Visiting Briscoe Hailed By Mexican-Americans

GOV. DOLPH Briscoe was greeted with effusive praise and compliments by about 50 Lubbock Mexican-American leaders Tuesday night as he met with the group on his first campaign trip to the Hub City.

Introducing Briscoe to the gathering at the Hilton Inn, Dr. Ray Santos called the governor an "equalizer" and a "courageous fighter" for Mexican-Americans.

Briscoe, seeking a third term, was praised for his programs for bilingual education, migrant laborers and higher education for Mexican-Americans.

Briscoe has appointed more Mexican-Americans to boards and commissions than any other Texas governor before him, Santos said.

"He knows our needs and understands our frustrations because he's always been part of us," Santos said.

"He knows and understands the plight of the poor Mexican-American."

Santos said the Mexican-American had been in the Dark Ages from the 1920s through the 1960s, but said that under Briscoe's administration "we have come out of the darkness into the dawn.

"We can't afford to go back into the dark ages," Santos said. "We want to see more of the light and he is the only man who can allow us to see more of the light.

"We need Dolph Briscoe in office until 1982," Santos said, and urged the Mexican-American leaders to "help keep him in office as long as the constitution allows."

Briscoe pointed to his record of the past five years and said the state had "made tremendous progress." He pledged to continue and expand the programs initiated by his Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs "regardless of the criticism." The migrant affairs office recently has come under fire for alleged mismanagement of federal funds.

Briscoe asked for the group's help in his re-election campaign so "we can continue the sound, solid progress of the last five years."

Asked if he would order the attorney general to issue a "cease and desist" order to state law enforcement agencies regarding the recent deaths of Mexican-Americans while in the custody of law enforcement officials, Briscoe said only "I'll be glad to work with you to protect the rights of each individual against abuse."

Briscoe also pointed out he had asked the Justice Department to investigate two of those deaths.

At a news conference earlier, the governor said the only issue in the race between himself and Atty. Gen. John Hill for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination was "whether to continue the type of government we've had and the greatest economic boom in our history, or to go on a spending binge and erode our tax base."

Briscoe, 54, refused to discuss his handling of the arrests of more than 200 farmers in Hidalgo recently, but said he had met with American Agriculture representatives recently and decided "we must look to what can be done to ease the plight of the farmer."

Farmers are facing "the most severe cost-price squeeze since the dark days of the depression," he said.

Briscoe said he supported passage of Coal Bargainers Okay New Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bargainers for the United Mine Workers and the coal industry agreed Tuesday on new contract terms that both sides hoped stubborn miners would accept and end their 99-day strike.

UMW President Arnold Miller summoned his union's bargaining council to Washington and a spokesman said the group was likely to vote tonight on the tentative agreement.

"We think we have a package that would be very good for the union, very good for the country and get our mines back to work and the country on its feet," said Nicholas T. Camicia, chief industry bargainer.

"I think we've got a good agreement," said Miller, although he declined to predict whether the union's rank-and-file membership would ratify the proposal.

The union's ratification process normally takes about 10 days and Miller said he wouldn't rush the process. Under the union's constitution, if the bargaining council were to vote today, the earliest that rank-and-file miners could vote would be Monday.

Proposals Rejected

The council rejected one tentative proposal on Feb. 12, and the rebellious membership voted down a proposal sanctioned by the UMW leadership over a week ago.

Both sides are pinning their hopes on approval by the miners to avert the possibility of further federal intervention as well as preserve industry-wide bargaining, and the Carter administration hailed the tentative accord.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said President Carter was "pleased and encouraged" by the announcement of a tentative agreement.

"The welfare of our country requires a dependable supply of coal," Carter said. "And a negotiatied national contract is the best way to insure that supply.

Negotiators announced their deal as miners by the tens of thousands continued to ignore a federal back-to-work order.

The Justice Department, meanwhile, continued to pursue a policy of non-confrontation in enforcing the back-to-work order issued under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Justice Department spokesman Mark Sheehan said the government still is scheduled to go to U.S. District Court here on Friday to argue for an 80-day cooling off period under the terms of the Taft-Hartley Act.

But he said the Justice Department probably would agree to seek a 10-day extension of an existing temporary restraining order if the UMW and coal operators agree to such a move.

The White House said 151 mines that were shut down last week are now open. Most of them are non-UMW mines, said Powell.

Negotiators for the two sides in the long and bitter strike met for a little over three hours in a final session before agreeing to terms.

It appeared that both sides made concessions, although the Bituminous Coal Operators Association seemed to give more.

Sources said that under the new pro-

RIDING IT OUT — After days of blowing dust and months of rain or snow, Texas Tech University junior Mark Schneider of Amarillo apparently couldn't resist the bright, sunny skies Tuesday and combined a studying session with a sunbathing interlude. Late Tuesday, forecasters were promising more Springlike conditions through Sunday — a promise sure to bring more Lubbockites out on bicycles, beach towels or pickups, as the case may be. Trio Testifies About Brutal Assault On Murder Victim

By PAT PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ROBERT Atkinson was stubborn about dying.

Three Lubbock teenagers testified Tuesday they saw 18-year-old murder defendant Broderick Ware pistol-whip Atkinson, shoot him several times, "stomp" him in the head repeatedly, run over the young man with a car and then "stomp" him some more before leaving him for dead in a remote East Lubbock canyon.

They said the victim, 19, was alive and "moaning" after being run over by the car.

And they said he struggled when being "stomped" both after being shot multiple times and again after being run over.

When she heard about the moans, a young Mexican-American woman — reportedly a relative of the dead man — walked, head bowed and sobbing, from Dist. Judge Robert C. Wright's courtroom.

It had not been an easy day for the person easily affected by tales of violence, or by pictures and detailed descriptions of grisly, gory scenes.

Tuesday morning was devoted to police and pathologist testimony about the state Atkinson's body was in after being found Oct. 21, 1977, in the weedy canyon near the 2100 block of Weber Drive near 19th Street.

Det. Harris Clanton said the body was so deteriorated it was difficult to tell the race of the dead man — whether he was a black or Mexican-American.

When prosecutors passed pictures of Atkinson, lying in the weeds to jurors, most glanced at them quickly and passed them on, grimacing.

Later, Dr. John R. Ray testified the 4807 Cedar Ave. resident had been shot three times, but said entrances of two bullets into the body could not be located because of the advanced state of decomposition.

Shot Three Times

The pathologist who performed the autopsy said Atkinson died specifically of "hemorrhaging, external and internal" due to three gunshot wounds.

"He was shot three times — once in the face. One of the bullets lodged...in the upper abdomen or lower chest, severing the spinal cord, and the third was in the lower-middle abdomen," Ray said.

11-Day Search Conducted

The discovery of Atkinson's body Oct. 21 capped an 11-day search that began after police discovered his bloody car parked in an alley in the 500 block of Avenue E.

Dandelion seeds covering parts of the auto led police to look for the man in weeded areas of the county.

However, their search proved fruitless until an informant provided a location for the body and also for the alleged murder gun, officers said.

The informant told his tale again — this time to intent jurors — Tuesday afternoon.

Although admitting he twice lied to authorities about what happened in the early hours of Oct. 10, 1977, Billy Adams declared in court he was now telling the Palestinian Terrorists Targeted

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli forces struck into Lebanon Tuesday at Palestinian guerrilla bases along its border. Guerrilla spokesmen in Lebanon reported tank and air attacks on six towns, and "fierce combat" where Israeli gunboats landed troops south of Tyre.

An Israeli military communique officially called the border crossing a "mopping-up operation," not merely retaliation for a weekend terrorist attack in which Palestinian commandos killed 33 Israelis.

Tanks Cross Border

An Israeli radio reporter at the front said long columns of tanks were crossing the 40-mile-long border into Lebanon, their way lit by flares dropped by jets. He said a heavy Israeli artillery barrage preceded the attack and Arab gunners returned the fire, bombarding some Israeli settlements.

A spokesman for Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization high command in Beirut said guerrilla defenders met the armored assault with fire from bazookas, heavy machine guns and mortars.

"We are trying to stop them every yard of the way," he said. "We are using every weapon we have."

"Locked In Combat"

A PLO communique early today said guerrillas and their leftist Lebanese allies were "locked in fierce combat" with an Israeli force it said was put ashore on a beach south of the port city of Tyre. There was no indication the gunboats opened fire.

There was no sign in Lebanon that Syrian troops, which make up the bulk of the peacekeeping forces stationed there since the civil war truce late in 1976, had joined the fighting.

The provincial governor's office in Sidon, another Lebanese port city, said

Spurned Youth Hijacks Bus, Shot By Police

WALLED LAKE, Mich. (AP) — A teen-ager, distraught because he was spurned by a girl, armed himself with a shotgun Tuesday and hijacked her school bus. He was shot twice by police.

Larry Todd, 15, of Union Lake, was shot after police and sheriff's officers who had surrounded the bus were unable to talk him into giving up, authorities said. He was struck twice in the stomach by bullets that shattered a window of the bus.

Shells In Pocket

Police later discovered the shotgun was unloaded, but they said the youth had six shells in his pocket.

Todd underwent surgery at Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital and was expected to live, hospital officials said. No criminal charges were filed imediately, but Todd was put under police guard.

The girl and four other students on the bus, all unidentified, and the bus driver were shaken but unhurt.

Police said Todd, who attends the same high school as the girl, managed to commandeer the bus even though four officers were trailing it in unmarked cars.

Parents of the girl who "didn't want anything to do" with the youth warned White Lake Township Police at midnight Monday of his alleged threats to hijack the bus. The boy had held police at bay with a loaded shotgun in a dispute over the same girl a month ago, police said.

"The idea was to intercept him before any students were picked up," said White Lake Police Chief Justin Watt. "Unfortunately, it didn't work out that way."

The boy was lurking in weeds along

Chlorine Gas Fumes Hurt 78 In Ohio

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Clouds of toxic chlorine gas, unleashed by explosions and fires at a downtown chemical plant, sent at least 78 persons to hospitals Tuesday and prompted the evacuation of about 2,000 persons, authorities said.

City officials said a nine-square-block area was evacuated, and that the people were allowed to return to their homes late Tuesday. They were asked to keep their windows open for at least five hours to disperse any fumes.

At least 25 of the victims were hospitalized for observation. The rest were treated and released, hospital spokesmen said. Most were firemen, including Fire Chief Bernard Bickerstaff, who was reported in satisfactory condition in Ohio Valley Hospital. Police Chief George Mavromatis was treated and released. Both suffered from inhalation of the fumes.

About 15 public and parochial schools were evacuated. Conrail halted all trains through the city of 28,000.

Last month, eight people were killed when a railroad tank car derailed and ruptured in the Florida Panhandle, spewing chlorine gas across a highway.

Steubenville Mayor William Crabbe ordered downtown streets cleared for fear the chlorine fumes would spread. He ordered all available police, fire and rescue personnel to the site of the blasts.

Mystery Surrounds Tot's Disappearance

By PAT TEAGUE

SAN ANTONIO child welfare workers said Tuesday a Lubbock pre-schooler should begin the last leg of her 1,000-mile odyssey today, a journey that began late Saturday when the 4-year-old disappeared from an East Lubbock parking lot.

Workers say they will release the little girl, whose name is Nancy, to her parents provided they produce their Texas driver's license, the youngster's birth certificate and a picture of Nancy taken with the family.

Lubbock police received word about 1 p.m. Tuesday that the brown-eyed child had been in the Alamo City nearly 41 hours since she was discovered by an off-duty policeman about 8:30 p.m. Sunday at a downtown bus station.

Note Afixed To Clothing

Detective Anton Michalec, assigned to the department's theft bureau, was working at the bus station when he found the child with a note affixed to her clothing, along with a $10 bill.

The note said: "My name is Nancy. I live in Lubbock. I'm lost. Please send me to the Lubbock Police Department."

San Antonio patrolman Sterling Gotthardt was dispatched to the bus station to take a routine report, and soon after Nancy was transferred to the Children's Shelter, a United Way-sponsored facility.

There, the taciturn child provided workers with few clues to her background, Bexar County Child Welfare spokesman Ron Gossen said.

Nancy spent the day at the shelter Monday as workers continued trying to obtain information about her family.

Tuesday morning, Gossen said, a county welfare worker decided to phone authorities here.

Gossen said San Antonio welfare workers and shelter employees initially misunerstood the meaning of the note, written with what was believed to be an eyeliner pencil on a scrap of paper.

NANCY
Found In San Antonio

He said workers believed the child was from San Antonio and had been abandoned for a one-way trip to Lubbock.

Local welfare workers, who will assume responsibility for the followup investigation, counselled with Nancy's parents Tuesday.

For Nancy, the whole affair began Saturday when the youngster accompanied her mother, grandmother and 8-year-old brother to an Avenue H bar.

Following a disturbance at the club about 9:30 p.m., police said the women and children were told to leave.

The two women said a third woman, who had been drinking with them, left the lounge at the same time and volunteered to drive all four to another bar.

Go Hunting Babysitter

The group went with the woman, Nancy's mother later told juvenile investigators, and the five drove to an Avenue U residence in hopes of finding a babysitter. But they found no one and they decided to go to another club, this one on Quirt Avenue.

According to Nancy's mother, when the group arrived at the club about 10:30 p.m., Nancy was asleep on a rear seat. As the child's mother bent down to pick up Nancy, the woman driver reportedly told her she'd park the car and bring the child inside shortly.

As the grandmother, mother and son walked towards the building, the young boy suddenly yelled to his mother that the woman was taking his sister. Nancy's mother reportedly told the boy not to worry since the woman was only parking the car.

The mother later told investigators she had called the police to come to the scene because the girl was missing and had spoken to three uniformed officers.

Claim Disputed

Club employees dispute that claim, however, and police say they have been unable to locate such a call after checking the dispatch log.

The trio, without Nancy, reportedly stayed at the club until about 2 a.m., before leaving with an unidentified man. The latest member of the party reportedly drove the grandmother home and took Nancy's mother and brother to a local restaurant to eat. Thereafter, the foursome drove to an address in the 800-block of Avenue C, where they remained until the child's mother notified police at 8:15 a.m. Sunday.

About 12 hours later, detective Michalec found the youngster in the bus depot in downtown San Antonio.

The grandmother and mother, as well as the 8-year-old son, maintained Tuesday that the unidentified woman was about 26 years old, heavy-set with shoulder-length black hair and drove a standard-size, four-door car.

At least one witness at the first club, however, said he clearly recalled seeing the foursome, conspicuous by the children present, and he said no third woman was there.

Slaughter Of Seals Halted To Allow Cows To Give Birth

ST. ANTHONY, Nfld. (UPI) — Sealers temporarily halted their annual hunt Tuesday to allow pregnant cows to give birth to their pups before resumption of the baby seal slaughter.

The action by the sealers brought the hunt to a standstill, although three of six Canadian ships were stranded in heavy pack ice, Fisheries Department spokesman Ed Quigley said.

Quigley said the suspension in sealing may continue for several days to allow the seal cows to deliver their young unhampered by hunters.

"There was an agreement between the hunters and us that they would stop the hunt to allow for pupping," Quigley said. "Three ships are bogged down in the ice and there is virtually no activity at all on the ice floes."

The Greenpeace Foundation's efforts to view the hunt were hampered when helicopter pilots refused to fly members of the protest group out to the hunt.

Charles Friend, an aide to Fisheries Minister Romeo Leblanc, said Greenpeace members had accused the government of intimidating the pilots of the rented helicopters from flying to the hunt site.

But Friend said the pilots had instructions from their head offices "not to fly under any circumstances."

Rex Weyler, a spokesman for Greenpeace, which has mounted a world-wide campaign against the annual hunt, said helicopter pilots had "been threatened or whatever you want to call it."

Permission was given for six people to visit the hunt Sunday but the organization was told in a meeting Monday that ended with two Greenpeace members being arrested for loitering that no other permits to allow visitors within a half mile of the hunt would be issued.

"We've told the pilots a number of times," Friend said, "if they fly anywhere near the seal hunt and if they know the intentions of their passengers they can be charged as accessories."

Pilots could have their helicopters confiscated if the laws passed in the last two years restricting access to the hunt were violated, Friend said.

The lack of air transport would prevent a physical presence by Greenpeace at the hunt, held about 180 miles north of this northwestern Newfoundland town.

Both Weyler, a photographer, and Greenpeace president Patrick Moore said they still intended to travel, along with 10 others, to personally observe the hunt, which this year has a quota of 180,000 baby harp seals.

Moore said they would not approach within the half mile of the herd as stipulated in a federal law passed last month.

'Peeping Tom' Suit Seeks $1 Million

DETROIT (UPI) — Valerie Sause, 18, is demanding $1 million in punative damages from a department store where she says she was embarrassed by a "Peeping Tom."

Miss Sause, of suburban Southfield, accused the DaytonHudson Corp. of negligence in "failing to supervise" the activities of a male employee who allegedly watched her undress in a fitting room from an observation slot used to spy on shoplifters.

Her damage suit, filed in Wayne County Circuit Court Monday, claims the incident caused Miss Sause "pain, suffering, disability and mental anguish."

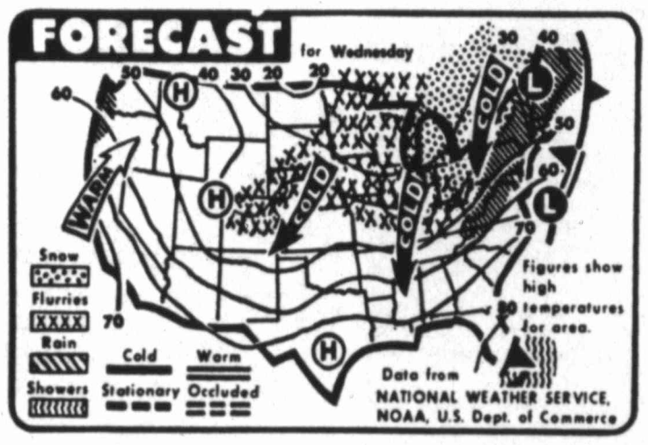

Her attorney, Maurice Herskovic, said Miss Sause discovered she was being watched when her boy friend, standing outside the fitting room, looked up and spotted the peeper.

"Her boy friend told him: 'Are you enjoying yourself?'" Herskovic said. "Then the man fled."

The incident occurred at the Hudson's department store outlet at the swank Fairlane Town Center in Dearborn.

James Carolin, director of corporate security for Hudson's, said the firm has strict guidelines for surveillance of fitting rooms.

"Opposite sex surveillance is forbidden," Caroline said. "Those guidelines are well known by our security personnel."

Bright, Sunny Skies Predicted

More bright, sunny skies and mild temperatures will reign across the South Plains today.

And forecasters are expecting no chances of rain through Thursday to put a damper on the spring-like weather.

Temperatures may be slightly cooler today, with the high expected just near 60. Readings will drop to the low 30s by tonight.

Northwesterly winds will be at 10 to 15 miles per hour.

The dry weather and pleasant temperatures are continuing over the South Plains because of another high pressure system which has built up towards the area from the Rockies.

Eleven hours of sunshine are predicted today and Thursday.

The weekend weather outlook calls for continued dry and sunny through Sunday.

Temperatures may even reach the low 70s by Friday.

Temperatures Tuesday were mild over all of the Lone Star State. Readings were in the 50s and 60s across North Texas and in the 70s and 80s in South Texas.

For Eastern New Mexico, the forecast is calling for mostly fair skies through Thursday. No significant temperature changes are expected.

Winds will be northwesterly at less than 15 mph.

Moon Mining Troubles Solvable

HOUSTON (UPI) — A lunar scientist Tuesday said projected problems of mining raw materials on the moon for powering technical stations and providing raw materials for the space industry can be solved on Earth.

Dave Criswell, an associate scientist with the Lunar and Planetary Institute near the Johnson Space Center, said it might take two or three years of study to determine a way in which such a project could be developed.

"It's clear more work is needed to know how to set it up on the moon's surface where there is no atmosphere and a lighter gravity," Criswell said. "But they don't seem to be hard problems. They can be worked out on Earth."

Projected materials that could be produced in such an effort include aluminum, oxygen, silicon, and silica, Criswell said during an interview at the 9th Lunar and Planetary Science Conference.

"Early models of space power stations indicate you could build a large fraction of the power station out of those materials," Criswell said.

State News

"This is to see what kind of equipment would need to go to the moon to gather lunar soil and process it. We're trying to do it with an attitude that you use as much of the material as possible."

As a goal for the 1980s, he said, the concept requires initially the use of about 30 Space Shuttle orbiter trips to bring the necessary hardware into Earth orbit. From that point a mass mover would ferry the materials and personnel to the lunar surface.

Criswell said the initial lunar base would require about 25 people. At least 10 people would be required to man the station, which could produce about 100 times its own mass in material each year.

