Stars shine at premiere

The stars came out in Midland Friday night for the premiere of "Waltz Across Texas," the movie that was filmed in Midland last year. Among those at the gala, formal opening at the Howard Hodge Cinema were the stars of the movie, left, Anne Archer and former Midlander Terry Jastrow, while Josh Taylor, above, another of the film's stars, hugs some of the girls from Midland's High Sky Girls Ranch. Proceeds from the "tux and boots" premiere went to High Sky Girls Ranch.

Reagan hoping for talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, declaring his meeting with Arab leaders "an important milestone" along the road to Middle East peace, said Friday that he hopes negotiations can resume soon on the future of the Palestinian people.

But he indicated there was no change in the Arabs' refusal to deal with Israel or its stand that the Palestine Liberation Organization was the "sole and legitimate representative" of the Palestinian people.

"There was no negotiating at all," the president said later at a reception for a group of businessmen. "This was a consultation to plan, to find out how we move forward from here."

He added, "all in all, it was an excellent meeting."

A senior U.S. official said after the three-hour White House session that while "there is a sense of urgency" among the Arabs to deal with the Palestinian problem, they are not yet prepared to publicly accept Israel's right to exist and negotiate with the Jewish state.

"I don't think they have yet reached the point where they are as explicit as we believe they should be," said the official, who briefed reporters with the understanding his name would not be disclosed.

King Hassan of Morocco, in a farewell statement, called for a settlement based on "peace, co-existence and security." He made no direct reference to Israel, and said it was his personal belief that an agreement should be based on U.N. Security Council resolutions 242 and 338.

Adopted in 1967 and 1973, the resolutions implicitly recognize Israel's right to exist call for a peaceful settlement in the region. But they make no reference to a Palestinian homeland, which the Arabs have urged.

Britain still hopeful of Irish settlement

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The British government vowed on Friday to go ahead with its latest attempt to work out a political settlement in Northern Ireland despite election results that doomed any lingering hopes of success.

"We're not going to give up," the Cabinet secretary for the strife-ridden province, James Prior, declared in a radio interview.

"Everything in Northern Ireland is a setback unless you accept miracles...We don't expect to solve all the problems overnight. But we owe it to all the people who have been murdered to try."

But with most of the votes counted in Wednesday's election, British officials privately expressed dismay at the vote for hardliners on both the Protestant and Roman Catholic sides.

They were particularly disheartened by the strong showing made by Sinn Fein, the legal political front for the outlawed Irish Republican Army which was contesting an election in Northern Ireland for the first time. Five of its 12 candidates had won seats and a sixth win appeared likely.

"This is a vote for British withdrawal...obviously people support the IRA," said Sinn Fein vice president Gerry Adams, a former guerrilla twice jailed by the British. He won easily in his West Belfast district.

"This is a license for the Provisional IRA to kill," said Gerry Fitt, an anti-IRA Catholic member of the British Parliament.

With returns in for 71 of the 78 seats in the new provincial assembly, the Protestants had won 46, the Catholics had 17 and the non-sectarian Alliance Party had 8.

The Protestants included 24 Official Unionists, 20 of the Rev. Ian Paisley's militant Democratic Unionists and two members of splinter groups.

On the Catholic side, in addition to the Sinn Fein seats, the Social Democratic and Labor Party, traditionally the Catholics' main political voice, took 12 seats.

Most analysts agreed that the results spelled failure for the latest British attempt to get the 1 million Protestants to share power with the 500,000 Catholics so local rule could be restored. But in fact both sides, although they participated in the election, rejected the government's post-election plans before the voting.

Acidic nasal spray seems single case

DALLAS (AP) — Technicians were testing a store's stock of Vick's nasal spray Friday after a 30-year-old man was injured after using a bottle apparently contaminated with sulfuric acid, police said.

Investigators and the manufacturer of the spray said the incident appeared to be isolated.

Gary L. Dozzi of suburban Grand Prairie was taken to Methodist Central Hospital Thursday night, complaining of nasal irritation and burns, Dallas police spokesman Ed Spencer said.

Tests conducted at the Dallas County Medical Examiner's Office showed the Vick's Long Acting Nasal Spray which Dozzi used was "very acidic" and probably contaminated with sulfuric acid, Spencer said.

All bottles of the product were pulled Thursday night from a Kroger store in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas where Dozzi's wife bought the spray earlier in the evening, Spencer said.

"There's nothing to indicate now that it's more than an isolated incident," Spencer said.

Dozzi was hospitalized in stable condition and was expected to be released Friday or Saturday, hospital spokeswoman Ramona Whitley said.

"He squirted (the spray) in his nose once and it was not so bad. But he did it again and it was very, very painful," said Dr. Richard Casey, the emergency room physician who treated Dozzi.

"He was under a lot of stress when he came in, but he wasn't in horrendous pain.

Poll says Spain's Socialists may win

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Two opinion polls indicated Friday that the Socialist Party would win a substantial majority in the general election next Thursday, allowing party leader Felipe Gonzalez to form the first all-socialist government in Spanish history.

One survey of 18,000 voters, conducted for the big independent newspaper El Pais by pollster Louis Harris' Spanish affiliate, indicated the Socialist Workers Party (PSOE) would win between 193 and 217 seats for a majority of 36 to 84 in the 350-seat Cortes, the lower house of Parliament.

Another poll of 7,000 voters for the independent Diario 16 also indicated as many as 217 Socialist winners.

The two polls indicated Manuel Fraga's rightist Popular Alliance would come in second, with 69 seats likely, according to the Diario 16 sampling, or between 87 and 107, according to the other one.

The polls emphasized the near-disappearance of support for the centrist parties that governed the country from the restoration of parliamentary democracy in 1977 until the dissolution of Parliament in August.

The growing likelihood of a Socialist victory was accompanied by an increase in violence by the Basque separatists and growing fear of a rightist army coup to block Spain's first leftist government since the 1936-39 republic.

The Madrid newspaper ABC, which has close ties to the monarchy, reported the guard at King Juan Carlos' Zarzuela Palace had been put on the alert with orders to fire after a column of tanks was seen approaching an intersection near the palace Tuesday night.

The Defense Ministry said the tanks were returning from operations, and their movement was "completely routine."

European unemployment rate hits post-war record

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The Common Market on Friday reported 11.2 million people unemployed in the 10-nation European economic bloc during September, a postwar record.

The monthly job report said the new unemployment figures meant that 9.8 percent of the workforce was jobless for September and warned that this figure will surpass the 10.1 percent U.S. level unless European business revives.

The report showed the worst unemployment rates since World War II, with 300,000 more people out of work than in August and 1.8 million more than in September 1981. Rates ranged from a high of 14.8 percent in Belgium to 1.3 percent in Luxembourg.

Unemployment climbed in all 10 Common Market countries except Ireland and Greece, which already are among the poorest regions in the economic bloc.

The new rates also included 13.1 percent in Ireland, 13 percent in Britain, 10.8 percent in the Netherlands, 10.5 percent in Italy, 9 percent in Denmark, 8.9 percent in France and 6.9 percent in West Germany.

No precipitation is in the forecast, leaving the monthly total at 1.01 inches and the yearly amount at 12.63 inches.

Midland officer loses job

A 27-year-old Midland police officer who allegedly impersonated a physician in order to obtain the codeine-laced Tylenol IV pain-killer has lost his job and has been indicted by a Midland County Grand Jury.

The former officer, Mike Williams, had been on prescription medication for an injury to his hand but reportedly his physician declined to renew his prescription.

He was terminated from the force on Oct. 4 following an in-house investigation, Police Chief Wayne Gideon said Friday, and was subsequently indicted for the penitentiary offense of acquiring the controlled substance by deception via a telephone call to a drug store on Sept. 28. He has been released from the Midland County Jail under a $5,000 bailbond.

"There was no indication of distribution of any kind," Gideon said. "He was acquiring the medication for his own personal use due to an old injury. The man had taken so many (tablets) that he got addicted.

"I took the action I had to take," Gideon said, "and took the file to the district attorney (Vern Martin)."

Williams was a patrolman from April 1980 until January 1981, when he resigned to work in the oil field, and returned to police work last March.

"He had a good reputation as a police officer," said Gideon "and appeared to be very dedicated."

Jennifer O'Neill shot in abdomen

BEDFORD HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Actress Jennifer O'Neill, star of "Summer of '42," was shot once in the abdomen Friday night and was hospitalized in fair condition, authorities said.

Mount Kisco Police Lt. Ted Brugger said he received a call from the operator shortly after 6 p.m. with a woman on the line saying she was shot in the abdomen and in great pain.

Brugger said he asked the woman her address and it took several seconds before she was able to answer — 320 McLain Ave., Bedford Hills, an affluent community in northern Westchester.

Brugger said he called Bedford Town police and also sent Officer Frank McCann of the Mount Kisco Police Department.

McCann said he and other officers and ambulance corp members found the 33-year-old actress lying on the bed in a second-floor bedroom bleeding severely, in great pain and crying for help.

There was no one else in the house, according to McCann.

Although he did not see the gun, McCann said he believes it was a small-caliber gun, "not a rifle."

Brugger said McCann returned and told him, "'Jennifer O'Neill was shot,' that's the first time I knew the identity of the woman I was talking to."

At airport, two air views on Bentsen

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Charges made Friday morning by the chairman of the Texas Conservative Union alleging U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen was involved in fraudulent land schemes 30 years ago were denounced by Tyler attorney John Hannah during a face-off at Midland Regional Airport.

Richard Harvey had set up the news conference to present what he claimed are facts showing the Bentsen family was involved in "fraudulent land schemes" in Hidalgo and Starr counties between 1957 and 1966. He also denied that his organization was supporting Bentsen's opponent — Republican Jim Collins — for the senate. That became the core of the disagreement between the two men.

A prepared news release from the Texas Conservative Union states: "Facts show that between the years 1957 and 1966 Lloyd Bentsen Jr., his father and his uncle devised ways to use their lands in Hidalgo and Starr Counties to illegally 'cash in' on the Soil Bank Conservation Reserve Program." It goes on to state the Bentsens "...were rewarded for their unlawful efforts by nearly a million dollars."

HARVEY ALSO contended that the Bentsen family got away with it because it was swept under the rug by Democratic presidents, including Lyndon Johnson.

Hannah, who ran and lost the Democratic primary for state attorney general and is a former U.S. district attorney, pointed out the charges had gone through five administrations, including Dwight Eisenhower's.

"First, Lloyd Bentsen Jr. never owned any of the property involved," said Hannah. "Secondly, this was all resolved when the Bentsen family brought suit against the federal government, hardly the actions of someone who would think they had acted fraudulently."

Richard Harvey

The news conference turned into a disagreement between Harvey and Hannah over the actions of the Texas Conservative Union.

Hannah pointed out the union had run an advertisement in a Tyler newspaper which denounced Bentsen and endorsed Collins, then asked for donations.

"We're not advocating the election of Jim Collins," Harvey had responded to a reporter's question before Hannah began his rebuttal. "I'm not trying to push Jim Collins; I'm not trying to say Lloyd Bentsen ought to be defeated. I think the people of Texas ought to know (about the alleged land schemes). I think Lloyd Bentsen ought to resign."

He denied that any money went to Collins or that any of Collins' staff members knew about Harvey's statewide news conferences.

"The Texas Conservative Union has not donated one dime" to Collins' campaign, he added.

HANNAH POINTED OUT that Bentsen's campaign had filed a case with the Federal Election Commission against the Texas Conservative Union because it had failed to register as a political entity. The law requires each organization to file with the FEC if it spends more than $1,000.

Harvey said the union — which was organized to rate what state senators and representatives do in Austin — has spent little more than $900 and that money went for newspaper ads, so they had abided by the law. He also noted that his organization had kept itself "separate from any campaign."

During Hannah's turn at the microphones, he said, "It's almost ironic the man would show up who's possibly in violation of the law. Mr. Harvey has been running ads against Senator Bentsen. At the bottom of those newspaper ads, they solicit money for Jim Collins. And he tells you he's not connected with the Collins campaign. I think it's obvious he's connected with the Collins campaign."

Harvey denied that any of the money solicited went to Collins' campaign, although he admitted the ads read that the public should vote for Jim Collins.

Harvey, however, later acknowledged his group did select Collins' campaign slogan of "voting the Texas Way." Asked by a reporter to explain the "Texas Way," Harvey said, "We hope it's conservative."

"BUT CONSERVATIVE can mean a hundred different things," said the reporter.

"You're right," Harvey laughed.

Harvey, asked why Bill Clements or Collins had not made this issue a "brouhaha," the chairman replied, "I don't know."

Before Hannah began his remarks he said to Harvey, "Richard, you're going to have to walk to Lubbock (site of a similar press conference Friday afternoon) or you're going to be over the amount of money you can spend."

Noting that he also is from Tyler, the same hometown as Harvey, Hannah added, "We don't take him seriously there, but we didn't know what you folks know about him here."

Taking another jab at Harvey, Hannah said, "Let me make it perfectly clear that I am here to represent Sen. Bentsen."

"Isn't this trite, political garbage?" asked one reporter of Hannah.

"Yes, exactly," replied the Bentsen supporter. "This country has huge, tremendous problems. We have a huge unemployment rate. We have the highest unemployment rate in East Texas that we've ever had. Farmers are suffering. The interest rates are still too high. Serious problems that people should be talking about some serious answers. And people, instead, run around and talk about garbage like this. It should be an insult to the citizens of Texas and to the citizens of Midland and Odessa."

Hannah said he encouraged Bentsen's staff not to send anyone out to rebut Harvey's charges. "But it's Bentsen's type of campaign to answer all charges, no matter how nebulous. I think the charges are ridiculous."

Army reports nerve gas leak read by sensors

RICHMOND, Ky. (AP) — Sensing devices registered a small leak of potentially deadly nerve gas at the Blue Grass Army Depot on Monday, a depot spokesman said Friday. But he said it was possible the sensors had malfunctioned and no leak had occurred.

No trace of the gas remains at the post and apparently no one was ednangered by the substance, according to Basil Cole, public information officer for the depot.

But the death of a cow on the post this week was being investigated to determine whether it was related.

Between 200 and 300 people were evacuated from the post briefly as a precautionary measure on Thursday as soon as test results showed that the sensors had indicated the readings of Sarin gas on Monday.

The gas, which the Army calls GB, attacks the nervous system and is one of the most potent gases in the Army's arsenal. It is stored in bunkers on the post.

Cole said tests on material gathered in the sensing devices or bubblers showed that on Monday they picked up a reading of ".000172" of GB. He said the surgeon general has said that .0001 is a maximum for any continuous exposure to the gas.

But Cole said it was possible the problem lay in defective sensors, rather than in any leak.

"We have not determined what caused this," he said. "All of this could have been caused by a contaminated bubbling vessel. This is a theory we are looking at."

He said tests on particulates collected Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday showed negative results.

"All readings are now absolute zero," he said Friday. "We are certain the area is safe."

Monday's leak was not discovered until Thursday, Cole said, because the post is using new testing equipment and did not have lab results until then.

Two dead cows were found on the post this week, Cole said. The Pentagon said in a statement Friday that the cows had been killed by a truck. Later, Maj. John Myers, an Army spokesman, said that just one of the cows had been killed by a truck. There was still some question about what killed the other cow, which will be exhumed and undergo an autopsy, he said.

Both Cole and the Pentagon said no one on the post or in surrounding residential areas was in danger Friday.

The leak was reported to state police at Richmond and emergency officials at the Capitol in Frankfort on Thursday.

State police Lt. William Kline said he visited the depot Thursday night and was briefed by Cole and other officials.

"Samples showed that on Oct. 18

Richmond, Va. is the site of a possible leak of nerve gas picked up by Army sensors this past Monday at Blue Grass Army Depot. However, according to a spokesperson for the Army, it is possible the sensors malfunctioned and there was no leak.

nerve gas was present in small quantities" in the sensing device, Kline said. "They advised me that they were not aware of this until yesterday (Thursday)."

The Pentagon said in a statement Friday that it was investigating the possibility that nerve gas escaped at depot.

The Pentagon statement stopped short of confirming that nerve gas had leaked. It said that chemical crews were trying to determine what triggered the sensing device posted at a site where the potent nerve gas is stored.

The Pentagon statement said:

"The reason for recent precautionary actions taken at the Blue Grass facility was that one of the 12 chemical sensing devices indicated some likelihood of the presence of hazardous materials. However there is no reason to assume that danger exists, either to on-post personnel or in the surrounding community."

Trained crews were "taking appropriate actions to identify the abnormal readings," the statement said.

Sensing devices surrounding the storage site have given false readings in the past, but Pentagon officials said they weren't sure why.

"We are using a bubbling system which draws air through a liquid and it dissolves. We take this in on a special sensitive device and measure that," Cole said. "What we come up with the capibility of measuring to .0001 and below."

Tests performed by doctors during Thursday's evacuation showed that no one had been contaminated by gas, Cole said.

Fred Thornberry

Countian campaign chairman

Don Tergerson, a Midland egg and poultry producer, has been named as the Midland County campaign chairman for Fred Thornberry, Republican candidate for Texas Agriculture Commissioner.

"With people like Don Tergerson helping us in this campaign," said Thornberry, "I feel confident that we can defeat my liberal opponent."

Tergerson served with Thornberry on the Texas Egg Council when the Republican Party candidate was in the poultry science department at Texas A&M University.

"I know he's devoted to agriculture," Tergerson said of Thornberry, "and I think he'll make a good agriculture commissioner."

Thornberry's opponent in the Nov. 2 general election is Jim Hightower, former editor of the "Texas Observer" and defeated candidate for the Texas Railroad Commission two years ago.

"I'm glad to know that my support is coming from Texans and not the AFL-CIO and the Eastern liberals who are backing my opponent, Jim Hightower," Thornberry said in a prepared press release.

Thornberry, who is both a practical farmer and an agricultural scientist, is waging his first political campaign. He raises timber and livestock and has a collection of more than 50 beehives.

Thornberry, a poultry specialist, resigned from his job at Texas A&M to enter the race for commissioner. He holds the doctorate in agriculture from Texas A&M University.

"A lot of Texans know my opponent Jim Hightower's name," Thornberry said, "and now they are going to find out what he really stands for and the damage he would do to farmers, ranchers and consumers in Texas if he is allowed to put his liberal-leftist philosophy to work as agriculture commissioner."

Hightower and Thornberry are vying to succeed Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown, who was defeated by Hightower in the Democratic Party primary elections last May 1.

Diplomat faces abuse charges

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A North Korean diplomat to the United Nations was indicted Friday on charges of sexual abuse stemming from an attack last month on a Bronx woman.

The man was holed up in the North Korean mission in Manattan, with police outside waiting to arrest him.

Nam Chol O, third secretary for the observer delegation of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, was charged by the Westchester County grand jury in a three-count indictment alleging first-degree sexual abuse, menacing, and fourth-degree criminal possession of a weapon, a rock.

Vergari said O allegedly grabbed the woman from behind while she was walking on a bridle path, knocked her down, threatened her with a rock and sexually abused her. The woman managed to fight off her attacker and flee.

She filed a complaint with local police a week later and a warrant for O's arrest was issued Sept. 21 by Eastchester Town Court Judge J. Rockhill Gray. Vergari said the grand jury's action and a subsequent Superior Court warrant issued Friday by County Judge James Cowhey supersedes the local warrant.

"We're hoping the grand jury action convinces North Korean officials that the matter is a serious one...and hope they relent and turn him over to us," Vergari said.

County, local and New York City police have been waiting a month for O to appear outside the North Korean mission on East 80th Street in Manhattan to arrest him. Vergari declined to say if any other steps were being taken to arrest the diplomat.

Council holds special session

Midland City Council met in a special session Friday morning at the Council Chambers and spent an hour trying to make up its mind on two items.

The first took about 50 minutes of discussion, and the council voted to allow building permits to be issued in specified areas of 349 Ranch Estates on North Big Spring.

Much of the discussion centered on 1F-3 zoning, Agricultural Estates zoning and size of the lots.

The second item consumed about five minutes of discussion, and the council approved an agreement with The First National Bank of Midland. A shuttle bus service will be provided for employees of the bank who must park south of the railroad tracks.

The rain in London stays mainly...on everything

LONDON (AP) — It rained in London Friday. It also rained Thursday, Wednesday, Tuesday, Monday, Sunday, Saturday and every other day but two this month.

Britain, never a country noted for abundant sunshine, is having its wettest October in 20 years. For umbrella manufacturers, it's pence from heaven.

"The stores are all driving us potty," said Stewart Schaverien, whose firm of the same name manufacturers more than 1 million umbrellas a year.

"We've never sold so many umbrellas so quickly," he said. "We've been praying to the patron saints of rain and they've been very kind to us."

Schaverien said his work force has been put on 14-hour days to keep up with demand this month, which is running about double that of a normal October. The umbrellas sell for around $20 each.

So far this month, the London Weather Center has recorded 4.26 inches of rain, the most for an October since 1960, when a record 5.21 inches fell for the entire month.

"We could say it might topple the record by the time the end of October comes around, but you know how it is with this weather business," the weather center's spokesman said. In line with British government policy covering civil servants, he declined to be identified.

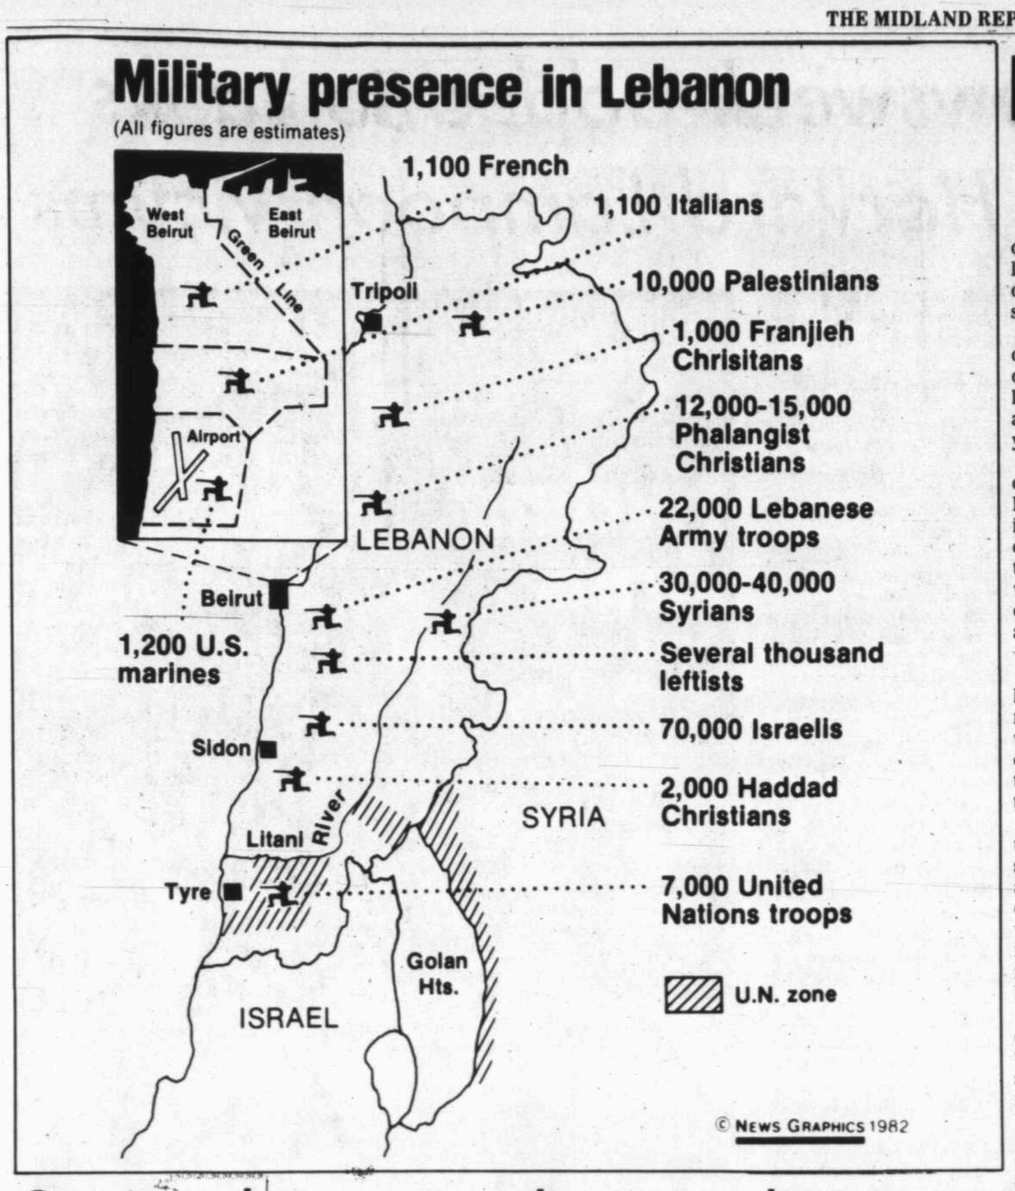

The only entirely sunny days in London this month occurred on Oct. 1 and Oct. 9. Every other day since Sept. 20 it has rained at least part of the day, the spokesman said, adding it has been much the same all over the country.

Britons are used to dealing with the damp, but some of them are getting a bit edgy.

According to the Sun newspaper, the dreariness got on Diana's nerves and she insisted on being taken home. After what the London tabloids called a "blazing row," Charles accompanied her and their 4-month-old baby, Prince William, to London. Diana stayed out of the rain for several days, taking a shopping tour of London's posh shops, and Charles headed back to Scotland, the papers said.

The A-1 motorway near Stamford, Lincolnshire, was closed for a time Friday after a tanker truck jack-knifed and spilled three tons of flour.

Bolivian trek reveals wonders

By Sally Koris
Hearst Feature Service

Bolivia has revolutions regularly, but despite constant coup d'etats, nothing really changes in this land of huge mountains and lush Amazonian jungles. The country is too poor and too rural, the campesinos are too uneducated, and those with political consciousness are too divided for any major changes to occur.

So I didn't really worry when, during preparations for my seven-day trek (an organized long distance walk, with porters or animals carrying equipment) through the gold-mining region of the Cordillera Real in northwestern Bolivia, I heard that there had been yet another coup — the ninth change in government in the last four years.

It was only when a distraught employee of the trekking agency caught up to me late one night in my hotel in Sorata — a beautiful Mediterranean style town which tumbles down a steep escarpment in northern Bolivia — and started squawking that I became concerned. According to the campesino, who had been commissioned to supply our group of 12 with a guide, burros and campesinos, we'd have to leave on the trek at the crack of dawn before the country's transportation workers went on strike and closed off all the roads.

