Quake jars Managua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — A strong earthquake in the Pacific on Tuesday set off tidal waves that flooded dozens of communities along Nicaragua's western coast. At least 12 fishermen were reported missing at sea. The quake measured 7.0 on the Richter scale, according to the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo. The quake was followed by two big aftershocks, which apparently set off huge waves that washed over parts of San Juan del Sur, a city on the border with Costa Rica, and the beach resorts of Masachapa, La Boquita and Pochomil. State radio said the sea had washed about 900 yards inland at Masachapa, a town of about 2,000 people./5A

Clinton attacks

GREENVILLE, S.C. — After weeks of defending himself against GOP tax-and-spend charges, Bill Clinton went on the offensive Tuesday, accusing President Bush of wanting to cap Medicare spending, an idea the Democrat said would boost medical bills of millions of elderly Americans./8A

Change of heart?

NEW YORK — Half of the adults in a nationwide poll released Tuesday said they would choose the same career if they could make choices in their life over again. The 45 percent who said they would choose a different career were almost equally divided among those who would choose one more financially rewarding, more personally rewarding, or both. Five percent didn't know if they would choose differently. Just 18 percent of the 1,296 people polled by the Roper Organization said they feel their careers are both personally and financially rewarding. Half those polled said the career they have chosen for themselves is more rewarding personally than financially.

Gifford miscarriage

NEW YORK — Kathie Lee Gifford announced on her live syndicated television show that she had a miscarriage while vacationing with husband Frank Gifford. Returning to her "Live with Regis & Kathie Lee" program on Monday, she told co-host Regis Philbin, "I was hoping to come back after a two-week vacation" to deliver the good news. Instead, she had the miscarriage while in Colorado with Gifford, the Monday Night Football announcer.

Bush vows 100 percent federal aid in rebuilding

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — President Bush took an emotional tour Tuesday of Hurricane Andrew's worst ravages, pledging 100 percent federal reimbursement for eligible costs of the massive cleanup and rebuilding effort. He ended the day with a TV appeal from the Oval Office, asking Americans to boost private efforts to send aid into Florida and Louisiana.

Hurricane Andrew was devastating, Bush said in his primetime remarks, but could not "extinguish the American spirit." Already, he said, "A relief effort has risen, unprecedented in size and impact."

The president said there are urgent needs for volunteers,

President to campaign in Lubbock area today

By Chip Brown
Associated Press writer

LUBBOCK — Three years ago, President Bush called on Lubbock for some favorable advice, and this windswept West Texas city was immediately dubbed his pulse of America.

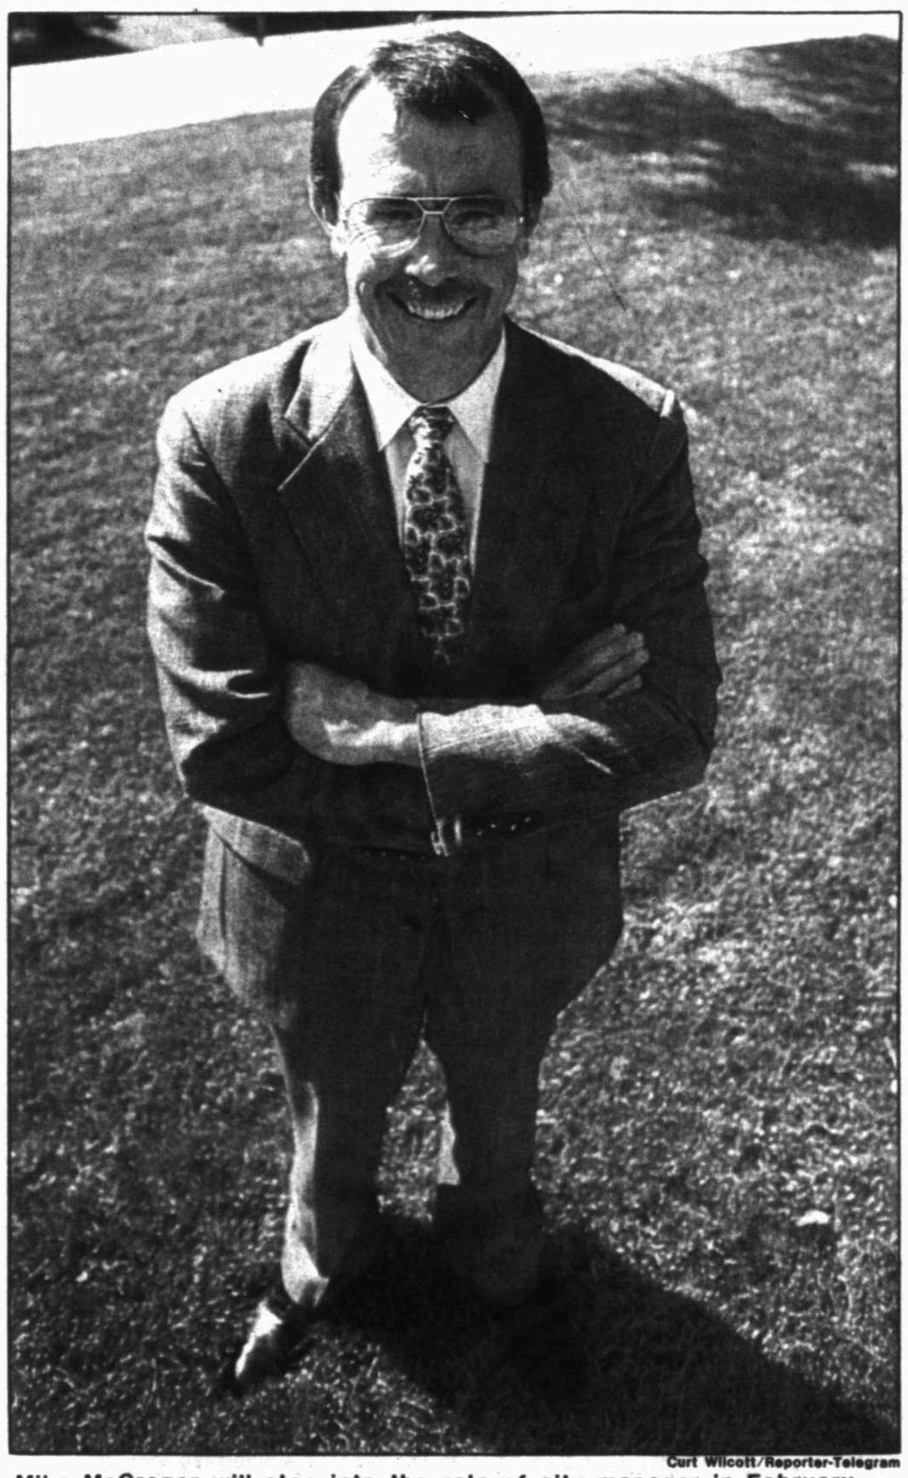

These days, Bush may not want to hear what the people in his barometer city have to say.

"I think most of the people in Lubbock are taking their frustrations out on George Bush right now," said Lisa Nowlin, a partner in Southwest Research Associates, which occasionally distributes a poll from Lubbock titled "Pulse of America."

City selects McGregor

Council's 5-1 vote fills city manager position

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Mike McGregor, with 19 years of city administrative experience backing him up, will step into the role of city manager in February, the City Council announced Tuesday.

The council interviewed three finalists for the position during a closed executive session Tuesday after narrowing the list from 11.

Several city officials cited McGregor's experience as the overwhelming factor in choosing him over the other two finalists.

"We're setting the tone for the next three years, I believe. Because of his experience, he gets the nod," said District 3 council member Buddy Sipes.

McGregor was selected to the position by a 5-1 council vote with Claudia Egan dissenting. The vote was held during a special council session.

Mrs. Egan voted for current Assistant City Manager Susan Thorpe.

"I'm not taking anything away from Mike, I'm sure he'll do a great job and I know Susan will support him," Mrs. Egan said.

The other candidate was Waco Assistant City Manager Curtis H. Snow, a former assistant city manager for Odessa.

City officials did not advertise the opening outside of Midland.

"We felt that we had two qualified candidates here ... making the cost of an external search unnecessary," Mayor J.D. Faircloth said. "We're very pleased with our decision and we're confident he'll do a fine job."

McGregor has worked for the city of Midland for nine years — including 5½ as deputy city manager.

District 3 council member

He will officially take over the position on Feb. 1, 1993, a day after current City Manager Fred Poe, 64, retires.

Poe, who has worked with the city for 32 years, did not make a recommendation on the selection of his successor.

McGregor, 41, vowed his commitment to the city.

"I know the issues and the challenges. I know how to get the results and I know the people," he said. "I look forward to working with Ms. Thorpe and the staff. We have an excellent quality staff."

McGregor, who previously worked in administrative positions for the cities of Plainview, Tyler and Seminole, said he feels fortunate to continue working in the same "geographical area" where he was raised. He was born in Lubbock.

At-large council member Bill Morrow praised all three candidates.

"The fact that we interviewed three indicated we felt we had three exceptional candidates," he said.

McGregor received a bachelor's degree from Texas Tech University in government and a master's degree from the same school in public administration.

He and his wife, Cindy, have two children: Andrew, 10, and Patrick, 6.

Lake Ivie-Midland pipeline flows toward completion

BALLINGER — A 200-ton ditcher trudges its way to Midland, digging a 12-foot deep trench 8 feet wide from the new O.H. Ivie Reservoir near here.

Fare for the 155.7-mile trip, being made in the name of water, is $115 million.

Behind the crawling Trencor Jet ditcher, crews will be laying 20- to 32-foot segments of massive concrete-lined steel pipe.

In less than 2½ months — if the weather cooperates — John D. Stephens of Georgia, who specializes in laying underground water pipelines, will have finished the $75.9 million job he was awarded by the Colorado River Municipal Water

Leading gauge signals little change in listless economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge signals little improvement in the listless economy until at least next year.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday its Index of Leading Indicators, designed to predict economic activity six to nine months in advance, edged up 0.1 percent in July after falling 0.3 percent in June.

Despite the minor gain, that was hardly good news for President Bush's re-election campaign. "The economy is kind of foundering," said William Dunkelberg, dean of Temple University's business school. "From the politician's point of view,

American chess genius Fischer spits at sanctions letter

By John Daniszewski
Associated Press writer

SVETI STEFAN, Yugoslavia — Bobby Fischer not only plans to defy a U.S. government warning against playing a $5 million chess match in Yugoslavia — on Tuesday he spat on it.

The reclusive 49-year-old American chess genius was acerbic, abrasive and dismissive at his first news conference since the early 1970s. He appeared to have been nursing numerous private grudges during his time out of the public eye.

Fischer lashed out at the chess establishment, Soviet publishers, world press censorship, Communists, Jews, Israel and the United Nations, and said he felt mistreated by the U.S. government.

As he prepared to play his first public match in 20 years today against Boris Spassky, Fischer declared that he remains world champion and characterized the current official titleholder, Garry Kasparov, as among the "lowest dogs around."

Fischer attended the hour-long news conference with Spassky, whom he beat in Reykjavik, Iceland, in 1972 to take the world crown.

The only American ever to win the world chess championship, Fischer was stripped of the title in 1975 when he refused to play Anatoly Karpov after quarreling with the International Chess Federation over contest rules.

He then went into virtual seclusion, and old chess

CAMPAIGN: Bush to visit barometer city today

polls, which feature local residents' views on political topics of the day, are sent to the White House, Ms. Nowlin said.

Bush is expected to visit the Lubbock area today to console devastated cotton farmers with a disaster relief package.

Here, the agriculture-based economy rises or falls on the strength of the annual cotton crop. The 25-county area surrounding Lubbock produces a quarter of the nation's cotton annually.

Heavy rains drowned the crop during planting season, reducing a 3 million-bale haul to 1.37 million bales.

Experts predict losses of more than $320 million with cotton-related businesses and local economies losing as much as $1 billion.

The president's trip today to a cotton gin in Shallowater, a tiny town just outside of Lubbock, will be the first visit here since a notorious phone call he made in March 1989.

In response to reporters questioning the direction of his presidency, Bush said, "I talked to a fellow from Lubbock, Texas, the other day which was the best phone call I have made. And he said, 'All the people in Lubbock think things are going just great."

The next day, headlines deemed Lubbock the next Peoria, Ill.

In choosing Lubbock as his example of middle America, Bush seemingly picked an easy sell.

This city on the South Plains has a population of 186,000 and more than 150 churches, many of them large and conservative. Residents of Lubbock County gave the GOP ticket 69 percent of the vote in 1988.

The friend Bush called is Robert W. Blake, a retired oil investor, who regularly talks to and visits the president. The two have been friends since the early 1950s, when Bush was in the oil business in Midland, 120 miles south of here.

Blake acknowledged Monday the folks in Lubbock may not be as charitable in their state of the union views these days.

"We are the president's barometer and it's just like all cities — people are hurting," Blake said. "The economy is not as good as it was four years ago. . . . But I think that George will carry Lubbock in the next election, and I think he will be re-elected."

Residents aren't so sure.

"He lost himself. He couldn't control Congress. I know part of the problem is Congress' fault, but he didn't try too hard," said Allan Collins, a 71-year-old retired business executive. "I'm basically a Republican, but I vote for who I want to."

The most recent Pulse of America poll, a phone survey of 400 local residents chosen at random in mid-July, showed residents favoring Ross Perot over Bush by a margin of 35 percent to 34 percent. Bill Clinton received the support of 16 percent with the rest undecided. The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percent.

Perot quit the White House race before he ever got in, but the heat appears to still be on Bush.

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal wrote in a July 19 editorial for Bush to dump Vice President Dan Quayle.

"In brief, Mr. Bush should find another rewarding and meaningful role for Mr. Quayle to play," the paper said.

Expect sunny skies, mid-90s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the mid-90s and southwest winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 62, Tuesday's high reached 89, compared to the record high for that date of 104 set in 1959. The record low was 56 set in 1968.

STATE

Fog and humidity contributed to soggy, stormy conditions Tuesday across Texas.

Showers and a few thunderstorms hit parts of the Concho Valley and Big Bend. Otherwise, West Texas skies varied from partly sunny to sunny.

Rain also continued across the northern fringes of the Hill Country. Other showers and thunderstorms continued in the southeast and along the upper coast.

Frontal boundaries and an upper-level disturbance caused storms in the east.

Afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 80s and 90s. Extremes at 4 p.m. were Dallas and Greenville with 73 degrees, and Harlingen with 100 degrees.

Heat indices were above 100 on the mid and lower coast Tuesday afternoon. Southerly winds off the Gulf of Mexico kept humidity levels high.

The South Texas forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with showers and thunderstorms possible through today. High temperatures will be in the 90s.

In North Texas, partly cloudy skies will bring widely scattered thunderstorms. Highs today and Thursday will hit from 92 degrees to 99 degrees. Lows will dip to 70.

West Texas will see partly cloudy nights and mostly sunny days through Thursday.

NATION

Rainstorms were scattered over the central third of the nation and the Southeast on Tuesday with some heavy showers in North Dakota and Texas.

At midday, rain clouds and thunderstorms were scattered from southeastern Texas and southwestern Louisiana to eastern Oklahoma, and from central Texas to central Oklahoma. Scattered showers ranged from North Dakota into Kansas and the middle Mississippi Valley.

In the Southeast, showers and thunderstorms extended over southeastern Georgia and the eastern coast of Florida.

Heavier rainfall totals for the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT included 2.20 inches at Jamestown, N.D.; 1.30 inches at Abilene; and 0.85 of an inch at Lake Charles, La.

Overnight showers and thunderstorms in the Hill Country of central Texas produced 4 inches of rain at Fredonia and 4.6 inches at Pontotoc, the National Weather Service said.

Late Monday, very heavy rain fell in northwestern Kansas, with 9 inches near Grinnell, 7.5 inches near Oakley, and 7 inches near Gove, the weather service said.

It was the driest August on record at Peoria, Ill., with only a quarter-inch of rain. The previous record was 0.44 of an inch in 1893, the weather service reported.

It was the coolest August on record at Chattanooga, Tenn., with a mean temperature of 73.5 degrees.

And it was the coolest June-July-August summer period on record at Binghamton, N.Y., with a mean temperature of 64.1. Kansas City, Mo., had its second coolest summer with a mean of 71.7. Duluth, Minn. also had its second coolest summer with a 58.7-degree mean temperature.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

FISCHER: Chess genius plans to defy warning hands questioned until the last minute whether he would actually attend the news conference Tuesday.

Now bearded, with a receding hairline, Fischer was surrounded by bodyguards as he entered the crowded hotel hall.

Picking from a stack of questions reporters were required to submit in writing, he chose one about the U.S. government's warnings that he faces up to $250,000 in fines and 10 years in prison if he goes through with the match.

"This is the order to provide information and cease and desist activities from the Department of Treasury, Washington, D.C., Aug. 21, 1992," Fischer said, brandishing a document he pulled from a briefcase.

"This is my reply to the order not to defend my title here," he said, and spat loudly at the letter as match organizers and some Yugoslav journalists applauded.

The United Nations and the United States have slapped sanctions on the rump Yugoslavia — now only Serbia and Montenegro — to punish it for fomenting war in nearby Bosnia.

Spassky, who unlike Fischer accepted verbal questions, acknowledged he, too, was violating sanctions subscribed to by his adopted country, France.

But the semi-retired 55-year-old said he was doing it because the match would be "very good politics for chess, and maybe not only chess."

Fischer was asked if he supported the international sanctions.

"No, I don't support the sanctions because first of all I don't support the U.N.," he said.

"For example, look at Israel. There has been resolution after resolution against them for them to leave the West Bank and so on," he said. "They ignore resolutions and never have sanctions against them."

Fischer also objected to the U.N.'s rescinding of its resolution equating Zionism with racism.

Fischer, whose mother was Jewish, chose a question inviting him to respond to reports characterizing him as anti-Semitic. He replied that Semites include both Arabs and Jews, and added, "I am definitely not anti-Arab, OK?"

To another question, he said communism was "basically a mask for Bolshevism, which is a mask for Judaism."

Describing how the chess world would be different if he had remained active the last two decades, Fischer said:

"For one thing there would be much less cheating. These criminals — Karpov, Kasparov, (Viktor) Korchnoi — have absolutely destroyed chess by their immoral, unethical prearranging of games."

Fischer alleged that Karpov and Kasparov fixed their championship matches in the mid-1980s.

The winner of the 10-game Fischer-Spassky rematch will get $3.35 million. The loser takes $1.65 million.

As for whether his play has improved during the last 20 years, Fischer said, "Well, we'll see."

Later, at an evening ceremony, Fischer and his bodyguards led scores of Yugoslav leaders and other VIPs across a causeway from the mainland to the resort island of Sveti Stefan. The way was lighted by torchbearers wearing traditional Serbian and Montenegran costumes.

Fischer, Spassky and match organizer Jedzimir Vasiljevic were then seated on a dais above an outdoor stage painted like a giant chess board where young dancers performed.

Fischer was seated with his 19-year-old Hungarian girlfriend, who reportedly helped lure him out of retirement.

ECONOMY: Leading indicators signal little gain

it's the kiss of death."

In another report, the department said construction activity declined 0.6 percent in July, the second consecutive drop and the worst since December. A modest upturn in government construction projects wasn't enough to offset decreases in residential and commercial construction.

Economists said the reports portray a sluggish economy, growing rather than shrinking, but too weak to meaningfully reduce an unemployment rate that jumped from 5.1 percent in June 1990 to an eight-year high of 7.8 percent two years later.

The Labor Department is scheduled on Friday to release the August rate. In advance, economists were predicting 7.6 percent, down from 7.7 percent in July. They foresee little further improvement through the rest of the year.

"The economy is essentially dead. It's barely growing, if at all, and there's no sign we're emerging from the stagnation," said economist Lawrence Chimerine, a Philadelphia-based adviser to DRI-McGraw Hill Inc.

Before the election, only one more unemployment report is scheduled for release, on Oct. 2. A report on the gross domestic product for the July-September quarter is due out a week before Election Day. It likely will be as anemic as the 1.4 percent growth rate in the April-June quarter.

"I don't see any possibility of statistics good for the administration. I think they will just reinforce everybody's concern," Chimerine said.

He and other analysts say intractable long-term problems are detracting from growth. They include layoffs in banking and other financial services, the reduction of post-Cold War military spending, the collapse of commercial real estate prices and, especially, the overhang of debt built up by businesses, consumers and the government during the 1980s.

"We just don't have the wherewithal to snap out of this slow-growth pattern," said economist Samuel D. Kahan of Fuji Securities Co. Inc. in Chicago.

In July, five of 11 forward-looking indicators contributed to the increase in the index. Five indicators were negative and one was considered neutral.

The positive indicators, ranked in order of magnitude, were:

- An increase in building permits.
- A decline in new applications for unemployment benefits.
- A rise in stock prices, as measured by the Standard & Poors 500.
- An increase in business delivery times, showing companies are having a bit more difficulty keeping up with demand.
- An advance in factory orders for consumer goods.

The negative indicators were:

- A decline in factories' backlog of unfilled orders, showing manufacturers were having little difficulty keeping up with new orders.
- A drop in prices for various raw materials, another sign of lagging demand.
- A fall in consumer sentiment as measured by the University of Michigan's Research Center.
- A decrease in the inflation-adjusted money supply.
- A decline in orders and contracts for business equipment and buildings.

The average workweek for manufacturing employees was unchanged at 41 hours.

The various changes left the index at a seasonally adjusted 149.6, up 2.7 percent from a year ago.

PIPELINE: Crews lay 20- to 25-foot segments

(From 1A)

District. The additional expense is for seven electric-powered pumping stations to move the water to the higher West Texas grounds.

Abilene, which is north of the lake, will build its own pipeline to Lake Ivie through the West Central Texas Municipal Water District.

Completion of the Lake Ivie-to-Midland pipeline in early 1995 will mean that San Angelo, Midland and Odessa will be getting "some of the finest-quality water in the country," said state Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo on Tuesday.

"We're lucky," Sims said. "(But) It's not luck that the Colorado River Municipal Water District had enough foresight to come in and build the reservoir" on about 30 square miles of former ranching and farming land.

Piping Lake Ivie water to West Texas is "going to make us — Midland, Odessa, San Angelo and Abilene — some of the better water cities in the country," Sims said.

Midland now contracts with CRMWD to buy surface water from Lake J. B. Thomas near Snyder and E.V. Spence Reservoir near Robert Lee.

Odessa, Big Spring and Snyder are CRMWD-member cities.

Like Midland, San Angelo, Stanton and Robert Lee are contract cities, or partners, with the water district.

Midland City Manager Fred Poe said the initial stages of laying pipeline is "just the next step in getting some of this good water out to Midland."

Midland is committed to paying between $30 million and $35 million toward the cost of the of $115 million pipeline project.

"It's worth every penny of it," said John Lowe, Midland's retired director of utilities.

The CRMWD is bearing the major portion of the cost, and San Angelo the balance, said CRMWD spokesman Joe Pickle.

Once Lake Ivie water is being pumped westward, 45 million gallons of water per day initially will be pumped to the Odessa-Midland area, said O.H. Ivie, CRMWD general manager for whom the lake was named.

"As the need for additional water develops, we'll be able to get up to 65 million gallons a day to the Midland-Odessa area," he said. Of that daily flow, 10 million gallons would be reserved for Big Spring, "if and when they need it."

Abilene, like Midland, is buying the right to take an average of 13.4 million gallons of water per day from the lake. The peak daily flow may be up to 20 million gallons, Ivie said, but the year's average must be 13.4 million.

Of the 155.7-mile line, 47.7 miles from Lake Ivie to San Angelo will be 60-inch (inside diameter) pipeline of 20- and 24-foot segments, and the balance will be with 53-inch pipelines of 24- and 32-foot segments for the 108 miles from San Angelo to the Midland-Odessa storage facility west of Midland International Airport.

AID: Bush ends day with TV appeal building supplies, diapers, baby formula and other necessities.

"America always will be a nation of neighbors," said Bush. "Although the relief effort is well under way, urgent needs still exist and so tonight I make a special appeal to the generous spirit of the American people ... I urge all Americans to pitch in in any way you can."

He said Alvah Chapman, chairman of the Miami-based newspaper group Knight-Ridder, Inc., had agreed to head "a national private-sector effort to help rebuild south Florida. It's called, We Will Rebuild." Bush gave the group's address and said it had his support, and that of Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles.

During his visit here, Bush announced that Homestead Air Force Base, which was ripped apart by the furious storm, will be rebuilt "to show our commitment to south Florida."

"We're in this for the long haul. We won't leave until the job is done," said Bush in the courtyard of Homestead Middle School, now serving as an emergency medical center.

There were complaints last week from some Dade County, Fla., officials that Washington had been slow to respond. Bush canceled a weekend vacation and West Coast campaign trip to show Florida he cared — and to avoid the political fallout that could cost him the state's 25 electoral votes.

A few hurricane victims heckled the president. But mostly Bush heard thanks as he, his wife Barbara, and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney viewed the devastation, comforting those who suffered and applauding the efforts of the military and other rescue workers.

"If it wasn't for the federal government getting involved here, we'd be in big trouble," said Rick Prave, 33, an electrician from Leisure City, Fla.