The idea is attractive to Criswell because lunar soil contains many of the major elements which provide the basis for industry and life on earth. It also eliminates the need for spectacularly expensive ferrying of raw materials to the moon from Earth.

"Lunar material must be chemically separated to provide the pure elemental chemicals which will serve as industrial feedstock," Criswell said. "The bulk of the effort would be at the space manufacturing facility.

"The idea that is really important is not any one particular technology, but basically the fact that you need to start working in space with materials in space to create a completely new system and a completely new capability."

Such a lunar-based facility could be set up on the lunar surface and developed in stages, some of which would use cast-off shuttle propellant tanks as operating areas.

Mining would be a first step because power and a source of raw material for fuel and basic building materials are necessary for any kind of space colony survival.

"What we're doing can be planned in reasonable detail in a small project.

Chase Over, Man To Pay Traffic Fines

HOUSTON (AP) — Roger Dale Smith, 17, told the judge Tuesday he did not want to be chased by police any more.

Smith had just entered pleas of guilty to 66 traffic violations.

Municipal Court Judge Robert P. Jungman fined Smith $1,408 but accepted a recommendation by prosecutors and dropped 35 of the charges.

"What should I do with you?" Jungman asked after hearing the guilty plea.

"I want to pay the fines, and I don't want to be chased by the law any more," Smith answered.

Smith was given until April 7, 1980, to pay the fine at $80 a month.

City Marshal R. E. McLemore said Smith had avoided arrest by giving false telephone numbers and addresses and went to Utah to avoid paying the traffic fines.

McLemore said Smith returned to Houston and on his next several traffic tickets gave the telephone number of a Texas Employment Commission office as his home telephone. McLemore said the TEC told him Smith was working for a roofing company, where the arrest was made.

Smith said he never has had a Texas driver's license.

Most of the traffic tickets were for driving without a license but others were for speeding, running red lights, driving with an expired inspection sticker, driving with illegal papers, and illegally cutting corners on red lights.

Citizen Group Challenges Plan For Prison In Hidalgo County

AUSTIN (AP) — Location of a state prison a few miles from the Mexican border — as proposed by the Texas Board of Corrections — would invite security problems, a prison lobbyist said Tuesday.

"If Fred Carrasco would have escaped in the Huntsville siege of 1974, he was planning to vanish into Mexico," said Charles Sullivan, executive director of Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants. "Having 2,500 prisoners within a few miles of the border is a security problem."

Sullivan said his group plans to file a lawsuit, perhaps this week, against the board, which met Monday in Palestine and approved an $8 million purchase of 6,741 acres in Hildalgo County for a prison.

The suit would challenge the board's action on grounds it violated the state's open meetings law, Sullivan said.

A three-member panel that must approve such land transactions met in Brownwood Monday following the Palestine meeting and said more information was needed on the purchase, including a land appraisal.

The three panel members, Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Board Chairman James Windham and General Land Office Chief Clerk Jack Giberson, voted to delay action until March 28.

The Palestine meeting's agenda did not include the land transaction and did not indicate an executive session would be held, Sullivan said.

The legislature appropriated $8 million for a prison in West Texas, said Malcolm Greenstein, a lawyer representing the citizen group.

"The only thing Hildalgo County is west of is Cameron County and maybe a few states on the east coast," he said.

The lawsuit will allow more investigation of the purchase, Greenstein said.

"We want to stop the purchase in Hildalgo County. It will give sufficient time to investigate it, such as who's going to profit from it and what effect it will have on the families of the inmates," the attorney said.

Police Checking Threat Made On Officer's Life

HOUSTON (AP) — Police reported Tuesday they are investigating an anonymous threat to kill an officer who shot and killed a Louisiana youth last year after a high-speed chase.

A federal grand jury now is investigating the death of Randall A. Webster, 17, Shreveport, for possible civil rights violations by police.

Deputy Police Chief R. G. McKenhan said the anonymous telephone threat against Officer Danny H. Mays, 31, was received Feb. 15 by a clerk in the police accident division where Mays now works.

The call was received about two weeks before officials revealed the federal grand jury was investigating the 1977 shooting.

McKeehan would not reveal details of an alleged plot but said police believe the telephone threat was linked with an alleged scheme to have Mays killed.

Police Capt. John LeVrier of the accident division quoted the anonymous caller as saying, "Well, it's been a year now since Webster was killed, now it's May's turn."

Mays said he shot Webster after the youth pointed a pistol at him at the end of a police chase that developed during an investigation of a report a van had been stolen from an automobile dealer's show room.

A county grand jury investigated the shooting but took no action on case.

Last week, Police Chief Harry Caldwell said the gun Webster allegedly pointed at Webster had been traced to the police property room and was reported to have been destroyed along with other weapons in 1968.

T. F. Clark, a retired police captain, said Monday he and two other officers witnessed the destruction of numerous guns and weapons on May 24, 1968, but that it was impossible for them to know for certain the .22-caliber revolver in question actually was destroyed. Clark was in charge of the police burglary and theft division and property room at the time.

Mays was transferred from street duty to desk work in the accident division Feb. 23.

Visiting Joan Mondale Praises San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Joan Mondale, wife of Vice President Walter Mondale, campaigned for the arts Tuesday as she toured San Antonio and viewed three sculptures that will be displayed in the vice presidential residence in Washington.

The trip marked the second time within the past year that Mrs. Mondale has visited this history-rich, bicultural South Texas city.

She visited the Southwest Crafts Center during the morning and watched as painters, sculptors, potters and glassblowers performed their talents.

She also was honored at a reception by the Bexar County Democratic Party.

Then, after touring the restored Mexican market area, El Mercado, she praised San Antonio as a "liveable city which had shown that the arts can serve as a marvelous economic resource."

Mrs. Mondale said San Antonio has been a leader in restoring its downtown area with such projects as El Mercado, the Alamo Plaza, the Riverwalk and its nearby Spanish missions.

"It is a healthy direction for our cities to move," she said. "San Antonio is not trying to be a city that it isn't. This city is really coming to life creatively."

After a Mexican food lunch at an El Mercado restaurant with local officials including Mayor Lila Cockrell, Mrs. Mondale toured the historic San Jose Mission, one of the earliest established in Texas by Spanish missionaries.

Mrs. Mondale was honored Tuesday night at a reception and dinner at the Witte Museum, where she viewed the three works of art that will decorate the vice presidential residence.

All are sculptures by 20th century artists and are part of the permanent collection of the San Antonio Museum Association. They are among 50 works being loaned to the vice presidential residence from public collections in the Southwest.

Mrs. Mondale, who was to spend the night at a downtown hotel here, is to view the other art works today in Dallas.

The sculptures she viewed here are "Beast Boar" by David Gilhooly, "Ceramic Ball" by Letitia Eldredge and "Rodeo Rider" by the late George W. White Jr.

Mrs. Mondale, an avid patron of the arts, was accompanied here by her daughter Eleanor, 18, who has applied for fall admission to Trinity University in San Antonio.

Mrs. Mondale said her daughter spent Monday night and Tuesday on the campus getting acquainted with the university.

"We're keeping our fingers crossed that she's admitted," said Mrs. Mondale, adding that Trinity usually sends out its admission notices sometime in April.

Death Penalty Challenged By Attorney

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston attorney is challenging the state's death penalty claiming it discriminates against men, and he is prepared to summon all 112 prosecutors in Texas to prove his point.

Michael Thornell filed a two-part motion before State District Judge Lee Duggan Monday on behalf of his client, Michael Wayne Eubanks. Eubanks is charged with capital murder in connection with the death of a man during an apparent burglary last October.

Thornell is also questioning the competence of juries to judge whether a convicted murder would constitute a continued threat to society if not executed.

Duggan is expected to rule on the motion Wednesday.

Harris County District Attorney Carol Vance testified Monday that he could recall only one woman faced with a capital murder charge in the county since the current death penalty statute took effect in 1974.

Capital murder is punishable by life imprisonment or death.

Paula Cantrell Derese pleaded guilty to murder and received a life sentence. She subsequently testified in the trial of Vernon McManus who was convicted of capital murder and is awaiting execution at the state prison in Huntsville.

Assistant District Attorney Don Dawson testified that capital murder cases are pending in the county's 177th State District Court against two women, one of whom has been indicted.

Thornell maintains that women are rarely charged with capital murder and even less frequently assessed the death penalty if convicted.

"But if you say a statute is discriminatory, you have to be able to prove it," Thornell said to explain the plan to call as many state prosecutors as necessary to testify.

Thornell's legal clerk, Nancy Hanratty, testified that statistics on the charging of women with capital murder are hard to come by.

Thornell said he plans to carry the challenge as far as it will go and will appeal if Duggan denies the motion.

Robbed Attendant Forced To Disrobe

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — For the second time in a week, an armed robber has forced a female store attendant to strip above the waist to prevent her from quickly getting help, police reported Tuesday.

In the latest holdup Monday, the topless store attendant was closeted in a storeroom with 12 customers, including a 15-year-old boy who was forced to remove his trousers.

PLO Message--In Blood

SOMETIMES AN act of insensible tragedy has much more widespread and lasting effects than the perpetrators could ever imagine. And so might be the case as a result of the terrorist attack on the Israeli buses last week, an attack for which the Palestine Liberation Organization has taken full credit.

Except in those radical nations which condone world anarchy as a way of life, the bloodshed has been universally condemned. Even the White House, which has played footsie with the PLO on occasion, noted its revulsion.

BUT IT IS deeds and not words which will speak the loudest in the long run as a result of the PLO adventure. Israeli leaders, starting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin, have vowed retribution for the attack.

Begin says Israel will "cut off the arm" of the ones responsible for the attack. Normally, Israel does retaliate in such instances.

But the more immediate result will be a hardening of the Israeli position against granting of any sort of status to the PLO in current or future peace negotiations, especially to pressure for a Palestinian homeland on the West Bank or near Israel.

The Israeli leader quite correctly can now turn to President Carter when they meet in their delayed talks next week and say, in effect, "I told you so."

WHILE THIS may not resolve the long-range problem of what to do about the Palestinian problem, it at least gives the Israelis a hard bargaining point.

Even the President, whose wishy-washy stand on the Mideast has caused more consternation than anything else, would be hard pressed to continue arguing for Palestinian recognition—at least any move which might give official sanction to the PLO as it now operates.

This has been one of the major weaknesses in U.S. policy vis-a-vis Israel and the Arabs and the PLO. Carter and his advisors have never seemed to understand that Peace to the Israelis means security from attack and harassment, even of the sort inflicted by the terrorists.

WHILE CONDEMNING the PLO attack, the administration has still left itself open to the charge that it occasionally has leaned more heavily on Israel than it has on the PLO or other bullies of the world.

No one kids himself that the arms package involving sale of planes to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia was to "balance" the power structure in the Mideast. It was to meet Arab demands, demands based on the fact that the Arabs also are our friends and—coincidentally—friends who sell us 40 per cent of our oil.

Perhaps what is needed in Washington is the same hard-nosed realistic appraisal of the PLO. It is an outlaw organization and has no business sitting at the same table with law-abiding nations—Israeli, Arab or American.

'Well, I've Got To Get Tough With Somebody!'

AN EDITORIAL:

Inflation Still The Monster

WHILE IT came as no surprise, the sharp jump in wholesale prices is ample cause for concern for the American consumer and the White House.

Fueled by soaring food costs, February wholesale prices showed a 1.1 percent rise. Figured on an annual basis, this represents a 13.2 percent increase, or double the current inflation rate.

IF PAST experience is any indication, the wholesale price rise will start showing up at the retail outlets within a few weeks.

This, along with a slowdown in some other categories, such as auto sales and the like, may put extra pressure on the administration to revise some of its anti-inflation goals.

Unfortunately, many people may perceive the jump in food prices as a sudden boon for the beleaguered farmer. This is not so. As has been the case for the past several months, the retail price of farm products has not always trickled down to the producer.

In fact, quite the contrary has been the case. Prices of various goods have been going up, to the farmer as well as the city dweller. But the prices farmers have received have not reflected the sharp jumps noted in the indices.

One bright item did come out of the government data factory the past week. The nation's unemployment picture actually improved, despite the coal mine strike and harsh winter weather.

Credit for this went to an increase in manufacturing and industrial jobs and a steady goods and services market over much of the country.

IN THE meantime, Congress continues to study ways and means of maintaining the nation's still viable, but sluggish economy. Here again, unfortunately, some of the remedies may do more harm than good.

This is particularly so if the so-called Labor Reform package, the Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill and tax legislation pass as now envisioned.

All are geared to more federal spending, more union control, and in the long run, fewer jobs.

M. STANTON EVANS:

For Rhodesia, Andy Is No. 1 Stumbling Block

WASHINGTON—You begin to wonder when Congress will do something about UN Ambassador Andrew Young.

While most foreign policy discussion is focused on the Panama Canal, Young has been lining up American policy with the Communist-sponsored terrorists who are trying to conquer Rhodesia by force of arms.

In so doing, he has tilted U.S. influence against the one-man, one-vote concept that is supposed to be the lodestar of our diplomacy and managed to outflank the British Labor government on its left, which takes some doing.

It indeed appears that Young all by himself, is the principal stumbling block to an internal settlement in Rhodesia.

PRIME MINISTER Ian Smith has come to terms with moderate black leaders including Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau, who among them clearly represent the majority of blacks within Rhodesia.

The resulting agreement is commanding wide support in the global community, even among the spokesmen for the liberal-left who have been hostile to the Smith regime.

Thus British foreign minister David Owen has cautiously greeted the internal settlement as "an important first step" toward resolution of the Rhodesian conflict.

Since Owen was one of the original sponsors of the "external settlement" approach involving the Communist-backed guerrillas, his guerrillas, his guarded words of approval for the internal settlement are viewed by political tea-leaf readers as a major softening of British policy.

IN THE UNITED States, meantime, the agreement between Smith and the moderate blacks has drawn approving words from The Washington Post, bellwether of mainstream liberal-left opinion.

While holding out the hope that the external guerrillas can somehow be included in the plans for an election (which they disdain), The Post concludes:

"The more the internal partners demonstrate their legitimacy, the more they deserve to win American support, and the more likely they will be to get it."

The internal settlement would therefore seem to have everything going for it:

IT WOULD FULFILL the ideological imperatives of liberal diplomacy;

It has the backing of Rhodesia's indigenous black leadership;

It commends itself to international opinion. (It is also said to have the backing of high officials in the U.S. State Department.)

The only opposition comes from the Communist-backed guerrillas who know they cannot win an election, their knee-jerk supporters in the Marxist "third world"—and Andrew Young.

Contrary to the cautious optimism that has greeted the internal settlement in many global capitals, Young has dumped all over the idea from the beginning.

He calls an internal settlement "no settlement at all" and makes it clear that his sympathies lie with the Communist-sponsored terrorists.

He has little time for the moderate black leaders in Rhodesia and has managed to make this hostility prevail as U.S. policy. (When Chief Chirau tried to visit the United States last year he was denied a visa—even as various Communist leaders from around the world were being permitted entry.)

ONE WONDERS where the Congress of the United States is hiding out while Andy Young is making policy for us.

It seems most unlikely the American people want their government aligned with Communist-sponsored terrorists in Africa or anywhere else, or that they would want their government to set its face against a plan for authentic and peaceful majority rule.

But with Andrew Young defining policy, that is exactly what we are getting.

Dallas Woman Urges People To Block Parimutuel Bill

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I am categorically opposed to parimutuel betting in Texas. No matter what you call it, it is legalized gambling. Horse racing in Texas is currently legal; betting on horse racing is not.

The gamblers are trying to slip it up on an unsuspecting public. By asking "Are you in favor of horse racing?," they have diverted and distorted the real issue. The real issue is: "Are you in favor of legalized gambling?"

I am against legalized gambling because it brings suffering to persons who can least afford to lose. It preys on human weakness, tempting many people to gamble away their pay checks. Also, it attracts the criminal element to the state.

So don't let the gamblers give you a snow job. Do not support attempts to legalize parimutuel betting in Texas.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Dedicated To Death

EGYPTIAN PRESIDENT Anwar Sadat's break in diplomatic relations with Cyprus, resulting from the famous commando raid, puts terrorists on notice throughout the world.

The radical wing of the Palestinians' El Fatah, the Baader-Meinhoff gang in West Germany, the Irish Republican Army, the Euzkadi ta Azkatasuna (ETA) in Spain that gloated over its assassination of Premier Luis Carrero Blanco, the Zengakuren in Japan, the terrorist groups in the United States, etc., have roots in very specific situations.

In each country, the terrorists and skyjackers' motives are various and confusing. But, everywhere, their objectives are mainly the same. They are dedicated to death and self-destruction. And the terrorism and skyjacking that plagues the world communicates itself to other countries.

IT IS LIKE A Japanese making ready for harakiri; the seppuku along with the trusted kaishaku who chops off the intended suicide's head the moment the knife goes home—laying out the red mat, placing the short knife on the table preparing its plunge with ritual deliberation.

Egypt, opposing terrorists everywhere, blasted Libya for "harboring and training Palestinian renegades."

Libya, almost as large as California and Alaska combined, is ruled by iron-fisted Cd. Moammar el Khadafy, a wild man fresh off a burro's back and into a Cadillac.

TODAY LIBYA IS all but a Soviet stooge.

Khadafy constantly urges war with Israel and detests Sadat, the most moderate leader in the Arab world. He has publicly sworn to "eliminate"—overthrow or kill—Sadat and had a small radical groupp attempt (it failed) to seize a military technical college in Cairo.

Obviously, international cooperation is the only conceivable solution. But the United Nations —passing mealymouthed resolutions—has repeatedly failed to prohibit this horror to innocent people.

The United States has always tried—and always failed.

U.S. OFFICIALS know that Dawson Field, the former British Royal Air Force air strip at Qasr al Hallabat, Jordan, is a terminal for Red Chinese weapons flown in from Albania to the Palestine terrorists who turn skyjackers.

They know that the terrorists who committed the Maalot murders arrived in East Berlin's Schoenfeld Airport. They were smuggled into West Germany and have expanded 150 to more than 500 members in Western Europe and Yugoslavia, with some 51 cells in West Germany alone.

She Asks Understanding, Cites Corruption Of Power

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Lubbock has set by for years watching what happened as city after city was forced to integrate. The word integrate has become synonomous with busing. There is nothing fearful about integration but forced busing is frightening.

The thought that our government can say there is a fuel shortage then bus children across town against the majority of the people's wishes is awesomely scary.

Hostility always arises out of resentment when made to do something against your will. In what I've observed this hostility is almost always misdirected. Instead of the people being irate with our politicians that have made themselves all-knowing and all-powerful through ever increasing control and interference in and of our lives and businesses, the hostility develops into yet a further prejudice between races.

The Good Lord knew when he made people different that it would be a real test for those that do love, but I believe, he knew as people grew in faith and love that their prejudices would be discarded and true acceptance and understanding would grow. Men have never succeeded in playing God and we should be realizing more every day how absolute power corrupts absolutely.

She Hopes Fine Home Is Given Understanding Care

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Since moving to Lubbock a year ago, I have daily passed the home at Slide Road and 4th Street mentioned in an article of the March 8 Avalanche-Journal morning edition.

This home, the land, the trees and windmill have given me priceless moments of daydreaming and imagining as to the inner life of that magnificent property. On rare occasions I would see a front curtain pulled back slightly and a figure sitting beyond.

Now all of the who's, what's, where's and why's have come to light.

My only hope now is that in subdividing all that land, the trees may be preserved, and if, in fact, the home is to become a restaurant that the owner will treat it with the dignity it so deserves. Ah, progress!

Couple Have Praise For Good Samaritan Neighbors

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

"Concern"—How Sweet It Is.

Just a word? Not hardly. To us it is a reality among the neighbors in our block, for the health and well-being of all of us. As recipients of such concern, we have found it to be very contagious and soul pleasing.

Having had several months of illness in our family during the past year, we speak from experience.

It is rare that a day passes without one or more personal visits or phone calls from our concerned neighbors, to find in person—"How is the problem? Can we help in any way? Can we drive you someplace? Here are a few cookies or a pie, or a cake. Hope you enjoy them."

We welcome and love our great neighbors for their show of concern, and try to repay in kind. And you know what? It is free and gives such feeling of satisfaction—try it.

P.S. Do you know your neighbors?

WE MAY BE over-reacting, but it seems to us that far too much emphasis is being placed on one aspect of foreign policy today which is not the key issue.

That is much ado is being made, by administration backers and a segment of the media, that the President's prestige as a world leader is on the line, both in the Panama Canal debate and now the proposed Mideast arms sale. Or, put not so subtly, if the Panama Canal Treaties are defeated and if the White House plan to sell planes to not only Israel but Egypt and Saudi Araba is not approved, then Mr. Carter will come off as a discredited President in the eyes of the rest of the world.

