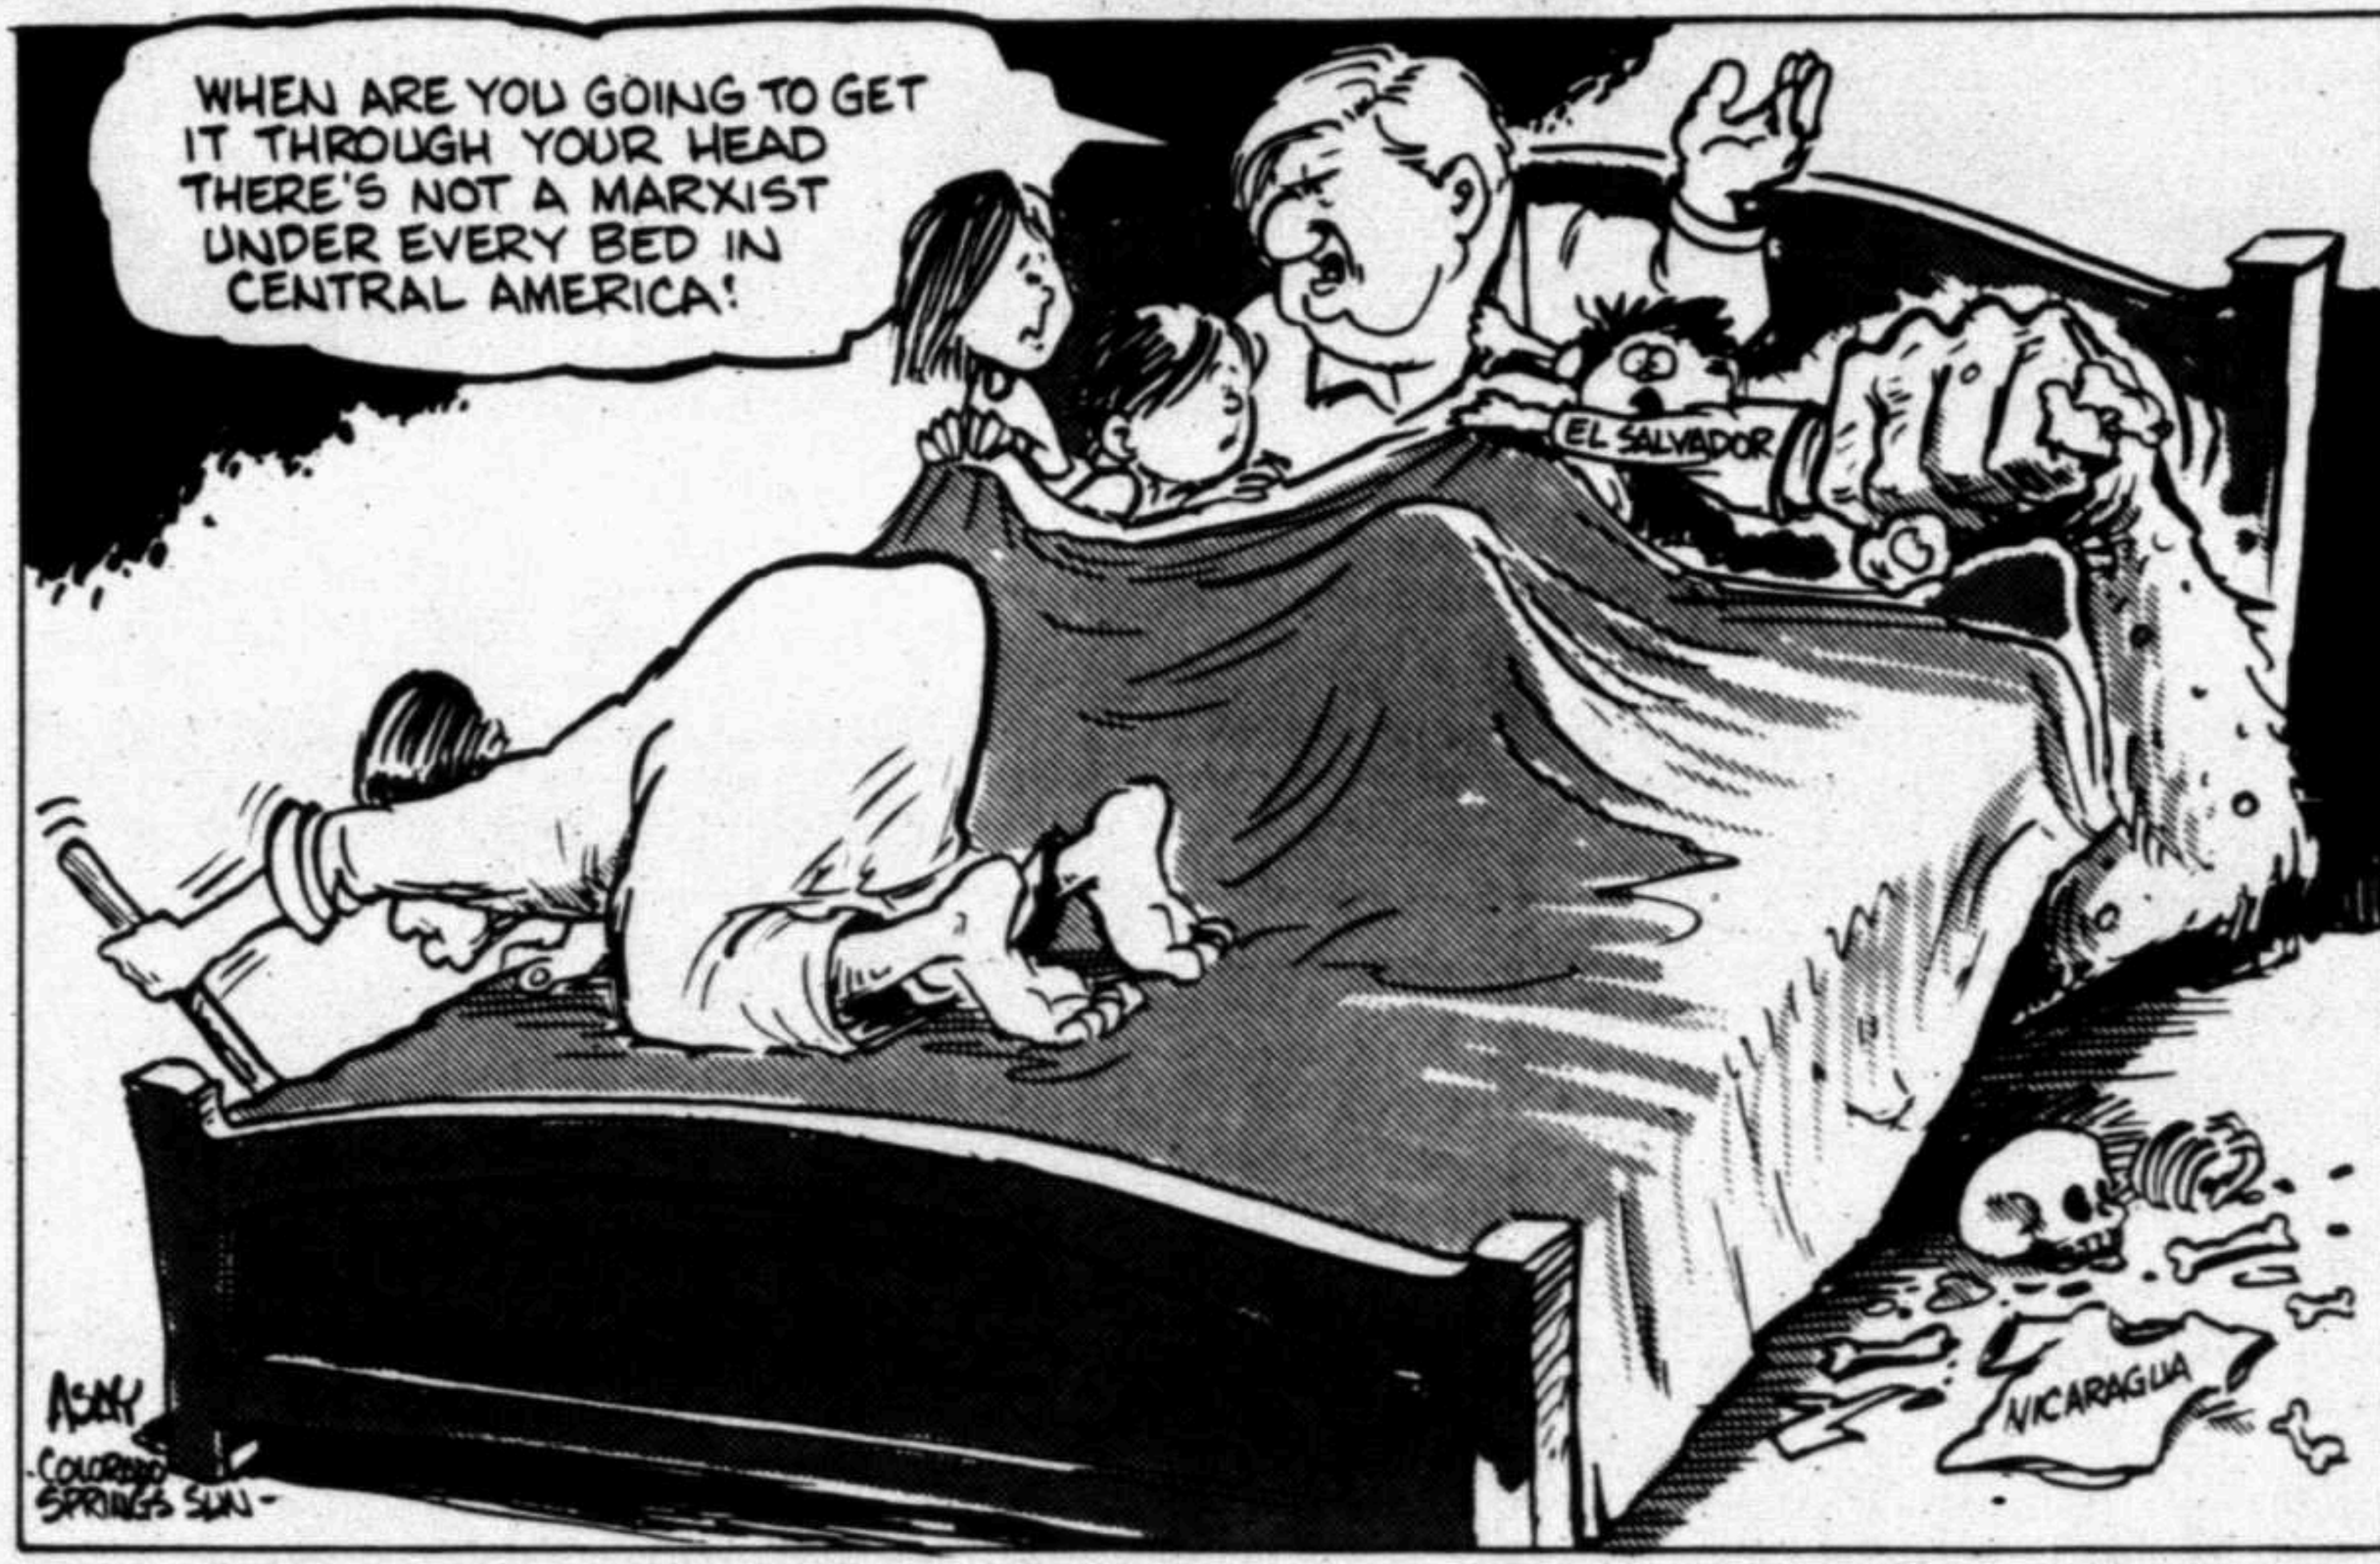

Ten years ago: Eight people were killed and a dozen others injured when a gasoline can was ignited and thrown into a crowded bar in Allentown, Pa.

Five years ago: The Labor Department reported that inflation the previous month was running at an annual rate of nearly 15.5 percent — the highest in 4½ years.

One year ago: Dr. Barney Clark died at the University of Utah Medical Center on his 112th day with the world's first permanent artificial heart. He was 62.

Today's Birthdays: Comedian Marty Allen is 62 years old. Former Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson is 46. And basketball star Moses Malone is 29.

Thought for Today: "There is no more miserable human being than one in whom nothing is habitual but indecision." — William James, American psychologist and philosopher (1842-1910).

JACK ANDERSON

Change of mind crucial to plea

WASHINGTON — Crucial government tapes of conversations between auto-maker John Z. DeLorean and undercover agents show that DeLorean wanted to back out of a $24 million cocaine deal that supposedly would have saved his sports car company from bankruptcy. Then — overnight — he suddenly agreed to go ahead with the scheme.

What the jury in DeLorean's drug trial will have to determine is, quite simply, why? DeLorean has told my reporters that one of the government operatives threatened his daughter's life, and that he agreed to go along out of fear.

Jack Anderson

DeLorean's apparent change of mind is made clear on the government's tapes of three telephone conversations in September 1982. My associates Indy Badhwar and Tony Capaccio have reviewed the still-secret tapes.

The first conversation occurred on Sept. 15, 1982, between DeLorean and a supposed banker who called himself Jim Benedict. The man was actually an FBI agent. DeLorean told Benedict he had no money for the cocaine deal and wanted to pull out.

DeLorean: "I just don't see any way out of it."

Benedict: "You just screwed up a helluva deal."

DeLorean: "But I don't see any other way, 'cause that's where it is, and unless you've got some other ideas there just isn't any other way."

Benedict: "So what are you telling me? I want to all this trouble for nothing? You really put me in a bad spot. ... This is going to make me look extremely, extremely bad and it puts me in a very bad position. So what do you want me to do? You want me to kill this deal?"

DeLorean: "I don't see any alternative right now. All I can do is, I'll try to develop an alternative and if I can't, I'll leave word at your office."