THE CONCERN TURNED to worry the next morning. The leader of our trek, Alain Meisli, Bolivia's foremost andisimio, frenetically hurried everyone into the back of a dilapidated 1934 Harvester truck so we could get out of the city before the roads were closed off. From the look of the truck and the aged driver, I began to think it might be safer to stay in the city than risk traveling over the 20,000 foot Chuco pass in that vehicle.

My worry was justified. The road leading to the pass was unpaved, narrow, filled with switchbacks, sheer drops and ruts the size of lunar craters, and the mountain range was rugged, brown and unforgiving. But Bolivians are used to this sort of thing, and our driver had pioneered the route, taking it hundreds of times with his truck laden with gold and tin. So I quickly became used to it, letting the bumps throw me any-which-way while I absorbed the fantastic landscape and counted all the various shades of brown before my eyes.

The five-hour drive over the pass to the foot of hulking, snow-covered Mt. Illampu proved a wonderful introduction to the country. You realize quickly why things don't change: The landscape is so immense and treacherous that humans are forced to adapt to it, rather than change it.

FROM OUR INITIAL CAMP site above the tree-line at 16,500 feet, the trek led downward through gold mining country. I was excited; this historic trail is rarely traveled by outsiders. It was also a fantastic opportunity to see people living much as they had a century ago in this region.

Because few gringos ever travel through this region, our appearance caused a lot of excitement. On the first day, as we were passing through the small village of Ancoma, the village elders greeted us and said that the school had planned a demonstration for us. We could see about 50 children shivering in the school yard as they waited in gym shorts and T-shirts to give their performance. We wanted to get on with the trek, but felt compelled to take a seat on the makeshift bleachers.

"Uno, dos, tres," shouted the gym teacher. And with that, the children treated us to an hour-long show of gymnastics to the sound of Andean flutes and charangas, a stringed instrument made from armadillo shells.

As the trek went on, the landscape changed: From the barren lunar landscape of the first day, the trail slowly descended through mountainous forests into the semi-tropical region of Bolivia's upper Amazon jungle region. The flora changed too: From no trees to dense thickets of pine trees, we descended into long stretches of dark jungle, filled with bananas, rainberries (a relative of the strawberry plant) and immense philodenrins.

I WAS LUCKY ENOUGH to spy Andean condors, the heaviest flying bird in the world, with 12-foot wing spans, riding the wind current over the gorges, as well as the capybara, a strange Andean rodent the size of a dog.

The old Inca trails we took hugged the mountain sides, providing breakthtaking views of the Rio Tipuani tumbling through a gorge. Much of the trail was loose stone, which I learned to cover quickly by copying the ape-walk of our guide — a side to side rocking motion with bent knees on the balls of ones feet.

Much of the original 500-year-old trail has been worn smooth by centuries of hoof and foot travel. It's the kind of terrain that one measures by the amount of time it takes to cover, rather than in miles; steepness and roughness count — not distance.

The trail left me impressed with Inca engineering. Steps are obviously quicker to climb than a short steep slope, so steps were cut into the rock or laid as paving. Tunnels were cut through outcrops of rock obstructing the direct route (I went through a 500-foot tunnel carved from stone). And steps going up and around a sharp corner were laid in a fan arrangement for easier walking.

I COVERED BETWEEN SEVEN and 15 miles a day, depending on what was needed to get to water and a level camp site. The trekking was difficult because the terrain and the climactic conditions changed. Just as I thought I had mastered the art of skipping over rough, loose stones in cool weather, I had a day of climbing up steep Inca staircases in humid, sticky weather. And the last day of the trek was in a heavy tropical rainstorm.

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet chess grandmaster Boris Gulko said earlier this week that he has begun a hunger strike to win government permission to emigrate for himself and his wife, Anna Akhsharumova.

Gulko, 35, who was Soviet national chess champion in 1977, applied to emigrate to Israel in 1979. He told Western reporters that Soviet authorities have rejected his applications for an exit visa on the ground that his departure would be "inexpedient."

Gulko said that his wife, the Soviet women's chess champion in 1976, plans to join him in a hunger strike in early November. His protest coincides with an international chess olympiad in Lucerne, Switzerland.

After the Gulkos applied to emigrate, Soviet sports authorities barred them from participating in major national chess tournaments and from traveling abroad.

The couple began a public campaign last month for the right to emigrate. On Sept. 7, Gulko and his wife were detained by police outside the Moscow International Chess Tournament when they briefly held up small signs demanding permission to emigrate to Israel.

Over the last year, Soviet authorities have granted exit visas to several hunger strikers. In recent months, however, they have taken a harder line, indicating that they will no longer yield to such protests.

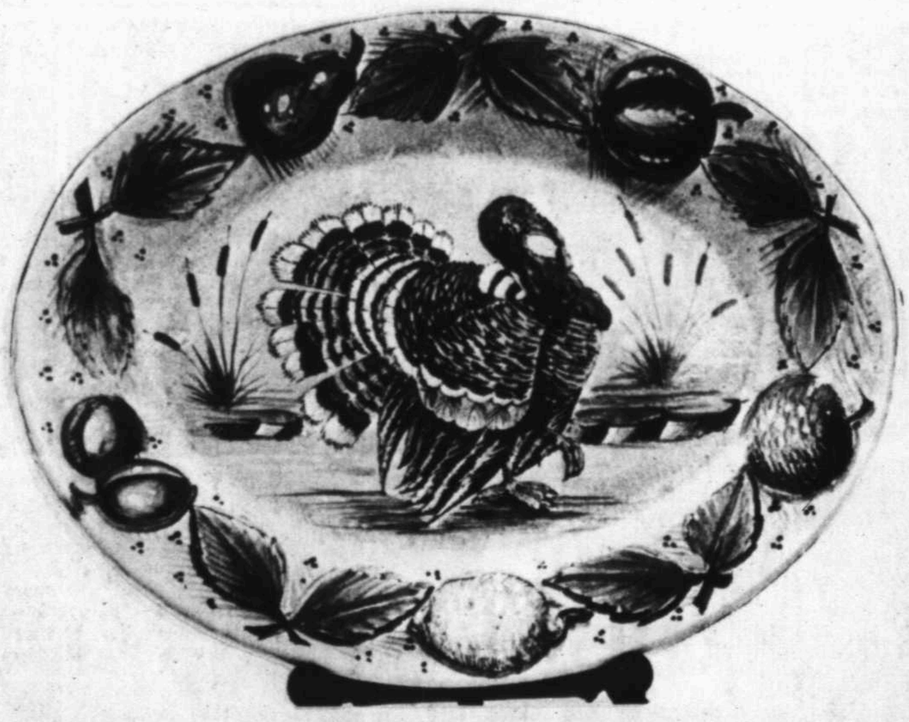

Gulko said he knew of the official attitude, but added that "hunger strikes succeed in more than 50 percent of the cases. Besides, it is the only means we have left."

Two other hunger strikes are under way in the Ukrainian city of Kharkov, 400 miles south of Moscow.

Yuri Tarnopolsky, a Jewish scientist barred for the last three years from emigrating with his wife and daughter, passed his 20th day of a water-only fast Wednesday, according to Jewish sources.

In a separate note, Stanislav Burdein, a 35-year-old economist who first applied to emigrate in 1979, said he joined Tarnopolsky in a hunger strike Monday.

Band has to watch its steps

CLEAR SPRING, Md. (AP) — Watch where you march, the state trooper told the band director as he handed him a ticket.

That was a sour note, some people say.

The director of the Clear Spring High School band was ticketed by state police Wednesday for marching his group along U.S. 40.

State Police Sgt. Richard Brown said Thursday dozens of callers have complained to the state police in Hagerstown about the ticket issued to band director John Eckstine.

Brown said Eckstine was cited for "walking on the highway" after a trooper decided the band wasn't protected from traffic. The offense carries a $10 fine.

Eckstine said he would take the matter to court rather than pay.

Brown said Trooper Louis Blenard was dispatched to Clear Spring on Wednesday evening at the request of the mother of one of the band members, who asked police to keep an eye on the group as it marched along the highway near the school.

Blenard told Eckstine the band should get off the highway and practice on the school grounds, Brown said. He also told the band director the band should have a car bringing up the rear. Eckstine agreed.

Actress leaves London apartment after fuss

LONDON (AP) — Koo Stark, the erotic-movie star who went on a Caribbean holiday with Prince Andrew, has quit her London apartment and won't return until a torrent of publicity subsides, acquaintances say.

Prince Andrew

"I think it is terrible Koo has been subjected to so much harassment," moviemaker Frixos Constantine, a friend, said Thursday. Miss Stark, who has lived in London for more than 10 years, "has said she will come back when the heat cools down."

The 22-year-old prince's eight-day vacation with Miss Stark on the island of Mustique this month created headlines around the world.

Andrew returned home alone Oct. 13, reportedly angry that photographers and reporters on the tiny island had forced him to cut short the vacation.

Miss Stark, 25, daughter of American movie producer Wilbur Stark, was reported to have been smuggled off the island in tears on Oct. 12 to fly to Miami.

Luis Kenny, owner of Miss Stark's rented apartment in London's Belgravia quarter, said two young men arrived in a van with the key to the apartment Wednesday night and removed all her belongings.

LONDON (AP) — Sarah Churchill, daughter of the late Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill, left an estate with a net value of about $376,000, according to her will published Friday.

Miss Churchill, an actress whose married name was Lady Audley, died Sept. 24 at the age of 67. The will said all her property was left to her sister, Lady Soames.

Miss Churchill, who was married three times, had no children. Her third husband, Henry, Lord Audley, died in 1963.

She last appeared on stage in 1971 and had devoted the last decade of her life to writing, entertaining friends, reading spy thrillers and watching old horror movies.

Carol Burnett, husband separate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Carol Burnett, who recently said her daughter's drug problems were "driving a wedge into my marriage," has separated from her husband, television producer Joe Hamilton, her publicist said Friday.

No reason was given for the separation, said publicist Rick Ingersoll.

"They have just decided on a temporary or trial separation," Ingersoll said. He said the decision was made on Thursday.

This is the second marriage for both Hamilton, 54, and Miss Burnett, 48, who were married in 1963. They have three daughters, Carrie, 18, Jody, 15, and Erin, 13.

Miss Burnett and her husband fought a hard battle when they discovered in 1977 that Carrie, then 13, was involved in drugs. They said they cajoled her and threatened her and then finally enrolled her in a Texas rehabilitation program.

Miss Burnett shared with the public her daughter's drug problem and encouraged other parents to keep their children away from drugs. She and her duaghter, who is now attending the University of Pepperdine in Malibu, Calif., even appeared on the "Phil Donahue Show" to answer questions from the audience.

However, the drug battle left its scars.

"I could think of nothing else, and it was driving a wedge into my marriage," Miss Burnett said in a recent interview.

Another battle Miss Burnett undertook was a $10 million dollar libel suit against the National Enquirer, a weekly tabloid journal that published a 1976 gossip column item which accused her of boisterous behavior in a Washington restaurant. The tabloid claimed she had argued with then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. She won a $1.6 million judgment which eventually was reduced to $800,000.

The Enquirer is appealing that award.

Miss Burnett is staying at the couple's condominium in Hawaii, while Hamilton is in Los Angeles, where he is currently executive producer of an upcoming NBC series called "Mama's Family."

Miss Burnett, who starred as the comically nasty orphanage manager, Miss Hannigan, in the movie "Annie," developed a friendship with Hamilton in 1958 when she was working on the television program "The Garry Moore Show."

Newsweek added to ranks of Harvard Lampoon victims

Could Newsweek really be running a cover story about the effects of atomic war on the fashion industry?

About 750,000 copies of the fake Newsweek go on sale across the country next week for $2 apiece — 50 cents more than the real thing.

Fifteen members of the undergraduate humor club spent the summer putting together the daffy collection of mock news articles for the Lampoon's seventh parody issue since 1966.

"Newsweek was an obvious choice, because it gave us opportunities to really go wild," said Lisa M. Henson, managing editor of the 96-page parody. "It wasn't as easy a target as other, sillier magazines, like Cosmopolitan, which are easier to make fun of."

"It's funny and in pretty good taste," said George Simpson, a spokesman for the real McCoy. "Anytime anyone lampoons your product, you've got to hold your breath a little bit. But this looks good."

But some might disagree with the students' taste. Among other things, the bogus Newsweek covers the appearance of Jesus Christ at the Jehovah's Witness pavilion at the Knoxville World's Fair and the public crucifixion of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon in Madison Square Garden.

"I think that some of it is in questionable taste," conceded Miss Henson. "But we consider that we publish more tasteful humor magazines than anyone else."

Like its namesake, the parody Newsweek is filled with reports on national affairs, medicine, business, lifestyles and television. But everything is made up.

The Harvard Lampoon blasts Newsweek in its latest effort, put together by students over the summer. A spokesman for Newsweek says the magazine is rather pleased with the effort.

In an article on "duck pin diplomacy," the magazine covers a gathering of world leaders at Pete's "Bowl-O-Fun" in Somerville, Mass. The Big Bowl Summit Conference, it reports, was "a novel mixture of international diplomacy and ten-pin bowling."

The parody also reports that:

—The latest additions to the Pentagon's arsenal include a one-man landing craft camouflaged to resemble a mallard duck; and an LT-51 anti-enemy variable-setting bazooka, a weapon that can be adjusted to "embarrass," "slice 'n' dice" or "reduce to a glowing fog of atoms."

—Argentina invaded Hong Kong and renamed it Las Malachinas.

Lampoon editors apologize to legislator

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — The publisher of the National Lampoon humor magazine has sent an apology to Rep. Nick Joe Rahall for an article that satirically depicts the Democrat as being sexually involved with a congressional page, Rahall said Friday.

Reading from a statement signed by publisher Julian Weber, Rahall said the magazine promised to publish a "full retraction" and apology for the article in its January 1983 issue.

"We are sure there is no basis in fact and not one shred of evidence in our possession that you have been involved in the kind of conduct described in the editorial," said Rahall, quoting Weber's statement.

Rahall said the agreement was reached during a meeting he had with Weber in New York on Thursday.

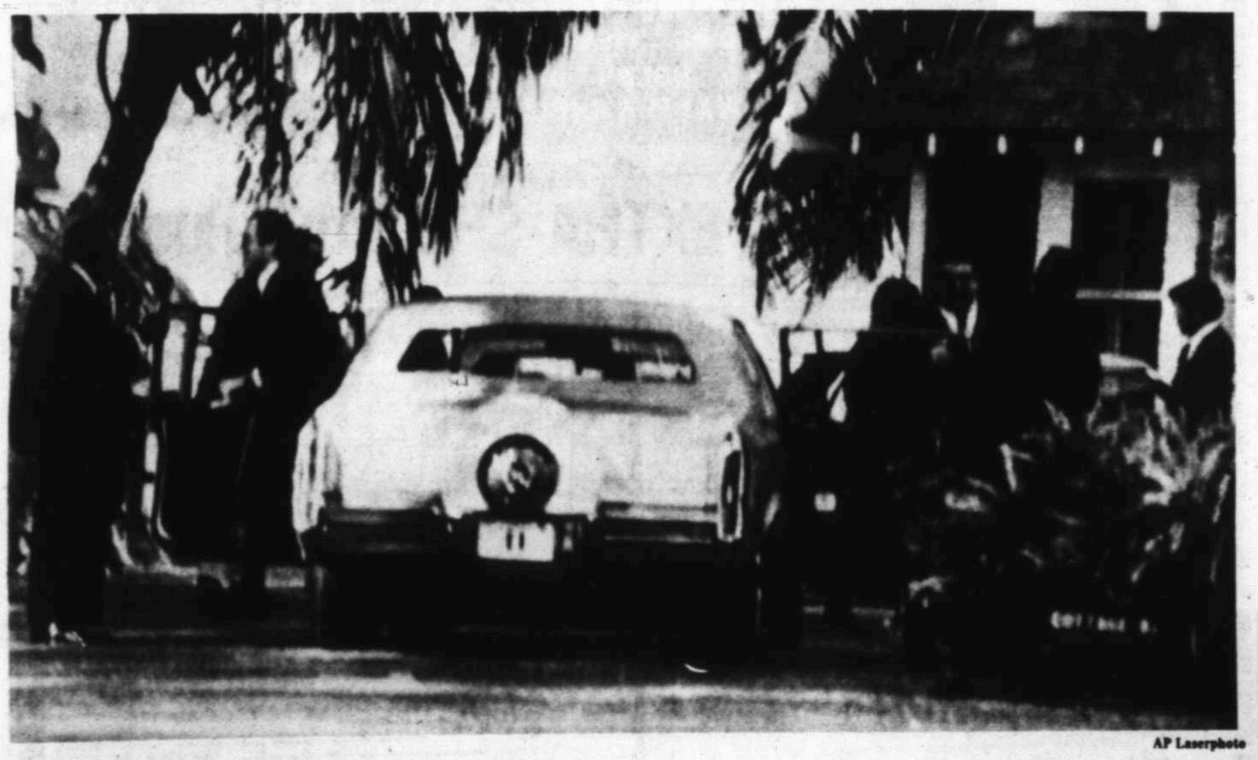

Weber said Friday that Rahall's name "slipped through our several screening processes" and said that he agreed to the congressman's demands to keep the case out of court.

"We could have been held liable," Weber said. "We had some defenses, but we didn't really want to stand on them."

The National Lampoon describes itself as the "magazine of adult humor" and its articles frequently parody current events. The article in question appeared in the magazine's November issue under the headline "Editorial," and recounts a fictional visit by the author to the home of a male congressional page.

According to Weber, the piece was intended as a parody on the congressional page scandal under investigation by the House Ethics Committee, of which Rahall is a member. The committee is investigating allegations by some pages that they engaged in sex with congressmen.

Vanessa Redgrave sues orchestra over cancellation

BOSTON (AP) — Actress Vanessa Redgrave sued the Boston Symphony Orchestra for $5 million Friday, charging that her appearance with the orchestra next year had been canceled because of her support of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court, also names two unidentified people, referred to as John Doe and Richard Roe, whom Ms. Redgrave says have harassed her for her political beliefs and tried to ruin her career.

The acclaimed British actress had a $31,000 contract to narrate Stravinsky's opera "Oedipus Rex" April 15-17 in Boston. The symphony later canceled the performances.

Ms. Redgrave's suit claims that she suffered "substantial pain and suffering, emotional distress and humiliation" because of the cancellation.

The orchestra defended its decision. Symphony director Thomas W. Morris said the action was taken because of "causes and circumstances beyond reasonable control."

Caroline Smedvig, a spokeswoman for the orchestra, said, "We believe our decision to cancel was a responsible course of action and we are confident the court will agree." She declined further comment.

Gloria...unhappy at latest

NEW YORK (AP) — Gloria Vanderbilt expressed anger and annoyance Friday over an upcoming television movie on the famous custody battle of her girlhood.

In a statement issued by her lawyer, Thomas A. Andrews, she said: "Miss Gloria Vanderbilt finds it appalling that a very painful time in her life has been exploited and fictionalized for commercial purposes."

Students play outside Louisville, Neb.'s Faith Christian School Friday following the release of the school's preacher, Rev. Everett Sileven, from the Cass County jail. Supporters from around the nation were on hand in Louisville to cheer Sileven's release. Sileven promised to keep the school closed until the end of a special Nebraska legislative session or the end of November, whichever comes first.

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A painfully ill diabetic who had lost the use of his kidneys died Friday at a Long Island hospital shortly after he won a court battle to halt his dialysis treatment, a hospital spokeswoman said.

A state Supreme Court justice on Friday ordered Lydia Hall Hospital in Freeport to halt treatment of Peter Cinque and let him die as he had asked before he lapsed into a coma.

Cinque died around 5 p.m., said nursing supervisor Gloria Woesner. He was off life support systems, she said.

The court ruling came a week after Cinque signed a refusal-of-treatment statement asking the hospital to end his regular kidney dialysis. In addition to his nonfunctioning kidneys, Cinque was a long-term diabetic who was blind and legless and had ulcers and poor circulation.

"The court finds there is clear and convincing evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that Peter Cinque made an informed and rational and knowing decision to forego dialysis treatment as of Oct. 15," said Supreme Court Justice Arthur Spatt. "He was alert, oriented and mentally competent."

Referring to a ruling in the case of a terminally ill Roman Catholic brother two years ago, Spatt said, "In this state, there is no statute prohibiting a patient from declining medical treatment or a doctor from honoring a patient's decision."

The hospital must stop dialysis and any other treatment and must discharge the patient, he said.

"The court finds Peter's decision was based on a compelling desire to escape the grievous pain and suffering," Spatt concluded in a courtroom packed with reporters.

Cinque's family listened intently, but showed no outward emotion as the judge delivered his half-hour-long ruling.

The hospital, which had gone to court to block Cinque's request, said in advance that it would not contest Spatt's ruling.

Earlier, the hospital had won an order from Spatt that treatment be continued while he held hearings on whether Cinque was competent to say he wanted to die.

Word of the hospital's move sent Cinque into shock and a coma, his attorney, John Pittoni, said. Cinque was in intensive care Friday; the hospital listed his condition as serious.

Spatt held two closed hearings this week. At one, a doctor reportedly testified that Cinque's mind would never be the same even if he wakens.

Cinque's case was in the mold of Karen Ann Quinlan and Brother Joseph Charles Fox, but it differed significantly in that Cinque was awake and personally asked to be allowed to die.

Miss Quinlan was in a deep coma when hospitalized and her parents fought a long court battle before the New Jersey Supreme Court said in 1975 that she could be taken off a respirator. She has been breathing on her own since, but has remained comatose.

Fox, 83, had said before his final illness that he did not want his life extended artifically. After he went into a coma, his guardian from the Marianist community on Long Island asked a court to terminate his treatment. Fox died in January 1980 before a final court decision, but the Appellate Division ruled afterward that he could have been taken off the respirator.

Cinque could be expected to live at least six months with regular dialysis, according to doctors, but he couldn't have been expected to survive beyond a week without it.

His fragile health caused Cinque to retire as a high school English teacher in 1969, but he studied for a doctoral degree in psychology and did some counseling until illness made him give it up.

Rebel school preacher freed from jail

LOUISVILLE, Neb. (AP) — A fundamentalist preacher was freed from jail Friday after promising to temporarily close his non-accredited Faith Christian School in Louisville.

A crowd of supporters that had gathered from around the nation wept and cheered as the Rev. Everett Sileven returned to the Faith Baptist Church after being released from the Cass County Jail.

During a brief hearing before Cass County District Judge Raymond Case, Sileven pledged that he would shut down the school until the end of November or the end of the special session of the Nebraska Legislature scheduled to start Nov. 5, whichever comes first.

Case asked Sileven, "This means that school is going to be closed — period?"

"Yes," Sileven replied.

The legislative session was called to deal with state budget problems only, but supporters of the school will try to get senators to take up the issue. If the matter is not resolved by that time, Sileven said, he would return to jail.

The agreement was described as "absurd" by Cass County Attorney Ron Moravec.

"They're telling you, 'I'm only going to close the school down for a few days,' " Moravec told Case. "It has no meaning, it has no enforceability. The school will be conducted as it has been."

The national secretary of the Moral Majority, Greg Dixon of Indianapolis, attributed Sileven's release to the pressure placed on local authorities by a group of about 350 preachers from around the country who have been in Cass County all week to support the school.

"I'm proud of my preachers," Dixon said. "We've been here one week and we've not broken one law and we have not touched one person."

Several times during the five-year-old dispute, which focuses on the pastor's refusal to use state-certified teachers, Sileven has promised to close the school, only to reopen it later.

Sileven was jailed in early September to complete a four-month sentence imposed the previous spring for operating the school. Last spring, he was freed after serving about two weeks of the sentence when church officials closed the school. When the school was reopened, Case ordered Sileven to complete the sentence starting in September. The judge intended the start of the sentence to coincide with the start of the fall semester.

Earlier this week, Case allowed classes to resume at the school because he feared a confrontation between authorities and the church supporters if authorities tried to close the building. The preachers then shifted their attention to gaining the release of Sileven.

Illinois court disallows quota system

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois Supreme Court on Friday struck down the state Board of Education's use of racial quotas to achieve integration in public schools.

The state's highest court said education officials lack the legal power to enforce a 1976 policy for rooting out racial segregation through the use of quotas.

The decision stemmed from suits against the state brought by East Aurora School District 131 and Chicago Heights School District 170. The state had threatened to hold up federal money on the grounds that Aurora and Chicago Heights condoned segregation of elementary school children.

The 1976 board policy held that every school in a district must reflect the district's total minority student population within 15 percentage points.

At the time the policy was adopted, 41.4 percent of the students in Aurora schools were members of minority groups and Chicago Heights had a total enrollment of 55.9 percent minority students. But the state board contended that each city had some elementary schools that were either nearly all white or all black.

New York man's dream comes true in form of railroad

SALEM, N.Y. (AP) — The Batten Kill Railroad Co. Inc., a dream come true for a black man handicapped by childhood polio, formally opened for business Friday serving towns in rural Washington County from near the Vermont border to the Hudson River.

Ronald E. Crowd, president of the state's first minority-owned line, says it will provide shippers with an alternative to trucking.

The railroad was purchased from the Delaware & Hudson Railway Co. in a $2.8 million deal.

The opening ceremony was held Friday at Agway Inc., which has feed grain, fertilizer and oil supplier operations here, and is one of the line's major customers.

Agway put up $101,000 in the funding package and owns 10 percent of the railroad, which also will serve major paper and pulp companies and some smaller firms.

The state Department of Transportation provided $1.8 million, $400,000 came from the state Urban Development Corp. and $360,000 from the state Job Development Authority.

Another $100,000 came from Mohawk & Hudson Transportation Systems Inc., a privately owned company and parent of the new line. Mohawk & Hudson, also headed by Crowd, has mostly minority group member stockholders.

The right of way, track, a locomotive, caboose and repair equipment were purchased from the D&H by Eagle Bridge Tompson Development Corp., a subsidiary of the Urban Development Corp. and leased to the BKRR.

The price was $500,000, with an additional $365,000 to be paid the D&H if carloadings go as anticipated, a BKRR spokeswoman said.

Black cats and Halloween just seem to go together, don't they? According to officials at the Midland Animal Control Center, 1411 E. Orchard Lane, plenty of black cats are available for adoption just in time for Halloween. This one is a 10-week-old female, identified only as No. 68. The Animal Control Center is open from noon to 2 p.m. today and 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Abusive families profiled

BOSTON (AP) — Mothers who beat, burn, starve or smother their children are themselves often downtrodden women mired in a life of welfare, loneliness and endless television watching, says a researcher.

Dr. Eli H. Newberger of Children's Hospital Medical Center developed a profile of these "families in crisis" where child abuse often occurs.

However, Newberger says abuse occurs among the affluent, too, even though doctors often attribute these children's injuries to accidents to avoid embarrassing the families.

