

Population Of Hobbs Doubled In Month; 200 Car Loads Of Material Shipped In 2 Weeks

Lea County, New Mexico, Oil Town Is Scene Of Much Activity; Construction Of Buildings On Constantly

By J. SAM LEWIS Staff Correspondent

HOBBS, N. M., May 13.—Hobbs, that is Old Hobbs, New Hobbs and All Hobbs, has doubled its population within four weeks, or since the day the Texas and New Mexico railroad ran its first train into town, April 12.

Buildings are going up on every hand, evidences of the permanency of the fields, is the claim of its citizens. There have been 50 new residences completed or started within the past two weeks and four or five are going up every day.

Much Material Brought In In two weeks 200 car loads of building material have been received here. There are 100 car loads material for Hobbs now on the track at Monahans, unable to move into Hobbs on account of the condition of the tracks here and the general crowded condition of the yards.

A new depot is being erected by the railroad company. It is a frame structure and will be used for passenger and freight business.

One new hotel, of 100 rooms capacity, is under construction in Old Hobbs.

In New Hobbs another hotel is under construction. It will be of brick and will have a capacity of 125 rooms.

Pipe Lines Coming The Humble Pipe Line company has virtually completed its pipe line into Hobbs and within four or five days will be receiving oil.

The Dutch-Schell interests are working on their pipe line and will have it completed shortly, it is reported.

Work on construction of the Atlantic Pipe company's line has not started but is expected to soon.

There are 35 rigs to be seen from the roads entering Hobbs. Two weeks ago there were only about 20 rigs.

27 Locations Made Latest report shows 27 locations for new tests.

Two of the operations are reported on top of the pay sand and will be brought in almost any day. Another test is close while there are several holes down below the 3,000 foot level.

One of the recent business changes is the purchase of an interest in the Hobbs News by S. H. Wimberly, of Miami, Fla. The News Publishing company has been incorporated with $20,000 capital. Stanley Sigler was the former owner and he will be publisher of the new paper.

Purchase Machinery Wimberly and Sigler went to Dallas and completed arrangements for the purchase of $15,000 worth of machinery and equipment. This will include a cylinder press, a job press, cutter, linotype, saw, stapler, perforator and other printing office equipment.

Meanwhile J. T. Harris, owner of a lot on Ship street between Carlsbad and Taylor, has begun erection of a building, 50 by 140 feet. The News is to occupy a room 24 by 50 feet on the corner of Taylor and Ship.

The more enthusiastic estimate the population at 8,000 people but conservative estimates place the number of permanent residents at between 4,000 and 4,500.

Much Building Going On New business houses are being started every day. Carlsbad street, a mile long, is the center of business. Lots have been sold and re-sold and there has not been a single loss according to real estate men.

Each succeeding sale has been for a higher price than the previous one.

All business houses here for any length of time have had to expand. The Dal Paso hotel and the Texas hotel are both enlarging.

New jewelry stores, new filling stations, battery stations, grocery stores, a mattress factory, a ladies' ready-to-wear store, a department store, dry goods store, furniture store, hardware store, drug stores and the like have come in recently or are building structures in which to house their stocks.

Church Started The Methodists have started a church here. Rev. W. R. Barnett is the pastor and he preaches at the Hobbs school house.

Hobbs, that is that part which is not busy, will entertain the Midland boosters on their arrival Tuesday.

A crowd of 300 is expected to come on a special train. There will be a 28-piece band from the high school.

MOODY CRITICIZED Earle Mayfield Replies To Governor's Statement

WINNSBORO, May 12.—Former United States Senator Earle B. Mayfield in opening his campaign here for governor issued a statement replying to one by Gov. Moody yesterday. In part he said:

"Dan Moody's attack upon me in this morning's papers is the only thing I needed to absolutely clinch the democratic nomination for governor in the approaching primaries. Every knock from him is a boost. If I had been governor of Texas three and a half years and had made as complete a failure of the job as Moody has made, I would not have the nerve to run for governor the third term, but would quietly retire and give somebody else a chance."

Land Case of J.E. Barlow Is Dropped

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The Joseph E. Barlow land claim of $9,000,000 against the Cuban government, which has troubled state department officials in the last two administrations and the Cuban government 12 years, was definitely tabled today in a state department report.