The second call came later that day, when James Hoffman, the government informer who was supposed to be arranging the cocaine deal, called DeLorean to urge him to stay in.

Hoffman: "Well, John, maybe there's a way we can solve this. Do you have something you could put up within our period, to show you have good faith, such as some kind of collateral? You got any free, ah, group of free and clear cars anywhere?"

DeLorean hems and haws and stresses his poor financial shape. Hoffman persists.

Hoffman: "Everything is in gear right now, and all I have to do is figure out a way to, ah, you know, to cover it and to put you in a position that, ah, nobod could criticize that, you know, you're not showing good faith."

The next day, Sept. 16 — after DeLorean claims his daughter's life was threatened in another call from Hoffman — Benedict called to pursue the collateral matter.

Benedict: "I talked to Jim (Hoffman) and I guess he has discussed some matters with you that might possibly change."

DeLorean: "Yeah, he asked me if there was any collateral."

Benedict: "What we're looking at is not necessarily, ah, I'm not worried about liquidation of the collateral, obviously."

DeLorean: "You want it to look right."

Benedict: "Right. Obviously you can't run it through the bank now. ... It will be like a note between you and I. Uh, I will be extending a loan based on collateral that, uh, put together for 2 million payable within 30 days and the collateral being assignable. And there'd be just a piece of paper between you and I."

DeLorean: "Well, let me, I'll get this done immediately and we'll have it. I'll put it on a plane to you tomorrow."

Benedict: "I'm going to call him and I'm going to tell him that I received today from your end ... cash. ... In case that should come to a face-to-face confrontation with you and him, keep in mind that I've told him that I've got the cash from you, as opposed to this arrangement we have here."

The government contends that DeLorean's agreement to the phony collateral arrangement showed his willingness to go ahead with the scheme.

WHO'S NEWS?: George Washington is still making news 185 years after his death. Last month, I printed excerpts from a love letter Washington had written to his best friend's wife, Sally Fairfax, while he was engaged to Martha Custis. Then I got a letter from E. Harrison Clark, a Washington biographer, who said the letter was a fraud. He found the signature suspicious and the style of the letter "completely different from anything that George Washington had ever written in his entire life." But another Washington biographer, James Thomas Flexner, stands firm in his belief that the letter is authentic.

FBI Director William Webster recently had an impacted wisdom tooth extracted by Dr. Richard Simeone of Potomac, Md. Webster was curious: Was the dentist related to John Simeone, assistant director of the FBI's new 50-man team created to extract hostages painlessly from dangerous situations? Despite the professional resemblance, the answer was no.

Ever since August 1980, a 3-inch gold medal honoring the late senator and vice president, Hubert Horatio Humphrey, has been lying in a safe at the Bureau of the Mint. The medal was authorized by Congress, but has never been given the customary formal presentation in a White House ceremony. Last year, Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., asked the White House to arrange for President Reagan to present the medal to Humphrey's widow, Muriel. He was told there were scheduling difficulties. But recently White House aide Craig Fuller contacted Muriel to work out a mutually agreeable schedule for the presentation.

EVANS & NOVAK

Defense boss bombing 'peace'

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger is quietly telling friends that George Shultz should resign for President Reagan's sake, a symptom of a renewed Pentagon assault on the weakened secretary of state that threatens White House "peace" strategy for the re-election campaign.

Weinberger is not recommending such a resignation to the president. But he is known to have told business and corporate pals of both himself and Shultz that Shultz should quit. He did so more in anger than sorrow because of the effect on Reagan of State Department failures.

Shultz is not about to resign. That means the Shultz-Weinberger struggle, the worst since Secretary of State Dean Acheson ran Defense Secretary Louis Johnson out of town 35 years ago, will continue. Any personality clash between the former Bechtel Corp. colleagues is eclipsed by strong policy differences, particularly on the Soviet Union, between the president's top two national security officials.

The Lebanon fiasco, based on Shultz policies opposed by Weinberger, is the reason for private suggestions that a new secretary of state is needed. It also has emboldened the Pentagon to renew disputes over Soviet relations previously decided at the White House in the State Department's favor.

The renewed Pentagon offensive, taken up by its allies in Congress, endangers the way the re-election campaign has been planned by White House chief of staff James A. Baker III and campaign manager Edward Rollins. Their plans to show candidate Reagan flourishing an election-year olive branch could be frustrated if Weinberger can cash in on Shultz's post-Lebanon vulnerability.

Pentagon allies on Capitol Hill scent that weakness and are moving fast to take advantage of it. Conservative Republican senators are convinced of two things: first, that Shultz wants a pre-election U.S.-Soviet arms deal; second, that to get it he and top aides are conducting "back-channel" (out of normal procedures) talks with Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko, offering him juicy concessions. So, these Reagan-aids have decided on a secret appeal to the president against any softening of the U.S. position on strategic arms.

This challenge to Shultz's dominance in foreign policy has clear Pentagon backing. Excluded from back-channel communications with the Russians and not at all happy about it, Weinberger sent Assistant Secretary Richard Perle to the House Armed Services Committee recently to denounce Soviet treaty violations, in terms much harsher than any ever used by the State Department. Perle quoted Weinberger as warning that Soviet treaty violations "must have been planned many years ago ... perhaps at the very time the Soviet Union entered into the agreements."

That contrasted vividly with the administration tone in charging Soviet non-compliance, set deliberately low-key by Shultz before the Lebanon fiasco weakened him. The secretary of state found that Moscow was "probably" violated the SALT II limit on one new-type strategic missile. In the Defense Department's recent budget, Weinberger hardened Shultz's finding by saying flatly: "The Soviets 'currently have two new types ...'"

To State Department insiders, the rancor between their boss and Weinberger has reached an alarming point that casts doubt on how Reagan wants his Soviet policy to look in an election year. That rancor, they feel, is getting worse, not better. Even though such recriminations against Weinberger are rife throughout the State Department, counterattack is unlikely both because of Shultz's current state of weakness and his personality.

"George won't retaliate out loud," one intimate told us. "It is not in his stolid, Germanic character to explode." Weinberger has fewer inhibitions, which explains the current attack on détente at the State Department. That may give him a slight edge in a struggle that will determine not only Ronald Reagan's campaign posture but perhaps the U.S. posture toward the Kremlin in the years immediately ahead.

CHARLEY REESE

Israel's security precarious

If President Reagan pursues his Middle East peace plan, he will meet with the same defeat and frustration he found in Lebanon and for the same reason.

His peace plan, which calls for a Palestinian state federated with Jordan on the West Bank, conflicts with the reality on the ground: Israel, no matter which party is in power, will never agree to it because it cannot afford to do so.

I will tell you why and it has nothing to do with Israeli expansionism or religion. It is simply a matter of physical security.

Most Americans do not realize what a small country Israel is. Israel's population is about the same as Philadelphia's. The country has only 7,990 square miles. That's about the size of Vermont. Eighty percent of the people and the industry is located in an L-shaped corridor that runs from Haifa in the north south to Tel Aviv and east to Jerusalem.

Israel's army is 75 percent reserves. Before mobilization, the ratio of Arab soldiers to Israeli soldiers is 10 to 1. After mobilization, it is 3.5 to 1 in favor of the Arabs. Thus, in a war, mobilization which takes 36 to 72 hours, is necessary for Israeli survival.

Now, there are two more important facts to consider. This vital mobilization takes place in that L-shaped corridor. And that L-shaped corridor, which is only 7 to 12 miles wide, is low-coastal plain and valley. The West Bank territory which bulges out on either side of Jerusalem is the high ground. Artillery in the West Bank can pound that L-shaped corridor at will. Tanks launched from the West Bank would be in the L-shaped corridor in five minutes.

The West Bank (Judea and Samaria) is essentially a line of semi-arid hills between the coastal plain and the Jordan Valley. If an Arab army has to fight its way across the hills from Jordan, it means the Israelis gain a minimum of 5 to 10 hours for mobilization.

For that reason, no Israeli government will ever agree to any plan which precludes some kind of Israeli presence on some part of that high ground. To do so would be irresponsible in light of Israel's history which has not known a single day of peace because of the Arabs' irrational hatred.

I don't know who is advising Reagan on his Middle East policy but whoever he is, he ought to fire him. No doubt the same guy who told him it would be easy to get the Syrians out of Lebanon also told him the Israelis would turn over the high ground to people who have launched five wars against them in the last 34 years.

Israel can live with the Camp David plan. It calls for granting Palestinians on the West Bank autonomy while retaining some military positions for Israel. They cannot live with a PLO controlled state looking down their throats even if it is allegedly demilitarized. In today's world of mobile weapons an area can be re-militarized in a flash.

The Israelis could afford to give up the Sinai because it is 22,000 square miles. Even if the Egyptians one day double-cross the Israelis, the Sinai is so large that by the time Egyptian forces could cross it, the Israelis would be mobilized.

The West Bank, on the other hand, is only 2,200 square miles and is only 20 to 40 miles wide. For our policy to succeed, it must be based on reality. We have many interests in the Middle East; the Israelis have only one — survival. Generally our mistakes cost us mainly embarrassment and loss of face. Israeli mistakes translate into death and destruction. We have a lot of margin for error. Israel has none. Therefore, any time we demand that Israel risk its physical survival for the sake of a theory cooked up on the banks of the Potomac, we are forcing the Israelis to disagree with us. I sometimes think the Arabists in the State Department do this deliberately so they can paint Israel as an uncooperative ally.

A sensible U.S. policy would be to tell the Arabs that the Palestinian problem is their problem and that if they wish to solve it, they can do so by sitting down with the Israelis and negotiating an end to the wars they, the Arabs, started. If they do not wish to solve it, then they are welcome to live with it.

We have a special relationship with Israel; our relationship with the Arabs is strictly business. The Arab countries have nothing to offer the West except oil for which they overcharge us. They can't get along with each other nor do they trust each other any farther than they can throw a mosque. Not a single Arab country will allow the U.S. to have a military base on its territory. Not a single Arab country can be relied on to stand with the United States in a crisis.

Sexual attack on schoolgirls stops

By The Associated Press

Officials in St. Louis and Detroit say stepped up security measures have brought a halt to a series of sexual attacks on schoolgirls.

Two men, including a middle school teacher, were charged Wednesday in two of 48 sexual assaults in Detroit since September. That brought to 18 the number of people arrested in the attacks, which city officials say stopped last month after security measures, including helicopter patrols, went into effect.

Police told 200 residents of north St. Louis Wednesday that neighborhood parent patrols have helped stop attacks there. Nine girls were attacked between Jan. 24 and Feb. 23, police said. No one has been charged in any of that city's cases.

Gag order issued on rapist's arrest

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — A judge has issued a gag order preventing all parties from talking about the arrest on murder and rape charges of a convicted rapist who allegedly killed his victim while free on bail while awaiting sentencing.

Timothy Bailey, 24, of West Chester, who had been free 10 months awaiting sentencing on a rape conviction, was arrested and charged in the death of Phyllis R. Healy, 23, whose body was found Tuesday.

Prior to the gag order, Chester County Judge M. Joseph Melody Jr. blamed the sentencing delay on the failure of the probation office to send him a pre-sentencing report. Probation officials said they did not send the report because Melody never set a sentencing date.

Church collapses; Two killed

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — A vacated church being razed collapsed with "no big bang," a witness said, killing two workmen trapped inside and injuring three others.

Demolition work on the unused wood-frame Mount Moriah church, which one church official said was built about 1921, was completed after the dead and injured were removed.

There was "no big bang," said Willie Long, who was in a nearby house. "It was just like you throw down a couple of pieces of tin."

The church was being dismantled because the congregation had moved into a new brick structure.

'Deadly force' law tested in state

BOSTON (AP) — In the first higher court test of the state's 1981 "deadly force" law, the Appeal's Court has ruled that a person in his house has no obligation to retreat from an intruder before attacking.

The unanimous ruling by the three-judge panel overturned the manslaughter conviction of John J. Gregory who killed an intruder in his bedroom. Gregory, 22 at the time of the Jan. 20, 1983 conviction, has spent more than a year in jail.

Prosecutors could appeal to the state Supreme Court, file for a retrial or drop the charges.

County won't provide information

WAUKESHA, Wis. (AP) — Waukesha County will not provide information on sheltering pets in the event of an emergency such as a tornado or toxic spill, the emergency government coordinator said.

Charles Race reacted Thursday to a plan drawn up by county humane officer Sharon Greenwald suggesting that emergency shelters for pets could be set up at the county fairgrounds.

The plan is fine, said Race, except for the suggestion that people contact the county to find out where the nearest shelter is.

"Uncle Sam can't blow everyone's nose," Race said.

Airline jet makes emergency landing

DENVER (AP) — In the third mishap involving a Continental Airlines jet in as many days, a malfunctioning handle allowed a plane's rear stairway door to pop open in mid-flight, forcing an emergency landing, an airline official said.

The Boeing 727 jet carrying 152 people landed safely Thursday at Stapleton International Airport.

There was no danger of decompression because the inner door of the jetliner remained sealed, said Mike Cinelli, Continental's manager of public relations in Houston.

The plane, Flight 81 from Chicago to San Francisco, was about an hour outside Denver when a warning light in the cockpit indicated that the outer stairway door was open, he said.

A flight attendant looked through the window of the inner rear door and confirmed the outer door was open about a foot.

The pilot, who wasn't identified by Continental, notified airport officials of the situation. Denver Fire Department airport crews and equipment stood by while the plane landed safely about 8:30 a.m.

Defendant guilty in child murders

NEW YORK (AP) — A 22-year-old Brooklyn man was convicted Thursday in the 1978 sex slayings of a 13-year-old boy and his 7-year-old sister.

A jury in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn deliberated for two hours before returning the verdict against Paul Higgins, the first of three defendants to go on trial in what detectives called one of the most brutal crimes they had seen.

