Unemployment rate falls to 7.3 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment nationwide edged down 0.1 percentage point to 7.3 percent in February as continuing economic strength created nearly 300,000 new jobs, the government said today.

The number of unemployed Americans, however, remained about the same, with 8.4 million people listed as out of work, down just 85,000 from January.

Moreover, the jobless rate for black workers rose by 1.4 percentage points to 16.3 percent, largely as a result of increased joblessness among adult black men. The rate for whites, meanwhile, was off, from 6.4 percent to 6.2 percent.

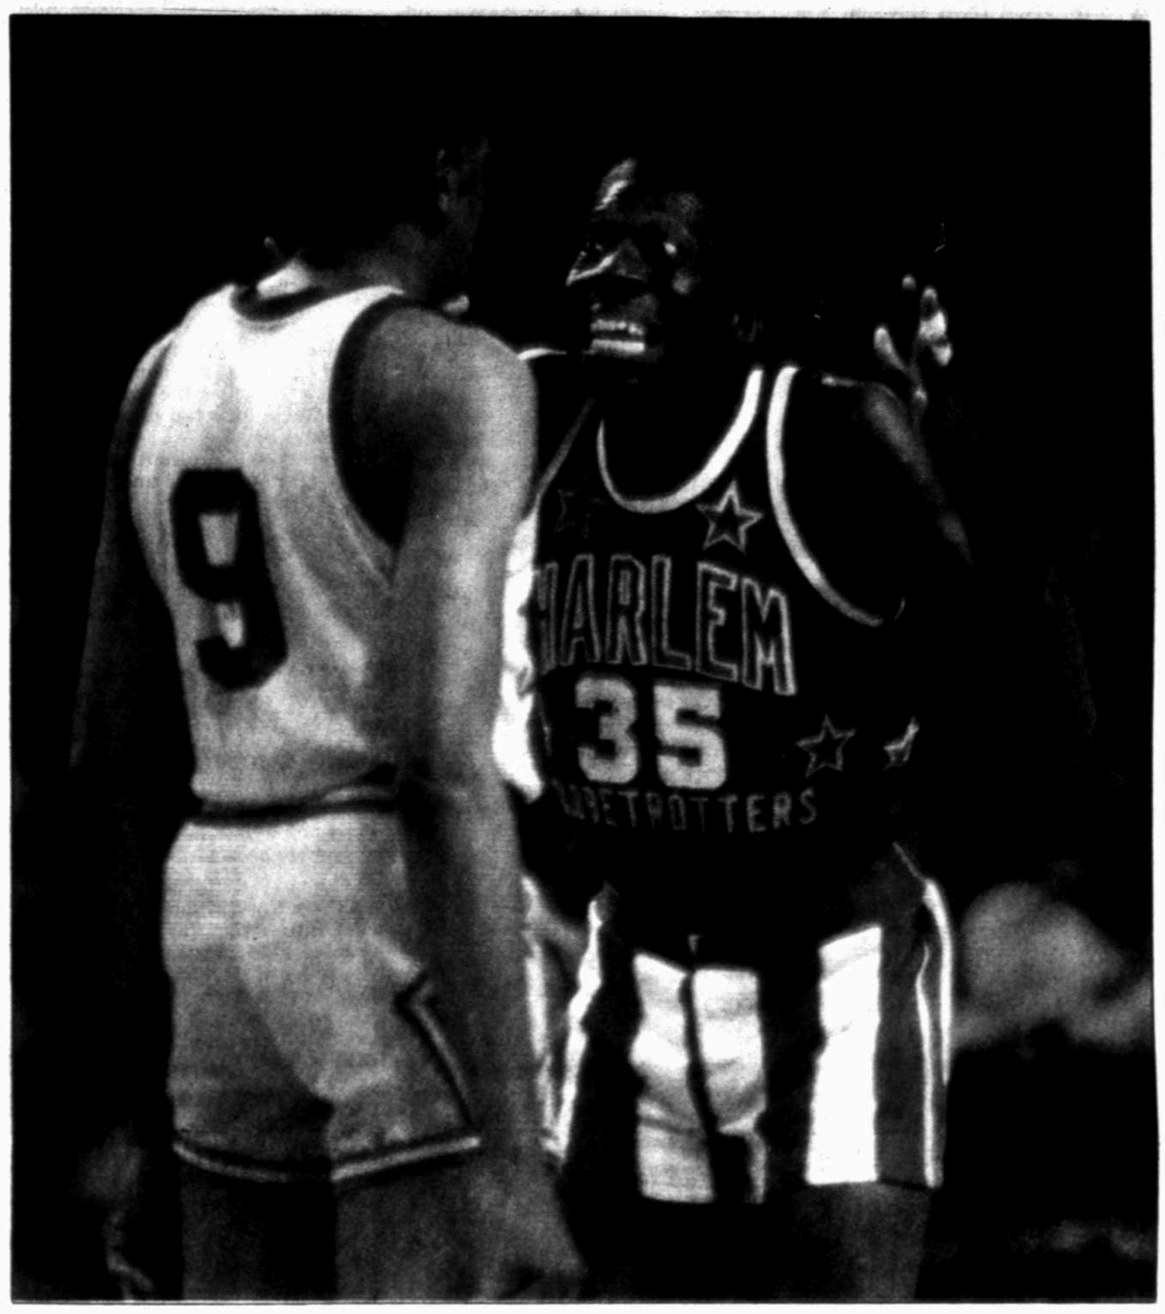

The number of Americans holding jobs rose to a record 106.7 million, the Labor Department reported. The bulk of the employment gain came in industries providing services rather than in those manufacturing products.

Indeed, testifying before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Janet L. Norwood, the commissioner of labor statistics, said, "Large over-the-month gains in the service-producing sector — 255,000 — were partly offset by declines in the goods-producing sector, particularly in manufacturing." Goods-producing jobs fell 137,000.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said more than 60 percent of the adult population held jobs last month, a figure he said was "equal to the highest employment peak in our history.

"We have seen a number of positive economic indicators in recent weeks but none is more reassuring than a drop in unemployment," Speakes added. "The economy is creating jobs in record numbers."

Salvadoran colonel killed

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Three gunmen in sports outfits walked up to the army's top spokesman as he rested after a match at a posh tennis club, shot him in the head and draped a red and yellow leftist banner over the body, witnesses said.

Lt. Col. Ricardo A. Cienfuegos was one of the highest-ranking officials to be assassinated in El Salvador since the war between the U.S.-backed government and the rebels began 5½-years ago.

"I heard a report (gunshot) and about six men altogether took all the players off the court," said of the witnesses who asked for anonymity for fear of reprisal. "They took us to a cafeteria at the entrance to the court and told us to throw ourselves onto the floor and then they left."

Witnesses said Cienfuegos, wearing white tennis clothes and shoes, was resting on a courtside bench when the killers approached. He was shot once in the head at practically point-blank range, they said.

A presidential spokesman confirmed the early afternoon shooting at the posh International Sports Club.

Unlike most senior officers in the Salvadoran military, Cienfuegos frequently traveled around the capital without bodyguards. The slight, reddish-haired officer played tennis at the members-only club each noon.

President Jose Napoleon Duarte, speaking to reporters, said the killing was another example of the war, which has been fought largely in the countryside, moving into urban areas.

Cienfuegos was often denounced by name on broadcasts by the clandestine Radio Venceremos, the voice of the Faribundo Marti National Liberation Front, the umbrella group covering the five guerrilla armies.

Witnesses said the gunmen draped over Cienfuegos' slumped body a red flag emblazoned with yellow letters giving the initials of the Popular Liberation Forces, a guerrilla group that has been fighting to take power in El Salvador since 1979.

Man wins re-trial after 22 years in prison

ANGOLA, La. — A 64-year-old man freed after spending more than 22 years in prison because he pleaded guilty to rape without consulting a lawyer greeted his grateful children with "a big old smile on his face" and packed his belongings into a pickup truck for the trip home.

"I feel fine but I'm not the man I was when I walked in here in 1962," Gilbert J. Smith said moments after his release Thursday night. "But I've got this much left, and I thank the Lord for that."

Smith, of Pineville, was freed on $5,000 bond from the Louisiana State Penitentiary after a judge ordered a new trial and corrections officials worked overtime at the family's request to free him quickly.

"They've got him dressed in street clothes, out of the (prison) blues," said Kathleen Case as her father left prison. "Of course he's lost a lot of weight. But he's got a big old smile on his face."

Smith was indicted Sept. 14, 1962, on an aggravated rape charge involving a 12-year-old girl. He pleaded guilty three days later and was sentenced to life in prison by Judge Walter M. Hunter, who has since died.

Judge Alfred Mansour on Wednesday granted the fifth-grade dropout a new trial. He did not set a date.

"After someone has been in prison as long as my father has, we're all ecstatic. We don't know what to say," Ronnie Royston, 32, said today. "We're sharing bits and pieces of our lives, a little at time."

"We're somewhat in a state of minor shock because it's hard to believe after all these many years that he's in our presence, and he feels the same way," said Royston. Smith's children were adopted by a stepfather when his wife remarried.

Smith's oldest child, Linda Garoutte, said Thursday, "I know that none of us will be sleeping tonight. We'll probably be sitting at his feet, holding his hand and spoiling him."

Ms. Garoutte said her father suffered a mental breakdown in prison once he realized that he would probably be there for the rest of his life.

At a January hearing on his motion for a new trial, Smith contended that he had reached an agreement with then-Assistant District Attorney Jules Davidson to plead guilty to the aggravated rape charge with the understanding he would receive parole three years later with Davidson's help.

Davidson said in January he remembers nothing of the case.

Seatbelt laws favored, poll shows

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Texans traditionally are opposed to government interference in their lives, but a recent poll shows that almost two out of three state residents approve of efforts by two legislators to make them do something they don't like to do: wear seatbelts.

A bill introduced by Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite, and Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belmont, would require the driver and all front-seat passengers in a car to wear seatbelts. Few Texans wear the protective belts, but a recent Shipley poll indicated that 62 percent favor a law requiring people to buckle up.

Even though less than 15 percent of people wear seatbelts nationwide, polls indicate that 68 percent of Americans support laws that would require seatbelt use, and 84 percent said they would comply with such a law, according to Thomas H. Hanna, president of the Detroit-based Traffic Safety Now Inc.

"We're probably talking about a range of 9,000-11,000 people each year (whose lives would be saved) if everybody buckled up," said Hanna, whose organization is helping to fund the Texas lobbying effort for the bill.

"It would save hundreds of lives in Texas each year," said Major Ira Dees of the Department of Public Safety's Midland office.

The DPS favors the law, as does the Department of Public Health, the Texas Rehabilitation Commission, the Texas Medical Association and the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers, according to a Dallas Morning News article.

"Anything which would get people to use their seatbelts is good," said Dees. "If the legislature gives us the law, we'll do our best to enforce it."

Midland Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry is a strong believer in seatbelts, but he opposes a law making their use mandatory.

"I think there's too much government in the lives of citizens," he said, adding that such a law would be difficult to enforce. "And we have too many unenforced laws now."

But Dees said merely having the law would encourage people to use their seatbelts.

Former FNB director denies he made threats

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

"Goodbye, and God help us," former First National Bank director John Hendrix recalled saying after the bank's June 1983 executive committee meeting when the Midland independent energy bank was struggling to raise capital to stay afloat.

Nevertheless, the bank failed on Oct. 14, 1983, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. became FNB's receiver and liquidator.

Hendrix was the last of about 20 witnesses in the five-day federal trial to settle a $25 million dispute between the FDIC and Eagle Properties Ltd. The controversy involves the bank's sale of its 24-story building to Eagle for $75 million.

Hendrix told FDIC Dallas attorney Lewis LeClair he made no threats to Fred Roper, representative of Eagle general partner Thomas C. "Tom" Brown, following the bank's executive committee meeting in June 1983. That meeting occurred on the eve of funding a $50 million down payment on the $75 million sale of FNB's 24-story building to the Eagle partnership.

The seven-member partnership had agreed to buy the building for $75 million on Dec. 31, 1982.

"IT WOULD BE absurd," Hendrix said of his making any threats. "They're all wealthy men. All they would do would be to move down the street. It would be a dumb thing to do."

'The boss' of Coca Cola company dies at 95

R. Woodruff

ATLANTA (AP) — Robert W. Woodruff, who built the Coca-Cola company into an international financial empire and amassed a personal fortune large enough to donate more than $200 million to the college he left out of boredom, has died at age 95.

Woodruff, a former president and chairman of the board of the soft drink company, died Thursday night after a 10-day stay at Emory University Hospital, said spokeswoman Julia Hoye.

At the age of 33, Woodruff quit as president of a trucking company to take over the helm of the soft drink company his father, Ernest Woodruff, had purchased four years earlier for $25 million.

That was in 1923 when the company "was largely a soda-fountain business, heavily in debt. I took the company and spread it around the world — with the help of a lot of fine people," Woodruff said in a 1981 interview.

Woodruff also was a philanthropist who contributed millions to education and cultural institutions in Atlanta and elsewhere. He was an "anonymous donor" to causes all over the state.

Known as "the boss" by Coca-Cola employees, Woodruff "considered himself an excellent salesman — that's all," said Joe Jones, his personal secretary, whom Woodruff had appointed to the Coke board of directors in 1980 by flexing the muscle resulting from his control of 17 percent of the company's stock.

He chose Roberto C. Goizueta as Coca-Cola chairman over another man reputed to be the favorite of company officers at the time.

"I'm free to do pretty much as I please now," Woodruff said then. "I come and go. I have a very nice understanding with the company."

Woodruff "retired" as president of the company in 1939 and served as chairman of the board from 1939 to 1942 and as chairman of the executive committee from 1939 to 1954.

He retired in 1955, but remained as a director and chairman of the finance committee of the board of directors until 1981, when he became chairman emeritus of the committee.

In April 1984, following a change in the company's by-laws that barred the election of directors age 71 or older, Woodruff retired from the board, ending a 61-year associa-

Officers have information on alleged armed robbers

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Suspect No. 1

Suspect No. 2

ODESSA — Ector County Sheriff Bob Brookshire at a news conference this morning announced that his office and the FBI have new information regarding the armed robbery Feb. 20 of the Red Door Antique Shop on West Yukon Road at the intersection of West Loop 338 in Odessa.

Brookshire said new composite photos of the two robbery suspects have been prepared by an expert forensic artist from Houston who worked with witnesses. Brookshire said copies of the photos were being released to the media in hopes that someone will recognize the suspects.

The sherrif also announced that a reward of up to $20,000 for information leading to the indictment of those responsible for the robbery has been posted by the insurance company.

On Feb. 20 two gunmen, driving an older model light green two-door Ford Thunderbird, drove up to the antique shop, entered the store armed with pistols, handcuffed five employees with plastic handcuffs and made them lie on the floor while the two men took a quantity of loose diamonds and gold jewelry. Initial estimates indicated the stolen diamonds and jewelry were valued at as much as $2 million, however, Brookshire said today that report was erroneous. The owner of the store, Delores Kirby, said the stolen property was worth approximately $800,000.

The two gunmen are alleged to have purchased the car used in the robbery from an Odessa car lot seven to eight days before the robbery occurred, according to FBI agent Tom Ferris.

The first suspect sought is described as being five feet, 11 inches to six feet tall, slender, weighing about 155 pounds and thought to be about 45 years old. He was wearing tinted perscription glasses. The second suspect is described as being of stocky build, about five feet, eight inches tall, about 180 pounds and between 28 and 30 years old.

Brookshire said anyone with information about the case could contact the Ector County Sheriff's Office, 333-3984; FBI office in Midland, 682-4766; Midland County Sheriff's Office, 682-9774; or Crime Stoppers in either city.

FNB

In the Eagle partnership, which consisted of seven "friends" and stockholders of the bank, are two general partners, Thomas C. "Tom" Brown and M.W. "Buddy" Branum, and five limited partners, Gene Sledge, J.L. Davis, Clint Hurt, Carl Lawrence and Charles Perry. All but Perry, who lives in Odessa, are Midlanders.

Each partner had paid $150,000 in cash to activate the partnership and to arrange financing for the $50 million down payment. The initial funding was guaranteed by two $25 million letters of credit from Texas Commerce Bank of Houston and InterFirst Bank of Dallas. The partners signed notes to FNB for an additional $25 million.

The $50 million was funded in June 1983 — six months prematurely. The bank sought the funding, since deposits were dropping, energy loans had turned sour, crude-oil prices were dropping and both Texas Commerce Bank and InterFirst Bank had not fulfilled earlier commitments to infuse the bank with more capital by buying $200 million in loans.

But before the "Tom Brown Group" — Eagle Properties Ltd. — had signed documents to activate the $50 million in letters of credit, Roper, a certified public accountant who later was to manage the FNB Building for Eagle, wanted more concessions from FNB. Testimony indicated Roper asked FNB to indemnify any negative cash flow — to protect the Eagle partnership and to make up the difference if Eagle's rental income was insufficient to make payments on the indebtedness which Eagle incurred in buying the building.

Hendrix said he had asked for Roper's cooperation and did not threaten him.

THE EAGLE partnership contends the $25 million in notes to FNB was not payable until after the $50 million in loans had been repaid. Eagle also maintains the 10 percent interest on the $25 million doesn't start until the notes are funded, which hasn't occurred. FDIC asserts that the interest started on Dec. 31, 1982 — when the the FNB-Eagle contract was consummated in the bank's 24th-floor board room.

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton, who heard the non-jury trial, is to settle the dispute.

"I can't rule until I consider all of the evidence," Bunton told the FDIC and Eagle attorneys and the Eagle partnership Thursday. Bunton complimented the lawyers on their thoroughness and promptness in bringing the case to trial a year after it was filed in February 1984. Evidence includes the witnesses' testimony, 450 exhibits and 28 depositions.

Under cross examination by Eagle attorney Seagal V. Wheatley of San Antonio, Midland oil producer Hendrix said he thought the building's $75 million sale price was a "fair deal the way it was structured."

The plan was for the Eagle partners to pay off the $75 million indebtedness with the rent gained from leasing about half the building to FNB for $6 million a year; other rental income was to come from other tenants in the building.

However, after the bank failed and FDIC took over, FDIC sold FNB's assets, once worth $1.8 billion, to RepublicBank First National Midland for $51.1 million. In late 1983, FDIC severed the old FNB-Eagle rental contract. The newly-formed RepublicBank took advantage of Eagle's plight and negotiated a reduced $4.5 million yearly rent of the building. The FNB had agreed to pay Eagle $500,000 a month lease.

"IT MADE GOOD business sense," Hendrix said of the sale price. "Those metaphysical aspects were the ones that were important to me at the time."

Wheatley indicated his interest wasn't in the metaphysical but in the fair-market price and the appraised value of the FNB property, which included the 24-story building, the 10-story parking garage and the drive-in facility. Eagle's stance is that the building was worth about $50 million and not the $75 million figure, which former FNB President Charles Fraser had set as the minimum sale price. Wheatley had presented evidence that Michael Magill, one of Fraser's officers, had recommended the building sell for $45 million. Former FNB Vice President Stuart Williams had arranged the financing at the request of Fraser, who set the price.

Hendrix said the $75 million infusion would "enhance our capital position," help the bank reflect earnings for 1982, and improve the balance sheet and the bank's capital ratios. He said he had not told the Eagle partners FNB would fail without the funding.

FDIC is seeking the $25 million plus 10 percent per-annum interest from Eagle. However, Eagle reportedly is strapped for cash and is making payments to RepublicBank on the $50 million in notes but doesn't have the rental income to pay on the $25 million indebtedness. After FNB failed, RepublicBank bought the two $25 million notes from Texas Commerce Bank and InterFirst Bank.

Eagle's problems are compounded by the decrease in rent — from a high of about $18 to $20 a square foot per year at the boom's peak in the early 1980s to a current rate of $5 to $12 a square foot.

THE FNB BUILDING was "quite possibly" the most prestigious building in town, said Doug Guichard, partner in Main Hurdman, the certified public accountant firm which performed services for FNB. Evidence indicated some FNB board directors initially were unwilling to sell the building in part because of the pride in ownership.

Wheatley repeatedly referred to his Eagle clients as the "lucky buyers."

As a defense not to pay the $25 million, Eagle is claiming FNB and Fraser misled the partnership on the appraised value of the FNB property. The $75 million included $66 million for the building and other structures and $9 million for the land.

Richard Brooks, a Midland lawyer who was an FNB director from 1963 until the bank's closing, said the directors wanted to get as much as they could on sale of the building "to protect shareholders...I didn't want to lose money for the shareholders."

"There was never any written appraisal presented to the board of directors," he said. "I never saw one...I wanted to know how much we could get for it; we were the sellers." Brooks indicated he wasn't interested in a fair-market price for the building. "I was trying to get all I could for it." He said the building's worth had "varied all over the map" in board discussions.

THE INFUSION of capital by way of the $75 million sale would reduce the bank's obligations to the Federal Reserve Bank, would increase its diminishing loan-loss reserve and would help the bank reflect a profit for 1982.

At the time, the bank was embarking on a plan to restore public confidence in the bank in order to maintain deposits, attract new depositors and to prevent a decline in deposits and, particularly, to forestall a run on the bank.

"We did everything we could to get that bank in liquid condition," Brooks said.