A Spanish-speaking woman hugged the president and his wife. "She said she lost her whole house but she felt like a millionaire after meeting the president," Mrs. Bush said.

The Bush party later flew from Florida to Louisiana for a look at the lesser disaster there from Andrew's second U.S. landfall and wound up in Jeanerette, La.

There, Bush visited a battered sugar cane farm — announcing he would not raise the sugar cane import quota despite crop damage — and a food distribution center where he shook hands with volunteers and people lined up for free groceries.

"I'm not impressed," said one volunteer, Bryan Thompson, 31, of Lafayette, La. "The people in line out front probably appreciate the food more than seeing the president."

The federal government normally pays 75 percent of the cost of rebuilding the infrastructure in disaster areas. Bush last week said Washington would cover 90 percent in the path of destruction that Andrew cut through Florida.

But now he promised 100 percent funding in the wake of what could be the costliest disaster in U.S. history. Florida officials have estimated the total damages could go as high as $20 billion.

Asked if the government could pay for such an effort, Bush said, "It's going to have to afford it. ... Helping people has to be a priority."

The president — his shirt drenched with perspiration in the Florida heat — and his wife trooped through a field kitchen outside a school where Army Sgt. Detrich Bellow was cooking hash browns for the homeless.

They inspected a tent city built by Marines in a city park still awaiting its first 1,500 tenants.

They poked their heads into a tiny closet in a battered ground-floor apartment where Adela Antonini and three others hid during the storm.

And they called upon their Spanish-speaking son Jeb from Miami to tell a worried Lydia Mendez where she could find help for an asthmatic child.

It was Bush's second trip to both states since Andrew tore ashore eight days ago and left thousands of Floridians homeless. State officials, sharply lowering earlier estimates, said Tuesday 6,000 to 10,000 homes were destroyed. They said up to 75,000 others were damaged.

But his previous stop here was in Miami, which missed the brunt of the storm.

Homestead, 30 miles south of Miami, looks like it was carpet-bombed, from the twisted, skeletal hangars at the air base that entombed two F-16s and a C-130 cargo plane to the trailer park nearby reduced to splinters and debris.

Questions arise as tents go up

By Joseph B. Treaster
N.Y. Times News Service

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — Flanked by the broken buildings and downed trees, a village of olive-drab tents that is to shelter 1,500 hurricane victims has risen on a field across from City Hall.

But by early Tuesday evening, nearly a week after city officials asked for the tents, it looked like a canvas ghost town. Not one of the tens of thousands of families who lost their homes in the storm had moved in and it was not clear when that would happen.

Military officers said the decision on when people would start moving in was up to the civilians in the Homestead government. City officials blamed the delay on the military.

"We are pushing the Army to let people in," said Chris Bezruki, the assistant city manager. "But the army says, 'We're not as comfortable with the tents as you are,' " he said, referring to the Army's concern that everything be in place before the tents are put into use.

The authorities say each of the general-purpose tents, 15-by-35 feet, can accomodate 14 people.

All of the tents that will shelter storm victims — 108 of them in seven parade-perfect rows — were up by nightfall Monday, but many things needed to make the village livable were still lacking.

Only about a third of the phone-booth-size portable toilets have arrived, for example. Eventually 70 or 80 of them are to be lined up on the perimeter of the field.

The shower tents, known in the military as "bath units," have not yet arrived and neither of the two field kitchens is ready to fire up its gas stoves and ovens.

The "laundry unit," composed of washers and dryers, is still en route, somewhere between Homestead and one of the military bases to the north, and the soldiers and marines have yet to work out what they are going to do with garbage and trash from the village. In addition, most of the tents do not yet have electric lights.

"We think they're ready enough," Bezruki said.

Two other tent cities are going up about two miles away, one to the east and another to the west.

At first, everyone working in disaster relief in Homestead made the assumption that putting up the tents would be like building a baseball stadium in an Iowa cornfield in the movie "Field of Dreams": "If you build it, they will come." Now, they're not so sure.

Donald W. Jones, the retired Army general who serves as the general manager for disaster services for the Red Cross, said Tuesday afternoon that he doubted people would flock to the tents and suggested that many would prefer to cling to what is left of their homes.

The experience of Red Cross disaster officials has been that people are not fond of shelters. Immediately after the storm, 86,000 people were in Red Cross shelters, but by Monday night, Jones said, only 2,300 people remained, even though a Red Cross survey shows at least 90,000 homes damaged, mostly in the Homestead area in southern Dade County, with 54,000 of them either destroyed or unsafe for occupation.

"I'm not sure people are going to want to come into the tents," Jones said. Nevertheless, he added, "We think we have to provide the opportunity."

In any case, he said, "My estimation is that the migration here will be very slow." The authorities say that the people who do come to the tents will be able to stay as long as they need shelter.

Army officers and reporters have talked with many storm victims who are not enthusiastic about the tents.

Many are concerned that if they move to the tent village, the few remaining possessions at their damaged homes will be stolen. Some also say they do not like the group living arrangement.

Romania's street kids appear to outnumber homeless adults

By Dan Petreanu
Associated Press Writer

BUCHAREST, Romania — In Bucharest's chaotic main train station, 13-year-old Andrei Bentea has found a home begging, sniffing glue and sleeping on a filthy patch of cement.

Battles over turf with other street children have left his leg badly scarred from razor blade cuts. With a practiced wince, he explains it provides "a begging advantage" over other children, who must fake infirmity.

Andrei fled his home in the northwest city of Cluj just after the December 1989 uprising that toppled Nicolae Ceausescu and his Communist system. He and many children like him already have been twisted by the poverty and chaos Ceausescu left behind.

Tens of thousands of unwanted children were born as a result of Ceausescu's ban on contraception and abortion, aimed at increasing the country's population.

Many impoverished parents turned them over to orphanages. Of the 87,000 children who still live in state institutions, most were abandoned.

More than 1,000 children live on Bucharest's streets, a sixth of estimated number of homeless children nationwide, according to the state Adoptions Commission.

In the capital of 2.3 million, the children appear to outnumber the adult homeless. The two groups do not mix.

Since Ceausescu's overthrow, contraception has remained scrace. But abortions have skyrocketed to about 1 million a year. In addition, under President Ion Iliescu's free-market reforms, some people are even poorer.

"A growing number of children are being abandoned as a result of the drop in living standards," said Labor Ministry Director-General Silvia Pasti.

But the ill-funded, dilapidated orphanages are already bursting at the seams, and a massive effort on behalf of the children is for now considered unlikely.

Rodica Mitulescu, who runs the Labor Ministry's Street Children Project, said about $18,000 was allocated to create special centers for street children. But, she acknowledged, the facilities are very limited.

"We are ensuring protection only to one group of kids, those with the tiniest street experience ... who have a high potential for re-integration into society," she said.

Alexandra Zugravescu, head of the state's Adoptions Commission, said more effort should be made to prevent homelessness by helping poor families with many children and making sure children stay in school.

"The most effective solution would be a (more) substantial effort by the state," said police spokesman Nicolae Bucur.

Markus Heil, director of the Vienna-based Caritas Catholic charity in Romania, noted that many children prefer the streets because they are not given proper food, care or housing in state-run orphanages.

"Many think a rich foreigner will find them there," she said. "They tell all kinds of lies to break the foreigners' hearts."

Andrei Bentea said he would like to find an adoptive family to replace his abusive mother and alcoholic father.

As he spoke, a fellow station resident, Giacomir Varda, 12, appeared from behind and tried to set fire to his hair with a cigarette lighter.

Spotting an American reporter, Varda fell on the floor, his leg contorted, and began wailing: "Take me away from here!"

He said the few girls who arrive at the station are often induced by pimps to become prostitutes in area brothels.

U.N. begins first weapons inspection with 'no problems'

■ U.N. inspection is the first since U.S.-led allies set up the 'no fly zone' in Iraq.

Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — Nuclear weapons experts went to work Tuesday under tightened security in Baghdad on the first U.N. inspection mission since U.S.-led allies set up the "no-fly" zone in southern Iraq.

A U.N. official, reached by satellite telephone in Baghdad, said there were "no problems" during the team's full day of work.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said "a lot" of Iraqi security personnel accompanied the team, but gave no specifics.

The 21-member team — which includes experts from the United States France, Germany, Italy and Poland — set out from its Baghdad hotel early Tuesday without disclosing its destination. The team returned at sunset.

The mission has been conducted under unusually high security and secrecy. The United Nations placed its workers on maximum alert after a bomb was found attached to the car of three U.N. guards in northern Iraq on Friday.

U.S. and allied jets last Thursday began patrolling the "no-fly" zone — the part of Iraq south of the 32nd parallel. Iraqi military aircraft have been banned from the zone, which shelters Shiite Muslims who have been under attack since trying to overthrow Saddam Hussein last year.

Baghdad has declared creation of the zone an act of war and has pledged retaliation. Some Iraqi officials have hinted the retaliation could take the form of challenging the U.N. inspection teams or U.N. relief efforts.

Team leader Maurizio Zifferero, an Italian official of the U.N.'s International Atomic Energy Agency, has said he expects "a very quiet mission — and a fruitful one."

He also has tried to disassociate his U.N.-supervised hunt for nuclear weapons from the "no-fly" zone controversy.

Under the U.N. Security Council resolution that set the terms of the Gulf War cease-fire, Iraq is prohibited from possessing or developing weapons of mass destruction. The inspection teams are to ensure that Iraq does not retain nuclear, chemical or biological weapons, ballistic missiles, or the facilities to make them.

Baghdad last month served notice that it will prevent access to ministry buildings. The team that was last in Iraq did not challenge the Iraqis on that score.

Negotiators finish chemical weapons treaty

GENEVA (AP) — Negotiators have completed an agreement on a ban of chemical weapons and plan to hold a final meeting Thursday before sending the treaty to the U.N. General Assembly.

A report accompanying the treaty was finished last week. A draft of the treaty was produced earlier in August. The treaty bans the production, sale and stockpiling of chemical weapons.

Russia, China and Iran have told the 39-nation Conference on Disarmament they are not certain to sign the treaty, and the agreement of countries like Libya and Pakistan also is uncertain.

The treaty, which will take effect when 65 nations have signed, would require the elimination of chemical weapons over 10 years. Any country that signs the treaty is committed to undergoing inspections on short notice if it is suspected of stockpiling or making chemical weapons.

The treaty, which will take effect when 65 nations have signed, would require the elimination of chemical weapons over 10 years.

Russia is hesitant to sign out of concern it will be required to shoulder the full cost of destroying its stocks of chemical weapons, estimated at $450 million, and of spending an additional $10 billion to convert its chemical industry to eliminate equipment that can be used for producing weapons.

Russia and the United States — which has said it will sign the treaty — are the only two countries that have confirmed that they possess chemical weapons. Experts suspect about 20 other countries of having them.

Iran has expressed reservations because only the four leading producers of chemical weapons in Asia are assured of permanent seats on the 41-seat council supervising the treaty.

Pacific quake creates tidal waves

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A strong earthquake in the Pacific on Tuesday set off tidal waves that flooded dozens of communities along Nicaragua's western seaboard. There were no immediate reports of death or injury.

The quake measured 7.0 on the Richter scale, according to the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo. It hit at 6:16 p.m. (8:16 p.m. EDT) and had its epicenter 75 miles southwest of Managua in the Pacific.

The quake was followed by two big aftershocks, which apparently set off huge waves that washed over parts of San Juan del Sur, a city on the border with Costa Rica, and the beach resorts of Masachapa, La Boquita and Pochomil.

The quake was felt strongly in Managua, but there were no immediate reports of damage here

Clashes mount on eve of new round of talks

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Sarajevo's Muslim-led defenders waged a desperate and costly offensive Tuesday to break the 5-month Serb siege of the city, where dwindling supplies of clean water raised fears of epidemics.

The attacks — launched on the eve of a new round of peace talks — failed to punch through Bosnian Serb lines and left many casualties. A U.N. official estimated one Bosnian fighter was lost for each six feet of ground gained.

In Serbia, backers of federal Premier Milan Panic and Serbian leader Slobodan Milosevic demanded that their foe resign. Some Serbs fear differences between the two men, which intensified after Panic committed the Serbs to surrendering Bosnian territory at a London peace conference last week, could push Serbia itself into civil war.

A new round of talks sponsored by the United Nations and the European Community are scheduled to begin in Geneva on Thursday.

Marrack Goulding, head of U.N. peacekeeping operations, was due in Sarajevo Thursday to begin trying to place artillery around Sarajevo under U.N. supervision, as agreed to at the London talks, officials said.

But Goulding's impending arrival did little to silence guns in Sarajevo.

Bosnian health officials reported 20 people killed and 218 wounded across the republic in a 24-hour period ending early Tuesday, including 13 dead and 119 wounded in the war-ravaged capital.

Those figures usually include just civilians. Battlefield casualties appeared to be heavier, although no figures were provided.

Bosnian defense officials and media reported particularly fierce clashes in the western suburbs of Ilidza and Nedzarici, where government forces have been trying to drive a wedge through Serb lines and open more avenues for relief convoys.

Health ministry officials warned that Sarajevo had only three days supply of chlorine left to purify its water supplies.

Most of the city has been without running water for weeks because of damage to electric lines used to power pumps. Health officials fear unpure water could lead to epidemics of gastric illness.

The last attempt to bring in chlorine supplies in mid-August was blocked by Serb militias, the officials said. Larry Hollingworth, Sarajevo operations chief for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said the agency soon would begin an airlift of chlorine.

In the hills around Sarajevo, Bosnian radio said government forces were advancing according to plan. But when asked about his forces' progress, Zaim Hakovic, a Bosnian commander, responded curtly: "So-so."

Military observers said government forces were suffering heavy losses — "about one man for every two meters of earth they take," according to one U.N. officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

MCHD board should be commended

Midland County Hospital District's board of directors has been caught between two equally unyielding realities in recent years: spiraling health care costs and rigid public sentiment against higher taxes. The result had put the district's board in the position of having to raise taxes in both 1990 and 1991 to generate more revenue to cover indigent care costs.

But this year the board's action was not to raise taxes, but to decrease them slightly. True, the reduction only amounted to one-twentieth of a cent on the tax rate, but it was a pleasant fact for the district's taxpayers who had watched taxes climb during the past two years when economic conditions also did not render a tax increase palatable.

While taxpayers may assume that it's always easy for those on public governing bodies to simply approve budget estimates and pass the tax bill along to the taxpayers, it has been obvious during the past couple of years that Memorial Hospital and Medical Center officials and hospital district directors have been exerting extraordinary effort to hold costs down and to keep the district's taxes from climbing further. No doubt the changes being experienced in the nation's health care industry have contributed significantly to the pressures the directors have experienced.

MCHD's directors are "under the gun" currently because health care has been affected more in recent years than other areas by cost increases and because the delivery of health care is so critical to the well being of people. When costs increase and the economy worsens at the same time, the natural result is that somebody has to make the difficult decision to delay their medical treatment and somebody else gets bumped from the category of "paying patient" to that of "indigent patient."

The district directors are in the position of trying to help hold those cost increases at bay, and keeping medical care available — and affordable — for as many of Midland's residents as possible.

After the board's 5 to 0 vote approving the tax rate last week, board president Margaret Williams said, "We have really worked on that — trying to keep from raising our taxes — and we have succeeded. And I think we need to be commended."

The board members' efforts show and we do commend them on their hard work for the taxpayers of Midland County Hospital District.

Tax cuts don't work without other cuts

President Bush delivered a blockbuster speech in Houston . . . filled with promises for his supporters and sharp attacks on Republican enemies.

The big pitch was for an across-the-board tax cut. Bush claims a tax cut, coupled with cuts in federal spending, would stimulate the economy.

The pitch has an appealing ring, but it lacks the specifics to define its acceptability with the American people or as responsible fiscal policy.

The president said $300 billion in reduced federal spending would finance a tax cut. But where would he cut? Would he cut Social Security, veterans' pensions, Medicare, and farm subsidies? If so, say so.

One of his advisers said he saw no evidence that the American people want the kind of details that define precisely what Bush would slice off the budget. That's a clever way of hiding what the president wants to do under a mountain of political baloney.

Former President Reagan came on like gangbusters in 1980 with a similar proposal. He was elected and convinced Congress to pass some of the tax cuts he proposed. Reagan's plans stimulated the economy, and they also fertilized a national debt that has grown from under $1 trillion to more than $3.5 trillion.

Bush blames Congress for the nation's economic problems, but Congress has not acted alone. The president proclaims his successes; he also must shoulder responsibility for his failure to effectively guide economic policy.

The Reagan/Bush administration taught the nation at least one terribly painful lesson: There's no such thing as a "free" tax cut. American taxpayers will be paying for the Reagan-/Bush tax cut for decades — maybe even centuries. The last 12 years have shown us that tax cuts don't work unless they're coupled with spending cuts.

Baker post merits concern

The swearing-in of James A. Baker III as White House chief of staff was a quiet affair. That's because the yanking of Baker from the State Department to salvage the re-election campaign is a low point for the Bush presidency and something of an international embarrassment.

In addition, Baker's new role with the White House and the re-election campaign is, although legal, cause for public concern.

Bush is allowing his own immediate political worries to take precedence over the country's international concerns. That is the obvious conclusion, at any rate, if one believes that Baker is doing a good job at a critical time on the international front — presumably the president's view.

There is a fundamental problem with one person running both the White House staff and the president's re-election campaign. These are two distinct jobs, both with full-time demands.

There is, or at least there should be, a natural tension between the two positions. Something may be bad policy but good politics, or the other way around. The president himself should be making those calls, not turning them over to an all-powerful aide.

Company's garbage is town's treasure

What's good for General Motors appears to be good for Sawyer, N.D. — or is it?

Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., and Sawyer, a town of 319, are having a head-on collision over that question.

Anderson

Sawyer isn't hard to picture — think of a Norman Rockwell painting. A small farming community with no traffic lights and only one police officer who works part time. The 25 firefighters work on a volunteer basis, earning $4 per fire, even after a recent 12-hour blaze. Emergency calls ring simultaneously in the homes of 14 of the firefighters.

Downtown Detroit is more than 1,200 miles away from Sawyer, and many worlds apart culturally. But Sawyer has something that the Fortune 500 automaker desperately needs: a dumping ground.

G.M. will deliver 8 percent of its total waste to a landfill nine miles south of Sawyer. The scrap metal, concrete rubble, dried paint residue and other "stabilized materials" from over 100 G.M. plants across the country will be railroaded into town. Sawyer's own mayor, Dennis Redding, will be waiting.

Redding will haul the arriving waste in his pick-up truck from the railroad station to the Echo Mountain landfill. By 7 a.m. most mornings, Redding is busy packing dirt into a cell to ready the landfill site.

Redding didn't even appear on the ballot earlier this year to get re-elected to his fourth four-year term, winning 54 of 98 votes cast as a write-in candidate for the $25-a-month moonlighting position, which often entails chasing down stray dogs.

"North Dakota is in a bind," Redding told our associate Ed Henry. "There's no industry that's growing. People are leaving because of unemployment. You look around the United States and the waste industry is growing everywhere."

Some 43 states currently import and export what amounts to normal household trash, and every state exports some amounts of both hazardous, non-hazardous or industrial waste. Municipal Services Corp., which owns and operates the landfill, is a subsidiary of U.S. Pollution Control, Inc. Although the safety of Echo Mountain has not been challenged, USPCI has been cited for numerous violations and has paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in connection with alleged violations at other landfill sites across the country.

Without G.M.'s garbage and a job from Municipal Services Corp., Redding would have been forced to uproot his family from this once-thriving farming community.

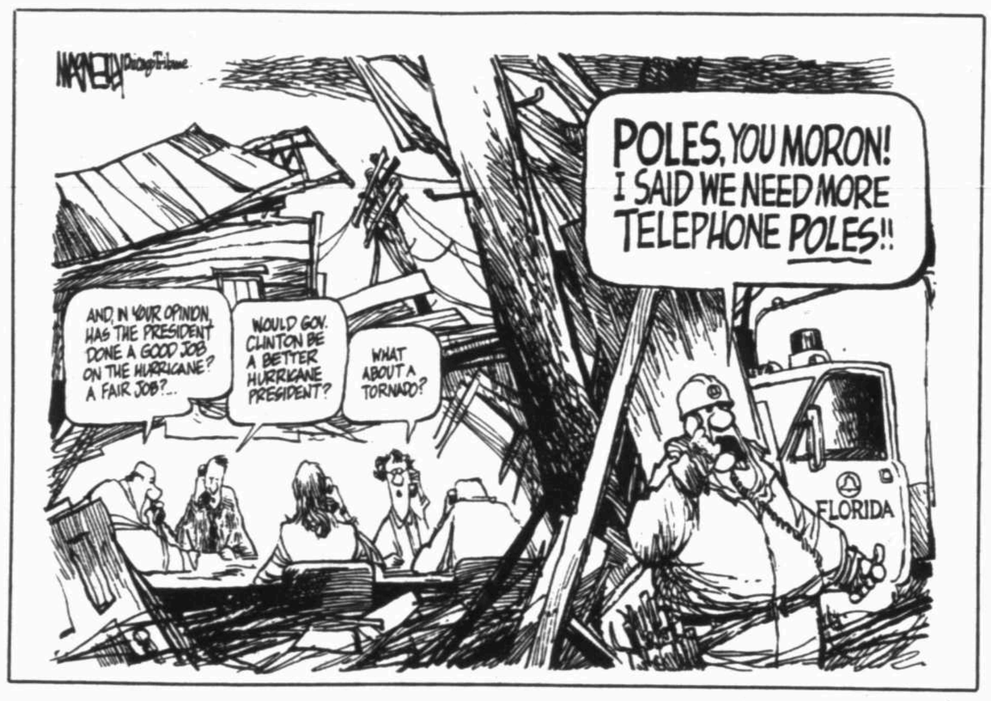

"It's a sad commentary when garbage, trash and sludge become sold as answers to economic problems to states like mine," Conrad told us.

Conrad's outspokenness has stirred up a hornet's nest. Redding and the five members of the town's City Council fired off a stinging letter to the senator, accusing him of belittling the town as small and struggling in the North Dakota press.

"Senator, you have insulted us by calling us 'economically hard pressed' without ever having been to Sawyer or Echo Mountain. You have insulted our integrity as working people. . . . Does a community that raised over $4,500 to upgrade the infield on its baseball diamond sound 'hard pressed?' " the July 28 letter argues. "How many larger cities in our state would welcome a business that would bring more than 30 good paying, permanent jobs to their area?"

"This is a stunning story," says Conrad, who is retiring at the end of his term. "The thing that really raised my interest . . . is the fact that nobody has any say if a community (like Sawyer) signs a deal with a big company. What happens to the quality of life of the surrounding community?"

Criminal cover-up division works overtime

WASHINGTON — U.S. Attorney General William Barr, in rejecting the House Judiciary Committee's call for a prosecutor not beholden to the Bush administration to investigate the crimes of Iraqgate, has taken personal charge of the cover-up.

Safire

The document that will be Exhibit A in a future prosecution of obstruction of justice is an unsigned 97-page apologia that accompanied Barr's unprecedented refusal to recognize a "political conflict of interest," as called for in the law.

Read it for yourself; though intended to explain in detail why Congress does not understand the intent of Congress, Barr's Apology does the opposite: its strained defensiveness will cause any objective reader to say "something smells fishy here."

Barr and the chief of his criminal division, Robert Mueller, could face prosecution if it turns out that high Bush officials knew about Saddam Hussein's perversion of our Agriculture export guarantees to finance his war machine, and delayed the inquiry into the Atlanta Lavoro bank scandal. They have a keen personal and political interest in seeing to it that the Department of Justice stays in safe, controllable Republican hands.

In professing to see no conflict in the investigation of themselves, these political appointees seek to hide behind the professionalism of "career prosecutors" of the Public Integrity Section and the FBI.

But dismayed professionals inside Justice tell me that the Public Integrity chief was reassigned months ago to make way for a more malleable man. The Barr Apology was prepared by political appointees for a political purpose: contain Iraqgate until after the election.

And Barr has thoroughly abused the FBI. Field agents have told me for a year that higher-ups at Justice have steered them away from rewarding lines of inquiry. This month the former head of the FBI's Atlanta field office, William Hinshaw, publicly accused Justice of having "delayed indictments for nearly a year in the $5 billion scandal."

It's no secret why the FBI's Lavoro investigation was hamstrung: to allow Agriculture and Commerce officials to carry out Bush national security directive 26 supporting Saddam.

Two days ago, I called Agriculture officials at the center of the grain-financing scandal; not one has been interviewed by the FBI. The reason "no evidence was found," in Barr's repeated phrase, was that no evidence was sought.

The attorney general arrogantly insists that Judge Marvin Shoob, who does not appreciate federal wrongdoing in his Atlanta courtroom and has called for a special prosecutor, "does not understand the case." Shoob understands the Lavoro case the way Judge Sirica understood the Watergate case.

That Atlanta case, which the criminal division in Washington was forced to admit it delayed during the Bush buildup of Saddam, may provide a way to scale the Barr stone wall. Christopher Dragoul, the local bank manager who pleaded guilty, comes before Shoob Sept. 14 for sentencing.

