Stiffer law could curb DWI

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Vehicle forfeiture. Stiffer fines. Mandatory jail time. Tightened requirements for obtaining occupational drivers licenses. Probation considered as conviction.

Add them up, and they equal what County Attorney J. Scott Henderson has been wanting for some time now: a comprehensive reform of the state's DWI laws.

"It's pretty well what I wanted to see," said Henderson, an ex-Waco cop and former Kerr County deputy. "The legislature did a good job."

The new law, which goes into effect Jan. 1, is designed to curb the number of drunken drivers and cut the toll of alcohol-related accidents on Texas roads.

Authorities estimate that half the traffic fatalities nationwide are caused by drinking drivers.

In Texas, a total of 4,271 persons lost their lives in the 451,770 traffic accidents reported to the Department of Public Safety last year. The DPS places the dollar loss at $3.3 billion.

Taking a tougher stand

Tougher DWI laws, recently passed by the Texas Legislature, include harsher penalties and the possibility of longer jail sentences for persons convicted of drunken driving.

Suspects killed, wounded

BAKERSFIELD, Texas (AP) — A West Texas man charged with the murder of a sheriff's deputy was killed and his teen-age son wounded when they tried to rob an attendant at a natural gas processing plant Saturday night, authorities said.

The father, 40-year-old Richard Graham, was shot in the chest by the attendant, said Upton County Sheriff's Sgt. George Willeford. The son, 18-year-old Thomas Graham, who was also charged with capital murder in the deputy's shooting, was shot in the face by the attendant, Willeford said.

Deputy Charles A. "Chuck" Renfro, 45, was shot to death about 1 a.m. Friday when he answered an alarm at a lumber and hardware store in McCamey, about 50 miles south of Odessa.

The father and son were trying to rob the Intratex Co. plant about 10:30 p.m. Saturday when the attendant surprised them.

The son was taken to a hospital by ambulance, Willeford said.

The elder Graham's 19-year-old daughter has also been charged with capital murder in the case, but a prosecutor said he would ask a grand jury to drop the charge.

Terri Graham was charged Friday and released on $10,000 bond, but investigators have since learned that she was at work when the deputy was murdered early that morning, District Attorney Aubrey Edwards said.

British Airways helicopter crashes; 20 feared dead

LONDON (AP) — A British Airways helicopter shuttling passengers to the Scilly Isles vacation resort crashed and sank Saturday in the English Channel. Officials said 20 of the 26 people aboard were missing and feared drowned.

Six survivors were rescued by lifeboats and two Royal Navy helicopters that raced to the crash scene two miles off St. Mary's, the largest of the five main islands.

The Civil Aviation Authority was trying to determine the cause of the crash and there was speculation the helicopter flew into a flock of birds.

"There are a lot of dead birds at the scene of the crash," said Scillies coast guard spokesman Denver Childs.

The navy called off its search at nightfall, but said it would resume at dawn Sunday despite deteriorating weather. Prince Charles sent a message of sympathy for British Airways to give to the victims' families.

The survivors — two pilots, two local women, a 12-year-old boy and a 14-year-old girl — were taken to local hospitals.

Officials identified the pilots as Captains Dominic Lawlor and Neil Charlton. A British Airways spokesman said both were "veteran pilots." Names of the two children were not released.

One of the women, Mrs. Meagan Smith, was seriously injured and was flown from St. Mary's by helicopter to the Royal Cornwall Hospital at Truro. The other woman, Mrs. Lucille Langley-Williams, had three cracked ribs.

"I remember a bang and I think it must have been when we hit the water .... I started struggling with the door handle," Mrs. Langley-Williams told Press Association, the British domestic news agency.

"It was difficult. I twisted and pulled at it frantically and finally it opened. I remember taking a very deep breath and thinking it seemed a long, long way getting to the surface. Then I could see the water paler above."

She said she found Mrs. Smith on the surface along with the other survivors, all of whom were picked up by rescue craft within 20 minutes.

A team of divers was brought in to try to find the other victims in the sunken wreckage. Michael Osborne, spokesman for the Falmouth Coast Guard, said, "Had there been any other survivors, they would have been found on the surface. It is a matter of looking for a number of bodies at this stage."

Officals feared it would be the worst helicopter accident in British history.

The helicopter had 23 passengers and three crew members aboard when it crashed, an airline spokesman said.

It was en route from Penzance on the Cornish peninsula to the Scilly Isles, 25 miles off England's southwest coast, when it lost radio contact just before noon (8 a.m. EDT), the airline spokesman said.

The Royal Navy Rescue Center initially reported seven survivors had been picked up by lifeboats. But the navy and the Department of Transport later said six people had been rescued.

Lt. Cmdr. Andrew Lockett, rescue coordinator at the navy air station at Culdrose, said the Sikorsky 61 helicopter had broken up and the main fuselage was believed to be at the bottom of the channel, about 200 feet deep.

"This makes it a very difficult diving operation," the Falmouth spokesman said, because the depth gives divers only five minutes to work on the wreckage before they have to come to the surface.

Seas were calm but visibility near the crash scene was very poor, the spokesman said. St. Mary's Airport was closed to all traffic because of the accident and the fog.

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Specialists in protective white coveralls gently unloaded two steel-and-lead crates of highly radioactive Iridium-192 on Saturday from a small cargo plane that ran off an airport runway, crashed and burned.

No radiation leaked from the 500-pound containers, each containing 150 to 200 wafers of Iridium-192, which are used for X-rays of microscopic welds or cracks, officials said.

"If you would have had a fracture in the package all the way through ... you would have had a beam of radiation like a flashlight," said Jim Alexander, an Energy Department spokesman.

But the containers were intact, as was a small cylindrical container of slightly radioactive Yttrium-90, which was thrown 18 feet from the burning plane, he said.

The materials were being shipped to Georgia and Louisiana from Oak Ridge National Laboratory, a $368 million Energy Department research facility near Knoxville, about 100 miles to the west.

Hazardous materials specialists unloaded the containers by crane, put them in a truck and took the containers to the Oak ridge lab Saturday afternoon, Alexander said.

The twin-engine Gulf Stream G-1 turboprop plane, leased by Emery Air Freight, crashed about 9 p.m. Friday as it was landing at Tri-City Regional Airport not far from the Virginia line to pick up more cargo.

The pilot and copilot escaped unharmed before the plane's fuel caught fire and gutted all but the tail section. The plane plowed through a 75-foot section of chain-link fence at the end of the main runway and came to rest on an embankment beside a service road.

"We are confident there was no leak," Alexander said. "These packages are very rugged. They're designed to go through this kind of accident. They did what they were supposed to."

But even if the containers had split open, radiation would not have spread far from the plane, said Bobby Joe Davis, emergency director of the U.S. Energy Department's Oak Ridge operations.

Airport manager John Hanlin said first reports were that a braking problem caused the crash. Ron Schleede, chief site investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, declined to comment on a possible cause shortly after his four-member team arrived at the airport Saturday.

As a precaution, local civil defense workers briefly evacuated four nearby houses, a spokesman for the Tennessee Emergency Management Agency in Nashville said.

The stainless steel crates of Iridium were on their way to Gamma Industries in Baton Rouge, La. The container of slightly radioactive Yttrium was bound for Georgia Institute of Technology in Atlanta for research.

Hanlin said part of the airport's main 6,600-foot runway was reopened Saturday, as was another 4,450-foot-long stretch. He said the airport's two major airlines, USAir and Piedmont Aviation, were again landing planes, as were three regional airlines.

Klan marches through Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — More than 60 Ku Klux Klan members, protected by a wedge of riot-equipped police, marched through five downtown blocks Saturday to shout their messages of white supremacy, and four people were arrested.

A few eggs, a rock, a cigarette lighter and an umbrella were thrown at the Klan members but caused no injuries. One onlooker set off a firecracker.

One Klan member was arrested before the march began for allegedly carrying an illegal pistol and rifle in her car, said Police Chief Billy Prince. Three other people, all anti-Klan demonstrators, were arrested, two for allegedly carrying an illegal machete, and a third for throwing the cigarette lighter, Prince said.

The robed Klan members, carrying flags and posters, stopped at each intersection to shout and chant to crowds. Onlookers, estimated by police at 1,000, were allowed to gather only at streetcorners behind barricades and double rows of officers.

As the Klan approached, the crowds chanted "Death to the Klan!" and "Go home honkies!" and made obscene gestures.

"You're a bunch of illegal aliens and communists and you ought to be rounded up like the criminals that you are," Klan march leader Charles Lee told the crowd.

Prince said after the march that it was "successful, safe and relatively uneventful" and said he was "very proud of the way it was handled" by his officers.

"The citizens faced a test of Dallas' maturity and they did very well," Prince said.

A Midland man and a 26-year-old Greenville man were killed instantly when their car ran off the road and into a truck-tractor legally parked on the south shoulder of Texas Highway 158, 12 miles west of Garden City, at 5:45 p.m. Saturday. Gary Steven Patterson, 32, of Midland was pronounced dead at the scene by Glasscock County Justice of the Peace J.E. Wooten. The name of the other victim, who also was pronounced dead at the scene, was not released pending notification of the next of kin. The driver of the truck, who was sleeping in the cab, was not injured. Both bodies were taken to Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Grain in poor shape, receiver says

BRADY, Texas (AP) — Some grains stored in a defunct cooperative's elevator are in such poor shape they are unsalable, says the court-appointed receiver.

Ed R. Whitesides of Austin also told a state district judge Friday that grain still is missing, although some grain not previously inventoried was found in the elevator in this North Central Texas town.

Whitesides, a retired Texas Department of Agriculture official, was given responsibility for liquidating the grain in early June.

Commissioner reports on AIDS, agent orange

AUSTIN (AP) — State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein said Saturday 20 cases of the rare disease AIDS have been reported in Texas this year, but he indicated that figure does not accurately reflect the extent of the problem.

Bernstein also reported to the State Health Board on Agent Orange and refugees coming into Texas.

Dr. C.E. Gibbs of San Antonio urged the board to make "low-weight" babies a priority issue in its public health efforts.

Gibbs said a proposed program to reduce the number of low-weight babies from 14 to 11 per 1,000 population could save $125 million in health care costs by 1990.

Bernstein said since 1981, a total of 37 cases of AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — has been reported in Texas, "which nobody believes." Seventeen people in Texas have died from AIDS, which results from unknown causes.

Twenty cases have been reported this year, according to a written report from Dr. Jerome Greenberg, associate commissioner for preventable diseases, but he said, "Some treatment and research institutions, particularly in Houston, have a backlog of unreported cases which we expect to add to the total in the next two or three weeks.

Inspector acquitted

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Jurors in the second trial of a former U.S. Occupational Health and Safety Administration inspector have acquitted him of charges he attempted to solicit a bribe.

Robert Jandrucko, 35, denied that he called William spivey, owner of Eutectic Metals Co. in Fort Worth, that year and offered documents in exchange for gold.

Clore to be sentenced for attempted murder

HOUSTON (AP) — Billy Ray Clore faces a possible two to twenty years in prison after a jury found him guilty of attempted murder for shooting his comatose father in the head.

Clore, 26, originally accused of murder in the death of his father, was convicted Friday on a lesser charge of attempted murder.

Prosecutors asked State District Judge Ted Poe to reduce the charge earlier in the day when they decided the cause of death of the elder Clore, who had suffered many ailments including kidney and heart disease, was uncertain.

Defense attorney Jack Zimmermann said he will ask the jury for probation when the punishment phase of the trial begins Monday.

Clore testified Thursday that he shot his father — his "best friend" — because he thought the comatose man was suffering.

"I walked in the (nursing home) room and stood there and looked at my father," he said. "I said a prayer. I prayed that I'd be forgiven for what I was about to do if it was wrong."

Clore said he believed his father, 62-year-old Robert Clore, had been brain-dead since November, when a heart attack left him comatose. When Zimmerman asked the defendant if he believed he had killed his father, Clore said, "I stopped him from breathing."

Zimmermann said Friday he thought prosecutors gained "a psychological advantage" when the charge was lessened. "They didn't have to brand him as a murderer," he said of the jury.

state in brief

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — An indictment accusing 21 men of operating a marijuana smuggling ring stemmed from an investigation into a 1981 triple murder here, federal authorities say.

The indictment alleges that more than 70,000 pounds of Mexican marijuana was smuggled from Laredo to Dallas over two years beginning in August 1980.

Five of the 21 men indicted are in the Webb County Jail, two are in jail in Dallas, several others are in state and federal institutions serving sentences on unrelated charges and the rest are fugitives in the United States and Mexico.

Utility wants rate increase

DALLAS (AP) — If Dallas Power & Light Co. receives a $104.8 million rate increase, residential customers' bills will rise an average of $12.50 monthly, company officials say.

DP&L filed the rate increase request Friday with the Public Utility Commission in Austin.

The request represents a 14.4 percent increase in DP&L's combined annual residential and commercial income.

Judge blocks computer purchase

AUSTIN (AP) — A state judge has ruled that the state mental health agency broke the law by trying to buy $2 million worth of computer equipment without taking competitive bids.

District Judge Joe Hart granted a temporary injunction Friday that stops the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation from buying IBM computers and computer programs without seeking bids.

The 29-acre ranch, which had been listed in the $900,000 range for five months, was sold Friday to Dallas-based Discipleship Counseling Services Inc., said Carolyn Shamis, a broker at the real estate firm DDA Carsha Inc.

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecast for Sunday predicts showers for parts of New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Indiana. Showers are also forecast for Texas.

Chance of showers remain slim

While dry and dusty Midland may receive some shelter from burning rays with partly cloudy skies through Monday, the chance of rain remains slim with only a 20 percent possibility of thunderstorms forecast for late this afternoon and tonight.

Temperatures will continue to rise with highs today and Monday climbing into the middle 90s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The low tonight should drop near 70.

Winds will be from the south at 10-20 mph today.

Friday's high of 98 missed the record high of 101, set in 1980, by only three degrees. The overnight low of 71 was 11 degrees warmer than the record low of 60, set in 1936.

Shiite strike closes many Beirut shops

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A general strike by Shiite Moslems protesting the army crackdown on their militiamen closed many stores in Beirut Saturday and paralyzed the port city of Tyre. A young Shiite was killed by Israeli gunfire as demonstrators were being dispersed.

The strike virtually shut down Baalbek, where Iranian revolutionary guards and Lebanese followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini hold sway in the Syrian-occupied Bekaa Valley.

Syria's government-controlled news media declared its support for the Shiite protest and for the first time criticized Lebanese President Amin Gemayel by name.

"He has lost his legitimacy. He represents only the fascist party," a Syrian television commentator said, referring to the Gemayel family's right-wing Christian Phalange Party.

The regime of Syrian President Hafez Assad was angered by the Lebanese army's quelling of defiant Shiite militiamen in Beirut's old Jewish quarter on Friday.

On Friday, a Lebanese official quoted by state radio and television stations in Beirut said Gemayel had signed the troop withdrawawl agreement that Lebanon had reached with Israel May 17, clearing the way for an exchange of ratification documents. But Information Minister Roger Shikhani denied the report.

Tax base affected by decision

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

July 5 the U.S. Supreme Court struck a blow that was felt all the way to Midland. By a 6-2 vote, the court limited the ability of local districts to tax bank securities. While Roland Wilkinson, chief appraiser for the Midland County Appraisal District, tried for more than a week to get a copy of the ruling and determine its impact to the county, speculation and misinformation caused growing concern.

The decision stated local taxing authorities cannot include federal securities when calculating taxes of bank stock. Such a measure conflicts with federal laws prohibiting the taxation of government securities such as Treasury bills and federal bonds. The ruling will affect nearly every major city in Texas, as well as five states with similar taxes.

The measure will reduce the county tax base by over $94 million dollars this year, according to the appraiser. The valuation of bank stock based on the old formula was $135.5 million, but that figure is now $36.4 million.

Wilkinson said the six taxing units in Midland County — city, county, Midland and Greenwood school districts, Midland College and Midland Memorial Hospital — would receive the same amount of tax revenues, but that taxpayers may see an increase in the effective tax rate.

"We really won't know the full impact until the effective tax rate is calculated, and that won't come until we receive the final valuation figures (about Aug. 1)," Wilkinson said. "I think the effect should be minimal. It's a very small percentage of the overall tax roll. The bank portion is less than 1 percent of the total tax roll in Midland County.

"Most of the loss will be made up in new improvements," he continued. "We had over $300 million worth of new improvement valuations this year alone."

The most worrisome aspect of the ruling is whether or not it is retroactive. "There was no mandate received from the Supreme Court decision or state law that would require us to refund those tax monies," Wilkinson said. "No bank is eligible for past taxes if it did not pursue litigation over the matter for the tax year in question. That rules out all but two of our banks here."

Western State Bank filed suit against the appraisal district over the taxation policy in 1979, 1980 and 1981. Commercial Bank and Trust, now Texas American Bank, filed a similar suit in 1980 and 1981. Wilkinson was not sure how much money might be subject to refund.

"That is something the courts would have to decide. It's not known at this time how much, if any, of the money they could get back.

"I would be very surprised to see any of th banks requesting a refund from taxing units," h continued. "I think such action would place a almost unbearable burden on the tax units which are already experiencing losses in reve nue.

"The banks here have been so good," he added "Only two of them have sued. Where I came fro in Lubbock everyone one of them sued back t 1979, and all those taxes may have to b refunded."

Officials at Western State Bank and Texa American Bank could not be reached for com ment on whether or not they intended to pursu litigation, however one last week said five or si local banks had joined in a suit to regain pas taxes.

Currently, banks are the only corporations tha have their stocks taxed. With the Supreme Court ruling, according to one bank official, banks ca now avoid the tax altogether by matching th amount of money in their capital accounts wit purchases of federal securities. Because of tha possibility, the State Property Tax Board and the Texas Associations of Appraisal Districts wil need to come up with a new formula or an alter nate tax. Wilkinson said, even bringing up the possibility that it may be abolished altogether by the legislature.

DWI laws could curb problem

Spurred by growing public concern and groups like Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, the legislature "codified what we've been doing here for about a year," said Henderson. "But what used to be optional is now mandatory."

Among the changes Henderson "practically prayed for" is raising the maximum fine for a first offense to $2,000; it used to be $500.

The increase will allow prosecutors to "start getting the attention of drunk drivers without having to put them in jail," he noted. "Jurors generally don't like to jail someone for DWI, apparently because they feel there but for the grace of God go I."

As the number of a person's offenses goes up, so do the penalties. A second, non-injury violation, for example, can result in suspension of driving privileges for a full year. The old law offered a suspension range of 180 days to two years.

The new law also calls for a mandatory three days in jail as a condition of probation on second offenses.

Under provisions of the old law, probation generally meant not having to do jail time — even for second or third violations.

In addition, the new law gets completely away from probation not being considered a conviction.

Thus, drunken drivers will find that the probation they receive the first time around will be used to "enhance punishment" for subsequent violations.

A third, non-injury offense, calls for a mandatory 10 days in jail as a condition of probation.

When serious injury results from an alcohol-related accident, penalties are enhanced by increasing fines and jail time drastically.

For instance, a first-offense "aggravated DWI" means — among other things — a minimum of 30 days in jail as a condition of probation.

A third aggravated DWI can result in a five-year prison term and a fine of up to $5,000.

The new law also: tightens restrictions on acquiring occupational drivers licenses; allows for the confiscation of a habitual offenders vehicle; orders counties with populations of 25,000 or more to purchase video-taping equipment for the filming of DWI defendents when they are arrested; makes it a Class-B misdemeanor to knowingly let a person borrow your car if that person's license has been suspended for DWI; and mandates blood, breath or urine tests under certain, specified conditions — even if it means strapping the person down to obtain the sample.

A person cannot refuse to give a sample if the following conditions occur: a person is arrested for DWI or involuntary manslaughter; an accident has been caused which the officer believes is the result of a person's intoxication; at the time of arrest, the officer reasonably believes that a person has died or will die as a result of the accident; and the person voluntarily refuses the officer's request to give a sample.

When those four criteria are not met, a person is allowed to refuse such tests. Yet he or she will suffer an automatic suspension of their driving privileges — even if a trial results in acquittal of DWI charges or the defendent pleads guilty in return for probation.

But the new law provides that the refusal can be brought to the jury's attention during trial — something prosecutors are not allowed to do now.

"I think the new law will help cut down DWI-related deaths, injury and property damage. It will make prosecution more effective and uniform statewide," said Henderson. "I like it."

Police probing three burglaries

Police Roundup

Midland police were investigating three burglaries Saturday.

Mary Moss Jackson, 1300 Cottonflat Road No. 28, reported a burglary at the same address. Taken was a television set valued at $599.95. Entry apparently was gained through a backdoor between 8:50 p.m. Friday and 12:45 a.m. Saturday.

Karl Steven Hockenhull, of 1214 E. Cedar, reported the burglary of his residence at 9:20 a.m. Taken was a tape recorder, phone, three television sets, a microwave and a calulator. Total value was placed at $1,140.

The burglary of an automobile was reported by Alan Dawson of 909 N. Loraine. The burglary apparently took place between 10 p.m. Friday and 7 a.m. Saturday while it was parked at 710 W. Ohio. Taken was an eight-track stereo and a bicycle. Total value was placed at $200.

Andrews man killed in mishap

ANDREWS — An Andrews man was killed and two others were injured following a one-vehicle rollover in the 100 block of Southeast Avenue A in Andrews about 6 p.m. Saturday.

Owner of the vehicle Barry David Hilliard, 21, was pronounced dead at the scene by Andrews County Justice of the Peace Rusty Bartley.

The driver, Daniel Carl Thomas, 23, was admitted for observation at Permian General Hospital. According to a spokeswoman at the hospital, Thomas was still undergoing treatment at 10 p.m. for undisclosed injuries.

The third passenger, a 15-year-old male from California who was staying with relatives in Andrews, was treated and released with a cracked upper left arm.

No other details were available.

Chemical plant may be sold

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Executives of El Paso Products Co. say that they are considering selling their Odessa chemical operation.

"The management of El Paso has decided to explore possible opportunities for the sale of the chemical operations. Any further developments will be reported," EPPC spokesman Jim Collins said Friday afternoon.

Collins did not elaborate and gave no reason for the proposed sale.

The company's Odessa operations have been pared down slowly since last summer when its butadiene plant was closed. EPPC's ammonia plant was shut down in January 1983 following an explosion.

When the butadiene and ammonia production plants wre closed, an company spokesman cited soft demand for petrochemicals and plastics as the reason for shutting down the operations.

About 1,200 people are employed at the Odessa refinery where the company makes chemical products and plastic resins.

Woman treated for stab wounds

A 32-year-old Midland woman was being treated for stab wounds to the neck after an incident at Illinois Avenue and Lee Street, across from Price's Bar, 903 E. Illinois.

Ernestine Marion, whose address was listed as Airline Mobile Park, on West Highway 80, was undergoing treatment and her condition was unknown, according to a spokeswoman at the Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room.

Armenian conflict simmers in California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A telephone rings in a local newsroom. An Armenian caller claims responsibility for a murder halfway around the world, in what has become an international war of terror against Turks by Armenians who want to even a decades-old score.

The conflict began in the Middle East during World War I, when Armenians say 1.8 million of their countrymen were massacred by the Turks. But its focus is now Los Angeles — with the largest Armenian population outside Turkey — where Armenians vow to continue their struggle until the Turkish government acknowledges its guilt.

Violence surged again last week with Friday's deadly bombing at a Turkish Airlines counter at Orly Airport in Paris, which killed six people. The day before, a Turkish diplomat was assassinated in Brussels, Belgium.

But the bloodshed began here a decade ago. On Jan. 28, 1973, Armenian immigrant Gourgen M. Yanikian invited Mehmet Baydar, Turkish consul-general in Los Angeles, and Bahadir Demir, vice consul, to a hotel near Santa Barbara, then shot them to death.

Yanikian's conviction and imprisonment touched off a decade of assassinations, car bombings and protests. Since 1973, Armenian terrorists have claimed responsibility for 27 murders of Turkish officials and relatives.

A 20-year-old Armenian faces trial this fall in the January 1982 murder of Turkish consul-general Kemal Arikan, 54. Other Armenian nationals have been charged with planting bombs recently at Los Angeles International Airport and at private homes.

Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies also are investigating a spectacular car bombing that killed an Armenian businessman in residential Marina del Rey on Thursday. However, no political motive has been established.

The city's 225,000-member Armenian community is second only to Yerevan, capital of the Armenian Soviet Socialist Republic on Turkey's northeast border.

In wake of airport bombing, Armenians make more threats

PARIS (AP) — Armenian terrorists warned of more bloody attacks against Turkish targets Saturday following the Orly Airport bombing that killed six people, including a French child and a man with dual U.S.-Greek citizenship.

A statement left at the Athens office of the French news agency Agence France-Presse said the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia would "continue to attack all political, economic and touristic institutions which represent the interests of the Turkish authorities," AFP reported in Paris.

Although Friday's bombing was clearly aimed at Turkish Airlines and its passengers at Orly, the savagery of the attack could signal a new phase in ASALA's tactics to avenge the massacre of Armenians in Turkey between 1894 and 1915. Armenian groups say 1.5 million of their people wer slain, but Turkey says the number is much smaller.

In Helsinki talks, OPEC not expected to focus on prices

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

Peace keeping, not price cutting, will preoccupy OPEC oil ministers when they open their summer strategy session Monday in Helsinki, Finland, analysts say.

That means the price of gasoline and other fuels made from crude oil should hold steady, at least through the summer, after having risen a bit over the past four months.

After cutting their price by 15 percent last March, to $29 a barrel, the ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will face virtually no pressure in Helsinki to reduce prices further.

Instead, they probably will reaffirm the March survival plan and try to avoid the kind of internal bickering that ruined a similar scheme a year ago. It took two weeks of acrimonious meetings to reach March's agreement.

The plan limits oil exports by OPEC members to prevent prices from dropping, and if it fell apart in Helsinki, the cartel could be thrown into perhaps the greatest crisis of its 23 years. Few analysts believe, however, that OPEC ministers will risk such a nightmare.

"I think it will be the calmest meeting they've had in quite a while," said Dillard Spriggs, president of Petroleum Analysis Ltd., a consulting firm in New York.

Analysts see little chance of OPEC changing the system of production sharing and individual quotas adopted last March.

"The leaders of OPEC are acutely aware of the provocative nature of reopening the issue of individual production quotas," said William Randol, an international energy analyst at the investment firm of First Boston Corp.

Last July, when the OPEC ministers could not agree how to rejigger their production-sharing plan, several members, desperate for money, began flooding the market with oil. Their actions backfired.

The glutted condition of the market allowed oil prices to sink even lower, and by March OPEC was forced to cut its base price for the first time. To try to avoid future price cuts, the members adopted the production-sharing plan and vowed to honor it as long as needed.

So far they have, with one or two exceptions. As a result, the ministers may do little more in Helsinki than crow about their four-month success.

The world price of oil has risen slightly since March, allowing most OPEC members to sell as much oil as they are permitted by the March accord. An exception is Iraq, whose sales are hampered by its war with Iran.

The price of Saudi Arabia's top crude oil, for example, is selling in the spot market — where single cargoes are sold by middlemen — for about $29 a barrel. That is a gain of $1 since March. Other crudes have risen more.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Women will become major force in upcoming elections

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In past years, women's political groups have talked a lot about women's issues.

At the meeting of the National Women's Political Caucus in San Antonio this month, there was some talk about women's issues.

Those issues included such things as health care, national defense and U.S. foreign policy.

State Treasurer Ann Richards, who attended the caucus and received the Texas Women's Political Caucus award as "Woman of the Year," agrees that there is a new emphasis and tone in politics where women are concerned and that the caucus meeting reflected that.

"There's a lot of big press talk about the gender gap," Ms. Richards notes. "It really doesn't mean anything new...Women, in voting as in all other aspects of their lives, are becoming more independent, and are voting what they feel, instead of what they think some man wants them to do...That doesn't mean just husbands, either. It can be bosses...," Ms. Richards says.

What is happening, she concludes, "is that we are seeing the realization of what we have idealized in America: American independence."

And male politicians are taking women very seriously, as shown by the appearance of five Democratic presidential contenders at the San Antonio meeting.

All five have said they would consider a woman for vice president and would name women to key cabinet posts.

Obviously, those candidates believe women will be a major force in upcoming elections and the women at the caucus would agree.

Ms. Richards feels this year's caucum meeting points up the change which has occurred in the group and in the women's political movement.

"It was really an interesting experience," she says, "having gone through a number of years with these old associations.

"There used to be a lot of internal fighting — over who was going to be the sixth vice president of the caucus rather than who's going to be the vice president of the United States.

"These women are all generally politically sophisticated. They're not coming together for the purpose of venting their own frustration; they're tyring to see what can be done to help each other, and to help men who are sympathetic to what they feel."

One thing those attending the caucus seemed to feel strongly about was removing Ronald Reagan from the presidency.

Since Reagan hasn't officially become a candidate, he wasn't invited to address the caucus. But he was much discussed and not favorably.

Kathy Wilson, a Republican who chaired the caucus, urged Reagan not to run again, "for the sake of American women, Republicans, Democrats and independents."

The one thing clear from the San Antonio meeting," Ms. Richards says, "is that they (caucus members) do not support Ronald Reagan."

"I was stunned," she adds, "at the total concensus of that attitude. The Republican women were the strongest in their opposition...It was unbelievable."

The one thing missing at the session, Ms. Richards feels, was sufficient discussion on coalition building, how women "are going to increase their communication with other so-called voting groups."

"I think," she says, "that's really the next step in the process."

The caucus session, she believes, points up the fact that "you are not going to be able to point at an issue and say, 'Aha! That is a woman's issue."

"That...is part of the sophistication women have achieved. Women's issues are, across the board, what every other human issues are..."

"It has generally fallen to the woman elected official to deal with questions such as child care or garnishment of wages for child support."

The garnishment issue, Ms. Richards notes, is a traditional woman's issue, with legislation on that topic being carried in the 1983 Legislature by two men, Rep. Rene Oliveira, D-Brownsville, and Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls.

Activity by women in political races, Ms. Richards sas, will be on the basis of issues and candidates. But "you're going to see that women are no more idential in their philosophy than are men."

But, she adds, "when you see that women across political and philosophical lines agree, then you are dealing with one powerful force."

Tapes released of extortion suspect

DALLAS (AP) — Area radio and television stations have been asked to play tape recordings of a man who called Exxon USA's office here during an extortion scheme involving bombs planted at four service stations.

The FBI made the request in an effort to identify the man, who gives instructions for an air drop of gold coins the extortionist had demanded.

The voice recorded on the tapes is not that of a man who has been subpoenaed to testify before a federal grand jury, FBI spokesman Joe Hersley said Friday.

"We know him (the man subpoenaed)," Hersley said. "We don't know the man on the tapes. There are two different people."

Federal trial to investigate Pentagon operations on Korean War POWs

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Pentagon may have withheld for three decades evidence suggesting that 389 American soldiers classified as missing in action in the Korean War were actually prisoners left behind when the shooting stopped, according to documents in a federal trial that begins this week.

The two sides — the Army and a Canterbury, Conn., man searchng for a brother who never returned from Korea — have traded allegations of fabricated evidence and a coverup.

The trial in U.S. District Court begins Tuesday and will likely touch on the sensitive relationship in 1953 between demands for the release of American prisoners of war and negotiations to end the war.

Robert Dumas — who has been searching since then for his brother, Roger, an Army private listed first as missing in action and later as presumed dead — feels the U.S. government may have accepted an end to the war at the expense of a few hundred of its servicemen.

Dumas' suit, filed against current Army Secretary John O. Marsh Jr., asserts the Army acted unfairly and in bad faith in denying POW status to his brother, who was reportedly seen in North Korean Prison Camp No. 5 in April 1953.

DUMAS PROMISED HIS DYING mother to keep searching until he got his brother back, dead or alive. If the government cannot prove his brother is dead, Dumas says, they should classify him a POW.

Over the years, Dumas has enlisted the aid of presidents, senators and generals in his battle. He asserts that in 94 trips to Washington he has uncovered maps, charts and references to debriefings of released POWs that prove the military knew soldiers were left behind.

The possibility the government knew more than it was telling was bolstered by one-page data sheets on the 389 missing men that were released by the Justice Department as part of the lawsuit.

The summary sheets, classified when written in 1954, were based on debriefings with hundreds of repatriated POWs, intelligence reports, military command reports, letters from POWs, International Red Cross reports and enemy propaganda broadcasts and publications. The actual debriefings remain classified.

Crane vows to remain in office

DANVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Rep. Dan Crane cried Saturday as he said he was sorry he hurt his family by having an affair with a 17-year-old congressional page, but vowed to remain in office.

"I have no plans to resign," said Crane, a conservative, three-term Illinois Republican. "In no way did I violate my oath of office."

The House Ethics Committee revealed Thursday that Crane had admitted under oath to having sexual relations with a 17-year-old female page in 1980. The panel recommended a reprimand for him.

Crane flew to Illinois shortly after the announcement, and went into seclusion with his wife and six children. He had been unavailable for comment until the news conference.

"The reason I didn't get to you earlier was I wanted a chance to talk with my wife and family," Crane said in the 90-second news conference outside his local congressional office.

"These have been the hardest days of my life," Crane said, tears running down his face and his voice quavering. "I am paying the price today. I have broken a law of God, and I can only ask for God's forgiveness, my wife's forgiveness, my family's forgiveness, and my friends.'"

"I know I did wrong. I made a mistake," Crane said. "I didn't want to bring any pain to my wife and family, which I have done. I am sorry."

Mrs. Crane, who has stayed at their Danville home with their children during his terms in Washington, stood next to him but showed no emotion and said nothing.

Crane refused to answer questions and left immediately after issuing his statement. An aide said he had no idea when Crane would appear in public again.

"I hope you'll understand that I'd like to leave now without being pursued by any other questions," said Crane.

Earlier, Crane's father said his son had visited him but had said little about his admission.

"He just said he was sorry," Dr. George Crane said Friday in an interview at his home near Hillsboro, Ind., adding that he believed that at least half the members of Congress had engaged in sex outside marriage. He called Washington the "Sodom ... of today," a city where alcohol and sex cannot be controlled.

Criticism of Reagan serves as warning

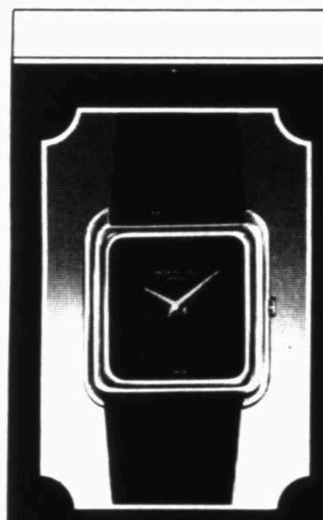

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The NAACP hurled criticism at the Reagan administration last week as a reminder that the president is again in danger of forfeiting the black electorate if he seeks another term.

The dissatisfaction expressed by executive director Benjamin L. Hooks and others at the association's convention was deep and specific, ranging from a black unemployment rate double that of the general population to the administration's stands against busing and quotas.

Shark caught in river

SAND SPRINGS, Okla. (AP) — Randy Ray probably pulled up more than he bargained for while fishing at the Arkansas River — a salt water shark.

State Wildlife and Conservation Officials said the 3-foot, 7-pound shark probably was released in the freshwater river either by an aquarium owner or someone who returned with it from a fishing trip to the Gulf Coast.

Voting on successor scheduled

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The California chapter of the National Organization for Women voted Saturday for new officers, including a successor to president Ginny Foat, who is accused of murder.

Results of the voting by about 500 delegates attending the two-day convention were to be announced Sunday.

Ms. Foat has been on leave of absence from her $18,500-a-year post as president of the state group since shortly after her arrest Jan. 11 in the 1965 New Orleans slaying of an Argentine businessman. She is free on $125,000 bail and was scheduled to lead a workshop entitled "Building Blocks to Feminism," part of an overall convention theme of "Women on the Rise."

Vessel searches for Titantic

NEW YORK (AP) — A research team looking for the wreck of the Titanic headed out into the North Atlantic on Saturday, aiming for a spot where an earlier expedition photographed an object that may be the sunken liner's propeller.

Led by Texas millionaire Jack Grimm, the Columbia University team left Halifax, Nova Scotia, at dawn aboard a research ship. They hoped to reach the target Sunday night.

The university's ship, the 208-foot Robert D. Conrad, is equipped with side-scan sonar, a powerful magnetometer to detect metal and underwater cameras. It is scheduled to search for five days before returning to Halifax.

Grimm said the search will focus on a canyon two miles beneath the surface, on the edge of the continental shelf, where the object was photographed in the last hours of the 1981 expedition.

Watt praises dam construction

GRAND COULEE, Wash. (AP) — Grand Coulee Dam is a monument to those who were willing to fight for a massive energy and reclamation project in the face of strong opposition, Interior Secretary James Watt said Saturday.

At a ceremony marking the 50th anniversary of the start of the dam's construction, Watt told a crowd of about 4,000 that it represented "power to improve the quality of life, power to provide for our national defense, power to create the jobs, power to make our nation great."

Watt said the Columbia Basin Project has succeeded beyond the dreams of its early proponents, irrigating over a half million acres and producing power valued at $1.8 billion over 42 years.

FBI investigating bombings

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Two bombers struck another Marine Midland Bank automatic teller early Saturday, and the FBI is investigating whether the same pair is responsible for explosions in Albany and Dallas.

Thieves broke into the bank's Pittsford branch Saturday about 12:30 a.m. and managed to blow open the automatic teller's vault, but apparently fled without taking any money, George Mahoney, agent in charge of the FBI's Rochester office, said Saturday.

Klan leader faces possible jail term

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The imperial wizard of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, faces a possible jail term this week because he refuses to give a black civil rights group a list of his members.

Bill Wilkinson, 40-year-old head of the Klan group, heads for Birmingham, Ala., on Wednesday to face U.S. District Judge E. B. Halton Jr. in a contempt of court proceeding.

Halton has ordered Wilkinson to give a list of his members to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The Invisible Empire, one of several Klan groups, already is out of the closet to some extent. It made public its constitution, bylaws and ceremonies a week ago, ending 118 years of secrecy.

Among other things, its revised constitution forbids any member "to conceal his face with a mask in any public gathering. Masks may be worn for ceremonial purposes in a meeting for members only ..."

White House gets back to normal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's aides, conceding there have been some "rough days" since revelations about the 1980 Reagan campaign first surfaced, say factionalism and backbiting inside the White House have abated.

"We're back to our normal sour selves," quipped one White House official. "Things started snapping back into place early (last) week."

In recent weeks, several Reagan administration officials apparently have been consumed with the issues surrounding how the 1980 Reagan campaign obtained Carter's briefing papers for a Carter-Reagan debate in October 1980.

Various White House factions developed, resulting in whispers and leaks to reporters. But as public attention has dwindled somewhat, the matter is taking up less time at the White House, aides say.

Meanwhile, the Justice Department and the House Civil Service and Post Office subcommittee are continuing their separate investigations into the matter.

"I sense a little more coming together," said one White House aide, contrasting that to the extreme factionalism evident in recent weeks. This aide, like others, talked only on condition he remain anonymous.

"There have been times during the week when things would come up," said an aide. "But it's now taking much less time. People are still concerned that we be as fully cooperative, but on a day-to-day basis, other issues are now taking more time."

He acknowledged things were a lot better than they had been, saying, "There were some rough days before this week."

So far, there have been no resignations or firings in the case.

Ambassador: World must assist Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel's new U.S. ambassador says the partial withdrawal of Israeli troops should strengthen rather than weaken Lebanon, but also insists there is a global responsibility to keep Lebanon free from outside control.

"What the world must ensure is the independence of Lebanon," Ambassador Meir Rosenne said in an interview in his office Friday. "This is a chance for this country to regain its territorial integrity, its political independence."

He said fulfilling that responsibility could mean sending additional members of the international peacekeeping force to assist the Lebanese army following the partial withdrawal of Israeli troops.

In discussing a partial withdrawal of Israeli troops, he said, "Israel will do everything possible to ensure that by redeploying its forces, we will increase the chances of Lebanon once again becoming an independent state."

Meanwhile, Lebanon's foreign minister, Elie Salem, said after a meeting with Secretary of State George P. Shultz Saturday that he is "absolutely confident" a complete withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon will occur.

Ideas to achieve that are still being discussed with Washington, Salem said. Lebanese President Amin Gemayel will visit here next week for talks with President Reagan and Shultz.

The Romanian-born Rosenne, who has been ambassador since May, said U.S.-Israeli relations are once again on a sound footing after hitting a low point following Israel's invasion of Lebanon in June 1982.

One example of the improved relationship is the scheduled visit by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin on July 27. An earlier visit was put off by Washington until Israel had agreed to withdraw its troops from Lebanon.

Rosenne said "there was a lot of exaggeration" about the differences.

But he said Israel's acceptance of a U.S.-sponsored agreement for the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon, coupled with Syria's refusal to agree to pull out its troops, has underscored for Americans the value of the relationship with Israel.

"You have ample proof as to who wants peace and who doesn't want peace in the Middle East," he said.

Rosenne declined to answer when asked if Reagan's Sept. 1 peace initiative for the Middle East, which Israel rejected, is now dead. But he said Israel doesn't think that "any plan that comes from the outside" can lead to a solution of the Arab-Israeli dispute.

"Israel is ready to negotiate with any Arab state peace with no preconditions," he said.

U.S. officials say Jordan indirectly helped pave the way for smoother U.S.-Israeli relations by refusing to join peace talks as proposed by Reagan. Had Jordan stepped forward, Washington would now be putting heavy pressure on Israel to also negotiate, and relations might still be in a difficult stage, they say.

But these officials say the chief reason relations have improved is that both nations have worked hard to bring it about following the ouster of defense minister Ariel Sharon, whose relations with Washington were described as acrimonious at best.

Moshe Arens, who was U.S. ambassador, returned to Israel to become defense minister, while Rosenne, who was ambassador to France, succeeded Arens in Washington.

Rosenne, 52, emigrated to Israel from his native Romania at the age of 13. His diplomatic experience includes a period as the Israeli consul in New York City from from 1961 to 1967 and a key negotiating role in the 1979 Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty, which stemmed from the 1978 Camp David accords.

A State Department official said Shultz and Arens held several meetings before Arens returned to Israel at which they focused on ways to minimize misunderstandings.

An informal agreement emerged that Israel will consult before taking actions that could anger Washington, such as the Lebanese invasion and the bombing of the Iraqi nuclear reactor, said the official who asked to remain anonymous.

One result has been the extensive consultations over the planned Israeli redeployment in Lebanon.

Lebanese minister says U.S. hasn't given up on Syria

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem said Saturday that American efforts to persuade Syria to withdraw its troops from Lebanon are still alive.

"The United States has not run into a dead end," Salem said of U.S. attempts to convince Syrian President Hafez al-Assad to remove his country's forces.

Emerging from a meeting at the State Department with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Salem told reporters new efforts will be made to break the current diplomatic impasse.

Salem and Shultz met to pave the way for discussions here next week between President Reagan and Lebanese President Amin Gemayel.

Salem said the two leaders will examine and refine a set of "specific ideas" to attain the total removal of all foreign troops from Lebanese soil.

Lippizaner stud farm open again

PIBER, Austria (AP) — The Lippizaner stud farm, closed nearly five months by a killer herpes virus, reopened Saturday to the music of a brass band and applause from hundreds of visitors eager for a glimpse of the majestic white dancing horses.

Federal veterinary officials imposed a quarantine shortly after the epidemic struck in February, killing eight brood mares and 31 foals on the farm which supplies stallions for the Spanish Riding School in Vienna.

"We hope nothing like this will ever occur here again," said veterinarian Othmar Schmehlik in an impromptu speech to about 400 visitors at the 185-year-old farm.

Two mares still suffering from the disease — equine rhino-pneumonitis — "are improving constantly" he said.