Brooks noted the FNB board of directors had authorized Fraser to sell the property.

"I had considerable faith in and respect for Mr. Fraser," Brooks said.

"I would say he was capable and aggressive," he said, "and would like to have his own way if he could."

In testimony last week, Clarence Scharbauer Jr., a Midland rancher who was an FNB director and who became chairman of the board after Fraser's resignation from the bank in April 1983, testified that Fraser tried to dominate the board.

Brooks replied "sure" to Wheatley's query if Fraser was "strong willed."

SEATBELTS

"I think a vast number will (comply) simply because it is the law."

In New York, where a similar law went into effect Jan. 1, "Surveys indicate a 70 percent compliance with the law," Hanna said. "And the Governor's office just announced that in January, fatalities had declined 38 percent from January 1984."

Nationwide, there were 44,000 car-related deaths in 1984, about half of which involved front-seat passengers, according to Hanna. In Texas, about 4,000 people died in traffic accidents last year, Dees said.

Hanna's organization is funded by General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp., American Motors Corp., Volkswagen of America Inc. and Volvo of North America.

"We were founded in response to Transportation Secretary (Elizabeth) Dole's request for a private sector effort to encourage seatbelt use," Hanna said.

Besides saving lives, the car manufacturers would like to take advantage of Ms. Dole's offer to rescind regulations requiring airbags in each car if enough states pass mandatory seatbelt laws, said Hanna. New Jersey, Illinois and Missouri have joined New York in passing the law, "And Gov. Blanchard of Michigan is expected to sign that state's law this afternoon," he added.

According to Sprayberry, who as one of the county coroners has conducted inquests at many Midland County traffic-accident scenes, "Seatbelts are definitely a very vital source of protection."

"I would be all for (the law)," said Wanda Nix of the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center. "I think anybody in our field would welcome a bill like that."

Ms. Nix said seatbelts help prevent spinal-cord injuries and closed-head injuries, which occur "when a person is thrown from from a vehicle" and often involve paralysis and brain damage.

"A lot of our quadraplegics and paraplegics say, 'If only I'd had my seatbelt on,' " Ms. Nix added.

"People just don't realize the amount of risk in a car," said Hanna.

People think "it always happens to somebody else," said Dees, who added that wearing seatbelts is "a habit which has to be cultivated."

If the two legislators get their way, it's a habit which Dees and his troopers will soon be helping people cultivate.

But Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, noted that the unemployment rate had remained in the range of 7.1 percent to 7.5 percent since May and said the economy was "making no new progress for the 8.4 million people who want work but cannot find it."

Meanwhile, the length of the average workweek for production workers fell 36 minutes to 40.0 hours on a seasonally adjusted basis.

Overall, the unemployment rate was off 0.1 percentage point from January's 7.4 percent, continuing the up-and-down oscillations that have characterized unemployment since mid-1984.

Analysts predict civilian joblessness will drop to 7 percent or even lower this summer, but then edge upward later in the year.

The rate, which reached a post-Depression peak of 10.7 percent in November 1982, dropped to 7.2 percent last June, then headed up again before falling to 7.1 percent in November, the lowest rate since the 1981-82 recession.

Among specific groups, the report showed these unemployment rates for February:

—Adult men, 6.3 percent, unchanged.

—Adult women, 6.7 percent, down from 6.8 percent.

—Teen-agers, 18.4 percent, down from 18.9 percent.

—Whites, 6.2 percent, down from 6.4 percent.

—Blacks, 16.3 percent, up from 14.9 percent.

—Hispanics, 9.7 percent, down from 10.6 percent.

Department analyst Deborah Klein said that the black unemployment rate tends to be volatie. She acknowledged that the rate had been going down in recent months but added, "Whether this reversal will be sustained, it's too early to tell."

As for the white jobless rate, she noted that the calculation had been fluctuating along with the overall rate and said the February decline restored the rate for whites to its December level.

An alternate overall unemployment rate, combining the 115.1 million-member civilian labor force with the roughly 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, fell to 7.2 percent from 7.3 percent.

When unemployment reached its post-Depression peak in November 1982, nearly 12 million people were out of work.

In 27 months of recovery through February, the number of unemployed people has been cut by 3.5 million and the jobless rate has declined 3.4 percentage points.

More than 7 million jobs have been created, two-thirds of them in service industries.

The current economic expansion is somewhat narrowly based, said Joe Carson.

tion with Coca-Cola. He was 94 at the time.

Woodruff's gifts, either from his personal fortune or his family foundations, included $13 million for Atlanta's Central City Park, $4 million toward the state's purchase of Ossabaw Island, and several million in matching funds for three community centers, including the Martin Luther King Jr. Community Center and Park.

His gifts also included $10 million for the Atlanta University Center library, $7.4 million for the Atlanta High Museum of Art building, $8 million for the Atlanta Arts Alliance complex and $10 million for the arts organization's endowment.

The biggest recipient of Woodruff's gifts, however, was Emory University, the school he left after the 1908-1909 academic year despite objections of his parents. Beginning in 1937, Woodruff contributed about $215 million to the university. He said he left because he was bored.

In 1979, he gave the university $105 million in a single donation.

In his last years, Woodruff was almost a recluse, nearly blind and crippled by a stroke, but said to have his wits about him.

Under his stewardship, Coke grew into a worldwide company. Today it is more diverse, with the acquisition of Columbia Pictures Industries taking it into the entertainment field.

Woodruff's boldest move may have been his decision during World War II to make Coke available to all servicemen for 5 cents. The government not only accepted the offer, but paid for the transportation of the soft drink to the troops and of the parts needed to build bottling plants.

During the war, 5 billion bottles of Coke were consumed and 64 bottling plants were built overseas. When the war ended, Woodruff saw millions of servicemen returning home with an abiding thirst for his product.

A keen golfer, Woodruff was co-founder of the Masters tournament, now one of the sport's major championships, and numbered President Dwight D. Eisenhower among his friends.

The Atlanta Arts Alliance honored Woodruff with a 7½-foot bronze statue in 1983. He had one complaint about it, said Goizeuta.

"When I told him about the sculpture, he asked me, 'Am I drinking a Coke?' When I told him no, he said, 'Too bad,' " Goizeuta said.

The Armed Forces Press Committee, which the American-educated Cienfuegos headed, issued a statement saying, "He adds himself to the list of the heroes of our armed forces who have offered their lives for peace.

"The only reason he was assassinated was because he always fought to keep people informed about the criminal activities of the terrorist hordes," it said. "The only weapon he carried was a pen," the statement said.

Cienfuegos, in his 40s, left a wife and two young children.

In other developments in Central American conflicts, a rebel leader said the leftist Nicaraguan government, which his group is trying to overthrow, refused to let him enter Nicaragua, claiming the CIA was plotting his assassination to convince the U.S. Congress to resume funding for the rebels.

The rebel leader, Arturo Cruz, told reporters in San Jose, Costa Rica, that the reasons cited by the Sandinista government for barring him were "ridiculous."

Nicaragua's Ministry of the Interior said the CIA wanted Cruz to be arrested in Managua so it could "unleash an international campaign...to show that the Sandinista dictatorship jails democrats like Mr. Cruz."

If Cruz were not arrested, the CIA was planning to kill him and blame the Sandinista government, the ministry said.

Cruz said he was going to Nicaragua to give bishops a copy of an ultimatum signed by 21 rebel leaders. The document, which had already been sent to the Sandinista government, calls for political reforms and new elections and sets a March 20 deadline for the government to enter negotiations the rebels want supervised by the Episcopal Bishops Conference of Nicaragua.

Rebels have said if no substantial progress in efforts to negotiate a settlement is reached by April 20, the talks should be ended, "terminating the possibility of a peaceful solution to the national crisis."

The Sandinistas came to power in a 1979 coup that overthrew the pro-U.S. Somoza regime.

In his decision, Mansour wrote, "There is no indication (in the court record) that (Smith) intelligently waived the right to counsel guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution."

"The fact that (Smith) pleaded guilty does not necessarily constitute a waiver of his right to counsel...That (Smith) waited 22 years to seek post conviction relief does not constitute a waiver of his rights," Mansour wrote.

"I know what I pled guilty to," Smith said during his hearing. "And I was not guilty." However, he admitted "I was involved" in the crime.

"What we're after now is we want justice to prevail, and we want help for our father, any help he may need to readjust or to be rehabilitated," said another son, John Royston. "And of course we want to surround him with his grandchildren and great-grandchildren and let him enjoy whatever time he has remaining to make up for 22 lost years."

Asked why he had not sought legal assistance before, Smith said at his January hearing that he was in a television and radio repair program while in prison and he wanted to "master it" before he left.

"I am a master of radio and television (now)...I invent, design and manufacture radios and televisions. It is the highest honor a man could have. I have reached my goal," he said.

Bill to give Pentagon own shuttle

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican congressman from Colorado proposes to get the military out of NASA's way by giving the Air Force a space shuttle all its own.

Rep. Ken Kramer introduced a bill Thursday that stipulates that the approximately $2 billion it would cost to build a new space plane come from "reductions in other Department of Defense programs."

He predicted the idea "may initially be resisted by entrenched bureaucracies" but that it would work in the best interests of the taxpayer and national security.

"Right now, NASA is forced to operate what amounts to a Space Trucking Company for DoD (the Department of Defense) in space," he said. "Building a fifth orbiter specifically for DoD would free NASA to get on with what it does best: cutting edge research and development."

The Air Force is scheduled to begin regular flights from its own launch site at Vandenberg Air Force Base in California next January. But the military will be using one of NASA's four shuttles, Discovery.

The space agency had hoped for years to get funds to build a fifth ship to join Columbia, Challenger, Discovery and the not-yet flown Atlantis. But with shrinking commercial business, NASA has dropped the idea and instead wants to build a spare parts inventory to keep current shuttles flying into the 1990s.

Last month, the Air Force and NASA — often at odds — agreed that the military would book one-third of all shuttle cargo space for the next 10 years.

Comic draws big response

CHICAGO (AP) — Spider-Man's disclosure that he was a sexually abused child drew so many "Dear Spider-Man" letters and so much praise that sequels are planned in the fight against child abuse.

Anne Cohn, executive director of the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse, said Thursday that the response to the superhero's disclosure had been "overwhelmingly positive."

In a comic book released last October and in a supplement in eight newspapers Feb. 17, Spider-Man tells how a person he had trusted abused him as a child and urges a young boy with a similar secret to tell his parents.

The comic format is such "an extremely effective tool" in the struggle against child abuse, Ms. Cohn said, that sequels are planned.

"Children will read this comic. They appear to learn from it," she said.

Letters — some written to Spider-Man himself — have come from children and adults, including a professor who said he was abused for 17 years by his father who threatened to kill him if he told anyone.

"When I was a kid, I read a lot of comics," the professor told the committee. "How I wish one of those comics I had read had a story like this one. ... I might have had the bravery to tell others, to tell until someone did believe me."

Since the supplement appeared, Ms. Cohn said, the committee, its local chapters and other agencies have received thousands of calls and letters from people — many offering help, a few seeking it, many praising the supplement.

She noted that the October comic book urged readers needing help to write Spider-Man.

"We get a lot of letters saying: 'Dear Spider-Man, you had a secret. I have a secret. I, too, was sexually abused.'"

Figures show short-term price drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John Block has unveiled figures showing commodity prices would drop for several years under President Reagan's farm bill, but would rise on the strength of renewed exports by 1990.

As the Senate Agriculture Committee kicked off hearings Thursday on the administration's proposed 15-year farm policy, Block noted that the record $63 billion the government spent on farmers in the last four years failed to stabilize farm incomes.

And the farm economy is in its worst shape in decades, Block said.

"I cannot believe that farmers want to continue to receive this kind of income from the government," Block told the committee. "I believe farmers want to get away from government."

Under the administration's proposals to cut price supports, prices received by farmers for all major commodities would drop, and not recover to present levels for three to five years, Block's figures showed.

But he said while other proposals might yield higher short-term farm prices, they would sacrifice farming's long-term health.

Policies that continue heavy government involvement in agriculture "would have this country so screwed up ... that we'll never be able to compete in world trade. Instead of America being the envy of the world, we'll be the laughingstock of the world," Block said.

The farm bill debate, which will consume much of Congress' time in coming months, opens against a backdrop of severe economic hardship for many American farmers, particularly in the Midwestern grain belt. Depressed commodity prices and land values are squeezing out the most debt-ridden producers.

Block predicted that if Congress fails to adopt part of the administration's farm policy, farmers will wind up in even worse shape. Farmers would suffer either because continued farm spending would continue to add to deficits and high interest rates, or because strict production controls would be instituted that would forfeit export markets with high growth potential, he said.

"We can't afford to keep mortgaging agriculture's future for a temporary quick fix," Block told the panel during nearly three hours of testimony. "It is time to face realities, set the proper course and make the transition as smoothly as possible."

But under questioning by committee Democrats, Block conceded that no farm group backs the administration plan and that compromise will be necessary.

Reagan's bill calls for largely divorcing government and farming, whose close links go back to the New Deal programs of the 1930s.

The proposal would drastically cut price supports for major commodities over a period of five years while maintaining a minimal "safety net" of income protection. The underlying theory is that market forces, rather than promised government prices, should determine farmers' production behavior.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., the Agriculture Committee's ranking Democrat, called the administration's approach "well-intended but misguided."

"Those economic theories, if implemented, would destroy the family farm system of agriculture while accruing short-term benefits to interests far removed from the on-farm commodity producer," Zorinsky said.

Zorinsky also disputed Reagan's statement, made Wednesday when he vetoed farm-credit legislation, that only 4 percent of U.S. farmers need immediate financial help.

He cited a string of statistics from Block's department, including the estimate that it would take a 32 percent increase in farm prices to restore all mid-size farms to profitability.

Bomb blasts rock Germany

WORLD

BOCHUM, West Germany (AP) — Three bombs damaged buildings in Bochum, Essen and Hamburg early today some 12 hours after left-wing terrorists bombed a department store in Dortmund, injuring eight people, police said.

An anonymous caller threatened more attacks in a 7 a.m. call to Essen police several hours after the latest explosions, which caused no injuries.

"We are now going farther west. Today it's Essen's turn," police quoted the caller as saying.

The West German government had warned after Thursday's blast that extremists supporting the leftist Red Army Faction may be planning a wave of terror against the public.

The bombs in the neighboring Ruhr district cities of Bochum and Essen both detonated about 2 a.m. at industrial offices, causing property damage but no injuries, police said.

In Bochum, the bomb was slipped through the front door mail slot of the Industrial Union of Mining and Energy. The explosion caused extensive damage to a reception desk telephone switchboard and a computer room, police said.

The bomb in Essen was placed in an electrical switching case near the entrance of a building housing the General Association of German Hard-Coal Mining. Damages were minimal, police said.

In Hamburg, police said a bomb exploded in a large stone flower box behind a building housing shipping offices, damaging nearby buildings.

Windows on the sixth floor of an office building were broken by a fist-sized rock blasted from the flower case, police said.

There was no immediate word on the explosives used in the bombs.

On Thursday, a group calling itself "Action Christian Klar" claimed responsibility in a telephone call for the bombing of the Hertie department store in Dortmund, in the eastern Ruhr district. The caller told a local newspaper, "others will follow."

A Hertie saleswoman and seven customers, including a child, were injured when the bomb blew up under a ground-floor sales counter.

Margot Baader, 51, was hospitalized in serious condition today after doctors amputated one of her legs. An unidentified 21-year-old Indian man who lost a foot also was reported in serious condition.

Klar, an accused leader of the Red Army Faction, is currently on trial in Stuttgart charged with murder in the 1977 killings of three prominent West Germans and other acts of terrorism.

The 32-year-old Klar and about 30 other jailed members of the Red Army Faction staged a seven-week hunger strike in December and January to back demands that they be recognized as prisoners of war.

The Red Army Faction, originally known as the Baader-Meinhof gang, has been waging guerrilla warfare since the late 1960s to overthrow the West German state and expel the U.S. military from Europe.

Authorities said the Red Army Faction and allied groups staged more than 30 bombings and arson attacks on West German, American and French property in West Germany during the hunger strike.

The fast ended after two Red Army Faction terrorists shot and killed West German industrialist Ernst Zimmermann at his home in suburban Munich on Feb. 1, police said. The terrorists — a man and a woman — escaped.

After Thursday's store bombing, the West German Interior Ministry warned that the attack represented a "new dimension and also the final stage of terrorism."

The bombing showed that the terrorists have abandoned their proclaimed political aims, ministry spokesman Wighard Haerdtl said in Bonn.

"Now they have performed sheer terror directly against the whole population," Haerdtl said.

U.N. Irish troops come under fire

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — Irish peacekeeping troops of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon came under mortar and machine-gun fire from Israeli-backed militiamen who themselves were under attack, UNIFIL spokesman Timur Goksel said today.

Goksel said no Irish casualties resulted from the Thursday night shooting in the village of Yater, nine miles southeast of this port city in south Lebanon.

He said that two positions of the South Lebanon Army militia at the Yater road junction were attacked with small arms from two directions, presumably by anti-Israeli guerrillas, and members of the South Lebanon Army fired back with small mortars and machine guns in all directions.

He said much of the return fire hit Irish positions of the nine-nation U.N. force, a 5,600-member peacekeeping force which has patrolled south Lebanon since 1978.

U.N. sources said another position of the South Lebanon Army, whose militia is trained and paid by Israel, was attacked with two grenades and rifle fire Thursday night near the market town of Nabatiyeh, but there were no casualty reports. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

They said an Israeli army position was attacked today near the village of Deir Qanoun al-Nahr, seven miles northeast of Tyre, but they had no details.

In Jerusalem today, Israel's deputy prime minister, David Levy, warned that Lebanon would be headed for self-destruction if there were any more clashes between the Lebanese army and the Israeli army.

Levy spoke in an interview with Israel Radio after attending the funeral of an Israeli soldier killed Thursday in a two-hour fight between the two armies near the village of Kawthariet Assayad in south Lebanon.The radio said Levy called the encounter "an act of treachery."

Israeli officials blamed the battle on what they said was Lebanon's refusal to coordinate with the Israeli pullback in south Lebanon.

A Lebanese army communique said the fight started when Israeli troops advanced beyond their front line under a screen of tank cannon fire.

Israel completed the first phase of a scheduled three-part withdrawal on Feb. 16 and preparations for the second stage are under way.

Israel invaded Lebanon on June 6, 1982, to uproot Palestinian guerrilla bases in south Lebanon.

In Maarake, the main stronghold of anti-Israeli guerrillas east of Tyre, residents said that Israeli troops banned car traffic into and out of the village.

Approve bill

In 1981 the Legislature approved an experimental bill that legalized court-ordered wiretaps in drug cases. It was part of a now-infamous war on drugs package enacted that year. Now the law enforcement tool is headed toward extinction in September if legislators do not approve a measure designed to make the earlier legislation permanent.

They should do that, of course. Here's why: Court-ordered wiretapping has proven itself effective in the netherworld of organized criminal activity, of which drug trafficking is a major part. In fact, since the 1981 legalization of wiretapping there have been 164 arrests which led to 56 convictions, according to Department of Public Safety officials.

Furthermore, as a result of the wiretaps officers have confiscated $12.7 million worth of illicit drugs, 86 firearms, $140,000 cash and 49 vehicles.

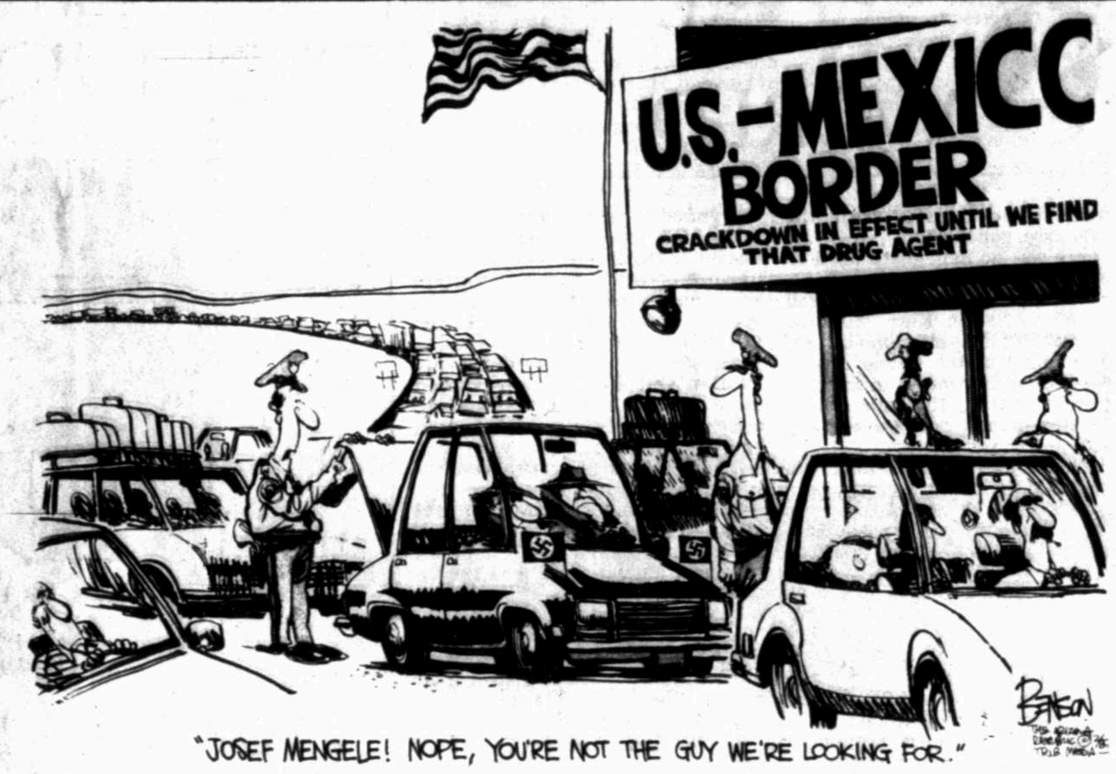

Those statistics are ample evidence that court-ordered wiretapping is making a big dent in drug trafficking. That, of course, makes city streets a little safer for children and others who can become victims of the drug traffickers.