"In the present position," said the report, "the department does not feel that any action in regard to Mr. Barlow's claim would be now appropriate."

It followed submission of a lengthy discussion of the case by Harry F. Guggenheim, American ambassador to Cuba, who flew to Washington recently to discuss Barlow's affairs.

Accompanying his statement that the Barlow claim had lost merit with a summary of his case, the state department said the Barlow case involved claim to possession of a certain tract of swamp land, "largely undeveloped," in the city of Havana.

AMERICAN IS KILLED Payroll Robbery In Colombia Fatal To Oil Paymaster

BOGOTA, Colombia, May 13.—A payroll robbery near Bucaramanga today, something new in Colombian crime, resulted in the death of Paul Leroy Keating, 23, of Oil City, Pa., paymaster for the Tropical Oil company.

Keating, accompanied by three other employees and a member of the constabulary, was carrying payroll funds of $33,350 in a pay car and had reached the plant.

When he began paying the workmen, robbers appeared and opened fire with revolvers, killing Keating. Then they seized the car and compelled the driver to speed them away, later putting him out.

On The Edge Of This Volcano Grows The Choicest Coffee Known

... If you've never tasted these rare mountain coffees from the West Coast — Do it Today!

NATURE'S choicest coffee is grown on the slopes of an old volcano. . . . It is flavored in Nature's own way, by steaming tropic rains. . . . rich volcanic soil. . . . brilliant mountain sunshine. . . . All of these combine to give it a rich vivid flavor that is utterly unlike any other coffee known.

districts along the West Coast of Central America. Coffees with a winy tang and delicious mellow body, that experts agree are not duplicated anywhere else in the world. If you've never tasted Folger's, we believe your first cup will be a revelation.

A New Flavor Ordinarily you note little real difference when you change from one brand of coffee to another. That is because over 70 per cent of all the coffee entering the United States comes from one common region—where Nature gives it the same common taste. The Central American coffees that we use are another type altogether. Grown in a different country where Nature gives coffee a rare flavor found nowhere else in the world. You will realize that this is no ordinary coffee with the very first rush of fragrance that comes with the opening of the tin.

Specialist Gives Beverage Recipe

Berry season is here and from all accounts the crop of blackberries and dewberries this year is unusually large, says Miss Mamie Lee Hayden, extension specialist in home industry at Agricultural and Mechanical college, College Station.

Miss Hayden gives the following recipe for dewberry or blackberry acid: one gallon of berries, two ounces of tartaric acid, one pint of boiling water, and sugar.

"Four boiling water over berries," she directs, "and let it stand 25 hours. Drain in jelly bag. For every pint of juice add one pint of sugar. Add acid and stir until sugar and acid have dissolved. Pour in sterilized jars and screw tops on loosely. Put a false bottom in a vessel or bucket deep enough to hold the jars in bucket. Fill to within one or two inches of the top with water and let all simmer 20 minutes. Screw tops on jars as tightly as possible and keep in cool place. Berry acid is to be used as a foundation for summer drinks. Use two or four tablespoons (or to taste) to a glass, and fill with water and ice."

Jim Lindsey Stops Giants As Cards Cop 7th Straight

Former Texan Checks McGraw Rally in Sixth

Chicago Cubs Pile Up Early Lead to Beat Out Boston Braves; Phillies Slug to Swamp Buccanera

ST. LOUIS, May 13. (AP)—Jim Lindsey, a right handed recruit pitcher from Houston, saved the day for the Cardinals today and enabled them to run their winning streak to seven games by defeating the New York Giants, 6 to 4. Lindsey stepped into the box after Sherdel had weakened in the sixth inning and had the bases after one run had scored. He checked the Giant rally, allowing two more runners in the sixth and none in the next three innings to score his first victory of the season.

Bill Walker pitched the entire game for the Giants, but extra base hits caused his downfall. The Cardinals made five of the nine doubles in the game, bunching three of them in the sixth to overcome a one-run lead. Hayes hit a homer in the eighth.

VALUATIONS INCREASE

(Special To The Avalanche)
POST, May 13.—Garza county's valuation for 1929 was nearly $30,000 larger than for 1928. W. P. Calo, sheriff and tax collector, reports. Valuation the past year was $4,311,862, compared to $4,621,862 a year ago.