Parents are not the only assailants, he says. Boyfriends and babysitters are also sometimes engulfed in the uncontrollable rage that leads to child abuse.

In the latest case to come to light in Massachusetts, 3-year-old Brandy Mallett was critically injured in her home in an Everett housing project. Her live-in babysitter, Elizabeth Hutchinson, 31, pleaded innocent to charges of assault with intent to kill.

"There are many, many Brandy Malletts," Newberger says. "There are hundreds of Brandy Malletts in this state, but they only come to public attention by accident when someone calls the police."

Newberger, head of the hospital's family development study, analyzed the family life of 109 children who were hospitalized for abuse, accidents, failure to grow and poisoning.

He found that 35 percent of the abuse victims were children of the families of crisis. Almost all the families were women living without husbands. Among their similarities:

—All were poor, and seven out of eight lived on welfare.

—Both the mothers and their children were in poor health.

—The mothers were depressed and watched television an average of 7½ hours a day.

—Many complained that there was no one to listen to them, no one who cared what happened to them.

—The mothers were themselves often the recipients of harsh physical disciplining as children.

Child abuse may be increasing as unemployment grows, Newberger says. This is suggested by case reports from the Midwest and industrial cities where unemployment is highest.

Boy to reunite with dog

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A reunion between a 12-year-old cancer victim and his dog 900 miles away has been arranged by strangers who read of the family's plight.

Teddy, whose parents don't want their last name published, was separated from his pet Brittany spaniel, Muggins, two months ago when he was taken to Los Angeles from his home in Medford, Ore., to undergo specialized treatment.

The boy's parents said they couldn't afford to bring along Muggins and had no place to keep him at the home of a relative where they are staying.

Partly because of the time demands caused by Teddy's illness and partly because of the slumping economy in the Medford area, Teddy's father lost his auto sales job. He has had to work as a security guard to manage expenses for Teddy and his wife.

Doctors don't know extent of sickness

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Morning sickness, probably the most common and least studied problem of pregnant women, often lasts longer and hurts worse than most male doctors realize and is certainly not limited to the morning, a Swedish study concludes.

Dr. Ann M. Jarnfelt of Sahlgrenska University Hospital in Gothenburg said her study of 244 women with at least three pregnancies each, the last in 1980-81, also suggests "a possible relationship between nausea in pregnancy and impaired liver function."

"That means it might be worth trying the same types of therapies you use to treat liver disease," including changing diets, she said in an interview after presenting her findings at this week's 10th World Congress of Gynecology and Obstetrics.

The study also found women with allergies and gastritis and those who had side effects from oral contraceptives were much more likely to suffer from nausea when pregnant. The reasons for such apparently connections was not determined.

"Seventy percent of all pregnancies were complicated by nausea...and it is a serious problem," she said.

"It makes 12 percent of the women so sick they can't work...for a long time during their pregnancy. To that you can add more women who have to go home from work for two or three days."

Though the nausea popularly called morning sickness normally ends after the first three months of a pregnancy, about 9 percent were sick the whole nine months.

"When you read the medical books, they say it's usually just in the morning," she said, but only half her subjects reported peak nausea in the morning. Problems in the evening and both morning and evening were each reported by 7 percent.

Candy-maker groups join those urging trick-or-treat caution

By The Associated Press

Candy makers have added their voices to those urging parents to make sure their little ghosts or goblins don't fall victim to a malicious trickster this Halloween.

The Tylenol murders have underscored fears that children could be fed poisoned goodies while out making their traditional rounds.

Several communities have banned trick-or-treating and others are urging parents to keep their children home. Some are providing free X-rays of trick-or-treat bags.

Precautions are issued each Halloween, but there is added concern this year because of the Chicago-area deaths of seven people who took Extra-Strength Tylenol laced with cyanide.

Since the deaths three weeks ago, authorities have discovered isolated cases of acid or poison in products such as mouthwash and eyedrops in several states, including California, Florida, Ohio and Colorado.

The three national associations representing the candy makers and distributors say Halloween should go on, but they urged parents to inspect each candy treat their children bring home for damaged wrappers or other signs of tampering.

Other safety tips issued by the Chocolate Manufacturers Association, the National Confectioners Association and the National Candy Wholesalers include:

—Give and accept only wrapped or packaged candy.

—Visit only familiar homes or neighborhoods.

Tylenol maker to start comforting television spots

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — The makers of Extra-Strength Tylenol will begin 60-second television messages Sunday discussing cyanide contamination of the pain reliever and saying they will eventually reintroduce the capsules in "tamper-resistant containers."

Dr. Thomas N. Gates, medical director for McNeil Consumer Products Co., will appear in spots on all three major networks beginning Sunday evening telling the public, "We want you to continue to trust Tylenol."

Johnson & Johnson, the parent firm of McNeil, has pulled regular and Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules from the shelves of the nation's stores following last month's deaths of seven Chicago-area people who had ingested capsules laced with cyanide.

Meanwhile, Johnson & Johnson announced Friday it had received a letter from the federal Food and Drug Administration confirming that the contamination of the capsules did not occur in the company's two plants, said Johnson & Johnson vice president for public relations Lawrence G. Foster.

Foster said the FDA had verbally notified Johnson & Johnson that contamination did not occur at its plants in Fort Washington, Pa., and Round Rock, Texas, a few days after the first of the deaths.

In the television message, Gates will say that "you are all aware of recent tragic events in which Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules were criminally tampered with in limited areas after they left our factory."

"This act damages all of us," Gates says in the message. "Tylenol has the trust of the medical profession and 100 million Americans for over 20 years. We value that trust too much to let any individual tamper with it."

Fingerprints on tainted bottle investigated

CHICAGO (AP) — Investigators awaited the results of fingerprint analysis on a newly discovered bottle of cyanide-tainted Tylenol on Friday while seeking the customer who had returned it to a Chicago store.

Meanwhile, Johnson & Johnson, parent company of Tylenol's maker, announced that the federal Food and Drug Administration had conclusively determined the cyanide contamination did not occur at the company's plants. Seven people in the Chicago area were killed by the tainted capsules.

Joseph Chiesa, president of McNeil Consumer Products Co., said the company was "gratified" that the FDA's finding confirmed its own investigation.

The FBI crime lab in Washington employed laser technology in trying to lift usable fingerprints from the latest contaminated capsules, described by officials as deteriorated after apparently sitting in the bottle for several weeks.

The unused, 50-capsule bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol had been turned in to Dominick's Finer Foods on the North Side, several hundred feet from the Walgreen's drug store where the last poisoning victim to be discovered, Paula Prince, purchased a 24-capsule bottle.

It was the seventh bottle found to be contaminated with cyanide. Five bottles claimed victims, and FDA investigators removed a sixth from a drugstore.

The lot number on the latest bottle — MC2880 — matched the lot number on two bottles that claimed four victims in the suburbs.

Despite the latest find, "there still aren't any good solid thoughts on either access to the capsules or distribution," said a law enforcement source in Washington. "There are still a lot of theories, including that it (the poisonings) began with random purchase or shoplifting."

The bottle discovered Thursday is "one more item that might contain fingerprints," the source said.

The lot numbers on previous bottles found contaminated with cyanide conformed to the numbers on the bottles on the shelves in the stores where they were purchased.

However, the lot number on the latest bottle apparently differed from the remainder of the store's stock. The container also was returned without its box.

Some still question safety of DC-10s

By Joann Rodgers
Hearst Feature Service

Fear is again surfacing among airline passengers that DC-10's are "jinxed jets," wide bodies with a nasty habit of getting people killed.

Is the fear justified?

Nearly 1,000 people have lost their lives in the McDonnell-Douglas Corporation wide-body jetliner since it went into service in 1971.

In the latest disaster, on September 13, 50 died when the pilot of a chartered DC-10 en route to New York from Malaga, Spain, aborted the takeoff and crashed through a fence.

Last January, a World Airways DC-10 with 200 aboard went down in Boston Harbor after it belly-whopped, broke apart and skidded off the end of an icy runway. Two are missing, presumably drowned.

In all, the DC-10 has been involved in six fatal accidents, including three of aviation history's worst, the world's worst single plane crash and the worst domestic U.S. accident.

Engineers say that although the DC-10 may have fewer safety back-ups built into them than the Boeing 747, there is no way to demonstrate that such back-ups would have prevented the fatal accidents the plane has suffered.

If the information available does show any bias at all, it probably is that the DC-10's are more suspect in overall safety design than the 747. But the experts insist there is just no way to conclude the plane is dangerous, or to prove the case on the basis of the accidents involving fatalities.

THE PLANES WERE grounded for a month in 1979 after one operated by American Airlines crashed at Chicago's O'Hare Field, killing 273.

That same year, a DC-10 slammed into a mountain in Antarctica, killing 257. A year earlier, a Continental Airways flight from Los Angeles overran the runway and burned, killing two. And in 1974, a Turkish DC-10 went down near Paris with 346 aboard, killing all.

The headlines are indeed worrisome. But interviews with federal air safety officials, aviation engineers and industry spokesmen suggest that DC-10 safety and performance may be no worse than that of any other jumbo jets, such as the 747 or the Lockheed L1011.

At the very least, they say, the plane's media reputation as a "flying coffin" is out of line.

"I have yet to see any data that could nail down that notion," says Dr. Bernard Loeb, acting chief, studies and analysis division, of the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) in Washington, D.C. "The hard fact is that because of the way statistics are kept and the way the press presents disaster news, reports are often misleading to those who do not understand their limitations.

"AVIATION IS A VERY SAFE industry," he continued. "Statistically, the number of accidents where someone is killed or seriously injured in an actual crash, where an aircraft comes out of the sky or hits something, is very small and the incidents are widely separated.

"If there are only five or six such incidents over a decade or more, one just can't argue that the aircraft involved is unsafe. There is no way to compare DC-10's and 747's at this time in a way that would accurately pin down the safety question," Loeb commented.

Still another problem with statistics is variation in the denominators used to compute accident rates. Some airlines compute accidents per million miles flown and others per million passenger miles. The difference is stunning, notes Jack Cook, the McDonnell-Douglas spokesman in St.Louis.

If four people in a car drive 100 miles, that can be counted as 100 actual miles driven or 400 passenger miles. If 100 people in a bus drive 100 miles, that can be counted as 100 miles — or 10,000 passenger miles. If both the bus and car crash and kill all passengers, however, it does not mean that the bus is 25 times more dangerous than the car. Yet that is often how some groups compute the accident rates, Cook says.

THE NTSB KEEPS RECORDS only on accidents involving U.S. carriers. Foreign carriers which own, lease or operate planes keep different records. Their statistics cannot always be grouped with the careful data collected by the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board, the NTSB and the Federal Aviation Administration

In addition, tallies on fatal accidents include any case where there is a death, even if the aircraft is clearly not at fault. The death of the World Airways stewardess killed by a defective galley elevator door aboard a DC-10, for example, is given equal weight in the accident statistics with the Chicago crash. Each goes down in the records as a fatal DC-10 accident.

Injuries and deaths often depend on such things as weather, pilot error, maintenance failures and even the location of passengers in the cabin during a sudden period of turbulence.

The Malaga crash may have been caused by the blowout of retread nose wheel tires that created a vibration misinterpreted by the pilot. If so, that's a maintenance problem on a foreign carrier over which McDonnell-Douglas has no control. The NTSB, which evaluates accidents and makes recommendations for improved safety has no authority to either investigate or mandate changes in overseas carriers.

THE NTSB IS ORDINARILY called in by foreign governments to help investigate crashes, officially or unofficially, however, because of its expert staff. The Spanish government has not announced any official conclusions about the Malaga crash; an investigation usually takes months.

The crash that killed 257 in Antarctica was clearly due to pilot error and bad weather.

And, according to the FAA, the Chicago crash — in which the engine fell off shortly after takeoff — could not be conclusively blamed on DC-10 design and engineering defects.

The FAA cited maintenance problems and poor regulatory follow-up by its own inspectors, as well as the McDonnell-Douglas design that placed some of the hydraulic system lines close to the pylon assembly holding the engine to the wing.

"The whole issue of engineering and design that may make part of the aircraft especially susceptible to problems or vulnerable to accidents is a separate story," noted the NTSB's Loeb. "Accident statistics can't illuminate those. Even if there were agreement on possible design weaknesses, there would be no way to prove they are ever the single or major cause of an accident."

ONE REASON: SERIOUS or fatal accidents involve a combination of events.

"With modern aircraft, it is very hard to come up with a true rating of safety because it is impossible to predict the combination of factors, including weather, human error and so on that may be involved in an accident," said Brad Dunbar, an NTSB spokesman.

All aircraft approved by the FAA undergo modifications and changes with or without the provocation of an accident, so that it is hard to compare a DC-10 that flew in 1975 with one that flies today.

Notes McDonnell-Douglas spokesman Cook, "Any time the FAA certifies a plane, it is the beginning of an evolutionary process. Changes are always being made."

An engineer for United Technologies, which designs and manufactures jet engines for McDonnell-Douglas and other aircraft makers, said the "worry over the DC-10 is due to an unfortunate set of circumstances in which the press has over-played the stories ever since the Chicago crash in 1979.'

The engineer, who asked that his name not be used, has 30 years experience in jet engine design. He said that accidents involve a complex number of possible causes and sequences of events that are not always predictable.

"EVERYONE WHO WORKS on aircraft design plays endless 'what if' games. They try to anticipate what would happen to this or that component if this or that problem arose. But it's a complicated world out there, and no one can anticipate every combination of events."

In the Chicago crash, the actual incident that rendered the plane "unflyable," he said, "was the failure of a lift device on one side of the plane."

That failed because no one spotted a crack in the engine pylon assembly. When the engine fell off the pylon, it tore up the nearby hydraulic lines in the wing and caused the lift device failure, which was, in a real sense, the last straw.

Further compounding the problem of comparing aircraft safety records is the lag in data collecting, says Loeb. The NTSB has complete information only through 1981. With all the cautions and pitfalls, the most reliable information on the DC-10 and 747 probably comes from the NTSB.

Here are the latest NTSB figures:

— In the seven-year period ending in 1981, the total accident rate, including fatal accidents, for the DC-10 was 7 per million flight hours.

THE FATALITY RATE WAS 2.3 per million flight hours. The figure for accidents in some way related to the aircraft was 3.1 per million flight hours.

— For the 747, the total accident rate was 3.7 per million flight hours. The fatality rate was 0.3 per million hours, and the aircraft-related accident rate was 1.7 per million flight hours.

For comparison, there are 350 DC-10's in world-wide operation with a lifetime record of 1.5 billion miles flown. There are 540 747's in service and the lifetime total miles flown is 5.8 billion miles.

Of the DC-10's six fatal accidents, three apparently had nothing to do with the aircraft design itself. These were the World Airways stewardess' death, the Antartica crash and the accident at Malaga. The others have multiple causes and are still under debate in aviation engineering circles.

The 747 has also had six fatal accidents, according to the NTSB. Of these, according to John Wheeler, a spokesman for The Boeing Corporation, one included an Iranian Air Force plane that blew up, with no cause determined; two included pilot errors and two involved terrorist bombs.

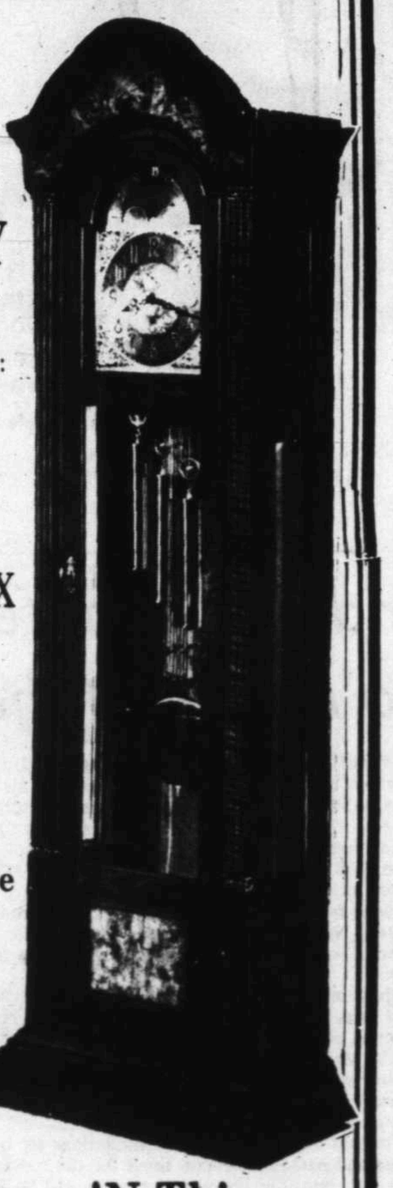

Other sets of figures dispute the NTSB data.

GAO can't tell if workforce reductions saved money

WASHINGTON (AP) — It is too early to tell whether federal workforce reductions by the Reagan administration will save money for taxpayers, according to the congressional General Accounting Office.

In a study released Thursday, the GAO said savings depend on whether agencies ultimately replace laid-off workers or whether they hire outside contractors to do the work of furloughed employees.

New York City cabby offers his ear, advice

NEW YORK (AP) — Streetmap in his head, steering wheel in his hands, Glenn Deiters yanks his cab out of the snarl and bark of Park Avenue traffic, parks illegally and peers through the tall windows of the Bankers Trust Building.

"Sometimes there's a feel about a building," he says. "Here you can see right up the escalators. If there's a guy with a briefcase coming down, you're in business."

The lobby's vacant and Deiters scans the sidewalk, hands still squeezing the wheel of his 1981 Dodge Diplomat, banana yellow, brakes good, suspension fair after 42,616 city miles. "I don't see that wild-eyed look on any of these people," says Deiters, 20 years a hack. "I can tell by their faces. If they're panic-stricken, they're looking for a cab."

No one's looking and Deiters, working against the clock and 50,000 competitors, slips back into the barrage of traffic. "The money's the mover," he says. "You're standing still, you're not making money."

But passengers in Deiters' taxi get more than one-ninth of a mile for a dime. They get the willing ear, the street-smart advice — and the harrowing ride — that can turn mere transportation into something like therapy on a roller coaster.

"I'm a guy who thinks I'm doing something for the city, being a cab driver," he says. "People try to unburden themselves and all they're looking for is a little good will."

They get it from Deiters, a big man with a beefy smile and advice on everything from the best pizza in town to the city's drug problem: "Shoot the pushers." He mixes wry humor, tough talk and dime-store philosophy into a concoction as brash as his native city.

"Cab drivers create the impression of New York," says Virginia Christian, of Richmond, Va., a recent passenger in Deiters' cab. "People go to the Statue of Liberty — that can't talk. But on the way they talk to the driver. He's the most important person in the city."

Deiters says he's appreciated more by tourists than by residents. "New Yorkers are very hard cases," he says. "They see the pain, the suffering, the grief, the bag ladies, the pimps, the prostitutes, the junkies and the pushers. Everybody's crowding everybody. There's a rush on all the time. Everybody wants to be there an hour ago."

Deiters gets them there with a studied insouciance, deftly carving his taxi through seemingly impenetrable walls of traffic. "Good cab driving is a science," he says. "You get used to the heartbeat of the city, and you've got to be where it is."

He pilots his cab chiefly in Manhattan: 11 miles long, two miles wide, trafficked on a summer day by more than 900,000 cars and trucks. He vies for fares with 11,787 authorized medallion taxis and an estimated 40,000 "gypsy" and other cabs, battling for street space with fearless pedestrians, belligerent bicyclists, even high-speed roller skaters.

"You play it by ear and instinct," says Deiters, 48, a construction worker until he injured his knee in a fall. "You have to be able to weave around like a flock of swans swimming on a lake."

Deiters, driving for a fleet, keeps about half the fares he collects. He works 10 hours a day, without lunch, averaging 13 miles per hour. He makes about $15,000 a year.

"I could get an office job, but I can't be caged," he says. "If I get really disgusted I'll park by the river with a can of soda and relax. Ten minutes of that and I can take 'em on again, I can face the traffic."

Indians want federal government to represent their claims in court

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Arthur Duhamel lowered his nets into waters once used by his ancestors, wildlife agents told him Indians couldn't fish there without a license — and Indians weren't getting many licenses.

In 1979 a federal judge said the state of Michigan acted illegally in the more than half-century that Indians were barred from fishing in their traditional waters. Now, Duhamel wants compensation for all the years he couldn't fish in Lake Michigan's New Mission Bay.

He is one of thousands of Indians hoping a lawsuit will force the United States government to represent them in court — and soon.

The lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court by Indian rights attorneys, who noted that if the government doesn't file suits on the Indians' behalf by Dec. 31, thousands of claims will be wiped out.

On that date, the statute of limitations set by Congress and extended several times for the Indians will run out, meaning the government would be barred from filing lawsuits on behalf of Indians who were legally wronged before July 18, 1966.

THE NATIVE AMERICAN Rights Fund, which filed the suit, contends the Interior Department has no intention of beating the deadline, even though it's aware of 17,000 potential claims.

They're asking U.S. District Judge Howard Corcoran to order the department to file lawsuits on behalf of the Indians before Dec. 31.

Simultaneously, the fund and some members of Congress are pushing for passage of legislation to extend the deadline. It would have to be approved during the lame duck session to begin Nov. 29.

The pre-1966 claims are often difficult to identify, because many of the wrongs were done years ago and descendants are hard to find.

One type of claim involves denial of fishing rights. Other Indians had their land taken away illegally. Still others had money taken from estates to reimburse states for old age assistance payments. Non-Indians received similar payments without paying anything back.

The chief Indian attorney in the federal lawsuit, Anita Remerowski of the Native American Rights Fund, said, "The Indians see it as one more promise that's been breached."

ADDED THE FUND'S legislative director, Suzan Harjo, "There's a perception that Indian rights are subordinate to non-Indian rights. That's not what the Constitution says. It's not what the huge body of Indian law says. It's classic cavalry thinking."

Carl Shaw of the Bureau of Indian Affairs denied that the Interior Department agency is failing to meet its responsibility.

"We still believe if the deadline is not extended we will have filed all the claims by Dec. 31," he said.

"There's no way there's 17,000 claims that we haven't looked at. My people tell me we will have identified and filed by Dec. 31 those cases we feel are legitimate. The department feels no extension is necessary."

The lawsuit contends the government hasn't even investigated many potential claims, including those of Duhamel's tribe, the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa-Chippewa Indians in Suttons Bay, Mich.

The 58-year-old Duhamel, a former pipeline welder who now runs the fishing business he always wanted, said treaties of 1836 and 1855 gave his tribe the right to fish in ancestral waters.

"WE'RE VERY SIMPLE people," he said. "We believed the treaty operated to give us the right to fish. Non-Indian fishermen were all around me. A local fishing firm came right in our waters in front of our house and we couldn't take a rowboat out and fish with a hook and line.

"We attempted to fish but were always arrested. They got paranoid. They would say I was in violation of state law. I would reply they were in violation of the Constitution of the United States.

"I had to devote so much effort to fighting these people I feel my life has been shortened 10 years. Without fish, we don't live."

The greatest number of claims, the lawsuit said, involve trespass. A county would build a road through an Indian's backyard without asking, and a utility would do the same with power lines.

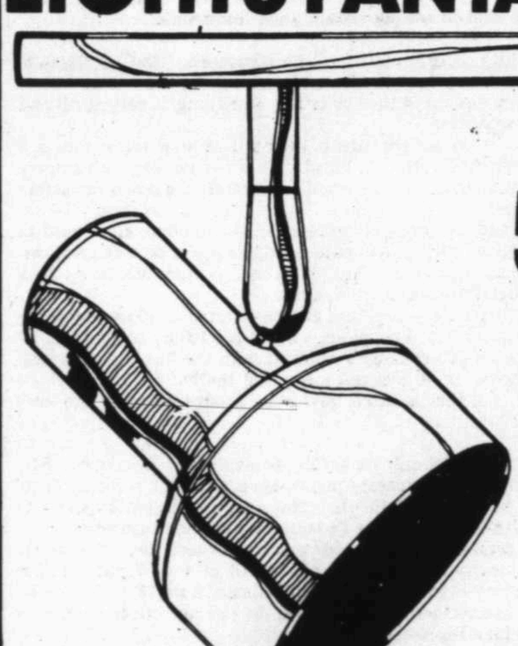

BUREAU OF INDIAN Affairs guidelines would legalize many of these intrusions if they're deemed beneficial to the Indians. That doesn't satisfy Emmaline Hammond, a member of the small Chukchansi Tribe who lives in rural central California on the western slope of the Sierra Nevada.

When she was a child, her family's property had only a dirt trail to an Indian cemetery. By the late 1950s, there was a dirt road. Now there's a two-lane paved county road to serve a nearby subdivision.

Drivers speed by, dumping their garbage along the way, killing pets and endangering children. Mrs. Hammond said she learned about the road when bulldozers suddenly appeared about three years ago.

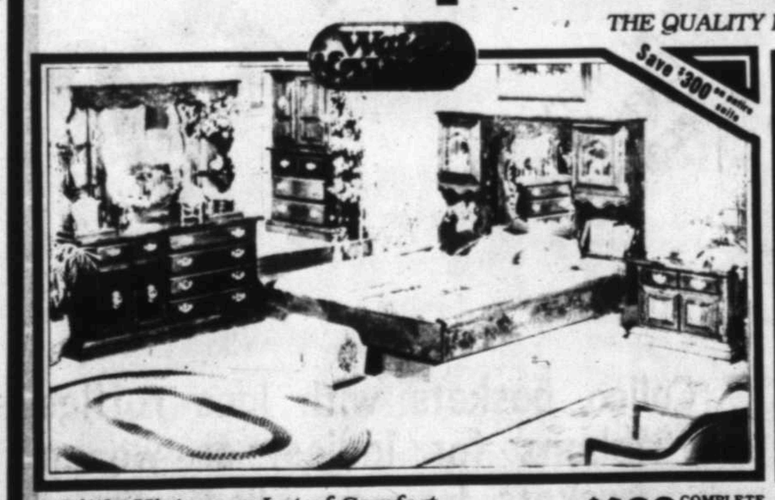

"I would like to have the road closed," she said. "It cuts the property right in half. I don't want money. Money doesn't bring the land back. They couldn't pay us enough for the damage that's been done."

Cub Scouts hold third Pushmobile Race

The third annual Chaparral District Pushmobile Race was held recently at Midland College in the east parking area of Chaparral Center.

Patches were awarded to all Cub Scout participants and ribbons for first, second and third place winners in each group. The first-place winners of the three age groups then raced each other for the grand champion title and ribbon.

A pushmobile derby is a race using cars built by Cub Scout Den members and their parents. The course is 1,600 feet long and is set up in 200-foot intervals. At the 800-foot point, the cars are turned around for the return trip of 800 feet. Two Cubs are required to operate the cars — one to push and the other to drive — and different boys take over at each interval.