The festive opening, complete with free glasses of the local white wine, was meant as "an expression of the local population's relief that the epidemic is conquered" said Reinhold Scheuche, a councilman of nearby Koeflach.

The local volunteer band played traditional tunes. Applause greeted each group of horses as they were led to a meadow walled in by the crowd. Most of the animals were mares, but among them were three of the majestic stallions best known for their dancing performances at Vienna's 18th-century Spanish Riding School.

"This is great," said tourist Mike Solberg, 17, of Kenosha, Wis., as the horses, each bearing the Piber brand of a crown on its left flank, filed past under the sweltering summer sky.

Schmehlik said visitors will no longer be allowed to touch the animals, either at the farm or at the former Hapsburg riding school in the capital.

He said the no-contact rule was decided on "to prevent the transmission of other types of diseases from man to animal," even though it has been determined that the herpes was spread by genitally infected studs.

Visitors will still be allowed into the Piber stables, housing about 160 Lippizaner mares and foals.

Outlining other protective measures, Schmehlik said stallions from abroad will be put to stud at the 1,408-acre farm in southeastern Austria, to strengthen genetic resistance to the disease.

Before, only Austrian Lippizaners were bred for the riding school, a practice that was criticized as weakening the horses' resistance by inbreeding.

A breeding halt was ordered shortly after the disease struck but was lifted in late May when five stallions were put to stud. Schmehlik feared the number of foals born next spring will be substantially below normal because of the time lost.

"About 25 brood mares are now pregnant with a week to go in the breeding season," he said. About 50 mares become pregnant during a normal season.

Six thousand demonstrators link up U.S., Soviet embassies

LONDON (AP) — About 6,000 anti-nuclear demonstrators linked arms to form a human chain nearly two miles long between the American and Soviet embassies Saturday to mark the 38th anniversary of the first atomic bomb test.

The chain stretched from Grosvenor Square, site of the U.S. Embassy, across the north side of Hyde Park to the Soviet mission in Kensington Palace Gardens. Police estimated 6,000 people participated.

In London, two balloons marked "Fragile, Handle With Care" were passed from hand to hand across the human chain. Spokeswoman Alison Whyte of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament said they were symbols of "the superpowers capacity to destroy the world many times over."

Worldwatch to grade nations

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to supply timely information on worldwide resources, a non-profit research institute said Saturday it will issue an annual "report card" grading countries on how well they are doing in such areas as population control, energy conservation, and food production.

The eight-year-old Worldwatch Institute said it hoped the report would spread information on resource programs between countries so that successes in one part of the world can be duplicated elsewhere.

"Though many countries are being overwhelmed by population problems, Thailand has made remarkable recent success in reducing birth rates and its imaginative programs could be instructive to others," said Lester Brown, president of Worldwatch.

Brown said the report would also praise such things as the breakthrough being made in California in the generation of electricity by windmills and the efforts Norway has made toward recycling by requiring a deposit tax on automobiles.

South Africa tightens borders

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — South Africa says it has tightened controls at its borders with Lesotho and has arrested a Lesotho paramilitary officer.

Foreign Minister Pik Botha also said in a statement Friday night that Lesotho had detained a South African police officer who was working in Lesotho as a soccer coach.

Botha also said it appeared the Lesotho security forces had been instructed to spy on and take action against its citizens in South Africa. He said two members of the paramilitary force from Lesotho skirmished with police in South Africa on Monday.

One of them was arrested after it was discovered he had an automatic assault rifle under civilian dress, Botha said. The other man escaped.

China denounces arms sales

PEKING (AP) — China on Saturday denounced U.S. plans to sell $530 million worth of arms to Taiwan, seat of the rival Nationalist Chinese government.

The "new package showed once again that the Reagan administration wants to continue the arms sale to Taiwan on a large scale," the official Xinhua news agency said in a dispatch from Washington.

The package, announced Friday by the Pentagon, includes 792 air defense missiles and equipment to modernize Taiwan's tanks.

China maintains that any arms sales to Taiwan amount to interference in China's internal affairs and hinder efforts for peaceful reunification.

Five people killed in Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Three men shot five people to death as they slept and wounded four others at Pulau Timba Timba, island, about 20 miles off the east Malaysian town of Semporna, Borneo island, the National News Agency reported Saturday.

It quoted Sabah State Police Chief Commissioner Yahya Yeop Ishak as saying the dead and injured were from two or three families who had moved to the island about five weeks ago.

They were believed to have come illegally from a neighboring country, he said, but he did not identify the country, according to the news report.

Government employees strike

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Hundred of thousands of government employees went on strike Saturday, paralyzing offices in Andhra Pradesh, to protest the policies of N.T. Rama Rao, chief minister of the southern Indian state of 60 million people, United News of India said.

News reports from Hyderabad, the state capital 850 miles south of New Delhi, said 600,000 workers, including clerks, guards, medical staff and printing press employees, stopped work after negotiations between union leaders and the government were deadlocked.

The strikers want withdrawal of recent curbs on trade union rights of employees and restoration of the retirement age to 58, from 55.

Seven killed in bus crash

UDINE, Italy (AP) — A bus packed with Austrian tourists swerved across a highway while rounding a curve and collided head on with a truck Saturday, police said. Seven people, including two small children, were killed in the crash in this northern Italian city.

The dead were from Vienna. Police said three people, including both drivers, were injured in the early morning crash.

One of two 4-year-olds killed, police said, was the bus driver's son. The parents of the other dead child, a girl, were killed.

Prostitutes get sewing machines

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The government in Jogjakarta, central Java, has donated 25 sewing machines to former prostitutes to help them make a living, the official Antara news agency reported Saturday.

The prostitutes have had vocational training from the government.

The agency said the machines were distributed to groups of five or six prostitutes.

Sudanese official comes to U.S.

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Sudanese First Vice President Omar el-Tayeb departed Saturday for a two week visit to the United States to meet with U.S. officials, the Sudan news agency reported.

Sudan receives U.S. economic and military aid.

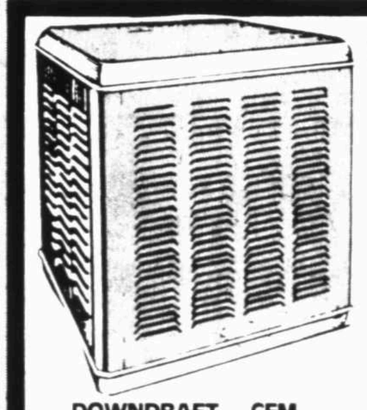

Units of the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force will hold military exercises with Sudanese troops next month. Similar joint maneuvers will take place at the same time in Egypt, Oman and Somalia.

Contadora summit shows concern over widening wars

By ISAAC A. LEVI

An Analysis

CANCUN, Mexico (AP) — The Contadora Group's first summit, being held in Cancun this weekend, dramatizes the region's deep concern that current guerrilla violence in Central America may soon escalate into a regional war.

Presidents Miguel de la Madrid of Mexico, Ricardo de la Espriella of Panama, Luis Herrera Campins of Venezuela and Belisario Betancur of Colombia scheduled the meeting as reports increased that an armed conflict between Nicaragua and Honduras is imminent. Previous meetings have been at the foreign-minister level.

"It is a grave situation, no doubt," said one diplomat who, like most others here, spoke on condition he not be identified.

The group takes its name from the Panamanian island where the four countries formed their organization in Jan. 5 to seek a regionally negotiated solution to the Central American conflicts. Contadora, which has the backing of the U.N. Security Council and most Latin American nations, is calling for an end to militarization and foreign intervention in the region.

Nicaragua, governed by leftists, and Honduras, whose conservative government the United States strongly supports, recently have moved more troops along their border.

THE TWO countries have exchanged increasingly harsh war threats and denounced border incursions since January, when Honduras-based Nicaraguan exiles began increasing their attacks on northern Nicaragua. This week, the rebels announced they will mount an offensive July 19 in another effort to overthrow Nicaragua's three-man Sandinista junta.

The target date of the "contras," as the rebels are called, is the fourth anniversary of the Sandinista revolution which overthrew Gen. Anastasio Somoza, the pro-American strongman whose family ran Nicaragua for 42 years.

The diplomats say that if incidents between Honduras and Nicaragua escalate, the violence will soon draw in El Salvador, where leftist guerrillas have been fighting to overthrow the U.S.-backed government since October 1979.

Nicaragua accuses the Reagan administration and Honduras of arming and training the rebels.

The Reagan administration accuses the Sandinistas of threatening peace in Central America by smuggling weapons to the Salvadoran guerrillas and building a huge army, far beyond Nicaragua's defense needs, with Soviet weapons and Cuban training.

The four Contadora countries are on the rim of the troubled region and fear an escalation of the fighting would worsen their problems.

GUATEMALA, WHICH has a guerrilla movement that has been fighting for power for two decades, is on Mexico's southern doorstep. More than 35,000 Guatemalan refugees have fled across the border and are living in refugee camps on the Mexican side.

Mexico and Venezuela are going through serious recessions because of lower oil prices, their principal source of export revenue, and domestic discontent is widespread.

Colombia has a leftist insurgency and the other three countries have vocal and influential leftist movements. Large segments of all four countries are extremely poor.

Panama borders Costa Rica, whose relations with Nicaragua have become increasingly tense. One of the Nicaraguan exile groups is based in San Jose, the Costa Rican capital, and the Nicaraguan rebels have expanded their fighting into a southern front near the Costa Rican border. Costa Rica has no army and has asked an international peacekeeping force to monitor that border.

Girl asks friend to come to U.S.

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Samantha Smith ended her visit to Leningrad Saturday by inviting her new Soviet playmate to come to the United States next summer.

"My parents have said its OK if she can come," Samantha explained after kissing Natasha Karina goodbye outside the Hermitage art museum.

Samantha's father, Arthur, hugged the 13-year-old Soviet girl. Samantha's mother, Jane, also wished Natasha a fond farewell.

Samantha, 11, of Manchester, Maine, arrived in the Soviet Union last week at the invitation of President Yuri V. Andropov, to whom she had written letters about her fear of nuclear war.

Natasha was the first person to welcome Samantha at a Young Pioneer camp last week in Artek, near Yalta in the Crimea, where they were constant companions.

Somalia: Ethiopia invading

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Somalia claimed that Ethiopian troops with air support invaded central Somalia at dawn Saturday and that there were many casualties.

There was no independent confirmation of the claim or a similar report by Ethiopia's official news media.

"All enemy invasions have been checked and heavy losses inflicted on them," the official Somali news agency, Sonna, quoted the Somali Defense Ministry as saying. Somalia has a military agreement with the United States, which supplied arms during fighting last summer with Ethiopia.

"The Defense Ministry states that (Ethiopian) ground and air attacks are still continuing," the agency added, but did not say when the government communique was issued.

Soldiers from Marxist Ethiopia penetrated three miles into Somalia at Mataban Qabno, in the Galguduud region, before they were "forced to retreat," Sonna said, again quoting the Defense Ministry.

The other place attacked was Dabad, in the Balambale area of Hiraan region, Sonna said in a dispatch telexed to Nairobi.

The areas said to be invaded are north and northeast of Mogadishu, the capital.

The two countries, traditional military rivals on the Horn of Africa, clashed in the 1977-78 over the Ogaden region of Ethiopia. Somalia started that war, which it lost when the Soviet Union switched support and armed Marxist Ethiopia, which was backed by Cuban soldiers.

Ethiopia and Somalia have clashed sporadically over the last 20 years, primarily over Ogaden.

The two nations last came to blows a year ago in the same regions Somalia claimed were attacked Saturday.

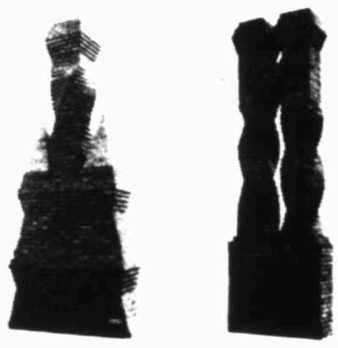

At the time, Ethiopia denied any direct role in the brief border conflict and said Somali rebels opposed to President Mohamed Siad Barre had clashed with Somali government troops.

Western and African diplomatic sources confirmed that Ethiopia, apparently with some Somali rebel support, captured two small border enclaves in July 1982, in the Hiraan and Galgaduud regions. Both are still held by Ethiopia, they say.

Romance is author's 'passion'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

When Parris Afton Bonds was 6, she typed her first novel. It was three chapters and took three pages.

Friday night, she finished her 12th romance novel and dropped it in the mail Saturday to her publisher.

A native of Dallas and resident of Hobbs, N.M., she appeared at J. Caviness in Permian Mall at Odessa Saturday for an autograph party. Dressed in pink and signing each book with a pink pen, she talked of her start in the field and bubbled advice to promising writers seeking the magic road to publication.

Parris Bonds

To their complaints of having a husband, a job or children to handle first before sitting down to write, she had an answer. Ms. Bonds has a husband and five boys ranging in age from 16 to 4. In the past five years she has turned out 12 books.

Before that, she was freelancing. The writer, who will turn 39 this week, inked her way into the field when the family was living in Mexico City. Her first story went to Modern Secretary magazine and it dealt with someone at the U.S. Embassy. Then she went the route of religious magazines.

"A lot of writers train in True Confessions," she said, "then go to religious magazines."

One day she heard Marty Robbons' song, "El Paso," and it sparked her first novel. Six months later it was finished, "but my heroine turned out entirely different than in the song."

She spent another six months selling it to a publisher and by that time, the second was written. "I sold two books within two weeks," she said brightly. With that, she thought she had the business sewn up. But it was five months before she could sell her third.

Ms. Bonds admits she lucked out on her first book. She had no agent, no previous novel writing experience. "They were desperate for books then." And when her books continued selling, her reputation grew. One is being picked up for a movie. And two, "Dust Devil" and "Deep Purple," have won awards.

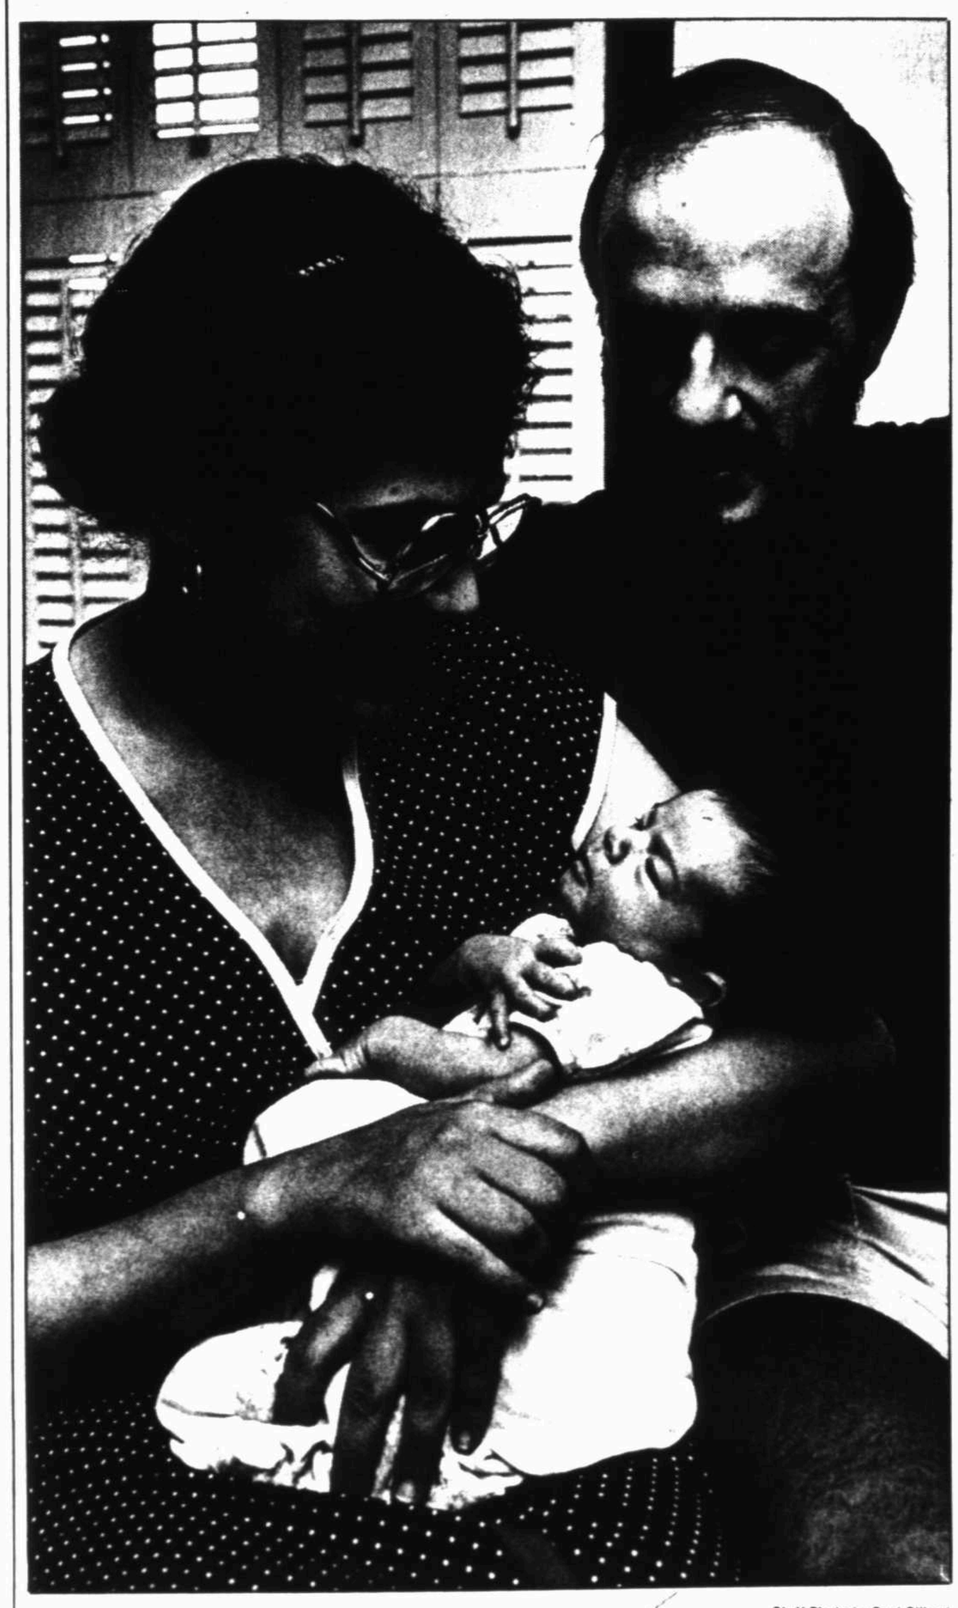

She reacted gleefully each time someone told her how much they enjoyed her books. "Oh, I'm so glad to hear that."

One woman told her to write faster and get more books out. But there was one, said the woman, she hadn't bothered to read because someone told her one of the characters died.

"I don't like reality," the reader said.

'A little miracle'

After coping with infertility for six years, Marie and Louis Mazzullo can smile down at their daughter, two-week-old Mary Elise.

Infertile couples not alone

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

When Louis Mazzullo came home from a night on the town early last fall, he said he was about half out of it.

When his wife Marie told him she was pregnant, he answered, "Yeah, right," and went to sleep.

"I woke up the next morning and said, 'You're WHAT?'" Mazzullo, an independent geological consultant, remembered with a laugh.

For most couples, the simple announcement is a big event.

For the Mazzullos, it represented the end of a six-year struggle, one that was often full of the doubt and despair felt by so many other couples who suffer from a common condition: infertility.

Dr. J.E. Mendez

According to Dr. J.E. Mendez, Ms. Mazzullo's obstetrician/gynecologist, about 20 percent of his patients are being treated for infertility.

There are probably many other couples who are infertile that don't appear on the statistical charts of Midland doctors.

Feelings of frustration and inadequacy keep some from seeking help, the Mazzullos said. Also, there sometimes is pressure from friends and family, resulting in the couple rationalizing their way out of wanting children.

"Some are prone to say, 'Well, I'm a failure,'" Mazzullo said. "Others say 'I'm infertile — to hell with it.' If you're infertile, you're either a failure or God doesn't love you anymore or you're ashamed. A lot of people will say, 'it's your fault,' 'no, it's your fault,' and never even go for help. There are so many different reasons for infertility."

"The more we know about infertility, the more we find out how complex infertility really is," Mendez agreed.

Causes of infertility can be broken down as follows, according to Mendez: 20 percent have a male factor, 20 percent have an ovulation problem, 20 percent have blockage of the fallopian tubes, 20 percent have endometriosis (when tissue resembling uterine mucous membrane is found in abnormal locations in the pelvic cavity), and the remainder have a combination of the above factors or are unknown.

Married for 10 years, the Mazzullos said three years before the birth of Mary Elise July 2, Ms. Mazzullo had an ectopic pregnancy, or one outside the uterus. In this case, it was a tubal pregnancy and she lost one of her fallopian tubes.

"Basically, that's when we started clueing into the problems," Ms. Mazzullo said.

In Albuquerque, N.M., they attended meetings of Resolve, Inc., a nationally organized support group for infertile couples.

"You'd be amazed," Ms. Mazzullo said. "People came from Los Alamos, Belen — all over. It was the most uplifting thing to realize there are hundreds of (infertile) people out there. I was so impressed. Before you meet other people with problems, you think you're the only one."

They moved to Midland two years ago and were disappointed to find there wasn't a similar support group.

Close to adopting, Ms. Mazzullo said she made one last effort and went to see Mendez.

Mendez discovered she had a high prolactin level, or a high production of the hormone secreted by the pituitary gland that promotes the growth of breast tissue and stimulates milk production during pregnancy or breast feeding. He treated her with Parlodel, used instead of estrogen on new mothers who choose not to breast feed.

Theft law — like crime rate and inflation — rising

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The theft law finally has caught up with inflation.

And it may lead to more inmates in county jail and to fewer prisoners in the state penitentiary.

A petty thief, hot-check artist or bungler soon may have to upgrade his crime by at least $550 to get a shot at serving prison time under auspices of the Texas Department of Corrections. Anything less and he could end up just fined or under the sheriff's care in the Midland County jail.

Today, he can write a hot-check for a minimum of $200 or shoplift a $200 television set or golden earrings and end up on felony probation or in prison. Ten years ago, that same thief could have wound up in the "joint" by stealing a $50 citizens band radio or writing a hot check for that amount in groceries.

"The net effect (of the revised law) in this county is that a significant portion of our checks and routine checks (in the $200-to-$749.99 range) will be handled by the county attorney's office," said District Attorney Vern Martin.

"Its effect, I think, will be to normalize the case load because of the inflationary factors involved," he said.

"The effect of this is a change in punishment levels of these crimes."

A MISDEMEANOR offense is a relatively minor "misdeed" which does not exact the death penalty or a penitentiary sentence.

Beginning Sept. 1, a misdemeanor theft will be in the one-cent-to-less-than-$750 range.

Ten years ago, before inflation started its dramatic upward trend, larceny of less than $50 was a misdemeanor punishable by a fine or only jail time. But in 1973, the Texas Legislature revised the law to adjust to inflation back then; a theft of $200 or more — not the former $50 — became a felony offense beginning in 1974.

Here's how the 1983-revised theft law will change the existing ranges on punishment:

—Class C misdemeanor: Covers a pecuniary loss of less than $20. Since 1974, a Class C offense covered up to a $5 loss. Maximum punishment is a fine up to $200.

—Class B misdemeanor: Covers loss from $20 but less than $200. At present, a Class B offense takes in a loss from $5 or more but less than $20. Maximum punishment is a six-month jail term or a $1,000 fine or both.

—Class A misdemeanor: Covers losses from $200 or more but less than $750. For the past 10 years, a Class A offense has covered the value of stolen property prized at $20 but less than $200. Maximum punishment is a one-year jail sentence or a $2,000 fine or both.

—Third-degree felony theft: Covers a loss of $750 or more but less than $20,000. The existing law governing third-degree offenses provides for losses from $200 to less than $10,000. Maximum punishment is a two-year to 10-year prison term and a $5,000 fine or both.

—Second-degree felony theft: Covers pecuniary losses of $20,000 or more. The 1973 low-side on second-degree felony theft was $10,000 or more. Punishment is a two-year to 20-year confinement in prison or a $10,000 fine or both.

There is no first-degree felony theft.

ORIGINALLY, the act would have raised the misdemeanor range to $1,000. Other legislators wanted the misdemeanor cut-off at $500. So, the lawmakers compromised at $750.

The revised law was viewed favorably by 238th State District Court Judge Vann Culp.

"I think it was a wise thing to do, because of inflation," said Culp. "It'll put more offenses in the courts where they ought to be. I'm happy for it," he said, "because it'll give us a little relief up here."

Midland County Court-at-Law Judge Willie DuBose, like County Judge Bill Ahders, will be hearing many high-side misdemeanor theft cases. He expressed concerned over courtroom space to try the new cases.

"We don't have two (county) courtrooms," he observed. "There has been more than once we could have tried two cases at once, and we didn't have a place to try them."

GARY OTT

In this 'black and white' business, gray works best

One thing is certain: Newspaper persons should never be confused with fashion plates. Or, more succinctly, those of us in this profession do not know how to dress properly.

Too harsh a statement?

Perhaps. Let me try again. Men in this profession do not know how to dress properly. There have been a great many studies conducted to determine the cause of this somewhat peculiar phenomenon, but the most popular three seem to be:

1) Newsmen don't make enough money to buy decent clothing.

2) It is too much to expect a man to be in constant pursuit of the truth, while at the same time, keeping up with latest snooty fashion trends out of Gentleman's Quarterly.

3) It is more or less tradition that newsmen be slobs. To be dressed immaculately could result in you being mistaken for a TV anchorman and no "real" newsman would ever want that to happen. After all, TV anchormen probably use hair spray and, believe me, hair spray has no place in a newsroom. For crying out loud, it's just NOT done.

As a result, most "real" newsmen keep their clothes very basic. Grays and browns do quite nicely. That's because grays and browns are extremely difficult to screw up, even for newsmen who have never been noted for having a keen eye for color schemes.

Indeed, real problems begin to pop up when newsmen try to branch out and dress in brightly-colored clothes, such as reds and blues and (God forbid) oranges. To dress in such a manner should be considered quite dangerous and in very poor taste. Newsmen should resemble Oscar Madison, not the NBC Peacock.

Besides, as soon as a reputable city hall reporter starts showing up in orange shirts, it can't be long before he has the audacity to don white shoes, white belts or even multi-colored jump suits which, as a result, means the entire profession would suffer supreme embarrassment.

And rightfully so.

There are a number of areas that can cause problems for the newsman who is attempting to dress properly.

Take ties, for example. Since times are rare when we are required to wear them, most of us only own two. That's right: one brown one and one gray one. After all, we have some pride and, therefore, want to be color-coordinated at all times.

The problem arises when we are decked out in our snappy gray outfit and then suddenly realize to our horror that the gray tie still has an unsightly mustard stain on it from two months ago when we were dining out at that fancy hot dog stand on the east side of town.

Quite naturally, panic sets in. Should we go with the coordinated look and wear the dirty gray tie or do we opt for cleaniness and wear the brown one, which, unfortunately, will make us look like we dressed blindfolded before prancing into the black tie banquet we are about to cover?

Decisions. Decisions.

Socks are another source of constant worry for the legitimate newsman. Most of us own hundreds of individual socks but, sadly, none of them quite match. Thus, we are required to improvise. For example, wearing a brown sock with a green one is a valid combination. Ditto for blacks and dark blues. However, blacks and light blues should be avoided at all costs. After all, even newsrooms should have dress standards, modest though they may be.

I could go on, but I'm late doing my laundry. Things have become desperate. My brown shirt has ugly half-moons in the arm pits and my gray trousers are filty. Making matters worse, I'm down to two socks: A yellow one and that cute little pink one I save for important functions, such as masquerade parties and city council meetings.

DEATHS

Henry Tillet Jr.

ABILENE — Henry A. Tillet Jr. 87, of Abilene died in an Abilene hospital Tuesday.

The son of a pioneer Abilene attorney, he was born Sept. 10, 1895 and lived most of his life in Abilene. He attended Simmons College, now Hardin-Simmons University, was a member of the third graduating class at Rice University, and served in World Wars I and II.

Survivors include two sons, Dr. Henry Tillet and Wilbur C. "Dub" Tillet of Midland; two daughters, Mrs. Ione Haynie of Boulder, Colo., and Mrs. Robert L. Duncan (Cassandra) of Houston; 12 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Clark Jackson

Services for Clark C. Jackson, 78, of 1213 E. Cuthbert Ave. will be at 2 p.m. Monday in Roscoe V. Jackson Mortuary with the Rev. Rase Gowans, pastor of Greater Ideal Baptist Church, officiating. Graveside services will be Tuesday in Evergreen Cemetery in Austin.

Jackson died Wednesday in a Big Spring hospital.

He was born June 17, 1905, in Lockhart, was a veteran of World War II and had lived in Los Angeles, Calif., before he moved to Midland.

Resolve helps infertile couples cope

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Resolve, Inc., founded in 1973 in Massachusetts, helps couples deal with infertility in two ways, according to Nanette Salvino, president of Resolve of New Mexico, based in Albuquerque.

"First of all we provide peer support," Ms. Salvino said. "The other is to provide information. A big function is the educational types of programs."

While there is no known support group for infertile couples in Midland, Ms. Salvino said one could be established by contacting the national headquarters.

"Infertility is a very lonely and difficult experience and it's easier if there is someone to talk to about it who can understand it," Ms. Salvino said.

In Albuquerque, infertility affects about 15 to 20 percent of the 400,000 population, Ms. Salvino said. However, after becoming involved in Resolve she said she thinks the figure is closer to 20 to 25 percent.

"That's at least one in every five or one in every six couples," she pointed out. "When you start thinking about it, that's a lot of people.

"Most of us have dealt with our own infertility," said Ms. Salvino. "And one of the most important things (that has been helpful) is Resolve.

"Infertility is the kind of experience where you just feel so alone. It seems like everywhere you look you see pregnant ladies and small babies. It is a very, very emotional type of experience."

While Resolve originally planned to have a chapter in each state, Ms. Salvino said some states have several while others have none. There are 40 local chapters throughout the country.

"One thing you've got to remember is overall, in cases of infertility, we're talking about a 50-50 shot. About 50 percent of the couples will eventually get pregnant. But about 50 percent of them won't. We try to help people deal with it on whatever level."

Further information may be obtained by writing Resolve, Inc., P.O. Box 474, Belmont, Mass. 02178, or calling (617) 484-2424.

Infertility affects about 20 percent of couples

"It's not meant to be a fertility drug," Mendez said. "But after I put her on this medication, she was ovulatory."

In three months, she also was pregnant.

Caught up in work at Southland Royalty, where she is a drafter, Ms. Mazzullo said when she noticed physical changes, she gave Mendez a call.

"We were in the middle of budget hearings and I was really involved in work. But he told me to come on in and within an hour, they knew I was pregnant," she said with a laugh. "(Mendez) said 'Either you're going to keep it or your going to lose it.' He's real frank."

"This was just the first (Parlodel patient) for me that ended up being used also for infertility that was successful — although (the Mazzullos) look at it kind of like a mini-miracle," Mendez said. "I had told her I was putting her on this medication specifically to bring this hormone level down. But once we were sure everything else was normal, I was pretty sure that something could happen.

"But in medicine, you can't guarantee those kinds of results," Mendez said, grinning. "The proof in the pudding is not until the baby is born."

"We were so excited that everyone knew right away," Mrs. Mazzullo said. "To us, she is just a little miracle baby.

"I had a very, very mundane pregnancy," Mrs. Mazzullo said. "It wasn't a media event even though it was Dr. Mendez's first (using Parlodel). This has been a glorified birth announcement.

"We're both from New York," she continued. "We're Yankees. But it took a small West Texas town to get us going. I've lived in big cities and maybe I wasn't treated as an individual. Maybe I was treated as a number. Maybe in a small town you get more personal care. But I want other people to realize there is help in the Midland-Odessa area."

"The fantastic thing, the beauty of infertility — as frustrating as it is at times — is when you do get a result, it's thrilling to everyone — the couple, the physician," Mendez said.

Changes in theft law reflect economy

Dewey Lee, the district attorney's chief prosecutor, annually collects on "bad" checks of $200 or more. They're checks which the merchant or other payee has been frustrated in collecting. In the first quarter of 1983, he collected $100,243.57 in checks ranging from $203.70 to $45,486.91. He gives the "hot" check-writer a chance to make restitution before the victim files formal charges and the grand jury considers the theft case for indictment.

"IT'S GOING to probably affect 50 percent of our ($200 to $749.99) checks," said the investigator. "It'll affect 50 percent of thefts, not just (hot) checks, as well as 50 percent of our criminal mischief cases, too."

Lee referred to the slowdown in the economy in the wake of the Permian Basin petroleum boom of the late 1970s and early 1980s.

"When your economy gets bad, your hot-check writers get to using their pens more," said Lee.

"We give them chance after chance here before we send them to the penitentiary, or we put them on probation" and, possibly, in prison if they violate probation by, for example, committing larceny again.

Other than for inflationary reasons, said Lee, "Our illustrious governor and legislature have decided this (the revised law) was a means to empty the penitentiary of 8,000 or 9,000 people convicted of non-violent crimes." The Texas Department of Corrections inmate count is about 38,000, he said.

Nevertheless, Lee seemed somewhat relieved with the law.

"In a way, it's going to be a blessing to us (in the District Attorney's office). I'm the only one who handles these (hot checks)."

On Sept. 1, the county attorney's chief investigator, Charlie Jones, will have the added burden of collecting on those checks.

"WE'RE GOING to have a lot more trials," County Attorney J. Scott Henderson said of the coming new case load. "We're going to demand more jail time. The (new) driving while intoxicated (DWI) law is going to cause more trials and more jail population."

He suggested that $500 rather than $750 "would be a fair break" between the misdemeanor and felony offenses. He based that on the Consumer Price Index in computing the effects of inflation.

Henderson said he would "have to revise my budget requests" and seek an additional investigator and another attorney. Currently, five assistant attorneys are on his staff.

In 1982, his hot-check section collected $143,000 on bad checks. For the first half of 1983, his office has collected $72,491 on bad checks.

Though his office handles thousands of hot checks turned in each year by merchants and others, Henderson speculated that his office "probably don't get one in three of them.... It's going to raise the prices of goods and services."

Ultimately, the effect of the revised law on the thief may be to increase the dollar amounts of the checks he writes or the value of property or services he steals closer to the $749.99 misdemeanor limit.

"We don't have indictments," said Henderson, "and the defendants won't take it as seriously.

Henderson said his recommendation for punishment on theft will be determined by how juries respond.

"The jurors are what determines my plea-bargaining recommendations (to the judge)," he said. "I'll probably put one out of 10 in jail.... In a lot of cases, jail will be more appropriate than a fine."

He reasoned that a thief, in order to pay a fine, may steal again.

"If he's fined, the only way he can get the $1,000 is to steal something worth $10,000 and sell it.... I think we'll do our best to see that justice is done."

Sheriff Dallas Smith figured that the revised statute effectively will increase his jail population but likely would decrease the population of the Texas Department of Correction. The overcrowded state prisons and inflation gave the Texas Legislature incentive to revise the theft statute.

"That same guy that's been going to the state penitentiary will be going to the county jail," the sheriff said.

Of the inflation-fueled top-side increase of felony theft from $200 to $750, Smith said: "I don't think the buying power has dropped that much."

"This was a way to lessen their burden at the state level," he said of Texas' overcrowded prisons, "and I think it will do that. But a high percentage of them will be staying in the county jail. We're already in a little bit of a bind — crowded conditions. This will enhance that problem."

"In reality," he reflected, "that may or may not occur."

Friends of Library seek 'merchandise' for sale

The Friends of the Midland County Public Library's annual book drive in gathering books, magazines and other library "merchandise" for the Friends' 16th annual Benefit Book Sale in November will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Books, periodicals and other library-related items, such as records and learning games, may be dropped by the old U.S. Post Office Depot at 203 W. Industrial Avenue. Books will be stored there until the November sale.

The Friends are collecting the books, including hardbound and paperback volumes, for the benefit sale Nov. 4, 5, and 6 in the Midland County Exhibit Building, according to Rob Sutphen, Friends president.

Last year, the Friends collected an estimated 20,000 books and uncounted magazines for the three-day sale, which grossed more than $9,200. The 1981 sale grossed almost $8,600.

Proceeds go toward buying library equipment — from book racks to computers — not in the library's budget.

"We'll be glad to have all the books we can," said Mary Mann of the Friends board. She and fellow Friend Mary Hughes will be accepting the books and other items at the old depot, which is south of the library and on The First National Bank's super parking lot.

"We need paperbacks, fiction — current fiction and just plain ordinary fiction," said Ms. Mann. "Biographies always go over pretty good (at the sale). We can always use encyclopedias." The book browsers like books on the arts and sciences. "Religion usually does well," she said. Specialized magazines, including "Antiques," are in demand.

Hobbs resident forwards 12th novel to publisher

It's distaste for reality that has pushed romance novel sales into the fast lane. In fact, Ms. Bonds said, her novels are no different from spy novels or James Bond. It's all fiction. "It has as much fiction as 'Octopussy,'" she said of the latest Bond film.

"It used to be the stigma that women who read these books were those who sat in front of a TV all day with the soap operas, degenerating their minds. A recent study showed the average reader is a woman with at least two years of higher education, a household income of at least $20,000 and 2½ children.

"These women are not degenerating. They work. When they go home they want to relax and be entertained, and this (romance novels) is a cheap form of entertainment."

One woman mentioned her three children and the time she devotes to them. That is an excuse, according to Ms. Bonds.

"If you were a secretary, you'd have interruptions and have to get back to work. Look at the positive side of it. Interruptions with kids are no different than working in the office. When you come back to it, you have a new perspective and can see where you have a problem."

After the youngest son was born, nursing was no problem. "I would sit in the library doing research and nursing; I tried to get in a corner," she laughed.

Although it's a six-to-seven day a week job, it pays well. Average advance paid for a romance novel is $8,000 to $10,000, said Ms. Bonds. She gets a royalty of 10 percent, although the average here is 6 to 8 percent.

She wouldn't say exactly what she has made on her books, only that her job has been "very, very profitable. Two years ago, Fortune magazine did a story on the salaries of the average male. That year I made better than 90 percent of the men."

And her salary has been a major force in helping the family. Her husband bought into an oilfield firm 1½ years ago, and today the economy has dropped.

The romance novel business is keeping paperback book companies in business, she said. "The publishing business was hurting last year. If it hadn't been for the romance books, they wouldn't have made it. These books account for 50 percent of the paperback book market."

A recent guest on ABC's "Nightline," and in preparation for a six-city tour in October, Ms. Bonds is a leader in trying to change the image of romance writers. She is co-founder and board vice president of Romance Writers of America, which now numbers 2,000 members worldwide.

"We're trying to make it a more professional business of writing and get away from it being just a hobby."

16 students get journalism grants

Allison scholarships pay tuition, fees at MC

Sixteen students have been named recipients of Allison journalism grants to attend Midland College for the 1983-84 academic year. Recipients are chosen because of an interest in journalism and recommendations from high school journalism teachers. The scholarships provide tuition, fees and books for two semesters and may be renewed for a second year.

Freshman students who have accepted the scholarships include:

Jon Lutes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lutes, 2500 Custer, a graduate of Odessa Permian. Lutes served as the school newspaper's fall editor and as its sports editor. He was a member of the National Honor Society, Permian outstanding journalism student, selected for high school's Who's Who and first place winner for headline writing in the University Interscholastic League district contest.

Ylva Martin was graduated from Pecos High School. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Martin Jr. of Pecos, she was editor of the school newspaper, named to Who's Who and received UIL journalism awards.

Mary Martinez, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin P. Martinez of Kermit, served as copy editor and feature editor of the Kermit High newspaper and editor of the yearbook. She was a three-year National Honor Society member, vice president of the Press Club and the National Honor Society and winner of district UIL journalism contests.

Trini Rodriquez was also graduated from Kermit where she was on the newspaper staff for three years and editor her senior year.

Francisco Rueda, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francisco Rueda of Crane, comes from Crane High School. He served on the staff of both the newspaper and the annual. He was an honor roll student, member of Quill and Scroll and selected for Who's Who. He won first place in the Texas class AA student art contest for school papers.

Jerry Snelling, son of Lewis Snelling of Haskell, won numerous awards for photography during two years on the Haskell High School paper. He also worked as a staff photographer for the Abilene Reporter-News.

Connie Sullenger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sullenger of Kermit, was on the Kermit High School newspaper staff two years and served as editor. She also was a staff member for the annual, won UIL awards and was selected for the Society of Distinguished American High School Students.

Don Williams is a 1983 graduate of Tulia High School. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Williams, he was a regional UIL qualifier in feature writing and headline writing two years and a state qualifier in feature writing this spring. He was a member of the National Honor Society, the Society of Distinguished American High School Students and Who's Who. He also worked for the Tulia Herald as a writer and photographer.

Patty Cooper of Midland, a freshman at Midland College, is the recipient of an Allison journalism scholarship for the 1983-84 academic year. Active for several years in writing for clubs and organizations in Midland, she has decided to pursue a journalism career, and has been working on a special edition of the college newspaper.

Julie Ann Moellering, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Moellering of Midland, is a recipient of an Allison journalism grant at Midland College for the coming year. A 1983 graduate of Greenwood High School, she was vice president of her senior class and a member of the National Honor Society.

Pam Tatsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Tatsch of Midland, is a winner of an Allison journalism grant for Midland College. A 1983 graduate of Midland High School, she was co-editor of the school newspaper and was a member of the National Honor Society.

Angela Lynn Rice, daughter of Linda Rice of rural Midland, will receive an Allison journalism scholarship for the 1983-84 school year at Midland College. She served as business manager for the Greenwood High School newspaper and annual and won district University Interscholastic League journalism awards.

education in brief

Three graduate from NTSU

Marilyn Lee Carmean, daughter of Rodney Carmean, 809 W. Michigan, earned a master's degree in labor and industrial relations.

Arthur Lamon Hamilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Hamilton, 3619 W. Louisiana, was graduated magna cum laude with a bachelor's degree in computer science.

Debbie Shelburne, a 1978 graduate of Greenwood High School, was awarded a bachelor's degree in elementary education.

Bachelor's degrees awarded

Midland students graduating with bachelor of arts degrees from the University of Texas at Austin include Ricardo Jimenez, 1209 E. Estes, and Arthur Michael Taylor, 3500 Bedford Ave. Delnor Everett Poss of Big Spring was graduated with honors with a bachelor of arts degree.

Midlander on ACU honor roll

Thomas Ross Pollard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Pollard, 3100 Shell, was named to the spring Dean's Honor Roll at Abilene Christian University. A student must earn at least a 3.5 grade point average to qualify.

Parents may preview films

Films and other audio-visual materials available to public schools through Region 18 Education Service Center may be previewed by parents and other interested adults during a review session 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. July 29. Those requesting a preview should do so by Thursday by calling Shirley Higgins at 563-2380.

MC enrollment increasing

Enrollment at Midland College has been steadily increasing over the past year, and college officials attribute it to the economy. A slowdown in the local economy traditionally sends persons back to school for additional training. The cost factor also comes into consideration because students can live at home, continue with employment and save on other expenses that may be incurred if they relocated.

Fall enrollment was 16.8 percent over the previous year, and the spring semester saw an 18.6 percent increase. While the first summer session had a more modest 12 percent jump, second summer session enrollment, which ended Wednesday, was 20 percent above 1982 figures. As a result, the college plans to hire 11 additional instructors this fall.

MC offers computer course

An introductory computer course for 10- to 12-year-olds will be July 25-28 at Midland College. The course is from 3 to 5 p.m. and covers basic computer parts, how computers work and different uses.

Fee for the course is $15, and more information can be obtained by calling 684-7851, extensions 147 or 216.

