JUST SIX MONTHS OLD BUT SHE CAN CHEW TURKEY AT TODAY'S FEAST!

Lookit that smile! And what other sweet young lady can show a toothsome grin like this at the age of six months? Miss Katherine Maryland Carney of Sacramento, Calif.—and, as we said before, just six months old—already has the privilege of gritting her teeth and chewing gum at an age when most other babies are chewing lustily away at teething rings.

SOLONS THINK OF PROBLEMS

THANK YOU!

For your leniency in judging today's Journal, it is being published at noon so newspaper people may have the afternoon off.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Thoughts of relief for farmers, the unemployed and industry appeared uppermost on Thanksgiving Day in the minds of Congressional leaders.

As they talked of plans for the coming session, only four days off, emphasis was laid on programs to stabilize commodity prices, rehabilitate farms, exclude immigrant labor and spend more money on public works and shut out low-priced Russian products.

One thing, however, appeared definitely ruled out as a cause for joy among tax payers, on this day. That is continuance of the present low income tax rate. Representative Hawley, chairman of the House Ways and Means committee, declined to join in any anti-inflation agreement, claiming the administration forces in the House have engaged in just that sort of tactics against legislation originated by Democrats or western independents in the Senate.

Just because all appear anxious to help the country, however, is no sign of harmony in the ranks over how this should be done.

Democratic Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, for instance, yesterday declined to join in any anti-inflation agreement, claiming the administration forces in the House have engaged in just that sort of tactics against legislation originated by Democrats or western independents in the Senate.

Chairman Johnson of the House Immigration committee, is at work on permanent immigration restriction proposals, to bar for all time the entry of aliens who would interfere with economic conditions.

Chairman Dowell of the House commodity exchange and the seed and fertilizer loan proposal.

Senator Capper, Republican, of Kansas, predicts a three-fold farm aid program including $250,000,000 more for the farm board.

Legislation curtailing future sales of commodity exchanges and the seed and fertilizer loan proposal.

Senator Stetever, Republican, of Oregon, is drafting a bill to amend the tariff act by making effective next March stringent rules against corn-produced goods.

While he has asked the treasury for a full investigation of Russian lumber production, in relation to convict labor. Others are engaged in similar tasks.

New York Police Named In Vice Rackets

GRAFT CHARGE IS FOLLOWED BY PROBE

WALKER'S RULE GIVEN ANOTHER BLACK EYE BY INVESTIGATORS

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Testimony of police graft from vice caused a stir in political circles today.

Newspapers said Republican leaders were considering launching a legislative investigation into Mayor Walker's administration on the basis of charges brought out in the appellate court's inquiry into the Magistrates' courts.

Mayor Walker and Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney promised to sift the allegations to the bottom and bring the accused to a speedy trial, if the evidence warranted.

Mayor is Quoted "You can depend upon it that there is anything to it, there is nobody in the police department who can get away with it," Mayor Walker said.

"I'm going to sit in and listen to any testimony of that kind personally," said Mr. Mulrooney. "I'll get transcripts of the testimony given before Referee Samuel Seabury and will study them and then take action."

Ryan Defended The Commissioner defended Police Inspector Thomas T. Ryan against any implication that he might have been involved, when informed that the witness had mentioned an "Inspector Ryan" as one of those with whom he dealt.

"If Ryan is an honest man, there isn't an honest man in New York—and I've known him for 34 years," he said.

Inspector Ryan himself denied the testimony "an absolute lie." Other policemen and detectives mentioned refused to comment.

Chile Acuna, former police stool pigeon testified that he played the part of the "unknown man" in more than 150 frame-up immorality cases in which he and the police benefited financially. He named 28 policemen.

INSPECTOR RYAN IS CLEARED BY ACUNA

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The Daily News said in a copyrighted story today that "Chile" Acuna, former police stool pigeon, had denied he named Inspector Thomas T. Ryan as the detective who hired him to "frame" women in vice cases.

BY BRUCE CATTON

We thank Thee, God, that once again The need we have to share with others Has wakened, in the hearts of men, The charity that makes us brothers.

We thank Thee for the glowing light That radiates from human kindness And shines through the eternal night To strike away our human blindness.

QUAKE TOLL STANDING AT 253 DEAD; MUCH DAMAGE DONE

TOKYO, Nov. 27.—Thousands of homeless on the Izu peninsula, the northern part of which was struck by an earthquake yesterday, turned to the task of restoration today.

Awakening to a bright, warm morning after a night of terror, the homeless attacked the work of rebuilding dwellings, shops, and farmhouses with the aid of hundreds of soldiers and firemen from cities adjacent to the stricken area.

