U.S. troops capture Marxist leader

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — Grenada's citizens began restoring order to their battle-scarred island today as defenders' guns were silent and the leader of the short-lived Marxist military regime was reported in custody.

The American death toll in the Grenada campaign rose to 16, with 77 wounded and three missing.

A man who claimed to be Gen. Hudson Austin and was carrying Austin's identification papers was captured by U.S. paratroopers, the Pentagon said Sunday. Austin was chairman of the 16-member People's Revolutionary Council set up after the Oct. 19 killing of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop.

No further details of Austin's capture were immediately available. Austin had been reported on the run in various locations across the 133-square mile Caribbean island since the U.S.-led invasion last Tuesday.

Some reports said he had with

■ Rangers proud of their role, Page 2A

him one or more women hostages, and he reportedly made at least one abortive attempt to escape from the island on a yacht.

On Saturday, U.S. Marines in the suburbs of St. George's, the capital of Grenada, captured Bernard Coard, another architect of the bloody coup tht ousted Bishop. Coard, a Marxist economist and deputy prime minister, led a faction that believed Bishop's pro-Cuban regime was not radical enough.

In St. George's, there were no reports of further fighting Sunday and reporters were allowed to walk the streets without military escorts for the first time.

"There is no life-threatening situation at the present," said a report issued by U.S. representatives of the Agency for International Development.

The report said AID had shipped in $20,000 worth of food, medicine and other supplies, but the food shortage on the island was not as bad as expected. The problem, the report said, had been distributing food from warehouses to stores during the invasion and during the junta's 24-hour curfew for several days earlier.

Midlander on board missing drilling ship

From Staff and Wire Reports

PEKING — A Midland man is among 81 crewmen of an American oil drilling ship missing since Wednesday in the South China Sea after a typhoon.

Bernard Patrick Cates, 39, of Midland was on board the ship as a subsea engineer, according to his wife, Patti.

"To this point, there has been no indication that the ship has gone down," said Mrs. Cates. "There have been some lifejackets recovered. The weather is very bad and that's hampering search efforts."

Cates, a native Midlander, returned to Midland six months ago and is employed by Global Marine Inc. of Houston.

Two Vietnamese vessels joined American and Chinese aircraft and ships hunting for the crew, the official Xinhua news agency said today.

U.S. and Chinese officials requested the Vietnamese government assist in the hunt for the 81 missing crewmen of the 5,926-ton Glomar Java Sea, Xinhua said.

The drilling ship had been prospecting for oil south of China's Hainan island in the South China Sea, opposite the coast of Vietnam, when Typhoon Lex hit with 75-mph winds and churning seas last Wednesday.

Although no new signs of survivors have been found, Air Force Lt. Col. Jack Gregory of the U.S. West Pacific Rescue Coordination Center in Okinawa, Japan, said there was no plan to call off the hunt.

"We're continuing the search for now and will continue...," Gregory said. "We have no plans to call it off."

Owned by Global Marine Inc. of Houston and leased by Arco China Inc., the vessel carried a crew of 42 Americans, 35 Chinese, two Singaporeans, an Australian and a Filipino.

Global Marine, in a statement released in Hong Kong, said today: "There have been no further reports of survivors or distress signals in the past 24 hours." A spokesperson in Global's Houston office said the company "is not prepared to release any information regarding members of the crew, except to members of the family."

Over the weekend, U.S. pilots said they might have seen flashing lights, a buoy and life rafts. But Gregory said the lights apparently were floating strobe lights unrelated to the missing ship.

Feuding factions meet to attempt reconciliation

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Lebanese national reconciliation conference, opening today after weeks of tense negotiations, brings together a collection of men who in some cases have been feuding bitterly for decades.

Walid Jamblatt

Amin Gamayel

Their task is to try to end Lebanon's internal conflicts, and the pressure on them has increased since the Oct. 23 truck bombings in Beirut which killed at least 287 U.S. and French servicemen in the multinational peacekeeping force. The four nations comprising the force have hinted they might reassess their roles unless the reconciliation talks yield significant results.

One of the key participants is leftist Druse leader Walid Jumblatt, who over the weekend warned of a new civil war if Lebanon's Christians balk at making concessions to the Moslems at the conference.

Jumblatt said the outcome of the talks will hinge on the Christians' willingness to grant "to the majority of the population the concessions necessary to lead to a modern Lebanon."

"If they no not wish to do so, there will be a new war," he said.

Jumblatt's Druse militiamen and their leftist allies battled the Lebanese army and Christian militiamen in September's three-week civil war.

"The real problem facing Lebanon is to get Israeli forces out of Lebanon and get Syria and the Palestinians to get their forces out of Lebanon so the Lebanese will have a chance to work out their differences and to control their destiny like everyone else," Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem said Sunday.

He said the conflict which has raged in Lebanon since 1975 was fueled by instability elsewhere in the Middle East.

"For eight years, Lebanon has paid a heavy price because it is a democracy, because it is free, because it is different," Salem said. "Now the Lebanese people more than ever are united behind the government to disentangle itself from the crisis in the area."

Israeli troops invaded Lebanon in June 1982 to force out Palestinian guerrillas and are still there. Syrians, permitted to stay in Lebanon as peacekeepers after the 1975-76 civil war, also are still there.

Sitting in the same room in a Geneva luxury hotel this week will be men who in some cases blame one another for attempts on their lives or for assassinations of relatives and followers.

In some cases, men allied with one another today were once arch-enemies. The history of their bloody entanglements, shifting alliances and hardline power brokering underscores the difficulty they face trying to end years of factional strife.

For example, former President Suleiman Franjieh was once allied with fellow Maronite Catholic Pierre Gemayel on the Christian right. But Franjieh broke with his fellow Christians in May 1978 over their increasing ties with Israel and hostility toward Syria.

Voters could change homestead provision

EDITOR'S NOTE: Eleven constitutional amendments will appear on the Nov. 8 ballot. This series examines the arguments for and against each proposal and how it would affect the state's citizens. This part looks at Propositions Two and Three.

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

A change in provisions for the homestead exemption law and a proposal to allow agricultural producers to collect assessments on product sales for the financing of research, marketing and education programs will be voted on by Texas citizens Nov. 8.

They are among 11 proposed amendments to the state constitution.

For 100 years until 1969 the urban homestead exemption was $5,000, but inflation resulted in an increase to $10,000 in 1970.

Basing the limit in size rather than value, say supporters, would preclude the necessity for future amendments due to inflation. However, those who oppose the proposition say that current limits suffice.

Homesteads first were protected by Texas law in the year Texas became a state — 1845. A rural homestead has been based on size — 200 acres — since that time, but the urban homestead exemption has been changed many times. There were no limitations on such during the days of the Republic of Texas, though improvements were protected only up to $500.

In 1845, a $2,000 limit was placed on the value of the plat claimed as urban homestead, and that figure was raised to $5,000 in 1869.

While that figure was doubled in 1970, the matter was further clouded

Proposition Two would change the homestead protection provision for urban lots from a $10,000 maximum valuation to a one-acre limit. by the stipulation that homesteads established prior to 1970 are still under the $5,000 limit.

The proposition will appear on the ballot as:

"The constitutional amendment replacing the limitation on the value of an urban homestead with a limitation based on size."

Proposition Three would allow groups of farmers to collect fees from producers and use the funds to promote and market that particular agricultural product. The money would be refundable to those who do not wish to participate, but they must write a letter to obtain such a refund.

Originally, assessments on productions were voluntary. But in 1969 the code was revised to require all producers of the commodity to pay assessments. Although they still could obtain refunds by applying to the commodity board, if they didn't take action it would be collected automatically.

The law was deemed unconstitutional by the Supreme Court in 1975. The court ruled the assessment amounted to an occupation tax in violation of the Texas Constitution.

The legislature thereafter amended the code to allow producers the right of exemption from paying the assessment by applying to the board.

The proposed amendment would enter into the constitution that current practice which is carried out under statutory law.

A similar proposed amendment met with defeat in 1977.

Supporters of the proposition contend it would create jobs and help the state's agricultural economy.

"The passage of this constitutional amendment can go a long way in enabling farm producers to go after effective and productive promotions for their grains, fibers and animal products," said Bill Sims, state senator for the 25th District. "In times like these, it just makes good sense."

Opponents of the proposition, however, say it smacks of a new tax on farmers and that the current practice is working well for many commodities.

Tuesday: Propositions Four and Five.

Rangers resent invasion criticism

FORT LEWIS, Wash. (AP) — The Army Rangers who helped secure a Cuban-built airstrip and rescue medical students on Grenada say they're bitter about anti-U.S. sentiment over the invasion, but are convinced their outfit was tailor-made for the mission.

"We knew why we were there," said Sgt. Steve Kendrick, 25, of Martinsville, Va. "It was a detailed operation."

In a news conference Sunday, Kendrick was joined by five others from the ranks and Lt. Col. Ralph L. Hagler Jr., commander of the 2nd Battalion, 75th Division, in describing their experiences on the eastern Caribbean island.

Like others interviewed informally as they were reunited with friends and family at this Army base south of Tacoma, they said the evacuation of medical students at St. George's University made the mission worthwhile.

"We were the only people who were qualified to do it," said Spec. 4 George M. Rollins, 20, a 90mm recoilless rifleman from Warrensburg, Mo.

"There's no other force in the United States that could do that mission," Hagler echoed.

"It was about time we took care of our own people," said Sgt. Paul W. Guerra, 22, of Silver City, N.M.

When asked whether he resented criticism from U.S. allies about the invasion, Guerra replied evenly, "Yes, very much."

Hagler commented, "I'm sure those allies that were (critical) weren't in the (dormitory) building, waiting to be rescued."

Several times, he and the soldiers referred to the students as "hostages."

About a mile away on the base, hundreds of cheering, flag-waving friends and relatives greeted more than 550 returning Rangers, who were flown to neighboring McChord Air Force Base from division headquarters at Fort Stewart, Ga., aboard six Air Force C-141B transport planes.

Oblivious to a chilling rain, one woman sobbed, "Don't leave me no more, don't leave me no more," as she welcomed a soldier home. His left arm was draped across her shoulder, and the middle finger on that hand was in a splint.

AP Laserphoto

A U.S. Ranger rests for a moment during operations on Grenada in a photograph taken by a French photographer during the first three days of fighting.

A few yards away, another soldier was greeted by another woman.

"Ron's coming," the soldier said. "He wasn't on my plane, but he's coming. He's coming."

Signs bore slogans like "Rangers Lead the Way," the unit's motto since World War II. Numerous women wore T-shirts and jackets saying, "I am a Ranger Wife" and "Love is a Ranger."

When asked whether he was surprised at being sent on his first combat mission so close to home, Kendrick shook his head slightly.

"You never know," he said. "They (Communists) keep creeping up on us. They're in El Salvador now."

Hagler said the Rangers parachuted onto the Port Salines airfield in the face of "anti-aircraft fire and intense small-arms fire" at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday and secured it for the rest of the invasion force.

To reduce their exposure, the jump was made from about 500 feet, one of the lowest jumps since World War II and too low for the use of reserve chutes had any primary chutes failed, Hagler said.

All three Rangers who died on the mission perished Thursday in a helicopter crash during a raid, Hagler said.

Spec. 4 Andrew Paulin, a 21-year-old M-60 machinegunner from Boise, Idaho, said he had just taken cover after getting out of the lead chopper when he heard two choppers collide and saw two other choppers crash into each other.

"I was scared," he said. "There was nothing we could do for our buddies in the crash. Choppers were bounding around everywhere. There was nowhere to go but the ocean."

The compound they were attacking contained about 12 Cuban soldiers and was "like a basic-training camp...built upon the Soviet model, a Soviet infiltration course," Hagler said.

He said the unit turned over 25 Cuban prisoners, 40 members of the local militia and about 500 refugees to troops from other nations in the multinational force.

"We didn't, quite frankly, anticipate the degree of resistance we got," Hagler said. "The Cubans were well-trained. The (Grenadian) militia had very little heart."

Reporters saw smashed windows and empty store shelves as a result of looting after the invasion. The only restaurant open in the area was selling beer, but no food.

Patrols of soldiers and sailors from the 400-member, seven-nation Caribbean security force were serving as police. The central market area, usually quiet on Sundays, was even quieter than normal.

"We see the real truth about Americans and we see how they're interested and we see the real truth when they arrived because they didn't want to see us get communistic," said Benedine Charlotte, carrying a two-week-old baby.

The AID report said there was extensive shelling damage to bridges and roads, and a broken water main had lowered water pressure. Electricity was working in some parts of the city, according to the report, and telephone communications were being repaired.

In an address to the nation late Saturday on state-run Spice Island Radio, the British-appointed governor general of the island, Sir Paul Scoon, urged stores and schools to open and government employees to report to work today.

The United States and its Caribbean allies have recognized Scoon as the only "constitutional authority" on Grenada and have pledged to help him set up an interim government and then hold elections.

In Barbados, high-ranking police said a contingent of U.S. Marines captured an undisclosed number of Cuban resisters Sunday on Carriacou, a 13-square mile island dependency of Grenada to the north. But there was no official word from military spokesmen.

The Pentagon on Sunday said the Cuban government's count of Cubans on Grenada — a total of 784 — may have been correct, despite previous military estimates ranging higher. Nearly 700 Cubans are being held as prisoners.

At the time of the invasion, U.S. military intelligence estimated there were about 600 Cubans on Grenada, most of them construction workers building a new airport. However, after U.S. Marines and Army rangers took Grenada amid fierce fighting, the Pentagon said there were up to 1,200 Cubans, many of them well-trained soldiers, on the island.

In Geneva, the Red Cross said it was arranging to evacuate the Cuban wounded. The U.S. command in Barbados, 110 miles from Grenada, has not released any casualty figures for the resistance, but one report said as many as 69 defenders had been killed.

The Pentagon said five American soldiers listed as missing had been found dead, raising the official U.S. casualty count in the Grenada campaign to 16 dead.

In Washington, Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam said Sunday that American forces recovered a "treasure trove" of documents showing Grenada had entered into military supply contracts with Cuba, the Soviet Union and North Korea.

Also in Washington, U.S. intelligence sources said there was no clear evidence any of the 1,000 Americans on the island were in danger of being taken hostage. President Reagan said fear of an Iran-type hostage situation was a motivation for the invasion. About 700 people, most of them American students at St. George's University School of Medicine, have been evacuated from Grenada.

Feuding factions meet to attempt reconciliation

One month later gunmen from the Christian Phalange party, founded and headed by Pierre Gemayel, killed Franjieh's son Tony, his wife and infant daughter.

Gemayel, father of President Amin Gemayel, came to the conference as co-chairman, along with former President Camille Chamoun, of the Lebanese Front, an umbrella organization which includes the Phalangists.

But relations between Chamoun, remembered as the president who requested U.S. intervention to restore order in 1958, and the Gemayel family have not always been harmonious.

Militiamen of Chamoun's National Liberal Party performed well alongside the Phalangists during the 1975-76 civil war. But when the war tapered off, the Phalangists clashed with Chamoun's militiamen in a series of bloody battles in the summer of 1978, reducing the Liberal Party's power.

President Gemayel's opponents at the conference have had their share of feuding too.

Although Jumblatt lives in Damascus and received Syrian backing during the September civil war, many Lebanese blame Syria for the 1977 murder of his father Kamal Jumblatt in an ambush.

Jumblatt shares leadership of the Front for National Salvation, a group formed to oppose the Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal pact, with Franjieh and former Prime Minister Rashid Karami.

Karami, whose stronghold is the northern port of Tripoli, joined other Parliament deputies in demanding Franjieh's resignation as president after the breakup of the Lebanese army in 1976.

Franjieh remained in office, thanks in part to support from Chamoun.

However, nine years earlier, when Chamoun was president, Franjieh was among his strongest opponents.

Black leaders may not back Jackson candidacy

ATLANTA (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, demanding a "new covenant" linking blacks to the Democratic Party, organized labor and big business, says he will seek to become the first black presidential candidate nominated by a major party.

The civil rights leader said he will formally announce on Thursdsy that he is running for the 1984 Democratic nomination because blacks have an investment in the Democratic Party, "and we want a return on our investment."

Many of the country's black political leaders have said they will not support Jackson, fearing such a campaign would be divisive. But in an interview on the CBS television program "60 Minutes," broadcast Sunday night, Jackson said, "No candidate can expect to have unanimous support from any given community."

■ Jesse Jackson profile, Page 7A

"We have a dual mission." he said. "One part is to remove the repressive Reagan regime. The other is to achieve parity.

"Our position has been that we have been an unofficial candidate in the Democratic primaries," Jackson said. As of Thursday, he said, "I expect to become an official candidate."

Asked if he would choose a female running mate if possible, Jackson replied: "There's no doubt about it."

The 42-year-old Jackson, a disciple of slain civil rights leader Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., heads Operation PUSH — People United to Serve Humanity — a Chicago-based organization that concentrates on registering voters.

"There is a way to put America back to work," he said. "There is a way to study war no more. There is a way to organize a coalition across racial and sexual lines. There is a way to form a new covenant between the locked out and the Democratic Party. There is a way to form a new covenant between the locked out and the labor unions. There is a way to form a new covenant with the world community."

Reagan faces new tests over Grenada invasion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, bolstered by signs of public support for his policies, is facing new tests over the invasion of Grenada and keeping U.S. Marines on duty in Lebanon in the aftermath of heavy American casualties.

The president also hopes to announce this week his choice of a new Middle East envoy to help negotiate a solution to the war in Lebanon, where a tenuous ceasefire remains in effect. The new envoy would replace Robert McFarlane, who has taken over as White House national security adviser.

On other matters relating to Lebanon, questions remain about the terrorist bombing in Beirut that killed more than 225 Americans. In a weekend announcement, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said a formal board of inquiry will be convened to investigate all circumstances surrounding the attack, including whether security precautions were adequate.

Gen. Paul X. Kelley, the Marine Corps commandant, was summoned before the Senate Armed Services Committee today to answer questions about security arrangements.