Justice, with so much to cover up, wants him to stay mum; local prosecutor Gail McKenzie has been pushed aside again, as Arthur Wade, a non-lawyer from Agriculture, has led the team at the Atlanta penitentiary coaching Dragoul on what not to say. He reminds Dragoul that the only way he can get a "downward departure" from the sentencing guidelines is upon the prosecution's request.

However, Dragoul now has a new pro-bono lawyer — Bobby Lee Cook, "the Ed Williams of the South" — who is said to understand that concealing the truth about the government's guilty knowledge of bank fraud is not the best way to obtain leniency from Shoob.

I hope the judge asks about Dragoul's meeting in 1988 with an aide to Hussein Kamel, Saddam's son-in-law and arms procurer, in the London offices of Matrix Churchill, an Iraqi front.

When Dragoul informed the Iraqi that investigators from the CIA and the National Security Agency had been in the Atlanta bank to monitor its financing of Iraq's huge commodity credits, he said Saddam's agent replied: "Don't worry about that — we know all about it; we're working together."

Do you suppose our "Criminal Cover-Up Division" has demanded the NSA and CIA reports and interviewed their agents? Forget it; that might lead to finding evidence making it unlawful to resist appointing a special prosecutor.

Killing all the lawyers raises many questions

I know this may come as a surprise to many people, but Dan Quayle has been reading Shakespeare. That is why one of the main targets of his campaign is lawyers. Shakespeare was the first one to advocate killing all the lawyers. Now it's become the linchpin of Bush's presidential strategy.

Buchwald

When Quayle shafted the lawyers in his speech at the Republican Convention and got a standing ovation, George Bush followed up and trashed them, too. It was as if the GOP had found something to take the place of the Communist threat to the United States.

I have no quarrel with Quayle and Bush when it comes to the elimination of lawyers. But I do have questions to pose to them.

What lawyers do George and Dan want eliminated? The Bush Administration lawyers are in court every day trying to stop somebody from doing something to them, or they are in court asking the judge to do something to the people.

Who lives and who dies?

Let me pose a hypothetical question to Mr. Bush.

"One of your sons is involved in a savings and loan scandal in Colorado and could be indicted for it. Should he have a right to legal counsel to protect himself from federal banking accountants who are after your political scalp?"

I think by calling for the abolishment of the legal profession, Bush and Quayle are playing with fire.

The latest census indicates there are now 2.5 lawyers in every extended household in America. Translated into economic terms, this means that there are millions of legal mouths to be fed, not counting spouses and children. Everyone in the country knows that there are too many lawyers in America, but nobody can afford to have their relatives thrown out of work.

As someone who has been in court for four years, I have strong feelings about the need for lawyers in our country. I was very much in favor of my lawyers and very skeptical about my opposition's lawyers. My lawyers were brave, honest people, who only believed in justice for their client.

The lawyers who opposed us were crafty, double-dealing skunks who were only concerned with earning their enormous fees and showing the judge they were smarter than he was.

Many times my sympathies were with Shakespeare because I, too, wanted to kill all the lawyers.

Having said that, we have to be practical about what we're talking about.

The Republicans must give us an estimate of how many lawyers they want eliminated, and then someone in the White House or the CIA has to come up with a plan on how to carry out the sentences.

The trouble is that when you bury three lawyers, eight new ones spring up in their place.

Perhaps Quayle and Bush are not really serious about eliminating members of the legal profession and are just using the issue to warm up the crowd. If that's all it is, then I'll be there cheering along with everybody else. But if someone sticks me in the eye with a Bush-Quayle banner, I'm going to sue him for everything he's got.

■ Burst water main disrupts Wall Street area

NEW YORK — A 30-inch water main burst in the Wall Street area of lower Manhattan early Tuesday, flooding the basements of two major office towers, forcing the closing of the southern part of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Drive and disrupting the morning for tens of thousands of downtown workers and commuters.

Though the accident happened at 1:30 a.m., hundreds of workers, many of them data-entry clerks for financial firms, were at work and had to be evacuated from the two buildings, 55 Water Street and 125 Broad Street.

There were no serious injuries, but the Fire Department at first feared that the hundreds of thousands of gallons of water that poured into the basements of the buildings might touch off an electrical explosion.

■ Teachers in 3 states strike, signals wider unrest

Teachers in three states have gone on strike in work stoppages that could spread to three other states. And union leaders and education analysts say the bitter mood among teachers goes beyond wage and compensation issues.

In the largest of the strikes, 10,000 teachers in the Detroit school system walked off their jobs Monday, as did teachers in four other Michigan school systems of Mount Pleasant, Clarkston, Grand Haven and Plainwell.

In Illinois, teachers in Harrisburg, Rochester, Bethany, Tri-Valley and Belvidere are on strike, as are teachers in the Bennington, Vt., school district.

The number of strikes, while smaller than in past years, could grow if current negotiations break down in several school districts in Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and California.

■ Judge sentences lawyers in savings-and-loan case

PENSACOLA, Fla. — One Texas lawyer was sentenced to prison, another to a halfway house and a third got probation Tuesday for their roles in the Topsail Hill savings-and-loan fraud case.

U.S. District Judge Roger Vinson sentenced Houston attorney Robert Collins to nine years in prison and fined him $15,000.

Collins was one of the principal defendants in a scheme that defrauded $102 million from Hill Financial Savings Association of Red Hill, Pa., and Vision Banc of Kingsville, Texas, through loans obtained to purchase about 21,000 acres of beach and forest land at Topsail Hill in the Florida Panhandle.

The lawyer told Vinson he didn't realize clients he represented in the deal were committing fraud.

"I do not believe ... that I or the people who worked with me had any intent of committing any crime," Collins said.

Graham clinches Democratic nomination

MIAMI (AP) — First-term Sen. Bob Graham clinched the Democratic nomination Tuesday in Florida's partial primary, which will be continued next week in hurricane-battered Dade County.

Dade, the state's largest county with 10 percent of Florida's registered voters, postponed its election to Sept. 8 because many people were still too busy recovering from Hurricane Andrew. But voters elsewhere in the state chose nominees for U.S. Senate, House and local offices.

Nevada also held primaries Tuesday. Three candidates were challenging Democratic U.S. Sen. Harry Reid. On the Republican side, six candidates were running for Reid's seat.

In Florida, with 373 of 5,344 precincts, or 7 percent, reporting unofficial returns, Graham had 49,634 votes, or 82 percent, to attorney James Mahorner's 10,684 votes, or 18 percent. At that rate, votes from Dade County couldn't change the outcome.

The 55-year-old Graham, a former two-term governor, has been trying to help relief efforts in his home county. Spokeswoman Mary Byrne said that given the circumstances, he wouldn't comment on the primary.

In the Republican Senate primary, former U.S. Rep. Bill Grant, who switched to the GOP in 1988 and was defeated when he ran for re-election in 1990, took an early lead.

With 361 of 5,344 precincts, or 7 percent, reporting, Grant had 19,585 votes, or 53 percent.

Syria commits to reach settlement with Israel

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Syria has presented Israel with a document in which Damascus, for the first time, committed itself in writing to reach a "peace settlement" with Israel and acknowledged that Israel had "security concerns" that could be addressed, Israeli officials said on Tuesday.

The Syrian document, detailing its views on Middle East peace, was presented on Monday by Muwaffaq al-Allaf, the chief Syrian negotiator to the Middle East peace talks here. Neither Syria nor Israel made the document public.

Israeli officials said that the paper contained many standard Syrian demands with which Israel disagreed, including the insistence that a peace accord be based on a full Israeli withdrawal from territories occupied in the 1967 Middle East war. But the Israelis said it also contained some new language indicating an important change in tone by the Syrian side.

"The main progress reflected in this document is in matters of tone, but that is not to be poohpoohed," said Israel's chief negotiator, Itamar Rabinovich. "It is important for both sides to be persuaded of the seriousness of the other party. Progress made on symbols is important because symbols have been so important in this conflict."

Federal grand jury indicts eleven men on drug charges

PHOENIX (AP) — Eleven men have been indicted on drug charges in a smuggling and distribution network that authorities said had operations in five states, officials said Tuesday.

FBI officials said the men were indicted by a federal grand jury in Phoenix on conspiracy to distribute and possession with intent to distribute marijuana and cocaine.

The FBI said the ring had operations in California, New Mexico, New York, Pennsylvania and Texas. It allegedly distributed 10 tons of marijuana and 53 kilos of cocaine.

More than $6.5 million in assets have been seized from the organization, the FBI said.

Five of the 11 indicted were in custody Tuesday, but the whereabouts of five others was unknown, authorities said.

One of the 11, William Angel Gutierrez, reportedly has fled to Cartagena, Colombia, the FBI said.

The FBI said the indictment followed a two-year investigation by FBI, Internal Revenue Service and Scottsdale police.

Bush plan will boost Medicare costs to elderly, Clinton says

Hearst News Service

GREENVILLE, S.C. — After weeks of defending himself against GOP tax-and-spend charges, Bill Clinton went on the offensive Tuesday, accusing President Bush of wanting to cap Medicare spending, an idea the Democrat said would boost medical bills of millions of elderly Americans.

Speaking to senior citizens at the Village Green Retirement Community here, Clinton said the president's deficit-reduction plan would mean cuts in Medicare, the health insurance program for the elderly and the disabled, by $127 billion over five years.

As a result, he claimed, some 30 million Medicare recipients would each pay $2,000 more for health care over that period. He made similar comments earlier Tuesday at the Macon-Bibb Senior Center in Macon, Ga.

Clinton said the $127 billion figure is in the administration's "mid-session review," which proposes ways to reduce the nation's estimated $334 billion budget deficit for fiscal year 1992, which ends Sept. 30.

Bush has not endorsed any specific proposal, but he has called for a cap on so-called entitlements — benefits mandated by law — other than Social Security. Entitlement programs such as Medicare, Medicaid and veterans benefits are the fastest growing segments of the federal budget, making them a prime target for cuts.

Bush deputy campaign chairman Clayton Yeutter said Clinton was taking "his favorite tactics, fearmongering and pandering, into the senior citizen community." He urged the Democrat to "stop scaring seniors."

Yeutter said that while Bush's deficit-reduction plan would cap overall spending on entitlements other than Social Security, it also would ensure that Medicare benefits keep pace with inflation.

'People at very high levels of income should pay more for the entitlements they get, including Medicare. But I don't want to hurt the middle class and the poor who are already poorer than they used to be and paying more for health care.'

—Bill Clinton

The Clinton campaign said the estimate of $2,000 more that Medicare beneficiaries would pay comes from a study by Kenneth Thorpe, a professor of health policy at the University of North Carolina.

By 1997, Medicare is expected to account for 12.7 percent of the federal budget, up from 8.8 percent in 1992 and a projected 9.5 percent next year, according to the Congressional Budget Office. Total spending on Medicare is expected to be $146 million in fiscal 1993.

The tactic of painting his opponent as an enemy of the elderly is not a new one for the Arkansas governor. During the Florida primary campaign, he attacked rival Paul Tsongas for his proposals to curb entitlements, and what had been a close battle in the Sunshine State turned into a solid victory for Clinton.

Clinton did not mention then that he believes Social Security benefits should be taxed for those recipients with annual income greater than $100,000. His proposal would cover 3.7 percent of those receiving payments. Since 1983, individuals with income more than $25,000 and couples earning more than $32,000 have paid income tax on half their Social Security benefits.

The Democratic candidate also said Tuesday that the wealthy should pay more for the government benefits they receive.

"People at very high levels of income should pay more for the entitlements they get, including Medicare," Clinton said. "But I don't want to hurt the middle class and the poor who are already poorer than they used to be and paying more for health care."

At the same time, Clinton derided the across-the-board tax cut Bush proposed at the Republican National Convention, saying it would benefit the wealthy.

"How's he going to pay for that? He's going to sock it to us (the middle class)," Clinton said, in one of several attempts to draw a class distinction between himself and Bush.

Explosion of specialists threatens cost, effectiveness of medicine

By Brenda C. Coleman
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — The number of physician specialties has soared in the past five years, threatening to splinter medical care and boost already spiraling costs, says a report in The Journal of the American Medical Association.

Twenty-five physician specialties and 56 subspecialties now have accredited U.S. training programs, with 35 of the subspecialties recognized in just the past five years, the report said.

While internal medicine, plastic surgery and urology have been established for decades, new specialties include such offshoots as aerospace medicine, hand surgery and pediatric urology, said the report in Wednesday's journal.

And more are on the way, said the report by Dr. Carlos J.M. Martini, vice president of medical education for the AMA, the nation's largest organization for doctors.

In addition, 123 self-appointed medical boards certify physicians in areas ranging from addiction treatment to circus medicine without having passed the muster of the American Board of Medical Specialties or the Accreditation Council on Graduate Medical Education, Martini said.

A spokesman for specialists called the report "sort of a hysterical response" to the trend.

Dr. Marc L. Rivo, director of medicine for the Bureau of Health Professions in the Department of Health and Human Services, said the proliferation of specialists and subspecialists is a serious problem.

"Despite a doubling of the physician supply in the last 25 years, from 300,000 to 600,000, we still have large parts of the country that have no doctors," he said from Rockville, Md.

"In many parts of the country, including large cities, there are not enough generalist physicians to provide basic access to care," he said. "So people are using emergency rooms for their care or putting off seeing a doctor."

"Specialization is very important," he said. "It has to continue, because it is the byproduct of advances in medical knowledge. ...

What is bad is when you have doctors who specialize in the left elbow alone."

Some Midlanders concerned about water

■ Shell contends dumping more waste water won't be harmful.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

An area oil company's request to increase the dumping of industrial waste water while eliminating a safeguard monitoring possible harmful materials has caused several local residents to express concern for Midland's drinking water supply, a local consulting geologist said.

Shell Oil Co. in Odessa has applied to the Texas Water Commission (TWC) to dump an additional 96,000 gallons of water from its plant without testing for three hazardous materials — chromium, hexavalent chromium and benzene.

"We're not asking for a permit that doesn't test or monitor anything," said Dennis Winkler, a Shell official in Houston. "We're saying to the Texas Water Commission that since we've never found 'detectable levels' of these compounds, these are compounds we do not run."

Ed Vogler, a local consulting geologist, believes the monitoring requirements should remain in place because of the increased discharge flow.

"It seems logical that the concentration of these hazardous minerals may possibly increase — especially with the increased flow," Vogler said.

Winkler said that chromium, hexavalent chromium and benzene are generally associated with "cooling waters" and are compounds the Odessa refinery doesn't run.

Shell currently releases a daily average of 360,000 gallons of water into a drainage ditch that feeds several draws, including Midland Draw. The flow eventually leads to the Colorado and Concho rivers.

Officials at the TWC stressed that the permit was still "not a done deal" and revisions may be drawn following a "technical review."

Vogler was alerted to the plan last month by a client who irrigates about 400 acres for grazing his livestock. The client wrote the TWC in early July expressing his concerns about the possible "death of livestock, destruction of crops or contamination of the lands" causing a significant loss of income and property value.

Vogler echoed those concerns.

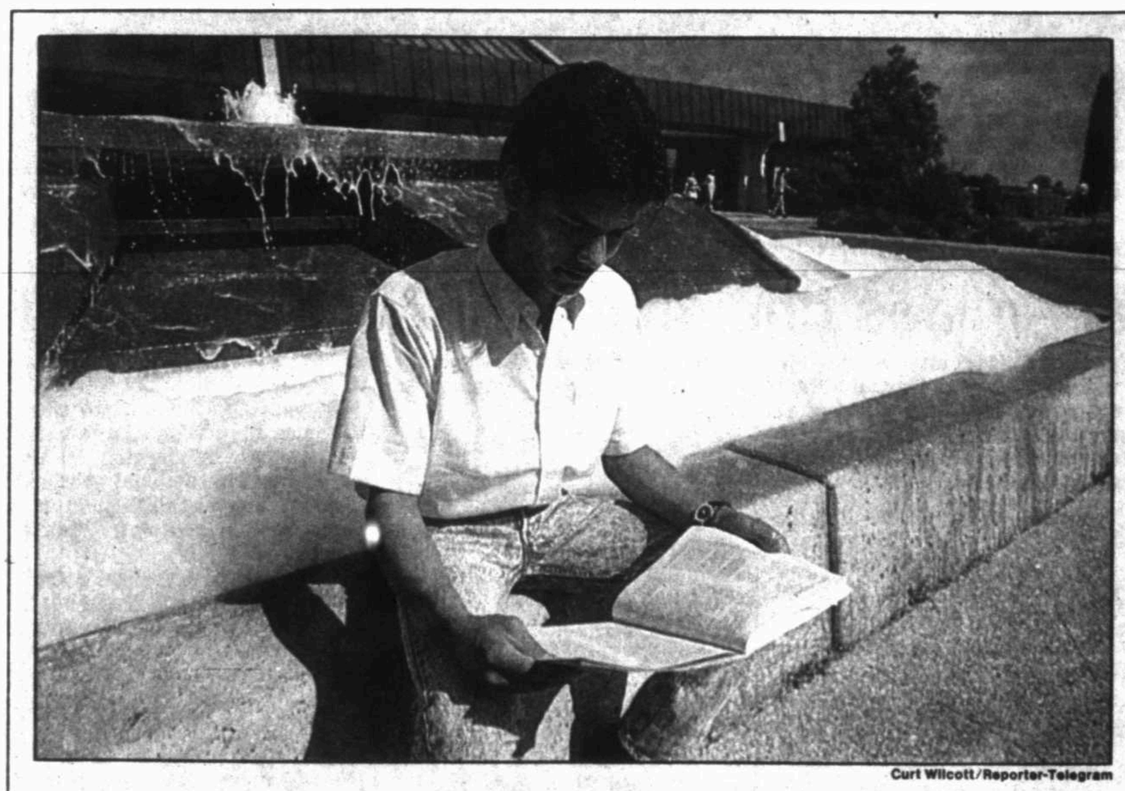

"In my lake at my ranch in Mitchell County, for example, I have recently stocked additional fish. There are creeks right there ... that my livestock drink from," he said. "I'm sure there are others who will be equally concerned."

Residents concerned about the application can write: Kerry Sullivan, Assistant Chief Hearings Examiner, P.O. Box 13087, Austin, 78711, and state "I request a public hearing." Citizens should also explain how they are adversely affected.

The TWC has reviewed the application from Shell and declared it "administratively complete." However, the permit draft may be changed pending further evaluation by the commission.

"The two sources (Lower Colorado River and Concho River) of Midland's drinking water could be threatened. The water of West Texas should be protected," Vogler said.

The discharge route from the plant on South Grandview Street in Odessa flows from drainage ditches to the Monahans Draw, the Midland Draw, Mustang Creek and Beal's Creek before entering the Colorado River.

Lawmen continue roundup

■ Permian Basin Drug Task Force arrests more than half of the 40 people the grand jury indicted last week.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

After 10 months of undercover investigation and 24 hours of arrests, more than half of the 40 people indicted last week by a Midland County grand jury on narcotics charges were in jail Tuesday.

Officers from the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, the Texas Department of Public Safety, the Midland Police Department and the Midland County Sheriff's office began a roundup Monday at about 3:30 p.m., with 14 people being arrested by Tuesday night.

"We are still working on getting all of them," said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter. "When the word got out that we were arresting people, most of them left. But, we will continue to look for them. I am real pleased at how the roundup went."

A Midland County grand jury last week handed down sealed indictments covering 61 violations, three being possession of a controlled substance and 58 were for delivery of a controlled substance. All the violations involved cocaine.

All those taken into custody Monday were charged with delivery of a controlled substance, a first degree felony that carries a five- to 99-year prison sentence and/or a $10,000 fine.

Among those arrested Monday were Derrold Lynn Hunts, charged with four counts of delivery with bond set at $30,000. Charged with two counts each of delivery were Paula Renee Harper and Billy Don Lucas, with bond set at $15,000 each. Also facing two counts of delivery each with bond

MISD creates program for hearing-impaired students

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Imagine having to ride a bus to Odessa every day to school.

Melvin and Mary Dunn's son, Sam, did just that.

"Sam had to go to Ector Junior High for two years and that was really difficult," Ms. Dunn said.

"He got on a bus around 7 in the morning and got home about 5:30 in the evening," she said.

But beginning this year, Sam, 15, is attending Midland schools.

So are some other Midland deaf children who had been forced to go to Odessa, where the Regional Day School for the Deaf is located.

"I think it's great that Midland will be administering its own program," Ms. Dunn.

"When children go to school together from kindergarten on, they can be part of the community," she said.

"It is important that Midland, the community, be involved in the education of all its children," Ms. Dunn said.

Parents of other deaf children have voiced similar sentiments.

"Parents felt they needed to be provided the services here in Midland," said Jan Murdock, supervisor of special education for the Midland Independent School District.

As a result, MISD sought a local program, which was approved by the Texas Education Agency at the end of August.

Previously, until the seventh grade deaf youngsters were taught in Midland with supervision from the Regional Day School for the Deaf under the Ector County Independent School District in Odessa. Older students had to go to Odessa for classes.

About 20 students are currently enrolled in the deaf education program at MISD, Ms. Murdock said.

Youngsters range from completely deaf to those with moderate hearing loss.

Depending on their grade level, youngsters attend either Emerson Elementary, Alamo Junior High, Lee Freshman or Lee High School.

"They are using the same curriculum as the regular students," Ms. Murdock said.

Each student has an individual education plan designed to suit his or her needs. Classes are combination of deaf and regular classes, and sometimes strictly one or the other.

One of the goals of the program, as in all special education programs, is to place the youngsters in the mainstream with their peers.

"What their abilities allow them to do with their peer groups is what we want them to do," Ms. Murdock said.

To accommodate the deaf students, MISD has had to make some adaptations, including decoders for televisions for closed captions, interpreters who not only know sign language, but can translate concepts, and an orientation of the curriculum to be more visual and hands-on.

The program employs four full-time and one part-time interpreters and four full-time certified teachers. Hiring qualified personnel was one of the biggest hurdles in implementing the program, Ms. Murdock said.

The school district still needs substitute interpreters, she said.

Richards spends her birthday firing at Bush, doves

By Terri Langford
Associated Press writer

HONEY GROVE — Gov. Ann Richards spent her birthday Tuesday firing verbal barbs at President Bush and birdshot at doves during a hunt used to stump for state Sen. Ted Lyon and Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero.

The doves were safe. Richards went home to Austin empty-handed.

However, Bush took several on the wing.

Richards, with incumbent troupe in tow, blamed Bush and former President Ronald Reagan for "destroying" Texas' oil and gas industry. She also predicted that the tone at this year's GOP convention would turn away voters in November.

"The Republicans had such a really sad convention, such an angry convention, they didn't get the bounce from it, called a dead cat bounce," she told about 200 people, mostly hunters. "You know even a dead cat will bounce if you throw it hard enough."

She also took general jabs at domestic issues such as unemployment and the economy.

"These guys stand up there saying 'Who do you trust?' I mean, our answer is 'You got to be kidding,' " Richards said.

The dove hunt, a fund-raiser for Lyon in his home district, was part of a two-day trip through East Texas to help boost the profiles of both Lyon and Guerrero.

Lyon, the victim of recent redistricting, faces a tough race this fall against Florence Shapiro, former mayor of Plano. In the recent redistricting move, Lyon lost voters in rural areas — where he has the most support — and gained a number of urban voters.

Guerrero was appointed by Richards to fill the vacant seat on the Texas Railroad Commission when John Sharp was elected state comptroller in 1990. The former state representative for Austin faces her first election this fall against Republican Barry Williamson, a Dallas oilman.

In a news release Tuesday afternoon, Williamson called Guerrero a hypocrite for hunting.

Williamson referred to an April 11, 1985, comment Guerrero made on the Texas House floor seemingly opposing the Sportsman's Rights Act, sponsored by Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton.

"I would like for you, Mr. Messer, ... to tell the people of Texas why it is that you want to pass a law to allow murderers killing Bambi to do it in peace," she was quoted.

But Messer remembered the

BPW sets 'women power' seminar

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Everything from a fashion show to in-depth discussion of the presidential candidates will be explored in "Women Power: A Positive Force," a networking-in-the-'90s seminar.

The annual event, sponsored by Uptown Business & Professional Women, will be presented Saturday, Sept. 12, from 9:30 a.m.-4 p.m. at the Plaza Club, 6 Desta Drive, Suite 6600.

Cost of the day-long event, which includes lunch and wine and cheese tasting, is $35 per person. Registration will begin at 9:15 a.m.

"Because this is an election year, and we want all women to be as well-informed on the issues as possible, there will be a political forum for roughly and hour in the morning," said BPW member Linda Farrar.

"We will have a representative from each party who has been given seven questions in advance (in order to prepare responses). Each person will have two minutes to give their candidates' views on the questions," she said.

League of Women Voters representatives will also attend and will register voters throughout the day-long seminar.

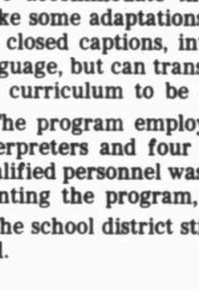

Guest speakers will include Celia Morales, who will speak on "Identifying and Resolving Women's Issues."