The Shizuoka prefectural government announced there had been 253 deaths and 345 persons injured. Houses destroyed were listed as numbering 2,256 and damaged dwellings totalled 5,562.

Chicago Gangster Is Sent To Prison CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Authorities behind Chicago's drive against "public enemies," scored again this time by sending back to the penitentiary for 30 years, James (Pur) Sammons, beer gang gunman, who has been at odds with the law for more than thirty years.

With little ceremony, the graying gangster was returned to the penitentiary at Joliet yesterday, thus becoming the second "public enemy" to be put behind state prison bars. At Joliet Sammons joined George (Red) Barker, another "public enemy" and alleged labor union racketeer, recently committed. Sammons, like Barker, was sent back to prison as a parole violator.

WILD ANIMALS THROW TOWN IN TERROR

MORE DEATHS FEARED AS 18 LAY INJURED IN MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 27.—Lions, bears, tigers and elephants, wild in a new-found freedom from circus cage and corral, roamed the Guanajuato mountains today as Charro and Hacienda owners banded to track them down and either kill or return them to captivity.

At Irapuato 18 members of the Beas circus, one of the largest in Mexico, lay in hospital beds, badly burned from fire which swept their train yesterday, killing at least 12 of their associates and losing the menagerie. Many injured were not expected to live.

The fire occurred at Oudalupa station, near Irapuato, where the circus train was being switched. Some of the coaches were backed into tank cars filled with gasoline. The fluid, sprayed onto the wooden coaches, caught fire and in a few minutes the entire train was in flames.

Circus performers and employees clad in nightclothes, escaped from the coaches as best they could, only to meet a new peril, the maddened animals which were getting loose from their cages as the fire burned the cars about them.

Finally guns were procured and some of the more ferocious beasts were killed. A passenger train was stopped on the track nearby and some of the lions entered the coaches. Frightened passengers broke out windows of their berths to escape.

The elephants stampeded once they broke from their cars, and raged through the town cutting a swath of destruction.

The passenger train from Mexico City arrived at Guadalupe ten hours late today because of the delay at the scene of the circus train blaze.

Passengers aboard the train said they had seen the charred bodies of twelve persons removed from the debris of the train. Others were believed dead.

SERIES OF THEFTS IS BEING INVESTIGATED BY OFFICERS HERE

Two negroes were being held by police today in connection with an investigation of some alleged stolen property which city officers secured this week in a series of raids and arrests during a probe of thefts. Two other negroes were released.

Officers stated that the negroes held were from time to time making statements disclosing the alleged thefts they committed. Some of the property has been identified but there is still considerable clothing at police headquarters. Three automobile tires were among the loot taken that have not been identified as far.

It is believed by officers that much of the loot was taken by negroes in raids on clothes lines at residences. There were many sections of garden hose also taken, some of which has been identified by householders.

CHAPTER XXX

Terry bowed his head as if in prayer. Life opened up in one of its amazing bursts of radiance. He went over all the mothers of boys he knew and his own stood apart, different, magnificent, strong as a rock. He felt proud of her and repeated her simple philosophy: "Everything matters, my lad, but nothing matters very much. . . . Never do anything today that you will regret tomorrow; but live today to the fulfillment, as though it were the last day of life."

The priest was talking now about his mother and her great reward in the next world. Listening, Terry understood the poignant longing in all mankind for eternal life, the hope of someday meeting his mother again. The experience broadened him, gave him an understanding of the bewildered souls carried away on waves of religious fanaticism. It filled the maddening blank in their minds.

Had he been a devout Catholic, the night had lessened the turmoil in his mind. In his hour of agony he wanted to believe anything. Reality was too hard, too terrible. To think that his mother, the wanderer far from the banks of the Shannon, who had made her prayer, "To travel beyond the sunset till I die," was to be laid to rest in the earth for ever and ever while snow melted and flowers bloomed and the green fields were caressed by sun and wind and rain! No. He didn't want to believe that.

Terry tried to stir a feeling of devotion, to throw himself into a future world where he would see his mother. But to no purpose. Yet he could imagine the spirit of his mother giving a blessing to the flowers, flowing through the sap of the trees toward the sky. Such a person should never really die.

With the congregation, he stood up, knelt down. The service finally ended. Out of the church and over to the cemetery moved the mournful procession. The crowd ranged themselves around the opened grave while the priest, his robes blowing in the cold wind, said a few prayers. Ropes were placed under the boarded coffin. With grief too deep for tears, Terry stood and bowed his head as the remains of his mother, his last kin on earth, were lowered into the ground. His heart was heavy with an aching sadness as pebbles and dirt rattled on the boards and shoveled after shoveled of clay covered up the grave.

