MDC reaches out to global businesses

Development group makes contacts with 10 international companies

By Kathleen Thurber
Staff Writer

The Midland Development Corp. has expanded its sights overseas as it works to partner with businesses interested in bringing jobs to Midland.

Business Development Director Don Woodward said through a $60,000 contract with Canadian-based ROI Vision they've been put in touch with 12 companies, including 10 based in foreign countries.

"We've not had this kind of international exposure," he said.

Having partnered with ROI Vision near the start of the 2010-2011 fiscal year, Woodward said the intention was to generate meaningful leads, not necessarily to gain contacts from other countries. The contract requires ROI Vision set the MDC up with a minimum of 50 appointments.

During the first phase of the partnership, the firm has put them in touch through tele-conference with 10 international companies looking to open a site in America, Texas or an energy sector, he said. Businesses with which they've spoken have been based in countries including Canada, Luxembourg and France, among others, and are involved in industries that range from finance to software development to wind farms and even toilet manufacturers, Woodward said.

"This is very exciting," board member Cary Love said. "It looks like we're getting involved with companies we would never have heard of."

Through ROI Vision, Woodward said when MDC visits trade shows they also will have meetings pre-arranged with companies that fall into their target groups.

"It just adds to our contacts," Woodward said.

Before partnering with ROI Vision, Woodward said they researched the group's efforts for a few years. When putting MDC staff in contact with a business, he said the company provides background information on a business and then follows up

Woman pleads guilty to stealing $240K from oil company

- Former bookkeeper accused of taking money over time period of seven years.

By Audrie Palmer
Staff Writer

A Midland woman has pleaded guilty to embezzling more than $240,000 from a local oilfiled company over the course of seven years.

Sherry Locke Edge entered a guilty plea in federal court Friday morning for stealing thousands from Condor Operating Co. where she worked as an accountant and bookkeeper.

She is charged with one count of mail fraud, which carries a punishment of a maximum term of imprisonment of 20 years; a maximum term of supervised release not to exceed three years; a maximum fine of $250,000; and full restitution.

IRS: Don't forget tax credit for families

By Kathleen Thurber
Staff Writer

With one out of five eligible workers not filing for the Earned Income Tax Credit annually, the Internal Revenue Service worked on Friday to raise awareness.

Celebrating its fifth annual Earned Income Tax Credit Awareness Day, officials said they wanted to ensure taxpayers receive the money back for which they're qualified. Plus, they added, with the tax extensions passed at the close of 2010, many families again are eligible for the expanded credit

Texas marks 150-year anniversary of secession

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

Sam Houston tried to tell Texans secession and joining the Confederacy wouldn't work.

He warned of "rivers of blood," a generation left dead or crippled by war and ultimate defeat of the South at the hands of the industrial superior North.

"After enduring civil war for years, will there be any promise of a better state of things than we now enjoy?" Houston wrote in a November 1860 letter preserved among documents at his namesake museum in Huntsville.

A secession convention that assembled in Austin 150 years ago this weekend rejected the Texas governor's advice.

"I think everybody pretty much knew what was coming," Mac Woodward, curator of collections at the Sam Houston Memorial Museum, says.

Stoked by unfounded fears and erroneous reports of slave rebellions that became known as the Texas Troubles, Texans in February 1861 approved secession by a 3-1 margin, sending the 15 years at UTPB Kay Bivens is retiring after serving 15 years as director of Institutional Advancement at University of Texas of the Permian Basin. She is flanked by Grant Billingsley, vice chair of the UTPB Development Board, left, and UTPB President David Watts. A group of university supporters, friends, co-workers and family members established the Kay Bivens Endowed Scholarship, and a plaque was unveiled Friday at her retirement reception.

Chief fundraiser retires after 15 years

From staff reports

ODESSA — After experiencing first-hand the area's busts and booms at Tom Brown Inc., Kay Bivens jumped into the fundraising arena at United Way of Midland nearly 22 years ago. Now, after 15 years as chief fundraiser at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, she's retiring from "smiling and dialing."

"From my first day of training as a loaned executive for United Way in 1982, I knew I loved fundraising," said Bivens, in whose name a scholarship has been created.

"I was very fortunate to inherit Kay as my chief development officer," said UTPB President Daid Watts. "Because of her philosophy that donors give to people they trust, UTPB has gained hundreds of new supporters during her tenure.

"We will all miss her, and that is why we've established the Kay Bivens Endowed Scholarship as a tribute to her tireless work to promote this university," he said.

"Future UTPB students will benefit from this award, just like hundreds of past students have been assisted with their education due to her fundraising efforts."

When Bivens arrived at UTPB in 1996, there were about 2,100 students compared to more than 4,000 today. There weren't any buildings on 42nd Street north of the campus and only 114 beds in student housing instead of the present 600, most in deluxe apartment-style accommodations.

Bivens, director of Institutional Advancement, inherited a list of 235 donors in 1996 and will leave a list of more than 2,400. She said her fundraising successes always have been the result of a team effort and the extraordinary generosity of Odessans and Midlanders. She also credits Watts with being a team-building leader who has great vision and works tirelessly to strengthen and expand the university.

Highlights of her time at UTPB include the creation of endowed presidential scholarships and the Wagner Noel Performing Arts Center.

During the university's silver anniversary year, 1997-98, a goal was set to establish 12 scholarships, but with leadership from Loraine Perryman and Jack Wood, the number nearly doubled to 23, Bivens said.

More recently, Bivens assisted a group of volunteers who raised $18 million in cash and pledges within three months' time for the performing arts center.

She learned about fundraising at United Way. She began in a volunteer capacity as the campaign cabinet's professional division chair and on the planning cabinet and board. She then joined the agency's staff and served as campaign director from 1989 to 1996.

Bivens' community involvement includes memberships in the Odessa East Rotary Club, the Pilot Club and Executive Women of Midland. She served six-year terms on the boards of Casa de Amigos, Safe Place and Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale. She has also been active with the American Heart Association, the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and the Midland Opera Theatre.

EL PASO

US paid key witness about $80,000 in Posada case

A prosecution witness has admitted receiving nearly $80,000 from the U.S. government for agreeing to testify against an elderly ex-CIA operative.

Government informant Gilberto Abascal also said Friday that federal authorities helped him obtain U.S. citizenship.

Cuba-born Abascal has spent five days testifying that he was on a boat that carried anti-communist militant Luis Posada Carriles from Mexico to Miami in March 2005.

Posada then sought U.S. citizenship and underwent immigration hearings in El Paso — during which he said he paid a people smuggler to drive him across the Texas border.

Posada faces 11 counts of perjury, obstruction and immigration fraud for lying about how he made it to the U.S., and for denying his role in 1997 hotel bombings in Havana.

FORT WORTH

Texas clinic evacuated after reports of gunman

A dozen employees were safely evacuated from a Texas health clinic after hiding in locked offices for several hours Friday following reports that a gunman was inside, police said.

No one was injured in the incident at a JPS Health Network clinic in Fort Worth, and police Lt. Paul Henderson said no gunman had been found by Friday afternoon.

A woman called 911 in the morning, saying that a man with a gun entered before the clinic opened, Henderson said. The woman ran out and the dozen employees then hid in offices as tactical officers arrived and developed a plan to get them out.

that was offered through the stimulus program.

"It's a credit that's designed to help working families," Deputy U.S. Secretary Neal Wolin said, speaking during a tele-conference with the media.

For example, Wolin said, a single mother of three who makes about $39,500 could receive $950 back under the extended credit, or about $650 more than is provided back during a typical year.

Having initially passed in 1975, the Earned Income Tax Credit is meant to offset the burden of Social Security taxes deducted from paychecks. The credit is available only to those who work and is based on several qualifications, including income, marital status and the number of children a person claims on their tax returns.

Typically, those who made $48,362 or less during 2010 will qualify for some type of credit through the program this year, said Verlinda Paul, director of the EITC program.

"Many people qualify for the first time this year," she said, adding the recession has meant a cut in hours or wages for several.

Cecille Jones, acting deputy director of electronic tax administration and refundable credits, stressed the IRS doesn't look at the credit as welfare but rather a refund for individuals who are working.

"It is a tax benefit they earn," she said.

She said workers who don't have children and people who aren't required to file a return are among the groups most likely to overlook the credit.

Those filing a return who don't have children can claim the credit through a 1040 EZ form, Paul said.

In 2010, about 26 million workers were eligible for the credit and received an average of $2,200, she said.

In Midland, spokespersons with the IRS said assistance with filing for the claim can be found at several Volunteer Income Tax Assistance sites. Community National Bank and Casa de Amigos already have started providing services to those who earned less than $49,000 during 2010, and several other sites will begin offering help during February.

The free filing programs available through www.irs.gov also allow for taxpayers to claim the credit, officials said.

state barreling toward the Civil War on the losing side and costing Texas hero Houston his job. The only Unionist governor in the South would be removed when he refused to swear allegiance to the Confederacy.

Texas became the seventh state to secede and the last to join the Confederate States of America before the war officially started that April.

The Texas defection came despite the blocking efforts of Houston, easily the state's most prominent national figure at the time. He was a hero as leader of the Texas forces that won independence from Mexico in 1836, a two-time president of the Republic of Texas, a state legislator, congressman and senator. Before arriving in Texas, he'd also been governor of Tennessee.

"Here you have a governor, Sam Houston, who continues to say the Union must be preserved, that Texas is better off in the Union," said T. Michael Parrish, a Baylor University history professor whose specialties include Texas and Southern history and the Civil War.

"He had always said that from time of the Texas Revolution and founding of the Republic, he said ultimately the goal was to be annexed as a state. He had to take a courageous stand."

Houston suggested U.S. troops should consider driving the French out of Mexico and not fight each other, hoping to deflect sentiment for an American civil war.

"The summer and fall of 1860 he stumped the state and uttered phrases: 'Rivers of blood will flow, the South can't win, if we do secede we should become our own nation,'" Parrish said.

Houston also spoke out against Jefferson Davis, the provisional president of the Confederacy and a man he knew from their days together in the U.S. Senate.