On the question of Grenada, the House is considering legislation invoking restrictions under the War Powers Act that would require Reagan to withdraw Americans from the Caribbean island in 60 days unless Congress extends their stay. The measure already has been approved by the Senate.

More than a dozen Americans have died since U.S. forces landed there last Tuesday.

Marine's mom waits for phone to ring

SEAFORD, Del. (AP) — A pair of clean Marine camouflage pants hangs on a line in the back yard. Inside, wood crackles in the fireplace, an old movie is playing on TV and a mother waits.

The phone rings often, always shrilly. Jackie Persinger always answers. But not one call has brought news of her son's safety.

She is just one mother of one Marine who left Camp Lejeune, N.C., last week to join the invasion of Grenada. But she has waited before — for 444 days, when her son and 51 other Americans were held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Iran three years ago.

The name of Sgt. Gregory A. Persinger, 25, hasn't appeared on any list of missing or wounded in Grenada, and he may already be among those Marines pulled out of the Caribbean and sent to Beirut.

She worries, "but so do all the other mothers," she said Sunday at the family's home. "Of course it's tough. But it's tough for everyone. Greg is not any kind of special hero. He's just a Marine, one of many doing their job."

Politely, evenly, she tells callers she hasn't heard from her son. No phone call. No letter. But she says little else, keeping her own counsel during a week that has shocked the world as the Iranian hostage crisis once did.

"I'm proud of him, but I'm not the only mother of one of those boys," she explained.

Her husband, Lawrence, notices the strain. "She's here all day with the phone ringing. By the time I get home, she's a bundle of nerves," he said.

"With all that's going on in Beirut and Grenada," Greg's father said, being the parent of a Marine "isn't easy, I'll tell you."

Only 30 miles away, in Dover, other parents gathered Sunday for one of the first memorial services for soldiers killed in Beirut and Grenada.

Not all of the calls to the Persinger home have been kind. One anonymous caller "said he wished Greg was dead because of all the attention Greg's gotten," Mrs. Persinger said.

Greg Persinger became a local celebrity, as did all the hostages in Iran, when he returned to this southern Delaware community of 5,000, the Persingers' home for 20 years. He walked a mile-long parade route lined with yellow ribbons, American flags and cheering well-wishers.

He spent his first afternoon of freedom riding around town, talking with his older brother and munching pistachio nuts on the porch of the Persingers' tidy, white mobile home surrounded by tall pine trees at the edge of town.

Jimmy Carter's mother dies at age 85

Lillian Carter

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Lillian Carter, the spry and forthright mother of former President Jimmy Carter whose full life spanned politics, the Peace Corps and the limelight of her son's White House years, is dead at the age of 85.

Mrs. Carter, affectionately known as "Miss Lillian," died of cancer at 5:05 p.m. Sunday at Americus-Sumter County Hospital.

The former president and his wife, Rosalynn, were at Mrs. Carter's bedside when she died, along with her other son, Billy, and her daughter, Gloria Carter Spann, said hospital administrator James Griffith.

Dr. Paul Broun said Mrs. Carter, who underwent a radical mastectomy in 1981, died of cancer after a period of declining health.

A graveside service is scheduled for 3 p.m Tuesday at Lebanon Cemetery in Plains.

During her son's tenure in the White House, Mrs. Carter traveled the world, but was fond of returning home to Plains "to get barefoot."

She once advised a congressional committee interested in the problems of hunger and population planning, "Don't retire until you have to. And if you do retire, find a hobby and just keep on living. Don't get in a rocking chair and rot out."

As a 67-year-old widow, she joined the Peace Corps in 1966 and went to India for two years as its oldest volunteer.

The wrinkles of age, her silver hair and thick Southern accent lent charm to her outspokenness. But the president's foes were her foes, and she made no bones about that.

Campaigning in New Hampshire in 1979, she drew an embarrassed silence and a few catcalls when she told an audience she hoped no harm would befall U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, then challenging Carter for the nomination.

A campaign spokesman explained that the president's mother meant the remark only as "an honest expression of concern."

On a campaign stop the same year, she said that if she had $1 million, she would hire someone to kill Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini.

As an amateur ambassador on infrequent trips abroad, the president's mother was a hit, traveling to Ireland in 1977 with the President's Friendship Force program and to Europe and Africa in 1978. She represented her son at the funeral of Indian President Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed in 1977.

Born Aug. 15, 1898, in Richland, Ga., about 20 miles from Plains, Mrs. Carter attended public schools and studied nursing at the now-defunct Wise Clinic in Plains. She earned her nursing degree at Grady Memorial Hospital in Atlanta.

Drought reduces cotton crop to 'absolutely next to nothing'

ODESSA (AP) — Agriculture officials in West Texas are predicting higher prices on some cotton goods because of a drought that has drastically cut production already reduced by a federal program.

The West Texas crop — mostly short-staple cotton used in denim jeans and work shirts — is "absolutely next to nothing" this year, said Don Richardson, Howard County agriculture extension agent.

Cotton farmers are reporting yields of as little as one-tenth that of a good year because of the drought and the federal Payment in Kind program that offered them commodities in exchange for not planting much of their land.

The PIK program was instituted to help reduce a national surplus that threatened to drive down the farmers' income from their crops.

RICHARDSON SAID ONLY about half of his county's 110,000 production acres were planted and he expects only about 10,000 bales this year, compared with 70,000 to 80,000 bales last year and a top production of over 100,000 bales.

A bale weighs 500 pounds.

While drought plagued the crop during its growing season, a late rain finally fell earlier this month, serving only to discolor the cotton, decreasing its value, the farmers say.

Bill Crockett, the Plains cotton market reporter for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, says healthy harvests nationwide, plus a large surplus, will make up for the small West Texas crop.

But Crockett says even so, he expects the price of cotton products to increase because of higher labor and production expenses.

"THEY ALWAYS have," he said.

Crockett expects the nation's cotton harvest to be between 7 million and 7.5 million bales, compared with 12 million last year.

The nation has a large surplus of cotton — about 8 million bales — that the federal government is trying to deplete through the PIK program, Crockett said. The surplus cotton, easy to store because it does not deteriorate rapidly, is from from four or five harvests, he said.

Richardson says cotton prices have gone up across the country because of the drought and the PIK program.

Larry Shaw, a long-time farmer from Knott, said he planted about 475 acres this year, setting aside about 35 percent of his land for the PIK program.

He said that with snowfall last winter, he received only between 5 inches and 6 inches of rain.

WHEN THE HARVEST is completed, he hopes to have between 200 and 250 bales of cotton from his non-irrigated fields compared with the almost 450 bales he harvested last year. Shaw expects to make between $250 and $300 a bale.

Shaw's story has been repeated throughout West Texas, though irrigated cotton farms south and west of Midland County haven't faced quite as severe problems, but they produce far less cotton.

Shaw said a strong U.S. dollar hasn't helped cotton farmers, either. In West Texas, about 75 percent of the crop is exported, he said.

Because the dollar's value has gone up in the world market, foreign nations can't buy as much as they once did.

The poor harvest was the third consecutive bad crop for West Texas farmers, who faced drought and hail in 1981 and 1982.

This year, the drought is forcing an even heavier toll on the crop.

"A lot of our stuff, it got planted, but it never did come up," said Nestor Hernandez, director of U.S. Department of Agriculture Soil Conservation Service in Martin County.

Richardson said that even though the recent rain reduced the value of the cotton that was produced, in his county, "nobody's fussin' a bit."

The water helped rebuild a depleted underground water supply, Richard said.

"As poor as the crop is, the benefits of the rain offset the disadvantages," he said.

Horror lives on for former POWs

TEXARKANA (AP) — Time doesn't heal all wounds. Nearly 40 years after World War II ended, former prisoners of war are still struggling to escape nightmares from the past.

"The prison camp isn't over. You can control it when you're awake, but it comes right back at night," W.W. Nevill, 61, former Japanese POW, said while sitting in a fellow veteran's kitchen.

Across the table from Nevill, Ed Carter, 62, and Bill Thompson, 59, both former German POWs, sat nodding their heads in agreement. Nevill's horror began April 9, 1942, when U.S. forces in the Philippines surrendered to Japan and the Bataan Death March began. The horror continues in his subconscious, drowning his nights in cold sweat.

Thompson was captured Nov. 17, 1943, after his tank company was cut off and left without supplies. It was 266 days before his liberation by the Soviet Army, Carter said.

"It seemed like 10 years," he said.

When Carter's B-17 bomber was shot down over Germany Oct. 8, 1943, he and five other crew members survived by parachuting, but were picked up and imprisoned by German soldiers. The details of prison life are still vivid, Carter said.

"I don't guess there isn't any way to ever forget the smell," he said. He took a brief, glassy-eyed reflection, and abruptly snapped back with a shake of his head.

The three are members of the Northeast Texas chapter of the Organization of Ex-POWs. During the meetings, former POWs discuss legislation affecting them, but never talk about their experiences as a group.

"We've just all got a lot in common. We understand each other and don't have to talk about it," Nevill said.

The meetings give former POWs a chance to get together with people who understand what they have been through, Thompson said.

"You can socialize over a dinner and not talk about it," he said.

One common theme to the meetings is how POWs are treated by the government, Carter said. POWs are not understood by the government or the general public, Nevill said.

"If the general public could understand just one-quarter of what these people went through, and I say went through with flying colors, for their country, that would open their eyes. Then they would take a long, hard look at what they're doing for ex-POWs," he said.

"There's not a prisoner of war that wants sympathy. They want understanding," Nevill said.

Both Nevill and Thompson recounted times they were beaten and locked in dungeons. Carter said he was not aware of random beatings at his camp, but said conditions were poor.

Nevill weighed 196 pounds when captured, he said, but dropped to 97 pounds by the time he was released from his Japanese prison camp. Thompson said he too was malnourished when released.

A combination of hate and patriotism kept the men going.

"Hate's what got me through," Thompson said, clenching his fist. "We were treated like a pen full of hogs. Those Germans, some of them, didn't have a heart. If you died, you were just one less they had to guard."

Prisoners with Nevill at the POW camp in Japan were forced to work in coal mines 12 hours a day.

"They would just pick people out at random and literally beat them to death. They would do that just for their amusement," he said before he began to shake uncontrollably. He stopped talking and wiped his eyes. The other two men looked away as he sobbed.

"The cruelty of the Japs was incomprehensible to most people, because it was so inhumane. I don't know how anyone made it," Nevill said. "I could sit here and tell you stories you couldn't print. I could tell you stories that you wouldn't sit here and listen to."

One of the problems facing POWs, Thompson said, is that their stories are so bad people can't believe them.

"People just don't want to hear it," he said.

For the sake of POWs and those killed in prison camps, Nevill said, people need to hear the stories and need to understand. POWs problems are different from those of other veterans groups, he said, and should be looked at on a case-by-case basis.

Firm accused of attempting to overcharge for equipment

FORT WORTH (AP) — General Dynamics' Fort Worth division has been accused by a U.S. Senate committee chairman of attempting to charge the military an up to 976 percent markup on tools to maintain F-16 fighter planes, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, made the charges in an Oct. 6 letter to Deputy Secretary of Defense W. Paul Thayer, the newspaper said.

"I directed an investigation of several pieces of support equipment for F-16 aircraft maintenance which disclosed alarmingly high proposed prices for simple tools and other support equipment," Roth told Thayer.

The Star-Telegram said it had obtained a copy of Roth's letter and an accompanying report by committee investigators.

AS AN EXAMPLE, Roth said the company listed the cost to the Air Force of a modified 12-cent wrench at $9,606, the Star-Telegram said.

The wrench was to be part of a $1.2 million contract General Dynamics has offered the Air Force to maintain the radar on the F-16s. Committee investigators said General Dynamics bought the wrench from Westinghouse Electric Co., the radar's manufacturer, for $5,295, Roth told Thayer.

Former military auditors working with Roth's committee said 62 hours spent by engineers designing the modified wrench, plus overhead and profit charges, resulted in the $9,606 total, the newspaper reported.

The investigators were able to buy a box of the wrenches from a Washington outlet for $12, they said. The wrench was to have been modified for the Air Force by trimming its tip to one-quarter inch and adding a 1½-inch steel shank to its handle.

"I have great difficulty in justifying proposed prices of $9,600 for a 12-cent Allen wrench, $900 for a $7 cutting tool, $1,100 for a $5 spotface cutter pilot, and $9,800 for $1 spacers," Roth wrote Thayer.

ROTH'S COMMITTEE is scheduled to hold hearing on alleged overcharges on Wednesday. Thayer and Pentagon officials involved in the F-16 program are expected to testify, but no General Dynamics personnel have been asked to appear, the newspaper said.

The committee is also expected to question military officials about support costs for the Dallas-based Vought Corp.'s Multiple-Launch Rocket System and the McDonnell Douglas Corp.'s F-18 jet.

The newspaper said investigators reported that none of the 14 items contained in the proposed General Dynamics contract would have gone to Fort Worth, but would have been shipped directly from Westinghouse to Hill Air Force Base in Utah, where F-16s are based.

Crime commissioners snub offer to help with unserved warrants

DALLAS (AP) — A group of businessmen who serve on a citizens crime committee want to do something about thousands of unserved arrest warrants held by the Dallas County Sheriff's Department, but county officials say nothing can be done about the backlog — unless the warrants are dismissed.

The warrants committee of the Greater Dallas Crime Commission has been monitoring a growing number of outstanding warrants in the county for the past several years.

Officials said that there were 37,000 unserved criminal warrants in late 1982. By last month, the number was 54,000, according to sheriff's department records.

County commissioners say the number of unserved warrants has been in the tens of thousands for at least 10 years, but that the numbers are blown out of proportion because they represent incidents, not individuals.

A professional hot-check writer who writes 25 checks in Dallas County will have 25 warrants out for his arrest, commissioners said.

"This so-called backlog of warrants has been a political hot potato for too long — people really haven't analyzed it; they just get all upset and talk about 50,000 criminals being on the streets when it's just not true," said commissioner Jim Jackson.

He recently wrote a letter to the crime commission to state the county commissioners' position on unserved warrants. Jackson was responding to telephone calls and letters from several crime commission members who have demanded that commissioners take immediate action to lower the numbers.

The state commission is a nonprofit organization of about 200 individuals and corporations who work in committees on issues affecting public safety.

"I think the response of the court basically is that they understand the complexity of the issue and they cannot concern themselves about the numbers," said Joseph Stedman, chairman of the board of Texas Commerce Bank Casa Linda.

More Texans killed in Beirut

By The Associated Press

The waiting has come to a end for two more Texas families, who have learned that their sons were among the more than 200 U.S. servicemen killed in last week's terrorist attack in Lebanon.

Master Sgt. Matilde Hernandez Jr., 37, of Austin, was placed on the official casualty list Saturday, and the name of Lance Cpl. David Brown of Conroe was added Sunday.

A native of Arlington, Marine Pfc. Stephen Bland, 23, of Midway Park, N.C., was also put on the casualty list Sunday.

Hernandez' sister, Defina Arriola, said her brother had written of his desire to leave Lebanon in seven letters his relatives received Oct. 24, the day after the bomb attack. He was due to come home Nov. 17.

Hernandez, who lived near Camp Lejeune, N.C., with his wife Mary and their four children, 9 to 15, joined the Marines during the Vietnam War and served a short time in Vietnam until he was injured, Mrs. Arriola said.

The Marines sent Hernandez to Beirut in May. Initially he was a guard at the airport, but later was moved to an indoor job.

Divers find woman's head

HOUSTON (AP) — Divers have found the head of a woman who was shot and killed by her husband during an argument, police said.

Homicide Detective H.W. Kersten said the head was found in the San Jacinto River on Saturday "right where he said it was."

John Brandal Grant, who was charged with murder in the death of his 17-year-old wife, Connie, remained in jail Sunday on $35,000 bond.

Six indicted for taking 'cool' cash

HOUSTON (AP) — Six people have been indicted on charges they stole at least $400,000 that the uncle of Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. had stashed away in a freezer.

The six, all children of the long-time maid of Holmes' uncle, Thomas Holmes, used the money to buy about 20 cars, investigator Clyde Wilson said. The maid passed a polygraph test and was not involved in the theft, Wilson said.

Investigators began watching the maid's home and checked the vehicle registration on each of the cars, Wilson said. Investigators discovered all the cars were recently purchased by the maid's children.

Indicted on charges of theft over $10,000 were Charlotte Marie Randall, Freddie Marie Henix, Thersa Henix, Irene Henix, Georgia Mae Blackshire and Kenneth Wayne Sneeze.

If convicted, each could face up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Ceremony planners hit snag

DALLAS (AP) — Local Democratic leaders Plans say they're still looking for someone to speak at a ceremony to mark the 20th anniversary of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

So far, three people have been asked to address the Nov. 22 gathering but none has accepted the invitation.

The planners have run into other problems, too. As of Wednesday, only 117 of 2,000 tickets to the $15-a-plate luncheon had been sold, and most of the other dignitaries of national stature who have been invited have either declined or not responded.

But Bob Greenberg, chairman of the Dallas County Democratic Party, said he was still optimistic.

El Paso man charged in murder

EL PASO (AP) — An El Paso man has been charged with murder in the slaying of an Army administrative clerk who was found strangled and partially burned in the desert east of here.

Clive Anthony Howlett was being held Sunday in Grand Island, Neb. on murder and car theft warrants issued by local authorities. El Paso County Court-at-Law Judge John Fashing said he set Howlett's bond at $200,000 on the murder charge and $50,000 on the car theft charge.

The body of 26-year-old Army Spec. 4 Pamela Rosario of Florence, Ala. was found Friday. Investigators said she was an administrative clerk at William Beaumont Army Medical Center in El Paso. She had been missing since Oct. 19.

'Sadat' miniseries broadcast

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — The man who brought sanity and humanity to an ancient battle line in the Middle East was not always a statesman and a peacemaker.

As depicted in an emotionally moving but historically suspect and sometimes superficial television movie, Anwar Sadat first exhibited political consciousness as a bomb-thrower and a revolutionary.

"Sadat," the two-part, four-hour glorification of the assassinated Egyptian president, stars Louis Gossett Jr., who captures Sadat's inner dignity and his physical appearance, although his performance, at times, comes across as bland.