OC to open fall registration

ODESSA — Early registration for the fall semester at Odessa College opens Monday. Students may register from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and 5 to 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday until Aug. 11 in the counseling center on the second floor of the Student Union Building.

Registration is Aug. 25 and classes begin Aug. 29. Late registration will be Aug. 29 through Sept. 12.

Academic advisement is necessary for all students prior to registration, according to Director of Counseling Janis Booth. All new and transfer students must see a counselor for advisement.

Returning students with declared majors should see a faculty advisor in his or her major department, and returning students with undeclared majors must see a counselor. Appointments with counselors can be made by calling the counseling center between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Houston man crashes while fleeing police

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man was fatally injured when he collided with a pickup while attempting to elude police who were chasing him for a minor traffic violation.

John Montgomery Watts, 35, died at St. Joseph Hospital at 2:49 p.m. Saturday, 20 minutes after the two-vehicle crash near downtown.

Two of the three people in the pickup were taken to St. Joseph Hospital where they were being examined late Saturday. The third was uninjured, police said.

Watts allegedly ran a red light a few minutes before the crash Saturday and a patrol car pulled up behind him to try to stop him. Watts sped off and was chased about two miles by the cruiser, police said.

Rev. Gene Crane

Tom Laney

St. Paul's Methodist gets new staff members

St. Paul United Methodist Church has acquired two staff members this summer.

The Rev. Eugene Crane is the church's new associate minister. Crane's responsibilities lie in the area of evangelism and education. In addition, Tom Laney has joined St. Paul UMC as musical director.

Crane and his wife, Sally, grew up in Kansas. They were married in 1955 and have two grown sons, Chuck and Tim, and a 2-year-old daughter, Christa.

Crane worked 30 years for Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Company, quitting in January of 1981 to become pastor of the Cotton Center UMC. He transferred his college hours to Wayland Baptist University, graduating from there in May 1982. He also completed the five year course of study at Perkins School of Theology in August 1982. This program replaces seminary for those called into the pastorate after the age of 35.

Tom Laney, who comes to Midland from First UMC at Snyder, is a 1974 graduate of Millikin University, Decatur, Ill., where he received a bachelor of arts degree with a major in music. He has a masters of church music degree from Scarritt College, Nashville, Tenn. While in college, Laney had roles in six operas and three plays.

His work history includes director of music, First Christian Church, Springfield, Ill., 1973—74; manager of choral organizations, Millikin University, Decatur, Ill., 1974-75; director of music, Central UMC, Decatur, Ill., 1977-78; minister of music, Dalewood UMC, Nashville, Tenn., 1981-82; and director of music and education, First UMC, Snyder.

Laney also has sung with and been a featured soloist with the Nashville Symphony Chorus and Chamber Chorus. He starred for two years, 1980-81, in the Scarritt Madrigal Dinners as King Henry VIII. He founded and directed the Acts 29 Players, a music-drama troupe patterned after the Jeremiah People.

He has been an active member of the Percussive Arts Society, American Recorder Society, MENSA, Choristers Guild, Christian Educators' Fellowship, the American Guild of English Handbell Ringers and the Fellowship of United Methodists in Worship, Music and Other Arts.

He and his wife, July, have no children.

Man sentenced to prison

BIG SPRING — Clifford Bart Dunbar, 22, of Pennsylvania was sentenced in 118th District Court last week to 15 years in prison for the aggravated rape of a 13-year-old Akron, Ohio girl east of Big Spring.

A Howard County jury returned a verdict of guilty after three hours of deliberation, and spent 40 minutes deciding his punishment. Jurors also assessed a $3,000 fine.

Dunbar previously had been convicted of assault with intent to rape in Oklahoma in 1981 and sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

Paisano camp planned

The 63rd session of Paisano Baptist Encampment will be held at Paisano Pass in the Davis Mountains July 25-31.

Paisano grew out of a prayer meeting of cowboys. Brother L.R. Millican, pioneer curcuit rider missionary, worked with the area ranchers for many years, helping them set up the first "encampment" in 1916. Due to World War I, the next camp was not until 1921, and the encampment has met consecutively since that time.

A special "Early Bird Service," led by First Baptist Church of Marfa, will be held on the grounds July 24 at 8 p.m.

Men's Prayer Meeting will be directed by George Stokes of Waco. Leaders for each day will be Tuesday, John LaNoue; Wednesday, George Stokes; Thursday, Bruce Lampert; and Friday, Jim Stephen.

Bible studies will be conducted by Dr. Virtus Gideon, professor of Bible at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth, and Dr. Alta Ada Williams of Signal Mountain, Tenn.

Preaching will be done by Dr. Robert Naylor, president emeritus of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth, and the Rev. Bailey Stone, pastor of First Baptist Church, Odessa.

Paisano has maintained the tradition of no registration fees and everyone is welcome to attend.

Semi-weekly publication set

STANTON — The Stanton Reporter will go semi-weekly beginning July 31, according to editor Connie Mabry.

The newspaper long has been published as a weekly.

Editions will now be released on Sundays and Thursdays.

Lamesa plans sidewalk sale

LAMESA — Lamesa's annual July Sidewalk Sale, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce Retail Committee, will be held July 28-30.

Any group, service club or organization may arrange to set up a booth Saturday, July 30 on the Square or the shopping center by calling the chamber office at 806-872-2181.

Medicare seminar to be held

LAMESA — A Medicare-Medigap seminar and noon luncheon will be held Wednesday, July 27 at the Senior Citizens Center.

Sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and the Aging Committee of the county extension service, the seminar is under direction of Social Security Administration, Medicare, Better Business Bureau and Insurance Underwriters Association. It will include a program and question and answer session.

Horse show begins Saturday

MONAHANS — The fourth annual Monahans Quarter Horse Show will be held Saturday and Sunday, July 24, in Ward County riding arena.

Competition will be in open (professional), amateur, youth 13 and under, and youth 14-18.

In addition to earning American Quarter Horse Association points, open class contestants will divide $1,350 in prize money.

Shows will begin at 8 p.m. each of the two days. Admission is free.

Ward County Wagonmasters will serve a barbecue lunch from 11 a.m.-2 p.m. in the coliseum.

10 YEAR NO SWEAT WARRANTY

If Air Conditioning doesn't have it here it probably doesn't have it.

Gas Air Conditioning Has It!

No other air conditioner has a warranty like a gas air conditioner because no other air conditioner is built like a gas air conditioner.

Gas air conditioning has fewer moving parts and no compressor to wear out or break down. This means less wear and tear and lower maintenance costs.

That's why gas air conditioning is so dependable and why it has a warranty that's twice as long as other types of units . . . a full 10 years!

Find out more about the air conditioning that's backed by the best warranty available. Call Energas today for a free cooling survey and cost estimate. There's no obligation.

Remember, all air conditioning was not created equal. And we have the paper to prove it!

Manufacturer's limited warranty covers all defects in materials and workmanship on the sealed refrigeration unit for ten years from the date of installation of the air conditioner when it is installed in a single family residence. All other parts are warranted for one year from date of installation.

Citizens urged to support health career recruitment

The president of Exxon USA, Houston, has challenged Midlanders to support the Texas Health Careers recruitment program.

Randall Meyer, chairman of the statewide campaign to raise $2 million over a three-year period, set a goal of $80,000 for Midland. Midlander Arden R. Grover was named by Meyer to chair the local campaign.

"The Texas Health Careers program involves searching out youth interested in a medical profession, motivating them, providing them a place for education and placing them in appropriate positions," Meyer said.

According to Tony Owens, vice president of the Texas Health Careers recruitment program, the program is contacting 200,000 junior and senior high school students yearly through school assembly programs, career days and classroom presentations. After contact is made with students interested in health career professions, a computer tracking system is used to maintain contact and send further information, customized to their age and interests.

Assisting students with financial counseling and aid in college and in locating jobs is making a big difference, Owens said.

In the past four years, enrollment in nursing profession programs has dropped 30 percent, according to Meyer.

"Texas hospitals now need 10,000 registered nurses to fill budgeted registered nurse positions," he said. "Only 3,133 registered nurses graduated from Texas nursing programs in 1981."

According to Owens, college enrollment drastically declined in medical technology, radiologic technology, respiratory therapy and operating room technology.

"Unless the Texas Health Careers program is successful, a decline in the quality of health care in Texas is inevitable," Owens said.

Meyer believes Midlanders want quality health care and will support the program.

"I am pleased that Arden Grover has agreed to serve as Midland chairman of the Texas Health Careers program development effort," said Ray Branson, Midland Memorial Hopsital president. "I plan to help him any way I can. I have a personal interest in doing so in that I'm a member of the select committee chosen to help the Texas Health Careers program. As an administrator, as well as a member of the committee, I'm very aware of the need to reduce the shortages in our hospital positions. Contributions to the program will be used for this purpose.

"We Americans demand and deserve high quality medical care. Only well-trained professionals in sufficient quantities can ensure this as a reality for the future. When Mr. Grover calls, I encourage our citizens to respond."

Representatives of medical facilities and financial institutions as well as educational institutions also are being called upon to support the drive.

Therapeutic touch conference planned

ODESSA — "Touch — Therapeutic Use of Self" will be the focus of a six-hour continuing nursing education conference at 8:30 a.m. Saturday at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

The conference, sponsored by District 21 of the Texas Nurses' Association and the Texas Tech University Health Science Center Continuing Nursing Education (CNE) Program, is open to nurses, other health professionals and the general public.

Several practice sessions will be conducted throughout the course to help develop a level of confidence in each of the participants. The course will review the theory of therapeutic touch and identify its uses. Particular attention will be given to using touch to help ease pain and to promote relaxation and healing.

Clinical specialist Susan Newfield and assistant professor Dr. Helen Cox, both of the TTUHSC School of Nursing, will conduct the course.

Participants may be awarded 0.6 CEUs (six contact hours) by the Texas Tech CNE program, which is accredited by the Western Regional Accrediting Committee of the American Nurses' association. The course also has been submitted to the Texas CEARP program for recognition points.

Fee for the course is $40. For registration information, contact the TTUHSC Office of Continuing Nursing Education at (806) 743-2734. Enrollment is limited to 35 participants.

Lease request OK'd

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission approved a request from Lutheran Social Service of Texas, Inc., of Austin, to acquire by lease Sage Healthcare Center, a 114-bed nursing facility in Midland during a meeting Friday.

Officials from Lutheran Social Service of Texas asked the THFC to rule a certificate of need was not required for the acquisition by lease.

A certificate of need must be approved by the THFC for the purchase of equipment or services costing $600,000 or more. Also, a certificate of need must receive THFC approval if an acquisition by lease includes a change of services.

Weekend campouts slated

The Midland YMCA will be holding a series of weekend campouts in late July and August for children in the fourth through eighth grades.

Weekends will be spent in the Davis Mountains, at Lake Nasworthy and at Comanche Trail Park. Campers will sleep in tents, hike, sight-see and help cook their own meals.

Campers at the YMCA also will explore the nature and heritage of Texas through fun activities.

United Blood Services to conduct local drive

United Blood Services will be conducting a blood drive from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday. The Bloodmobile will be parked at Parkview Hospital, 3201 Sage St.

United Blood Services is a non-profit organization and receives no federal, state or United Way funding. The organization is self-supporting through service fees which are used to cover operating expenses.

Any revenue generated from fees is applied toward blood bags, delivery and storage expenses, new equipment, increased facilities, laboratory reference work and payroll for a professional staff.

Patients are not charged for the blood or blood replacement because the program relies on volunteer, non-remunerated blood donors. Four patients may receive aid from one donation. While red blood cells are used to treat anemia, open heart surgery patients and newborn babies with Rh disease, people suffering from hemophilia need Antihemophilliac Factor to help clot. Leukemia patients, meanwhile, need platelets to prevent uncontrollable bleeding during treatment and plasma is used to treat burn patients and accident victims with acute blood loss.

'Bionic Man' will be subject of medical lecture at MMH

Steve H. Dougherty, M.D., of the Department of Surgery at Texas Tech University School of Medicine at El Paso, will present a lecture to the medical staff of Midland Memorial Hospital at noon Wednesday in the Medical Staff Conference Room.

The presentation, entitled "The Bionic Man," is a part of the regularly scheduled CME (Continuing Medical Education) lectures offered weekly.

Dougherty did his undergraduate work at Stanford University and received his medical degree from the University of California, San Francisco Medical Center. All of his hospital training took place in the Department of Surgery at the University of Minnesota, where he was an intern, medical fellow, research associate, chief resident and special fellow in surgical infectious disease until he came to Texas Tech in 1982. He now serves as an instructor in the Department of Surgery and his special research interests are surgical infections and gastrointestinal physiology.

Stress reduction conference set at Metropolitan YMCA

The Positive Lifestyle Center, offered through the Midland Metropolitan YMCA, offers a comprehensive group-oriented program designed to reduce on-the-job and personal stress.

YMCA membership is not required for the next course, offered July 30. Fee for Y members is $50 and $75 for non-members. Company or organization groups of five or more may receive a discounted rate.

The eight-hour course utilizes a multi-dimensional approach that allows participants to select the stress-management strategy that best meets their needs. Step-by-step exercises identify the stress cycle, teach relaxation techniques and effective use of self-talk.

Other instruction includes active listening, assertion training, dealing with aggressive people, giving and receiving negative feedback and putting it all together. The program is designed to help individuals gain control over stress, opening the way to a happier and more productive life.

To register or for more information, persons may call 682-2551.

Shaw honored by county agents

Larry Don Shaw

BIG SPRING — Texas Rep. Larry Don Shaw, a Big Spring Democrat, farmer and rancher, has been selected as a "Man of the Year in Texas Agriculture" for 1983 by the Texas County Agricultural Agents Associations.

Shaw, one of seven men named for the honor, was nominated by county agents in the Far West Texas District of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) of Texas A&M University.

The legislator, who farms cotton and raises cattle in Howard County, was elected to the Texas House of Representatives in 1980. The 69th District he serves takes in the counties of Howard, Borden, Hudspeth, Culberson, Reagan, Upton, Reeves, Winkler, Ward, Crane and Loving.

Others TAEX honorees are William A. "Bill" Porter, Terrell farmer and businessman; James A. Theeck, Washington County rancher; Lucas Reyes, field crops research scientist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Corpus Christi; Bennie Claunch, Bailey County farmer and cotton ginner; Charlie Rankin, Edinburg farm broadcaster, and Bob Traweek, dairyman and peanut farmer.

As a freshman legislator, Shaw was successful in passing measures ranging from a landmark assistant program for Vietnam veterans suffering from the effects of Agent Orange to protecting the mineral rights of land owners alongside state highways and funding for a dead infant screening program. He co-sponsored bills calling for elimination of the state inheritance tax, stiffer penalties for drug dealers and rapists, the regulation of medical practice and the promotion of gasohol, solar energy, generic drug substitutions and small businesses.

In the 67th Legislature, Shaw was assigned to the Environmental Affairs Committee and to the Elections Committee and chaired a pair of subcommittees.

Shaw holds a degree in agricultural education from Texas Tech University. As a youth, he was active in Future Farmers of America and 4-H programs and was a national winner in the 4-H public speaking contest.

Cutting horse show continues

The show is sanctioned by the National Cutting Horse Association.

The purse will be determined by the number of $50 entries fees.

The Bar H Ranch, operated by Olin and Elizabeth Horne, is off County Road 40 and is about eight miles north, via Farm-to-Market Road 1788, of Midland Regional Airport.

County agents receive awards

COLLEGE STATION — Eight county agents with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service have been named recipients of the Distinquished Service Award, the highest recognition given by the National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

The county agents honored and the counties they serve are Gordon L. Ford of Hopkins, Johnnie Cooper of Fort Bend, Sam Kuykendall of Menard, Glenn Huddleston of Anderson, William L. Schumann of Comal, Richard A. Spencer of Fisher, Ronald Gooch of Donley and Robert D. Adamson of Hansford.

The winners will be recognized at the annual Texas County Agricultural Agents Association Aug. 7-10 in Wichita Falls. The awards will be presented at the NACAA meeting Oct. 8-13 at Wichita, Kan.

Working cowboys to compete

WICHITA FALLS — More than 200 working cowboys will compete under the banner of 14 of Texas's largest spreads for the bragging rights of 1983's best ranch in Texas. The competition will be in the third annual Texas Ranch Roundup here Aug. 19 and 20.

Plans for the annual tussle were announced by the event's co-sponsors, the North Texas Rehabilitation Center and Budweiser beers.

The two-day event is reminiscent of the late 1800s roundup competition, which is the forerunner of today's rodeos. The event emphasizes working ranch skills.

The Moorhouse Ranch, operated by J.C. "Togo" Moorhouse, won the championship last year. The ranch's title will be defended by its team of cowpunchers.

The ranches sprawl over 2.5 million acres.

Proceeds from the Roundup will benefit the North Texas Rehabilitation Center in Wichita Falls, the West Texas Rehabilitation Center in Abilene and the West Texas Boys Ranch in San Angelo.

Beef becoming 'big' business

Beef is a $300 billion U.S. business and is the largest single agricultural industry in the country, said Pope, former associate dean of agriculture at Texas A&M University and now dean of agriculture and home economics at New Mexico State University at Las Cruces.

"Beef also is a mature industry that has entered a new world of highly specialized agriculture in recent years, challenging the 1.3 million producers who grow it," he said.

About 90 percent of U.S. households use beef as the major fresh meat item on their menus, he said.

He noted that the fast-food industry uses "tons of beef" in hamburgers and sandwiches.

EARNEST KIKER

Entomologist chosen for Far West District

Dr. Charles T. Allen has been named to the position of entomologist for the Far West District of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. He will be headquartered at the District Extension Office in Fort Stockton.

He fills the position vacated by Charles Neeb, who was recently named district director for the Far West District.

Allen has been serving as an Extension entomologist for South Texas for the last two-and-one-half years, giving leadership to insect pest management programs in cotton, grain sorghum, corn, citrus and vegetables.

Allen will work closely with the county Extension agents and county program building committees in planning, conducting and evaluating educational programs relating to insect pest management for the area's major crops, as well as the homeowner's problems with landscape insects. We are looking forward to having Dr. Allen assist us in Midland County.

Frequently there are small areas in alfalfa fields which fail to produce an adequate stand. Most often the failure to obtain a stand is the result of poor water distribution. When water stands too long in low spots it causes the plants to die. High spots dry out too quickly resulting in a reduction of stand. Reseeding does not usually satisfactorily correct the problem.

It is unlikely that the stand can be improved by reseeding an old stand. In order to get the seed covered, it is necessary to prepare a seedbed by disking or renovating the field some way. Tests indicate that damage occurs to the roots and crowns of the present stand and pre-disposes the plants to disease organisms which further reduces the stand. The increase in disease organisms in the soil reduces the longevity of the reseeded alfalfa even if it is successful. In the event of stand failure of a new seeding, it is generally best to rotate to another crop for one season before reseeding alfalfa.

Many of the extra benefits of an alfalfa crop are reduced when stands become too old. Crown and root diseases are the major cause of reduced stands. When a stand is three or four years old, it should be closely checked for dead, dying or diseased plants. A good time to check is when the last cutting is about a foot high. Visible symptoms are wilting of the leaves, stunted plants, and uneven stems on the same plant. Some plants should be dug, and the crowns and roots examined for dead or diseased tissue. Healthy roots are white, so any brown or dark discoloration indicates the presence of one or more disease organisms.

During the winter many of these plants will die and others will not produce well. When the number of healthy plants drops below an average of four or five plants per square foot, it may be more profitable to plow the stand out.

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The further decline of the nation's farm prices and the increasing indebtedness of its farmers under the Reagan administration will be made one of the top issues in the next presidential election campaign, said Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower at a recent joint press conference here with Democratic party officials and congressmen.

Hightower accepted appointment from Chairman Charles Manatt of the Democratic National committee as chairman of the party's Agriculture Council.

"Jim, in working with members of Congress such as Rep. Kika de la Garza of Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture committee, and Senator Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., of the Senate committee, has an excellent opportunity to organize an effective forum for the agriculture community so that its voice will be heard," Manatt told the conference. "We intend to have open forums across the country to help shape the debate on farm policy."

Hightower announced that "we will seek to write a new agriculture program for the nation." He emphasized that it will give priority to owners of family farms "instead of making some big farmers richer like the Reagan farm policies are doing." He also said the new program, which he and the farm-state congressmen present, will be written into legislation as soon as possible. It will have "some sort of controls to hold down production." He also denounced the present Reagan policies of continuing to let farmers think they can exist on exports when the U.S. has lost its markets to increased subsidized production by competitors.

Pickwick Players stage 'Dirty Work' at Yucca

"Character? You have spent yours, and I never had any."
Munro Murgatroyd

A Review

Depravity stalks the Yucca Theatre stage. Evil, unscrupulous Munro Murgotroyd, aided by Ida Rhinegold, a fair young maid until she met Munro and adopted his wretched ways, is determined to become wealthy in whatever manner necessary, even going so far as to say, "What better way to fortune than to marry one?"

The game plan is to poison the poor Widow Lovelace and marry her young, pure and innocent daughter, Nellie. It is of no importance to Munro that he is already married. Besides, he plans to have Nellie locked up in an asylum after she signs over the deed to her mother's place.

IS THERE any hope for Nellie and the others caught in his clutches? The situation moves from bleak to beyond grim in the Pickwick Players production of "Dirty Work at the Crossroads," onstage at 1:30 p.m. today, Saturday and July 24 at 208 N. Colorado Ave. Tickets, priced at $3, may be purchased at the door. The Pickwicks are Midland Community Theatre's youth performing group.

Directed by Michael Spicer, this melodrama contains lines which are extremely funny, such as Ida's comment to Munro upon seeing him with his fake beard on — "Oh. What are you playing? A dish of spinach?" — a plot which has a clearly defined presentation of right and wrong and all of the bigger-than-life mannerisms.

CAST members include Stuart Williams as the villainous Munro; Jennifer DeLong as his infamous accomplice; Lynn Granberry as the lovely Nellie; Josh Jones as her true love Adam Oakheart; Sharon Graham as Nellie's mother; Stan Williams as Nellie's loyal friend and helper Mookie Maguggins; Elaine McKinney as Mrs. Upson Asterbilt, the wealthy widow who brings her daughter to the country to get her away from a fortune hunter; Maria Bakke as Leonie Asterbilt, who imagines she wants only to be reunited with the man she fancies she's in love with; Julie DeLong as Mrs. Asterbilt's French maid, Fleurette, whose talk of love hides a frugal soul; and Christi Irish as Little Nellie, who just wants to be happy.

The cast did a fine job with this particular genre. Of special note was Miss Granberry's apt portrayal of the transition from sweet innocent to one who has become wise to the ways of the world; Jennifer DeLong's cold-hearted Ida, who begins to melt; and Julie DeLong's Fleurette — a role which added a delightfully refreshing touch to the production.

Although Stan Williams and Elaine McKinney did a reputable job with their respective roles, both threw several lines away Saturday by looking away rather than at the audience when they delivered them.

Maria Bakke and Christi Irish played cameo roles. Miss Bakke turned out a believably spoiled daughter who is determined to have her own way, and Miss Irish effectively flounced her "little girl" role.

When Stuart Williams' portrayal of Munro is viewed as a whole, he did a good job; however, it could have been more effective. For example, his laugh lacked consistency. At times, it was truly sinister; but on other occasions, it came off as slightly silly.

WILLIAMS played this pivotal role with an obvious knowledge of the genre and great enthusiasm; however, he needed to bring his movements more in size with the rest of the cast (while the others needed to stretch to his).

Admittedly, the exaggerated mannerisms are an integral part of melodrama and these he did well. It was the other movements he made onstage which caused his performance to come off, at times, as too busy.

The set worked well (The train scene was worth the trip). What was missing were program notes to explain this genre to the audience. In lieu of notes, a brief introduction from the stage would have been nice.

When the audience members, who ranged in age from 5 to 60, became comfortable with the extended mannerisms of melodrama, it was hard to tell whether they or those onstage were having more fun Saturday. A sure sign they had caught on by the play's close was the hissing applause given the villainous Munro.

Winds spread Toronto fire

Strong winds scattered embers from a burning warehouse in downtown Toronto in 1904. The fire started shortly after 8 p.m. and within three hours almost the entire wholesale area of the city was in flames. More than $11 million damage occurred before the wind shifted and the fire was extinguished.

John Travolta makes 'Staying Alive' come alive for theatergoers

"Staying Alive" has no trouble coming alive thanks to its star John Travolta, as high voltage dancer Tony Manero, but it does have some trouble living up to its name by the movie's end.

A sequel to the 1977 smash hit "Saturday Night Fever" that launched Travolta into superstardom, "Staying Alive," begins six years later. Tony Manero is now living in a flop house off Broadway, washing his dirty laundry in the shower, waiting tables at night, teaching dance classes by day, and going unsuccessfully from one audition to another.

Ever the ladykiller, Manero has a girl he abuses a la the old days and meets another who gives him some of his own medicine, to his utter confusion and unending frustration.

A Review

But all this is secondary to the only game in town for Manero — dancing on Broadway. When he cops the lead in a misbegotten musical called "Satan's Alley," Manero struts his stuff (as only Travolta can do), but "Staying Alive" succumbs anyway, becoming a frenzy of overchoreographed, edited, and orchestrated scenes out of someone's nightmare.

The dance scenes that do work come in rehearsal where the give and take of the dancer's egos provide another challenge for Manero, who is used to having things his own way.

Teamed with Sylvester Stallone, who has a heavy hand in "Staying Alive" as director, producer (with Robert Stigwood), and writer (with Norman Wexler), Travolta comes across like a Stallone clone — a believer in the American dream filtered through the screen of Italian angst. The outcome of "Staying Alive" is as predictable as every Stallone film and only Travolta makes the formula burst forth with life.

Even so, Travolta as Manero, is left devoid of language, apparently the better off then to speak with his body. And unlike this summer's other hot dance movie, "Flashdance," "Staying Alive" has little support from the sub-plots, forcing Travolta to go it virtually alone.

"Staying Alive" is a solo act which Travolta turns into a captivating and charismatic center-stage performance, with a new muscled look and more aggressive dance style than in "Saturday Night Fever." When the camera is not tight on his tense, pouting, unshaven face, it is redefining the phrase, "backfield in motion" as he sways his taut backside to the city beat.

Some of that beat is provided by the Bee Gees as they pump out five new songs that are virtually indistinguishable from each other, recalling one dance title, "We dance so close to the fire."

But Stallone's brother, Frank Stallone, does contribute a musical number, "Far From Over", for a rehearsal duet that is memorable and adds to the effect of never ending music used to bolster the weak plot.

The photography by Nick McLean is a study in closeups in movement. It is distracting at times as the dancers whirl by and takes some getting used to, but any other style for the closing number in "Satan's Alley" would have been a greater agony — a number that choreographers Dennon and Sayhber Rawles have already taken too seriously.

Supporting Travolta as the objects of his masculine attention are Cynthia Rhodes (who also appeared as a dancer in "Flashdance") as Jackie, his sweet and sexy girlfiend, and Finola Hughes as Laura, a seductive and insensitive vixen who forces Manero to take a long hard look at himself. Both women dance up a storm in several senses of the word, creating tension on and off stage and admirably holding their own against Travolta's high intensity on screen. But here again, these women are made into cardboard figures when they aren't moving to music - two dimensional, lacking in motivation for their dreams and actions.

Rated PG, "Staying Alive" arouses the kind of emotion a "Rocky" movie might and for the same reasons, but Travolta brings more than heavy-lidded, brooding Italian good looks to the underdog character; he brings an earthiness, a vitality. We like him even when he is insensitive to his mother and friends because he is childlike in his selfishness.

"Staying Alive" is a showcase for Travolta. He flys high in the air without regard for sure footing when he lands and manages, despite a weak script and faltering direction, to do some staying alive of his own.

Pulitzer Prize-winning play opens July 29

Michael Cristofer's "The Shadow Box" opens July 29 for a four performance run at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

Set in a three hospice type situations in northern California, this play focuses on three terminally ill patients and their families, friends and loved ones. Despite the setting and the condition of three of the players, "Shadow Box" is not about death. It is a play about the beauty and fragility of life and the need to cherish every moment.

"The Shadow Box" is one of only 10 plays to win the Pulitzer Prize and the Tony Award for Best Play.

MCT's cast includes MCT veterans Glen Thomason, who appeared in "Sly Fox," "On Golden Pond" and "The Last Meeting of the Knight of the White Magnolias;" Arlene Jara, who played the title role in "Funny Girl;" and Scott Innes, a member of the Pickwick Players; in one cottage. The characters they portray are Joe, a blue-collar worker who has little to show for his life's work, Maggie, his wife who cannot accept the truth, and their 14-year-old son.

D.A. Plumlee, a frequent MCT performer, plays Felicity, a cantankerous old lady who clings to life, and Robyn Rose, last seen in "Tally's Folly," plays Agnes, her long suffering daughter in another cottage.

The final cottage features newcomer Carl Yowell, who portrays Brian, a very bright, very clever but not too successful writer and philisopher. Yowell, a recent graduate from Corpus Christi State University, has played leading roles in such shows as "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," "Man of La Mancha" and "Look Back in Anger."

Elizabeth Hewlett, another newcomer to MCT, plays his former wife Beverly, who is a slightly sloppy jet-setter. Miss Hewlett is studying acting at Tulane University where she has won "Best Actress" awards in "Love's Labors Lost," "The Curse of the Starving Class" and "Marat/Sade."

The role of Mark, Brian's friend, is played by MCT veteran Don Stroud, last seen on MCT's stage as Jesus in "Godspell." Stroud is currently playing the hero in the 35th annual Summer Mummers production.

The interviewer, a representative of the hospital's staff charged with the patients welfare, is played by Mark Wilkins, last seen as one of the Aggies in "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

MCT members will receive a 50 percent discount off the regular ticket price of $5. Reservations may be made by calling Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

The production is funded in part by grants from Mr. and Mrs. William C. Morrow, Mr. and Mrs. Arlen L. Edgar and Trott and Company.

Music festival has foreign flavor

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — Are you ready for a Venezuelan version of "Whiskey River" or a German rendition of "Stay All Night, Stay a Little Longer?"

Maybe a Norwegian singing plaintively of "Honky Tonk Angels" or an Australian warning his countrymen of "Cigarettes, Whiskey and Wild, Wild Women?"

If so, head for Fort Worth this week. Fifteen dollars and a country-Western spirit of adventure will get you five nights of such fare starting Sunday at the International Country and Western Music Awards Gala. If you're a high-roller, bring $500 for a ringside reserved table for you and nine good buddies.

The gala, a first, will unfold each evening under the stars in Rodeo Park, an open-air, city-owned facility in Cowtown, the historic stockyards area on Fort Worth's north side.

Called the Woodstock of C&W music, the festival features such names as Michael Murphey, Tom Jones, Connie Francis, Johnny Rodriguez and Boxcar Willie.

The so-called "guest performers" will introduce leading male, female and group artists from Australia, Canada, New Zealand, the Netherlands, Great Britain, Germany, Ireland, Norway and Sweden.

The sponsor, the nonprofit International Country and Western Music Association, says the aim is to spotlight C&W music around the world and maybe even get in a plug for Fort Worth and Texas.

Meanwhile, in St. Clairsville, Ohio, thousands of people from around the nation and Canada gathered for the seventh annual two-day Jamboree in The Hills.

"This show is a great idea...like an Olympics of country music," said Johnny Chester, Australia's "male vocalist of the year" for the past three years, though largely unknown in this country.

Repaying society

Clean Midland, Inc. is considering joining hands with Municipal Court and the Midland Police Department in a program that would allow people who've received sentences for traffic violations work off their obligation to society.

This is only one in the growing list of ways governmental entities are creating to let those guilty of minor, non-violent offenses pay their social debt. We wholeheartedly support Clean Midland's participation in such a program.

There are other examples of how this is being done right here in Midland. Sheriff Dallas Smith has been active in utilizing trusty labor for Midland County. His trusties were largely responsible for a remodeling and expansion project in Smith's office earlier this year and soon will begin fixing the courthouse's leaky roof.

Sheriff Smith even plans to use prisoner labor in other ways in the future. He's wise to do so. A lot of manpower and work experience drains away in a jail cell and many prisoners probably would rather be working than sitting on a jail bunk simply because it gives them a chance to get out of the cell and back into the world.

The program Clean Midland is considering would have a number of advantages. For one, those who've shown they cannot pay their fines would be allowed to work out their fine in a constructive fashion that would benefit the community. For a second advantage, the city could collect something of value from individuals it might otherwise not receive payment from. Best of all, though, it might instill in some of the participants a matter of pride in their community and a desire to do more constructive work.

This promises to be a commendable program, but the effort being exerted to find new ways in which the community can utilize prisoner labor and be monetarily or otherwise repaid for illegal acts definitely should not end here.

Earlier this year the Texas Legislature addressed this issue, along with prison overcrowding, by passing a bill which authorized restitution centers, where criminals can help to repay the victims of their crimes. That's certainly a good, big step in the right direction.

Another step could be taken locally by formation of a committee comprised of community-minded individuals, law enforcement officials and representatives from the judicial branch to plan and design a program of community work using inmate labor from both city and county jails.

We strongly urge law enforcement officials to pursue this idea in the interest of getting "payment" for society from non-violent criminals and to give those criminals another type of chance.

Another View:

Setting their agendas

It might be the off season for many of us, but not for the Democratic candidates for president. Most of them have been crisscrossing the country speaking to organizations that are likely to be powers at the Democratic National Convention next year.

All six prepared 10-minute videotapes for delegates to the National Education Association convention in Detroit. Five went to Detroit to speak before the League of United Latin American Citizens. The same five were then off to San Antonio for the National Women's Political Caucus. Five will be in Detroit this week for a Democratic Party meeting, and five are expected in New Orleans for the annual meeting of the NAACP.

At each stop each candidate seems to perform a little ritual. First comes denunciation of the Reagan administration and all its diabolical works. Then comes the endorsement of just about every plank in the organization's platform.

That's accompanied by an effort to convince the audience that the candidate is sympathetic not only in his views but also in his choice of words. John Glenn, for example, got in trouble with NWPC for using "man and wife" rather than the approved form, "husband and wife."

There's something a little disturbing about this spectacle of candidates trying to convince diverse groups of their orthodoxy. The groups are seeking clues as to whether the candidates, in their hearts, feel as strongly as the groups do about their particular issues. But that is better determined by scrutiny of a candidate's career as distinct from his performance in a short set-speech.

The candidates, in trying to please or to avoid displeasing the groups, may find themselves endorsing positions that will make campaigning more difficult if they are nominated, and governing more difficult if they are elected. They may also end up ceding to groups the most important power a candidate has: that of framing the issues.

Instead of using this early stage of their campaigns to articulate their idea of where the nation should move and what government should do, they are trying to prove their adherence to others' positions and orthodoxies. Yet activists don't always reflect the views of those they purport to represent, much less those of voters or citizens generally.

Ronald Reagan won the 1980 election in large part because he articulated such a vision; it was Jimmy Carter who was reduced to appealing in the debate to the separate concerns of various organized groups.

Of course the Democrats should pay some attention to the groups they've been appearing before. But they'll do a disservice to their own campaigns if they let those groups set their agenda.

ART BUCHWALD

Reach out and kill someone!

It usually comes at 10:00 or 11:00 at night, maybe when you're in bed or watching TV or in the bathtub. The phone rings, and keeps ringing. You remember the kids are out and you break your neck to answer it.

"Hello, hello," you shout into the receiver.

And then you hear this voice (it's usually a he, though it could be a she), "This is the Blank Upholstery Company. If you are in need of having your furniture reupholstered or new drapes hung in your living room, leave your number at the sound of the beep and one of our salesmen will call you tomorrow morning."

Art Buchwald

The obscene junk telephone caller is now getting through to every home in America. No one is safe from being awakened out of a sound sleep or being taken away from his dinner, or even making a baby, while the obscene junk telephone caller is out there in some dark room selling his services, his subscriptions, and making his pitches for charity or political contributions, insurance policies, gold coins, and even discount telephone equipment.

But it's not a person that is calling. It's an obscene computer — one that has been programmed to start speaking as soon as it hears your voice, and is prepared to dial the next number as soon as you hang up.

Getting an unlisted number will not protect you from the obscene telephone computer. It just goes from number to number with 30 or 40 tapes spitting out its filthy messages.

There is a solution. It takes patience and a little detective work, but this is how I recently got back at one of the obscene junk callers.

Instead of hanging up on the computer I listened to the entire message. The voice wanted me to subscribe to a magazine, at the sound of the beep, which would give me a chance to win $100,000 in their sweepstakes. I wrote down the name of the magazine.

The next day I bought it and looked up the name of the publisher. I then called the magazine's office and said I had a gift of flowers to send to the publisher's wife and wanted his home address. The secretary gave it to me and I found his telephone number in New Rochelle.

That night I waited until midnight and made my first call.

"Hi," I said in a bright voice. "This is the Axmo Muffler Company. We would like to give you a free estimate on our latest muffler, guaranteed for the life of your car. It is an opportunity you can't pass up."

The publisher hung up on me.

I waited a half hour and called back. "I'm sorry to disturb you but we're conducting a survey on zits for the Acne Institute. Do you have any relatives or friends in New Rochelle who have been afflicted by this disease?..." He hung up again.

Every half hour I made another call. I told him I was selling roofing by mail. I informed him that if he could name the first president of the United States he would get a case of dog food at cost; I inquired if he needed mulch for his grass, and if he was interested in Mexican tax free bonds.

By four o'clock the man was a blithering idiot.

"Why are you doing this to me?" he cried.

"Because," I said, in my most obscene voice, "you're doing it to us. Stop your junk call computer and I'll stop my telephone calls."

"I'll call the police!" he screamed.

"You may call them as soon as you hear the beep," I told him.

I could have sworn I heard the publisher crying at the other end of the line.

If you want to do the same thing, be my guest. And if you can't get the big shot who instigated a junk call at his home at night, keep calling him every hour at his office.

Since the government won't stop the obscene calls, the people must take justice into their own hands. It's time every free American shouted into his phone, "BEEP YOUR JUNK CALLS, I'M NOT GOING TO TAKE IT ANY MORE."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

China may gain favored status

WASHINGTON — After months of intense, behind-the-scenes bargaining, the Reagan administration will probably announce soon that Communist China has been given the status of a more friendly country. This will enable Peking to buy higher-technology items of potential military value.

Jack Anderson

Oddly enough, the secret bargaining was not between U.S. and Chinese officials, but between different agencies of the Reagan administration. The Defense Department opposed any relaxation of export rules that would allow the Chinese to pick our technological brains in militarily useful ways. The Commerce and State departments were willing to give away the store, while the CIA remained curiously neutral.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger had history on his side in the argument. The Nixon administration made the same mistake with the Soviet Union in the name of detente.

Prodded by Henry Kissinger, the Nixon regime allowed U.S. firms to export high-tech items to the Soviets, who promptly used them to enhance their military capability. For example, U.S. computers at the Kama River truck factory helped produce the vehicles that carried Red Army troops into Afghanistan in 1979.

Far more serious was the export of machinery to make miniature ball bearings, which gave the monster SS-18 missiles the accuracy needed to hit U.S. land-based missiles. It is this capability, of course, that is causing the United States to spend billions on the MX missile program. It was the most exact fulfillment so far of Lenin's cynical prediction that capitalism will sell communism the rope it hangs us with.

The Reagan administration evidently does remember one bit of history: Kissinger was saddled with the blame for the detente-inspired military advantage we gave the Russians. So the White House is letting Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige take full credit for the Chinese trade deal.

Not that the Yale-educated former cowboy doesn't deserve the responsibility. As a professional rodeo performer, Baldrige's specialty was steer roping. But as a high-level negotiator, he played the steer's role; the Chinese roped and branded him like a stray dogie.

How did they do it? Essentially, by blackmail at both the governmental and personal level.

Peking first warned ominously that U.S.-Chinese relations might break over Taiwan. President Reagan then made a number of concessions on the issue — enough to cause conservatives to accuse him of breaking his campaign promise of solidarity with Taiwan.

Having succeeded with that gambit, the Chinese next began complaining that U.S. export restrictions were endangering relations between the two powers. Baldrige leaped into the saddle and galloped off to the rescue — and promptly fell into the Chinese "trip trap."

The trip trap works like this. A high American official is invited to Peking for important discussions. The Chinese roll out the red carpet and assure the visitor that his is really an extraordinary mission. The distinguished guest is treated alternately with deference and disdain — depending on what he brought along for his hosts in the form of concessions.

Since high-level trips to Peking are still not routine events, the American official's visit is given saturation coverage by the world press. The last thing he wants is to be snubbed by the Chinese leadership, thus making him look foolish by having him deal only with lower-level officials and — horror of horrors — have his trip declared a failure.

So the prudent emissary makes sure he brings enough in his briefcase to assure the royal treatment in Peking. The result is what in Imperial China was called the kowtow. In no other capital do American dignitaries assume the role of supplicants begging the approval of their hosts.

The technique clearly worked with the cowboy from Washington. My associate Dale Van Atta has seen a series of memos, classified "secret," in which Baldrige demanded an increase in the quantity and quality of exports as proof of our friendship for China.

On Jan. 26, 1983, Baldrige wrote to the president's national security adviser, William Clark, urging him to persuade the president to change the export rules. Since the secret policy regarding exports to China was worked out in July 1981, Baldrige complained, "agreement has been reached between Commerce and Defense on only 14 of over 200 items... and the process of seeking such agreement has ground to a halt."

Change the rules so the Pentagon's picky objections wouldn't kill lucrative export deals, Baldrige urged, adding, "Time is of the essence."

On March 29, he wrote Clark again, recommending four possible options. The one the administration has chosen puts Communist China "in the Free World export licensing category, thereby treating it the same as Yugoslavia and India."

This policy, Baldrige wrote, would be "relatively simple to administer" (that is, no hassles with the Pentagon) and would create "closer strategic ties between (China) and the United States." He conceded that there were three drawbacks:

— Might entail unacceptable risk to long-term U.S. national security interests.

— "Politically unacceptable to treat China as a Free World country."

But these misgivings were overridden, and Baldrige was allowed to promise the Chinese that export controls would be relaxed just for them. Since his return from Peking in late May, Baldrige has had an interagency group trying to implement the promises he made.

Baldrige has won a major victory — over the Pentagon. It may be years before the true cost of his victory becomes clear.

GEORGE F. WILL

States caught in services crunch

WASHINGTON — State politics are compelling many Americans to consider in 1983 a question that is likely to be important nationally in 1984.

George F. Will

In 1980 Ronald Reagan pressed this question: What kind of government do you want? Thirty-three months later, the answer is reasonably clear. The politics of Congress (where the budget cutting is finished for the foreseeable future) and the actions of many state legislatures indicate that the answer is: Americans want a "services government" at least as large as the one they have.

That is not the answer Reagan wanted, but there it is, so a 1984 question may be: Well, all right then, how are you going to pay for it? Consider how that question is vexing five states containing almost one-third of the nation's population.

Having inherited a deficit, Ohio's new Democratic governor, Richard Celeste, has made permanent a "temporary" personal income-tax increase imposed by the Republican who governed for 16 of the preceding 20 years. Celeste has added his own increase, for a two-year increase of 90 percent. The vote was along party lines. Republicans concede the need for new taxes, but prefer different ones, and object to Celeste's spending plans. Ohio is planning to spend 30 percent more in 1984-85 than in 1982-83.

Having inherited a deficit (from a Republican who governed for 13 years), Michigan's new Democratic Gov. James Blanchard has imposed a 38 percent increase in the personal income tax. Only one Republican legislator voted for it.

Texas has not had a tax increase for 12 years. Its new Democratic governor, Mark White (a Republican had governed for four years) promised, as a candidate, not to raise taxes. He also promised substantial enrichments of public services, including a 24 percent pay raise for teachers. He now proposes to raise a two-year total of $1.7 billion with "sin taxes" (even taxing sinful pinball machines) and five cents more on a gallon of gasoline. The Legislature took a look and went home. White may call a special session.