"They did not like one another, they did not trust one another," Parrish said. "Sam Houston predicted Jefferson Davis would lead the Confederacy to disaster."

Houston refused to call the Legislature into special session to consider secession, but backers of the idea circumvented him, picked delegates for a secession convention and assembled Jan. 28 in the House chamber of the Texas Capitol. According to accounts from the Texas State Library, Gov. Houston, working below them in his first-floor office, described them as "the mob upstairs."

On Feb. 1, delegates voted 166-8 to secede.

"That's not the people," Woodward said of Houston's stance that a public vote was needed. "He goes back to that Jacksonian populist belief: The people need to speak.

"My sense is he was trying to hopefully delay the secession by staging this number of roadblocks, or goals he thought needed to be done."

When a Committee of Safety was authorized by the convention to seize all federal property in the state, Houston summoned Texas Rangers loyal to him to intercept a secessionist posse headed to a federal arsenal in San Antonio. But the commander of U.S. forces in Texas, Gen. David Twiggs, on Feb. 16 surrendered all military property in the state, and a week later the public vote approved the secession convention actions.

"Ultimately, the Legislature said: 'Well, we'll just fix you,'" Woodward said. "'We're going to have all the state officials pledge their allegiance to the Confederacy.' That was what he would not do, the one thing he would not do."

On March 15, the governor's office was declared vacant and Lt. Gov. Edward Clark was sworn in as governor of the Confederate state of Texas.

"The momentum got beyond him," Woodward said.

Ironically, Houston eventually supported Texas' move to the Confederacy.

"When the people voted, he had to live with that," Woodward said. "That was his belief."

Texas, then at the western edge of the nation, avoided much of the devastating battle carnage endured elsewhere in the South. Galveston was blockaded, Corpus Christi was hit by naval cannon, Sabine Pass was the scene of two confrontations, and the last battle of the war occurred in May 1865 at Palmito Ranch near Brownsville, more than a month after Robert E. Lee's surrender.

Records are spotty, but somewhere between 70,000 and 90,000 Texans, more than 10 percent of the state's population, served in the Confederate army. Among them was Houston's son, Sam Jr., who was wounded badly at Shiloh and wound up in a prisoner of war camp in Illinois. The Houston museum has a Bible he carried, featuring a bullet hole that travels halfway through the book.

Documents suggest Houston visited Union POWs held at the state prison in Huntsville, where he eventually returned after his ouster from the governor's office and where he died at age 70 in July 1863.

"The thing you always wonder is how much he suffered, how difficult it was for him personally as the Civil War progressed," Woodward said. "His whole life was built on Texas being part of the union and preserving the union."

with the MDC and the business of interest after the two have completed initial conversations.

By furnishing the MDC with that extra information, Woodward said they're able to be more prepared to talk with a company about Midland and what it has to offer than they might be if they made a contact at a trade show with a company they'd never heard of before.

During the year, MDC staff are working to increase the number of business contacts made from the approximately 3,600 contacts made last year to about 3,726 this year, Woodward said.

In other business, board members received a report of the MDC's activity during the previous year.

Among the highlights for the year was the relocation of Apache Corp. to Midland that was helped by a $250,000 incentive deal, the recruitment of 10 physicians by Midland Memorial Hospital through a $300,000 contribution by MDC, renovation of the S-11A Hangar and the recruitment of United Express Sky West Airlines' nonstop flight to Denver, which received a $200,000 incentive through the city and MDC.

The Go Live! campaign also is continuing with the first release of MDC's "Live Guide" in February. The guide will appear in the Reporter-Telegram as well as being mailed out and will focus on events and activity in the central business district downtown.

Board member Laura Roman said they also want to look at conducting a parking feasibility study downtown. Whether a local business or one from outside, Roman said parking always is a question that comes up and something they want to be able to provide more data on.

Roman and Robert Rendall each were re-appointed to another three year term with the board during Tuesday's City Council meeting. The board still is waiting for a replacement to be appointed to Doug Henson's position that was vacated.

What's new at the movie theater

Capsule reviews of films opening this week:

- "The Mechanic" — It's probably blasphemy to even think this, much less say it out loud, but here goes: This remake starring Jason Statham is better than the 1972 original starring Charles Bronson — and Statham is better in the lead role than Bronson was. Now, "The Mechanic" may not have been one of Bronson's stronger films during this era but it has achieved a certain following among genre fans. In retrospect it was a bit languid, it meandered here and there with its groovy vibe — although it did feature a breathtakingly wordless, 15-minute opening as Bronson's assassin character laid out the works for an elaborate kill in a seedy, downtown Los Angeles apartment building. That's the whole point of both films: The hit men at the center of them pull off assassinations that don't look like assassinations. Both function in a world where morals and rules don't seem to apply, where law enforcement is practically nonexistent and the relationship between a hit man and his mentor is meant to seem as touching as the one between a father and son. Director Simon West ("Con Air") and screenwriter Richard Wenk have taken those core concepts from Lewis John Carlino's original script, moved the action to steamy New Orleans and pumped out a movie that's slicker and sleeker, leaner and meaner — not in an idiotic way, but rather to reflect the actor and the times. R for strong brutal violence throughout, language, some sexual content and nudity. Running time: 92 minutes. Three stars out of four.

— Christy Lemire, AP Movie Critic

- "The Rite" — Anthony Hopkins classes this up, as you can imagine he would in almost every situation. But even his otherworldly powers can only make this overly familiar demonic possession thriller engaging for so long. Despite the ads that would suggest otherwise, Hopkins is a supporting player here. The center of the film is Colin O'Donoghue, making his confident, impressive feature debut as Michael Kovak, an aspiring Catholic priest suffering a spiritual crisis. Following his mother's death, Michael joined his father (Rutger Hauer) in the family mortuary business. Swedish director Mikael Hafstrom ("Evil," "1408") details the painstaking process of cleaning and preparing a body for a funeral with precise, clear-eyed detail, which makes it seem even creepier. Still, Michael is obviously a caring and conscientious young man, and it makes sense that he'd be interested in tending to others through the church. Trouble is, he's not sure what he believes. Michael Petroni's script, "suggested by" a novel that was "inspired by" actual events, is surprisingly reasonable and even-tempered with its discussions about the nature of faith. For a while, it is neither hyperbolic nor preachy, but open to all possibilities and levels of devotion — or lack thereof. All of this intelligent setup, as well as the moody, atmospheric way Hafstrom takes advantage of locations in Rome and Budapest, make the over-the-top climax feel like even more of a letdown. PG-13 for disturbing thematic material, violence, frightening images and language including sexual references. Running time: 113 minutes. Two and a half stars out of four.

GUILTY

From 1A

According to a factual basis filed with the district clerk's office, Edge began writing unauthorized checks to herself from the company's bank accounts beginning in summer 2003 and continuing on to June 2010.

When she was confronted by her employer, court documents state that she admitted to what she had done and was terminated.

Edge would create false entries in the bookkeeping records to make it appear that the checks she wrote to herself were actually payments to vendors and to cover legitimate expenses, an indictment stated.

She also would create a monthly report for the company's income and expenses and did not properly account for the money she had taken. A copy of the report was then mailed through the U.S. Postal Service to Frost Bank, which is responsible for the Robert A. Hall Trust that is a recipient of the disbursements from Condor, the factual basis stated.

No sentencing date had been set as of Friday at press time.

Cocaine, ecstacy found in bust

■ Five arrested in Odessa over past three days.

From staff reports

ODESSA — Law enforcement investigators have arrested five people over the past three days and confiscated several narcotics including more than 600 pills of ecstasy and ecstasy powder.

Ly

Ector County Sheriff's special investigative unit, along with the Midland Department of Public Safety narcotics division, conducted a "buy bust" operation beginning Thursday.

As a result of the seizure, about 497 ecstasy pills were confiscated, and two people, Mark Anthony Caldwell, 32, and Kisha Luana Hamilton, 31, were arrested. A press release states that they will prosecuted on federal charges.

Authorities also obtained a consent to search the Game Room at 2615 N. Grandview Ave., where Huing Viet Ha, 41, was arrested and charged with a state-jail felony of possession of cocaine.

Another search warrant was executed at a home in the 300 block of East 42nd Street where 172 ecstasy pills and 13 grams of powder ecstasy were found. Duy Anh Nguyen, 27, was arrested there on federal charges.

About 84 grams of marijuana also were seized at the home, and Hieu Le Ly, 28, was arrested and charged with a state-jail felony of possession of marijuana in a drug-free zone.

Police said they also found $770 in U.S. currency that was taken in as evidence during the bust.

MPD looking into sex assault at restaurant

From staff reports

Police confirmed Friday they are working a sexual assault investigation that allegedly occurred Thursday evening at the McDonald's restaurant at Loop 250 and Midkiff Road.

Authorities aren't releasing many details into the incident but said it involves two employees at the restaurant who know each other.

City spokeswoman LeaAnn Dearman said the investigation is ongoing and releasing additional information at this time could jeopardize the investigation.

Taco Bell fights back after beef attack

SO, WHAT'S IN THE TACO MEAT?

- Isolated Oat Product: Made industrially from oats. Helps processed meat stay moist.
- Soy Lecithin: Mainly used to keep oils and water from separating.
- Maltodextrin: Usually used as a sweetener. Derived from starches such as corn, wheat or potatoes.
- Autolyzed Yeast Extract: Flavor enhancer made from yeast that makes savory flavors more intense.
- Citric Acid: Found naturally in citrus fruits. Used to give foods a sour or acidic flavor, or as a preservative.
- Silicon Dioxide: Essentially, sand. Ground very fine and used in small quantities to keeps food such as powdery seasoning mixes from caking up. Packets of seasoning mixes at the grocery store often include it.
- Sodium Phosphates: A common meat preservative.

LOS ANGELES — The quality of Taco Bell's beef may be called into question, but their sense of humor isn't.

Fighting back against a lawsuit that alleges the company's beef isn't very meaty, the Irvine, Calif.-based Mexican fast food chain has launched a massive marketing campaign — including snarky, full-page newspaper ads that declare, "Thank you for suing us."