In other words, we are supposed to "buy" the President's foreign policy in order to make him appear a viable—and perhaps wise—man abroad.

THIS IS HOGWASH, pure and simple. And thinking Americans shouldn't be taken in by such claptrap.

Since when does a nation have to back a President whose foreign policy has been a near shambles from its inception? Why should the majority follow its leader down a primrose path when that majority perceives, as is the case with the Panama pacts, that it invites possible disaster later?

Even the normally staid and sensible Wall Street Journal, in what ostensibly was a news analysis of the Mideast arms proposal, said if Congress were to veto the Mideast arms sale "a rebuked President would be seen by the rest of the world as an impotent leader."

Well, it might just turn out that the rest of the world might perceive Congress and the American people as wiser than the man in the White House. Mr. Carter's foreign policy record thus far—from those "stabilizing" Cuban forces in Africa to his handling of the dollar crisis—leaves much room for second guessing.

During a candidates' speaking session, more than one would-be office-holder indicated that he or she felt "the easy way out" was to go ahead and do what the Federal bureaucrats wanted.

Never mind that Lubbock has had one of the better City governments, for all races, in the nation. Or that that there is a record of qualified minority candidates being named to office, even on at-large basis.

An argument for enlarging the City Council, in view of the City's growth, may well be made. But, we can think of no more Democratic way of naming our elected public servants than to let everyone vote on each of them.

Anything else is restricting the Democratic process and denying all of those governed to choose all of those who do the governing.

IT WAS 45 years ago this week that the face of American politics got a new image.

It was on March 12, 1933, that the "fireside chat" was born.

It was President Theodore Roosevelt who called the White House a "bully pulpit." He recognized the political value of symbols and in a moment of whimsy put his finger on the seldom realized potential of a Chief Executive to appeal to the nation and mold public opinion.

Ironically, it remained for President Franklin Roosevelt to take full advantage of his cousin's perceptive advice.

Less than a week after assuming office, FDR set out to appeal directly to the conscience of the American people in the first of a long series of radio "sermons" which became known as the "fireside chat."

MANY HISTORIANS credit the fireside chats with revitalizing the fallen spirits of a hardpressed population.

Coming as they did at the height of the Great Depression, they created a version of what Marhall McLuhan later called "the global village," a media-induced feeling of togetherness shared by a widespread audience.

They chats also humanized the Presidency itself, making Roosevelt seem to many listeners like a member of the family.

President Carter revived the format in 1977 and recently used it as an address on the Panama Canal treaties. Through such means, Carter has attempted to rally political support for his programs. But, thus far, he has not enjoyed the success which FDR did. Powerful members of Congress have accused him of seeking to circumvent normal channels.

What the public wants, pollster Patrick Caddell wrote in a 1976 memo to Carter, are "visible signals that it needs to understand what is happening." The fireside chats are supposed to do that, the White House says. But, as we noted earlier, for many, much of it has come off as political image making.

30 Coal Miners Incur Wrath Of 'Red Necks'

KEYSTONE, W.Va. (AP) — In the Appalachian coalfields, there is no uglier term to a union man than "scab."

A soft-spoken union miner who wants to work — call him Bill — was called that Tuesday outside the Keystone No. 1 mine. But he said he'd be back Wednesday, when he hopes to dig coal.

Thirty miners, members of United Mine Workers Local 6196, showed up for work Monday morning at the Eastern Associated Coal Corp. mine, located in the heart of West Virginia's southern coalfields.

Of the state's 65,000 UMW miners, they are the only ones who have gone underground in the 99 days of the coal strike.

A dozen reported for Tuesday's morning shift and six were put to work. They stayed above ground, shoveling mud from railroad tracks that run near the mine portal.

Just down the road from the mine, about 15 masked pickets showed up, and shouted "Scab. Scab." Translated loosely, the word applies to any union man who works without a contract.

"There's some guys that'll call you a scab whether you're right or wrong, because they don't want to work anyway," said Bill.

The tall, wiry, middle-aged man said he wouldn't cross a picket line, but has a couple of reasons for wanting to get back inside the mine.

"The law's the law," he said, referring to the Taft-Hartley back-to-work injunction most union miners are ignoring.

And he said the frequent wildcat strikes that disrupt coal production in Appalachia seldom bother Keystone No. 1.

"Keystone has a tradition of trying to work," he said. "You have to have a good reason before this local will consider not working."

Leaning against his car in the muddy mine parking lot, Bill said it is important that if he works underground, he doesn't have to worry about anything outside the mine.

"I want to work in peace," he said. "I've got 14 people to worry about down there."

But peace may be a rare commodity for the men who show up for work at Keystone No. 1. Many of the 450 members of Local 6196 are angry and embarrassed that their local has been the only one to go underground.

Down the road were the men wearing masks and choth red bandanas, another tradition in the coal fields. Fifty years ago, in the southern West Virginia mine wars, miners wore the bandanas around their necks as a kind of uniform and became known as "red necks."

While Bill said he preferred that his name not be published, he said he is not afraid of masked men.

"You always have some nut out there threatening you, anyhow," he said. "You have to deal with it. So far, I haven't had any threats, although after today I probably will.

"As long as they come face-to-face, I ain't worried about it," he said.

"I'll be back Wednesday."

New Pact Studied By Miners

By United Press International

Striking coal miners predicted quick action on a new contract proposal Tuesday, but terms of the agreement drew mixed responses.

"I would figure if the settlement satisfies the questions the miners have regarding the health, medical and pension benefits, then things look much better," said Robert Carter, president of United Mine Workers District 30 in Kentucky.

But in Ohio, union officers were critical of an incentive clause, which offers more pay for more production.

"I don't think the incentive clause should be in there whatsover," said Ken Conoway, president of a local at Powhatan Point, Ohio. "It is just normal for a guy to want to grab a few extra bucks if they have the opportunity to make it.

"It will mean more injuries and more fatalities because miners would be getting paid to take an extra chance."

The new contract agreement announced in Washington by negotiators must be approved by the United Mine Workers bargaining council before being submitted to the rank-and-file membership. That vote is expected Wednesday afternoon.

Carter said the vote by the UMW's total membership could come by this weekend "if things go right."

"I think it could be approved by the men who might be more willing to go along with it," Carter said.

"I don't think it's going to go," said Frank Dwyer, vice president of UMW Local 1619 in Indiana, Pa. "I really don't because we had a good insurance policy — probably the best that any working man had or one of the best — and negotiating on a lower payment of our contribution to insurance policy is not really the whole thing.

"We still have to take care of the 700,000-plus dependants."

Thus, on the 99th day of their strike, the 160,000 members UMW had another decision to make. They had defied a Taft-Hartley back-to-work order and showed no signs of relenting unless they get what they want.

Some coal trickled from independent mines which reopened when the court order outlawed picketing.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said reports from the mine safety inspector show 151 mines have opened since last week, including 11 UMW mines in the states of Virginia, West Virginia, Alabama, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

That still left hundreds of others idle. Even at some mines where a few workers returned, there were not enough men to produce coal.

There was talk in the union halls that contract negotiators in Washington may be getting close to another offer, but out in the coalfields, tempers were growing shorter.

Despite a sharp warning from U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell that pickets would be arrested, there were scattered confrontations at mines from Pennsylvania to Utah.

Police arrested four UMW members from among a crowd of 200 that showed up at the Albright power plant in Kingwood, W.Va. where a coal truck's windshield was smashed. Preston County Sheriff Wade Graham said they were charged with obstructing traffic.

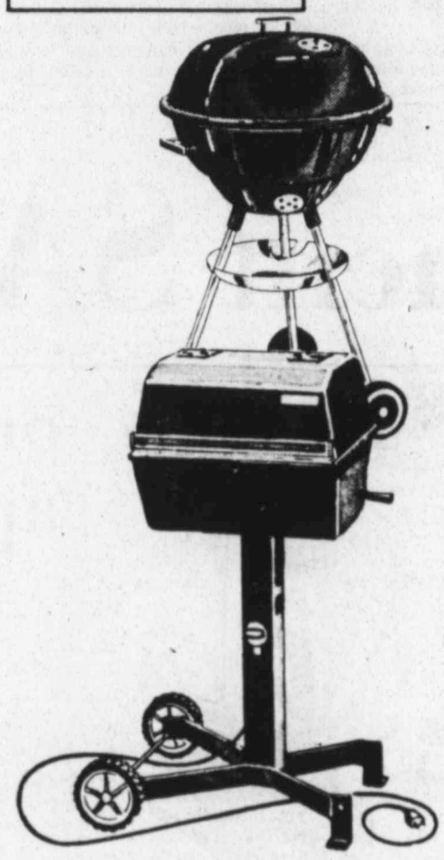

Pickets wearing ski masks joined a group of retired UMW miners to bar the entrances to mines in Carbon and Emory counties in Utah.

There were several rockthrowing incidents as a caravan of 400 pickets roamed through Somerset County and elsewhere in central Pennsylvania. That's where the PBS Coal Co., a nonunion operation, filed suit Monday charging that the UMW had cost the company $20,000 a day since the strike began.

Crude Oil Tax Poses Problem In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is trying to rewrite its proposed crude oil tax — which the president has called the centerpiece of his energy program — to make it more palatable to Congress, administration and congressional sources said Tuesday.

"They know the tax is in deep trouble and they're trying to find a way out," said a congressional energy aide who asked not to be identified.

He said administration officials have recognized that the $39 billion tax cannot pass Congress unless substantially modified, especially on the heels of the politically unpopular increase in Social Security taxes recently voted by Congress.

One possibility being explored is using revenues from the oil tax to offset the Social Security tax increases.

"There has been talk in the last 24 hours of putting the crude oil tax in Social Security," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporters.

However, such a proposal, reportedly advanced by Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, is being opposed by Senate Finance Committee Chairman Russell Long, D-La.

A Long aide, John Steen, said Long had told Schlesinger to look for other alternatives to keep the tax alive.

It was Long who last week told Carter the crude oil tax was unlikely to pass the Senate. House tax specialists immediately denied Long's claim, asserting there might still be hope for the controversial tax.

Sources said that Schlesinger and his top aides have been engaged in extensive private discussions with top congressional energy leaders and their staff members on ways to save the oil tax.

A Schlesinger spokesman, Jim Bishop, acknowledged talks were taking place on possible changes in the tax, but declined to elaborate.

Another option being considered is a scaled-down version of the tax so it would have less impact on consumers than the House-passed tax, sources said.

The tax on domestic oil is designed to make U.S. petroleum as expensive as foreign oil over a three-year period in an effort to reduce U.S. reliance on imports and encourage conservation. It would add about seven cents a gallon to the price of gasoline and other petroleum products.

The House passed the tax last August under Carter's energy plan. But the Senate rejected the idea, approving instead a multibillion-dollar package of tax breaks for energy production and conservation.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., a top Senate energy tax negotiator, said he was hopeful that revenues from the tax could be put in a trust fund to encourage development of new forms of energy.

School Trustees To Meet Thursday

The Lubbock Independent School District board of trustees will meet Thursday to select textbooks and affirm the employment of teachers for the 1978-79 school year.

The board also will hear a presentation by a representative of Lubbock ministers concerning the implementation of a school desegregation plan here.

The meeting will be at 7:15 a.m. in the assembly room of the district's administration building, 1628 19th St.

Shamrock Schedules Shenanigans

SHAMROCK (UPI) — There isn't much of an Irish community in this Texas Panhandle town. But that doesn't stop the folks from celebrating St. Patrick's Day.

And as usual the town will hold Saturday night its annual celebration honoring Ireland's patron saint.

Some say it's really to honor St. Patrick's, but most concede the celebration is merely to attract the community for a night of fun.

"It's just a chance for people to come back end visit. It's quite a celebration," said Gary Gandy, chairman of this year's event.

Among the traditional activities in this town with the name reminiscent of Ireland include a donegal shenanigan (a beard judging contest), selection of a colleen (an Irish beauty queen), parades and banquets.

A man without a beard becomes as wanted as the fugitives whose pictures once decorated sheriffs' offices. The only thing that protects the clean shaven desperado is a permit that lets him walk the streets without being tossed in jail, according to the town's (tongue in cheek) St. Patrick's Day law.

However, the ways of the American West have to intrude at the Saturday night celebration — there will be a western-style dance.

"Most everybody here likes country and western," Gandy said.

The community has been hosting the celebration for 31 years, even in the presence of laws banning the rog flowing so freely at St. Patrick's Day parties elsewhere on the Christian map.

"Every good Irishman has a jug under the coat," said Gandy.

How many good Irishman live in Shamrock? "Oh, quite a few," he said kiddingly.

In 1938 Glenn Truax, a high school band director, decided to take advantage of the community's name. Except for a few World War II and Korean War years, the shenanigans have been continued ever since.

According to local legend, the town came by its moniker during the 1890s. Then the town was called Exum, but a homesick postmaster named George Nickle changed it to Shamrock in memory of Old Sod.

Judge Slates Lopez Trial Date For May

PLAINS (Special) — The trial of Ricardo Lopez, accused of last April's gunshot slaying of Whitharral High School principal Malcolm Omar Tripp, has been set for May 22 in Plains.

Lopez, 18, of Route 2, Littlefield is jailed in Levelland.

Dist. Judge M.C. Ledbetter had tentatively set a March 27 trial date. Ledbetter said Tuesday he moved the date to May after granting Lopez's defense a motion for continuance.

Patrick Abeyta of Lubbock, Lopez's attorney, said Tuesday that he had asked for more time because he wanted to examine a medical report from the state's psychiatrist before going to trial.

Lopez was found incompetent to stand trial by a Plains jury last June after testimony from a psychiatrist that the defendant was "enamored" with voodoo and black magic.

Lopez was deemed competent in late December, however, by Dr. James A. Hunter, clinical director at Rusk State Hospital. The former Whitharral High School student was then discharged from Rusk and returned to the Hockley County Jail in Levelland.

Hockley County Dist. Atty. Bill Boedeker is prosecuting the case, along with Lubbock attorney John Montford who was hired by Tripp's family as a special prosecutor.

Tripp, 31, was shot to death on the steps of Whitharral High School about 9 a.m. April 7.

Lopez reportedly walked into a nearby grocery store, put a .32 caliber revolver on the counter and told the store's owner to call police and an ambulance.

School officials said Tripp had been talking to Lopez a few moments before, asking him why he was not in class.

Motley Included In Aid Request

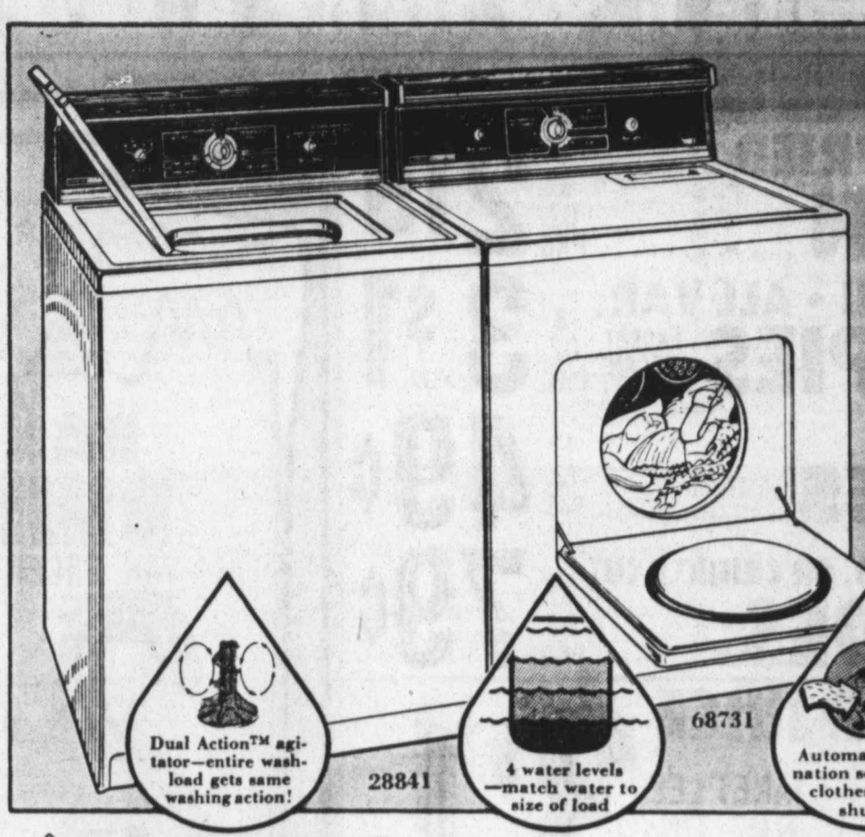

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Motley County was included Tuesday in Gov. Dolph Briscoe's request that three Texas counties be declared disaster areas to qualify farmers and ranchers for emergency loans through the federal government.

In a letter to Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, Briscoe also requested the disaster area designation for Knox and Dallas counties to help cover losses caused by severe weather from Nov. 12, 1976 to February 27, 1978.

Briscoe also asked the Small Business Administration to allow eligible residents of 102 Texas counties to participate in a physical disaster loan program through which more financial aid might be available. Federal estimates, he said, show 114,765 farmers and ranchers in those counties have suffered estimated losses of $459,860,122 during the past year.

Five Senators State Positions On Canal Pacts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five previously uncommitted senators declared their positions on the Panama Canal treaties Tuesday as backstage maneuvering continued for the final few votes that will decide whether the Senate ratifies the pacts.

An informal count by the Associated Press showed the opponents with 34 votes — the number they would need to block ratification when the first of the two treaties comes to a vote on Thursday. The same tally gave the proponents 64, three short of the total they would need if all members were present.

However, the maneuvering continued and sources indicated the vote totals were far from firm at this time.

Announcements by senators Herman Talmadge and Sam Nunn, both D-Ga., and by H. John Heinz, R-Pa., added three votes to those in favor of approving the treaties. All three attached conditions to their assent, but had been regarded by vote tabulators on both sides as probable yes votes.

At the same time, Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., came out opposed, as expected, and Sen. William Roth, R-Del., produced a mild surprise by lining up with the opposition.

And Republican Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon said he was now "wavering" in support for the treaties because of alleged efforts by President Carter to make behind-the-scenes deals with senators to win their votes.

"The President shouldn't be the host of 'let's make a deal,'" Packwood said. He cited no personal knowledge of any actual bartering, but an aide said his complaint was intended as "a warning that the White House may lose more votes — including his — than it gains with such tactics."

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., listed among those opposed, indicated he would be ready to vote for the treaties if the administration agreed to a reservation spelling out more fully U.S. rights to intervene to keep the canal operating after the year 2000.

DeConcini said State Department officials had told him the change was acceptable, but it was not known whether the Panamanians would go along. Any such provision, he said, would have to be "binding" on both parties.

Meanwhile, Panamanian officials said the Senate vote is too close to predict but added they are "preparing for the worst — whatever that may be."

They also predicted that Thursday's scheduled vote would be postponed if the administration does not have enough votes to win. One Panamanian source, who declined to be identified, said his government would not object to some proposed treaty changes. He indicated the proposals made by DeConcini possibly could be acceptable.

Among senators still undeclared, only two evidently had vote-counters for both sides completely mystified — Sens. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., and Edward Brooke, R-Mass.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., chief strategist of the anti-treaty forces, called the estimate that opponents had enough votes "very exciting," but said his own count was one or two votes short of the 34.

On the Senate floor, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., declared that if the treaties lose, the administration has only itself to blame. "Those who stonewalled the effort to improve the treaties with amendments on the floor must bear the burden," he said.

The White House, obviously recognizing that the treaties are in serious jeopardy, has intensified its own lobbying efforts in recent days by warning of possible damage to the prestige of the presidency should they go down to defeat. However, administration officials denied making deals with senators to get their votes.

President Carter has used the prestige-at-stake theme in personal phone calls to what Laxalt said was "damn near all" of the declared treaty opponents in the past few days.

Both the White House and Talmadge denied published reports that the administration had won Talmadge's vote by dropping its opposition to his $2.3 billion emergency farm bill.

Talmadge said he didn't know if the administration supported or opposed his bill. He insisted that, in any case, there had been no negotiations with White House officials. Carter's Press Secretary, Jody Powell, agreed, calling the reports of a deal "absurd."

But an administration source who declined to be identified said Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland had suggested that the administration soften its opposition to Talmadge's proposal to "help Herman" and then work to kill the farm legislation in the House.

The two Georgians endorsed the treaties with the proviso that reservations can be attached to open the way for U.S.-Panama negotiations on allowing a permanent U.S. military presence in Panama after the year 2000.

Nunn said he had been assured by Senate leaders and Carter that such a change was acceptable, and would have the same binding effect.

Panamanian Officials 'Preparing For Worst'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Panamanian officials said Tuesday the Senate vote on part of the new canal treaty is too close to predict but that they are "preparing for the worst — whatever that may be."