Grand champion went to the 8-year-old group from Pack 84.

Stepdaughter links Harrelson to 'payoff'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The prosecution Friday presented sensational testimony from Charles Harrelson's stepdaughter to link him to a package of $100 bills the government charges was the $250,000 "payoff" for the 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

The emotional testimony from Teresa Starr Jasper finished tying Jimmy and Elizabeth Chagra and Charles and Jo Ann Harrelson to the package of money that Mrs. Jasper admitted picking up in Las Vegas and delivering to the Harrelsons in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Mrs. Jasper, who broke into tears after flashing a smile at her mother seated at a counsel table, admitted under questioning by prosecutor John Emerson that she told Mrs. Harrelson she had an affair with Harrelson, her stepfather, from December 1979 until February 1980.

She also read several letters that Harrelson wrote the jailed Mrs. Jasper last year telling her, "I love you with every fiber of my body" and complimenting her for refusing to testify in the grand jury investigation of Wood's death.

In the letters, Harrelson made numerous references to FBI agents who he referred to as "the Gestapo," "scum," "stinking S.O.B.'s," "dog dung-eating slobs" and other obscene terms.

Mrs. Chagra's former secretary, Canadian Cindy Cote, earlier described how she and the pregnant Mrs. Chagra drove a package from the Chagra home in Las Vegas to the Jockey Club in June 1979.

Then Mrs. Jasper nervously testified how the Harrelsons dispatched her from Corpus Christi to pick up a package which they said was a "gambling debt." She said the package was delivered by an attractive pregnant woman at the same Las Vegas hotel on June 24, 1979.

Defense attorney Tom Sharpe Jr. said early in the trial that he would show that the package actually contained $150,000 and actually was related to a "scam" that Harrelson was working on Chagra, a high-roller gambler and narcotics trafficker with a reputation as an easy mark.

Government OKs gas price hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal energy regulators Friday approved a $136 million natural gas price increase for Cities Service pipeline company, while leaving the case open for hearings on a narrow issue in the price dispute.

The increase, which affects gas customers in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming, Oklahoma and Texas, goes into effect today, but could be refunded to customers if the decision is reversed after hearings.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission allowed the increase, known as a purchased gas adjustment, to offset higher prices Cities Service is being charged by producers from whom it buys gas. The increase would amount to about $98 a year for Kansas customers.

The adjustments are routine matters, filed every six months by pipeline companies and allowed to go into effect automatically unless objections are raised.

But the commission, on the recommendation of its staff, called for hearings in the Cities Service case within 60 days to examine whether the pipeline could be paying more to "affiliated producers" — those which are part of the company — than to independent gas producers.

The Kansas Corporation Commission and a host of politicians had asked FERC to deny or at least delay the price adjustment, saying it did not meet the legal test of being a pass-through of "prudently incurred costs."

The KCC also had asked FERC to consolidate the gas price adjustment issue with another rate hike request currently under consideration.

Coloradoan, five others indicted in bomb threats

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman promised immunity from prosecution in exchange for information about an attempt to use sophisticated bombs to extort $15 million from the Gulf Oil Chemicals Co. was among five people indicted Friday, said U.S. Attorney Dan Hedges.

Jill Renee Bird, 34, was indicted along with her common-law husband John Marvin McBride, 46, who is accused of masterminding the plot; Theodore Duane McKinney, 45; Timothy K. Justice, 30; and Michael Allen Worth, 34, all of Durango, Colo.

Federal grand jurors returned a 12-count indictment accusing the five of conspiring unlawfully to obtain $15 million from Gulf.

U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald earlier Friday denied a request for a protective order that would have kept intact the immunity promise given to Ms. Bird in exchange for information about the extortion scheme. The judge said she did not have the authority to interfere with the grand jury proceedings.

Government attorneys, in a brief prepared for Ms. Bird's hearing, said the promise of immunity was withdrawn because McBride did not live up to his promised part of the bargain.

Gulf shut down its Cedar Bayou chemical plant, about 30 miles east of Houston, for several days in late September and early October after extortionists threatened to blow up the refinery unless they were paid $15 million.

Five bombs were found, and one exploded harmlessly as it was being defused.

Federal authorities in Colorado had said Ms. Bird would not be prosecuted because her common-law husband had agreed to cooperate in the investigation.

She was released and charges against her dropped when McBride agreed to lead authorities to more explosives. Five bombs were found in a mine shaft near Silverton, Colo., leased in McKinney's name.

But on Thursday, Ms. Bird said grand jurors "told me I was a target" of the investigation. She said she declined to answer the panel's questions on grounds of her Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

Ms. Bird said she was not surprised by the judge's refusal to grant the protective order. Her attorney, Robin Auld, said Thursday that prosecutors had hinted they might revoke the immunity guarantee.

"They think Miss Bird might be more culpable than they first thought and they're mad...," said Auld.

The indictment accuses each of the defendants of conspiracy to extort, attempted extortion, illegal use of explosives, illegal transportation of explosives across state lines, mailing a threatening letter and threatening to damage a facility.

If convicted, all of the defendants could face maximum sentences totaling 100 years in prison.

Hedges said U.S. Magistrate Kelvin Botley set bond at $1 million apiece for the defendants. However, Hedges said attorneys for Ms. Bird have been advised that she will be allowed to surrender voluntarily.

Epic behind Chinese art collection

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Described by its young and innovative curator, Richard Wang, as housing "the best collection of Chinese art in the world," Taipei's famed National Palace Museum has begun a major expansion program.

Ground will be broken in the next few months for a new administrative and storage wing and work will start on renovating existing offices into exhibition areas. When the two projects are completed in about five years, the museum will have nearly doubled the space available to display its treasures.

That is good news for Chinese art lovers who now may see, at any one time, only about 6,000 of the 600,000 items stored in two vast, air-conditioned caves behind the classic-style museum compound.

This immense collection, admired by more than 18 million visitors since the museum opened in 1965, was brought to Taiwan in the last days of China's civil war in the late 1940s. Packed in 4,824 crates, it was moved almost literally a step ahead of Communist leader Mao Tse-tung's conquering army.

CONTRARY TO general belief, the fleeing Nationalists did not bring all the pieces of the Palace Museum collection, a stunning assemblage of paintings, bronzes, porcelains, pottery, jade and other objects acquired by a succession of emperors over a thousand years. They chose only the finest examples, a fifth of 19,550 crates which already had been taken to south China in the 1930s ahead of the invading Japanese.

The story of the movements of the Palace collection over the turbulent centuries is a Chinese epic. The latest chapter is how the museum has come of age under the guidance of the 42-year-old, Taiwan-born Wang.

In early days the museum displayed pieces in a spartan setting of vast halls and plain glass cases huddled together. That has changed in the past five years. Ceilings were lowered, rooms made smaller and more intimate. The treasures are mounted like precious jewels on glass platforms, dramatically lighted from different angles.

Despite the richness of its holdings, the museum is relatively poor. Its annual budget of $2.5 million just covers salaries and upkeep, with nothing set aside for acquiring new pieces. The 10,000 items obtained in the past 17 years were donated, mostly by Japanese admirers and wealthy Chinese.

ONE IMPORTANT blank spot is the museum's lack of ceramic burial objects such as the brilliantly colored statues of retainers and officials turned out in the Tang dynasty, 618-906 A.D. A few Tang figures have been donated, but "burial objects were considered inauspicious and were never given to the emperors," Wang said in an interview.

Wang, a ruggedly handsome man with an interest in sports — cups and trophies line his office walls — graduated from journalism school in 1966, a year after the museum opened. He started as its public relations official, then became fascinated with the collection.

"I didn't plan to become a museum man," he said. "But I got hooked on the culture and stayed. I never looked back."

Sent to the University of Michigan for a year to study museology, he returned in 1972 to become curator at age 32.

What are the most valuable pieces in the collection?

"That depends," he said. "What it all boils down to is how rare an item is. Antique collectors will pay anything for a piece which is unique."

WANG SAID that from an historical point of view, bronzes and paintings are very valuable, but seldom fetch high prices at auctions or in the art market. For craftsmanship, the jades are superb.

"All things considered," he said, "I should say our most valuable pieces are two large bronzes of the Chou dynasty (1766-221 B.C.). "One is a big tripod which contains more than 500 ancient characters. The second is a basin, or pan, which tells of the conclusion of the first international border treaty. Historically, both are very important."

Among paintings, Wang rates as best Fan Kuan's "Travelers Among Mountains and Streams." The Sung dynasty (1045-1105 A.D.) landscape is the oldest, and influenced all others which followed. The best porcelain is the austerely simple and rare Ju ware, also of the Sung period, he said.

Museum Director Chiang Fu-tsung has been with the collection since it arrived. Still vigorous at 86, he has written a detailed account of how the pieces were moved from Peking to Nanking, then to the southwest in wartime, and finally to Taiwan in 1948.

Guns replace fists in town rivalries

HAMLIN, Texas (AP) — In West Texas, where the cotton fields stretch as far as the horizon and high school football is the most powerful attraction for 150 miles, small-town rivalries run strong.

Manhood is to be proven and hearts won by fighting the boys from Stamford or McCaulley, Trent, Roby or Rotan. For generations, it has been a male rite of passage performed with fists and feet on dark country roads away from the vigilant eye of the local police.

But in recent years, the fighting has turned ugly and tragic. Guns have replaced fists. Since April 1980, three have died on the backroads of Jones and Fisher counties north of Abilene.

Wandell Williams, a 19-year-old graduate of McCaulley High School, was the latest to die — killed Oct. 10 by bullets from another youth's rifle.

A companion, Danny Benevides, a senior at McCaulley High School, was critically wounded. Four young people from Trent and Hamlin were arrested and charged with murder.

"This isn't the first time someone's been killed," said William Yeamans of Hamlin, one of the four arrested in the shooting. "If they got a gun — and most everybody carries a gun — you shoot them before they shoot you."

That reasoning was good enough for a Fisher County jury when in August 1980 it acquitted Charles Allen, then 21, in the shooting death of Billy Pena, 25. During a three-day trial, the jury found that Allen acted in self-defense when he fired on Pena as the other man pulled a shotgun from his truck.

However, Williams was unarmed and sitting in the back seat of an Oldsmobile sedan when he was killed.

"They followed us out of town, driving real close. We stopped on the roadside and they pulled up to block us off," Yeamans said. "One person in our pickup started shooting. When we were going down the road, someone hollared they seen a gun in the car. Maybe that's why they shot. I just don't know."

Craig Whitley, 18, of Trent; his half-sister, Belinza Nell Turner, 22, of Hamlin; and Charles Eddie Adams, 20, of Trent, also were arrested and charged with murder. All except Whitley have been released from the Jones County Jail in Anson after posting their $25,000 bonds.

"It is not anything new to have rivalries between these little towns," said Woodrow Simmons, district attorney's investigator for Jones County. "But this is a senseless killing. There wasn't any reason for this to happen."

Although early reports attributed the killing to a football feud between Trent and McCaulley, Yeamans said even he's not sure what started the fight between his friends and Williams' buddies. The two groups had been at a party when the altercation began and both groups left the party to end up together on the highway.

"It doesn't matter what the fight is about — girls, a football game or just a personal grudge. These boys are all the time fighting — McCaulley and Trent, McCaulley and Hamlin, Hamlin and Rotan," said Hamlin resident Don Hall. "We did it when we were young, but everything was fair. It was one on one with your fists. Now everything goes — guns, knives, all the kids have them."

Hamlin Police Chief Ronnie Hill says he's aware of the problem, but he says he doesn't know what to do.

"In rural areas like this, there is a lot of small game to hunt and everybody carries a rifle or shotgun in their pickup," Hill said. "It's perfectly legal to carry a rifle and with snakes and what-have-you in the country, it's necessary. It's just unfortunate that the boy's dead."

Hill said he had hoped that the shooting death of a 17-year-old Hamlin youth last year would have "shaken some sense into the kids." In that case, a 16-year-old youth pleaded guilty, was certified as an adult and sent to prison.

"We've got a real problem here in Hamlin," Hill said. "We're in the corner where Jones, Fisher and Stonewall counties come together. All the kids have to do is go across the county line and they're 18 miles from the nearest law enforcement officer."

Logistics and laws, however, don't mitigate the pain felt by McCaulley and Trent or by the Williams family.

McCaulley — a collection of houses, a post office and a school strung together by dusty, red roads — is a cohesive farming community of less than 100 residents. The entire rural school district has 115 students. Williams' graduating class had three members.

In Trent, residents expressed their sorrow about the killings and their concern that some were blaming their town.

"There's just not a feud, darn it. We've always been friends," said Roy L. Neff, superintendent of the Trent Independent School District.

"We feel just terrible about what happened, but I just don't know what to do."

Trent, with a population of 313 and the semblance of a downtown, is larger and more prosperous than McCaulley. The two towns, separated by a 22-mile stretch of country highway, have long shared a six-man football rivalry, but Neff says the contest has always been friendly.

"It's really sad when three or four kids can blacken everyone," Neff said. "And not all those kids involved were bad kids, either."

Adams, one of those charged with murder, graduated two years ago from Trent High School, where he lettered in football, basketball and track and was a member of the National Honor Society, Neff said. He farmed with his father, said the superintendent.

Whitley, a native of Hamlin, attended Hamlin, McCaulley and Trent schools, Neff said. Whitley dropped out of Trent High School last spring, Neff said.

Mrs. Turner, who also was arrested, has a small daughter and has been working at the Hamlin Dairy Queen to pay family bills, a friend said. She was staying with Whitley, her half-brother, at the time of the shooting, according to the friend.

Prisonser's parole revoked

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The parole of Silvester C. Torres, convicted in Ector County of possession of heroin, two counts, has been revoked due to unsatisfactory adjustment, the Board of Pardons and Paroles reports.

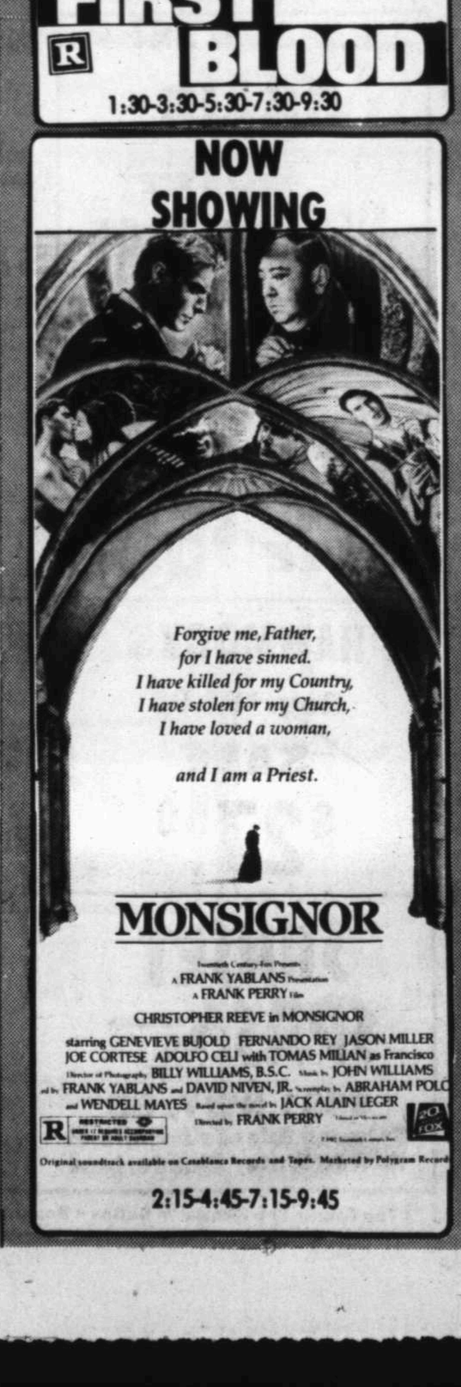

Torres began a 10-year sentence Oct. 23, 1978, and was granted parole on June 25, 1981.

When former National Guardsman Barry Sullivan of Hammond, Ind., received a check in the mail two months after his discharge he felt like he had just found a winning lottery ticket. He promised half his windfall to his mother, but opened the envelope to find the check was for two cents. Sullivan said the check was probably to balance the books. He is going to frame it.

School called miniature collage of farms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Soon after the sun rises, Steve Klause and his classmates prod dairy cows toward the barn or bring horses to the stalls as they go to school.

Klause is a student at North Carolina State University's School of Veterinary Medicine, a modern $32 million structure, pond and rolling pastures located just minutes from the state Capitol.

"How do you talk to people about their pet bird unless you've had a pet bird?" said Dr. Ben Harrington, head of the animal unit at the school.

Klause says he likes the program because some other veterinary schools do not encourage so much contact with the animals.

"We don't want to graduate a student from here without a solid background in any area in which they might be asked to act in an advisory role," said Dr. Donald Howard, associate dean in charge of teaching. "It is our intent not to have a Taj Mahal here but an animal operation."

Mirian Spann, an animal technician, compares the school to a collage of miniature farms of dairy cows, beef cattle, goats, horses and swine.

"They (the herds) are small in proportion but you still have all the same problems," she said.

Students are asked to roll up their sleeves and help with the animals as soon as they arrive. Each year, students take on more responsibility. They start working with healthy animals and move to sick animals, solving health maintenance problems and working in animal clinics.

The school opened a year ago with a small group of donated animals and classes in cattle barns. This year's class has 40 members and the number of animals is expected to double this year.

Construction is expected to continue until 1983, when the school will open its animal hospital and admit its first full class of 72 students. Eventually there will be 80 teachers and 20 researchers at the school.

Howard said the school's goal was to reflect accurately the mission of a land-grant university by offering teaching, community service and research.

"Without question, our dominant effort is to train people who are concerned with food animal problems," Howard said. "We have tried to direct the teaching program to be sure they're generalists. We have given them essentially a liberal arts education in veterinary medicine."

Policeman buys lunch, wins $500,000

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — For some, a sudden fortune equals The Great Escape, but for police officer Fred C. Drago, it's only money.

He's more concerned about his life's goal, completing 30 years as a policeman next year and collecting a pension.

"A pension is something I earned. The money is something I won," Drago said, holding a radar gun at oncoming school traffic as he made his rounds.

Drago's sudden fortune arrived six months ago when he entered a local McDonald's for a hamburger, fries and coffee. He left with a game ticket worth $500,000 stuck in his gunbelt.

"People asked me if I was going to sell my house and move over by the country club. I told them that would only mean a new house payment and mine's paid for," he said. "I've paid off everything. I don't owe nobody nothing. That makes you feel better."

Drago, 53, did take The Caribbean Escape, though, taking his wife, Anna, 51, on a cruise after collecing the $500,000.

Drago's fortune surprisingly hasn't changed his lifestyle that much. He still prefers driving his 1966 Chevelle. In fact, he looks on true wealth as a burden.

"Merrill Lynch called me. E. F. Hutton called. They wanted me to invest in precious metals. I wasn't interested in that. Another guy called in Mobile. He never would tell me what he was in. He wanted me and the wife to come out to his house for dinner. I figured he was in real estate.

"A car salesman offered to sell me a Rolls Royce or an eight-passenger limo.

"I don't believe people with millions and millions have got good sense. It would drive you crazy keeping up with it."

Drago, who has five grandchildren, said he had turned the winnings over to an accountant and a bank to invest.

"The accountant told me to go out and spend some of it," he said. "I don't know what the taxes will be."

Not all the calls were offering investment advice. Some of them were for television shows. To the suggestion that he hire an agent, Drago replied, "My wife is my agent and my treasurer." She has started a scrapbook titled "Rags to Riches."

Winnings aside, Drago is serious about his police career which he started at $215 a month.

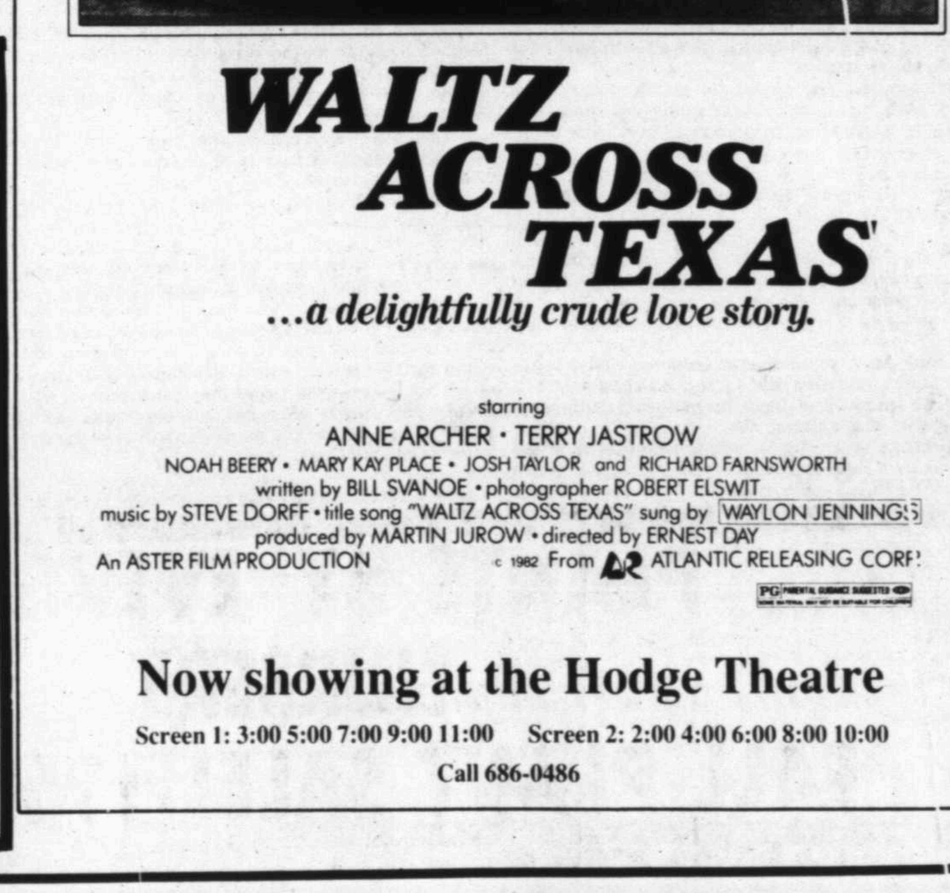

"I never shot anybody. If I can make my 30 years, I can say I worked without having to shoot anybody. I think that's a good record."

A car stopped beside the patrol car. "Officer, did you know the flashing lights aren't working on the speed limit signs?" the driver asked.

"No, I didn't," Drago said. "We better report that."

'Bottle battle' continues to rage in Western states

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

The battle over empty soda bottles and beer cans — and the nickels shoppers would get for lugging them back to market — rages in four Western states this election year as voters consider adopting bottle-deposit laws.

The hottest and costliest skirmish over deposit laws is in California, where opponents have poured about $4 million into a contest that supporters say could affect the future of bottle legislation in other states.

"We got New York this spring," said Sandra Nelson, the bottle-bill lobbyist for Environmental Action in Washington. If California passes the measure in November, she said, it will be "like a death knell" for deposit law opponents.

Initiatives also are on the ballot in Colorado, Arizona and Washington state, marking the environmental groups' broadest effort in more than three years to put mandatory deposit laws on state books.

In Massachusetts, a Nov. 2 referendum would repeal a deposit law already on the books but not set to take effect until Jan. 17.

NINE STATES, beginning with Oregon in 1972, have approved some form of bottle-can deposit plan aimed at reducing litter and increasing recycling. The latest was New York, where the Legislature passed a bottle bill last spring.

Proponents — environmental groups as well as farmers — say bottle laws reduce litter, save tax dollars in trash and landfill costs and conserve energy by recycling glass and aluminum.

Opponents — led by beverage manufacturers and bottlers and organized labor — say bottle laws raise the price of beer and soft drinks, force people in the container industry out of work, hurt charitable and for-profit recycling efforts and fail to significantly reduce litter.

"There has been, it seems, a vigorous push by a very small hardcore group of dedicated lobbyists to get this on the ballot in several states, but they are an extremely small minority," says Roger Bernstein, of the Glass Packaging Institute, for years a leader against mandatory deposit bottle bills.

The issue also is being considered in Rhode Island, where 25 of the state's 39 cities are voting on non-binding resolutions to urge the General Assembly to pass a bottle bill.

BOTTLE BILLS HAVE been peddled, recycled and peddled again since the early 1970s — in Congress, state legislatures, statewide initiatives and city commissions. This year is the third try for the initiative in Washington state.

Recent statewide votes on the issue haven't fared well. Five initiatives have been offered since 1979 — and all were defeated.

California's Proposition 11 is based on Oregon's law, as are most deposit laws. It would make buyers of beer, soft drinks or mineral water to pay a nickel deposit on each can or bottle. The deposit would be refunded when the customer returned the empty container.

As of mid-September, Proposition 11 opponents had raised $3.7 million and a spokesman for the group says the war chest has grown steadily. Supporters of the bottle-deposit issue have spent less than $1 million, but opinion polls in the state show them leading.

California has 16 glass container manufacturing plants — the most in the nation, and the can making industry also is concentrated there.

"WE'VE BEEN BEHIND in the polls, but certainly a lot less behind than three or four months ago," says Gilbert Moore, of the opposition, Californians for Sensible Laws.

A television advertising blitz in Colorado has slashed the proponents' lead on Issue 5 as well, Ms. Nelson said. She said she expects opponents to outspend proponents about 3 to 1.

"The need to recycle beverage containers and clean up our state is clear," says Liz McDonough, spokesman for Coloradoans for Recyling.

The opposition group, Coloradans for Voluntary Recycling, claims a mandatory bottle deposit will replace effective, convenient and profitable voluntary recycling with a cumbersome and expensive container collection system.

Initiative 414 in Washington state is similar to a measure voters rejected in 1979.

In Arizona, Proposition 200 opponents are using an environmental angle against the bottle-deposit issue. They said washing the returnable containers could increase water usage in that water-conscious state by as much as 75 million gallons a year

Anderson upsets No. 1 seeded Tarr

And, presto! Suddenly, there were none.

It was like Pickett's Charge at Gettysburg and the Bridge at Sharpsburg. The casualties this week have been horrendous.

Going into today's semifinals of the Midland Tennis Club's 22nd Fall Classic, the ranks of the seeded players have been virtually levelled. With the hasty exit of No. 1 Derek Tarr Friday, Armand Molino, No. 6, and Ricardo Acuna, No. 9, were the only ones left.

Acuna will meet unseeded Andy Gordon at 11:30 a.m. today at the Midland College courts in one semifinal while Tim Anderson will face Molino in a match to follow. Also on the agenda is a doubles semifinal match.

The finals will be played at the Racquet Club Sunday, singles at 1 p.m. and doubles at 3 p.m.