The fast-food chain's ads in Friday's editions of the Los Angeles Times, the Wall Street Journal, USA Today, the New York Times and other papers is the chain's effort to set the record straight, according to company officials.

"Plain ground beef tastes boring," the ad states. "The only reason we add anything to our beef is to give the meat flavor and quality. Otherwise we'd end up with nothing more than the bland flavor of ground beef, and that doesn't make for great-tasting tacos."

But there's also a very serious tone to the company's PR counter-offensive, which includes information on its Facebook page and a YouTube video of Taco Bell President Greg Creed insisting that the meat mix is "88 percent beef and 12 percent secret recipe."

And now, the company — protesting that its reputation had been sullied — is threatening to countersue the plaintiffs and their lawyers.

Cables: Egypt, US clash over democracy

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Egyptian leaders had clashed with the U.S. over human rights and government reforms for years before Friday's warning that the situation there threatens U.S. aid to the country, according to a series of leaked U.S. diplomatic messages.

The disclosure of the confidential messages — some of which were circulated within the U.S. government less than one year ago — offers extraordinary insights into the complicated relationship between the U.S. and Egypt as tensions there escalated.

"The Egyptians have long felt that, at best, we take them for granted; and at worst, we deliberately ignore their advice while trying to force our point of view on them," Ambassador Margaret Scobey wrote Secretary of State Hillary Clinton on Feb 9, 2009. It was among the diplomatic messages released recently by WikiLeaks.

Two months earlier, Scobey wrote that Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak has resisted past U.S. calls for increased democracy, which he has viewed as a threat to his leadership and a boost to internal adversaries seeking to undermine him. Scobey's Dec. 12, 2008, memo to Gen. David Petraeus was in advance of his meeting with Mubarak.

"Mubarak now makes scant public pretense of advancing a vision for democratic change. An ongoing challenge remains balancing our security interests with our democracy promotion efforts," she said.

U.S. officials have urged Mubarak and other senior Egyptian leaders to allow peaceful street protests, and they have condemned the violence stemming from Egyptian government crackdowns on the protests. The U.S. now is considering reducing the $1.5 billion in its military and civilian aid in the wake of increasing violence.

Relations between the U.S. and Egypt appeared to be improving after Obama won in 2008, according to some of the diplomatic correspondence disclosed by WikiLeaks. Mubarak had hopes for improved relations with the U.S. after Obama won, Scobey told Petraeus a month after Obama's victory.

She offered Petraeus some insights into Mubarak's tarnished view of a once strong ally. "The Egyptians have lost confidence in U.S. regional leadership. They believe that the U.S. invasion of Iraq was an unmitigated disaster that has unleashed Iranian regional ambitions and that the U.S. waited far too long to engage in Arab-Israeli peacemaking efforts," Scobey wrote.

"In addition, U.S. and Egyptian differences over the pace and direction of political reform have drained the warmth from the relationship on both sides."

A meeting between Obama and Mubarak would be a good idea "to try to begin repairing the relationship," Scobey advised.

The Egyptian leader visited Washington In August 2009. Writing in advance of the trip, Scobey said that the Egyptian president appreciated Obama's interest in restoring "the sense of warmth that has traditionally characterized the U.S.-Egyptian partnership."

"Mubarak viewed President (George W.) Bush as naive, controlled by subordinates, and totally unprepared for dealing with post-Saddam Iraq, especially the rise of Iran's regional influence," Scobey wrote in a May 19, 2009, memo.

Spending helps economy gain steam

By Jeannine Aversa

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The economic recovery is now consistently picking up speed, and American consumers are the ones pushing the gas pedal. They increased their spending late last year at the fastest pace since 2006.

The question now is whether they can spend enough this year to make the economy grow even faster and finally bring down unemployment. It's up to them because the housing market and government spending aren't offering much help.

A more active consumer was the main reason the economy grew at an annual rate of 3.2 percent in the final three months of 2010, the Commerce Department said Friday. It was up from 2.6 percent the previous quarter and the best since the start of last year.

That level of growth would be great news in a healthy economy that only needed to hold steady. But with unemployment still at 9.4 percent a year and a half after the Great Recession, steady is not good enough. By some estimates, the economy would need to grow 5 percent for a whole year to significantly bring down the unemployment rate.

Still, the recovery has gained steam since a difficult patch last spring. Economists now think 2011 will be a pivotal year when consumers can finally be counted on to power the economy to stronger growth.

A one-year cut of 2 percentage points in the Social Security payroll tax is a big reason why economists predict Americans will keep spending enough that the economy will grow more strongly this year.

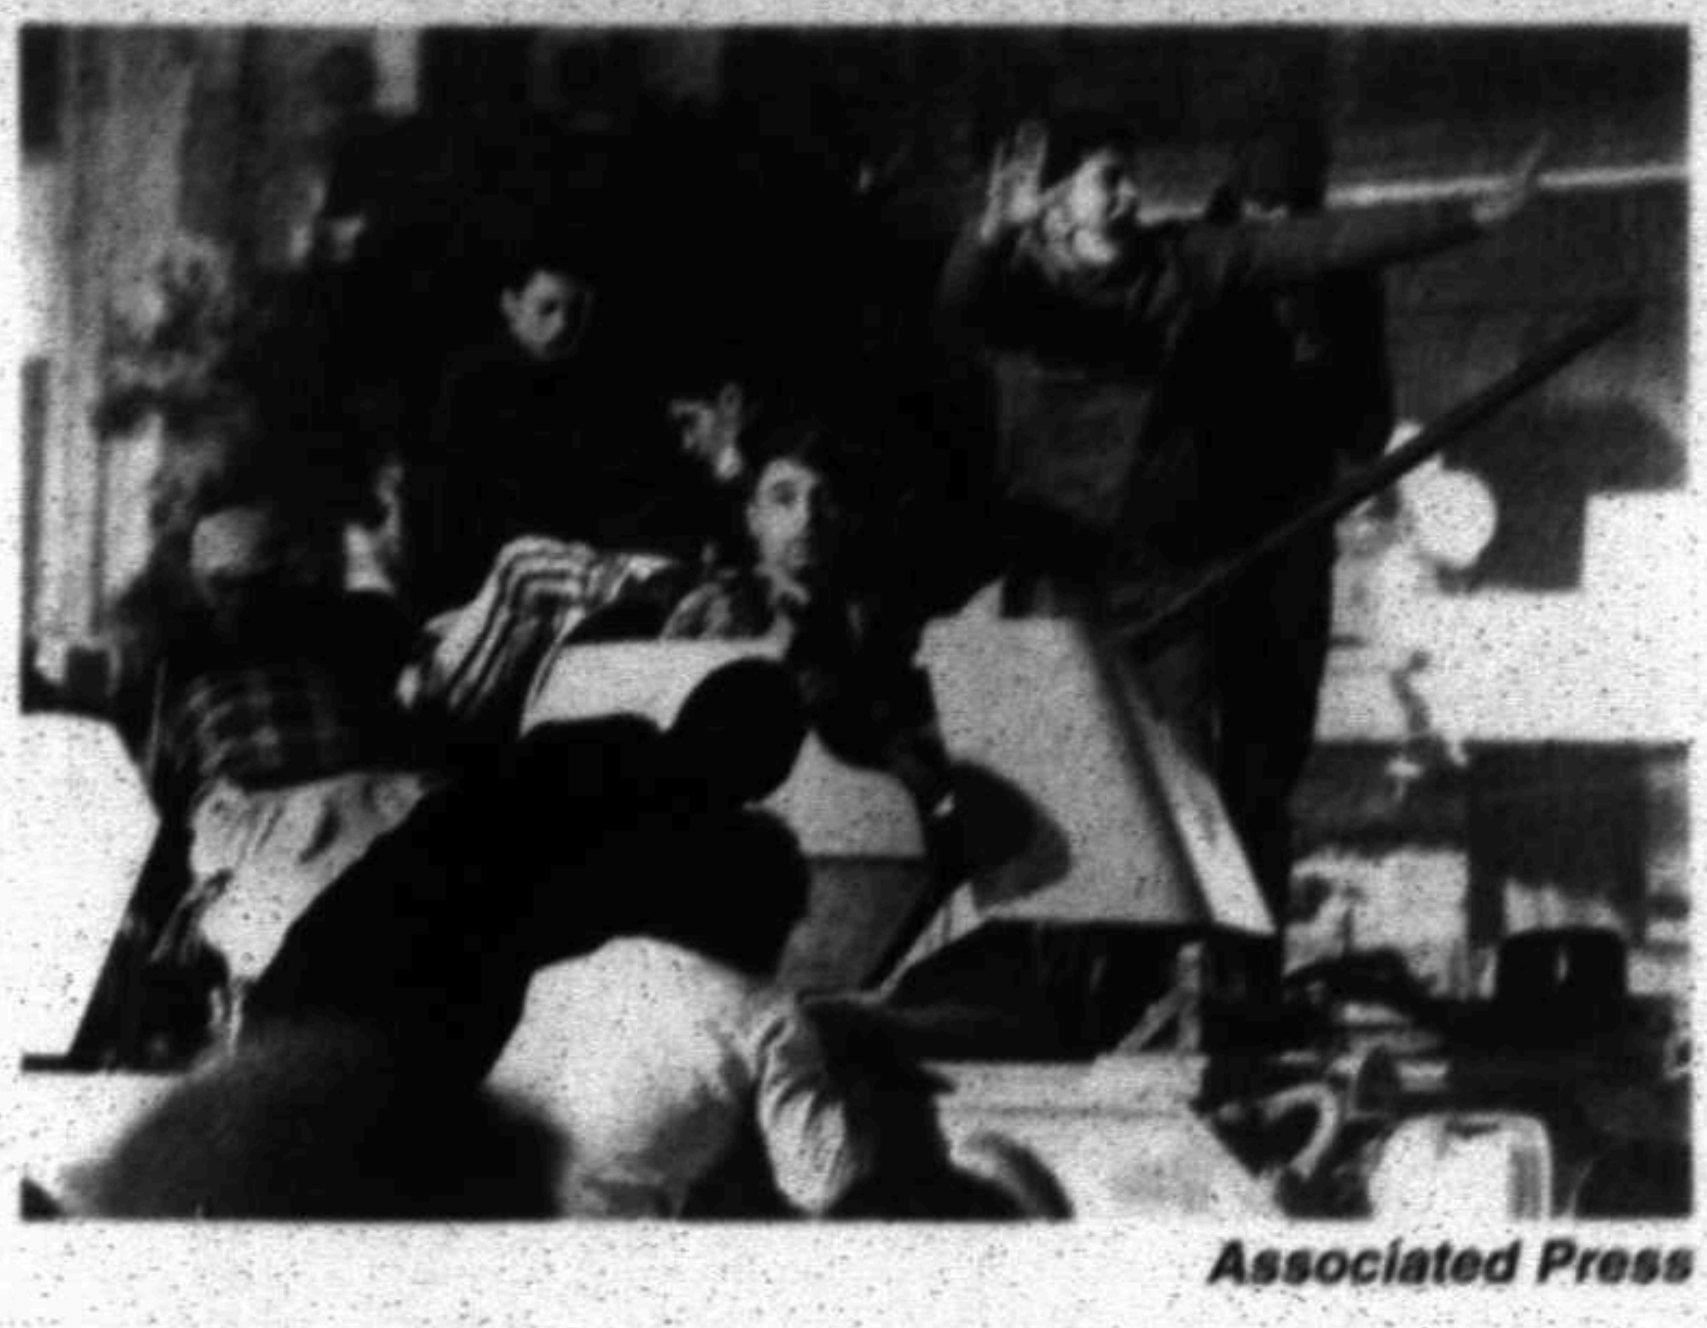
Egyptian government responds to protests