Bob Fitzsimmons made his first appearance as a boxer in an amateur tournament conducted by Jim Made in New England.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

Thinking Out Loud
Mule Haas played in left center for Babe Ruth the other day, which is against the union rules, but that happens to be just where Babe smacked one that would have been a homer if Mule hadn't been playing there. Center fielders are supposed to play deep right center for the Buster, the vote for Mule, Ben Chapman, the new third baseman for the Yankees, got some chance to look over fast ball pitching when he faced Vance of the Dodgers one day recently and in the opening American League game faced Lefty Grove. Ben says that Parmelee, who was in the Association last year, can throw one as fast as ol' Dazzy or Grove. Can this be true? ... Leo Diegel, the Agua Caliente pro, who puts like your Aunt Martha, announces that he is out after five major and two sectional championships this year, including an officially recognized match for the world's professional title, to be played in England against the title-holder, Abe Mitchell. Well, well!

American League Again
Henry Edwards, the man employed to keep the American League's name in the papers, did not tell me this, but according to unofficial statistics, the American League had the best of the training games with the National League. The American League teams won 41 from their National League rivals, while losing 36. The New York Giants were the worst offenders, winning 6 and losing 11. The Braves won 12 and lost 11 from the American League, however, and the Cincinnati Reds also had a slight edge, 5 to 4. That's some supremacy, anyway.

If Ted Rickard were around the diggings now, he might be promoting a little hockey on the side. During the season just ended, the Boston Bruins were sold out in every one of their home games. 22. They played to about 300,000 fans during the league season, and at $1.50 a head, that means nearly half a million seats. Inviting proceeds, say a million.

Two Meets Chin

Jim Jeffrey says Primo Carnera's chin is too big, reports Tom Laird of San Francisco. Jim says all big chins are glass and they crack easily. Not only that, but a wonderful legend, maybe Jeff knows. Out on the coast the other day, three fine young men held an innocent meeting. One was Jack Kearns, who is handling George Godfrey's affairs for Jimmy Dougherty. Another was Bill Duffy, the brains behind the Carnera boxing crusade. The third was Ancil Hoffman, coast promoter. When shall these three meet again? ... Jimmy Zimm, the pitcher who always had something the matter with him when he pitched on the coast, pitched for the Cleveland Indians. In going great guns out on the coast for the Prisco Seals. Jim has the stuff, all right.

During a relay the other day on the coast between the University of California and the Olympic Club teams, Bill Barlow pulled a muscle and fell. Bill Bias, California broad jumper, leaped to the track, snatched Barlow's baton and carried it forward. It was against the rules but Coach Charley Hunter didn't protest. So the impromptu substitution was allowed. California, however, lost the race by a yard. Sounds like those Merrill stories. But, would Coach Hunter have protested if California had won?

George Eaton, deputy commissioner, was guest yesterday of the Kiwanis club at Sudan, where a financial campaign for the scouts in that city was started yesterday afternoon.

Lions Entertained By Dance Students

Pupils of Mrs. Aubrey Walker were featured entertainers at the weekly luncheon session of the Lubbock Lions club yesterday noon at the Hilton Hotel. SHOOTING WITH SHUTE

Never Use Your Niblick In Sand Trap Except As Last Resort

If I felt ambitious and literary, I probably could write an entire novel-length book on how to play out of sand traps. And probably I wouldn't half cover the field, either. One thing that strikes me as a rather common error is as a choice of a club to play out of such places. Duffers I have seen seem to think the niblick is the one club to use in such a situation and that that is the only use for such a club. Of course that is not true. The niblick is the club when explosion shots are necessary, but one should never attempt an explosion shot when any other method of getting out remains.
In traps where there is no trench between the sand and the side of the bunker, most any club is better than a niblick, and in shallow traps where no special loft is required, a putter is frequently the best club to use.
As a matter of fact, I believe the duffer who gets wild-eyed and afraid the minute he gets into sand will find it to his advantage to think over the possibilities of getting out with the putter first. Then if he finds that the putter doesn't answer his purpose, he should go on up the line of clubs until he decides on one with which he can feel certain of getting out.