Higgins, who in 1980 began serving a 6- to 18-year sentence on unrelated robbery charges, faces a maximum sentence of 25 years to life in prison on each of the four murder counts on which he was convicted. Justice Sybil Hart Kooper said she would sentence Higgins on Friday.

It is not unusual for defendants such as Higgins to be charged with two murder counts for each victim. One, intentional murder, covers the act of murder itself, and the other, felony murder, covers murders committed in the course of another felony, in this case burglary.

Assistant District Attorney Eric Kraus maintained that Gregory and Lashawn Kelly were slain after a botched burglary in which the killers thought they would find a large sum of money and an empty apartment.

Instead, the two children were home alone that night of Aug. 18, 1978, in the family's apartment in a Brooklyn project. Their mother, Thelma, had gone out to prepare for a family outing the next day, Kraus said.

She returned home shortly after midnight but did not discover her daughter's body until 5 a.m., when she went to wake her. Gregory's body was found about eight hours later in an elevator motor room on the roof of an adjoining building.

Prime Minister Shamir braces for early elections after losing battle in Parliament

JERUSALEM (AP) — Burdened by unpopular military and economic policies, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has lost a battle in parliament to save his government and is ready to yield to the opposition's demand for early elections.

Five members of Shamir's governing coalition defected Thursday to support the Labor Party's early elections bill. After a 12-hour debate interrupted by three adjournments, the 120-member Knesset passed the bill on a preliminary vote by a 61-58 margin.

Only former Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in seclusion since his resignation last fall, was absent.

"We have to honor the Knesset's decision," Shamir said after the vote, indicating he would not try to bury the bill in committee.

If the Labor Party bill gets through a required series of additional votes, as appears likely, it would be the first time an Israeli government was forced into an election against its will.

The vote hit at Shamir's prestige and his hopes of setting a new course for the economy that would help him regain lost ground with the electorate.

The prime minister said he "was not interested in an election campaign that is liable to seriously harm the government's efforts to revive the economy...but the Knesset decided otherwise."

Shamir, 68, was not scheduled to face the voters until November 1985.

'Soviets need to be more responsible'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top State Department official says the Soviet Union has been incapable of productive arms control negotiations because of a "paralysis" in its decision-making process, resulting from a prolonged period of "succession politics."

Lawrence Eagleburger, undersecretary for political affairs, said Thursday that the flexibility needed for productive talks requires leadership willing to make difficult decisions and accept responsibility for them.

"The Soviet Union has not had such leadership during the Reagan administration," he said. "Virtually without exception, each time the Soviets have been faced with difficult choices we have witnessed a period of apparent internal debate followed, inevitably, by hard-line decisions clearly dictated by the most conservative elements in the Politburo."

Eagleburger, third-ranking official in the State Department, spoke to a foreign policy conference in Birmingham, Ala. A text of his remarks was released by the State Department.

The speech represented a departure from the administration's normal practice of not commenting publicly on decision-making in Moscow.

The address seemed aimed at critics, including many prominent Democrats and West Europeans, who hold President Reagan responsible for the collapse of talks with the Soviets on reducing intercontinental and medium-range nuclear weapons.

DURING THE MORE than three years of the Reagan administration, Eagleburger said, there has been a "sustained period of Soviet succession politics." For the first two years, President Leonid Brezhnev was "aging and ailing" while his colleagues tried to position themselves to replace him.

Brezhnev's successor, Yuri Andropov, was ill during much of his 15-month tenure, Eagleburger said, and the new Communist Party leader, Konstantin Chernenko, "has yet to establish himself."

"We may well face an interval of political consolidation before the Kremlin is ready to turn its full attentions to arms control talks," he said.

Eagleburger said the "Soviet paralysis is particularly frustrating when we are the ones accused of not being forthcoming in arms negotiations."

"The record shows that we have responded constructively and imaginatively to the challenges of arms control. It is the Soviets who have shown neither flexibility nor commitment to the cause of reducing tensions," he said.

MEANWHILE, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda said in an editorial Thursday that the Reagan administration was solely responsible for increased international tensions.

"For many years now, especially after the coming to office of the Reagan administration, the American side has tried in vain to convince people that the best way to quench a fire is to pour oil on the flame, while the best way to enhance security is to pile up more and more heaps of weapons," Pravda said.

And, using a phrase Reagan once applied to the Soviets, Pravda said the United States is the "focus of evil" because of its military policies. It called on the United States to negotiate with the Soviet Union on banning nuclear weapons from space.

"By continuing to tread the path of preparing for nuclear war on the ground, on the seas, in the air and now in outer space, Washington inevitably places itself in opposition to the fundamental interests of all people and indeed becomes the 'focus of evil' it is so busy trying to locate," the Soviet newspaper said.

Man divorces nagging wife

LONDON (AP) — A security officer who says his nagging wife even monitored the amount of lemonade he drank has been granted a divorce after 34 years of marriage.

Judge Elizabeth Appleby ruled Thursday that Percy Adams had experienced a "particular amount of bother" that was more than he reasonably could be expected to bear.