Associated Press



Associated Press

OUTRAGED An Egyptian army soldier riding in an armored personnel carrier is surrounded by anti-government protesters near Tahrir square in Cairo, Egypt, on Friday.

CAIRO — Egypt's embattled President Hosni Mubarak said early today that he had asked his Cabinet to resign, and promised reforms in his first response to protesters who have mounted the biggest challenge ever to his 30-year rule.

But Mubarak also defended the crackdown by police on tens of thousands of demonstrators that drew harsh criticism from the Obama administration Friday and even a threat to reduce a $1.5 billion program of foreign aid if Egypt escalated the use of force.

A somber-looking Mubarak called anti-government protests "part of a bigger plot to shake the stability and destroy legitimacy" of the political system.

The steps announced in a nationally televised speech fell short of protesters' demands for his ouster that have been a constant mantra during four straight days of demonstrations.

"Out, out, out!" protesters chanted Friday in violent, chaotic scenes of battles with riot police.

They also demand remedies to widespread poverty in this nation of 80 million.

"We aspire for more democracy, more effort to combat unemployment and poverty and combat corruption," he said.

But those words were likely to be interpreted as an attempt to cling to power rather than take concrete steps to solve some of the more pressing problems facing many Egyptians, primarily unemployment and rapidly rising food prices.

Mubarak also defended the security forces' crackdown on protesters, saying he had given them instructions that the protesters be allowed to express their views. But, he said, acts of violence and vandalism left the security forces with no choice but to react to restore order.

He spoke minutes after the end of a day of protesters running rampant on the streets of Cairo, battling police with stones and firebombs, burning down the ruling party headquarters, and defying a night curfew enforced by a military deployment.

He said this week's protests struck fear in the heart of the majority of Egyptians concerned about the future of their country.

"Violence will not solve the problems we face or realize the objectives we aspire to," he said. "I will not shy away from taking any decision that maintains the security of every Egyptian," he vowed.

The government's attempts to suppress demonstrations appeared to be swiftly eroding support from the U.S. — suddenly forced to choose between its most important Arab ally and a democratic uprising demanding his ouster.

Despite Mubarak's address, the protesters were sure to be emboldened by their success in bringing tens of thousands to the streets in defiance of a ban, a large police force, countless canisters of tear gas, and even a nighttime curfew enforced by the first military deployment of the crisis.

Flames rose in cities across Egypt as police cars burned and protesters set the ruling party headquarters in Cairo ablaze. Hundreds of young men tore televisions, fans and stereo equipment from other buildings of the National Democratic Party neighboring the Egyptian Museum, home of King Tutankhamun's treasures and one of the country's most popular tourist attractions.

Young men could be seen forming a human barricade in front of the museum to protect it.

Others around the city looted banks, smashed cars, tore down street signs and pelted armored riot police vehicles with paving stones torn from roadways.

SKYING FOR THE REBOUND Midland High's Ryan Evans (33) and Jamal Sanders (4) bring down a rebound Friday during the first half of their District 3-5A basketball game at the Odessa High Field House.

OHS hands MHS first district loss

By Shawn Shroyer
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Through the first seven games of District 3-5A, Odessa High was overshadowed by Midland High's flawless district record. On Tuesday, the Bronchos emerged from that shadow to hand the Bulldogs their first district defeat.

Odessa High made a six-point lead for Midland High in the third quarter vanish and rallied for a 44-37 victory at the OHS Fieldhouse. Just like that the Bronchos (14-11, 6-2) pulled within a game of the Bulldogs (16-10, 7-1) and improved to 2-1 against Midland High this season, including a win in the Tall City Oilman's Classic.

"It's been our goal all year to try to win district," Odessa High coach James Johnson said. "This was huge for us. If we lost we were going to need a lot of help, so we needed to do our part."

The Bronchos did their part on the defensive end, which allowed them to dominate the final 13 minutes of the game.

With a little over five minutes to play in the third quarter, Midland High's Kionne Lewis scored his second straight bucket to put the Bulldogs up, 26-20. From that point on, the Bronchos outscored the Bulldogs, 24-11, including an 11-0 run to end the third quarter.

In the meantime, Midland High couldn't buy a basket. For the game, the Bulldogs were 12 for 44 from the field.

"It wasn't our night," Midland High coach Justin Hardin said. "You're not going to make every shot every time, but they need to remember they have to shoot. You can't score if you don't shoot. We just had a day where they weren't hitting."

The Bulldogs' go-to scorers T.J. Brown and Mercedes Lane had the hardest time scoring against the Bronchos' 3-2 zone. Brown was 4 for 19 from the floor, including 1 for 8 from 3-point range while Lane was 2 for 10, including 2 for 9 from long distance.

IMPRESSIVE WIN

Despite missing McPherson, Rebels top Panthers

By Jonathan Hull
Sports Writer

Odessa Permian didn't look anything like a two-win team for the first quarter of Friday's game.

But the Panthers' strong play simply couldn't hold up. Lee didn't allow Permian to sink a single field goal in the second period, allowing the Rebels to go up big and never look back in a 65-57 victory at Chaparral Center.

Lee (11-13, 4-4 in District 3-5A) outscored Permian (2-15, 1-7) 16-1 in the frame with the Panthers' lone point coming from a single free throw by Shawn Pierce with 2:21 to play in the first half.

Lee was also playing without key scorer and rebounder Corey McPherson, who missed the game due to illness, making the Rebels' victory that much more impressive.

"We were trying to make up for Corey not being there the entire game," Lee guard Tray Collins said. "Everybody knew we had to step it up on defense

Lady Bulldogs cruise past Lady Bronchos

By Shawn Shroyer
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Winning district titles has become routine for the Midland High girls basketball team. So much so the Lady Bulldogs didn't even discuss the fact that their game with Odessa High on Tuesday was for a share of the District 3-5A championship.

Just as it has all district season, No. 21-ranked Midland High rolled to a routine 60-25 victory against Odessa High at the OHS Fieldhouse. Just like that, the Lady Bulldogs (26-4, 10-0) wrapped up at least a share of their third district title in four seasons. Having swept the season series with Odessa Permian, Midland High is assured the No. 1 seed out of 3-5A, but the Lady Bulldogs must wait at least one more game to claim the title outright.

Lady Bronchos....25

"That was one of our team goals they had going into the season," MHS coach T.C. Willis said of the championship. "I don't even think the players know, but I'm sure they'll be excited when they find out. We didn't even talk about it."

Lady Panthers sneak past Lady Rebels

By Jonathan Hull
Sports Writer

There's only one thing on the minds of the Lee girls basketball team right now. The Lady Rebels are determined to make the playoffs.

That determination showed on Friday as the Lady Rebels delivered possibly their best performance of the season.

Unfortunately, it wasn't enough. Odessa Permian rallied in the fourth period to sneak out of Chaparral Center with 57-52 victory against Lee.

Lady Panthers ..57
Lady Rebels.........52

"It took a little bit of everything for us to win," Permian coach Angela Braziel said. "Lee was active and full of energy. They got after it pretty good tonight. I give them credit because they played well."

Lee (9-17, 2-7 in District 3-5A) trailed by as many as eight points in the first half and never held a lead in the first two periods. However, the Lady Rebels were feisty enough to stay within striking distance, trailing 27-23 at halftime.

The close margin allowed Lee to finally pounce. After a bucket by Permian's Alex Comer in the first 30 seconds of the second half put the Lady Rebels down 29-23, they ran off a 10-0 run, giving them their first lead of the game.

Diana Welch initiated the rally with a 3-pointer from the left wing, and Kortni Edwards followed with a bucket in the paint. A Landry Johnson free throw tied the game at 29 at the 5:59 mark in the third period and a long 2-pointer by Cindy Benavides put Lee out in front for the first time, 31-29, with 5:29 left in the third.

Johnson capped the 10-0 run with a driving layup, giving the Lady Rebels their biggest lead of the game, 33-29, with 4:15 to play in the third.

Permian (18-9, 8-2) never allowed the Lady Rebels to get too far ahead, though, and Cheyenne Swoopes hit a jumper in the lane to pull the Lady Panthers within 40-39 in the final seconds of the third period.

"The drive is there to want to win. It's there all the time," Lee coach Rosalind Lawrence said. "We always talk about being in the game and we had the opportunity tonight."