When the original bill was enacted it was staunchly opposed by civil rights advocates who said they viewed it as an invasion of privacy. Perhaps it is an invasion of privacy in one regard, but identifying drug traffickers isn't an easy job. The wiretapping tool merely makes it a little easier.

What's more, the state representative whose bill is now before the Legislature, Terral Smith of Austin, says there have been no complaints about the system in the past four years. "Everything we have heard has been complimentary," he said.

That's a remarkable achievement for a law enforcement tool in which the opportunity for abuse is definitely present. The fact the wiretapping procedure hasn't resulted in a legal backlash from defendants speaks highly of the fine men and women who've been involved in the operation.

Despite the objections, which by now should have been seriously considered, this tool has established a proven track record and apparently has caused no erosion of civil rights. It should be approved. It's needed.

"JOSEF MENGELE! NOPE, YOU'RE NOT THE GUY WE'RE LOOKING FOR."

CHARLEY REESE

World starts over frequently

It's a fact the universe contains everything we need to live reasonably happy and prosperous lives. History is the story of people shooting themselves in the feet.

Charley Reese

Since human behavior causes most of our problems, save for occasional natural disasters, and since human thinking is what produces human behavior, it follows that our greatest potential enemy is located between our ears.

Before we pass too harsh a judgment on the human race let's take note of a very important but seldom thought about fact. The human race has to start over with each generation.

All girl and boy babies are Adam and Eve. They arrive not only naked but blank. They don't know if they are male or female, white or black, Jew or Gentile, American or Tibetan, communist or capitalist. They don't even know what any of those things are.

The significance of that is that humans have the ability to both progress and regress. The human body cannot go backwards to an earlier time, but human behavior can and frequently does. Knowledge can be lost as well as gained, ignored or utilized. Nor is it ever evenly distributed.

We like to say that we know how to put a man on the moon, but in fact only a few people in one or two countries know how to put a man on the moon. Eliminate a relatively small number of people and burn a few records and the moon could become as inaccessible as it ever was.

Moreover many newspapers in the same country which put men on the moon carry as one of their most popular features an astrology column. Some people today know how to put a man on the moon. Others think the world is flat; some buy love potions, paint their faces, pay good money to hear rock bands, dope their brains, refuse to walk under ladders, believe in witches and demons, and so forth.

What most people think of as progress is really an illusion fostered by the accumulation and preservation — so far — of knowledge in one narrow field, engineering.

Present generations always like to think of themselves as the vanguard of all the generations prior to them, but that, too, is an illusion. In fact, every generation learns everything and does everything for the first time. That's why, even though we benefit from an accumulation of technical data, we are no wiser than any other generation and in the case of some generations are decidedly less so.

Neither Genghis Khan nor Julius Caesar would have made the stupid mistakes the British and French generals made in World War I as they expended several million lives before it dawned on them that the machine gun had made massed infantry charges across open ground an obsolete tactic.

I used to think, as someone else said, that history repeats itself because people do not learn history. In fact, history frequently repeats itself because the world is, so to speak, begun over again every 30 years.

Parents know this even if philosophers don't. Every parent knows how impossible it is to transfer his accumulated knowledge and experiences to his children who obstinately insist on learning from their own experiences.

The world starting over every 30 years is a rather startling thought with a lot of interesting implications. For example, the new Soviet leader will be the Soviet leader for the very first time in his life. Everything he does will be a learning experience.

Ah well, it's at least comforting to think we're so stupid after only 30 years rather than being so stupid after 8,000 years of experience.

JACK ANDERSON

Reagan fond of secrecy stamp

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is using the rubber stamp of secrecy with reckless disregard for the American public's right to know.

Jack Anderson

I've sounded this theme before, but this time I'm going to let you in on a little secret about many of these classified documents: Quite frankly, they are often classified not so much for what is in them, as for what isn't.

Take, for example, a Central Intelligence Agency report I saw — classified higher than "Top Secret" — on "Unidentified Research and Development Facility No. 3." This confessed that all the CIA's satellites and all the CIA's men hadn't been able to solve the puzzle of a building located at a Soviet nuclear test site. Its purpose remained unknown for nearly a decade, even though it had been under construction for almost that long.

The same is true of several top-secret CIA briefings for President Reagan on Soviet leaders — they must have been classified to hide our ignorance.

The CIA had no idea whether Yuri Andropov had a wife and, if he did, whether she was his first or second. Her presence at his funeral finally enabled the CIA's dogged agents to solve this puzzle. Konstantin Chernenko's wife was also kind enough to show up for the same event, setting another intelligence gap.

Hiding the limitations of U.S. intelligence may be justifiable at the "Top Secret" level, but there is no excuse at the lower "Secret" level. If the Soviets snatched a secret document and found out the CIA hadn't learned about an "X" missile system, or the peccadillos of a "Y" Politburo member or the cost of a new "Z" agricultural plan, they would reckon the information was simply held under tighter security.

So ignorance classified at the "Secret" level is more likely intended to protect the intelligence analysts who wrote the report and don't want to advertise their lack of special insight.

My associates Donald Goldberg and Dale Van Atta have come across a classic example of this in a 1982 Air Force study. Commissioned by former Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Lew Allen, the study — called "Air Force 2000" — apparently was supposed to determine "the operational environment which will confront the Air Force at the turn of the century."

The executive summary my associates obtained is classified "Secret-No Forn-WNINTEL." By legal definition, "Secret" means that the disclosure of this document would cause "serious" damage to our national security. "No Forn" is short for "No Foreign Dissemination," meaning the document may not be shared with a foreign country, not even those such as Great Britain with whom we routinely share intelligence. "WNINTEL" stands for "Warning Notice: Sensitive Intelligence Sources and Methods Involved."

All that classified embroidery points to the idea that this is one hot document. So my associates dutifully compared the secret version against the public one to find out just what the classification stamp was used for.

Their conclusion is that the secret document is simply crystal-ball gazing and has no business being classified, other than to hide the absence of omniscience evidenced by the Air Force's top planners.

Out of the total of 94 paragraphs in the secret report, only seven were classified. Even these seven secret paragraphs contained nothing particularly sensitive — for instance, the notion that "The U.S. and U.S.S.R. will remain ideologically and politically opposed," or the prediction that "the perception of warfare as a legitimate means of settling international disputes will gain greater acceptance."

Page 5 of this secret summary features a chart, separately classified "Secret," of 11 "possible" nations which will join the six-nation "nuclear club" by the year 2000. Never mind that I reported these 11 publicly three years before the Air Force report — in 1979.

ATTENTION-GETTER: A length of 2-by-4 is the recommended method for catching a mule's attention. Rep. Clarence Miller, R-Ohio, tried a subtler method to pique his colleagues' interest in a subject dear to his constituents' hearts, but probably of faint interest elsewhere. He was hoping to win support for federal aid to the long-suffering ferroalloy industry.

Miller's solution to this potential eye-glazer was to write a "Dear Colleague" letter in the form of a quiz. "What is a ferroalloy?" he asked, and supplied five possible answers:

— "Something your mother told you never to mention in public."

— "The latest sports car model to come out of Detroit."

— "A new starlet on the 'Dallas' series."

— "A fear of 'Dear Colleague' letters."

— "None of the above."

House members whose curiosity was aroused presumably consulted their dictionaries and learned that ferroalloys are the various combinations of iron and other metals that can be used to make steel.

DABBLING IN THE DESERT: Looking for some hot property — really hot? Call a Saudi Arabian princess. A State Department report discloses that real estate is becoming a hobby among well-born Saudi women. "Royal princesses with nothing else to do often buy and sell real estate holdings as a sort of pastime," it states.

Grocery-bag wars

Anything, it seems, is worth fighting about when there's money to be made. How else to explain the public-relations war being waged between the plastics and paper industries over the best kind of grocery bag to use? If you've been to the supermarket lately, you know what we're talking about. Alongside those tried, trusty and true brown paper bags that Americans have relied on and treasured since 1883 you'll see a lump of limp, shapeless, non-biodegradable plastic containers that the plastics lobby would try to convince you is the way to go.

Their argument is that plastic bags are more easily portable — at least for those who go to the store on foot — because they have handles, that they don't leak all over the place when something wet gets loose, and that they can just as easily be used as garbage containers as the paper variety. They are also cheaper for the supermarket, at about 2.6 cents apiece, compared with 4.4 cents for paper bags, and they require less storage space.

The obvious response to this propaganda barrage is that paper bags stand on their own, so to speak, in your trunk, are biodegradable, make a better waste container, can be cut up and used to wrap books or make Halloween masks, and — here's the telling punch — are actually cheaper overall because supermarket checkers can pack them 18 percent faster than the plastic.

It shouldn't come as any surprise that these opposing claims come from the respective industries struggling to win the hearts, minds and bulk orders of supermarket chains around the country. But what about the poor consumer? Surveys have been conducted, of course, and it turns out, not too surprisingly, that those who live alone in city apartments — typically, singles, old people and just about anyone who lives in the middle of Manhattan or San Francisco — prefer plastic. The rest of us — "suburbanites," the pro-plastic folks disparagingly call us — are quite happy with our brown paper bags, thank you, and we're still a majority.

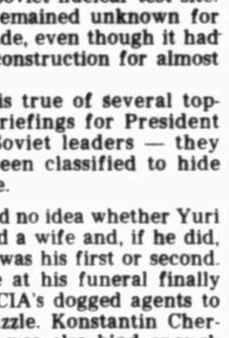

We took our own poll, of course, at a meeting among colleagues. A summary of the spirited debate that took place would be unprintable, but the result was a resounding victory for the paper-baggers, which may account for the somewhat biased tone of this editorial. This is a war for the survival of a way of life, after all, and we're taking no prisoners. At least on paper.

Freedom effort collapsing

WASHINGTON — Instead of rallying Congress to the Nicaraguan freedom fighters, President Reagan's sulphureous rhetoric for the contras has set the scene for his administration's defeat and a reversal in the rising tide of American world prestige the past four years.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Reaganite hard-liners in both the administration and Congress are desperately looking for some way to turn the tide and persuade the Senate and House to restore $14 million of "covert" CIA aid to the freedom fighters. But like liberals and other anti-contra forces, the Reaganites see small prospect of victory when the president calls for the vote (probably not for several weeks).

That has caused consternation among Reagan's best friends. They are growing critical of Secretary of State George Shultz, whose strong language supporting the freedom fighters contrasts strangely with his diplomatic approaches to the Sandinista regime.

These Reaganites foresee major political repercussions throughout the hemisphere: reinforcement of Sandinista rule in Nicaragua, intimidation of Costa Rica and Honduras, confirmation of Fidel Castro's communist power in the Western Hemisphere, loss of U.S. credibility marking the end of a period of relative dynamism in American foreign policy in the East-West struggle.

No matter how displeasing this prospect for their nation may be to liberal Democrats, their concern is not sufficient for them to support the embarrassingly exposed CIA "covert" war against the Sandinistas. Nor will liberals countenance any switch to private financial aid for the contras or any effort to get help from Israel or other third countries.

After rejecting CIA covert aid, say Democratic leaders, Congress will not turn around and approve some other concealed method of financing the contras. That rules out giving them special financial aid as "political refugees."

A less predictable reaction is building among Republican conservatives. They know that if the Sandinistas triumphantly consolidate their power because of the failure of four years of major effort by the Reagan administration, every Latin American country — Mexico included — may soon find itself up against the cutting edge of communist power.

They see in Nicaragua a reversal of what the president described in his trenchant Feb. 16 radio address: a "move against communism and toward freedom ... is sweeping the world." Whether or not a Sandinista triumph over Ronald Reagan could be blamed on Congress, the march of international events would seem reversed.

Such concerns were unveiled in a private luncheon talk here this week to foreign policy hard-liners by Malcolm Wallop, one of the Republican senators best informed on foreign policy. Wallop noted that Sen. Gordon Humphrey had asked Shultz at a recent Armed Services Committee hearing to explain how the U.S. could possibly negotiate any "mutually advantageous agreement" with a Soviet government "whose behavior is indistinguishable from that of Nazi Germany."

Wallop said that Shultz refused to take the question seriously. Merely by asking the question, said Wallop, "Humphrey broke a rule much valued by people like George Shultz — never translate your words into action."

Such hard-liners believe an unfavorable vote by Congress should be followed up by Shultz with action along the lines of his Feb. 22 speech in San Francisco. Shultz said then that if Congress refused to restore the CIA aid, it would have the effect of "consigning Nicaragua to the endless darkness of communist tyranny" and lead the U.S. "down a path of greater danger."

But what is Shultz's plan to avert that catastrophe if CIA funding is denied by Congress? If such a plan exists, it is one of the few secrets left in government. In its absence, the administration appears to be moving headlong down a road that ends in humiliation and defeat for Ronald Reagan, George Shultz and the United States.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, March 8, the 67th day of 1985. There are 298 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 8, 1965, the United States landed about 3,500 Marines in South Vietnam.

In 1874, the 13th president of the United States, Millard Fillmore, died in Buffalo, N.Y.

In 1894, New York state enacted the first dog-licensing law in the nation.

In 1917, the first of two Russian Revolutions began with rioting and strikes in St. Petersburg.

Also in 1917, the U.S. Senate voted to limit filibusters by adopting the cloture rule.

In 1930, the 27th president of the United States, William Howard Taft, died in Washington.

In 1942, the Japanese captured Rangoon, Burma during World War II.

Ten years ago: Speaking to a Republican leadership conference in Washington, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan criticized President Gerald R. Ford's plea the day before to broaden the base of the GOP, saying a political party "cannot be all things to all people."

Five years ago: In Iran, a plan to transfer control of the U.S. hostages to the Revolutionary Council fell apart when the militants balked at yielding the captives.

One year ago: A Senate committee agreed to delay the vote on Edwin Meese's nomination as Attorney General.

Today's birthdays: Retired Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., is 83. Actress Claire Trevor is 76. Actress-dancer Cyd Charisse is 64. Actress Sue Ane Langdon is 49. Singer Charley Pride is 47. Former baseball player Jim Bouton is 46. Actress Lynn Redgrave is 42. Actress Susan Clark is 41. Actor Mickey Dolenz is 40. Lyricist Carole Bayer Sager is 39. Actress Jaime Lyn Bauer is 36. Baseball player Jim Rice is 32.

Thought for today: "Because things are the way they are, things will not stay the way they are." — Bertholt Brecht, German poet and dramatist (1898-1956).

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Crane, Reagan, Glasscock, Howard, Martin, Borden and Dawson: Tonight cloudy with lows near 50. Variable wind 5 to 10 mph. Saturday mostly cloudy with highs upper 70s. Southeast and south wind 5 to 15 mph.

Andrews and Gaines: Tonight partly cloudy with lows mid 40s. Southeast wind 5 to 10 mph. Saturday partly cloudy with highs lower 70s. South wind 10 to 20 mph.

Temperatures expected to reach 70s

From Staff and Wire Reports

Getting the yard back in shape may be on the agenda for some Midlanders Saturday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport expects temperatures in the upper 70s to warm the area.

Tonight will be cloudy with lows near 50, becoming mostly cloudy Saturday. Variable winds at five to 10 mph tonight will increase from the south to southeast at less than 15 mph Saturday.

Thursday's high of 76 was 13 degrees below the record set in 1972. This morning's low was 35 degrees above the 1932 record.

STATE

Dense fog covered much of South Texas early today, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a travelers advisory for the coastal plains where visibility was reduced to near zero in some areas.

Hazardous driving conditions were reported across a wide area of South Texas.

The fog was produced by the combination of high pressure over the eastern half of the country and a trough of low presure over West Texas. The systems combined to pump gulf moisture into Texas, producing the fog and a cover of low clouds for the eastern two-thirds of the state. Skies were partly cloudy over the Panhandle and Trans Pecos area.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the low to mid 60s over most of the state. There were some readings in the 40s west of the Pecos and across the Panhandle. Extremes ranged from 41 at El Paso to 69 at Brownsville.

Forecasts called for dense fog to continue over the coastal plains during most of the morning. It was to be partly cloudy to cloudy statewide. Highs were to be mostly in the 70s, ranging from the upper 60s over the Panhandle to the upper 80s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

NATION

Snow, sleet and freezing rain spread from New England into Pennsylvania today and rain pushed from the mid-Atlantic states into the nation's midsection and across the Plains.

Snow was falling across much of eastern New York and parts of New England. A mixture of snow, sleet and freezing rain was falling over parts of southern New England, southern New York and eastern Pennsylvania.

Snook streak ends

Lamesa reaches 4A semis

AUSTIN (AP) - Larue LaPoynor, led by Kerry Pettie's 24 points, upset Snook 60-52 Thursday in the Class A state basketball semifinals, ending Snook's string of seven straight state titles.

LaPoynor, 30-6, will meet Nazareth, a 44-42 winner over Munday, in Saturday's title game.

In Class 3A semifinals Thursday, Brownsboro erased a 20-point deficit to beat Seminole 63-56, and Sweeny beat Ingleside, 58-48.

Bay City and Lamesa earned berths in the Class 4A state championship game. Bay City advanced by blasting Seagoville 89-64 Thursday night, and Lamesa followed with a come-from-behind 67-64 triumph over New Braunfels.

Sophomore LaBradford Smith was 12 of 12 from the field and 5 of 5 from the free throw line for Bay City. Hart Lee Dykes added 18 points for the winners despite sitting out much of the second half with four fouls. John Tenison hit 12 of 21 for Seagoville for 31 points.

Bay City is now 34-1, and Seagoville bowed out with a 20-12 record.

Brothers Jerry and Chris Mason led Lamesa, which had to overcome an eight-point halftime deficit. Jerry scored 24 points and Chris 20, and each pulled down 10 rebounds. Tilo Schmidt led New Braunfels with 22 points.

Lamesa raised its record to 28-5, while New Braunfels ended its season at 19-13.

The Seminole-Brownsboro 3A game looked like a rout when Seminole built a 27-7 lead with 3:08 to go in the first half.

But the Bears came back, outscoring the Indians 45-27 in the second half.

Seminole finished with 30 turnovers. Brownsboro had 24.

Terry Bailey led Seminole, 30-3, with 20 points. Jonathan Bell added 19. Bryan Bragg and Ricky Banks each had 16 for Brownsboro, 30-4.

Sweeny's 58-48 win over Ingleside was keyed by Donald Lemon's 19 points and six rebounds. Chuck Wiginton led Ingleside, 29-4, with 24 points.

The Snook loss ended the Bluejays hopes of setting a national record of eight straight state baketball championships.

"It doesn't shock me," said Snook Coach Donnie Victorick."But it hurts. It hurts tremendously."

Snook started in its usual slow-moving offense, but the Flyers, keyed by Pettie, forced a quicker tempo. Pettie's steal and lay-up with 3:51 to go in the first quarter gave LaPoynor a lead it never surrendered.

Snook wound up with 13 turnovers that LaPoynor turned into 10 points. The winners turned it over only seven times.

Pettie, a 6-3 senior, repeatedly challenged Snook's 6-8 sophomore center Walter Martin, who finished with 20 points and nine rebounds. Pettie punctuated the win with a running, one-handed dunk over Martin with 4:27 to go in the game. Martin fouled Pettie, who added the free throw.

Snook, 33-6, tried to foul its way back into the game, but LaPoynor hit 18 of 26 free throws. Curtis Steger hit 10 of 10 from the line for the Flyers from East Texas.

Chaps play AC tonight

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

SNYDER—The 75-60 score that Midland College piled up against Cisco Junior College here Thursday night in the first round of the Region V playoff tournament looked sound enough on paper, but Chaparral Coach Jerry Stone wasn't too pleased with what he saw.

"If we play like this against Amarillo Friday, we'll get beat," Stone assessed after the victory.

"It wasn't pretty, but I guess you can still say we're undefeated in the tournament. But that's about all you can say."

The Chaps did look somewhat sluggish throughout the contest and never did get its impressive offensive attack in high gear. MC seemed to score when it had to and when that didn't work, they just pushed the Wranglers around with sheer physical ability.

"There were several key factors in this game," said Stone. "First, Cisco is a pretty good team and a week's layoff doesn't help at this time of the year. Also, Cisco played both Saturday and Monday to get in this tournament, so they have been playing."

EVEN WITH all the dire talk coming from the Chap dressing room, MC took an 8-6 lead with 15:35 left in the first half on a basket by Teviin Binns and never trailed again. Cisco did tie the score at 20 later in the first half, but MC put on another spurt and led 38-31 at the half. Cisco never got closer.