Tarr eliminated Anderson of Mesa, Ariz., 6-2, 6-2 last week on the way to victory in the Tyler tournament, but Friday Anderson took a 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 decision.

Mike Gandolfo, who earned his accounting degree at Clemson University, seemed on his way to another finals meeting with Tarr, like the one in Tyler, when along came Andy Gordon to knock off the seventh-seeded Lakeland, Fla., resident, 7-5, 6-3. Earlier Gordon had beaten No. 2 seeded Marcel Freeman in the upset that touched off the weeklong carnage.

Gandolfo, reputed to have the third most feared serve in tennis, Satellite or Grand Prix, had one of those days when he double-faulted himself out of contention.

Molino, who attended Wake Forest, took the measure of Sean Brawley, 6-4, 6-2, after reaching the semis at Tyler last week.

Acuna, who plays on Chile's Davis Cup team, expelled 19-year-old Sammy Giammalva 7-5, 2-6, 6-2. Giammalva, seeded fifth, like Acuna, has competed in the fastest of circles with high finishes in Grand Prix tournaments at Napa, Houston, Cologne, Tampa, and Atlanta. He won the doubles at Bologna and was runnerup at Atlanta and Vienna.

The doubles didn't escape the rash of form reversals as Gary Donnelly, Scottsdale, Ariz., and Brawley upset No. 1 seeded Tarr and Gandolfo, 6-3, 4-2, 40-30, default when Gandolfo suffered an ankle injury.

Acuna and J. Ayala defeated C. Nunn-H.Reid, 7-6, 6-3 and will meet Gordon and T. Osipkay in a doubles semifinal following the two singles matches.

J. Robbins and N.L. O'Rourke defeated T. Keiffer and A. Avram, but the team withdrew from the tournament due to a shoulder injury suffered by O'Rourke. As a result Donnelly and Brawley gained a spot in the finals Sunday without having to play a semifinal. —TED BATTLES

Bobcats spoil 'Dogs' revival

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The last two weeks the Midland High offense seemed to have a new life resurrection and two straight victories had vaulted the "Graveyard Dawgs" back into District 4-5A contention. The offense took a step back to the grave at Memorial Stadium Friday night.

The result was a 13-0 loss to the San Angelo Bobcats, leaving the Bulldogs all but dead in the 4-5A race while keeping San Angelo's second place playoff hopes burning with a brighter flame.

Midland High is now 2-3 in loop play while San Angelo is 3-2, tied with Midland Lee and Odessa High with two games to go.

And again it was the story we have come to learn by heart at Midland High this year. The offense just didn't give its gutty and proud defense a chance. The MHS defense swarmed as usual, but you can't keep good football teams out of the end zone without some offensive help. And San Angelo is a good football team.

THE MHS offense, which got 188 yards from Raymond Chambers two weeks ago against Abilene Cooper and 119 yards from Ricky Madrid last week against Odessa High, gained only 71 yards rushing and 33 passing for a mere four first downs and penetrated the Bobcat 50-yard line only once all night.

Chambers was held to a mere 23 yards rushing on 10 carries, but the hard part to swallow was that he lost four fumbles to boot. And Madrid was held to a mere 30 yards on 10 carries. And quarterback Mark Page tossed two more interceptions, his 13th and 14th of the year, to add to the six turnover night.

It was enough to put the Bobcats over the top, but they still had a tough time doing it against the Bulldog defense, which again came to play.

A Chambers fumble in the first quarter at the Midland 40 set in motion San Angelo's second quarter TD. The Bulldogs held the Bobcats three downs, but San Angelo coach Jimmie Keeling gambled on fourth down at the 35 and quarterback Greg Thomas responded with a 35-yard TD bomb to Derrick Campbell, who was behind the Bulldog defense at the seven and backed his way into the end zone. It was one of the few mistakes MHS made on defense all night, but that was enough since the Bulldogs could get nothing going on offense.

IT LOOKED like the Dogs were going to come out of the Homecoming halftime with a determined mind after Madrid returned the opening kickoff from the 17 to the Bobcat 49. That was the only time MHS penetrated the Bobcat 50, but Chambers fumbled on the next play and San Angelo marched to the Midland two where Gary Russell and John Hibbitts came up with third and fourth down tackles to keep the Bobcats out of danger.

And by this time, the Midland defense was beginning to show wear and tear from staying on the field so long, and San Angelo came back in the fourth period to march 78 yards in seven plays for the final 13-0 margin. The killer was a 32-yard TD romp by Trey Wright, who ended the night with 109 yards rushing on 17 carries.

The Bulldogs just got nothing started on offense and ended up with only 34 offensive plays on the night. The MHS defense was on the field the rest of the time.

Defensively, the Bulldogs' Alex Mata and Hibbitts played as if they could win the second place playoff berth by themselves. Russell and Terry Hannon also came up with big defensive plays. It's an old story, but the MHS defense deserves a better fate.

AND IT all came after it looked like the Bulldogs had the offense straightened out, but then again, San Angelo's

McCallum runs streak to 16 with knockout

NEW YORK (AP) — Unbeaten middleweight Mike McCallum of Kingston, Jamaica ran his unbeaten streak to 16, 15 by knockout, when he stopped Carlos Betancourt at 1:51 of the third round of a scheduled 10-rounder Friday night at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum.

McCallum, 25, ranked 13th by World Boxing Association, had Betancourt, 160 pounds, from San Juan, Puerto Rico, helpless on the ropes with a flurry of hard rights and lefts to the head and midsection before referee Tony Perez stopped the bout.

McCallum scored a second-round knockdown with a right to the head.

Betancourt, idle since last December, saw his record drop to 10-7.

"I'm hoping that within a year I'll get a title fight in the junior middleweight division," said McCallum. "That's where I belong. I have no trouble making the weight — only getting fights against good opponents."

Lenny LaPaglia, an undefeated middleweight from Chicago, who has knocked out all of his 17 opponents, scored a technical knockout over Charlie Hecker, 158, of New York, at 1:47 of the third round of another scheduled 10-rounder. Hecker was fighting for the first time after a seven-month layoff.

The 6-foot, 160-pound LaP-aglia, who has never been forced to go past the third round in any of his bouts — 10 knockouts were in the opening round — suffered a cut over his left eye after bumping into Hecker's head.

Midland Lee pulls one out of hat at Big Spring

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — Earlier this week, the Midland Lee coaching staff promoted junior varsity halfback Walter Jones to varsity and then showed what kind of faith they had in him in the fourth quarter when things were looking pretty desperate.

Trailing Big Spring by a 7-0 score with less than two minutes on the clock and the ball resting on the Rebels 45-yard line on a third-and-6 situation, head coach Spike Dykes called a triple option play with Jones in the backfield.

Quarterback Paul Cox took the snap from center and rolled out toward the right sideline where he was quickly cut off by the Big Spring defense. With no place to run, he pitched the ball to his trailing back, Jones, and the sophomore turned it up field.

The Rebel blockers mowed down the Steers defense and that left one player for Jones to beat, defensive safety Jay Pirkle. Pirkle had the sideline cut off so Jones cut back inside and won a foot race to the end zone. The play went 55 yards for the touchdown and suddenly it was a 7-6 ball game with 1:40 left on the clock.

"I knew I had it when I cut back," said Jones about his game-saving touchdown run. "I got a good block from Luther (Johnson, Lee's wide receiver) at about the 30."

"It was good blocking that did it," said Coach Dykes. "There was a bunch of them and he (Jones) did a good job of running."

Coach Dykes could have called for extra point kicker Kerry Robertson after the touchdown to tie the game, but with the District 4-5A race for second place up for grabs, a tie wouldn't do it. Instead, he decided to go for the two points.

Again, Cox was the quarterback and again he rolled out to his right. This time Greg Woodberry, a fullback, was the trailing back and he took Cox' pitch into the end zone for the go-ahead score, 8-7.

Big Spring came up with excellent field position on the ensuing kickoff when Lee went for the onside kick and that gave the Steers' hot-handed quarterback Adam Rodriquez plenty of room to work with. On the first play he hit wide receiver Robert Porras for a 16-yard gain. Porras carried the ball out of bounds on the Lee 44 to stop the clock.

It was the next play that stopped Big Spring's comeback attempt. Rodriquez, who was 7-of-10 on the night, put the ball up deep only to see Lee's Luther Johnson come down with it on the 25-yard line. It was the only interception Rodriquez threw in the game and, with only 1:26 left on the clock, it came at a time when Lee could run off the final seconds for the win to maintain a share of second place in the league with San Angelo and Odessa High with a record

"Billy helped us. He taught us how to win. And that sticks with you." — Oakland A's center fielder Dwayne Murphy, reacting to the firing of manager Billy Martin.

Kuenn, Dalton in confab

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Manager Harvey Kuenn and General Manager Harry Dalton spent more than an hour Friday discussing the Milwaukee Brewers, but Kuenn's job status for next season was among the items left unsettled.

Kuenn took over for fired Manager Buck Rodgers on June 2 and, serving as interim manager, guided the club to its first American League championship. The Brewers lost to St. Louis in the seventh game of the World Series Wednesday night.

Kuenn, who had said during the World Series that there were questions to be answered before he decided whether he wanted to return as manager, said before Friday's meeting that those matters had been resolved.

Permian romps; OHS beats Abilene

Odessa Permian moved its magic number to one as far as winning the District 4-5A football title Friday night with a 56-14 romp over Abilene Cooper and Odessa High kept its second half playoff hopes alive with a 20-6 decision over Abilene High.

Permian is now 8-0 on the year and 5-0 in loop play and needs only a victory over Big Spring next week or a loss by Odessa High to San Angelo to clinch the title outright.

Permian had to come from behind twice against Cooper despite the lopsided ending. Mike Troglin scored three touchdowns on runs of 28, 32 and 10 yards to pace the Panthers while quarterback Brent Kelley tossed a seven-yard TD to Britt Hager and scored himself on a 23-yard run.

Cooper led 7-0 after an Eric Tarr nine-yard TD in the first period and again in the first period by a 14-7 margin on a Michael T. Royals one-yard run, but the Cougars couldn't hold the lead.

Odessa High got two touchdowns from Howard Harris, a 68-yard pass from Albert Cruz and a two-yard run, and an 85-yard TD romp from Jim Cottingham in its victory over the Eagles of Abilene.

OHS is now 3-2 in league play, tied with San Angelo and Midland Lee for second place. Both Abilene schools are now out of the hunt with 1-4 loop marks.

Greenwood stays alive in 7-A race

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

GREENWOOD—Greenwood's Rangers chopped up the Bronte Longhorns with Bill Franks' slashing runs between the tackles for a 26-6 District 7-A win here Friday night, setting up two showdown games with Eden and Garden City which will decide the district title.

The win was the fourth straight for the Rangers, who evened their record at 4-4 and boosted their 7-A record to 4-1. Bronte is 2-6 and 1-4.

Quarterback Stuart Burleson punched over a couple of one-yarders for scores and passed 15 yards to David Skinner for another, but it was Franks who was the workhorse, gouging out 189 yards in 34 carries.

The outcome was never seriously in doubt as the Rangers marched 76 yards in 13 plays on their first possession to score on the Burleson-Skinner aerial with 5:20 left in the first period.

On its next possession, Greenwood rumbled 65 yards on a 14-play drive that twice was set back by penalties. Franks ripped the Longhorn line for 58 yards and caught a pass for another 12-yard gain before Burleson took it in from the one with 10:05 left in the half.

Bronte's Todd Lee, a stalwart defender all night, stepped in front of Franks to intercept a Burleson pass and race 45 yards for a TD with 7:13 left in the half, but Greenwood stormed back to score before intermission. This time it was an 80-yard hike in 14 time-cosuming plays before Franks belted it across from the five with 1:05 left in the half.

Greenwood's final TD came in the third period, a drive of 60 yards on which Burleson hit end Marc Colburn for 35 yards to get things moving. Burleson finally took it in from the one with 2:46 left in the third period.

Before it was over, the Rangers had to thwart a Bronte threat resulting from a 67-yard interception return by Jesse Puentiz to the Greenwood eight. The Horns appeared TD bound with third and two, but Randall Morgan caught a fumble in midair at the one.

Rankin rambles by Balmorhea

BALMORHEA—Rankin's Red Devils raced to a 36-0 halftime lead and then coasted to a District 6-A victory over Balmorhea, 51-8, here Friday night.

The Red Devils improved their season's record to 4-3 and district mark to 2-2-1 while Balmorhea slipped to 0-5-1 and 3-1.

It was a couple of passes from quarterback Quad Midkiff to Chug Browning that got the Devils started. The first was for 31 yards with 7:59 left in the first period and then next was a 21-yarder with 4:54 in the period. Jesse Hernandez kicked two of his five extra points to make it 14-0.

Dennis Black, the 1,000-yard all-state candidate, took over after that by scoring three touchdowns and passing 64 yards to Keith Kevil for another.

Black's TD runs were from one, one and three yards out and the senior fullback wound up with 81 yards in 23 carries.

Balmorhea averted a shutout on a one-yard run by quarterback George Gomez in the final period.

Ozona sullies Crane's record

OZONA—Ozona's Lions roared with 17 first half points to spoil Crane's dreams of an unbeaten season by beating the Golden Birds, 17-8, in a District 6-3A game here Friday night.

It was the first loss in eight games for Crane, which slipped to 2-1 in district. Ozona is 7-1 and also is 2-1 in district.

Crane's lone score came in the third period when Mark Angel ran in from the nine-yard line and Junior Bishop ran the two-pointer.

Ozona had a 16-10 edge in first downs and a 336 to 265 edge in offensive yards.

Hobbs nudges Carlsbad

CARLSBAD (AP) — The Hobbs Eagles took a major step towards securing a post-season playoff bid Friday night with a 7-6 victory over Carlsbad in a District 4AAAA showdown of the state's top-ranked teams.

Hobbs, ranked No. 2 in the state behind Carlsbad, got a 2-yard touchdown run by Doug Haynes in the first quarter and the tenacious Hobbs defense made it stand up. The winning margin turned out to be a Jerry Hernandez extra point kick following Haynes' TD.

Tornados toss scare into Pecos

LAMESA—Underdog Lamesa threw a scare into the Pecos Eagles before bowing, 14-12, in District 2-4A football action here Friday night.

Running back Gilbert Arrendondo scored from the one with 1:41 left, but the Tornadoes bid for a tie failed when the Eagles stopped the run.

Pecos had taken a 14-6 lead with 7:21 left in the game on a Rosario Solis run of two yards and Dennis Mosely kicked his second extra point.

In the first period, an eight-yard run by Elmer Jackson gave Pecos a 7-0 lead. Lamesa countered in the second quarter when Quarterback Craig Bryant flipped a three-yard pass to wide receiver Jeff Latyon.

The win leaves Lamesa with a 1-6 record for the season and an 0-4 district mark.

Texico tops Tatum, 42-0

TEXICO (AP) — Unbeaten Texico, behind Earl Bibbs' three touchdowns, rolled to a 42-0 win over Tatum Friday night in a District 2A high school football game that clinched a playoff berth for the Wolverines.

Bibbs scored a pair of touchdowns on short runs and was on the receiving end of a 15-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Brad Steward.

Texico, in running its record to 7-0, also got a trio of touchdowns from Steward.

Stanton Buffaloes sting Owls, 41-7

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

It was suppose to be a close game as the Buffs and Owls were the only two teams in District 8-AA without a loss.

But Stanton jumped out early, kept Reagan County's running game in check, then ran, ran and ran some more.

Stanton wasted no time in establishing their dominance as Nicky Reyna took the opening kickoff and sprinted 80 yards to put the Buffaloes up 6-0.

"That opening kickoff really hurt us," Davis said. "It's the first touchdown scored on either of our kicking teams in four years."

Reagan County stopped the Buffs on their second possession with a goal line stand on the two. But the poor field position and a bad punt gave Stanton the ball on the 30. Seven plays later Mark Helms hauled in a 8-yard Darrren Sorley pass.

Lee wins, 8-7

On their second possession of the second half, the Steers mounted their first successful drive of the game, 86 yards on 14 plays with Rodriquez getting the touchdown on a four-yard run. Carl Green kicked the extra point for a 7-0 lead.

Midway through the fourth quarter, Big Spring started a second drive from its own 16-yard line. A 36-yard pass from Rodriquez to tight end John roeiner gave the Steers a first down near midfield and 10 plays later it was fourth-and-8 on the 24 yard line. Green was called on to kick a 41-yard field goal. His aim was on the mark, but his distance was short. Lee had escaped a back-breaking score.

Lee outrushed Big Spring 214-127 but were outpassed 146-18 to make the offensive statistics nearly even. The big difference in the game was Jones. his 55-yard run gave him 63 on the night (season) on two carries to lead both teams on the ground. Woodberry contributed another 43.

"The kids really got after it tonight," said Stanton coach Steve Park.

But Stanton was helped by great field position as witnessed by the a statistic that will never show up in the scorebooks. All five of the Stanton touchdowns came off drives that started inside the Owls' 50 yard line.

Fullback Rocky Barnes lead the Buffalo ground game with 192 yards in 24 carries and two touchdowns.

The junior scored on a 5-yard run in the second stanza and again in the third quarter on a 7-yard blast.

With eight seconds left in the second half, Reagan County looked like they might get back in the game when quarterback Bobby Gunnels threw a 10-yard completion to Jack Blakely, who then pitched back to Greg Fisher, who was trailing on the play. Fisher romped down the sideline for the Owls' only score as time ran out.

But the Buffs came out in the second half and put the Owls in place, outscoring Reagan County 21-0.

Stanton's defense held Reagan County's All-West Texas tailback Greg Fisher to 63 yards rushing.

"They forced us to go to the passing game and that isn't our style," Davis said.

defensive unit deserves a share of the credit because they were rock hard. Still, MHS could have a win with any kind of offense on the field and it's hard to win any game with six turnovers.

Midland High is not completely dead in the race for second place, but they are in a position of having to win their final two games and hoping San Angelo and Odessa High loses again.

The Bulldogs are now 3-5 on the year while San Angelo is 6-2. San Angelo has Odessa High and Big Spring left to play while MHS faces Abilene High and Lee.

Clovis scores over Roswell

ROSWELL (AP) — Quarterback Doug Hubby threw for one touchdown and ran for another to spearhead defending state champion Clovis to a 22-14 District 1AAAA prep football victory over Roswell.

Roswell, ranked No. 4, committed two turnovers in the first quarter that led to a field goal and touchdown by No. 3-ranked Clovis.

Tim Hartley drilled a 22-yard field goal for the Clovis Wildcats and Hubby hooked up with Mike Minnis on an 8-yard touchdown pass.

Roswell's Coyotes came up with their first score in the second quarter when Eddie Glenny raced 20 yards for a touchdown.

The Wildcats scored in the third quarter on a 2-yard touchdown jaunt by Robert Grimes.

Jimmy Miller had a 2-yard touchdown run in the final quarter. Hubby scampered in from 9 yards out for a touchdown in the same period.

The Coyotes committed three fumbles and had three passes intercepted during the contest.

Clovis boosted its record to 6-1 overall and 1-0 in district action. The loss dropped Roswell's mark this season to 5-2 and 0-2 in the league.

McCamey romps to easy victory

MILES—Jodie Stephens scored on 45 and 43 yard runs to ignite McCamey's Badgers to a 42-0 win over Miles' Bulldogs in a District 8-AA football game Friday night.

Both of Stephens' runs came in the 28-point first period as McCamey raised its season's record to 5-3 and went 2-1 in district. Miles is 3-5 and 0-3.

Eddie Venegas scored on a 20-yard run and fullback Sidel Pineda punched in from the six to make it 28-0 at half.

Andrews' Kirk Pearcy retains Tall City Cross-Country title

El Paso Bowie claims team title

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Andrews' Kirk Pearcy won a challenge from Lubbock Roosevelt's John Warner to retain his Tall City Invitational Cross Country title while Amarillo High's Brenda Moore won an easy victory among the girls Friday morning at Hogan Park.

Pearcy won this event as a junior last year, but had a stiff challenge from Warner this time around. Pearcy was two strides behind Warner at the two-mile mark, but the Andrews senior was 25 yards in front one mile later at the tape, and that was what counted. Pearcy posted a time of 15 minutes and 51 seconds to win the event.

"I haven't lost a cross country race this year, but I've run against Warner five times and he is always a tough opponent," noted Pearcy. "The time appears to be slow for me, but this is a long course, so it may be better than I think."

DESPITE Pearcy and Warner's showing, it was El Paso Bowie which took the team title with an amazing low of 55 points. Bowie placed seven runners in the top 32. Jose Acuna led Bowie with a third place. Amarillo Palo Duro was a distant second with 113 points while Andrews had 161. Midland High was tenth with 245 with the top finish an 18th by Chuck St. Germain. Midland Lee did not finish in the team standings, but Carl Piccolo's 16:52 was good for 12th place.

Moore's two-mile win in the varsity girls division came in 11:50 some 11 seconds ahead of El Paso Coronado's Cathie Koss and 14 seconds ahead of Midland High's Claire Hardy.

"I lost last week in Lubbock, but this is the fifth win for me this year," said Moore. "It wasn't a good time, but it was an easy course and I guess we all took it easy."

Hardy, who has been in every race this year for MHS, said, "Brenda, Cathie and I were all close until the last half mile. That's where Brenda began to take the lead."

Despite Moore's victory, Amarillo had to settle for second place in the team race with 99 points. El Paso Coronado won the event with 24 points, placing seven runners in the top 16. Midland High was sixth with 188 points.

BIG SPRING'S John DeLeon was a surprise winner in the junior varsity boys division with a 17:43 over three miles, but Midland High won the team title with 48 points. Odessa High was a close second with 52 and Big Spring had 57. Lee was sixth with 150.

The MHS Bullpups were led by Arturo Arciga's fifth place 18:12 while Micheal Mashburn was eight in 18:30. Lupe Reyes led Lee with a 18:44 for 13th place.

Perhaps the biggest win of all came in the girls junior varsity run where Lubbock Coronado's Biigit Gotterup, an exchange student from Denmark, took an easy victory with a 13:01.

Gotterup had never run competively and this was her first victory. She played handball in Denmark, but part of her training was a grueling 3,000 meter daily warmup run before practice.

"I just wanted to do something when I came to the United States. I thought about volleyball, but it was already started, so I decided to try running. This is my first victory and I'm having a lot of fun."

Coronado coach Jon Omdahl said UIL rules prohibit Gotterup from running in the varsity competition, but "she would be about my third best runner if I could use her on the varsity."

Mauch resigns as Angels pilot

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Gene Mauch, who guided the California Angels to the American League West division title this season, has decided not to return as manager in 1983, the club announced Friday.

A terse prepared statement released by the Angels said: "The managerial position was offered to Mauch on Wednesday. After 48 hours of deliberation, Mauch notified the club this morning (Friday) of his preference not to return and the Angels have reluctantly accepted."

Postlewait putting favorite

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Defending champion Kathy Postlewait and 15 other top women golfers put their putting skills on display Saturday and Sunday in competition for the $50,000-first prize in the J&B Gold Putter Award.

The "course" for the tournament, now in its fourth year, consists of six holes each on the ninth and 18th greens and the practice green at the Desert Inn Country Club.

The tournament, which features a total of $100,000 in prize money, brings together the LPGA's top seven putters on the tour, the top seven birdie makers, defending champion Postlewait and Lynn Adams, the top eagle maker.

Knicks trade for Bernard King

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernard King of the Golden State Warriors was traded to the New York Knicks for guard Michael Ray Richardson, the National Basketball Association teams announced Friday.

King, a forward, had signed an offer sheet with the Knicks recently. He averaged 23.2 points per game last season, eighth-best in the NBA. Richardson, entering his fifth season in the league, averaged a team-and career-high 17.9 points per game last year.

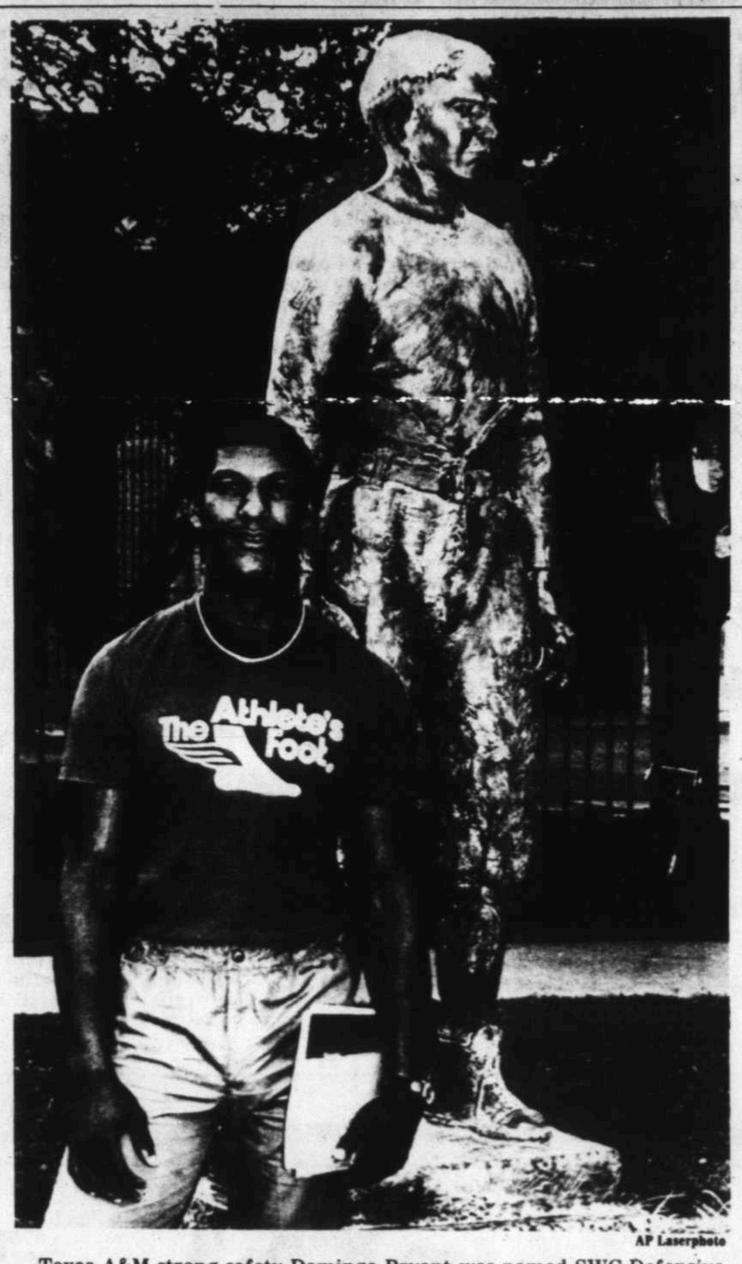

Depalmer wins in quarters

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Mike Depalmer of the United States overcame Brazilian Joao Soares 3-6, 7-6, 6-1 Friday in the quarterfinals of the $100,000 Fischer Grand Prix Tennis Tournament.