The first four minutes of the fourth period saw the game back and forth with five lead changes. However, with 3:44 left to play, Permian's Italia Calderon picked up a key offensive board and got the putback and Tenesia Pointer followed with a baseline jumper, placing the Lady Panthers up 49-46.

HS SOCCER ROUNDUP

BOYS
MHS 1-0-1 AT TOURNEY

WICHITA FALLS — The Midland High boys soccer team played to a scoreless tie against Wichita Falls and then defeated Marble Falls 3-1 at the Wichita Falls Tournament on Friday.

MHS coach Warren Cottle said his Bulldogs (2-2-4) played well against the tournament host and then really turned it up against Mineral Wells for the victory.

Darius Knapp scored two goals for MHS in the fifth and 45th minute with assists coming from Hudson Diggins and Sammy Ibarra. Robert Gonzalez had the other goal at the 35th minute with an assist from Ibarra.

Mineral Wells got its only goal in the 51st minute.

The Bulldogs next play Amarillo Palo Duro at 8 a.m. today.

GIRLS
MHS BEATS PEARLAND

BRYAN — The Midland High girls soccer team bounced back from a loss on Thursday to beat Pearland 3-0 in the consolation round of the Brazos Valley Tournament.

The Lady Bulldogs (5-5-1) bounced back from a 1-0 loss to Friendswood in which MHS outplayed and outshot its opponent 10-3 but missed too many opportunities, MHS head coach Kent Rivas said.

Rivas said his team played much better and the Lady Bulldogs started to find the back of the net against Pearland.

Madison McAdams opened the scoring in the 36th minute off an assist by Madison Scribner. Megan Maynard scored an unassisted goal in the 48th minute, and then Savannah Ross closed out the scoring in the 70th minute with an assist from McAdams.

MHS next plays against Montgomery at 9 a.m. today.

LEE WINS TWO IN MANSFIELD

MANSFIELD — Tori Rackow scored two goals and Jamie Bush had three assists as the Lady Rebels won two games to advance to today's championship game of the Mansfield Summit Invitational.

Lee (5-0-5) began the day with a 2-1 victory against Mansfield Summit. Kendeal Stark and Rackow each scored in the game as Bush had assists on both goals.

Then in the second game of the day, Lee dominated San Angelo Lake View 2-0. Sammie Stewart and Rackow both scored in the game as Bush and Stewart each had assists.

Lee will likely take on Wichita Falls at noon today in the tournament's championship game.

LADY BULLDOGS

about prior to the game was the importance of rebounding.

Dreamika Merchant has been a force in the paint all season for Midland High and was again on Tuesday with a team-high eight boards. However, even some of the guards got into the mix as the Lady Bulldogs outrebounded the Lady Bronchos 42-25, thanks in part to starting guards Paris Webb and Krystal Valdez and reserve guard Skeesha Bowers.

"Paris Webb and Krystal Valdez rebounded incredibly well," Willis said. "We talked about the importance of rebounding heading into the playoffs. Something like that can be a determining factor."

Willis said he also emphasized being active on the defensive end and that was apparent as the Lady Bulldogs recorded 17 steals, including six from Kelsey Hoppel and four from Webb.

Those Odessa High turnovers turned into offense for Midland High with Hoppel tying Merchant for a game-high 15 points while Webb tacked on 14. In all, nine of Midland High's 11 players scored in the game.

With at least a share of the district championship in hand, now the Lady Bulldogs can move onto their remaining goals, beginning with Senior Night on Tuesday.

"It feels great to clinch at least part of a district championship," Hoppel said. "I'm proud of my team and I'm glad to be a part of this team."

going, can kill you," Johnson said. "Mercedes wore us out last time, so we wanted to keep Lane out of the lane. And Brown isn't going to miss a free throw, so we didn't want to let him drive on us and draw fouls."

While Midland High was able to cut Odessa High's lead to 38-37 with a little over two minutes to play, a play just moments earlier left the impression that it was simply the Bronchos' night.

A loose ball rattled around on Odessa High's end of the court and seemed to be touched by every player on the court. Amid the scrum, an Odessa High player came up with it and went up for a layup. The shot was too strong, but Joed Amoyaw went up, handled the ball with one hand and wrapped it over the lip of the rim and through for a masterful dunk to put Odessa High up 38-32.

Even in the first half, the Bronchos seemed to be a step ahead of the Bulldogs.

While the Bulldogs tried to work the ball around the Bronchos' zone, three times Odessa High's Darrian Samuels jumped the pass and took it the other way for a layup. Jakari Allen did it once, as well. Those turnovers proved costly in the end.

"They were really aggressive with it," said Hardin of Odessa High's zone. "They shot the gap four times in the first half and we gave it to them for eight points."

and scoring."

Lee trailed 17-14 after the first period, but opened the second with a 16-0 run that spanned over the better part of the quarter's first six minutes. Permian turned the ball over eight times during Lee's rally.

Devin Savage and Tray Collins did most of the damage in the frame with Savage scoring seven in the paint and Collins putting up seven more from the field, including two 3-pointers.

By the end of the run, Lee was up 30-17 with 2:27 to play in the first half. The Rebels didn't score another point in the half, but didn't need to, either.

"We switched our defenses up a lot in the second quarter," Lee coach Mark Coffman. "We didn't play strictly zone and they missed some open shots, too. We did better on the boards in that period than any other. We stopped the ball pretty well tonight."

Fortunately for the Rebels, they shot the ball extremely well as Permian outrebounded them 40-14. Lee was able to overcome the huge difference on the boards with efficient shooting, while also taking good care of the ball for long stretches at a time.

While McPherson's presence was obviously missed on the glass, Coffman felt he got very sufficient play from Adrian Horton defensively, while Horton also added eight points.

"We definitely missed Corey tonight," Coffman said, "but I was very pleased with the play we got from Adrian. They're different types of players, but Adrian was a good presence out there."

Collins led all scorers with 26 points, but had a complete game with eight rebounds, five steals and four assists. Savage chipped in 11.

With the win, Lee remains in the thick of the playoff race just a mere half game behind San Angelo Central for fourth place.

LADY REBELS

driving layup for Lee, cutting the score back to 49-48, but the Lady Panthers didn't trail again.

"All you can ask for is an opportunity," Lawrence said. "We had the opportunities to win, but we couldn't close. We fought the entire time. We just didn't capitalize when we needed to."

Permian was led by Swoopes, who had 12 points, six steals, four assists and three rebounds.

Lee got a double-double from Alex Ramos, who had 12 points and 12 rebounds, while Johnson had 11 points.

The loss was a big missed opportunity for Lee to move into a tie with San Angelo Central for fourth place in the district. With Midland High, Permian and Abilene High having clinched playoff spots, only one postseason berth remains.

"Considering they're second in our district, we're going to take a lot of confidence away from this game and use it going forward," Johnson said. "We can take the confidence from this game, build on it next game and go 3-0 and make the playoffs."

Rush stops Jacks with late goal

- Odessa and Rapid City combined for 7 power-play goals.

From staff reports

ODESSA — Rapid City and Odessa combined for seven power-play goals on Friday, but it was an even strength goal by the Rush midway through the third period that was the difference in a 6-5 victory for Rapid City.

By the end of the second period the two teams had combined for eight goals with the score tied at 4. Early in the final period, though, Odessa opened up a 5-4 lead when Philippe Plante scored on a power play off assists from Sebastien Thinel and Mike Lesperance.

Unfortunately for the Jacks (19-16-5), though, that was their final score of the game.

Rapid City tied the game with less than 12 minutes remaining when Konrad Reeder scored the Rush's fourth power-play goal of the game to knot the score at 5.

Four minutes later, Rapid City's Les Reaney scored the game winner off assists from Colt King and Dave Grimson. The Rush improved to 22-17-4 this season and remained tied for first place in the Turner Conference.

Mike Lesperance scored two goals for the Jacks as Alex Dunn and Dominic Leveille also scored for Odessa. Jacks goaltender Michel Robinson stopped 33 of 39 shots.

The two teams will complete a two-game series at 7:05 p.m. today at the Ector County Coliseum.

Murray in Australian Open final against Djokovic

By John Pye
Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Andy Murray doesn't have to worry about Roger Federer or Rafael Nadal this time. He is hardly in the clear, however, as he goes for his first major title.

Murray won his Australian Open semifinal, defeating David Ferrer 4-6, 7-6 (2), 6-1, 7-6 (2). Next in line is 2008 champion and longtime friend Novak Djokovic in Sunday's final.

There is also, of course, there's that long, long British drought. Fred Perry was the last British man to win a one of the four majors — way back in 1936. More than 270 Grand Slam tournaments have been contested in almost 75 years since Perry's victory, when Britain had a King and an empire.

"First of all, it's more like a personal dream or a personal goal of mine," Murray said. "The historical thing, it's not something that I've thought about that much, but it's something that obviously for me personally I want to try and win. But I also don't want to get myself so amped up that I play a stinker of a match."

Hurricanes G Ward goes No. 1 in NHL All-Star draft

By Ira Podell
Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — Nicklas Lidstrom's first pick in the inaugural NHL All-Star fantasy draft was his only bad one — choosing the wrong side of a flipped puck with the No. 1 selection on the line.

Eric Staal of the host Carolina Hurricanes quickly picked goalie Cam Ward — his teammate — first overall for Team Staal.

"I was the best player available, I guess," Ward quipped. "Yeah, I was surprised. He wouldn't tell me. He wouldn't lay down his cards, at all. Obviously, I knew I had a better chance to have him choose me early because he is a good friend and teammate. But I didn't know if he really actually wanted me to sweat it out."

The rest of the rosters for Sunday's All-Star game — and Saturday night's skills competition — were filled out as 36 players were chosen in the unique draft in which there was really no way to pick a bust.

"I've watched past All-Star games, and it's not exactly goalie-friendly," Ward said. "It's how you approach it that matters. I'm here to celebrate and be proud of being All-Star and have fun. I'm not going to get too choked up if I get scored on five times or something like that.

"I've got to do something right because I'm the number one overall pick. I guess I've got to be lights out."