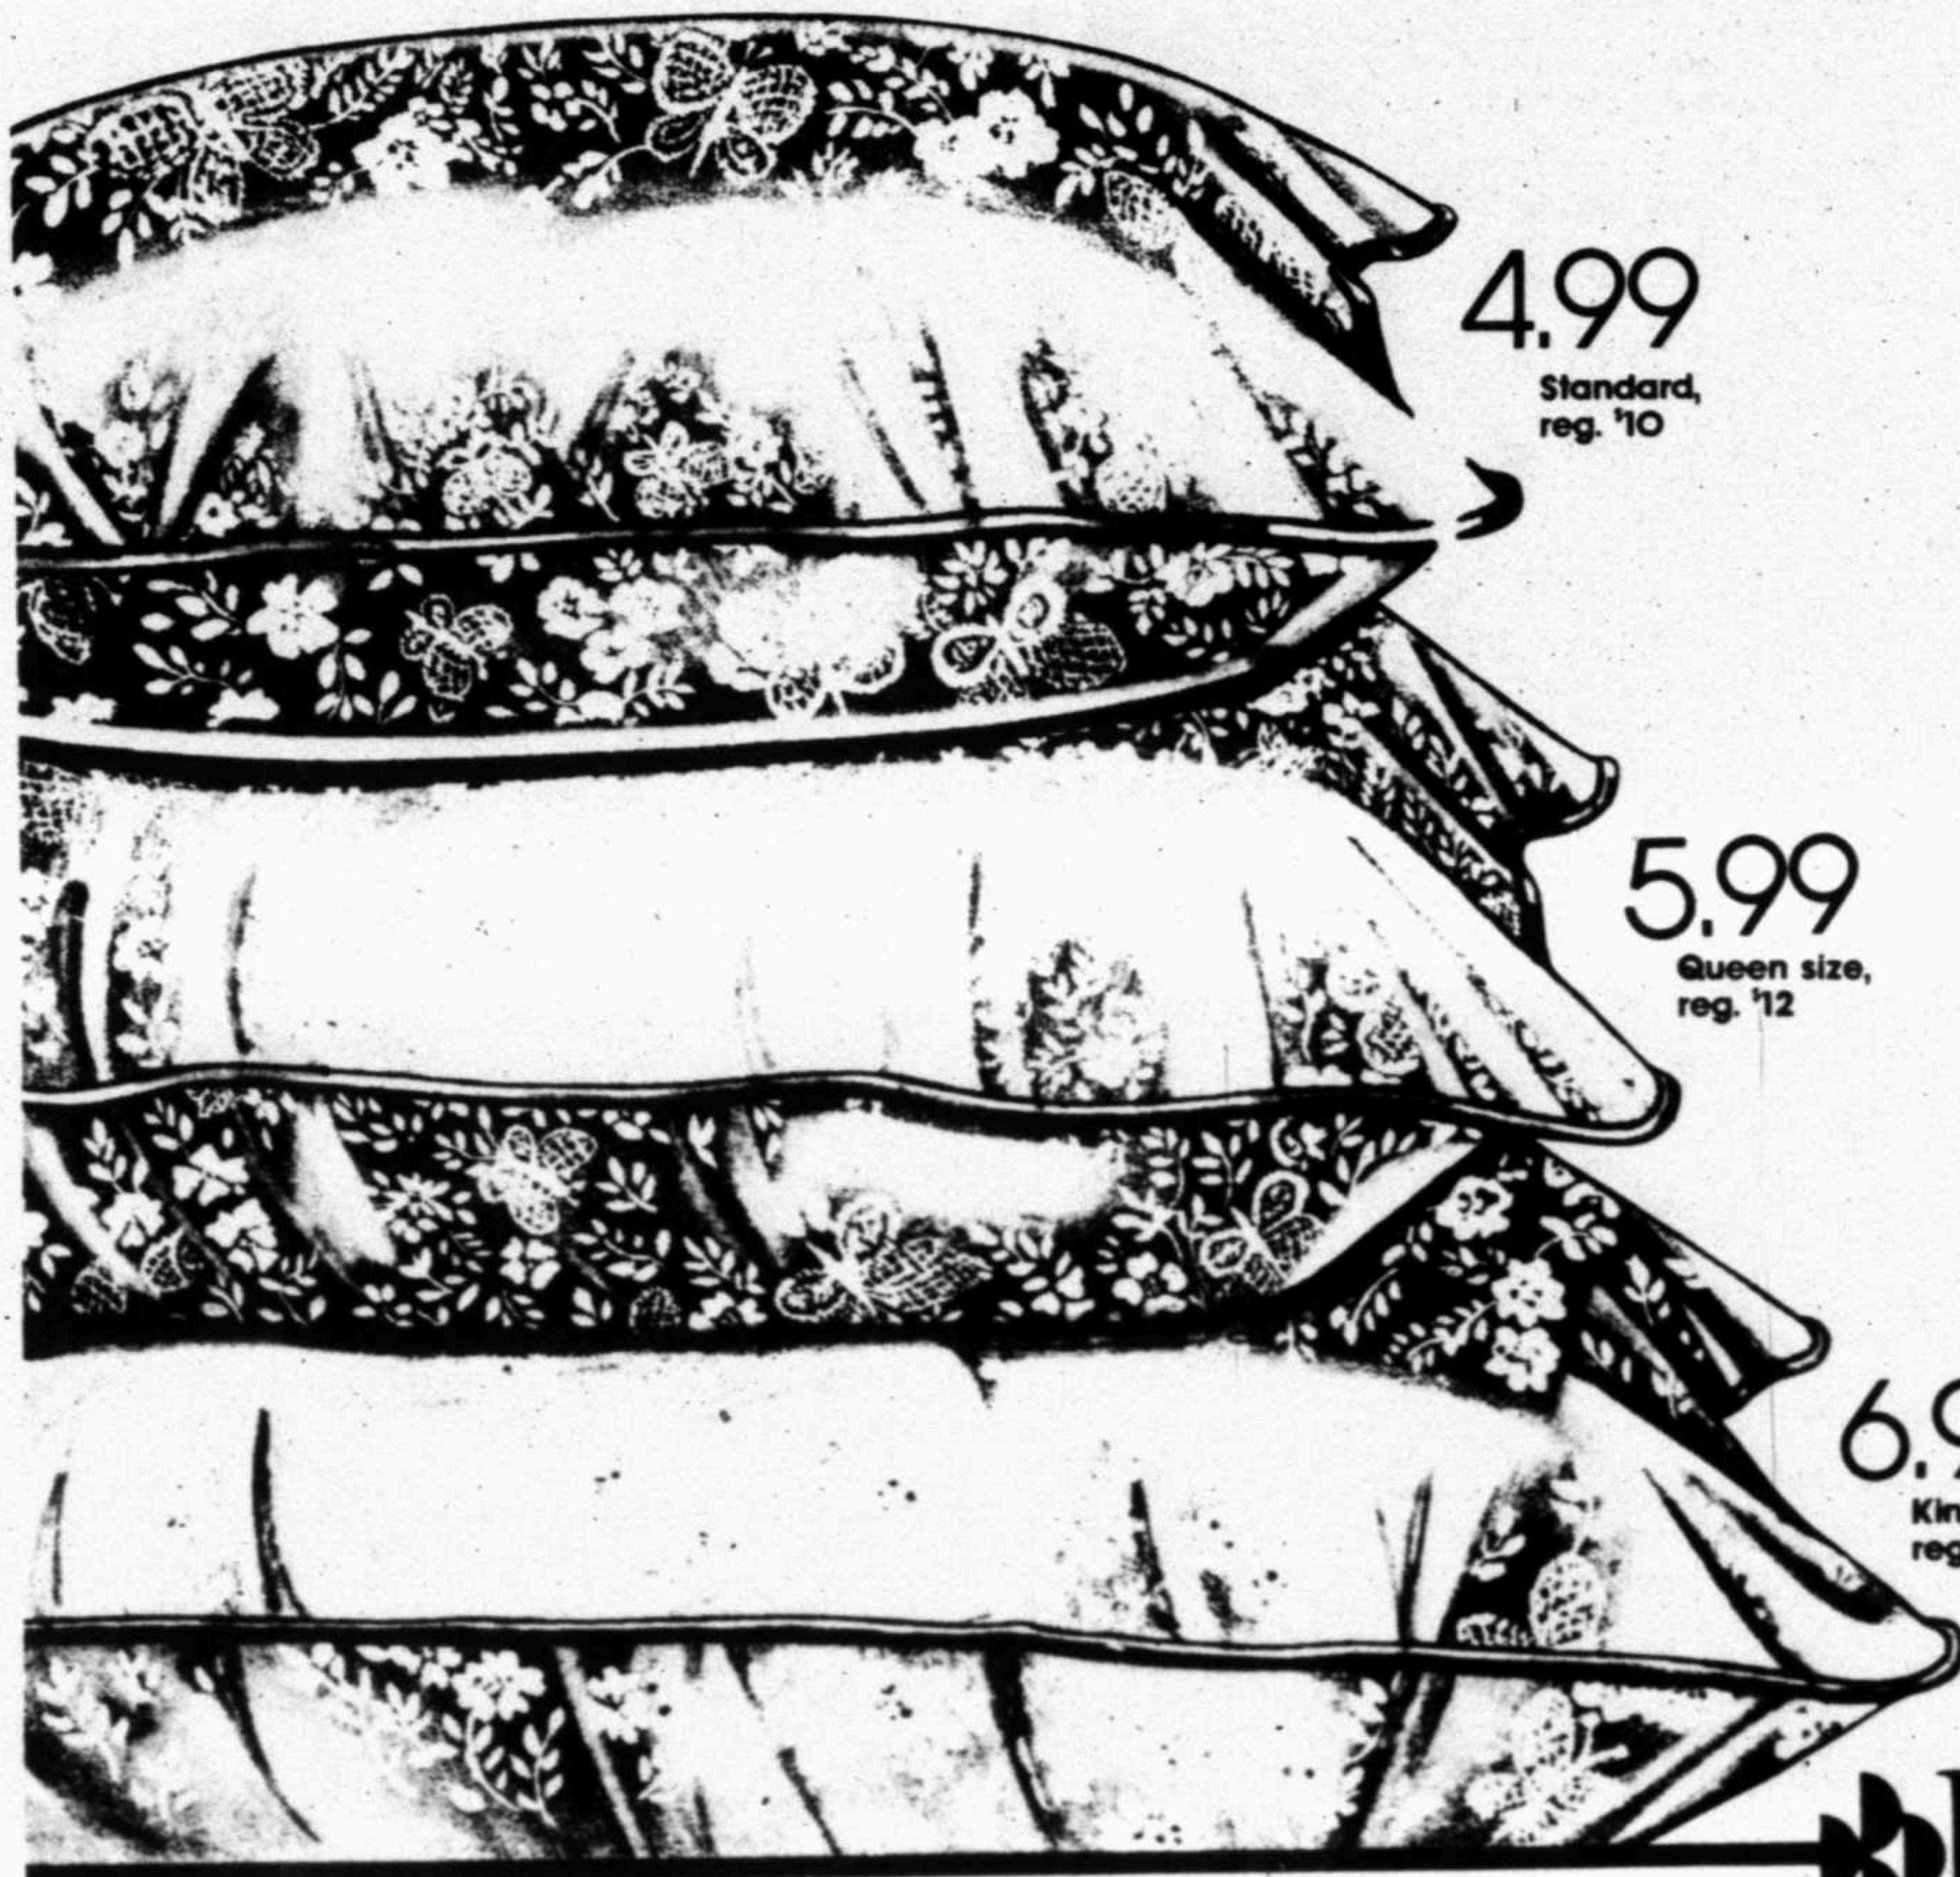

According to the judge, Gwendoline Adams' careful record-keeping of family grocery purchases and gripes about her husband's snacking also contributed to his high blood pressure.

Adams, 57, left the couple's Chesham home in December 1981 and moved in with another woman a year later.

Mrs. Adams, 55, claimed she still loved him and wanted him back, but the judge said chances of reconciliation were "nil."

The judge said Adams complained that whenever his wife returned home, she would check on their stock of food and drink, making "inquiries over every drop of lemonade that had gone missing."

Hoosiers horrify Heels in upset

By The Associated Press

Freshman Steve Alford scored 27 points and Mike Gioni's two free throws with five seconds left carried unranked Indiana to a 72-68 victory over No. 1 North Carolina in an NCAA East Regional semifinal Thursday night.

Indiana, 22-8, surged to a 59-47 lead with 5:36 remaining, then had to hold off a torrid Carolina comeback behind All-Americans Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins.

The Tar Heels, 28-3, twice cut the lead to two points as Indiana collapsed at the free throw line, with freshman Marty Simmons missing the front end of three straight one-and-ones and Chuck Franz another before Alford contributed six straight in the final 3:12.

Indiana, which kept North Carolina off balance with an aggressive man-to-man defense, will play Virginia, which beat No. 18 Syracuse 63-55 in the other East semifinal in Atlanta, for the regional title Saturday and a trip to the Final Four.

The Midwest semifinal games in Lexington, Ky., saw third-ranked Kentucky down Louisville 72-67 and sixth-ranked Illinois stop No. 11 Maryland 72-70.

The Midwest semifinals in St. Louis Friday night pit No. 5 Houston, 29-4, against

No. 16 Memphis State, 26-6, and fourth-ranked DePaul, 27-2, vs. No. 19 Wake Forest, 22-8.

In the West semifinals in Los Angeles Friday night, Dayton, 20-10, plays No. 15 Washington, 24-6, and No. 2 Georgetown, 30-3, takes on No. 13 Nevada-Las Vegas, 29-5.

Guards Dicky Beal and Jim Master scored 15 points apiece as 28-4 Kentucky, playing on its home court, avenged an overtime loss to its bitter cross-state rival in last year's NCAA tournament.

Melvin Turpin, who scored 14 points, gave Kentucky a 61-53 lead with 4:36 left to play. Louisville, 24-11, climbed within 63-61 with three minutes left before Master hit three of four free throws and Winston Bennett made two foul shots and tipped in Master's only miss.

Lancaster Gordon had 25 and Milt Wagner 22 for the Cardinals.

Illinois, which lost by two points to Kentucky this season, got 15 points from George Montgomery in advancing to the Midwest final Saturday against the Wildcats.

The Illini, 26-4, trailed Maryland by as many as nine points in the first half but then the co-Big Ten champs took control in the second half and moved ahead by 11 points with 4:33 left in the game.

Maryland, 24-8, the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament champions, closed the gap to four points with 1:12 left and got the game's final basket with one second remaining.

Adrian Branch paced the Terrapins with 19 points.

Virginia ran off 12 straight points early in the game to surprise Syracuse. Virginia, 20-11, missed its first eight shots from the field and did not score until 5:10 into the game. Down 6-4, Olden Polynice scored six points as the Cavaliers raced to a 16-6 lead.

Syracuse, 23-9, trailed 26-16 at halftime after shooting only 28 percent from the field.

...The Agony of Defeat

135-point scoring mark likely to stand

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — It's been 24 years since Danny Heater scored 55 points in the final 10 minutes en route to setting a national basketball scoring record of 135 points in one game.

The feat put his school and the town on the map. And, it's a mark his former coach is confident will stand forever.

Heater was a 6-foot-1 star on Burnsville High School's 1960 team, averaging 28 points a game, when he set the record against Widen High on Jan. 26, 1960.

"Our school was located in an isolated area of the state back then before the interstate highway system, and we received very little newspaper coverage," recalls Jack Stalnaker, Heater's former coach.

"So, we checked on the state scoring record and decided we would let Danny try it while permitting his teammates only to score on rebounds or tip the ball except in layup situations," he said.

Stalnaker called time out after Heater had netted 83 points, enough to surpass the state record by 11, and planned to take him out of the game. But his teammates, aware that earlier in the week a Bristol, Pa., player had come six points shy of the national record of 120 points set in 1953 by Dick Bogenriefe of Sedalia, Ohio, urged their coach to leave Heater in the game.

"I did and I couldn't believe my eyes," Stalnaker told the Wheeling Intelligencer. "He scored 55 points in the last 10 minutes, including three left-handed hook shots from the key and three consecutive steals of inbounds passes in less than 10 seconds."

For the game, Heater, who now lives in Suitland, Md., hit 53 of 70 field goal attempts and 29 of 41 free throws as Burnsville routed Widen 173-43.

After Heater scored the 135 points, he was offered a basketball scholarship to the University of Richmond. But during the summer before he enrolled, he injured his back in an automobile accident and was unable to play.

Pearson hurt; brother killed in accident

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys wide-receiver Drew Pearson, falling asleep at the wheel, survived serious injury but his brother Carey Mark Pearson was killed early Thursday when their speeding automobile slammed into the rear of a parked, steel-loaded tractor-trailer.

"I don't think Drew suffered any injuries that will be lasting," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who visited him in Presbyterian Hospital after flying in from the National Football League meetings in Hawaii. "His face is bruised and he is still undergoing tests. He should be OK unless they discover something. Of course, he was very hurt about the death of his brother."

Landry said, "He fell asleep while he was taking his brother home from a basketball trip."

Landry and the 33-year-old Pearson had talked recently about Pearson's possible retirement.

"We talked about his age and what he might do but we didn't come to any conclusion," Landry said.

Police spokesman Ed Spencer said Drew Pearson was driving a vehicle that went on to the shoulder of LBJ freeway in far north Dallas near Plano Road and smashed into the left rear tires of a Transtar Tractor Trailer rig loaded with steel. Larry Jameson, 30, of Ingleside, Texas is listed as the owner. Nobody in the truck was hurt.

Spencer said the officer making the report said Pearson was driving a 1984 Dodge Daytona at an unsafe speed and that the truck was parked on the shoulder with its flasher lights on at the time of the 1:30 a.m. accident.

Pearson had a blood-alcohol level of .053, said investigator Hollis Edwards. State law says a person with a level of .10 is legally intoxicated.

Pearson was well within the legal limits of sobriety.

Dallas police spokesman Bob Shaw said the fatal accident would be routinely referred to a Dallas County grand jury.

The Pearsons had just returned on a team bus with 14 other Cowboys from Colgate, Okla., where some members of the Cowboys team had played in an exhibition basketball game.

Pearson is the founder of the "Dallas Hoopsters," a team that barnstorms the Southwest region during the offseason.

"Drew books the games and makes all the arrangements," said Cowboys' spokesman Greg Aiello. "However, the club does not sponsor the team. It is not a club function."

Pearson is an accomplished basketball player and is married to the daughter of former Globetrotters star Marques Haynes.

Pearson was driving his brother to the home of a third brother, Andre, when the accident occurred.

Pearson, a former all-pro out of Tulsa University and the Cowboy's all-time leading receiver, is probably best-known for the 50-yard "Hail Mary" touchdown reception that beat Minnesota in the last 20 seconds of a 1975 playoff game.

The Pro Football Hall of Fame named Pearson to its All-Decade Team of the 1970s.

He was named All-Pro and went to the Pro Bowl in 1974, 1976 and 1977. He became the Cowboy's all-time leading receiver in 1980 when he passed Bob Hayes mark of 365 catches.

Ron Grygo, athletic director of the high school in the Pearsons' hometown of South River, N.J., said that Carey Pearson, 27, was a wide-receiver in high school but did not play in college.

SLU, Michigan gain NIT semis

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Southwestern Louisiana's basketball team played taller than expected against Santa Clara in the National Invitation Tournament.

"We knew that getting on the boards was going to be very important for us against such a big team and we hit the boards hard," said Graylin Warner after leading the Ragin' Cajuns to a 97-76 rout of Santa Clara in a quarterfinal game Thursday night.

Overall, the Cajuns out rebounded the bigger Broncos 46-26, and it paid off in a lot of second and third shots. Warner was their leading scorer with 22 points.

"We've been rebounding well all year, but we surely didn't do it tonight," said Santa Clara Coach Carroll Williams. "I don't offer any excuses. Santa Clara was quick, well organized and we just ran into a buzz saw."

The victory sent the Cajuns into the NIT semifinals Monday night at Madison Square Garden in New York. Michigan also gained a seminal berth with a 63-62 victory Thursday over Xavier.

The other two semifinalists will be determined tonight when Notre Dame plays at Pittsburgh and Tennessee visits Virginia Tech.

Led by Warner, all five Southwestern Louisiana starters scored in double figures. Warner scored 14 of his points in the first half and USL, 23-8, went ahead for good with 15:12 left before halftime. At intermission, the Ragin' Cajuns led 46-26.

USL's Dion Brown set the tone of the Ragin' Cajun victory. His first rebound of the night made him the school's all-time record rebounder, with 905.

George Almones added 18 points for the Cajuns, while brothers Drexal and Alonza Allen and Brown had 15 points apiece. Santa Clara, 22-10, was led by Harold Keeling's 26 points.

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Broncos' pursuit of Dallas wide receiver Butch Johnson appears to be on the rocks after Dallas Coach Tom Landry turned down two offers from Broncos Coach Dan Reeves.

Landry left the National Football League meetings in Honolulu on Wednesday without agreeing to a deal for Johnson, a nine-year veteran who is unhappy in his backup role with the Cowboys and has asked to be traded.

"I made one offer involving a draft choice or choices and another offer involving a player of ours," Reeves told the Rocky Mountain News. "Coach Landry is looking to trade for a player, but he was not interested in what we had to offer."

"If he can go somewhere and find an offer for a player comparable to Johnson, that leaves us out. And that seems the way he wants to go."

Landry said he would prefer to obtain a backup middle linebacker or tight end in a trade for Johnson, but the Broncos have a serious shortage of tight ends and "linebacker is an area we have too many question marks at," Reeves said. "I didn't even mention that position. As you know, we are kind of hurting for players to trade."

Reeves said he believed Landry might eventually accept an offer of a draft choice, in which case the Broncos "still have a chance."

The Cowboys reportedly had asked for a second-round choice for Johnson, while the Broncos were offering nothing higher than a fourth-round pick.

Quick Draw McGraw would have loved it.

He would have loved the quick draw that enabled New York's Bryan Trottler to tie a National Hockey League record by scoring just five seconds after the opening faceoff as the Islanders and Boston Bruins skated to a 3-3 tie.

He would have loved the quick draw that set up a power-play goal by Detroit's Reed Larson — just one second after a penalty to Calgary's Steve Konroyd. The Red Wings went on to defeat the Flames 6-4 and clinch their first playoff berth since 1978.

He would have loved the sharp-shooting by the Philadelphia Flyers, who set a club scoring record in machine-gunning the Pittsburgh Penguins 13-4, including seven goals in the third period.

And he would have loved the three goals by Pierre Larouche of the New York Rangers, giving him 47 for the season, in a 5-3 victory over the New Jersey Devils.