Depalmer wore down Soares with a powerful serve during their two-hour match.

Seventh-seeded Henri Leconte, 19, of France also reached the semifinals by rolling over fourth-seeded Marcos Hocevar of Brazil 7-5, 6-3.

In doubles action, Pavel Slozil of Czechoslovakia and Leconte defeated Americans Stan Smith and Chris Dunk 5-7, 6-2, 6-2,

Test for SMU

Texas favored over Mustangs

By Associated Press

Southern Methodist and Arkansas, unbeaten and nationally ranked, get severe road tests Saturday in a regionally televised round of Southwest Conference family feudin'.

Even though SMU is fourth-ranked, has the nation's longest victory streak at 10, and boasts two of the most prolific rushers in the National Football League, the Mustangs are UNDERDOGS according to the oddsmakers.

Las Vegas has SMU a one-point 'dog in its ABC-TV regionally beamed 2:50 p.m. game in Memorial Stadium against the 19th-ranked Texas Longhorns, who have had two weeks to simmer over their 28-22 loss to Oklahoma.

SMU is 3-0 in the SWC race, a half game ahead of the Arkansas Razorbacks. Texas has won its only conference game.

Sixth-ranked Arkansas was a field-goal choice over Houston in the 11:35 a.m. CBS televised "Breakfast Bowl" game against the Houston Cougars, who have beaten the Razorbacks four consecutiv years.

Arkansas has never won in the Astrodome.

In other SWC matchups, Texas A&M was a 14-point nod over the winless Rice Owls in a 2 p.m. game at College Station; Baylor was a 7-point selection over homestanding Texas Christian in the 89th meeting in history between the two schools; and Texas Tech was a 20-point underdog in its intersectional game against Washington, the No. 1-ranked team in the country.

"We talked about the challenge of playing the No. 1 team in the nation," said Moore. "When you are No. 1, you know you are playing for the national championship every week...so, that is what we are facing. I think our players are looking forward to the challenge."

'We'll be fired up," said Tech quarterback Jim Hart.

So will SMU.

The Mustangs' last loss was to Texas 9-7 in Texas Stadium last year.

"I'd like to beat Texas more than anything else in the world," said SMU All-American tailback Eric Dickerson. "Our most important goal is to go undefeated and win the Cotton Bowl...Texas stands in the way of that."

Texas Coach Fred Akers said,"Last week's open date gave us a chance to renew our energy and forget about any past disappointments. We're going to have to have all the energy and concentration we can because we will have to be a scrambling, attacking football team to take on SMU.

"This has always been a good series but it has really heated up the last two or three years. I'm glad it's here."

SMU's Eric Dickerson was named national Back of the Week by AP, for his performance against Houston last week, but it's Texas he'd most like to beat...

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

The TV folks, remembering 1969, the year of the Big Shootout in the SWC, are gambling that the race will boil down to a High Noon in December duel between Texas and Arkansas, as it did in 1969. Even so, the chances of the remake coming up to the Oscar performance of the 1969 game, aren't guaranteed. It could fizzle. And Texas and Arkansas could come up firing blanks for their Shootout.

It pretty much depends on SMU. The Mustangs and their All-America, 200-yard-a-game Tailback stand in the way of both the Razorbacks and Longhorns.

BUT IF YOU happen to be SMU Coach Bobby Collins or a Mustang fan, of which there really aren't all that many these days, judging by attendance for a No. 4 ranked collegiate power, you probably wish the NCAA had some sort of tampering rule, like they do in baseball.

SMU faces Texas Saturday and you can't blame the Mustangs for suspecting that someone stacked the deck against them somewhere along the way. After all, would you rather be playing a Texas team that is coming off a recuperatrive Rest and Relaxation week, or a Longhorn that is still wondering if anyone got the name of that truck after successive outings against Oklahoma and Arkansas. That's the way the schedule read before the TV folks began waving money.

Two weeks ago, we were 7-5 in bucking the point-spread. Someone called in to ask what happened last week. Due to the crush of Series and football copy, there was no room for forecast, which was a shame, since we got all 40 games picked correct. Well, if you are going to tee it up in the rough, you might as will get a good shot.

This week, the SWC...

SMU plus one over Texas—Oklahoma broke long gainers on the Longhorns with second banana backs and there's nothing second banana about the Dickerson-James tandem.

Rice plus 14 over Texas A&M—Strange things have a habit of happening in this series and 14 points looks pretty good.

Washington minus 20 over Texas Tech—Tech and 20 would look good at Jones Stadium, but not in the great rain-washed northwest...still Huskies have Stanford coming up next week...

Arkansas minus 3½ over Houston—Razorbacks continue unbeaten, but that schedule thus far is suspect.

The big ones...

Oklahoma minus 20½ over Oklahoma State—Both are in Big 8, but Cowboys aren't in same league as Sooners.

Kansas State plus 4½ over Kansas—Wildcats tied Missouri.

Missouri plus 25 against Nebraska—Huskers have been rolling up lopsided margins, but Tigers will have to be shown.

West Virginia plus 3½ over Penn State—Mountaineers have some people who like to show Joe Paterno he made a mistake and it's a Morgantown. State may win, but it should be close.

Vanderbilt plus one over Mississippi—I thought Vandy would be favored.

Stanford minus 11 at Washington State—John Elway should be good for 14 himself.

Mississippi State plus 1½ over Auburn—Just a hunch. And not a good one, considering Auburn beat Tennessee by 10.

UCLA minus 12 over California—No contest.

South Carolina plus 18 over LSU—Sure, Gamecocks lost to Furman, but 18 points...

Lake View rips Andrews, 42-27

SAN ANGELO — The Lakeview Chiefs leaped a major hurdle here Friday night in its effort to win the District 2-4A football title with a 42-27 victory over the Andrews Mustangs.

Lakeview is now 4-0 in loop play while Andrews absorbed its first district loss of the year after a stunning upset over Sweetwater last week.

Andrews led 14-13 in the second quarter, but the game was knotted at 21-21 at the half. Lakeview put the game away, however, in the second half with three unanswered TDs as John Rodgers scored on a two-yard run and a 12-yard pass from Drew Whipple and a six-yard interception return by Tim Boutilier. Whipple tossed three touchdown passes on the night and had 156 yards in the air.

Andrews' quarterback Bill Morrison scored on a one-yard run, tossed two TD pass of 57 and 36 yards and passed for 193 yards in a bang-up show in the high scoring loss.

Dallas Mavericks top Houston Rockets

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A balanced scoring attack led the Dallas Mavericks to a 109-96 victory over the Houston Rockets Friday night in a National Basketball Association exhibition game.

Six Mavericks in double figures, led by Rolando Blackman's 14 points. Kelvin Ramsey and Jay Vincent added 13 each.

Elvin Hayes hit 23 points and pulled down eight rebounds for Houston. Vincent also had eight rebounds for Dallas.

Kagel threatens to withdraw

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Sam Kagel, the mediator brought in to help resolve the National Football League players' strike wants to withdraw from the bargaining talks, it was learned Friday night.

"I plan to get on a plane tomorrow (Saturday). I'm tired, I want to go home. I gave it my best shot," sources quoted Kagel as saying.

But he also scheduled one last negotiation session between the players' association and the owners' Management Council, which was to resume at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

It was believed Kagel planned to suggest at Saturday's session that a mediator-arbitrator be brought in to attempt to resolve the dispute.

Winnipeg beats Devils

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — The Winnipeg Jets held the New Jersey Devils to only 12 shots at goaltender Ed Staniowski and eased to a 3-1 triumph Friday night in the only scheduled National Hockey League game.

Both teams looked sluggish in the second period, although the Jets still had control, outshooting the lackluster Devils 9-4.

For today's big games

SMU, WVU have motivation

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Coaches Bobby Collins of Southern Methodist and Don Nehlen of West Virginia won't have to resort to psychology to get their teams ready to play Saturday.

There is no need to plaster the bulletin board with opponents' remarks to get anyone fired up because incentive will not be lacking when fourth-ranked SMU visits No.19 Texas and 13th-rated West Virginia plays host to No.9 Penn State.

"I'd like to beat Texas more than anything else in the world," says SMU tailback Eric Dickerson. "Our most important goal is to go undefeated and win the Cotton Bowl. Texas stands in the way of that."

LAST YEAR, the Mustangs were ineligible for a bowl game and Texas spoiled their otherwise perfect season with a 9-7 victory.

The Penn State-West Virginia series has been among the nation's most one-sided rivalries, with Penn State leading 39-7-2 and riding a string of 23 victories in a row since a 14-14 tie in 1958. This time, however, not only are the Mountaineers in the Top Twenty, but their quarterback, Jeff Hostetler, was Penn State's No.1 signal-caller until Todd Blackledge beat him out early in the 1980 campaign.

"I'm pretty beat up, but I'll be ready to play against Penn State. I'm looking forward to that," says Hostetler, who transferred to West Virginia and sat out the 1981 season.

ELSEWHERE, TOP-ranked Washington entertains Texas Tech, runner-up Pitt visits Syracuse, No.3 Georgia is at Kentucky for a night game, No.5 Nebraska hosts Missouri, No.6 Arkansas is at Houston, and No.7 Alabama plays host to Cincinnati. Eighth-ranked Arizona State and No.10 North Carolina are idle.

In the Second Ten, No.16 Miami and No.17 Florida State are not scheduled, while No.11 UCLA is at California, Oregon State at No.12 Southern California, South Carolina at No.14 LSU for a night game, No.15 Notre Dame at Oregon, No.18 Clemson at North Carolina State and Oklahoma State at No.20 Oklahoma.

SMU owns the nation's longest major college winning streak — 10 games since last year's loss to Texas. Two years ago, SMU broke in a freshman quarterback named Lance McIlhenny against Texas, then the nation's No.2 team, and he has led the Mustangs to 20 victories in 22 starts, including a 20-6 upset of the Longhorns that day.

Penn State and West Virginia have identical 5-1 records and Nehle says Saturday's game "will be an easy one to prepare for. I'm not concerened about our kids getting ready for the Penn State game. I'm concerned about winning it, obviously, but I won't have to do much to get them fired up or to get them to concentrate on getting ready for the game.

"We've been able to take everybody's best shot so far. But Penn State is always good. They have great players at every position every year. When we played Pitt (WVU's only loss, 16-13), we knew they were super, but they didn't explode. But look at Penn State; this team takes the ball on Nebraska and drmves down the field in about 10 seconds."

WASHINGTON TAKES a week off from the Pac-10 race to entertain Texas Tech of the SWC. Pitt's Dan Marino gets a chance to tie a national record against Syracuse; he has thrown a touchdown pass in 17 consecutive games, one shy of the NCAA mark set by Steve Ramsey of North Texas State in 1968-69.

A touchdown against Kentucky will give Georgia's Herschel Walker a Southeastern Conference record; he is tied with LSU's Charles Alexander at 42.

Nebraska and Oklahoma usually dominate the Big Eight, but with 2-0 records they are the only teams to have won a conference game. The other four league games this season all ended in ties.

SYMPATHY and a little fear is in Barry Switzer's voice as he talks about Oklahoma State's season so far and the Cowboys' chances of beating his Oklahoma Sooners today.

The cross-state Big Eight rival seldon has presented a serious threat to Oklahoma, and this year bad luck has joined Oklahoma State's opposition to leave the Cowboys 1-1-2 for the year.

"I'm scared of them because I know this is their season. This is their Texas game and a win Saturday could make a 2-2-2 record easier for them," the Oklahoma coach said.

Trite as it sounds, Switxer said, the Cowboy record doesn't indicate what the team can do.

Oklahoma State Coach Jimmy Johnson almost snickers at such talk and retorts "when I was coaching at Oklahoma I don't remember them rolling over for Oklahoma State."

But Johnson agrees that his Cowboys are better than the figures show. Among his ranks he can count the nation's best rusher, who may be one of the best in college history.

ERNEST ANDERSOn has piled up an average of 208.4 yards a game in Oklahoma State's first five games and has drawn national attention to the team that otherwise has fallen on hard times. Oklahoma State has the nation's worst ratio of gaining and losing the ball to interceptions and fumbles.

"Snakebit" is the term Switzer uses to describe the Cowboys' condition. "I thought they would be 5-0 by this time," he said.

The Cowboys have tied their last two games and Johnson said that could be worse than losing. "A loss you can forget. With a tie you rehash all the 'ifs.'"

Johnson said that heading into the game against Oklahoma "we're as battered up as we'vE been all year long, both mentally and physically."

Oklahoma Stade's admired tight end John Chesley will miss the Oklahoma game because of injury.

Switzer said former halfback Stanley Wilson will be moved to his old fullback position. He admitted earlier that moving Wilson was a mistake made more noticeable by freshman Marcus Dupree's performance in the I-formation.

Rookie Liebler holds slim edge at Pensacola

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Rookie Steve Liebler, looking for his first professional victory, fired a sizzling 5-under-par 66 Friday to take a one-stroke lead after two rounds of the $200,000 Pensacola Open.

Liebler, whose best finish so far on the PGA tour was a tie for seventh in the LaJet Classic two weeks ago, birdied three straight holes — beginning at No. 14 — to overtake Calvin Peete, who also shot a second-round 66.

Barber, Sikes tied

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Miller Barber and Dan Sikes shot their second consecutive 69s Friday to move into a tie for the lead at 138 after two rounds of the Hilton Head Seniors International golf tournament.

First-round leader Don January, playing in the mist and cold of the afternoon round, shot an even-par 72 over the 6,603-yard Shipyard Plantation Golf Club course to hold down third place at 140.

In a group at 142 were Ted Kroll, who shot a 6-under par 66 Friday; Julius Boros, who had a 68; and Bob Goalby and Buck Adams, who had second-round 71s.

Five more players completed 36 holes under par. Tied at 143 were Guy Wolstenholme, who turned in a 2-under par 70; Jim Perree, who had a 71, and Gardner Dickenson, Howie Johnson, and Al Bessalink, who fired second-round 72s.

"I birdied the first three holes and felt I could really shoot a good score today," Barber said. "But I just didn't make any putts after that. I had a lot of chances."

"The key to playing well here is to keep the ball in the fairway," he said. "They (the fairways) are in great condition and you can spin your irons and fire the ball right in there."

Cubs hire coaching staff for '83 season

BASEBALL—The Chicago Cubs hired coaches Ruben Amaro, Duffy Dyer and Fred Koenig for 1983. Amaro, 46, former Gold Glove infielder with St. Louis, will coach third base. Koenig, 51, coached with Texas Rangers this year, will coach first and Dyer, 37, a catcher during 14 seasons in the majors, was hired as the bullpen coach. John Vuckovich, who coached first this season, will be reassigned to the dugout to assist Manager Lee Elia. Billy Conners remains the pitching coach. Fired earlier were coach Tom Harmon, third base coach Gordy MacKenzie and hitting instructor Billy Williams...

The Chicago White Sox will shorten the distances to the outfield by moving the infield eight fee toward the outfield. As a result it will be 341 feet down the lines, 374 to the power alleys and 401 to center. The old demensions of 352 down the lines, 375 in the power alleys and 402 in dead center were found to be inaccurate. Actually, the measurements were 349 down the lines, 382 in the power alleys and 409 feet to dead center. This year the White Sox hit 51 home runs in Comiskey Park while the opposition hit 43. The White Sox have had only two American League home run champions. Bill Melton did it with 33 in 1971 and Dick Allen had 37 in 1972...

Third base coach Danny Ozark says he doesn't understand why the Dodgers did not ask him back and, instead, hired Joe Amalfitano to replace him...

St. Louis' Dane Iorg, after nine Series hits as DH, is all for bringing the DH to the National League. Iorg tied New York's Reggie Jackson and Kansas City's Hal McRae for most hits by a DH in a series. Iorg batted .529 with four doubles and a triple...

NBC estimated a record 80 million fans watched the seventh game of the World Series, topping the previous high, 77.6 million who watched the final game of the Dodgers-Yankees series last year. The Nielsen rating of 38.1 was the fourth hightest rating for a Series telecast. The rating, which measures a percentage of the total number of sets tuned to a program, does not always correspond to the actual number of viewers...

GOLF—Defending champion David Graham overcame torrential rain to increase his lead to three strokes after 36 holes with a 70-136 in the Lancome Trophy at St. Nom La Breteche, France. Severiano Ballesteros shot a 71-139 to tie Sandy Lyle for second...

TENNIS—Vitas Gerulaitis eliminated defending champion Gene Mayer 7-5, 6-2 in the Melbourne semifinals Mazda Superchallenge and then blasted the officiating. Ivan Lendl beat Eliot Teltscher 7-5, 6-2 in the other semi. Gerulaitis said after the match that the officiating by the lines people and umpires in Melbourne was the worst he had ever encountered. "From Egypt to Zambia it's never been anywhere as bad as this. This is the worst place I have ever played. But it has nothing to do with the people and the crowds are the only thing which keep me coming back to Melbourne."...

Jimmy Artias advanced to the semifinals of the Japan Open with a 6-4, 6-4 win Gianni Ocleppo. Dominique Bedel ousted Glenn Michibata 6-2, 6-4, and Sashi Menon knocked out Charles Strode 6-4, 6-4.

BOXING— Donald Curry and Marlon Starling, unbeaten welterweights, will meet in a 12-round fight today (4 p.m. CBS) for the NABF and USBA welter titles. Curry, the NABAF champion, is 14-0 record, with 12 knockouts, and ranked No. 2 by both the WBC and WBA. Starling, the USBA champion, is 25-0 record, with 16 knockouts, and ranked No. 6 by the WBC and ninth by the WBA. "I don't think I'll have a problem at all with Starling," said the 21-year-old Curry of Fort Worth. "I think (top-ranked) Milton McCrory is an ordinary fighter and I think Starling has less talent."

Starling had his jaw broken while sparring with Thomas Hearns. "I came off with the broken jaw, but I know I was beating him pretty good. I came home thinking if he was the best in the world, then nobody out there is better than me."...

Sugar Ray Seales defends his NABF middleweight title against unbeaten James Shuler in a 12-rounder today (noon, NBC)...Sunday Hilmer Kenty, former WBA lightweight champion, will fight Roberto Elizondo (1 p.m., CBS)...

BASKETBALL—As the NCAA launched another investigation of the Wichita State University basketball program, head Coach Gene Smithson denied any rules have been violated...

AUTO RACING—Cale Yarborough says he will race next season for the Ranier Racing Team of Charlotte, a team sponsored by Hardee's Food Systems Inc., a Rocky Mount-based fast-food chain, Coca-Cola and Valvoline Oil...

Upshaw, Garvey hopeful

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Mediator Sam Kagel put a damper on reports of major progress Friday at the negotiations aimed at ending the 32-day-old strike by National Football League players.

"I am authorized to make the following statement by the parties. I just left a meeting," Kagel said. "We are continuing to meet on basic money issues and I cannot report any susbstantial progress as to this subject.

"The meetings will continue this afternoon and this evening," Kagel said.

The status of the negotiations will be the subject of a Sunday meeeting with union leaders and player representatives from the league's 28 teams. While he said he hoped to attend the session, tentatively scheduled for Washington, D.C., union chief Ed Garvey said he would bow to the wishes of Kagel and be at the bargaining table if so directed.

KAGEL said he has not made up his mind whether to schedule a Sunday bargaining session.

Earlier, union president Gene Upshaw, a guard with the Los Angeles Raiders, said he was pleased with the progress of the talks. "I am very comfortable with the way things are going."

And Garvey said:

"There is no talk of a recess. It is our feeling we should stay here and bargain to wrap this thing up," he said.

In an impromptu news conference in the hallway of the hotel where the negotiations have been held for the past 11 days,Upshaw insisted the union has fan support.

He brandished a check for $43 made out to the union, saying it came from a fan who wrote he felt the players deserved some financial support since the league had been paid $43 million by the television networks.

FRIDAY'S NEGOTIATIONS followed a dinner Thursday night attended by Kagel, Garvey, Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, union board member Stan White of the Detroit Lions and management counsel Sargent Karch.

The five-hour dinner session wasn't strictly for pleasure. "I don't join those people for pleasure," Garvey said.

Negotiators are attempting to work out a compromise between the union's demand for a wage scale, a central salary fund, performance bonuses and a fixed percentage of TV revenues and management's desire to retain the traditional individual negotiating process.

THE UNION contends that, under its wage scale, 94 percent of the players now in the NFL will be guaranteed higher salaries

Turner loses bundle on NFLPA games

ATLANTA (AP) — Ted Turner's decision to broadcast the two All-Star football games staged by the striking National Football League Players Association cost the Turner Broadcasting System Inc., more than $800,000, a company spokesman said Friday.

Turner had also planned to televise other NFLPA games but a U.S. Court of Appeals ruling Wednesday forced the striking players to cancel the rest of its All-Star contests, including ones scheduled in Toronto Sunday and Atlanta on Monday.

"The figure I heard was around $800,000," said spokesman Art Sandow of the loss. Turner's local station WTBS is beamed by satellite across the country.

WTBS had agreed to pay the NFLPA $500,000 per game. In addition, Turner paid for uniforms and some of the production costs, Sandow said. Revenues from advertising were minimal.

SWC THUMBNAILS

Arkansas (5-0, 2-0 in SWC) at Houston (2-3-1, 1-1-1), 11:35 a.m. — Arkansas is ranked No. 6 nationally, and lead nation in scoring defense at 6.2 points yielded per game after shutting out TCU and allowing Texas Tech only three points on field goal. Billy Ray Smith leads Razorback defense as one of premier down linemen in nation, while Cougar offense getting stronger each week with return of QB Lionel Wilson, hurt early in season. Cougars lost 20-14 to SMU last week. Arkansas leads SWC in both offense (404.4 yards per game) and defense (236.4) and has allowed average of only 72.8 yards rushing per game. Cougars pace SWC and fifth in nation in pass defense with yield of 122.8 yards per game. Game features four of SWC's top nine rushers, No. 5 Dallas Wiggins and No. 6 Dwayne Love of Houston; No. 7 Darryl Bowles and No. 9 Jessie Clark of Arkansas. Razorback Tom Jones top SWC passer with 59.7 per cent completions, while Houston's David Roberson averages 4.8 catches per game.

Rice (0-6, 0-3) at Texas A&M (3-3, 1-2), 2 p.m. — Both teams have quarterback problems and both depend on the pass. A&M's Gary Kubiak suffered shoulder injury in victory over Baylor, leads SWC in passing yardage with 1,226 and far ahead in total completions with 114. Rice is switching from Michael Calhoun to Phillip Money to Doug Johnson. Both teams at extremes in SWC stats–Aggies lead in passing offense (211 yards per game) and Rice second (176), Aggies last in pass defense (236 yards per game) and Rice next to last (179), Rice last in rushing offense (138) and Aggies next to last (144). Aggies last in total defense (424) and Rice next to last (358). Teams have five of top eight SWC pass receivers--Aggies' Johnny Hector, Don Jones and Jimmy Teal and Owls Deron Miller and Tim Sanders. Johnson saw first action in a year and a half last week against Texas Tech. Aggies hold 36-27-3 series lead.

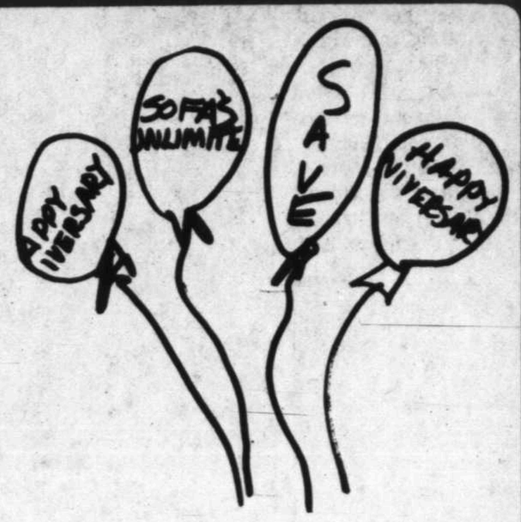

Baylor (2-3-1, 1-1-1) at TCU (2-4, 1-2), 2 p.m. — TCU leads series, 42-39-7, but Baylor has won eight straight. Both teams need to rebound from losses last week, Baylor coming from 25 points behind A&M to score 20 points in last 25 minutes. Frogs dropped non-conference game to Mississippi, despite QB Rueben Jones throwing for season best 252 yards on 17 completions. Baylor QB Mike Brannan listed as very doubtful, still nursing hamstring injury, and David Mangrum scheduled for third start with freshman Tom Muecke listed second. Baylor fifth in SWC rushing and boasts two of top ten SWC rushers in Alfred Andeson and Allen Rice; TCU's Marcus Gilbert is 10th. Frogs' passing history not evident this year as they throw just 20 times per game to Baylor's 25, nearly half of Baylor's 62 completions have gone to Gerald McNeil.

SMU (6-0, 3-0) at Texas (3-1, 1-0), 2:50 p.m. — SMU risks longest winning streak in nation (10 games) against the last team to defeat them last year. SMU is ranked fourth nationally and Texas stands 19th after loss to Oklahoma. They are two of the last three undefeated teams in SWC play. Mustangs' Eric Dickerson Saturday became first SWC rusher ever to go over 1,000 yards this early in a season by totaling career high 241 vs. Houston for season average of 166.8 yards per game. Dickerson now ranks second in SWC career yardage (3,834) and fellow tailback Craig James is fifth with 3,321. Dickerson second in national rushing and James fourth in national punting. SMU and UT rank second and third, respectively, in both SWC offense and defense. Mustangs have scored six of last ten TDs on passes, while Texas is No. 2 in SWC pass defense at 127.5 yards per game in allowing only two passing TDs. Texas holds 37-20-4 all-time series lead.

Texas TEch (3-3) at Washington (6-0), 3:30 p.m. — Red Raiders, unanimous choices for the SWC cellar who have broken even in their first six games, play the nation's No. 1 team. Huskies return explosive offense from '82 Rose Bowl championship team that edged Raiders, 14-7, in first meeting betwee schools. Washington is 4-6-1 all-time vs SWC opponents, Tech is 26-6-2 vs. current Pac Ten members. Three of Raiders' six games have been decided by a total of four points, while Huskies' closest has been ten-point decision over Arizona in second game of season. Tech defense has gained respect despite yielding 333.5 yards per game, because inexperienced offense kept defense on field through early games. Raider ground game getting extra punch from soph I-back Robert Lewis, continued improved leadership from QB Jim Hart. Raider defense yields only 3.6 yards per rushing play and has claimed eight pass interceptions, third best in SWC. Huskies had trouble getting untracked vs. winless Oregon State last week before Rose Bowl MVP Jacque Robinson scored two late TDs. QB Steve Pelluer went out with injury two weeks ago, and reserve Tim Cowan hit TD passes of 41, 15, and 12 yards in 50-7 victory over Cal.