The officials also said they expect Thursday's scheduled Senate vote to be postponed if treaty supporters conclude that they don't have the votes to win.

A Panamanian Embassy spokesman later said the official's remarks did not represent the official view of the government. The spokesman, who declined to be identified, did not want to comment further.

The Carter administration now is weighing demands made by undecided senators whose votes are needed to win Senate passage. Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., for example, is pushing for an amendment that would enable the United States to take unilateral military action to open the canal if it were closed.

One Panamanian source, who asked not to be identified, said his government would not object to some proposed treaty changes.

"We are willing to take anything (attached to the treaty) that does not cross our line of indignity," the Panamanian source said. "That includes proposals made by DeConcini — if he does not cross that line, if he has not already," he added.

Panamanian officials say they don't know which way the Senate will vote Thursday and they consider it a strong possibility that a treaty vote will be deferred until after this year's congressional elections if it appears the Senate would reject the proposed pacts now.

"We really can't predict which way it's going to go," he said. "We're preparing for the worst, whatever that may be."

If it appears that the treaties would fail, Senate leaders "could send them back to the Foreign Relations Committee, freeze the treaties there, and reintroduce them next fall," the source said.

There are two treaties before the Senate. The pact scheduled for a vote Thursday covers the defense of the canal after the year 2000 when Panama takes over the waterway. The other treaty deals with the gradual transfer of the canal and the Canal Zone to Panama between now and then.

The Panamanian officials expressed concern that any postponement could provoke violence in Panama from those who already criticize Gen. Omar Torrijos for what they view as his government's concessions to the United States in the treaty negotiations.

"The students, the extremists — no one in the government can hold them back now," said one official.

"For all practical purposes, if it (the vote) doesn't go now, it will all be different. We would have to go through riots, other unpleasant things. And then the Senate would look at ratification of these treaties differently," he added.

Panamaian sources in Washington said they are "trying to keep cool, trying to keep calm," while waiting Thursday's outcome.

"We are on the phone 10 times a day," they said, with both White House aides, Torrijos and other officials in Panama.

"We are getting ourselves in position to deal with this outcome, whatever it is — and sizing up what is best for us," one source said.

"We have such a short time, and we have to get ourselves positioned so that if things go wrong, we are not blamed for it, that it is not because of Panama's intransigence.

"We've taken a real beating (during the Senate debate on the treaties) and we don't want to do anything that would jeopardize ratification," he added.

New Canal Proposed By Senator

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mike Gravel of Alaska has frequently been a lonesome figure on issues before Congress, and his role in the debate over the Panama Canal treaties is no exception.

Simply put, Gravel believes all the argument about what will happen to the canal after the United States turns it over to Panama in the year 2000 completely misses the point.

As the first of two Senate votes on whether to approve the treaties draws near, Gravel cheerfully declares, "Everybody is arguing about the wrong thing. This is an obsolete conflict."

Why?

Gravel is a proponent of encouraging Panama to build a new $20 billion sea-level canal which would make the present waterway fully obsolete.

He has gathered statistics which he says show that because new ships are bigger, only about 8 percent of world's shipping tonnage will be able to use the present canal by the year 2000.

Among oil tankers built since 1950, Gravel notes, more than two-thirds were too big to pass through the locks of present canal.

Gravel, a Democrat who supports the treaties, says he had to find authorities in Norway to provide statistics about the likely obsolescence of the canal. He could locate no research in the United States on how much the canal will actually be used as control is gradually shifted to the Panamanians.

If the treaties are approved by the Senate, Gravel will push for an $8-million study on the feasibility of a new canal. Earlier studies by the U.S. Corps of Engineers have demonstrated that a sea-level canal can be built.

Gravel said his research has shown that a new canal, which would require no locks to raise and lower water level, could be built sometime in the 1980s.

This time, however, there would be no U.S. control. Financing would be handled by the Panamanian government with help from the World Bank or some other international lending organization.

It would be a Panamanian canal.

Gravel is not urging the new canal out of a feeling of goodwill for the Panamanians. Before long, Alaska will be producing millions of gallons of oil and natural gas which the West Coast of the United States will be able to use.

And the quickest and most practical way to get the oil and gas to the industrial heartland of the United States and to East Coast cities is to send supertankers through a new canal, according to Gravel.

So if Gravel is right, the current political storms over ratification of the canal treaties will one day be recalled with amusement by politicians of the next century.

If history bears out the senator's assertions, the battle will have been fought over a canal as useless as yesterday's newspaper.

Cosmonauts Plan For Return Flight

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet cosmonauts Yuri Romanenko and Georgy Grechko are preparing to return to Earth after more then three months in orbit aboard the Salyut 6 space station, Tass reported Tuesday.

The Soviet news agency said the cosmonauts were "tidying up" the space station and getting it ready to operate automatically after they leave.

Tass gave no specific time for the cosmonauts' return but said their flight was "nearing conclusion."

It said the cosmonauts were continuing their daily routine of physical exercises, photography and various scientific experiments.

Romanenko and Grechko, who were fired into orbit last Dec. 10, set a world endurance record for continuous time in space March 4, when they broke the 84-day mark set four years ago by U.S. astronauts aboard Skylab 4.

Senators Grilling Park

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate investigators took their first crack at indicted rice dealer Tongsun Park Tuesday and sources said a House subcommittee will soon disclose documents showing Park had "a working relationship" with South Korean intelligence.

Following a similar effort by a House panel, the Senate Ethics Committee began its own closed door interrogation in an effort to determine how much money Park may have given senators and whether any payments were intended to buy influence for Korea.

Investigators said "a large number of senators" already had supplied them with material related to the Park questioning, but they declined to elaborate.

Park is said to have told Justice Department prosecutors that senators got only a small fraction of the $750,000 he gave to about two dozen past and present members of Congress.

He described those payments as campaign contributions or compensation for help in consumating the business deals he transacted as a Washington-based rice merchant in the 1970s. He denied charges the money was distributed as part of a Korean government-backed bribery scheme.

In the House, sources said the international relations subcommittee, also probing Korean lobbying practices, has obtained previously classified U.S. intelligence documents showing Park began helping Korea's Central Intelligence Agency about 10 years ago.

"The documents show they had a working relationship and that Park was regarded — as they say in intelligence parlance — as an asset of the KCIA from at least 1968 on," one source said.

The sources said the House panel, headed by Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn, would release those documents at the first in a series of public hearings today, plus other material showing:

—Why Korea "decided to resort to extraordinary measures" to influence U.S. foreign policy; "how they made the decisions," and who was given responsibility for covert lobbying.

—"Who in the (U.S.) executive branch knew, what they knew and what they did about it."

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., an ethics committee member, said Monday he had seen U.S. documents showing that American intelligence agencies kept track of the Korean lobbying operation and that top Nixon administration officials, including Henry Kissinger and John Mitchell, knew but did nothing to stop it.

Park had no comment to reporters as he went before the Senate panel.

A 36-count grand jury indictment against him lists contributions of $3,000 to former Sens. Joseph Montoya, D-N.M., and Jack Miller, R-Iowa, who has said he gave the money back.

It also said Park gave $500 each to Sens. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, Harry Byrd, Ind-Va., and former Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo.

First Korean Bribe Trial Set To Begin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Korean-born businessman Hancho Kim becomes the first defendant to stand trial in the Capitol Hill influence-buying case Wednesday, facing charges he conspired to pass $600,000 to congressmen on behalf of the Korean government.

He has pleaded innocent to all charges.

Kim's federal court trial opens following closed door congressional testimony by indicted rice dealer Tongsun Park, who has admitted under immunity from prosecution that he made $750,000 in payments to congressmen.

Park has denied he ever worked for the Korean Central Intelligence Agency and maintains the payments he made were private business or political contributions.

Park also maintains he never heard of Kim until he read about him in the newspapers.

But a defected KCIA agent told congressional investigators a check was drawn on Park's bank account to help fund Kim's separate influence buying plan, known as "Operation White Snow."

Kim is charged with one count of conspiring to influence congressmen "to enact legislation for the benefit of the Republic of Korea" and one count of lying to a federal grand jury.

His attorney, David Povich, says he questions whether "any Korean can get a fair trial" after the widespread publicity given the congressional and Justice Department investigations of the alleged bribery schemes.

Prosecutors do not claim to have evidence Kim ever actually attempted to bribe members of Congress, but only that he received Korean government money as part of a conspiracy aimed at buying influence on Capitol Hill.

Sources say that if he did make any payoffs, the Justice Department has only one apparent way of getting him to admit it: to convict him and convert him to a government witness with an offer of leniency on his jail sentence.

The strongest evidence against Kim involves his association with at least two unidentified congressmen and one unidentified executive branch official.

The charges against Hancho Kim rest mainly on the testimony of defected KCIA agent Kim Sang Keun, who said the Washington-area businessman phoned him in August 1974 and told him they would be working together on a "very important mission" for Korea.

Senators Grilling Park

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate investigators took their first crack at indicted rice dealer Tongsun Park Tuesday and sources said a House subcommittee will soon disclose documents showing Park had "a working relationship" with South Korean intelligence.

Following a similar effort by a House panel, the Senate Ethics Committee began its own closed door interrogation in an effort to determine how much money Park may have given senators and whether any payments were intended to buy influence for Korea.

Investigators said "a large number of senators" already had supplied them with material related to the Park questioning, but they declined to elaborate.

Park is said to have told Justice Department prosecutors that senators got only a small fraction of the $750,000 he gave to about two dozen past and present members of Congress.

He described those payments as campaign contributions or compensation for help in consumating the business deals he transacted as a Washington-based rice merchant in the 1970s. He denied charges the money was distributed as part of a Korean government-backed bribery scheme.

In the House, sources said the international relations subcommittee, also probing Korean lobbying practices, has obtained previously classified U.S. intelligence documents showing Park began helping Korea's Central Intelligence Agency about 10 years ago.

"The documents show they had a working relationship and that Park was regarded — as they say in intelligence parlance — as an asset of the KCIA from at least 1968 on," one source said.

The sources said the House panel, headed by Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn, would release those documents at the first in a series of public hearings today, plus other material showing:

—Why Korea "decided to resort to extraordinary measures" to influence U.S. foreign policy; "how they made the decisions," and who was given responsibility for covert lobbying.

—"Who in the (U.S.) executive branch knew, what they knew and what they did about it."

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., an ethics committee member, said Monday he had seen U.S. documents showing that American intelligence agencies kept track of the Korean lobbying operation and that top Nixon administration officials, including Henry Kissinger and John Mitchell, knew but did nothing to stop it.

Park had no comment to reporters as he went before the Senate panel.

A 36-count grand jury indictment against him lists contributions of $3,000 to former Sens. Joseph Montoya, D-N.M., and Jack Miller, R-Iowa, who has said he gave the money back.

It also said Park gave $500 each to Sens. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, Harry Byrd, Ind-Va., and former Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo.

First Korean Bribe Trial Set To Begin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Korean-born businessman Hancho Kim becomes the first defendant to stand trial in the Capitol Hill influence-buying case Wednesday, facing charges he conspired to pass $600,000 to congressmen on behalf of the Korean government.

He has pleaded innocent to all charges.

Kim's federal court trial opens following closed door congressional testimony by indicted rice dealer Tongsun Park, who has admitted under immunity from prosecution that he made $750,000 in payments to congressmen.

Park has denied he ever worked for the Korean Central Intelligence Agency and maintains the payments he made were private business or political contributions.

Park also maintains he never heard of Kim until he read about him in the newspapers.

But a defected KCIA agent told congressional investigators a check was drawn on Park's bank account to help fund Kim's separate influence buying plan, known as "Operation White Snow."

Kim is charged with one count of conspiring to influence congressmen "to enact legislation for the benefit of the Republic of Korea" and one count of lying to a federal grand jury.

His attorney, David Povich, says he questions whether "any Korean can get a fair trial" after the widespread publicity given the congressional and Justice Department investigations of the alleged bribery schemes.

Prosecutors do not claim to have evidence Kim ever actually attempted to bribe members of Congress, but only that he received Korean government money as part of a conspiracy aimed at buying influence on Capitol Hill.

Sources say that if he did make any payoffs, the Justice Department has only one apparent way of getting him to admit it: to convict him and convert him to a government witness with an offer of leniency on his jail sentence.

The strongest evidence against Kim involves his association with at least two unidentified congressmen and one unidentified executive branch official.

The charges against Hancho Kim rest mainly on the testimony of defected KCIA agent Kim Sang Keun, who said the Washington-area businessman phoned him in August 1974 and told him they would be working together on a "very important mission" for Korea.

Daily Drink May Combat Coronary

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — A beer or cocktail a day may afford some protection against coronary artery disease, a study of heart patients in America's beer capital has shown.

But Dr. Joseph J. Barboriak, one of the authors of the study, said he feared the study could prompt drinkers to cast moderation to the winds and try to drink their ways to health.

"Some people may have the impression that if one drink is good for them, two drinks will be better and 10 drinks will be 10 times as good," said Barboriak, chief of biochemistry at the Veterans Administration hospital and a professor of pharmacology at the Medical College of Wisconsin.

He emphasized that that was not the case and cautioned against excesses.

Barboriak was in Orlando, Fla., Tuesday to present the study to a conference of heart specialists.

Other collaborators in the study are Alfred A. Rimm, a statistician and associate professor in preventive medicine at the Medical College, and Alfred J. Anderson, a statistician.

Barboriak said the study, which involved some 2,000 persons with coronary heart disease, showed persons who consumed more than six ounces of alcohol a week had a higher level of high density lipoprotein in their blood than persons who abstained from alcohol or consumed only very small quantities.

Those with the higher lipoprotein levels were less likely to suffer from hardening of the arteries, he said.

But Barboriak stressed moderation, noting there also is ample evidence that alcohol abuse can damage the liver and heart muscle and has been linked with abnormal heart rhythms.

He said he was concerned that the promotion of alcohol as having a beneficial effect on the heart and arteries could tempt recovering alcoholics to start drinking again for medicinal purposes.

Third World Spurns Rhodesian Pact

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Third World members of the Security Council spurned Western gestures for a compromise Tuesday and pressed for a vote on a resolution declaring Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith's settlement with moderate black leaders "illegal and unacceptable."

The resolution also would condemn "all attempts and maneuvers" aimed at retaining power by Smith's white regime.

The 15-nation council scheduled a vote to come after hearing American Ambassador Andrew Young deliver the first comprehensive U.S. statement on the Salisbury accord.

British and American spokesmen said they were waiting for final instructions from their capitals whether to veto the resolution or abstain. The other three Western members of the council — Canada, France and West Germany — were expected to abstain.

The internal settlement, reached between the Smith regime and three Rhodesia-based black nationalists, provides for black majority rule in Rhodesia by the end of this year. It has been denounced by militant leaders of the Patriotic Front, which has been fighting to overthrow the Smith regime and did not participate in the Salisbury negotiations.

The United States and Britain have called the agreement "a significant step" toward majority rule, but both have emphasized that a settlement is unlikely to endure without the participation of the Patriotic Front.

Young has been more emphatic in insisting that any Rhodesian settlement involve the guerrilla group -a central point in the British-American plan for Rhodesia's political future that Young and British Foreign Secretary David Owen have been pushing since last September.

In Washington, a State Department sources said the United States was making last minute efforts to sidetrack or water down the resolution.

"We can't swallow it as it's written now, but we don't want to veto." he said. "If we can't get a resolution we can support, we would hope to abstain."

He said Young was being given instructions to vote as he sees fit depending on what kind of resolution finally comes to a vote.

But Ambassador Radha Krishna Ramphul of Mauritius, a sponsor of the resolution, said that there was no room for further negotiations. "The resolution already has been watered down and diluted, and that's it."

The document was put forward Monday by Bolivia, Gabon, India, Kuwait, Maritius, Nigeria and Venezuela. It is backed by three Communist members on the council — China, the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia. If there is no veto, nine votes will carry a resolution through the council.

Diplomatic sources have said Britain would be forced to veto the resolution because the internal settlement has generated firm support both from British Conservatives and Labor.

Young, on the other hand, has cautioned that a U.S. veto might set back American efforts "to get on the right side" in Africa.

Hijacker's Actions Explained

DENVER (UPI) — The father of an unemployed Vietnam War veteran accused of commandeering a jetliner over the San Francisco Bay area and forcing it to fly to Denver, said Tuesday his son's action "was just some pathetic cry for help."

The father, Rex Thomas, told authorities that his son, Clayton, 27, had a history of nervous disorders.

The younger Thomas surrendered to FBI agents at Stapleton International Airport Monday night after three crewmen on the United Air Lines 727 jumped to safety from the cockpit.

He was charged with air piracy and held on a $250,000 bond.

One of the crewmen, Jack Bard, 40, remained hospitalized with a fractured heel. Pilot Al Grout, 54, who suffered a leg bone fracture in the escape, and Second Officer L.A. Warfield, 34, flew home to Seattle Tuesday.

The hijacker commandeered the plane, on a flight to Seattle, over the Bay area and ordered it to land at Oakland, where the 68 passengers and four flight attendents were allowed to leave, the FBI said.

The plane was then flown to Denver for refueling.

Agents said Thomas, who had been living with his father in Lafayette, Calif., had served in the Army during the Vietnam war. They said they did not have information about his discharge.

Thomas' father said at his home the suspect was being treated for a nervous disorder at the Veteran's Administration Hospital in Martinez, Calif.

The suspect suffered a nervous breakdown several years ago while in the Army, his father said, and was taking a strong tranquilizer. The dosage was reduced recently and Thomas became despondent.

"This whole thing was just some pathetic cry for help," the father said. "He's not a mean kid. He's never been violent in his life."

Thomas, during an appearance before U.S. Magistrate Royce Sickler Monday night, told the judge he was a "psychiatric case." The judge urged the suspect not to say anything further without a lawyer present.

The FAA said the hijacker told the plane's crew he had incurable throat cancer, but Thomas' father said that was not true.

The FAA also said the hijacker claimed to have a bomb in a red-and-white vinyl flight bag. FBI agents said they found only newspapers, a book and a lollipop in the bag.

Thomas, while the plane was on the ground in Denver, asked for enough fuel to fly to Cuba, the FBI said. Agents were negotiating when the crewmen escaped.

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

Housing Credit Booklet Issued

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The Equal Credit Opportunity Act ... Credit Rights in Housing," is the newest consumer booklet issued by the Federal Reserve System.

The pamphlet discusses the law against discrimination in credit for housing and also details requirements for lenders to inform the public where they make their mortgage and home improvement loans.

Copies of the pamphlet can be obtained, without charge, by writing to any of the Federal Reserve Banks.

Requests should be addressed to the banks' Publications Services or Publications Department. The banks are located in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Richmond, Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Dallas and San Francisco.

Other consumer-oriented publications from the same source include "The Equal Credit Opportunity Act and Age," "The Equal Credit Opportunity Act and Incidental Creditors," "The Equal Credit Opportunity Act and Women," "Fair Credit Billing," "If You Borrow to Buy Stock," and "What Truth in Lending Means to You."

Gift Item Limit Increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — You can be more generous in giving gifts to your friends and relatives in communist countries now.

The Office of Export Administration has changed its rules and will now allow the sending of gifts worth up to $200 per week. The old limit was $100. The amount is the domestic retail value of the items sent.

Charles C. Swanson, director of the administration's operations division, said the change was made because inflation has increased the price of most items.

Swanson said gifts valued at more than $200 should be refused by postal officials or shippers. However, if the gift consists of more than one item, these could be sent separately, a week apart, as long as the value in one week did not exceed $200.

There is no limit on gifts to residents of most non-communist nations.

Vet Care Appointments Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration is urging veterans to make appointments as far in advance as possible for outpatient care at VA hospitals.

Officials say they have found outpatient care can provide the necessary treatment for many individuals, but this has resulted in an increase of more than a half million such visits to hospitals in the past year.

So, to avoid delays in receiving care, officials said, veterans should contact the hospital as far in advance as possible to make an appointment.

Weatherizing Loans Offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural homeowners may be able to obtain some assistance in weatherizing their homes under an Agriculture Department program.

Loans of up to $1,500 ($3,000 in Alaska) can be made to eligible residents from local utilities. The interest rate is 8 percent and the maximum term is five years.

Not all eligible utilities are participating, however.

The ceiling for eligibility is $15,600 in adjusted annual income ($23,400 in Alaska). You can check your eligibility with local offices of the Farmer's Home Administration, listed in telephone books under U.S. Government, Agriculture Department.

Book Details Labor History

WASHINGTON (AP) — How did workers cope with inflation during the Revolutionary War?

What were the violent years of labor organizing in America like?

What will worklife be like in the year 2001?

These and other aspects of working in America are discussed in "200 Years of American Worklife," a 192-page book being made available by the government.

The price is $5.50 and the book can be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402. Order stock number 029-000-00293-2.