"Celia serves on the Governor's Commission for Women and will have just returned from a session with Gov. Ann Richards when she speaks at our seminar," Ms. Farrar said.

Ms. Morales serves on the executive board of the United Way, the Midland College Small Business Advisory Council and the Hispanic Women's Network of Texas.

Joan Warren, the coordinator of continuing education at Cowley Community College, is scheduled to speak on "Leadership" and Patricia Netherland-Ares, MA, LCDC, PFC, a BPW member, motivational speaker, licensed chemical dependency counselor and director of Star Counseling Center, will speak on "Claiming Our Power and Wisdom.

"Joan has been presenting seminars and helping clients develop leadership skills for the past seven years," Ms. Farrar said. "Patricia is a superbly qualified motivational speaker."

Netherland-Ares

Other speakers and their topics include Betsy Triplett-Hurt, "Women and the Responsibility of Voting;" Diane Biancalana, "Women's Health Issues;" and Kathleen McCullough, "Sexual Harassment and Discrimination."

The seminar will include a fashion show presented by a New Mexico designer, wine and cheese party in the afternoon, hair and

Bustamante to speak at free Labor Day fest

Staff report

ODESSA — U.S. Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, will head the list of local, state and national officials who will speak at the 35th annual Permian Basin Labor Day Celebration Monday in Odessa, said Central Labor Union President D.L. "Dally" Willis.

The Labor Day event, which will feature food, fiddler contests, horseshoe pitching contests and games for adults and children, will begin at noon Monday in Odessa's Sherwood Community Center at the corner of E. 49th and Everglade streets.

Admission is free and the public is invited.

The annual Labor Day fest is sponsored by the Permian Basin Central Labor Union to honor America's working men and women, Willis said. It is one of the longest running Labor Day celebrations in the state.

In addition to Bustamante, other speakers will include Judges Charles Baird and Pete Benavides of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals; Judge Susan Larsen of the 8th Court of Appeals in El Paso; and Betsy Triplett Hurt, Democratic candidate for state representative in Odessa.

For additional information, call Willis at 563-0583 or 682-2700.

Vietnamese doctor finds a home in South Plains

By John Rigg
Associated Press

FLOYDADA — Dr. Victor Hoang may have lost a country but he has found a home.

The 42-year-old family practitioner also may be one of the few physicians on the South Plains to have the distinction of having earned a medical degree twice.

Hoang, who was born in Hanoi but fled to South Vietnam with his family in the early 1950s, developed an interest in medicine after being treated for a gunshot wound by U.S. Army doctors.

While serving with the Vietnamese navy in the late 1960s, Hoang was shot in the knee and taken to an Army base outside Saigon for treatment.

"I was very lucky that I was the only Vietnamese to be operated on there. They did a very good job," he said, noting that such a wound might have cost him his lower leg if he had been treated by local doctors.

Impressed by the Americans' kindness and techniques, Hoang decided to become a doctor. He completed a year of college before enrolling in medical school in Saigon. He graduated from medical school six years later.

But he and his wife, Lisa, held little hope for a successful career under the communist regime.

In the spring of 1979, after paying the communist government more than $10,000, the couple fled the country, Hoang said. They left separately — one month apart.

Hoang and nearly 500 other refugees left in a small fishing boat. The craft nearly sank but they were rescued five days later by a British freighter and taken to Hong Kong, he said.

Mrs. Hoang and her three children were not as lucky.

"I spent seven days without food and water. I saw a kid die in front of me," she said. "We had nothing left. A lot of ships passed us by. Some of them threw food to us."

Her boat stopped at an island off Malaysia. But local authorities wanted no part of the Vietnamese and towed the refugees' craft out to sea, cutting them adrift in the current, Mrs. Hoang said.

A short time later, the outcasts landed at an island in the Indonesian archipelago. Mrs. Hoang and her children were treated decently at a refugee camp, she said. After more than two months, they emigrated to Utah to live with her sister.

Hoang spent about a month in Hong Kong before he emigrated to England, a country he would call home for more than a year. While there, he held such jobs as a bartender and interpreter.

Hoang, sponsored by his wife, arrived in Salt Lake City in 1980. Both of them worked at different jobs while he attended the University of Utah. After graduation, they moved to California and he attended the College of Osteopathic Medicine of the Pacific.

The couple moved to New York in 1989 and Hoang completed his residency at Interfaith Medical Center in Brooklyn. They wanted to live in the Southwest and opted for Sweetwater after reading about an opening at Rolling Plains Memorial Hospital. Hoang worked two years for the Sweetwater facility, a period that included about 5,000 hours as a contract physician in emergency rooms across the region, his wife said.

Hoang put up his shingle at the Cogdell Clinic in Floydada on Aug. 11 after Caprock Hospital administrator Terry Keltz heard about the doctor and went to Sweetwater to meet him.

The new doctor may be the answer to Floydada's medical needs. The town has been without a physician since the hospital closed in May 1991, about three months after the clinic shut its doors, Keltz said.

"I would follow up any lead. That's what happened in this case," he said. "He's the first physician I've interviewed that did not demand a salary guarantee. He's the first physician I've ever met who's been through medical school twice."

Hoang is practicing medicine five days a week, a routine that should prevent him from becoming burned out by patient overload. His presence should act as a magnet for a second physician. That, in turn, should allow the hospital district's board of directors to achieve another goal: the reopening of the hospital by 1993, Keltz said.

Hoang said he sees 25 to 30 patients a day, and that the townspeople have welcomed him and his family.

"Floydada is very nice," said the soft-spoken physician. "People here are very friendly."

Mrs. Hoang, who works in the clinic as office manager, said her husband has had enough experience to enable him to handle any emergency.

"He can keep a patient stable. He has had a lot of experience," she said. "We've had a lot of support from the people in town. They need a doctor and they're very happy we're here."

Richards joins effort to lure replica of ships

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards is joining an effort to lure replicas of Christopher Columbus' ships to a new home on the Texas coast.

The governor said she'll ask Spanish officials to consider Corpus Christi as the homeport for the replicas of the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria, known collectively as Los Barcos.

The governor's efforts will include sending a representative to Spain and urging Texas schoolchildren to write King Juan Carlos. Texas mayors also will be asked to support the campaign.

Richards decided to join the campaign Monday after meeting with a group from Corpus Christi that hopes to secure the ships.

"We told her we needed someone who could get the attention of Spain, and she indicated she would be glad to do it," said Gary Bushell, president of the Corpus Christi Area Economic Development Corp.

"We were pleased by how receptive she was. She was very enthusiastic. She immediately understood the importance of the ships," he said.

Said Richards' spokeswoman Margaret Justus: "She strongly believes they (Los Barcos) belong in Texas and Corpus Christi."

Corpus Christi is among five cities vying for the ships. Spanish officials will visit all five by the end of October to discuss proposals to homeport the replicas.

Corpus Christi's stiffest competition will be from groups in New York City, Columbus, Ga., Miami and Fort Lauderdale, Fla., according to William Crook, who is leading the Los Barcos campaign.

The ships visited Corpus Christi for 10 days in March.

In July, the Corpus Christi Area Economic Development Corp. sent Spain a proposal to bring the ships for the city's annual Bayfest and for the Festival of the Americas, a celebration of the 500th anniversary of Columbus' voyage. It is not yet known whether the ships will return.

DEATHS

Ocie Woodul

LAMESA — Services for Ocie Woodul, 85, are set for 2 p.m. Thursday at the Lamesa Church of Christ with Mark Hackett, minister, officiating. Burial will follow in Lamesa Memorial Park under the direction of Branon Funeral Home.

Mrs. Woodul died Sunday at her Lamesa residence.

She was born on April 7, 1907, in Nolan County. She worked at the Plainsman Motel as a switchboard operator. She was a member of the Medical Arts Hospital Auxiliary and had worked in the Pink Pantry at the hospital. She was a member of the Pythian Sisters, the '48 Delphians and the Garden Club.

Survivors include two daughters, Wynell Wood and Lavoris Truitt, both of Lamesa; a sister, Bulah Sanders of South Carolina; four grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren.

Clarence Nicholson

LUBBOCK — Services for former Midlander Clarence Nicholson, 82, are pending with Rix Funeral Directors.

He died Tuesday at a Lubbock hospital.

Ex-Continental Airlines chairman sentenced for DWI

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Continental Airlines Chairman Frank Lorenzo was sentenced to two years probation Tuesday and fined $750 after pleading no contest to a drunken driving charge.

Lorenzo, 52, was sentenced during a brief court appearance around noon before visiting Harris County-Court-at-Law Judge Gerald Payte.

A patrol officer stopped Lorenzo on July 28 after he saw him driving the wrong way on a Houston street, according to arrest records. Lorenzo also didn't have his driver's license with him, Officer C.W. Jones said.

Lorenzo was given two Breathalyzer tests, blowing a .096 and a .10 level, respectively. A person with a .10 blood-alcohol level is considered legally drunk in Texas.

Jones has said Lorenzo's performance on motor skills tests resulted in the driving while intoxicated charge.

Lorenzo and his attorney, Bob Moen, did not immediately return telephone messages left at their offices Tuesday evening.

Lorenzo, who came to symbolize a tumultuous decade of airline deregulation in the 1980s, stepped down as chief executive officer of Continental Airlines Holding Inc. in 1990. He remains on Continental's board of directors.

He built Continental into what was once the nation's largest airline company by merging the ailing Texas International Airlines with Continental and then buying Eastern Airlines and People Express.

Eastern Airlines has since folded. Continental is still flying but it is in the midst of bankruptcy reorganization.

set at $10,000 are Floyd Jackson, James Arthur Johnson and Valerie Ann Johnson.

Those facing a single charge of delivery and their bond amount are: Richard Earl Hemphill, Willie Earl Hutson, Zackery Lee Jackson and Derrick Dewayne Mosley, $25,000 each; Bernell Beck Shelton, $10,000; and Eddie Gene Adkinson, Charles Henry Mason, Juana Faye Wilson and Vanessa Haynes, $5,000 each.

Those indicted who were already in jail before Monday's roundup were: Rochelle Hall (aka Rochelle Oldham) and Jackie D. Lenard, each charged with three counts of delivery. Hall's bond was set at $25,000; Lenard's at $15,000.

Also already in custody, now facing one additional charge of delivery were: Jerry Lewis Dedrick and Wylinda Ann Ellis, both with bonds of $25,000; and Stephen Ellis Craig, Vanessa Leticia Jackson, Christina Yvonne Johnson, Tommy Ray Owens, Matias Salgado Ramos and Julio Renteria, with bond set at $5,000 each.

Two charges of delivery were also handed down for Dewayne Duson, who is currently in custody in Brownsville, Painter said. His bond was set at $50,000.

RICHARDS: Governor uses hunt as political tool statement as a joke.

"It was just a funny little episode," he said Tuesday night. "It was kind of a slow day. I was on the front mike. Lena went to the back mike. We were laughing. . . . No one thought it was anything more than good-natured joking."

Guerrero, Lyon and Richards three made a four-town campaign trip Monday, visiting Plano, Rockwall, Terrell and Canton. Richards' hunting party on Tuesday included Lyon and his son Payton, Guerrero and her husband Leo Aguirre, State Comptroller John Sharp and Barry Bridges, both security officer and hunting advisor to Richards.

About 200 people paid at least $125 dollars each to attend the dove hunt, barbecue and a visit with Richards.

The annual Richards dove hunt has become a powerful political tool, as first discovered in 1990.

The former Texas treasurer was getting stomped by West Texas oilman Clayton Williams in voter polls about the time dove season opened that year. A lot of mileage was given then, she said, to accusations that because she was a woman, she would be soft on crime and would take a hard stance against gun owner's rights.

Lyon invited her to go hunting and take the press along.

"Man, after that my numbers went straight up in East Texas," Richards said. "So I thought I'd come back hunting last year and I did and this year, because I want to keep my numbers up in East Texas."

The attention focused on the annual dove hunt — held on the first day the season opens — is not lost on the candidates seen hunting with Richards.

The dove hunt with Ann Richards is the place to be seen despite the jokes about the press dressed in non-hunting gear that scare off the quarry.

"I tell you what, we could have damn sure bagged a limit of press," Lyon said.

"Leo and I go hunting every year about this time, but we never attract any cameras at all," Guerrero said. "So we decided that we'd come with Ted and Ann to attract some cameras. And look how well we did."

Residents are steamed about train's late-night runs

AUSTIN (AP) — Late night runs of a vintage steam train has some residents blowing their stacks.

The Hill Country Flyer, a steam-belching locomotive with a loud whistle, carries passengers on a scenic run between Cedar Park and Burnet.

But later, it must travel 20 miles into Austin to turn around.

Neighbors who live near the track say the jaunt sometimes takes place too late and is too noisy.

The train is required by federal regulations to blow its whistle four times each at the approximately 25 road crossings from north Austin to downtown.

Sometimes it is traveling through Austin after midnight.

"I love the sound of trains," said Zelda Herrington. "But when they come out at that time of night, it really is disturbing the peace."

The nonprofit association that operates the train has applied for a grant to build a turnaround in Cedar Park.

"We do understand the neighborhood concerns and they are valid," said Susan Richardson, executive director of the Austin Steam Train Association.

But, she said, the association couldn't wait until the turnaround was built to start business. "And we didn't foresee it running this late."

But some residents don't want to wait until the association builds a turnaround.

"We don't feel like we have to put up with this," said Ms. Herrington. "I don't care if it is temporary. It is not acceptable at all."

Ex-NASA official files claim for wrongful arrest

HOUSTON (AP) — A former NASA official who says he was wrongly jailed on drug charges due to a "reckless, inadequate and incompetent investigation" has filed a claim seeking $10 million in damages from the federal government.

Edward Smith Barker, 62, a former NASA security and protocol officer, filed an Aug. 28 claim with the U.S. Department of Justice faulting the investigation by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and the U.S. Marshal's Service that led to his incarceration earlier this summer.

Joel Androphy, an attorney representing Barker, said authorities still have not explained adequately how his client mistakenly was arrested.

In his account of the arrest, Barker has said two gun-wielding marshals came to his Houston-area home, arrested him and took him to jail — all the while refusing to listen to his protests of innocence.

Larry Finder, a spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office in Houston, declined to comment on the claim Monday to the Houston Chronicle. He did not immediately return a telephone call Tuesday from The Associated Press.

Federal authorities, however, previously have acknowledged Barker was mistakenly identified as another Edward Barker who was wanted in Louisiana on drug charges. The U.S. attorney's office also publicly apologized for the incident.

The correct Barker wanted by authorities lived in Montgomery County and has been arrested, Androphy said.

Barker had top security clearance at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, where he arranged presidential visits and helped select astronauts.

Filing the administrative claim is required before a lawsuit may be filed against the federal government. The government has six months to address the claim, or a lawsuit may be filed against the government, Androphy said.

Burglars loot blind man's business

AUSTIN (AP) — A 71-year-old visually impaired man who operates a popular snack bar in a state office building has been looted three times since May, losing nearly $800.

"I didn't think it would ever happen to me," said Charlie Garrett, who has an artificial left eye and only 10 percent vision in his right eye. "I didn't think anybody would come in here and steal money."

He has operated for nine years in the headquarters of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Garrett's 15-seat snack bar was first burglarized in May, when a thief took about $350 from a cash drawer. On June 8, someone stole 200 $1 bills, more than $150 in change and Garrett's 100-pound cash register. It was replaced at no cost by the Texas Commission for the Blind.

After that, MHMR spent $150 to change the locks on the doors to the building.

Animal shelter seeks volunteers

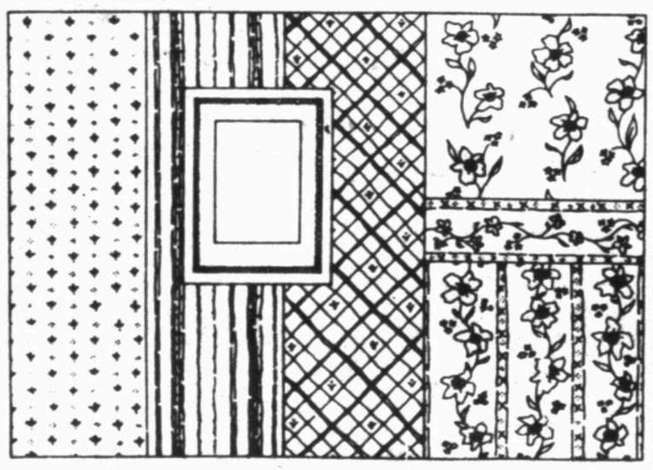

Staff report

The Midland Animal Control staff is seeking volunteers to donate their skills in helping to care for animals at the city shelter and carrying out chores because of understaffing, according to Karen Hoffman, MAC assistant director.

A meeting for volunteers is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. today at the MAC Shelter, 1200 N. Fairgrounds Road.

Volunteers would work in many capacities, such as helping with adoptions, grooming animals, and making follow-up telephone calls, Ms. Hoffman said.

State in brief

■ Man charged with murder in girl's death

AMARILLO — A 21-year-old man has been charged with capital murder in the sexual assault and beating death of his fiance's year-old daughter, officials say.

David Lee Cross of Amarillo turned himself in and was arraigned Monday before District Judge Abe Lopez. Bond was denied.

An arrest warrant for Cross was issued Friday after Lauren Taylor Goar was disconnected from a respirator and died at Northwest Texas Hospital.

According to a complaint filed against Cross, two doctors determined that the infant died from being struck in the head and was sexually assaulted about the same time.

The complaint against Cross also said the child had been examined by a pediatrician Thursday and was healthy and "suffering from no trauma."

The infant's mother, Camille Goar, left the child at her apartment with Cross about 5 p.m. Thursday, court records show.

An ambulance was summoned to the residence about 8 p.m. after Cross called Ms. Goars' parents to say the child had been hurt.

■ Nude twins roll through mall parking lot

COLLEGE STATION — Authorities have decided twin brothers were out of line when they cruised a mall on in-line skates — naked.

The 24-year-old men were arrested at 1:25 a.m. Monday after they rode the smooth pavement of the spacious, empty — but well-lighted — Post Oak Mall parking lot and were spotted by a mall security guard.

Lt. Wayne Onstott said Mark and Michael Sammis were charged with disorderly conduct by public indecency, a Class C misdemeanor. They paid a $130 fine late Monday morning and were released from the College Station city jail.

Authorities described the incident as bizarre.

"Back in the early 1970s there were streakers, but not on Rollerblades or roller skates," Onstott said.

A Post Oak security guard, who asked not to be identified, said "We've never had anything quite like this. Must have been something in the August air."

■ Teen charged in murder of neighbor

DALLAS — Police Tuesday arrested a teen-age suspect and charged him with murder in connection with the stabbing death of his 13-year-old neighbor.

The 16-year-old suspect was arrested without incident at his Pleasant Grove home.

Police said Jamie Easter was slashed to death and was discovered by her 11-year-old brother as he arrived home from school.

Homicide detectives declined to release a motive for the murder, but said the suspect lived on the same street. Jamie's family members said the suspect was her boyfriend.

The day she died, Jamie missed school because she was sick and spent the day at a neighbor's house. She went home to change clothes around 4 p.m. and that's when the attack occurred, police said.

The teen, who will be 17 in three weeks, had planned the murder for several weeks, Sgt. Jim Chandler said.

■ Bee swarm attacks man mowing his lawn

CORPUS CHRISTI — A 78-year-old San Patricio County man has escaped serious injuries in an attack by a bee swarm that stung him more than 100 times as he mowed his lawn.

John Snyder was attacked early Monday at his rural residence about 10 miles west of Sinton in South Texas, sheriff's officials said.

He was airlifted to Humana Hospital in Corpus Christi, which released him Monday afternoon, hospital spokeswoman Mary Daniel said.

Adam Ogan, a county animal control officer, said it was not immediately known if the bees that attacked Snyder were Africanized, or so-called killer bees.

A sample of bees from Monday's attack was sent to the honeybee lab at Texas A&M University for identification, said Ogan, who added that there have been four confirmed killer bee attacks in San Patricio County this year.

■ Perot's name to remain on Texas ballot

AUSTIN — Despite abandoning his presidential campaign, billionaire Ross Perot's name will remain on the Texas ballot this fall, state election officials say.

The deadline for withdrawing passed on Monday.

The Nov. 3 ballot will include three other presidential candidates — Republican George Bush, Democrat Bill Clinton and Andre Marrou, the Libertarian nominee.

Mark Bell, spokesman for Secretary of State John Hannah, said Perot told Hannah in a letter two weeks ago that he intended to remain on the ballot with retired Vice Adm. James Stockdale as a running mate.

"It is my intention to be included on your ballot as a candidate for president of the United States in compliance with the wishes of the citizens of your state who undertook petition efforts," Perot wrote.

Perot supporters submitted more than 230,000 petition signatures on May 11 to qualify the tycoon for the Texas ballot.

Attorney general visits Houston jail

■ States must enhance law enforcement efforts and realign social programs, federal official says.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — U.S. Attorney General William P. Barr said Tuesday the nation must strengthen its law enforcement efforts and realign its social programs to address growing crime statistics.

"The issue of violent crime has reached a critical juncture in this country," Barr told members of The Houston Club and later Harris County officials who led him on a tour of the county's year-old jail.

"Of those countries that keep records of violent crimes, the United States ranks No. 1 and Texas is one of the highest in the country," Barr said.

Statistics released last week showed the number of violent crimes in the nation rose 3.6 percent during 1991, while in Texas the number increased by 10.3 percent, Barr said.

While politicians traditionally have addressed rising crime by either beefing up law enforcement or expanding social programs, Barr said, "I think we need both approaches."

"For the last 25 years, we have been addressing the root causes of crime" by spending money on social programs, Barr said. Since then, "we've spent $290 billion just for the anti-poverty programs. That's $3,111 for every taxpayer." And, he said, that does not include any job training programs or other social improvement services.

"What good is it to build public housing and have it taken over as stash houses?" Barr said. "It was once said 'poverty causes crime' ... today, I think crime causes poverty."

Instead, he praised states' efforts to build more jails, strengthen sentencing laws and curb recidivism of "chronic offenders and career criminals," who he said were responsible for 80 to 90 percent of the nation's violent crime.

"Our primary goal is to identify and incapacitate that long-term criminal," Barr said. "That is the only approach that has any effect on crime."

Barr praised programs like the federal "triggerlock" project that imposes federal firearms charges and standardized jail terms against criminals who use guns and violent weapons to commit state crimes.

Barr presented U.S. Attorney Ronald Woods with a plaque commending the southern district, which includes Houston, for bringing 194 triggerlock cases against criminals since the program began in April 1991. The Houston-based district total represented the fifth-highest number of cases in the nation.

The district that includes San Antonio topped the nation with 271 cases. Dallas ranked third with 210. Nationwide, federal prosecutors have brought 6,400 such cases since the program began.

Discrepancies of report are not his fault, Erdmann says

LUBBOCK (AP) — An attorney for a convicted murderer says his client deserves a new trial because of discrepancies in a toxicology report, but indicted pathologist Ralph Erdmann has refused to take the blame.

"Never have I falsified anything," Erdmann said Monday. "That I'm human and can do errors, yes. But intentionally? Never."

Erdmann testified Monday during the first day of a hearing to determine whether Richard Jaxson, convicted in the murder of Lubbock waitress Tammy A. Everett, is entitled to a new trial based on the discrepancy.

The evidence gathered at the hearing will be presented by state District Judge Cecil Puryear to an appeals court.

Dan Hurley, an attorney for Jaxson, says his client's right to due process was violated by perjury from Erdmann and the withholding of a second toxicology report on Ms. Everett.

That report, requested by Peace Justice Melvin Powers, indicated that the victim had smoked marijuana and had a blood-alcohol content nearly three times the legal limit.

An earlier report found no trace of alcohol or drugs.

Erdmann said the toxicology reports were performed by an employee. He acknowledged during cross-examination by Assistant Criminal District Attorney Mike West, however, that he had assumed responsibility for the reports when he signed them.

Hurley also charged that Erdmann failed to testify at Jaxson's trial because he knew the toxicology report had been falsified. Erdmann, however, said he couldn't appear at the trial because of obligations in the military reserves.

Erdmann has been indicted on charges of falsifying autopsies in Dickens and Hockley counties. He has since been accused by colleagues and police of losing body parts and faking autopsies for prosecutors.

He was subpoenaed Monday for his records in the 1991 autopsy of 1-year-old Christopher Chapa, whose death was ruled as an accidental drowning.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Creative enterprises will bring the greatest rewards this fall. Trust your artistic impulses. Romance blossoms anew during the winter holidays! Early 1993 finds you up to your ears with travel plans. If possible, combine a business trip with a mini vacation. Paying attention to a recurring dream next May could give you important guidance. You find yourself in the middle of the social whirl by early summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Cleveland Amory, quarterback Terry Bradshaw, tennis star Jimmy Connors, actor Mark Harmon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You know what you want but must paint a picture for others to understand. Put your thoughts in writing if you are not a spellbinding speaker. Stay upbeat about a troubled relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep a low profile today. There is no need to try something new until later in the week. Tend to routine chores with good humor. Your positive attitude wins respect from people in authority.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be going on a trip for the wrong reasons. Travel is best postponed. Avoid taking any unnecessary risks. A complicated financial problem requires immediate attention.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Complete pending projects before embarking on a quest for something new. It is best to maintain the status quo a while longer. Avoid fruitless arguments and draining conversations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your cares will evaporate once you settle on a better financial strategy. A new job could be the solution. Communicating with someone at a distance relieves anxiety.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Meet your deadlines on time. An authority figure or older male makes some tough demands. You pass the test with flying colors! Continued effort will bring the financial security you seek.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Travel plays a major role in your success now. People at a distance extend an exciting invitation. Give someone a surprise by buying lunch. Profits can be increased if everyone cooperates.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have a knack for raising funds and impressing the right people. Woo clients and win friends with a direct approach. Cement a promising romantic relationship by dining somewhere special this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Push your personal plans with all the energy and confidence at your command. A romantic setback could prove enlightening. Curb everyday expenses and money worries will disappear.