Cisco coach Dan Montgomery saw things a little differently than Stone, saying, "Midland just beat us up physically. There are not many teams that can brutalize you the way they do. Those two big guys (Eddie Frazier and Tony Wright) are really physcial. Binns isn't that physical, but those other two make up for it. I think they were the difference. Defense was the difference.

"Midland just shut down our big man (Melvin Jones). He scored only 12 points from the field and hit only 7 of 12 from the line. Shoot, he's an 80 per cent free throw shooter."

Cisco was led by Lloyd McArthur's game-high 20 points while Jones had 19. The Chaps never did find the hot gun, but used five players in double figures to keep things in hand.

FRAZIER had a college high of 14 points while Binns, Zeak Williams and Ricky Grace all had 12. Vernon Coleman rounded out the attack with 11 points.

In what may have been the quote of the week, Frazier said after the game, "That's not my high game. I had 13 before this season." After realizing his mistake, he noted, "I guess this is my high. I felt good coming into this tournament and I'm shooting to make the all-tournament team."

Frazier hit 6 of 10 from the field and had a game high nine rebounds.

The Chaps, now 26-4 on the year, advance to today's 9 p.m. semifinal matchup with Amarillo College, a 75-63 winner over Grayson County in another first round game. Andrew Kennedy, a 6-7 sophomore, led the AC attack with 24 points. "It's us against them again" said Stone. "This will be the fourth time we've played them and we've won the last two. You see ball control and aggressive screens when you play Amarillo."

Today's other semifinal at 7 p.m. will pit Odessa College against McLennan. OC defeated Texas State Technological Institute of Waco by a deceiving 90-78 margin, a game that threw the tournament off schedule with three overtimes. By the time the Midland College game was over, Stone was thanking OC, saying, "Now the trick is to see if we can get home before the sun comes up."

McLennan defeated New Mexico Junior College by 96-93 after leading by as many as 23 points.

REGION V Notes—Midland received some bad news Thursday night when it was announced that the Region V tournament would be returned to Snyder again in 1986...One insider, who was at the meeting where the decision was made, said, "It's the first time I've ever been in a meeting like that where money didn't win out. Midland offered the most money, but they don't have girls basketball and they don't support the girls over there."

Stone said, "They don't like us to host the event because they think it gives us a big advantage, but we've only won the region title once when it was held in Midland. Western Texas has won more titles in Midland than we have."

Odessa College's unbeaten and No. 1 ranked women's team won the Region V title Thursday night with a 56-55 win over Western Texas.It took a three-point play in the last five seconds to turn the trick. OC will carry a 34-0 mark to the national tournament.

The OC men ranked No. 13 in the nation, had their hands full against TSTI. One Amarillo College official said, "We had TSTI in our tournament early in th e year and they looked like garbage." And, in a way, TSTI is left over garbage. TSTI doesn't have any scholarships to offer its players. After defeating TSTI, OC's Mark Benoit said, "It looks like another championship game between the twin cities." Wonder if he forget McLennan was in the way.

BOB BRUNDAGE

Tops among all-time losers...

In the world of sports there are winners and there are losers. It's the most basic concept in athletics. Somebody's going to walk away with the victory and you never know who, uh, most of the time.

There are a few notable exceptions to this rule:

—When Charlie Brown is on the mound, the Peanuts gang can't win a baseball game...

—On ABC's Wide World of Sports, there's this guy who, week after week, comes flying down a ski jump, falls near the bottom, crashes onto the roof of a building and finally ends up in a crumpled heap on the snow-covered ground...

—There are the Washington Generals, a basketball team that probably holds the record for the world's longest losing streak. The Generals haven't won a game since Jan. 5, 1971. However, they nearly always play before — if not a packed house — then a good-sized crowd.

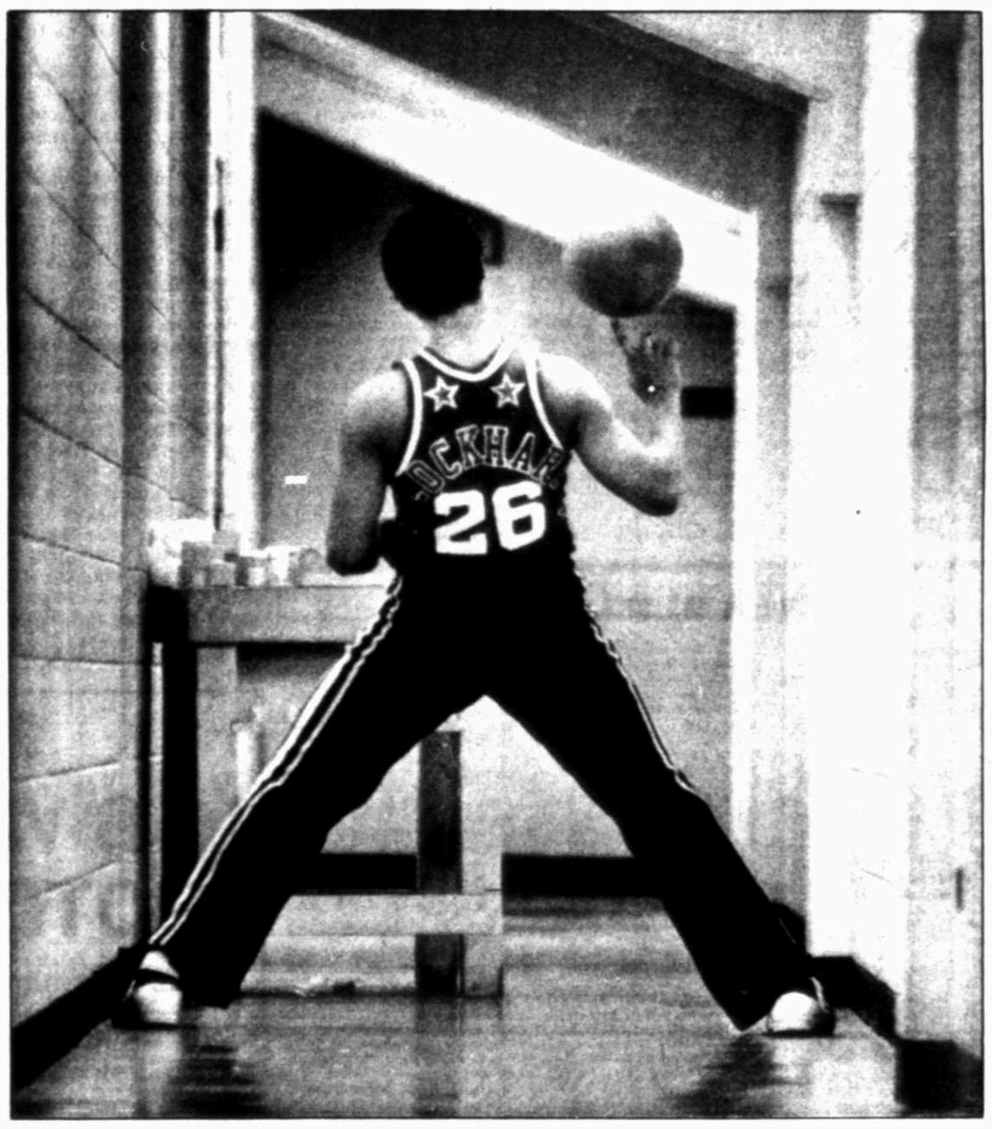

Thursday night at Midland's Chaparral Center was no exception. The Generals lost, 90-78 and there were 2,809 fans on hand to watch that losing streak continue.

Even from that size crowd, the Generals don't get much notice. They are the other guys, the perennial losers, the straight men for the Tommy Smothers', the Dick Martins',the Jerry Lewis'...of the world.

They are the Rodney Dangerfields of sports. They receive some polite applause when introduced before the start of the game but fade from the picture the moment the comedians appear.

The comedians, of course, are the Harlem Globetrotters, the "Kings of Basketball Comedy" and they are led by the "Clown Prince of Basketball," Hubert "Geese" Ausbie.

From opening tipoff to final buzzer, the Globetrotters run circles around the Generals. The Trotters dribble the ball between their own legs and through those of the Generals. The ball is passed just beyond the outstretched arms of the Generals in the same "Magic Circle" the Globetrotters run in the pre-game warmup to the music of "Sweet Georgia Brown."

Kent Porter Reporter-Telegram

Trotters' Osborne Lockhart warms up in Chap tunnel before going on.

MOST OF the comedy routines the Globetrotters use have been around for years but are still appreciated by the crowds. Not only are they still funny, but they also show the result of a lot of practice put in to get the timing down pat. They may not always hit the shot, but they make it look like they could.

It's not just the Globetrotters, but the Generals and the referees who have been well trained. They always seem to be where they're needed — or not needed — to make the Globetrotter plays work.

And, for all their efforts, the Generals are still ignored. While fans are surrounding the Globetrotters after the game — trying to catch autographs — the Generals leave unnoticed. It's part of what they're paid for.

But, even so, a little nod of thanks would be appreciated. The show couldn't go on without them.

Baseball's exhibition season opens Friday with three games, including the spring training debut of the defending World Series champion Detroit Tigers.

The Tigers, who beat the San Diego Padres in five games in the 1984 World Series, play host to the Boston Red Sox at Lakeland, Fla., in a game that begins at 1:30 p.m. EST.

Right-hander Jack Morris, 19-11 last year including a no-hitter against the Chicago White Sox, will start for Detroit, and left-hander Bobby Ojeda, 12-12, will start for the Red Sox. Neither pitcher is expected to work more than three innings.

The other games have the New York Yankees versus Houston at the Astros' new spring training site in Kissimmee, Fla., and the Kansas City Royals versus the Chicago White Sox at Sarasota, Fla.

The White Sox played an exhibition game Thursday, beating the University of South Florida 13-0 at Sarasota. Luis Salazar went 3-for-3 and drove in two runs for the White Sox.

TED BATTLES

Say it isn't so, Rand McNally

Maybe I shouldn't criticize the AP football and basketball rankings any more, not after seeing the best-places-to-live ratings. There it was in eye-catching headlines...Pittsburgh the best place to live, old smokey city itself, No. 1 in all of the U.S.A.?

That's what the Rand McNally people said in yardsticking the nation's most attractive places to live based on urban attractiveness and quality of life. I suppose sports is billeted in there somewhere.

It sounds like a preposterous joke. Well, the whole thing reads like a joke. And that isn't just because of what the Steelers used to do to the Cowboys in the Super Bowl.

Scanning the top 20, one suspects the map people might have inverted the list.

Of the top 20, the only place worthy of a second glance is No. 18 Burlington, Vt., and you can't find a decent bakery there any more.

Boston is No. 2, fine, but what can you do in Fenway Park in the winter. Where's the Cape when you need it?

And as for No. 3, Raleigh-Durham, if I were going to live anywhere in North Carolina, it would be Asheville (No. 36).

From there, the list has San Francisco No. 4. I guess a Super Bowl championship will do that for a city, but don't get sick there. Dallas is an example of what will happen when you don't even make the playoffs. The Cowboys, er Big D, skidded all the way to No. 12.

Knoxville ranks No. 14, but all I can remember is the gagging summertime stench from the river on the last visit and the fact that it hasn't had a football team since General Neyland retired.

THE 329 cities are rated, broadly, on such things as quality of education, transportation, housing and health care.

Pittsburgh No. 1, even without the Waner boys, Forbes Field, Kiner, Terry Bradshaw, Franco Harris? Even Pittsburgh fans won't go to that new place down on the Golden Triangle. The Pirates may be the Pelicans or Mountain Climbers in a year or two.

New York City is 25th, rather high for a city whose professional athletic teams find the swamps of New Jersey more attractive than Broadway.

An idea of what kind of a list this is, Oakland (the west coast Newark)is No. 68 and Newark No. 73...but if you haven't been to Newark, maybe you wouldn't appreciate the irony. Even the Bears left.

But the real rub is Midland. It slipped from 111th to 257th. That's Midland, Texas, home.

Not upset. Listen, we rate below Amarillo (114), Lubbock (133), Houston (75), Cleveland (31), Altoona (209), Johnstown (206), Beaumont-Port Arthur (243) and Anchorage (242). Admittedly, Altoona has its Horseshoe Curve and they're still cleaning up after the flood and that hockey movie in Johnstown, but higher than Midland....

I THINK Midland's ranking was a matter of confusion. They gave our 111 niche to West Palm Beach-Boca Raton-Del Ray Beach. It's easy to do since both are polo hotbeds.

Still, Midland No. 257, under any circumstances, is unacceptable. It just isn't so. In listing the 10 best and 10 worst in such categories as transportation, housing costs, crime, climate, education, economics, recreation, arts, the main rap against Midland is in the area of health care and environment. Seems Midland ranks No. 3 on the worst list.

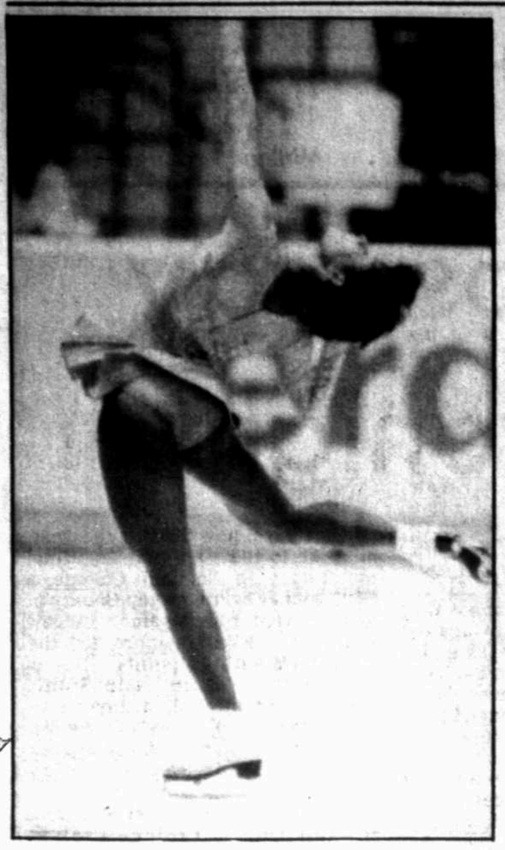

It's the environment that is disturbing. Even a No. 1 ranking on the best list in Economics can't overcome the environment. And what do they mean by environment? Our weather is better than most of the cities listed ahead of us. Granted this winter has been more worthy of Juneau than West Texas, but that was after the list had been compiled.

And maybe you can't drive into the Sangre de Cristos, Blue Ridge or San Juans a few miles out of town, but if you drive along the Monongahela out of Pittsburgh, the sludge hills and decaying steel mills of Donora won't brighten up anyone's day.

Our baseball field is natural grass and one of the best surfaces in the country. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Minnesota, Philadelphia can't make that claim.

MC women win match on coast

From Staff Reports

SAN DIEGO — As Midland College tennis coach Joe Williams expected, his Lady Chaparrals did not play the United States International University women Thursday.

"I couldn't give you a name for the team we did play," said Williams of the pick-up match his women played instead of USIU. "We did play a match and we won it. What the team was made up of was two world ranked players and four other strong players in this area."

According to Williams, USIU's women didn't want to play Midland College Thursday becaue they just came back from a 17-day road trip and were tired.

Instead, the USIU coach put together the pick-up match which did, at least, feature two calibre players: Ha Nu, the Chinese defector who is currently ranked 200th among the world's professionals and Romanian Lucia Romono, the 125th ranked women's pro.

Nu and Romono both took victories in singles and teammed up in doubles for an easy win. The two pros defeated MC's Helen Lebeller-Sarah Swan, 6-0, 6-2. In singles, Nu was a 6-1, 6-1 winner over Lebeller while Romono defeated a troublesome Kim Gidley, 7-5, 6-3.

"Gidley had Romono talking to herself and slamming balls around," said Williams.

About Lebeller's match, Williams said, "It was good experience for Helen. The score looks bad but it was a case where she lost a lot of close games."

The rest of the Midland College women, singles and doubles, took out their opponents in the 6-3 team victory.

"We got some pretty valuable competition really from only two positions," said Williams.

TODAY, the MC women may find themselves playing another match, but Williams doesn't expect it to be against the USIU team.

"USIU is supposed to play Western Michigan Friday but we may end up playing Western Michigan instead.

The MC men's team, which was off Thursday, will definitely be playing USIU.

Following are the results of Thursday's matches with MC players listed first.

Running back always fans' favorite

The running back has always been a big part of the mystique of football. Red Grange practically made the game, college and pro. If he didn't, the Four Horsemen did.

When the songwriters wrote, "You Gotta Be a Football Hero," they meant left halfback. Betty Coed had lips of red for the ball carrier.

Grantland Rice rhapsodized about these romantic figures, made folklore out of them. The Galloping Ghost. Mr. Outside. Crowds came to see them dash perpetually out of reach of the troglodytes in the line, like characters out of Tom and Jerry cartoons. Everybody rooted for them. They were like the lone ace in the skies over no man's land in World War I, the hero on the white horse getting away from the bad guys in the Saturday serials.

The Heisman Trophyist is a running back. It's the glamour role in the game, the football equivalent of the guy who gets the girl, the money, the gold watch and everything.

But does he win games? Not lately he doesn't.

ASK ANY of pro football's defensive linemen, the highest practitioners of the art, and they will tell you the runner is the least of their nightmares. It's not the guy who tucks the ball under his arm that keeps them awake nights, it's that little guy who goes scrambling around back there with his arm cocked, the football held high, and his eyes firmly fixed downfield for the waiting receiver that makes their calves ache, their ankles turn, their mouths dry and their Achilles tendons snap.

"We'll never get beat by the run," the great Deacon Jones said one night, just after he had gone through four quarters of lung-bursting pursuit of Frantic Fran Tarkenton, the quarterback who was to defensive linemen what the flood was to Johnstown.

Still, legends die hard. It's been years since a genuine scourge of the gridiron ran his team right into the Super Bowl — or even the Rose Bowl.

COLLEGE coaches are the slowest to learn. Brigham Young University is the current national champion and a chronic top 10 team largely because its coach years ago saw the strategic value of the forward pass and scrapped the traditional collegiate recruiting techniques of pushing for the boy who could run fastest. BYU wanted the ones who could throw farthest.

The snorts of derision that were heard from coast to coast when the struggling United States Football League signed as its No. 1 draft choice a 5-foot-10 football player should have tipped us that nothing has changed. The NFL scoffed that Doug Flutie would be a second round choice in its league, if that. Probably the 55th player chosen, no better.

Probably so. But it is well to remember that Dan Marino was the 27th choice in the NFL two seasons before. And he was No. 1 in the USFL that year.

Not that the USFL is immune to the lure of the ball packer. Two years ago, it broke several of the unwritten laws of football, including a pair of its own, to sign the running back, Herschel Walker, out of Georgia.

YOU REMEMBER Herschel Walker, don't you?

Well, if not, how about Mike Rozier?

"Who?" you say.

Rozier. R-o-z-i-e-r. A football player from Nebraska. I'll give you a hint: He was the Heisman Trophy winner and he came into the league about the same time as Jim Kelly, the quarterback for the Houston Whozits. The famous Kelly. Rozier plays for Jacksonville. I guess. You don't hear much about him because the really productive players in that league are quarterbacks.

"Student body right" just doesn't work in the pros. I suppose the greatest, most devastating running back in the history of the pro game was Jim Brown. But not even Jim Brown could run the Cleveland Browns into an annual championship with quarterbacks like Milt Plum.

The quarterback, Otto Graham, was the one who made the coach, Paul Brown, famous and won all the titles. Neither Jim Brown nor Leroy Kelly could, so to speak, foot the bill.

Franco Harris of the Pittsburgh Steelers may have been one of the greatest runners in the pro game, but it is a fact of history that his team, the Steelers, didn't win the championships till the quarterback, Terry Bradshaw, came of age.

When Earl Campbell couldn't run a franchise right into the Super Bowl, you have to know nobody could. Tony Dorsett may be as great as Grange ever was but Dallas hasn't been in a Super Bowl since Roger Staubach, the QB, left.

The reigning NFL champions, the San Francisco 49ers, don't even have a running attack as such. They don't need it. Neither did the team they played in the Super Bowl. Detroit moved heaven and earth to sign, and then to keep, Billy Sims, the runner. It's a bigger waste of money than the Edsel. They should have gone for the quarterback model.

DOUG Flutie may be too little, too light, too lucky, too slow, or too bright. But he's in the right profession. If you're going to make a mistake in drafting, make it in favor of the guy who gets rid of the ball. Gives it to somebody else. The guy who hangs onto it in today's game really is the galloping ghost. Because he usually disappears at the line of scrimmage. Well short of the Super Bowl.

NFL seeks to speed up grid games

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League is considering a package of procedural changes for 1985 that combined with a possible streamlining of commercial breaks on television may be able to reverse a trend to longer games.

Members of the NFL's Competition Committee, meeting for the past two weeks on the Hawaiian island of Maui in preparation for next week's owners' meetings in Phoenix, have agreed that they will recommend no drastic changes to shorten games — like keeping the clock running on incomplete passes and out-of-bounds plays.

But they have come up with tentative proposals which may help them get an average of 10 minutes out of NFL games, which averaged 3 hours, nine minutes in 1984.