A federal court has compelled California to mail 346,615 state welfare and salary checks even though the state has been without a budget and hence without power to spend since June 30. George Deukmejian, the new Republican governor (after eight Democratic years), campaigned on a promise of no new taxes for four years.

I remember asking him how he would cope with the $1 billion deficit he foresaw. Cut spending, he said. Care to say where? I asked. He said: the Coastal Commission, for example. I remember hoping, for his sake, that the Commission has a budget of at least $1 billion. (Its last budget was a smidgen more than $9 million.) He has cut energetically, not even sparing today's sacred sector, education. The Democratic-controlled Legislature (with many Republicans concurring) wants to spend more, especially on education, and proposes new taxes.

Last week, Pennsylvania's governor, Richard L. Thornburgh, a Republican in his second term, faced a choice: He could use his line-item veto to balance the budget sent to him, knocking out $1 billion, one dollar in every eight. Or he could veto the whole thing and continue the stalemate with the Legislature while 230,000 state welfare and pay checks sat unmailed. He used the item veto.

The Republican-controlled state Senate had given him the new revenues (about $450 million) he requested, but the Democratic-controlled House, which added spending, provided no new revenues, on the peculiar ground that he had asked for too few. The Senate accepted the House version just so something could go to the governor's desk. To concentrate the House's mind, Thornburgh vetoed the House's appropriation for itself. I like his style.

Five summers ago, the nation's rightward swing was announced with a cymbal-crash: California's Proposition 13 cut taxes. Already in 1983, 30 states have raised taxes; at least 17 have raised personal-income or sales taxes.

Last summer, before the recovery was visible, President Reagan won passage of a $98.3 billion tax increase over five years. Last week, in St. Louis, John Glenn was asked if he would support a tax increase to reduce deficits. He said, "We may have to come to that" because projected deficits will require government to borrow about three-quarters of private savings, and even at six percent unemployment the deficit would exceed $100 billion.

Reagan can use his veto and run against Congress, but only so far. Voters are learning in their states in 1983 that the question is how — not whether — to pay for the government they have and intend to keep.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

In 1603, Sir Walter Raleigh was arrested for suspected complicity in a plot to dethrone England's King James I.

'Raucous caucus' shows Democrats don't have issues

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

EDITOR'S REPORT

SAN SIMEON, Calif. — A raucous caucus of women assembled in San Antonio the other day to proclaim that if women voters followed their lead in 1984, they'd be in the position of electing the next president of the U.S. The handpicked delegates to the National Women's Political Caucus Convention all denounced President Reagan and were dutifully, I thought shamefully, courted by Democratic presidential hopefuls.

Hearst

By this time, the Democrats seem to have run out of issues. When President Reagan took office, he assumed a staggering inflation rate and a wobbly economy sunk in hopelessness and helplessness. He stayed the course, brought inflation down to around 5 percent and stimulated stagnant production. It was pretty much the same method applied by Prime Minister Mrs. Margaret Thatcher to a sick economy in Britain.

Aided as well by a divisive split within a warring opposition Labor Party, Mrs. Thatcher recently won re-election by a real landslide. Longtime Labor supporters switched to vote Conservative for the first time in their lives. Britain's doughty prime minister still persists in slashing government spending and boondoggle projects.

IT COMES as no surprise then that Democratic presidential aspirants find themselves bankrupt for any meaningful party planks. They looked to education which President Reagan adroitly removed from their grasp. They found teachers uncertain about Democratic hot air promises. So the fashionable liberated term, "gender-gap," meaning women voters left out in the cold by this administration, was coined. The women's caucus sought to cash in on this issue.

The lady delegates had the invited Democratic aspirants saying what each of them would do if elected president. Some of the women anointed by the caucus to speak in behalf of "all U.S. women," were distinctly intemperate and abusive. They tried to mangle President Reagan with rancor, ignored all administration accomplishments and insisted that there isn't a minority around who'd support the president. There isn't a syllable of truth in all this vitriol.

One ubiquitous example of woman power at the conference was Bella Abzug, a strident, ex-congresswoman from New York, best known for wearing outrageous-looking hats which match her harsh tones. She has been trying to get elected to something, somewhere for years and has, I'm delighted to note, failed singularly. As I know, New Yorkers can be a long-suffering and tolerant lot but they always draw the line at giving another chance to the likes of Bella Abzug.

HER COMPANIONS-in-arms, they did link arms to show unity on a few occasions, are actually the auxiliaries of the one-time "Women for McGovern." Just think back to 1972 and recall how George McGovern, with their solid backing, won only the state of Massachusetts and Washington, D.C., in his run for the presidency.

The caucus chairman, oops, chairwoman, Kathy Wilson, derided President Reagan as "a dangerous man... a one-term president." Well, she is entitled to her own opinion but should the president choose to run for re-election, my own opinion is that he'll be a two-time president. Obviously, President Reagan cannot mollify people like these in any way and shouldn't even try. They spend all their time talking to each other and the like-minded, never brooking argument.

What concerns me above all the venomous outbursts generated by this self-styled women's caucus is the selectivity of media polls taken across the country. They purported to show that women more than men were anti-Reagan. When you examine any detailed breakdown of the polls, these conclusions are wholly incorrect except where male voters are concerned. It depends, for instance, in what professional or non-professional activities women are engaged.

THEN, YOU FIND percentages lining up pretty much like the men who overwhelmingly approve of the president's performance. What are we to make of all this polling so far in advance of even a convention choice for a Democratic nominee? It sure smacks to me of loaded guesswork based on a tiny number of respondents in certain fields. The commentator, given his or her own political philosophy, chooses the anti-Reagan theme if that's the suit and rides it hard.

Should the sampling be even close in a specific area, it's either ignored or glossed over as trivia. When a pro-Reagan trend turns up unmistakably, it somehow gets space, as we used to say, back with the truss ads or deeply buried at the bottom of a news piece. Needless to say, it hardly ever is commented upon on TV.

I'd be remiss, too, if I let these harridans masquerading as guardians of our democracy off the hook too easily. They had no qualms whatever about cuffing around their own Democrats. John Glenn, an eminent senator and former astronaut, was hooted. Why? He referred to the traditional "man and wife." The women's caucus cheerleaders or ringleaders prefer, if you please, "husband and wife." Then Senator Gary Hart stirred their wrath when he went over the time limit by a couple of minutes. Some democratic procedure!

OBVIOUSLY, I don't have President Reagan's ear but I certainly would like to suggest that his advisers should persistently and publicly strip away the caucus pretentions to speak for American women. In 1980, they were a motley crew smothered by the magnitude of Ronald Reagan's triumph. As always is the case, the radical chic among them regrouped and thought their efforts achieved advantages for the Democrats in the 1982 midterm elections. Careful examination of those results has proved it didn't.

In 1980, the president opposed the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) and abortion. He won a plurality of the women's vote against the incumbent President Jimmy Carter. The caucus women's strategists claim loftily that he could "win their respect" by reversing his stand on ERA and abortion. This would, in my view, amount to some of the silliest political thinking of the day. The president, even to his severest critics, is hardly a silly man.

According to the caucus's statistics, there are 992 women in state legislatures; women hold 24 seats in Congress and are mayors in 76 cities with populations over 30,000. Less than 5 percent of all elected women legislators in the country attended the San Antonio conference. I think that is proof positive of the boasts by the caucus about their impact on women's votes.

SPEAKING OUT

Agency's existence depends on citizens

By EDIA HERNANDEZ

Edia Hernandez, a native Midlander, is president of the board of directors of Midland's Human Relations Council. She also is the mother of two and is employed as a production data specialist for a local energy firm.

Financial support for the Human Relations Council is given through private donors, but the unstable situation of our economy has threatened the existence of our agency. We are addressing the community to inform you of the possibility of the Human Relations Council closing because of a shortage of funds.

The Human Relations Council of Midland was established in the fall of 1970. Our purposes are to promote understanding and communications between all racial, religious and ethnic groups within Midland County.

The council has played a major role in helping to bring about many of the positive changes which have occurred during the past decade in Midland. To accomplish these purposes, the council has promoted equality of opportunity for all citizens. We have worked to reduce racial discrimination in housing, employment, education and other areas of our society.

We have provided procedures to deal with grievances and opened channels of communication. We have attempted to reduce tensions and facilitate orderly social changes. We have provided valuable information through radio forums. We have served as a resource for the school district, the local college district and Midland city government. We continue to serve as a source of information to all who request it.

We are an aid to the community especially during this period of economic recession, rapid population growth, increased unemployment and reduction of human services. The council presently provides the following services: Tenant and Landlord Relations Services, Food Bank Connection, Information and Referral Line, Energy Crisis Intervention, Weatherization Program, Housing Rehabilitation Community Development, Neighborhood Beautification, Community/Neighborhood Meetings on Crime Prevention, Attendance and Knowledge of Activities of Local Community Organization and Agencies, (PAFF) People Who Assist in Filling Out Forms pertaining to Social Security, Medicare, Food Stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC).

However, we still have much to accomplish before our work is completed. There is a great need to help people with re-employment skills, drug prevention, student drop-out prevention and tutoring for people of all ages.

The decision to close will affect all of the community. Therefore, we felt the need to share with you in this important decision. We need your input in order to make the right decision.

Please respond to this question: Do you think the Human Relations Council is valuable to our community and does it merit your support?

Your response will help determine the future of this agency. Human Relations Council, Post Office Box 2145, Midland, Texas 79702. Phone 684-5866.

Thank you!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Much ado

To The Editor:

There has been much ado in the media since the release of the report from the National Commission on Excellence in Education, which related to the state of American public education. As usual, would-be experts are using the report as a means of blaiming the public schools and public school teachers of America for whatever problems they perceive to be present in public education.

I cannot help but wonder where these experts were last year and the year before when public school educators voiced their concerns about these same issues. The issues of overcrowded primary classrooms, the mountains of paper work, inadequate teaching supplies, violence, poor discipline, and low pay — all these are symbols of the problems present in our larger society. After all, we are products of our environment.

The shortage of teachers in specific areas is also not a new problem. If Mr. Reagan had asked those of us who teach, we could have told him that there would soon be a shortage of math and science teachers. Bright young people have chosen to go into careers that will provide them with three meals a day, as well as provide them the respect of their community.

There are no quick fixes to educational problems. In order to solve our present problems, there must be commitments from all areas of our society — parents, teachers and government.

Merit pay is not the answer to the problem, however, teachers have open minds. If merit pay is as valid of an idea as people think it is, maybe it should be tested first in the White House, Congress and the governors mansion in Tennessee. If these public officials are willing to be paid on the basis of their performance, perhaps teachers will be willing also to be paid based on their performance.

In spite of criticisms, I submit that public schools and public school teachers of America have done and are continuing to do a good job. What other institution takes whatever raw material it is sent and, in turn, creates astronauts, doctors, lawyers, nurses, computer experts and yes, even presidents? I challenge anyone to match the record of public education.

Keep MidTran

To The Editor:

I'm writing in regard to MIDTRAN closing down and stopping picking up old people to take them to the doctor's office and to get groceries or to the senior center. What will we old people do who have no way to go at all?

I think it's a shame that old people are picked on when they have but a few years to live. Reagan has picked on us enough.

I'm a widow of 70 years trying to live on $390 a month and pay my bills.

My Bible says, "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him is sin." Those people at MIDTRAN are doing good. They love old people. It's a shame other people don't care enough to keep helping.

Misplaced rebels

To The Editor:

Just a few random jottings.

Ms. Mim's heart is in the right place but her guerrillas aren't. America trains the army of El Salvador. We support the guerrillas of Nicaragua. The results of a poll show that an appalling number of people don't know which side(s) we support in Central America.

Julie Ann Giles and Mark Buttery (the young people who cared enough to write letters to the editor), I salute you and hope to "hear" from you again. Young people should be encouraged to speak out (and be listened to) on issues they feel are important.

I do a great deal of walking. From time to time, I have been amazed by the carelessness(?) of people who throw glass bottles from cars which break on the curbs. Not long ago I stepped on the neck of a bottle hidden in the grass. It broke under my foot. I wasn't hurt; but what if I had been wearing sandals, or worse yet, been barefoot? People could be seriously hurt; not to mention children and animals. People, please think and don't throw!

Thanks, Midland

To The Editor:

On behalf of the Midland Unit Board of Directors for the American Cancer Society, I would like to express our deep thanks to everyone who participated and assisted with the 1st Annual Jimmy Allison Memorial Golf Tournament. Through this event, over $10,000 was raised to aid in the fight against cancer.

A special thanks to the board of Midland Country Club and its staff for their invaluable assistance. In addition, we appreciate the sponsors who helped keep expenses to a minimum. Many local businesses contributed prizes to ensure the success of the event.

We also appreciate the volunteers who donated their time to assist during the tournament. We hope everyone had an enjoyable time and look forward to even more successful tournaments in the future. This tournament raises needed funds to assist in cancer control programs and is dedicated to the memory of one of Midland's leading citizens.

Less than prudent

To The Editor:

The recent quotes (Midland Reporter-Telegram, July 6, 1983) attributed to Mr. Phillip Marcum concerning the action being taken by Stanford N. Phelps to force MGF Oil Corporation into Chapter 7 bankruptcy is but one more example of the clearly less than prudent decision-making that has resulted in the rapid demise of that company. Statements such as "We were moving forward when Mr. Phelps caused this unfortunate incident" and "Phelps...beginning proceedings against MGF...is an outrageous move" add nothing to the current negotiating process and in all probability will harden Mr. Phelps' resolve to see the company brought to its knees.

Being a former employee and current shareholder of MGF, I do not believe that the current situation can entirely be attributed to the poor economic climate. Consider the following:

1. Since January 1, 1983, the quoted stock price of MGF has fallen from 3⅜ to 1⅛ — a drop of almost 70 percent. No other energy related stock has even approached that dismal performance since the beginning of this year.

2. MGF received a qualfied audit opinion by professional certified public accountants for the year ending Dec. 31, 1982. This qualification questioned the continued viability of MGF as an entity. Although other companies have encountered varying degrees of financial difficulty in the past year and a half, very few have had this stigma attached.

3. The work force has been reduced from a peak of some 1,450 employees on Feb. 1, 1982, to approximately 30 percent of that total as of this time. Yet some questionable and, I might add, relatively high priced administrative staff still remain performing tasks that one could reasonably deny the need for at this time.

No, the problem is not only the economy. While it is true that MGF experienced a period of uncontrolled growth and was adversely affected when the economy soured, it also appears to be true that the company experienced a period of uncontrolled management and ego. Now something should be done about that. There should be some additional house cleaning, but not at the levels where it has been done. The "house" should be cleaned at the top — where the ultimate responsibility for this decline rests — and then, hopefully, the company will survive and prosper.

If such action is not forthcoming, then I would respond with the old adage — "You made your bed, now lie in it."

Library wrap?

To The Editor:

Recently I read of a proposal to put a "wrap-around" on the present courthouse to give ample law space for many years to come.

Now, why not put a "wrap-around" on the present library which will give ample space for many years to come? The library is well-located.

Midland adults learn to have fun only one way

Bill Modisett

Don't get me wrong; I like kids. But while they're in a videogame arcade doing their thing with Pac-Man and Donkey Kong, where are the grown-ups? In an office downtown working 8 to 5 and getting nothing but ulcers and headaches.

At least that's the way it was until Midland City Council gave us office-bound lifers a way out of the doldrums in the form of — one-way streets!

It used to be that the only entertainment you had driving to work along Texas Avenue or home along Illinois was to leisurely watch the early-morning ritual of people leaving their houses, enjoy the beauty of Crier Park rose garden or view the majestic downtown skyline as morning sky colors played across mirrored glass. Not anymore, though. Now the kids aren't the only ones who get to enjoy letting their aggressions and imaginations run wild.

Joe G. leaves for his downtown office at 7:25 a.m. Everything's normal until he nears downtown. But as he turns onto Texas Avenue, a miraculous transformation occurs. His stylish businessman's hat and conservative wire-frame glasses become a helmet and goggles. His Olds Delta 88 takes on the sleek design of an Indy 500-style race car.

Joe glances to his left, to the car next to him, and realizes it will take him going into the first turn if he doesn't act. He pushes the pedal to the floor and streaks ahead, brakes slightly to avoid hitting the car immediately ahead of him and slips ahead of the aggressor to his left.

Confident that he has claimed the lead, with adrenalin pumping, Joe pushes his machine to the limit. As he reaches Marienfeld Street, Joe's helmet becomes a stylish Stetson again, his goggles wire-frame glasses. He enters his downtown office as mild-mannered Joe G., displaying none of the aggressiveness that makes him king of the track.

Scenario II takes place on Illinois Avenue at 4:45 p.m. Bart H. is on his way home when it comes over him. Suddenly he's Luke Duke taking his souped-up Charger over the backroads of Hazzard County.

There's only one thing to do, so Luke ducks into another lane, passes a slow-moving, grandmother type, veers back into the center lane and speeds ahead. Suddenly Luke makes a hard left from the center lane, slides onto a side road. The sheriff, coming alongside Luke but out of his view, brakes to avoid hitting the Duke boy.

Then Luke — uh, Bart — circles back to get the butter his wife had asked him to bring home.

The final scenario is straight out of CHiPs, complete with cars changing into twisted hunks of metal, exploding into balls of fire and trying to imitate birds before realizing they can't stay airborne. All the while, other vehicles stack up like dominoes trying to avoid a collision, but of course they can't. It's in the script.

Midland's one-way streets really have made the drive to and from downtown an eventful experience. Finally, we grown-ups are getting to have some fun with our imaginations, too.

It's about time. Just don't let the kids find out that we're getting to act like kids on the one-way streets. If they do, they'll never be satisfied watching TV again!

Watson takes one-shot British Open lead

AP Laserphoto

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Tom Watson was handed a 1-shot, third-round lead by a scowling Craig Stadler, who slashed and thrashed his way to a double bogey-6 on the final hole Saturday at the 112th British Open golf championship.

"The lead, that's where I want to be going into the last round of any tournament," said Watson, who had finished his comeback-round of 70 moments before Stadler's unhappy adventures in knee-deep hay on the 54th hole.

"Actually, I have mixed emotions," said Watson, the defending champion who hopes to become the first man to win the British title five times.

"I struggled with the driver all day, and that's not a very good club to have go sour on you going into the last round of the Open championship.

"But I'm now in the lead, and that's where I want to be. So if I can get the big club working tomorrow, I should have a good chance to do well."

THE DRIVER cost him a double bogey on the first hole. He hit it unplayable under a bush, had to drop out and made double bogey. He spent the rest of the mild, breezy day trying to get it back.

Watson, golf's Player of the Year five of the past six seasons, finished three trips over the vandalized Royal Birkdale Golf Club links in 205, eight shots under par.

Stadler, who led through the first 53 holes of this event, held a 1-shot advantage until his drive on the 18th hole was taken by the wind and whipped 80 yards off line into deep rough.

"It looked like a pidgeon," Stadler said. He could do nothing but hack it back to the fairway, then hit his third into a bunker. He came out long and 2- putted for the six that cost him the top spot. He goes into Sunday's final round with a 206 total.

But he isn't the only one Watson has to worry about. Huddled in a cozy little group at the top of the standings are an elite cadre of some of the game's most accomplished performers: current PGA champion Ray Floyd, Australian David Graham, Lee Trevino and the Britain's Nick Faldo. All are within 3 shots of the lead.

"It should be exciting," Watson said. "There are a lot of players playing well, Graham, Stadler, Floyd. You can't count anybody out.

"I know what I have to do. I have to shoot in the 60s. I just have to go out and do it," he said.

Stadler agreed.

"The players that are at the top are capable of playing very, very well. Somebody will come out of the box on Sunday — hopefully it will be me."

THOSE HOPES were echoed — for different reasons — by Graham, Floyd and Faldo, tied at 207.

"Give me this one and Augusta (the Masters) and I could retire happy," said Graham, who already owns a U.S. Open and PGA championship. Graham, taking daily medication for a hand problem, scattered nine 3s across his card, on the way to a 67. The last of those 3s was an eagle on the 17th hole, nailed down by a 40-foot putt.

Faldo, 25, a three-time British PGA champion and seeking to become only the second Englishman to win this national championship since 1948, is the favorite of the 30,000-plus galleries. Twice he received applause so warm he paused to wipe tears from his eyes. He shot a 71 that included birdies on all the par-5 holes.

The veteran Floyd, holder of two PGA and one Masters crown, is stalking his first national open title. He had a 69 that, he said, "could have been a 64. I threw away several shots out there."

Trevino was another stroke back at 208 after a wildly erratic 73 that included four birdies and six bogeys. One of those bogeys, on the 18th, was in the manner of a save. He got it on a 20-foot putt that kept him within 3 strokes of the top spot and sent him into a happy little dance around the green.

"It's there. I can feel it. I can still do it," said Trevino, 43, who won the first of two consecutive British Open titles on these same brush-covered dunes and sandhills in 1971.

AMERICANS FUZZY Zoeller, Andy Bean and two-time U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin, along with South African Mark McNulty were at 209, only 4 off the pace. Zoeller shot a 67, McNulty 68, Bean 70 and Irwin a 72 that should have been at least a shot better.

Usually a careful, meticulous player, Irwin left an 18-foot birdie putt hanging on the lip of the cup on the 14th hole, then walked up and whiffed a back-handed tap-in. He missed the ball entirely, but called the stroke on himself.

"The intent was there," he said. "I meant to hit the ball. I can't explain it. I just got careless."

Jack Nicklaus, who has won this title three times and has been runner-up a record seven times, struggled to an indifferent 72 that left him at 215, apparently out of the title chase. Masters champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain was 69-211 and U.S. Open title-holder Larry Nelson 73-216.

Watson used the driver only four times, and got into the rough each time.

"I've got some work to do there," he said after the round and headed for the practice area.

The most damage was caused by his first shot, which put him in a double- bogey hole.

He got one of the shots back with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 10th, and flipped a little sand wedge shot to 5 feet for birdie on the 15th.

After driving far to the left on the par-5 15th, he played back to the fairway, hit an 8-iron to 8 feet and made the putt to go 8 under par for the tournament. He retained the standing with a 6-foot putt on the 18th, a stroke that saved par and, as it turned out, gave him the lead.

The start of the day's play was delayed 20 minutes so officials could repair damage caused by vandals, who dug a number of huge, deep holes and painted slogans on the sixth green overnight. A protest group seeking the release from prison of a convicted killer took credit for the vandalism.

In order to get the round in, officials declared portions of the green "ground under repair." Players were allowed to lift from the damaged areas in order to have a clear putting avenue to the hole.

Late starters meet in USFL's first championship game

DENVER (AP) — The inaugural United States Football League championship game brings together the Michigan Panthers, a team which got started late, against the Philadelphia Stars' Jim Mora, a coach who got started late.

Michigan enters Sunday night's game on a definite roll. It lost four of its first five games, one of them against Oakland, then won 11 of the remaining 13 during the regular season to finish at 12-6 and in possession of the Central Division championship.

Then Coach Jim Stanley's Panthers knocked off the Western Division winners, the Invaders, 37-21 to move into the title game in Mile High Stadium.

THE STARS didn't hire Mora as their head coach until Jan. 12, more than a week after the USFL draft and less than two months before the season began. They had signed George Perles, an assistant coach with the National Football League's Pittsburgh Steelers, to be their field boss, but Perles changed his mind and went instead to Michigan State. Still, the Stars started hot and never cooled off.

They won their first three games, lost one, won eight in a row before losing again and put together a four-game winning streak before dropping the meaningless season finale.

Their 15-3 record was the best in the league, but it seemed it would all be for naught when their ball-handling fell apart in the semifinal playoff against Chicago. Four interceptions and three fumbles enabled the Blitz to build a 38-17 lead early in the fourth quarter.

Then, in one of the more remarkable comebacks in pro football history, they forced overtime, won the second coin flip and drove 73 yards in 14 plays, Kelvin Bryant's 1-yard dive capping the 44-38 victory.

"Our comeback against Chicago will hopefully carry over into the title game," said Mora. "Michigan is definitely playing better now than when we first played them," a 29-20 victory by the Stars in Philadelphia last June 5.

THE USFL had wildly divergent attendance figures for its two playoff games — a scant 15,684 in Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium and a league-record 60,237 (built in part on reduced-price tickets) in the Pontiac Silverdome. The league was hoping for 45,000 or more in Mile High Stadium (capacity: 75,123).

At about noon Saturday, ticket sales edged past 40,000. The weather for the game was expected to be excellent — temperatures in the 70s and clear skies.

AS GAME-DAY approached, Denver was gripped by indifference. Unlike the frenetic atmosphere which takes over the NFL's Super Bowl city each January, the Mile High City went about its business with no fanfare for the first USFL title game.

Some attention was being diverted 60 miles away to Greeley, Colo., where Denver Broncos' rookie quarterback John Elway, the NFL's No. 1 draft choice (by Baltimore before The Trade) was holding court.

Each USFL team's quarterback might best be described as a middle-rounder. That's what Philadelphia's Chuck Fusina was in 1979 out of the University of Pittsburgh and what Michhgan's Bobby Hebert might have been this year out of Northwest Louisiana State had he not chosen to sign immediately with the Panthers.

Fusina who never got past the clipboard-carrying stage in three years with the NFL's Tampa Bay Buccaneers, then was traded to San Francisco and quickly cut by the 49ers. He was substitute teaching when the Stars' president and general manager, Carl Peterson, went quarterback shopping.

The people with the Bucs and 49ers gave him tepid reviews, taking away points because Fusina couldn't throw long. Then Peterson spoke to Joe Paterno at Pitt. "Joe told me, too, that his arm was only average. But he said, 'What Chuck does, Carl, is win, and for that reason I think he'd be perfect for your ballclub."

FUSINA WASN'T overwhelming — fifth among USFL passers — but he didn't have to be. He had Kelvin Bryant, the league's No. 2 rusher (1,442 yards) behind heralded Herschel Walker. And when Fusina and Bryant weren't on the field, the Stars trotted out the Doghouse Defense, which allowed the fewest points in the league, 204 in 18 games.

Hebert, a soft-spoken rookie out of the Louisiana Cajun country, wound up as the USFL's passing champ. At the start of the season, though, the question wasn't whether he'd finish first but whether he'd finish at all. In the first five games he was sacked 15 times. He was running for his life.

Then Stanley went out and did some shopping of his own — for linemen to protect his quarterback. He picked up a fistful of former Pittsburgh Steelers (Ray Pinney, Tyrone McGriff, Thom Dornbrook) and put them in front of Hebert. sincs then, Hebert has been trapped behind the line only five times. Michigan finished second in scoring with 451 points, five behind Chicago.

"They talk about their line and the additions they've made there," said the Stars' Mora. "But Bobby Hebert's improvement, in my mind, is at least as much a factor in their being in this game right now."

Like the Stars, the Panthers had a solid ground game led by Ken Lacy, a rookie out of Tulsa. he finished third in the league with 1,180 yards.

The Panthers, like the Stars, also rely heavily on defense, particularly on the quarterback-stalking talents of John Corker. He had been a little-used linebacker for three years with Houston in the NFL, then was released last November. He was signed by the Panthers and wound up leading the league in sacks with 28½. He's known these days as Sac Man.

"My confidence was taken away in Houston. This has given it back," he said, looking back at the just-ended season. Then, looking to the postseason, he added: "We owed Oakland and we paid 'em back. That Philadelphia bunch — we owe them, too."

Cubs split with Travelers

Baker hits winner in first game

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.— The Midland Cubs split a doubleheader with the Arkansas Travelers Saturday night. The Cubs won the first game but dropped the second half of the twinbill to fall to 12-15 in the second half.

The Cub offense, on holiday in Jackson, scored 10 times in the twinbill, but the Cubs escaped with only a split against the lowly Travs due to erratic pitching. The series is even at two games apiece.

Midland has now lost eleven of fourteen with a series-ending game Monday, the last stop before Wednesday's Texas League All-Star game in El Paso.

MIDLAND TOOK the first game 6-4 behind the power hitting of the top third of the order. Jay Loviglio had a double and a triple. Rick Baker went three-for-four with a double, homer and three RBI that accounted for the final two Midland runs, and Bill Hatcher slammed two doubles in four tries.

Wright pitched six innings before giving way to Bill Johnson in the seventh. Johnson allowed one hit en route to his fifth save.

IN THE second game, Arkansas got on the board early and often to squelch Cub hopes of a sweep. The Travs rebounded from game one with a 10-4 shelling of Midland in the nightcap.

Tom Thurberg, in his first appearance for the Travelers this year, pitched a complete game win against the slumping Cubs. Thurberg, a former New York Met, just transferred to Arkansas from AAA Louisville.

The Cubs kept their warm bats going from game one by notching two runs in the first, but after Thurberg settled in the Cubs could get little going.

Gotay Mills, who has had 17 hits in the past week, led off the Arkansas first with a home run to cut the Cub lead to 2-1.

The third inning did the Cubs in. Leading 2-1 and with one out, Midland got blown right out of the ball park by a 6-run rally that saw eleven batters go to the plate, five hits, a walk and two beaned batsmen.

With one down, Mills laid down a bunt single. Rod Booker singled and Mark Salas drew a walk to fill the bases against Cub starter Darryl Banks.

Banks fanned Dan Ayer for the second out, but beaned Bob Helsom to force in the tie run. Luis Ojeda singled in a pair, then a Barry Sayler double to the left field fence scored two more.

Things got a little nasty when Banks beaned Traveler Steve Pendleton. Pendleton's subsequent injury will force him out of this week's TL All Star game.

Larry Reynolds, up for the second time in the inning, singled Sayler in for a 7-2 Arkansas lead.

That was all she wrote for the Cubs.

Banks was the loser, now 9-7.

ELSEWHERE IN the Texas League, Shreveport easily won a battle of division leaders as they routed West's El Paso Diablos, 11-1; Beaumont took an 8-5 decision from Jackson and Tulsa at San Antonio was postponed by rain.

The Diablos and Captains will play one game today as will the Gators and Mets. Tulsa and San Antonio will play a doubleheader to make up for back-to-back rainouts.

1914 — Babe Adams of the Pittsburgh Pirates pitched 21 innings without issuing a walk, but a home run by the New York Giants' Larry Doyle did him in as Rube Marquard went all the way for the 3-1 victory.

Dallas offense nips defense

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Free agent fullback Clyde Mackey of Albany State ran 18 yards for a touchdown to give the offense a 24-23 victory over the defense on the final play of a rookies scrimmage Saturday at the Dallas Cowboys training camp.

Mackey was the leading rusher with 30 yards on two carries. Free agent fullback Terrance Jones of Oregon had the day's longest run from the scrimmage, 15 yards.

Free agent quarterback Brian Ransom of Tennessee State led the passers with three completions in five attempts for 28 yards. The top receiver was free agent Stephen Cox of Utah.

On defense, number-one draft choice Jim Jeffcoat of Arizona State had a quarterback sack plus a tackle for a five-yard loss. Second-year linebacker Jeff Rohrer of Yale caused a fumble.

Former South African rugby star Naas Botha turned in a sparkling performance, connecting on a 56-yard field goal and a 49-yard punt. He placed another punt out of bounds inside the 20-yard line.

Stallings wins Fun Run 10K

The weather was perfect, cool and breezy and only slightly humid, as 128 runners participated Saturday morning in the Midlander Health and Racquet Club's First Annual Big Brothers Big Sisters Run For Fun.

The Run, co-sponsored by the Midlander and Petroplex Savings, benefitted Big Brothers-Big Sisters with all proceeds donated to the service organization.

Entrants ranged from small children under the age of 12 to adults over 50. Two different runs were offered for the runners, one of two miles and another 10 kilometers in distance.

Barely 10 minutes after the 7:15 a.m. start, Mike Williams of Odessa jetted across the finish line in the two mile at 10:26. Williams said the pace "wasn't too fast at the first, but one of the 10k guys was giving us a good run. It was a good pace, a little humid." Williams was the first of 58 two-milers to finish. Moments later Scott Hammond came in second and Mike Zinn finished third one minute and three seconds behind Williams.

Carol Jochum was the first woman finisher in the two mile. Jochum was 14th overall.

Steve Stallings of Stanton called the pace "a little slow" after finishing first in the 10k run. Stallings' time of 32:55 was solid but off from his personal record and his target time of 32:30. "Seven is a little early for me. The time wasn't close to my best time but I can't feel too bad. Weather-wise it was as good as you could ask," Stallings said. Stallings, a CPA, competes about once a month in the summer. Asked about the Midlander's first Run For Fun, Stallings was enthusiastic. "I enjoyed it. The guys did a real good job and the proceeds go to a good cause."

By IRA ROSENFELD
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — They called themselves Monarchs, Barons, Giants and Eagles, names of grandeur and glory. But their carriages were old buses, their domain the backroads of America, their rewards a few dollars, the smiles of their fans and a chance to play baseball — the game they loved.

"By 1950 the major leagues had signed the top two dozen players from the Negro Leagues, taking away our best drawing cards and killing our teams," Walter "Buck" Leonard said in a recent interview.

Leonard was inducted into Baseball's Hall of Fame in 1972, although he never made it to the majors. Forty-years-old and past his prime in 1950, Leonard went to Mexico, where he played another five years.

"I was getting on a little bit and couldn't run much. But in Mexico all they wanted me for was to hit and I could still do that," said Leonard, who wound up with a .355 career batting average. He does not begrudge the fame and fortune that almost certainly would have been his had the major leagues integrated earlier.

"You can't think about that" Leonard said. "The first one was Jackie, and while he wasn't the best baseball player in the Negro Leagues, I have never heard anyone say he wasn't the perfect man to break the color line.

"Jackie had the right temperament, education and could speak well — all the things that were necessary if you were going to be the first player to go from the Negro Leagues to the majors."

LEONARD, WHOSE teams included the Birmingham Barons and the Homestead Grays, joined fellow Negro League stars Monte Irvin and Jimmy Crutchfield in Washington this month for a screening of a new film, "There Was Always Sun Shining Someplace: Life in the Negro Baseball Leagues."

The film, which will be aired by Public Broadcasting System this fall, was culled from more than 1,000 pictures and interviews with more than 80 former players.

There is also rare footage of a game in Venezuela, in which a team of black all-stars stopped the 1947 World Series-champion New York Yankees 1-0 behind a one-hitter by the Kansas City Monarchs' Hilton Smith.

"When I played in 1934 they gave us 60 cents a day meal money," he said. "Ham and eggs cost 25 cents, beef stew 15 cents. I ate beef stew every night for a week."

Gradually, the meal money rose. In 1950, Leonard received $2 a day. "When it went to $1, I opened a savings account," he laughed.

"I was promised $150 a month in 1935," said Crutchfield, an outfielder for the Pittsburgh Crawfords, considered by many the greatest Negro League team. "Of course they could have promised me $5,000 for all I ever saw."

League games were played on weekends from March to September, with long bus rides interrupted for games against local semi-pro and amateur teams, both black and white.

"We could play baseball, but we also gave the folks a show, something to remember us," Leonard said. "When you joined the team the first thing they taught you was how to play 'pepper,' a warmup game that attracted fans. We also held home-run hitting and accuracy-throwing contests."

Perhaps the greates Negro baseball team, the 1935 National League champion Pittsburgh Crawfords, fielded five future Hall of Famers. The five are (from left): Oscar Charleston (first) Judy Johnson (fifth) Cool Papa Bell (12), Josh Gibson (15) and Satchel Paige (17). Other players are unidentified.

"We would play two games in Chicago, drive all night and play two Sunday afternoon in another city, get back on the bus and return to Chicago without ever taking off our uniform," Crutchfield said. "We rode buses so much many of us couldn't sleep anyplace but a bus."

"There were a lot of places we couldn't eat or sleep because we were black," Leonard added. "Sometimes we would park near a restaurant and have to wait until a white person would come by who would go in and bring us our food. But we didn't care.

"We didn't march or protest. We didn't crave those things so we didn't miss them. It was the love of the game that kept us going."

In September, the Negro League World Series would take place between the best teams from the 16-team American and National Leagues.

"The Kansas City Monarchs were always tough, but so were the Springfield Braves, the East Orange BBC's, the Homestead Grays and the Newark Giants," Leonard said.The best may have been the Crawfords, ownwed by bookmaker Gus Greenlee.

THE PITTSBURGH team included five future Hall of Famers — Satchel Paige, Josh Gibson, Cool Papa Bell, Judy Johnson and Oscar Charleston, reputed to be the greatest star in the history of the Negro Leagues.

Fact and fancy have blended through the years to make the Crawfords larger than life.

Paige, who last pitched in the majors when he was 59, was said to throw a baseball with such accuracy it could stop on a dime. Gibson was reportedly the strongest man to ever put hardwood to horsehide. Bell was said to be so fast he could flip a light switch and jump into bed before the lights went out.

Crutchfield, 73, now living in Chicago, won wide acclaim for his fielding, including a knack for catching line drives barehanded and behind his back. He joined the Crawfords after his former team, the Indianapolis ABC's, missed a couple of paychecks.

"It was the Depression, and missing pay days was not that unusual," Crutchfield said. "We played a game in Pittsburgh and Mr. Greenlee said he would pay me regularly if I stayed behind to play with the Crawfords. Not that money was everything, you understand, but I was getting hungry after missing a few pay days. So I stayed in Pittsburgh."

Irvin, a Hall of Fame member, is currently assistant to the commissioner for baseball. A young star with the Newark Giants, Irvin later starred in the majors for the New York Giants.

"I guess you can say I saw both worlds," Irvin said. "The Negro Leagues had some fine players, but it was not the caliber of the Major Leagues. The biggest difference was the pitching. A team might have a decent pitcher but you didn't face major league caliber pitching day after day."

NCAA investigation hurts SMU's integrity

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University's integrity has suffered from the NCAA's four-month-old preliminary investigation into football recruiting, president L. Donald Shields says.

"The thing I value the most is my personal and professional integrity, and the integrity of this institution. And I feel our integrity has been violated," Shields told The Dallas Morning News in an interview published Saturday.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association began its investigation in March and must inform the university within six months of its progress. At that time, the NCAA can drop the investigation, continue the preliminary inquiry or inform SMU that it will conduct a full-scale investigation.

Shields said the preliminary inquiry "could be a long one."

SMU athletic director Bob Hitch told the News the probe has caused a morale problem in his department.

"This is probably the most miserable (four) months I've ever spent. My people in our department are very bitter. We've had a tremendous morale problem," he said.

The investigation "is awful embarrassing. It is a very sad time in our department. It's affecting families. It's affecting husbands and wives, and it's affecting 280 student athletes."

SMU's internal inquiry covers "all recruitment aspects," Shields said, and SMU attorney John McElhaney added that every media report on the NCAA investigation is being examined.

SMU will share its findings with the NCAA, including possible violations by other institutions, even though the NCAA has given the school no help in targeting areas to investigate, McElhaney said.

Shields said the NCAA has not contacted any SMU representative.

He added that he has been "terribly tempted" to comment, especially with information McElhaney has provided.

"Right now we could refute a good deal of the allegations," he said.

Despite a limited enforcement staff, the NCAA's probe "has been an active, repeated effort..." McElhaney said.

"Our alumni are extremely valuable to the university," Shields said. "They provide for a large percentage of the costs ... As for their involvement in the recruiting process causing problems or difficulties — at times it can and it has. Not only here, but at other institutions."

"We're very concerned," added Hitch. "Dr. Shields and I have been here only a short time. We feel we can solve our problems."

SMU has been placed on probation five times, and David Berst, NCAA director of enforcement, has admitted that a school's past has an effect on future investigations.

"Based on my limited experience, I would not say all member institutions are monitored equally," said Shields. "I believe the NCAA has a responsibility to take a more active role to see that an institution's good name is protected."

Publicity has complicated SMU's investigation, added McElhaney.

"We think it's been extremely unfortunate. I don't want to comment on the fairness or unfairness, but we feel the media attention has to some extent skewed and interfered with the investigative process," he said. "And some of the charges, coupled with headlines on the article, leads to on accusation of guilt which I think the public tends to accept."

Shields said he would initiate litigation against the NCAA only if "justice was not adequately dealt with."

He said his athletic staff would be held accountable for any transgressions, but would not say whether any jobs would be jeopardized.

"It would depend on what the findings are and whom they relate to," he said. "If the findings relate to individuals, yes."

Forsman shoots 65 to gain Quad Cities lead

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Dan Forsman, a tour rookie, shot a 5-under-par 65 in sweltering 91-degree heat Saturday to take a 1-stroke lead after the third round of the $200,000 Quad Cities Open.

Forsman carded six birdies and one bogey on the par-70 Oakwood Country Club course for a 54-hole total of 198, 12 under par. Tied at 199 were defending champion Payne Stewart, Greater Milwaukee Open winner Morris Hatalsky and early leader Danny Edwards.

Rookie Curt Byrum, who led after the first two rounds, shot a 4-over-par 74 Saturday to fall six shots off the pace. Jon Chaffee, who shot a tournament-record 62 on Friday, finished with a 71 Saturday and a 201 for 54 holes, three strokes behind Forsman.

THREE DAYS of baking heat had hardened the greens and fairways, and tournament officials had to stop play on the 18th hole Saturday to hose down the wilting green. But a breeze kicked up late in the day, and several players said that helped their games.

"The wind was the whole story," Edwards said.

Forsman, 25, attributed his good play Saturday to his wife. "She's been getting on me lately about practicing too much. I have changed my routine and been playing a lot looser."

Forsman said he plans to be "more aggressive" going into the final round, shooting for $36,000 in first prize money.

Stewart, who had suffered from back pains earlier in the week, said, "My back's a whole lot better. It's not 100 percent, but it's better."

Byrum, 24, of Onida, S.D., was the lone leader after the opening 18 holes Thursday, when he scored a tourney record-matching 63. This is his first year on the PGA tour. He shared the lead after 36 holes Friday with Chaffee and Edwards.

Only one golfer in the history of the tournament has held the lead for more than one day. Scott Hoch, champion in 1980, led all four rounds that year. He went into Saturday's action six under at 134 and quickly joined a pack of more than a half dozen challengers at nine under par.

Three gold winners lead qualifying in other events

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three swimmers who already have won gold medals at the LA83 International Invitational meet led qualifers in other events Saturday.

Heading the list was Vladimir Salnikov of the USSR who swam 3:57.48 in the prelims for the 400-meter freestyle, an event in which he holds the world rcord.

On Thursday in this new outdoor pool built for the 1984 Olympic Games, Salnikov lowered his own world record in the 800 to 7 minutes, 52.33 seconds. His world mark in the 400 is 3:57.48.

East Germany's Petra Schneider paced the qualifiers in the women's 200 individual medley with 2:20.15. On Friday she won the 400 individual medley with 4:45.92. She holds the world rcord in the latter event at 4:36.10 and has the second best time ever in the 200 at 2:11.79, just .06 off the world record.

Tiffany Cohen of Mission Viejo, Calif., winner of the 800 freestyle, the only gold captured by the United States in an individual event, led qualifiers in the women's 400 freestyle at 4:17.69.

East Germany's Cornelia Sirch has a shot a second gold medal. She already has one in the women's 200 backstroke and was second best in the 200 individual medley qualifying with 2:22.06.

Other leading qualifiers for Saturday events were John Sauerland of Shaker Heights, Ohio, and Robin Lemy of Los Angeles, both with 23.33 in the 50 freestyle; Dana Torres, Mission Viejo, 26.35 in the women's 50 and Bill Barrett of Los Angeles, 2:05.84 in the men's 400 individual medley.

Hamsho wins unanimous decision

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A brawling Mustafa Hamsho thoroughly dominated Wilfred Benitez Saturday to take a unanimous 12-round decision in a middleweight title elimination bout.

Hamsho, who is from Syria and lives in Bayonne, N.J., took the fight to Benitez from the opening bell and kept Benitez, of Puerto Rico, pinned in his corner against the ropes for most of the bout.