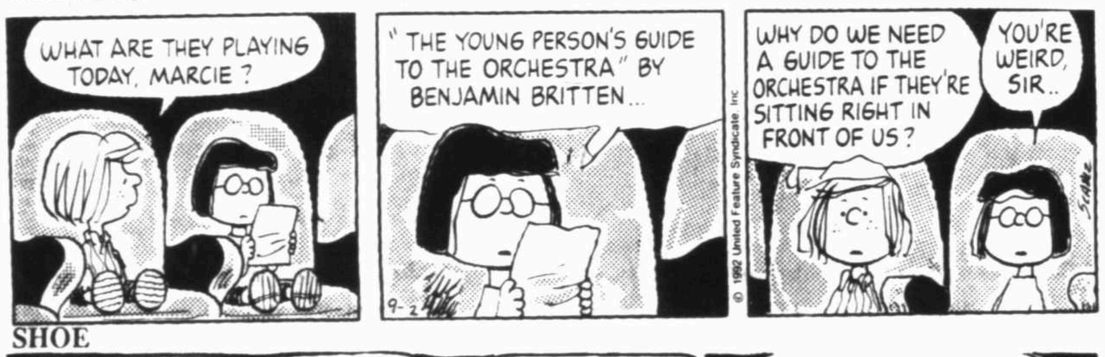

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A lecture or seminar will inspire you to scale new heights. Rid your home and office of clutter. An organized workplace brings peace of mind. An unexpected romantic encounter could amaze you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Secret pacts have plenty to offer you now. Alliances are strengthened by time and joint effort. Sharing confidences brings forth a special feeling of trust.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A pleasant surprise could lurk behind closed doors. A faraway friend may be involved. Investments yield unexpected dividends. Avoid falling prey to old doubts.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are exceptionally strong, both physically and mentally. Their dedication and persistence will make them successful in virtually any field they choose. Nevertheless, some golden opportunities will be lost if these children take too long to make up their minds. Prone to crushes in adolescence, these Virgos will become much more selective in romance once they mature. They want a partner with high spiritual or moral values.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

It's nice to have a backup line should your main chance fail to come through. But don't be satisfied with just one alternative—dig deep to see whether another chance isn't concealed somewhere.

When partner shows a balanced 19 points by jumping in no trump, we would not dream of passing with the North hand. We would bid four diamonds, confirming at least a six-card suit and some slam interest. That would have gotten us to six diamonds, which might be made after a heart opening lead if declarer guesses to set up the spade suit.

Against three no trump, West led the queen of hearts. Declarer won in dummy perforce and went after the diamonds. When West discarded on the second diamond declarer had only eight tricks, and looked for the ninth by taking the spade finesse. Unlucky.

Our perpetual pessimist would have made quick work of the contract. South would have decided that diamonds weren't breaking and that the spade finesse would also fail, and would have looked for any other possibility. The club suit offered that chance.

After winning the opening lead, declarer should immediately lead ace, king and another club. If the suit divides evenly, the 13th club sets up; if not, a club can still be established if East holds two honors unguarded, as in the diagram. If neither clubs nor diamonds break, declarer can still fall back on the spades for the fulfilling trick. As it is, the club suit delivers the contract.

Actor Ray Wise of 'Twin Peaks' relishes playing cinematic slimes

LOS ANGELES — He tried out for the part of the sheriff but ended up with the role of Laura Palmer's dad in the movie "Twin Peaks: Fire Walk With Me." That's OK. Ray Wise relishes playing cinematic slimes.

Wise plays the world's worst father in the former "Twin Peaks" TV series and the new movie, and he's the public relations sleaze Chet MacGregor in the Tim Robbins' political satire "Bob Roberts," about a folk-singing, right-wing Senate candidate.

Wise said he talked to director David Lynch about the part of Sheriff Truman.

"He called a few days later and said, 'I want you to play Leland Palmer,' " he said in an interview with the Daily News of Los Angeles. "I knew I had to do it. The challenge was to play him in a way that wasn't completely offensive to everybody.

About his other movie role, Wise said MacGregor's skill of deceit is retained in a smile.

"He's a fella who can charm your socks off in a very pleasing way," Wise said. "He's a great confidence man, always keeps a smile on his face. He instills confidence in you, therefore you can feel good about believing in his candidate."

MIAMI — Gloria Estefan got a group of volunteers together Tuesday to start a private relief effort for victims of Hurricane Andrew.

Estefan

The lead singer of the Latin pop group Miami Sound Machine, whose hits include "Conga" and "Live for Loving You," was joined by her husband-manager Emilio as they turned their south Miami offices into a distribution center for donated diapers, food and water.

"I thought, 'I've got a roof, I've got space. Let's start a collection agency,' " she told reporters at a garage adjacent to her offices.

Estefan, who lives on Miami's exclusive Star Island, said she suffered only landscaping damage from the hurricane, which roared through Florida on Aug. 24. Estimates of the number of homeless people have ranged from 180,000 to 250,000, and damage estimates run as high as $20 billion.

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — American televangelist Robert Schuller said Tuesday one of his main tasks in an increasingly violent world is helping people face change positively.

The 65-year-old preacher was on a brief stopover in Amsterdam before traveling to Sweden, Germany and Russia, where he plans to meet with Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

"Our kind of ministry can transcend politic race and culture," Schuller told reporters. "I hope it can help in the whole social development of a country."

At an airport news conference, Schuller declined to say what he would be discussing with Yeltsin during the latest of several trips to the former Soviet Union, now mired in economic and political crises.

But Schuller said he also would meet churchmen and philanthropists in Moscow to arrange food aid to the former Soviet republics.

Schuler's Christmas 1989 message was the first religious broadcast by a preacher from outside the country allowed on Soviet TV.

He had gained access to the Kremlin through the late American philanthropist Armand Hammer who had close personal and economic ties to the then Soviet leaders.

VENICE, Italy — Michael Ritchie and Dennis Hopper will replace fellow American director Peter Bogdanovich on the jury for the Venice Film Festival that opened Tuesday.

Gillo Pontecorvo, the festival's curator, said Ritchie and Hopper will arrive no later than Thursday morning to replace Bogdanovich, who suddenly withdrew from the panel a day ago citing conflicts with his work schedule.

He said the jury would meet immediately after their arrival to select a president.

Ritchie presented his film "The Candidate," starring Robert Redford, to the festival in 1972. Hopper directed and co-starred in the 1969 hit "Easy Rider."

BUFFALO, N.Y. — People have long said James Griffin has led a charmed life as Buffalo's mayor. Now they point to his winning a sporty Mercury Capri convertible worth $14,500.

Griffin drove away with the grand prize from a fund-raising raffle last weekend for Bishop Timon High School in south Buffalo, where the mayor lives.

The school sold 20,000 tickets at $1 each. On Sunday, student Jimmy Echeverria, who had sold the most raffle tickets, drew out the ticket stub bearing the winner's name. The ticket read simply, "Mayor Griffin."

"I think everyone in the place was stunned," said Mark Schroeder, an organizer of the event. "As soon as it happened, everyone was yelling, 'Fix, fix, fix!'

"I yelled back, 'We're not that bright. We couldn't even have thought of something like this,' " Schroeder said. "Everybody was laughing."

Organizers called Griffin at home and said the mayor was shocked he had won.

Pros look to finer points of chocolate

By Florence Fabricant
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Some chocolate lovers couldn't care less about the nuances. As long as it's chocolate, anything goes. But for professionals who cook and bake with chocolate, the fine points of flavor, aroma, sweetness and texture make all the difference.

With chocolate, as with other ingredients like seafood and flour, the products available to professional chefs come in many more varieties and levels of quality than those available to home cooks.

In supermarkets the selection usually consists of two or three brands that might be available in unsweetened and semisweet.

Professionals, on the other hand, have a choice of more than a dozen American and European brands of bulk chocolate, each of which might offer as many as six different kinds of bittersweet chocolate alone.

How do the professionals decide which is best?

They taste them. On a steamy August afternoon, a group of 46 food professionals, including chefs and food writers, candy makers and caterers, sampled 27 different chocolates in a single sitting at the Chefs Cuisiniers Club, a Manhattan restaurant that also functions as an information center for chefs.

Peggy Cullen, a confectioner whose Lucky Star chocolates are sold at Dean & DeLuca, organized the tasting with Penelope Pate-Green, a food consultant. She contended that many chefs, herself included, had selected the brand and type of chocolate they used with less than complete information.

"I've always loved Peter's Gibraltar, and I always used it until I discovered Valrhona," Ms. Cullen said. "But Valrhona is very expensive. At the confectionary trade show in Chicago I saw all these other brands. So I thought a real comparison would be informative. Maybe if everyone preferred Wilbur's, it wouldn't be necessary to spend the money on Valrhona."

Ortrude Carstens, another candy maker whose chocolates are sold at Dean & DeLuca, said: "I mainly use Valrhona and never heard of Peter's before this tasting. I was interested to discover it."

Ms. Cullen arranged for the New York Women's Culinary Alliance and Les Dames d'Escoffier to sponsor the tasting.

Setting it up involved cutting 260 pounds of chocolate in one-inch chunks, taking care to see that no identifying markings were evident. They were put in numbered cups of egg flats so the chocolates could be tasted blind, identified only by number.

Warm unsweetened green tea was served as a palate cleanser.

Tasting so many chocolates was exhausting; the eyes glazed over, to say nothing of the palate. Still, for some of the participants the tasting was an exercise in sheer delectable indulgence.

"I'm overdosing, but I love it," said Jean Bayrock, a food writer and broadcaster from Elizabeth, N.J., who was making a concerted effort not to polish off every sample in her tray.

Top-of-the-line bulk chocolates from 10 companies were represented. The tasters started with the bittersweet, the largest group, with 13 samples, then continued with 9 semisweet, 2 milk and 3 white chocolates.

The tasters were advised to consider the appearance, aroma, texture, flavor and aftertaste.

Fine chocolate should be shiny and evenly colored. It should have no off odors, break cleanly with a snap and feel smooth and not grainy or waxy in the mouth.

The flavor should be appealing but not overly sweet, with no chemical or metallic taste. And it should have a pleasant, lingering aftertaste.

In determining which chocolate to use for a particular recipe, confectioners are concerned with the complexity of flavor and degree of sweetness. They also consider cost, using less-expensive chocolate to combine with other ingredients and flavors.

Viscosity, or how fluid the melted chocolate will be, is also important, and they select the chocolate according to whether they are dipping truffles, baking cakes or glazing petits fours.

These criteria are as useful for evaluating chocolates sold for home baking as those sold for professional kitchens. And even though the home cook has fewer choices than the professional, there are still several brands to select on the market.

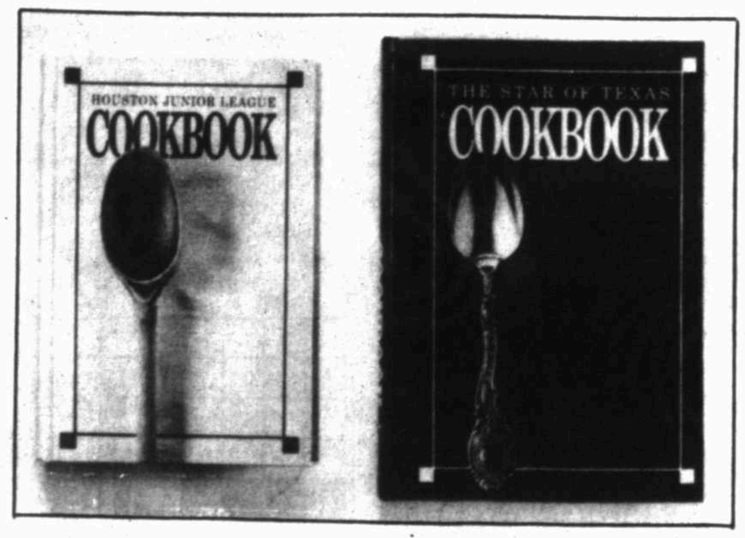

Participants ranked each chocolate from excellent to poor. Among the bittersweet chocolates, Valrhona Equitoriale, a French import made with a high proportion of superior but costly South American criollo beans, was preferred by the group (an opinion that coincided with my own). Peter's Gibraltar, made by Nestle in the United States, was a close second.

A number of tasters liked Valrhona Manjari, a silky chocolate with a very rich, complex, almost spicy flavor, but this bittersweet chocolate also received the most negative votes. It was one of the chocolates that Jacques Torres, the executive pastry chef of Le Cirque, used in his cooking demonstration that afternoon.

David Rosengarten, an editor of the Wine and Food Companion, a quarterly journal, was one of the tasters who preferred the Valrhona Manjari.

"Manjari is not as easy to like as some of the others," he said. "In general I felt the same problem in this tasting as in wine tastings, with people preferring the more obvious, less complex examples."

Among the chocolates labeled semisweet, Peter's Viking was preferred. Many of the participants, including Mr. Rosengarten and me, were pleasantly surprised by the quality of Nestle's semisweet, the only supermarket chocolate in the tasting.

Anniversary cookbook editions offered

Staff report

Anniversary editions of the Houston Junior League Cookbook ($14.95) and The Star of Texas Cookbook ($19.95) are now available for purchase. The Houston Junior League Cookbook will celebrate its 25th anniversary in 1993 while The Star of Texas will be 10 years old. Both books can be purchased by mail order through the Junior League of Houston.

Both cookbooks are important to the fundraising efforts of the Junior League of Houston. Proceeds from the books go toward the operation of a Junior with almost 4,000 members. The Junior League of Houston Inc. serves the community through many civic, cultural and health projects and community assistance grants.

Both cookbooks can be ordered by sending a check or money order for $24.30 for The Star of Texas and $18.89 for the Houston Junior League Cookbook (prices are per book including tax, shipping and handleing) to the Junior League of Houston — Cookbooks, 1811 Briar Oaks Lane, Houston, Texas, 77027. Potato dish is all dried up

By Linda Anderson

I don't know if this was planned for the election year, but Betty Crocker has recently introduced a new style of boxed potatoe — oops, I mean potato — dishes.

Anderson

Potatoes Express is a new line of boxed side dishes that are supposed to be ready in 15 minutes. I'm always ready to try something new — especially if it's covered with cheese sauce — so we bought a box of Cheddar Cheese Potatoes Express to check out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Inside the box were the expected package of sauce powder and the package of dried potato sticks.

This new product is available in four flavors. Besides the previously-mentioned Cheddar Cheese, flavors are Alfredo, Broccoli Au Gratin and Sour Cream 'n Chives. Each box makes six side-dish servings and costs $1.15.

Label advertising claims you can "Enjoy julienne strip potatoes in a delicate, creamy sauce." Basically, that means instead of being round slices of potato in sauce, these are two- to three-inch sticks of pot to in sauce.

All you have to do is heat potatoes, sauce mix, hot water, milk and margarine in a two-quart saucepan, simmer for about 15 minutes, and it's done. Or, you can prepare Potatoes Express in the microwave oven, but surprisingly enough, it takes longer — a minute or so to mix, 15-18 minutes to cook and five minutes to let it stand. Isn't that odd?

According to the nutrition label, one serving prepared according to package directions contains 130 calories, only 4 grams fat, but 590 mg sodium.

The taste-test proved a theory I have about dried potato dishes — there's not much you can do that will prevent them from tasting like they were made with dried potatoes. They might get softer so you can eat them, but there's no doubting they started out as dried potatoes.

One taste-tester said they tasted just like other boxed, cheese-covered potato dishes only they looked like macaroni and cheese. The other tester said they tasted icky and she wasn't going to eat them — could she still have some ice cream?

I agreed with their verdict. Once a dried potato, always a dried potato. I ended up dumping the rest of the dish out the sink because I knew no one would ever eat it.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.

DEAR ABBY

Boy's greedy tantrum turns great expectations into grief

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago, I read something in your column that affected me so profoundly, I never forgot it.

Van Buren

It was the article you ran about a young boy who was enraged after receiving a Bible instead of a car he expected on the occasion of his high school graduation. It illustrated the consequences of holding a grudge like nothing I had seen or heard before.

Abby, please run that letter again for all of us who have ever let greed get the best of us. — AMANDA B. WARREN, UNIVERSITY OF KANSAS

DEAR AMANDA: It's one of my favorite letters, too. Thank you for requesting it. Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: The letter concerning the minister who, on receiving a pair of leather gloves for services rendered, was disappointed — until he discovered a $10 bill stuffed into each finger, reminded me of this story:

A young man from a wealthy family was about to graduate from high school. It was the custom in that affluent neighborhood for the parents to give the graduate an automobile. "Bill" and his father had spent months looking at cars, and the week before graduation they found the perfect car. Bill was certain that the car would be his on graduation night.

Imagine his disappointment when, on the eve of his graduation, Bill's father handed him a gift-wrapped Bible! Bill was so angry, he threw the Bible down and stormed out of the house. He and his father never saw each other again. It was the news of his father's death that brought Bill home again.

As he sat one night, going through his father's possessions that he was to inherit, he came across the Bible his father had given him. He brushed away the dust and opened it to find a cashier's check, dated the day of his graduation — in the exact amount of the car they had chosen together. — BECKAH FINK, TEXAS

DEAR BECKAH: I hope Bill read the Bible cover to cover, for it contained much he needed to learn: "A foolish son is a grief to his father, and bitterness to her who bore him." (Proverbs 17:25)

DEAR ABBY: Whatever happened to food handlers who had to wear hair nets years ago? It is disgusting how many times I have found hair in my food lately.

I wish there would be a new national law to cover up all that hair that is flying around. — LOUISE IN WICHITA, KAN.

DEAR LOUISE: I don't know the law in Kansas — but that regulation is alive and well in California. If you are distressed about hair in your food, you should pick up the phone and inform the county department of health about where and when it happened. I'm sure they'll be glad to know — as there aren't always enough inspectors to go around.

P.S. In California, only the workers who prepare the food are required to have hair "restraints." Food servers are not required to wear hair restraints (hair nets or hats that keep the hair confined) unless their duties include preparation of food. However, laws can vary from state to state.

DEAR READERS: Benjamin Franklin once said, "If man could have half his wishes, he would double his troubles." Small wonder someone told him to go fly a kite.

By popular request, Abby shares more of her favorite prize-winning, easy-to-prepare recipes. Canseco to join team in New York

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jose Canseco had been with the Texas Rangers less than 24 hours when the first hints of controversy wafted through the clubhouse.

■ Related stories/1D

Instead of hurrying to Kansas City to be with his new team, the former Oakland slugger sent word he would join the Rangers on Thursday in New York, leaving his new bosses and teammates to explain his absence as no big deal.

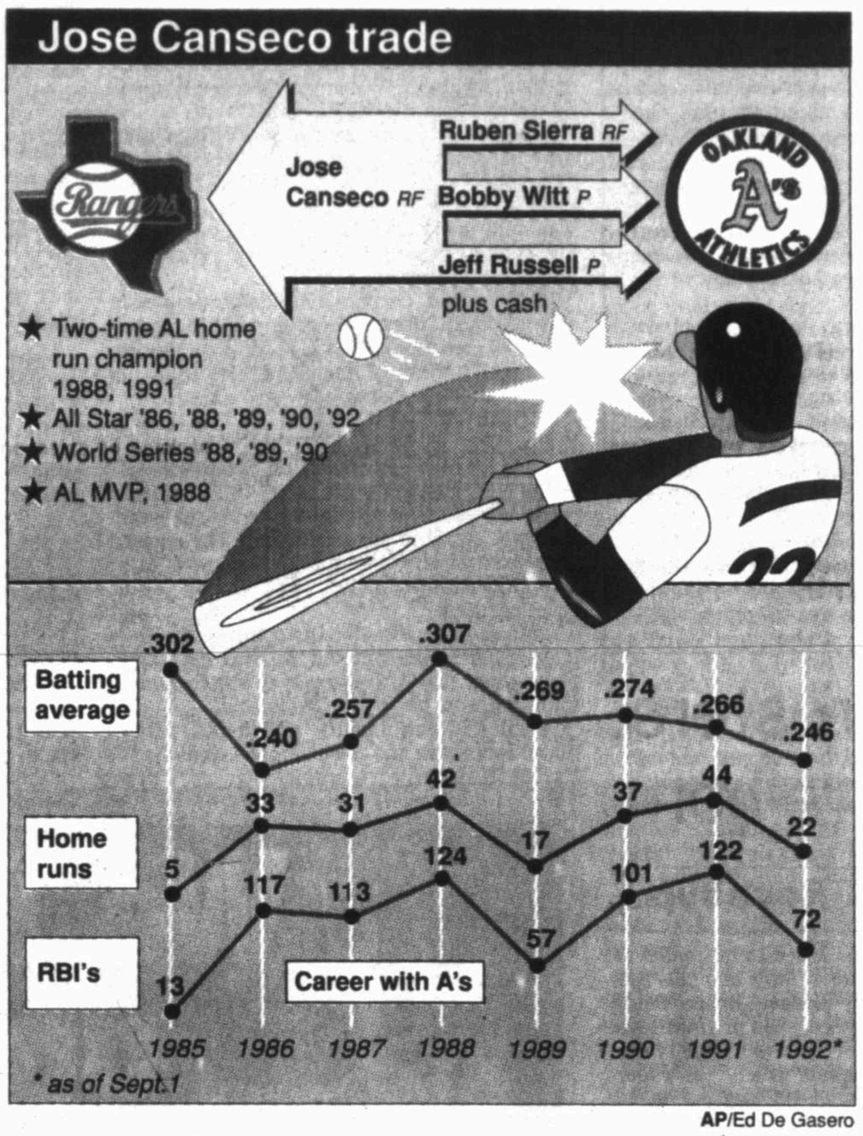

"What do you want me to say?" manager Toby Harrah told a questioner Tuesday as the Rangers dressed for a game against the Royals. "You have a couple of days to report. You don't have to report the next flight out. I am very glad Jose Canseco is going to join us on our off day in New York. I honestly believe if Jose stays healthy he's going to have some great years in Texas."

Canseco, 28, was the centerpiece of the blockbuster deal of the season Monday when the A's, who are leading the American League West, sent him to Texas for pitchers Jeff Russell and Bobby Witt and outfielder Ruben Sierra.

Canseco, a power-hitting outfielder whose career has often been marked by controversy as well as feats of batting skill, is hitting .246 with 22 homers and 72 RBIs during an injury-dogged season.

Sierra happy to be with A's

BOSTON — Ruben Sierra was happy with his trade to Oakland. The Athletics will have "every opportunity" to make him happier by signing the outfielder, who can become a free agent after this season.

"We should certainly have a completely open mind" in negotiating with the Athletics, Bob Woolf, Sierra's attorney, said Tuesday. "I can't think of another team he would be better suited for."

In a blockbuster deal Monday night, Oakland traded Jose Canseco to the Texas Rangers for Sierra, starter Bobby Witt, reliever Jeff Russell and cash. Sierra and Russell would be eligible for free agency after the season.

"The contract will fall into place, I'm certain," Woolf said. "If it doesn't, then he's a free agent to seek out the rest of the market, but certainly every opportunity would be given to Oakland."

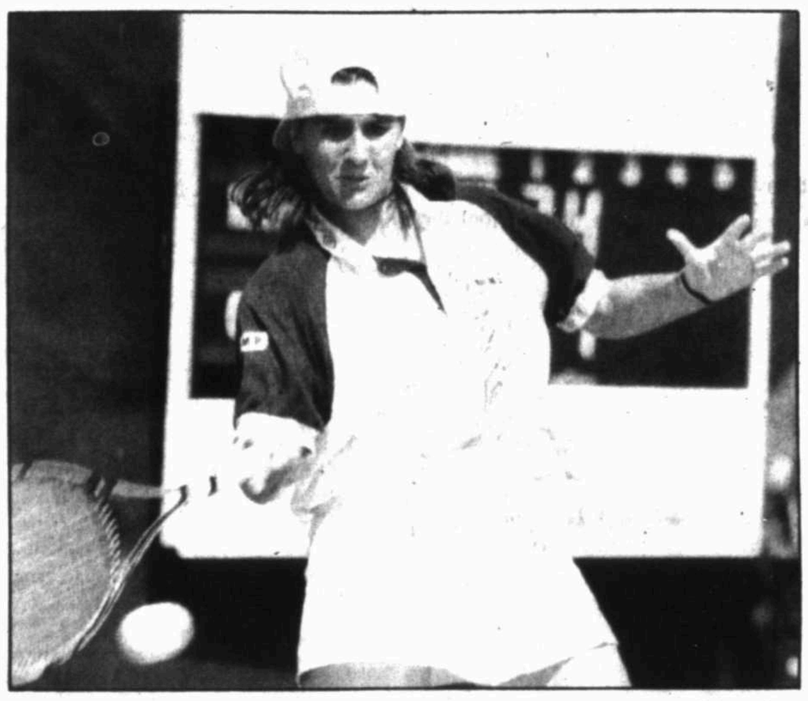

Sierra was awarded $5 million in arbitration before this season. Only Bobby Bonilla of the New York Mets and Danny Tartabull of the New York Yankees have higher salaries this year.