New Car Sales Down Over Year Ago

DETROIT (AP) — Domestic new car sales plunged 13.6 percent in early March as the Big Four automakers were unable to match year-ago record sales levels.

Auto executives, however, were quick to predict a sales upturn with the approach of the traditional spring selling season.

Industry analysts had anticipated the steep decline, noting year-ago figures were inflated by sales incentive contests at three of the carmakers. In early March, 1977, the daily sales rate, the industry standard for determining percentage increases and declines, was 28,547, erasing an 11-year record.

The same figure for this year was 24,677, according to sales reports released by the companies Tuesday. None of the manufacturers was conducting dealer incentive contests.

"This thing went to hell in the snow," said one analyst, referring to the January and February sales slump caused by severe winter weather. "But it's started working its way back."

General Motors Corp., reeling during the entire 1978 model year from buyer rejection of smaller but more expensive intermediate-size autos, said March 1-10 sales of 127,248 were off 16.5 percent from 152,335 a year ago.

GM officials were looking to spring to thaw out the company's chilly sales. "We continue to be optimistic about sales of both passenger cars and commercial vehicles by our dealers and we believe the spring of 1978 will be a very good one," said Robert D. Burger, GM vice president of marketing.

At No. 2 Ford Motor Co., deliveries in the nine sales day totaled 61,697, down 8.7 percent from last year.

"Questions about the health of the industry can't be answered simply by comparing current results with those of last year, when sales were running at exceptionally high rates," said Gordon B. Mackenzie, Ford vice president of sales. "An equally important question is: Are sales improving as we move toward the spring months? The answer is yes."

Mackenzie noted the industry annual selling rate had grown from 9.7 million from Jan. 11 through Feb. 10, increased to 10.5 million through the final 20 days of February, and predicted further improvements in March.

"The auto market is definitely recovering from the winter doldrums," he concluded.

Chrysler Corp. slipped 7 percent, from 31,076 a year ago to 28,893 for the most recent period. Chrysler credited strong sales of its new compact Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon models for keeping the No. 3 carmaker's sales figures near those of a year ago.

American Motors Corp., meanwhile, continued to have problems selling cars. The 4,255 deliveries made by the smallest of the four major U.S. manufacturers were off 28.5 percent from last year's 5,948.

For the calendar year, U.S. car sales are off 8.5 percent. Ford is off 2 percent for 1978; GM is down 9.6 percent; Chrysler is off 13.6 percent; and AMC is down 27.8 percent.

Plainview C-C Slates Forums

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW—Two political forums, featuring candidates for Hale County commissioner and the 19th Congressional District have been slated by the Plainview Chamber of Commerce governmental affairs committee.

Bill Rice, chamber president, said Tuesday the five candidates vying for two places on the Hale County Commissioners Court will appear at a forum at 7:30 p.m. April 11 at Llano Estacado Museum.

The hopefuls include Lloyd Goldston, incumbent, and Homer Roberson, to represent commissioner precinct 2 and incumbent Tom Wheeler, Joe Don Hancock and James Belk to represent precinct 4. All are subject to the May 6 Democratic primary.

Candidates for the 19th Congressional seat currently held by George Mahon will appear in a forum at 7:30 p.m. May 2 also in the Llano Estacado Museum.

They include Kent Hance and Morris Sheats, Democratic candidates, and Jim Reese, Joe Hickox and George Bush, Republican candidates.

Mahon has announced he will retire from office after the current term.

Rice said each candidate will be given the opportunity to make a short statement at the beginning of the forum before fielding questions from the audience.

The forums are open to the public.

DANGEROUS SMOKE—Thick smoke billows from the National Colloid Company plant at Steubenville, Ohio, Tuesday, releasing hazardous fumes. Steubenville Mayor William Crabbe, who said he feared the fumes would spread, ordered all downtown streets evacuated after 38 persons were hospitalized. Authorities said they inhaled chlorine gas fumes following the explosion and fire. (AP Laserphoto)

Guerrilla 'Mop-Up' Opened By Israel

heavy fighting raged in pockets along the border from the Arqoub region in the foothills of Mount Hermon to the leftist-held town of Yarine, four miles from the coast.

The PLO communique said, "Our forces are inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy in lives and armor."

Sounds of fighting drove Israeli border villagers into bomb shelters for the night. Armed civil guardsmen at Shelomi and Baram patrolled the dark streets. Troops battled a few miles away across the border fence.

"Get off the streets! Get into your bomb shelters!" police shouted through loudspeakers mounted on patrol cars.

Sources in Beirut said Israeli tanks and troops supported by warplanes attacked Palestinian guerrilla positions, and Israeli gunboats massed off the southern coast.

Naval Forces

Witnesses reported sizable Israeli naval forces along a 30-mile stretch of the southern coast.

A spokesman for the Sidon governor's office said Israeli gunboats drew a cordon along the coast from the Palestinian-controlled village of Aarafand to the Israeli frontier.

A spokesman for the PLO high command said the guerrilla-held towns of Bint Jubayl, Maroun el Ras, Yaroun, Taibe, Khiam and Rashaya Foukhar were hit by air strikes.

He said a three-pronged tank assault was under way in southernmost Lebanon and the Arqoub region, once the main theater of cross-border guerrilla strikes against Jewish settlements.

Size Not Stated

The Israeli announcement of the border crossing said nothing of the size of the operation.

Associated Press photographer Max Nash reported from the border that a long column of armored personnel carriers moved up earlier in the evening and a military policeman told motorists: "No one goes by until the column passes."

As far south as Tel Aviv, about 75 miles from the border, jets and helicopters roared overhead. Throughout Monday and Tuesday, Israeli soldiers and equipment moved northward.

David Hitchcock, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv, indicated the Americans were not taken by surprise: "I won't say we had advance knowledge of this, but we have been consulting constantly with the Israelis."

Broadcast Reopens

Israeli radio, which had shut down for the night, reopened for broadcasting an hour later to carry live reports from northern Israel. "We hope later to carry reports from the fighting itself," an announcer said.

"Our children are all in the shelters," one Israeli civil guardsman told a radio reporter. "Between the explosions we sing and talk. Sleeping is hard."

The border crossing Tuesday came three days after Palestinian terrorists attacked two buses on the Tel Aviv-Haifa road, killing 33 Israelis, and one day after Prime Minister Menachem Begin — responding to the attack — vowed to "cut off the arm of evil."

"Only Terrorists"

Israel's announcement said its forces did not intend to harm the population, the Lebanese army or Arab forces keeping the peace after the recent Lebanese civil war — "but only terrorists and their helpers."

It said, "The objective of the operation is not retaliation for the terrorist crime, for there can be no retaliation for the murder of innocent men, women and children, but to protect the State of Israel and its citizens from incursions of members of Fatah and the PLO who use Lebanese territory to attack citizens of Israel."

Israel customarily does not announce details of cross-border operations until they are completed, and news of military activities is subject to heavy censorship.

CBS News described the operation as the largest since the 1973 Middle East war.

Arafat claimed earlier Tuesday in Beirut that three brigades of Israeli tanks, paratroopers and mechanized units were deployed for a large-scale assault on guerrilla strongholds in the south of Lebanon.

Diplomatic sources in Washington said Israeli intelligence had received reports prior to the operation that the PLO was planning further terrorist strikes within Israel. Sources in Tel Aviv said Tuesday that interrogation of the two terrorists who survived the Saturday raid indicated seven more Palestinians were on Cyprus planning another attack.

The cross-border operation came on the same day as a condemnation of the terrorist raid by President Anwar Sadat of Egypt — whose peace talks with the Israelis have been opposed by the PLO. He called on all factions in the Middle East to break "the vicious circle of action and reaction because it will lead to nothing."

Saudi Arabia said Tuesday it "condemns terrorism in all its forces. Those who have committed it on innocent people inevitably draw counter terrorism on other innocent people."

Sources in Washington said that the U.S. government had learned earlier of "big troop movements, weapons movements" toward the frontier. "It sounds like much more than a small raid," one high-level source said.

In New York, the PLO permanent U.N. observer Zehdi Terzi said the Israeli incursion "might escalate into a full-scale war." He said the United States must share the responsibility for such an eventuality because it supplies Israel with "weapons, money and moral support."

truth when he said he witnessed Ware kill Atkinson.

Adams, 19, said he, Ware, and two girls, 15 and 16, met Atkinson at an Avenue C club and left it in the man's 1969 Ford.

"Robert was driving fast," and ran up and almost off of an embankment, Adams said.

The near-accident so frightened one girl that she jumped from the auto, he indicated.

He said Atkinson stopped and let Ware drive, and that after picking the girl up, the group headed for another nightspot.

They had been drinking and smoking marijuana, he said.

It was when they left the second club that an altercation erupted between Ware and Atkinson, Adams testified.

"Robert swung at Brodie...Brodie swung back and hit Robert in the eye," he said.

He said they left in Atkinson's car, Adams driving under Ware's direction. He said Ware and Atkinson, occupied the back seat, while he and the two girls were in the front.

Ware began pistol-whipping Atkinson, beating him with the handle of a gun, Adams testified.

He said Ware told him to drive to the Weber Drive spot and that there:

"He shot him one time when the car was moving...then shot him again when it stopped...I think he shot him three or four times."

Ware pulled Atkinson from the auto and he "starts stomping," Adams said.

Could you see where he was "stomping" him, Asst. Dist. Atty. Phil Gamble asked. On the side of the head, Adams replied.

Ware attempted to open the car trunk, wanting a tire tool with which to "stick him in the throat," the witness said.

Instead, however, he said Ware got in the car and "he told me to run over him, but I was scared to do it."

Runs Over Youth

Ware took the wheel, and "he ran over him," Adams testified.

Adams said he himself pulled Atkinson's body into some weeds at the side of the road, and that he thought the man was still alive then.

Later, Ware threw the pearl-handled gun into water at Mackenzie Park, and deposited the auto in the alley, he said.

Then, Adams said he, Ware and the girls went to his own home where they all stayed the night.

Initial stories of the night's events which were told police — that Atkinson dropped the group off after they left the second club — were concocted by Ware, the witness testified.

He said he went along with the lie for a while because "I was scared of the law and Brodie Ware, too."

Adams' grim tale was backed by the two girls.

The 16-year-old testified she "heard the bumps up under the car" when Ware allegedly ran over Atkinson.

The 15-year-old added a detail about Atkinson's apparent strong will to live: "When Brodie was stomping him, he grabbed Brodie."

Court-appointed defense lawyer Mary Anne Wiley attacked the trio's testimony as given to avoid being prosecuted for the death themselves.

Waving written statements at each of them, she reminded Adams and the girls they had denied knowledge of Atkinson's death in early police interviews.

Why did they change their stories, she asked.

"I was tired...it had been on my mind," said Adams, who had been arrested Oct. 18, along with Ware, on a Lubbock burglary charge.

"They (police) said I can be in a lot of trouble...they said they could file (the murder case) on me," he testified.

He indicated police told him no murder charges would be filed against him if he would sign a statement telling about events surrounding Atkinson's death.

The 16-year-old girl told a similar line. "I was telling him (a policeman) a different story and he said they would book me for first degree murder," she said.

The other girl, however, indicated her decision to give a statement came because she thought police already knew the whole story. Officers told her Atkinson's body had been found, shot three times, the eighth-grader said.

"They already knew, and said for me to go on and give my statement." She said officers told her no charges would be filed against her, but that, basically, her statement came "because they already knew."

The trio all indicated Ware was a different man on the death night than the one they normally knew. "He didn't act like himself after that liquor," the 15-year-old said.

The trial is to continue at 9 a.m. today in the 137th District Court.

Bargainers Okay New Coal Pact

posal miners would still be required to pay a portion of their health care costs, but the sums would be far less than was called for under the contract miners rejected a week ago.

Sources also said the industry gave up its long fight for at least limited contract controls on wildcat strikes, but won some form of productivity incentives.

Terms Outlined

Sources said the contract includes these terms:

— Active miners would be required to pay up to $200 a year for family health care, compared with a maximum of $700 under the rejected contract. Pensioners would have to pay a maximum of $150 a year, compared with $450 under the rejected agreement. Hospitalization costs would be free. Health care was free under the expired contract, but benefits were not guaranteed.

— Health and pension benefits would be guaranteed, and medical benefits would be provided in many cases from company-run insurance plans rather than the present independent fund.

Wildcat Strikes

— Sources said that unlike the rejected proposal, the new contract does not contain so-called "labor stability" language giving companies the right to punish wildcat strike leaders. Industry officials believe they have some authority under an arbitrator's ruling to discipline the leaders of wildcat strikes, although the arbitrators have final word.

— Companies could put productivity incentives into place at mines where the local UMW membership voted in their favor. The rejected contract contained no incentives.

— A program that could have meant dismissal for miners guilty of repeated absenteesm would be dropped. The proposal, a union demand that was unpopular with the miners, was in the rejected contract.

Pension Boost

— Retirees who have been receiving a maximum pension of $250 a month would receive an immediate boost to $275. Under the rejected contract, the pension increase would have gone into effect gradually over three years.

— Widows would retain health benefits for five years.

— The industry agreed to liberalize pension eligibility rules contained in the rejected contract.

Even if the miners should accept the contract, it would not necessarily assure an end to the strike.

The UMW and the Association of Bituminous Contractors are negotiating a separate agreement to cover an estimated 14,000 construction miners.

One industry spokesman said the two sides still have "some basic gut issues" to resolve. "We have some tough bargaining ahead of us," said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified by name.

Talks between the UMW and the ABC have been in recess since the UMW rejected the main contract proposal over a week ago.

Chlorine Gas Fumes Hurt 78 In Ohio

men — were overcome in the first hour after the explosion, which occurred shortly before noon, and many just fell in their places.

"We lost 15 at a shot. It was just like somebody shot them," Hosfelt said.

Hosfelt said the victims complained of breathing difficulties and nausea.

He said authorities told him there was one major and several smaller explosions at the National Colloid Co. and the Famous Supply Co., a heating company.

National Colloid president Michael J. Barber said he was not at the water chemical company when the blasts occurred.

"Two girls working in the office said they heard a strong hissing noise and the wall came out," he said.

He said the company is distributor for "hard" chemicals such as chlorine.

"We did have a lot of swimming pool chemicals in the plant and also some gas cylinders of chlorine. How much went up in flames, how much in the explosion — if there was an explosion — I can't tell you," he said.

Allen Franks, a spokesman for the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency, said that at the time of the explosion there were 20 cylinders of pure chlorine gas at National Colloid, weighing 150 pounds each, along with 30,000 pounds of HTH, which is a 70 percent chlorine mixture put in swi-ming pools, and unknown amounts of sulfuric acid, hydrochloric acid and soda ash.

'Bathtub Beer' Bill Advances

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved legislation Tuesday to legalize home-brewed beer and to ease restrictions on making wine at home.

The measure, called a "a bathtub beer bill" by Rep. John H. Rousselot, R-Calif., was passed on a voice vote without audible dissent and sent to the Senate.

Its sponsor, Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr., R-N.Y., said "many citizens with their tradition of American independence" want the option of making home brew "without having to rely on the beer barons and the persons who produce large quantities of wine."

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said the Treasury Department supports the legislation.

Ullman said the department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms interprets current law to mean it is illegal to brew beer at home for personal consumption.

Under the legislation, each household in which there are two or more persons would be allowed to brew up to 200 gallons of beer tax free each year.

CAMPAIGNING FOR RE-ELECTION — Gov. and Mrs. Dolph Briscoe greet Dr. Ray Santos shortly before a meeting with Lubbock Mexican-American leaders Tuesday night at the Hilton Inn. Carter Seeks Curbs On Price Increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration will aim its anti-inflation program this year at slowing price increases, leaving until 1979 a major push to put the brakes on wage gains, it was learned Tuesday.

It has concluded there is virtually no chance of getting any cooperation from labor in restraining wage demands unless there is progress on prices, an administration source said.

With many major wage negotiations scheduled for 1979, the success of the program will depend on what happens on the price side this year, one administration official conceded.

"The real test is what we get on the price side," he said. "If we don't get anything on the price side, we don't expect to get anything on the wage side either."

Behind Schedule

Implementation of the program, which was announced by President Carter in January, is behind schedule because of complications resulting from the long coal strike. But officials expect to begin meetings with leaders of major industries in about two weeks.

Among those high on the list for early consultations with administration officials are executives in the steel, auto, lumber and aluminum industries.

Although there may be exceptions, each industry will be asked to hold price increases this year to between 0.5 percent and 1 percent less than the average price increases of the previous two years.

Requests To Unions

The same requests will be made of major unions later on. Carter's goal is to reduce the overall rate of inflation by about 0.5 percent each year.

The so-called underlying rate of inflation in the economy has been stuck for some time at between 6 percent and 6.5 percent annually. Economists both in and out of government say there is virtually no chance of reducing this rate without some effort by the government, although there is disagreement on what that effort should be.

Carter's anti-inflation program relies almost entirely on winning cooperation from both labor and business for gradually decelerating wage and price demands.

Wages have been increasing annually at about 8 percent a year, which translates into price increases of about 6 percent a year, after allowing for an increase in productivity of about 2 percent.

Administration economists say wage increases must be slowed before much progress can be made in reducing the 6 percent price inflation.

There are few major labor negotiations this year, which is one reason the administration feels it can concentrate on prices. The coal contract and railroad negotiations do fall in 1978, but officials consider these old business, rather than new business subject to restraints of the anti-inflation effort.

However, administration officials now privately concede the outcome of the coal negotiations may complicate their efforts. For one thing, the contract will result in higher prices for coal, and thus for steel and electricity.

The coal miners' increase in wages may raise expectations in other industries.

Barry Bosworth, director of the administration's Council on Wage and Price Stability, has urged in a memorandum that the administration consider holding the 1978 pay increase for federal employees to 5 percent, instead of the previously planned 6 percent, to demonstrate that the government is doing its part to control inflation.

Bosworth also suggested that the president support a $6 billion rollback in Social Security taxes, but it was understood the administration already has rejected that idea.

Gunman Surrenders After Ledge Vigil

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A young accountant despondent over losing his job fired a shot at the manager of his high-rise apartment building Tuesday, then climbed onto a 32nd-story ledge and waved his gun before quietly surrendering, police said.

Police helicopters circled overhead, a highway below was closed off, and pedestrians stopped on downtown streets to watch.

Thomas Brooks Simmons, 25, was booked for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon after three officers who had crept to the roof of the Bunker Hill Towers talked him into surrendering.

Police said Simmons had left a suicide note in his 15th floor apartment, donned a black outfit and climbed onto the roof of the 32-story building. Someone from across the street saw him and called Towers manager Greg Catt.

Spurned Youth Hijacks Bus, Shot By Police

the road and jumped aboard the bus as it went by on its way to Walled Lake Central High School, about 30 miles from Detroit, police said.

"We don't know how he got on the bus," Watt said.

Police Follow

They said he pressed a 12-gauge shotgun to the head of the driver, Leona Spencer, 41, and ordered her to continue her route until the girl who rejected him was on board. When she got on, he demanded it be driven back to the garage near Walled Lake. Police cars followed.

It was unclear why the girl boarded the bus in the face of the threat.

Police and sheriff's deputies surrounded the bus in the garage and began negotiations with Todd threatening to "blow the heads off" of his six captives and saying he wanted to be driven to Florida, police said.

Patrolman Drives

White Lake patrolman Randy Lingenfelter persuaded Todd to let him take the bus driver's place in return for letting the hostages go, but Todd allowed only the driver and two boys off the bus. Three girls, including the reluctant girlfriend, remained on board with Todd and Lingenfelter at the driver's seat.

Todd was shot from outside the bus while his attention was momentarily diverted.

Watt said he would urge that Todd be prosecuted as an adult because juvenile authorities "didn't see fit to hold him" after the earlier incident, on Feb. 15.

Walled Lake is a suburb adjacent to White Lake Township about 10 miles west of Pontiac. The school has about 1,600 students.

Briscoe Wins Praise Of Mexican-Americans

the Bentsen-Dole bill under consideration by the Senate which would permit farmers a flexible scale of parity for planting less.

The governor said he had contacted every governor in the country and the president "asking for support of the bill."

Asked about charges by Republican gubernatorial hopeful Ray Hutchison that Briscoe had used state aircraft for personal and political uses, Briscoe responded it was "partisan, political rhetoric with no basis in fact."

That triggered Briscoe's comment that the people of Texas deserved a "higher standard of conduct from those seeking office."

He said some candidates in the gubernatorial primaries had made the mistake of trying to "build themselves up by tearing others down."

Briscoe also said that solving the water problems in West Texas is "a big priority with me and always has been."

The governor criticized the Texas Educators Political Action Committee for refusing to release tape recordings of interviews with gubernatorial candidates, which he said would reveal what promises were made in exchange for the group's support.

That group endorsed Hill for governor.