Staal was more matter of fact in explaining his decision to go with Ward.

"He is a tremendous goalie, and I won a Stanley Cup with him," Staal said of the 2006 champion Hurricanes.

Locker, Texans headline Senior Bowl

By John Zenor
Associated Press

MOBILE, Ala. — Jake Locker could easily have skipped the Senior Bowl, just as he might have bypassed being a senior altogether.

The former Washington Huskies star is among the candidates to be the first quarterback selected in the NFL draft after an up-and-down senior season. Instead of weighing the risk-reward of a top-tier passer competing in an all-star game with scouts, coaches and team executives scrutinizing your every pass and move, Locker thought it was a no-brainer to play in Saturday's game for senior NFL prospects.

"I just love playing football," Locker said. "It's an awesome game, and just the opportunity to come play against the best college players. It's an awesome opportunity."

Regarded as a potential No. 1 overall pick after his junior season, Locker now is vying with underclassmen Cam Newton, Blaine Gabbert and Ryan Mallett to get the nod as the top quarterback taken in April.

He has spent this week competing with fellow seniors who boast impressive resumes if not quite the lofty draft stock. The other two North team quarterbacks are Nevada's Colin Kaepernick and Iowa's Ricky Stanzi.

The South is led by three Texans who faced each other in high school. Alabama's Greg McElroy and TCU's Andy Dalton both have led their teams to perfect seasons. Florida State's Christian Ponder ranks among the Seminoles' top five career leaders in passing yards, completions, total offense and completion percentage.

Other top prospects participating include Texas A&M linebacker Von Miller, Colorado offensive tackle Nate Solder and defensive ends Ryan Kerrigan (Purdue) and Cameron Jordan (California).

Locker at least put a nice punctuation to his final season. He led Washington — which had to win its final three regular-season games to become bowl eligible — to a Holiday Bowl upset over No. 17 Nebraska.

"That meant the world to me. That's why I came back," said Locker, who ran for 83 yards and a touchdown in the finale. "I made a commitment to that school and I wanted to honor that commitment. I had a great experience when I was at Washington. I wouldn't trade it for anything. I'm just happy that our football team was able to go out the way we did."

Haas takes the lead, Tiger rallies to get 5 back

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — A strong finish by Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson made them feel better about their rounds Friday on opposite ends of Torrey Pines, and better about their chances of catching Bill Haas.

Haas, slowly turning into the player everyone thought he would be, made eight birdies on the South Course for a 6-under 66, giving him a two-shot lead over Anthony Kim going into the weekend at the Farmers Insurance Open.

"A nice 36 (holes) on the weekend could turn this into a great week," Haas said.

It's shaping up to be quite a show.

Mickelson, with his wife mingling in the gallery this week for the first time since she was diagnosed with breast cancer in May 2009, turned an ordinary round into a decent one with back-to-back birdies for a 3-under 69 on the North Course. He was three shots behind along with defending champion Ben Crane, four of Mickelson's Ryder Cup teammates, and John Daly.

SPRING BREAK

Your beach awaits: Plan now for spring break

By Helen Anders

AUSTIN — This time of year, Texas beaches are populated primarily by gulls, gulls, gulls along with a flock of Winter Texans, better known in some quarters as snowbirds.

But in March, that scene makes a dramatic shift as thousands of families and vacationing students storm the beaches. The week of March 14 is especially intense, because that's when most Texas colleges and school districts are on spring break.

Now's the time to start thinking about where you want to go. A quick check shows most beach hotels are trying to book rooms for between $130 and $230. If traffic won't support that, rates will drop, so I'd suggest you look for something on the low end or wait a while to choose your room.

Remember that in addition to hotels, there are numerous condos. It's important to ask about fees up front. Cleaning fees are normal, but I've also seen booking fees and homeowners association fees, both just ways of making you pay more without giving you anything extra. Read everything carefully and ask questions.

Compare rental agency prices against those on sites such as homeaway.com, where you can sometimes deal directly with an owner and avoid some fees.

Here's an update on what you'll find this spring break at the biggest three Texas beach areas:

South Padre: Where catching a wave is easier than you think

By Jennifer Hiller
San Antonio Express-News

Early on a summer morning at Isla Blanca Park on South Padre Island, pelicans glide across the water, shrimp boats journey into the Gulf of Mexico and a few fishermen set up on the rock jetty.

So far, the only person in the chilly water is a 9-year-old who has Texas' best surfing wave all to himself.

He catches ride after ride — alone, graceful and likely unaware of how good he has it.

The prettiest stretch of beach in Texas, also known for having the best waves, is amazingly quiet and bare during the time of day surfers call Dawn Patrol, when the onshore winds haven't yet picked up, the water is calm and the waves are clean.

"It's always like this," said Rachel Gore, the mother of the 9-year-old, and a surf instructor. "A lot of times it's just us in the water, and we're looking for people to surf with. It's by far the best wave in Texas, and it's never crowded."

THINGS TO DO The monument at Dealey Plaza, nearby the site where President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in 1963, is seen Jan. 5 in Dallas. The temperature might be 75 during the first Super Bowl week in Dallas-Fort Worth. It could be 25. Or both. So while Super Bowl travelers are packing everything from T-shirts to overcoats, they'll have plenty of indoor and outdoor options for their itineraries, from shopping at Neiman Marcus to visiting the JFK assassination site to touring the stadium in Arlington where the big game will be played.

JFK site, Neiman Marcus await Super Bowl fans

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

DALLAS — The temperature might be 75 during the first Super Bowl week in Dallas-Fort Worth. It could be 25. Or both.

So while Super Bowl travelers are packing everything from T-shirts to wool overcoats for the area's fickle winter weather, they'll have plenty of indoor/outdoor options for their itineraries. The game takes place Feb. 6 at Cowboys Stadium in Arlington.

High on the list for first-time visitors to the area is the site of John F. Kennedy's assassination in downtown Dallas. Strolling around the grass on both sides of Elm Street, where Kennedy was shot Nov. 22, 1963, is free. There's a good chance a conspiracy theorist can point out the infamous "grassy knoll," the spot from which some witnesses say they saw gunfire.

An admission fee will get you in to the Sixth Floor Museum at Dealey Plaza, inside the building known as the Texas School Book Depository, where Lee Harvey Oswald set up his perch at a corner window.

International visitors love the Southfork Ranch and the white-column home that came to symbolize the runaway TV hit "Dallas" in the 1980s. Sure enough, at least two Super Bowl parties are planned for the site in Parker, about 25 miles north of downtown.

Those who have only seen longhorn cattle on TV can watch the real thing stroll down the red bricks on Exchange Avenue at the Fort Worth Stockyards near downtown in the "city of cowboys and culture," as officials like to call it. Yes, the twice-daily "cattle drive" operates even when it's freezing. But if you'd rather stay warm, Billy Bob's is a couple of blocks over and calls itself the world's biggest honky tonk. For a buck during the day, check out the glittering disco saddle (not ball) over the dance floor and the cement squares that feature the hand prints of the late Johnny Cash and other music — mostly country — stars.

For visitors who neglect to pack a coat and need one, Phillip Jones, CEO of the Dallas Convention and Visitors Bureau, said, "I'm sure they can find something at Neiman's or any of our shopping venues."

Aah, shopping. Arguably the No. 1 indoor sport in Dallas. Jones refers to the upscale retail store Neiman Marcus, which originated downtown and is now one of the centerpieces of the swanky NorthPark Center. Among those spotted browsing there recently was AL MVP Josh Hamilton of the Texas Rangers.

Dallas ended up using the NBA's all-star weekend a year ago as a test run for the Super Bowl. Crowds jammed the Galleria mall in north Dallas the day before 108,713 people, the most ever to watch a basketball game, took in the all-star game at Cowboys Stadium.

The $1.3 billion home of the Dallas Cowboys with the retractable roof is in Arlington, but February is the offseason for tourism in the city halfway between Dallas and Fort Worth. One of the area's best-known attractions is Six Flags over Texas, but its 50th anniversary season doesn't start until a month after the Super Bowl.

Still, the stadium is an attraction in its own right. It has surprised officials with its ability to draw visitors for tours, on the order of 40,000 people in some months, said Jay Burress of the Arlington Convention and Visitors Bureau. The NFL is planning Super Bowl tours at $40 a pop. Space is limited, so reservations are recommended.

Burress said fans typically take stadium tours the day before Cowboys or college football games, and he expects Super Bowl visitors to do the same. The stadium "promised to be for more than just football games, and it has definitely delivered with other events and tours that are year-round drivers," Burress said.

Some of the other highlights in the Dallas-Fort Worth area:

■ FAIR PARK: Out-of-town football fans probably recognize the name because of the annual Texas-Oklahoma football game at the Cotton Bowl. But Fair Parkers like to remind people that the area just east of downtown Dallas is a National Historic Landmark with the world's largest collection of 1930s Art Deco exposition buildings. Gene Simmons and Shannon Tweed are planning a Super Bowl party at Fair Park. The Cotton Bowl will have entertainment for three consecutive nights, culminating on the eve of the Super Bowl. A Tom Landry exhibit that chronicles the career of the Cowboys' Super Bowl-winning coach has been on display at Fair Park since the fall.

■ THE ARTS: Plenty of money has gone into expansion of the Dallas and Fort Worth arts districts in recent years. The Dallas Museum of Art and Nasher Sculpture Center are two highlights of the area on the north end of downtown. The latest addition is the Bill Winspear Opera House, fronted by 60-foot glass walls that offer views of the lobby. Fort Worth has everything from prominent art to the rodeo, which always opens in January and gets the rare boost of Super Bowl week falling on its final week. The city landed a coup when ESPN decided to put its show at Sundance Square downtown, not far from the Bass Performance Hall, which hosts the biennial Van Cliburn international piano competition.

■ NFL EXPERIENCE: The annual Super Bowl showcase of interactive games for fans will be held Jan. 27-30 and Feb. 2-6 at the Dallas Convention Center. The cost is $25 for adults and $20 for children 12 and under. Kids 2 and under get in free.