Among them — reducing the number of pass-interference calls; shortening timeouts in the last two minutes of each half; and restarting the clock after some penalty calls.

Long games — last season's average was nearly 15 minutes longer than a decade ago — are considered one reason for a 20 percent drop in network TV ratings the last two seasons.

Midland College just won its fourth WJCAC title in five years and is going after its second national title; Midland Lee is fresh off trips to the state finals and regional finals in football. That's just the tip of the iceberg.

Midland may not have the Cavaliers or Rangers or football like it's played at Northwestern or Rice, but we aren't destitute. What do you suppose it could be...surely not the all-weather track. Midland added that since the last ratings. It's gotta be that. Odessa has that astroturf football stadium and is punished with a 297th ranking. So, it stands to reason...

Brenda Maxey squares off against wrestling foe.

No Dory Funk, she

5-2 coed grapples for NIU

DEKALB, Ill. (AP) — Wrestlers usually are pictured as Herculean hunks of chiseled flesh — and male. At barely 5-foot-2 and 118 pounds, Brenda Maxey doesn't fit the mold.

She is the first woman on Northern Illinois University's wrestling team, and, according to Coach Don Flavin, the first woman to win a match in the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Maxey, 19, is "second string to the varsity." While her 3-7-0 record for this season may not put her at the top of the team, it's good enough to have won her the respect and friendship of her male teammates.

But Maxey says that wasn't always true.

When she told Flavin she wanted to join the team as a walk-on in the summer of 1983, his reaction "was kind of like, 'we'll see how long you'll last,'" Maxey recalled.

"My idea was don't be rude because she won't be here too long," Flavin said. "I never expected that she'd last the whole season ... She's the first gal I ever worked with on the team."

Maxey proved herself by finishing among the top 10 in a 13-mile race during pre-season team conditioning, Flavin said. "She had herself 25 brothers that day."

Maxey remembers her first competition well. It was at Stevens Point, Wis.

"I was nervous," she recalled. "I got to the mat, and he (her opponent) wasn't as awesome as I expected him to be. He pinned me, but I didn't feel too bad because I think I had a point or two on him."

She beat the fourth competitor at the meet, and won another match by default when "a guy from the Stevens Point team refused to play against me."

Maxey says winning is everything, and she has no qualms about trying to pin an opponent. "Basically, the same feelings are there whether they're a man or a woman," she said. "There's just no difference whatsoever."

Teammate Nate Allison, 20, disapproved when Maxey joined the team.

"I didn't want to wrestle with her," he said. "I was embarrassed because she's a girl." But once Maxey proved herself, Allison said he and other teammates warmed up to her.

"She just fits right in now," Allison said. "She's kind of strong — for a girl."

Maxey is treated like one of the guys, Flavin said. "She doesn't get any breaks, and she doesn't ask for any. She needs strength, but that's part of the chemistry between the sexes."

Wrestling hasn't always been Maxey's sport. Back home in Fredonia, N.Y., she was a cyclist. She later switched to judo, and in 1982 moved to Rochelle, Ill., near Dekalb, to train with judo coach Bill Maxey, 34, who later became her husband.

Hatalsky eagles into lead

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Morris Hatalsky scored an eagle-2 on the way to a wind-blown, 5-under-par 66 that gave him a two-stroke lead Thursday in the first round of the $500,000 Hertz Bay Hill Classic.

Hatalsky, winner of two titles in a 10-year PGA Tour career, hit a 2-iron shot into a gusty, blustery wind and into the cup for the eagle on the 10th hole at Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Club.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, March 9, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You win big once you decide to concentrate on one objective at a time. A difference of opinion will occasionally work to your advantage. A love relationship grows stronger as the year progresses. Curb a tendency to daydream. Only hard work will bring you the success you want. Old friends prove more reliable than new ones. Base decisions on facts, not wishful thinking. Family members draw closer together when their goals are the same. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: actress Joyce Van Patten, fashion designer Andre Courreges, actor Marty Ingels, mystery writer Mickey Spillane, politician James Buckley, Italian navigator Amerigo Vespucci.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A tug-of-war is featured. Be careful not to get caught in the middle! Creative efforts and romance enjoy favorable influences. Entertaining at home will hold special appeal this evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Influential person helps you advance your goals. A weekend trip is best postponed. Be more patient with a family member and you can avert a confrontation. Use tact when making suggestions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your dreams of escaping to a faraway place are unrealistic now. Give serious thought to taking a weekend job; the extra money will make certain luxuries possible. Romance looks promising.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone with great personal magnetism fills your head with romantic ideas. You are able to make new financial progress. Develop your natural efficiency and the sky is the limit!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Getting an early start today is essential if you are to be ready for this evening's entertainment. Make concessions to a loved one who is emotionally overwrought. You will never regret your kindness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An argument could arise with mate or partner. A change of scenery helps you patch things up. Plan a special outing. An older person appreciates your thoughtfulness more than you know.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look into an unusual real estate opportunity. Purchasing something lots of people want can be a shrewd move. Comparison shoppers bring home real bargains. One-on-one encounters are favored tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Button your lip when dealing with a difficult person who could affect your financial future. Evening is the best time to pursue your personal goals. Call someone in a position to help.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Family members could play a major role in your social plans. An out-of-towner brings good news. Deception is possible in romance. Keep your eyes open and avoid making extravagant promises.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick to your regular activities today, rather than rushing off to try something new. Romance is more rewarding than in the past. Plan a night out on the town. Date a kindred spirit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid all forms of gambling. Travelers get a chance to mix business with pleasure. Jot down the names and addresses of people who might be helpful in the future. Call home occasionally.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid contacting people at a distance during morning hours. You need to sort out your own feelings before approaching the object of your affections. Know your own heart.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

By and large, we dislike "active" defenders. It is seldom right to flit from suit to suit in the hope of striking it lucky somewhere. But there are hands where a passive defense can't be right. Consider this example.

North's jump to three no trump won't be found in any textbook. He decided that his hand might easily produce six tricks for his partner, so there rated to be reasonable play for game.

Had East routinely won the opening lead and returned his partner's suit, the hand would have been over. Declarer would win and force out the ace of diamonds, and no matter what East did then declarer would be certain of nine tricks.

But East paused to take stock after winning the ace of spades. West could not hold a high card in both spades and clubs, so there was no way that the defenders could set up the spade suit and run it.

The threat posed by the diamond suit was staring East in the face. Even if he held up the ace of diamonds for two rounds, the ace of hearts would still be an entry to the table. It was imperative that dummy's entry be removed, so at trick two East shifted to the king of hearts!

That presented declarer with an extra heart trick, but it defeated the contract. Instead of six diamond tricks declarer could make only two! Declarer fell back on the club finesse, and as a result he could make no more than seven tricks.

Village Voice throws party for advertisers in personal column

NEW YORK (AP) — Mel is a lively, well-educated SWJM seeking a SWF for a fun-loving relationship based on sunshine and romance. Carol is a slender SWF looking for a SWM to share conversation, music, good food and other simple pleasures.

Mel and Carol were among about 200 people at a party The Village Voice threw Thursday for some of its most devoted correspondents: the single men and single women — SMs and SFs — who advertise in the weekly newspaper's personals columns.

Under the strobe lights at The Kamikaze Klub nightclub they discovered what most Voice readers must leave to imagination: what the faces behind the personals look like.

"It's interesting, seeing the people who place the ads," said Robert Olds, a self-described DM WASP from Union, N.J., who wore his ad on the lapel of his pinstriped suit. "And of course, the Voice gets a lot of different kinds of ads...so there's a lot of different kinds of people."

Since its second issue in 1955, the Voice has carried classified ads from the lovelorn and the adventurous. A typical issue these days has two or more pages carrying as many as 300 personal ads.

Over the years, the ads have developed their own shorthand. Thus, readers know that SWM means single white male, DBF is a divorced black female, and GWJF means gay white Jewish female. DM is a divorced male.

Not all ads are placed by single people. One can find listings for a MWM — married white male — seeking an MWF "for discreet affair." Or an occasional couple seeking an "attractive WF...for fun relationship."

But most ads, according to classified advertising manager Martha Sturgen, are "single professional people looking for other single people."

The most popular month is February, with its flood of Valentine's Day ads, so it was appropriate that Thursday's party was open to all those who placed personals last month. About 1,000 people were invited.

"I find it's a casual and...direct way of meeting someone," said Mel Bruchner, an ebullient 41-year-old New York City high school teacher. "It's a filtering process even before you meet the person face-to-face.

"The ad is the first filter, because you briefly state what kind of person you are and what type of person you want to meet. The second filter is the response, in which the women tell you a little bit about themselves.

"The third filter is when you call them up. And the fourth filter is...if she likes what she hears and you like what you hear, you arrange to meet for, say, a brunch. And you can get to know each other on a casual basis."

Bruchner said he has been placing ads for three years and while he hasn't found someone to marry, he has developed many close friendships.

Carol, a 29-year-old New York City musician who preferred not to give her last name, placed her first Voice ad last month.

"Statistics don't tell the whole story," the ad began, "but they do give the general idea." It described her as a "SWF, 5-feet-8-inches, slender, looking for SWM, 23-40, who likes good conversation, music, good food and other simple pleasures."

David Bowie plays hired gun in movie 'Into the Night'

LONDON (AP) — Flamboyant rock star David Bowie, used to calling the shots in movies he directs, plays a hired gun in his latest big-screen foray, John Landis' "Into The Night."

Bowie, 38, said he agreed to take the bit part because "I'm a great admirer of Landis' movies. When he asked me to join some of his pals playing guest roles I was very flattered."

Landis, whose hits include "Trading Places" and "National Lampoon's Animal House," also has cast a string of fellow directors in walk-on parts in his new movie.

Sharp-eyed movie buffs may spot Roger Vadim and Paul Mazursky among Hollywood luminaries usually behind the cameras. Landis himself will make a brief appearance.

"Into The Night" stars Jeff Goldblum, who was in "The Big Chill," and Michelle Pfieffer, who appeared in "Grease 2."

LONDON (AP) — It was no state visit when Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko of Japan flew into London for a day, but they were welcomed by a royal personage.

The 51-year-old prince and his wife arrived Thursday after visiting Ireland, Portugal and Spain and planned to head for home today.

Their son, Prince Naruhito Hironomiya, 25, a student at Oxford University, met his parents at London's Heathrow Airport.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The cast of "Dallas" got together on the lawn in front of the South Fork ranch house, but there was no dirty dealing, intrigue or passion.

The people who make television's top-rated program were toasting the launching of a book and contest that producers hope will get as much attention as the show's famous "Who shot J.R.?" cliffhanger in 1980.

"Who Killed Jock Ewing?" is a mystery novel and contest with a first prize of $50,000 to the person who solves the case of the "Dallas" patriarch's disappearance nearly four years ago in a South American jungle.

"We think this is an exciting idea and that it is going to be a very popular book," Joe Whitaker, president of Lorimar Licensing Co., said at a party on the "Dallas" set Wednesday to kick off the campaign.

Among those attending the party on the set were Howard Keel, (Clayton Farlow), Donna Reed (Miss Ellie, Jock's widow, now married to Farlow), Steve Kanaly (Ray Krebbs), Deborah Shelton (Mandy Winger) and Roseanna Christiansen (Theresa, the Ewing maid).

Jock Ewing was reported missing after Jim Davis, who played the role, died in 1981. Jock hasn't been replaced.

LONDON (AP) — Ray Parker Jr., who had a worldwide hit record with the title track from the "Ghostbusters" movie, found himself playing the Pied Piper in London after he won the prestigious British Academy of Film and Television Arts award.

Parker was caught in a traffic-snarling demonstration by Londoners protesting government moves to cut subsidies to left-wing municipal authorities Wednesday as he drove to London's NBC bureau for a live spot on the "Today" TV show.

The former session man and musician with Stevie Wonder's band jumped out of his limo to walk the 15 blocks to the studio.

Still clutching his statuette for best original song of 1984, presented Tuesday night by Princess Anne, Parker was soon trailed by scores of fans.

"I felt like the Pied Piper of Hamelin," he said. "I used to see the people going wild for Stevie, and I wondered what it would be like. Now I know.

"Ghostbusters," written and recorded in two days, has sold 8 million copies worldwide.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Edward L. Rowny, who sometimes played his harmonica to ease tensions during Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty talks in Geneva, where he headed the U.S. delegation, takes his act to the stage next month.

Rowny will join harmonica virtuoso Larry Adler in a duet performance April 20 on the stage of the Peabody Conservatory of Music.

The two last played together in the old Baltimore Harmonica Band of the 1930s. Rowny, 67, has been playing the harmonica since he won his first one as a paperboy taking part in a selling contest.

On Jan. 18, President Reagan named Rowny special adviser to the president and assistant secretary of state on arms control matters.

Aviation department sets major priorities in 1985

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

In a year when Congress is haggling over budget cuts, the city's Aviation Department staff is asking for more money for two projects they claim would place Midland Regional Airport in a safer and more economically viable position.

One request is to operate the control tower 24 hours a day, rather than 18 hours, and to make Midland Regional Airport an international port of entry. The latter would serve as a boon for oil companies working in Mexico, according to Jon Mathiasen, assistant director of aviation/administration.

Both suggestions were listed as priorities by the city's Airport Board, which serves as an advisory panel to Midland City Council.

Both are issues that ultimately will be decided in Washington, D.C., Mathiasen said.

The Federal Aviation Administation control tower at Regional Airport used to operate 24 hours a day, until the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Strike in 1981. Midland's hours were cut back to 6 a.m. to midnight, but the full cycle was never resumed after more controllers were hired and trained.

Mathiasen pointed out that Lubbock and Amarillo airports have control towers operating 24 hours, "and we're busier airports than they are."

The longer operating hours are for the community's benefit, he said, and for the safety of the airport. But getting the approval "is a long bureaucratic trail and would take an appropriation of more money for this region" to staff the tower.

Midland's passenger boardings went up from 629,303 in fiscal year 1983 to 649,683 in FY 1984, according to the airport staff's figures. Lubbock reported 575,776 for its calendar year 1984.

But boardings are not the only data considered when deciding if the tower should be open 24 hours a day, said David Gibson, FAA tower manager at Midland Regional Airport.

Stressing that the decision is made by personnel at the FAA's Southwest Regional office in Fort Worth, he said a list of criteria must be met. "To be honest, I don't know what that criteria is. It's not just boardings. Some airports have a commitment to the military and nearby bases and they have to be open 24 hours. There's a lot of considerations."

If the criteria are met, he said, then the regional office will consult with the local office before a decision is made. "We're talking about spending taxpayers money and you have to be prudent in how you do it," Gibson said.

After making about 30 phone calls to persons all over Washington, D.C., Mathiasen said he tracked down the man in charge of giving the final approval on ports of entry. The man is Ron Schaeffer, one of several assistant secretaries of the treasury.

If granted, the port of entry probably would not lead to a Mexican airline starting service at the airport. Rather, it would be established for oil companies and the private jets going to Mexico on business.

"This is a political item with all the budget cuts going on," Mathiasen said. "They would need federal employees stationed here. We do have office space at the airport we would let them have at no charge, if the council agrees.

"Lubbock has one," Mathiasen said of that agriculture city's port, "and they don't need it. Midland needs it with all the oil business here and in Mexico."

If the port of entry is granted, Mathiasen said there are plans to set up at Midland Regional Airport a foreign trade zone which would be a duty-free area for foreign goods.

Mathiasen said the staff's goal is to have both projects approved by the end of this year.

"We plan to fight it to the end of the earth," he said.

Doctors say abused infant suffers permanent blindness

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The 21-year-old former boyfriend of a Midland woman was arrested Thursday after Fort Worth doctors said her 4-month-old daughter will be blind for life because of injuries he is alleged to have caused Feb. 16.

Walter Felix Paul, who lived with the infant's mother and 2-year-old sister in the Manor Club Apartments, 5009 Rio Grande, No. 25-E, was arrested at 2:45 p.m. at the apartment on charges of injury to a child with serious bodily injury. Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bail for the unemployed man at $50,000.

Since the alleged assault, the mother, an employee of Fairmont Bowling Lanes on West Loop 250, has moved in with her sister, who also lives in Manor Club Apartments, and is not continuing her relationship with Paul, said Sgt. C.W. "Buzz" Cupp of the Midland County Sheriff's Office Juvenile Division.

Both the 4-month-old and her 2-year-old sister are in the custody of Child Protective Services in Midland, said Sgt. Monnie Weddell.

No charges were filed against the mother, he said.

According to the arrest affidavit, Paul babysat the two sisters and their 4-year-old cousin Feb. 16. Later that evening, the 4-month-old girl suffered seizures and was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital.

She was diagnosed as having a "subdural hemorrhage" and was transported to Fort Worth Children's Hospital.

A subdural hemorrhage is a ruptured blood vessel between the outermost and middle of the three membranes covering the brain and spinal cord.

Attending physicians in Fort Worth said the child was hemorrhaging to the brain and suffered damage to the retina, which could result in blindness.

The doctors notified the Department of Human Resources Wednesday that the child was permanently blind "due to the shaking caused by Walter Felix Paul," according to the arrest affidavit.

The 4-year-old cousin is alleged to have confirmed that Paul "shook" the child and "threw her down," the affidavit stated.

Investigators with the Child Protective Services asked the sheriff's office Feb. 22 to assist in the investigation, Cupp said.

Blood bank orders test kit for AIDS antibodies

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

A new test kit for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome antibodies will be used "as soon as we get the kits", said Anne West, supervisor for Midland Memorial Hospital's blood bank. The announcement comes less than one week after the U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services approved the marketing of a test kit produced by an Illinois firm.

The test, manufactured by Abbott Laboratories of North Chicago, was described Saturday by Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler as "the answer to the prayers of thousands of Americans facing surgery or otherwise requiring blood," according to an Associated Press news story.

AIDS is a often-fatal disease that reduces the body's ability to fight infection. It is primarily found in four high-risk categories — Haitians, actively sexual homosexual and bisexual men, hemophiliacs and intravenous drug abusers. However, it is not limited to those four groups.

"By 1985, about 9,000 cases had been reported," said a report from HHS.

Although the test is designed to detect the presence of an antibody that is often present in individuals with AIDS, Ms. West stated that "it is not a test for AIDS."

"We're testing for the antibody not the actual organism," she said.

The test kit, known as "ELISA" (enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay), tests for antibodies to the HTLV-III virus, which was identified in 1984 as the cause of AIDS, according to the HHS report.

The presence of the antibody can indicate whether or not a person has been affected with the virus. "However, a negative response does not guarantee that a person is free of the virus," said the report.

"One problem is that if a person came into contact with the AIDS virus shortly before getting the antibody test, than it may not show positive," said Ms. West. "The tests will be run on donors only," said Ms. West.

"We don't want homosexual men thinking it's a test for AIDS and coming in for a free test," she said.

The MMH blood bank currently requires donors to read a brochure on AIDS, which asks members of the high-risk categories to refrain from donating.

"We can't ask anyone if they are gay," said Ms. West. "But if we suspect it and they donate blood, we will throw it away."

How to handle "suspected" cases, the licensing of improved testing kits within days of a less accurate kit and a sporadic acceptance of the testing procedures by blood banks due to a lack of mandate by the federal government are resulting in a general uneasiness toward the blood screening by blood bank workers.

Pressure by the HHS on blood bank services to accept the testing procedures as soon as they are licensed is causing problems with accuracy of results.

Peter Page, director of the American Red Cross blood services was quoted in the Dec. 13 edition of "Nature" magazine as saying that "the tests may be being hastened to the commericial market before the false-positive problem has been resolved."

"We're being rushed so much by the HHS that we don't have time to resolve it in the case of the AIDS test," he said.

Inaccurate test results are not limited to donors who have recently been introduced to the HTLV-III virus, according to Ms. West.

"Some people may even test out positive (shown to have the antibody) even when they are not," she said. "One to two percent of the population can get a positive test even though they don't have AIDS."

If the test is positive, the procedure is repeated, said West.

If it tests out negative the second time, then we test it again to make sure that no mistake was made. But if it tests out positive the second time, then we have a problem.

The problem is how to tell the blood donor that they may have been exposed to the HTLV-III virus.

"We're not sure what we'll do," she said. "If it gets out, it could really do a lot of harm to that person if they could wind up losing their job."

The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta "cautions personnel who come in contact with a positive donor to maintain confidentiality."

Disclosure of this information for purposes other than medical or public health could lead to serious consequences for the individual," said a report from the Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, a CDC publication.

Screening procedures should be given a clear explanation of how information about them will be handled," said the report.

Blood banks take wait and see attitude

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Local blood banks are responding with a "wait and see" attitude after the announcement of the licensing of a second manufacture of ELISA (enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay), a test for the AIDS virus antibody, HTLV-III.

Electro-Nucleonics Inc. of Fairfield, N.J., is the second firm to be licensed by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services within a week, for production of ELISA, said a report from the Associated Press today.

Currently, three other companies are vying for the licensure of the antibody test kit. They are Travenol Laboratories, Litton Laboratories and Dupont.

"I haven't recieved any information on the latest one," said Anne West, supervisor of the Midland Memorial Hospital blood bank. "We are waiting on the test kits from Abbott."