Woolf said he didn't know if Sierra would want a contract making him baseball's highest paid player.

"I just want to get a feel for the (Oakland) organization, for how they feel about Ruben," Woolf added. "Wherever we're going, I think we would be looking for a relatively long-term situation."

Sierra, 26, is hitting .278 with 14 homers and 70 RBIs. He is on the disabled list with chicken pox but may be McEnroe's matches rarely are anticlimactic in any tournament, but he was upstaged Tuesday night by the playful one that preceded it — Martina Navratilova's 4-6, 6-1, 7-5 victory over smiling, laughing, go-for-broke Shaun Stafford.

Lee alum nabs starting role for Red Raiders

■ Linebacker Quincy White tries to fill the shoes vacated by Matt Wingo at Texas Tech.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

LUBBOCK — Quincy White admits it freely. He likes food. And he likes lots of it. White, the former Midland Lee tight end/fullback/defensive end who is a starting inside linebacker for Texas Tech this season, said his weight jumped a little bit too much this summer.

White

And as the Red Raiders prepare for their season opener Thursday night against the University of Oklahoma, White is continuing in his attempts to keep to his playing weight at 230.

"Dining hall food," is how White describes how he got up to 250 during the summer, despite working in the arid West Texas conditions as a roofer. "You get to eat so much here. Now, I wouldn't want to weigh any more. I got so big I was slow, but now I'm able to run more."

White, listed at 228 in this season's Tech media guide, will finally find some stability in college football this year as he steps in to take over for two-time All-Southwest Conference ILB Matt Wingo, who graduated last spring.

Hailed as a linebacker with both the skill and strength to have a promising collegiate future, White realizes he's facing a tough task ahead.

"Matt taught us all," White said. "Last year when I came in from junior college, I wasn't ready (to be a starter). Now, it's not that much of a load. I just wish I knew then what I know now."

After graduating from Lee in 1989, White enrolled in Texas A&M before Proposition 48 forced him to play at Trinity Valley Junior College.

He started two years at TVJC, recorded 87 tackles and nine quarterback sacks as a sophomore, and was voted All-Texas Junior College Conference in both years.

White said he decided to return to West Texas because he has always admired Tech head coach Spike Dykes and his coaching methods. The admiration is returned by Dykes.

"Quincy's a really good player," Dykes said. "He came here last year and started early in the season on special teams. We made a mistake and thought he was well, but we should've red-shirted him."

It's widely believed by players that Tech's 1991 season turned around at halftime of the Red Raiders' 37-14 loss to Texas A&M last year at Jones Stadium. Down 24-0 at the break, the Raiders' outscored the Aggies 14-13 in the second half. White and several other players

It will be Permian, Lee and then a guess

It appears that District 4-5A as a whole is on the rise again after a short spell of mediocrity.

The only way to judge, of course, is by using playoff and non-conference games. The district seemed to go through a period where league teams had merely a 50-50 chance at winning against an outside the league opponent.

Williamson

However, last season the district posted a fine 16-9-1 non-conference mark and a 12-2 playoff record, the best in the history of the district, according to Tim McGraw, our local 4-5A historian.

Granted, Abilene High and Midland High, with only one victory between them all year, accounted for six of the league's nine losses to non-conference opponents, but the rest of the league was pretty salty. And it must be noted that MHS is only a couple of years removed from a 9-1 record and a district tri-championship.

San Angelo was only a couple of victories away from giving 4-5A some UIL history. No district has ever won two state championships in the same season (well, there has only been two chances with the new UIL format), but it wasn't far from happening last year as Permian won the Small School title and the Bobcats lost only to Big School state champion Killeen in the semifinals.

One coach from San Antonio told me that if there is ever a district to put up two state championships in one season, it would be a good bet that the teams would come from 4-5A.

With San Angelo, Abilene Cooper and Odessa High capable of making some noise this year, the district appears to be stronger still. Of course, Permian and Midland Lee have long been noise makers.

Here's the way I see the District 4-5A race this year:

1. Odessa Permian: I'm not a brain surgeon or a coach under Tam Hollingshead, but you don't need a play book to pick this one. The Panthers will go undefeated unless God or man makes a natural lake out of Memorial Stadium on Oct. 23. Permian will win another state championship. It's just a matter of which one — Big School or Small School.

2. Midland Lee: Lee is probably the only team in 4-5A that is never happy with second place, but it will be enough for a 10th consecutive trip to the state playoffs. The best thing that could happen for Lee is for Abilene Cooper to finish third, placing Permian in the Big School bracket. If that happens, Lee could roll past the quarterfinals.

3. San Angelo: This is a risky pick with the departure of quarterback Shea Morenz, and they must beat Cooper on the road. Still, the Bobcats got a real taste of playoff action last year and there is a great deal to carry over from winning three playoff games. In other words, it will be Permian and Lee again in the state quarterfinals.

4. Abilene Cooper: Cooper could easily be third or easily fifth. If they lose to San Angelo, they may die on the field. We'll just pick them in between.

5. Odessa High: With quarterback Erik Hartman, the Bronchos will be that "on any given night" team. The major problem is that "on any given night" the Broncho defense might not show up.

6. Abilene High: It may be Nov. 6 before the Eagles can climb out of the basement and they will have to do it on the road against Midland High. At the very least, it will make the final game of the season interesting for both teams.

7. Midland High: The Bulldogs are the last place pick due to the "what have you done for me lately" syndrome. MHS will have to win on its own merits to gain back some lost respect. A victory anywhere down the road will do the trick, making the job somewhat easier. Still, it's hard to see a place where you can pencil in a sure district win for the 'Dogs until possibly Nov. 6. It could be a case of which team is still capable of holding up its head that long. That's why non-conference games will be so very important for Midland High.

TL expansion

ROUND ROCK — An ownership group interested in bringing a minor-league team to Round Rock has a plan to finance a stadium, but it may not be specific enough to meet the deadline established by baseball's expansion committee.

Tom Kayser, president of the Texas League and a member of the 10-person Double-A expansion committee, said the plan sounds reasonable. But he said he doesn't know how the other members will view it.

A final decision on two expansion franchises probably will be made in early October.

C.J. "Dutch" Kellerman, who would be part owner of the team if one is granted to Round Rock, said the plan involves establishing a public improvement district, which would issue bonds. The ownership group already has a parcel of land where the stadium would be built under contract.

Tuesday was the deadline for representatives of cities vying for expansion franchises to turn in specific details about their ownership groups and stadiums.

Kayser said three cities — New Haven, Conn.; Portland, Maine, and Columbia, S.C. — already have notified the committee they have firm plans for ownership and stadiums.

Kayser said he advised the Round Rock group to develop its stadium plan because eventually at least two more Double-A franchises will be awarded.

"I've told them not to quit. The Round Rock area would be a very attractive site," he said.

NFL trial

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Lawyers for both sides in the NFL antitrust lawsuit finished presenting witnesses Tuesday, the 34th day of the trial.

Judge David Doty scheduled final arguments and final instructions for Sept. 8, with jury deliberations to begin late that day or the following morning.

Wednesday and Thursday of this week will be spent in closed sessions, with the judge considering arguments from the owners and the players concerning his instructions to the eight-woman jury.

"We still have a lot of work to do on that," Doty told the lawyers.

Doty dismissed the jurors for the six-day break with strict orders not to watch any NFL games this weekend, the opening of the regular season.

The final witness in the case was economist Bruce Owen, who works for the NFL.

Oilers lose waived RB Jones to Denver

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Denver Broncos foiled Houston coach Jack Pardee's strategy Tuesday by claiming running back Victor Jones off the waiver wire.

"That was disappointing and surprising," Pardee said. "He'd gone through a couple of Plan B's and we thought it was a good calculated risk that we'd be able to get him through again."

The Oilers also trimmed four wide receivers on Monday to reach the NFL 47-player roster limit. None was claimed during the waiver period including sixth-round pick Mario Bailey of Washington and No. 7 choice Elbert Turner of Illinois.

The Oilers hope to resign some of the players they cut on Monday to the club's practice squad.

Jones was a valued special teams performer last season but turned up the No. 4 running back in preseason drills behind starter Lorenzo White and backups Gary Brown and Spencer Tillman.

The Oilers host Pittsburgh in the season opener in the Astrodome Sunday. Pardee is still trying to solve the dilemma along his defensive line. He kept only two defensive ends at Monday's cuts.

"They'll have to get a couple of tackles ready until the unsigned guys come in," said Lee Williams, one of two Oiler ends in camp. "I could play the whole game but what will they do if one of us gets hurt?"

Willis Peguese is the other defensive end on the team. Pro Bowl defensive end William Fuller is a contract holdout and Sean Jones has announced his retirement.

Starting wide receiver Haywood Jeffires missed Tuesday's workout because of a stomach virus.

"It bothered me not to be out there today but Mother Nature stopped me today and told me to sit this one out," Jeffires said.

Former University of Houston defensive lineman Craig Veasey worked out with the Oilers.

Bates lives Redskin rivalry yet again

By Ed Werder
The Dallas Morning News

IRVING (AP) — The Washington Redskins have provided Tom Landry's final victory, Jimmy Johnson's first triumph and Bill Bate's fondest memories.

Bates, the safety whose decade with the Cowboys has been defined by ice packs and bloodied uniform pants, figures to start this season the same way he started his career as the Cowboys prepare to resume their rivalry with the Redskins Monday at Texas Stadium. On Sept. 5, 1983, another Monday night, Washington was the opponent for Bates' first NFL game.

"There's so many games and things that have happened that I will remember," he said. "The plays still flash in my mind."

Bates was at RFK Stadium when Landry won with the Cowboys for the last time in 1988 and the next season when Johnson earned his only rookie victory.

There was a certain uneasiness, suspicion and paranoia during Redskins week under Landry's direction, Bates said. While Johnson is no less intense or focused, Bates said, he appears more self-assured.

Of course, Johnson never had to coach against George Allen, whom Landry suspected was responsible for spying on his practices.

The NFC East has more competitive balance these days, and Johnson seems to consider the Redskins just another challenger. The closest thing to a rivalry Johnson has had was with the Philadelphia Eagles when Buddy Ryan coached them.

Landry was more likely to integrate new plays or personnel matchups into his game plans when the Cowboys played the Redskins than Johnson has been, Bates said.

"I think Coach Landry pulled out a few more tricks here and there that we would save for the Redskins — a special play or a new blitz we hid until that particular game," Bates said. "I think that had a lot to do with Coach Landry's era. He knew that game — Washington-Dallas — meant so much to the rest of the year.

"Coach Johnson won his only game that first year there. We've got a lot of confidence against them. The great thing about our staff is they've got confidence, and you can tell they have confidence against their staff and what they're going to do."

Bates played his first pro game against the Redskins and has been involved in some of the most memorable — if temporarily forgettable — scenes from the series.

The first happened during Bates' second season, when he found himself in the Redskins' huddle, his misdirection the product of a collision with John Riggins.

"The fourth quarter up there, they're killing us," Bates said. "They're running the counter trap over and over. Riggins is getting the ball, and I know I'm going to meet him in the hole. I went running in there as fast as I could and hit him head-on, and he didn't knock me back, and I didn't knock him back. We both went sideways.

"I get up shaking my head and go into the Redskins' huddle. They're kicking me out, wanting to fight me. Well, I see Riggins finally get up, and he's walking off the field. I decide I'm going back to my huddle, staying in the game, because if he leaves and I don't, then I got the best of that one."

Fog aside, Bates always is certain about the magnitude of the game when the Cowboys play the Redskins. He said he has attempted to convey the importance of those meetings and his appreciation of the rivalry to younger teammates.

"When I came in, I knew what the rivalry was because I was a Cowboys fan," he said. "The guys that are coming in now, I hope they know that it's a big deal.

"I told Larry Brown before we played them last year, driving up to the stadium, 'Remember this game because there's not a better time or a better place to be playing professional football than in this stadium right here. Whether we win or lose, remember this.'"

Johnson still hopeful for Irvin, Stepnoski

Associated Press

IRVING — It's not too late for holdout Michael Irvin to contribute to the Dallas Cowboys' opener, said coach Jimmy Johnson, who wants the Pro Bowl receiver to report to practice by today.

"We still have time left," Johnson said Tuesday on the Cowboys' last day off before preparing for Monday night's season opener at Texas Stadium against the defending Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins.

"We get into our practices tomorrow and would have a full game week," he said.

Irvin and starting center Mark Stepnoski are the Cowboys' lone remaining holdouts after Pro Bowl tight end Jay Novacek accepted a three-year, $2.7 million offer Sunday.

"We're going to show a few new wrinkles as far as what we do on offense. But they would be able to contribute. It depends on how fast they can pick it up in practice."

The Cowboys and Stepnoski are about $100,000 per season apart. Stepnoski's agent, Ralph Cindrich, proposed a two-year, $1.5 million deal. The Cowboys have offered a three-year, $1.9 million contract.

But the Cowboys are concentrating on signing Irvin, whom they've offered a three-year contract for $1 million per season. Irvin wants double that amount for three years.

Teams shuffle rosters, some players re-born

Associated Press

Ottis Anderson and other victims of Monday's cuts returned Tuesday as the 28 teams established both injured reserve and "injured reserve — red shirt" lists.

Philadelphia, meanwhile, moved to fill the void in its defensive line caused by the death of Jerome Brown by acquiring Leon Seals from Buffalo.

Around the league it was a day of shifting rosters as holdouts continued to report and players continued to come and go.

Eric Martin, New Orleans' top receiver, finally showed up in camp and free safety Rickey Dixon reported to the Cincinnati Bengals, who still have four unsigned veterans.

Denver, left with only one of its "Three Amigos," brought back another, Ricky Nattiel, whom it traded away last winter.

The Philadelphia-Buffalo trade was strange in that Buffalo's defensive line troubles seem far greater than those of Philadelphia. While reaching the Super Bowl last season, the Bills were 27th in the NFL against the run.

NFL Roundup

Seals had asked to be traded after the Super Bowl and the Bills apparently believe Bruce Smith has recovered enough from knee injuries to return to his 1990 form.

Philadelphia, which uses a four-man line, placed starting tackle Mike Pitts on injured reserve with back problems.

Joe Montana was formally placed on injured reserve Tuesday, leaving Steve Young as San Francisco's undisputed No. 1 quarterback.

Despite ongoing problems with his surgically repaired right elbow, Montana objected to the move. He felt he could be ready to play in less than a month, the minimum stay on injured reserve, and was upset over not being able to practice with the team.

The Times Tribune of Palo Alto reported Tuesday that Montana was so upset by the decision that he asked, in a meeting with team president Carmen Policy, to be let out of the final year of his contract.

MHS volleyballers split dual match

The Midland High volleyball teams hosted Crane and Denver City in volleyball competition Tuesday at the MHS gymnasium, with the Lady Bulldog varsity splitting its two matches and the MHS junior varsity taking one win.

The evening's play began with the Lady Bulldog JV defeating Crane's JV in two games, then saw varsity play begin with Denver City downing Crane in two games.

Crane then defeated MHS' varsity 17-15, 15-2, but the Lady 'Dogs rebounded for a 15-12, 15-5 victory over Denver City.

"It was kind of a crazy dual match where you had to say on any given game, not just any given match, that somebody could win," said MHS coach Sonja Pittman, whose team went to 2-5 for the season. "We always seem to play better when district play starts, so that's something to look forward to."

The MHS varsity next plays in the Seminole tournament Friday and Saturday.

Lee spikers take pair in dual match

Midland Lee's volleyball team upped its season record to 7-3 Tuesday night with victories over San Angelo Central and Pecos in a non-district dual match at the Lee gymnasium.

The Lady Rebels defeated Pecos 11-15, 15-12, 15-8, the went on to beat District 4-5A rival Central 15-6, 15-12.

"We were able to play the bench, and we wanted to be able to do that and let them play some in the tournament this weekend (at San Angelo)," said Lee coach Anita Corder. "Our people are little bit tired with school starting because they have to study and stay up late doing that. But we will have a short practice tomorrow then go to tournament.

"I'm real pleased with where we are at this point. The play had been great."

In junior varsity play, Lee won over Pecos 17-15, 15-3 then lost to Central 17-15, 11-15, 15-3.

Reb tennis team defeats Andrews

Midland Lee continued through its early fall team tennis schedule unbeaten Tuesday, as it downed Andrews 12-6 in a dual match at the Lee courts.

Mat Thompson, David Stark, Jereme Gooch, Monty Miller, David Boes and Robert Chin kept the boys side of the team unbeaten in both singles and doubles play, while Jennifer Bowles, Rae McNeil and Rebecca Ruda won on the girls side.

Lee is now 3-0 for the season. District 4-5A play begins Sept. 15 with Midland High traveling to Lee.

DALLAS (AP) — Here are previews of Southwest Conference football games Sept. 3-5:

OKLAHOMA (9-3 in 1991) at TEXAS TECH (6-5, 5-3 SWC), 7 p.m. (CDT), Thursday, ESPN national telecast — It's a historic, first-ever match between the Sooners and Red Raiders, though neither team is a stranger to its respective foe's conference. This marks OU's 123rd game against a current SWC member-institution, and the Sooners hold a slim, 59-58-5 all-time edge over teams from its former conference (1915-19). Tech has played 34 previous contests with Big Eight squads and leads the composite series 21-10-3. Both Gary Gibbs of Oklahoma and Tech's Spike Dykes paid their dues as assistant coaches on successful squads before taking their current posts. Gibbs is 24-10 (fourth season) while Dykes has a 30-26-1 mark (seventh year) — all at their present assignments. The Sooners surprised many observers by going to the airways on offense in a convincing win over Virginia in last year's Gator Bowl. OU is expected to field its usual, bruising defensive unit, which allowed just 157 points in 12 games last year. Texas Tech's fast finish gave rise to a national ranking as high as 17th in one pre-1992 publication. The Red Raiders do not have the deepest team in the nation but pack some of their most talented individuals since '89. OU's QB Cale Gundy (91-of-172 passing for 1,228 yards, all school records) enjoyed a 25-of-31 outing against Virginia in the '91 finale. Defensively, end Reggie Barnes paced all Sooner defensive linemen with 73 tackles and nine QB sacks. QB Robert Hall is the SWC's returning total offense leader with 2,066 net yards and was 5-2 as a starters last fall. Safety Tracy Saul needs one pass interception to become the undisputed SWC career leader in pilfers and enters the contest with 20 interceptions, 70 career punt returns and 1,159 yards on pilfer/punt runbacks.

RICE (4-7, 2-6 SWC) at AIR FORCE (10-3), 1 p.m. (CDT) Saturday — The Owls and the Falcons have met twice on the gridiron, with Rice taking a 21-17 decision at Houston in 1986 and AFA capturing a 56-17 verdict at Colorado Springs in 1985. Both former members of Ken Hatfield's staffs at Air Force before the current Clemson mentor accepted the Arkansas top post in 1984, Fred Goldsmith of RU and Fisher DeBerry of AFA have a knack for patterning their teams around the available talent. Goldsmith is 13-28-1 (fifth year) overall, 11-21-1 at Rice (fourth season) after a preliminary stop as head coach at Slippery Rock, and 0-0 against the Falcons. DeBerry is 65-33-1 (ninth year, all at Air Force) and 1-1 against the Owls. His last task was a masterful 38-15 downing of Mississippi State in the 1991 Liberty Bowl. Physically, Rice matches up well against the always-quick Falcons. The teams are opposites on offense as the Owls use the one-back set with ample passing while AFA sticks with its successful, full-house Wishbone set and variations. A key to the outcome could be how well the Owls manage to contain the triple option attack. 1991 Doak Walker National Running Back Award recipient Trevor Cobb (1,692 rushing yards in 1991, leading returnee in NCAA Division I-A) paces a Rice offense which should be more diverse in '92. Solid depth at QB with Josh LaRocca, UCLA transfer Bert Emanuel and Greg Willig gives the Owls added firepower while NG Matt Sign (65 tackles, 12 tackles for losses in 1991) joins FS Nathan Bennett (95 stops) as two of the SWC's most sure-handed tacklers. Though senior QB Rob Perez (1,157 net yards rushing in 1991 — tops nationally among QBs) has departed, the Falcons return some key interior linemen from the nation's No. 2 rushing offense — 338.1 yards per game — last season.

TEXAS A&M (1-0, 0-0 SWC in 1992) at LSU (5-6 in 1991), 2:30 p.m. (CDT) Saturday, ABC split national telecast — The Aggies and Tigers tangle for the 45th time in football history, with LSU leading the series 26-16-2. A&M scored the most decisive win — 38 points — in the rivalry last season at College Station in 45-7 fashion behind Greg Hill's NCAA freshman-best 212 yards. The Tigers lead SWC opponents 84-44-10. Texas A&M's R.C. Slocum is 28-9-1 (fourth year, all with the Aggies), 2-1 against the Tigers and 4-0 in season openers after the Maroon and White topped Stanford 10-7 last week. LSU's Curley Hallman, a Texas A&M alumnus and key player in the Aggies' 20-16 win over Alabama in the 1968 Cotton Bowl, served as an assistant in Aggieland with Slocum before moving to Southern Mississippi and then LSU in the top spot. Hallman is 28-17 (fifth year) overall, 5-6 (second season) at LSU and 0-1 against his alma mater as a college head coach. The Aggies have to regain an even keel after a stirring, come-from-behind win over Stanford in coach Bill Walsh's return to the collegiate ranks while the Tigers have a tough task against a Texas A&M defense with one scalp on its belt. Consistency and timing on offense are musts for a win by the SWC visitor while the homestanding Bengals seek to halt a 14-19 skid over the last three seasons. Aggies' TE Greg Schorp had a career-best four catches for 68 yards, including a 21-yard grab for the team's first TD of the season from QB Jeff Granger, in last week's lidlifter. A&M LB Marcus Buckley, who made a key sack and fumble recovery to stop the Cardinal's first drive in the opener, is a lethal pass rushing threat. Junior NT Eric England was a standout for the Aggies against SU with eight stops and three tackles behind the line. LSU has a sound scoring threat in KS Perdo Suarez (26-of-36 on field goals in 1990-91) and one of the SEC's top defenders in LB Ricardo Washington (83 tackles, three fumbles caused in '91).

HOUSTON (4-7, 3-5 SWC) at TULSA (10-2), 6 p.m. (CDT) Saturday — Longtime rivals UH and TU meet for the 29th time as the Cougars maintain a 15-13 all-time edge. The Cougars stopped the Golden Hurricane 82-28 at the Astrodome when the teams last faced one another in 1988. Tulsa's last win in the series came in 1986 by a 24-14 count at Houston. UH's John Jenkins is 14-8 (third year, all with the Cougars) after serving as offensive coordinator for Houston's 1987-89 teams under then-head coach Jack Pardee (now with the Houston Oilers). Tulsa's Dave Rader is 23-23 (fifth year, all in Golden Hurricane land) after pacing the school to one of its best marks in history at 10-2 last season. Both Jenkins and Rader served as assistant coaches at Mississippi State (Jenkins from 1979-83 under Emory Bellard and Rader in 1986 under Rockey Felker). These two high-scoring teams shared 110 points in their most recent meeting at UH and have the potential to run up some major numbers this weekend. Defensively, Tulsa's swarming style accounted for several key triumphs last year, and the TU defenders held off two attempts to score an upset by upstart SMU before the 'Cane prevailed 31-26 at Ownby Stadium in the 1991 regular-season finale. UH's stellar inside receiver Freddie Gilbert has All-America chances after leading the nation with 106 catches last year. QBs Donald Douglas, Jimmy Klingler and Kyle Allen are in the thick of a three-way battle for the starting spot. The Cougars' defense should be stronger behind the likes of Dick Butkus Award nominee LB Ryan McCoy (97 tackles in 1991), LB Eric Blount and DB Kevin Batiste. Tulsa lost several key players, including All-Independent team QB T.J. Rubley, off the 1991 group but returns a standout corps of wide receivers — tops among which are Brian Thompson, Mario Fair and Chris Penn. TBs Ron Jackson (171 yards rushing against SW Missouri State) and Chris Hughley are big-play threats.