The Big Game. . . . Yale and Princeton. . . . Tiger and Bulldog matching brain and brawn for the supremacy of the East in the oldest football rivalry. . . . "I'll bet one grand on Yale. What odds?"

"Why Yale licked Army and Dartmouth." "Well, Princeton walloped Ohio State and Navy and Cornell. . . . What do you mean odds?"

The Big Game. . . . Indian Summer fading before the onslaught of cold, wintry blasts, the sun hiding behind grey clouds. . . . Leaves, turned red, yellow and brown, covered dead grass. . . . The singing ping of a booted pigskin in a hushed arena followed by a stream of running figures. "There he goes!" A mighty roar in the cold blue dusk. "Go on, go on!" "Grass. . . . Stop him, stop him!"

Twenty-two young giants fighting for the glory of the Bulldog and Tiger. "Hold 'em Yale!" . . . Touchdown, Princeton. . . . A lingering echo in the November twilight. . . . The Big Game!

There was something more than an excited crowd and thrilling football in the fiftieth-odd meeting of Yale and Princeton with Terry Malone setting off the fireworks. Something more compelling, breath-taking—Football Drama.

It was just too much for Terry Malone. He looked back on the unprecedented incidents of the game as if it had been a drunken spree when he struggled to explain for his own satisfaction the amazing events which culminated so disastrously in the closing minutes of the game.

After his mother's funeral, Terry hurriedly returned to Princeton, appeared on the football field in time for a last signal drill with the varsity in a frantic effort to get his mind off the sudden death of his mother. Her death was still too close to him, too unreal; the sort of thing that would hit him like a thunderbolt at some unexpected time a few months later. Caught up in the hysteria of the big game, he momentarily forgot his tragedy.

On the day of the game, Terry's brain beat in his head and his ears rumbled with the noises on the campus. Unable to get to sleep, he walked to the window and opened it. In came a burst of cold air chilling him pleasantly.

Looking out, the imarticulate poet in him sensed the dreamlike beauty of the sun glittering over towers and spires, glittering on frost covered grass. The bumble of the big game crowd and tooting of motor horns along crowded Nassau Street drifted up to him in a disturbing echo of excitement. Down below there was the sound of scraping feet and the mumbled stir of voices. Already the town was taken over by old grads and their families returning from distant corners of the land to see a heralded Princeton team match with and speed with the unbeaten eleven of Yale.

Terry pounded a clenched fist against his opened palm. . . . In a few hours. . . . Well, it wouldn't be long now! . . . The nervous anticipation of the big game seeped into his veins and something in his stomach tightened on him, made him feel dizzy, sick. He was unable to relax, again. Beneath the surface he was humming as if everything within were taut violin strings.

Burns and Sonny slept on, unconcerned about the match, just the rest they could. Terry hopped back into bed, but was unable to sleep. He got out, went to the door, picked up the Herald-Tribune and Times to see what sport writers had to say about the relative merits of the teams.

"The Princeton-Yale game," said a nationally known sports writer, "leads today's list of important contests. Both teams came through their early games undefeated. Yale had a rough road and Princeton showed unexpected strength and power. The Yale line is one of the best and their backs are fast and capable. Princeton survived the early games with a clean slate, scoring impressive victories over Cornell, Ohio State and Navy. In Malone and Thomas they have two of the best ball-carriers in the East. These two will bear watching. I look for a hard, fast game with anything liable to happen."

"Well that's interesting," said Terry, tossing away the paper. "Any way the game turns out it will be just as I predicted it. You've got to be good to write dope like that."

Glimpsing at other columns, Terry found some writers favored Yale and others banked on Princeton. But on the whole he found nothing that lessened the growing strain on his nervous energy as game time approached.

The Palms Stadium's cold concrete was covered with a mass of moving color under the streaming flood of humanity that trickled in from every entrance; the banners of Yale and Princeton proudly snapped at each other in the breeze; an aeroplane stunted overhead.

The rumbling of the crowd filling the stadium came to Terry in the nearby dressing room as a sickening echo. Nervously he pulled on his top while the lines of his face sharpened. From his compressed lips ran two crevices. He swallowed hard at times.

Around him swarmed athletes, dressing, talking and swearing. Attendants worked on bandaged legs, wrapped tape around brittle joints. Sonny Drayton was fuming. His stockings, in tatters from three years of varsity wear, had vanished. Sonny was superstitious about these smelly orange and black striped woollens. They had carried him through his college career without a minor injury and he would be damned if he'd step out on the field without them. The colored attendant was solicitous. He finally dug out Sonny's old stockings from a pile of waste, offered to clean them but Sonny insisted on putting them on.