Abbott Laboratories of North Chicago, licensed on Saturday, was the first company to get licensed by the HHS.

Employing personnel detailed, costly

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The personnel office: It's closed doors have resulted in more feelings of intimidation than one may expect to encounter when passing through heaven's "golden gates."

Behind those doors, however, the detailed and costly process an employer initiates to find the right man or woman for the job is intimidating in itself.

Take the Midland Independent School District for example. It's effort to replace Dr. Duane Moore, assistant superintendent of instructional services began nearly five months ago when Moore resigned to accept the position of superintendent of the Vigo County School Corporation in Terre Haute, Ind.

Ronald W. Whitmore, director of MISD Human Resource Services, said a nationwide search to fill the vacancy began immediately after Moore announced his resignation in October. Still, it could be late spring or summer before the position is filled.

Whitmore said the district posted announcements of the vacancy in national educational periodicals and on campuses of major colleges and universities across the country.

"We're now in the situation where it's a two-way street," he said. "The next step will be to select 6-10 qualified candidates and invite them to town for interviews before making a final selection."

To date, 195 persons from 41 states; plus Great Britain and Brazil have applied for the position. Of those 195 applicants, 51 were from Texas, including five from Midland; and 11 from Kansas.

MISD is in no hurry to fill the spot vacated by Moore, Whitmore said. "We want to find the right person for the job. I'm confident we can do that."

According to Whitmore, the district's four to six-month hiring schedule is not unusual.

In comparison, the same procedure at the city and county level may prove to be as long as well as costly.

Sgt. Tom Hyde, of the Midland Police Department's Internal Affairs office, said persons who apply for positions on the force may wait as long as one year to undergo the screening process.

"The process is a lengthy one because of the nature of the job," he said. "I'm not in a hurry to fill a vacancy. We have to weed out anyone who could be physically or emotionally undesireable."

The selection of candidates for city law enforcement positions requires a "rigid" screening of all inquiries, according to Hyde.

For example, applicants must pass academic, physical and psychological examinations in addition to a study of their credit, military, driving, medical and criminal records.

Each applicant also must complete 520-hours of instruction at the Permian Basin Law Enforcement Academy and pass a licensing examination prior to completing one year of employment.

The cost of hiring and training personnel "is substantial," according to Hyde. "I can't pinpoint an actual figure, but I can guarantee it's expensive."

He added, "We don't pay for transportation or for the examinations. The applicants are responsible for that at their own expense. But we are responsible for paying $100 per officer to attend the academy and are required to supply instructors and pay their salaries."

City manager Jim Brown said many communities are — for a fee — turning to private recruiting firms to handle hiring chores.

Although Midland city officials have never used the method, Brown said it does have its advantages.

"Normally, the city pays a fee ($10,000-$15,000) and the firm takes over recruiting and screening all applicants, but they don't make a final selection for you."

The process, according to Brown, is time consuming.

"We've never used a firm, but we came close," he said. "You'd be surprised how hard it is to recruit people in this area. They (recruiting firms) have more exposure and avenues to get people. They get a bigger and broader selection than we can get," he said.

At the county level, Midland County Judge Bill Ahders said each department establishes its own system for hiring employees.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said, "There is no set hiring policy for the county. Elected officials choose their own employees and set up how they want their offices run because they serve at the pleasure of the people."

He noted that the cost of hiring and training each staff member runs taxpayers an estimated $30,000, but in his case, "it's worth it."

"In this business, what they do on the job can affect not only their lives, but the lives of others as well," he said. "My main objective is to keep as many people as I possibly can and still look for people who have a common sense approach."

DEATHS

T.O. Midkiff

KERRVILLE — T.O. (Dick) Midkiff Jr., 81, of Kerrville and formerly of Midland died Wednesday morning in a Kerrville hospital.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Kerrville Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Richard Johnson officiating. Burial will follow in Garden of Memory Cemetery under the direction of Kerrville Funeral Home.

Midkiff was born Oct. 10, 1903 in Midland County. He attended Midland public schools and the old Midland College. He was the son of pioneer ranchers of Midland County who brought the first sheep here. He moved to Kerrville in 1952, where he continued to ranch.

He was a member of the First United Methodist Church and a past member of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association.

Survivors include two sons, T.O. Midkiff III of Midkiff and Richard Midkiff of Harker Heights; three daughters, Hazelle Calcote of Kerrville, Loyce Cole of Anchorage, Ala. and Maydelle Jackson of Midkiff; five brothers, Tyson Midkiff of Rankin, Frank Midkiff of Midkiff, Sam Midkiff of Lamar, Colo., Hunter Midkiff of Midland, and Lige Midkiff of Amarillo; three sisters, Gladys McDonald, Nell Benedefet and Bee Hanks, all of Midland; 14 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Eldin Tate, Bob Wilson, Bob Whishman, Mike Schofield, David Workman, Clayton Feller, D.H. Radford; Lester Grona and Ed Martin.

Honorary pallbearers will be Robert Wayne Calcoat, Doug Coal, Hugh Jackson, Steven Midkiff, Greg Midkiff, Robbie Midkiff, and Quad Midkiff.

The family suggests memorials be made to the American Heart Association or the American Diabetes Association.

Franklin Ward

Services for Franklin Dulaney Ward, 86, of Midland will be at 11 a.m. Saturday in Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Ross Payne, pastor of Cotton Flat Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

He died Thursday morning at a Midland hospital.

Ward was born Dec. 31, 1898, in Pecan Gap, and moved with his father to Midland in 1905. He graduated from high school here and then attended the original Midland College. He entered the Army during World War I and served in France. After his discharge he returned to Midland and had been associated with a number of Midland firms.

Survivors include three sons, Franklin D. Ward Jr. of Brownwood, Pearl A. Ward of Green Valley, Ariz., and John G. Ward of Odessa; a daughter, Mrs. Charley Dodson of Midland; 10 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Lydia Wingo

Services for Lydia Kathrine Wingo of Midland are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Thursday evening at a Midland hospital.

Survivors include his wife of Weatherford; a stepdaughter, Sue Ellison of Odessa; three stepsons, Joe Reynolds of Midland, and Jimmy Reynolds and Tommy Reynolds, both of Anchorage, Alaska; a sister, Mildred Clark of Snyder; 11 grandchildren, a great-grandchild and three nieces.

Police continue its search for suspects

From Staff Reports

ODESSA - Police this morning are seeking three men, one on a charge of attempted murder, the other two on aggravated kidnapping charges.

Officer L.E. Zyza was patroling near the intersection of West 22nd Street and West County Road shortly after 2:30 a.m. today when he observed a vehicle run a red light.

Zyza stopped the car and a young woman driving jumped out and said she had a stabbing victim in the back seat. Officer Zyza escorted the woman and the stabbing victim, 22-year-old David Ross Haugenater, to the Medical Center Hospital emergency room.

At the hospital, according to police spokesman Rusty Baker, Haugenater told Zyza he drove into his driveway at 1103 W. 25th Street and got out of his car when an Hispanic man walked up and said, "Follow me, bastard."

The man moved off, apparently thinking Haugenater was following. Haugenater said as he stood there he felt something against the left side of his neck and struck a man in the face. He said he suddenly felt a sharp pain in his stomach and fell to the ground.

Haugenater said he got up, got in his car and drove to an apartment complex in the 2000 block of Coahuila, where he met two friends, Timothy David Lewis and Patricia Ann Bryant. Ms. Bryant was taking him to the hospital when they were stopped by Zyza.

Haugenater was treated at the hospital for stab wounds in the stomach and chest and two cuts on the left side of his neck and released.

Odessa police today continued to seek two men who allegedly abducted a 19-year-old woman from the parking lot of the Stop&Go store, 2225 W. County Road, shortly after 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The Odessa woman told investigating officers the two men, whom she knew, dragged her into their car, drove her to the east side of Bowie Junior High School, where they fondled her.

They left the school area and drove onto West University, where they had to stop for a traffic signal at Kermit Highway. She tried to jump out of the car, but one of the men pulled her back into the vehicle, described as an older model white car.

When they finally let her go, she told police, she went home, told her boyfriend what happened and he told her to call police.

A Crime Stoppers tip Aug. 23, 1984 has led to the apprehension of 22-year-old Kyle Lin Teal, wanted in connection with the burglary last June of the home of Robert Stacy, 908 E. 25th.

The Stacy family was on vacation and returned home to find their home had been broken into. Missing were a shotgun, a rifle and scope and a suitcase, with a total value of nearly $800.

The Crime Stoppers tip indicated Teal was in Vernal, Utah. Odessa police sent information to Vernal police, who located and arrested him.

Teal has waived extradition and is awaiting return to Odessa.

Jewelry reported stolen

From Staff Reports

Two rings valued at $1,300 were reported stolen March 1 from a business at 2080 Commerce.

According to reports filed with police Thursday, Paula Williams, P.O. Box 4262, said she left the rings in the women's restroom after washing her hands. When she realized she had forgotten them 30 minutes later, she returned and found the diamond wedding ring and opal and garnet ring missing.

L.F. Greer, 1309 Upland, reported two residential burglaries Thursday. According to reports, a house at 1700 N. H St. was burglarized and a $400 water pump stolen. A 12-foot by 14-foot piece of carpet was reported stolen in a burglary at 410 W. Estes Ave. Greer did not know when the burglaries had occurred, reports said.

About $350 in cash was reported stolen from the Donald Shoulders residence, 401 Humble, Apt. C. According to reports, Shoulders said he returned to the apartment at 8 a.m. Wednesday after being gone for a week to find a window pane, valued at $15, had been broken.

In reports filed with the Midland County Sheriff's Office, Carl Branch of Route 2 Box 162 reported a $500 propane tank had been stolen from a vacant house he owns on County Road 309, east of Cole Park.

According to reports, the tank, owned by Midland 66 Oil Co., 1612 Garden City Highway, was taken between Tuesday and Thursday.

Larry Dale Ward told sheriff's officers early this morning that his residence in the Midland Mobile Home Ranch, B-6, was burglarized. Entry was gained between 10 p.m. and midnight Thursday by kicking open the front door. Taken were a stereo set and speakers rented from Easy TV Rentals. Value of the items had not been determined.

Nine firefighters were called at 10 p.m. Thursday to extingish a burning bed at a residence at 200½ Lee, occupied by Betty Myers and owned by Odell Walker, 807½ N. Baird. According to reports, the fire was caused by smoking in bed. Two hundred gallons of water were used to extinguish the blaze, which was confined to the bed.

AIDS

"We want to have 'state of the art' testing procedures," said Ms. West, one day prior to the announcement of Electro-Nucleonics licensure.

However, Marie Plikaitis, supervisor of the Medical Center blood bank in Odessa, stated that the early tests being licensed are not as accurate as those proposed by other companies.

"The preliminary findings are that the Abbott test is not that accurate," she said. "We want to examine the other kits that will be available rather than ordering the first one on the market," Ms. Plikaitis said Monday.

Although the Associated Press reported ENI officials and HHS spokesmen as stating that "the test showed more sensitivity to the AIDS antibodies than any of the other four tests licensed or under consideration for licenses," Ms. Plikaitis disagrees.

"A report from the Feb. 26 National Intelligence Report, shows that the ELISA test being manufactured by Abbott and ENI are not the most accurate."

The report states the following accuracy rates: Travenol, 99 percent; Litton, 95.6 percent; Abbott, 95 percent; Dupont, 85 percent and ENI, 82 percent.

This percentage rate was determined by the testing known AIDS patients. The resulting positive tests indicate the accuracy rate.

"It's all the same test," said Ms. Plikaitis. "But there are differences in the way they manufacture them."

The concern over screening blood donors for the HTLV-III antibody, stems from recent cases of blood recipients getting the virus through contaminated blood units. To date, health officials have reported more than 113 cases of blood-transported AIDS.

Although two tests are now available to the nation's blood banks, there are no mandates from the government requiring their use.

While the tests are being accepted by many blood banks, others have chosen not use them, while continuing to exchange blood units with local banks and though a national clearing house.

"Oh yes, we exchange blood with the Midland blood bank," said Ms. Plikaitis.

Police investigate disappearance

From Staff Reports

An investigation into the disappearance Wednesday night of a 38-year-old Midland man is being conducted by the Midland County Sheriff's Office after family members and employers voiced concern.

"Usually, if it's an adult that's missing, we'll just sort of hang back," said Sgt. Monnie Weddell of the sheriff's office Criminal Investigation Division. But circumstances surrounding the disappearance of Jimmy Lynn Davis raised the possibility of foul play, he said.

According to reports, Davis, of Route A, Box 41-A, was last seen at 11 p.m. Wednesday on his way to Levelland on a work assignment.

The employee of Basin Industrial X-ray was driving a 1981 Ford Supercab pickup, and wearing a brown-and-white checkered, Western-cut shirt, Wrangler jeans, brown boots and a blue lightweight jacket, according to Weddell.

"He hasn't been seen or heard from since," he said.

Davis is described as between 5 feet 8 inches and 5 feet 9 inches tall, 130 pounds, with blond hair and blue eyes.

Persons with information about his whereabouts are asked to call the county sheriff's office, 683-9481.

ANTIBODY

The CDC also recommends that in the event of a positive ELISA test, "it is the responsibility of the blood bank to notify the donor".

"The information should be given to the donor by an individual especially aware of the sensitivites involved," said the CDC.

Ms. West stated, however that "if there are no symptoms of the disease and the person comes up with a positive test result, we would not contact the donor."

"Later on, when the tests are mandatory, all of the blood banks will be required to contact the donor," she said.

Currently, the MMH blood bank is planning to "discard any blood units that result in a positive test."

INFANT

Six days later, according to Midland Police Department reports, a neighbor in the apartment complex was sitting with the 2-year-old girl for three hours when the woman noticed the child had "numerous injuries to her head and body...(including) bruises on the top of her head, forehead, back and leg from the household" had reported the suspect punished the 2-year-old by "carrying her by the hair of the head."

According to the report, the neighbor told police the younger child was in a hospital in Fort Worth because of injuries she was alleged to have suffered at the hands of the suspect.

She also stated that the 2-year-old child "appeared to be in poor health, was throwing up and had diarrhea," according to the report.

Police contacted Child Protective Services Worker Sylvia Wilkinson, who confirmed she and sheriff's officers were investigating the possible abuse of the 4-month-old.

Ms. Wilkinson and Ann Bradford, DHR area operations manager, were out of the office today and could not be reached for comment.

Pancake jamboree planned

From Staff Reports

The Downtown Lions Club will stage its 29th annual Pancake Jamboree Saturday at the mall in Dellwood Shopping Center. It will be a day-long event, beginning at 7 a.m. and continuing until 8 p.m. Attendance is expected to exceed the 9,000 mark.

Special entertainment will be provided throughout the day under the direction of club member Duke Jimerson.

Lloyd Jobe, acquisition chairman, said sufficient mix to make 30,000 pancakes is on hand, in addition to more than a ton of sausage. Coffee, milk and orange drink will also be available.

All duties in connection with the mixing, cooking, serving and cleaning up will be handled by the more than 450 members of the sponsoring club.

Keith Somerville, general chairman, said a county fair atmosphere will prevail at the jamboree.

Several thousand tickets have been sold in advance, according to Charlie Sprayberry, ticket sale chairman, but plenty will be available at the door Saturday.

Other committee chairmen include John Clark, cooking; Norman Gould, equipment; Joel Blankenship, service; Ray Gwyn, publicity; and Ed Brannon, afterglow.

Bill Malone is president of club, which funds its annual budget for a far-reaching program of special activities and projects with proceeds from the jamboree.

County files more charges against 62-year-old man

From Staff Reports

Three additional felony charges of indecency with a child by sexual contact were filed Thursday against a 62-year-old Midland man arrested Monday night after officers confiscated from his trailer house alleged pornographic photographs of Midland children.

Carroll "Curly" Pullin of Westgate Mobile Home Park remains in county jail today on four counts of indecency with a child by sexual contact. Bail on each of the second-degree felonies was set at $100,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

In addition, a Class A misdemeanor charge of sale, distribution or display of harmful material to a minor was filed against the heavy machine operator Thursday. Bail was set at $500, Pine said.

According to Investigator Sue Rudie, the alleged pornographic photographs made available to the children pictured them.

Sheriff's officers thought Thursday morning they would file the Class A misdemeanor charge of sale, distribution or display of harmful material against Pullin but would increase it to a third-degree felony under Section 43.24 of the Texas Penal Code.

That section allows the charge to become a felony if one "hires, employs, or uses a minor to do or accomplish or assist in doing or accomplishing any of the acts prohibited."

Instead, officers kept the charge a misdemeanor and filed the three additional second-degree felonies, which are punishable by two to 20 years in prison and a fine not to exceed $10,000.

Ms. Rudie, who is heading the investigation, said both those identified in the photographs and other children are being questioned about possible incidents and calls from concerned parents are continuing to come into the sheriff's office.

Although about five children ages 7 to 14 are reportedly involved, Ms. Rudie has declined to release information on the number of children, their ages and the number of photographs seized.

Special prosecutor considered in Austin ethics case

AUSTIN (AP) — City Attorney Paul Isham says he is considering the appointment of a special prosecutor to handle an ethics case involving Austin Mayor Ron Mullen.

Isham said a special prosecutor is one of several options he can pursue as a result of the Ethics Review Commission's 3-2 decision this week that Mullen violated the city ethics ordinance and should be prosecuted.

The case involves Mullen's Dec. 13 vote to place a $47 million bond issue on the Jan. 19 ballot for an east-west thoroughfare. He holds a financial interest in land adjacent to the roadway.

Mullen had abstained on four previous votes involving the land.

PUC sets rates for pay phones

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission on Thursday approved privately-owned pay telephones to be connected to Southwestern Bell Telephone's network.

The commission set a rate of $47.96 per month for non-electronic switching system central offices and $27.43 per month plus 5.7 cents per call for electronic switching systems, said Ronna Martin, PUC's information coordinator.

Electronic switching systems are more-modern types of telephone equipment which have measuring capabilities for each call made, Ms. Martin said.

Woman charged in robbery

From Staff Reports

A 17-year-old Missouri woman was arraigned Thursday on charges of aggravated robbery in connection with running over an employee at a motel where a television set was stolen, according to police.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bail at $50,000 for Shelly Rene Myers.

Ms. Myers is suspected in the Wednesday night aggravated robbery at La Quinta Motor Inn, 4130 W. Wall Ave. According to police, she and another woman were seen at the motel at about 11:30 p.m. One woman was in Room 402 and the other apparently was watching for authorities, police said.

Reports indicate one of the women got into a 1975 or 1976 Oldsmobile Cutlass with the TV. Tony Montez, a motel employee, attempted to stop her when she ran into him with the car, according to police.

Montez was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital where he was treated for a non-displaced fracture of the right elbow.

Police apprehended Ms. Myers near a restaurant on West Wall Avenue, and witnesses at the motel identified her as the driver of the car. Police are still looking for the second suspect.

Committee waits for House action on eligibility rule

AUSTIN (AP) — A State Board of Education committee says it will wait to hear from the House before it acts on a Senate resolution demanding that the no-pass, no-play eligibility rule be revised.

The full 15-member state board will review the action of its Student Committee on Saturday.

The five-member committee agreed on a reply to a Senate resolution passed 24-5 Thursday, but was sharply divided on whether to revise the controversial rule.

"Some injustices are being done," Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said of the board's ruling that bars students with a failing grade in one course from taking part in athletics or other extracurricular activities for at least six weeks.

Upset parents, coaches and school administrators protested at a Senate committee hearing Wednesday that school teams were being broken up, students were dropping out of school and at least one boy considered suicide because of the rule.

"This rule has caused a great deal of confusion and heartbreak in Texas schools," Katherine Raines of Cleburne said Thursday. She favors week-by-week checking of students' grades to determine if they are eligible for athletics and other extracurricular activities.

"Parents did not take us seriously when we passed a no-pass, no-play rule," said Houston attorney Volly Bastine. "Now it's hit the fan ... Somebody has to be the sacrificial lamb. If a student can't play baseball, he can always study."

STATE

Committee chairman Jack Strong of Longview was authorized to write a letter to Parker, author of the Senate resolution which directed the state board to revise the rule.

"The letter will express our deep concern of the Legislaturue's interest and let the Senate know when we get strong directions from both houses we will give it immediate consideration," Strong said.

He said he made his suggestion for the letter after talking with Jon Brumley of Fort Worth, chairman of the state board.

Strong said he also talked with House Speaker Gib Lewis after the Senate resolution was passed 24-5 Thursday. The Senate action came after the House had adjourned for the weekend.

"The speaker said the issue (no-pass, no-play rule) was hotly contested in the House and he did not know the outcome," Strong said. "I think without any House action we would be remiss to take any action now."

He said Brumley has talked with Parker and assured the senator that if any emergency was indicated in the future, Brumley could call an emergency session of the state board.

Committee member Charles Duncan of Houston said he was a strong proponent of the six-weeks rule.

"This is a time to be more concerned about students failing than playing," Duncan said. "I think we need to stick to our guns."

Strong had tried earlier to get the six-week suspension changed to a week's suspension but failed when it first came before the board.

But on Wednesday, Strong told the Senate Nominations Committee that since the board had agreed to the no-pass, no-play rule on first reading in December, it should not be changed for a while to see its effects.

The rule would become permanent if it is approved a third and final time by the state board Saturday.