"One of my opponents admitted pledging $1.3 billion in state money to get the endorsement, " Briscoe said, even though the state comptroller had forecast only $750 million in additional funds would be available to spend in the next fiscal year.

That meant, Briscoe said, his opponent had pledged the state would have a new tax bill.

During his Lubbock visit Briscoe also attended a dinner for supporters and a reception attended by about 200 persons.

Malaria Again Becomes Pest

ATLANTA (AP) — Malaria has made a comeback in many countries where it had been under control in recent years, and as a result it has become more widespread in the United States, the Center for Disease Control said Tuesday.

The CDC said that from 1970 through 1975, the number of cases of malaria in U.S. civilians reported through its surveillance system increased from 151 to 430 a year.

Malaria is transmitted by the bite of an infected Anopheles mosquito.

"Even when travelers are properly informed and do receive prophylactic medication, they often stop taking their drugs as soon as they return home," the CDC said.

Although many countries are listed as especially dangerous to the traveler from the United States, the CDC gives these areas where malaria is known to exist: Mexico, Haiti, Central America, South America, Africa, the Middle East, the Indian subcontinent, Southeast Asia, Korea, Indonesia and Oceania.

State Closes Evidence In Hawkins Murder Case

It will be up to a jury here today to determine if Samuel Christopher Hawkins III is guilty of capital murder in connection with the bloody stabbing death of a six-months-pregnant Borger housewife.

Evidence in case was closed Tuesday after one rebuttal witness — a psychiatrist — testfied for the state.

Earlier Tuesday, it was revealed in testimony that Hutchinson County Sheriff Lon Blackmon had conducted night interrogations of Hawkins at the Lubbock County Jail since the trial started.

The sessions were conducted without the knowledge of the defendant's attorneys.

Final arguments by attorneys were to begin shortly after 9 a.m. Presiding Dist. Judge Richard N. Countiss has allotted 90 minutes of argument to each side, and the eight-man, four-woman jury panel will begin its deliberations when the arguments are completed.

The 34-year-old Hawkins, a former meat packing company employee and reportedly the son of a Georgia minister, is accused of murdering Abbe Rodgers Hamilton, 19, May 3, 1977.

The pretty brunette victim was found on the blood-soaked bed of her Panhandle home, bound hand and foot and stabbed numerous times in the neck.

A pathologist testified Mrs. Hamilton's jugular vein had been severed and indicated an attempt may have been made to decapitate her.

The state alleges the victim was murdered during an attempted aggravated rape and is seeking a death penalty conviction.

The trial — which began with jury selection Feb. 13 — was moved to the 99th District Court here on a change of venue from Hutchinson County. Testimony began one week ago today.

Responding to questions from Hutchinson County Asst. Dist. Atty. Linda Walden, the Amarillo psychiatrist testified that Hawkins in his opinion was sane on the date he is alleged to have committed the offense.

"He definitely would have known right from wrong on May 3," Pennal testified.

Pennal said his opinion was that Hawkins also had the capability of conforming his conduct to the law.

"The final diagnosis is that he is a suspicious person with anti-social traits in his personality who has never been psychotic, period," the psychiatrist stated.

The defense had earlier called two psychologists, neither of whom would state that Hawkins was insane at the time of the alleged offense.

One of the witnesses did say he believed the defendant had suffered from occasional insanity in the past. The other said he had seen no evidence of Hawkins' ever having been psychotic.

Pennal said Hawkins' history suggests he had a "traumatic, difficult" early life. He said the defendant became interested in religion and did some preaching in his youth. He said Hawkins was apparently the first in his family of "12 or so" to receive a high school diploma.

The psychiatrist indicated Hawkins had been treated poorly and "developed a rather intense hatred for white people."

Pennal indicated the idea may have been conveyed to Hawkins that "the best way to get back at white people, at the men, was through their wives, or women."

Sheriff Blackmon confirmed earlier Tuesday that he had visited Hawkins inside the county jail since the trial began and asked the defendant to give him answers to typed questions on a five-page document.

Blackmon said Hawkins had answered all of the questions orally, and the state made an unsuccessful effort to put those purported answers into evidence.

Defense attorneys Russell Busby and Gene Storrs objected that a second document bearing the alleged answers — a document unsigned by the defendant and with the purported oral answers reduced to writing by the sheriff — failed to meet requirements of Texas' oral confession statute.

Countiss sustained the objection.

Blackmon, who had testified for the state on several occasions during the trial, was called by the defense in an apparent effort to convince jurors that, although a confession by Hawkins has already been placed into evidence, investigators feel they still need additional information.

Storrs first hinted at recent questioning of the defendant while another defense witness, Amarillo Police Det. Bill Eaton, was on the stand.

"Would you ever walk into a defendant's cell at night in the middle of his trial and talk to him for several hours without the knowledge of his attorneys?" Storrs asked.

"No, I have never done it," Eaton replied.

The state asked Eaton if he would have done so if he had been asked to visit by a defendant, and Eaton said yes.

"Without the knowledge of his attorneys?" Storrs then asked. "No," the detective answered.

The defense then called Blackmon. Busby asked the sheriff if he had spoken with Hawkins in jail on Feb. 24, for four to six hours on Feb. 26, March 5-6 and again for about three hours Sunday.

Blackmon indicated he specifically remembered the Sunday session and said he had spoken with Hawkins on several occasions.

"Sheriff, during some of these visits did you have a typed-up statement or confession you showed Sam?" Busby queried.

"Yes, you might call it a statement," Blackmon said.

He produced the five-page document and told Busby he thought he had shown it to Hawkins twice.

The sheriff said in answer to Busby's question that it had never been shown to defense attorneys. He also said Hutchinson County Dist. Atty. Stephen Cross had not seen it.

On cross-examination, Blackmon told Cross he had visited with Hawkins only on occasions when Hawkins specifically asked him to, adding that once he did not go see the defendant even though Hawkins had asked him to.

Blackmon said he had received answers to all the questions he had typed, and Cross then made the unsuccessful effort to introduce the purported answers as evidence.

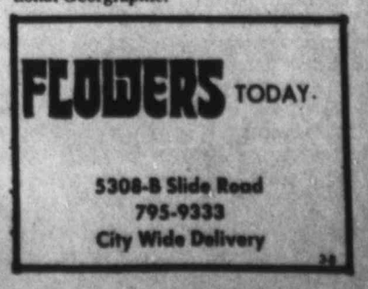

Countiss rejected a defense motion for a mistrial because of the events.

Revision Of Social Security Tax Law Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Tuesday he thinks Congress is determined to revise the Social Security payroll tax increases it enacted last year, and he urged the Carter administration to propose its own changes.

House Republican Leader John Rhodes said Democratic Congress members are in a panic to revoke the increases. He said there is tremendous public opposition to the increases, which were made to ensure the solvency of the Social Security system.

O'Neill said the House seems certain to develop its own proposal if the administration fails to act. He said he told Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal Monday, "if they don't come up with some kind of package, I don't think I could hold the House from going forward."

Proposals to undo the payroll tax increases enacted last year are gaining widespread support on Capitol Hill. The Carter administration has taken the position that no changes are needed this year.

The payroll tax rate in 1977 was 5.85 percent from a worker and a matching amount by the employer. The amount of each worker's annual earnings subject to the tax reached $16,500, with maximum payment $965.

Beginning last January, under a previously enacted law, the tax rate rose to 6.05 percent and the maximum wage subject to tax increased to $17,700. The maximum tax payment rose to $1,070.

Tax increases enacted last year begin taking effect next January. By 1987, the tax rate becomes 7.15 percent and the amount subject to tax will be $42,600, with a maximum tax payment of $3,045.

The House Democratic Caucus will consider proposals Wednesday.

O'Neill said that as recently as two weeks ago he saw no need for any changes. But, he said, the growing opposition to the increases appears to signal that some action is inevitable.

O'Neill said it is too early to tell what type of proposal the House might enact. "I don't know," he said. "It's in the embryo stage."

Rep. James A. Burke, D-Mass., said Tuesday he has 150 cosponsors for a bill that would provide that one-third of the financing for Social Security come from income taxes.

Rep. William Moorhead, D-Pa,, chairman of the House economic stabilization subcommittee, submitted legislation for income tax financing for the disability and Medicare portions of Social Security. He also proposed that any tax cut this year be in payroll taxes rather than income taxes.

O'Neill said there also is talk of postponing scheduled increases, and of putting revenues from a proposed crude oil tax into the Social Security system.

House Republican leaders said the payroll tax increases should be revoked and Congress should adopt GOP proposals to finance the retirement system.

Rhodes and Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr., senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, proposed that up to half of the money in the Social Security health insurance trust fund be diverted to the retirement fund, once the increases enacted last year are eliminated.

They said the health insurance trust fund money could be made up by the Treasury through income taxes. In addition, they said the 2.7 million federal employees, who are now covered by their own retirment plan, should begin paying into the Social Security system.

HEW Medicare Listing Found Riddled With Errors, Costly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional investigators said Tuesday HEW's listing of $100,000-a-year Medicare doctors was "poorly managed," riddled with errors, prematurely released and costly.

It cost nearly $14,000 to prepare the report last year and $122,000 to correct it, said a General Accounting Office report.

A Michigan doctor listed as receiving $115,000 actually got $15,000 and said, "My wife must think I have an apartment on the side and a mistress as well."

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano apologized to the American Medical Association for "any embarrassment that may have been caused to any of your members" by errors in the March 14, 1977, list.

The GAO report, released by Rep. L.H. Fountain, D-N.C., said some 470 doctors complained about errors in the list, including 300 who said an individual physician's name was used mistakenly to identify a group practice.

Other doctors complained physicians in group practices were listed as solo practitioners or reported dollar amounts were inaccurate.

There were 25 complaints the list included names were used of doctors who had died, retired or were no longer associated with the group practice indicated, the GAO said.

An AMA spokesman said the list of doctors treating elderly Medicare patients included a 76-year-old Elmhurst, Ill., child doctor who had lived the last 12 years in Arizona and practiced no medicine at all in 1975, the year on which the list was based.

"Our review has shown that errors were caused primarily by the inaccurate and incomplete data ... used in preparing the list," said the GAO, a congressional auditing agency.

The GAO said Medicare officials complained they were not given adequate time by the HEW secretary's office to prepare an accurate list and were aware that what they were issuing was based on inaccuracies and incomplete information.

Trustees Defend Plan's Presentation

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock Independent School District Tuesday issued a statement clarifying federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward's remark that he was given the district's integration proposals Feb. 16, long before school officials sought community input or formally announced a plan.

The district insists that Woodward and the U.S. Justice Department, at a private conference in Amarillo last month, were provided only a "preliminary draft of information relative to a possible desegregation plan."

Since the school board had not adopted the "concepts presented," and thus was not bound by them, school officials said the Amarillo meeting did not violate the board's promise to "consider the suggestions and concerns of the people before any plan is finalized."

But some citizens take issue with that explanation.

"Judge Woodward's remark indicates the board had had a plan for some time, though they denied its existence. We the public have been used," said Jaye Pearson, who as co-president of the Roscoe Wilson Elementary Parent-Teacher Association helped organize PTA input in late February and early March.

"Our energies had no impact at all. The plan had been submitted before the public had adequate time to make input. Our elected officials set the stage for some play-acting, all the while directing behind the scenes. This is not democracy. It is a travesty of the worst sort," Mrs. Pearson said.

But Supt. Ed Irons, school board president Charles Waters and board vice president Bob McKelvy retort they did not circumvent the process of community input.

When the district's representatives met with Woodward Feb. 16, "we hadn't approved any plan. That was yet to be decided upon. But we wanted to know from the judge if we were in the right direction or off track with the ideas under consideration," Waters said.

"While it's important that the public have input, we wanted Judge Woodward to have input, too. The ideas we presented to the judge were not written in stone. They could have been changed — in fact, they were changed — as we ascertained the public's sentiment," Waters said.

"I'd like this whole controversy to be put to rest. I think we're clean. I know good and well we're clean."

The controversy was triggered Monday when Woodward, in opening a court hearing on the district's integration plan, said he had been "furnished a copy of the proposed plan" on Feb. 16.

The problem with that statement is that the school board had not adopted a proposed plan until March 6, with amendments added only last Friday. And through the development period for the plan, school officials had been encouraging suggestions from the public.

Part of the conflict may depend on Woodward's use of the word "plan." School attorney Charles Cobb said that the information presented Feb. 16 represented "only the rudiments of the direction we were proposing to go. It wasn't a plan at all."

Added McKelvy, who attended the Amarillo meeting: "We didn't have a plan as such when we went up there. It was nothing like a final plan — only ideas and concepts.

"Some of the concepts we discussed have become parts of the plan. But it (the information presented Feb. 16) was nowhere near a final plan."

He said the meeting was held primarily for "clarification."

One thing that was discussed in Amarillo, McKelvy said, was "trying to get something done (on the plan) as early as possible." That is why Woodward set Monday to hear the board's final proposal, instead of waiting until after the original April 1 development date.

Waters was unable to attend the Amarillo Feb. 16 session for business reasons. Thus, he said, when Monday's session was set, Waters viewed it as a surprise.

In its statement Tuesday the school system said:

"On Feb. 16, the attorneys for the Lubbock Independent School District and school administration presented to Judge Woodward and the Justice Department a preliminary draft of information relative to a possible desegregation plan. The concepts presented had been discussed by the board but not acted upon.

"This information pertained to the use of specific grades and possible closing of certain schools at the elementary level, the possible relocation of the proposed junior high school and the concept of a magnet school at the senior high school level.

"This information was given to Judge Woodward and the Justice Department pursuant to the court's request to be kept informed. The purpose was to determine whether or not these concepts were consistent with the court's thinking.

"The conference was held with the court, attorneys for both parties and representatives of the school board for the purpose of sharing and considering concepts and tools that might be used in implementing the court order. No action of the court was requested or received."

It was on Feb. 13, only three days before the Amarillo meeting, that the board issued a statement encouraging public input to be considered "before any plan is finalized."

Woodward has ordered the district to desegregate nine schools. The district's plan is still being studied by the judge.

Larry Flynt Placed On Respirator

ATLANTA (AP) — Larry Flynt, the Hustler magazine owner who was gunned down during his obscenity trial, fell back into critical condition and was placed on a respirator Tuesday, his doctors reported.

A statement from Emory University Hospital said Flynt's intestinal bleeding had been controlled, but his breathing had become a problem and he is depending on "mechanical ventilation for pulmonary support."

Asked to explain, a spokesman said he was placed on a respirator.

Doctors reported Monday that Flynt had contracted pneumonia in addition to his other problems.

Flynt, 35, and an attorney, Gene Reeves Jr., 47, were shot March 6 near the Lawrenceville, Ga., courthouse where Flynt was on trial on a charge of distributing obscene material.

Flynt was transferred to Emory last Wednesday and a bullet and bone fragments near his spine were removed Thursday. Doctors said Flynt has a less than 50 percent chance of walking again.

The medical advisory released Tuesday afternoon said Flynt's "vital signs remain stable and his condition is now critical."

Reeves remained in guarded condition at a Lawrenceville hospital.

Police in Lawrenceville received reports on ballistics tests from the state crime lab in Atlanta Tuesday. They had said they hoped to find a lead to the assailant or assailants from the results. However, investigators declined to discuss the findings with the news media.

Dollar Value Drops In Foreign Trade Centers, Gains In U.S.

By The Associated Press

The dollar declined Tuesday in foreign-exchange trading in Europe and Japan as disappointment grew over what dealers called inadequate efforts to help the U.S. currency. But the dollar gained in New York on news that tentative agreement had been reached in the coal strike.

Gold prices, meanwhile, continued to rise Tuesday, heading once more towards the $190 an ounce mark they reached last week.

In London, an ounce of gold closed at $188.50, up from Monday's $187. In Zurich, gold was $188.125 an ounce, up $1.50 from Monday.

Overseas, the dollar fell in value against all major West European currencies and the Japanese yen, leading one London dealer to say the dollar's year-long decline was "not over by a long shot."

But later in New York, the dollar rose on news that the United Mine Workers union and the coal industry had agreed for a third time on a tentative contract to end the long strike.

Proposed contracts were rejected twice before, but one New York money dealer said that even though the new proposal hasn't yet been accepted, the money markets probably would react as though it was.

The U.S. and West German governments Monday announced a $2.7 billion plan to bolster the American currency. But one observer said Tuesday of the package: "A band aid was applied to a gaping wound."

In Tokyo, despite Bank of Japan support estimated at $120-$130 million, the dollar fell almost three yen to 233.025 yen Tuesday.

A Japanese expert predicted that the American currency would continue its slump until U.S. trade deficits improve.

The dollar's year-long slide is a reflection of the United States' economic problems — inflation, high unemployment and a trade deficit of $26.7 billion last year.

As the dollar drops in value in comparison with other currencies, American travelers abroad are able to buy less with their U.S. money. And the cost of foreign goods in the United States is greater, making them less competitive with American products.

Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda said Tuesday that when he meets with President Carter in Washington May 3, he would strongly urge the United States to take measures to defend the dollar.

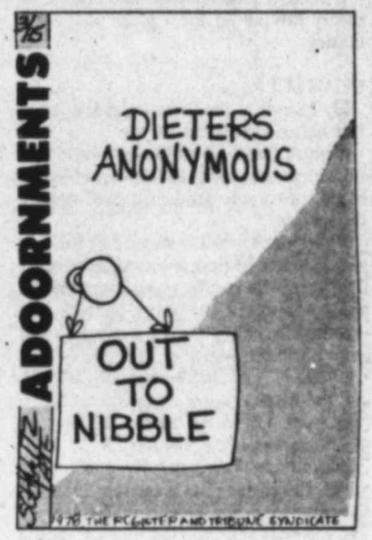

Meanwhile, the newspaper Asahi said the Bank of Japan was expected to take new measures to protect the dollar. Asahi said the measures would include tighter curbs on the massive inflow of short-term capital from abroad and a total ban on purchases of public bonds by non-residents.

In Frankfurt, where the dollar recorded a late rate of 2.0513 German marks, the Bundesbank bought $27.3 million to support the dollar. Monday's rate had been 2.0540 marks.

In London, the British pound was valued at $1.9140 Tuesday, up from Monday's $1.9080. Other late dollar rates in Europe Tuesday: Paris — 4.73375 French francs, down from 4.7425; Zurich — 1.9485 Swiss francs, down from 1.96; Amsterdam — 2.1865 Dutch guilders, down from 2.1945; Milan — 859.45 Italian lire, down from 864.

In New York, the dollar was worth 2.0580 marks, up from 2.0495 Monday; 4.7664 French francs, up from 4.7600; 1.9519 Swiss francs, up from 1.9430; and 233.04 yen, down from 233.69. The pound was worth $1.9030, against $1.9095 Monday.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you please stress the great importance of taking medicine as prescribed? I know people with high blood pressure and heart conditions who forget or just don't bother to take their medicine because they get too busy. My mother-in-law is one. It seems I worry more about her taking her pills than she does. Maybe these people like the attention they get when they are rushed into the emergency room in the middle of the night. One day they won't make it out of the emergency room. -- Mrs. A.D.

Some patients do find themselves back in the hospital or in the emergency room because of failure to follow instructions about medicine.

How does one keep up with six or eight different medicines being taken at different times of the day? Perhaps a lesson from the professionals will help. In hospitals, a chart is used that includes the name of the medicine and the time to be taken. As the medicine is given, the fact is checked off and recorded.

If this is too complicated to squeeze into a busy working day, then a simpler method is available. All of one day's pills can be placed in a bottle. At the end of the day, the bottle should be empty. If not, some medicine is being missed. Trial and error should bring the taker into synchronization with the pill schedule. At the very least the patient will know which medicine he didn't take, and how much.

Needless to say, the patient should not stop taking any medicine without instructions from the doctor. Antibiotics are probably the most improperly used of all medicines. When the doctor prescribes a course of therapy with antibiotics, it is for an acute condition, such as a severe infection. He intends the full supply to be used. If not, he will say so. It is a common (and costly) mistake for a patient to quit taking an antibiotic when he begins to feel well or when a fever subsides. Many find themselves going back to the doctor with the same symptoms. A costly second course of antibiotics is often necessary, because the first was halted too soon. A study among pediatric patients revealed that as many as 40 per cent of youngsters started on antibiotic treatment were brought back in with recurrences of infection because the parents had interrupted the medicine-taking too soon.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 16-year-old girl with a problem I've had for some time now. The nipples of my breasts go in instead of pointing outward. Please don't tell me to see my doctor, because he is a friend of the family and I would be too embarrassed. I haven't mentioned this to my mother. Is this normal or is there something wrong with me? --Miss A.H.

Sorry to have to begin by telling you what you don't want to hear. I want you to see your doctor.