Explorer of Top and Bottom of World May Undertake Proposed Trip Beneath Arctic Ice in Obsolete U. S. Submarine

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, May 13.—Capt. Hubert Wilkins, explorer of the top and bottom of the world, may undertake his proposed trip beneath the Arctic ice in an obsolete United States submarine, converted into a "submersible boat."

The bearded explorer with Simon Lake, submarine inventor and builder, called upon Assistant Secretary Jahncke of the Navy late yesterday to try and purchase such a boat. Whether the Navy will sell has yet to be decided.

Both Wilkins and Lake were loath to discuss their conference. The explorer acknowledged that the possibility of using a submersible boat for geophysical work in the Arctic had been discussed. He added, however, that being a British subject he himself could not possibly purchase such a craft from the government.

It was Assistant Secretary Jahncke who told the details of the visit. He said the explorer and the inventor had been advised to enclose the details of their proposed purchase in a letter to be submitted to Secretary Adams.

Jahncke added that undoubtedly the request would eventually be sent to the department of state. A clause in the London naval treaty, which has yet to come before the senate, makes specific mention of experimental submarines, he explained, and thus the proposed sale would involve an international angle.

Wilkins, whose explorations have carried him through the air, said he planned to make his sub-ice voyage into the north

ONE MINUTE PULPIT Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land.—Isaiah, I, 18, 19.

IT WOULD BE FOLLY TO QUIT THERE is much food for thought contained in the following statement by R. J. Murray, president of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and board of city development, that every reader can afford to ponder.

The fact that Lubbock made such an increase in population is due solely to the leadership this city has taken in advertising the resources of the South Plains.

Mr. Murray continues by saying: "While some other agricultural sections of the United States are in deplorable conditions, at this time, yet the section immediately around Lubbock is in admirable condition, prospering and growing."

"In my mind this atmosphere is maintained by the courageous way the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce has told most of the United States, through semi-national advertising in many farm periodicals, of the agricultural resources of this section. To my mind the chamber of commerce citizens of Lubbock could do nothing better during the next two years than to continue the advertising of our agricultural resources."

"If the undeveloped land in Lubbock's trade territory is placed in cultivation within the next 10 years, Lubbock will have a population of 60,000, and will be the manufacturing and distributing point of West Texas."

No better proof of our greatest resource can be offered to the outside world than the remarkable growth of Lubbock, from a town of 4,051 people to a bustling little city of 20,512, in 10 years time. The added accretion to be derived from this year's government census of Lubbock, is backed by a remarkable growth in number of farms in farm families, in new lands put to cultivation during the past decade.

As The Morning Avalanche views it, the logical procedure for the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce now is to proclaim in greater voice what our resources are. Our claims will now be more convincing, with government census figures backing us up. To stop now would be the utmost folly.

CHANGING TASTES There is real news value in two items that appeared in commercial reports of the past week. The items being to the effect that toothbrush sales are increasing while sales of virtually all other commodities have been declining and that the piano-accordion has usurped the place of the saxophone at the moment.

Toothbrush sales are a barometer of the success of health education in the schools, of Americanization efforts and of rising living standards. Like the bathtub, the toothbrush was once the luxury of the rich, or, as many non-users believed, the burden of the rich. Within recent years school hygiene has made rapid strides in teaching health and care of the teeth, which means future generations with healthier and cleaner mouths, and, consequently, healthier bodies.

Elevation of the piano-accordion in popular estimation is one of the wonders of the evolution of modern music. Not so very long ago it was the instrument of gypsies, loggers and immigrants, laborers and more or less looked down upon by 100 per cent Americans, some of whom even then harbored a secret love of its melodious strains. Those who have never been converted to the saxophone will not lament the waning popularity of that instrument, now second in popularity to the piano accordion, the latter of which is the instrument of the public exploit, the fall-off in sales of violins, saxophones and other orchestral instruments.

FRUITLESS ZEAL Political radicals seeking to "overthrow" the American government that they may try out their own ideas on government are wasting their time and money and bringing upon themselves fruitless suffering and mental perturbation. All this parading, picketing, sign painting and head-cracking will go for naught.

Perhaps it is because they cannot sense the fallacies of their own political theories that they do not see the futility of trying to convert the rank and file of Americans. There are a number of reasons why the thing cannot be done.