Gov. Mark White, who appoints members of the state board, told a news conference that he did not favor weakening the school reform bill passed by the summer special session, except maybe to shorten the grade period involved in the rule.

Spy planes fly along Texas Coast

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sophisticated military spy planes are flying surveillance missions along the Texas border in the war against drug smuggling, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Thursday.

Bentsen Thursday told reporters for Texas news organizations that Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) planes were pressed into use five times in Texas last year to aid in drug law enforcement.

In "Operation Lookdown," AWACS provided radar surveillance 24 hours a day along a 200-mile stretch of border in the Big Bend area for three days last September, Bentsen said.

The senator, who co-sponsored a 1981 law directing the military to cooperate with civilian law officers' requests for aid in combating drug imports, quoted a report he received this week from Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

In addition to military radar operations conducted in Texas during the past 16 months, the U.S. Army has provided some assistance to drug enforcement officers in the state in that period, Bentsen said.

The Army provided helicopters for observation and on one occasion helped the Border Patrol and Customs officials move a radio tower. Also, they are providing night goggles to the Border Patrol and Customs Service.

Weinberger reported that in calandar year 1984 active duty and reserve air crews from all three military services flew nearly 3,100 air sorties providing nearly 10,000 hours of flight coverage in support of civilian law enforcement agencies.

A Pentagon spokesman Thursday said the military was aiding in the drug war several years before Congress specifically authorized assistant to civilian law enforcement officers. "It is not new. Since 1977, military planes have made sweeps along the Gulf Coast," said Lt. Col. Larry Greer.

Prior to the authorizing legislation, said a spokesman for Bentsen, the military and civilian lawmen had only "informal contacts." Now, even a local sheriff can ask for aid, he said.

"I think, even before the law was passed, the military was not precluded from helping civilians," said Jack DeVore, Bentsen's press secretary.

Bentsen emphasized that military officials may not make arrests.

AWACS aircraft used in the Texas operation are from Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma while RF-4C planes used in radar and photo reconnaissance of isolated Texas airfields are based in Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin.

Weinberger was unable to assess the impact of military-civilian cooperation in drug operations and advised Bentsen to check with civilian agencies. "In general, however, I continue to hear much praise about the military's assistance from the President and Vice President, the heads of federal law enforcement agencies, members of Congress and state and local officials," Weinberger wrote the senator.

The Department of Defense and the military services have published directives implementing the law and have set up standard procedures to provide assistance to civilian authorities.

Men named 'friends' of state education

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Classroom Teachers Association named two men as recepients of an award acknowledging their contributions to public education.

Bill Kirby, interim commissioner of education, and Wayne Windle, a private citizen from El Paso, were each named as a 1985 Friend of Education by the teacher association Thursday.

The annual award is designed to honor a state official, legislator, or private citizen outside the field of education who had made a significant contribution to public education.

Windle, served six years on the State Board of Education, where he fought for equitable funding for poorer school districts, the association said.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against most major European currencies in early West European trading today. Gold prices fell.

Dealers said the market was still recovering from marked falls on Wednesday following comments by U.S. Federal Reserve chairman Paul Volcker that the American currency could drop sharply.

"I think the market is still very bullish, but after such wild movements and Volcker's comments, the market is a little uncertain," said one Frankfurt dealer.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar edged up to close at 261.65 yen, compared with Thurday's 261.35.

In London, the pound slipped to $1.0600 from Thursday night's $1.0635.

Early dollar rates against other key currencies, compared with late rates Thursday:

-3.4242 West German marks, up from 3.4020.

-2.9180 Swiss francs, up from 2.9060.

--10.4595 French francs, up from 10.4500.

-3.8765 Dutch guilders, up from 3.8545.

-2,139.00 Italian lire, up from 2,121.75.

-1.4015 Canadian dollars, down from 1.4020.

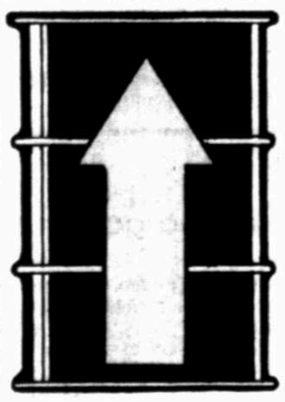

Gold opened in London at $288.75 bid an ounce, down from $289.50 bid late Thursday. The city's five major bullion houses set a recommended price of $289 at the midmorning "fixing." Dealers said the market was very quiet.

In Zurich, gold opened at $288.90 bid, down from late Thursday's $289.50, and was quoted in later trading at $289 bid.

Silver was quoted in London at $5.66 bid an ounce, down from $5.68 late Thursday.

In Hong Kong, gold dropped $1 an ounce to close at $290.15 bid.

Research says consumer confidence slips

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer confidence in the U.S. economy slipped in February but remained at a "relatively high level," a business research group reported as most major retailers posted modest sales gains over a year earlier.

Meanwhile, Agriculture Secretary John Block on Thursday urged Congress to enact the administration's austere long-term farm policy proposals, a day after President Reagan vetoed a farm credit-relief package submitted by Congress.

The Conference Board said its February survey of consumer confidence showed a slight decline from January, when it rose sharply after sliding in December.

"The continuing high level of consumer confidence throughout the country, following the sharp decline in December, is reassuring," said Fabian Linden, executive director of the board's consumer research center.

The board also asked consumers about their buying plans and found that 8.8 percent of those surveyed planned to buy a car within the next six months, virtually unchanged from January.

Although the February sales gains were disappointing for some retailers, industry analysts noted that the comparisons were made against strong results a year ago.

Industry leader Sears, Roebuck & Co. said its sales for the four weeks ended March 2 edged up 2.4 percent, while K mart Corp., in second place, posted a 14 percent gain.

Mongtomery Ward & Co. was the only retailer among the top 10 to report a drop in sales, a decline of 2 percent.

Block, referring to the farm bill vetoed by Reagan, said the nation "can't afford to keep mortgaging agriculture's future for a temporary quick fix."

"It is time to face realities, set the proper course and make the transition as smoothly as possible," he told the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The transition he called for is to a system in which government plays only a minimal part in farming, providing a "safety net" but slashing most of the price supports farmers have come to depend on over the last several decades.

Farm groups testifying before the panel sounded broad disagreement, and members of the committee said current conditions dictate against the approach advocated by Block.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., ranking Democrat on the panel, called the administration's "market-oriented" bill "well-intended but misguided."

"Those economic theories, if implemented, would destroy the family farm system of agriculture while accruing short-term benefits to interests far removed from the on-farm commodity producer," Zorinsky said.

Meanwhile, Apple Computer Inc. plans to shut down production for a week because of excess inventories caused by the sluggish personal-computer market sent Apple's stock tumbling $2.50 a share, to $22.12½, in heavy trading of more than 3 million shares on the over-the-counter market.

TAR president calls for public's support of 2 proposed state bills

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — More than 200 Realtors gathered at the Holiday Inn Centre in Odessa Thursday for the Region 6 meeting of the Texas Association of Realtors.

Guest speakers included TAR president Robert Wertheimer of Dallas, Region 6 vice president Patsy Bohannon of Midland and TAR executive vice president James T. Sawyer of Austin.

Wertheimer, in an interview before he addressed the group following a noon luncheon, said two bills currently before the Texas Legislature deserve the attention of the TAR, but the general public as well.

The two bills represent an attack on the Texas Homestead Law that would strip homeowners of debt protection they have enjoyed for some 144 years, according to Wertheimer.

A bill submitted by Rep. Bill Hammond of Dallas that hasn't gotten much attention, says Wertheimer, proposes the Homestead Law be amended to allow for a new first lien note. The proposal calls for a homeowner to be allowed to borrow up to 80 percent of the value of a home on a one time basis for some catastrophe or any other reason imaginable. Such a first lien note would be allowed only one time during the lifetime of the ownership of that home.

Wertheimer says this bill hasn't gotten much notice because legislators are busy working on a proposal submitted by Sen. Chet Brooks of Pasadena and Rep. Debra Danburg of Houston.

The Brooks-Danburg bill, he said, calls for a change in the Homestead Law that would allow homeowners to put a second lien, or mortgage, on their homes.

As proposed, Wertheimer said, the minimum loan would be $5,000, with the maximum up to 80 percent of the appraised value. Only one such second lien loan would be allowed on a piece of homesteaded property.

TAR opposes this bill too, Wertheimer says, "because once you let down the barriers of what's provided (under the Homestead Act) in the Texas Constitution you've stripped away protection Texas homeowners have against seizure of their homes for debts."

Generally, under the Texas Homestead Law, the only way a Texan can lose a homesteaded property is for non-payment of mortgage or through a tax lien.

The danger of removing the homestead from constitutional protection, as Wertheimer sees it, is that it could put control of maximum-minimum second mortgage amounts in the hands of state legislators who, under pressure from lobbyists, could change the amounts whenever they wanted too.

"Every two years," he said, "the people of Texas would be fighting the lenders."

Wertheimer noted foreclosures in Texas are already above the national average. Changing the Homestead Law to allow homeowners to borrow, through a second mortgage, against their equities would push Texas foreclosures well above the national average, he said.

The hue and cry for these changes is not from the people of Texas, Wertheimer contended. "It's from the finance companies, the savings and loans and New York Stock Exchange companies, who make up the Texans for Home Value Access group."

According to Wertheimer, this group is a coalition jof such companies as: Beneficial Finance, Household Finance' Record Data, Transamerica, Citicorp, Sears, Merrill Lynch, Shearson-American Express and several saving and loan companies.

This group claims to have conducted surveys, he said, which show 68 percent of the people in Texas want access to the money represented by the equity they have in their homes.

But, Wertheimer contends, this group is not telling the people of Texas what happens to them if they get access to home equities by bending the Homestead Law.

"They (the people of Texas) would have no further debtor protection of their homes," he said.

"We think the people of Texas have been protected (through the Homestead Law) for 144 years and deserve continued protection against having their homes seized for debt," the TAR president said.

Pickens planning to sell Phillips shares

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — An investor group led by T. Boone Pickens said Wednesday that it would exercise its right to sell 8.9 million shares of Phillips Petroleum Co. stock to that company for $53 a share, realizing a profit of $89 million

The sale was part of a settlement reached last December, when Pickens's Mesa Partners group agreed to end a hostile bid for Phillips

In the settlement, Phillips also agreed to propose a new recapitalization program in which shareholders were offered a package of stocks and bonds that the company valued at $53 a share. The market, however, placed a lower value on the plan, prompting Carl C. Icahn, the financier, to initiate another bid for Phillips, the nation's 11th-largest oil company.

Texaco to close Amarillo refinery by end of year

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — An effort to "remain competitive" in a changing market has forced the shutdown of one of Texaco's smallest refineries, leaving 150 people jobless here by the end of the year.

Meanwhile, Gov. Mark White says an effort should be made to help the workers find new jobs.

Texaco U.S.A. officials announced Thursday that the closure will take effect by the end of the year.

No time line has been set for the shutdown, but plant operations will stop by the end of 1985, said Paul Weeditz, spokesman for the Mid-Continent Region of Texaco.

The closure is an effort by the oil company to "remain competitive in the marketplace," Weeditz said.

White said he's concerned about the loss of jobs.

"We must address the needs of these workers and their families and help them find other jobs as rapidly as possible," White said.

But Weeditz said the prospect of transferring employees to other Texaco facilities is remote because of the scarcity of jobs.

In addition to closing the Amarillo facility, Texaco also is shutting down its Lawrenceville, Ill., plant, Weeditz said. He said the changing market has forced the company to review its domestic operations and make them more efficient.

The continuing drop in demand for petroleum products and the abundant supply of distillates in the United states are major reasons the company decided to close out some operations, Weeditz said.

"This plant, as well as the industry and the company as a whole, is experiencing very difficult economic times and demand levels are substantially below peak levels of just a few years ago," he said.

Texaco regards information on refinery operation levels as "proprietary" so no figures are available for the Amarillo facility, Weeditz said.

The Amarillo refinery, built in 1918 and purchased by Texaco 10 years later, has a rated capacity of 20,000 barrels of crude oil per day, making the plant one of the firm's smallest.

Of the three Texaco refineries in Texas, only the El Paso operation, with a capacity of 17,000 barrels a day, is smaller. Weeditz said he doesn't know of plans to close the El Paso facility.

Plant changes may be delayed

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Operations at General Motor's assembly plant here could be halted for several months in late 1986 or early 1987 to convert the facility for extensive use of robots, sources within the United Auto Workers say.

Several hundred people could be laid off or asked to retire early to accommodate the switch in technology, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Wednesday, quoting sources in UAW Local 276.

Sources said the model changeover would require a major overhaul of the plant and some expansion.

The unidentified union officials said the Arlington plant is one of several that have been selected as assembly plants for the GM "10" — a front-wheel drive automobile planned as a replacement for the Oldsmobile Cutlass and Chevrolet Monte Carlo now being built here.

Bob Hartnagel, a GM spokesman at Dallas, said GM has made no announcement on any future project model in Arlington. Company policy prohibits officials from discussing production plans, he said.

John Childers, president of UAW Local 276, who represents about 4,000 GM employees here, said he had no comment on the report.

"The (employees) that get laid off will probably be in pretty good shape," Childers told the Star-Telegram. "Maybe we won't get hurt too bad."

Sources said workers who were laid off would be eligible for retraining and reassignment within GM as part of a "job bank" agreed to in the latest national labor contract between the UAW and GM.

George Campbell, Arlington deputy city manager, said GM officials have recently contacted city officials about various projects during the plant, but company officials have not been specific about any plans.

"They're very secretive about the reasons they're asking the questions," Campbell said.

Donoghue's Money Fund Averages (TM) (Averages for all 257 taxable funds)		45	7.82	8.13

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 257 money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 decreased $2.5 billion to $199.0 billion during the week ended March 5, 1985. The taxable funds' 7-dcy average yield increased to 7.82 percent from 7.81 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield remained at 7.81 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity remained the same at 45 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Assets of taxable money funds were down $2.5 billion this week as institutional investors moved $2.3 billion out to take advantage of higher, short-term rates in the market. The average maturity for all taxable money funds remained at 45 days for the second week, a sign that money managers are still waiting for a stronger indication of which direction interest rates are heading. The 7-day average yield has remained stable for the past three weeks. Assets of tax-free money funds increased for the ninth consecutive week. These assets now exceed $32 billion, up from $23 billion at year-end 1984."

30-day average yield 7.81

Yield columns represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven days and 7-day compounded (effective) rates of return. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. OIL & GAS DIGEST

Conoco U.K. announces North Sea gas find

HOUSTON - Conoco (U.K.) Limited, an affiliate of Conoco, has made a significant oil and natural gas discovery near its Miller field on Block 16/8b in the United Kingdom sector of the North Sea.

The well tested at a composite rate of 10,517 barrels of oil and 13 million cubic feet of gas per day from three zones between 13,052 and 13,461 feet in the Upper Jurassic Sands. Testing was done with chokes ranging from 7/16-inch to3/4-inch.

The largest test flow came from the lowest zone, which flowed 6,125 barrels of 35.7-degree API gravity oil and 10.35 million cubic feet of gas per day through a 3/4-inch choke.

Drilled in 358 feet of water to a depth of 14,480 feet, the 16/8b No. 6 well is about three miles north of the 16/8b No. 2 well, which was the discovery well of the Miller field.

Amoco to test electronic credit card system

CHICAGO - Amoco Oil Co. will test an electronic system for processing credit card sales at selected service stations this spring.

The new system will allow sales data - - including gallons sold, dollar amount, and credit card number - - to be sent via a telecommunications network to Amoco's credit card center where it would be automatically posted to the customer's account. In addition, the system will authorize the sales transaction to insure the validity of the card being used.

Using a variety of equipment, Amoco will test the system at about 30 Amoco service stations in Des Moines and at three stations in both Tampa and Chicago.

Great Western Sugar files for bankruptcy

Hunt family shuts down Denver-based firm

DALLAS (AP) — Great Western Sugar Co., one of the last assets of Hunt International Resources Co., filed for protection from its creditors Thursday in federal bankruptcy court.

The Denver-based company had been shut down last week by its parent company, which was once a major holding of billionaire brothers Nelson Bunker Hunt and W. Herbert Hunt of Dallas.

Great Western and its two subsidiaries filed a voluntary petition under the Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code, deputy court clerk Marge Tucker said.

The Hunts had sought bids for Great Western, but were apparently unable to make a sale that satisfied creditors. Hunt International's lenders have been in control of the ailing company's finances for several weeks.

The bankruptcy protection filing was the latest in a series of financial embarassments and downturns experienced by the wealthy Hunt family, once one of the nation's richest clans.

Company officials acknowledged last week that before Great Western's shutdown, Hunt International's only other operating assets were two offshore oil rigs.

"The banks refused to continue funding us," said Glen Adams, vice chairman of Great Western. "So we didn't have enough funds to protect the collateral."

Great Western's three main banks are Bankers Trust of New York, First National Bank of Chicago and Manufacturers Hanover Trust of New York.

Adams said the company's next move is to try and "make some kind of arrangements with the banks so that we can assure that the sugar beet crop gets in the ground."

Three thousand growers, owed money by Great Western, are depending on the company for money to buy beets in the next 30 to 45 days.

"It's going to take some money from the banks to do that," Adams said. "After that, then hopefully we can sell the company."

Hunt International, owned by the trusts of the two brothers children, was one of the family' three major holdings. Nelson Bunker and Herbert Hunt invested heavily in energy, commodities such as sugar and silver, and farm land, all of which have experienced slumps. Their losses have been estimated at $4 billion.

Great Western operates in five states — Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Nebraska and Kansas. Hunt International put the 80-year-old sugar company and its two subsidiaries on the sale block Dec. 26, running full-page newspaper ads.

An association representing 2,000 Great Western sugar beet growers has tried to purchase the company, and its Northern Ohio Sugar Co. subsidiary, through the two-month bidding process.

The association, Greeley, Colo.-based SUGRO, said it hoped to resume operation of the company's now-idle refineries.

Hunt International disclosed in an earlier Securities and Exchange Commission filing that it was in default on a $124.5 million line of credit at the end of January, and had borrowed an additional $92 million. The assets of the company were valued at about $192 million as of Sept. 30, according to the SEC filing.

The sugar industry has been hurt by the popularity of artificial sweetners. Growers say that because of the high cost of shipping, they would have to switch to other crops if Great Western permanently closed.

On Friday, 250 to 300 remaining Great Western employees were laid off and operations at its 13 refineries ceased. One week earlier, paychecks to employees bounced when banks stopped funding some of the company's operations.

Troubles for the two Hunt brothers has not recently been limited to their financial affairs. Last week in Washington, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission accused the two, along with several other individuals and companies, of illegally manipulating the silver market during late 1979 and early 1980.

Nelson Bunker and Herbert Hunt both have denied any wrongdoing.

McLaren follows his own instincts

By/MARY CAMMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

One can't predict where in music Malcolm McLaren will turn up next.

As he says, "I started as a painter. Once you finish a canvas, you get on with another."

Right now he has released "Fans," the second album of a two-record deal with Island Records. In it, he's in opera land.

The first album, "Duck Rock," in 1982, took him to Zulu land and the wilds of both Tennessee and New York City.

And before that he gave the world, as manager, the Sex Pistols, Adam and the Ants and Bow Wow Wow. The latter included, for a few minutes, Boy George. He isn't friends with any of those people now, McLaren says. He designed clothes and owned shops and met those bands' members as customers.

"People accused me of being a terrible dilettante. Groups ended up hating me. They thought I left them when it was important for me to continue. I thought anybody could manage them; they didn't need me.

"Having designed the picture — the group — and done the final shaping and seen it reach a stage for an audience to understand, for me the job is done. When they looked like they were going to succeed, I got bored.

"I decided there wasn't any point forming more groups. It might be more interesting to make records myself. I'd rather go to the zones of my own inspiration. That's what started me off."

McLaren had trouble getting a record contract. Island signed him for two LPs and now wants him to renew. But he's thinking about doing something different. He was in New York, where he was interviewed, for talks with theater producer Joseph Papp.

"I'd rather, this time, work in a way to make the visual side come through," McLaren says. "I've become thrilled by film and stage. You can put music and fashion together." He thinks the new album, "Fans," could be turned into a stage presentation.

For "Duck Rock," McLaren says, "I was running around the world listening to everybody's folk music, primarily the dances of it."

Two disco hits came from that album, "Buffalo Gals" and "Double Dutch."

McLaren says, "What was inspiring about it for me was the practical nature of music, the way people make it intrinsic to their very life."

In New York, McLaren found some disc jockeys making "hip hop" or "scratch" music — talking over records they were playing, mixing records together, playing parts of records over and over, turning records with their hands to slow them down.

Man confesses to death of Waukegan girl

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP) — Henry Lucas, the Texas jail inmate who says he has killed at least 360 people, has confessed to the slaying of a 12-year-old Waukegan girl — one of about 30 people he says he killed in Illinois, authorities report.

Lisa Slusser was killed in 1977 while she was on an acorn-gathering expedition near her home in Waukegan. She was stabbed 19 times, her skull was fractured, and she was sexually molested.

Despite the confession, Lake County Sheriff Robert H. "Mickey" Babcox said Wednesday he was not ready to close the book on the case.