MISSISSIPPI STATE (7-5) at TEXAS (5-6, 4-4 SWC), 6:30 p.m. (CDT) Saturday, ESPN national telecast — Mississippi State ushers in the John Mackovic era and centennial season at Texas with a 1-1 series mark against the Longhorns. Texas prevailed over the Bulldogs 54-7 in 1921 before MSU returned the favor 13-6 on TBS-TV last September in Starkville. The Bulldogs are 14-13-3 against the eight SWC schools in football, but Texas sports an impressive 88-43-4 all-time mark against the 12-team SEC loop. MSU's Jackie Sherrill is 112-50-2 (15th year) overall, 7-5 (second season) at State and 6-2 against the Longhorns as a head coach. UT's Mackovic, who has guided his last four teams to bowl games and the 1989 Illinois bunch to a co-Big Ten title, is 44-36-1 (eighth year) overall on the college gridiron after stints at Wake Forest (1978-80) and Illinois (1988-91) with a tenure for the Kansas City Chiefs sandwiched in between. The Bulldogs had their first bowl team since 1981 last year under Sherrill while the Longhorns have the opportunity to become one of the SWC's most balanced squads in run-pass ratio. The Bulldogs sports one of the SWC's top defenses and have been predicted to finish as high as second in the SWC West behind Alabama. Texas had the nation's No. 2 defense in total offense yards yielded behind Texas A&M. The development of younger interior players defensively as the season progress will be important to the Longhorns. QB William 'Sleepy' Robinson gave State opponents a wakeup call last season with the nation's 25th-best pass efficiency rating at 132.9 after going 77-of-141 for 1,167 yards. LB Daniel Boyd has 211 career stops over two campaigns and helped the Bulldogs limit 1991 foes to 319.5 yards per game. The Longhorns have some surprising young talent at receiver positions and an experienced hand in senior QB Peter Gardere (already 14th in SWC career passing yards with 5,032 and 12th in career completions with 380). DE Bo Robinson is the most experienced front four player while LB Anthony Curl has a team-best 302 career stops. C Turk McDonald and SS Lance Gunn (nine career interceptions) have all-star potential in 1992, and Gunn is a two-time returning All-SWC defender.

Youthful Sooners exude exuberance

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — A young Oklahoma football team begins its season Thursday night against Texas Tech. Coach Gary Gibbs is eager to watch the growing-up process.

Gibbs says 23 players who will suit up against the Red Raiders have never played a down for No. 15 Oklahoma, or have played only sparingly. That includes four starters on defense and three on offense.

The two-deep depth chart only lists 10 seniors to go along with 14 players who are true freshmen or redshirted freshmen. If Gibbs is concerned, he didn't show it Tuesday.

"I'm excited about this football team," he said at his first weekly news conference of the year. "We've had excellent practices. Our team's excited about the season, they're anxious to play.

"Obviously with the inexperience and youth, you're concerned about how they're going to react to certain situations. But you also know they're going to enter the season and this contest with a lot of enthusiasm.

"I think we're a team that believes we'll be successful. And with that youth we still can blend in a lot of key players who have played a lot of football here at Oklahoma."

At the top of that list are quarterback Cale Gundy and outside linebacker Reggie Barnes.

Gundy threw for 1,228 yards last season while Mike Gaddis was running for 1,240 yards. This year, the offense is expected to revolve more around Gundy. Barnes was an All-Big Eight pick last year and Gibbs believes he can be one of the best in the nation this year.

"We still have question marks and really we're not going to be able to answer those questions until Thursday night," Gibbs said.

He has an idea what he'll see from the Sooners.

"I think we'll go out and play lights out," he said. "I think we'll play hard, I think we'll play with a lot of enthusiasm and I think we'll be an exciting football team to watch and be part of."

The same could be said for Texas Tech, which won five of its final six games last season to finish 6-5. The Red Raiders are picked by some to finish second to Texas A&M in the Southwest Conference.

Texas Tech is led by junior quarterback Robert Hall, who is third on the school's career passing list with 3,369 yards and accents his good arm with outstanding running ability.

The defensive leader is free safety Tracy Saul, a senior who has 20 interceptions. His next one will give him the conference record for career interceptions.

"We've got a lot of respect for Tech," Gibbs said. "Those who have covered Tech or those who know much about Tech realize they expect to have a very good football team."

Oklahoma may have one as well. A lot will depend on how healthy they stay and how quickly the young players mature.

"That's the major question mark for us — how our people react to a lighted scoreboard and a stadium that's jumping," Gibbs said. "Now we've got to compete against some people in different color jerseys."

WHITE: Dykes speech inspires

(From 1C)

cited an inspirational halftime message delivered by Dykes as the turning point of the season.

After the A&M loss, the Red Raiders proceeded to close out the season by winning five of their final six games to finish at 6-5 (5-3 in conference play) for the year, runner-up to A&M.

"Coach Dykes always had confidence in us last year, it was trying to get it (confidence) out of us," White recalled. "And that wasn't fair to him. After the A&M game, though, we were pretty confident. He just told us at halftime if we couldn't play, don't go out on the field.

"We just finally came togther as a team. We got tired of losing. People in the stands at home games would make fun of us when we'd walk down the tunnel. And people at the University Daily were critical of us."

Improved attitudes at training camp combined with well-conditioned players are a couple of positives White said he has noticed heading into the season.

"We're going to start off this year like we finished," White assured. "We've had some hard-nosed competition on defense. And everybody's in the best shape we've ever been in. Practices are even fun. We've looked forward to them."

Now, if the No. 15 Oklahoma Sooners would only cooperate, the fun for White and his Red Raiders cohorts can continue.

Astros continue torrid streak

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Luis Gonzalez and Ken Caminiti each had a home run, a double and two RBIs Tuesday to power Houston to a 5-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies, the Astros' sixth win in their last seven games.

Brian Williams (7-4) recorded his fourth win in his last five starts. He gave up seven hits in seven innings, walked three and struck out three. Doug Jones pitched the final 1 1-3 innings for his 29th save.

Cliff Brantley (2-6) was the loser, pitching five innings and giving up three runs on five hits and five walks.

Caminiti's home run, his 11th of the year, was an inside-the-park homer that put Houston ahead 2-1 in the third. Phillies center fielder Stan Javier charged in but was unable to make the catch and the ball rolled to the fence.

Gonzalez's ninth home run of the season came in the fifth and gave Houston the lead for good at 3-2.

Dodgers 5, Cubs 4

CHICAGO — Mike Sharperson drew a bases-loaded walk in the 13th inning to force Roger McDowell home and give the Los Angeles Dodgers a triumph over the Chicago Cubs, their first victory in seven games.

McDowell walked leading off the 13th against Heathcliff Slocumb (0-2) and moved to second when Eric Karros, who tied the game with a ninth-inning home run, singled with one out. Eric Young also walked to load the bases.

Slocumb got Tom Goodwin on a short fly ball for the second out, then walked Sharperson on a 3-1 pitch to send the Cubs to their first loss in five games.

McDowell (6-8) pitched 3 1-3 innings, allowing one hit and two intentional walks while striking out two. John Candelaria got the last two outs for his fifth save.

National

Expos 5, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Dennis Martinez saw to it that Cincinnati continued its skid in the NL West, scattering eight hits over eight-plus innings as the Montreal Expos beat the Reds.

Martinez (15-10) won his fifth straight for the second time this year as Montreal stayed three games behind Pittsburgh in the NL East.

It was the sixth straight loss for the Reds, their longest losing streak of the season.

Tim Pugh (0-1), who was called up Tuesday from Nashville, lasted four innings in his major league debut. He got a rude welcome to the big leagues when lead-off hitter Marquis Grissom homered on a 0-2 pitch, his 12th of the year.

Pugh then walked Spike Owen, who went from first to third on Larry Walker's single up the middle and scored when Dave Martinez threw the ball into the Expos' dugout trying to make the play at third.

Braves 4, Mets 1

NEW YORK — David Nied pitched four-hit ball over seven innings for a victory in his major league debut as the Atlanta Braves beat the New York Mets.

The victory pushed the Braves' lead in the National League West to 7½ games over second-place Cincinnati with a little more than a month to play.

Nied, 24, was 14-9 with a 2.84 ERA for Triple-A Richmond before being called up Tuesday. The right-hander, who was leading the International League with 159 strikeouts, was Atlanta's 14th selection in the 1987 June draft.

He struck out three and walked four before Mike Stanton relieved to start the eighth. Jeff Reardon got the last three outs for his second save since being acquired from Boston on Sunday.

Pirates 5, Giants 3

PITTSBURGH — Jay Bell's two-run single keyed a three-run Pittsburgh fifth inning that rallied the division-leading Pirates past San Francisco, the Giants' seventh straight loss.

The Pirates, whose 3-6 record against the Giants entering the game was their worst against any NL opponent, won their third in a row and fifth in their last six games. The Giants' losing streak matches a season-high set June 13-19.

Danny Jackson (7-11) continued his strong pitching since being acquired by the Pirates in mid-July, allowing seven hits and one earned run while striking out four and walking two over seven innings. He is 3-2 with a 3.00 ERA with Pittsburgh, including a 1-0 loss to Atlanta on a complete-game one-hitter.

Cardinals 2, Padres 0

ST. LOUIS — Rookie Donovan Osborne beat the San Diego Padres for the third time and the St. Louis Cardinals got home runs from Geronimo Pena and Tom Pagnozzi.

It was the fifth straight victory for the Cardinals, who got back to the .500 mark for the first time since July 18, and the fourth straight loss for the Padres. The Cardinals are 8-3 against the Padres, including four shutouts.

Brett passes Mantle on RBI list as Royals best Rangers

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — George Brett's single moved him past Mickey Mantle on the career RBI list and capped a four-run seventh inning Tuesday night that lifted Kansas City over Texas 8-3 and caused the mistake-prone Rangers to waste a fine effort by Nolan Ryan.

Ryan, trying to break a personal five-game losing skid, struck out five and did not issue a walk and left after six innings with a 2-0 lead on Juan Gonzalez' American League-leading 39th home run.

But he was relieved starting the seventh by Todd Burns (3-5) and the Rangers proceeded to self-destruct. First Burns hit Brian McRae leading off, then Gary Thurman singled him to third. When David Howard lifted a routine fly ball to medium center, right-fielder Jack Daugherty collided with center fielder Gonzalez, who dropped the ball as McRae scored.

American

Gregg Jefferies singled home Thurman with the tying run and then Howard scored the go-ahead run on Keith Miller's sacrifice fly. Brett's single scored Jefferies and gave him 1,510 career RBIs, beating Mantle for 33rd all-time. The winner in relief of Hipiloto Pichardo was Mike Boddicker (1-5), who got his first win since last Sept. 20.

Ryan bested Brett earlier in a bases-loaded duel between future Hall-of-Famers, getting him to fly out on the first pitch for the third out of the fifth.

Blue Jays 9, White Sox 3

TORONTO — Jack Morris pitched a four-hitter over eight innings and Kelly Gruber hit a grand slam to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Morris (18-5) won for the sixth time in his last seven starts as he tied Dave Stieb's club record for most wins in a season. He struck out three and didn't walk a batter.

Morris, 14-2 in his last 18 starts, led the Blue Jays to their third straight win.

John Olerud broke a scoreless tie in the sixth when he drove in Joe Carter from third with a fielder's choice off Kirk McCaskill (9-11). Pat Borders later tripled home two more runs for a 3-0 Toronto lead.

Twins 5, Tigers 4

DETROIT — Minnesota pinch-runner Pedro Munoz broke a tie, sliding around the tag with the winning run in the eighth inning as the Twins beat the Detroit Tigers for their third consecutive win.

Detroit reliever Les Lancaster (3-4) walked Kent Hrbek to start the inning and Munoz ran for him. Chili Davis also walked and Shane Mack's bunt moved both runners up.

Detroit's Mike Munoz relieved Lancaster and issued Brian

More Sports, 1D

Harper an intentional walk to load the bases. Darren Reed, obtained Monday in a trade with the Montreal Expos for Bill Krueger, pinch-hit for Gene Larkin and hit a liner that Rob Deer caught in right field.

Deer's throw got to catcher Mickey Tettleton ahead of the runner, but Munoz was called safe by umpire John Shulock.

Carl Willis (6-3), the third Twins pitcher, got the victory. He pitched 1 2-3 innings, allowing two walks. Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his 35th save and a team-record 109th for the Twins.

Yankees 7, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Melido Perez allowed eight hits and took over the AL lead in strikeouts as the New York Yankees defeated the Milwaukee Brewers.

Perez (12-13) struck out five over eight innings to take over the league lead in strikeouts at 179, one better than Boston's Roger Clemens. John Habyan pitched the ninth for the Yankees.

Perez, beating Milwaukee for the sixth time in seven decisions, held the Brewers scoreless until the third when Paul Molitor led off with a double and eventually scored on Robin Yount's groundout. That run snapped his season-best 19-inning scoreless streak.

The Yankees got two runs off Jaime Navarro (14-10) in the first on Mel Hall's two-out RBI single and a walk with the bases loaded to Mike Stanley. They scored four more in the third, sending 10 batters to the plate.

Hall knocked in his second run on a sacrifice fly in the third after Navarro gave up a leadoff single to Don Mattingly.

TENNIS: Stafford enjoys match

for officials and plenty of choice shots for Michiel Schapers before winning 6-4, 6-0, 6-4. It was the start of McEnroe's last run at the Open title as a fulltime pro, his last realistic, if outside, shot at winning a fifth championship.

Navratilova, also going for a fifth title here, stared first-round defeat in the face, and it wore the look of the effervescent Stafford, ranked No. 160. Navratilova finally prevailed in nearly two hours of mental torture that Stafford thoroughly enjoyed until the end.

Stafford laughed uncontrollably from the start and especially when she came back from 5-1 to 5-5 in the third set, captivating the crowd but not especially amusing Navratilova.

"When push came to shove at 5-all, I said, 'OK, enough is enough,' and I really got pumped up and pulled it out," Navratilova said. "She is feeling no pressure, just having a great time out there, and I am just feeling the weight of the stadium on my back. She was laughing whether she won or lost the point.

"I'm saying, 'Get serious. Wipe that smile off your face. This is serious business.' It's tough when your opponent is laughing. You wouldn't know the score to look at her face."

Stafford, a qualifier who had never gotten past the third round of any Grand Slam in four years as a pro, didn't apologize at all for having a ball in her first match against Navratilova.

"I don't think I've ever had so much fun," Stafford bubbled. "I was out there playing great tennis. I think I can play better. If I play better, though, I win. Going out there on stadium court in the past ... I totally froze and played like a dog. I was so uptight, and I did not want that to happen this time."

Andre Agassi contemplated "career suicide" at Wimbledon and first-round survival at the Open.

Agassi came out a winner once again, picking up where he left off on Centre Court and avoiding a scary rerun of his early exit here last year.

The same rocketing returns and groundstrokes, the same odd ventures to the net, and the same can't-be-beat attitude that served him so well in winning on Wimbledon's grass were evident on the stadium's hard court Tuesday.

Agassi disposed of a potentially dangerous qualifier, rehabilitated Mikael Pernfors, 6-2, 6-4, 6-1, and got past a first-round match after getting trapped in one last year, when he lost to Aaron Krickstein in straight sets.

"Last year illustrated to me quite clearly that you can't be one hair off your game and survive the first few matches," Agassi said, sucking on a red lollipop. "If one person is going to make you pay attention, and make sure there's no messing around, it's a guy like Mikael."

Agassi didn't mess around at Wimbledon, either, beating McEnroe in the semifinals and 37-ace Goran Ivanisevic in the final.

"It solidified and validated me as a professional," Agassi said, well aware of his reputation as a choker after losing in the finals of the 1990 U.S. Open and the 1990 and 1991 French Opens.

"If I lost in the (Wimbledon) finals, maybe I'd start thinking of career suicide. In the fifth set, I said to myself, 'Here it goes. Crunch time. You can walk off here with the best feeling you are ever going to experience, or the worst one that you could possibly ever experience.' It was a dramatic moment for me. I needed it extremely bad. My fans out there needed it, too. They needed a reason to keep believing, and I think my critics out there needed it, too. They needed a little dose of reality that I can play and I can win."

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.
2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.
3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.
4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options.
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.
5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Oil still up

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil futures prices advanced in light trading Tuesday.

WTI crude oil for delivery in October, which rose 17 cents on Monday, added another 16 cents to settle at $21.64 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Among refined products, home heating oil for October delivery settled at 61.17 cents a gallon, up 0.27 cent. Unleaded gasoline for delivery in October settled at 61.16 cents a gallon, up 0.57 cent.

Natural gas prices were mixed. Contracts for delivery in October settled at $2.081 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 3.1 cents.

Lower-grade sour crude for delivery in October settled at $19.14 per barrel, up 16 cents on the Merc. North Sea Brent Blend crude oil settled at $20.12 a barrel in London, up 25 cents from Friday. The London market was closed Monday for a national holiday.

Stocks higher

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market closed marginally higher Tuesday after several new reports offered an unflattering assessment of the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed up 8.91 to 3,266.26. Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume was moderate, with 172.65 million shares changing hands as of 4 p.m., up from 160.23 million in the previous session.

Market analysts said they found nothing remarkable in the new reports on construction activity, purchasing trends or leading economic indictators. There certainly wasn't anything remarkable in the market's reception of the new data.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar tumbled again Tuesday, closing at a new all-time low against the German mark. It was also lower against most other major currencies.

The dollar closed at 1.3900 German marks, down from 1.4030 marks late Monday. Its previous low closing was 1.4015 marks set Aug. 25 in New York. In European trading, the dollar settled at 1.3935 German marks.

The dollar has been hammered recently because U.S. interest rates are low compared with those in Germany. Higher German rates — in some cases as much as 6 percentage points above U.S. levels — make mark-denominated investments more attractive to investors.

Airlines' ticket prices to take off

■ Higher prices might not last even though airlines end discounts, analysts say.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Air fares are on the rise again as discounts expire and airlines raise ticket prices with hopes of ending the heavy losses sustained in summertime price wars.

But with fewer people traveling, the increases might not stick, airline analysts said. And even if they do, it will take more than higher fares to make the industry profitable again, they said.

On Tuesday, a first round of fall price discounting expired, increasing fares within the continental United States by about 30 percent.

A second round of discounting, which started when Northwest Airlines issued coupons for $35 to $50 off, expires Saturday.

On the same day, most airlines will also raise prices by $10 to $40, depending on the market, in a round of increases initiated by Continental Airlines. United Airlines and USAir, however, will be raising fares by about $10 to $30.

"The increases peg domestic fares to a mileage table so that in every case the fare paid bears a direct relationship to the distance traveled," said David Messing, a Continental spokesman. "We're intent on fare levels once again matching cost."

Transcontinental fare increases will generally be greater. For most of the industry, the regular 14-day advance purchase for a New York-Los Angeles round-trip, purchase, for example, will jump from $390 to $490. The United fare will increase to $470.

The fare increase pushed up airline stocks Tuesday. AMR Corp., the parent of American, rose $1.87½ to $57.37½; Delta rose $2.37½ to $5.37½; and UAL Corp. rose $3.37½ to $107.50.

The raises bring fares back up to the levels they were on April 13, when a fare overhaul initiated by American went into effect. Under that system, fares for leisure travel stayed the same or rose, but fares for last-minute travelers, usually business people, dropped.

Since then, summer price wars have eaten into airline revenues.

Although the discounting helped raise airplane loads from 68 percent in July 1991 to 73 percent in July, the industry still lost $668 million in the first six months of 1992, the Air Transport Association said. That follows losses of $2.4 billion and $1.6 billion in 1990 and 1991 respectively.

And the third-quarter, usually the airlines' most profitable, is expected to show more losses, said George James, chairman of Airline Economics Inc.

"We've had discounts on top of discounts," said American spokesman Tim Smith. "They've made no economic sense."

He said that the new fares represent,"a recognition by all carriers that they have to move to a sensible fare strucure related more to mileage and to cost."

Analysts speculated, however, the fare increases might not be around long.

Several times this summer carriers tried to raise fares by up to 33 percent but each time plans failed because one airline or another chose not to match the increases, said Tom Parons, editor of Best Fares Discount Magazine.

Frito-Lay to test a thinner version of tortilla chips

PLANO (AP) — Frito-Lay Inc. will begin test marketing a thinner version of its best-selling Dorito tortilla chips, hoping to convert some potato chip eaters, the company said Tuesday.

Doritos Tortilla Thins are about the size of potato chips, two-thirds as thick as the normal Dorito chip. Company officials are planning to introduce the chips nationally in the spring.

"We'll keep all our businesses on their toes with some spirited competition between potato chips and tortilla chips," said Steve Liguori, vice president of marketing for the company, which also makes Lay's and Ruffles brand potato chips.

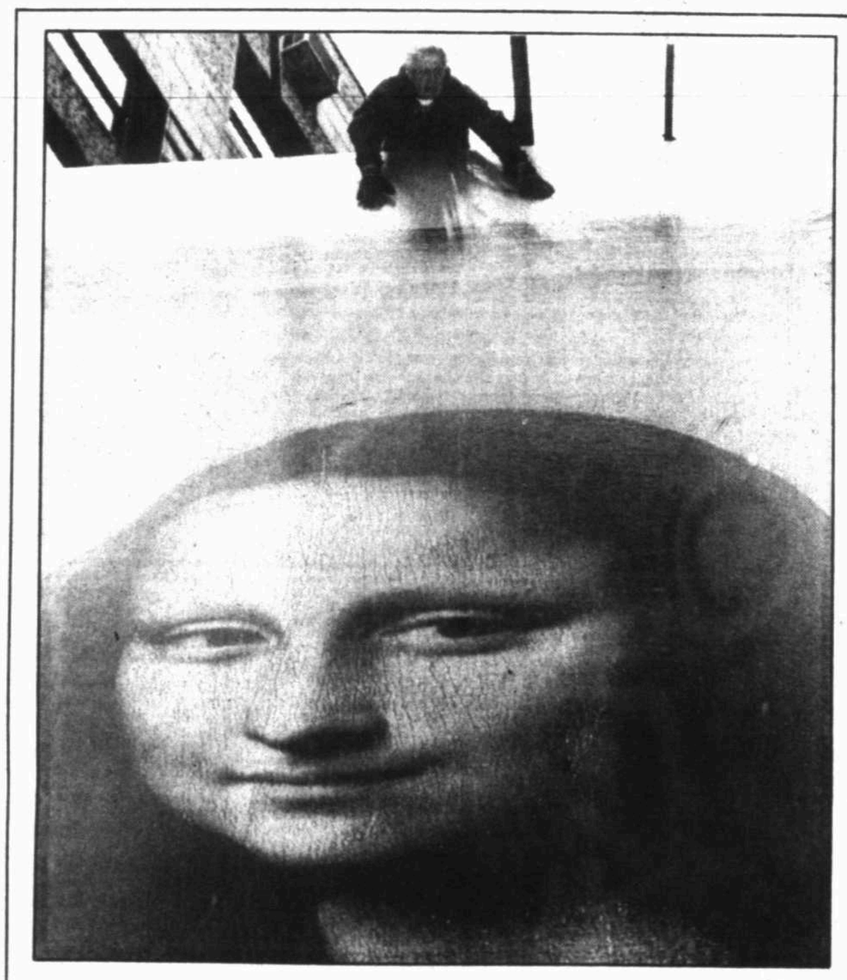

The company will test the chips in Tulsa, Okla., and Omaha, Neb. The Frito-Lay bakery in Topeka, Kan., which serves the two markets, is the first to receive the new, more precise equipment that makes the thinner chips.

"No one has ever been able to roll it this fine with this degree of precision until we've just figured out how to do it over the last few months," Liguori said.

He said it will take a few months to add the new equipment to Frito-Lay's more than 20 bakeries nationwide.

Tortilla chips, which have less fat and salt than potato chips, have seen faster growing sales than potato chips for the past several years. However, it may be awhile before the $2.5 billion tortilla chip market grows as large as the $4 billion market for potato chips.

Earlier this year, Frito-Lay remade the recipe for nacho cheese-flavored Doritos, the company's best-selling tortilla chip, and those for Lay's and Ruffles potato chips.

Conoco to cut 45 to 50 jobs

PONCA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Conoco announced Tuesday it is laying off between 45 and 50 employees, most of them in Ponca City but a few in Houston.

Company spokesman Lynn Hohensee said about 17 of the positions are being cut from the company's graphics and printing services division, and about 20 are being cut from the finance office.

The final number of layoffs hasn't been determined because a few of the positions are vacant, Hohensee said.

The layoffs are the result of efficiency studies.

"We're looking for ways to be more efficient, really. We've run into a number of efficiency and productivity studies," Hohensee said.

"We're trying to identify work that doesn't really add value to what we do," he said.

All those employees who lose their jobs are eligible for severance pay, he said.

Project uses laser to store computer data

AUSTIN (AP) — The MCC high-tech research consortium is moving ahead with a demonstration project that uses lasers to store vast amounts of computer information inside tiny crystal fibers.

The Austin-based research center has received an advanced, compact laser that will be a key component of its high performance holographic storage device.

If the project goes as planned, MCC will demonstrate a commercially feasible method of storing and retrieving computer information that is thousands of times faster than the magnetic disk drives typically used today.

The new laser was built to Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. specifications by Amoco Laser Co. of Naperville, Ill.

It is expected to enable researchers to store information in the form of holographic images inside tiny crystal fibers.

MCC has been awarded patents for two key breakthroughs in the underlying technology and also built an experimental prototype, which demonstrated that its technology works. MCC now plans to build an advanced prototype to show the commercial potential of the technology.