Chief among these obstacles to the socialization or communization of the United States is the American's inherent intolerance of another's political opinions. A Democrat can no more accept a Republican's viewpoint than a Republican can understand the Socialist. And to this day the failure of the rest of the world to adopt the American system of government lock, stock and barrel remains a mystery to most Americans. There is only one tenable system and that is theirs. This intolerance of another's religion with the rank and file.

Silliest of the fears of the chronically hysterical is the fear of revolution and a Red Terror on American soil. Except in times of general unemployment the communists cannot muster enough malcontents to stage an interesting parade.

On the Firing Line at the Nation's Capital

By CHARLES P. STEWART Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 13.—J. Raymond McCarl holds office on the same basis that progressive sentiment in the senate favors for justices of the U. S. supreme court.

That is to say, he was named for an unusually long term but at its end he will not be eligible to reappointment.

If McCarl is a fair sample of what Uncle Sam can get in the way of public servants on those conditions, it would pay him to expand the system; but he probably couldn't. Comptroller General McCarls are scarce enough to class as pure accidents.

A decade ago, when congress created the comptroller generalship, it saw the importance of making the job's incumbent an independent of any human influence as Robinson Crusoe.

His stunt is to collect all of Uncle Sam's bills and pass on all bills presented against him. A bill collector seldom is popular. Still less so is a cashier whose task is to turn down swindle sheets running from a few cents apiece into the millions of dollars, to a 10-figure total annually.

In such a functionary apt to be subjected to tremendous pressure by mighty powerful interests quite frequently—not to push some government claim toward or not to over-finkly about jostling down his "o. k." on one document or another that means a lot to people it may be actually dangerous to antagonize.

Oh boy! There's no superlative adequate to describe it. Congress foresaw this. To protect the contemplated comptroller, it made him removal-proof (except by impeachment) for a 15-year term, allowed him a $10,000 annual salary and then (for presumably having been banished from his breast, to extinguish hope also) prescribed a single term as his maximum limit.

Somehow McCarl was talked into accepting this berth—the only one of its kind in the country, and McCarl is the only man who ever held it; his one term has not expired yet. At its end, he will be eligible to reappointment—with no retirement pay either.

In the nature of things it is the most thankless job on earth. Already McCarl has saved the government ten times more money than anyone in history—and made somebody howl with rage for every dollar of it. Fifteen years of this—and then, oblivion.

The point is, however—it is widely urged that first class lawyers could not be found to become federal judges for less than life terms.

If lawyers are like accountants this argument is faulty; any time Uncle Sam finds a competent judge as he did an accountant, when J. Raymond McCarl went to work for him on a 15-year basis, with no retirement allowance—he will have good grounds on which to congratulate himself.

At any rate, the comparison is interesting—considering recent progressive talk concerning the judiciary.

Like congress, in creating the comptroller generalship, the "founding fathers," aimed to make the federal bench independent—and went congress one better by according life tenure to the judges. They meant the supreme court to act as a hard-set brake on governmental change and it works that way.

This is what irks the present senate progressives. They are not the first progressives it has irked. Among others, it irked President Roosevelt so much that he proposed some ballot-box method of reversing supreme court decisions.

Today's progressives think they would be satisfied if the brake's grip could be loosened temporarily, occasionally; but that never occurs. This is a conservative country most of the time. Consequently, most of the supreme judges are conservatively chosen. Now and then a progressive is named, but not often enough to overcome the conservative majority.

The progressives might have a progressive president and congress, and still they would have a conservative supreme court handicapping them, and before they could get it made over, probably the conservatives would be back in power, presidentially and congressionally.

Hence the progressives' exasperation over President Hoover's supreme court appointments. He evidently is going to have five or six vacancies to fill, they want him to select progressives and he seems determined to name conservatives.

Nevertheless, buying his nomination cannot accomplish much but embarrass him. He can keep appointing conservatives as long as the progressives can keep on fighting their confirmation.

Thus the progressive abolitionist has about decided on a campaign to abolish life tenure for the federal judiciary, from top to bottom. Limited terms would be a wiser expedient—or at least an opportunity for its ineligibility to reappointment; but on liberal retirement pay would do the rest.