The miniseries, filmed entirely in Mexico with hordes of extras, will be broadcast this week and next Monday on the Operation Prime Time network. In Midland, it will air on WGN, cable channel 11.

Thirty years before he broke ranks with other Arab nations to help close some of the wounds between Israel and Egypt, Sadat was part of the assassination team that killed an Egyptian deemed to be too friendly with the ruling British authorities. Although he spent time in prison on the murder charge, Sadat was acquitted for "political reasons."

Sadat's treatment here is so glowing that even his involvement in the assassination is treated sympathetically. Later, when he's courting his second wife, Jihan, he says that his earlier activism occurred before he grew up, which is the closest thing to a wart uncovered by "Sadat."

Some items ignored or swept under the rug were his imprisonment in 1944 for helping two German spies in World War II, the first marriage he outgrew, his early alliance with the Soviet Union and the failure of many of his domestic policies.

To woo audiences from ABC, CBS and NBC, Operation Prime Time feels its films must profile bigger-than-life figures who are then enlarged by the full-blown Hollywood treatment. The last OPT biography, the Emmy award-winning "Golda," starring Ingrid Bergman, chronicled the life of Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir.

"Golda" did a better job reconstructing the personal life behind the public figure. Sadat's private life is fleshed out only superficially. No mention is made of his seven children from the two marriages, and Jihan, played by Madolyn Smith, does little here but boost his morale.

♠J9542 ♡AK ♢K95 ♣1043
What is your opening bid?

A. — You do not have one! Even counting distributional values, your hand is worth only 12 points, and your five-card suit is not rebiddable. If you open one spade, you will be in trouble on any auction except where partner responds one no trump or raises spades. The final drawback is that your high cards are in your short suits, where their offensive effectiveness is limited. Pass.

Q.5 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J94 ♡10952 ♢QJ4 ♣AK7
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	3 ♠	?

What action do you take?

A. — East's preempt has complicated the auction. Since you surely have a 4-4 heart fit here, we would not fault you greatly if you chose to bid four hearts. However, we feel that contract will be tenuous at best because of your weak trump holding and balanced hand. Our choice is to double. Partner should realize, from the auction, that we are unlikely to have a spade stack, so he should remove the double on distributional hands.

Q.6 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K982 ♡AK765 ♢4 ♣KJ83
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♢	?

What do you bid now?

A. — You are certainly in slam territory — even a grand slam cannot be ruled out. The question is how best to investigate the possibilities. Both an immediate cue-bid and a jump in partner's suit will convey the strength of your hand, but the bidding could get too high before you have decided where to play the hand. For instance, if you jump to three spades and West preempts with five diamonds, what next? Our own choice would be a quiet bid of two hearts. That is forcing, and partner's natural rebid should tell us more about his hand than any bid he is forced to make under pressure.

Have a neo-title!

Now that we have figured out who the "neo-conservatives" are, we may have to start another list of "neo-liberals."

A group of 200 politicians, academics and others used that term to describe themselves when they met recently at Reston, Va., to chart a course for what they perceive to be a new movement.

Neo-conservatives are people who considered themselves to be liberals until events of the 1960s and 1970s soured them on the traditional liberal outlook and drove them toward principles generally upheld by conservatives. They are called neo-, we presume, to distinguish them from people who have been conservatives all along.

The ideological slant of the neo-liberals isn't so clear. From the speeches made at Reston we can figure out where they've been but can't be sure where they're going. The best clue comes from Charles Peters, editor of The Washington Monthly, who coined the term neo-liberal and sponsored the Reston conference.

"First of all, and most important of all, we are liberals," he declared. "We criticize liberalism not to destroy it but to renew it by freeing it from its myths, from its old automatic responses in favor of unions and big government and against business and the military." Hooray for that, if the neo-liberals really mean it.

The new philosophy, said Mr. Peters, also means "voting for a candidate not on the basis of what he has done for you or your special group but on the basis of what he has done for the community as a whole." That's a winner, too.

The breast-beating at Reston was encouraging. Democratic Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona admitted that his own party needed some neo-liberalizing to remove it from the bondage of the education establishment. Robert Nagel, a law professor from the University of Colorado, came down hard on liberal judges who make the courts look foolish by carrying constitutional rights to "any extremes."

A lot of what was said at Reston seemed to come straight out of a conservative primer. The conservatives have no monopoly on their ideas, of course, so they can't complain of plagiarism. But if the conservatives, the neo-conservatives and the neo-liberals all start saying the same things, how are we going to tell them apart?

Hole in the head

The stirring Biblical account of David's defeat of Goliath with a sling-shot is an encouraging account. It is the classic story of the good, little fellow knocking off the big, bad guy.

It is disappointing to learn that a psychiatrist and a physician have set about to reduce this tale to scientific plausibility. The team has put forth the argument that Goliath, a glandular freak to begin with, had a soft cyst on his forehead. The stone from David's sling, the medical pair said, struck the cyst, penetrating Goliath's brain and killing him.

In effect, the scientists have reversed the roles of the duelists, making Goliath the handicapped victim instead of the monster the Bible said he was, thereby invalidating the Scriptural message. Science might serve us better by leaving our treasured Biblical tales alone.

Another View:

Killing a commission

Having run into trouble in his efforts to turn the heretofore-independent U.S. Civil Rights Commission into an echo of White House policy, Ronald Reagan now appears determined to kill it altogether.

Six months ago, the president set out to replace three of the commission's six members, two of them appointed by President Carter, one by President Ford, with three conservatives less likely to be critical of the administration's civil rights attitudes and programs. In addition to the two Reagan appointees already on the commission, the three new members would have given Mr. Reagan control of five of the six members.

All that was entirely unprecedented. Since the commission was created without administrative or policymaking power — it is supposed to be an independent federal entity monitoring and reporting on the state of civil rights in this country — no president has ever tried to replace incumbent members before. In effect, Mr. Reagan tried to turn what was designed to be the nation's conscience on civil rights into a compliant organ of administration policy.

Not surprisingly, the Reagan nominations ran into trouble, even in the Republican-controlled Senate, where they've been stalled since May. In the ensuing political deadlock, however, the commission's own legal authority is expiring. What was hoped to be bipartisan compromise legislation extending the commission's mandate and giving Mr. Reagan two appointees on an expanded commission — not enough to control the full body — has been rejected by the White House. Now, in what is reported to be frustration, the president has flat-out fired the three members he sought to replace last spring, leaving the commission without enough members for a quorum.

Since the commission already lacks legal authority to operate — if there is no new legislation, it must wind up its affairs by Nov. 30 — the firing of the commissioners may turn out to be largely redundant. Still, the president's rejection of the compromise makes it clear that he'd rather be without a federal voice on civil rights than one the White House can't control.

There is still hope that Congress will — either with or without the president's acquiescence — reauthorize the commission in such a way that it has at least a chance of operating independently. If Congress cannot do so — and it's increasingly likely that it can't — there'll be no doubt that it was the president who killed the commission. That would probably be convenient for an administration notorious for its indifference to civil rights issues, but it would be a serious blow for civil rights.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Lack of tapes could kill case

WASHINGTON — Despite video tapes that show him clearly handling a satchel full of cocaine, auto wizard John DeLorean's contention that the government entrapped him into the illicit drug deal may still hold in court.

Jack Anderson

The reason is that crucial conversations in the early stages of the bizarre incident were not recorded. So the government's claim that DeLorean initiated the narcotics deal cannot be proven by electronic evidence.

Neither, of course, can DeLorean's insistance that it was a government informant who first suggested a cocaine transaction as the way to bail the flamboyant automaker out of his financial difficulties. He then went along with the deal, he told my staff, because of threats against his family.

The government's case isn't as airtight as the attorneys have been claiming in pretrial motions over the months. For example, one motion states that "the conspiracy is vividly depicted and preserved on a series of audio and video tapes."

But court documents and internal government memos studied by my associates Indy Badhwar and Tony Capaccio show no conclusive evidence to prove the government's claim that "DeLorean initiated his participation in a narcotics transaction," and that "narcotics were discussed openly from July through the date of his arrest" in October 1982. The vital conversations simply weren't recorded.

According to an internal Drug Enforcement Administration report, U.S. Attorney James Walsh decided to open an investigation on July 16, 1982. His decision was based largely on a 10-minute conversation with the DEA agent who handled James Timothy Hoffman, the informant DeLorean swears set him up.

The DEA report admits that Hoffman made the first call to DeLorean. The report says Hoffman called "on a personal matter" in late June — with no further elaboration.

In this first conversation, which was unrecorded, Hoffman said DeLorean disclosed his auto company's deep money troubles and asked Hoffman if he knew any investors who might help save the company. As Hoffman recounted the conversation to the DEA, he said no. DeLorean then said he "wanted to meet and discuss an important matter and could not do so over the phone." An eight-minute follow-up call the next day was also unrecorded.

The two men met in Newport Beach, Calif., on July 11, 1982. Hoffman reported to his DEA agent that he "was asked by DeLorean if he had connections in the Orient for white powder and also the connections to transport and market the product in the U.S."

The DEA report concluded that DeLorean wanted "to finance the importation of white heroin into the U.S.A. by private aircraft from the Far East." But the Hoffman-DeLorean meeting was not recorded, nor were three other calls between them that same day.

The government contends that DeLorean "characterized the narcotics deal as a 'godsend' in his first recorded conversation with an undercover agent." Actually, that conversation was with a banker-undercover agent whom Hoffman had given as a financial reference — and the word "godsend" was not uttered.

The next day, however, DeLorean called Hoffman. The conversation was also recorded, and a DEA report describes it this way: "DeLorean stated that he had discussed with the banker the possibility of obtaining a loan for 'floor planning' his cars." It was this loan that DeLorean referred to as a "godsend."

In the taped conversation with Hoffman, DeLorean said he wanted to "go ahead with our proposition." The government says he meant the narcotics deal. DeLorean says he was talking about a legitimate investment package.

In fact, in a recent pretrial hearing, prosecutor Walsh was forced to concede that there was no mention of narcotics in that crucial early conversation between DeLorean and the government informant.

BLUNDER OF THE WEEK: Shortly after announcing its support for former Vice President Walter Mondale, the National Education Association mailed out several thousand embarrassing packets, containing six separate, multicolored reports on an NEA conference last February.

The colorful pamphlets were bound in a glossy folder, which was contained in a mailing envelope. Each pamphlet, folder and envelope was emblazoned with the slogan "Teaching the 'Right Stuff.'" My sources say the NEA was aghast at this unwitting plug for the new movie about Sen. John Glenn's exploits as an astronaut.

AIDES BLOCKED ON AIDS: Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., has been complaining for months that bureaucrats at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta were blocking his staff's attempts to monitor the agency's progress on research into Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS).

Finally, after a series of letters from the congressman, an aide was allowed to review records and interview key personnel in Atlanta. Weiss's staff is now preparing a report — and if it's critical, the feud may start all over again.

INSIDE REPORT:

'Negligence' studied in bombing

WASHINGTON — A top-secret Pentagon warning was flashed to Gen. P. X. Kelley, the highly-respected Marine commandant, hours after he said publicly that his personal inspection of the Marine barracks in Beirut showed "very adequate" security.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Kelley was bluntly told by the Defense Department that Congress holds a contrary view and that innumerable investigations soon will aim at proving military negligence in Beirut. Ex-Marines serving in Congress understand that the general's apparent exoneration of the Marine command was intended to rebuild morale, but believe it could severely damage him.

A footnote: Also politically nicked in the aftermath of the Marine tragedy was Secretary of State George Shultz. His congressional testimony "explaining" the Marine presence was privately denounced by many members as only contributing to the confusion.

CAP IN CONTROL

Apart from keeping the news media in the dark, the tight Pentagon security insisted on by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and personally approved by President Reagan blocked the rest of the U.S. government from learning about the unfolding drama in Grenada.

No official outside the Defense Department — including those in the State Department, the CIA and the White House's national security staff — was given information that could have been leaked to their favorite reporters. In insisting on total secrecy, Weinberger argued that premature and inaccurate reports from competing government bureaucracies might damage the invasion. Nothing since World War II has approached such information-hoarding by the military.

One important State Department official was forced to use a secure scrambler telephone to obtain rudimentary information from his Pentagon counterpart. Even White House chief of staff James Baker was kept in the dark.

DEAVER'S LOST COOL

White House aide Michael K. Deaver's sharp tongue, widely felt in Washington the past three years, was directed at Ronald Reagan himself when the president backed away from a Deaver-planned staff shakeup.

"Indecisive!" was one word unbelieving onlookers in the White House heard Deaver direct at Reagan. The president had first agreed to replace William P. Clark as national security adviser with James Baker and move up Deaver from deputy to succeed Baker. A press release announcing the changes had been prepared based on Reagan's OK, but he killed it when Clark and other officials dissented strenuously.

Deaver's close personal relationship with the president and first lady has been his trump card in internal White House wars. It remains to be seen whether his outburst will weaken those ties.

MONDALE'S APOLOGY

The public apology by front-runner Walter F. Mondale for calling closest pursuer John F. Glenn "anti-Democratic" represented the first public chink in Mondale's wondrously smooth presidential campaign structure.

The "anti-Democratic" gibe, contained in a letter over Mondale's signature but never actually read by the candidate, was approved by national campaign manager Bob Beckel. The apology was pressed by James Johnson, who holds the title of acting national chairman but is without question the campaign's top man.

Johnson, who feels that the Mondale campaign is on track for the nomination, does not want to unnecessarily rile up the former vice president's Democratic rivals. Beckel disagrees, believing it necessary to aggressively lash out at Glenn.

CHARLEY REESE

Arab society a mosaic of factions

The American foreign policy establishment is unique in its ability to avoid learning anything from experience. However, if by some miracle it were to change, Lebanon offers a wonderful explanation of the Arab world.

Charley Reese

Lebanon, you see, is not atypical — it is typical. It is an Arab country with the canvas cover pulled back, so the speak, exposing the factionalism which exists in virtually all of the Arab countries. What makes it less visible in the others are strong central governments run by one faction or a combination of factions which ruthlessly suppress the others. Since Lebanon has no strong central government, the insides of Arab society are exposed to view.

Most Americans tend to look at the world as if were created yesterday. They tend to think the world is a mirror image of our own society with the only differences being speech, dress and degree of affluence. Nothing is more wrong. The present is only the visible tip of the past and it is a very long past. American culture and values, which are a product of our own past, are neither universally existent nor even universally desired.

Arab society today is in a state of transition. The nation state, as we in the West define it, is a new concept in the Middle East, dating only to the end of World War I. Furthermore, the present national boundaries in the Middle East were drawn by British and French diplomats, intent only on marking out their respective empires, and largely ignoring both the people and the geography.

Arab is a generic word, like Indian, which describes many diverse people whose common links are geography and language. The "Arab world" became the Arab world only with the conquests of the Arab empire in the 7th Century. Though the Arab Empire fell to later conquerors, it left two important legacies — Islam and the Arabic language.

One faction in modern Arab society today consists of those who dream of re-establishing one united Arab empire. Moslem fundamentalists tend to dream of this since the original empire used Islam as an excuse, just as Spain and Portugal use Christianity as an excuse for their empires.

These people tend to clash with those Arabs who are nationalist in the Western sense — in other words, those who think of themselves as Lebanese Egyptian, Jordanian or Palestinian first and Arab second. Egypt's Anwar Sadat was a modern nationalist and he was killed by Moslem fundamentalists who believed he had betrayed the "greater Arab nation."

Under the umbrella of various empires, Arab society was organized by tribes or clans. Primary loyalty was to the head of the clan. Power was gained by a confederation of tribes or clans. To this day, King Hussein of Jordan's power rests on the loyalty of a group of Bedouin tribal chiefs to Hussein personally. The ruling family in Saudi Arabia operates on the same basis.

Even modern political movements are frequently built around a clan or prominent family. The Husseini family is prominent in the Palestinian nationalist movement. The tradition of personal loyalty to a leader is still strong in Arab society and contributes to the easy formation of factions. The 11 separate organizations which make up the PLO are partially a result of this tradition. Overlaid on those factors are religious divisions. Islam's major factions are Sunni, Shi'ite, and Druse, but some Arabs are Christian which is also divided into different sects. Overlaid on those factors are modern political differences like socialism and Marxism. In short, Arab society is a mosaic, not a solid piece of a solid color.

Today Arab society is unstable because all of these factions and ideas and dreams are competing for dominance. We in the West cannot impose stability on the Arab world. Eventually, the stability will evolve just as it has in other societies.

The worst blunder the American foreign policy establishment makes is to pretend to see stability where none exists.

Charley Reese writes for Sun Belt Syndicate.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On Oct. 31, 1968, President Lyndon Johnson ordered a halt to all U.S. bombing of North Vietnam, saying he hoped this would lead to fruitful peace negotiations.

Jesse Jackson plans to hurl 'rocks' at other contenders

By MIKE FEINSILBER

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the stump speech he's been delivering across the country, black leader Jesse Jackson has a metaphor about "rocks just laying around." Every astute politician in America is aware of these "rocks."

They are the untapped black vote.

For effect, Jackson calls the roll and compares the number of unregistered blacks with Ronald Reagan's winning margin in key states.

Alabama, carried by Reagan with 17,000 votes, has 287,000 unregistered blacks. Arkansas, Reagan's by 5,000, has 87,000. South Carolina, where Reagan won by a margin of 11,000, has 328,000 unregistered blacks. New York, carried by Reagan with 165,000 votes, has 915,000 unregistered blacks.

Jackson says these are rocks that some David can hurl against some Goliath.

Whether or not all those blacks register to vote, the numbers are registering in people's minds.

And the effects are making themselves felt even outside the political arena.

No surprise there. That's the way the system has always worked.

It may be a sign of the times that in 1983 a black man went into space, a black woman was crowned Miss America, a black leader will be memorialized with a national holiday and Jackson said Sunday he is seeking the Democratic presidential nomination.

It doesn't matter whether or not those events occurred out of the most cynical of reasons. What matters is that they are taking place.