Philadelphia got three goals each from Ilkka Sinisalo and Dave Poulin and two apiece from Tim Kerr — giving him 51 for the season — and Len Hachborn in swamping the Penguins.

The Flyers led 6-4 entering the third period before they broke the game open with seven goals.

"I thought it was going to be close after the second period (6-4 Philadelphia)," said Pittsburgh Coach Lou Angotti. "But they came out so strong and we just couldn't settle down. We were totally outmuscled in the corners."

Mark Howe scored 31 seconds into the final period when he blasted a slapshot from just inside the blue line over goalie Denis Herron's left Adrian Dantley was sick and Bernard King was hurt, so the Utah Jazz and New York Knicks were in trouble.

King, averaging 30.4 points per game since Jan. 1, hit five shots in a row and scored 12 points before leaving the game with 4:03 left in the first quarter of the Knicks' game against Boston Thursday night. New York stayed close until the third quarter, but couldn't overcome King's absence and lost to the Celtics 108-100.

"They do the same things offensively, but they aren't able to execute as well without King," said Larry Bird, who joined Kevin McHale and

Dennis Johnson with 23 points each for the Celtics.

Meanwhile, Dantley, the National Basketball Association's leading scorer, missed Utah's game in San Antonio because of a respiratory ailment and the Midwest Division leaders fell 129-126 to the San Antonio Spurs.

In the only other NBA game, Philadelphia edged Washington 106-101.

Mike Mitchell scored 39 points and George Gervin added 35 to provide most of the points for the Spurs, who are fighting to stay in playoff contention.

While the Kridicks and Jazz lost without their best players, the Spurs have been without center Artis Gilmore since Feb. 23 because of a broken cheek.

"With Artis out, I know I have to

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—A trio of longshooters shared the first round lead in the $400,000 USF&G Classic, but they were under pressure from much of the same cast that provided the drama last week.

Gary Koch, who scored his second victory of the season last Sunday, playoff loser George Burns, Bernhard Langer of West Germany, Australian Greg Norman and PGA titleholder Hal Sutton all were in last-round contention in the Bay Hill Classic.

And all were among the first round leaders Thursday.

The pace, however, was set by Gary Hallberg, Larry Mize and Bob Eastwood. All had 66s and all, at least in a fashion, had to be considered longshot.

Freshman Antoine Joubert scored 18 points and hit two free throws with 21 seconds remaining to boost Michigan over Xavier.

The Wolverines, 21-10, had an 11-point lead, 54-43 with 8:30 left, but the Musketeers, 22-11, scrapped to pull to within one, 59-58, when Dexter Bailey hit a layup with 1:12 remaining.

Michigan forward Roy Tarpley followed with two free throws, before Xavier center Jeff Jenkins notched the last of his game-high 21 points to pull his team back to within 61-60. Joubert, the Wolverines' high scorer, then hit both ends of a 1-and-1 to ice the game.

"I felt I had to come out shooting tonight," Joubert said. "A lot of people doubt my shooting ability, but I know I can shoot if I feel like it."

Michigan Coach Bill Frieder: "We made some foolish mistakes tonight, but we made big plays and free throws when we had to. You've got to give credit to Xavier. They're a scrappy team."

In tonight's action, the Irish will have to cool off Clyde Vaughan, who has scored 55 points in Pitt's previous NIT victories over La Salle and Florida State after a slump in the latter part of the season.

"I started to loosen up," said Vaughan of his NIT surge. In "loosening up," Vaughan, a 6-foot-5 forward, shook off a shooting slump that had seen his average drop below 20 points a game for the first time in two seasons.

"It's nice to have Clyde Vaughan back," said Pitt coach Roy Chipman, whose team now is 18-12. "We lost the real Clyde Vaughan for about a month. There was so much pressure on the kid, whether it was imagined or real. Each basket was becoming crucial for him."

The Irish, 19-11, made it to the quarterfinal round with wins over Old Dominion and Boston College. Notre Dame's NIT success has been fueled by the play of 6-10 sophomore center Tim Kempton.

"The beast is back," Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps says of Kempton.

Virginia Tech Coach Charlie Moir feels that Tennessee will be the Hokies' "toughest game of the season."

The Hokies, 20-12, have won four of their last five games following a slump near the end of the regular season. Eleven of Virginia Tech's last 16 games have been decided by three points or less, including the Hokies' 68-66 victory over South Alabama in a second-round NIT game Sunday night.

Meanwhile, Tennessee has played 12 of its last 13 games with no more than a six-point difference. The Volunteers defeated Tennessee-Chattanooga 68-66 in a second-round NIT game Monday night. The Vols have won seven of their last nine games.

shoulder. Thomas Eriksson's wrist shot from 15 feet out at 4:43 made it 8-4 and 15 seconds later Poulin took a pass from Kerr from behind the net and stuffed the puck past Heron.

Hjorthorn scored on a shot from the left faceoff circle at 5:23. Goals by Sinisalo, Poulin and Sinisalo again completed the rout.

The Flyers' old record of 12 goals in a game was set Feb. 2, 1974, against Detroit.

Regarding his effort to become the fourth Philadelphia player to reach the 50-goal level, Kerr said he was "just glad to get it over with so early in the game (1:53 of the first period). I didn't do anything different. I just tried to play my game and was fortunate to score when I did. It was a real good feeling when I double my output each night," said Gilmore's replacement, Edgar Jones. "I need to get out on the break so I can put pressure on the other center."

In the 12 games since Gilmore was hurt, Jones has averaged almost 13 points and nine rebounds a game for the Spurs, including 11 points and seven rebounds against the Jazz.

"Utah played well without Adrian Dantley, but I thought we played pretty well without Gilmore," San Antonio coach Bob Bass said.

John Drew tallied 22 points for the Jazz, who slipped to 39-32 for the season but remained one game ahead of Dallas atop the Midwest finally did it, but it'll probably feel a lot better sometime later this summer when I look back on it."

• Poulin said the lop-sided triumph "should really give us a lot of momentum heading toward the playoffs. It seems that now, instead of only a few players playing well, the whole team is coming together."

Red Wings 6, Flames 4

Larson scored twice for Detroit, while Bob Manno, Steve Yzerman, Lane Lambert and Danny Gare got the other goals for the playoff-bound Red Wings. Lanny McDonald scored three times for Calgary and Jamie Macoun had the other one.

Konroyd was in the penalty box for just one second when Ivan Boldirev won a faceoff for Detroit, enabling Larson to fire a shot between goalie Reggie Lemelin's legs that put the Red Wings ahead 1-0 at 8:29 of the first period. Manno made it 2-0, but McDonald scored twice within six seconds — a club record — to tie it after one period.

In the second period, Yzerman, the NHL's highest scoring rookie, put Detroit ahead with his 37th goal of the season. After MacInnes evened the score again, the Red Wings went ahead to stay 4-3 on Lambert's shot from just outside the crease. Gare made it 5-3 after two periods.

Islanders 3, Bruins 3

Mike Bossy broke out of a slump with two goals, including his 47th of the season at 14:25 of the third period on a slapshot from the top of the right faceoff circle that capped New York's comeback from a 3-1 deficit. The Islanders took the lead just five seconds into the game on Trottier's 39th goal. That tied an NHL record for the fastest goal set by Winnipeg's Doug Smail on Dec. 20, 1981.

Bossy also scored at 15:25 of the second period after Boston goals by Mike O'Connell, Ray Bourque and Rick Middleton. The Islanders, who have won the last four Stanley Cups, are 0-62 in their last eight regular-season games with Boston, although they ousted the Bruins in last year's Wales Conference championship series. The victory gave them a two-point lead over second-place Washington in the Patrick Division.

Rangers 5, Devils 3

Pierre Larouche scored three goals as the Rangers spoiled the fifth attempt by New Jersey's Glenn Resch to become the 25th goal-keeper in NHL history to record 200 victories. Larouche's first goal of the game and 45th of the season snapped a 1-1 tie in the first period and he made it 3-1 before the period was over. Larouche got his third goal at 9:39 of the second period on a 20-foot shot that went between the legs of Resch, who was then replaced by Ron Low.

Division standings. Darrell Griffith added 20 points for Utah, which has never made the playoffs in the 10-year history of the franchise.

On the other hand, the Spurs have made the playoffs each year since the franchise was moved to San Antonio from Dallas in 1973.

"If we can just stay close, we feel we can win any game," said Mitchell, who is averaging 34 points a game over the past 12 contests. "This type of pressure is good for us because we've never had to hustle like this to make the playoffs."

After a 67-67 halftime tie, San Antonio took a 95-93 lead into the fourth quarter and then pulled in front 110-100 with 3:22 left in the game.

Utah's Rickey Green scored six points in just over a minute to cut he deficit to 125-123 with 27 seconds left, but Utah missed three three-point attempts.

Celtics 108, Knicks 100

Despite the loss of King, New York was deadlocked with Boston at 57-57 early in the third quarter before a sellout crowd at Madison Square Garden. But the Celtics outscored the Knicks 21-8, including eight points by Johnson, to pull away.

"He started out on a 58-point pace," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said of King's hot start. "It was taking him about a sixteenth of a second to get the ball away. When he went down, I knew we would have a better chance of winning the game."

"We didn't establish a low-post game once Bernard left," Knicks Coach Hubie Brown said. "At halftime, going off the court only two down was good because we didn't have any offensive rebounding in the first half. In the second half, people who had to deliver for us half-sub-par games.

76ers 106, Bullets 101

Andrew Toney scored 22 points and put Philadelphia ahead to stay with a basket 28 seconds from the end against visiting Washington.

The Bullets, who got 21 points from Greg Ballard, overcame a 15-point second-quarter deficit and put together a 12-2 streak in the fourth quarter to wipe out an 81-72 76ers lead. Toney's basket gave Philadelphia a 102-101 edge before Julius Erving hit two free throws and Maurice Cheeks added another basket in the final seconds.

THE BETTER HALF

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, March 24, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TO-DAY: This was the birthdate of industrialist and Treasury Secretary Andrew Mellon, escape artist Harry Houdini, two-time Republican presidential candidate Thomas E. Dewey, writer Malcolm Muggeridge and actor Steve McQueen. Also sharing your birthday: actor Norman Fell, baseball's Jesus Alou, Boston Red Sox pitcher Bruce Hurst and actress Vanessa Brown. The financial picture brightens when you seize an unusual business opportunity. Choose partners who are hard workers. A long-time personal relationship recovers its former luster. Let loved ones know you appreciate their sacrifices.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be gracious even when a relative is irritating. Travel enjoys favorable influences. Do not retreat on a matter affecting parent and child. A blind date or chance encounter makes romance exciting.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are struggling too hard to make a relationship work. Relax and see if things do not improve. A display of temper will work against you. Happiness comes from being with young people.

GEMINI (May 21-June

20): A neighbor will be generous if you play your cards right. Forge ahead with a community project. The odds favor your efforts. A romantic upset is only temporary.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You find a way to please your loved ones and still pursue an important goal. Simple pleasures are best this weekend. Make that phone call you have been postponing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good time for talking with teen-agers about their school plans. Financial negotiations should not be closed until after you obtain expert advice. Tenderness makes romance come alive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your memory helps a relative. An overdue invitation arrives. Accept and have a wonderful time! Travel is both useful and lucky. A change of environment boosts your spirits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A vague message can be upsetting if you need specific information. Do not let outside interests interfere with family plans. A community project takes more time than you bargained for.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A conversation with neighbors sparks some interesting social plans. A project dear to your heart needs more work. A candid chat will help you avoid embarrassment or misunderstandings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A weekend job could be the answer to temporary financial woes. To cut spending, perform more services for yourself. Complete income tax forms. Romance begins to heat up. Watch your step!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A Libra makes a valuable suggestion. You benefit both financially and emotionally. A close friendship blossoms into romance. Not all family members approve your choice. Work to win them over.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone you thought impervious to your charms shows new interest. Do not reveal too much too soon. Work harder and set more realistic goals and you will realize a life-long ambition.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Loved one offers financial help if you are in a bind. Accept gratefully, but agree on a repayment date. You get good feedback from an influential person regarding a pet project.

Officials take wait-and-see stance on use of 'Stun Guns'

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Sheriff Dallas Smith and Chief of Police Wayne Gideon have assumed a wait-and-see stance toward the use of so-called "Stun Guns" in the line of duty.

The handheld, battery-operated zappers shoot 40,000 volts of low-amp electricity through a person and leave him or her immobilized for up to 15 minutes without causing permanent damage, according to the manufacturer of the devices, Nova Technologies Inc.

Stun Guns are legal for civilian use and reportedly sell for under $100 at local sporting goods shops and other retail outlets.

The devices — which are already being employed by some police agencies around the country — are powered by an ordinary nine-volt transistor radio battery.

While acknowledging their potential for reducing or even eliminating the need for physical force in subduing violent people, Smith said:

(See OFFICIALS, Page 2C)

Touted by their manufacturer as "the ultimate defensive weapon," Stun Guns — which are legal for civilian use — shoot 40,000 volts of electricity through a person's body and render an attacker immobile for up to 15 minutes. Although some police departments around the country are already using Stun Guns, Midland law enforcement officials are taking a wait-and-see approach before allowing their officers to carry them.

Democratic contender sees race as opportunity, not lost cause

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Joe Sullivan

If the Democrats couldn't capture Tom Loeffler's congressional seat in 1982 when Republicans everywhere were taking a beating, do they stand any chance of unseating him in 1984?

Absolutely, said Joe Sullivan, who was in Midland Thursday campaigning for the Democratic nomination for Loeffler's 21st District congressional seat. Where some might see a lost cause, Sullivan sees an opportunity.

"There's not going to be a strong Reagan vote" to help Loeffler, said Sullivan. "People are beginning to see the handwriting on the wall. Inflation is coming back, interest rates are going up, and there's the increased possibility of war."