Of course a constitutional amendment would be required.

Now GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XV "Why?"

Phillips simply but to Alan the question she could not answer for herself. Why did he want to kiss her? He knew and she didn't—so she asked him.

But her manner of asking it, and her intonation, were neither simple nor direct. She was something of an actress, Phillips. She managed, with one word and a little tremor in her fingers—the fingers in Alan's palm—to convey a wealth of meaning.

There was helplessness, shyness, pride and gallantry, sacrifice and submission in her voice. Alan felt that she asked him: "What do you want of me, to possess my heart to satisfy a whim?" And yet there was no bitterness, just a touch of wonder communicated to him. He heard the quietness of resignation as she spoke, and though he might have hurt her. Yet he could not honestly proclaim a great longing to have her love.

There remained to him, however, a fairness equal to her own. "I don't know, Phillips," he said; "unless it was just to find out if

The Husband Hunter

BEGIN HERE TODAY NATALIE CONVERSE tries to conquer her jealousy over her handsome husband, ALAN. When he receives a phone call to the home of BERNADINE LAMONT, a popular night club hostess, she demands that he refuse to go. He explains that Bernadine is the widow of a war buddy who had saved his life. The actress surprises Alan requesting him to take BOBBY in the event of her death. He promises and tries to tell Natalie, but her rebuff silences him. Later he confides in his secretary, PHILLIPS WEST, who has been waiting and hoping for this opportunity.

When Natalie next comes to the office, Phillips engages her in conversation and talks glibly about helping pick out toys for "darling Bobby" and shows her a letter from Bernadine in which Alan's visits to Bobby are mentioned. Natalie hears in a gasp without realizing that Phillips pushed him gently away.

"No, Alan, no," she said softly. "We can't always do what we want you would. You see, I wasn't sure and..."

Phillips laughed. "I see," she broke in, "you've been thinking about what I said tonight. I hoped it was true, and you want to know if I really believe one should open the book. Well, she threw her head back and stood erect in the shadow ball, achieving in spite of her surroundings, a kind of nobility. "I'd rather be judged for what I am, than have you make a mistake about me. She declared it warmly "If it will help you to understand any woman better to know whether or not I'd like you to kiss me, you may as well know, I would."

Alan, by this time, was feeling more serious. "Then may I?" he asked, sensing that her surrender was not complete.

Phillips let him hear the slightest catch in her breathing, as she answered. "No... I don't think so."

Alan was puzzled. "I don't understand you, Phillips," he told her. "If I want to kiss you, and you like me so, why would you let me know you wouldn't?"

Phillips pushed him gently away. "No, Alan, no," she said softly. "We can't always do what we want you would. You see, I wasn't sure and..."

"Rot," Alan denied. "When there's very little happiness in the world at best, and someone is always trying to take that little away from you, you've a right to have what you can get."

Phillips leaned back, away from him. "But I'm not sure that it would make me happy to have you kiss me," she returned quietly.

"I said I'd like you to kiss me. Alan, I did not say it would make me happy if you did." She paused and smiled sadly. "I think it would make me very unhappy, if you want to know the truth."

Alan felt utterly helpless. "What are you trying to say, Phillips?" he pleaded.

"Something that I'm afraid I can't put into words," she replied in tones of silky softness. "And now you must go, Alan," she added, with sudden determination supplanting the regret in her voice.

The suggestion carried more weight with Alan than Phillips had intended. "Yes, I think I must go," she said. "Yes, I think I must go."

Phillips. The idea that she had so revealingly suppressed, had come to him in a flash. She wanted something more from him than a casual caress, or nothing at all. Alan did not like to say to himself that Phillips was in love with him. He was too lacking in conceit to entertain the thought, but he could not escape the conclusion. In one breath she had told him that she wanted him to kiss her. He could not believe that it was a wanton wish. In the next breath she had allowed him to comply with the wish.

Well, one thing was certain; she had a tremendous honesty. Alan was touched by her manner of handling the situation. But it set him on guard at the same time. He did not want to offend her. And he understood also that she had said to mean that she did not want him to either. What else could she have meant by saying it would make her unhappy if he kissed her?

Clearly, she had put him on a high pedestal. If he fell off, because of a kiss, it would disappoint her. The whole thing made him uneasy.