Hollywood loves those spin-offs, sequels

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — "Go for it again," urge the movie ads, "Rocky III."

"Just when you thought it was all over, the terror begins anew," scream the flacks for another recycled flick. "Halloween III." Or was it "Amityville II"? Perhaps "Jaws IV" or "The Godfather IX." I've lost count.

Nothing succeeds in show biz like sequels and spin-offs of the same old stuff. Thus was it always with the dream merchants, all the way back to "Rin Tin Tin's Pup," except Roman numerals now take the place of family relationships. The old nuclear family that gave birth to the "Bride of Frankenstein," "Dracula's Daughter" and "Son of the Sludge From Six Fathoms Under" has been simplified for easy marketing to the numbers game.

On Broadway the writers are at work on "Annie II." In Hollywood, "Airplane II" is just getting off the ground, which should not be confused with "Airport II."

There was a second "Poseidon Adventure," but I can't remember whether salvage crews raised the old ship and she turned turtle again or they launched another love boat and deep-sixed her. "Poseidon III" should outdo the Spanish Armada in salt water pollution.

NO DOUBT there will be a second sitting of "Diner" and an "E.T. II," which sounds like a sorority house at Ole Miss or an edited for television version of Caesar's famous question to Brutus.

If "QII" sounds too much like a Cunard liner, "Q" may have to be followed by "R," "S," "T" and "U," by which time the script writers may have put the finishing flourishes to the "Second-Best Bordello in Brownsville."

Rona Barrett hasn't broken the story yet, but Hollywood is rumored to be running so short of second and third-time-around retreads that the movie moguls running it up the flagpole poolside at the Beverly Hills Hotel are seriously considering adding Roman numerals and updated plots to some of yesteryear's box-office bonanzas.

My spies in Tinsel Town — a retired make-up man who used to wax Mischa Auer's mustache and an out-of-work key grip holder who was blacklisted for revealing Lassie's real sex — tell me the celluloid recycling mills are tooling up to grind out revamped editions of some great golden oldies.

On your local theater marquee next spring you can watch for:

GonE With the Wind II — Atlanta has risen from the ashes, but Tara has been turned into a shopping mall, where the indomitable Scarlett O'Hara is reduced to running a trendy wool and knitting shop called "Frankly, My Dear, I Don't Give A Darn." Rhett Butler has gone off to Washington as a carpetbag Congressman, leaving her to haunt the singles bars still lusting after that wimp Ashley Wilkes. Adult theme.

Rockne II — Scandal rears its ugly head over the golden dome at South Bend. With the Gipper gone, the crusty old coach has been caught sneaking a newly ordained priest (also played by Pat O'Brien) into the huddle disguised as a field goal kicker to pray for success in the big game against those heathens from Southern Methodist. Parental guidance advised here because of the prayerful language.

MY DARKING CLEMENTINE II — Doc Holliday, who survived the gunfight at the O.K. Corral, is threatened with losing his license by the State Medical Board for performing a sex transplant on "Thunderbolt," Wyatt Earp's favorite stallion, now called "Clementine." "Chihuahua," the Linda Darnell sexpot role, has also been made more relevant to modern lifestyles and is now played by Al Pacino.

High Noon II — Subtitled "Half Past Eleven." Turns out the clock on the wall was fast, and the sheriff shot up some innocent folk getting off an earlier train, the local from Tombstone. The real baddies in Hell's Angels black leather jackets roar in from the desert on dune buggies, with Willie Nelson and Sissy Spacek in charge of the mayhem visited on the town. Woody Allen is cast in the Coop role of the quiet, conscientious citizen stirred to take a stand in favor of municipal noise abatement.

Maltese Falcon II — The Sidney Greenstreet character has gone to Weight Watchers, so the fat man has become the Thin Man in this masterful merger of two of Dashiell Hammett's toughest, tautest private eye mysteries. Gumshoe Sam Spade is now security specialist Dora Diamond, played by Goldie Hawn, while all of Charlie's Angels are melded into the old Peter Lorre role. Nudity adolescent situations.

Dr. Zhivago II — Now chief gynecologist at the Minsk General, the dedicated doctor has to contend with an unfaithful wife, unfaithful mistress, bungling bureaucrats and a herpes epidemic in his fearless crusade to build the first 18-hole golf course in the Ukraine. Rodney Dangerfield gives a memorably poignant performance as the harried head nurse forced to perform an illegal cuticleectomy on a drunken commissar.

Hunchback of Notre Dame II — The old belfry swinger picks himself up off the pavement and menaces the Elysee Palace, where a communist regime is bent on ridding Paris of clanging wake-up calls from the city's many church steeples. Still knocking the gong around with his head, Quasimodo splatters toan-other tragic end, with the sagacious old coroner (played by Walter Matthau) delivering the picture's unforgettable last line: "I can't remember his name, but the face sure rings a bell." Strong language, some of it in French.

Jail trustee went on lam with ham

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Police and sheriff's deputies looking forward to an awards banquet found themselves with a crime to solve. Their dinner had been stolen.

One clue came when Kent County Jail trusty Samuel Persons Jr., who was reported missing Wednesday afternoon while driving the Grand Rapids police van, surrendered that evening and revealed where the van could be found.

But still AWOL were five ham rolls, 10 pounds of coleslaw, a case of frozen peas, a gallon of salad oil and a gallon of mustard that Persons was supposed to have delivered to the banquet site.

Persons, meanwhile, faces arraignment on charges stemming from his escape and the theft, said Sheriff Philip Heffron.

Halloween bash held on Key West

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Residents on this coral island, often battered by hurricanes, are bracing for a storm of rowdy visitors, some in X-rated costumes.

"When we get done with this party, the entire island will be burnt out," said Townsend Keiffer, director of the Fantasy Fest Carnival '82. The 10-day extravaganza, which started Friday, promises to be one of America's biggest Halloween bashes.

Residents who revel in Key West's reputation for eccentricity say they expect 25,000 visitors to join the 24,000 natives in drinking, dancing and costumed fantasies under the palm and banyan trees.

Funds may not be spent on student services

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorney General Mark White has ruled that a "rider" in the current appropriations bill prevents public universities from spending legislative appropriations for student services such as entertainment series, student publications or medical services.

The opinion was requested by State Auditor George McNiel.

In the opinion, White said he found "no general law which bars the expenditure of appropriated funds on student services," but said the 1981 appropriations bill specificallly bans expenditure of legislative appropriations on items defined in the Education Code as student services.

White also ruled that constitutional ad valorem tax funds, provided to schools not under the Permanent University Fund, must be used to construct buildings and facilities "essential to or commonly associated with teaching, research, or the preservation of knowledge."

Construction of "auxiliary enterprise buildings and facilities," such as dormitories, cafeterias, student union buildings, stadiums and alumni centers, cannot be constructed with such funds, White said.

He commented, however, the "factual considerations" are involved in determining whether a building is "essential to or commonly associated with teaching, research, or the preservation of knowledge," so that "we cannot state a general rule" on what buildings may be constructed with those tax funds."

Freak shows no longer popular

DALLAS (AP) — Sideshows at the State Fair of Texas featuring a human pincushion, the "Penguin Boy" and the "Iron-Tongued Man" are drawing more sympathy than business these days.

Circus businessman Ward Hall says that as fair-goers have become more sophisticated, new human oddities to headline in the shows are becoming more scarce.

"There just aren't many bumpkins around any more," said Hall, a 39-year veteran of the circus and sideshow business.

His 12 oddity acts range from the Pete Terhurne, a dwarf who plays the part of the "Iron-Tongued Man", to Dick Brisben, who was left with feet but no legs and deformed arms and hands by birth defects. Brisben is the "Penguin Boy" in Hall's show.

The freak shows used to be a drawing card at circuses, but Hall says he now brings in only enough money to pay the bills and keep the show on the road.

Hall said 100 sideshows were making the rounds during their heyday in the 1930s. Now, he said, there are six, and medical science may have something to do with the decrease.

Taxpayers pay brass' travel tab

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — The Air Force general was in a hurry.

Available to him for the round-trip flight from Washington to Offutt Air Force Base in Nebraska were a C-140 transport or a slightly slower T-39. He chose the C-140 and saved 15 minutes in travel time.

But the taxpayer wound up with the additional $12,400 tab to fly the speedier though more fuel-hungry aircraft.

The costly round-trip was one of several examples cited in a recent draft audit by the Pentagon's Defense Audit Service of continuing abuses in the free world's largest airline, the Defense Department's so-called administrative support aircraft pool. Auditing wags call it DOD Airlines.

THE ABUSES by military brass of the 649-airplane pool of passenger aircraft, many of them of the commercial and executive jet variety, wastes tens of millions of dollars a year. And this has become a sore point for the legislative and national security subcommittee of the House Government Operations Committee, which is considering public hearings on the matter, according to sources close to its chairman, Jack Brooks (D-Texas).

The waste outlined in the draft report also peeved Frank C. Carlucci, deputy secretary of defense, who dispatched a memorandum to top Pentagon officials ordering tighter controls in the use of passenger aircraft.

That may be a tall order, since abuses have existed for a long time and at least a dozen government studies and audits over the past 14 years have unraveled a wide array of waste in the system.

The current draft audit, which is expected to be completed this month with comments from the service branches, illustrated a number of areas of abuse. Among them:

— The extensive use of Defense airplanes on flight routes served much more cheaply by commercial airlines.

— THE EXPENSIVE use of helicopters on short trips where automobiles would have served as well.

— The use of fuel-guzzlers when more economical airplanes were just as adequate for the trip.

This year's cost figures for the military fleet were unavailable. But a 1979 Defense audit said that the investment for the fleet then was $1 billion, and the 1978 operating cost was nearly $200 million.

In preparing this year's draft audit, Defense auditors visited 60 airports and examined the records of 777 flights. They said that nearly a quarter of those flights were "uneconomical misuse" of the Defense fleet at a cost of nearly $1 million.

THE AUDITORS then pored over centralized records of Air Force and Navy flights over a 20-day period. Of 1,113 flights with 3,400 stopovers, a total of 1,258 stopovers had no passengers. Those empty flights cost $1.6 million. The auditors projected the total through a full year and concluded that the two services spend $28 million a year on stopovers with no passengers.

The auditors also took a close look at 224 Air Force flights over the three months and found that on 201 of the flights passengers could have used commercial airlines at a savings of $221,000.

The auditors found that in most of the instances in which Defense officials used military rather than commercial aircraft, the officials cited "scheduling constraints" in opting for military transportation. But in many instances, the auditors found, commercial flights were readily available.

They cited the example of an Air Force civilian and a colonel who flew from Washington to Great Falls, Mont., on a T-39, claiming "scheduling constraints." Yet the auditors said that departing at the same time for Great Falls was a commercial airliner, which arrived in Great Falls only 56 minutes after the military transport. The one-hour savings cost the taxpayer $5,701 over the commercial rate.

In another instance, a Defense official landed at the Daytona Beach, Fla., airport to meet a Defense contractor five miles away. Instead of taking a cab or limousine to the site, a $20 round-trip, he opted for a helicopter, which had to be flown 140 miles away from MacDill Air Force Base at a cost of $1,575.

MILITARY AIRCRAFT were dispatched not only for passengers, but also for transporting unclassified briefing papers and slides. A T-39 was flown from Scott Air Force Base in Illinois to Kirtland Air Force Base in New Mexico with the briefing material, and the trip cost $3,500. The auditors said that the U.S. Postal Service's express mail would have cost $9, and the package would have arrived at about the same time.

The most costly abuse illustrated by the auditors was the $300,000 spent by the government to fly service academy cadets to the Navy-Air Force and Army-Air Force football games in the fall of 1981.

The cadets may have learned that trick from the National Guard, which the previous year had used 12 KC-135 and C-130 transports to shuttle guardsmen to a bowling tournament. That cost the government $110,000.

American GIs isolated in Germany

HEIDELBERG, West Germany (AP) — The bowling alley in Patrick Henry Village is in the heart of Germany, but it looks and sounds more like Tennessee or Texas — what with young Americans munching on hot dogs bought with U.S. dollars, leaning on a bar where a sign proclaims, "We Sell American Beer."

It is a U.S. Army village, complete with a theater, chapel, schools, stores and a restaurant; it is so well-equipped with the necessities and comforts of home that soldiers hardly need venture elsewhere.

Many soldiers don't — the U.S. Army has been in West Germany for nearly four decades, but in many ways it behaves like an uneasy newcomer, living in isolation from the country it is helping to protect.

"There are people in Patrick Henry Village who never leave. They have never been down to the Hauptstrasse (Heidelberg's main street)," said Molly Markwick, who formerly lived in the village with her husband, an Army sergeant.

"We have structured our organization is such a way that if you want to avoid ever speaking to a German, you can," says Maj. Robert J. Schneider, head of the Army's medical research team in Europe."I'll bet the number of American families with German friends is under 20 percent, maybe under 10 percent."

Schneider says this isolation is a major cause of stress among GIs, and that to overcome it, the soldiers need to learn German.

Most GIs finish their tour of duty, 18 months to 3 years, without learning to say more than the few German phrases they need to get a beer, order a meal or find a public toilet.

Many soldiers say they feel uneasy off the American bases that are home to three-quarters of the U.S. soldiers and their families in Germany. They become what are referred to as "the barracks rats."

Soldiers may take tours or meet Germans through Army community offices, but Doris Scott, a public affairs officer at Mannheim, says she gets more Germans asking to meet Americans than the other way around.

"On the whole, most Americans don't like or aren't comfortable in Germany," said Spec. 5 Bob Sanders of Chicago, who is stationed in Heidelberg. "I think that problem would be erased if everyone knew the language."

Money is a factor in the soldiers' isolation. In the 1960s, the U.S. dollar bought four German marks. It now buys 2.50 marks, a constraint on low-paid lower ranks when they think about going out for a German meal.

In the past two years, many U.S. soldiers and their families have been upset by the anti-militarism and anti-Americanism of some German youth and by terrorist attacks on Army installations and Europe Commander-in-Chief Gen. Frederick Kroesen. Just this week, terrorists used gasoline and bombs to torch vehicles belonging to U.S. servicemen in Frankfurt.

"I've had young Germans spit on my shoes, swear at me in English and say, "You GI, you don't belong here, go back to America," said Spec. 5 Don Waters of Hyannis, Mass. "I'm going back, too, in 28 days, and I can't wait."

American GIs are also face discrimination in Germany; some landlords won't rent them apartments and some German drinking establishments exclude soldiers.

In Giessen, a city of 78,000 in central Germany that is host to 5,000 American soldiers, the Envogue, a swanky disco, bars GIs unless they have dates.

"Soldiers are too aggressive," says Michael Rosenberg, manager of Envogue. "They are too loud. And they are dumb."

Schneider says the isolation adds to stress suffered by GIs, most of whom have been separated from families and friends for the first time in their young lives.

In extreme cases, apparent stress has led to crazed actions.

In July, a 20-year-old private drowned in an M-60 tank after stealing the vehicle from his base and driving it on a rampage through Mannheim. The tank crushed at least 14 cars and injured four people before the GI drove it off a bridge into a river.

No one knows why the rampage occurred. But many soldiers did not seem surprised.

The Comforts of Home

To our forefathers, this was living at its best . . . but the hard chair, the iron pot and the open grate would not be our idea of comfort.

Today kitchens sparkle with bright, easy-to-clean metals, and cupboards are filled with helpful appliances. We relax in foam-padded chairs and sleep on spring-filled mattresses. Almost every aspect of modern life is slanted toward speed and convenience.

Man, with his marvelous God-created brain, has overcome many obstacles, and there seems to be no limit to his inventiveness. God has given us a world full of possibilities, and minds that constantly seek to improve our environment.

But to make the most of our opportunities, we must ever develop and renew the resolute "faith of our fathers." Come worship with others and receive that heritage of inspiration and light.

Church has dedication

Alamo Heights Baptist Church, 1305 N. Midland Drive, will observe a special Dedication Day Service for its new sanctuary at 10:45 a.m. Sunday.

The service will be conducted by the church's pastor, the Rev. Milo B. Arbuckle. The program will consist of special recognitcn of those who have had a part in making the new sanctuary possible, recognition of charter members and special music.

Exactly one year prior to this special dedication, Alamo Heights held another special ceremony when it had its groundbreaking service prior to the commencement of construction of the new building.

Lunch will be served in the church's fellowship hall following the dedication service.

Raja Yogas want silence

Copley News Service

What the world needs most is a good dose of silence, says says Brahma Kumari Jayanti, director of the Raja Yoga Center in London, England.

"Most people today are afraid of silence because they don't know what to do with it," said Sister Jayanti, a slight, soft-spoken disciple of Raja Yoga founder Brahma Kumaris.

Sister Kumari says it's time people explored the benefits periodic silence and meditation can bring.

"It is in silence that we can explore our being," she said in an interview.

"It is in silence we can get in touch with our internal feelings, with the peace and joy which are part of our natural state and which we wish to celebrate."

Sister Jayanti said the habit of meditation is made difficult in this age of radio, television, tape recorders, jet engine afterburners and other features of modern life that saturate the environment with just plain noise.

It's distracting and unnerving, she said.

Sister Jayanti says the reason moderns cultivate all this noise is that the material world of the senses has seduced them away from the inner world of the spirit.

"They've grown accustomed to seeing everything from the consciousness of the physical, the consciousness of the body so that my ears, my eyes, my taste and other senses all need constant stimulus," she said.

This constant din is only one of the many distractions that keep people from "thinking about who they are, thinking about what they should be doing, thinking about how they should be having a relationship with people," Sister Jayanti said.

The alternative is to learn the arts of silence and meditation by which one can contact the true self and God, she said.

"It's all a matter of how you use your mind. You can either use it on a mundane level or you can turn your mind towards God," she said.

"We use communication through sound in order to reach the state of silence," she said.

Buddhist shrine of Borobudur Temple restored with aid of IBM computers

JOGJAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Borobudur Temple, an ancient jigsaw puzzle with three-quarters of a million stone pieces, has been reassembled with the help of computers and seems ready for several more centuries.

The huge shrine, one of the world's finest Buddhist monuments, was built during the Sailendra Dynasty (A.D. 774-864) more than 200 years before the Norman conquest of England.

The truncated pyramid lacks the symmetry of Cambodia's Angkor Wat or the soaring lines of Europe's Gothic cathedrals. But historian Arnold Toynbee called it "a comprehensive poem about the mystery of the universe, a symphony of the inaudible music of the spheres."

Over the centuries it was covered with volcanic ash, overgrown by the Java jungle and vandalized for building stone and its fine sculptures. It survived all those indignities but nearly succumbed to a form of decay called stone cancer.

THAT MALADY occurs when water, carrying minerals and salts, seeps through the stonework from inside. When the moisture evaporates, the stone surface is scarred. The blemishes eventually flake off — and they took with them some of the finely carved bas-reliefs and other art work that decorates the ancient masterpiece.

In 1959, the archaeologist Soekmono warned that the national treasure was falling apart. It was found that centuries of rain had finally penetrated close-fitting stones and the original drains had failed, turning part of the solid earth interior into mud. Walls bulged and flat surfaces buckled.

It took 700 workers 10 years — at a cost of $24 million — to take the stones apart one by one, dry them, treat them to resist decay, and put all 750,000 back together again.

AN IBM COMPUTER kept track of each stone and the treatment it required. Reassembly was the hardest part of restoration, said Soekmono, who oversaw the project, 17 miles northwest of Jogjakarta in South Java.

Officials say President Suharto will formally reopen the temple in about six months, after an archaeological park and other trimmings are completed nearby.

Borobudur is quite different from a church or a mosque. It was not designed as a burial vault and has no interior. The shrine is an architectural symbol of the Buddhist concept of transition from life to Nirvana where humans achieve bliss by breaking away from the "wheels of life."

Local lore credits Borobudur to an architect named Gunadharma. Historians estimate he needed 10,000 laborers and several decades to complete the 10 terraces which were elaborately decorated to represent the world's three spheres as divided by Buddhism: desire, form and formlessness.

THE NAME Borobudur derives from the Sanskrit words "vihara Buddahuhr," or Buddhist monastery on a high place.

Several terraces sank below ground through the ages. Visible now are five terraces in gradually diminishing sizes from the 160,000-square-foot base to a large plinth which supports three circular terraces crowned by a large bell-shaped stupa. This houses a rather abstract and incomplete image of Buddha, symbolizing the unknown form that humans take in eternal life.

Some 200 years after completion of the temple, the center of the region's Buddhist culture and political life shifted to East Java. Borobudur was abandoned to the surrounding jungle and virtually disappeared for more than 700 years. Eruptions from two nearby volcanos covered much of the monument and thick vegetation fed on lava-enriched soil.

Church of England upsets Thatcher's conservatives

For some of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party faithful, a church report this month advocating that Britain unilaterally scrap its nuclear weapons was the final straw.

"There is clearly an element in the Anglican Church which is heading for confrontation with the state," snapped Conservative Party legislator Julian Amery.

The church, once dubbed the "Conservative Party at prayer," had already incensed right-wing Tories in an argument over whether God should be beseeched to crush Britain's enemies, or to bring peace to the world.

A gathering in St. Paul's Cathedral July 26 began as a thanksgiving service for Britain's victory over Argentina in the Falkland Islands in June, but it ended in domestic controversy.

In the view of many conservatives — including Mrs. Thatcher, commentators said — the service proved long on peace, reconciliation and prayers for the dead on both sides, and short on patriotic thanksgiving for Britain's triumph.

"The church has gone soft," Maj. Gen. Sir Jeremy Moore, the army commander who carried a Bible into battle on the Falklands, complained after the service.

Then came the publication of a revised Anglican hymnbook watering down the national anthem, "God Save the Queen."

The revamped version of the 239-year-old anthem omitted the hallowed phrase "send her victorious," instead suggesting merely that "God bless and guard our queen."

"It is a hymn for yesterday's trendy clerics and it deserves to be banished to total obscurity," thundered London's Standard evening newspaper. Conservative lawmakers described the revised version — which no one has yet said will be adopted — as "vapid" and "deeply offensive."

Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, a former World War II tank commander and spiritual leader of the 65-million-member worldwide Anglican Communion, explained that the new hymnbook and the nuclear report are not official church policy, but merely reports issued by small working groups.

He is known not to favor unilateral nuclear disarmament.

The 190-page disarmament report, entitled "The Church and the Bomb," not only has divided the church, whose temporal head is Queen Elizabeth II, but also has annoyed the government.

"Nuclear weapons are an essential part of Britain's security," Mrs. Thatcher, who regularly attends Anglican services, told the House of Commons this week after reading the report.

Tory legislator Sir John Biggs-Davison remarked: "Is not the danger that the Church of England is becoming the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament at prayer?"

The report is unlikely to be adopted when the church's ruling 560-member General Synod, composed of bishops, priests and laymen drawn almost entirely from the middle class, debates it next February.

But it underlines a divide between the state church, to which almost half of Britain's 56 million people belong, and the conservative administration of Mrs. Thatcher, as well as differences between churchmen themselves.

religion in brief

Unitarians have prison outreach program

The Midland Unitarian Universalist church has been involved in the visitation program at Big Spring federal prison for the past two years.

Jerome Edwards, prison superintendent, and the Rev. Jerry Kelly, chaplain, recently presented certificates in recognition and appreciation of outstanding service to the prison to the Rev. Daniel Budd, the Midland UU minister, and to Paul Suess, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Wise, all members of the Midland congregation.

Church members visit the prison camp one Sunday a month and present a religious service, followed by a general discussion period. On certain occasions, inmates who qualify and who have church sponsors, may attend special functions at the Midland church.

Hardin-Simmons choir to perform

ABILENE — The Hardin-Simmons University Choral Association, headed by Ty Morris Jr., will perform on Parents Day Oct. 30.

Morris is the minister of music at Crestview Baptist Church in Midland.

Dr. Loyd F. Hawthorne, professor in music education and choral director, is campus coordinator for the event. He urges exes to be on hand to sing under the direction of several choral directors who have been on the campus over the years. Exes who wish to participate may call Morris at Crestview, or Hawthorne at 1-677-7281.

The 2 p.m. concert will be held in Woodward-Dellis Recital Hall at HSU.

The great end in religion instruction is not to stamp our minds on the young, but to stir up their own. Not to bind them by prejudice to our particular sect or notions, but to prepare them for impartial, conscientious judging of whatever may be offered to their decision . In a word, the great end is to awaken the soul.

Reagan opposes Social Security payroll tax increase, says official

Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan strongly opposes any increase in Social Security payroll taxes next year, including a more rapid imposition of increases scheduled for 1985 and later years, a senior administration official said Saturday.

Reagan previously said he opposes other tax increases in fiscal 1984 despite huge projected deficits. Raising payroll taxes next year by bringing forward future increases has been widely suggested — by Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., among others — as one way to help solve the Social Security funding crisis.

A presidential commission is due to report just after next month's general election on how to save money for the Social Security retirement trust fund, which otherwise would run dry next year.

Reagan is "in my judgment...totally opposed to any increase in payroll taxes," the official said, adding that the president "knows how the payroll tax has grown, what it costs the average worker each year." The payroll tax rate for calendar 1983 is now scheduled to be the same as for 1982 — 6.7 percent on both employer and employee — while the tax base rises from $32,400 to $35,100.

IN A NEWS CONFERENCE last month, Reagan joked that "unless there's a palace coup...I don't see the necessity" for further tax increases.

The president's stiff opposition to raising taxes and unwillingness to scale back the planned military build-up drastically reduces the maneuvering room for those now working on the 1984 budget to be sent to Congress early next year. The deficit would swell to $175 billion in fiscal 1984 with no new tax increases or spending cuts next year, officials reportedly believe. Some private estimates put the likely deficit still higher.

Agreement among senior officials on a much gloomier outlook for the economy's growth than Reagan forecast earlier this year "closes off some of the exits" used by the White House in the past to lower its deficit projections, the official said. Slower growth cuts into government revenues, automatically driving up the deficit.

Nevertheless, the official indicated, the administration would like the 1984 budget document to project a balanced budget by the end of the five-year planning period it will cover.

This would require huge new budget savings and would be almost impossible without higher taxes and less defense spending than that agreed to by the president, according to most budget experts. Reagan's budget this year showed large deficits each year through 1987.

THE PUSH FOR A budget that would show deficits eventually shrinking to zero stems from Reagan's strong endorsement of a constitutional amendment to balance the budget. "Implicitly that will be one of the driving forces" in this fall's budget-making process, the official said, adding that the administration "simply can't walk away from" the call for a balanced budget.