"Say, I sure pulled one over on the A.," cried Red Thomas, bursting into the dressing room and ripping off his tie, coat and shirt. "Just got ten seats on the forty yard line—all together," he chuckled. "The old man is coming down in a private car with a get ten more seats this morning. I did, too. Said he has arrangements for a big party in the car after the game. The whole team is invited. Hear that, you guys? Here's a chance to break training in a big, wet way."

"You're to be guest of honor, Jim," beamed Red on Captain Nichols. "Don't forget it! The old man wants to meet you."

Jim Nichols nodded absently, with no intention of accepting the invitation. There was a girl waiting for Jim after the game; a girl who didn't want to make whoopes, but just desired to be alone with Jim; after coming all the way from Chicago to see him play his last game for Princeton. Jim was a bundle of nerves. He looked distracted and a little worried.

The boisterous presence of Red Thomas aggravated the nervous tension of Terry, who could not help but wonder about the strange caprices of a destiny which pitted him against the flaming red-head in a battle of self-control on the same backfield.

Into the room breezed the head coach, throwing off an atmosphere of confidence and enthusiasm. He was a sympathetic leader now, one of the boys, instead of a stern, exacting master.

A wise coach who knew that many games are won and lost in or near the dressing rooms before play began; a man who knew what to do and say during every minute, who struggled against any provocation in the trying period before the team stepped out on the field. A coach who knew that it was up to him to lead and inspire confidence. He hurried from one player to another. "How you feeling, Burne? That ankle strong enough to stand it? That's fine. . . . Hard day ahead of you, Dan. Up against a good man, one of the best. Let's see what you can do now. . . . Jim, all set? Terry, watch that wind. It's bad. . . . Well, take it easy, men. Save your energy. We'll be out there in a few minutes now."

The band could be heard, coming nearer, growing louder, reinforced by the roar of the crowd as they marched through the tunnel into the stadium.

"Crash through that line of blue. And send the backs around the end. Fight, fight for every yard. Princeton's honor to defend."

The blare of the band and the cheers inside the stadium had the same effect on Terry that the gong has for a prize fighter. It spreads to the rest of the players. The coach, sensing it, cried, "All right! Let's go, men!"

There was a rush to the door and out streamed the Princeton varsity, trotting toward the stadium.

SO ANOTHER NEW MARK IS SET!

SLATON, Nov. 27. — Another endurance flight record has been established. This time it's a case of hauling stove wood.

Frank Fletcher, editor of the Southland Sun, at Southland, nine miles southeast of Slaton, is responsible for the story that a Lubbock county man, J. A. Gausnell, left Fordyce, Ark., a few days ago with two tons of stove wood on his truck, and that he sold 1,000 pounds of it piece by piece as souvenirs for the folks en route. The load consisted of pine knots, oak logs and hickory sticks.

Gausnell traveled via Texarkana, Dallas, Fort Worth, Abilene, Snyder and Slaton, covering a distance of about 850 miles to bring the unsold portion of his cargo into port.

IDALOU TERRITORY PLANTS PASTURES

By Staff Correspondent
IDALOU, Nov. 27.—Between 4,000 and 5,000 acres of wheat have been sown in this section of Lubbock county, mostly for winter pastures, according to bankers and business men here.

"My estimate is somewhere between 4,000 and 5,000 acres," W. L. Bradley, president of the Security State bank, said. "I think most of it is for pasture purposes, although there will be considerable that will be harvested next summer if we get anything like a good crop."

"It is the biggest wheat acreage I have known of here. I understand that there is already some wheat being pastured. This is volunteer wheat, however. We got a lot of wheat in before the early rains late in September and that made it come up better."

W. F. Pruitt, city secretary, says he has a small patch of wheat at his home place in town that he is pasturing.

Thought For Today
The iron entered into his soul—

The Cities
Every year a larger percentage of the American population lives in cities. With ever-increasing rapidity ours is becoming an urban civilization.
But Lot's wife seems to have a good many counterparts among us, nevertheless. In the great march to the cities there are many who turn their heads for a regretful look backward.

Why do we fret and live in our cities when we might be partakers of serenity? Is one of the human mysteries; and man is forever excusing himself by crying out that he cannot get away. Yet, if he knew how he would be renewed, not only physically but spiritually, he would seek these accessible paths, away from the hum and discord of his average days.