Nipple inversion or depression doesn't have to mean disease. In fact, in a young girl like yourself it probably does not. The nipples sometimes are hidden underneath in little grooves and can be pulled out. There are simple tests that show the cause of inversion. Probably the chief result of a visit to your doctor will be an easing of your fears about this. But it's important that you have the breasts seen anyway, by family friend or not.

This raises the question of whether or not you have had any routine physical examination in recent years. If you haven't, you're due for one anyway.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I heard that the birth-control pill is dangerous because it causes the overies to cease producing eggs and therefore causes a girl to be sterile. True? -J.L.

No. A woman is born with about a half million eggs in her ovaries. Of these, only about 400 are used in her ovulation lifetime (one a month). The birth-control pill prevents ovulation on a month-to-month basis. Ovulation resumes after the pills are stopped, although for some women there may be months before the cycles are regulated.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Reading the carpet ads in my local newspaper, I have come across three terms I don't understand. They are: plush, shag and saxony. What do they mean and how can I tell the difference?

I thought I understood and then I recently saw an ad for a plush shag.-Lula Ensley.

DEAR LULA:

A plush finish is a dense cut pile carpet in which the ends of the carpet yarns blend together to produce a solid look on the surface.

When looking at the surface of the carpet, individual fibers are more noticeable than yarns. The terms plush is sometimes used to describe any dense of thick pile carpet. The closer the carpet yarns, the more plush the carpet.

A shag is made with longer face yarns and the yarns are spaced farther apart in the carpet. The yarns can be cut, loop, or a combination of cut and loop.

Due to the lower density and longer yarns, the surface has a random tumbled appearance. When looking at the surface you see ends and the sides of yarns. Some stand and others are leaning or falling over.

A saxony finish is used to describe a dense cut pile that has been made from yarns with a tight, heat set twist.

When the surface of a saxony is observed, each individual yarn can be seen. The main difference between a plush and saxony finish is that in a plush the fibers are more noticeable when looking at the surface, and yarns are more noticeable on a saxony.

The appeareance difference between a shag and a saxony is the shag has longer yarns and they are spaced fatther apart.

By using shorter face yarns and placing them closer together, it may be difficult to determine if the carpet is a shag with a dense shorter pile, or a saxony with a higher but sparser pile. There is no exact point in which one stops and the other begins.

The term plush shag is not a technical term, but one made up to describe a shag carpet that has a denser pile.

Your carpet retailer will be glad to show you samples of each of these. -All my love -Heloise

Power Generator Available For Home

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Emergency generators are an old story for hospitals and industry that would otherwise be severely crippled or shut down by power failures.

Now a leading generator manufacturer is introducing a gasoline-powered standby generator for home use. The manufacturer says the 5,000watt system produces enough energy to run a home heating system, refrigerator and a limited number of lights and electrical appliances. Its refillable fuel tank holds enough gas for eight hours operation. The $2,000 price tag includes installation.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

My kids couldn't wait until they walked.

At eight months they were pulling themselves up to tables. At nine months they were teetering unsteadily from room to room. At 14 months, they were running away from home.

When I called them in to take their baths, they were playing in the house in the next block. When I wanted them to help me unload groceries from the car, they were digging in a cave and couldn't hear me. When I called them to dinner they were on a raft in the middle of a major river.

Through years of getting varicose veins of the neck from shouting for them, I discovered only one sure-fire way to get them at your elbow ... have a friend who dropped by to "talk."

I had a kid once safely tucked away for two weeks at camp. My friend Marge dropped in to tell me about Elaine's hysterectomy and before she got out the details, he parked himself between our coffee cups and said, "Dogs get fat after their operation. I hope poor Marge can hold the line."

"What's with Mary Worth?" asked my friend, amazed.

"Don't you have something to do?" I asked.

"Nope."

"Then go play."

"What'll I play with?"

"Try the $800 worth of deferred payments in your bedroom."

"The batteries are all burnt out. Why don't you want me to listen? I won't tell."

"It isn't a matter of telling. It's just that this is big people's talk."

"You want me to grow up, don't you?"

"Not in one day."

"If you don't want me to listen, why don't you go someplace and talk where you can be alone?"

"We're sitting in a parked car now. Look, if you were talking to your friends and I just barged in and sat down in the middle of your conversation what would happen?"

"You'd fall asleep."

Somehow, that elusive child who is never around when you want him has managed to eavesdrop on every conversation I've had.

"Why don't you come right out and send him packing?" asked Marge.

"He knows too much," I said slowly.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My marriage is falling apart. It's not another woman. It's another man. I'm sure these two don't have anything going except a close friendship, but whatever it is, it's too close for me.

Wilbur works the 2 p.m. to 10 p.m. shift. Four nights out of six he brings Orville home with him. We have only one bedroom. The living room couch is lumpy so Orville sleeps on the floor.

Wilbur hands me Orville's laundry and says, "Throw it in with mine." It's not any extra work so I've been doing it. (My sister says I'm crazy.) Then there's the cooking — and the grocery bill. It's out of sight. Besides dinner at 10:30 p.m. I have to fix the guy a lunch just like Wilbur's. Even luncheon meat costs like crazy these days.

This routine has been going on for a year. Before Orville came into the picture, Wilbur had another friend. It seems like he aways has to have someone else around. Is he afraid of me or what? I need your advice immediately. -- Marriage On the Rocks

Dear Rocks: I'm typing as fast as I can, although I don' know why you feel this is an emergency if it's been going on for a year. Obviously a third party's presence protects Wilbur from having to accept the responsibilities of a husband. You give me very little to go on, but I'm sure there's a lot more to it. A therapist can tell you if the situation is salvageable. I can't. It would mean professional help for you both. I urge you to go at once and talk openly and at length about this freaky situation.

Dear Ann: May a school bus driver say a word through your column to the parents of the kids we drive? Thank you:

Dear Parents: If I didn't love kids I wouldn't have taken this job, but a little help from you would mean a lot.

First: I don't mind cleaning up after children when they get sick and throw up. They can't help it. But I shouldn't have to pick wads of gum off the floor and scrape suckers from between the seats. The apple cores, orange peels, grapes and pieces of cake are other items I can do without.

Please be patient with me if I am late. Sometimes the roads are bad or the traffic is heavy, or it could be mechanical trouble.

I have no right to touch your kids if they misbehave — and they know it. So please instruct them to be courteous and obedient. If a child throws things, gets in a fight on the bus and distracts me, it could cause an accident. I would never forgive myself if something happened and my kids were hurt — even though it wasn't my fault. So please have a little talk with your bus passenger tonight at supper, folks, and make my life easier.

Thanks a lot. — Your Child's Bus Driver

Dear Driver: I'm sure every school bus driver in the world appreciates your message. I thank you in their behalf.

Dear Ann Landers: My brother died recently. I'm sorry now that we weren't closer. We lived in nearby cities but somehow our family and work commitments took priority over a letter or a phone call.

I'd like to share the letter I wrote to my children and his, in the hope that they won't make the same mistake we made:

"Dear Ones: During this time of mourning there comes a pause for reflection, appraisal and regret. I regret that my brother and I did not accept each other as we were. I regret that we didn't help each other more, that we didn't share our feelings and our troubles. I regret that we didn't make time for each other. These things I regret for myself. Yet, I believe I am not alone."

Your column has assuaged many a hurt, Ann. I hope my personal experience will serve to strengthen your efforts. -- A.A.B., New Brunswick, N.J.

Dear A.A.B.: Of course it's too late to do anything about your "regrets," but writing that letter to your brother's children, and to yours, and sharing it with my millions of readers will surely cause others to reflect on their relationships with brothers and sisters. You will never know how much good you have done. Thank you.

BY OSWALD JACOBY AND ALAN SONTAG

North's two-heart bid was a Jacoby Transfer forcing South to bid two spades. This bid has the advantage of allowing the strong hand to be concealed during the play.

Dr. George Rosenkranz, Mexico's greatest player, was sitting West. Rosenkranz, like all champions, possesses a killer instinct. At a bridge table, he is completely devoid of mercy. Which is why he is Mexico's greatest player.

This hand was played at a national championship in Chicago. With the opening club lead there is no chance for declarer to make two spades. He must lose three club tricks, a diamond and two spades.

Most defenders would be satisfied with this rather cut-and-dried result. Not Rosenkranz.

East won the opening club lead with the jack when declarer played low from dummy. East returned a heart, won by declarer in dummy with the queen. Declarer returned the singleton 10 of diamonds and West topped the king with his ace.

West (Rosenkranz) led the queen of clubs which was covered by the king and won by East's ace. East returned a club that Rosenkranz won with the 10.

Everyone at the table knew declarer was down one. But Rosenkranz was thinking about that extra hundred points his partnership would score if the contract could be set two tricks. More important, since this was a duplicate tournament, plus two hundred would virtually assure him of a top score on the board.

Rosenkranz discovered the only play that would set the contract two tricks. He led the 13th club. Declarer had no counter. If he ruffed in dummy, East would over-ruff, and South would have to win with the ace of trump. This would establish an extra trump trick in East's hand, allowing the defense to score three trump tricks, setting the contract two tricks.

Of course, if declarer does not ruff in dummy, the result is the same. West's enlightened lead of the 13th club did indeed earn his partnership a top score.

Eating More Not Warmth Provider

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — Frank Konishi, Southern Illinois University-Carbondale nutritionist, says it's a myth that eating more food keeps you warmer.

Konishi says a high protein diet produces more body heat during the digestive breakdown of food, but the key to keeping warm is proper winter clothing.

He added that the "hobbling effect" of bulky clothing worn during cold weather makes an individual use more energy and need more calories.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM

The Newspaper Bible

Matt. 12:39-50, 13:1-8, The Living Bible

39,40 But Jesus replied, "Only an evil, faithless nation would ask for further proof; and none will be given except what happened to Jonah the prophet! For as Jonah was in the great fish for three days and three nights, so I, the Son of Mankind, shall be in the heart of the earth three days and three nights.

41 The men of Nineveh shall arise against this nation at the judgment and condemn you. For when Jonah preached to them, they repented and turned to God from all their evil ways. And now a greater than Jonah is here—and you refuse to believe Him.

42 The Queen of Sheba shall rise against this nation in the judgment, and condemn it; for she came from a distant land to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and now a greater than Solomon is here—and you refuse to believe Him.

43,44,45 This evil nation is like a man possessed by a demon. For if the demon leaves, it goes into the deserts for a while, seeking rest but finding none. Then it says, 'I will return to the man I came from.' So it returns and finds the man's heart clean but empty! Then the demon finds seven other spirits more evil than itself, and all enter the man and live in him. And so he is worse off than before."

46,47 As Jesus was speaking in a crowded house His mother and brothers were outside, wanting to talk with Him. When someone told Him they were there,

48 He remarked, "Who is My mother? Who are My brothers?"

49 He pointed to His disciples. "Look!" He said, "these are My mother and brothers."

50 Then He added, "Anyone who obeys My Father in heaven is My brother, sister and mother!"

CHAPTER 13

1 Later that same day, Jesus left the house and went down to the shore,

2,3 Where an immense crowd soon gathered. He got into a boat and taught from it while the people listened on the beach. He used many illustrations such as this one in His sermon: "A farmer was sowing grain in his fields.

4 As he scattered the seed across the ground, some fell beside a path, and the birds came and ate it.

5 And some fell on rocky soil where there was little depth of earth; the plants sprang up quickly enough in the shallow soil,

6 But the hot sun soon scorched them and they withered and died, for they had so little root.

7 Other seeds fell among thorns, and the thorns choked out the tender blades.

8 But some fell on good soil, and produced a crop that was 30, 60 and even 100 times as much as he had planted.

Dutch Win In New Moluccan Showdown

ASSEN, Netherlands (AP) — Dutch marines in a two-pronged assault Tuesday overran a building held for 28 hours by South Moluccan terrorists and freed 70 hostages at the moment the gunmen had threatened to start executing them.

"It was a very easy operation," said a government spokesman. "The marines clearly just walked through the front door."

No one was killed in the 20-minute attack mounted by 60 anti-terrorist marine commandos, under fierce covering fire by sharpshooters on nearby rooftops. But officials said a 40-year-old man died Monday when the three terrorists occupied the Drente provincial government complex in a wooded suburban area of this northern Dutch city.

Six hostages were reported hurt Tuesday, one of them shot in the stomach. One of the wounded reportedly was shot by the terrorists, who were arrested unhurt and taken to a downtown police station, a government spokesman said. An official said the gunmen had carried "light arms."

"They're free, they're free," a marine officer yelled into his radio as the marines climbed the interior stairs and secured the building, four stories of concrete and glass colored blue and gray.

"I think we were all very lucky, especially the hostages," said a policeman as the released captives were escorted to an emergency aid center set up at a skating rink nearby, prior to precautionary sessions with psychiatrists and reunion with their families.

Some hostages waved both arms triumphantly in the air as they left the building while others were supported by fellow hostages. Some smiled and some sobbed.

Crowds of relatives, friends and neighbors watched from behind the police barricades where they had come to stand in the rain, transistor radios in hand, and await news.

Local government architect Carl Zuhorn spoke to reporters shortly after he was released. He said the captives, who were being held on an upper floor, heard shots "and then the marines were in the room. There was firing in the room. The marines were shooting at the terrorists. The Moluccans fired back. I thought we were all going to be killed, but it was all over very quickly."

Immediately after the marine attack, there had been no official indication the terrorists returned fire.

The marine unit, 100 strong in all, was the same one that stormed a train and a school near Assen last summer to end 20-day twin sieges by another band of Moluccan extremists and rescue more than 150 hostages.

That terror incident turned many Dutchmen against the South Moluccans who came to live with their former colonial masters here when their homeland — also known as the Spice Islands — became part of independent Indonesia in 1949.

Young militants among Holland's 40,000-strong Moluccan community have terrorized this country periodically for a decade, trying to prod the Dutch into intervening with Indonesia for South Moluccan independence.

Indonesia also is a former Dutch colony, but the Dutch government says it can do nothing to aid the Moluccan cause.

In this case, the terrorists originally threatened to start killing their captives at 2 p.m. Tuesday if the Dutch did not meet their demands: the release of 21 comrades jailed after the terror action last summer and one in 1975, a plane out of the country with some of the hostages and a $13 million ransom.

But Justice Minister Job de Ruiter, speaking to parliament in The Hague after the siege ended, said the gunmen early Tuesday demanded two Moluccan community leaders be sent in as go-betweens, and told the mediators of a new deadline.

"If the government didn't meet their demands, they said, they would begin killing two hostages each half hour, starting at 2:30 p.m., half an hour after the deadline they set," the minister said.

De Ruiter quoted the gunmen as saying the first to be shot would be two local politicians among the hostages. He said they threatened to kill all the hostages — 55 men and 16 women ranging in age from 18 to 63 — if they spotted a marine near the building.

De Ruiter said that such conditions left the government no choice but to prepare for action.

"It didn't seem likely to us that we would succeed in buying time," he declared. He said that at 2 p.m. the government had telephone contact with the Moluccans and the situation appeared "very serious."

Premier Andries van Agt told legislators the hostages would have faced "great risks" had the marines not gone in, and added: "We deeply regret that it was necessary to end this action in this manner, but a peaceful ending was an impossibility."

The premier appealed to Dutchmen not to judge all Moluccans by the acts of those who carried out what he called "this shocking action."

The commando unit, airlifted in helicopters to the siege scene Monday night, attacked at 2:40 p.m. after a shot was heard inside the building and the terrorists telephoned the government crisis center and claimed they had killed a hostage, the government spokesman said.

"As soon as we heard that, the marines were ordered to attack," the spokesman said. But when the marines reached the floor where the hostages were held, the man the Moluccans had reported executed was in fact only wounded.

The spokesman said the marines attacked from two sides.

One group which had hidden in an adjacent building under cover of darkness was the first to reach the front door of the besieged building. Nearby lay the body of the man who was killed in the initial terrorist assault and who, officials said, was dumped from a window and lay on the sidewalk throughout the siege.

The second marine unit was hidden on the other side of the building and raced across open ground to reach the complex, the spokesman said.

As the marines moved in, a fleet of green army ambulances drove through the cordon of police and troops to pick up the wounded.

"There were fewer casualties than we expected," said one policeman. The marine gunfire apparently was intended to pin the Moluccans down.

The siege began at 10 a.m. Monday after one gunman flagged down taxi driver Jacob van der Werff, seized him and later gunmen marched him at gunpoint into the government building with his hands on his head.

As the lone gunman fired in the air in the reception area, he was joined by two others firing Israeli-made Uzi submachine guns. They ran through the halls herding hostages together while other occupants — most of them civil servants — jumped from doors and windows to safety.

In the melee of gunfire, five persons were wounded. One was a boy shot through the lung as he rode past the building on his bicycle.

Later, 3½ hours before the marines swept in, the Moluccans released without explanation a housewife identified as Mrs. M. de Reeper. The terrorists let her go with the two Moluccan mediators after their two-hour meeting.

Officials reported afterward that no progress was made toward a possible deal — and the siege headed towards its climax.

Unfulfilled Dream Motivates Displaced Spice Islanders

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A festering dream handed down from their fathers drives Holland's South Moluccan terrorists in their quest for the independence of a homeland many of them have never seen.

The young militants whose latest hostage-taking raid in Holland was crushed Tuesday by Dutch marines are the offspring of native veterans of the Dutch army who left the South Moluccan islands of Indonesia for Holland in 1950.

Those men left hoping that Dutch intervention would allow them to return to a republic free of Indonesia, and their children persevere in what now seems a hopeless cause.

The homeland in whose name the militants have staged a series of terror raids in Holland over the past five years is a cluster of impoverished islands in eastern Indonesia some 2,000 miles northeast of Jakarta.

Fabled as the Spice Islands, its main cash crops are cloves, nutmeg and copra. Logging and fishing support others, but except in Ambon, the capital, most of the people are subsistence farmers outside the cash economy.

South Moluccans differ ethnically and culturally from most other Indonesians, 90 percent of whom are nominally Moslem. Most of the million-plus Spice Islanders are Christians.

What sets the exiled hard core apart from others back home is the collaborationist role their forefathers played during 300 years of colonial rule in the former Netherlands East Indies.

Celebrated for their prowess as warriors, generations of Moluccans willingly enlisted in crack fighting units, serving the Dutch somewhat as Gurkhas served the British army.

When Indonesia declared itself free in 1945, some Moluccans demanded their own independence on grounds of cultural and ethnic differences from the predominant Javanese.

The Spice Islands agreed to cooperate with Jakarta only after being promised much autonomy. This faded when the United States of Indonesia was created in 1949.

Jakarta's aim was to establish its authority. When a government "pacification" force was sent to the neighboring Celebes Islands, veterans of the Dutch colonial army in Ambon reacted by declaring themselves independent as the "Republic of South Moluccas."

Troops occupied Ambon after six months of fighting. The leaders and several hundred followers fled north to the larger island of Ceram to wage guerrilla war.

Other Spice Islanders counted on the Dutch to help them return to an independent homeland. More than 15,000 former soldiers and dependents left with the Dutch army after Ambon was destroyed in November 1950. The exile group later grew to about 40,000.

Indonesia seized the last of the secessionist guerrillas more than 10 years ago and the aborted republic seemed likely to be remembered only as a historical footnote.

Instead the dream festered until a second generation of unassimilated Moluccans turned to violence in the past few years.

The Indonesian government last year organized the first of several trips for young members of the restive Moluccan community to see their native islands.

Jakarta would welcome the return of those living in Holland, said Noes Solissa, one of two Moluccans who made a three-week inspection trip.

"Not only the authorities support this idea, but also the man in the street, they see us as brothers," Solissa said in December.

Outstanding Citizens Awards Given

By DEAN GLAZE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LITTLEFIELD — "Movin' On" was the theme for the annual Littlefield Chamber of Commerce Banquet held Tuesday night in the Lamb County Agriculture and Community Center.

A record crowd of 600 persons was on hand to honor outstanding local citizens, meet the new chamber officers and directors, and hear an address from Grant Teaff, head football coach at Baylor University.

Honored as Man-of-the-Year in Littlefield was H.C. Randall, a resident here for 19 years.

Randall has worked on numerous fund raising drives, and served on the city council from 1963-67. He is now chairman of the Lamb County Memorial Library.

Elta Mae Blevins was cited as the Woman-of-the Year by the chamber.

Mrs. Blevins, who has lived in Littlefield since 1948, has done a great deal of work with special children in a satellite school here. She has also been active in the local little league and P.T.A. She has also spent a lot of time working with the elderly in the community.

Farm Family-of-the-Year honors went to the E.E. Carter family, which has resided in Lamb County

Alma Faye Carter is a seventh grade schoolteacher here. She and her husband are active in the Woodmen of the World organization, band bosters, and Women of Woodcraft.