"Well, good night," he said against her silence.

She pressed his hand gently with her impressed fingers, and drew them away. Still she said nothing.

"I'm no hero, Phillips," Alan declared brusquely. "I'm just a very mere man in a common mess."

"Alan..."

"I'm not going to talk about it," he assured her quickly; "but I want you to know that I appreciate your going out with me tonight. I realize that it isn't the sort of thing you do ordinarily."

"Oh, Alan, please," Phillips choked. "I wanted to go. I don't mind you knowing that. It's been wonderful. But we mustn't be cheap. Please go now, and let's... let's remember that I'm your secretary."

Alan took her at her word and left. Thinking it over, after she had gone to bed, Phillips wondered if she'd made her pose of resistance too strong. Well, it was too late to mend the mistake now, if mistake it was. And she had from Alan his admission that he was in a "common mess." Domestic trouble, of course. Her thoughts, when she fell asleep, were satisfying enough to bring a smile of triumph to her lips.

Alan was surprised to see, late as it was, a light in his wife's room, when the taxi he had taken from the station entered his driveway.

He hoped she wouldn't want to talk with him. She must have heard the car, he knew. Nevertheless, he went in quietly. Natalie did not appear. Alan got to sleep without going through one of the dreaded scenes.

When he awoke in the morning, he thought, with distaste, of breakfasting with her. He wished, for a reason which he did not analyze, that he did not have to see Natalie before he went to the office.

It was the guilt of a conscience that had unsuccessfully sought to rationalize his conduct with Phillips. He told himself only that it would put him in a bad humor for the day to see Natalie.

As he made his way downstairs, he began to hum, determined to be cheerful as it was, if possible. The whistle died away when he entered the dining room, and saw Natalie was not there.

He glanced at his watch. And frowned. He was a few minutes late as it was. If Natalie was doing this purposely... well, he wouldn't wait for her.

With his decision to breakfast alone, if necessary to make his train, came a touch of panic. He had a feeling of something slipping away from him; something as well established, so familiar that it had seemed permanently secured. Alan had yet to learn that after love has seemed to go the little things

It had grown upon remain, to die one by one. And that with the death of each little habit, each little custom and usage, there is separate pang.

It was just this death agony of an early morning pleasure—beautiful Natalie, seated across from him at a charming breakfast table, pouring the delicious coffee—that caused him to turn sharply when the waitress entered the room, and ask just as sharply, if her mistress was coming down.

"No, sir," the girl answered, startled by his abruptness. Alan saw that her hand trembled as she put the grapefruit on the table, at just one place.

"And if you please, sir," Frances went on hurriedly; "I should like to have a few moments of your time before you leave the house."

"I'm going to be late," Alan snapped. "Whatever it is, Frances, you will have to wait until tonight or tell Mr. Converse about it. She isn't ill, is she?" he added unaccountably.

"Well, good night," he said to me to see you sir. In fact, it is very important."

Alan sat down and attacked the grapefruit. "Yes," he said, digging at the unoffending fruit. "Well, what is it?"

"I'm leaving, sir, unless you wish me to stay," Frances informed him. "What?" Alan was amazed. He knew how highly Natalie prized the girl.

"Yes, sir," Frances went on. "Mr. Converse has dismissed me, and I am not to stay unless you re-engage me, sir."

Alan put down his spoon, dropped it, literally. "What's wrong..." He hit of the question and got to his feet.

"Where is Mr. Converse?" he asked. (To Be Continued)

She Lost 19 Pounds Of Fat In 27 Days

During October a woman in Montana wrote me: "My first bottle of Kruschen Salts lasted almost a week and during that time I lost 19 pounds of fat—Kruschen is all you claim for—I feel better than I have for years."

Here is the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of water before breakfast.

Be sure and do this every morning for "113 the little daily dose that takes off the fat."—Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system.

At the same time the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are toned up as the pure, fresh blood containing Nature's six life-giving salts are carried to every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of the body and this is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, undulating vivacity and charming figure.

If you want to lose fat with speed get an 8c bottle of Kruschen Salts from the City Drug Stores or any live druggist anywhere in America with the distinct understanding that you must be satisfied with results or money back. Adv.