Benitez, 24, making only his second appearance as a middleweight since moving up in class, seemed unable to get untracked and the few punches he managed to land did no damage. Benitez has held the junior welterweight, welterweight and junior middleweight titles and has moved up in hopes of becoming the first man to win titles in four different weight classes.

The win puts the 29-year-old Hamsho, the World Boxing Council's top-ranked contender, in line for another fight against undisputed middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler. Hagler knocked out Hamsho in the 11th round of their earlier title bout in October 1981, and has signed to meet Roberto Duran here in November.

HAMSHO WON almost all the rounds on the cards of the ringside judges, with judge Lou Tabat scoring it 118-109, judge Chuck Minker 118-111 and judge Dalby Shirley 117-111. The Associated Press had Hamsho winning 119-111.

The tone of the fight was established early as Hamsho came out and immediately pushed Benitez back into his corner.

Hamsho, whose loss to Hagler was his only defeat in the last eight years, was all over Benitez during the fight, throwing punches from all directions.

Benitez ventured out of his corner only occasionally and whatever little counterpunching he did was light and ineffective.

The most interesting moments of the otherwise lackluster bout came in the third round when Benitez was thrown or pushed to the canvas on four separate occasions. Although Benitez seemingly was dazed at one point, referee Davey Pearl ruled no knockdowns and warned Hamsho for pushing and grabbing.

The fight was held outdoors at the Dunes Hotel in 100-degree heat that didn't seem to bother Hamsho but may have had an affect on Benitez.

Benitez's corner screamed at him throughout the latter part of the fight to get out in the middle of the ring and box but a listless Benitez was unable to respond.

Hamsho, 158¾, ran his record to 37-2-2, while Benitez, 157¾, fell to 44-3-1. Hamsho received $200,000 and Benitez $150,000 for the fight.

IN A companion bout, heavyweight Tim Witherspoon pounded out an easy 10-round decision over Floyd "Jumbo" Cummings. Witherspoon, who lost a split decision to WBC champion Larry Holmes in May, knocked Cummings down in the first round, hurt him again in the second, and won every round on the card.

In other fights on the undercard, middleweight Kevin Moley of Selden, N.Y., scored a 10-round decision over Marshall Felton of Los Angeles and heavyweight David Bey of Philadelphia knocked out Grady Daniels, Chicago, at 3:01 of first round.

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Jeff Buckingham, a senior on last season's University of Kansas track team, set an American record in the pole vault Saturday by clearing 18 feet, 10¾ inches at the Lawrence Open.

Buckingham set the record on his first attempt, then failed three times to break the world record of 19-0¾.

"It feels great," he said. "I've never held a major record before. Now I'm a step closer to the world record. I can look at the world record realistically now.

"I knew I had it (the record) when I took off. I had a good tailwind and got my speed up. I had no trouble gettting over."

Buckingham, who is 5-foot-8 and weighs 157 pounds, said he passed up a meet in France to compete in the Lawrence Open at Memorial Stadium.

"I'm sure glad I stayed home. I wanted to set the Memorial Stadium record. I've had a tough time here."

Broyles has RHCC lead by one shot

Defending champion Jake Broyles fired an even-par 71 Saturday to lead first round play in the Ninth Annual Frank Key Invitational Golf Classic.

Broyles is being pushed by Joe Gieb of Midland and Kermit's Roy Peden. Both shot one-over 72's to follow Broyles. The senior tournament, held at Ranchland Hills Country Club, has attracted nearly 150 golfers from all over west Texas and parts of Oklahoma.

Play continues today in the final round of the Classic.

Yankees add to Ranger troubles with 3-1 victory

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Rookie Ray Fontenot allowed five hits over seven innings and Dave Winfield drew a bases-loaded walk that broke a fifth-inning tie as the New York Yankees edged Texas 3-1 Saturday, handing the American League West-leading Rangers their eighth loss in 10 games.

Fontenot, 2-0, left the game in eighth after giving up a single and a walk. Reliever Rich Gossage struck out the side and then pitched the ninth for his 11th save.

Fontenot, making his third major-league start since being called up from Triple-A on June 19, struck out five and walked one. He allowed Dave Hostetler's run-scoring single in the second inning.

New York scored twice off Mike Smithson, 6-8, in the fifth inning as Roy Smalley and Jerry Mumphrey stroked one-out singles. Andre Robertson doubled in one run and, one out later, Bert Campaneris and Winfield drew consecutive walks.

American League

A's 12, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Pinch hitter Garry Hancock belted a two-run double to key a four-run seventh inning as the Oakland A's snapped a six-game losing streak with a 12-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The A's jumped on reliever Bob Stanley for seven runs in two innings to end a string of 10 consecutive losses to the Red Sox. The victory was only the second for Oakland in 22 games at Fenway Park, and their first since August 30, 1981.

Oakland rookie reliever Keith Atherton, 1-0, allowed just two hits in 5⅓ innings. He replaced rookie Gorman Heimueller, who gave up five runs in less than four innings.

Blue Jays 7, White Sox 5

CHICAGO — Willie Upshaw smashed a two-run homer to cap a three-run rally that broke a ninth-inning tie as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Chicago White Sox 7-5.

It was Toronto's eighth victory in nine games since the All-Star break.

Barry Bonnell drew a leadoff walk in the ninth from Juan Agosoto, 1-1, and moved to second on a groundout. Jesse Barfield then singled home Bonnell and Upshaw followed with a prodigious drive into the upper deck in right field.

Joey McLaughlin, 3-2, the third of four Toronto pitchers, picked up his second victory in as many nights. Randy Moffitt pitched the ninth, allowing Julio Cruz's sacrifice fly, for his ninth save.

Angels 8, Orioles 5

BALTIMORE — Brian Downing belted a two-run homer and Bobby Clark added a three-run shot during the fifth inning as the California Angels snapped a five-game losing streak by beating Baltimore 8-5, breaking the Orioles' six-game winning string.

Downing put California ahead 5-4 in the fifth when his two-run blast, his eighth of the year, chased Baltimore starter Dennis Martinez, 5-12. Reggie Jackson and Bobby Grich followed with singles off reliever Sammy Stewart and Clark then hit his fourth home run.

Angels starter Geoff Zahn, 6-4, won for the first time since coming off the disabled list July 11. He went 8⅔ innings and left after Benny Ayala's RBI single with two outs in the ninth. Luis Sanchez got the final out for his fifth save.

Indians 17, Royals 3

CLEVELAND — Gorman Thomas drove in four runs with three hits, including a home run, and Ron Hassey, Manny Trillo and Pat Tabler also homered as the Cleveland Indians pounded out 20 hits to pummel the Kansas City Royals 17-3.

Gaylord Perry, 3-11, was belted for six runs on seven hits in 2⅔ innings while making his second start for the Royals since being claimed on waivers.

The Indians broke the game open with a five-run third inning, highlighted by Hassey's homer, to take an 8-0 advantage and then added seven runs in seventh as Thomas and Tabler homered to complete the rout.

Brewers 5, Twins 0

MILWAUKEE — Moose Haas threw a three-hitter and the Milwaukee Brewers smacked four solo home runs to extend their winning streak to five games by defeating the Minnesota Twins 5-0.

Bill Schroeder, Jim Gantner, Paul Molitor and Robin Yount homered as the Brewers won for the 15th time in 19 games. Haas, 7-2, allowed only one runner past first base in posting his sixth win in seven decisions.

The Brewers gave Haas all the offense he needed with a run in the first off Frank Viola, 4-7. Ed Romero hit a one-out single, Molitor singled and Robin Yount walked to load the bases. Mike Brouhard then lined a shot off third baseman Gary Gaetti's glove, but the ball rebounded to shortstop Ron Washington, who forced Yount at second as Romero scored.

Schroeder rapped his second homer in three nights since being called up Tuesday from the Brewers' AAA farm club in Vancouver. The shot with one out in the second inning carried about 20 rows into the left-field bleachers.

Mid City rallies for 8-7 victory

BIG SPRING — The Mid City Little League baseball team staged a gallant comeback last night to knock Western out of the playoffs, 8-7.

Leading the way for Mid City was Andy Aleman and Russell Page. Aleman had a grand slam home run and Page scored the winning run in the last inning to pit Mid City in a losers-out game Monday in Big Spring against defending champion Lamesa.

Western scored one run in the first which Mid City answered in their half of the inning. But Western jumped out to a 7-1 edge with four runs in the second and a pair in the third.

Mid City climbed back into the game in the bottom of the third. Pitcher Dorey Thompson singled, then Clark Cranford got a base hit. A fielder's choice by Jason Brassard loaded the bases. Page got the comeback started with a run-producing single to make it 7-2 Western. Then Aleman provided the big shot, a grand slam to cut it to 7-6.

Rent It or Own It

What household task causes more blisters and aches and pains than raking? Now, the chore of dethatching a lawn can be made much easier with a power rake. Its flail blades penetrate to the soil as it removes accumulated grass clippings and roots. If not removed, this decaying organic material acts as a barrier to prevent the effective absorption of fertilizer and water. When properly dethatched, your lawn is ready to accept treatment, water and air which promote new growth. Rent a lawn sweeper to remove the thatch raised by the thatcher. And, oh yes, for the days ahead, keep a leaf blower in mind.

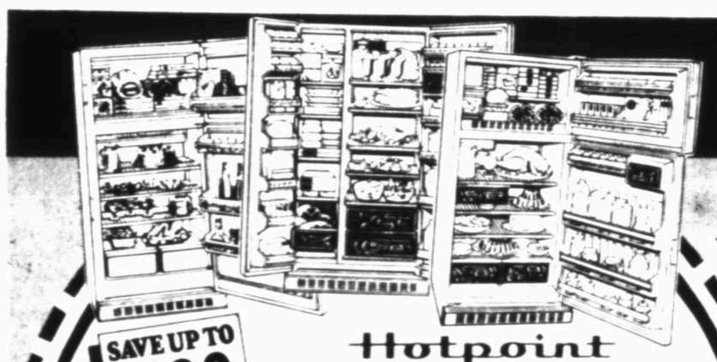

A workman is only as good as his tools and the final result of any job displays the quality and knowledge of such a person. Now you can do the job using the same equipment that the professionals do. Streaking Astros defeat Mets, 3-1

By Associated Press

HOUSTON — Houston's Dickie Thon drove in three runs and Mike Scott scattered six hits in 8⅓ innings to lift the Astros to their 10th victory in 11 games, a 3-1 triumph over the New York Mets.

Thon's sixth-inning double knocked in two runs to give the Astro shortstop his ninth game-winning RBI this season.

Omar Moreno, who scored Houston's first run, drew a walk from loser Mike Torrez, 5-11 to open the sixth. Terry Puhl was safe at first when Torrez bobbled his sacrifice bunt. Thon's double to left scored both Moreno and Puhl to give Houston a 3-1 lead.

Scott, 5-3, posted his fifth straight winning decision. After allowing a run in the second inning, Scott allowed only two base runners until needing help in the ninth from Frank DiPino, who posted his ninth save.

Cardinals 9, Giants 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Ozzie Smith and Lonnie Smith stroked two-run singles during a five-run sixth inning rally and rookie Andy Van Slyke drove in two runs with a pair of doubles to pace the St. Louis Cardinals to a 9-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

St. Louis' uprising featured five hits, including a run-scoring double by Van Slyke and three walks, two of them intentional, as the Cardinals took a 7-3 lead against Fred Breining, 6-7.

In the seventh, David Green singled for his third of the game and Van Slyke doubled him home. The Cardinals made it 9-3 in the eighth on an RBI single by Lonnie Smith.

Phillies 9, Reds 3

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Phillies erupted for six runs in the fifth inning to back the nine-hit pitching of red-hot John Denny, and went on to a 9-3 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds.

It was the sixth complete game for Denny, 8-5, who struck out three and walked none. He has given up just nine earned runs in his last 49⅓ innings.

Trailing 1-0, the Phillies struck for six runs on four hits in the fifth to chase Bruce Berenyi, 4-10, who has not won since June 9.

Braves 6, Expos 3

ATLANTA — Jerry Royster broke a 3-3 tie with a two-run, pinch-hit double in the sixth inning and Brett Butler drove in two runs with a homer and groundout as the Atlanta Braves downed the Montreal Expos 6-3.

Bob Horner opened the sixth with a walk and Chris Chambliss followed with a double that chased starter Ray Burris, 3-4. Glenn Hubbard drew a walk off reliever Bryn Smith to load the bases and Royster doubled off Dan Schatzeder after pinch-hitter Bob Watson fanned.

Butler then grounded to second, scoring Hubbard.

Pete Falcone, 8-1, won his seventh straight decision. He allowed four hits, walked four and fanned three before Royster batted for him in the sixth. Steve Bedrosian finished up, posting his 14th save.

Newman wins Mid-Ohio race

Newman's triumph ruined a bid by Kirtland, Ohio's Fred Baker to continue his five-race winning streak. Newman qualified for the pole position with Baker alongside and took the lead at the start. Baker fell back to fourth place and eventually had to drop out of the race with a blown clutch.

Baker has a chance to start a new streak Sunday in the Showroom Stock GT class with a Porsche 944, while Newman will be in the 11th place grid spot for the $46,600 Trans-Am Championship professional race.

Defending Mid-Ohio winner Elliott Forbes-Robinson grabbed the Trans-AM pole Friday with his Pontiac Firebird and a 92.84 mph lap.

Daniel has two-shot advantage

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Beth Daniel, twice the leading money winner in her five years on the tour, clung to a 2-stroke lead Saturday after 54 holes of the $350,000 LPGA McDonald's Kids Classic.

Daniel, 26, seeking her first victory in almost a year, posted a three-round total of 5-under-par 211, two strokes ahead of defending champion JoAnne Carner.

But Patty Sheehan, the tour's top money winner, charged from the pack with a 4-under-par 68 Saturday to move within three strokes of the lead.

Sheehan, trying not only for the $52,500 first prize, but also for a $450,000 bonus annuity for the winner of two of three selected tournaments, had a 2-under total of 214. She has already won one, at Corning, N.Y.

Daniel started the third round over the 6,283-yard White Manor Country Club course with a 3-stroke lead, and although it was sliced several times to one, she maintained her advantage.She has shot 67-71-73 over the par-72 course with the lightning fast greens.

On Saturday she had one birdie and two bogeys in heat that reached 96 degrees.

Carner got as close as one stroke in a par round of 72, which included two birdies and two bogeys, all on the front nine.She has shot 72-69-72 for a 3-under 213.

Sheehan bogeyed the first hole, and then rolled in birdie putts of six feet twice, and 10, 12 and 25 feet. Three of her birdies came consecutively, on 15, 16 and 17.

Other leading scorers heading into Sunday's final round included Kathy Whitworth and Sandra Haynie, tied at 1-under 215, four strokes off the pace; Anna-Marie Palli and Laura Cole at par 216, Judy Clark and Hollis Stacy at 1-over 217.

Daniel's lead first slipped to one stroke after three holes, when Carner birdied the opening hole and the leader bogeyed the third.

Whitworth also twice got within a stroke, but she fell apart at 12 and 13 when she bogeyed and double bogeyed to drop to 1 under for the tournament.

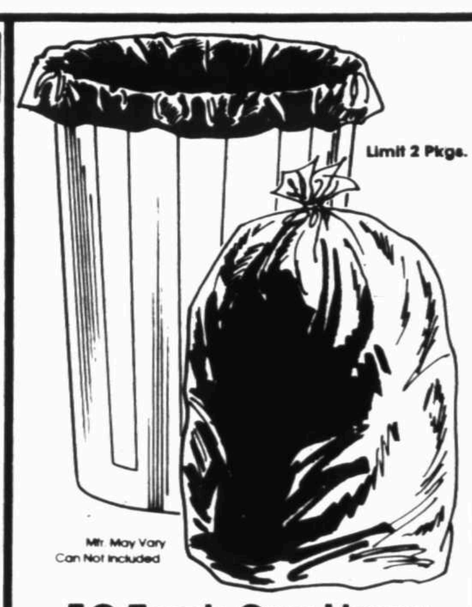

Daniel increased her lead to two strokes at 5-under when she took a par at the fifth and Carner and Whitworth both bogeyed.

POSITIVE THINKING

Experience joy by good health, positive thinking

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Your physical condition has a lot to do with your ability to enjoy life. When you are refreshed and rejuvenated, life takes on new meaning. Proper exercise and proper rest are essential ingredients of joyful emotions. Some scientists, according to an account I read, made some experiments with what they call "massive doses of sleep." They induced sleep in people who were tired and aging, and they reported a regeneration of tissues, a prolonging of life, the disappearance of disease and of course with this, the appearance of a new vitality and joy in living.

So, treat your body right if you want your feelings to be right.

Another important procedure is to think right. Treat your mind right. Think positively. The positive thinker trains himself in the attitude of joy. He expects it, then he finds it. What you look for, you will find — this is a basic law of life. Start looking for joy and you'll find it. For when you look for it, you will be able to see and recognize it. Some good friends of mine, Elsie and Otto Palmer, who live in Brooklyn, N.Y., looked for it and found it. They wrote:

"It is extremely difficult to give expression to one's innermost feelings; but since we have been learning about positive thinking, we feel you should know that we, too, are experiencing that wonderful something within that makes us want to sing for joy and tell the world about it.

"The application of your techniques has revolutionized our lives. While we have been brought up in a religious home, we never before understood how helpful and practical one's religion could and should be. It has given us a completely new and happy outlook on life to the extent that each day is begun with great expectancy and joy.

"I have made a habit to expect a pleasant surprise each day and it has never failed to come to pass with one exception: and that is, the degree of the surprise depends on the degree of faith I put into my expectancy. If I am very sure, lukewarm or cool — to that degree will the surprise come to pass."

I like the paragraph in this letter that speaks about expecting a pleasant surprise each day. This is first-rate positive thinking. The people who look forward into the future expecting to see great things are people who are going to be happy.

And if you're happy, you can experience this deep fun in life by doing a constructive job on your thoughts. If your mind is filled with grudges, hate, selfishness or off-color thoughts, I suggest shifting to a different mental life and upbeat attitude. Then you will truly enjoy life every day.

Zephyr begins new westward journey

DENVER (AP) — As a brass band played "I've Been Working On the Railroad," a 14-car Amtrak train was christened the California Zephyr on Saturday before rolling out of Denver's Union Station for points west.

Performing the honors with a bottle of California champagne was Beulah Bauman, a hostess on the original California Zephyr operated by the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad.

The Denver & Rio Grande recently sold its Denver-to-Salt Lake City line, on which the old California Zephyr ran from 1949 to 1970, to Amtrak.

Amtrak spokesman Arthur Lloyd opened the ceremonies by announcing the "rebirth of the Chicago-to-San Francisco streamliner" and the "rechristening of the most talked-about train in the country."

Until Saturday, Amtrak operated its Chicago-to-San Francisco passenger trains on the Union Pacific Railroad line across southern Wyoming. Now those trains will roll across the Colorado Rockies along the old Denver & Rio Grande line. The change leaves Wyoming without passenger rail service.

About 50 shutter-snapping railroad buffs and reporters turned out for the ceremonies. Other celebrations were planned later in the day in Glenwood Springs and Grand Junction.

Railroad officials said the inaugural ride was a sellout, with about 600 passengers on board the double-deck train. About 400 boarded in Denver after the train's arrival from Chicago.

Despite what Lloyd said was Amtrak's "enviable on-time record," the 14-car train left about 15 minutes after its 8 a.m. scheduled time.

Doris Osterwald of Denver said she came because "this is kind of an important day, I think — the start of a new era."

Leonard Bernstein, a steward on the old California Zephyr and now the Amtrak liaison officer for the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad, said the old Zephyr "performed with distinction in the 21 years of its history."

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Motivation required for insulin pump users

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been on insulin for a long time, and I suppose I have adjusted as well as anyone can adjust to something like that. But I would like to get away from having to check my sugar all the time, and everything else that's involved in doing so. Would an insulin pump do that for me? — Dennis, Buffalo, N.Y.

Dear Dennis: Patients who use the insulin pump must still monitor their own blood sugar and must program the pump as often as 10 times a day in order to maintain the proper flow rate. As you can see, a high degree of patient motivation is required for anyone considering using the insulin pump.

Dr. Lois Javanovic, of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, emphasizes that the insulin pump is not for everyone. Insulin can be a dangerous drug, and the patient must be in control at all times.

If a patient is motivated and responsible, the pump can be set to deliver insulin at a rate that approaches the normal rate. With the wrong patient, however, the results can be disastrous.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have read about women who want to give birth at home, and about how some doctors say it isn't safe to do so. Others say that only women with a high-risk pregnancy have to give birth in a hospital. I am not pregnant but when I do start a family, I would like to give birth at home. What I would like to know is how a woman is supposed to know whether she will have a high-risk pregnancy before she becomes pregnant. — Mrs. K.R., Ocean City, Md.

Dear Mrs. R.: There are a number of factors that suggest a high-risk pregnancy, and I will only mention a few. For example, a pregnancy in a girl under 15 years of age can be assumed to involve a high risk. Other factors include obesity, a variety of medical problems such as diabetes and heart disease, a history of smoking and alcohol or drug abuse, and a family history of hereditary disease. These and other factors alert the obstetrician to the need for careful observation during the pregnancy.

OIL & GAS OPPORTUNITIES

Santa Fe Energy is one of the nation's largest independent petroleum producers. We are a solid Santa Fe Industries subsidiary with over 80 years of success in the energy field. We are moving our Permian Basin District Office to Midland, and invite you to investigate the following openings:

SR. GEOLOGIST

This position requires a Master's degree in Geology and a minimum of 8 years Oil & Gas experience including extensive geophysical and geological expertise in the Permian Basin. Experience in log evaluation and prospect generation is also required.

SR. LANDMAN

This position requires a degree in Petroleum Land Management or Law; CPL desired; and 8-10 years experience with a strong background in contract negotiations and preparation. The applicant must be able to present projects to senior management. There is a definite emphasis on exploration land work, and development experience is also required.

SR. RESERVOIR EVALUATION ENGINEER

This position requires a Master's degree in Petroleum Engineering with 7-12 years Petroleum Engineering experience—a minimum of 6 of those years in reservoir evaluation with heavy experience in the West Texas-Eastern New Mexico area. Carbonates experience required, as well as secondary recovery (water flood) and tertiary (CO_2) background. Also required is evaluation, budgeting and planning for a major oil & gas company. Any experience other than reservoir should be in the production area.

Positions are also available for Exploration Technicians and Engineering Technicians with a minimum of 5 years experience in their respective fields of expertise.

SECRETARY

Position requires a minimum of 4 years experience with a minimum of 60 wpm typing and shorthand. Oil & Gas experience is required.

PRODUCTION CLERK

Will be responsible for posting production, up-dating well reports and other duties in connection with our engineering and production department. 4 years experience in the Oil & Gas industry required.

RECEPTIONIST

Will be responsible for answering and routing in-coming calls, greeting visitors, and overflow typing. Typing speed of 60 wpm is required as well as 1-2 years experience.

Santa Fe Energy offers an excellent compensation and benefits package and outstanding advancement opportunities. For immediate consideration, please send your resume or a letter of application with salary requirements to:

MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Area Supervisor

Are you our next Area Supervisor?

If you have experience as a multi-unit restaurant supervisor with P&L responsibility for several units, Long John Silver's Seafood Shoppes has a select management opportunity in the northern half of Texas well worth investigating.

This individual must have proven ability in supervision with a recognized restaurant chain.

We are seeking a person to join us as an Area Supervisor Trainee to train for several months and to eventually assume responsibility for approximately 5 or 6 restaurants.

We offer a very competitive starting salary and incentive bonus plan, a fully maintained company car, and excellent company benefits. But most importantly we offer a unique and mature plan for your personal and professional development.

Please send resume in confidence to:

ROSES

(and zinnias and verbena and marigolds)

"...Nothing can make you feel as good or appreciate life as much as pretty flowers can."

Mildred Riddle Farris

As a young girl in Sweetwater, Mildred Riddle Farris cleaned her family's home every Saturday. After her chores, she filled a black ceramic bowl on the dining room table with fresh zinnias, verbena or marigolds from her own flower garden.

Mrs. Farris, 56, still has the black bowl and her love of flowers has blossomed from a patch of earth in Sweetwater to a successful florist shop in Midland.

Mildred's Flowers on Shell Avenue is located in the quiet westside neighborhood she has called home for 35 years.

"I started the business on my 39th birthday. I told myself if I wasn't a success by my 40th birthday, I would quit."

That was 17 years ago. Mrs. Farris said she started her business at a good time when Midland's economy was sluggish.

"I had to learn as I went along and Midland was growing slowly. I was on my feet and running when the business got going. I can weather the bad times better than a lot of people can. I didn't know anything but I knew I didn't know anything.

"I don't believe I could have done what I have been able to do if I hadn't done it here. For its size, Midland has more to offer than any place in the world."

In the beginning she filled orders, delivered arrangements and billed her customers. "People still think I do all of it," she said. She now runs her business with the help of 10 full-time employees.

At first she handled flowers primarily for anniversaries, birthdays, and parties. Mildred's now caters to every occasion which calls for flowers, but weddings are Mrs. Farris' biggest business.

The florist does not have formal training in her craft. "I'm basically self-taught." A local florist, now retired, Buddy Pulliam, who owned the original Buddy's Flowers, gave Mrs. Farris some instruction.

"He taught me how to make my first corsage and bow and he let me stand around and watch him work and I read all his old florist magazines.

"I told him I didn't have any money to go to design school and he told me experience is the best teacher."

She taught classes in floral design through Midland College and has invited budding florists to observe her at work.

Mrs. Farris has traveled all over the U.S. and the world to participate in design shows and to visit flower shops, markets and auctions.

Mildred Riddle Farris arranges flowers in a style she studied in Japan. A florist in Midland for 17 years, she thinks flowers are to be cut and brought into the home to be enjoyed.

Design shows are sponsored by the florist industry to create new floral designs and to give other florists ideas about how to improve their businesses. She has arranged flowers on board a cruise ship to the Caribbean, in New Orleans, La. and in Mexico. She just returned from a trip to Tokyo, Japan, where she participated in a one-day design show.

"I've been to places I thought I would never see and done things I never thought I would do."

She was one of 140 American designers who went on the trip sponsored by a floral wire service. Mrs. Farris was one of four American designers invited to work with Japanese designers at a design show.

Mrs. Farris knew a lot about the art of Oriental flower arranging before she left for the Far East.

Most all Japanese women learn how to arrange flowers before they marry, she said. All arrangements are organized in three levels, the top level represents heaven, the middle stands for man and the lower level symbolizes earth. Floral design is a vital part of the Japanese religious ceremony.

Unlike her business, which sells mostly arranged flowers, Japanese florists sell cut flowers which people arrange themselves in simple designs.

"...Nothing can make you feel as good or appreciate life as much as pretty flowers can."

Mildred Riddle Farris

Mildred Riddle Farris arranges flowers in a style she studied in Japan. A florist in Midland for 17 years, she thinks flowers are to be cut and brought into the home to be enjoyed.

As a young girl in Sweetwater, Mildred Riddle Farris cleaned her family's home every Saturday. After her chores, she filled a black ceramic bowl on the dining room table with fresh zinnias, verbena or marigolds from her own flower garden.

Mrs. Farris, 56, still has the black bowl and her love of flowers has blossomed from a patch of earth in Sweetwater to a successful florist shop in Midland.

Mildred's Flowers on Shell Avenue is located in the quiet westside neighborhood she has called home for 35 years.

"I started the business on my 39th birthday. I told myself if I wasn't a success by my 40th birthday, I would quit."

The florist does not have formal training in her craft. "I'm basically self-taught." A local florist, now retired, Buddy Pulliam, who owned the original Buddy's Flowers, gave Mrs. Farris some instruction.

"He taught me how to make my first corsage and bow and he let me stand around and watch him work and I read all his old florist magazines.

"I told him I didn't have any money to go to design school and he told me experience is the best teacher."

"I've been to places I thought I would never see and done things I never thought I would do."

She was one of 140 American designers who went on the trip sponsored by a floral wire service. Mrs. Farris was one of four American designers invited to work with Japanese designers at a design show.

Mrs. Farris knew a lot about the art of Oriental flower arranging before she left for the Far East.

Most all Japanese women learn how to arrange flowers before they marry, she said. All arrangements are organized in three levels, the top level represents heaven, the middle stands for man and the lower level symbolizes earth. Floral design is a vital part of the Japanese religious ceremony.

(See MILDRED, Page 2E)

Mildred...

Mrs. Farris wishes everyone could frequently enjoy fresh flowers in their homes. But shipping flowers from places such as Florida, California and Holland makes them expensive.

"There is nothing that can make you feel as good or appreciate life as much as pretty flowers."

There are always fresh flowers in Mrs. Farris' home. The floral designer believes flowers should be grown outdoors to be enjoyed indoors.

"Don't worry if it has a six-inch stem or a two-inch stem. Just cut it and put it in a coke bottle and look at it and love it."

Although she loves her work, she regrets she waited until she was nearly 40 years old to start her business. She plans to keep working "until I drop down behind the work table."

Mrs. Farris began her career while raising her two adopted sons, Richard, who lives in Tulsa, Okla. and Daniel, who lives in Austin. She and her first husband adopted Richard, who had a clubfoot, and Daniel, who is mentally retarded, because, "we felt they needed us and we needed them. Daniel would have probably ended up in an institution."

Over a period of four years, the couple also cared for 36 foster children. "At one time we would have as many as three children under six months old at the house with our two sons."

Although she has led a full life she still has many plans.

"There are so many things I would love to do. I won't have time to get it all done."

Running her business occupies much of her time, but she makes time to work on wedding flowers.

"I like it because a wedding is a very special day for a bride and her family. I miss not being able to do it all."

At busy times such as Mother's Day, she said, "I feel like I created the monster that's going to devour me."

Mrs. Farris recently returned from the flower market in Dallas where she placed orders to prepare for Christmas.

The shop also handles floral arrangements for funerals. "Funeral flowers are important in people's lives because they symbolize beauty and the fleetingness of life. The most important time for flowers is at a time of bereavement."

Mrs. Farris would like to start her own silk flower shop and open several small flower shops around Midland. Because of her extensive experience with wedding flower arrangements, she would like to establish a complete wedding service.

But she is very satisfied with her life. "I have had the complete life of wife, mother, homemaker and career woman. There are so many people trapped in jobs they hate. That's got to be the most awful thing in the world."

Looking back to when she started, taking orders at her kitchen table, Mrs. Farris said, "I didn't know I wasn't supposed to make it. I just knew I wanted it bad enough to succeed."

Because of her success she can afford to wear a mink coat, expensive jewelry and travel extensively. "I really enjoy my lifestyle because I really worked for it."

Jose Raul Alarcon, master weaver of the Ecuadorian village La Pila, produced the "Perfect Panama." The two-ounce hat was appraised at $2,000.

Hat appraised at $2,000

It's only straw, but has the color and sheen of old ivory. Its weave is close and supple as linen. Burt Berinsky of Jay Lord Hatters in New York appraises it at $2,000. It's the perfect Panama hat.

At a scant two ounces, this unique masterpiece from South America, says an article in the July issue of Connoisseur, is five times as good as gold. No longer mere haberdashery, it's almost too good to wear.

Panamas got their name and first came into fashion on Nov. 16, 1906. That's when President Theodore Roosevelt was photographed wearing one while trying the controls of a 95-ton steam shovel during a three-day tour of the Panama Canal construction. They became increasingly popular summer-wear until – suddenly, after World War II – men stopped wearing hats. Business dwindled.

Today, men's hats are making something of a comeback. But Connoisseur reports that good Panamas are now very hard to find. "I would almost kill for a few really good Panamas," Berinsky says. "I have customers for them but I can't get them."

The perfect Panama aside, the best ones usually available – those that are tightly woven, airy and almost weightless – cost as much as $200.

These straw sombreros are made in several Central and South American countries – but not notably in Panama. It's in these tropical lowlands that a perennial herb, called toquilla in Spanish, flourishes and is used to create fine straw hats. Immature leaves can be split into straws of wonderous strength, fineness and flexibility. The best Panamas are marked "Made in Ecuador," where the craft of weaving toquilla straw into hats seems to have originated and continues today, so Connoisseur's writer went to Ecuador in search of the "Perfect Panama."

Lettuce hides jewels

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — A nearby Torrance company is manufacturing a head of lettuce that requires no refrigeration but keeps valuables cool.

Lett-us-hide made its debut recently at the International Gourmet Products Show in San Francisco and apparently is on its way to becoming a household hit.

Made by Iwasaki Images of America, Lett-us-hide looks exactly like a head of iceberg lettuce, complete with the shredded-plastic cover. On the underside a lid reveals a glass jar embedded in the head.

The jar is large enough to accommodate several jewelry items or other valuables.

Harry Fujita, executive vice president of Iwasaki, a subsidiary of Iwasaki Co. Ltd. of Tokyo, expects the plastic lettuce to sell for about $15 in stores.

"It was my son's idea," said Fujita. "He said it's not safe these days to leave things around. People never expect you to hide things in lettuce."

Making plastic impressions of food items has been Iwasaki's business for 40 years, Fujita said. In Tokyo, 2,000 employees churn out plastic replicas of hundreds of food items. Restaurants in Japan typically display plastic mock-ups of all the dishes offered on the menu. When the food is served it looks exactly like the plastic version.

Iwasaki America, which has been in Torrance for eight years, earned $1.7 million last year, principally on sales of vinyl foods for store displays. All items sold in the United States are made at the Torrance plant.

One order by the Chicago Museum of Science and Industry amounted to 13,000 items, Fujita said.

Plastic food replicas made by the company also are used in nutrition classes in hospitals and schools.

Although Lett-us-hide is not yet on sales racks, Iwasaki is pressing ahead with its next idea — 8-inch vinyl apples to promote New York, the "Big Apple."

Jose Monserrate Lucas of Ecuador has been weaving hats for 60 years. The only furniture in his bamboo house is a tripod made from a forked tree branch.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

While Midland was experiencing day after day of temperatures above the 100-degree mark, a tour group of 30 (mainly Permian Basin residents) enjoyed the cool and wet clime of Merry Olde England. The two-week trip was sponsored by the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, with Dr. Frank Samponaro, associate professor of history at UTPB, and his wife, Marsha, as tour escorts.

Going from Midland were Doris (Mrs. Van) Howbert, Katie (Mrs. Bill) Heck, Barbara (Mrs. Pat) Bolden, Margaret (Mrs. Howard) Davis, Beverly (Mrs. Forrest) Muire, Linda (Mrs. Sam) Ingle, Nancy Hull, Shirley (Mrs. Wilbur) Rocchio, Linda George, Judge Barbara Culver, Beth (Mrs. Jim) Slaton, Dee (Mrs. Kenneth) Dean, Norma (Mrs. Bill) Hetzel, Sandy Root, Louise and Dr. Garland Lang, Cuz and Joe Coester, Suzanna (Mrs. Ben) Johnson and Mary Lou Cassidy. They were joined by residents of Odessa, Crane, Amarillo, Denver, Colorado, and Wichita, Kansas.

Although London and its many exciting tourist attractions were definitely a highlight of the trip, at least three-quarters of the time was spent in the English countryside. Stops included the world famed Lake District, perhaps the most scenic of all areas in the British Isles; Bath, famous for its wealth of Georgian architecture and its Roman baths; the enchanting Cotswolds hills; Stratford-upon-Avon, Shakespeare's birthplace, located in the rural heart of England, and the seaside resort of Brighton. They also visited Stonehenge, where there was a massive gathering to observe the summer solistice.

The group enjoyed exploring the many magnificent cathedrals and castles which grace Great Britain and staying at the charming country inns, many built in the 18th and 19th centuries, along the way. Theatre going included the musical "Cats" on the London stage and the incomparable "Julius Caesar" at the Royal Shakespeare Theatre at Stratford.

In London, they enjoyed sightseeing, touring some of the world's finest museums, galleries and parks, and the shopping, especially at the famous department store, Harrods. The group was entertained at an Elizabethan Banquet, with entertainment by minstrels and ballad singers in medieval costume, on the eve of their departure.

FAYE AND ARLO FORREST have returned from a trip to the beautiful Pacific Northwest and Canada. Flying first to Portland, Oregon, they were guests of their daughter, MariJann (Mrs. George) Holmes and her family and were present for the high school graduation ceremony of their granddaughter, Libby Holmes.

The two families enjoyed a motor trip through Oregon and Washington and into British Columbia. In the capital city of Victoria, famous for its colorful flower gardens and British atmosphere, they stayed at the Empress Hotel and enjoyed its afternoon tea. Taking the ferry on to Vancouver, they enjoyed the cosmopolitan charm of the province's largest city. On their return, they drove inland through the mountains from Vancouver to Seattle and back to Portland.

The Forrests also were in Houston recently for the high school graduation of another granddaughter, Martha Forrest, daughter of Margie and Don "Timber" Forrest. Martha is now attending Midland College and residing here with her maternal grandmother, Mozelle Neill.

FROM POINTS throughout Texas and New Mexico and as far away as California, sixty-seven descendants of the late Edward and Mary E. Walker and the late John and Mattie Hall came to Midland for their seventh annual reunion. The group enjoyed a tour of Midland, and those who had lived here as children were awed by the many changes.

Plans were made to hold the 1984 reunion in Fort Worth.

Midlanders attending this year's event were Jean and Jim Sumner, Keith and Judy Summer, Jeremy and Lauren, Cindy Summer, Paul and Mamie Smith, Bessie Baker, Glen and Janice Pine, Glen Allen and Lesli Pine and Kristi Marie, Bobby and Paula Lindley and Jason, Jim and Kay Sims and children, Jim, Josh and Kimberly Jones, Sam and Maxine Miller, Shirley and John Blevins, Andrew and LeAnna.

ALTHOUGH ODESSA is only a short drive away, we hated to see long-time Midlanders Jean and Darold Hobbs move over there earlier this summer. Darold has accepted a new position as a computer operator with the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

While living in Midland, the Hobbs were active in church, community and school affairs. Their daughter, Jennifer, will be a sixth grader at Dowling Elementary this fall.

Business and professional women have new officers

Sam Guyton is a counselor in private practice. She has been vice president in charge of programs and vice president in charge of membership. Sandy Hanson is vice president and manager of Career Path, Inc. She has been chairman of the "Woman of the Year" committee for three years.

Jody Spelman is an auditor for Trott and Company and has served as treasurer and with the finance committee. Melissa Hursh is employed by HBF Corporation. She has served as corresponding secretary chairman of the phone committee.

Theresa "Sam" Guyton

Linda Hicks is employed by Union Oil of California as a landman. She has participated in the scholarship committee. Vanessa Goss is a marketing representative at Texas American Bank/Midland and served on the committee for NIKE and the women's seminar. Carole Hillman is an audit supervisor for Trott and Company and has helped with the membership committee.

B&PW is dedicated to improving the professional, personal, economic and educational outlook for women. Its members actively seek to achieve career goals and proficiencies through improved skills and to support women as business and community leaders. For more information call 686-0736.

Club news

NEWTIMERS BRIDGE CLUB

Newtimers Bridge Club met at Ranchland Hills Country Club recently. High Scorers of the day were Gladys Awalt, first, Coney Thomas, second and Peggy Barry, third.

Election of officers was held. Barbara Fleetwood is the new president. Deeonda Bailey is vice president, Merle Crouch is secretary-treasurer and Sue True will direct hospitality duties.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF RETIRED PERSONS

The American Association of Retired Persons met recently with 54 members and 12 visitors present. Chester Powers, president, called the meeting to order. The invocation was given by Hazel Cole followed by the salute to the flag. Bea Covert read a tribute to our flag entitled "I am the Nation."

Jean Sauze presented a program on the history of the flag. She read the story giving the dates when the colonies and states were admitted to the union. She was assisted by Fay Kelley and Missie Spurgin, who constructed the flag on a large wooden frame on the stage. They added the stripes and stars as each state was admitted until the flag was complete.

Bea Tiner played patriotic hymns on the piano throughout the program.

Several committees were recognized for their work. Guests were received, birthdays observed and illnesses reported. Table games were played afterwards.

Famous artists childhood works show no sign of artistic future

Hearst Feature Service

Available for the first time to the general public, childhood works by nine famous artists are published in the July issue of Connoisseur.

Early works by Winslow Homer, Vincent Van Gogh, Edward Hopper, Christo, Paul Cezanne, John Singer Sargent, Stuart Davis, Paul Klee and Alexander Calder — done during the artists' teenage years or even earlier — reveals that childhood work gives no clear indication of artistic future.

The works show a delightful and uninhibited view of the world, often without technical restrictions or concerns for visual accuracy. In that respect, points out the article, they hardly differ from all children's art. But, says Connoisseur, "these drawings also reinforce an important old truism: great art can not be taught and no on can predict when the magic will happen or whether it will be sustained."

Connoisseur says of the artists: "They were begining to see with adult eyes and were capable of drawing directly from life, yet they retained some childhood insecurities."

Thousands marry in old church

NASHUA, Iowa (AP) — They come to the Church in the Wildwood — by the hundreds — to get married.

"About 52,500 weddings have been performed in the church since World War I," said the Rev. John W. Christy. "We've been here five years and performed more than 4,000."

Christy is the pastor of The Little Brown Church in the Vale made famous in the hymn by William S. Pitts.

"As a young man, he was traveling through Bradford (now defunct) to Fredericksburg to visit his fiancee. The coach had stopped here for lunch," Christy said.

"He went strolling through the area and was impressed by the spot where the church now stands — the beautiful trees, the growth and underbrush," Christy said.

When Pitts returned to Wisconsin, he wrote "The Church in the Wildwood" and forgot the song until he returned to Bradford in 1863 to teach music at the local school.

"He was somewhat surprised to find the church had been built on the spot he had envisioned the church and wrote the song about," Christy said.

The song was first publicly sung in the small Congregational church which was started in 1860 and dedicated in 1864.

Christy said there were two stories about how the church came to be painted brown.

"One is when it came time to paint the church, the pastor asked the congregation to bring in the paints they had at home. When it was mixed together, it had a brownish tinge to it," Christy said.

"The second story, a little more reasonable, is that the people didn't have much money and brown paint was on sale and they bought the cheapest paint available."

The church was active until the turn of the century, when the community of Bradford disappeared. The church became inactive for about 20 years until a group reopened it as a church and historical site. The church, still Congregational, now has about 125 members.

The hymn began bringing couples to the church to be married shortly after World War I. The number dropped during World War II to as few as 150 to 200 a year, but the number of people wanting to be married in the Little Brown Church has steadily increased since then.

"Since I have been here, we have on the average of 800 weddings a year," Christy said.

"The day for the most weddings is Valentine's Day, but the season for weddings is May and June and then September or October," he said. "Most are on Saturdays."

The children of many of the people who were married at the Little Brown Church like to be married where their parents were.

"One of the reasons for the popularity of the church is we have a number of third generations coming back to the church because their parents or grandparents got married here," Christy said.

Many of the couples who are married at the Little Brown Church return the first Sunday each August for a marriage reunion.

Women smokers increase

NEW YORK (AP) — The number of men who have quit smoking has more than doubled in the last two decades, but the combined percentage of current and former women smokers has risen, a researcher said Wednesday.

The findings are the first from a 6-year American Cancer Society study of 1.2 million Americans which was begun last year, said Steven Stellman, the cancer society's vice-president for epidemiology.

He and Lawrence Garfinkel of the cancer society reported the findings Tuesday at the Fifth World Conference On Smoking and Health being held in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada.

They emphasized that the results were preliminary, and not applicable to the American population at large because they were based on a select segment of the populace.

"We're proud of the results with men, we're not so happy about women," Stellman said in a telephone interview.

According to a survey taken last year of 158,000 men and women 30 years old or older, 38.7 percent of the men have quit smoking for at least two years. A similar study done in 1959 by the cancer society found 17.3 percent of the men had quit smoking.