Assume:

—That NASA selected astronaut Guion Bluford for an early trip on the shuttle because it was aware of the public relations payload such a flight would carry.

—That, in selecting Vanessa Williams of Millwood, N.Y., the Miss America judges got a message when the states sent four pretty black women to Atlantic City.

—And that politicians in Congress voted for creating a legal holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr. out of a respect for, or fear of, the power of the black vote and not because they thought so highly of King's earthly achievements.

Even if all that were true in this most hard-bitten world, it still would be evidence that at last black people have begun to emerge from the shadows of American life.

In that case, they're doing what other big ethnic groups have done throughout American history to achieve social status and political success.

It could be called muscle politics. It is as American as grits, greens and apple pie.

It is what causes politicians to eat kielbasa, don yarmulkes, milk cows, dance the schottische, have a beer with the boys in a working class tavern, pose for pictures in 10-gallon hats, visit nursing homes and kiss babies regardless of race, creed, color or state of dampness.

It is the phenomena that motivated Harry Truman to recognize Israel in 1948, a presidential election year, a mere 11 minutes after the new state came into existence.

It is what drives politicians of every persuasion to march down the green stripe that's painted on New York's Fifth Avenue every March.

Jackson isn't content to be second best

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who hopes to become the nation's first black president, is a man driven to succeed — and show others they can, too.

"If you do less than your best, it is a sin," Jackson, a Baptist minister, lectures his audiences.

From the pulpit to the political trail, the 42-year-old black leader practices what he preaches.

On Sunday, after months of speculation, he announced his quest for the nation's highest office, saying in Atlanta that he will formally declare his candidacy for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination on Thursday in Washington.

"Jesse's always had a great need to excel, to be the best," says half-brother Noah Robinson. "I don't think he'd be content to be second-best."

Some see that as a gift of the spirit. Others see it as an obsession with ego.

But Jackson, one of America's best-known and most controversial civil rights activists, says his personal motivation and the message of hope he delivers to others are keys to his popularity.

"With longevity, competence and success, you build up a reputation," Jackson says. "Most of my peers have passed from the scene...I think my appeal to people has been sustained by my ability to interpret to people, to show them ways out."

Jackson, a son of the South, says he has been doing just that since the 1960s, when he first emerged on the national scene as a brash disciple of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Jackson, who donned bold dashikis and brandished the clenched-fisted black power salute in those days, joined King's call for sit-ins and protest marches against discriminatory laws.

In 1971, three years after King's assassination, he founded Chicago-based Operation PUSH — People United to Save Humanity, later changed to the more humble People United to Serve Humanity.

In recent years, he has spearheaded demands for economic justice for blacks, leading boycotts and signing agreements with national corporations to guarantee blacks their fair share of business. Those agreements have come under heavy criticism by some blacks who feel Jackson sometimes targets the wrong companies.

Still, Jackson claims the covenants have channeled $1.5 billion to black businesses.

Now, Jackson, who wears conservative, three-piece suits these days, has a new rallying cry: "We no longer have to fight for racial equality. We have to fight for leadership."

Jackson's bid to fill that void in leadership is his first bid for public office, but his face and name have been in the public eye for two decades more than most politicians.

His self-appointed mission has prompted him to speak out on causes ranging from apartheid in South Africa to dirty lyrics in disco music.

"I'm in the prophetic ministry," he explains. "It's the kind of ministry ancient prophets engaged in when they challenged the conduct of kings and queens."

That style has prompted kudos and criticism. Supporters say he's a motivator, a mesmerizing speaker who can focus attention on an issue like no other leader. Critics say he's an egomaniac who has a knack for starting programs, grabbing the publicity and then dropping out once the hard work begins.

Despite the criticism, Jackson ranked among the 10 men most admired by Americans in one 1983 Gallup Poll and ranks third in some presidential preference polls.

Jackson was born Oct. 8, 1941, in Greenville, S.C., in what he recalls as a "dual society." The adopted son of a postal worker, Jackson attended public schools, played football in high school and college and considered a career as an athlete.

Congress focuses on foreign affairs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, confronted by dramatic military events half a world apart, focused its attention today on two questions: How long should U.S. troops remain in Grenada and how safe are the Marines in Lebanon?

In the House, the agenda was headed by a scheduled vote on invoking the War Powers Act of 1973, which could require President Reagan to bring home the Grenada invasion force within 60 days.

On the Senate side, where the War Powers Act was invoked in a vote last week, the Armed Services Committee was hearing from Gen. Paul X. Kelley, the Marine commandant whose troops have been in Beirut for 13 months as part of an international peacekeeping force.

Today's scheduled House debate on Grenada centered on a resolution that would hold Reagan to the letter of the War Powers Act. The act says he cannot keep troops in hostilities, or facing the threat of hostilities, for more than 60 days unless Congress approves. It allows him an extra 30 days if he certifies the time is needed to get the troops out safely.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee approved the resolution 34-2 last Thursday as all of the panel's Republicans joined most of its Democrats. Sources said the Democrat-dominated House was likely to endorse the action.

The Republican-controlled Senate approved an identical measure Friday by a 64-20 vote.

Much of today's Senate questioning of Kelley was expected to focus on how a suicide attacker could penetrate the Marine compound at the Beirut airport with an explosives-laden truck and devastate a headquarters and barracks building filled with sleeping servicemen.

More than 225 men died in the Oct. 23 blast. Two days later, U.S. Marines and soldiers invaded Marxist-run Grenada in a 6,000-man operation in which more than a dozen Americans were killed.

Kelley is just back from an inspection trip to Beirut, where he said he thought adequate provisions had been taken for the Marines' security.

Many in Congress disagree. In a resolution passed last week, Senate Democrats declared that "Marines occupying sentry positions reportedly were not allowed to carry loaded weapons; and the security for the Marines was obviously inadequate."

"When a sentry is not allowed to put the bullets in his gun, that does not, in my view, constitute adequate protection," Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia told the Senate.

Rep. William Richardson, D-N.M., returning Sunday from a trip to Beirut, said the Marines should be moved to new defensive positions because their current ones don't provide enough protection.

Spectators didn't see gunman

ATLANTA (AP) — None of the spectators at a crowded gymnasium where a 33-year-old woman was shot to death during a basketball game has reported seeing anyone with a gun, police say.

"We have a whole gym full of witnesses, but the information is so sparse," homicide Sgt. D.C. Gundlach said of the shooting Saturday that killed Sharon Davis of College Park.

Although police are treating the death as a homicide, Detective G.C. Lovett said it is possible the shooting was an accident and the person responsible was too frightened to talk to police.

Man repeats feat in St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The man who scaled a 35-story building near Busch Stadium, unfurled an American flag and then rappelled to the ground also climbed a 71-story building in Houston last May, police say.

Authorities identified the climber as 21-year-old David Adcock of Houston, although he also gave his name as Skip Stanley. He had said he would parachute off the Equitable building Sunday, but instead lowered himself to the ground, where he was arrested.

On May 16, Adcock inserted a springboard at the 68th floor of the Allied Bank Tower in Houston, unfurled the Texas and American flags, then parachuted to the ground, authorities said.

Two men buried by potatoes

WIGGINS, Colo. (AP) — Two men were working to shore up the support beams of a farm warehouse when the supports gave way and buried them in tons of potatoes, killing one man and seriously injuring the other, authorities said.

Scott Tidemann, 32, of Wiggins, the owner of the warehouse, was rescued within minutes Saturday. But it took firefighters 40 minutes to dig out Henry Ruppel Jr., 39, of Fort Morgan, officials said.

Ruppel, who was buried under 5 feet of potatoes, died of suffocation, Morgan County Coroner F.D. Jolliffe said. Tidemann, who suffered broken bones, was in stable condition Sunday at Northern Colorado Medical Center in Greeley.

Thousands of quake's survivors in Turkey could freeze to death

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The death toll from a violent earthquake in eastern Turkey reached 813 today, and Red Cross officials said many of the thousands of homeless survivors could freeze to death unless emergency shelter was provided.

Turkish authorities said the toll was expected to mount today as rescue teams reached remote areas.

Both the International Red Cross and its Turkish equivalent — the Red Crescent Society — issued urgent appeals for money to buy tents and blankets.

The Red Cross said the quake Sunday morning left at least 23,000 homeless or injured and devastated at least 32 villages.

"The need for immediate shelter is a life-or-death matter," a Red Cross statement said. "The affected area is on a high plateau and at this time of year someone who cannot find shelter after nightfall may freeze to death before morning."

The Turkish Red Crescent Society estimated it needs 5,000 tents, 30,000 heavy blankets and 5,000 heavy sleeping bags.

Rescue efforts, carried out mostly by soldiers, were hampered by darkness late Sunday and officials said they believed there were scores of others victims still buried under debris in hard-to-reach communities.

A rescue coordinator in Erzurum said thousands of survivors were exposed to cold, rainy weather after the quake.

"By the time enough supplies reach us they (survivors) will have to endure more natural disasters," he said, declining to be identified.

Rain and near-freezing temperatures were reported in the mountainous areas hit by the quake near the borders with Iran, Iraq and Syria.

Authorities said the quake was believed to be centered in Erzurum and Kars provinces, where most of the damage occurred. But it also jolted the provinces of Bitlis, Mus, Dyarbakir, Bingol, Van and Malatya, according to martial law authorities.

Journalists in Erzurum, a farming center, in telephone conversations described "widespread destruction" in the districts of Pasinler, 25 miles northeast of Erzurum, and in Sarikamis, 45 miles from the Soviet border.

The Tercuman newspaper said at least 50 villages were ruined in an arc including Pasinler, Horagan and Narman.

Authorities said at least 361 of the dead were found in Pasinler villages, including 125 in Koyunoren village, and nearly 100 were found under collapsed houses in Sarikamis.

"In view of the remoteness of hundreds of other villages, the total casualty figure could be very high," said a spokesman for the governor's office in Erzurum.

The U.S. Geological Survey, which monitors tremors around the world, said the quake measured 7.1 on the Richter scale of earth movement — capable of widespread damage.

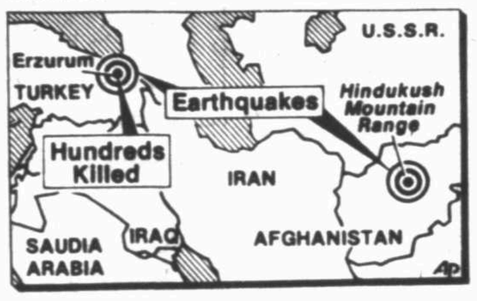
A Turkish nurse carries a village girl to a hospital in Pasinler, Turkey, Sunday, after a powerful earthquake jolted the area, killing at least 487 people in the province of Erzurum.



The Richter scale is a gauge of energy released by an earthquake as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph. A quake of magnitude 7 is a major earthquake capable of widespread, serious damage.

"I was about to take my regular morning tea...when I felt an intense rumbling under my feet and the entire roof collapsed on my head," said an unidentified farmer in an interview with a Turkish television crew.

"Then I opened my eyes in the hospital...I have really no idea what happened to my wife, my kids."

Radical wins Argentinian race

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Raul Alfonsin of the centrist Radical Civic Union won the presidential race in elections to replace Argentina's 7-year-old military regime, returns today showed. The victory ended the Peronist Party's four-decade domination of national politics.

With more than 80 percent of ballots counted, Alfonsin, a 56-year-old lawyer and former congressman, had 52.6 percent of the popular vote compared to Peronist candidate Italo Luder's 39 percent.

Alfonsin captured 6,155,234 votes of a total of 11,701,347 in returns from 52,184 of the 67,561 polling stations. Luder, a former senator, received 4,565,991 on behalf of the labor-based Peronists.

Candidates of 10 other parties trailed far behind. Oscar Alende was third in the balloting with just 278,042 votes, or 2.4 percent.

The final count, with more than 14 million ballots cast, was not expected until later today.

A jubilant, banner-waving crowd of thousands of supporters cheered Alfonsin as he arrived early today at the Radical party headquarters. Alfonsin leads a left-of-center faction in the Radicals, a middle-class, fundamentally social democratic party.

In a speech from the party headquarters' balcony, he called on Argentines "to raise the flag of national unity, the flag of democratic coexistence and the flag of social justice."

"We're setting out for a new Argentina that is going to struggle for human dignity," he also told supporters.

The six-year presidential term is scheduled to begin Jan. 30. But military president Gen. Reynaldo Bignone has acknowledged the date may be moved up.

Luder conceded a "a winning tendency of the Radicals," but said he would not definitively concede defeat until all the returns were in. He said he had no immediate plans to meet with Alfonsin, but pledged that Peronists "will support democracy, whatever party wins."

Projections gave control of the 254-seat Chamber of Deputies to the Radicals. The 46 senators comprising the National Congress' other house are to be elected by provincial legislatures on Nov. 25.

Earlier, a bitter Peronist Party vice president Lorenzo Miguel had accused election officials of manipulating the disclosure of returns to hide a Peronist lead.

"A gigantic informational fraud is under way, with official information projecting a Peronist victory being deliberately withheld with the intention of bringing about civil confrontation and altering the transition to democracy," he told journalists at a downtown theater serving as an party computation center.

However, Interior Minister Gen. Llamil Reston told the news agency Noticias Argentinas, "Anyone who thinks there is anything malicious in the objective way the results are being reported is mistaken and is making an unjust criticism."

Miguel effectively heads the Peronist Party. Titular head Isabel Peron, third wife of party founder and three-time President Juan Domingo Peron, lives in self-exile in Spain.

Partial returns in provincial balloting indicated the Peronists and the Radicals would roughly split the 22 governorships up for election. Voters also choose among candidates for more than 12,000 municipal posts.

Pro-Sandinista group beats up Catholic priest

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Members of a pro-government group beat up Managua's auxiliary bishop and forced several Roman Catholic churches to cancel Mass for opposing the leftist-led country's conscription policy, church officials said.

The auxiliary bishop, Monsignor Bosco Vivas, suffered a head cut Sunday when he was attacked outside San Judas church in southeastern Managua, said a lay worker in the Managua archbishop's office.

Elsewhere in Central America, at least six Salvadoran soldiers and four leftist rebels were killed in heavy fighting as rebels took over the small town of Tejutepeque, 33 miles northeast of San Salvador, military officials said.

The Nicaraguan church worker, who requested anonymity, said Vivis was told that if he entered the church, where he had been planning to attend a special mass, "he could be considered a dead man."

The worker said members of the group, called The Crowds, blocked entrances to several churches and beat up priests and parishioners. He said there were also reports of vandalism.

At least eight churches had to cancel Masses, and Catholic officials said they believed other churches in provinces to the south of Managua had to suspend services also.

Las Turbas is part of the leftist Sandinista Front, the political party of the ruling junta.

The official Voice of Nicaragua radio, in a transmission made from San Judas church, said demonstrations at that church were directed at a priest there, the Rev. Silvio Fonseca, "because he was devoting himself to a boycott of the military conscription of Nicaraguan youth."

The Episcopal Conference of Nicaragua, a group of Catholic bishops, strongly criticized a new draft law passed by the Sandinista government last week, calling it a characteristic of "totalitarian regimes."

Sunday marked the last day of the law's first phase, which required all men between the ages of 17 and 22 to register for military service. Starting next January, in the second phase, all Nicaraguan men between 17 and 40 must register.

In El Salvador, civilian and military sources said the number of soldiers killed Sunday in the fighting at Tejutepeque was probably much higher than the official count of six soldiers and four leftist rebels. Heavy fighting persisted in and around the town, preventing a more accurate count.

Egyptian prosecutor claims 16 trying to overthrow government

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The state prosecutor has charged 16 people with trying to overthrow the government through armed revolt in order to establish a communist system.

State Prosecutor Ragaa el-Araby said the 16 had planned terrorist activities and assassinations of public figures in Egypt. Thirteen of those charged have been arrested and three are at large.

El-Araby alleged in the indictment Sunday that the group is linked with Palestinian and Iranian organizations and that some of its members have received military training by Palestinians in Lebanon and Syria.

The defendants, two of whom are Palestinians, face a maximum sentence of life imprisonment and hard labor.

Village ends war with France

ALMERIA, Spain (AP) — The mayor of a tiny village in southern Spain has signed a peace treaty ending the town's 100-year-old "war" with France.

The Municipal Council of the village of Lijar declared war on France Oct. 14, 1883, to defend the honor of Spanish King Alfonso XII. Alfonso was insulted and stoned when he passed through Paris Sept. 29, 1883, after a trip to Prussia.

On Sunday, Lijar Mayor Diego Sanchez Cortes and Rene Bicer, French consul general in Almeria, signed a peace act in Lijar's main plaza. The ceremony was the highlight of a series of celebrations by the 600 villagers.

Turkey closes two newspapers

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Martial law authorities have closed two daily newspapers without giving reasons for the shutdowns, newspaper spokesmen said.

They said police delivered messages to the editorial offices of the dailies Gunaydin and Tan ordering them to cease publishing Sunday.

The orders referred to clauses in the emergency law that give military commanders broad powers to intervene in the press, the spokemen said.

Shiite Moslem says U.S. warned of possible attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Shiite Moslem leader today claimed the U.S. Marine command in Beirut was forewarned of possible attacks against the American peacekeepers but failed to take adequate precautions prior to the Oct. 23 truck bombing.

Ghassan Siblini, a high-ranking leader of the Amal militia, also joined other Shiite leaders in warning the United States and France not to stage reprisals against his community for the twin bombings that killed at least 287 U.S. and French peacekeeping troops. Siblini and Akef Haidar, head of Amal's political bureau, said U.S. troops would meet stiff resistance if they attacked the Shiite-dominated suburbs of south Beirut.

In Geneva, Switzerland, meanwhile, leaders of Lebanon's feuding factions gathered today for the start of a national reconciliation conference aimed at ending eight years of turmoil and civil warfare. Some politicians in Beirut described the conference as the last chance for Lebanon to survive as a unified nation.

Siblini, in a statement published by the independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar, said the Marine command "was given warnings from two security quarters in Lebanon a few days before the attack that a big operation might be staged against them."