"He didn't tell us anything about the crime that wasn't general knowledge," said Willie Smith.

NATION in brief

Jacksonville man charged in kidnapping of nurse

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — A nurse abducted in her own car by a gunman bailed out in front of the sheriff's office, and deputies gave chase and shot the driver, authorities said.

Bobby Dallas of Jacksonville, wounded in a shootout, was charged with abduction and several other counts, said St. Johns County Sheriff Neil Perry. Dallas was in critical but stable condition Thursday.

Junior-high student Dickey Reeder, 14, suffered a broken leg when he was hit by the car during the chase.

Denise Sherrin jumped yelling from her car after Dallas ordered her at gunpoint to drive out of the city, Perry said.

Teen gets probation

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A teenager convicted of trying to poison his father in a plot foiled by the youth's friends has been sentenced to three years in prison and placed on 50 years' probation.

Montgomery Todd Meeks, 19, was ordered Wednesday to undergo counseling and do 200 hours of community service work per year of probation. He was convicted of attempted murder and solicitation of murder after he sent a classmate to Louisville, Ky., in October 1983 to buy ricin, a poison.

Friends intercepted the classmate and replaced the poison with water.

Woman sues airline

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A woman has sued Galaxy Airlines, Lockheed Corp. and the organizers of a gambling junket for negligence in connection with a Jan. 21 plane crash in Nevada that killed 70 people. Her son was the only survivor.

In two Hennepin County District Court lawsuits seeking at least $50,000 each, Adrianne Lamson of St. Paul also names as defendants charter organizer Hy Thayer and Caesar's Palace. George Lamson Jr., 17, was injured in the crash.

Calls to Thayer went unanswered Thursday. Spokesmen for Lockheed and Caesar's said they had not seen the suit and declined comment. Galaxy attorney Paul Engstrom said evidence has not shown the airline to be responsible.

Company converts unit

INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. is preparing to reopen its methyl isocyanate unit here, but will convert the deadly chemical to a safer chemical or finished pesticide for shipment, an official said.

The company will spend $5 million to $10 million for facilities to convert MIC — the chemical that killed more than 2,000 people when it leaked from a Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India — to a safer state, spokesman Thad Epps said Thursday.

Carbide won't begin production of MIC here until it completes its internal investigation of the Dec. 3 Bhopal disaster, Epps said.

DEMING, N.M. (AP) — Authorities say they'll decide within two weeks whether to seek a new trial after jurors couldn't reach a verdict in the case of a man accused of keeping his mentally ill wife in a cage-like room for two years.

Frederick Misany was charged with falsely imprisoning his wife between June 1982 and June 29, 1984, in a barred room in their mobile home. A mistrial was declared after 3½ hours of jury deliberation Wednesday.

Defense attorney Tom Foy Jr. said Misany believed he had the authority to keep his wife locked up to protect her and that the man believed she was raped and abused in mental institutions.

Fumes puzzle authorities

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Authorities say they may never determine the source of unidentified fumes "like fingernail-polish remover" that felled six people near Union Carbide Corp. and FMC Corp. chemical plants.

Officials of both companies said Thursday that they were investigating the fumes and did not know whether they were coming from their plants, which are within a mile of each other.

The odor dissipated within 30 minutes and none of the people overcome by the fumes was admitted to hospitals, authorities said.

Man files suit against car wash

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A man who claims he was attacked by a spray wand at a self-service car wash is suing the car wash owner for $200,000.

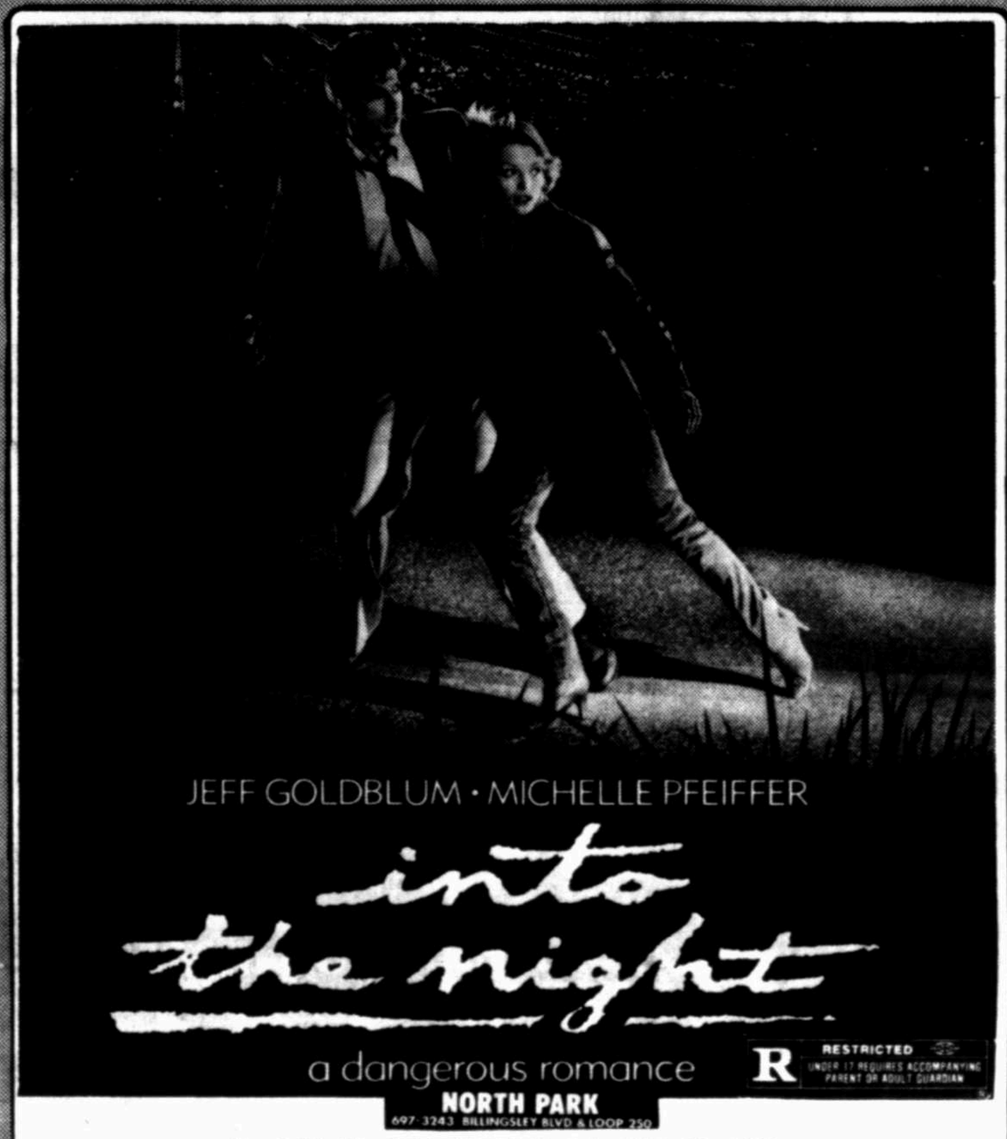

George S. Deits of Marietta, Ga., in a suit filed Tuesday in Hamilton County Circuit Court, said he suffered a detached retina, permanent damage to his vision and lost wages in the May 1, 1984, incident.

Conference educates teens, campaigns for 'Survival Bill'

By NADINE BROZAN
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The problem under consideration was adolescent pregnancy.

The seminars, lectures and workshops holding the attention of 900 people at the fourth annual conference of the Children's Defense Fund encompassed prenatal care, jobs and job training, tax reform, federal budget cuts, child care and improved health and education policies.

But no matter what the issue, it was almost always connected with adolescent pregnancy, and that problem, as Marian Wright Edelman, president of the advocacy organization, put it, "has no quick fixes."

Her voice ringing with emotion during the final speech of the three-day event, Mrs. Edelman said, "The heart of combating adolescent pregnancy is not just sex education, it is giving young people a future, a stake in that future. It is giving them decent schools, decent jobs, prenatal care so that they have healthy babies, child care so they can work."

AMONG SEVERAL new projects announced during the conference conducted in the Hyatt Regency Hotel was a five-year campaign to make prenatal care available to all pregnant women, to reduce infant mortality, birth defects and repeat pregnancies to teen-agers and to insure that those teen-agers who do become pregnant enounter no obstacles to prenatal care. Many of the proposals are contained in the Children's Survival Bill, an omnibus piece of legislation that will be reintroduced shortly in Congress.

In her talk, Mrs. Edelman said that unless advances were made, "At least 22,000 babies will die in the United States between 1985 and 1990, primarily because they were born too small to survive. Thousands more will be handicapped for life. One in eight of these deaths, 2,700 of them, could be prevented by insuring that their mothers receive adequate prenatal care. Out of another 100,000 deaths in which low birth weight is a contributing factor, 13,800 lives might be saved if the mothers received comprehensive prenatal care."

ACCORDING TO a report issued by the Children's Defense Fund and documented by statistics, a disproportionate number of at-risk babies are born to adolescents. (In 1982, women under the age of 20 bore 523,531 children). Teen-agers, especially younger ones, and black women were shown to be those most likely to receive inadequate care or in some cases no care at all. The report says that "children giving birth to children" harms not only the mother but also the baby. The mother's chances of dropping out of school and being unable to find a job escalate greatly, and the baby is vulnerable to physical, mental and emotional handicaps.

THE STATISTICS on childbearing among teen-agers and on the poverty in which they are likely to raise their children, contained in several documents distributed at the conference, were bleak. Of the 3,680,537 babies born in the United States in 1982, 523,531, or 14 percent, were born to adolescents.

However, many approaches have been tried and some have been found to work. Alice Radosh, coordinator of services for teen-agers in the Office of the Mayor of New York and former director of the Brooklyn Teen Pregnancy Network, described what can be done.

"In Brooklyn, four years ago, there were 14,000 teen-agers becoming pregnant and no services," she said. "So we brought together a diversity of agencies, family planning, schools, churches, storefront agencies, and created a network to get the teen-agers to use the services. It has created two employement programs: one in carpentry and plumbing with day care on the site and the other in word processing."

IN SEVERAL CITIES — St. Paul, Houston and Jackson, Miss., among them — programs have been brought to adolescents rather than waiting for them to seek help, and that has meant establishing comprehensive health care clinics on the premises of high schools and junior high schools.

By May, there will be 30 clinics in schools in 17 cities, with 19 more in various stages of planning.

"You may wonder how we manage to dispense birth control in a school in Jackson, in the heart of the Bible Belt," Dr. Aaron Shirley, director of the Jackson-Hinds Comprehensive Health Center, said. "Well, we stumbled on family planning." In 1979, the staff at his clinic realized that they were not attracting sufficient numbers of adolescents and as he recalled, "Some smart aleck said, 'Where are the students? They're in school.' "

A PROGRAM was started in a local high school, with no particular emphasis on sexual matters. As Shirley said, "No one was keyed into pregnant girls, until someone called me and said, 'We have a lot of mothers in the school.' I identified 90 mothers in a school with a population of 960 and learned that half of them had given birth before starting high school." Services for them were offered, but, said Shirley, "Had we set out to be a teen-age pregnancy program, we probably would have been kicked out. Once we were in place, no one objected.

The clinic treats everything from sports injuries to acne and in so doing has crated a climate of trust between the health professionals and the students that is invaluable in dealing with family planning and pregnancy, he said.

IN HOUSTON, the school clinic had its inception in an effort by the Urban Affairs Corporation to study the need for day care in the schools in 1979.

"We marketed ourselves as an adolescent health care facility, but we wanted to be a family planning center and deal with parents and babies in a safe and comfortable setting," Mrs. Lovick said, pointing out that with its diverse services, only 11 percent of the 6,000 medical visits made during the first year were for pregnancy-related matters.

A follow-up study of 150 prenatal patients in the first school-based clinic in the country, in St. Paul, which now has programs in four schools, shows that of the student patients who delivered babies between 1974 and 1981, 80 percent of them graduated from high school. Of those who remained in school, only 1.3 percent became pregnant again. By contrast, national data indicate that 50 percent of adolescent mothers do not finish school, and more than 17 percent have a second child within a year.

Brain implants used to cure high blood pressure

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A risky surgical procedure using soft plastic placed against the brain is proving to be a reliable cure for patients suffering the severest forms of high blood pressure, according to a neurosurgeon.

Dr. Peter J. Jannetta said he has been able to lower blood pressure by implanting tiny swatches of soft plastic felt against the brain to relieve abnormal pressure from blood vessels on nerve cells that tell the heart how hard to beat.

The procedure succeeded for 36 patients, or 86 percent, of the 42 operations Jannetta said he conducted and analyzed. In the other six cases, Jannetta said he concluded that his surgical technique was inadequate.

The pressure against the nerves which distorts the brain's instructions to the heart comes from arteries that stretch as a person ages, often forming loops, he said.

By repositioning the problem arteries and insulating the key nerve cells with the tiny wads of felt, Jannetta said he can insulate the nerves from the arteries' rhythmic beating.

High blood pressure is a leading cause of heart attacks, kidney disorder and strokes. Of the estimated 20 million Americans who have high blood pressure, medication, the preferred treatment, has little or no effect for 2½ million, he said.

Medication remains the preferred treatment for hypertension because of the risks involved in surgery.

Benefits replace good times in Aspen

New York Times News Service

ASPEN, Colo. — "When we first came here," said Walter Ganz, who with his wife, Ruth, kissed Englewood, N.J., goodbye a dozen years ago, "there were just two things to do in this town: skiing and sex. Do you know what the biggest thing is now?" A pause. 'Fundraising! You can go to a benefit every night of the week. It is incredible."

And it is almost true. In this area, the Roaring Fork Valley, of 9,000 population (30,000 in high ski season), no fewer than 75 cultural, sports and social-service organizations vie for the philanthropic dollar by staging more than 200 fund-raising events a year. Add to these the private parties at which the big givers are discreetly solicited and the total is closer to 300. Big givers abound. Those in the know say that, of the Forbes 400 list of the wealthiest individuals in the country, 60-odd have strong ties to Aspen, which means either second homes or regular visits or both.

In a recent week the Aspen Historical Society had its annual Sweetheart Ball (dress: Victorian), and Marian Lyeth, widow of Munro L. Lyeth (chairman of the board, Cherry Creek National Bank, Denver), was host at a cocktail party for donors to the Music Associates of Aspen, whose vice president and longtime benefactor, Marjorie Stein (of the Block family, Inland Steel, Chicago), made a soft pitch for more support. Also, the Aspen Community School had its annual art auction.

FURTHERMORE, the Aspen Art Museum, whose board president, Mary Jane Anderson, owns and operates the 900-acre Aspen Valley Ranch, had its weekly wine-and-cheese tour and was preparing for its Patrons Dinner (dress: Western), and Ballet/Aspen had its Valentine Eve Benefit Dinner, an event chaired by Scarlett Adams, whose husband, Harland Adams, (of the family that owns Kentucky Fried Chicken) paid $40,000 at a charity auction last year for the privilege of buying — in literal fact, naming — a ski run on nearby Snowmass Mountain. It is called Adams Avenue.

All this largesse supports a cultural environment unique among ski resorts. ("What have they got in St. Moritz?" says Susan Gurrentz, a member of the museum board. "Gambling and bobsledding. What have they got in Vail? Nothing.") The Aspen Art Museum mounted shows by Susan Rothenberg, Andy Warhol and Ansel Adams and a Buckminster Fuller retrospective. Ballet/Aspen gives 28 performances in a five-week season, has a repertory company and supports a dance school. The Aspen Institute imports scholars and political leaders for seminars. Music Associates brings in such artists as Misha Dichter, Pinchas Zukerman and Emanuel Ax for its summer festival.

TO KEEP ALL this going — and this does not begin to cover the school programs, the hospital, the junior hockey teams, the day care, the film society, the library, the writers conference — requires an ardent courtship of the big givers, and recently the suitors have been tripping over one another.

"Charities are competitive, that's life," said Lita W. Heller (daughter of the late film producer Jack Warner), president of the board of Ballet/Aspen. "You can't raise money the way they used to. My father used to pick up the phone and say, 'Listen, you want the business? You want your cars on the Warner lot next year? Send me a check for $100,000.'

"But the no-party solicitation doesn't work here," she said. "People want a party. The competition for dollars is tremendous, the smaller benefits are being run into the ground and the amateurs are going to fall by the wayside. I hate to see professionals take over, but I think that's how it will have to go."

It has already happened. The Aspen Foundation, formed four years ago as a sort of community chest, is directed by Kristin Marsh, a professional fund-raiser.

MARY ESHBAUGH HAYES, associate editor of The Aspen Times, estimates that the annual philanthropic take in this valley is $2 million. This season, the Aspen Foundation alone raised $450,000 by the sale of special donors' ski passes. They are distinguished by their price ($2,500) and their color (basic black) and, glimpsed about an occasional neck on the lift lines, carry more cachet than gold. The foundation will raise at least $250,000 more during World Cup Week, with the jewel in Aspen's social and philanthropic crown: La Grande Affaire, a black-tie dinner-dance and auction that will bring out the serious gowns and the international crowd.

DEAR ABBY

Diner conversation too spicy for lunchtime

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We often have lunch at a coffee shop near our office. The acoustics there are such that conversations at nearby booths or tables are very audible. More than once we have had to listen to vulgar and profane language because we could not help overhearing.

Today I heard a vulgar expression I've never heard before (I'm 58). These are not arguments, just business people discussing their office or jobs.

If you were sitting there, would you:

1. Suffer in silence. (After all, this sort of thing is not uncommon and is therefore tolerated.)

2. Ask the manager to speak to these people. (That hardly seems fair, asking him to do your dirty work, when he probably does not want to offend other regular customers.)

3. Go up to the booth or table and say something like: "Pardon me, but perhaps you are unaware that your conversation is being heard at the nearby tables."

If you print a better solution, I'll keep copies in my purse to hand out. OFFENDED IN L.A.

DEAR OFFENDED: I would write a note saying something like:

"Your language is offensive. Please clean up your act, or keep your voices down. Thank you. — The Lunch Bunch"

Then I would either ask the waitress to deliver it to the offending table, or I'd deliver it myself.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a unique problem with no visible way to solve it without losing a friendship.

We have friends with whom we play cards at least once a week. Both my husband and I have seen Mr. X palm a wild card off the table onto his lap to be used when he needs it in order to win. We do not play for high stakes, so neither my husband nor I can comprehend why Mr. X. does this.

Needless to say, Mr. X is always the big winner — the total rarely amounts to $5.

Now when we play, I am all tense, always looking to see if Mr. X is going to palm another card. We don't want to mention this to his wife or to his other friends, as we really care for them.

What should our game plan be? — CHEATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR CHEATED: Your game plan should be "truth or consequences." When you see Mr. X palm a card, call him on it in a jocular way — "I didn't know you were a sleight-of-hand artist; let's see you palm another card!" Then let him take the consequences.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is very insensitive about people who have had mastectomies, as I have had. She mentions her big bosom every chance she gets, and seems so proud of it.

Recently she lost 10 pounds, and at a party loudly stated that she was sad because she lost it all in her bosom! Then the other evening at another party, she announced that she had gained two pounds — and guess where? "In my headlights!" This was particularly disgusting to everyone because another good friend who had had a mastectomy was present.

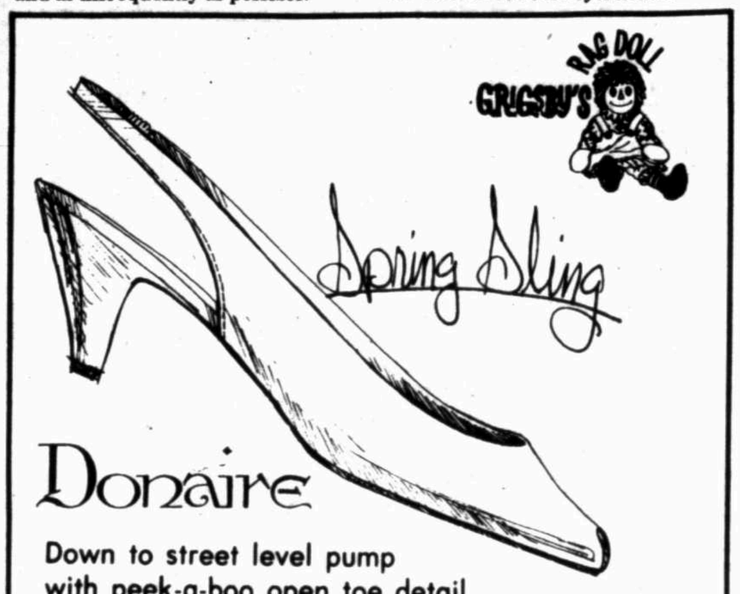

My husband said that she must have gained two pounds between her ears. We are all around 70 and have never heard anyone talk that way before. How should a woman like this be treated? – NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: At a distance, and as infrequently as possible.

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

BUICK

WHY SETTLE FOR LESS THAN A BUICK?

Why should you...even if it's a small car you're looking for? You're exactly the person Buick had in mind when it designed the 1985 Skylark. A serious driver who wants practicality and affordability tempered by comfort and convenience. The very things Buicks have long been noted for...as well as for roominess and quiet and the security of a well-built car. They're all here in the '85 Skylark. Drive one today.

Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?