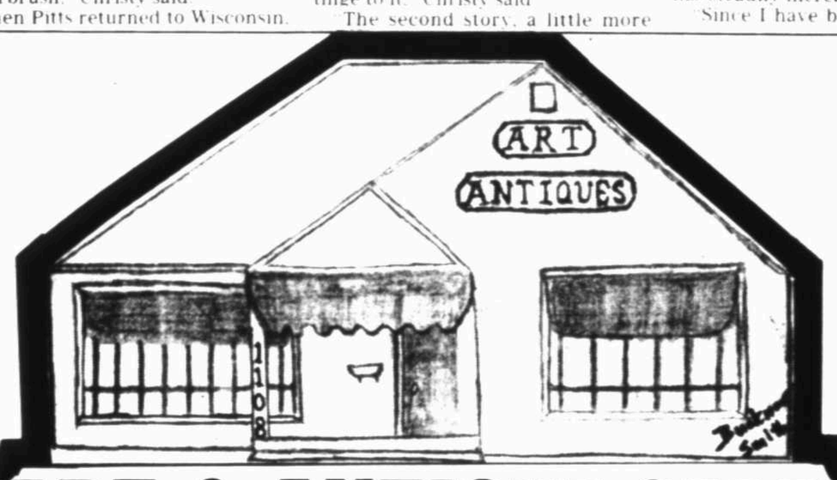

Among women, 42.5 percent were current or former smokers in 1982. Only 32.8 percent of women in the 1959 study were into that category.

The new study, known as the Cancer Prevention Study II, is the largest study ever undertaken to find links between cancer and lifestyle, diet and environment, the cancer society says. The 1959 study, which was not completed until 1972, was the first Cancer Prevention Study.

Stellman said the subjects enlisted by cancer society volunteers are more educated and older than the population as a whole. Stellman said, and therefore differ in their smoking habits.

SENIOR PORTRAITS

It's time for Lee High and Midland High seniors to make an appointment for their yearbook portraits.

WE ARE THE OFFICIAL YEARBOOK PHOTOGRAPHER and you should come to us if you want your portraits to be compatible (and the same quality) with those of other seniors in the yearbook. If you go to another photographer, the school will accept the photographs provided they meet specifications.

THERE IS NO CHARGE TO THE SENIOR OR TO THE SCHOOL ..and.. THERE IS NO OBLIGATION TO PURCHASE PORTRAITS!

Some confusion may exist because of letters mailed recently to seniors by a new photographer in town.

DON'T BE MISLED BY PROMISES OF SLIGHTLY LOWER PRICES AND GIMMICKS! We have found over the years that seniors prefer the traditional senior portrait and our 24 years of experience in photographing seniors insures quality work ..especially when compared to that of some photographers who have been in business for LESS THAN FOUR MONTHS!

For years we have been providing services to the high schools at no charge as part of our working agreement. We also provide monetary support to activity funds and organizations thru advertising and commissions.

Garlic once for lovers

Copley News Service

Garlic, that powerful and spicy bulb, was regarded by the ancient Romans as an aphrodisiac. (One presumes that both the Roman men and their lady loves would eat it at the same time. After all, one lover with garlic breath just doesn't make it.)

Garlic was grown in the lush gardens of Babylon, and was also important in the diet of the ancient Egyptians.

The Greeks of classical antiquity had a cure for the offensive odor of garlic on the breath — just roast a beet over hot coals and eat the root. (If you serve garlic at your next toga party, don't forget the roasted beets.)

Garlic bulbs can be stored much longer than onions. Store both in a cool, dry place and make sure there's plenty of air circulation. You can buy either garlic or onions in strands of bulbs and hang on a wall or from the ceiling — both decorative and functional.

A compound bulb made up of a number of cloves of varying sizes, garlic is a very strong flavoring agent. The more cells of the clove are broken down, the stronger will be the garlic flavor. Pulverizing a clove in a garlic press will release more of the oil than will dicing or chopping.

In the past, garlic was thought to act as a "blood purifier." Hippocrates claimed that it was bad for the eyes but good for the rest of the body. And Pliny described it as a cure for everything from toothaches to epilepsy and leprosy.

In these days of space travel and microwave magic, garlic is no longer used as an aphrodisiac or medicinal spice, but is a popular and pungent flavoring. However, if you have a toothache, or want to be devastatingly alluring to someone special, you might try the following recipes. Who knows — they just might work.

Some diets hurt diabetics

Quick weight loss schemes are not recommended for diabetics, according to a food and nutrition expert.

"Diabetics should avoid all nutritionally unbalanced diets, especially those high in protein mixtures containing low quality protein use in modified starvation type of diets," warned Mary K. Sweeten, food and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Diabetics should follow only the diet recommended by a physician, she said.

Copley News Service

Late in your wedding day you'll both drive off with tin cans clanking while friends and relatives pelt your car with rice or birdseed for good luck. Alone at last.

Somehow the breakfast you both missed for pre-wedding jitters and the reception dinner missed for all the dancing and excitement of the day begin to catch up with you. Now that the day's events have come to a close you find yourself hungry and relaxed for the first time all day.

Stopping at a restaurant would hardly seem magical, and even ordering room service at the hotel would be another unwanted interruption. Ah, but you find a gaily decorated basket hiding in the trunk of your getaway car when you arrive at the hotel. A note attached reads, "Food is love" and is signed by a thoughtful member of the wedding party who packed the surprise.

If you'd like to surprise a special couple with a "basket of love," here are some ideas from the folks at Perrier, bottlers of sparkling waters.

Fill a basket with all the essential treats and sweets for two famished honeymooners. Luscious purple grapes on top give only a hint of what is inside. A small loaf of french bread, sliced black forest ham, cold lemon chicken and a wedge of Camembert cheese can all be wrapped and covered with colorful napkins. Sparkling mineral water makes a perfect thirst quencher. Brightly wrapped chocolate truffles are tossed throughout the basket. The final ambrosia is two slices of wedding cake and a split of champagne.

And tucked into the side of the basket is a small bunch of daisies, because daisies don't tell. ...

Shopping easy, hard

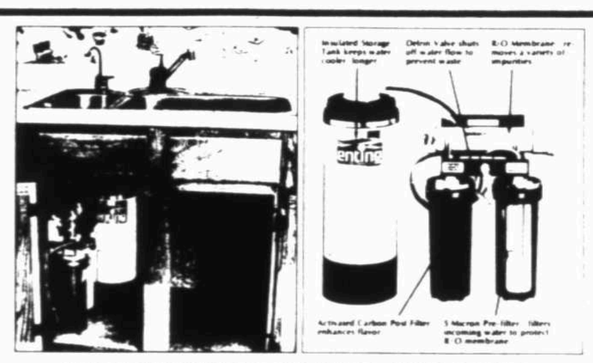

"Consumers simply find it more difficult to shop for some products and services than others," said a home economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Nancy Granovsky.

In a recent Harris poll of attitudes toward the consumer movement, consumers rated the food and gasoline markets at the top of the list for ease in shopping around.

On the other hand, credit and medical services were ranked at the bottom of the list.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Herbs meant to be harvested, used

By ELVIN McDONALD

There's so much romance in growing herbs, we sometimes forget that of all plants, they are meant to be used. Only this week I caught myself about to buy a big bottle of dried oregano when at least a bushel is ready to be harvested in my garden.

Herbalist Marilyn Hampstead says the young leaves, soft stems and flowers of herbs all have flavor and are best cut early in the day, before the noon sun volatilizes the essential oils. Harvest by cutting back plants about half way, gathering eight to 10 stems of a kind together and securing with a rubber band.

Rinse herbs quickly in room temperature water. Soaking for a long period will diminish flavor.

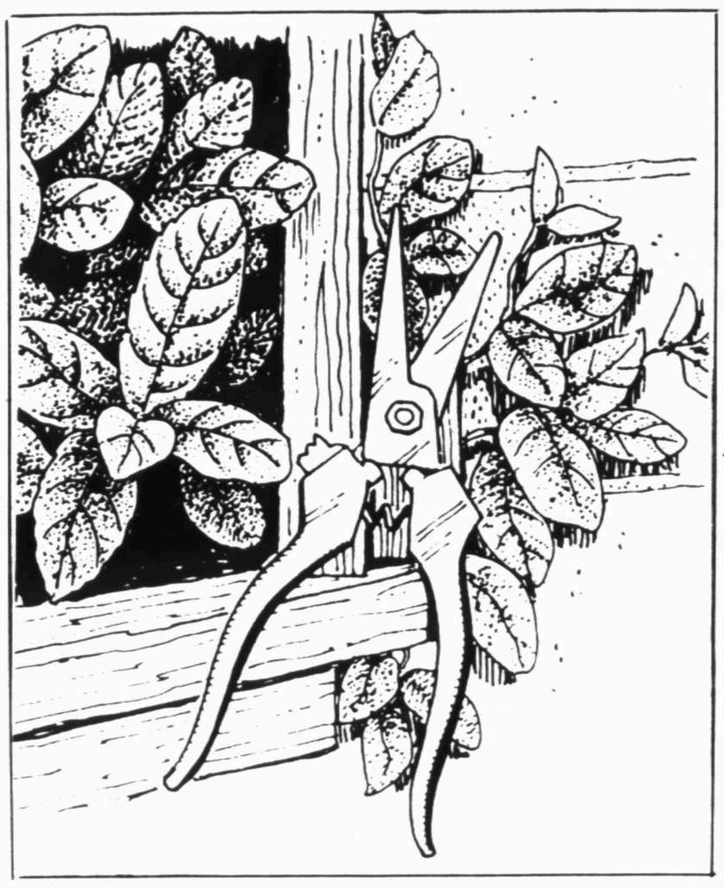

To preserve by drying, hang bunches in a warm, dry, airy place out of direct sunlight. Most herbs take four to 10 days to dry, depending on temperature, humidity and succulence of the plant material.

When dry to a crisp, place leaves, flowers and tender stems in an opaque, air-tight container. Label and store in a cool place. Check a few days later for signs of condensation; if necessary, re-dry until absolutely crisp.

To oven-dry, set controls between 125-150F. and place herbs on toweling in trays. Leave door ajar to allow moisture to escape and to prevent scorching the delicate flavors.

Freezing is an increasingly favored method for preserving fresh herbs. Strip leaves and flowers off coarse stems. Seal in air-tight containers. Or chop herbs coarsely in a food processor. Many herbs can be frozen by the bunch; remove pieces for flavoring as needed. Chives, parsley, dill, tarragon, chervil and basil are especially good frozen.

Other ways to preserve your herbs include pastes, oils, vinegars and candying. All these methods and recommendations for specific herbs are in a superb booklet, "What You Need to Know to Preserve Herbs," available for $3 postpaid from Fox Hill Farm, Box 7, Parma, Mich. 49269.

Summer is also high season for gathering rose petals, lavender and other ingredients to make potpourri and sachets. How-to recipes and resources for essential oils and preservatives are in "Fragrances." For your copy send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Scents" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305).

Q. What is the secret for growing dahlias?

A. A half day or more of direct sun, rich, moist, well-drained soil and protection from slugs. They are also outdoor plants and not for indoors except in bouquets. If you want to be a champion grower, read "Growing Dahlias" by Philip Damp ($15 postpaid from Timber Press, Box 1631, Beaverton, Ore. 97075).

Q. Could you please repeat how to sprout wood-rose seeds?

A. Remove the dried pod, the part we call a "wood rose," and soak the seeds in water for 48 hours before planting. Or file a small nick in the hard seed coat, soak 24 hours, then sow.

Q. How can I start the pod of seeds that has recently ripened on my amaryllis?

A. Fill a shallow pot or flat with moist soil-less mix (Jiffy Mix or Pro-Mix, for example), or your own combination of equal parts garden loam, sand and peat moss. Cut drills about a half-inch deep; place the papery black seeds in these sideways and firm in place to cover. Keep warm and contantly moist. Expect green spear sprouts in a few weeks. Seedling amaryllis reach flowering-size in two to three years.

Dialysis helps schizophrenics

Hearst Feature Service

New research underway in Italy is corroborating the controversial findings of American renal specialist Dr. Robert Cade, who treats schizophrenics by filtering their blood through kidney dialysis machines.

The Italian experiment, reports the August issue of Science Digest, has dialyzed up to 25 schizophrenics at a time for more than three years, with impressive improvements seen in their mental conditions.

These researchers, along with Dr. Cade, believe they are dealing with a specific group of "dialysis responders" — not just people who are responding to a placebo or reacting well due to recieving special care on a fancy machine.

Cade told Science Digest he is not afraid of scrutiny, but welcomes the European attempt to buttress his methods, which are vehemently questioned by many in the medical community. Some medical specialists dismiss Cade as a charlatan who exploits human misery for his own gain. They point out that his claims have not been supported so far by other studies.

But Cade, who is now attempting to scientifically verify his early successes with his Florida patients, says, "The attempt to deprive me of my right to ask a question and seek its answer is what has bothered me the most."

Studies show that schizophrenia runs in families, passing from afflicted parent to child. For Cade this suggested that the problem stemmed from a genetic abnormality, most likely an enzyme defect. "Such a defect could cause an accumulation of a particular substance within the blood, which if it were toxic, could cause schizophrenia," he explains. "It seemed to me I could remove it with dialysis."

Cade does not claim that this treatment will help all schizophrenics, but he claims complete success with several patients, including Linda Cook, now 40, who was first treated in 1972 at Shands Hospital at the University of Florida in Gainesville. After 14 weeks of dialysis, she no longer hallucinated, her mind cleared and her speech became coherent. Now, with periodic dialysis, she remains well and exhibits no symptoms of schizophrenia.

Psychiatrist Robert Waters told Science Digest why some patients may find dialysis beneficial: "Blood is a powerful symbol," he said. "When families of patients come in and look at the tubing on the machine, it has a potent effect on their emotions. The literature is considerable on the psychological influence on a normal person hooked up to dialysis machine; you can imagine what happens with people who are not psychologically normal."

Linda Cook believes the treatment is "totally legitimate," even though she does not question the validity of studies with differing results. She challenges skeptics to discover why dialysis did not work in certain cases. "It's just as important to find out why it didn't work as it is to find out why it did," she says.

Nonetheless, several studies have failed to verify Cade's claims. Doctors who conducted those studies maintain that Cade's results were just a good example of the placebo effect at work. "With dialysis, you bring the patient into the hospital for an experiment, and a number of things change for that patient," said psychiatrist Charles Schultz of the Medical College of Virginia. "They get therapy more often, they feel very special because they are in an important and interesting project. They are very withdrawn people, and a great deal of time, care and enthusiasm is given to them."

DEAR ABBY

Grandparents must pay to babysit

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our son and daughter-in-law (I'll call them "Bob and Mary") asked my husband and me to baby-sit their three school-age children while they went on a 21-day cruise. We agreed. No problem. We enjoyed doing it.

When they returned, Mary said she forgot to ask us to keep a separate account of the food we ate so we could reimburse them! She said if we had been in our home we would have eaten, which is true, but we were shocked. We assumed that taking care of their children was worth whatever food we ate.

Before we left, Mary presented us with a "bill," so my husband wrote out a check and gave it to her. When she took it, she asked us not to mention it to our son.

I think he should be told. My husband disagrees, saying it might cause trouble in their marriage, and he doesn't want to be a troublemaker. What do you think? – SHOOK UP IN CHICAGO

DEAR SHOOK: I vote with you. Mary doesn't deserve to be protected. Furthermore, with shenanigans like this, their marriage is already in trouble.

DEAR ABBY: I am a professional photographer who has photographed many couples, and I have never been able to find out why lovers always close their eyes while they're kissing.

I have read many sex-oriented manuals searching for the answer, but I've not been able to satisfy my curiosity concerning this universal custom.

I realize that this is no earthshaking problem, but I would like to have an answer from an authority. Thank you. – CURIOUS IN FORT MYERS, FLA.

DEAR CURIOUS: I don't claim to be an authority, but I'll wing it:

Some lovers close their eyes while kissing because the perspective at such close range is not the greatest. (Besides, what's to see?)

Also, if the kissee is not mad about the kisser, it's easier to fantasize with your eyes closed.

(If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

AT WIT'S END

Women's shoes a mystery

BY ERMA BOMBECK

One of the great mysteries of man-woman relationships is embodied in the question, "When does a woman have enough shoes?"

Men seem to feel if they found the answer to this puzzler they could make a breakthrough in the entire rational process of women.

Frankly, I have never found women all that complicated. We are perhaps the most rational of all animals. At least we don't put zippers in places where, if they didn't work, we would have to change our names and move to another country.

I'll try to make the explanation of the Shoe Mystique as simple as possible. First, men are wrong to assume that women buy shoes to walk in. There was never a time women did that.

Shoes that are comfortable and carry no pain are worthless. Try to understand that. They do not make a statement. They have no adventure. In order for a woman to function she must have a minimum of 15-20 pairs, all of them with a rational purpose.

No one should have a closet without a pair of shoes with two straps that you can dangle on the end of your foot to make you look sexy and give the illusion your ankles are thin.

Your basic shoe wardrobe should include several pairs of shoes that are two sizes smaller than what you wear for the bimbo who gets you in a crowded room and says, "I didn't know your feet were smaller than mine. Let's see what size you wear."

You should have six or seven pairs of shoes whose only function is to match something, even if you've outgrown it. The only way they can be worn is to slip them on after you are seated.

A line of sports footwear is crucial even though you don't engage in a single sport. These shoes are worn to supermarkets and on shopping expeditions to make people think you're into physical fitness.

I don't know how else to explain why we have so many shoes. If you can't understand this, then you're the type who wouldn't begin to comprehend why women never go to the powder room alone.

March of Dimes chapter chairman named

Len Mitchell was named chapter chairman for the Midland County March of Dimes 1983-1984 campaign term at the recent March of Dimes Annual Meeting and Volunteer Recognition.

Assisting Mitchell on the Executive Committee will be Burgess Wade, vice chairman, Frank Tirey, treasurer, and Jeri McCaslin, secretary.

Other members of committee will be Kasey Weaver, advisory committee chairman, Ed Clements, health and professional advisory committee chairman, Dave Clark, volunteer development committee, and Skeet Doss, Monte Carlo night chairman.

Raymond C. (Skeet) Doss has received the Outstanding Volunteer of the Year award.

In the 1982-1983 campaign year the Midland County March of Dimes has provided needed neonatal equipment for Midland Memorial Hospital's nursery. It is also started sending nurses from the MMH nursery and pediatric staff to training sessions at Fort Worth Children's Hospital. This advance training is intended to enable the staff to keep more of the birth defective babies in Midland rather than have them transported to larger hospitals.

The MOD has also provided educational nursing modules for Midland College's School of Nursing.

Other educational efforts in the past year include providing speakers for public school classes and to the pregnant teenage classes Midland High School. The MOD also supports the educational efforts of Childbirth With Preparation and the Junior League's Perinatal Clinic's.

"We believe we can prevent many birth defects by educating people on how to care for themselves and for their unborn children even before the babies are ever conceived," said Mitchell.

"We are increasing our public education program this year through several of the local doctors and, too, we will put more emphasis on the young people in our community," he added.

People interested in more information about the March of Dimes can call 694-4874 or write to the March of Dimes, P.O. Box 8337, Midland, 79708.

Heart association has new office

The Midland Division of the American Heart Association has just acquired new office space. The association's new quarters will be located in Liberty Square, Suite 208, 3525 Andrews Hwy.

The public is invited to come and see the new office on Tuesday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The association has also recently held its annual meeting and dinner at the Midland Country Club. New officers installed for 1983-84 at the meeting were Kay Bivens, president, Mike McElwrath, vice president, Anita Patton, secretary, and Alan Byars, treasurer.

New committee chairmen named were Mark Withrow, development, Bridget Gossett, public relations and public information, James Ramsoure, memorials, and Carmen Edwards, program.

AT WORK

Searching for position with security

By DR. ADELE M. SCHEELE

Q. My husband is a retired policeman with a degree in behavioral sciences. He's been working as an adult probation officer but the probation field is so limited. He'd like a management position in hospital or shopping mall security but he can't figure out how to break in to these fields. Can you help?

A. Security is a growing business these days, but he'll have more luck if he doesn't just "apply." After all, he is not a blank slate for a company to train. He already comes with two plums — his career as a policeman and his degree. So don't let him send out resumes or only answer ads.

He needs to find someone to launch him. Have him talk to his old buddies on the police force. Someone probably knows someone who manages home or business security systems.

Have him contact his former college professors. If there isn't anyone, have him find a link through a trade magazine or through any one of the security associations. This may seem too "political" for him and he may prefer the civil service system of apply-and-wait.

But he has an infinitely better chance using the business system of having people who trust you help you by getting you into an interview. He may be reluctant, but I trust that you will encourage and coach him just as you wrote for him.

Q. I work for a finance company as a collector. What career positions could I advance to in the banking profession?

A. For starters, go to the headquarters of the largest bank in your city and talk to someone in the personnel department. Ask for a run-down of jobs. Someone might tell you or refer you to a bank brochure or annual report that shows an organizational chart. From that at least you can discover categories.

Then, I'd recommend switching over to the collections department of a bank, because from the inside you will discover even more opportunities.

DUCK SALAD

A day or two before you plan to serve this salad, quarter a 5-pound duck and roast it on a rack in a shallow pan in a 350-degree oven until the flesh is tender and the skin is crisp — 2 hours. Serve the breast portions for dinner and the leg portions as follows.

2 quarters (leg portion) cold roast duck
1 cup seedless green grapes, halved
½ cup thin sweet red pepper strips
French dressing
Romaine lettuce

Remove skin and fat from duck; cut meat into fairly thin strips — you should have about 1¾ cups. In a bowl, toss together duck, grapes, peppers and French dressing (olive oil, white wine vinegar, Dijon mustard, salt and pepper in the proportions you prefer). Cover and chill. Shred romaine and toss with salad, adding more dressing if needed; or serve the salad on romaine leaves. Makes 2 servings.

Dance director dies after three-story fall

Hearst News Service

OAKLAND — The 36-year-old director of London's famous Royal Academy of Dance fell to his death Tuesday night from the third-story window of a dormitory on the Mills College campus.

Oakland police say they are treating the death of Alan Hooper as "an accidental death." Lt. Terry Green said there was "no suspicion of foul play."

Hooper was found lying unconscious in front of White Hall, a new dormitory on the campus, at 11:30 p.m. He was rushed to Highland Hospital, where he died at 1:15 a.m. Wednesday.

Hooper arrived on the Mills campus to join a group of 70 ballet students from the United States and Canada participating in a special summer dance program.

Hooper, who has been director of the Academy for the past three years, was assigned to a third-floor room in the dormitory.

PICNIC

(More PICNIC ideas, Page 2,3F)

Costa del Sol

Costa Del Sol Picnic Loaf is a potato omelet in French bread loaf. Make it only three to four hours before serving, wrap it tightly in foil to preserve its warm goodness and carry it along in a thermal container.

COSTA DEL SOL PICNIC LOAF

Three medium potatoes (about 1 pound)
One 10 to 12-inch round sourdough French or Italian bread
¼ cup olive oil
1 onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
¼ pound mushrooms, sliced
8 eggs
1 tbsp. fresh chopped oregano or 1 tsp. dried oregano
Salt and Pepper
½ cup thinly sliced green onions
½ lb. ham, cut into ½-inch cubes
2 ripe tomatoes, peeled and chopped

Boil potatoes in their jackets until tender. Cool, peel and slice. Cut bread in half horizontally and partially hollow-out centers of halves, leaving 1-inch thick shells. Brush insides of bread halves with about 1 tbsp. olive oil. Re-form loaf, wrap in foil and place in 300-F. oven while you prepare omelet (be sure to save bread you have removed for bread crumbs or stuffing).

Heat 1 tbsp. oil in 10-inch skillet or omelet pan. Add potatoes, onions and garlic and cook until brown. Remove from pan; set aside. Add 1 tbsp. oil to pan; saute mushrooms. Remove from pan and set aside.

Beat eggs with oregano; salt and pepper to taste. Add final 1 tbsp. oil to pan over medium heat. Put potato mixture, mushrooms, green onions, ham and tomatoes in pan. Pour in eggs. As the edges become firm, push toward center and shake pan to allow uncooked egg to flow underneath. Cook until eggs are set on top but still appear moist and bottom is brown, about 5 minutes. Invert omelet on a plate, using spatula to loosen edges, then slide omelet back into pan (add more oil if necessary). Cook until delicately browned on other side, about 2 minutes.

Remove bread from foil and invert omelet into bottom half. Cover with top crust of bread and wrap in several thicknesses of foil. Picnic loaf can be made ahead, chilled and reheated in 400-F. for 25 to 30 minutes wrapped in foil.

The classic "Club Sandwich" is updated in a hollowed out bread loaf, filled with layers of cheese, beef, turkey, tomatoes with sour cream and bacon dressing.

Club sandwich

The Club Sandwich begins with a nine-inch round bread loaf halved horizontally, hollowed out and filled with delicious layers of sliced Swiss cheese, roast beef, turkey, tomatoes and bottled sour cream and bacon dressing.

Top the sandwich with the remaining half of the loaf and stars cut from cheese. When served, the layered filling gives a striped look to each hearty sandwich.

CLUB SANDWICH

1 loaf unsliced round bread (about 9-inch diameter)
1 cup (8 oz.) sour cream and bacon dressing lettuce
⅓ pound sliced Swiss cheese
¾ pound sliced cooked roast beef
½ pound sliced cooked turkey
1 large tomato, sliced

Cut bread in half horizontally; hollow out center of each half, leaving ¼ inch shell. Spread ⅓ cup sour cream and bacon dressing into each shell; line bottom shell with lettuce. Into bottom shell, layer cheese, roast beef, remaining dressing, turkey, then tomato.

Top with lettuce; replace top shell and garnish, if desired, with additional cheese, cut into starts. To serve, cut into wedges. Makes about 6 servings.

The wrap-up

The picnic, relieved of tired, old chicken and haven't-we-seen-this-before potato salad, can be the perfect opportunity for an urbane outdoor feast.

The French, who have a word for just about everything that appeals to the senses, perfected the "piquenique" several centuries ago, transforming what the Romans called "dole basket suppera" into glorious open-air dining.

Insulated containers are preferable for safe eating.

WRAP-UP

12 ounces cream cheese, at room temperature
1 cup grated Gruyere cheese
⅓ cup coconut rum
½ cup chopped dates
½ cup chopped nuts
½ pound thinly sliced ham
1 Italian bread, about 14 inches long

In a medium bowl combine cream cheese, Gruyere cheese and liqueur; beat until smooth. Stir in dates and nuts. Cut a thin slice off the top of the bread lengthwise. Scoop out the bread leaving a thin wall. Spread a thin layer of the cheese mixture inside the hollowed-out loaf.

Arrange ham slices inside the loaf, leaving enough ham to wrap over the top. Spoon remaining cheese mixture inside the loaf. Wrap ham slices over cheese to cover. Replace top of bread over all. Wrap in foil; chill. To serve, slice into 1-inch pieces. Makes about 12 servings.

Fresh picnic ideas cure 'cook's block' after July 4

HEARST FEATURE SERVICE

The tyranny of fried chicken and deviled eggs is overwhelming on a summer holiday. Picnickers seem to come down with cook's block after July 4, and it's eggs and chicken time again.

That's a pity, because simple, more interesting dishes are no farther than the nearest cookbook. A picnic menu might be cold soup, quiche or potato pie and dessert or pate, salad with crusty French bread and dessert or just salad and French bread.

The trick to picnics is keep them simple, stay away from mayonnaise or custards which spoil rapidly unless refrigerated, and make sure the food is portable.

Carry the food in its own serving dish to save time and dish washing. A 3-pound coffee or shortening can filled with ice and salt makes an excellent refrigerant. Layer the ice cubes with 2 tablespoons of coarse salt. Put a cover on the can and place cold food around it. Freeze milk cartons full of water; make sure the top is closed and use them to keep food chilled.

Whether to use colorful napkins, plates and forks or chop sticks depends on your mood. An old sheet makes a decent picnic tablecloth, as do large bath towels.

In "Summer Food," Judith Olney offers a number of alternatives to fried chicken, especially this loaf, which is a complete picnic when accompanied by a bottle of wine.

PICNIC LOAF

1 recipe for bread dough (or frozen bread thawed)
10 ounces Gruyere cheese
4 eggs in the shell
1 pound Polish sausage (kielbasa) cut in 4 and pricked

Let the dough rise once in the bowl. Divide in two and make a thin, flat circle of dough (around 14 inches in diameter) on an oiled baking sheet. Place the cheese in the middle in a neat, round 6-inch-wide heap. (Grate or cut it into shape.) Cover cheese with half the remaining dough, sealing on the lid with a small amount of water. Space the eggs evenly around the edge with a section of sausage between each egg. Form the remaining dough into narrow, rounded strips and use them in a criss-cross pattern to bind eggs and sausage to the bread base. Moisten ends to help them stick. Let rise, glaze and bake, allowing an extra 5 minutes in the oven. The eggs will cook, the sausage render its flavorful juices, and the cheese melt succulently into the bread. Serve cut into pie wedges.

PICNIC PATE

6 ounces mushrooms
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
2 eggs
3/4 pound ground veal
1/2 pound ground pork
2 ounces ground pork fat
1/4 pound slices prosciutto, cut into 1/2-inch squares
1/3 cup pistachio nuts
1/4 cup minced fresh parsley
3 tblsp. minced shallots
2 tsp. fresh thyme or 1/4 tsp. dried
1 garlic clove, peeled and minced
Salt and freshly-ground pepper to taste
1/2 cup heavy cream
3 tablespoons brandy
3/4 pound thin-sliced pork fat for larding

Wash, dry, trim and chop the mushrooms. Saute gently in the butter until the moisture evaporates. Remove from the heat and reserve. Beat the eggs lightly in a large mixing bowl. Stir in the mushrooms and all the remaining ingredients, except the larding fat, and combine well. Saute a spoonful of the mixture and taste for seasoning. Add seasoning if necessary.

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Line a 1 1/2-quart terrine or loaf pan with the pork fat, reserving some for the top. Pack in the pate and cover with the remaining fat. Cover the terrine tightly with a double thickness of aluminum foil and a lid, if available. Place it inside a large pan half filled with hot water and bake for about 2 hours, 15 minutes or until the juices are clear yellow and a meat thermometer registers 170 degrees. Pour the water out of the large pan, place the terrine inside and weight the pate by placing large, heavy cans or filled jars directly on top of the aluminum foil. Let stand until cool. Unmold and served chilled or at room temperature. Makes 8 servings.

CREAM OF ALMOND SOUP

2 cups chicken stock or broth
3 egg yolks
1 cup heavy cream
1 cup blanched almonds
1/2 cup peeled and chopped pear
Grated rind of half a small lemon
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Pinch of nutmeg

Heat the chicken broth to simmering. Combine the egg yolks and cream in a small bowl and stir in a little of the hot broth. Then, stirring vigorously, pour the yolk-cream mixture into the broth and cook over medium heat, stirring, for 15 minutes or until slightly thickened. Do not allow the mixture to boil.

Grind the almonds to a fine powder in a food processor blender. Add the chopped pear and puree with the almonds. With the motor running, add the cream and broth mixture in a thin, steady stream. Pour the soup into a saucepan and stir over medium heat, without boiling, for 10 minutes. Remove from the heat and stir in the lemon rind and juice and nutmeg to taste. Cool to room temperature and chill. Makes about 1 quart.

Bean salad revised

JO'S RELISH

New version of three-bean salad.

16-ounce can French-style green beans
12-ounce can whole kernel (shoepeg) white corn
17-ounce can green peas with pearl onions
4-ounce jar sliced pimiento
1 cup diced (½-inch) celery
1 medium green pepper, diced (½ inch)
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup cider vinegar
½ cup salad oil
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon pepper

Drain beans, corn, peas and pimiento; turn into a large bowl with celery and pepper. In a medium saucepan, over moderate heat, stir together sugar, vinegar, oil, salt and pepper until sugar is dissolved; cool; pour over vegetables. Refrigerate overnight to develop flavors. Makes about 6 cups. (—AP)

Lemons get 'lemon' year

While lemon growers in California recently touted "the lemon crop is an exceptionally big one this year and sizes are larger than normal; lemons should be available at reasonable prices in local markets," the situation has changed in only a few short weeks.

Sunkist Growers, Inc. reports the warm rainy weather the state has experienced this winter and spring has caused a proliferation of the snail population, resulting on excessive fruit damage. In addition, winds have caused some outside scarring of the fruit.

Consequently, top quality standards will be in shorter supply and higher in cost than originally expected.

Wedding Notes by Tony L. Corbell

WHAT KIND OF WEDDING

The first decision facing the newly engaged couple is what kind of wedding they want. The most popular choice is the church wedding which assures an impressive background for the ceremony and has a religious atmosphere. But more than that are such advantages as proper seating for guests, a platform for the ceremony and proper acoustics for the exchange of vows.

The garden wedding is a romantic alternative and a proper one too. After all, the first human couple was married in a garden. But since the weather will be a major concern, it is best to have alternate plans ready.

The home wedding ceremony can be just as honorable as one in a church. The obvious disadvantage is, in the small number of guests which can be invited.

SUMMER TRIFLE

Summer is meant to be savored. Unfortunately, it's a season that slips by all too soon so enjoy sun-dappled lawns, meadows abloom with flowers, brilliant blue skies, balmy breezes and nature's bounty of fruits and vegetables to the fullest for time is fleeting.

Right now, rosy-cheeked peaches are making their welcome appearance in the markets to bring pleasure to our tables. Delicious "as is" in the hand, peaches become sublime with a little bit of effort. For a simple, but super dessert, top vanilla ice cream (peach is even better!) with sliced peaches and pour a couple of teaspoons of amaretto each serving.

If you have more time and want something more elaborate, a trifle is an elegant way to delight in this summer's crop of peaches. This trifle can be prepared early in the day and garnished just before serving. Custard, cubes of pound cake, sliced peaches and raspberry preserves are layered.

⅓ cup cornstarch
½ cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
3½ cups milk
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon vanilla
½ cup amaretto
2 frozen pound cakes (10¾ ounces each)
2 cups raspberry preserves
¼ cup amaretto
6 peaches, peeled, pitted and sliced
Whipped cream
Toasted, sliced almonds

In a saucepan, mix cornstarch, sugar and eggs until well blended. Gradually stir in milk. Add butter or margarine and stir over medium heat until custard thickens. Remove from heat and cool, covered. Stir in vanilla and ½ cup amaretto Cover and chill for several hours. Cut cakes into ½-inch cubes. Mix preserves with ¼ cup amaretto. Layer cake cubes, raspberry preserves, peaches and custard in a 2½ quart bowl. End with a drizzle of raspberry preserves. Chill. Just before serving, pipe a border of whipped cream around outer edge of bowl using a pastry bag with a star tip. Garnish with peach slices and toasted, sliced almonds, if desired. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

GADO GADO

1 pound fresh green beans, trimmed
2 cups shredded cabbage
2 large carrots, cut in julienne strips
1 cucumber, sliced diagonally
1 cup bean sprouts
8 ounces tofu (soybean curd), cut in ½-inch cubes

Bring 2 quarts of water to a boil in a medium saucepan; add beans, cabbage and carrots, cook 3 minutes. Rinse with cold water; drain. Arrange vegetables, cucumber, sprouts and tofu on large serving platter. Serve with peanut sauce. Makes 4 servings.

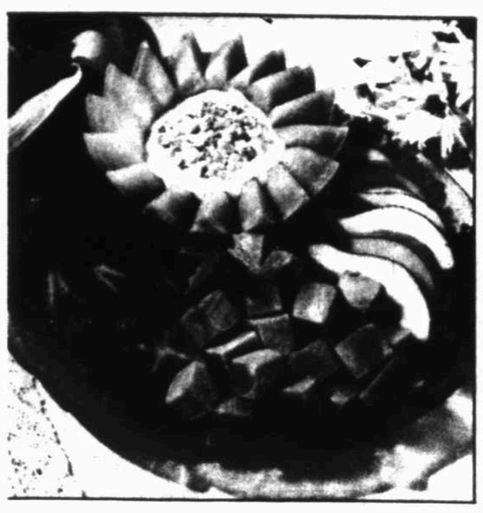

PEANUT SAUCE

⅓ cup smooth peanut butter
⅓ cup water
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
1¼ teaspoons Tabasco pepper sauce
½ teaspoon salt
1 clove garlic, cut in half
1 piece lemon peel, about 1-inch

In a small saucepan combine all ingredients; stir over low heat until smooth. Remove from heat. Remove garlic and lemon peel. Serve warm over salad.
Makes about 1⅓ cups sauce.

Grilling fish tips

When grilling fish outdoors, Annette Reddell Hegen of the the Texas Agricultural Extension Service suggests using thicker cuts of fish and a basting sauce to keep fish from drying out. Fish should be placed about four inches from the coals and cooked for 10 to 20 minutes, depending upon thickness.

HAM AND FRUIT SALAD WITH CITRUS BLUE CHEESE DRESSING

It's strictly summer party when you serve a ham and fresh fruit salad laced with a Citrus Blue Cheese Dressing. Cubes of ham and sliced fresh fruits such as red-ripe strawberries and juicy pears are arranged atop a bed of leaf lettuce on a large platter. A sunburst cut from half a honeydew melon makes the perfect holder for the tasty dressing.

The name, Blue Cheese (fromage bleu) cane from France but it's now a throughly American summer delight.

½ cup crumbled Blue Cheese
1 cup sour cream
½ cup orange juice concentrate
2 tablespoons orange marmalade or apricot preserves
⅛ teaspoon ground ginger
1 head Boston or leaf lettuce
12 ounces baked ham, cut into julienne strips
1 medium cantaloupe or honeydew melon, halved
1 pint strawberries
1 pear, sliced

Combine sour cream, orange juice concentrate, Blue Cheese, marmalade and ginger. Cover and refrigerate about 1 hour. Arrange lettuce on large serving platter. Arrange ham and fruit in an attractive pattern on top of lettuce. Serve with Blue Cheese dressing. Note: Any assortment of seasonal fruits can be used.

AVOCADO-STUFFED EGGS

6 eggs, hard-cooked, peeled and halved lengthwise
1 cup Basic Avocado Dip (recipe follows)
1 tsp. freshly grated onion or ½ tsp. instant minced onion
1 tsp. Dijon mustard
⅛ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
Paprika

Remove egg yolks; mash. Combine yolks with Basic Avocado Dip, onion, mustar, salt and pepper; mix well. Fill egg-white halves with avocado egg mixture; sprinkle each with paprika. Serve immediately or chill, well covered, a maximum of 5 hours.

Makes 12 servings.

VEGETABLE STUFFED PICNIC LOAVES

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 large onion, thinly sliced
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 medium eggplant, thinly sliced (1 pound)
1 zucchini, sliced thinly on the diagonal
1 yellow squash, sliced thinly on the diagonal
1 tomato, thinly sliced
1 red pepper, thinly sliced
1 cup sliced, fresh mushrooms
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon dried leaf oregano, crumbled
½ teaspoon dried leaf basil, crumbled
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 loaves (about 15 inches each) Italian or French bread
¾ pound thinly sliced salami
¾ pound thinly sliced provolone cheese
¼ pound freshly grated Parmesan cheese

In a saucepot heat oil; cook onion and garlic until softened. Add eggplant, zucchini, squash, tomato, red pepper, mushrooms and seasonings. Simmer, stirring occasionally until vegetables are softened. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Drain vegetables to remove moisture. Slice loaves of bread in half lengthwise and scoop out most of the soft insides. Line loaves with a layer of salami and a layer of cheese. Top with vegetable mixture and Parmesan cheese. Place halves together and wrap in foil or plastic wrap. Makes 8 servings.

BERRY BEST PICNIC BAR

½ cup butter or margarine, softened
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs
½ teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups blueberries
Crumb topping (see recipe below)

In a medium bowl cream butter and sugar until light. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Beat in vanilla. In a medium bowl; stir together flour baking powder and cinnamon; stir into creamed mixture. Spread batter evenly into a buttered 9x13-inch pan; top with blueberries. Sprinkle with crumb topping. Bake in a 350-degree oven 45 minutes or until golden.

COOKIE JAR FAVORITES

The snap of ginger and chewy goodness of raisins are what makes "Cookie Jar Favorites," favorites.

Raisins in cookies are a natural. You can't beat them for texture and moist, sweet flavor. Combine a simple method (dough that's chilled and sliced, no rolling or cutting out required) with just the right amount of sugar and spice and you have some extra-special cookies.

Besides providing chewy-good texture, raisins embellish cookies and an array of other dishes from salads and sweet rolls, with a good supply of iron and potassium.

Raisins are definitely a handy snack to keep on the kitchen counter in an air-tight cannister. That way you can reach for the raisins whenever a recipe calls for their special touch, or you just want a satisfying snack.

1½ cups butter or margarine, soft ened
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs
2⅔ cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups raisins
½ cup candied ginger or ½ cup golden raisins and 1 tablespoon powdered ginger
1 egg white, beaten

In mixing bowl cream butter, sugar and eggs. Stir in flour and salt, mixing until blended. Stir in raisins and ginger; chill 1 to 2 hours to firm slightly. With floured hands; form dough into a log about 3 inches in diameter or smaller for smaller cookies.

Wrap in waxed paper and refrigerate to chill completely. With sharp knife cut slices from log about ¼-inch thick. Place several inches apart on greased baking sheet; brush generously with beaten egg white; sprinkle with additional granulated sugar. Bake in 350 degree oven about 15 minutes until golden. Cool 2 to 3 minutes on pan, remove to rack and cool completely.

Makes 1½ to 2 dozen large cookies.

Sonoma Spa: Tranquility's the Inn thing

By EVELYN KIERNAN
Copley News Service

High up on either side of the exercise room, two moon windows had been cut to capture the light. A young green branch stirred in the soft breeze and bent, filling the window on the north side.

Bands of light from the curved ceiling of the adjacent entry bowed in brilliant geometry in the other.

By some magic, the two moons merged in the mirrored wall, reflecting an infinity of perspectives — multiplying a kaleidoscope of endless beauty.

I LAY ON the floor mat, stretching arms, legs — and for one brief moment — horizons. The music faded as the moment held in time and space, in inner harmony.

Peace prevailed.

If that sounds as though one had been over-sampling the glories of the nearby vineyards or yearning after some ancient mystical truths, you're probably right.

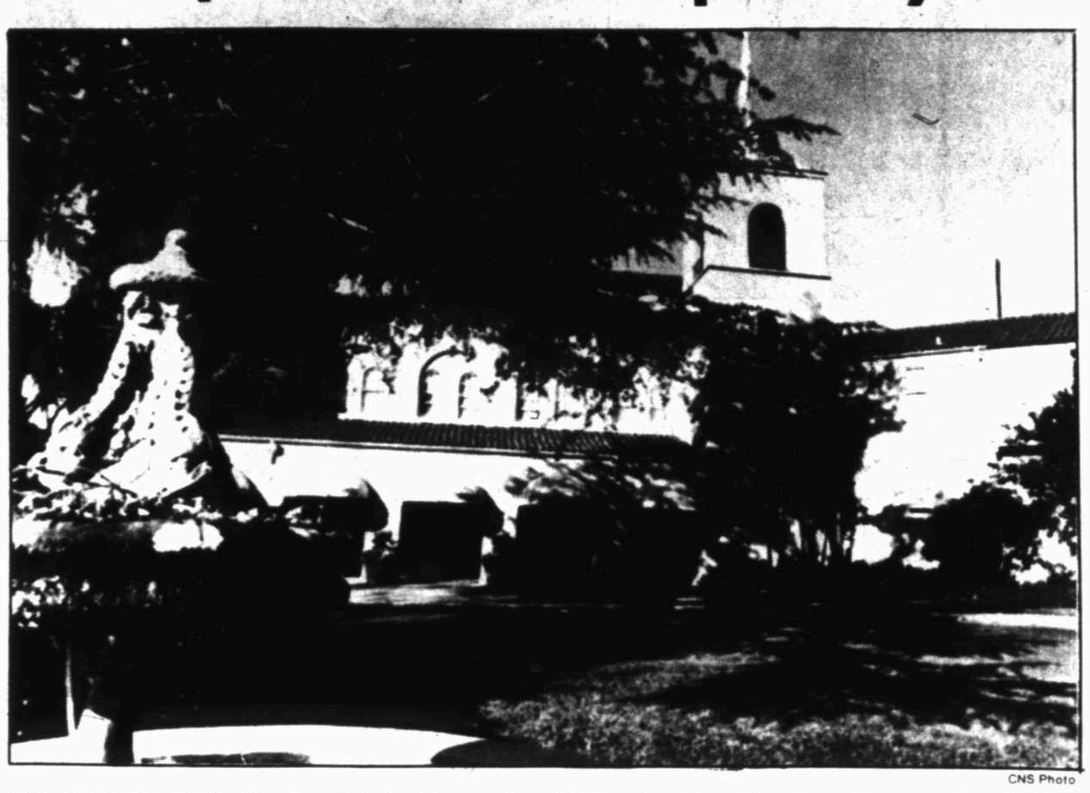

But it's not an unusual experience for visitors to Northern California's Valley of the Moon. Jack London understood it. So did Robert Louis Stevenson. Both of them wrote at length of this extraordinary area.