But Siblini, a political bureau member of the Shiite sect's dominant militia, did not say who had warned the Marines of a possible terrorist assault on their base at Beirut's international airport.

Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan has acknowledged that the American contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force received periodic warnings of attacks and took whatever security precautions were deemed appropriate.

Despite bad day, White hits 5 TD passes

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Danny White said he made "a few bad decisions" even though he had a career-high five touchdown passes as the Dallas Cowboys improved upon the National Football League's best record with a 38-20 victory Sunday over the New York Giants.

"I felt I played a good game. But it wasn't indicative of a record performance," said White, who hit 15 of 33 passes for 304 yards with two interceptions.

And Drew Pearson, who caught one of those scoring strikes, said he felt his quarterback had a "so-so day, for Danny White."

"Danny hit the plays he had to hit, but overall I think he'd tell you he didn't have one of his best days," said Pearson.

THE COWBOYS' defense, meanwhile, was having some kind of day as it forced New York quarterback Jeff Rutledge into six turnovers — three interceptions and three fumbles.

White also tied a team record with his five touchdown passes, including two to wide receiver Tony Hill.

White also threw scoring strikes to Tony Dorsett and Doug Cosbie as the Cowboys bounced back from their only loss of the season last week, 40-38 to the Los Angeles Raiders.

The Cowboys, 8-1, put Sunday's game away after White's 7-yard touchdown pass to Pearson on the first play of the fourth quarter capped a 10-play, 76-yard drive and gave the Cowboys a 31-20 lead.

"Danny had a good day," said Tom Landry, coach of the Cowboys. "He was a little up and down. But he made the big plays in the second half. Danny is a very capable person to take advantage of defenses. That's where he excells."

WHITE, WHOSE second-half touchdown passes went to Cosbie, Pearson and Hill, said: "I really think the second half was just a matter of us making adjustments to offset what they were doing defensively. We ran some different plays and made some adjustments on our passing game."

Dextor Clinkscale, Dennis Thurman and Bob Breunig intercepted fourth-quarter passes from Rutledge to thwart drives by the Giants, who fell to 2-6-1.

In the first half, Rutledge was sacked four times and lost the ball three of those times on fumbles. The Cowboys sacked Rutledge six times in the game. Rutledge, who was starting his second game for New York, left in the fourth quarter with a dislocated knee cap and torn tissue and his status for the remainder of the season was unclear.

White hooked up with Hill on the Cowboys' first and final touchdowns and each of his five scoring strikes put the finishing touch on long drives.

White's 21-yard touchdown pass to Hill tied the score 7-7 in the first quarter to cap a 10-play, 80-yard drive, which was aided by a 31-yard pass interference call against New York strong safety Bill Currier.

WHITE THEN hooked up with Hill on a 58-yard scoring pass in the fourth quarter to tie Eddie LeBaron, Don Meredith and Craig Morton in the Cowboys record book with five touchdown passes.

In the third quarter, White found Cosbie alone at the Giants' 37-yard line and the 6-foot-6 tight end rambled the rest of the way to complete a 61-yard touchdown pass play and give the Cowboys a 24-17 lead.

Houston Oilers keep record intact

By Associated Press

The San Francisco 49ers, Los Angeles Raiders and Minnesota Vikings, all division leaders, were the prime victims in a Sunday National Football League upsets.

Richard Todd threw for 201 yards as he led a balanced, virtually error-free Jets' offense and the New York defense contained San Francisco's runners in a 27-13 victory over the National Conference West Division leaders.

Cornerback Jerry Holmes ran back an interception 43 yards for a touchdown in the final minute to seal the victory for the Jets, now 4-5 after snapping a three-game losing streak.

Linebacker Shelton Robinson ignited slow-starting Seattle with a 12-yard fumble return for a touchdown and the underdog Seahawks went on to whip the Raiders 34-21 for their second victory over the American Conference West leaders in three weeks.

Robinson, who returned a fumble for a touchdown in a 38-36 Seattle victory over the Raiders on Oct. 16, made his big play with 9:18 remaining in the second quarter and the Seahawks trailing 7-0. Linebacker Keith Butler shook the ball loose from running back Marcus Allen of the Raiders, Robinson scooped it up and lumbered into the Los Angeles end zone.

THE LOWLY Cardinals, meanwhile, knocked off the NFC's Central-leading Minnesota Vikings 41-31.

Neil Lomax fired two touchdown passes to Roy Green and one to Pat Tilley, and Ottis Anderson ran for 136 yards and a touchdown in St. Louis, leading the Cardinals to their 41-31 upset over Minnesota.

The victory was only the Cardinals third this season, and Minnesota dropped to 6-3.

The usually error-plagued Cardinals stayed away from fumbles and interceptions until the final period. The Cards' Neil O'Donoghue, who missed three field-goal tries in a a 20-20 tie with the New York Giants last Monday night, made good on attempts of 52 and 47 yards.

Come-from-behind efforts by the Pittsburgh Steelers and Cleveland Browns continued the frustrations of the league's two winless teams.

Frank Pollard ran 2 yards for a touchdown with 31 seconds left as the Steelers overcame seven turnovers and an NFL record 42 carries by Tampa Bay's James Wilder for a 17-12 victory over the 0-9 Buccaneers.

Boyce Green sprinted 20 yards up the middle for a touchdown on the first play following an interception in overtime as the Browns sent the Oilers to their 16th straight defeat, 25-19. The loss was the second straight in overtime for Houston, 0-9 this season.

In other NFL action, Dallas hammered the New York Giants 38-20; Atlanta tripped New England 24-13; Baltimore edged Philadelphia 22-21; Detroit walloped Chicago 38-17 and Buffalo outlasted New Orleans 27-21.

In Pittsburgh, Pollard's 13-yard run and a 21-yard pass from Cliff Stoudt to rookie Paul Skansi set up the winning score as the Steelers scored all their points in the fourth quarter to win their fifth game in a row. Pittsburgh, 7-2, rallied from a 12-0 deficit.

IN CLEVELAND, the Browns had tied the game at 10-10 on a fake field goal late in the first half and sent it into overtime at 19-19 on Matt Bahr's fourth field goal, a 30-yarder with 49 seconds left in the fourth quarter.

"Boyce Green is something special," said Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano. "He really is going to be a special player in this league."

Green, an 11th-round draft choice from Tennessee's Carson Newman, collected all his yardage Sunday in the second half.

"I'm just happy to play and contribute, because anytime you can do that as a rookie, it's a good thing," he said.

On his game-winning run up the middle, he eluded several Houston tacklers and kicked his way into the end zone.

"I just ran into the hole and was kind of stalemated," Green said. "I just hit it inside and when I saw the goal line, I just kept going."

"Each loss become more difficult, more oppressing," said Chuck Studley, who replaced Ed Biles as Houston's head coach three games ago.

Rookie linebacker John Rade returned a fumble 16 yards for a touchdown as Atlanta's defense forced four critical fumbles in the Falcons' 24-13 victory over New England.

Rade called it "my ultimate, my best moment ever," after scoring the first touchdown of his pro career.

Life used to be so uncomplicated in 4-5A

Once upon a time, life in District 4-5A was so simple and uncomplicated.

The formula was for Odessa Permian to win the title while everybody else sat home and watched, convinced that this was the way life was supposed to be.

The second place team might be a little bitter that fortune had cast it in this district when it probably could have finished first in most of the other districts in the state.

Now that they've invited the second place teams into the state playoffs, they've thrown open Pandora's Box and all the witches and gobblins are out running around loose. Everybody is trickin' and there are very few treats.

AFTER ALL, just look what happened last Friday. Midland Lee went to Abilene looking for a treat and Cooper tricked 'em right out of a no-questions-asked bid to the playoffs.

The win also put Odessa Permian right back in sole possession of first place in the district, something Lee thought it had taken care of with a 20-7 victory over the Panthers a few weeks back.

So now, everything again is up for grabs. Some say even Odessa High, if it can forget past tradition which decrees the Bronchos succumb to Mojo magic, is physically capable of defeating the Panthers. That would toss the race into the laps of the coin-tossers, especially if Midland should upset Midland Lee, as it did last year.

THE SITUATION is a little different this year. Midland can't tie for second, but it can make life uncomfortable for its crosstown rivals.

Memorial Stadium can look for another big crowd for Friday night to see if the Rebels can earn a playoff spot a win over Midland.

It really should be no problem. After all, Lee beat Abilene, 35-0, and Abilene walloped Midland, 27-3.

But on second thought, Abilene Cooper beat Midland Lee, 23-21, and Midland beat Abilene Cooper, 39-21. But that's just the way 4-5A is these days.

A READER, presumably young, called in to ask, "Who is Thurman Tucker?" I suspect Bill Rigney, Jr., put the caller up to it. Tucker was mentioned in a column last week, along with the disbelief that any baseball fan could not know who Thurman Tucker was, especially one with the baseball heritage of Rigney.

Tucker was a fleet-footed outfielder with the old Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians. He was the spittin' image of Joe E. Brown. He also managed a Sophomore League team in Hobbs back in the 1950s.

Perhaps the best part of the Thurman Tucker tale came when Bob Kennedy, then General Manager of the Chicago Cubs, visited Midland and Rigney said to me in front of Bob, "Go ahead, pull your Thurman Tucker deal on Bob. See if he knows who Thurman Tucker is?"

Kennedy couldn't have made a better response if I had programmed it. "Thurman Tucker! We hugged each other in the outfield the day when we clinched the 1948 pennant for Cleveland."

Hawaii edges UTEP, 25-24

In Honolulu, victory was secured with 1:29 remaining. At Provo, the winning touchdown came with 11 seconds left. And at Fort Collins, a clinching touchdown and two-point conversion were scored with no time left on the clock.

It was nail-biting time in the Western Athletic Conference on Saturday. Hawaii edged Texas-El Paso 25-24 as Dino Babers ran 1 yard for a TD and Raphel Cherry passed to Shephard Killen for the two-point conversion at the 1:29 mark. Brigham Young, the nation's 15th-ranked team, got a 1-yard touchdown run from quarterback Steve Young in the closing seconds to beat Utah State 38-34.

Even more dramatic was Colorado State's 25-24 decision over New Mexico.

The Rams, trailing 24-17 and having no time outs left, had the ball at their own 20-yard line with 40 seconds on the clock. Terry Nugent completed four straight passes on out-of-bounds patterns, three to split end Jeff Champine.

CSU's comeback hopes appeared to have died when Nugent was whistled for intentional grounding on the next play, pushing the Rams back to the UNM 37. But, with nine seconds left, Nugent lofted a "Hail Mary" pass toward the end zone.

Marino dazzles Rams with deadly passes

"I never even had an interception," Rade said of the score that came after rookie Mike Pitts stripped the ball away from New England quarterback Steve Grogan during a nine-yard sack."I was fired up, and I was lucky. "I just happened to be there when the ball was ripped out."

RAUL ALLEGRE'S fifth field goal of the game, a 30-yarder with 2:07 left, carried Baltimore over Philadelphia.The Eagles had taken a 21-19 lead on an eight-play, 44-yard drive capped by quarterback Ron Jaworski's 6-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Harold Carmichael.

Eric Hipple passed for 216 yards and one touchdown and Leonard Thompson scored on a 40-yard reverse to lead Detroit over Chicago. Hipple hit Jeff Chadwick with a 21-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter and completed at least one long pass in each of Detroit's first four touchdown drives.

Joe Ferguson threw four touchdown passes, including two to Mike Mosley, and the Buffalo Bills survived a late New Orleans rally to beat the Saints. Ferguson ended the game with 13 completions in 25 attempts for 173 yards, while Saints starting quarterback Ken Stabler left the game at the end of the first quarter after taking a shot in the ribs.

Rookie quarterback Dan Marino ran for one touchdown and passed for two and Tony Nathan burst 18 yards for a key third-quarter score as the Miami Dolphins beat the Los Angeles Rams 30-14.

ERIC DICKERSON, the Rams' sensational rookie, rushed for 101 yards to boost his yardage for the season to 1,096, the first player in the NFL to pass that plateau this year and the 17th rookie to do so in NFL history.

Fullback Pete Johnson rushed for 112 yards and two touchdowns in his first start of the season, and quarterback Turk Schonert threw two touchdown passes and ran for another score as the Cincinnati Bengals crushed the Green Bay Packers 34-14.

Steve DeBerg shredded the NFL's No. 1 pass defense for 350 yards and a touchdown, and fullback Nathan Poole added two short-yardage scores to lead the Denver Broncos over the Kansas City Chiefs 27-24.

In the Monday night game, Washington visited San Diego.

Hardison top player

DENVER (AP) — New Mexico Highlands lineback Kenny Hardison has been named Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference defensive player of the week after helping the Cowboys break a 12-game losing streak Saturday in a 23-21 win over Panhandle State of Oklahoma.

Hardison had three assists — six for losses of 38 yards and two for sacks totaling 22 yards — and 11 solo tackles in the game.

The 5-foot-11, 185-pound freshman from Midland, Texas, also recovered two fumbles and forced another.

Offensive player of the week in the RMAC is Southern Colorado's Herman Heard, a 6-foot, 184-pound junior who was a big reason the Indians stopped Colorado Mines, 14-9.

Warning for Huskers

By Associated Press

There may be a Hurricane warning in Nebraska's quest for college football's national championship.

The No. 1-ranked Cornhuskers haven't had to weather many storms en route to their 9-0 record and the long-range forecast is for clear sailing past Iowa State and Kansas.

That would bring them to the regular-season finale against No. 14 Oklahoma on Nov. 26, with the Big Eight championship on the line, as usual. And if they get past the Sooners, they may have to face hometown heroes in the Orange Bowl.

The Miami Hurricanes are high on the list to be the visiting team on their own field and provide the opposition for the Big Eight champion on Jan. 2. The seventh-ranked Hurricanes knocked No. 12 West Virginia out of the major bowl picture Saturday with a 20-3 triumph, their eighth in a row.

"This team is on the threshold of greatness," Coach Howard Schnellenberger said after Miami held West Virginia to only two yards in 29 rushing attempts. "The next two weeks (East Carolina and Florida State) will be the real tests, but we are delighted to be in the position that we are."

The Orange Bowl's policy is to invite the highest available team in the AP poll. Miami figures to jump past third-ranked North Carolina and No. 5 Florida, both losers over the weekend. Runnerup Texas seems headed for the Cotton Bowl, while fourth-ranked Auburn and No. 6 Georgia meet on Nov. 12. Barring a misstep, the Hurricanes should move past the loser of that game, with the winner likely Sugar Bowl-bound.

"We know we've won eight straight," said Miami linebacker Jay Brophy. "We can win two more straight. We know what we can do when we put our mind to it."

While Miami's defense was throttling the Mountaineers, freshman Bernie Kosar threw touchdown passes of 19 yards to Glenn Dennison and 5 to Keith Griffin and Jeff Davis kicked two 36-yard field goals.

"Boy, Miami is good," raved West Virginia Coach Don Nehlen. "Their defense ate us alive. You can't win if you can't run. We knew Miami had a good defense, but they didn't allow us anything."

Provided Nebraska doesn't stumble, the visiting berth in the Orange Bowl had figured to be contested among North Carolina, Miami and West Virginia. But Carolina's 28-26 loss to No. 13 Maryland may have cost the Tar Heels their chance.

North Carolina fell behind 10-0, led 17-10 at halftime, then surrendered two touchdowns — on Boomer Esiason passes of 14 yards to Rich Badanjek and 24 to Sean Sullivan — and a field goal in the third period and trailed 28-17.

The final quarter produced a Carolina field goal and a 1-yard touchdown run by Tyrone Anthony with 22 seconds left. But the Tar Heels had to try a two-point conversion and Maryland linebacker J.D. Gross pressured Scott Stankavage into a hurried pass.

Hobbs AD dies at 58

HOBBS (AP) — Hobbs High School Athletic Director Gene Wells, who built one of the top track programs in the Southwest and a reputation as one of the state's top athletic administrators, is dead at the age of 58.

Funeral services were pending today.

Wells died Sunday of an apparent heart attack. A family member said Wells became ill and was being taken to Lea Regional Hospital in Hobbs. He was pronounced dead at the hospital at about 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

Wells began his career at Hobbs High School in the early 1950s, serving as head track coach and assistant football coach. He went on to establish one of the top track programs in the Southwest that included state championships in 1966 and 1973. He left the track coaching duties in 1975.

Wells was named athletic director in 1960. He also represented District 4AAAA on the Athletic Committee of the New Mexico Activities Association and was a past president of the New Mexico High School Coaches Association.

Survivors include Wells' wife Mary Nell; a daughter, Cynthia, of Houston and three sons, Craig of Roswell and Scott and Kevin, both of Hobbs

Hobbs Assistant Athletic Director James Richards said Sunday Wells had a history of heart trouble. Richards said Wells has suffered a heart attack in 1974 and another in 1981.

But Wells remained an active administrator and had attended the Hobbs-Alamogordo football game Friday night in Alamogordo.

The Texas Longhorns finally have scaled the summit expected of them — first place in the Southwest Conference football chase.

Texas Coach Fred Akers said it has been a pinnacle achieved the old-fashioned way, through hard work on the road and against opponents playing over their head.

"We had three rugged road games and just didn't have the intensity against Texas Tech we should have," said Akers after the No. 2-ranked 'Horns finally subdued the scrappy Red Raiders 20-3 Saturday. "It's been a gut-wringer for us this last month."

In other games Saturday, both SMU and Arkansas stayed alive in the SWC race.

SMU fashioned a brilliant goalline stand to beat back the vastly improved Texas Aggies 10-7 while Arkansas blasted Rice 35-0.

SMU, Arkansas and Texas Tech only have one loss in league play and still have a chance at the Cotton Bowl although unbeaten Texas has beaten all three.

In other games Saturday, Houston broke a four-game losing streak by outlasting Texas Christian 28-21 and Baylor did the SWC proud by defeating Tulane 24-18.

The SWC finished its season against outside competition two games over .500.