This sort of question as cities grow larger and larger, and noise and congestion and confusion become more and more unendurable, is probably going to be heard oftener and often. The average human being is not quite as dumb as some people have suspected; and the average human being is rapidly discovering that a trend in a big city is not all that it might be.

There are, of course, exceedingly powerful economic influences to create large cities. Factories have a way of clustering together—although, to be sure, there are signs
now of a trend in the opposite direction. There are jobs in the cities, and the chances for wealth and fame. But you might amuse yourself some day by wondering if it is not simply man's gregarious nature and his fear of loneliness that are chiefly responsible.

The pioneers who settled the wilderness were not moved by that compulsion, as they were under other, more powerful compulsions.
But their grandchildren felt it in all its force. There were many many people who found life on farms and in remote country hamlets very lonely. When we speak of the young man who leaves his father's farm and moves to the city to get a job we usually assume that he is moved by a desire to better himself economically; but isn't it at least as plausible to suppose that he goes because he wants the gayness, the companionship, the feeling of solidarity and nearness to his fellows that go with city life?

So our cities are swollen; and, being swollen, are unhealthful places
for many of their inhabitants to live.
And a lot of us, wondering how on earth this serenity that Mr. Towne speaks of can ever be come by in a big city, are casting the same wistful glances over our shoulders that Mr. Towne is casting.

Sooner or later, probably, there will be a change. The automobile has helped many people to get at least to the outskirts of metropolitan congestion. Perhaps, as time goes on, it will do more. We can hope so, at any rate. After city gets about so big it becomes 90 per cent abandonment.

The Valet
It is extremely gratifying to learn that a rich English baronet, dying, has left a fortune of $100,000 to a valet. Gratifying, that is, because it so beautifully carries out one of our favorite English traditions.

THE PLAINSMAN
Says:
That Girl on Broadway says this is the only day in the year when you can talk turkey to anybody and make him like it.

THIS being Thanksgiving Day, and all that sort of thing, The Plainsmen must follow the rules of the Columnists' Union and write about Thanksgiving, the Pilgrim fathers, turkey and all the fix'n's.
Every paper in the United States is all bogged down with a lot of slush
about John Alden and his girl friend
Priscilla, not to mention the doughty
Captain Standish. It wouldn't look well if Lubbock publications refused to co-operate.

But The Plainsman doesn't feel about Thanksgiving like some people do. He feels that everyone, regardless of whether they have turkey and cranberries, should be thankful. In other words, this department sharply
disagrees with a Lubbock man, who said the other day: "I kinda hate to see Thanksgiving roll around this year. We're getting along all right, but look at the people who aren't."

About the only people in the world with little to be thankful for are those who are invalids, in pain and without any hope of recovery. The rest of us have something to be glad about—even the Republicans! They should be thankful that they fooled
the people in 1928 even if they couldn't fool 'em on the fourth of this month.

BUT all kidding to one side with the left hand, a lot of people are running around with long faces because they like to be melodramatic, pessimistic or, to be outspoken, plain sour. You'll find a cartoon in the next column which is pretty much to the point.

Take the Pilgrim Fathers, for instance. We think of their Thanksgivings as perfect because romance and time have lent enchantment to the pictures we have seen of the early Thanksgiving Days. But the Pilgrim Fathers lived in constant fear of their lives, in constant battle with the raw land of the wilderness and without hot and cold running water!
Fahars! If they were thankful we've got lots to be thankful for.

ALL in all, this is a pretty good old world in spite of the bear stories which have become the most popular of bedtime yarns since the water of the stocks thirteen months ago. Life is just as real and just as earnest as it was in the day Longfellow penned his famous lines
—and we have just as much, if not more to be thankful about.

This generation of Americans hasn't any idea what hard times are—and never will. Economic conditions have changed to such an extent that the hard times of today are the normal times of yesterday.
Normal times today are better than good times when grandfathers was a boy. There is little privation today.

Certainly there are some people undergoing hardships this very day and in this very city.
But the condition is not general—is not wide-spread. As long as human beings are human beings there will be some unfortunates. The law of average demands it. But such those who are poor and broke today should be thankful that their condition has caught them in this generation rather than in a couple of lifetimes back. It's easier to get help now than it was.

Oh, we've got plenty to be thankful for, all right. All we need to do is realize it. Those folks who are doing the most looking down
the nose will admit it if you get 'em
in a corner. The Plainsman, for one, is as thankful, if not more so, today than on any previous Thanksgiving—and he's little better off, too.

That Man on Avenue Q says
there's no feminine forecasters. Not even the weather can agree with a woman.

Chicago racketeers seem to get along all right as long as they refrain from parking next to a fire-plug.