Sullivan, a 54-year-old psychology professor at San Antonio College, says that the federal budget deficit and President Reagan's emphasis on military intervention abroad will hurt Loeffler, who has closely identified himself with the president's policies.

"Loeffler has let us down," said Sullivan. "He hasn't tried to solve the deficit problem and he never opposed the Lebanon intervention. I think the voters want more responsible leadership."

Sullivan said the federal deficit is fueled by tax breaks for wealthy people and large corporations. He proposes to eliminate 85 percent of the deficit within a few years by closing tax loopholes.

"For instance, the so-called tax cut of 1981 had nothing in it for the average person," he said. "And foreign tax credits for large corporations will give foreign governments $750 billion by 1986" that would otherwise go into U.S. tax coffers.

Owner of business which hires handicapped vows to fight

By HALLVE JORDAN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — If the Texas Attorney General's office decides to investigate complaints against a money-making business that hires the handicapped, the owner says he will fight to keep his two local offices open.

"If I was to close them down, I'd have closed them down when you first called, kid," Virgil Combs, owner of Services for the Handicapped, told a reporter during a news conference Thursday morning.

The conference was called by Combs after accounts of public complaints lodged against the company appeared in the local media this week.

"Yes, I'm losing money because of all the controversy but I won't shut down the Midland office," Combs said. "I'll fight it. I'm from the southside of Odessa and I'm a fighter."

Services for the Handicapped, located in Odessa since last August, pays commission or a $4 an hour wage to the handicapped, senior citizens, disabled American Veterans and "anyone who is out of work and wants to work" as phone solicitors, Combs said.

The organization is involved in selling trash bags packed in boxes by mental health clients and tickets to a children's movie, "The Magic of Lassie," which will have two showings in Midland and Odessa May 5.

Since January, the company has grossed some $20,000, but only made a profit of about $4,000 after expenses, Combs said. About 50-60 people have been employed since August at the company, which he admitted has a high turnover.

Combs said potential customers are told they may purchase the tickets at $5 apiece and donate them to an organization for the handicapped of the customer's choice if they wish.

Profits made through the sale of tickets will help provide audio tapes of the New Testament for senior citizens and the blind at no cost, according to Combs.

He said he has received "maybe five or six" complaints from Midland customers. In those cases, he refunded the money.

"If anyone calls me and says 'I don't like the (trash) bags, I'll refund their money," he said.

More complaints, however, have been made by movie tickets customers to the local media, police department, Better Business Bureau and the Midland Tape Lending Library, which already provides audio tapes to the visually impaired at no cost.

"I don't care what the United Way does or anybody else (who provides free audio tapes to the handicapped) does," Combs said in response to a question about duplication of services. "This is services for the handicapped. OK?"

The complaints allege the company is misleading and deceptive in its sales pitch, according to several dissatisfied customers. Original statements read by callers soliciting sales did not identify the organization as a money-making venture and the name of the company suggested it was a charity organization, according to complaints.

Sale of the West

Jim Clark, director for the Haley Memorial Library's sixth annual Contemporary Western Art Show and Sale, checks out a piece of art that will be on display at the show Saturday at Midland Center.

Haley Memorial Library offers 'story of the West' at art sale

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

"The last story that we in America have to tell is the West; it was the last great frontier," says Jim Clark, director for the Haley Memorial Library's sixth annual Contemporary Western Art Show and Sale set for Saturday at Midland Center.

"For some reason, the cowboy took the world; the whole world loved cowboys. And the whole world loves the American Indians. And that's all the American West. It was probably the only thing that made America different at the turn of the century; the stories that came out about the cowboys and the Indians."

"The people in Boston and New York were doing the same thing the people in London and Paris were doing as far as Europe was concerned. And let's face it, Europe was the world at that time."

"This (the United States) was just a bunch of idiots stuck out here for varying reasons. I suppose the romance and the dime novel and that sort of thing that happened out of that period" has had a lot to do with the popularity of the West.

Clark's fascination with cowboys and Indians as portrayed in Western art began 25 years ago. At the time he was selling airplanes in West Texas.

"I went to a retrospective show for C.M. Russell in Washington D.C. — quite by accident. And I was fascinated with what I saw because I understood it. From that point forward, my interest grew. I started collecting. As business things changed, I got involved in the art business."

"I've had galleries in Santa Fe, and I do freelance. I'm probably the only professional art show producer in the country. I have recently opened Biltmore Galleries with my partner, Steve Rose, in Scottsdale. We carry, in the gallery there, strictly the early American masters (from schools of art represented in the 19th and early 20th centuries)."

In the 1920s, before Clark was born, J. Evetts Haley began collecting books and taking down personal narratives of the oldtimers of that day — frontier cowmen, trail drivers, Indian fighters, Texas Rangers, farming settlers, outlaws, buffalo hunters and other early Southwestern characters.

Haley, an acknowledged dean of range country historians, established the library six years ago. His thousands of books, many of them rare, form the foundation of the 11,500-volume library at 1805 W. Indiana Ave.

Before the Haley Library opened its doors, planning had begun on an annual art show and sale. The money made through this yearly event helps support the acquisitions and programs of a library dedicated to preserving the history of the cowboy and the range cattle industry.

Reservations may be made to Saturday evening's by-invitation affair by calling the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, 682-5785.

Over the past six years, the show has grown until this year's event includes three paintings or bronzes by each of the 60 artists represented.

Odessa man ready for world aerobatics championship

Gene Beggs, a member of the United States World Aerobatic Team, is readying for the world championship competition in Europe this August.

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Gene Beggs is digging in for his launch into the world championship of aerobatics.

"We have as good pilots as there are in the world," said Beggs, who, at 40, is a member of the United States World Aerobatic Team. In August, the U.S. team will be competing in Hungary with teams from about 20 free and communist bloc nations for the biennial World Aerobatic Championships.

He speculated that in 1984 the United States will be fielding its best-ever team.

"Our main competition has always been the Russians and the Czechoslovaks," said Beggs, "with some competition coming from East Germany and West Germany."

Unlike the American pilots, the Soviet bloc aerobatic pilots are "completely government-sponsored," he said. "They have a plank check."

Beggs, a flight instructor at Midland Regional Airport, qualified for the United States team last year in his biwing Pitts Special S1-T. He has logged approximately 1,400 hours as pilot in command in his 15 years of flying.

Since 1960, when the World Aerobatic Championship competition began, the United States men's and women's teams have won three team championships — in 1970 in England, in 1972 in France and in 1980 in Oshkosh, Wisc.

And four Americans, two men and two women, won individual championships in 1972, 1980 and 1982. Beggs is aiming to be a member of that elite group. "I hope so," he said.

American winners in 1972 were Charlie Hillard of Fort Worth and Mary Gaffaney of Miami, Fla. Both were flying Pitts Special biplanes. World Champion fliers in 1980 were Leo Loudenslager of Sussex, N.J., and Betty Stewart of Boulder, Colo. Ms. Stewart won the women's world championship in 1982 in Czechoslovakia. Loudenslager was flying his Laser 200 monoplane, and Ms. Stewart was piloting a Pitts Special.

Making up the 1984 American team are:

— U.S. Women's Team: Julie Pfele, 35, an Albuquerque, N.M., physician; Linda Meyers, 28, of Miami, Fla.; Debby Rihn, 30, a Seabrook, Texas, flight-school operator; and Brigitte de Saint Phalle, 32, a San Jose, Calif., computer specialist. Ms. Meyers pilots the biwing Weeks Solution, and the other women fly the Pitts Special in aerobatic competition.

— U.S. Men's Team: Kermit Weeks, 30, Miami, Fla., investor who is the nation's 1983 No. 1 aerobatic pilot; Henry Haigh, 58, a Howell, Mich., retired industrialist, who won the national aerobatic championship in 1980 and in 1982 was the runner-up in the world championship competition; Harold Chappell, 43, a Pontiac, Mich., automotive hardware salesman and engineer; Alan Bush, 27, a Virginia Beach, Va., Piedmont Airlines captain; and Beggs, an Odessa who operates a flight school at Midland Regional Airport. Beggs, Bush and Chappell fly the Pitts Special biplane. Haigh flies the Super-Star monoplane, and Weeks pilots the biwing Weeks Solution.

Beggs said he prefers the enterprise which the American pilots and other free-country fliers exhibit in financing their flying, aircraft and competition.

"I think it's neat we can do it without having to ask for help from the government," he said.

The nine American pilots and their dismantled aircraft will be flown to Europe for the competition in a Lufthansa-German Airlines Boeing 747.

Accompanying them will be aircraft mechanics, interpreters, team physician, trainer, judges and manager.

Beggs said the team is raising $150,000 from businesses and individuals to sponsor their competition, which is sanctioned by Federation Aeronautique Internationale (FAI) in Paris, France and is the World Olympics of aerobatic flying.

Owner of for profit business vows to fight

Combs said he contacted the Midland police when he opened a Midland office at 1908 W. Wall Ave., Suite 204. Capt. Roger Meurer told Combs the business was legal but misleading.

"It's going to be a problem," Meurer said.

The company was then introduced as "not a non-profit" organization in the sales presentations, Combs said.

But Meurer said the public may read or hear "not a non-profit" and subconsciously think Services for the Handicapped is non-profit.

"Well, what can I say, you know?" Combs said, adding he will not change company literature with the "not a non-profit" slogan.

"If you sit there and read that word for word and cannot understand it, something is functioning wrong in your mind."

Others lodging complaints said the sales presentation led them to believe the company was working in cooperation with the Permian Basin offices of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. Combs said originally agreements were made about donating tickets to the MHMR, but due to a lack of communication at MHMR, confusion arose. The trash bags, however, are packed by members of the Rainbow House, a club for MHMR mental health clients.

According to Nancy Langham, coordinator of the Rainbow House, a bid submitted to Services for the Handicapped was accepted but there is no other relationship between the two organizations.

In the 23 provisions of illegal selling practices under the Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Acts, one pertains to "causing confusion or misunderstanding as to affiliation, connection or association with or certification by another" organization, according to Linda Truitt of the Permian Basin Better Business Bureau.

"If Mr. Combs was found in violation of any law, it would probably be this law," she said.

The BBB did notify the assistant attorney general in the Lubbock regional office of the complaints received concerning the organization, she said.

While non-profit organizations have a board of directors or another party for which it is ultimately responsible, Ms. Truitt pointed out "the problem is as a profit-making organization, you don't have to be held accountable to anyone."

Democratic contender sees opportunity, not lost cause

Sullivan would also reduce the deficit by eliminating the departments of Energy and Education, and by taking what he calls a more sensible approach to military spending.

"As a former military man, I believe in a strong national defense," he said. "But we need to be more sensible in determining what we need and don't need."

Sullivan questioned the Reagan administration's foreign policy, which he said relies too much on military power and too little on negotiation.

"American diplomacy is at its lowest ebb in recent history," he said. "If we can't work things out, we shoot it up. That can be very expensive, both in military hardware and in American lives."

Sullivan said the Reagan administration also spends too much on foreign aid, especially military aid to places like Central America.

"We're trying to solve the world's problems with guns," he said. "We need to give more economic aid, but we must take care of our own first. We shouldn't be giving money to foreign countries while we're cutting back on important programs for our own people, like aid for disabled veterans."

Sullivan expressed confidence in his ability to win the Democratic primary from Bobby Locke and then to go on to beat Loeffler in the fall.

"I think the voters in Midland and the rest of the district are independent. They're not interested in Democratic or Republican labels — they're looking for leadership."

Officials take wait-and-see stance on 'Stun Guns' use

"Being able to subdue someone without hurting them has appeal — especially in a jail situation where someone won't come out of a cell without a fight. But it's a new product and I'd like to see what happens with other agencies that are using it."

"Personally, I've always been a little cool about officers carrying a lot of equipment on their person. Mace and clubs hanging off an officer's belt has always turned me off."

"All we allow are a gun, handcuffs and ammunition. The more equipment you carry, the more opportunity there is for a person to get it away from you during a scuffle."

According to company literature, the devices differ from cattle prods in that cattle prods have "electrical output characteristics that are totally different from those of a Stun Gun. The only electronic product other than the Stun Gun that will incapacitate an attacker is the Taser."

Citing government standards, the company claims tests showed that "electrical characteristics one-hundred times greater than that produced by the Stun Guns would still be non-lethal and cause no permanent harm."

"Even cardiac pacemakers can safely withstand hundreds of times the electrical output put out by the (Stun Gun). There is no danger of it being fatal or causing cardiac arrest."

Furthermore, says the company, while an attacker has to actually be touched by the weapon, it has been "scientifically designed so its output cannot be transferred from one person to another."

Chief Gideon, who also sees the potential application of the devices in police work, says he nonetheless would like to see "other agencies do the experimenting first."

"It's been my experience that whatever could go wrong probably will. I'm sure there'll be some court tests, too, and I'd like to see them before considering using Stun Guns here."

Emphasizing that he "can't speak for the department," one ranking Midland police officer said:

"I feel they'd be very good in police work to keep from having to use physical force. However, since they're on the open market, I worry about their indiscriminate use by pranksters. They could also be used against us."

Vietnamese say no trace of crew has been found

HOUSTON (AP) — Vietnamese officials say they have found no trace of the crew from an American drilling ship which sank during a typhoon last October in the South China Sea, a U.S. delegation has been told.

And a Houston lawyer who represents the families of six crewmen says he believes them.

A letter, from Commodore S.A. Ring to U.S. Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said Richard Childress of the National Security Council "raised the subject of the Glomar Java Sea on two separate occasions with the Vietnamese," attorney Fred Hagans said Thursday.

Haley Memorial Library offers 'story of the West'

Although the show has traditionally contained only Western art, this year there's a new twist.

"The show will have a distinctive Western flavor," Clark says. "A large majority of the paintings in the show are Western in subject matter. The few that aren't actual Western subject matter, the subject matter fits in with this part of the country. Most of those artists, I think actually some 52 or 53 of them, will be present for the show."