■ DEEP ELLUM: This eclectic collection of bars and restaurants just east of downtown Dallas is the heart of the city's music scene and figures to be a major gathering point throughout Super Bowl week.

■ DID WE MENTION SHOPPING? Of course we did, but there's more. Grapevine Mills mall, just north of Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, is a gigantic circle of shopping popular with tourists. It's not far from Main Street in Grapevine, a collection of shops and restaurants with an old-town feel.

BEACHES

From 1C

Ike did a number on the downtown area, where many businesses didn't have insurance. But more than two years later, it's thriving once again. The restaurant getting the most buzz right now is Black Pearl Oyster Bar & Grille at Post Office and 23rd streets.

The beaches look good, especially the refurbished beach along the Sea Wall. The 61st Street Pier, which collapsed during the hurricane, reopened in August, bigger and better than ever.

Driving is nice and smooth on Sea Wall Boulevard and Broadway now that both state-owned roads have been repaved. But watch out for the drop off onto city streets, many of which are still full of cracks and potholes.

The big hotel news is that the over-the-water Flagship Hotel, which had sat since 2008 with a gaping hole in it, should be entirely down by March. The pier is owned by the Landry's empire, and the plan is to put an amusement park on it like the one on Santa Monica Pier in California.

Hotel Galvez (2024 Seawall Blvd.) is celebrating its 100th birthday and probably will have some concerts and other special events. Keep tabs on it at galveston.com/galvez/.

"Dora and Diego" will be showing at the 4D theater at Moody Gardens (1 Hope Blvd., moodygardens.com), which also has a spectacular aquarium and other attractions. Next door, you can now book a ride in the open cockpit of a vintage plane such as a B-52 bomber at the Lone Star Flight Museum (2002 Terminal Drive, lsfm.org).

Schlitterbahn (2026 Lockheed Road, schlitterbahn.com), which is open year round in Galveston because it has a roof, will have a new ride this year but won't tell us what it is.

More information and a good hotel-booking page are at galveston.com.

South Padre Island

The biggest difference between the South Padre Island spring break experience now and five years ago is that Mexico is now out of the equation. The trips to Matamoros that once lured students are now dangerous because of drug violence. Don't even think about doing that.

Spring break now takes place entirely on the island, which is 30 miles north of the border and has not been affected by border problems. The biggest security difference you'll notice is an increased presence of state troopers and immigration officers on the way down. So don't speed.

The recession did hurt some island businesses. Club Pelican West, unquestionably the most city-like club on the island, is closed. So are some restaurants, including the one (it was there so briefly that I can't remember its name) that moved into Denny's, which remains vacant.

But there are good, new places to try, including the mid-priced Cafe Kranzler (2412 Padre Blvd.), which has an ambitious global menu, and the more upscale Wild Fork Italian Bistro (3305 Padre Blvd.).

For basic (mostly fried) seafood, Blackbeard's, which has a lot of new, cheap lunch specials, feeds crowds well at 103 E. Saturn Lane (at Padre Boulevard). McDonald's has been torn down, and a new McDonald's is on the rise at 840 Padre Blvd.

The new hotel is the Hilton Garden Inn (hiltongardeninn.hilton.com), and it also has the best spring break prices right now, starting at $87.20.

At Coca-Cola Beach, where a stage and other activities are set up on the sand behind Isla Grand Hotel (500 Padre Blvd.), students bury kegs in the sand and make a day of it. (Yes, there are plenty of portable potties.) The stage will be up March 6-23.

There's a new parking rule. The mid-island residential area is off limits to everybody but residents. There are "parking by permit only" signs, but they're easy to miss if the area's crowded. All hotels are within walking distance of the beach, but if your hotel's far from Coca-Cola Beach and you're aiming to park near it, stick to Gulf Boulevard.

Inertia Tours provides room-and-meals packages at a number of hotels. The price varies depending on how many people you want to share a room with. Check it out at intertiatours.com.

South Padre's big lure is its expansive beach, and most breakers go there to hang out on the beach, unwind, eat and enjoy the odd margarita or vat of beer. But there are activities if you have a family, including horseback riding, wind surfing, riding a big banana-shaped boat, birding or taking a dolphin watch cruise or dinner cruise on the Laguna Madre (the bay). More at springbreak.sopadre.com.

Corpus Christi area

The Corpus Christi area comprises several distinct destinations: There's Corpus itself, which offers a variety of accommodations — including upscale hotels — along with lots of good restaurants. Over the bridge across Aransas Bay, there's Mustang Island. The north end of it is Port Aransas, where you'll find a funkier experience with motels, seafood spots and a beach you can drive on.

On the south end, Mustang Island State Park offers a pristine beach. Farther south is the North Padre Island area and a long stretch of pristine beach at Padre Island National Seashore, beyond the hotels.

The news from Corpus Christi proper: Omni Bayfront Hotel (900 N. Shoreline Blvd., omnihotels.com) and Holiday Inn Emerald Beach (1102 S. Shoreline Drive, holidayinn.com) are both undergoing renovations and should be in top form for spring break. Both are just a few minutes' drive away from two big attractions, the Texas State Aquarium (texasstateaquarium.org) and USS Lexington (usslexington.com).

In the Corpus Christi marina, Harrison's Landing, formerly known as the Yachting Center, has a new restaurant called Tavern on the Bay. At the landing, you can rent a kayak or arrange a boat ride.

On North Padre Island, Bob Hall Pier (bobhallpier.net, 15820 South Padre Island Drive) and its Ozone Bar and Grill are being expanded to the tune of nearly half a million dollars. A pavilion is being added to the north side and should be ready by spring break. You can rent horses on the beach there.

I'm told more activities specifically for spring break at both Corpus Christi and Port Aransas will be announced later. Track them at thecoastalwave.com.

SURF

From 1C

Perhaps this shouldn't be a shock. This is, after all, the southernmost point of the southernmost beach in Texas, and getting here is no quick day trip for most Texans.

But having surfed other spots in Texas and elsewhere on and off for a dozen years, I expected a swarm of surfers. Or at least a handful of kids testing conditions in advance of the Texas surfing championships, which were starting in two days.

Instead, the morning beachcombers mostly include those arriving for lessons from Gore and her husband, Gene Gore, the unofficial surfing ambassadors for the island and full-time, year-round surf instructors.

The Gores provide students with surfboards and a wealth of experience. They're former lifeguards who met in Galveston, and both have surfed around the world in waves of the size that most sane people wouldn't attempt. Their surfing résumés could fill a longboard.

At their South Padre Surf Co., they rent boards and teach everyone from preschoolers to retirees to catch waves.

Their own children rode surfboards before they were a year old, balanced between Rachel's knees. So the Gores don't have an age requirement for lessons. All are welcome. On this day, their youngest student is 3.

"I tell people if they are comfortable and their kids are comfortable, we'll be fine," Rachel said.

Kids at heart are welcome too — especially those who always wanted to surf but never had the chance. The Gores taught a 74-year-old recently at the jetties at Mansfield Pass.

"He caught wave after wave after wave. I couldn't believe it," Gene Gore said. "He was in fantastic shape."

To start the lesson, students lie down on surfboards that are lined up in the sand. They hear the basics of surfing technique.

"Paddle, paddle, paddle, paddle, paddle," Rachel enthuses to the group of students, while Gene readjusts the kids correctly on their boards, tugging at their ankles to pull them into the correct position further back on the boards so the nose won't dip into the water when they catch a wave.

Everyone paddles for a bit, and when Rachel shouts, "Pop up," they do, and pretend surf on the sand.

Soon, everyone heads into the water, toting surfboards that are strapped to their ankles by a long leash, and followed by Rachel and Gene, who give helpful shoves to get people up on their waves and take pictures.

Everyone catches waves, including the 3-year-old.

The continental shelf drops off faster near the tip of Texas — or so surfers always say — so the waves break cleaner and bigger the farther south you travel.

But the waves at the first sandbar at Isla Blanca Park are small enough for surf lessons. If you paddle out farther, they're large enough to keep older kids or experienced surfers content.

I spend a happy couple of hours in the cool water, and when I catch my last wave in, my arms feel like lead — a reminder I need to leave the city and get in the water more often.

My family and I while away happy hours bumming on the beach before deciding to try a kind of surfing new to us — stand-up paddle boarding — where you stand on an enormous and sturdy surfboard and use a paddle to move through the water.

Karen Pfeiffer of On the Beach Surfsports takes us to a bayside area called North Flats for a SUP lesson.

"It's been a windsurfing place forever," she said. "Now we have a lot of kiteboarders."

No one is out this afternoon, though. The water is perfectly clear and between 1 and 2 feet deep. Pfeiffer tells us how to stand and paddle, with feet shoulder-width apart and knees slightly bent for balance.

Stand-up paddling has become something of a craze everywhere from Lake Michigan to Lady Bird Lake in Austin. And it is quickly clear why that is.

It's easy.

Soon we are laughing and gliding across the water on our 10-foot boards. The feel is similar to an ocean kayak, but with a better view.

Pfeiffer said kids can sit or stand on the boards with their parents, making it an any-age sport. You just have to pay attention to where you are and not venture into deeper waters (she had one person panic in this instance and abandon the board — never a smart idea).

More experienced paddlers can use narrower SUP boards and catch waves.

Thrilled with all the island's surfing experiences, we head out for a last adventure — and one that requires zero physical effort.

We take a two-hour dolphin watch/eco tour in the Laguna Madre and watch pelicans and dolphins zip past our boat. On the way back into the marina, employees pull up cowfish, squid, blue crab, lizardfish, flounder, shrimp and sea urchin — showing them to the crowd of kids gathered around them.

Our baby gets to touch a starfish for the first time.

During our beach trip, he also splashed in the surf and tried — many times — to eat sand and seashells. I wasn't brave enough to plop him between my knees and surf with him, but when the time comes, I'll let the Gores teach him to ride his first wave. Or he can sit on a paddle board and dangle his legs in the water.

Like all beach vacations, the most bittersweet time is leaving and dreaming about the next time.