The president has made the issue a major theme of the Republican campaign. The constitutional amendment passed the Senate but, largely because of Democratic opposition, fell short of the two-thirds majority needed to pass the House.

Asked if the White House realized the dimensions of the deficit problem, the official said "in a generalized sense, not in a sense of cold, hard facts." With many domestic spending programs frozen at 1982 levels, budget cutters are "getting closer to the bone" of federal spending, he said, adding that "the political system has an irreducible minimum" below which spending cannot be cut.

Major budget decisions will not be made until after the elections, and the White House has not thought out its political strategy for winning the huge deficit reductions sought by Reagan, the official said.

SENATE REPUBLICANS took the lead this year in shaping a package of tax increases and spending cuts after Reagan's budget proposals were spurned. That "Ping-Pong" strategy of proposal and counterproposal "wasn't all bad," the official said, citing as a "nearly optimal" outcome the $200 billion, three-year cut produced in the deficit.

Reagan has steadfastly opposed cutbacks in planned defense spending, although many of his aides believe such spending should not be increased as much as the president would like. One argument used to justify lowering projected defense spending is that inflation is expected to be lower so the Pentagon will not need as much money to achieve the same build-up in real terms. There is "a lot of sorting out of numbers to do" on defense, the official said.

Last year, the administration used optimistic economic assumptions to improve the budget outlook and shrink the deficit. But this year, senior officials have agreed on a much more cautious outlook, the official said. A 1 percent cut in the economy's growth rate next year would add about $28 billion to the 1984 deficit, according to the Congressional Budget Office.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said last Friday that he expects the economy to expand by 3.5 percent to 4 percent next year, after allowing for inflation.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The late great playwright-producer-director Moss Hart was born on this date, as were former New York Giant star Y.A. Tittle and former FBI chief Clarence Kelley. The months ahead are an excellent time for you to get family affairs in order. Ask mate or friend for help in setting up a better bookkeeping system. A business begins to turn around and you make steady career gains. Show your loved ones more affection. A romantic alliance becomes increasingly rewarding. Guard against deception on the part of a newcomer. Someone who professes instant friendship may have ulterior motives. Guard your privacy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get an early start today. You will want to enjoy every moment of what promises to be a wonderful time with your loved ones. Spend some quiet hours together in the evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You find special pleasure in the company of those you have not seen for a while. Romance will be exhilarating and out-of-the-ordinary. You receive some excellent personal news.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do whatever you can to get out of the rut you have been in. Deal direct with those family members who wield power. You earn their respect by speaking up and asking questions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be very careful when choosing your confidants. A drive in the country proves invigorating but travel to distant cities is best postponed. Be patient.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance could be tense at times. Keep busy by working at a hobby or tackling household repairs. Do not let gossip affect your feelings for an old friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Family members may not be willing to let you have your own way today. Compromise. Do not allow important matters to be neglected because of a difference of opinion with mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Mate's erratic behavior may be attributable to his inability to keep a secret. Look forward to a surprise celebration.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Curb excessive spending on weekends. Show mate more affection. Sidestep any business dealings that may involve travel. Major decisions should be postponed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A platonic relationship could turn into romance. Handle financial matters and increased responsibilities with dispatch. Finalize a decision involving mutual funds.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be suspicious of someone who offers a get-rich-quick investment. Consider loved ones' feelings before making a decision that will affect them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Communications return to normal. Invite family members to join you in entertaining or exercising. You receive stimulating news from a friend or relative.

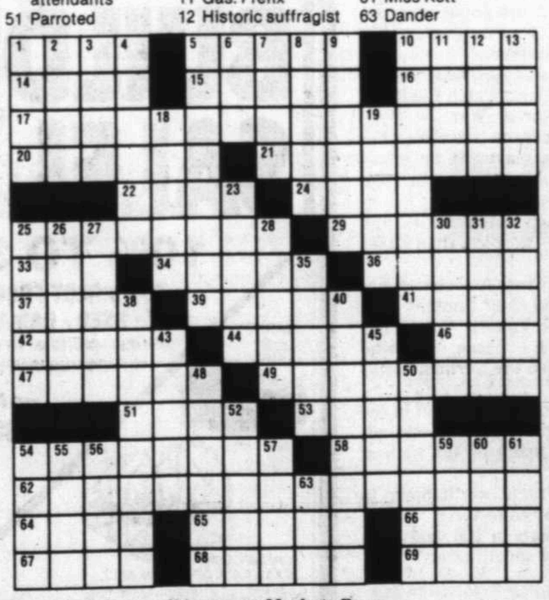

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A thoughtful discussion with friends or neighbors gives you valuable new insights. Convince romantic partner to spend the evening working on a creative project with you.

Tahlequah center of Cherokee culture

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (AP) — History has left its indelible signature on Tahlequah, the eastern Oklahoma village which proudly serves as the capital of the Cherokee Indian Nation.

Located in the Sooner State's "Green Country," the region surrounding Tahlequah provides prime canoeing, fishing, hunting and some of the best all-around sightseeing in the nation. Yet, history remains Tahlequah's most valuable resource.

Incorporated as a town in 1844, Tahlequah was the settlement established by the Cherokees after the bitter period when the federal government forced them from their ancestral lands in Georgia and Alabama. One of the Five Civilized Tribes, the Cherokees had achieved a remarkably high level of cultural and social development before the advent of the white man.

But during the infamous autumn and winter of 1838-39 the Cherokees were driven from their homes by soldiers bearing fixed bayonets and orders from Washington. Thousands of Cherokees perished from starvation, disease and exposure on a dreary westward path forever branded as "The Trail of Tears."

According to local tradition, a trio of Cherokee leaders was handed the task of selecting a capital for the Indian Nation once the beleaguered tribe reached its new territory.

Only two of the leaders survived the "Trail of Tears." They chose a site among the clear streams and rolling hills. When they were sure the third leader would not arrive in their new homeland, one of the Cherokees turned to his friend and said: "Tahlequah," which means "two is enough" in Cherokee. The name stuck.

Each year thousands of visitors from all around the world travel back in time at the ancient village of Tsa-La-Gi, a historically accurate replica maintained by modern Cherokees to show how their ancestors lived. Guided tours led by young Cherokees take visitors back to a lifestyle that flourished 300 years ago in southeastern United States.

Tsa-La-Gi, which translated means "Cherokee," is located southeast of Tahlequah at the Cherokee Heritage Center. This entire site is included in the National Register of Historic Places since it was the location of the Cherokee Female Seminary, the first institution of higher education for women west of the Mississippi.

Inside the shaded compound, craftsmen skillfully weave baskets from buckbrush, as costumed warriors whittle weapons and create darts for game-killing blowguns from thistle and cane.

"We see Tsa-La-Gi as a wonderful living drama," explains A. Eugene Hileman, The Cherokee National Historic Society's vice president of development. "And we view the Cherokees working here as members of a theater company. This place is pageantry and excitement — most of all it is an adventure."

Other attractions at the Tsa-La-Gi complex include the Cherokee National Museum, the Cherokee Hall of Fame and the Cherokee National Archives.

There is also the outdoor amphitheater where the play "Trail of Tears" is presented during the summer months. In 1983 the 15th season of this stirring drama will be staged with a cast and crew of nearly 100.

Victoria Cross leads other honors

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LONDON — It is just a piece of dark bronze hanging from a dull maroon ribbon, but the Victoria Cross is perhaps the world's most prized decoration for bravery in battle.

When two British paratroopers were awarded the Victoria Cross not long ago for action in the Falkland Islands campaign, the newspapers here made it the story of the day.

"Bravest of the Brave," another said.

The two VCs, both awarded posthumously, headed the list of 577 decorations authorized in connection with the Falklands campaign. They went to Lt. Col. Herbert Jones, commander of the 2nd Battalion of the Parachute Regiment, and Platoon Sgt. Ian McKay of the 3rd Battalion. Both were killed in action leading separate attacks on heavily defended Argentine positions.

THE ECONIMIST magazine said at the time: "Fighting men know that the Victoria Cross is given not for reasonable behavior but for unreasonable self-sacrifice. The two Falklands VCs show that in war, unreasonable conduct may be the way to win."

In England, one's honors are appended to one's name, and the initials "VC" lead all the rest, including knighthoods and orders of chivalry. The maroon ribbon, worn on the chest, takes precedence over all other decorations.

"This helps gather an aura of exclusivity," Michael Naxton, a medals and decorations expert, said, "and this contributes to the mystique of the VC."

While every country has its own highest award for bravery in combat, most military experts suggest that the Victoria Cross may be the most difficult to win — the standards being higher than even for the American Medal of Honor.

There were six nominees for the Victoria Cross in the Falklands campaign, but only two measured up. Among other things, there must be a 90 percent chance that the nominee might have been killed in the action, if indeed he was not.

It is difficult to compare the top awards of different nations because of the nature, duration, intensity and extent of military activities of different armies, even in the same war. But in World War II there were only 182 VCs awarded to British and Commonwealth troops; there were 434 Medals of Honor.

IN ALL, since the first VC was bestowed in 1856, it has gone to 1,354 recipients. The Medal of Honor, which was originated in 1861, has been awarded 2,642 times.

The Victoria Cross, given for "conspicuous gallantry of the highest order in the presence of the enemy," was founded by Queen Victoria during the Crimean War. She bestowed the first 62 in Hyde Park on June 26, 1857.

The metal in all the VCs awarded to date has come from bronze cannons taken from the Russians in the Crimean War. In the center of the cross is a royal crown surmounted by a lion with the inscription, "For Valour."

Early in its history, the VC was awarded relatively liberally, partly because there were fewer other decorations. Many were given in the Crimean War, the Indian mutiny and the wars in South Africa.

But the standards were tightened and in World War I and World War II the VC became much rarer.

Naxton, the medals expert, said Victorian times, they would give VCs out for things one would only get a mention in dispatches for today, and VCs have been getting much harder to win."

THE NUMBER of VCs issued in four years of trench fighting in World War I was 633, and of those 173 were posthumous — including two second awards, or bars, both to captains in the Royal Army Medical Corps. One captain had received his first in the Boer War, the other received both in World War I.

In World War II, of the 182 VCs awarded, 82 were posthumous. They went to members of all three military services, infantrymen, pilots, submarine captains and a New Zealand chaplain.

Capt. Charles H. Upham of the New Zealand 20th Battalion was awarded two VCs in World War II — the first in Crete in 1941 and the second in North Africa a year later. He is still alive, living in New Zealand.

Since World War II, eight VCs have been awarded, four to British soldiers in the Korean War, three to Australians serving in Vietnam and one to a Ghurka in the Malaysian insurgency.

No VCs were awarded for the campaigns in Aden, Kenya, Oman, Cyprus or Northern Ireland.

A special VC was given to the American unknown soldier of World War I, the first and only one of its kind.

THE AMERICAN Medal of Honor, instituted in 1861 for the Navy and in 1862 for the Army, is given for "courage above and beyond the call of duty." On occasion, it has been awarded at the direction of Congress to officers for services not directly involving bravery on the battlefield.

The Military Medal, France's highest award for gallantry, also is given to senior officers for their conduct of operations.

The French Legion of Honor is bestowed for bravery on the battlefield but also for civilian accomplishments. The actress Brigitte Bardot wears it.

From the beginning, the Victoria Cross has been produced by the same firm of London jewelers, Hancock, from stocks of bronze sent over by the Army Ordnance Department, which has custody of the old Russian guns.

"We cast four crosses at a time," Hancock's David Callaghan said, "so we always have some medals in stock."

The cross is engraved with the name of the recipient, his regiment and the date of the action for which the award is given.

"IN ALL," Callaghan said, "the Victoria Cross, the engraving and the presentation case will cost the government about $40."

But the Victoria Cross has brought skyrocketing prices on the medals auction market at firms like Sotheby's in London, which has regular sales of military decorations.

Last March, the first World War II Victoria Cross to be put on the market came up for auction. It was the only one awarded on D-Day in 1944, and it brought about 32,000 pounds, or $58,000.

Naxton, who is the medals expert for Sotheby's, said the VCs were the most valuable of all awards in the auction market because, unlike many other decorations, they bear the recipient's name and date of action.

"If you buy a Legion of Honor, say, you are only getting the medal itself, and you don't know who won it or why," Naxton said. "But with a VC, the collector is purchasing history, a hero's story."

He pointed out that it is illegal in the United States to sell or buy a Medal of Honor, and hence there is no international market for that decoration.

"CONTRARY TO THE usual value of such things," he said, "the more recently awarded VCs fetch more at auction than the older ones — simply because they are more difficult to win."

Even for a 19th Century VC, the minimum price at auction these days would be about $13,000, he said.

Since each VC is identified with its recipient, the highest prices are paid for those whose holders have caught the public eye, perhaps because of being involved in a well-known engagement like the charge of the Light Brigade in the Crimean War.

Earlier this year, the "Speakman VC" was sold for about $48,000. It was won by Sgt. William Speakman of the Black Watch Regiment of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, in the Korean War.

After the war, Speakman got into one scrape after another because of heavy drinking. The newspapers played it up under such headlines as "Speakman, VC, in Trouble Again." In 1971, Speakman sold his medal and emigrated to South Africa.

Winners of the VC become notables in their communities, and they are paid a pension of 100 pounds a year — now less than $200.

A GROUP called the Victoria and George Cross Association has been set up to look after needy recipients and their families. (The George Cross is the civilian equivalent of the Victoria Cross.) The association is headed by retired Rear Adm. B.C. Place, V.C., who commanded a midget submarine that torpedoed the German battleship Tirpitz in World War II.

According to Naxton, the Victoria Cross commands respect in the world because it is given only for acts of extreme bravery and not simply for military accomplishment, as are many of the highest awards of other nations.

And if the VC of Lt. Col. Jones of Falklands fame ever happens to come on the market, how will it be regarded by collectors?

"It is my view," Naxton said, "that in 20 years or 200 years, the Jones VC will be highly prized and most highly sought after."

Radio station to play comedy, no music

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you were stuck in a traffic jam, would you punch the "funny button" on your radio for relief?

Operators of WJOK-AM are going to find out just how many residents of the Washington, D.C., area turn to J-O-K for laughs when the new station goes on the air in about two months.

"We're going to be a full-service radio station," says Ron Lewis, the station's operations and program manager. "The only difference is that instead of playing music, we're going to be playing comedy. The possibilities are limitless."

The brainchild of Robert E. Cobbins, general manager and part-owner of the station, WJOK's studio and transmitting antennas are nearing completion in suburban Gaithersburg, Md.

Lewis estimates the station will be ready to go on the air no later than January, although no start-up date has been set.

Cobbins, a salesman and manager in broadcasting here for 30 years, first conceived the idea for a comedy station 18 years ago and has been collecting albums and tapes ever since.

It wasn't until 1974, however, that Cobbins saw an opportunity to turn his idea into reality by applying for the 1150 kilohertz frequency that had been assigned to WHMC-AM, a station whose license was yanked by the Federal Communications Commission.

Eight years later, after finally besting five competitors and winning the construction permit, Cobbins' Barto Communications Inc. is just about ready to launch "the first 24-hour all-comedy radio station in the nation."

Lewis says the station's repertoire will include everything from classical comedy, featuring Jack Benny, Amos and Andy, Laurel and Hardy and Fibber McGee and Molly, to more contemporary talents such as Richard Pryor, George Carlin and Eddie Murphy.

There will also be plenty of news, sports, traffic reports and weather. But no music.

"Basically, we're talking about using 50 years of comedy; all the recorded comedy we can find," adds Lewis. "But that won't be all. We'll do a lot of stuff with our listeners: joke-of-the-day contests, joke lines. And we're planning on recording stuff at comedy nightclubs.

"I don't think this market is limited at all," he continued. "We want to be a radio station that makes people feel good. Washington's funny button. You're stuck in a traffic jam, punch up the funny button and we'll help take the edge off life."

Cobbins describes the format as unique because "it's the only entertainment that appeals to everybody. Anybody from 12 to 125 likes to laugh."

Asked what type of "joke jockey" he's looking for, Lewis says, "we already have a tentative staff lined up. We were just looking for some witty, personable people, and we've found some real seasoned veterans."

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel passes in front of an honor guard upon his arrival at Beirut airport late Friday afternoon. Gemayel returned from a five-day trip which took him to the United States, France and Italy. Gemayel spoke before the United Nations, met with government leaders in the three countries supplying troops to maintain order in his country and had an audience with Pope John Paul II.

Gemayel calls trip abroad 'success'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Amin Gemayel returned from a trip to the United States, France and Italy Friday amid reports he had obtained U.S. and French pledges of increased aid for Lebanon's army.

He called his trip "successful" and said the leaders he met were "extremely responsive."

A 21-gun salute was fired as Gemayel's special Middle East Airlines jumbo jet landed at Beirut airport, where most of the 1,200 U.S. Marines are stationed as part of a multinational peacekeeping force that also includes French and Italian troops.

The peacekeepers were dispatched to Lebanon to bolster the Lebanese army in the wake of Israel's June 6 invasion and the massacre of Palestinian civilians by Christian militiamen in two Beirut refugee camps Sept. 16-18.

Lebanese state television reported that the United States had agreed to provide enough arms to equip 7,500 of Lebanon's 28,000 soldiers and that France pledged $86 million worth of military hardware.

The broadcast quoted its correspondents covering the trip as saying the arms deal was concluded after Gemayel's talks with President Reagan in Washington and with President Francois Mitterrand in Paris.

The TV reporters did not reveal the identity of their sources or provide further details.

Speaking to the Lebanese people from his plane in a live broadcast carried by state radio, Gemayel said his visit to the United Nations, Washington, Paris, Rome and the Vatican was "successful."

"All the leaders and the governments I visited and to whom I carried the wishes of all Lebanese were extremely responsive to our pleas for help in the process of restoring peace and the reconstruction of Lebanon," Gemayel said.

The United States provided the Lebanese army with $9.2 million worth of military equipment in the first three months of 1982. The shipments included 26 armored personnel carriers, 21 other armored vehicles, 18 howitzers and 19 jeeps.

The United States and France have suggested they may increase military assistance to enable the Lebanese army to re-establish control over the whole of Lebanon's 4,015 square miles of territory, but they have not revealed any specifics.

Gemayel told Italian officials his immediate goal was to reorganize and expand the Lebanese army to an elite force of about 60,000 and that he would need at least 15,000 multinational troops to help with internal security in the initial stage, according to Foreign Ministry sources in Rome.

Gemayel told a news conference in Paris he would like to see the 4,000-man multinational force expanded to about 30,000 pending the completion of the army's reconstruction program.

Reagan promised to give Gemayel's request "serious consideration," but Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Thursday he did not anticipate an increase in the size of the Marine contingent in Lebanon and suggested countries other than France and Italy should provide additional troops.

Italian government sources quoted Foreign Minister Giovanni Spadolini as saying Italy would consider increasing its 1,200-man contingent if the United States and France also agreed to expand their forces.

While in Rome, Gemayel also met with Egyptian Deputy Premier Kamal Hassan Ali. It was the first official contact between the two countries since Lebanon, along with other Arab countries, broke diplomatic relations with Cairo to protest the Camp David peace accords with Israel in 1979.

Arab Group drops Israeli ouster move

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Arab nations on Friday dropped plans to expel Israel from the General Assembly, but they vowed to try again next year if Israel refuses to withdraw from Lebanon or ignores what they call Palestinian rights.

In formally announcing postponement of the ouster drive "until another time" the 21-member bloc of nations which calls itself the Arab Group insisted it was heeding Arab interests and appeals from friends — not bowing to Secretary of State George P. Shultz' threat of a U.S. pullout.

Libyan Ambassador Ali A. Treiki confirmed at a news conference that during the group's closed-door meeting Thursday it had decided to go along with a Pakistani compromise proposal for a statement expressing reservations over Israel's right to sit in the 157-nation assembly.

"We finally agreed," he told reporters, "to accept the proposal from certain friendly countries to go ahead with collective written reservation on the Israeli credential letter — bearing in mind in the future that the (Arab Group's ouster) decision is still there and we will follow the practice of the Israeli government. If the Israeli government still contines to refuse to withdraw from Lebanon, to ignore the rights of the Palestinian people to self-determination, this matter will be put forward."

The Libyan envoy, the Arab Group's current chairman, said a letter outlining the Arab reservations had been opened for signature by all U.N. members and many already had signed. He did not identify these members.

If the Arab challenge to Israel's credentials were pressed to a vote next Monday as originally planned, Treiki said, the ouster move would have won.

A report by the assembly's credential committee is to be voted on next Monday. It endorses approval of the credentials of all delegations, including Israel's, now seated in the Assembly. South Africa, suspended in 1974, did not seek reversal of that decision this year.

Arab nations militantly opposed to Israel launched the ouster drive two weeks ago in response to the June 6 Israeli invasion of Lebanon and the Sept. 16-18 massacre of Palestinian civilians in Beirut.

The campaign won reluctant backing from more moderate Arab states. But the United States countered with an intensive lobbying campaign, in which Shultz threatened to suspend payments to the United Nations and withdraw from the General Assembly if Israel were kicked out. The United States contributes 25 percent to the U.N. budget, which totals $721 million for fiscal 1982.

Treiki said the Arab Group's letter of reservation, which will be forwarded to the assembly president, refers to a resolution adopted by the assembly at a special session last April declaring Israel to be "not a peace-loving member state."

The letter also faults Israel for defying U.N. resolutions calling on it to revoke its annexation of Syria's Golan Heights and the Arab quarter of Jerusalem.

Treiki assailed Shultz' threat as "blackmail" that, he claimed, almost provoked a backlash in favor of immediately suspending Israel.

The Arab ouster drive, Treiki said, was "not directed at the United States people." He described them as "victims of the Zionist lobby."

Ambassador Mahmoud Aboul-Nasr of Oman, who appeared at the news conference with Treiki, said Shultz' threat had not influenced the Arab decision "in any way." Rather, he said, the Arab group was motivated by its own interests and the appeals for postponement by "our friends."

Moderate Arab states, including Oman, had objected to pushing the campaign at a time when a high-level Arab League delegation was in Washington to explore prospects for peace in the Middle East.

The Arab announcement came a day after Israel survived an ouster drive in another U.N. body — the International Telecommunications Union meeting in Nairobi, Kenya.

Threats worry U.S. embassy in Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The U.S. Embassy took new security measures Friday after an anonymous telephone caller warned that mounting anti-American vandalism in Warsaw was only a "first step."

A spokesman for the embassy said the acting chief of mission, Herb Wilgis, spent an hour at the Foreign Ministry. He handed in a diplomatic note asking for greater protection of the embassy and expressing concern over the incidents.

U.S. officials would not outline the new security measures taken by the embassy, saying only, "We are taking the steps an embassy would take in this situation."

The beefed-up security came amid a wave of vandalism directed against American and French diplomatic buildings and cars this week. The vandalism follows a series of break-ins that seems to have increased since the summer.

American officials refused to draw any immediate connection to martial law, which began Dec. 13, and President Reagan's new economic sanctions, announced Oct. 9, one day after Parliament outlawed Solidarity.

"I find it remarkable that these incidents are occuring only some 36 to 48 hours after a Polish government spokesman told the world press of a mounting wave of anti-Americanism here," a Western diplomatic observer commented. "The coincidence is too overwhelming."

He was referring to a news conference Tuesday given by government spokesman Jerzy Urban, who said Reagan's new sanctions had further eroded Polish public sentiment in favor of the United States.

A U.S. official said both the French and American Embassies had requested greater protection and had been given assurances by the Foreign Ministry it was "doing everything in its power to protect all diplomatic missions in Poland.

"But he also added complete protection is impossible here or anywhere else in the world," the American official said.

The host government is responsible for protecting foreign embassies.

The statement recalled the siege of the Polish Embassy in Bern last month, when four expatriate Poles held a group of embassy personnel hostage under threat of death for at least three days before being seized by Swiss police.

Poland charged at the time the occupiers had been inspired by Reagan's global policies of confrontation and alleged Western news agencies had aided them in disseminating their demands.

The latest incident here occured Thursday morning, embassy sources said, when a man, speaking in English, described the painting of swastikas on two American trade buildings sometime overnight Wednesday as "only a first step" and threatened "other action."

"From the nature of the threat, it appeared he (the caller) was attempting to implicate the Palestine Liberation Organization," the embassy source said.

The letters "PLO" had been daubed on the U.S. agricultural building and a trade development center, along with splashes of paint. Three American Embassy cars have also be splashed with paint, but so far the embassy building itself has not been damaged.

French officials reported their embassy building had been splashed with pink paint, seven cars had been damaged outside its main gate on Monday and the French school had received a telephoned threat that one child might be kidnapped.

Salvadorans say government seized leftist leaders

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Five leftist leaders were seized by security agents this week and officials will not reveal their whereabouts, witnesses said Friday.

Witnesses, who asked anonymity for fear of reprisals, said the five were rounded up individually in different places and at different times during the week. Other leftist leaders similarly arrested in the past turned up dead a few days later.

The five men were identified as officers of the Democratic Revolutionary Front (FDR), a coalition of El Salvador's 14 leftist parties and movements that went underground two years ago because of government repression.

Since then, the FDR has worked in close alliance with the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN), a federation of the country's six leftist guerrilla groups. The FMLN is fighting to overthrow the U.S.-backed rightist government.

The guerrillas' underground Radio Venceremos confirmed the witnesses' accounts in a broadcast saying the five leftist leaders were "captured." Terry Santana, director of the El Salvador Information Office, a branch of the FDR, also announced the arrests in a statement issued in Washington, D.C.

All three sources said one of the leaders, Carlos Molina, head of the National University's Economics Department, was seized by armed men in a parking lot in the capital Wednesday. They forced him back into his car and drove off.

Luis Menjivar, identified by the Human Rights Commission as a clothing manufacturer, was seized Monday morning. The sources said the other two are Jorge Herrera and David Elias Guadron, of whom little else is known.

Herrera was grabbed Monday night, Santana said, and Guadron was taken sometime between Monday and Wednesday night. Guadron's family has been broadcasting appeals on local radios urging his safe return.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8½% for 95% loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 13½% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 1.25%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 14.28%

MINIMUM DOWN + FLEXIBLE FINANCING = AFFORDABLE HOME OWNERSHIP

However, the BROOKEHAVEN concept is to provide solutions to home financing problems of the eighties. Right now we offer a variety of financing plans. Conventional mortgages . . . fixed rate thirty year mortgages . . . minimum down, graduated payment mortgages . . . flexible financing suited to your requirements.

BROOKEHAVEN, luxury homes with affordable financing.

Sienna Coast, number 5 of the BROOKHAVEN series, features a secluded master suite with a private patio suitable for a hot tub; a formal dining room plus a breakfast area overlooking an enclosed atrium; walk-in pantry; and a utility room large enough to accomodate a sewing nook.