The people who built the spa at the Sonoma Mission Inn must have experienced it, too. And, somehow, they managed to capture it in the building which is dedicated to helping visitors achieve, if not Nirvana itself, a healthy start in the right direction.

I SMILED TO myself, recalling an article I had read which stated that this building was an old Quonset hut movie theater. To paraphrase a happy slogan, "It had come a long way, baby."

I knew about Quonsets — had lived in one briefly long ago. Never dreamed it could ever turn into anything so glamorous — but it did account for the curved ceiling (how we had hated them in cold climates!).

Nothing accounted for the imagination that had transformed the erstwhile ugly, strictly functional building into this beautiful spa, though credit is given to Charles Swerz & Associates, the geniuses who took the alloted Quonset and transformed it into a "sybaritic substitute" for an ordinary gym.

CNS Photo

The ambience of the Sonoma Mission Inn and Spa inspires the visitor to seek personal revitalization in the sybaritic setting.

Neither was there any specific accounting for the success of the spa itself. If there was, I couldn't figure it out. At least not instantly.

I HAD CHECKED in at the Sonoma Mission Inn, a once-funky resort built in the 1920s in what was then known as Mission Revival architecture. Over the years it had become a haven for the California laid-back lifestyle, leaning heavily to the pickup truck and motorcycle set.

The gardens ran to weeds and dried-out lawns and the stucco exterior grew rapidly the worse for wear through rainy winters and too-hot summers. Flower children of all ages loved it.

Then along came San Francisco real estate tycoon Edward Safdie who recognized the potential of the buildings, the surroundings and the entire area. He bought it for some $2.5 million. Less than a year and some $7 million later he reopened it.

In the interim he turned loose some of the best designers and workmen available. John Dickinson, designer of the Beverly Hills Hotel, was responsible for the Inn's interiors. Sticking to the idea of the simple life of the missions, his rooms are classic (but, oh so comfortable) cell-like retreats. A pale adobe-pink wash covers the beautifully repaired exterior and appears again in a number of furnishings and appointments in the hotel.

DETAILS, TOO NUMEROUS to mention, all add to the natural sense of serenity which is one of the great charms of the region. The gardens are in prime shape — simple and natural and filled with birds. A spring-fed stream meanders peacefully through the property.

A first-rate restaurant, The Provencal, is the pride of the Inn. Truly fine French provincial and northern Italian cooking has made it so popular with locals that reservations are a good idea almost any night.

But fine and fattening cuisine was not what had lured me here. It was the much-publicized spa itself. I wanted to see what any spa could possibly do in five days to undo the self-inflicted damage of 50 years.

CANDIDLY, I EXPECTED very little. Had the distinct impression that all spas are so superficial or so "into" self-examination and preservation systems as to be completely boring.

Wrong.

Somewhere about the third day, the chip on my shoulder fell off. The highly personalized fitness program worked out for me was obviously accomplishing something. By the end of the fifth day I had not only lost 5 pounds and a cumulative 5 inches, but apparently had restored the energy exhausted in a too-tight travel schedule.

The 12 other women in the group, ranging in age from mid-20 to mid-70, expressed similar feelings.

How is this possible?

WE TALKED AND came to the conclusion that it must be the combination of pleasant surroundings, personalized programming, superior instruction, gentle prodding and the basic assumption that you are there to do something good for yourself.

Nobody hangs any guilt on you. If you want a cigarette, light up (outside please). If you can't face the evening without a little cocktail or two, there's a most attractive bar or attentive room service. If the limited-calorie, superb menus offered don't satisfy, feel free to order seconds or dine in The Provencal.

If you want to go exploring the nearby wineries, restaurants or shops, your schedule will be arranged to allow you plenty of time to do so. After all, you're paying for the program — a neat $1,800 for the five days.

"But," says Gary Chlad, the fitness director, "lots of people spend that much for a vacation trip which doesn't really do them much good. Here, at least, you know if you cooperate you'll go home feeling much better than when you arrived.

"And," he added, "you will have established a pattern to continue to feel better."

CHLAD IS A University of California at Santa Barbara physical education graduate with five years experience at The Golden Door. His approach to exercise is very low-key. "The majority of the people who come to the spa have an unexpected problem: They've forgotten how to relax." So, much of the exercise is of the no-strain, stretch-relax variety.

Naturally, if you can handle it, there are more advanced classes, with much emphasis on aerobics and heart-conditioning. But everyone is asked to go at an easy pace, never setting too ambitious goals which only succeed in exhausting you. Pool exercises and games add to the fun.

The whole program is well interspersed with such pampering routines as daily massages, hot tubs and hydrotherapy, herb wraps, steam, sauna and Jacuzzi sessions and an assortment of salon services such as manicures, pedicures, facials, hairdos, makeup lessons — whatever makes you feel — and look — good.

Evening entertainment is limited — most everyone is ready for bed pretty early as the day begins with a very early morning hike in nearby Jack London Park. There are no heavy lectures, no philosophical discussions, no proselytizing for any religious groups — indeed, there is little, if anything, spiritual or intellectual interjected in the program.

I TALKED WITH Eva Jensch, director of the spa, about the whole idea. She told me that approximately 90 percent of the spa guests are working women. Many of them are facing "burn-out" — that dreaded state of non-functioning in a career. Many are just tired, have let the pressures and tensions of demanding jobs overwhelm.

"Weight loss is only a small part of the overall need for a better approach to managing time, for writing a daily routine, a new script, if you will, which constantly replenishes instead of draining.

"That's the whole object of our programs here. We want you to be healthy — and happy. A week — or a weekend — isn't too much time to give to a whole new approach to life, is it?" She smiled.

Jensch, and all the staff, are their own best recommendations for their programs. They all seem to enjoy great good health without being overbearing about it.

Travel writer's musings on travel

By MICHAEL CARLTON
The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

When people learn that I am a travel writer, the first question they inevitably ask is: "What is your favorite place?" I usually avoid a direct answer by saying something like "The last place I've been or the next place I'm going." And that is the truth, for I can get as excited about a trip to Sasakatoon, Saskatchewan as I can about one to Paris or Hong Kong.

Still, when really tested recently — when planning my first vacation in more than six years — I selected the places on this earth that I most enjoy, countries I hoped my new bride would find equally intriguing and romantic.

In planning this honeymoon I considered staying at Treetops and the Mt. Kenya Safari Club in Kenya for some game viewing. And I thought of sailing along the Great Barrier Reef off Australia's golden coast. I even contemplated a lazy month on my favorite Caribbean islands — St. Kitts, St. Lucia, Nevis.

But in the final judgement, I decided upon a very conventional trip, one many, if not most, of you have probably made. I decided to visit those three tourist meccas of Europe: England, France and Italy.

And, after a month of roaming around the three countries, after 30 days of traveling the width and breath of them, I'm pleased at my choices. They are still, to me, the most exciting, the most beautiful, and the most romantic countries in the world — even if you are looking at them for the hundredth time.

Like all good trips, this one gave me new questions to ponder. Such world-shaking questions as:

—Why would the QE2's embarkation area in Philadelphia have a second-rate accordionist player playing "Lady of Spain" as we left port when, in fact, we were sailing to England?

—Why are English dogs so beautiful and French and Italian dogs so ugly?; and why are Italian children so beautiful while English and French children are so doughy looking?

—Why is rain totally acceptable during a vacation in England, but ruinous in France and Italy?

—Why is the main street of downtown London — Regent — so tawdry and tacky and why is the main street of downtown Paris — the Champs-Elysees — so extraordinarily beautiful?

—Why can all the airports in Europe manage to have plenty of carts for your luggage available when you collect your bags while so few airports offer them in the States; and, if they do, charge you a buck to use them?

—Why are the hotels in Philadelphia in which we spent our honeymoon night before sailing on the QE2, the Barclay, and our place of rest in London, the Berkeley, both pronounced "Barklay?"

—Why do waiters in England make it seem a privilege to serve you while those in France can hardly mask a sneer and those in Italy a yawn?

—Why do the Italians design such great shoes and such terrible restaurants?

—Why are European trains so good and ours so bad?

—Why are pigeons considered a pest here and a tourist attraction at St. Mark's Square in Venice?

—Why can't American hotels have heated towel racks and bidets?

—Why can the French have such great restaurants at their railway stations when we have trouble getting a steamed hotdog at ours?

These, and more, we contemplate now as we sit late into the night at home.

And on these dark and stormy nights, we also remember a lot of things that impressed us or dismayed us in a month of wandering. Some random observations:

—The QE2 is still the best way to get to Europe for those who have the time, even in this jet-age. A five-day transit on the ship costs little more than an airline ticket, and you get wonderful meals, superb first-run movies (including "Gandhi" and "The Verdict" on our trip) and a slow-paced, entirely welcome introduction to first-class living.

—The International Herald Tribune is the American's greatest friend when he is abroad for long. You'll keep abreast of all the major news from home, know if it's raining in Pittsburgh or San Francisco, and find out that the Cubs have lost yet another game.

—Paris, despite the fall of the franc, is still extraordinarily expensive. We booked a small double room at the Paris Intercontinental and paid nearly $200 for a space that was smaller than our stateroom on the QE2.

—The Jeu de Paume museum in the Tuileries Gardens of Paris is usually overlooked by tourists rushing by to get to the nearby Louvre, and that's a shame, for it has a smashing collection of Impressionist paintings that will knock your socks off.

—French table wine can't touch our California jug wines. Their premier wines are superb — but surprisingly expensive. You can often buy the same bottle of wine for less in the States than you can in France. Italian table wine is not worth drinking and much of the red wine is doctored with ox blood to give it a richer color.

CNS Photo

The Eiffel Tower is one of the great sights from the famed Bateaux Mouches, the tour boats which drift along the Seine River, giving visitors a wonderful vista of Paris, one of the author's favorite cities. Travel Writer Michael Carlton chose to visit Paris and other French attractions on his honeymoon because he finds France one of the most exciting, romantic and beautiful cities in the world, next to Italy and England.

Pointers for visitors to Venezuela

By 'GENE BURKE
Regional Director
Los Angeles
Passport Agency
Copley News Service

TRAVEL ADVISORY: Venezuela — U.S. citizens wishing to come to Venezuela from the United States as tourists may obtain tourist cards from airlines authorized to fly to Venezuela. U.S. flag carriers currently authorized to fly into Venezuela are Pan Am and Continental. The Venezuelan international carrier VIASA also provides tourist cards to U.S. citizens.

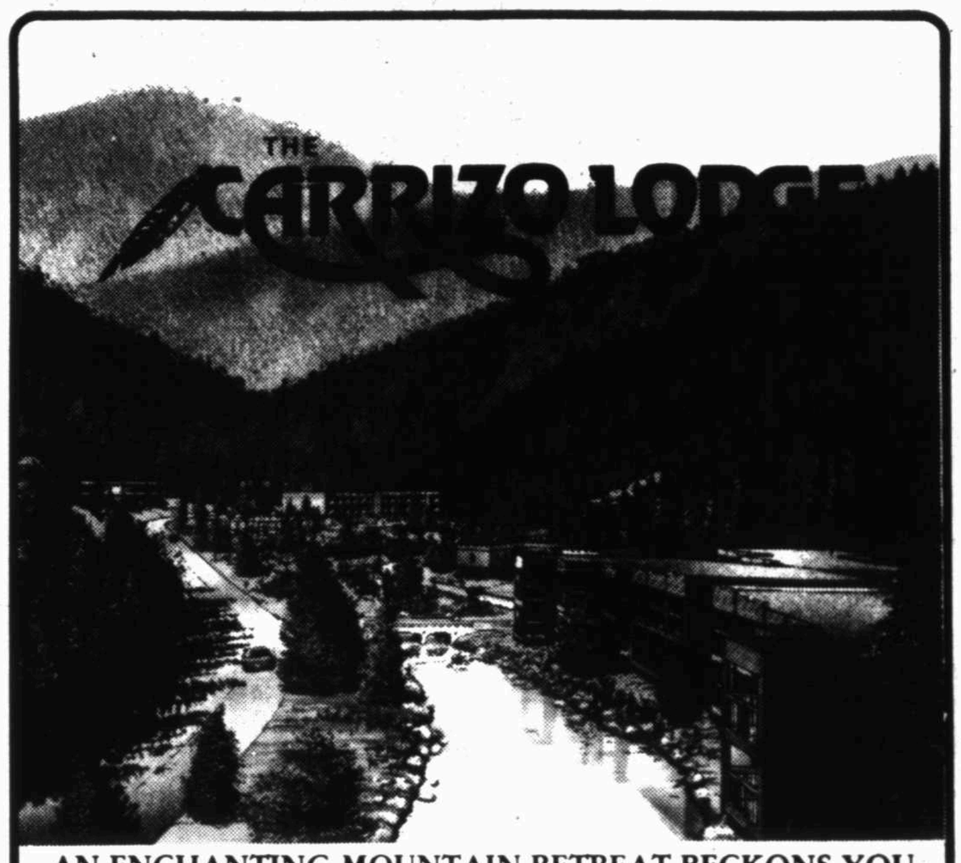

U.S. citizens coming to Venezuela as tourists by means other than common carrier (e.g., yachts) must apply for tourist visas at any Venezuelan embassy or consulate en route before entering Venezuelan territorial waters. These tourists should also be advised to have the vessel's papers in order. Firearms carried aboard yachts may be confiscated unless accounted for in inventory of vessel's equipment and declared.

Q: What are your office hours and are you open on Saturdays?

A: Our agency is open to the public 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. We are not open Saturdays, but some post offices authorized to accept passport applications are open Saturday mornings. Check your local post office.

Q: I am an American citizen by birth and have adopted a foreign child. Does she gain citizenship through the adoption and, if not, how can I apply for citizenship for her? She is 3 years old.

A: Your adopted minor child does not acquire U.S. citizenship through you and must be naturalized to become a citizen. You should file a petition for her citizenship through the Immigration and Naturalization Service, 300 N. Los Angeles St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90012.

County presents musical

"Ole Coke County, Home of the Rabbit Twisters," a historic musical, is being presented July 22, 23, 29 and 30 in the town of Robert Lee.

This annual presentation involves over 100 Coke County "Rabbit Twisters," or descendents from other areas, and depicts some 50 years of the county's early settlers' most exciting experiences right up to the turn of the century.

Admission charges to the play, which will be presented in the Mountain Creek Amphitheatre at 8:30 each evening, is $4 for adults and $2 for children ages 5 to 12.

Egypt possesses ancient grandeur, modern problems

Copley News Service

LUXOR, Egypt — At the fading Winter Palace Hotel in Luxor a huge portrait of Hosni Mubarak, the president of Egypt, hangs behind the reception desk. It is an axiom among seasoned travelers that one should strive to avoid such hotels, whether in Egypt or India or Eastern Europe. The portrait means the hotel is owned by the government, and civil servants staff it. The verve of free enterprise is absent; service will be a sometime thing.

We were not staying at the Winter Palace, but on the sleek Hilton Hotel riverboat Osiris. At dusk we walked along the Nile until the bulk of the Winter Palace rose up out of the dark. We turned inside.

Huddles of fraying tourists pocked the vast lobby; even at the dinner hour they waited patiently for their rooms: Americans, Chinese, Germans, all with the dazed look of travelers who have come far and grown numb. The marble staircase wound upward, but it was deserted.

In the spacious library, one old Britisher sat alone on a frayed and patched settee. Like many of the other furnishings in the Winter Palace, it must have preceded Egyptian independence from the British in 1952. The solitary Britisher in this slightly seedy setting was like other remnants of colonialism one remembers: the hill stations in Sri Lanka where Britishers lived while natives picked tea on humid slopes below; or the very English accents with which intellectuals attack Western political policies at New Delhi garden parties while sipping scotch and soda, without ice.

The charm of Luxor and the Winter Palace owe much to the British presence. The hotel is the dowager of a community of about 50,000 people where horse-drawn carriages ply riverside streets and feluccas glide along the Nile. It is said to be much as it was in 1922 when archaeologist Howard Carter and Lord George Edward Carnarvon, who stayed at the Winter Palace, made the ultimate discovery of Egypt's past greatness: the tomb of the boy king Tutankhamen, and its treasures, now known to all the world.

We ended our tour of the Winter Palace in a dim but spacious bar, ornate with mahogany, its ceilings lost in lofty darkness. Behind the bar stood a single Nubian, who nodded gravely as we took our seats. (Egyptians are predominantly Muslim, but they are unlike Arab nations in their complex ethnic mix, which has resulted largely from serving as a Mediterranean crossroads for thousands of years. They are Lebanese and Syrian, Greek and Cretan. The Nubians are a Negroid race diluted by old Egyptian influences and Arab migrations; about 200,000 of them live along the banks of the Nile, most of them from Aswan south to Khartoum in the Sudan.)

We asked him for vodka and tonic and looked around. The only other occupants of the room were five American college students, touring as part of their Semester at Sea; we had met them earlier in the day as we went in and out of the tombs in the Valley of the Kings. Now one pimply lad seemed to be baiting his group. He ticked off anti-American arguments heard on every campus, from the era of Vietnam to El Salvador.

"I don't care," a pretty Southern Methodist University coed kept saying. "It's better than anyplace else."

Finally he tired of his game and flipped on a stereo that he carried with him. Rock filled the room. The Nubian's eyes darkened. He reached beneath the bar and threw a switch of his own. From speakers around the room came crescendos of the Triumphal March from "Aida," which Verdi set in Egypt and began writing in 1870, the year after the opening of the Suez Canal.

The contest was brief. The young man with the stereo looked first at the Nubian behind the bar, who looked past him. Then he called across the room to us: "Is my stereo bothering you?"

"The 'Aida' does have more sense of place, doesn't it?" I said.

He was a good loser. He switched off the stereo. The Nubian flashed a brief smile and turned the volume of Verdi down imperceptibly.

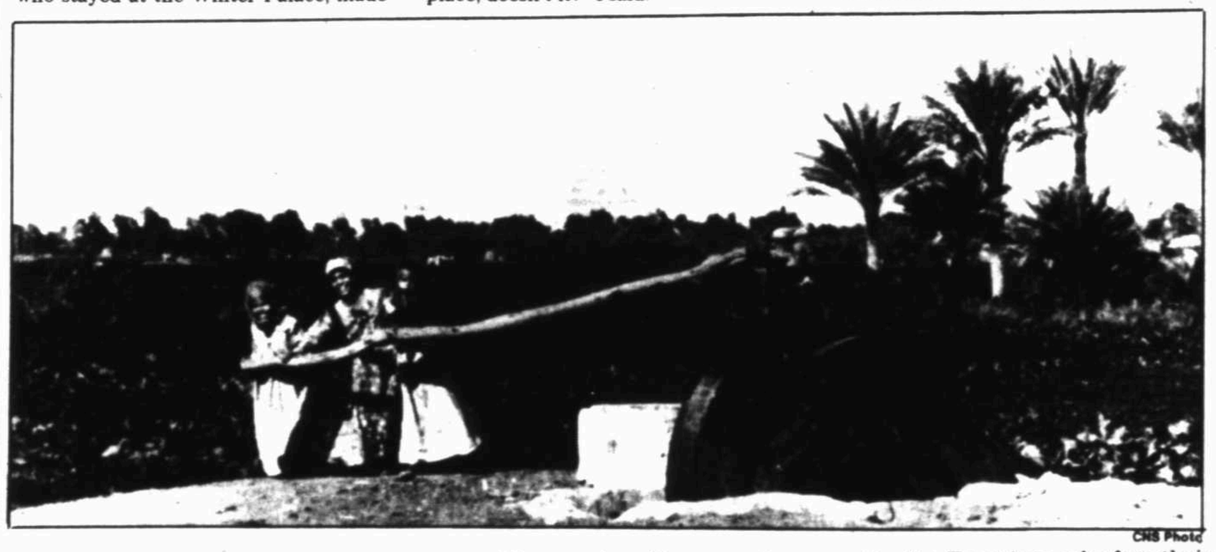

When I settled the check a few minutes later he bowed and coming up, to my surprise, flashed me a solemn wink.

We began our Egyptian visit by joining a Lindblad Travel group of 18 in Cairo. This Connecticut-based company is uncommonly well-staffed in Egypt. We had flown directly from Los Angeles to Cairo on TWA's longest flight, via New York, Rome and Athens. The melee of the Cairo airport was a blur. Our names were called by a man we came to know with affection: Dr. Mohamed S. Abdel Aziz, who should be headed about now for Boston and his medical internship. We dozed as he drove us to the Ramses Hilton Hotel.

Two other sensitive, literate Cairenes greeted us: Nellie Naim, one of the nation's better-known Egyptologists, and Dr. Eglal "Gigi" Wessia, a pediatrician who takes leave of her practice on occasion to shepherd Lindblad travelers. (She is also a traveling Blue Cross; she surveys her charges with a medical eye and her bagful of pharmacopeia heads off travelers' maladies before they take hold.)

The Lindblad tour (called "1,000 Miles Up the Nile") ranged by air as far south as Abu Simbel and Aswan, and cruised the Nile between Aswan and Luxor. It allotted three days to Cairo, a pulsing, overcrowded city of about 10 million. Everywhere we went in Egypt, the durability of its people's humor seemed to raise them above the troubles of their impoverished condition. Rare among Third World nations, Egypt never seems to depress the visitor; one is uplifted by past grandeur and present persistence.

The French are busy in Cairo now, trying to help unsnarl the city with a modern telephone system and a subway. The American presence has replaced the Soviet presence under which the Aswan Dam was built.

A Legacy Worth Reliving.

Savannah basks in fascinating 250-year heritage

By JACK BIESTERFELD
Copley News Service

SAVANNAH, Ga. — It was a cold and blustery February day in 1733 when Gen. James Oglethorpe and a hardy band of 12 British colonists landed on the shores of the Savannah River to establish a new life in the New World.

Now, 250 years later, visitors to this Georgia city still head for the river front, but this time they do so to walk along a tree-lined promenade, browse through quaint shops and delve into the city's fascinating history.

SAVANNAH HAS LONG been a mecca for history buffs. It is America's first planned city, and its hundreds upon hundreds of carefully restored homes grouped around shady squares annually attract millions of vacationers and preservationists.

Now the waterfront area is quickly becoming a magnet to visitors. It has come out of a centuries-long decline to become one of the biggest draws in Savannah.

Along the nine-block waterfront are some 20 restaurants and pubs, 35 shops and three museums. Cruises along the river start from here and it is the best place in the city to watch huge oceangoing ships come and go.

A FEW BLOCKS to the east Oglethorpe founded the first experimental garden in America in 1734. A plaque now marks the site. The 10-acre garden was intended to find the most profitable crop which could be raised in the new Colony. The colonists tried grapes for wine and mulberry leaves to feed silkworms. Fruit trees, hemp and spices were all tried in the Trustees Garden, but all failed.

Only one crop succeeded — cotton. In the ensuing years King Cotton made Savannah rich. Sailing ships from all over the world came to trade for the fiber. Huge stone warehouses were built along the base of the bluff overlooking the wharves. Ballast stones carried over on the sailing ships were used to pave the streets and make the walls of the buildings.

These old warehouses, some over 200 years old, are what makes the waterfront such a fascinating place to visit. The bottom floors overlooking the river house most of the shops and bistros.

INSIDE, HEAVY, HAND-HEWN timbers and bare bricks create a sense of history. Outside, a major urban renewal project wiped out the decrepit wharves and created the tree-lined pedestrian plaza, making the river front respectable again after many years of neglect.

Follow a cobblestone ramp up the hillside to the unique Factor's Walk. This maze of shaded alleys, footbridges and wrought-iron railings connected the main Bay Street area to the warehouses. It was here that the factors, or clerks, who worked in the cotton exchange and mercantile offices would walk, hence the name.

The upper stories of the warehouses were used as offices, and they still serve the same function today. From Bay Street they look like well-preserved two-story buildings with brick facades. But in reality they are five stories from the waterfront street below and in back.

ALONG BAY STREET a tree-shaded park holds other mementos of Savannah's history. There are the stone ramparts of Fort Wayne, built in 1784. An old iron lighthouse tower once guided ships into the port. The old Cotton Exchange building, constructed in 1886, was once the center of commerce in town. The bell from the old city exchange hangs in a replica of the cupola for the building. Guns presented to Savannah by George Washington in 1791 guard the waterfront.

Moored at the western end of the waterfront is the sailing ship Barba Negra, a three-masted Barquentine built in 1896 as a whaling ship. Now it is used for maritime research and education to save the whale, in a reversal of roles.

Although visitors are generally not allowed on board, the tall-masted ship with full rigging adds an authentic flair to the old buildings on the waterfront. Except for the occasional container ship or oceangoing freighter it is easy to imagine the wharf as it was 100 years ago.

At the other end of the waterfront restoration is a statue, "The Legend of the Waving Girl." It commemorates one of Savannah's favorite legends, the legend of Florence Martus. In the 1880s her fiance sailed off to sea. She promised to wreet every ship that passed her lighthouse home until he returned. She reportedly waved her white apron by day and a lantern every night at each ship that passed for the next 40 years.

NOT FAR FROM the statue, housed in one of the old waterfront buildings, is the Ships of the Sea Museum. Here, with intricately detailed models and pictures, the story of wooden ships and iron men in their 2,000-year struggle to conquer the sea is told.

There is an old ship's chandlery, or store, as well as a workshop and shipping office constructed in full scale. There are cannons, ships in bottles, figureheads and nearly anything else related to the sea.

Excursion boats tie up along the wharf about midway along the waterfront plaza. Both the Harbor Queen and the Cap'n Sam paddlewheel boat offer cruises up and down the river throughout the day.

CNS Photo

Savannah's historic waterfront is lined with 200-year-old warehouses that have been converted into chic boutiques, restaurants, gift shops and bistros. This charming restored section is located not far from the statue of the waving girl which commemorates the legend of a woman whose true love sailed off to sea and never returned.

City a symphony of emotions

By JACK SMITH
The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

We reached Venice, Italy on a Monday afternoon and found Harry's Bar closed for the day. "I suppose St. Mark's will be closed too," I grumbled, resenting this piece of bad luck.

We had stopped at the Albatros Hotel, on the outskirts of Mestre, and taken a bus through Mestre and over the causeway to Venice. A water bus, as crowded as a cattle car, had dropped us off on the Grand Canal not far from St. Mark's Square — the famous Piazza (i. Marcos.

I didn't want to walk immediately to St. Mark's. Of all Europe's treasures, it is probably the most renowned, the one most often seen in books and movies, the No. 1 goal of every tourist. I didn't want to come upon it unexpectedly, without some mental preparation.

I had never been to Venice, and I wanted to recover from the disagreeable boat ride before my eyes fell for the first time on that glorious vision: the Byzantine cathedral with its opulent doors, arches, domes and golden turrets; the red brick campanile, the quaint clock tower, the splendid Greek horses that once had been stolen by Napoleon; the great square with its clouds of pigeons.

We had lunch under a blue awning on the terrace of the Monaco Hotel, watching the gondolas slide by on the Grand Canal with their uncomfortable-looking passengers. They seemed to be trying to recapture the magic of all those movies, but not quite making it. Perhaps it would happen at night, when the moon was out and the gondoliers were singing.

Then we walked into the narrow streets, happily free of cars and motorcycles, and followed the little signs that said Piazza San Marcos. The signs alone made my heartbeat quicken.

Then, as suddenly as it might in a movie — "Cut to the Piazza San Marcos" — it appeared before us. I stood still, waiting to be seized by a symphony of emotions.

Directly in front of the cathedral stood an enormous dull gray screen, concealing the three center portals and the horses that I knew should be prancing on the entablature above them. It looked like a great eye patch. It was more of a disappointment, I thought, than Harry's Bar being closed.

My wife said, "I thought there'd be more pigeons."

Somehow that restored my good humor. I had an idea she was thinking of Katharine Hepburn as the American spinster who comes to Venice on vacation in "Summertime" and has an affair with Rossano Brazzi, the proprietor of a little glass shop near the piazza. There were thousands of pigeons in the movie.

Anyway, the screen in front of the cathedral meant that some conservation work was being done. We had seen screens and scaffolds everywhere, beginning with Notre Dame. And none too soon. The architectural landmarks of Europe were crumbling fast enough.

We entered the church, mystified and overwhelmed by its Oriental splendor, then walked through the smaller piazza (Piazzetta) that connects St. Mark's with the bay. Cafes spilled out of the ancient buildings in a bright lagoon of tables and umbrellas. On a music platform three gentlemen in tan coats — bass, violin, piano — were playing "It Had to Be You."

We turned back into the labyrinth of narrow streets and canals to look for a bookstore. I had heard that in Venice one could find books in English, and I hoped to find a copy of "Across the River and Into the Trees." It was perhaps Ernest Hemingway's worst book, an embarrassing self-parody, but at least no one else could parody Hemingway as well as he could. Since Venice was its setting, I thought it might come off better if I read it here, perhaps in Harry's Bar, where Hemingway's dying colonel had drunk very dry double martinis with his young Italian countess.

My wife had stepped into a small shop, perhaps hoping she might find Rossano Brazzi there, and I had walked on ahead. Suddenly, incredibly, I recognized a woman walking toward me. She was tall, slender, suntanned, casually chic. My wife had complained that she hadn't seen any chic women in Italy. Here was one from Los Angeles.

In 1951 our carpets were made of wool, rayon, or cotton face yarns. Today, most face yarns are of nylon, polyester or olefin. And of course we still have nice carpets made of wool.

Actually they're better! Today's carpets wear longer, are anti-static, anti-soil, anti-stain, or even anti-microbial. Many others are moth-proof, bug-proof, and mildew and mold resistant. They also have written guarantees, more beautiful colors and textures, are more colorfast and easier to clean. Even installation is better! Seaming techniques have been improved, backings are better, padding is better - all contributing to a better total installation!

BUY NOW and SAVE, at House of Carpets!

Not only can you save by buying during our 32nd Anniversary Sale, but you can also beat the price increases recently announced by nearly every carpet mill in the United States. So save double! Buy now from House of Carpets!

"Building a house will make dreams manifest," said Frank Welch. "The owner brings dreams and aspirations for a house, then the architect coordinates those ideas with his own."

Welch has been building Midlanders' dreams since the 1960s, and he maintains an office in Dallas as well as his Frank Welch & Associates office on West Texas Avenue.

He designed many important public buildings and residences in this city. Of several architects who worked for Welch's firm, many are now successful independents. Helping the Tall City grow, Welch designed structures like Midland Community Theatre and Midland Center.

"From disparate objectives come a fine finished product," Welch said of homebuilding. There is often a close and intense relationship between client and architect when a house is being built to fulfill someone's dream. Welch believes he can give his Midland clients the intangible satisfaction of having built their dream home.

"A client's list of needs — of his 'programmatic' requirements — may not be relevant. He may know little or nothing about the construction process," said Welch. Clients do know architecture they have seen — likes and dislikes among them, the way they would like to live, and changes from the way they live now needed to achieve that goal.

FRANK WELCH designs Midland structures, but he has built houses in almost every part of Texas by now, many in Dallas. He describes an architect like he is talking about the Renaissance man.

"An architect's interests must be comprehensive," he said. "The architect is involved with so many things, from the larger concept of a building, down to the quality of the materials used in its construction."

Each home and building Welch designs, "...is a new combination of materials and factors." These things may be familiar or may border on revolutionary. The current mood in architecture, Welch noted, is one of a large free-for-all — confusing styles that don't blend well, more often than not.

Clear, emphatic architecture from the Bauhaus period looks very unadorned, and often seems boxy. It was "a simple code that was easy to corrupt," Welch said. The reaction against Bauhaus was exaggerated, he said, because every revolution in design is met with overreaction.

Now, buildings (especially residences) are designed in a way that plays with Victorian or Roman or Wild West styles. "Pluralism in architecture is great," Welch said, "but it becomes discordant and chaotic if it does not respect its surroundings." He said old arcitectural styles shouldn't be dragged out of the attic and imitated in detail.

THE BLENDING-in process, putting a building in 'context,' has become one of the latest buzzwords in his profession, Welch said. Another is 'site-intensive,' which means the site shapes the building in a different-than-normal way.

Recent buildings in Midland, like The Summit, First City National Bank Towers and others, "...only seem to be built on odd-shaped lots," Welch said. The actual land is often a regular rectangle, with some triangular or elliptical building perched on it — for effect.

Welch felt dismayed when North Big Spring Street went commercial, and trees were sacrificed because of the need for commercial spaces and parking lots. The featureless commercial strip development now plodding along here proves growth is not always pleasant, Welch said.

Welch misses the unique character of 60s Midland. The central business district was busy — contrasting with adjacent, quiet residential streets that were graced with a variety of architecture from the 1920s and later. But the growth of this city has demanded property development.

Midlanders are mobile people, Welch said, and they are his best advertising. Building around Texas now, Welch gets the opportunity to see many houses he designed built on different kinds of Texas land — with its endless varieties.

WELCH ALSO attempts to avoid disharmony with his client. Sometimes, though, an idea will be rejected. "Sometimes you don't hit it the first time, or the second time," he said. "You misread the client, the givens. There is always revision and refinement, but an architect typically likes to retain something of his original idea. It's hard to get it (the first idea) out of your head."

Designing a home means starting from scratch, at least for Welch. The first thing he looks at after a conference with a client is the building site.

Welch notes the orientation of the site and any streets, and plans for the occupants' comfort by drawing nearly-windowless west walls due to the direction of sunset. The western sun scorches Midland, and if large windows are placed on the west wall of a house, Welch said, the house will be too hot.

In many houses, Welch created a living environment (with walled gardens, trees) because there was none given in Midland's featureless terrain.

Building setbacks, many times about 30 feet into the property itself, are required by deeds and city codes. "People ask why I build walls (around lawns and gardens)," Welch said. "I wish I could build them right to the property line, so an owner could claim all his property for his own use."

THERE ARE TWO parts of the design; the floorplan (a two-dimensional interior drawing) and the elevation drawing (an exterior drawing in perspective style, to give it a three-dimensional look). The parts of the house — interior and exterior — must complement one another, Welch said, in a process of compromises that should accomodate the best of both worlds.

"The floorplan grows from the owner," Welch said, "It is hard to design a house in a vacuum. Building a home and not knowing who will occupy it — if it must be done — should be dealt with in a time-honored, classical manner. Not kinky; but clear, cohesive, communicative design." Welch said he's building a classically-designed home for an organization's use in Houston's exclusive River Oaks, on what he called a beautiful, wooded piece of property.

He said the stretch of South Main in front of Rice University, near many of Houston's museums, is one of the most beautiful parts of Texas, to him. There are huge oak trees in front of the Rice entrance that illustrates one of Welch's architectural precepts, a Chines proverb:

"I urge people to think about landscaping even before starting to think about a house," Welch said. "In this semi-desert, it's a key element of design."

Welch attempts to avoid disharmony. He designs buildings to blend with neighbors' structures and any trees or shrubbery in the natural environment. "Trees can often create unity within diversity — which is admirable," he said.

ALTHOUGH HE is often meeting with out-of-town clients or working in his Dallas office, when Welch is in Midland he has quite a few things to attend to. In the early part of his day, he looks at drawings as they progress through several revisions, and makes his business schedule by telephoning people he needs to see and making commitments.

He is in town — and working — Monday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. "My time spent in Midland is intense," Welch said, because there is so little of it. There are myriad details to be selected and approved on any job, and that always requires time."

Welch said he often does design work early in the morning to avoid interruptions. The rest of the day "seems consumed, often, with small matters of large importance — requiring my attention."

Since Welch's work is time-consuming, patience seems requisite for the job. Architecture is "Very complex, full of details," Welch said, "Quite a few manhours are involved in each building. Thousands of hours could be spent on just one residence."

WELCH SAID he works from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. during the week, and burns the weekend oil to meet timetables, make plan revisions, or change plans as requested by the owner.

Hiring a professional to design a structure is expensive — but Welch said it is well worth it. "The fee is based on construction cost, which is the most time-honored method of charging a customer," Welch said. Thus, a four-bedroom luxury house that uses the very best in materials costs much more to have designed than a simple two-bedroom house.

"If an architect is worth his fee," Welch said, "the value of the house appreciates at least as much as the fee" due to the good design. Chances of getting an expert, knowledgeable person to design a home are much better, according to Welch, if the person hired is an accredited professional with a proven track record. Study predicts tumultuous times for banks

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A new study of banks and financial institutions predicts more tumultuous times ahead, continuing a pattern begun by recent deregulation and accelerated to chaotic heights by the impact of the recession.

Bank profits will fall by 9 percent between now and 1990. Finding funds to update technology and expand markets will be very, very difficult. And nearly one-third of the existing 15,000 banks will fall victim to the tough new competition.

But it is mild compared to the current doomsday predictions that range from a total collapse of the U.S. (and possibly the international) financial system to a wholesale takeover of financial institutions by such non-bank giants as Sears or the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch.

The study by the Bank Administration Institute and Arthur Andersen & Co. contends that the changes due in the rest of the decade will be far less dire than predicted.

"By 1990, banks will be banks, brokers will be brokers and insurance companies will sell insurance," said Joel P. Friedman, an author of the intensive study of more than 300 bank executives, state and federal regulators and legislators.

THERE WILL BE some continuing penetration of banking areas by non-bank giants but not as rapidly as currently predicted, he said.

The relative stability of the financial institutions does not mask the dramatic new hurdles ahead for bankers and thrift institution executives who will face major adjustments from their past "regulated" existence, Friedman said.

Those who fail to stay competitive in cost-cutting and who cannot muster the new management skills to find new customers and new sources for loan customers will fall by the wayside.

"Banks have to be entrepreneurs and take business risks in greater ways than they had thought necessary," said Friedman.

Some projections of the future surprised the experts, he said, and may prompt some preemptive actions by industry leaders.

One conclusion was that the giant banks and the vigorous medium-sized banks are aiming their customer recruitment at the same market: the over-$50,000 "affluent" households. This may minimize the profits for all concerned.

THEY ALSO APPEAR to be targeting the same regional markets, again with a collision effect, with large banks backing off from their anticipated expansion in international markets after recent traumatic experiences.

Another surprise is the low expectations for the much-ballyhooed "checkless society," of banking by home computers. The technology exists and most banks will continue to invest in it to prevent competitors from getting the upper hand — but few of the industry leaders interviewed expected the technological revolution to transform banking as rapidly as once thought — partly because it costs a household an average of $50 month for a banking-at-home computer but largely because consumers remain skeptical.

"Only 5 percent of all households will be using two-way cable for home banking by 1986 and that will grow only to 11 percent by 1990," Friedman said.

Currently, three-fourths of all bank customers are eligible to use the ATMs but only one-third actually do — and Citibank's recent disastrous public relations experience with forcing lower-income customers to do so is graphic proof of the pitfalls in pushing technological change too fast.

WHAT WAS NOT surprising in the report was the conclusion that smaller, under-$100 million community banks will be the most likely to founder in the coming years, as well as the savings and loans and savings banks generally.

Not only are large and medium-sized banks better able to compete for scarce investment capital, they are the most likely to benefit from the regulatory changes yet to come, Friedman said.

Forty percent of the small banks are likely to go under or be absorbed by larger partners before 1990, he said.

And what does all this portend for interest rates? For the availability of funds to the most growth-oriented sectors of business and finance to make the country forge ahead against tough international competition?

Friedman said those questions weren't included on the in-depth surveys asked once and then again of the 300 financial experts last year.

He gave his own cautious reply about interest rates, however: they will remain at double-digit levels as long as can be predicted, even after the recovery is well underway, even after the impact of the banking instability is factored into everyday predictions.

And what does that say about the ability of individuals to borrow for houses or big-ticket consumer items or for business to borrow for investment? It's an open question that confounds even the experts and that no questionnaire can answer, Friedman conceded.

Bank stocks may be 'hazardous'

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

Over the short term — a couple of months — the stocks of multinational and domestic banks have "the surgeon general's stamp: They may be harmful to your health," but over the longer pull they could do very well.

That's the view of Harold M. Lavine, bank analyst for Wall Street's E.F. Hutton.

Unlike many, Lavine is not alarmed by the banks' loans to sick foreign nations, and he is also a believer in future disinflation. Traditionally, bank stocks hit a low in the middle of recessions, then recover briskly, then go down again while the rest of the economy is in the early stages of the recovery, said Lavine. But then they rise anew.

Right on schedule, the bank stocks bottomed in the last recession, then soared as the Fed ballooned the money supply last summer. Next, also right on schedule, the banks fell again. That's where they are now: "We seem to be in the pullback phase of the two-legged bank stock market," said Lavine.

This pullback phase could last another two months or so and then the stocks could head back up again. It should be a relatively steady up-ride which could last five years or so, he said.

ALREADY THE BANK stocks — particularly the multinational, money center institutions — have done very, very well. The multinationals rose 69 percent off the floor of last summer. That compares favorably with moves of 45, 53 and 50 percent from the bottom of the three previous cycles. "Despite all the concern about lending to Brazil and Mexico, the multinational bank stocks have had their best move in history," he said.

In the current correction the bank stocks can be expected to drop by 20 to 30 percent. Generally, they've gone about half that distance already, he noted.

"The underlying situation in Mexico is improving very much, but the bad news (about the big banks' loans abroad) is still very, very visible," said Lavine, and that's one of the reasons for the current pullback, along with the usual lag in the accumulation of loan losses. (Normally, a recession has already ended when companies are still bellying up by the bushel and banks are setting up loan loss reserves to cover their losses.)

Once the banks' second market up-leg commences, the stocks have a nice up-ride ahead of them, he said. Now the price-earnings multiples on internationals are a mere 49 percent of the multiple of the Standard & Poor's 400. The average multinational banks' multiple is 5.9, while the index's multiple is 12.1.

BUT LAVINE THINKS both the multinationals and domestics can come up to a multiple that is 80 percent of the S&P 400. "It will take them several years — four or five — to achieve that. During the period they should be outperforming the market," said Lavine. Predicting that the banks' earnings will be growing at 12 to 14 percent a year over the period, Lavine observed, "You can double your money in these stocks."

His favorite is Bankers Trust. This New York institution separated itself from the crowd a few years ago and now it's paying off. When other banks were scrambling to get into the consumer banking business, Bankers Trust sold off its consumer assets and concentrated wholly in wholesaling. Now analysts are sour on consumer banking. Bankers Trust's earnings per share have been growing at 21.1 percent compounded for the past five years and he can see 12 percent in the future.

He also likes Citicorp, First Chicago, Southeast Banking and CoreStates Financial (the old Philadelphia National).