'HORNS HEAD FOR THE DOME

AUSTIN — Besides the come-from-behind victory over Texas Tech, Texas Coach Fred Akers got some more good news Saturday: Injured fullback Terry Orr and tailback Edwin Simmons could possibly be ready to play the Houston Cougars on Saturday.

BEARS DO SWC PROUD

WACO — Baylor's disputed 24-18 victory over Tulane was the Bears' first sweep of non-conference foes since 1976.

It didn't make Tulane Coach Wally English very happy.

Tulane threw a touchdown pass that wasn't late in the game. Officials ruled the Green Wave was in motion, calling it back.

Protests from the Tulane bench resulted in back-to-back unsportsmanlike conduct flags.

Tulane eventually faced a fourth and 42 and punted.

English said the officials' calls were "bull. I couldn't believe he called it."

HOGS SMOTHER RICE

LITTLE ROCK — Arkansas finally got even with Rice.

The Rice Owls had led their all-time SWC series with the Razorbacks until Saturday night 28-27-1 but Brad Taylor took care of it.

Heady and Talented

Sampson in impressive debut

HOUSTON (AP) — Ralph Sampson in his professional basketball debut showed himself to be smart as well as talented.

As a result, the much-anticipated confrontation between the Houston Rockets' 7-foot-4 rookie against cement-tough veteran Artis Gilmore of the San Antonio Spurs wasn't a confrontation at all when Sampson's team had the ball.

Instead, Sampson conceded Gilmore his strength and 30-pound weight advantage and retreated outside. While the 7-2, 260-pound Gilmore stayed anchored near the basket, Sampson had a grand time flipping jumpers with the grace of a guard and swooping downcourt on fastbreaks, now and then topping one off with a crashing dunk.

Sampson's statistics in Houston's 106-100 victory over the Spurs Saturday weren't awe-inspiring — 18 points, 12 rebounds, four blocked shots and 9-of-21 shooting — but the grace and skill with which he moved his very tall body around the court certainly were.

While Gilmore is among the top four most effective centers in the league, away from the basket he is out of his element. Sampson seemingly could be comfortable playing point guard.

The unquestioned hero was Golden State Warriors castoff Lewis Lloyd, who excelled with 28 points, 11 rebounds and 10 assists, but the contest will forever be remembered as Sampson's Debut.

Sampson served warning to other National Basketball Association centers that he has the skills to do anything necessary to counteract their strengths.

Rockets Coach Bill Fitch compared him to a street fighter who will adjust his style to frustrate an opponent.

"You don't always fight the same way," said Fitch, who made his debut as Houston coach after four years in Boston. "I want him going inside, but I'm sure some teams won't like seeing Ralph taking those little shots out there."

"That was the way the game flowed," Sampson said, explaining why only six of his points came on close-in shots. "Gilmore's so strong that it's tough to go inside with him. I'll take the ball inside when the opportunity comes."

The lesson came quickly that some centers like Gilmore, Moses Malone and Bob Lanier may be too strong for Sampson to handle.

In an exhibition game just nine days before Saturday's regular-season opener, Gilmore scored 12 points in a mere 10 minutes, skillfully pump-faking his young opponent off his feet and then dumping the ball through the net.

On defense, of course, Sampson had to stay with Gilmore, who hit 62 percent of his field goal attempts last season to lead the NBA. But the veteran was just 6-of-14 and scored 16 points on Saturday.

"I knew Gilmore would go down low," Sampson said. "I just tried to keep my feet and use my height. He's got a great pump fake."

"All the things Artis was able to do to Ralph in the exhibition game, he couldn't do today," Spurs Coach Mo McHone said. "He learned quickly and adjusted in just a week's time."

It was when the Rockets had the ball that Sampson tried to stay away from Gilmore and use his quickness.

"We told Ralph we didn't want him to get into a pushing match with Artis," teammate Elvin Hayes said.

"The foul-line jump shots were open on the fastbreak," Sampson said. "I had to take them."

Homer Fort, Permian Basin Petroleum Museum's project specialist readies a photo exhibit depicting the oil and gas industry in the Soviet Union.

Museum features colossus

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

Beginning Tuesday the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum will feature an exhibit of photographs depicting oil and gas exploration efforts in the Soviet Union. Homer Fort, project specialists for the museum, said the idea for the exhibit, titled: "Colossus of Oil: The USSR," came from a member of the museum's board.

"Mr. Fred T. Hogan made the point to me, that most Americans weren't aware of the growing ability of the Soviet Union to produce (oil and gas) with relatively high technological skill; and he was somewhat alarmed by the fact that Americans seemed to be somewhat complacent about it. He thought that something showing the Soviet oil effort might wake up the American public as to the implications of the Soviet's progress in this field."

Fort, who is heading up efforts to put the exhibit together, thought it would be an easier job than it has turned out to be. When he began, back in May, Fort suspected he might have some problems finding the necessary photos for the exhibit.

"The first thing we did was to go to World Oil and Oil and Gas Journal, the two trade magazines that deal particularly with international oil development. I was so positive that they had a drawer full of pictures on the Soviet oil industry. It turned out they didn't have any."

The publications did give Fort several leads. The first few did not materialize and Fort began to get nervous. He then learned of a picture agency in New York, who had a contract with TASS, the Soviet news agency.

"I wrote these people and it turned out they not only had an arrangement with TASS but with all the Eastern Block countires and in addition with the People's Republic of China. They had a lot of pictures that were, for the most part, pretty good quality. The only problem was they were quite small and we had to enlarge them. They lost somewhat in quality but nonetheless they're very interesting and I think they tell the story of the fact that the Soviet Union is a major producer of oil."

FORT SPENT a great deal of time in the library trying to find material to accompany the exhibit.

"I was trying to get an idea of how big their industry is and what its characteristics are and how it differs from the United States oil industry.

"The main difference is the Soviet industry is directed by a state bureau which is in turn part of a gigantic economic entity operated as a single unit by people with the full power of the Soviet state behind it. My view is that, so long as it's got that kind of almost unlimited power over the economy of a nation, it probably can accomplish almost anything it wants to."

Fort said the Russians stressed development of their oil industry after World War II and have been very successful until recently.

"Up until comparatively recently there was a growth of production that was really quite astonishing. Oil production has now stabilized and some people think it's declining a bit. Statistics from the Soviet Union aren't very good, they don't tell us much. But, what we don't know is whether this came about as a result of directing their resources into gas development exploration, at the expense of oil; or whether they're having the same problems the U.S. has in maintaining their reserves. I don't know and I don't think anyone else does."

FORT OBATINED SOME of his information from a CIA evaluation of the Soviet oil industry which was controversial, Fort said, because the CIA took a rather pessimistic view of the Soviet's ability to maintain production at existing levels.

"They predicted a noticeable drop off in production which caused a split in opinion. Information now available suggests the CIA was wrong in their evaluation.

"The problem is you can pick up any magazine and find out exactly what's happening to production in the U.S.; you can't do this in the Soviet Union. Intelligence estimates of the CIA seem to be proven wrong, as best we can tell. There's just no sign it took the drop the CIA was forecasting. There isn't any doubt that gas production has been increasing."

Fort is uncertain about the Soviet Union's ability to take care of their own needs in the future.

"It calls for some rather careful judgements on the part of the United States as whether or not the Russians can take care of their own needs, as they define those needs; or whether they would contemplate a move in to the Persian Gulf. And of course there's a general belief that the U.S. wouldn't tolerate an interruption of oil supplies to the west. The betting now is that the USSR will be content with looking for opportunities to stir up trouble but without risking an all-out military confrontation with the U.S.A. in the Persian Gulf. But, no one knows for sure. I'm not an expert, all I know is what I've read.

"YOU CAN'T MINIMIZE these people. They have managed, in some fashion, to find some very, very big oilfields over there; of course they have an enormous expanse of land to look in. They have tried to get technology where ever they can find it, including the U.S. When we cut off exporting pipeline technology, it really didn't work because other countries offered to replace us as primary suppliers."

Fort said the Soviet Union has made a tremendous effort to develop drilling technology and because of this, they have drilled some deep wells.

"I dont quite understand their fascination with this but drilling 34,000 feet, to my knowledge is still a world's record. They were trying for 49,000 feet, they didn't make it however."

The Soviet's success has been the most interesting thing Fort has learned from doing this exhibit.

"I don't think anybody can minimize the Russian's science and technology and achievements in this field. There isn't any doubt that these people won't be able to accomplish a lot. Most people say their accomplishments have been done at the expense of the Russian people. You can't take away from the fact that they have proved to be very successful at finding oil and developing it into a useable form. And you can't feel very complaciant that the American public knows everything there is to know, this is just not true."

Fort said the exhibit will be on display for three months in the museum's west wing.

CLEC backs down

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study asserting that natural gas consumers can expect their home heating bills to rise an average 21 percent this winter has been withdrawn by the organization which put it together.

The Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, an organization of consumer groups and labor unions which wants federal price ceilings on natural gas lowered, said Sunday it found "errors in weather-related adjustments" for about 20 of the 80 cities surveyed in the study.

Stories on the survey were carried last week by The Associated Press and other news organizations. The AP also ran for use in newspapers last Monday an accompanying list of the average projected winter heating bills for each city, based on the coalition's survey.

Ed Rothschild, the assistant director of the coalition, said a revised survey would be completed in about two weeks.

"We are going to review the entire survey, identify the errors in our methodology and data analysis and make the necessary changes and corrections," he said.

The study was partly based on the residential rates of 82 local gas distributors as surveyed by the coalition in August and September. Some of the distributors complained that they have since cut their rates.

"We apologize ... where our estimates of winter gas bills were in error," Rothschild said. "Particularly, we apologize to the managements of local gas distribution companies who have had to explain the discrepancy between their estimates and ours to an aroused public and press."

'Doomsaying' suddenly more popular

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jobless Americans are finally returning to work. Company profits are rising. In the midst of this economic recovery, a leading private economist is echoing earlier predictions of a possible new recession in 1985.

Similar forecasts, dismissed earlier as the talk of isolated "doomsayers," suddenly are appearing from several quarters — from Congress, mainstream economists and even a top Reagan administration official.

The question is whether the warnings are being taken seriously. The problem faced by these analysts is that they're sounding the alarm at a time when the economy is reviving strongly after the 1981-82 recession.

But Lawrence Chimerine, chairman of Chase Econometrics, a forecasting firm in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said deficits are likely to persist around $200 billion a year for years, barring unexpectedly aggressive action to cut the federal budget. Any such red-ink cleanup would likely require more social cuts than Democrats want, more military spending restraint than President Reagan wants and substantial tax increases that the president strongly opposes.

With deficits so high, "the risk of sizeable increases in interest rates will rise sharply in the 1985 environment," Chimerine said, and "a new recession could very well emerge during that period."

By then, he added, feelings of economic well-being will have faded and pressure to reduce the deficit may well force "a sizeable tax increase in the latter part of 1985."

Chimerine is not alone in his pessimistic long-term view:

—Otto Eckstein, chairman of another economics forecasting firm, Data Resources Inc., of Lexington, Mass., would not pinpoint a year in which the current business recovery will be reversed. But he said that if deficits remain high, "somewhere in the mid-1980s it's kind of hard to see how we'd get by."

—Sen. Robert Dole, the Republican chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said: "Some of us are terrified with the thought of ever-increasing deficits over the next four, five, six years. We need to apply a tourniquet and we need to do it now."

—Martin Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said: "Every year it gets riskier and riskier." Failure to deal with deficits until after the 1984 election, he said, "will probably produce a recession in fiscal year 1986," which begins in October 1985.

These men acknowledged the problems involved in seeking budget cuts and tax increases in an election year.

But if 1985 would be too late to deal with the red-ink problem, and confronting it would be politically unlikely next year, that would leave only a few weeks remaining this fall before Congress adjourns.

"Congress can, if properly spurred by the public, address the deficits this year," Dole said.

Help-wanted ads increasing

NEW YORK (AP) — A business research organization said the number of help-wanted advertisments in the nation's newspapers rose in September after falling in August.

The Conference Board, a corporate-funded research organization, said its Help-Wanted Advertising Index rose to 99 in September after falling to 97 in August. The index, based on 1967 equalling 100, now stands 26 points above its level of 73 a year ago.

Want ad volume began to recover a year ago, and jumped 36 percent between September 1982 and September 1983.

Kenneth Goldstein, associate economist for business analysis, said that although increases in want-ad volume have slowed considerably during the past few months, "prospects for additional new hiring remain bright, and the labor market is still improving."

The Piano Man

Tracy Ratliff has been entertaining Midlanders for a quarter of a century and others for 45 years.

Beginning with his first full church service at the Glen Rose Methodist Church when he was 16, Ratliff has been at the bench of a piano or organ ever since.

He said his talent came from his mother, who could play by ear.

"But she was determined that I learn to read music," the Bridgeport native said. When his family moved to Glen Rose, the 13-year-old studied under an ivory-stick wielding teacher for 9½ months.

"If I made a mistake, down it'd come on my fingers," he said, laughing. "She was good but she was very, very strict. She told me I had to learn the classics and then I could do anything. Now, I'm inclined to believe her, but then I wasn't."

AFTER LESSONS from her, Ratliff was on his own attending workshops and seminars to improve his skills.

Besides enjoying his music, Ratliff said it can be used as therapy.

"The people of Midland are so nice and they've always been," he said. "Sometimes, their remarks can make my entire day. They can put me on Cloud Nine. I don't care who it is, it's always nice to be appreciated.

"If something's really bugging me, I go to the piano to work it out," he said. "But the organ is much more fun. You can make it sound like a whole ensemble."

Back when he taught himself how to play the organ, the belief was the player should be barefoot to find the right floor pedals.

"I got caught cold with no shoes on in a church once," he said, laughing. "But I've played in everything since then, cowboy boots, whatever."

As a traveling auditor with Texas Electric Service Co. in Fort Worth, Ratliff said he visited Midland often. His business stays would last anywhere from six weeks to six months.

DURING HIS VISITS, he would stay at the old Scharbauer Hotel. One evening he called the desk and asked if there was a piano not being used. The private sessions on the second floor led to a coffee-shop career at the hotel.

"Everytime I'd come into town, I had a spot at the hotel coffee shop to play," he remembered. "I liked Midland because, at that time, it was a small town and people were friendly." He moved here in 1958.

Jobs as an auditor at car dealerships in the Midland-Odessa area were flexible enough that he could pursue his love of music at night.

In 1960, he began playing the piano and organ at Furr's Cafeteria on the corner of Cuthbert and Midkiff.

"Part of Furr's policy at that time was having live music," Ratliff said. "When it first opened, it was the eating spot in Midland — it was very convenient, fast and the only cafeteria here. They put me to work immediately with three other musicians — we all played the organ. I think I had two nights."

Now he has six, playing at Furr's Sunday through Friday from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday at the Furr's in Big Spring.

His following has changed but many of the customers are the same, he said.

"I MAY NOT KNOW their names, but I know what their favorite song is," he said, smiling. "I guess you could say my music appeals to an older crowd — the show tunes and that type of music. But I love it. I really enjoy watching the little kids bounce up and down. They call me 'the piano man' and 'the music man,' names like that."

Favorite requests throughout the years have been "Laura's Theme," "Stardust," "San Francisco" and "The Theme from Love Story."

"I still get requests for songs from 'South Pacific' and 'The Music Man,' but I don't get as many requests now as I once did. Now I know what their favorite tunes are.

"I more or less have a full program," he said. "Every night, I'm playing the known favorites, but I slip in some of mine every once in awhile."

If Midlanders aren't familiar with his cafeteria concerts, they may remember him from the 13 years he played at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

"They had a family night on Thursdays — buffet and bingo. After dinner, I'd help call the bingo sessions and then I'd move into the bar. We had a little three-piece combo that we'd use occasionally and play for dances."

His more recent engagements differ from the Glen Rose days as a quartet with his girlfriend, brother and sister.

"WE WENT TO little churches and had all-day singing with dinner on the ground. There wasn't any air-conditioning then and I might sit at that piano all day long and be wringing wet. There might be some kindly ladies that would sit near and fan me," he added with a grin. "I played on pianos completely without ivory and out of tune."

He doesn't sing anymore since his voice changed to what he describes as a "whiskey tenor."

By that I mean I have to have several shots of whiskey before I can sing tenor."

Roloff's followers continue legal battle, ministry

CORPUS CHRISTI, (AP) — His followers say they are keeping the faith, continuing the ministry and preparing to go back to court to keep the state out of the homes for delinquent youth Lester Roloff built and went to jail for.

Roloff died in the crash of a private plane on Nov. 2, 1982, Election Day.

The homes, situated on "The Farm," 557 acres of South Texas black dirt just outside Corpus Christi, are still in operation. The ministry is described as "more businesslike" without Roloff.

But Roloff's successors vow to continue with unwavering commitment the 10-year-old legal battle with the state that the fiery evangelist considered a fight for religious freedom.

"Our stand is on the First Amendment and the Bible principles of separation of church and state," said Rev. Wiley B. Cameron, 55, who took over as head of Roloff Evangelical Enterprises Inc. and the People's Baptist Church when Roloff died. "... Our standards and our methods of operation haven't changed. The Lord supplied us with a staff and we're carrying on the work."

IN 1973, A Corpus Christi prosecutor said 16 girls from Roloff's Rebekah Home claimed staff members had beaten them. Roloff admitted corporal punishment was used in the homes, but said not of the younsters was seriously hurt.

John Hill, then attorney general, began to investigate the homes, and the state welfare department demanded that the homes conform to licensing requirements or be closed.

Roloff spent five days in the Nueces County jail in February, 1974, when he was found in contempt of court for failing to meet an order to bring the homes into compliance with state standards.

In 1978, Roloff campaigned for Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements against Hill, the Democratic nominee.

Clements became governor, but Mark White, the new attorney general, persisted in the state's case. He won in state district court in June 1979. Roloff closed the homes rather than submit to state licensing.

ROLOFF PURSUED his legal battle all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, but lost.

Ownership of the homes was then transferred from Roloff Enterprises to People's Baptist Church. State District Judge Charles Mathews of Austin heard the case again in April 1981 and ruled that Roloff's three juvenile homes were exempt from state licensing requirements because the church, not the non-profit corporation, owned the homes.