WORD has emanated from the City hall that steps may be taken to halt the placing of handbills in automobiles, the attaching of advertising cards to automobiles
and to the painting of the streets
by individuals and firms to publicize some event. It is The Plainsman's opinion that a dry goods store has
as much right to usurp the streets
for painted signs as the theatres,
the high school senior class or the old ladies sewing circle. It's just another one of those things which shouldn't be tolerated.

The city authorities aren't going to pass an ordinance against such things until it has to, preferring to request cooperation in stopping it by appealing to good taste. The Plainsmen, however, is not so optimistic. It shouldn't—but it will—take a law and its strict enforcement to protect the rights of individuals and the citizenship, as well as the appearance of the city.

"Without-Or-With, Offense To Friends Or Foes, We Sketch Your World Exactly As It Goes"—Byron

U. S. Study Shows Crowded Conditions Of Urban Centers Tend To Break Down Home, Rodney Dutcher Reports

(This is the second of three stories summarizing some of the findings of the nation's leading experts on children as reported to the White House conference on Child Health and Protection which has just met in Washington.)

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer
WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The White House Conference on Child Health and Protection studied changes in American family life.

A committee headed by Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Bureau of Economics, recognized current thought that the family has been undergoing rapid and definite changes and found that integration of the "older family life" seemed to be indicated by statistics on marriage, divorce, size of families and proportion of births to population.

Conditions of production and consumption tend to remove from the home certain functions formerly considered inherent in family life. It is admitted. But despite the indubitable influence of trends in modern industrial civilization, one learns:

"There is evidence of a different sort that the family is not undergoing any fundamental change; that those functions which are being removed from the home are superficial in their nature, and that when outside forces reach more deeply into fundamental family structure, there is a resistance to their influence which will result in control of those agencies which impinge upon family integrity."

Study Home Life
The committee studied the home environment of 9,000 school children and learned such things as these:

1. Marriage is earlier and families larger in predominantly manufacturing cities. Farm families are larger than others in rural communities.

Foreign-born families coming from rural culture tend to conserve their rural family pattern even when living in cities while those of essentially urban culture such as Russian Jews approximate the family pattern of native urban citizens.

The per cent of married population increases as the size of the community decreases. Childless marriages are more common in cities. The size of the natural family living at home decreases as the size of the community increases and the total number of children born has the same trend. Single dwellings decrease and multi-family dwellings increase with the size of the community.

City families move most frequently and the per cent of those who stay in the community of their birth seems to be inversely correlated with the size of the community.

CLEVER RULES ARE GIVEN FOR BATHING
The Wilson I mean, when I say "Wilson's eleven points" was not Woodrow, but Erasmus, a famous English skin specialist. He is the man who made the Englishman's ritual of daily washing a part of the British constitution and a sacrament of the Church of England. He said he hoped the wide sale of his book on the skin had "in some degree contributed to the popularity of soap and water among our countrymen."

Essentials of Bathing: Here are his "Essentials of Bathing":
1. Rub the skin and limbs gently with the hands while in the bath, and, in the swimming bath, swim, that you may combine moderate muscular exercise with the action of the water on the skin.

2. Try to feel when you have had enough: some can bear immersion in water longer than others.
3. Never submerge the bath by bathing; too long your own sensations are a better test than time.

4. Dry the body leisurely, with moderate friction, beginning with the head, then take the arms and body, then the legs and feet.
5. Rough friction to the skin is never necessary, neither in the bath nor out of it.

6. Friction has three purposes, namely: To move the circulation in the skin; to exercise the muscles and to rub off dirt and loose skin.
7. The cleaning of the skin is very much assisted by soap; soap is tonic to the skin and very wholesome; it removes the old face of the skin and the varnish of dirt larger places.

Both divorce and illegitimate births increase with the size of the community.

Family Needs Change
Thus a pessimistic outlook for the family in an urban industrial civilization seems to be justified, says Dr. Stanley, but on the other hand city children are better adjusted than rural children, according to the study of the 9,000. Rural families resist change and the conjecture is made that there are some aspects of the old family pattern which should be changed, "probably related to the authoritarian and undemocratic parental attitudes of the old-fashioned family."

The stimulus of economic forces "has meant increased urbanization, homes located around factories and work places, near sources of supplies and services, the growth of apartments and flats, less space per person, less privacy, less family entertaining, more dependence upon outside sources for amusement, fewer children."

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—They have lived in a world of drama—and yet, the same sort of thing which might have happened on the stage finally comes up and bites them.

So let me tell you a little off-stage story.
Not so many days ago, the nation picked up its newspapers and read that David Belasco was critically ill; possibly dying.