TODAY	SUNDAY	MONDAY
Mostly sunny high 72 low 30	Sunny high 66 low 33	Partly cloudy high 66 low 32

LOCAL FORECAST

Expect mostly sunny skies today with a high around 72 and southwest winds between 5 and 15 mph. Tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy conditions with a low around 30 and west winds around 10 mph.

Sunday, look for sunny skies with a high around 66, a low around 33 and west winds between 5 and 10 mph becoming calm.

Monday, look for partly cloudy skies with a high around 66 and a low around 32.

The high on Friday reached 67 while the low dropped to 28. The record high for Jan. 28 is 79 set in 1950, 1987 and 2002. The record low is 10 set in 1948.

A strong fast-moving low-pressure storm will move southeastward from the Great Lakes to produce a swath of light to moderate snow over much of the Northeast today.

A new wave of cold air and flurries will follow the storm over the Midwest today and settle into the Northeast tonight and Sunday.

In the South, sunshine and relatively comfortable conditions are in store with high pressure in control.

Farther west, high pressure, sunshine and mild weather is in store for much of the Four Corners.

Casual modern dress inspires old-fashioned

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: American society has become ultra-casual in dress and manners. When I look at old photographs, men and women used to dress better and seemed to take more pride in their appearance. Now they wear pajamas to shop, torn jeans to work and clothes that are too small for large bodies. I feel we are a nation of slobs.

Are we doomed to be this way in the future? I work in an office of slobs and everyone knows I dislike the "casual atmosphere," so please don't print my name. — DRESSED FOR SUCCESS IN ALBUQUERQUE

DEAR DRESSED FOR SUCCESS: You are correct. People did dress differently in the 1950s, which took time, effort and money. Things started changing in the '60s — when the next generation became the demographic that was being marketed to. After that, younger people began adopting the "grunge chic" they were seeing in music videos.

Are we doomed to be this way forever? I think so, unless there's a reactionary fashion revolution. Frankly, I don't see it happening anytime soon.

But before labeling your co-workers as slobs, please remember that they were hired looking the way they do, and if your employer didn't approve of their appearance, there would be a dress code that is strictly enforced.

DEAR ABBY: Tonight I came home to find three messages on my phone. One was from a doctor's office; the other two were business calls. Each one asked me to call back. The callers spoke plainly — until they came to the phone number, which they rattled off so fast I had to replay the messages several times just to be able to write the numbers down.

What's the matter with people? This happens all the time at work and at home.

Callers, PLEASE slow down and speak clearly — as if you are picturing someone actually writing down your number. Abby, am I getting old, or what? — SAY WHA —? ORANGE, CALIF.

DEAR SAY WHA —?: What you're experiencing usually happens when the caller is in a hurry or calling a list of people they're trying to get through. In a social context, it is inconsiderate. In a business context, it is unprofessional.

People in the financial field are trained to repeat their phone numbers slowly, clearly and TWICE to prevent the problem you have described. And readers, if you are guilty of this, please slow down and take note.

DEAR ABBY: I have four adult children. I was diagnosed with lung cancer three years ago, but it was detected early and my prognosis is excellent. They keep making comments about their "inheritance." An example: "Take care of that painting — it's my inheritance." Dealing with the cancer is stressful, but their comments make me feel terrible. What can I say to shut them up? — NOT GOING ANYWHERE YET

DEAR NOT GOING ANYWHERE YET: Allow me to offer a few suggestions: 1. "Stop hanging crepe because I'm not dying"; 2. "Don't count your chickens before they're hatched"; and 3. "I will, because I've decided to donate it to a museum."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 29, 2011:

This year, success comes to you, but often your normal approach will be thwarted. You could be delighted by the role friends and associates play in your life. They clearly want you to obtain a goal and support you in any way that feels appropriate. If you are single, a friendship could develop into more. The other possibility is that you could meet someone through a friend. If you are attached, think of your sweetie as a friend, too. That bonding will support you in difficult times. SAGITTARIUS adores spending time with you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ An invitation is too appealing to say "no" to. Though a friend or roommate might want to be left out, go with your sense of adventure. You will particularly enjoy a new activity or place. Relax with the moment. Tonight: Be imaginative and original.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ Remain easygoing in the face of change and perhaps feeling a bit tired. You might not want to keep your plans, but do so for yourself. Someone close loves having you all to him- or herself. You might be happier with spontaneity. Tonight: Dinner for two.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Go along with plans. Enjoy being the passenger and not having to make every decision. The person in question is trying to speak through his or her actions. This person's caring is quite apparent. Meet new people; join friends. Tonight: Stay out of a competition.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Whether painting a room or reading a good book, you are comfortable following through on a task. Once it's complete, you will feel great. Invite several friends over midafternoon. Your love of entertaining and people mix well. Tonight: Make it easy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ You might not want to let your hair down, but you will. Others certainly support you in relaxing and having fun. No one is surprised to hear that you are tired. You have pushed and pushed. Give yourself permission to veg or do your thing. Tonight: A partner or friend is on the warpath.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ Consider repainting or remodeling before you decide to move. You might want more space. Clearing out clutter could help. Others willingly pitch in, if that is OK with you. Note that not everything will be put away perfectly, but the feel will be great. Tonight: Order in, especially as you could have company and still have a mess.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Your ability to laugh and loosen up others falls flat. You might take others' odd reactions personally, but actually their minds are on other matters. You have been a little serious of late. Find a friend, child or loved one who makes you smile. Tonight: You don't have to go far.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Be aware of your tendency to go overboard and create a lot of problems for yourself later. Still, you might be in the mood to overindulge. Whether spending, eating or imbibing, you simply perk up and have a good time. Tonight: Finally tell someone how you feel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ A friend could be dragging his or her heels, creating a question in your mind. This person's intentions will become clear without you having to ask any questions. An innate glow attracts many people. Don't wonder why people are gravitating toward you. Tonight: Wish-upon-a-star time!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You might want some downtime. A parent, boss or another type of authority figure comes down very hard on you. Remember, you don't always need to be available. Meet a special person in your life for the day. Go alone — you could meet someone intriguing. Tonight: Still not to be found.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ You could be a little taken aback by news and feel sad. Hook up with a friend who you always have a good time with. A new friend made today could change your life considerably. This relationship could develop into a long-term tie. Tonight: You are the party.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Stay sensitive to a somewhat depressed partner. You might wonder what is happening with an older friend or relative if you look at his or her demeanor. Learn more effective ways of expressing your anger. Tonight: Out and about.

Lovely Country Estate

With four bedrooms, two full and two ½ bathrooms, six car garage and fifty foot front porch! This home was built in 1950, then enlarged and renovated in 2001. Immense greatroom has beautifully stained concrete flooring, a cozy brick fireplace, and custom speaker system with media closet! Off of the greatroom is a screened in porch that has a view of the backyard with basketball goal encompassed by a six ft. metal privacy fence. Living area and downstairs bedrooms have gorgeous hardwood flooring and the entire second floor has plush carpeting. Master bedroom is sequestered and has two large walk in closets with built-in drawers and shelving. Master bathroom features a jetted tub and separate walk in shower. Spacious kitchen with embossed copper backsplash, glass display cabinets, and two pantries with owned R/O system. This home also offers a 30 x 70 workshop (4 car garage) built in 2003 with RV hookups, overhead doors, washer/dryer connections, and ½ bath. This country home is situated on 1.8 Acres in Gardendale water district with water well for yard.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
I've always been last. It's been the story of my life. I've always been tall for my age so when they lined us up in school, I was last in the line. In gym class I had no coordination so I was the last one picked. Now that I'm grown up, it's no different. I call to get concert tickets and they're all sold out...even when I know the band members! The same is true when I call a classified ad for something I want. It's always gone or someone else is already planning to come look. How does a guy like me get to the front of the line?

Carry: I'm only guessing from your comments that your last name started with a "Z". That would put you at the back of the class for sure.

Cash: Although when it comes to the classifieds, the early bird catches the worm. In order to get the best deals, you need to be out front. And despite what you might be thinking, it is not that difficult to do.

Carry: If the items are already gone by the time you respond to the ad, then you're not responding early enough. Consider buying a subscription to your newspaper and read it first thing in the morning.

Cash: And turn to the classified section first. If you see something of interest, call right away. Don't wait. If the seller's not home, leave a message with a phone number where you can be reached during the day and evening. A seller does not want to return your call only to get your voice mail.

Carry: When they call you back, you need to be willing to visit at the seller's first opportunity, even if it means getting up early before work or visiting during your dinner hour. The more flexible you are, the better your chances.

Cash: If you leave a message and the seller doesn't return your call, call them again. Sometimes it's just in the timing. If you're the first to call when they walk through the door and you offer to show up right away, the seller may not even return the messages on their answer machine.

Carry: Also, a quick sale is always a motivating factor. Be sure to let the seller know that you can come look right away and you're willing to take the item home with you.

Cash: As for being first to get those concert tickets, maybe you should consider buying a CD instead.

Proverbs Returned

For those of you who are not early risers and never subscribed to the phrase, "The early bird catches the worm", here are a few thoughts to make you feel better about sleeping in:

> "The early bird may catch the worm, but that means the early worm gets caught!"

or if you prefer...

> "The early bird may catch the worm, but it's usually the second mouse that gets the cheese!"

Try, Try Again

In the world of classified shopping, timing & persistency pays. When you call an ad and no one answers, always leave a message. However, don't stop there. Consider calling the seller again at a time you would expect them to be home. The best times are early mornings before work or shortly after work around dinnertime. If you still can't get in touch with the seller, at least you exhausted all your options and can be assured that they will receive your message.

Right On Time

When I needed to sell my car, I did like most people and placed an ad in my newspaper. Since they charged by the number of lines, I abbreviated everything, skipped words and made my ad as short as possible.

However when my ad came out, I received a call at the crack of dawn from a gentleman who wanted to come look right away. Having just crawled out of bed to answer the telephone, I glanced at the clock and told him that he was crazy to be calling so early.

Rather confused he said, "Your ad said to call between 5 and 6 o'clock.

"I know," I replied, "But I meant PM."