The holographic storage project plans to build a working prototype by 1994.

Platform damage report indicates gas prices may rise

DALLAS (NYT) — The estimate of the toll from Hurricane Andrew's assault on oil-and-gas operations in the Gulf of Mexico climbed sharply Tuesday, bolstering the view that natural gas prices will rise in the coming weeks.

The Minerals Management Service in Washington, which regulates energy production in federal waters, said Tuesday that 13 platforms had been toppled by the hurricane as it raced into Louisiana and that 100 more within 20 miles of its path were severely damaged.

The initial estimate by the agency Friday had been that four platforms had toppled and 38 others had been damaged. Scott Sewell, the agency's national director, said the damage totals would rise by next week as companies finished detailed reviews.

He estimated the cost of damage to date at $100 million, excluding disruption of production and pipeline shipments.

"This was truly a 100-year storm," Sewell said, referring to the winds of 160 miles an hour and wave surges of more than 60 feet.

The amount of natural gas output lost because of the storm was unclear. Analysts have put the figure at 1 billion to 3 billion cubic feet a day, or 8 percent to 15 percent of the 13 billion cubic feet produced daily from the Gulf of Mexico.

Sewell's said the loss was "perhaps" 1 billion cubic feet a day. He also said that about 15 percent of the nation's oil-refining capacity, which includes gasoline production, had been temporarily lost because of hurricane damage.

Paul Leibman, an analyst at Petrie, Parkman & Co., a Denver brokerage firm, said the federal report was a sign that natural gas deliveries from the gulf region would be lower than anticipated for several weeks.

"This sounds like it will have more of an enduring impact than at first perception," he said.

John H. Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York, said: "Things will get back to normal for oil in a very short time. But some of those gas production platforms won't be repaired until October or November. The damage is bigger than everybody thought."

Midlanders Joyce Low and Lucy Woodside have joined forces to open J&L GLASS ART DESIGNS.

Low said the two women offer custom designs sandblasted onto wine or champagne bottles, vases or trophies. These customized gifts can be ordered from six Midland retailers: Driscoll's Gifts, Ron's Florals, The Shop, Foods Fantastic, Baskets and More and Total Table. Low said she hopes to work with other merchants as well.

She said J&L can, for example, customize wine bottles to be opened at a wedding or saved for a first anniversary.

Low has owned her own stained glass window business for 13 years and taught stained glass classes at Midland College for eight years. The two met when Woodside took lessons from her.

Why Texas and Oakland traded

Rangers at least got something for Sierra and Russell

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON — Ruben Sierra strutted out of the batting cage, admiring the line drive his fluid, almost effortless swing had sent sailing over the center field wall.

"I can't wait for this season," he offered on that promising night back in April. "I feel good."

"You look good," replied his manager, Bobby Valentine. Cutting across their faces were those beaming smiles so common when seasons and dreams begin anew.

Analysis

And the Texas Rangers couldn't have looked better.

Their star, the one they had built the franchise around and whose imprint was all over their new stadium's blueprints, was healthy and happy, ready to chase his first pennant.

And that's exactly what Sierra will be doing after he recovers from chicken pox. But he'll be doing it in the green-and-gold trim of the AL West-leading Oakland Athletics.

Sierra began the season glowing from his record $5 million arbitration award. He was out to prove he was worth every penny.

"I'm ready to win the pennant," he declared. "I don't want to leave Texas, so I'm going to play so well they won't be able to let me go. They'll have to sign me. And we'll win the division and they'll pay me what I want and the fans will never want to see me leave."

Sierra's only concern was for teammate Julio Franco, the defending AL batting champion who was nursing a sore knee. Nothing to worry about, they said. No big deal really. Just a bruise. Should be better in no time.

Turns out, Franco was limited to 107 at-bats this season.

And that was the beginning of the end for Sierra, traded to Oakland Monday night in a blockbuster deal for Jose Canseco.

With Franco's feared bat harmlessly gathering dust in the dugout, pitchers throughout the league solved the most dangerous lineup in baseball. Because the bases were usually empty and all-or-nothing swingers followed them, Sierra and Rafael Palmeiro — each of whom, like Franco, had more than 200 hits last season — saw fewer strikes this time around.

Frustrated, they started pressing. Pitchers took advantage of their tendency to try to pull everything, inducing them into double plays and dribblers. Their averages plummeted. Their fortunes fell.

Sierra, who hit .307 with 25 homers and 116 RBIs last year, had 14 homers, 70 RBIs and a .278 average this year.

And Palmeiro, whose $3.85 million arbitration award was second only to Sierra, slumped from .322 with 26 homers and 88 RBIs in 1991, to .257 with 16 home runs and 66 RBIs this season.

Valentine was fired in July, but the bleeding never stopped.

Attendance dipped. Tempers flared and fans fumed.

Balls began falling in for doubles again. Sierra's hustle had gone the way of his applause.

Finally, on Aug. 16 against Detroit at Arlington Stadium, Sierra mockingly tipped his helmet after fans booed him following another infield pop-out with runners in scoring position.

Suddenly, it was imminent. Just like that.

Disgusted fans furled the "High Sierra" banner in the right field bleachers. One small gesture, one big mistake. Sierra was no longer their hero.

They began to agree that maybe this team could get along without him.

Maybe his lackadaisical play and attitude that seemed to emerge when the pennant slipped away was hurting youngsters like Juan Gonzalez and Ivan Rodriguez, who looked to Sierra like sons to a father.

Maybe the Rangers should find some other ways to use that $30 million Sierra would be asking for this winter.

Sierra was the franchise leader in homers, triples, RBIs, extra base hits and total bases. But it was clear his best years — he's only 26 — would be spent somewhere else.

And so, the only question was what could the Rangers get for Sierra. Losing him to the highest bidder in the winter would only bring draft choice compensation.

Sierra's agent, Chuck Berry, said the A's aren't looking at this as short-term insurance for a World Series ring, but are serious about pursuing a longterm deal with Sierra. What if the Rangers hadn't traded him, then lost him to Oakland anyway, via free agency in the winter?

So, Monday night the Rangers dealt Sierra along with pitcher Bobby Witt and closer Jeff Russell, also about to become a free agent, for Canseco, signed through 1995.

"When you talk about draft choice compensation, you talk about uncertainty. When you talk about Canseco, you talk about an immediate replacement for Ruben Sierra," said Texas general manager Tom Grieve.

This was Sierra's team, or at least he always wanted it to be. He grew up with the Rangers, signing with them when he was 17.

But he was always jealous of the attention Nolan Ryan received. He would vow to win over the fans, and he usually succeeded only to find himself having to do it all again because of a lapse on defense or a choke at the plate.

He never understood the boos. "Don't they know it hurts?" he would ask, struggling to understand why paying fans had the right to expect so much.

As a member of the bash — or was it brash? — brothers, Canseco epitomized the cocky Athletics. His awesome power helped the A's win the AL pennant in 1988 and 1990 and a World Series title in 1989.

But his off-field demeanor was controversial as he received a number of celebrated speeding tickets and had some public domestic problems with his wife.

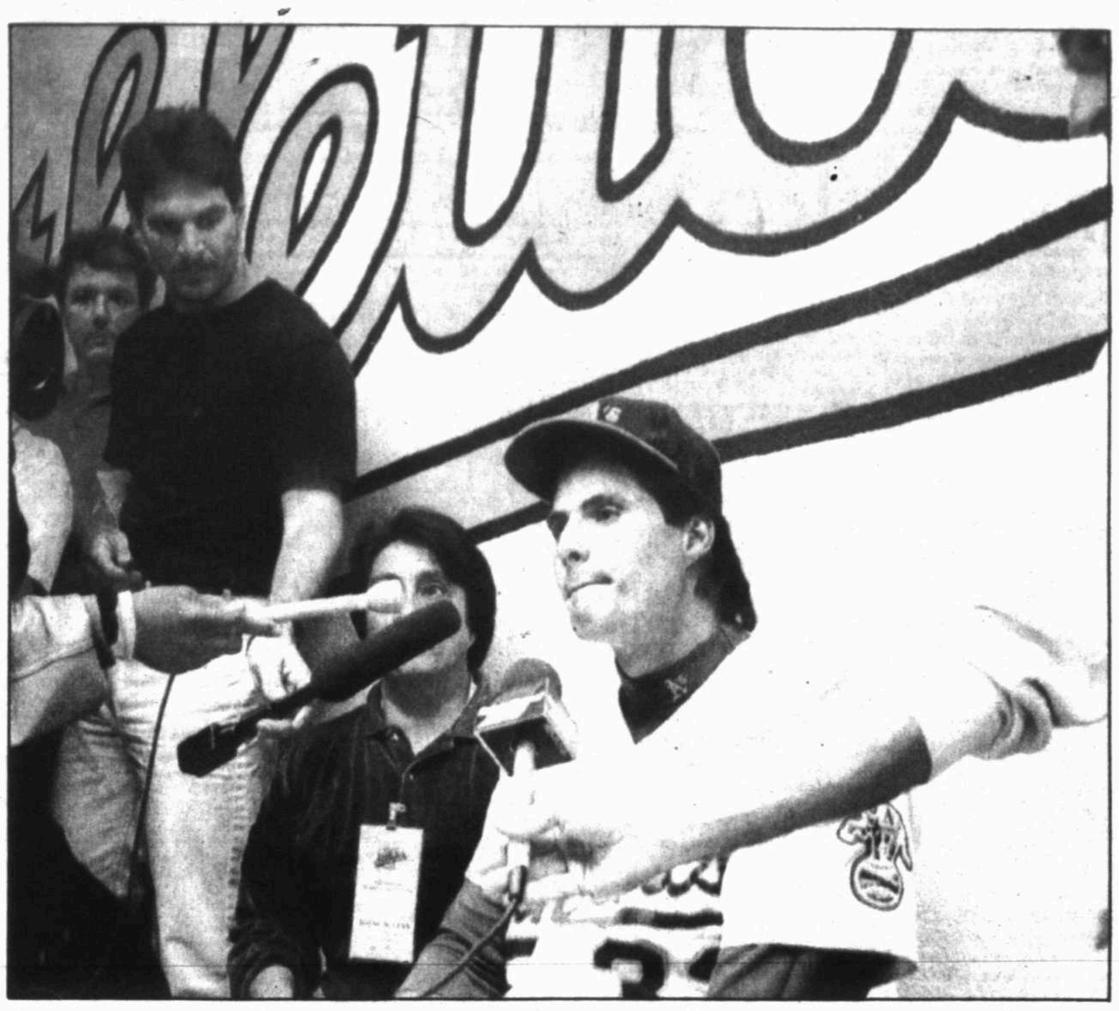

The Rangers get Canseco for three years, providing he isn't traded again, and an impressive 1-2 power punch with Canseco and Gonzalez, the major league leader in home runs.

Because Canseco was traded during a multiyear contract, he could demand a trade after this season. If such a demand weren't met, he could become a free agent, forfeiting his existing contract.

Canseco, a big ticket draw who has 231 homers and 719 RBIs in six-plus seasons, gets the short, inviting fences at the new stadium set to open after next season.

In Sierra, the Athletics get an impact player capable of making fans forget all about Canseco. In Russell, they get a setup man who has 28 saves for Dennis Eckersley, who has 42. And in Witt, they get a much-needed starter who much needed a new start.

As for Sierra, he gets that pennant race he always talked about, the one he never brought his fans.

Jose Canseco, here talking with the Oakland media after his trade to the Texas Rangers was announced Monday, could team with Juan Gonzalez to form another 'Bash Brothers' team like he did with Mark McGwire for the A's.

Who are they?

NEW YORK (AP) — A look at the factors in Monday night's trade of Jose Canseco from the Oakland Athletics to the Texas Rangers for Ruben Sierra, Jeff Russell and Bobby Witt:

Canseco

He is 28 years old, which is two years older than Sierra, and has a bad back. He was on the disabled list for 102 days in 1989 (broken left hand), 15 days in 1990 (protruding disc in his lower back) and 15 days this season (right shoulder).

Canseco is in the second season of a $23.5 million, five-year contract, the largest in baseball at the time it was signed in 1990. He is being paid $3.6 million this year, $4.1 million in 1993, $4.4 million in 1994 and $5.1 million in 1995. Texas is responsible for $672,527.40 this year.

Under the collective bargaining agreement, Canseco can demand a trade during the 15 days following the World Series. If the demand is not withdrawn, Texas would have to deal him by March 15, but if he is traded, he would not be eligible for free agency for five years.

Canseco is hitting .246 this season with 22 homers and 72 RBIs. His career average is .267 with 231 homers and 719 RBIs.

Witt

Witt, a 26-year-old right-hander, is in the second season of a three-year contract worth $7.3 million, making $2.35 million this season. He gets a $3 million salary in 1993 and Oakland has a $3.25 million option for 1994 with a $500,000 buyout.

He spent 29 days on the disabled list in 1987 (right shoulder tendinitis) and 66 days on the DL in 1991 (partial tear of right rotator cuff).

Witt is 9-13 this season with a 4.46 ERA and 68-72 in his career with a 4.61 ERA.

Sierra

Sierra won a record $5 million in arbitration on Feb. 19 after an arbitrator picked his figure over the Rangers' $3.8 million offer; Oakland would be responsible for $934,065.90. He is eligible for free agency following the season.

Sierra, who has the chicken pox and is expected to be sidelined for about 10 more days, is hitting .280 this season with 14 homers and 70 RBIs. He is a .280 career hitter with 153 homers and 656 RBIs.

Russell

The right-hander, who will turn 31 on Wednesday, spent 39 days on the disabled list in 1987 (right elbow surgery for bone chips and a spur) and 134 days on the DL in 1990 (right elbow surgery for bone chips and two spurs).

He is being paid $2.35 million in 1992, the final season of a $6.3 million, three-year deal, of which Oakland would be responsible for $439,011. He is eligible for free agency following the season.

Russell is 2-3 this season with 28 saves and a 1.91 ERA. His career record is 48-60 with 111 saves and a 3.83 ERA.

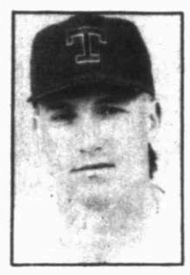

Athletics try to fill holes for stretch run, playoffs

By Dennis Georgatos
AP Sports Writer

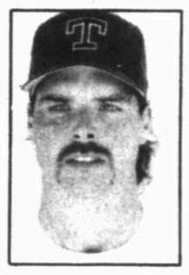

OAKLAND, Calif. — Look past the startling, head-shaking, oh-my-gosh aspects of the Jose Canseco trade. Yes, it's the end of a turbulent era, but it makes perfect sense to the Oakland Athletics.

Sierra

Witt

Russell

Even the shaken superstar saw a certain logic to it.

The A's, leading the AL West by 6½ games over Minnesota entering Tuesday night's game against Baltimore, "felt they had to make a deal, and looking at what they got I can see why," Canseco said.

Canseco, the AL's Rookie of the Year and MVP in 1988 and a slugger who leads the majors in home runs over the past seven years with 231, was sent to the Texas Rangers for outfielder Ruben Sierra, starting pitcher Bobby Witt and reliever Jeff Russell plus cash.

Oakland general manager Sandy Alderson consulted with manager Tony La Russa and other coaches before pulling the trigger on the Monday night trade, completed just hours before the deadline to set post-season rosters.

"We unanimously voted for this deal," La Russa said. "I don't think there is any question it helps us to win this year. So the next question is, 'What about next year?' When we get there, we'll talk about it."

The A's were desperate for pitching. They have baseball's top reliever in Dennis Eckersley, but overall the bullpen lacked depth and experience. Witt could help stabilize an erratic, injury-plagued rotation.

Sierra, a two-time All-Star with good power, will take over for Canseco in right field after he recovers from chicken pox.

"Hey, we got what we wanted and it's not easy in this day and age to work a deal, right?" Eckersley said. "I think it goes beyond finishing the year. I think it's the playoffs, too."

The trade is not without risk. Canseco was dealt to a division rival — the Rangers are 15½ games behind the A's — and he'll have plenty of chances to make Oakland rue the swap. Both Sierra and Russell are free agents at the end of the season and could end elsewhere next year.

And while Canseco was a magnet for controversy, he was also a big-time draw. He was theater, the villain on the road and sometimes at home, and he epitomized the A's swaggering style that saw them reach the World Series three times from 1988 to 1990, winning it in 1989.

"Many people have contributed to our success," Alderson said. "But Jose, for whatever reason — rightly or wrongly — seemed to represent it."

Alderson and La Russa said the trade had nothing to do with Canseco's celebrated run-ins with management, teammates or his wife's car. It came down to their belief he could do more for the A's by leaving, in the process bring the team what it needed for the pennant stretch run.

Reggie Jackson, an A's commentator and the Canseco of his era, empathized with Jose. He recalled another calculated move, when he was traded by the A's to Baltimore in 1976.

"Things have changed since then, but I think it's typical of this ballclub," Jackson said. " They're almost machine-like in trying to put together a good club. Emotions and things like that just get put aside."

While the trade was made with the idea of hastening the drive toward an AL West title and beyond, chances are it's a one-shot deal.

The addition of Russell and Sierra raised to 14 the number of potential free agents on the A's roster. Others include injured home-run leader Mark McGwire, catcher Terry Steinbach, and pitcher Dave Stewart.

There is no way the A's, already trying to reduce a $44 million annual payroll, can afford all of them or perhaps even half of them. The A's are in store for a major transition, as McGwire noted.

"We spent our whole careers together," said the now-solo other half of the fabled Bash Brothers. "It's the end of the 1-2 home run punch. We were right there in the top five all-time.

"That's the end of that."

Canseco should be big draw in Texas

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Jose Canseco will be a big ticket draw for his new team, but his debut at Arlington Stadium in a Texas Rangers uniform next week won't be the only game in town.

Canseco will join his new teammates in New York on Friday. The Rangers' first home game with Canseco, acquired in a blockbuster trade Monday night for right fielder Ruben Sierra, pitcher Bobby Witt and closer Jeff Russell will be Sept. 7 against the Boston Red Sox.

Up the highway that same night, the defending Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins visit the Dallas Cowboys at Texas Stadium for the 1992 Monday Night Football kickoff. That game has been sold out for weeks.

And at Arlington Stadium, tickets were already hot items before the trade because if the rotations hold, Nolan Ryan will face Roger Clemens.

That has only happened once at Arlington Stadium, when the fireballers squared off on April 30, 1989. The matchup drew 40,429 fans, a franchise record for a Sunday game.

SIERRA: Ruben may be able to play within 10 days able to play within 10 days, Woolf said. He is expected to take over Oakland's right field job from Canseco, 28, who is hitting .246 with 22 homers and 72 RBIs.

(From 1C)

"He was thrilled with the trade," Woolf said. "It's awfully hard to express you're happy when you have chicken pox.

"He was pleasantly surprised, not because he wanted to get away from Texas," Woolf added. "We're grateful that he was traded to Oakland because they're the No. 1 team in the league. He does feel a sense of gratitude toward the Texas team that really treated him nicely over the (past) six years."

All the traded players will be eligible for post-season play because the deal was completed before the midnight Aug. 31 deadline. Oakland had a 6½-game lead over second-place Minnesota in the AL West after Monday's games.

Canseco is in the second year of a five-year contract but can request a trade 15 days after the World Series because he is in the middle of a long-term deal.

If neither Sierra nor Russell stays with Oakland after this season, the A's would have given up the power-hitting Canseco for Witt, who is 9-13 with a 4.46 earned run average.

The Rangers "had already indicated" that they couldn't re-sign Sierra, Woolf said, "but the big risk was really for Oakland, and it still is."

CANSECO: Power now defines Rangers' lineup

anybody to spend some time getting everything in shape.

"It's got to be a shock for him," outfielder Kevin Reimer said. "I'm sure he's got things to straighten out in his own life. Things like this catch you off guard. I'm sure he'll meet us in New York and be ready to play. We're looking forward to it. We're real excited to have him."

"This could be a powerful lineup now," infielder Rafael Palmeiro said. "Unfortunately, everything Jose does is magnified. But there's no doubt the Texas fans are going to love him."

Harrah, who said he hadn't spoken with Canseco since the deal was made, hopes the slugger can have a positive effect on such players as Juan Gonzalez, who leads the league with 38 home runs.

"I know his teammates in Oakland loved the guy," Harrah said. "The guys here are going to like him, too, as well as the fans. I believe he'll help other guys in the lineup, too. A young power hitter like Juan Gonzalez, who is 22 years old, it's not going to hurt to have him in the lineup along with Juan. When we get Julio Franco back, the American League batting champion, you're talking about a lineup that ought to be able to score some runs."

Harrah also figures Canseco's power game is well suited to the Rangers' home park.

"It's a hitter's ballpark. He gets it up in that wind, it has a good chance of going out," Harrah said. "It's not a small park, but it's not Oakland either. In Texas, it's 90-plus degrees and if you hit it, it goes."

Harrah said he's not worried about recent statements Canseco made about losing bat speed.

"How old is he? 28. Players don't peak at 28," Harrah said.

"It's too bad he's under a microscope so much that if he does do something out of the norm or a little bit different, he's put on the spot," Reimer said. "We all make mistakes

Canseco Chronology

1982: Canseco is drafted by the A's in the 15th round and begins his career with Miami in the Class-A Florida State League.

1985: His major-league debut comes on September 2 against Baltimore. On September 9, he hits his first major-league home run — off Jeff Russell of Texas, ironically one of the players traded for Canseco.

1986: He is named American League Rookie of the Year after hitting 33 homers and driving in 117 runs.

1988: He becomes the first player in major-league history to hit at least 40 home runs (42) and steal 40 bases (40) in the same season. At season's end, he is named A.L. Most Valuable Player.

1989: Prior to the season, he signs a one-year contract for $1.8 million. The following week, he is cited for speeding in Florida. When he arrives in Arizona for spring training, Phoenix police tag him again.

Canseco misses the first half of the season with a stress fracture in his left hand. But he comes back to help the A's beat the Giants in the World Series. In the ALCS against the Blue Jays, he blasts a home run into the fifth deck of the Toronto SkyDome.

Off the field, Canseco is arrested for carrying a loaded gun in his Jaguar. He gets another speeding ticket in August. The following month, he launches his own personal telephone hotline for fans.

1990: He misses 31 games with back problems, but still hits 37 home runs. In May, he marries former beauty-pageant winner Esther Haddad. The A's sign him in June to a five-year, $23.5 million contract, making him the highest paid player in baseball.

1991: He files for divorce in January. He tunes up for the season by getting a speeding ticket for going 104 miles per hour. Then he hits 44 homers with 122 RBIs. That gives him 204 home runs over six years — more than any other active major-leaguer during that period. But his relationship with Oakland fans is tenuous. They taunt him, and in September he says he wouldn't mind being traded.

1992: Jose and Esther are back together. Sort of. In February, he rams his car into hers. She ends up dropping all charges. He agrees to get counseling. In June, he goes on the DL with a bad wrist. At the All-Star break, he goes on the DL again, this time for a shoulder injury. In August, he leaves a game early, prompting criticism from catcher Terry Steinbach. Hurricane Andrew damages his house in Miami. The A's trade him to Texas.

KENT OIL, INC.
KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

WHY KENT OIL COMPANY?

Kent Oil (operating Kent Kwik convenience stores) is a West Texas-based company, thirty five years old and still growing. We offer many benefits to our employees. These benefits include:

- Company-assisted medical, dental and life insurance
- Paid vacations
- Sick pay program
- Tuition reimbursement program
- Special incentive programs for all employees
- Profit-sharing and retirement plan
- Intensive new hire training
- Structured continual management training
- Flexible scheduling
- Full and part time hours available
- Work close to home
- Affiliation with Odessa 66 credit union

We attempt whenever possible to promote from within. All of our current store managers, middle and upper management started with the company at the entry level. It is possible to move up quickly based on your experience and level of education.

Working in a convenience store is both exciting and challenging. You have to be outgoing and enjoy serving the public, while at the same time be a self-starter, as you receive very little on the job supervision.

If you are considering a career in the retail industry, give Kent Oil your consideration. Please apply (and be ready for interview) at the Kent Oil office Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 3314 N. Loop 250 in Midland.

NIFTIES IN THE FIFTIES
WE HAVE THE BEST OF THE BUNCH!!!!

LOW FIFTIES - A terrific starter home with three bedrooms, two baths...beautiful yard featuring a redwood deck surrounding the pool. In a neighborhood of young families...house is less than 10 years old. Loan is a non-qualifying assumption...You can't beat this in the low fifties...See it!

MID-FIFTIES - Pretty sunken living room centered around a fireplace...dining room overlooking the lush, green, backyard. Fresh paint...3 bedrooms, 2 baths...Priced at the current FHA appraised value...$54,000...now all we need is you...Come take a look!

HIGH FIFTIES - A house that you would expect to pay much more for...lots of square footage...3 bedrooms, 2 full baths, floor plan that can be two living areas or two living and two dining or huge formal dining...it's up to you to decide how you want to use all this room...Sparkles inside and out with fresh paint and new carpet...Owner will pay $1,000 to help the buyer get in...Call for details...Drive bys are deceiving on this one...Much larger than it looks.

CHECK THESE OUT TOO!!!