Not so many months ago, the nation picked up its newspapers and read that David Warfield, that favored actor of yesterday, lay critically ill; possibly dying. Very well. . . .

For many a year the relation of Belasco and Warfield had a sort of Damon and Pythias flavor. Warfield had come out of the lower forms of entertainment, out of the burlesque and the museum vintage of theater history.

Belasco had cast him in "The Auctioneer" and he rose to rapid success. They had battled together against a number of stage adversaries, had stood side by side in battles of the theater. And one day there came a historic split-up. Only the Weber and Fields separation had been more spectacular.

They wrangled over certain splittings of receipts and there were mean charges bandied. For years Belasco and Warfield didn't speak when they met and they took pains not to meet.

Yet Belasco's office is just across the street from the Lamb Club, where Warfield went daily for his vintolite game. The bitterness ran deep.

Then came the word that Warfield was critically ill. Belasco arrived at his office shortly before nine. He picked up a paper and read the news. And the next thing he did was to dictate a telegram to the Bell Center for flowers to the hospital. He got a warm and friendly reply. All that had gone before was forgotten.

Warfield recovered and left the hospital. He returned to his apartment on Central Park West and one morning he picked up a newspaper. He read that Belasco was critically ill.

The first wire to reach the "old massa" of the theater was Warfield's. The first flowers came from the actor. And a second telegram arrived before noon.

They had both grown to be old men. And one of Broadway's most famous feuds had ended.

The Weber-Fields break-up had seemed happy ending. They had disagreed upon the split of the theater. Fields believed that the modern musical shows would supplant the old-time slap-stick stuff. Joe Weber had wanted to keep on with their famous routine. They quarreled, split—and went their separate ways.

Then, after years had gone by, Fields' father died. And Joe, who had been reared in the neighborhood, attended the funeral. The two found themselves side-by-side in a hack on the way to the funerals and as they drove they passed through the East Side scenes of their youthful struggles. Sentimental memories came up to choke them. Traffic troubles happened to halt their cab just in front of an old-time theater.

Each turned to the other—a bit of haze dimming the eyes . . . and shook hands.

They were older and wiser now.

OH, THOSE ALERT CHICAGO BOYS!
CHICAGO, Nov. 27 (AP)—Rack-etering in the songs of birds, has made its appearance in Chicago.

Asserting the sweet notes he had expected to hear from the canary he bought from a house-to-house salesman had proved to be sour, J. Kovich, called yesterday at a pet shop and tried to get his money back, only to learn that a racketeer who sold him the bird had no connection with the company—he pretended to represent.

"You're lucky," said the manager of the shop, "that you did not buy a parrot. That fellow has been selling dumb parrots for $20 and $30."

The Chicago Better Business Bureau has been asked to look into the matter.

SOUTH PLAINS NEWS CHATTER

BY J. SAM LEWIS
Field Correspondent

NEW FOUNTAIN SERVICE
The Sanders Pharmacy at Spur will be the most up to date in all West Texas if plans for a certain improvement announced there are carried out. According to store officials a special gasoline pump is to be installed in the store as a part of the regular soda fountain equipment and gasoline will be dispensed for "American Austin" tanks and cigar lighters. "We will have the gasoline tank so that the boy who owns Austin will be able to drive right up into the store, tank up, and then back out," one store official said.

SOUTH PLAINS VETERAN
J. B. Jenkins, president of the Floydada chamber of commerce is one of the old timers in this section. Mr. Jenkins has been in this area a matter of 35 years or so, he doesn't say how long and he has seen the South Plains grow from a cattle range to the capital of the greatest part of the Lone Star state. Born in Kansas, he was a small boy when the family came to Texas. When old enough he became a cowboy, worked on some of the big outfits and then branched out into business for himself. Now he is able to retire, although in the prime of life, and he spends most of his time in boosting for his home town. On the side he attends to his own ranch and farm affairs.

TOUGH JOE FOR AGENT
E. L. Tanner, county agent of Dickens county, has a few things to attend to outside his regular line of work. One day last week a farmer who was moving onto a new place, came to him and asked him how to kill bedbugs. The man said the house he was occupying was infested with them. Mr. Tanner gave him instructions for sealing up the house and then starting sulphuric acid fires to gas the pests to death. After minute instructions had been given and after the man thoroughly understood the work, he burst out with, "Say, Mr. Tanner, can't you come along and show me?" So a date was agreed upon and as no untoward reports have been received it is presumed the operation was successful.