Slightly lower on the list, but also in the positive category, is New York's Chase Manhattan — "the dim view some hold of management notwithstanding. Just over one year ago, Chase was considered one of the best banks. Then, days later, it was considered the worst, as the Drysdale debacle came to light. An appropriate evaluation of Chase lies somewhere between those two assessments, but Chase's multiple assumes it is one of the worst-run banks in the United States, and that is certainly not the case," said Lavine.

He prefers the multinationals to the domestics because the multinationals will benefit from disinflation (which he expects) and deregulation. Asked what he would do if inflation comes back, Lavine said he would sell the multinationals and buy the regionals, which benefit from inflation. "The Texas banks would benefit from the rising oil price and the California banks would benefit from rising real estate prices," he said, emphasizing that he really believes in long-term disinflation.

NOT EVERYBODY SHARES Lavine's positive view, of course. Irving Friedman, an authority on international debt, believes that as long as the commercial banks have the Fed and other central banks to feed them money, rescheduling of bad loans will be the "solution" to the debt crisis and inflation will result.

Fed wastes money

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank throws away 15 tons of money each month — shredded, of course — and officials are looking for someone to recycle the old bills.

Bank spokesman Duane W. Kline says the bank has been hauling the destroyed money to landfills, but it would like to find a more useful, less costly way to get rid of the paper.

"There's a general appreciation these days of recycling whenever possible," Kline said in a recent interview. Some companies use the money in novelty items, such as ball point pens and paper weights, but that market is limited, he said.

Attempts to use the shreds in making particle board and roofing material haven't been very efficient, Kline said. And the Treasury Department won't allow the cash to be used to make more paper, since the resulting product would be ideal for would-be counterfeiters.

Kline suggested the money might be used for insulation, but he knows of no one who has tried that.

Senate wants to snare cheats with red tape

WASHINGTON (AP) — When you open a new savings account or buy a share of stock, be prepared for some extra paperwork starting Jan. 1. Under penalty of perjury, you'll have to swear the government has not identified you as a tax cheat.

And when you file your tax return each year, you'll have to attach a separate form for each savings account or dividend payment.

That's how it will be if the Senate has its way. The increased paperwork is the price most people would pay for not having taxes withheld from their interest and dividends.

A committee of negotiators will decide later this month whether to repeal withholding and replace it with some new compliance measures, as the Senate voted, or to simply repeal it and work out a substitute later, as the House voted.

Withholding of 10 percent of interest and dividends for taxes is due to start Aug. 1, although Congress is expected to have repealed the law by that time. Both houses voted for repeal after the banking industry helped generate a record flood of mail from people who worried that their savings were about to be looted.

Bankers called withholding an expensive paperwork burden that would scare away savers without catching many of the estimated 20 million couples and individuals who cheat the tax collector on their income from interest and dividends.

If the Senate substitute becomes law, there still will be plenty of paperwork — enough to require the spending of additional hundreds of millions of dollars each year by the Internal Revenue Service.

The Senate proposal toughens penalties on people who fail to give their Social Security number to banks and other financial institutions, and on banks that don't properly report interest payments to the IRS. But the most important part of the bill would impose "backup withholding" on as many as 4 million couples and individuals who are identified as tax cheats and fail to correct the shortcoming.

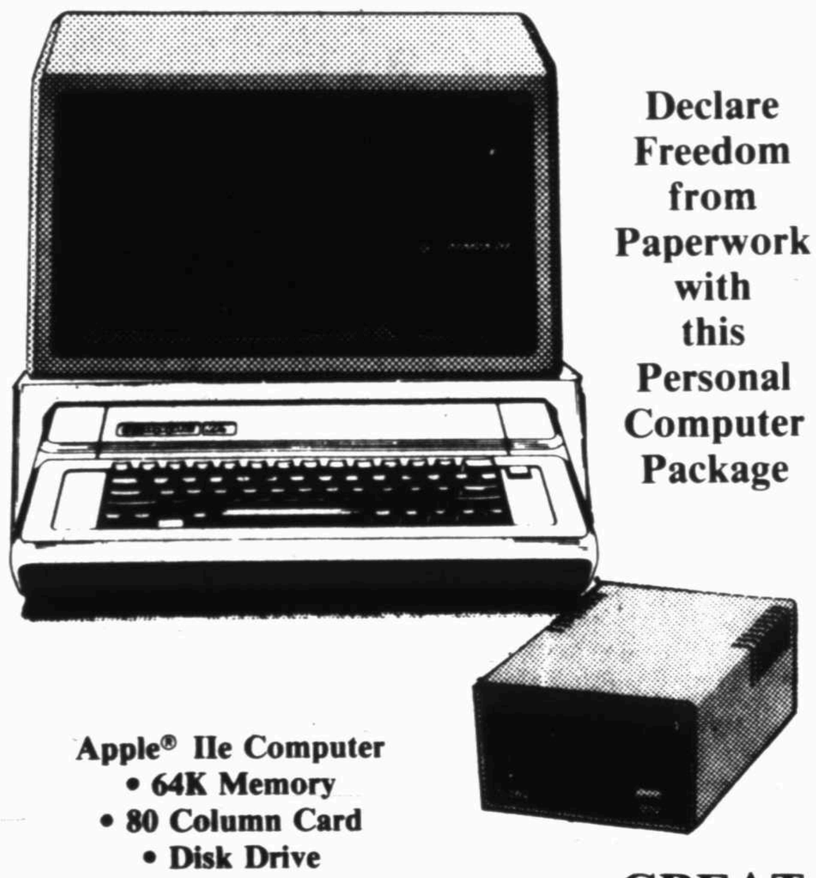

The IRS would determine who failed to file a tax return or underreported interest or dividends by more than $50 in a previous year. They would be notified and given 90 days to set things straight; otherwise, financial institutions would be notified.

The institutions would have 15 days to send notices to those customers, and then withholding of 20 percent — not the 10 percent in the law that is being repealed — would begin.

Even after withholding began, a saver could stop it by settling old debts with the IRS.

The Senate plan would require that every new savings or stock account opened after this year be accompanied by an oath that the saver is not subject to backup withholding. Without the statement, withholding would be imposed.

Builders using styrofoam walls here

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Move aside, bricks, mortar and wood — make room for styrofoam walls in Midland houses.

Two builders are working on new homes north of Loop 250 whose exterior walls are made of high density, high strength styrene or polystyrene foam.

Kiva Custom Builders, Midland-Odessa, is building a house on San Antonio Street using the foam.

Park Cities Contractors, Dallas, is using it on a 1,460-square foot home at the corner of Holiday Hill Road and Canadian just a few blocks from the Kiva site.

Although styrene foam has been used in other parts of the country for several years, this marks its first entry into the Midland market, according to J.B. Keaton, head of the city's department of inspections.

The white material meets or exceeds all structural and strength requirements of Midland's Standard Building Code, Keaton said.

"I've seen this used on the site in Midland and I think it's great," he said. "If I were going to have a home built, I would want it."

While at first it sounds like an impractical building material for a house, the foam is extremely strong, lightweight, fire proof, and energy efficient.

Engineers say using it increases the R-value of a house and makes it more dust- and sound-proof. The foam's thermal qualities are better than standard blown insulation or asbestos backed by foil.

The R-value is a measure of the resistance of insulation to conduct heat or cold. In Midland, the standard required is R-11; the styrofoam Ener-g-Panel used by Kiva and the Korwall used by Park Cities exceed that value.

Foam walls have two advantages, Keaton said. There is speed and ease of construction — one man can lift a panel and place it in its proper position on the outside frame of a house.

The foam can be incorporated into pre-cut and pre-measured panels, enabling workers to erect a house much faster than a conventional "stick-built" house. Each panel has openings already in place for windows, doors, electrical outlets and other utilities.

Builders claim to be able to complete a house in just a few weeks, depending on the plans, rather than the 90 to 120 days normally required using conventional methods.

"If we have the proper equipment, we can set and nail it together and be in the dry (closed in to the weather, with roof on and windows and doors in) in a day," said Park Cities' Walter Hodson.

He pointed out another advantage. Since building time is greatly reduced, the contractors' construction financing expense is reduced. Also, sub-contractors like plumbers and electricians are able to quickly complete their work on one house and move to the next.

"My sub-contractors love it," agreed Kiva's Mike Noble.

Builders in other parts of the nation, particularly in the North and East, have been using walls made of high density polystyrene foam for several years, Hodson said. Now, that material is making headway in the Southwest. As energy costs rise, builders and home owners are ready to accept new building techniques to create more efficient homes.

Park Cities is using a pre-fabricated panel called Korwall, manufactured at a plant in Arlington, Texas. The panel resembles a sandwich made of wood, plywood-like material and styrofoam. The unit is a combination interior-exterior wall with the foam acting as insulation.

The panels come in sizes to 28 inches by eight feet. They are pre-cut to fit the architect's plans for windows, doors, air conditioning vents and other openings.

After the panels are installed on the foundation and nailed together, exterior brick, wood or stucco is applied. Sheetrock panels are used on the interior according to requirements of the city's building code.

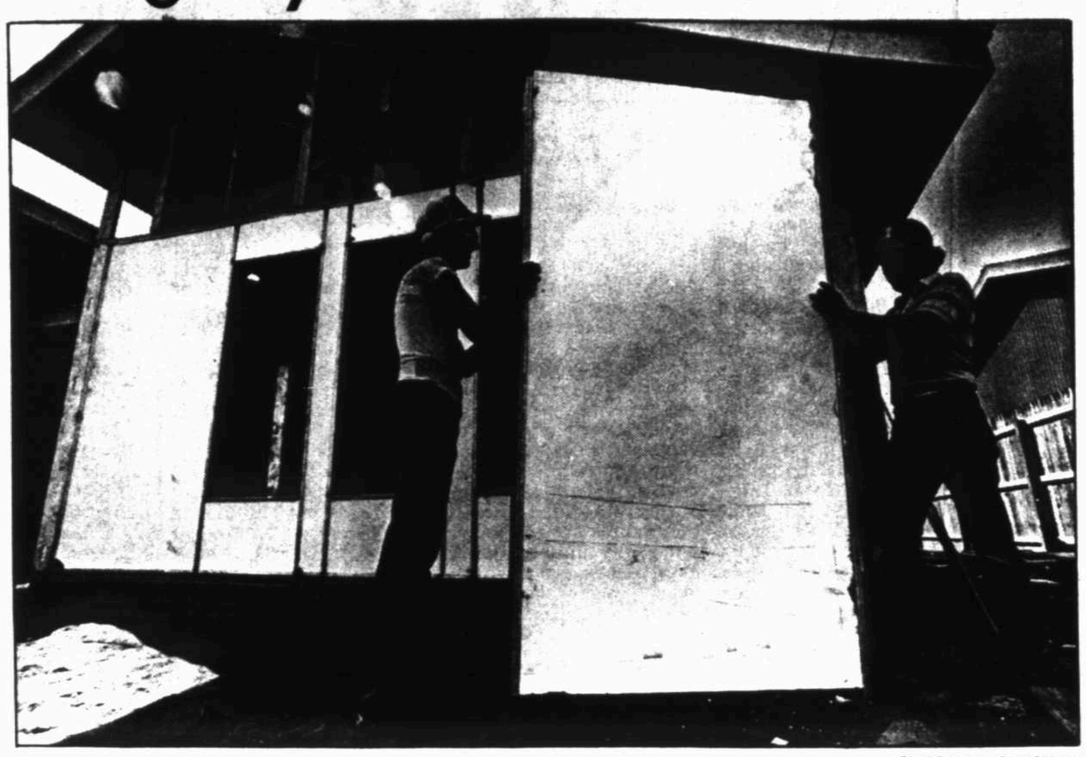

Kiva Construction uses a styrofoam panel called Ener-g-Panel. The panels are cut to size at a shop in Odessa and inserted into 16-gauge steel frames. Openings for windows and utilities are also cut in.

When the units arrive at the job site, in 16-foot long sections, they are installed in a tilt-wall fashion. Wooden top plates are then installed so that the roof can be built with conventional materials.

On a 3,400 square-foot house, a Kiva crew can have the structure "dried in" from the weather in three weeks, Noble said.

Distributions from closely held corporations a problem

By GARY M. CHOATE

A business operated in corporate form has many practical, legal, and tax advantages. However, one major disadvantage of utilizing a corporate entity is the potential double taxation of earnings.

This harsh result occurs when earnings are taxed initially at the corporate level, and again at the shareholder level when distributed as dividends. The purpose of the article is to review some planning ideas available to owners of closely held corporations which enable them to receive distributions from the corporation in ways which reduce the incidence of double taxation.

Dividends, for tax purposes, are distributions made by a corporation to its shareholders out of corporate "earnings and profits" (E&P). In general, E&P is a term used to measure the dividend paying capacity of a corporation.

While a thorough discussion of E&P is beyond the scope of this article, a brief review is warranted. The starting point for the computation of E&P is the corporation's taxable income. Certain adjustments are made to taxable income to arrive at current year E&P. Some of the more common adjustments are as follows:

Decreases to taxable income	Increases to taxable income
1) federal income tax	1) tax free income (ex-municipal bond interest)
2) net capital losses	2) dividends received deduction
3) premiums on officers' life insurance	3) net operating loss carryovers
4) fines and penalties.	4) excess of percentage over cost depletion.

To the extent that a corporation had E&P at the end of a taxable year in an amount equal to or greater than distributions to shareholders during such year, all distribution will be considered taxable dividends.

Noncorporate shareholders are allowed to exclude from gross income $100 of taxable dividends ($200 for individuals filing jointly) each year.

Corporate shareholders are allowed a deduction equal to 85 or 100 percent of taxable dividends each year. It is clear that dividend distributions to corporate shareholders are less costly in terms of taxes at the shareholder level.

If a corporation makes distributions to shareholders when there is no corporate E&P, such distributions are not taxable dividends but instead are treated as a tax free return of capital. As a return of capital, such distribution reduces the shareholders's tax basis in the underlying stock.

After the shareholder's basis is reduced to zero, any excess is treated generally as capital gain. Consider the following example:

Corporation X, at the end of 1983, has $10,000 of E&P. During 1983 the corporation distributed $15,000 to each of its two 50 percent shareholders, Mr. A, a single individual, and Corporate B. Mr. A has a tax basis of $5,000 in his shares while Corporate B has a basis of $10,000 in its shares of Corporate X.

The tax implications may be summarized as follows:

	Mr. A	Corp. B
Taxable dividend	$5,000	$5,000
dividend exclusion/deduction	$100	$3,500
Return of capital (to extent of basis)	$5,000	$10,000
Capital gain	$5,000	—0—

By closely monitoring corporate E&P and properly planning the timing of distributions of closely held corporations the tax at the shareholder level may be minimized or completely avoided. This type of planning must be used if the incidence of double taxation is to be reduced.

Britain to use its own equipment

HOUSTON — A British Energy Department plan to promote development of homegrown technology for offshore oil operations is likely to mean that U. S. equipment manufacturers will find it harder to use the North Sea as a proving ground for their projects, Petroleum Information International says in its July 11 issue.

A policy initiative by the Energy Department, the publication says, could lead to selective barriers to investment by U. S. and other foreign manufacturers.

ARBITRATION: AN ALTERNATIVE TO COURT ACTION

Since the early 1970's, BBB arbitration has proved to be a valuable option in trying to settle buyer/seller disputes.

HOW BBB MEDIATION AND ARBITRATION WORK

THE COMPLAINT

BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

AGREEMENT TO ARBITRATE

Parties sign binding agreement to arbitrate agreed issues in dispute and submit to the BBB Arbitration Program.

CHOOSING AN ARBITRATOR

A list of available arbitrators and their biographical sketches will be sent to both parties of the arbitration. Each party will cross off names of those considered unacceptable and assign a priority to those remaining. No arbitrator will be selected if rejected by either party.

THE PROCEEDINGS

INSPECTION

If appropriate, the BBB will provide technical expertise for an inspection of the item or service in dispute. The expert's evaluation can help the arbitrator make a more informed decision.

informal proceedings are held before the arbitrator. Both parties may be represented by an attorney or any other person they designate, and each may have witnesses and give supporting evidence.

The hearing will be held at a time and place convenient to the parties and the operator.

THE AWARD

Color analyst now at Intimate Fashions

Professional Color Analyst Ellen Christensen demonstrates Itten's color theory with manager Carmen Murphy (seated) and shop owner Dorothy Fox.

Color analysis is a new concept now spreading across the United States. This concept was developed by the Swiss-born artist, Johannes Itten, and was then brought to the United States in the late 1930s by some of his colleagues who taught him at the Bauhaus Architectural School in Weimar, Germany during the early 1920s. Itten's seasonal theory of color expression was then copied by American interior design students who were exposed to it by colleagues then teaching in schools across the country. These interior design students in turn left school and began practicing as color consultants.

Today, color analysis has spread across the entire United States. Unfortunately though, this movement is being fueled by emotions, and not sound logic. Most color consultants are quick to preach the "beautifying" results that color analysis gives, but very few are actually teaching their clients why the concept works. As a result, thousands upon thousands of women have been put into little Winter, Summer, Spring or Autumn "boxes", and now they cannot get out because they do not really understand what they have been shown; their fear of making a "mistake" with their colors has locked them in tightly.

There are two kinds of colors that you will appear your very best in: shades that match your skintone, hair and eye coloring. Color analysis is the process of determining complementing colors.

Ellen Christensen, of Couleur Inc. & Associates, is keenly aware of the importance of understanding why color analysis works. As a color consultant, her main concern is that the clients are able to use what they are presented creatively. Thus, the goal is to teach a client her colors and not just put her under a bright light in front of a mirror, and tell her what to do. At Couleur Inc. & Associates, "We are teachers, not judges."

Any questions regarding color analysis can be directed to Ellen at Intimate Fashions by calling the Imperial Shopping Center Lingerie Shop at (915) 689-7117. Ellen would be happy to explain the concept of color analysis and how it applies to every individual.

Intimate Fashions also welcomes manicurist Toni Manaman. A trained cosmetologist, Toni offers six various manicures. These include sculptured nails, nail silks, standard manicures, pedicures, nail tips and nail wrapping.

Owner Dorothy Fox explains that all manicures provided by Intimate Fashions are healthy to the nail; no damage is done to the nail. An introductory special is currently being offered for all manicure services. For further information call the staff of Intimate Fashions at (915) 699-4051.

Intimate Fashion manicurist, Toni Manaman utilizes her new supplies. Appointments may be arranged by calling Toni at 699-4051. A special introductory offer is now in progress.

"Sane and Safe Drinking" program offered

Alcohol is an anesthetic and the best tranquilizer known to mankind. If it were discovered tomorrow, it would put every tranquilizer out of business. It is very easy for a person to develop the habit of dealing with the tensions generated by personality defects, emotional conflicts and reality demands by utilizing alcohol.

Our approach to excessive drinking provides a positive alternative to the treatment of drinkers as criminals, or if used early enough, before the drinker must be treated as a victim of an incurable disease. Frank McFarlin, director of the Behavioral Motivation and Hypnosis Institute viewsexcessive alcohol consumption as a learned habit or behavior pattern; just like smoking, using snuff or overeating. When a person's drinking becomes excessive, a host of negative consequences may occur -- physical problems, marital and social discord, perhaps vocational and economic problems. These amy lead to increased consumption and a viscious cycle is underway.

Behavioral Motivation techniques provide ways of changing habits or behavior patterns. With habits like smoking, drinking or overeating, we almost always start by teaching stress reduction techniques; for once an individual has effective and satisfactory ways of coping with stress, the need to rely on habits such as drinking greatly diminishes. At this time, their subconscious mind, the seat of habit patterns, is amendable to change. We have a number of techniques ranging from hypnosis to new behavior generation and reframing which help induce the change.

Along with inducing habit changes, we teach the principles of enjoyable drinking.

For most people, the greatest pleasure is obtained from the first one to three drinks.These drinks, if consumed in a period of around one hour, will give the average male a "blood alcohol" level approximately one-half of that usually considered to be legally intoxicate (0.1%). Thereafter, the pleasure level subsides. If a person, in vain attempt to maintain the same pleasure level, continues drinking at the same rate, they go into a stuporous condition and, although they may consider themsleves as becoming clever and witty, they are well on their way to becoming what ia often referred to as "disgustingly drunk."

In our course on "Sane and Safe Drinking" available to business and small groups, we teach a person to evaluate their drinking, how to set limits for themselves , how to handle drinking pressure effectively and how to become aware of and avoid "hot spots".

If you find that you are sneaking drinks, becoming preoccupied with drinking, gulping drinks, avoiding reference to drinking, perhaps having memory blackouts or are unable to stop once you have had a drink, you may want to develop your capability for control before the onset of the chronic irreversible disease of alcoholism which is marked by a complete loss of control of drinking.

For further information regarding "Sane and Safe Drinking" contact Frank McFarlin, director of the Behavioral Motivation and Hypnosis Institute, at (915) 694-5485.

Iridology: the study of the iris

Iridology is the study of the iris of the eye. This term is derived from the roots: irid- iris and ology- study of; or simply the study of the iris.

A special introductory offer is now available in Midand through Verna J. Silverman. Verna explains that the science of Iridology "does not prescribe, predict or diagnose." Verna is offering to share her knowledge of iridology to inform people of this fascinating natural phenemenon.

The theory of iridology was first devised by Dr. Ignatz Peczely in the 17th century. Today, Dr. Bernard Jensen is the modern father of iridology. Dr. Jensen's world acclaimed text, The Science and Practice of Iridology, spells out the effects of proper iris analysis and the natural healing practices.

Iridology is a part of "the natural law"; the human body was designed to cure itself. Verna believes that "people are sick and tired of being sick; people have finally taken their health into their own hands."

She goes on to explain that this is not to belittle the advancements and technology of physicians today. It simply means that illness can be prevented through proper nutrition, herbs and a natural cleansing program.

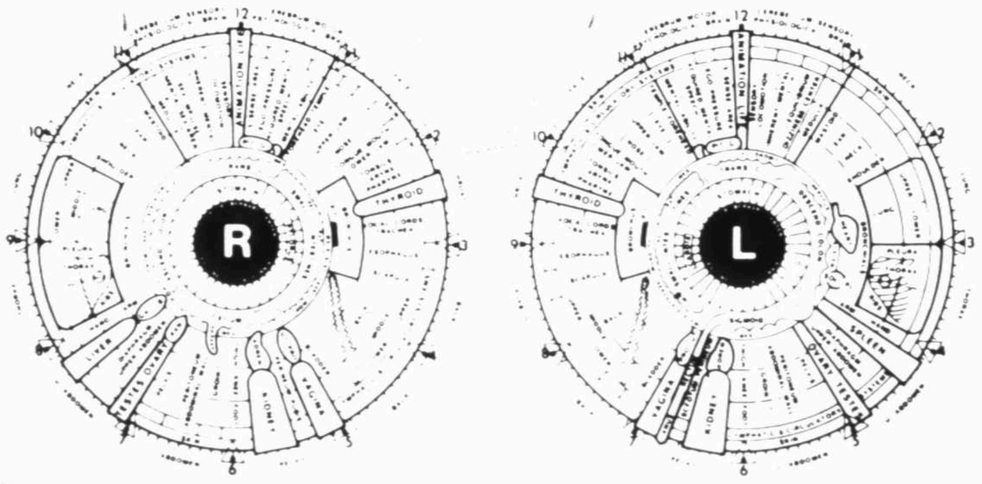

The iris, one of the most complex tissue structures of the human body, through a reflex association with the nervous system, shows us your health. The iris has the same reflex association through the nervous system with our human body. This means that if your liver, for example, is not healthy, it shows up on a certain place on your iris.

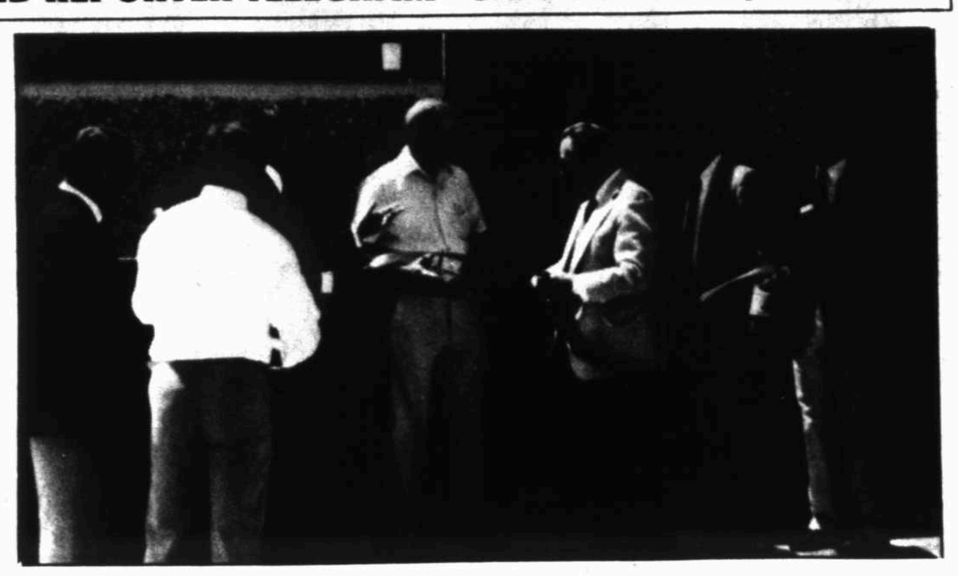

Through the use of natural foods (not inorganic, unnatural or synthetic), the human body has the capabjlity to cure itself. Verna explains, "you must purify and clean your blood - healing the body from the inside out." This theory is that of Herrings Law of Cure - cleansing from the head downward then again in reverse order.

Although this science is little known in the United States, there are over 3,000 Iridologists reported in Germany alone. Midland is fortunate to house trained Iridologist Verna J. Silverman, soon to be listed through the Better Business Bureau. Verna is not a doctor nor does she prescribe. She is willing to share her knowledge of the science of Iridology. For further information call Verna J. Silverman at (915) 685-1950.

Midkiff Business Center brings new concept to Midland

The Midkiff Business Center brings a fresh new concept to Midland's business district. Located at 1308 South Midkiff, the project covers 77,338 square feet. Property manager Peggy Willmon explains that this available space can be utilized in a myriad of designs and functions.

"The Independent Businessman's Address" houses various sized units available for both commercial and retail uses. Space sizes vary according to the needs of the client. Set designs begin at 800 sq. ft. ranging upward, some with outside storage. Retail space is offered from 526 sq.ft. to 4,300 sq. ft.

The advantages of the Midkiff Business Center are as numerous as the space flexibility. Located 10 minutes from the airport, this office warehouse/showroom space is easily accessible to Interstate 80 and downtown. Each office is equipped with air conditioning and heating coils. The professional management designed the Business Center with an overhead door (10 ft. x 10 ft.), private entrances and individual restrooms. Water and office trash costs are included in the rental charge at no extra charge.

Owners Olin B. Lane and C.B. Tisdale began the project in Septenber of 1982. The Dallas owners chose OBL. Corporation as the General Contractor. Job Superintendent is Ike McArthur and Project Manager is Dan A. Pool.

The development and construction all came together June 17, 1983 at the Midkiff Business Center's Grand Opening. Midland Chamber of Commerce welcomed "The Independent Businessman's Address" with a ribbon cutting ceremony complete with the Chamber's M-squad.

Both commercial and retail space is still available. For further information call property manager Peggy Willmon at (915) 687-5043. Join the independent businessman's address today and experience the benefits of this new concept of office space.

Munson opened the Midland-Odessa office in 1958. In 1977, she received Kelly Services' coveted Outstanding Performance Award. In 1972 and again the following year, she was recognized by the company for her citizenship.

Methanol touted as fuel of the future

By KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — There now appears a strong possibility that methanol, a form of alcohol, may replace oil as the future fuel for cars, aircraft, heating, air conditioning, industrial plants and other things operated with internal combustion engines.

Vice President George Bush's office has been informed that successful tests were recently completed in Phoenix, Arizona, on a valve that vaporizes methanol.

This is the first time it has been found possible to vaporize methanol for use as energy fuel. Vaporization, according to experts, means that methanol could become a cheaper and more efficient fuel for internal combustion engines. The use of methanol, which can be produced by natural gas, coal, grain, and even garbage, could make this country virtually independent of foreign oil supplies.

Sources closely associated with the Phoenix tests told The Hearst Newspapers that vaporized methanol will provide substantially more mileage per gallon than gasoline, faster acceleration for cars, and a 60 to 70 percent reduction in exhaust pollution.

The pollution improvement aspect is what brought the vaporization development to the attention of the vice president, who is chairman of the Presidential Task Force on Regulatory Relief. Solving the exhaust pollution problem in motor vehicles, aircraft and factories could greatly reduce the need for costly anti-pollution control devices.

As a result of the Phoenix tests, vice presidential Counsel C. Boyden Gray is arranging a Washington meeting with representatives of companies interested in the use of methanol as motor fuel. Alcohol Week, an industry publication, disclosed that the Bank of America and the General Telephone and Electric Co. are two of the companies directly involved. Other companies are the Webster-Heise Corporation, inventors of the valve which has proved capable of vaporizing methanol, and the Celanese Corp., one of the largest producers of methanol.

The government is interested in what could be a revolutionary breakthrough in the use of alcohol for fuel not only because of the pollution improvement but because of the possibility it could free America from dependence on foreign oil supplies.

The Webster-Heise small screen valve was being tested by the Department of Transportation for vaporizing gasoline when the inventors, Sherwood Webster and Richard Heise, discovered it could also vaporize methanol. The valve causes both methanol and gasoline to vaporize at low engine temperatures and to mix with incoming air. The result is virtual purification which reduces the need for pollution-causing additives and could provide greatly increased motor operating efficiency at almost half the cost of gasoline. For example, methanol now costs about 50 cents a gallon, wholesale, compared with 90 cents wholesale for ordinary gasoline. The DOT postponed for 120 days the test on gasoline pending the outcome of the methanol tests.

Research has been under way for years in this country and abroad on the use of methanol for motor fuel. Both Ford and General Motors have experimented with methanol-operated cars. One problem was that methanol eats away several types of metal, including lead. A special metal has been found to master that problem. However, the most serious drawback for the use of methanol in cars has been the cold-start problem. Methanol fueled cars would not start well below 50 degrees fahrenheit. Former astronaut Gordon Cooper has been experimenting in California with methanol to fuel aircraft. His test plane was slow in climbing until it reached above 13,000 feet. It is believed vaporization of methanol will overcome that problem.

Shell to spud first well on Outer Continental Shelf

NEW YORK (SWN) — The first exploration of the deepwater oil and gas potential of the U.S. Outer Continental Shelf will begin in a few days when Shell Offshore, Inc. (SOI) starts drilling a well in 6,800 feet of water in the Wilmington Canyon, Mid-Atlantic area, about 100 miles southeast of Cape May, N.J. SOI is a subsidiary of Shell Oil Company.

The well will be located in Block 587, leased by SOI and its co-owners, Amoco Production Company and Sun Exploration & Production Company, for $41 million in Federal Offshore Lease Sale No. 59 in 1981. That sale was the first deepwater leasing opportunity offered in U.S. waters.

The project is a joint venture of Shell Offshore Inc. (50 percent), Amoco (31.25 percent), and Sun (18.75 percent). Shell Offshore Inc. is the project operator.

M.L. (Lee) Blanton, manager of SOI's Atlantic Offshore Production Group, said at a press briefing here that at least two subsequent wells are planned in up to 7,500 feet of water over the next year or more.

The program will extend the search for new domestic sources of oil and gas to areas that the industry has not had the opportunity to explore.

The wells will be drilled by the Discoverer Seven Seas, a deepwater drillship owned by Sonat Offshore Drilling Inc. of Houston, Texas, which has drilled deepwater wells in various parts of the world.

"With this well, the oil industry is extending its capabilities to a new frontier of exploration, providing another step in the search for greater domestic energy security," Blanton said.

"Shell believes the deepwater areas of the U.S. Outer Continental Shelf could play a vital role in America's future energy supply. Industry has the technology for exploring water depths beyond 6,000 feet in a safe and environmentally acceptable manner," he said.

Blanton emphasized that although exploration efforts in shallower water areas of Baltimore Canyon have yielded no commercial discoveries to date, Shell will be drilling in an entirely different geological setting — a reef trend referred to as a Jurassic shelf margin complex.

Commission seeks input on new oil transport rules

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission has approved for public comment a proposed rule that would require oil tank trucks to carry identification papers for the oil they are transporting.

The proposed rule would require a cargo manifest for each load of liquid hydrocarbons loaded onto and transported by an oil tanker vehicle.

— Lease or facility from which the oil was removed,

— Amount of oil, removed,

—Identification of the transporter, and the intended destination.

Upon request by a Commission agent or other law enforcement official, the transporter must produce the cargo manifest immediately.

A copy of the manifest or a document with the same information must be left at the lease or facility from which the hydrocarbons were removed, or delivered to the lease or facility operator or his representative.

The manifest must be kept for two years by the transporter, and must be available for inspection.

Another provision would require oil tanker trucks to be identified on both sides with the transport company name, the number of the vehicle, and the number of the certificate or permit authorizing the service.

Comments will be taken for 30 days after publication of the rule in the Texas Register, and then the proposed rule will be presented to the Commission for final consideration.

Texas oil production averaged 2,362,265 barrels daily in April, up from 2,360,385 barrels daily in March and down from 2,428,492 barrels daily in April 1982.

The state's top producing counties in April were Pecos, 4,136,134 barrels; Ector, 3,737,442 barrels; Yoakum, 3,690,536 barrels; Gaines, 3,690,465 barrels; Gregg, 3,138,406 barrels; Andrews, 3,126,283 barrels; Hockley, 3,098,242 barrels; Scurry, 2,562,258 barrels; Crane 2,149,957 barrels; and Refugio, 1,866,358 barrels.

The Railroad Commission has reassigned the amount of gas overproduced by the Apache Key No. 1 blowout well in Wheeler County to the Apache Key No. 2 well.

The Key No. 2, now a producing gas well, was originally drilled as a relief well in an attempt to kill the Key No. 1, which blew out in October 1981 after it had been completed and was awaiting a pipeline connection.

The blowout, which produced as much as 26 million cubic feet of gas per day, was killed Feb. 6 by a second relief well, the Key No. 3.

Before it was killed, the blowout produced 947,268 Mcf (thousand cubic feet) more than its Commission-assigned production allowable. Commission transfer of that amount to the Key No. 2 production allowable means that the Key No. 2 will have to underproduce its allowable to make up the extra production.

Since the summer of 1982 the Key No. 1 had been in a "controlled blowout" status. As part of its statutory responsibility to prevent the waste of the state's hydrocarbon resurces, the Railroad Commission had ordered Palo Duro Pipeline Co. to take all the blowout production rather than flare the gas. That required the pipeline company to reduce its takes from other wells in the Key (Morrow, Upper) Field.

The Commission has also extended until Sept. 1, 1983, the period of time it will allow wells in the same field to make up any underproduction of Commission—assigned allowables that may have resulted from Commission actions regarding the Key blowout.

Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace has announced that 61 refineries in Texas processed 125,509,426 barrels of crude oil and hydrocarbon blends during March. Through the first three months of 1983, Texas refineries ran 356,428,196 barrels.

The March volume compares to 110,563,647 barrels in February and 123,601,299 barrels in March 1982.

Texas refineries ran 98,403,393 barrels of crude oil in March compared to 86,195,119 barrels in February and 94,349,195 barrels in March 1982.

Products manufactured in March totaled 125,220,328 barrels, up from 110,694,092 barrels in February and up from the 123,855,099 barrels in March 1982.

State leases in bays, inlets and the Gulf of Mexico produced 78,501 barrels of crude oil during April, in contrast to 81,171 barrels in March 76,898 barrels in April 1 year ago.

Gas well gas production from state leases amounted to 13,162,040 Mcf in April against 15,914,353 Mcf in March and 16,650,773 Mcf in April of 1982.

Total gas well gas production from offshore state lases so far this year was 61,504,614 Mcf through April.

Computer capers of movieland all too plausible

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The basic plot of this summer's movie thriller "WarGames" — involving a teen-ager tapping into the nation's military defense computer to play games — may be pure fantasy, but the home computer sequences are mostly plausible and realistic.

The equipment in David Lightman's bedroom could be assembled used for perhaps $2,000, according to Michael Fink, the film's visual effects supervisor, who put it together. That is certainly in the realm of possibility for a teen-ager to finance by selling his stamp collection, as a line that was dropped from the script would have explained.

Breaking into his high school's computer to change his and a girlfriend's class grades, as David does, is only too realistic. In fact, according to Steve Grumette, who wrote the software program to simulate that action, a high school student actually visited the studio and used a computer on the set to call up his own school's computer and peruse student grades to show Grumette how such records looked. Grumette said no grades were changed in that escapade.

Another caper was to have the computer call every telephone within certain exchanges and record which ones were answered by a computer. All that takes, according to Grumette, is a "smart modem," a $300 device that connects a computer to a telephone and can dial numbers automatically if told to do so by the computer using a software program written in BASIC.

RRC expects grant to be approved

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission officials trying to plug dozens of abandoned mine shafts in Brewster County — where a 14-year old boy died last year after falling into one of the shafts — are optimistic that the Office of Surface Mining will approve a $300,000 grant, for the project.

A construction grant application was submitted to the OSM the day after officials there gave approval of the grant proceeding, said Jerry Hill, director of the Surface Mining and Reclamation Division of the RRC, but the application will be reviewed for two months.

"I think they'll approve it," Hill said. "It's unfortunate it takes all this time to fill up some holes in the ground."

Gov. Mark White declared the area near Terlingua a safety hazard last November after speaking with RRC Chairman Mack Wallace, Hill said.

A study conducted in the area, which contains mercury mines abandoned since the 1930s and 40s, revealed 81 shafts which "we felt needed immediate attention", Hill noted. Plans call for 70 of the shafts to be backfilled and 11 of the lengthier ones to have steel grates placed over the entrances, he said.

The shafts range in length from 15 feet to 900 feet, and most are six feet in diameter.

A 14-year old boy touring the mines in the spring of 1982, fell 285 feet to his death, Hill said, causing much concern over the lack of protection at the site about 60 miles south of Alpine.

"It's been a long process," Hill said. "Hopefully we'll see something before not too long."

State looking at workplace injury, death

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State officials are looking at expansion of Texas' occupational safety services to help control rising injuries and deaths in the workplace - which also mean increased worker's compensation insurance rates for employers.

The Occupational Safety Board of the Texas Department of Health is looking at alternatives to the current program, but has made no recommendations.

Walter G. Martin, head of the department's occupational safety division, said the Industrial Accident Board received 423,000 claims for work-related injuries in 1982, compared to 418,000 in 1981.

Claims for benefits in job related fatalities increased from 1,055 in 1981 to 1,096 in 1982, Martin said.

"Many employers don't seem to realize that worker's compensation coverage is a cost-plus insurance," Martin said.

Whatever the losses are in the workplace, those losses will be reflected in insurance premiums, he added.

"There seems to be a lack of interest in preventing accidents and controlling insurance costs" on the part of some employers, he said.

The Occupational Safety Board is attempting to find ways to deal with the continuing rise in the number of injuries and in worker's compensation insurance costs.

Texas Department of Health currently provides an inspection service for employers, who may be exempted from an enforcement inspection by the Federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration for 12 months by using the State service, Martin said.

The problem has been that Texas has 18 inspectors to carry out the work, and TDH is hard-pressed to provide services to those businesses which want inspections.

One approach being considered by the board is to have the State take over all occupational safety services from OSHA — with another being to continue under the present system, in which the Federal agency is responsible for enforcement activities.

The approach being looked at by the board, Martin said, is to expand the services offered by the State by adding another 32 engineers to the department's inspection staff.

That would require additional funding, and no immediate action is expected by the board in choosing an alternative.

State Securities Commissioner Richard D. Latham reports an increase in applications to the State Securities Board for new issues, "with lots of new companies, particularly ones in the high-tech area" seeking capital.

Latham says the board is attempting to ease the way for those companies while assuring that investors also are protected.

The State Securities Board, at a meeting earlier this month, looked at the possibility of a follow-up study on merit standards used by the agency in evaluating stock issues, but decided against funding any such effort.

During its regular session, the Legislature became involved in extended debate — particularly in the House of Representatives — over "merit regulation" of securities versus the "full disclosure" approach used at the Federal level.

The board also approved requests for opinions from Attorney General Jim Mattox concerning effects of SB 429, relating to disclosure of bank records, on subpoena powers of the securities commissioner — and whether changes in the law passed providing for continuation of the Securities Board affects the confidentiality of securities dealers and salesman's files in existence before Sept. 1, 1983.

Latham notes the previous law provided that those files were closed — but the new law makes future files open, so a clarification from Mattox is being sought.

The board voted to repeal provisions relating to tender offers, noting a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision regarding such offers has indicated most instances where tender offers are made would be covered by Federal law.

State Board of Insurance's advisory committee on townhouses is attempting to complete work on rules and forms for the townhouse program.

The committee was appointed in an attempt to work out problems with coverage of townhouses, condominiums and similar units under existing insurance programs.

Texas Insurance Advisory Association, Independent Insurance Agents of Texas and Professionsl Insurance Agents Association are assisting in the effort, which may result in recommendations to SBI this fall.

Managers worth more, survey shows

National Service Managers now receive an average (mean) annual salary of $40,142, up 8.3 percent in the last year, according to a survey conducted by Steven Langer under the sponsorship of the National Association of Service Managers. Similarly, the average salary of Regional Service Managers is now $32,822; of Local Service Managers is $27,447; of Field Service Supervisors is $24,712; of Field Service Representatives is $21,755; and of bench Service Repairmen is $16,114. Over two hundred and sixty firms provided salary and fringe benefit information on over 23,000 service department employees in fifteen benchmark jos.

Salaries vary considerably from one type and size of employer to another. For example, the lowest average salary for National Service Managers is $35,884 in firms manufacturing measuring and controlling devices. The bottom 10 percent of those in manufacturing firms with annual sales of under $10 million made $20,599 or less.

The highest average salary is received by National Service Managers in merchandising firms with annual sales of $50 million or more ($51,188). the top 10 percent of this group had a total annual cash compensaton of $157,928 or more.

Real Estate today

DON'T FEEL GUILTY

If you have a lot of pent-up guilt, here's a tip. Get a paper bag and mark the word GUILT on it. Inflate the bag with all your guilt laden breath. Then smash it. The guilt will be gone and you'll feel better.

What has this to do with real estate? Well, the homeowner might feel a little guilty if he makes out his income tax beside someone who does not own a home. The difference in taxes payable to the government will be considerable in favor of the homeowner.

For starters, most of the money paid monthly for a home mortgage is tax-deductible interest. This runs over 90% in the early years of the loan. By giving it to the bank instead of the government, at least you KNOW who the recipient is of the benefit - YOU

If you sell and buy another home for as much or more, than your old one, you defer paying any tax on the gain. Also, if you are over 55 and sell, you can deduct up to $125,000 of the profit and never have to pay any tax on it. Home ownership is still the best tax shelter going for the average family...and it's getting better.

ClayDesta Plaza– The Excitement Is Building!

Nothing is better for a successful oil and gas business than being surrounded by other energetic, successful businesses.

And that's why so many independent operators and service companies are moving to ClayDesta Plaza.

Right now a lot of people are gloomy about energy. But we believe in those independent operators who are the backbone of this great industry. And we've got a business environment that reflects that positive attitude.

We've proven our value to more than 25 energy related companies that are already here.

Even the majors are coming our way. Sohio and Southland Royalty are already here. Cities Service and Sun will be in by early summer. And Gulf will occupy their new headquarters in early fall.

In all, more than six thousand people will be doing business by the end of 1983 in West Texas' first totally planned business development.

ClayDesta Plaza has lots of room. Free parking close to where you work. An extensive Petroleum Information Log Library. And Midland's only high-rise private business and social club.

We're so proud of what we've built for Midland, that even if you're not looking for office space, we'd be proud to show you what we've done, what we're doing, and where we're going.