White appealed the case, and Roloff was incensed.

The evangelist sided publicly with Clements against White in the 1982 governor's race. Before Roloff began his fatal plane trip on election day last year, he voted for Clements and made sure his four companions for the trip also voted.

A YEAR LATER, White is in the governor's mansion, and Jim Mattox is attorney general. Roloff's body is buried in a cemetery across the road from The Farm.

The state's appeal was transferred last May from the Third Court of Civil Appeals in Austin to the Tenth Court of Civil Appeals in Waco. Briefs for both sides have been filed, but no hearing has been set.

Meanwhile, The Farm continues, battling the drugs, alcohol and promiscuous sex Roloff saw as the demons in the souls of the delinquent youths sent to him by their parents for a religious education.

The Farm is the site of five facilities that house up to 500 residents and staff. It is like a small town, with its own gasoline supply, country store, goat milk dairy and, of course, church — the People's Baptist.

Those who have inherited Roloff's ministry take pains to note that nothing has changed at The Farm in the year since Roloff's death.

The sign in front of People's Baptist still names Roloff as pastor. Cameron said the sign hasn't been changed because "we just haven't thought much about it."

"THINGS THE outside world would notice don't bother us very much," Cameron said.

Cameron, who has been at The Farm for 10 years, first as school administrator, then as assistant pastor, worries that there is a public perception that without Roloff The Farm will fail.

Corpus Christi real estate mogul Alfred Edge, 67, is bringing Roloff's empire back from a multimillion-dollar debt, Cameron says, though Cameron admits that fundraising is not as easy without the ministry's forceful leader.

Roloff's taped sermons are still broadcast on about 190 radio stations. Edge said some of the "more inflammatory things" have been edited out.

Nueces County Attorney Mike Westergren, a friend and sometime legal adversary of Roloff, says the ministry has changed.

"I THINK IT'S managed in a much more moderate, businesslike fashion now," he said. "It's a lot more low-key, less fire and brimstone. The content may be the same, but the style is completely different."

Fires gut apartment, frame house, bank

Midland firemen battled a blaze caused by a burning cigarette on a mattress about 10:30 p.m. Sunday night before being called back to the scene two hours later.

Apartment C at 300 N. Madison St., occupied by Greta Williams, was blazing when 11 firemen arrived for the first alarm. The fire was extinguished with 300 gallons of water and the apartment sustained heavy damage.

Two hours later, 11 men were called back to the scene when the fire apparently rekindled. Contained to the apartment, the fire was extinguished with 1,000 gallons. Reports indicate the apartment was a total loss.

A one-story frame house on County Road 52W and 1278N, owned and occupied by Jack George Jr., was destroyed about 10 a.m. Saturday. Eight firemen responded to that blaze, which required 2,200 gallons of water to extinguish it. Cause was attributed to a child playing with matches.

Firemen also were busy at First City National Bank, 500 W. Texas Ave., at 12:33 a.m. Saturday. Report of a fire was turned in by a security guard. The blaze, confined to burning paper well logs on the sixth floor of Building 2, was extinguished with 25 gallons of water. Section 8 of the sixth floor sustained moderate smoke damage while the sixth though 14th floors sustained light smoke damage.

Police Round-up

In other action during the weekend, Midland police investigated the burglary of a residence in which items valued at a total of $4,078 were taken.

Jim R. Swann, of 3202 Sinclair, reported his home was burglarized between 3:30 p.m. Saturday and 6:20 p.m. Sunday. Entry apparently was gained through a back window. Taken were guns, jewelry and a flute.

The Carpet Center, 1603 W. Industrial, was broken into between midnight and 3:30 a.m. today and carpet samples and books worth $400 were reported missing. Patroling police noticed the front door of the business was shattered and a plate glass window was broken and investigated. They found a sledgehammer, electric drill and a large rock on the floor of the store inside the door. An employee said the items did not belong to the store. Damage to the windows was set at $200.

Nira Sharma, of 3224 Dengar, flagged down an officer at 4 p.m. Sunday in the 4100 block of North Ward to report the burglary of her vehicle. Two purses containing cash, checks and assorted items were taken from the vehicle, which was unlocked. Total loss was estimated at $345.

Youths hospitalized

Two Midland youths remained in Midland Memorial Hospital this morning following a two-car collision at Andrews Highway and Louisiana Avenue around midnight Friday.

Jon Kevin Davis, 15, of 2400 Keswick, and Amy Vanveen, 14, of 3417 N. Midland Drive Apt. 2706, were listed in satisfactory condition this morning.

Seven other persons involved in the accident were treated and released or were not admitted to the hospital. Davis, Miss Vanveen and Robert Kirk Woodson were taken to the hospital by ambulance and the rest were transported in private vehicles. Woodson, 15, of 1706 W. Illinois, was dismissed earlier.

According to police, a vehicle driven by Todd Edward Bell, 18, of 3207 W. Ohio, was southbound on Andrews Highway when it attempted to make a left turn onto Louisiana, going the wrong way. The second vehicle, driven by Phillip Dean Dozier, 23, of Route 7 Box 793, was northbound on Andrews when it collided with Bell's car, hitting the passenger side.

Passengers in Bell's car were Davis, Miss Vanveen, Woodson and Robert Boyd, 15, of 3300 Whitney. Boyd and Bell were not admitted for treatment.

Passengers in Dozier's car were Andrews Saxton, 19, of 407 W. Hart; William Beebe, 19, of 5009 Rio Grande; and Brian Abel, 19, of 2419 Apperson. Saxton and Beebe were treated and released and Dozier and Abel were not admitted to the hospital.

Artists invited to meeting

STANTON — Artists in Martin County are invited to attend a 7 p.m. meeting Tuesday in the Tesco Reddy Room at Stanton.

Purpose of the gathering is to discuss the formation of an art association to "keep the fine arts alive, well and visible in Martin County," according to Priscilla A. Williams, the group's organizer.

The group will apply to the Martin County Chamber of Commerce for permission to display art in the second floor meeting room of the restored 1908 jail. The chamber will be moving into the old jail building soon.

Paintings to be presented

The J.W. Parks Gallery presents the paintings of Maisi Sirois Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the gallery, 1108 N. Big Spring St.

Ms. Sirois, artist, philosopher, teacher and humanitarian, has been painting professionally since she was a teen-ager. Her paintings are in private collections throughout the world. She has work in the permanent collection of the Nylander Museum and has shown at the McNay, Witte Memorial and Abilene Fine Arts museums.

The public is invited to come by and see her work.

Engineer says he's a victim of prejudice

DALLAS (AP) — A young black engineer who came to Texas to work in the nation's defense industry says he's a victim of racial prejudice, not the "recreational robber" that prosecutors claim.

Anthony Williams, 25, of Swansea, S.C. could be sentenced to life in prison if convicted in connection with last summer's armed robbery of a suburban Dallas convenience store.

The race issue and the police procedures that linked Williams and a former roommate, Lenell Geter, to a series of robberies have drawn national attention to Williams' trial, which was to begin here today.

Williams' lawyers argue that the charges are rooted in racial prejudice and a tainted identification process.

Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade has been asked by NAACP lawyer George Hairston to drop the charge, or delay the case until Geter's conviction in another robbery is reviewed by a higher court, but the prosecutor has refused.

Wade's office claims it has solid evidence to back up the case against Williams and claims it is treating this trial no different than any other armed robbery case.

Prosecutors have attempted to depict Williams and Geter as "recreational robbers" who lived on both sides of the law. Both men worked at $22,000-a-year jobs in Greenville, 50 miles east of Dallas, at E-Systems Inc., a large U.S. Defense Department contractor.

Geter, 25, of Denmark, S.C., was convicted last October in the armed robbery of a Balch Springs fast-food restaurant and received a life sentence, despite the testimony of E-Systems employees that Geter was at work when the robbery occurred.

Civil rights groups have charged that he was the victim of inaccurate detective work and a victim of mistaken identification.

The two men were among about a half-dozen young black engineers E-Systems brought to Texas from South Carolina.

Williams' and Geter's cases have drawn national attention, including investigations by CBS' "60 Minutes" and exposure on Phil Donahue's syndicated talk show.

"If we win this one, Geter will get out," said Lee Bowers of Estill, one of at least four lawyers assisting in the case. "But if we lose, it's going to be hard to recover."

Edwin M. Sigel, Geter's court-appointed Dallas attorney, said the FBI is looking into allegations of police misconduct and perjury by Texas authorities.

Meanwhile, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox has agreed to a request by South Carolina Attorney General Travis Medlock to review Geter's case, which is under appeal.

Malfunction investigated

DALLAS (AP) — Federal investigators are examining dialysis equipment at the Dallas Kidney Disease Center, where a malfunctioning machine caused the fatal heart failure of three patients within minutes of one another.

"What we are concerned about is if there is any problem with the device and that the public be protected," said Dr. H. Frank Newman, regional medical officer for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Newman said a recall of dialysis equipment was unlikely, because kidney patients' lives depend on the machines.

Center officials said the deaths last week occurred when an electrical malfunction caused a backup heating system to begin operating at the same time as the main one, overheating the saline solution flowing into patients' blood and bringing on cardiac arrest.

"It apparently is a simple wiring defect that resulted in the equipment failing," Newman said. "The principal concern we have is that other machines built by the manufacturer are inspected to make sure there aren't similar defects."

Center officials said the problem was corrected and the center reopened on Saturday, the day after the deaths.

Newman and two other FDA inspectors said Saturday that they would require the system's manufacturer, Milton Roy-Extracorporeal Inc., to inspect its machines in other parts of the country.

National Medical Care, Inc. of Waltham, Mass., which owns the center, issued a statement Sunday expressing regret over the deaths.

Chicken scratch craft makes snowflake embroidery

Copley News Service

No matter how the name sounds, "chicken scratch" has nothing to do with chickens. Instead, chicken scratch is a needlecraft that lets you turn original gingham into lace.

Although chicken scratch is its most popular name today, over the years, the craft has been known as "depression lace," "mountain lace," and "snowflake embroidery."

The monogrammed pillow and Christmas ornament shown are examples of chicken scratch. The projects are available as kits.

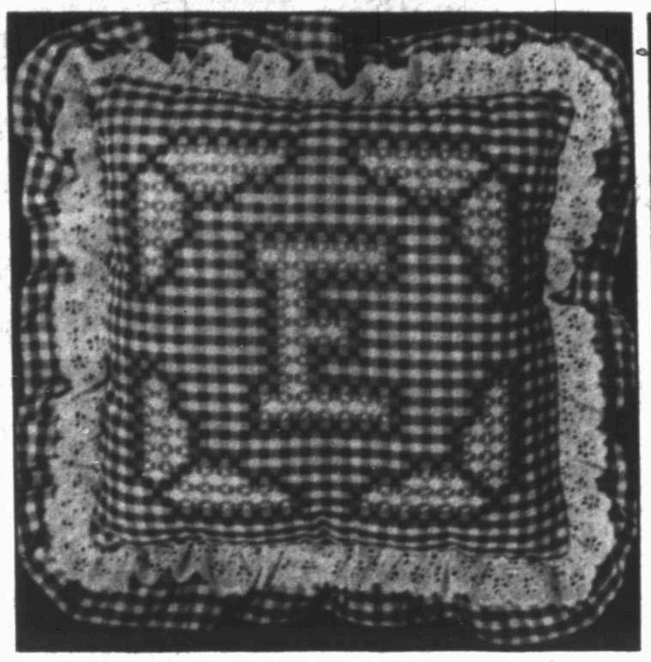
In chicken scratch, the basic stitch is a double cross-stitch, in other words, one cross-stitch over another cross-stitch.

Lacy borders, hearts, circles, diamonds and monograms all look beautiful in chicken scratch, especially on aprons, potholders, pillows and Christmas ornaments.

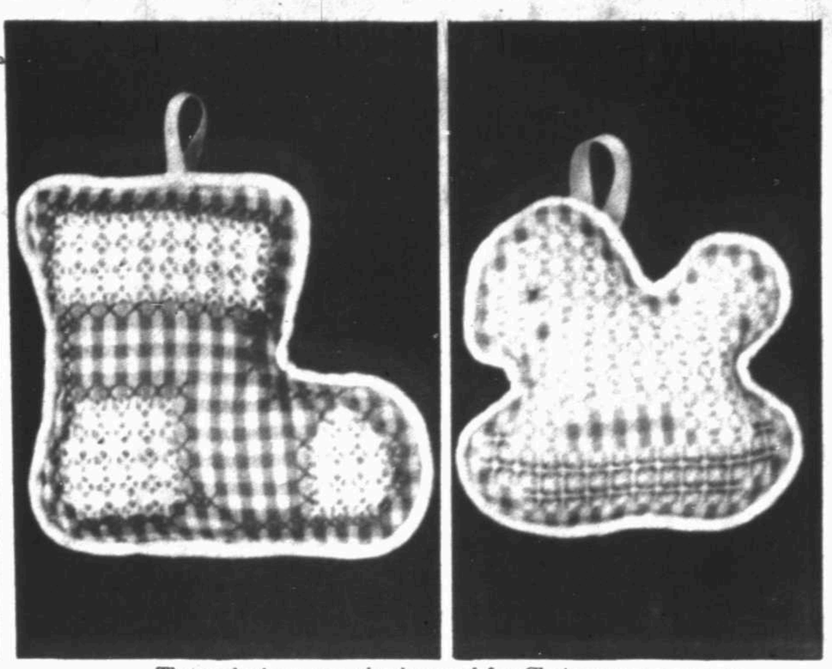
Here are directions for chicken scratch:

MATERIALS: Gingham fabric; white and colored floss; embroidery needle; design chart or graph paper and pencil. Optional but recommended: embroidery hoop.

DESIGN: Work from a special chicken scratch chart or draw your own design on graph paper as follows:



This pillow features the chicken scratch craft.



The technique can also be used for Christmas ornaments.

1. Mark the squares in your graph that correspond to the dark squares in the gingham. 2. Mark the squares in your graph that correspond to the white squares. 3. Draw an outline for your design by connecting white squares. 4. Mark the center of your chart.

OUTLINES: 1. Thread needle with three strands of colored floss. 2. Following you chart, make a double cross-stitch on each white square in your outline as follows:

a. Stitch from lower left corner to upper right corner.
b. Stitch from lower right corner to upper left corner.
c. Stitch from left to right.
d. Stitching from top bottom.

LACE FILLING: 1. Thread needle with three strands of white floss. 2. Stitch a double cross-stitch on every dark square within the outlined shape. 3. Then, working across, sew a vertical stitch on each medium square between dark squares.

4. Sew a horizontal stitch on remaining medium squares. 5. Stitch circles on the white squares by passing the needle under vertical and horizontal stitches around each white square.

To order, send kit number to Ellen Appel Crafts, Midland Reporter-Telegram, Box 1144, Laguna Beach, CA 92652.

DEAR ABBY

Halloween safety ensures treats, not tricks

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: It's Halloween again and time to remind you that ...

Somebody's child will be seriously injured or killed in a Halloween-related traffic accident.

Somebody's child will be badly maimed or fatally burned due to a flammable costume.

Somebody's child will become violently ill or die after eating poisoned candy or an apple containing a razor blade.

Somebody's child will be coaxed into an automobile or lured into a secluded area and sexually assaulted.

To make sure that child isn't yours, here are some tips to ensure the safety of your children:

— Use flameproof costumes only. If costumes are made at home, treat the fabric with a flame-resistant solution.

— Because masks, floppy hats, wigs and veils often interfere with a child's vision, use makeup instead.

— Accessories such as swords, broomsticks, hatchets, wands, etc., should be made of cardboard rather than plastic, metal or wood. Sharp items are dangerous.

— Provide youngsters with flashlights to prevent falls on sidewalks or porch steps. (Positively NO lighted candles should be carried!)

— Decorate your child's costume and trick-or-treat bag with reflective tape to make them highly visible to motorists.

— Remind children that they should NEVER enter the home of a stranger or accept rides.

— Adults can help by keeping their yards well-lighted.

Hospital investigated for mistreatment of AIDS victim

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Officials are investigating a University of Florida teaching hospital that allegedly treated an AIDS victim as "a medical outcast" by "dumping" him in San Francisco for outpatient treatment about two weeks before his death.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham is looking into the actions of Shands Hospital in Gainesville, which sent 27-year-old Morgan MacDonald away 16 days ago because it said he no longer needed hospital care for the immune system disorder. MacDonald died Thursday.

San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein and Dr. Mervyn Silverman, the city's director of health, said they were outraged over Shands' treatment of MacDonald.

Shands, which said it had treated MacDonald for 2½ months and concluded he was ready for outpatient care, chartered a jet and sent a physician and social worker to accompany him to San Francisco.

He was taken immediately to San Francisco General Hospital's special care unit for AIDS patients, the first of its kind in the nation.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is a disease that strips the body of its ability to fight infections. It is frequently fatal and is most likely to strike homosexuals, Haitians, abusers of injectable drugs and hemophiliacs. Of 2,416 reported AIDS cases in the United States, 287 are in San Francisco, according to Dr. Tim Piland of the city Health Department.

MacDonald was listed in poor condition when he arrived in San Francisco and steadily deteriorated.

"There was real doubt from the time he was dropped off ... that he was ever going to be coming out of the hospital," Silverman said. "I have never seen anything like this.

"There's a lot of callousness associated with this transfer. It's not really a transfer at all. They just dumped him. Their lawyers made it very clear that he would be out on the front step because he no longer needed acute care.

"At the very least, they showed medical misjudgment," he continued. "But it doesn't make sense. Why call our inpatient unit to say he's coming? Why pay for him to come? I don't know why they did it. Maybe it was because his Medicare payments had run out."

Michelle Davis, associate director of public relations at Shands, said money had nothing to do with the hospital's actions. She said MacDonald had stayed at Shands for 2½ months after coming into its emergency room, and "the bill is still unpaid."