"We have several new artists that will be here for the first time — probably about 20, in fact, that have never been here before. And they're artists that everyone should like to see their work. Heretofore it's only been able to be seen in some of the major shows around the country, in Oklahoma City or Scottsdale."

In conjunction with Saturday's art show and sale, the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library is featuring an art show at the library. This art work is not for sale.

"It is very special art," says Clark. "We have major paintings by Charles M. Russell, Frederic Remington, William R. Leigh and Frank Tenney Johnson."

"Charlie Russell has been the character of all the Western artists. He'd trade a painting for a bottle of whiskey. And he did. He'd trade almost anything for a bottle of whiskey. He was the character, and everyone has read about him. He lived with the Indians. He painted the Indians girls. But, he was also a very serious art student."

Today's Western artist is likewise a craftsman. "They're good artists first, and the subject matter comes second."

Clark has seen Western art gain in popularity, particularly in the last 15 years.

"The Western art business has become so big relative to what it was several years ago. Fifteen years ago, people would ask me what I do for a living, and I'd tell them, 'I sell Western art,' and they'd say, 'You do what?'"

"But, it has become a major force in the art world. It's not the largest by any means, but it's an art form that's strictly American and the people, especially in the American West, can really identify with it. It's their very own. And there's some really fine, fine art painted as a Western subject matter."

Odessa police recover equipment taken from local music store

ODESSA — Police recovered musical sound equipment valued at more than $3,000 Wednesday night which had been taken from an Odessa music store one year and one day before.

Three detectives executing a search warrant at the home of Odessa Ollie Boyles discovered two sound mixing boards — a $1,899, 12-channel and $1,199, eight channel unit — and a Peavey amplifier which had been taken with five guitars and one amplifier, not yet recovered, in a March 20, 1983 theft from Duke Music Store.

Boyles was arrested for felony theft and has been transferred to the Ector County Jail, with bond set at $1,500.

The warrant was issued based on information gathered from a person who had purchased one of the stolen pieces of equipment and has agreed to testify in the case.

Arsonist may have set eight fires

HOUSTON (AP) — Fire investigators say one person may be responsible for eight fires — including six that occurred within blocks of each other — over 24 hours.

The fires reported during Wednesday night and Thursday morning damaged included two appliance store fires, three house fires, one grass fire and two that broke out in dumpsters, investigators said.

Most of the fires occurred within about 45 minutes of each other Wednesday night, except for the two appliance store blazes that broke out Thursday morning.

A wine tasting party to benefit the American Heart Association will be held at the Energy Club, 2800 N. Big Spring, from 6-8 p.m. April 12. Red, white, domestic and imported wines will be available for sampling. Cost is $45 per couple, and those wishing to attend should contact the AHA office at 563-2008. Pictured are AHA board members Mike McElwraith and Megan Coffield.

Turtle attacked Eagle in harbor

The first submarine attack on an enemy warship was made Sept. 6, 1776, in New York harbor by a one-man, egg-shaped craft called Turtle.

It attacked the 64-gun British ship, Eagle, with a gunpowder "torpedo," but didn't harm the copper-sheathed hull. The attacker got away safely.

Chan Whitt Jr., a top trick-pool shot at 10, shows his stuff at the Golden Cue Billiard Lounge in Bladensburg, Md.

Pool shark banks on trick shots

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

He weighs 80 pounds, so don't call him "West Virginia Fats."

"Now I'm going to do my 'Space Shuttle' shot," Chan Whitt Jr. of Caldwell, W. Va. — 10 years old, four feet tall, professional pool prodigy — told a reporter, as the reporter lay helpless on his back across a pool table with a chalk between his teeth and the cue ball resting on the chalk. Aiming his cue, a confident grin popping out of his cherub's face, Chan explained, "Nine-ball in the corner pocket, two front teeth in the side pocket."

A newspaper in West Virginia dubbed him "Cute and Deadly."

Japanese television called him one of the "Miracle Children of the World."

His acknowledged nicknames run from "Prince of Pool" to "Pint-Sized Pool Whiz" to "Lil' Hustler" — this last emblazoned on the pickup truck of his cousin's press agent. He's been seen on "That's Incredible" and "P.M. Magazine," performing such marvels as his beloved "Six-Balls-in-One-Stroke-and-One-Ball-in-Each-Pocket," his crowd-pleasing "Six-Shooter-Make-Six-Balls-Real-Fast" and his awe-inspiring "Easy-Out-Nine-Ball."

Johnny Carson's people recently talked to his people. And Chan's father-manager, Chan Whitt Sr., a laid-off mail truck driver and sometime professional pool player, says there's a move afoot to name young Chan a "goodwill ambassador to the world."

CHAN'S FATHER is a lean, leathery type in cowboy boots, with a voice that twangs out of the West Virginia hollers. "Do you suppose that if you had the Hope Diamond, you'd put it away in a box where no one could see it?" he says of his treasured son. "Just like the Bible says, you shouldn't hide your light under a basket. People say that when they see something extraordinary like Chan, they see God. I think that's true. He beats ninety-nine and nine-tenths percent out of everybody he plays everywhere he goes. Everywhere. And he plays the best."

Chan is said to earn as much as $500 per appearance, shooting pool and playing the angles up and down the eastern seaboard, banking through the Midwest and caroming over to California, while keeping up with the fourth grade in Lewisburg, W. Va.

"He's an above-average student, even though he's missed quite a bit of school this year," says his teacher at Lewisburg Elementary, Sylvia Garrison. "He's good at math and he reads well. I remember once we had the word 'celebrity' come up in vocabulary, and he informed us all that he knew what it meant because of course he was one."

In 1982, at age 9, Chan was the youngest competitor ever to enter the Professional Pool Players Association World Open, going up against world-class players twice his age. And in January, when he was invited to Tokyo to show off some of his trick shots on Japanese television, he used a customized cue nearly twice his height — a $1,000 stick crafted of ebony and ivory.

HE'S THE YOUNGEST of seven kids and the only boy, and first played the game at 18 months, crawling with a miniature stick made by his dad. The father still accepts $100 challenges in smoke-filled saloons, and he even makes the occasional wager on Chan.

The son, however, keeps at cue's length from the heavy betting. He doesn't smoke, he doesn't drink and, his father says, he doesn't visit pool halls to prey on unsuspecting victims.

"I like going to tournaments, plus I like winning them," Chan says. "I think it's great. I'm meeting real nice people and everything. I don't think I'm good. I just make the balls. I practice for two or three hours, every day and on the weekends. He — my father — watches me all the time."

Any plans for the future? "Well, I'm going to college. And when I get into the Army, I'm going to fly a plane."

The other day, Chan pulled up in front of the Golden Cue Billiard Lounge in Bladensburg, Md., in a white chauffeured Corvette with his likeness taped to the doors.

Squinting at the afternoon sun, he stepped out of the car in his rented white tuxedo, carrying his leather cue case like a priceless violin. His chestnut hair blew in the breeze; he smiled and waved his short arms at a group of checkout clerks from the Jupiter Discount Store, who had gathered to gape on the sidewalk, and obliged some autograph-seeking kids and a couple of grown-ups, too ("Best Wishes, Chan Whitt").

HIS ENTOURAGE — his father, his cousin and his cousin's girlfriend (manager, press agent and personal secretary, respectively) — waited, applauding, by the entrance. Logan Sharp of the Golden Cue and Bill Brizzi of Beltsville Billiards were also there, having sprung for Chan and his entourage's fees and expenses.

"Billiards has always had a bad reputation," said Sharp, a husky man in an open collar and three-piece pin-stripe suit. "You always think of it as being played in a darkly lit place where all kinds of weird people walk in off the street. We still have that, but at least we're not darkly lit. And I think Chan will do a lot to give the game a cleaner image."

DEAR ABBY

Fiance 'ages' too fast for truth

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm confused. I am a 22-year-old woman engaged to be married, but here is the problem:

When we met, he said he was 37. A few months later he confessed that he was 42. A month ago, when he asked me to marry him, I hesitated because of the 20-year difference in our ages, but I decided to marry him anyway because I really cared for him.

Yesterday I found out his real age: He's 49 — soon to be 50!

What should I do? — WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: The important issue here is not so much his "real" age, as his real character. He's not honest. If he gets to 55, sell.

DEAR ABBY: I am 30 years old.

My husband is 34. We've been married for six years. My husband's job requires him to travel occasionally.

A few days after his last trip he asked me if I had written on the bottoms of his shoes! I said no. After carefully studying the fading writing, I deciphered it to read, "Ed was here and enjoyed every minute of it." I couldn't read the rest of it very well, but made this out: "I'll never forget the fun we had slam dancing at The Mission. Thanks for the memories. Love always, Maurice."

My husband swears up and down he doesn't know how the writing got there. I maintain that shoes are either on one's feet or in the closet. I also called long-distance to the city where my husband had been, and there is a lounge named The Mission. Also, the writing was on the instep where it would not be apt to wear off like it would if it were written on the ball of the shoe.

What do you think? Should I be suspicious? — SUSPICIOUS

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: You say your husband asked you if you had written on the bottoms of his shoes. Had he been guilty of any wrongdoing, he would not have called your attention to it. Write it off as the work of a practical joker.

Gardeners: Now best time to start bedding, vegetable plants indoors

Hearst Feature Service

Gardeners intent on growing their own bedding and vegetable plants from seed must start planting indoors now to have proper-sized transplants ready by mid-May.

Waste no time in starting certain flower seeds. Among these are impatiens, snapdragons, geranium and petunia. There are a few more weeks of grace left before annuals such as marigolds and zinnias must be sowed. Virtually all vegetable seeds should be started this week or next.

The toughest part of starting seeds indoors is providing enough light. Even the window that kept your African violet in flower all winter won't give sufficient light for raising a decent tomato or impatiens.

The alternative is to grow your bedding plants under artificial light. It's not hard or expensive, and it is extremely easy to control. The best light fixture for this is a shop light. This is usually a fixture with a reflector equipped for two four-foot fluorescent bulbs. Such fixtures, with bulbs, can be bought in hardware and discount stores for $12 to $17.

The fixture usually comes with two cool white bulbs. Remove one and replace it with a warm white bulb. The bulb will cost about $4 and is available at any hardware store. Plants need a combination of light that the two bulbs will provide by burning together.

Mount the fixture so its height can be adjusted. The top of the plant should be six inches or less from the bulb. Plan on burning the bulbs 15 hours a day. Get a timer; don't trust your ability to be punctual. Electricity cost is negligible.

A four-foot fixture will provide sufficient light for an area 2 x 4-feet. Within that eight square feet, you can grow at least 15 dozen plants. The actual number depends on the growing container. The most efficient in space are plastic trays sold in garden centers for just this purpose. A tray about 12 x 16-inches can easily grow four dozen plants to garden-ready size. Less efficient in space are individual peat pots, peat pellets and miscellaneous margarine tubs and milk tubs you've saved.

Soil is a critical element in your success. Resist the urge to bring in garden soil. If you do, it must be sterilized in the oven (350 for 45 minutes) and mixed with a conditioner, such as perlite or sand. It's easier to buy prepared seed-starting mixes. These usually contain finely ground peat, perlite and nutrients. Or, buy a bag of potting soil and add perlite or sharp sand in a ratio of 3 parts soil to 1 part perlite/sand.

Thoroughly moisten whatever soil mixture you use. Let it drain for a few hours before sowing the seed.

Carefully read and follow directions on the seed packet concerning depth and light needs. Some seeds should be left uncovered. Some require light to sprout; some do not. The seed packet will explain.

The soil should be kept evenly moist throughout the two-month season. Dry soil will prevent sprouting or kill the plants once sprouted. Even moistness is a key to success. Watch it carefully, especially during the first three weeks after sowing. Is it worth the trouble? It depends on what you want to grow. You probably won't save much money, especially if you have to buy a light fixture.

Educators staff sitting service

King Features' Syndicate

If success is a journey and not a destination, then 34-year-old Nancy Ann VanWie is traveling on a jet stream. In a little over three years, the tenderly tenacious California entrepreneur converted a moment of sheer panic into a "highly lucrative" house-and-child-sitting service called Sitters Unlimited that has spawned a national network of franchises selling from $15,000 to $60,000 each.

Since it generally takes ten years or more to constitute an overnight success, Ms. VanWie is indeed traveling at a superior speed.

Although the idea of running such a service was not novel, the concept of hiring only teachers and education majors as employees is what makes Sitters Unlimited, based in Del Mar, Calif., unique. This "educationally oriented" service combined with Ms. VanWie's meticulous professionalism have been the fuel for her current appetite.

After earning a master's degree in administrative education at tiny Lesley College in Cambridge, Mass., Ms. VanWie held "a zillion jobs" over the subsequent 12 years in numerous teaching positions, including one year as executive director of the largest federally funded day-care center in Massachusetts.

After that first taste of business, Ms. VanWie hungered for more and became an administrative assistant in sales at Polaroid. "It was a fabulous corporation, but I wanted my own business. And," she recalls with more than a hint of relief, "I was tired of East Coast weather."

WITH AN INDEPENDENT heart and her most valued necessities in two suitcases, Ms. VanWie flew into Southern California with no job contacts and, even worse, no car. "Through a friend of a friend, a lawyer was supposed to have arranged a 10-day house-sitting job for me in Newport Beach. But when I got off the plane at Los Angeles International Airport, I was paged and told that the whole thing was off. I was devastated and went absolutely hysterical. Looking back, I was very naive."

In a calmer moment, after she got settled (through a contact) at Polaroid, the gutsy damsel in distress remembered her panic and thought, "If this had been professionally run with contracts and deposits, it never would have happened." That's when the wheels started turning. "Six weeks later, on September 17, 1979, I officially opened my doors," she says triumphantly.