HAS FOOTBALL SCHEME
Judge Edgar Hutchins of Crosby county has a unique plan up his sleeve for a post season football game that he expects to promote in a short time. He has not announced definitely the plan, but expects to do so soon. The judge, who used to be a football coach, is strong for the game and he is of the opinion that he has planned a contest that will stir Crosby county to the depths.

J. LANCE KNOWS HIS CHICKS
J. Lance Suits, Lorenzo editor, chicken fancier, et al., has disposed of his side lines, poultry, but has not lost interest in the business. Jack was one of a group of five Lorenzo business men who started an experiment with chicks last spring. Jack sold out—the others it is understood have not. When Jack needs a spring fryer or a dozen of eggs, he knows where to get them.

SWINGS A MEAN BROOM
President Bradley of the Idalou bank is not above "swinging a mean broom" when the sand storms that have unexpectedly visited the South Plains during November, arise. A week ago Sunday there was an unusually vicious storm or rather a series of storms. No cracks were too small to keep out the grains of sand. They drive in from all sides. Mr. Bradley and his cashier got down to the bank early Monday morning, ahead of time, got out their brooms and began to sweep out the place. By actual measurement, the bank there was nearly a full quart of sand and dust. Banker Bradley handled the broom like a veteran.

DEAN FORGOT HIS NOTES
Dean James M. Gordon of Texas Technological college, who was the main speaker at the dedication of the new Shallowater school building, prepared a set speech for the occasion. He was to deliver the address after having made five stops on a 10-1/2 hour day that day at which he also spoke. To make sure that he got everything all right the dean wrote down his address. When he arrived at the school, in his hurry because of the large number of cars parked around the building, he forgot and left the address in his overcoat pocket and the coat in the car. It was not until he got onto the stage that the dean remembered the whereabouts of his address. But the dean got over with a bang and made the best talk heard in Shallowater in many a day.

HAS MANY SIDE LINES
L. L. Reese, of the Anton drug store, is a dairyman on the side and furnishes milk for the town. He has been adding to his herd until he now has nearly double the number of cows he had a year ago. "I can't seem to get enough milk to supply all the demands I have for it," says the druggist. Besides operating the dairy and drug store, Mr. Reese has a confectionery and a picture show and he plans to establish a haberdashery in the confectionery building.

By quitting golf to enter the talkies for $250,000, Bobby Jones may be said to have gone from the putting green to the long green.

'EL MAESTRO' OF MEXICAN BANDITS IS SLAIN ON WAY TO TRIAL; 'MYSTERY' CLOAKS SHOOTING OF HIJACKER BOSS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 27 (AP)—"Shot and killed while attempting to escape" was written today on the records of the Department of Justice after the name of Baldomero Navarro, who acknowledged no man's law, and whose deftness with two guns won him the title of "El Maestro" of Mexican banditry. Until a week ago Navarro and a few bold companions for 17 years roamed the mountains around Cuernavaca, descending to the highway from Mexico City occasionally for a hold-up which astonished with its daring. Once, it is believed, they nearly succeeded in kidnaping Ambassador Morrow as he drove to his country home in the Morelos capital. Last week federal troops, who pursued him in vain for years, captured and executed three of his men. There followed a running fight with Navarro across mesa and through arroyos, until a shot clipped his horse from under him and he was captured. He was brought to Mexico City and questioned by federal authorities. A long series of crimes with which the government connected him ranged from highway banditry to the murder of Abraham Rosenthal, American who was captured on the Cuernavaca road and put to death three years ago when ransom arrangements fell through. Friday the federal authorities turned him over to troops of the state of Morelos in which most of his offenses were committed, and he was started back to Cuernavaca to stand trial and face almost certain execution. At Tres Marias, not far across the Morelos state line he met death at the hands of his captors in a manner frequent for Mexican bandit leaders, "shot and killed while attempting to escape." None of the details was divulged.

RIOTS ARE QUELLED
SANTA CRUZ, Tenerife, Canary Islands, Nov. 27 (AP)—Three persons were killed and many wounded, some of them seriously, when police tonight charged against a group of manifestants. The manifestation was an expression of protest at abandonment of Santa Cruz as a port of call by Trans-Atlantic liners.

TAXI RUN OPENED
Described as the world's longest auto taxi service, the Trans-African Motor Safaris has been started to carry tourists from the Juba terminus of the Nile steamers to Cape Town. The route covers many of the larger cities and show places of the country. The entire trip is scheduled to take about eight weeks including stops at the principal cities. The first southern trip met with delays, however. At one point rains had put the road in such condition that 23 days were required to negotiate a piece of road which ordinarily could be traveled in two. In one section it required five days to progress 300 yards.