MacDonald was discharged from Shands, she said, because "the medical staff felt he was able to be treated in an outpatient clinic. We've treated many AIDS patients and would not have discharged him if we felt he needed hospital care."

Although MacDonald did not live in San Francisco, he was sent here because "it was felt that was where he could get the best facilities for outpatient system support," she said.

She said "things changed shortly after" McDonald arrived in San Francisco, but declined to be more specific.

In response, Silverman said, "I doubt very much that his condition changed dramatically from the time he left Florida to the time he arrived here."

"It is sad that a young man had to spend his final days as a medical outcast," Mayor Feinstein said. "Shands Hospital has set a terrible example that must never be repeated."

Shands already has been contacted by the Florida governor's office and is cooperating with the investigation, Ms. Davis said.

Burn-proof popovers

POPOVERS

Baked this way, the tops won't over-brown.

2 large eggs
1 cup milk
1 cup sifted unbleached all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tbsp. melted butter

Place center oven rack on rungs just below. Turn oven to 450-F. Place black iron popover pans (11 cups each ⅓-cup capacity) in oven while preheating so it will be very hot. In electric blender whirl together the eggs, milk, flour, salt and butter, scraping down until smooth. Generously brush the hot popover cups with butter. Pour in batter; fill each cup ⅓ full. Bake in 450-F oven 15 minutes; continue baking at 375-F until high, crisp and golden-brown — 20-25 minutes longer. (Underbaking will cause popovers to collapse.) Serve with butter. Makes 11. —(AP)

Campbell's introduces Campbell's Ranchero Beans, tender pinto beans in a zesty barbecue sauce. They have more real ranch taste than the leading brand, but "You be the Judge!"

Campbell's Ranchero Beans are available in a 15.5 oz. size in supermarkets in the Southwest.

CAMPBELL'S INTRODUCES RANCHERO BEANS

Camden, NJ, October, 1983 –Southwesterners want more spice and flavor. To meet these changing taste preferences in Southwest markets, Campbell's introduces Campbell's Ranchero Beans, tender pinto beans in a rich zesty barbecue sauce.

"Our research shows consumers tastes are sophisticated," says John Haring, product manager of Campbell's Beans, Campbell Soup Company. "They want more spice and full rich flavor in foods, including beans. Campbell's Ranchero Beans are more authentic in flavor than the leading brand and are expected to expand the ethnic bean category significantly."

The beans are tender, the sauce is rich, seasoned with a blend of chili powder and other favorite spices. They are delicious as an ingredient in chili or salads or served as an accompaniment to any entree from fried chicken to Mexican food.

In taste-tests conducted by Campbell's Market Research Department, consumers who were current users of the leading brand of pinto beans in barbecue sauce preferred new Campbell's Ranchero Beans over that brand. Ranchero Beans have more real ranch taste, but "You be the Judge!"

Horror, science fiction fills home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the aging house where he has lived since boyhood, Donald Reed sleeps amid images of creatures whose creeping, crawling ways would drive the less adventurous screaming into the night.

But the founder of the Academy of Science Fiction, Fantasy and Horror Films and the Count Dracula Society loves his rooms stuffed with bone-chilling books, frightening film memorabilia and eerie images of the blood-sucking vampire. For Reed, Halloween lasts all year long.

"Like all kids, I loved Halloween. I never gave it up. I never wanted it to end. So I went to horror films, and I began collecting things," said Reed, 47, as he recently gave a visitor a tour of his home south of downtown Los Angeles.

"This house is simply a reflection of my great interests: history, Dracula and the Science Fiction, Fantasy and Horror Film academy."

PICTURES OF Dracula in nearly all his cinematic incarnations stare down from the walls in Reed's bedroom and other rooms: Bela Lugosi, Christopher Lee, George Hamilton and Jack Palance are just a few of the actors who have donned cape and fangs over the past 50 years.

There's also a half-torso statue and an oil portrait of Vlad the Impaler, the Magyar knight of Transylvania who provided the historical basis for Bram Stoker's 1897 "Dracula" novel, about the "undead" count who rose from the grave each night. Vlad didn't survive by drinking blood, but he earned his title by skewering alive those who displeased him.

Elsewhere in the house are Dracula statues in the image of Lugosi and ceramic counts who hold their capes around red candles on the fireplace mantel.

A plastic statue of Frankenstein's monster, arms outstretched, stands in stride atop the kitchen refrigerator. A life-like mask of Lugosi hangs in the hallway. In the bedroom, a costume jewelry ring worn by Lee in one of his vampire films nestles in a plastic box.

Dr. Donald Reed sits in his south Los Angeles home amid props he has collected from some of Hollywood's scariest horror films. He is said to be the world's foremost expert on macabre movie-making.

The World Almanac's "Book of Buffs, Masters, Mavens and Uncommon Experts" calls Reed "perhaps the most knowledgeable American expert on Dracula in truth and fiction."

THE BUOYANT, scholarly Reed says that thanks to Hollywood, horror creatures like Dracula have become part of American mythology.

"The ancient Egyptians said to speak of the dead is to make them live again," he said. "We have accepted these creatures as the youths of ancient Greece accepted their mythological gods. But Dracula and Frankenstein are part of our American mythology. They are part of our culture, and on Halloween, they are very much alive."

Reed, who prefers to be known as Dr. Donald Reed, in fact earned a doctor of laws degree at nearby University of Southern California.

But rather than practicing law, he has written books on such diverse subjects as actor Robert Redford and "Admiral Leahy at Vichy France," a study of William Daniel Leahy's stint as the U.S. ambassador to France's Vichy government from 1940 to 1942.

Reed founded the Academy of Science Fiction, Horror and Fantasy in 1972 because he felt Hollywood was being unfair to the fanciful.

ONLY ONCE has an Oscar for best actor been awarded for a role in a horror film: to Frederic March in 1932 for the title role in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Science fiction and horror films may draw big audiences, but none has ever won the best picture award.

Reed's organization patterns itself after the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Its 2,700 members nominate films in categories devised by the organization, and its yearly awards show has been syndicated on television in recent years.

Reed is recovering from a car accident that nearly killed him 13 months ago. His right leg was broken in three places and he could not bend it. He still has an attendant living at the house with him while he continues therapy.

"I told God, 'No matter what you do, let me bend my knee so I can sit in a theater seat,'" he said. "Now I can."

Larry Hagman's daughter weds

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — The bride's grandmother, entertainer Mary Martin, sang as Kristina Hagman, daughter of "Dallas" TV star Larry Hagman, married New Mexico artist Brian Blount.

The wedding Saturday at Hagman's Malibu home was performed by Municipal Court Judge John Merrick.

Guests included "Dallas" co-star Linda Gray and most of the rest of the cast of the CBS-TV series in which Hagman stars as vicious oilman J.R. Ewing.

Other celebrities at the wedding were Peter Fonda, whose daughter, Bridget, was a bridesmaid; CBS-TV President Bud Grant; Merv Adelson, chairman of Lorimar Productions Inc., which produces "Dallas"; director Jerry Hellman, and actress Mary Crosby with her husband, Eb Lottimer.

Miss Martin sang "The Wedding Song" by folk singer Paul Stookey (of Peter, Paul and Mary) as Miss Hagman, 25, and Blount, 33, exchanged vows. Blount is from Santa Fe.

The honeymoon site was kept secret.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — When you're not governor of California any more, but still feel like "a force to strengthen the Democratic party," you keep busy: you toy with a personal computer, travel, lecture and organize a campaign fund and two think tanks.

That's how former Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. spends his time these days, according to a published report Sunday.

Brown, 45, who lost last year's race for a U.S. Senate seat to Republican Pete Wilson, is a prime force in the Committee for California, aimed at regaining that seat for the Democrats in 1984.

"We're a force to strengthen the Democratic Party," Brown told the Sacramento Bee. "I got a lot out of my years in politics and now I want to contribute to the process."

Asked about his own career, Brown said, "I have no game plan for future political office."

The think tanks he chairs are the Institute for National Strategy, and the National Commission on Industrial Innovation.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — One of the unlikeliest duos in American education — pioneering teacher Marva Collins and former college basketball star Kevin Ross — were together in the heartland, speaking out against illiteracy.

Ms. Collins, 46, founder of the Westside Preparatory School in Chicago, told a news conference Sunday that America "can't afford to be powerful and illiterate."

Ross, a former Creighton University basketball player who left college virtually illiterate after four years, learned to read at Ms. Collins' school.

Ms. Collins, who became nationally known when she broke away from Chicago's public schools to start a school in her home, was in Omaha to attend the United Methodist Community Center's annual youth achievement awards ceremony.

She said that because of Ross's success at her school, the program now has been expanded to include adults.

Ross, 24, teaches adults part-time at her school and said he plans to attend Roosevelt University in Chicago "to get what I didn't get at Creighton."

Felix the Cat's animator dies of heart attack

FORT LEE, N.J. (AP) — Pioneer animator Otto Messmer, dead at age 91, gave mannerisms and traits to his most famous character, Felix the Cat, that set new standards for his profession, a film historian says.

Messmer, a Fort Lee resident, died of a heart attack at Holy Name Hospital in Teaneck on Friday. A funeral was scheduled for today at McCorry Brothers Funeral Home in Cliffside Park.

Messmer created Felix in 1919 while working for the Pat Sullivan animation studio, and "people loved it. It became a tremendous success," recalled his daughter, Doris.

"Before Felix, most of the animated characters merely moved. Felix had more than that — particular mannerisms, human traits. Audiences could identify with that," said film historian John Canemaker, who teaches animation at New York University.

Messmer's approach had an enormous influence on his contemporaries, including Walt Disney, Canemaker said Sunday.

"Felix predates Mickey Mouse. If you take Felix's sharp ears away and you substitute two round ones, you got the basic design of Mickey Mouse," he said. "The use of personality and mannerism was a big influence on Disney's later work."

Felix became a film star in the 1920s and '30s, and was featured in over 300 short silent films usually shown as previews to features.

From 1924 until 1951, Messmer drew a Felix the Cat cartoon strip in the New York Journal-American newspaper.

Despite the popular success of the little black cat, Messmer never became a wealthy man, Canemaker said. "He never owned any copyrights, even while working for Sullivan," he added.

After Sullivan died in 1933, the copyright eventually passed to one of his nephews and is now held by the Felix the Cat Corp. and King Feature Syndicate.

After Sullivan's death, Messmer worked for Douglas Leigh Corp. from 1940 to 1972, designing animation for the electronic billboard overlooking Times Square in New York City.

After years of anonymity, Ms. Messmer said, her father finally was recognized with an exhibition at Expo '67 in Montreal.

Almost a decade later, the Whitney Museum and the Museum of Modern Art in New York City sponsored a Felix the Cat film festival, an event film critic Vincent Canby described as the "most blithe and buoyant film show in town."

Messmer was a member of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and of Moving Pictures Machine Operators Local 841 in New York City.

He is survived by his wife, Ann Mason Messmer, two daughters, three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Newspaper folds after 102 years

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Today's folding of the Memphis Press-Scimitar — the victim of slumping circulation after 102 years — leaves dozens of journalists without jobs and Tennessee's largest city with only one daily newspaper.

Just 10 years ago, the afternoon newspaper's circulation stood at 127,000, but it had dropped to 80,000 recently.

The owner, Scripps-Howard Newspapers, has said it will concentrate its efforts on improving the morning Commercial Appeal.

The announcement Sept. 20 of the Press-Scimitar's impending death by Milton Britten, editor of the newspaper since 1975, set off a job search that will continue for many reporters, photographers and editors after today's final edition appears.

Shortly after the announcement, the bulletin board blossomed with notices of job openings in other parts of the country. Some reporters found new positions as far away as California and Arizona.

Memphis Publishing Co. set up an office to assist with job hunting, offering advice on preparing for interviews and writing resumes. And the Commercial Appeal hired 25 of the Press-Scimitar's 94-member staff.

But city editor Jim Willis said Friday that about 35 men and women are still without jobs.

Some have opted for early retirement and a few have decided to return to college or enter other fields, said Willis, who is joining the morning newspaper.

Among those still job hunting are reporter Kay Pittman Black and photographer Jim Reid.

"This is my second fold," said Mrs. Black, who has covered city hall and local politics for 21 years. "I was on the Jackson (Miss.) State Times when it folded.

"Of course, I wasn't 45 then. I was just 24 and that makes a difference. I don't think anyone wants to hire a 45-year-old woman reporter."

Reid, 53, said, "I'm going fishing. I'm way behind on my fishing."

But the 28-year Press-Scimitar veteran said he can't afford to retire yet, even though he could draw a pension from the company.

"I'm at an awkward age — too young to be old and too old to be young," he said. "I'm not old enough to retire."

Reid, whose wife works in the Memphis Publishing Co. advertising department, said he plans to do free-lance photography and perhaps look for a job in law enforcement.

"I've worked so close with the police all these years, I think I might be able to contribute something," he said.

Employees who lost their jobs were eligible for severance pay equal to one week for every six months they had been with the newspaper, up to a maximum of 42 weeks' salary.

Dentistry relies less on needles

Worry keeps an estimated 19 million Americans away from dentists' offices and, to ally their fear, faster and quieter drills and sharper needles are being developed. Many dentists now use no needles, instead "blowing" anesthetic into the gum tissue.

Cuban prisoners at a POW compound near the Point Salinas, Grenada, airport stare through rolls of barbed wire at the multinational peacekeeping force Saturday. These Cubans are among the nearly 600 captured during the invasion of Grenada.

Cuban casualties to return home

HAVANA (AP) — Cubans killed or wounded during the U.S. invasion of Grenada will be returned to Cuba on a Swiss Air flight arranged with the help of the International Red Cross, authorities say.

Cuban authorities also said an estimated 600 healthy Cuban prisoners would be brought home on a British ship. No details were released here on when the jet and ship would leave Grenada.

President Fidel Castro, meanwhile, demanded the return of equipment used by Cuban workers to build a new airport in Grenada.

"It is not a matter of economics, it is a moral matter," Havana radio quoted Castro as saying Sunday in a broadcast monitored in Miami. "The equipments must be returned to Cuba."

President Reagan has said the airport was to be used for military purposes, to give communist forces easier access to Central and South America.

A Cuban government official expressed concern Sunday over U.S. reports lowering from 1,000 to 750 the number of Cubans believed to have been on Grenada when the U.S. forces landed Tuesday.

Castro had insisted all along that there were fewer than 800 Cubans on Grenada, including a diplomatic corps of 19 and 52 attached to a military advisory group.

"We are concerned now about the lower number of Cubans the U.S. is saying were on the island. Their figure is even lower than ours," said a Cuban government source who asked not to be identified.

The government said there were 35 women in the area of hostilities near the Point Salines aiport, where Cuba says 636 Cubans were working when the island was invaded. A Havana radio broadcast Sunday questioned whether some of the women had been killed.

The broadcast accused the United States of manipulating the Cuban casualty figures, and said one of the reasons may be to hide the deaths of women and minimize the overall death toll.

The Cuban government source said Cuba has asked for a complete list of the casualties, including causes in cases of death.

A Havana radio broadcast said Castro expressed to Spanish President Felipe Gonzalez and Colombian President Belisario Betancur his concern about the lack of communication between his ambassador and U.S. authorities on Grenada.

He also asked for a list of the captured Cubans, saying that relatives in Cuba could then be informed of the status of their kin in Grenada.

Marine Capt. Tim Howard of Jacksonville, N.C., speaks to reporters from a bed at the Bethesda Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md., outside Washington, Sunday. Howard, 30, pilot of a Cobra gunship, suffered leg wounds when his helicopter went down over Grenada.

Grenadians 'tickled pink'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Marine helicopter pilot awarded the purple heart after being wounded during the invasion of Grenada says residents of the Caribbean island welcomed the invading forces.

"Every house we flew over, the Grenadians waved to us and were tickled pink to see us," Marine Capt. Tim Howard, 30, of Jacksonville, N.C., said Sunday.

Howard's right leg was fractured and his right forearm was later amputated after his helicopter crashed while providing cover fire for Marines who landed on the island Tuesday, military officials said.

"Our job was to escort the Marines in the transport helicopters to make a landing to secure an area in which they could start evacuating American citizens," said Howard, who was wheeled into the news conference lying on a bed.

Howard and another Marine, Lance Cpl. Keith Harter, of West Unity, Ohio, spoke to a news conference arranged by military officials and later cut short when media representatives pressed close around the injured men.

U.S. mistakenly shelled hospital, news reports say

By The Associated Press

U.S. forces that landed on Grenada to secure a Cuban-built airstrip and rescue American medical students accidentally shelled a mental hospital, killing some mental patients and letting others wander around the island, according to news reports.

Maclean's, a Canadian newsmagazine, reported that about 47 mental patients were killed in the shelling, and a New York Post report said at least 13 bodies had been taken from the rubble.

Maclean's reported that Alice Celestia, a nurse at the Richmond Hill Mental Hospital, gave reporters a tour of the shattered asylum.

Maclean's correspondent Michael Posner and Post reporter Charles Lachman said they reached the island secretly by boat and toured the island Saturday while U.S. military authorities were attempting to limit reporters' access.

Both the Maclean's and the Post reports said the nurse absolved the United States of all blame, saying there was no way the Americans could have known they were shelling a hospital.

The Post said hospital officials believe the assault came after U.S. forces saw Grenadian soldiers fleeing into the hospital for sanctuary. Officials said they expected to find more bodies buried beneath tons of debris at the 183-patient hospital, the newspaper said.

The shelling occurred Tuesday, the first day of the invasion, the newspaper said.

In Washington, a Defense Department spokesman, Navy Lt. Cmdr. John Woodhouse, said, "We have no reports from commanders in the field which would substantiate the allegations in Maclean's magazine."

"We haven't gotten anything on it," Army Sgt. Ray Kopaniasz, another Pentagon spokesman, said today when asked about the Post report.

U.S. servicemen killed, wounded in Beirut listed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department has released the following partial list of U.S. servicemen killed or missing in the Beirut headquarters bombing Oct. 23. They are Marines unless otherwise noted. Most — and possibly all — of those listed as missing are presumed dead by the Pentagon and are included in the announced death toll.