"My original plan was to run a house-and-child-sitting service owned by an educator. Out of the sixty people I interviewed in the first two weeks, however, the only two who qualified were teachers. With their contacts, the number of like-minded applicants grew — thus, the educational aspects of the business just sort of evolved. After two more weeks, I had 30 educationally oriented sitters."

Clients then came back to her with praise — how unique the service was and how pleased they were to find an agency staffed solely by educators for any evening, overnight or extended-stay commitment. From that point on, the business started rolling.

Today, with seven franchise operations in Southern California, one in Boston and one in the Washington, D.C./Virginia area, she oversees a network of 600 sitters. In addition, Ms. VanWie has contacted the major hotel chains to add Sitters Unlimited as a new dimension of service for guests with children.

With salary freezes and budget cuts, teachers are not only a trustworthy labor force but are quite eager to supplement their incomes in a related field.

FOR THE TRAVELING parents, peace of mind settles in early when they learn of Ms. VanWie's strict standards. "I insist that clients first interview the sitter," she stipulates. After that, agreements are signed stating that sitters will not drink alcohol, have personal guests in, smoke, make unnecessary phone calls or transport the child unless the client puts it in writing.

One special benefit for the children is that the surrogate parent can sometimes detect learning disabilities that may have remained undiagnosed at home or in school.

One Newport Beach, Calif., mother who thought her son had a cold was informed that her child actually had a hearing problem. Ms. VanWie estimates that there have been 25 cases in which the sitter identified a previously unnoticed deficiency or disability and passed along the information to the returning parents during the required follow-up phone consultation.

Sight, smell sometimes contribute to weight gain

Copley News Service

The dieters of the world have suspected it all along — just looking at black bottom pie and bonbons adds pounds.

Now they are getting a nod of validity from Dr. Judith Rodin and her colleagues at Yale University.

While doing research on insulin levels, hunger and food intake, Rodin, a professor of psychology and psychiatry at the Connecticut Institution, has discovered that there is, indeed, a biological response in humans that affects the urge to eat and also affects the taste of the foods that they eat.

At a recent press seminar, Rodin said the appetite level is affected not only by the type of food a person eats but also by one's thoughts — in other words, just thinking about good things to eat will cause many people to overeat. For instance,

The tantalizing aromas from a bakery and the glorious color photos on the cover of Bon Appetit magazine can actually affect one's metabolism and lead unsuspecting folk down the pig-out path.

Danish pastry at breakfast, in fact, does make people hungrier at lunchtime than no breakfast at all.

Sweet foods (those sweetened with table sugar or sucrose) do, indeed, trigger eating binges.

THOSE VISIONS of sugarplums are doing more than just dancing in our heads, asserts Rodin. They are actually priming the body for weight gain.

Rodin's research points to insulin as the culprit. Insulin is the body's fuel regulator, guiding sugar and fat into cells. High levels of insulin in the bloodstream increase the likelihood that more calories will be consumed, resulting in excess fat storage.

In extensive laboratory tests, Rodin found that the blood insulin level of many of her subjects increased significantly when exposed to such stimuli as full-color food photos and a steak sizzling in a frypan. This group of subjects was dubbed hyper-responders — "people who are turned on by the sight and very thought of food," says Rodin.

And just who is hyper-responsive and who is not? After testing thousands of subjects over many years, Rodin estimates that about 60 to 65 percent of the population is hyper-responsive.

Some people, she suggests, may be born hyper-responsive. For others, it is a conditioned response. At first, insulin levels soar when they eat a piece of cake. Over time, those insulin levels begin to rise when the person merely looks at a piece of cake.

After being exposed to the tantalizing stimuli, all subjects were turned loose at a grand buffet of delicious things to eat. The hyper-responders were found to eat considerably more than those subjects whose insulin level did not increase as a result of the tantalizing photos and the sizzling steak. Moreover, the hyper-responders also reported the sweet foods tasting sweeter than did their counterparts.

TO CONTROL for the possibility that non-food stimuli were responsible for the hyper-responders' eating binges, Rodin showed each subject some food. Some were shown a very tantalizing dish; others saw less appealing food.

Later, when confronted with the buffet, those subjects who had viewed the most appetizing foods beforehand ate the most.

In related studies of animals, Rodin found that hyper-responsive animals also gained considerably more weight than the "normal" animals (those whose insulin level was not increased in response to external stimuli) when exposed to a diet of appetizing foods.

Rodin's research also has concluded that the eating of certain foods will boost insulin levels higher than others, and consequently make people eat more. She has compiled a list of foods and their relative abilities to boost insulin levels.

Cornflakes, for instance, boost the level more than oatmeal. Frozen peas more than lentils. Pastries more than peanuts. White potatoes trigger more insulin output than do sweet potatoes. Raisins result in higher levels than do apples.

Rodin also has done research on the relative effects of glucose (the sugar used in many prepared foods and baked goods) and fructose (the sugar found in fruits) on appetite enhancement. She found that glucose made it easy for subjects to overeat. On the other hand, her results suggest that fructose might actually be able to tame appetites.

To test this theory, Rodin fed her subjects breakfast, then gave them a drink containing 192 calories. For some subjects, the drink was glucose in water; others got fructose in water. After 2½ hours, all subjects were invited to a magnificent buffet.

Those who had received fructose ate an average of 869 calories worth of food; those who had received glucose ate about 1,400 calories worth.

The implications for dieters are clear. A candy bar with 100 calories does more to make you hungry in an hour than does an apple with 100 calories. In short, a calorie is not just a calorie.

AND RODIN'S bad news for the "chocoholics" and ice cream lovers among us doesn't end there. She suggests that dieting itself may be the biggest problem in regulating normal body weight; that dieting may make you fat and keep you fat.

Stress at home can cause problems at work

From Staff Reports

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Answers to daily problems and stresses people face at home may be found on the job.

"It's difficult to leave domestic problems behind when going to work each day," said Rodney C. Brown, director of employee counseling at R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. "A recent survey of business and industrial chaplains indicates that marriage and family problems are the primary counseling issues they face."

Employers walk a fine line between helpful support and unwanted interference when dealing with individual problems at the workplace, although many accept the responsibility to help.

Employees requesting help come from all parts of the work force, from factory line to corporate offices. Marital and family problems affect no one group more than any other, said Brown, head of a staff of three pastoral counselors and the coordinator of an alcohol/drug recovery program.

In dealing with family and marital conflicts, Brown and his staff note the frequent breakdown in communications among partners and family members. The increase in dual-career families and single-parent households has led to family concerns rarely seen 20 years ago.

Brown described some common family issues and suggestions on how to approach them:

— Make time and take the effort to communicate thoughts and feelings to spouse and children. Unclear expectations complicated by inadequate communications skills are major contributors to family discord.

Moon colony possible by 2010

WASHINGTON (AP) — Using a space station as a stepping stone, Americans could colonize the moon by the year 2010 and Mars by 2060, says the chief of the national space agency.

"Just as the airplane opened Antarctica to permanent human habitation, a manned space station, to be built and serviced with the aid of the space shuttle, will open space to a limitless range of opportunities for mankind," James M. Beggs, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said Wednesday.

Beggs outlined a scenario for the expansion of human life beyond planet Earth in a speech at the U.S. Naval Academy in nearby Annapolis, Md.

President Reagan in his State of the Union message directed NASA to develop a permanent manned space station, and Beggs predicted it would be in place 300 miles high within 10 years. He called it a "logical expansion of our activities in space."

"As we look to the future, many of our most innovative thinkers have devoted a good deal of time to imagining what the next 100 years in space might be like," he said. "I think we've come to the point now where their vision might very well become reality. Let me paint a picture of that future for you now."

Using the space shuttle, he said, "we build a permanently-manned space station. Then we must learn how to tug it out, or move it in other ways to geosynchronous orbit." At geosynchronous orbit, 22,300 miles up, a satellite rotates at the same rate as the Earth and thus remains stationary over one point.

"As we enter the 21st century, or shortly thereafter, we will have established a manned space station in lunar orbit, which will allow us to exploit the moon's resources," Beggs said. "Out about the year 2010, we could establish a colony on the moon, beginning with a small research station. By 2020 or 2030 we might have an operating productive activity on the moon."

In that period, he added, robots could be constructing a station on Mars.

"In about the year 2040, the colony on the moon would be flourishing," he said.

Scientists argue about space weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year after President Reagan outlined his vision of a space-age defense against Soviet nuclear attack, scientists are still arguing whether it is a "Star Wars" pipedream leading the world to disaster or to the end of a 30-year-old atomic stalemate.

A group of distinguished physicists came to the first conclusion in a report issued recently, arguing that the administration should pursue arms control rather than "this illusion." The private group, the Union of Concerned Scientists, has been critical of Reagan in past years.

But Dr. George Keyworth, Reagan's science adviser, said recently, "it's worth pursuing. Our research is at an early stage and may come to nothing. But if we find something, we (the United States and the Soviet Union) could get away from these loaded guns we're pointing at each other."

Officially, the Pentagon calls the project "Strategic Defense Initiative" and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger bridges when critics call it "Star Wars" after the popular movie featuring futuristic weapons.

However, official Pentagon budget documents recently submitted to Congress show that one part of the research, dealing with a weapon known as the electromagnetic gun, has been named "Project JEDI." The Jedi Knights, possessors of "the Force," were the good guys in "Star Wars."

Reagan, in a March 23, 1983 speech, called for scientific research into a defensive shield which change military strategy from offense to defense and could "give us the means of rendering these nuclear weapons obsolete."

The existing concept is "deterrence," the three-decade old doctrine which holds that the nuclear stalemate exists because both know a first strike would not destroy enough weapons to eliminate a devastating counter-attack by the other side.

Joan Mondale logs 100,000 miles for husband

Joan Mondale rests on a porch swing during a recent interview at her Washington home. Mrs. Mondale said the 1984 presidential campaign with her husband, former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, is "far more intense, more focused" than any other she has witnessed.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joan of Art, Mrs. Walter F. Mondale, campaigned in 34 states last year, traveling three or four days a week, logging over 100,000 miles. Tuesday, she saw her husband for the first time in a week and she did not arrive empty handed.

On her arm was an overstuffed orange canvas bag, filled with clean socks and shirts.

Primary day for Joan Mondale began at 6 a.m., shopping for vegetables for the neighborhood cooperative, and it stretched past midnight when she and the former vice president celebrated victory — Illinois and Minnesota — in St. Paul.

For Joan Mondale, the 1984 presidential campaign is "far more intense, more focused," than any other she has weathered — and Joan Mondale has been in politics for more than 20 years.

"The pace is faster. We're going five and six days out of seven instead of three or four," she says. "And the days are longer."

SINCE JANUARY, she has been on the road, appearing for her husband, speaking out on the need for daycare and job training, pay equity, the gender gap.

"We knew this would be a tough race," Mrs. Mondale said in an interview this week. "We just didn't know which of the other seven candidates would be the toughest contender."

Seated in the back seat of a car winding its way through the daffodil-lined parkway to National Airport, she reflected on the primary season.

"We've always had long periods of separation," she said. "When he was attorney general in Minnesota, he was home for dinner only twice a month. Our children have never known anything else. We only dated once a week before we were married." And they had known each other for 13 weeks.

Whatever one's politics, people who know Mrs. Mondale like her. She is a warm, gracious, unpretentious woman, a talented potter whose dedication to the arts over the years has won her the title, "Joan of Art."

CHATTING, SHE is relaxed, easy, quick to chortle over campaign trail gossip, quicker to criticize the Reagan presidency.

"How any intelligent person can vote for Reagan is difficult for me to see," she said. "He is the cause of all this suffering and pain, farmers losing their farms and 2½ million women sinking into poverty."

Yet ask her about rival Gary Hart, whose surprise primary victories sent the Mondale campaign reeling — and she stiffens, offering a stock reply:

"What we say is that it doesn't matter if ideas are old or new, but whether they're right or wrong. Reaganomics was a new idea, but it was wrong and it didn't work. We are proud that our ideas are based on the timeless values of the Democratic party."

Ask her about Jimmy Carter, whom her husband visited the week before in Georgia. Will Mondale ask Carter to campaign for him?

A long silence; then, "I don't know."

SHE IS MORE relaxed talking about her three children, taking pains to explain a point in one of the many news clippings about Mondale kids on the campaign trail that decorate the family kitchen.

"Both boys are campaigning full time for their father, and Eleanor is campaigning on weekends," she said. "They are terrific."

Ted is 26, a University of Minnesota graduate. William is 22, taking a year off from Brown University, where he is a senior. Eleanor, 24, a St. Lawrence University graduate, is an actress living in Los Angeles, now playing the Yoplait girl in Yoplait yogurt television commercials. "I wish she wore a name tag," her mother says.

For most of the last 17 years the Mondales have lived in an unassuming, white stucco house only a few blocks from the vice president's mansion where they moved during the Carter presidency.

Damage to the Mondale house from pipes bursting during the Christmas freeze has been repaired. The living and dining rooms are newly painted, stark white with white drapes and only a few pieces of simple furniture. There is no bric-a-brac, no clutter, a simple, sunny, elegant interior that highlights paintings and sculpture.

U.S. rivers to be studied

Grotesque cancerous tumors have been discovered in so many fish throughout the U.S. that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will soon survey rivers around the country, and the advisory council to the National Cancer Institute will decide this June whether to fund further investigations of the problem.

Although no one is yet ready to point a finger, it is suspected that the tumors are caused by some of the thousands of chemicals known to pollute American waterways. Some scientists believe that the danger of eating chemical-laden fish should not be underestimated.

"The fish are trying to tell us there is something wrong," warns cancer researcher John Black in an article in Science Digest's April issue. He and his colleagues at the Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, N.Y. have produced the most convincing evidence to date that chemical pollutants are responsible.

One hint that chemicals are to blame comes from the fact that most of the tumors are located on the skin, mouth and liver of fish. Feeding on plants and animals that have bound the toxic substances or grazing along contaminated sediments could cause cancerous skin and mouth lesions.