Hill Challenges Bell Rate Hike

TO INTERVENE IN BELL CASE — Texas Attorney General John Hill, at a news conference Tuesday, tells reporters he plans to intervene in the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s appeal to the Texas Public Utilities Commission for a rate increase. Hill said the $14 million increase asked by Bell is excessive. (AP Laserphoto)

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General John Hill asked the Texas Public Utility Commission Tuesday to allow him to formally oppose Southwestern Bell Telephone's $214 million rate increase case.

Hill said his advisers, including Dallas utility consultant Pat Loconto, The attorney general, currently running for governor, told a news conference Loconto had calculated that the increase would raise the return on Bell's common stock from 12.5 percent to as much as 16 percent.

"I haven't foreclosed in my own mind that the phone company might be entitled to some rate increase," Hill said.

He also said he personally would argue the state's case before the Texas Supreme Court April 5 in Bell's appeal of the utility commission's basic rate-setting formula.

In calculating Bell's rate base — on which its percentage of allowable profit is determined — the commission counted only the original cost of the telephone company's equipment.

Bell says current replacement cost — a much higher figure — also should be considered.

Bell received a $58 million increase in December 1976 — far below the $298 million it requested. The latest increase was requested last week.

Hill was a party in the 1976 rate case, and in 1975 successfully fought Bell's attempt to impose $45 million in long distance rate increases before the utility commission was created.

Not only would Bell's latest request raise residential telephone bills, Hill said, but it also would increase charges on CENTREX systems, such as the state uses, by $10 million.

"The impact of an increase of that magnitude would be a burden on the taxpayers of the state," he said in a prepared statement.

Reporters also asked Hill about the legitimacy of his activities in the field of criminal law, a question raised by some Briscoe supporters.

The governor recently instructed his Criminal Justice Division to determine whether Hill's organized crime division was exceeding its authority under the grant received from the division.

"The statutes of this state require the attorney general to respond to grand jury requests. . . In addition, it has been traditional in the attorney general's office for the attorney general to assist the Department of Public Safety in connection with narcotics control in this state. The attorney general has a clear statutory responsibility to move against any clear misapplication of public funds, as in Duval County," Hill said.

He said if Briscoe truly believed the attorney general had no business in crimin-allaw enforcement, "why has he allowed his office to fund this (organized crime division) program for the last five years?"

Hill said he doubted the Criminal Justice Division would cancel the $380,000 federal grant that funds the organized crime program.

"It would be a crippling blow," he said.

Labor 'Recommends' Briscoe Re-Election

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas labor union members recommended the re-election of Gov. Dolph Briscoe Tuesday, but stopped short of giving him a full-scale endorsement, considered somewhat of a victory for his chief Democratic opponent — state Attorney General John Hill.

An endorsement by the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education (COPE) would have meant the full power of the labor movement in Texas would be pushing for Briscoe's third term.

The recommendation meant there was a division within the labor ranks; that a majority of COPE members were for Briscoe; but the two-thirds vote for endorsement wasn't available.

A labor spokesman said, "We reached the compromise in an effort to eliminate a floor fight."

Shortly after the general session ended, the United Steel Workers union met in caucus to put its support behind Hill.

Other union groups did the same to announce backing of Briscoe.

It all boiled down to the fact that each union can work for the gubernatorial candidate of its choice without a mandate from the 255,500 union workers in Texas.

The 1,000 delegates to the conference adopted a resolution that called for the top priority in 1978, "The defeat of Sen. John Tower...and by working together we are confident tht the job will be done and the defeat of John Tower will be a reality in November."

Tower is the Republican senator from Texas, who will face either Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Tex., or Joe Christie, former chairman of the state insurance board.

The labor leaders, with no debate, gave its support to Christie in the Democratic primary.

The COPE report stated, "after comparing records of all candidates, the best choice for the working people would be for the Texas AFL-CIO to endorse Joe Christie in his bid for the U.S. Senate."

In other major endorsements, the labor leaders called for the election of:

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby; Mark White, attorney general; Warren G. Harding, state treasurer; Reagan Brown, agriculture commissioner; Mack Wallace and Jake Johnson, railroad commisioners.

During the Tuesday session, Christie and Krueger had some harsh words for each other as they attempted to win the labor support, a voting bloc that doesn't carry too much weight in this state of insurance, banking, ranching and farming.

Christie called Krueger a "handmaiden of major oil companies, and one who has accepted hundreds of thousands of dollars" in contributions from oil interests.

Christie, a former state legislator, said the oilmen always had a friend in Sen. Tower and this year "is hedging its bets by backing another good friend. They have nearly drowned him in oil money. We know a man can't lie down in a vat of oil and not come out slippery and slick."

Krueger said Christie's charges of huge oil company contributions "is a flat lie. He (Christie) talks out of both sides of his mouth, and he admitted two weeks ago he was uniformed and had no opinion about labor's prime legislative objective — a federal labor reform act."

Earlier in the two day session, Briscoe and Hill appealed for union support in what is expected to be a close race for the Democratic nomination May 6.

Teachers' Group Refuses To Air Hill Interview

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas State Teachers Association's political arm refused Gov. Dolph Briscoe's request Tuesday that it make public a tape of its interview with Attorney General John Hill.

The Texas Educators Political Action Committee also said it would release none of the tapes made when it interviewed a total of five candidates for governor.

Chairman Russell Owen Jr. of Dallas said the TEPAC board felt the interviews had been set up as private sessions and to release the tapes would violate the agreement.

"In addition," Owen said, "nothing of substance was said during the interviews which has not stated subsequently by the candidates themselves in public."

After TEPAC had endorsed Hill for governor, Briscoe, one of the other candidates interviewed, asked that the tapes be released. Hill said he had no objection.

Briscoe has accused Hill of obtaining TEPAC's endorsement by promising huge increases in state spending for teachers' salaries. Hill says he promised only to give education a higher priority than Briscoe has.

In other action, the TEPAC board decided in a weekend meeting not to endorse anyone in the U.S. Senate race for the May 6 primary.

All Senate candidates were invited for interviews, but only Democrats Joe Christie and Rep. Bob Krueger appeared.

Other TEPAC endorsements will be released later this week, Owen announced.

Decision Awaited On Plastic Pipe For Use In City

The Plumbing Board will decide today whether to recommend inclusion of a brand of plastic pipe in the city's list of acceptable piping.

The board, which will meet at 6:30 p.m. in the Emergency Operation Center, will consider recommending to the city council that the brand be added to the approved list of materials that can be installed in residences here.

Building inspection administrator Cecil Turquette said the pipe brand was laid in several houses before being caught by the building inspectors. The houses subsequently were "red-tagged," which means they do not pass final city approval.

But, Turquette said, the pipes are not considered substandard. The particular kind used simply "is not on the approved list," he said.

Migrant Workers Find Plight Worsened

By MOISES SANDOVAL
Pacific News Service

DENVER — In a snow-covered cornfield a few miles south of Windsor in Colorado's Platte Valley, a flock of geese feeds happily as it pauses on its long journey south. A few hundred yards away, a family of five huddles in claustrophobic closeness in small, ancient trailer alongside a barn and tries to coax enough heat from the burners of a small butane stove to keep warm. The geese are well fed; the family is hungry, sick, broke, in debt and unemployed.

They're birds of a feather — the geese and the family. They ae migrants. From time immemorial, the geese have gone north in the spring and south in the winter. For generations, the migrants have followed roughly the same cycle, working in the fields from Texas northward and back. In good times and bad, nature provides for the geese. But for the migrant worker, whose harvest is slim even in bumper years, the cupboard is bare this winter in Colorado.

Thus, the geese near Windsor, having eaten their fill, take wing southward that very day. But Gregorio and his wife, Susana, and three children, aged six, three and six months, are trapped. Any hope they had of going home to Texas died with the end of the harvest. They didn't have the money.

The farmer charges them $50 a month rent for the trailer and $45 for electricity, although the family has only a single light bulb (in a table lamp) and an outlet for an ancient TV set. Butane costs $75 every two months and water $3 for every 50 gallons hauled to the trailer.

The family has no money to pay for any of these items. The farmer had only four hours of work for Gregorio the previous week. At $2 an hour, that came to $8, but the farmer kept the money to apply on $230 in back rent, electricity and gas.

The only food in the trailer is that brought by Colorado Migrant Council staffers. The car which might, in happier days, have taken them to Texas is inoperative and the farmer has taken the title as security for back debts. That day everyone in the family was sick, but they had no way of getting to the nearest migrant clinic 15 miles away.

Inside the trailer, Gregorio and Susana stand so their guest can sit on the bed with the children, idly watching a TV soap opera, their faces puffy with colds. Appearing to be in their early 30s, the couple speaks English well and Gregorio, the outreach worker says later, has a 10th grade education.

En route to the clinic with the mother and baby, Field Services Coordinator Barbara Cambas says the only hope for the family is to move away from the farm. The baby turns out not to have pneumonia as feared, but the doctor says the overcrowded environment is undoubtedly contributing to the family's health problems.

So Cambas picks up a copy of the local paper and calls everyone advertising apartments or houses. But the rent is either too high or the landlord does not want children. Cambas says wistfully that if only a job will materialize, a welfare agency will provide the first month's rent for a better place to live. The day ends without a solution to either problem.

A few miles down the road toward Denver, another family has a different dilemma. The farmer is trying to evict them, but they won't leave until he pays about $2,000 in wages he has withheld for rent. The migrants claim they were told at the start of the season the housing would be provided free. The farmer cut off their electricity and removed their butane tank, but the Migrant Council managed to restore service and engage an attorney to help the migrants.

The Colorado Migrant Council says that migrants earned so little during the 1977 season that 5,000 to 10,000 workers and their families were stranded after the harvest. Luis Jaramillo, executive director of the council, said that 3,000 families received food, money or gasoline during the year so they could leave the state. But by mid-winter, 3,000 to 5,000 migrants still remained, he said.

Some were living in shacks below standard even for the summer, their windows boarded up as if no one lived there. The Health toll was high. In Johnstown, a baby had just died of pneumonia and Migrant Council officials blamed the poor housing. In the San Luis Valley, which experiences sub-zero cold from November through March, health agencies had run out of funds to treat the migrants, who were having to rely on home remedies.

The best many could do in finding jobs was sporadic work bagging beans or potatoes at loading docks, making an average of $50 a week. Others were reduced to sweeping snow off their employers' walks and feeding their dogs, Cambas said. Asked how the migrants survive, Angie Bernard, area director in the San Luis Valley, said: "As Mexicans, we have survival skills from 'way back. If we have beans, potatoes and tortillas, we somehow get by."

The Colorado Migrant Council spent $97,000 in direct food aid in 1977, but it was not enough. Food drives were held in all areas. Council officials felt the situation was so critical they held a week-long hunger fast to dramatize the plight of the migrants.

To understand what happened in Colorado last year, one has to consider the migrant stream as a real river, its headwaters in Florida and Texas. Early in the year, a freeze killed crops in Florida. Without jobs there, workers went north, creating what Jaramillo called a "domino effect." They displaced other workers who did the same thing in a ripple effect that was felt to the far northern reaches of the stream.

For the first time, according to the Migrant Council, migrants from Florida came to Colorado. This disruption forced workers "to literally scavenge for jobs" which threw them off in their timetable for work farther up the stream. "So you can imagine that you had a lot of displaced people," Jaramillo said.

The crisis was compounded by a cut in sugar beet acreage; the drought; a late spring ice storm that destroyed many of the power lines to deep wells from which farmers in northeastern Colorado draw their water; and the inexorable mechanization that every year reduces the need for land labor. Along the Kansas border there was a 50 percent reduction in crops requiring hand labor.

The resulting labor surplus, swelled by the ever increasing number of undocumented immigrants, created a vicious competition for wages. Migrant Council officials told of families "who were literally chased out of the fields because farmers found laborers who would do the work for less pay."

America's Migrant Farmworkers: at the bottom of the rung and dropping.

Grain Elevator Men Urge Go Slow Stance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grain industry representatives urged Congress Tuesday not to act too hastily in imposing restrictions on grain elevator operators because of recent fatal explosions.

"Changes in elevator practices prompted by incomplete or inadequate analysis should be avoided," Robert F. Hubbard, a vice president of Cargill Inc., told the health and safety subcommittee of the House Education and Labor Committee.

Another spokesman, George M. Wood, said the industry "is concerned that we not be hampered by ineffective, burdensome regulations, inspections and compliance at a time when we must devote an all-out effort to find the causes of explosions and determine what can be done to prevent them."

Wood, of Camden, N.C., is chairman of the National Grain and Feed Association's management team on elevator explosions and fires.

The subcommittee has been holding hearings prompted by grain elevator explosions in Westwego, La., and Galveston in December that took 53 lives.

Wood said a 1976 study by Iowa State University researchers indicates the causes of 62 percent of elevator explosions are unknown. He said the research "supports the need for careful study before heading off in a wrong and overly costly direction."

He said many of the regulatory activities of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration "unfortunately...are directed at potential health concerns rather than increasing explosion safety at grain elevators and feed plants."

"We believe that OSHA emphasis should be directed at the alternate health question of how to avoid the loss of life due to explosions and accidents," Wood said.

Hubbard said it would be "premature" to conclude, as others have, that low humidity may have been a major contributing factor in the Westwego and Galveston explosions.

He said the relative humidity was 67 percent at the time of the Westwego explosion and 50 percent at the time of the Galveston blast.

"Much lower relative humidities are commonplace in drier areas of the country without resulting in a higher incidence of explosions," he testified. "Second, the moisture content of grain dust is far more dependent upon the moisture content of the grain than on the ambient humidity."

Most elevator explosions occur when dust particles in a confined space are ignited.

Hubbard also argued that discontinuing the practice of returning dust to the grain as it passes through the elevator would not eliminate the risk of explosion. He said the Westwego elevator, for instance, did not return dust to the grain.

"I would not recommend changing industry dust-handling practices until sampling has been accomplished to determine dust concentrations within the equipment," the Cargill executive testified.

Hobbs Seeking New Airline

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS — Hobbs may have a new airline within 90 to 120 days to replace Texas International Airlines, which is ending jet service to Hobbs, Clovis and Carlsbad later this year.

John Anderson, chairman of the Hobbs Chamber of Commerce Transportation Committee, said that those working to secure a new airline "do not plan to settle for just getting air service." "We also want to improve our situation in regard to fares and schedules," he added.

The committee is looking for an airline that will offer service to Midland, Tex., and Albuquerque.

However, Anderson also emphasized that flights to Lubbock are also important, adding that the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce has offered to work with Hobbs in securing an airline.

Anderson said that an airline, which is certified by the Civil Aernautics Board, "is considered vital to assure that the Hobbs-Lea County Airport continues to qualify for federal funds for airport improvements."

New Law Seen As Boost To Vietnam Veterans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnam veterans would be helped rather than hurt by President Carter's proposed cutback of federal hiring preferences of veterans, administration witnesses said Tuesday.

"The changes would focus the veterans' preference more sharply to help disabled veterans and veterans of the Vietnam conflict," said James T. McIntyre Jr., acting director of the Office of Management and Budget.

"We believe they are both fair and necessary," McIntyre said at the start of congressional hearings on civil service reorganization.

The Civil Service Commission chairman, Alan K. Campbell, said there are 900,000 veterans among two million federal workers — 48 percent compared to their percentage in the total work force of 23 percent.

He said automatically awarding veterans an additional five points on the competitive Civil Service tests, whether they have been out of the military for three years or 30, has been a key reason why women and minorities are under-represented in the federal work force.

President Carter's plan would limit veterans' preference to 10 years following departure from active military service. This provision would go into effect two years after the legislation is passed.

If the reorganization bill passes this year, Campbell said, four million Vietnam and disabled veterans would be eligible for preference in 1981 when this provision would take effect.

Some members of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee took sharp issue with the veterans proposal. Rep. William D. Ford, D-Mich., said while many members deplored the inequities that the current system has created, few of them envisioned correcting the problems the way the Carter administration wants to do.

Ford said he could understand the need to limit the number of times veterans can use their preference rights and he said he also could see "the unfairness of someone like me being able to qualify (for the preference) 30 years after I've left the service. But when you limit the preference to the initial hiring 10 years after a veteran has left the service you do violence to the very concept."

Ford said many Vietnam veterans are currently at or near their 10-year period after having been in the military. He said the recession forced many to return to school seeking new careers and they are now looking for their first federal job.

"For four or five years now they've been sitting and waiting to get on the federal employment roster and now you're putting the statute of limitations on it," he said.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano and Defense Secretary Harold Brown urged the committee to approve the reorganization package.

Brown said millions of veterans have been helped in moving from military to civilian life by the job preference. "But as veterans preference laws have evolved over the years, they have become less a bridging device than a perpetual entitlement," he said.

He said preference for veterans for their entire lifetimes has retarded federal hiring of women and minorities "at the very time we are demanding equal opportunity hiring and promotion policies in private industry."

Hanoi Conditions Bogging Down Talks To Establish Relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top State Department official said Tuesday the United States remains "unequivocally ready" to establish diplomatic and trade relations with Vietnam, but not under the conditions imposed by Hanoi.

Richard Holbrooke, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, said negotiations for a normalization of relations are still bogged down over Vietnam's insistence that this step be preceded by a U.S. commitment to provide economic assistance.

Holbrooke testified before the House International Relations subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs.

He said the United States and Vietnam made "slight but significant" progress toward improving relations during three negotiating sessions last year in Paris.

He noted that the United States dropped its opposition to Vietnam's admission to the United Nations and that there was some progress in obtaining an accounting from Vietnam of Americans missing in action.

Holbrooke said no date has been set for the next meeting between the U.S. and Vietnamese authorities in Paris, but he suggested that one might be arranged for late spring.

"We are prepared to move forward with Vietnam," Holbrooke said, but the United States cannot accept Hanoi's aid demands.

"The United States has no obligationto provide aid," he said.

Holbrooke said a U.S. objective is to encourage Hanoi to work in a "responsible manner" in Southeast Asia.

Thus far, he said, there has been no evidence that Vietnam has used any of the large amount of weaponry the United States left behind in that country to encourage subversion in neighboring countries.

Holbrooke also confirmed that the administration is considering sending emergency food shipments to Laos which, he said, faces severe shortages because of drought.

He said the Carter administration places high priority on maintaining friendly relations with the non-communist countries of Southeast Asia. He noted that Vice President Walter F. Mondale soon will visit Thailand, the Philippines and Indonesia.

Holbrooke also reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to the 1972 Shanghai Communique, which calls for the United States and China to move toward normalization of relations. But he said the United States will not fulfill this objective in a way that jeopardizes the well-being of the people of Taiwan.

Army Suggests VietnamPlaque For Cemetery

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Army recommended Tuesday that those who served in Vietnam be memoralized soon with a plaque at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier because no unknown from the Vietnam war has been found to occupy the crypt at the tomb itself.

Charles R. Ford, acting assistant Army secretary, told a subcommittee of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, however, the Army still hopes "that a Vietnam unknown will be selected and ceremoniously placed in the crypt" at Arlington National Cemetery.

The reason none has been found, Ford said, is due to the Army's success in identifying the remains of those who died. The only possibility at present are three partial remains in Hawaii that the Army is still trying to identify, he added.

Ford also noted that there are 2,348 servicemen who served in Vietnam who have not been accounted for.

In the meantime, he said, the Army favors "placing an appropriate display" in the Trophy Hall of the Memorial Amphitheater to memoralize the American servicemen who served in Vietnam.

Dissident's Russian Trial Near?

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky marked a full year in prison Tuesday and there were indications his trial on charges of high treason will begin within the next few weeks.

Moscow apparently intends to go through with the trial despite President Carter's personal declaration that the 30-year-old Jewish activist is innocent of spy charges.

The Kremlin also seems to be ignoring warnings from American diplomats and congressmen that U.S.-Soviet relations could decline in many fields if Shcharansky is punished.

Carter broke the U.S. government's traditional reluctance to comment on espionage claims by announcing in June that Shcharansky never had a "known relationship in a subversive way or otherwise with the CIA."

Shcharansky, a computer programmer, was arrested March 15, 1977, 11 days after an article in the government newspaper Izvestia accused him of participation in a Moscow spy ring operated by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

It said the ring worked with CIA agents using U.S. diplomatic cover and with American correspondents in Moscow.

The U.S. Embassy called the Izvestia article "a classic piece of misinformation."

Shcharansky, who is fluent in English, was active in publicizing the emigration movement by Soviet Jews and served in other human rights activities.

He has declared that he did nothing illegal.

Earlier this month, officials announced the appointment of Moscow lawyer Silva A. Dubrovskaya to handle Shcharansky's defense, rejecting an appeal from the defendant's 70-year-old mother that he be represented by a French attorney.

The Soviet news agency Tass, without waiting for a trial verdict, has referred to Shcharansky as a traitor and said he would be punished "with the full severity of Soviet law."

Western diplomats and Soviet officials have expressed suprise at the international furor over the Shcharansky case.

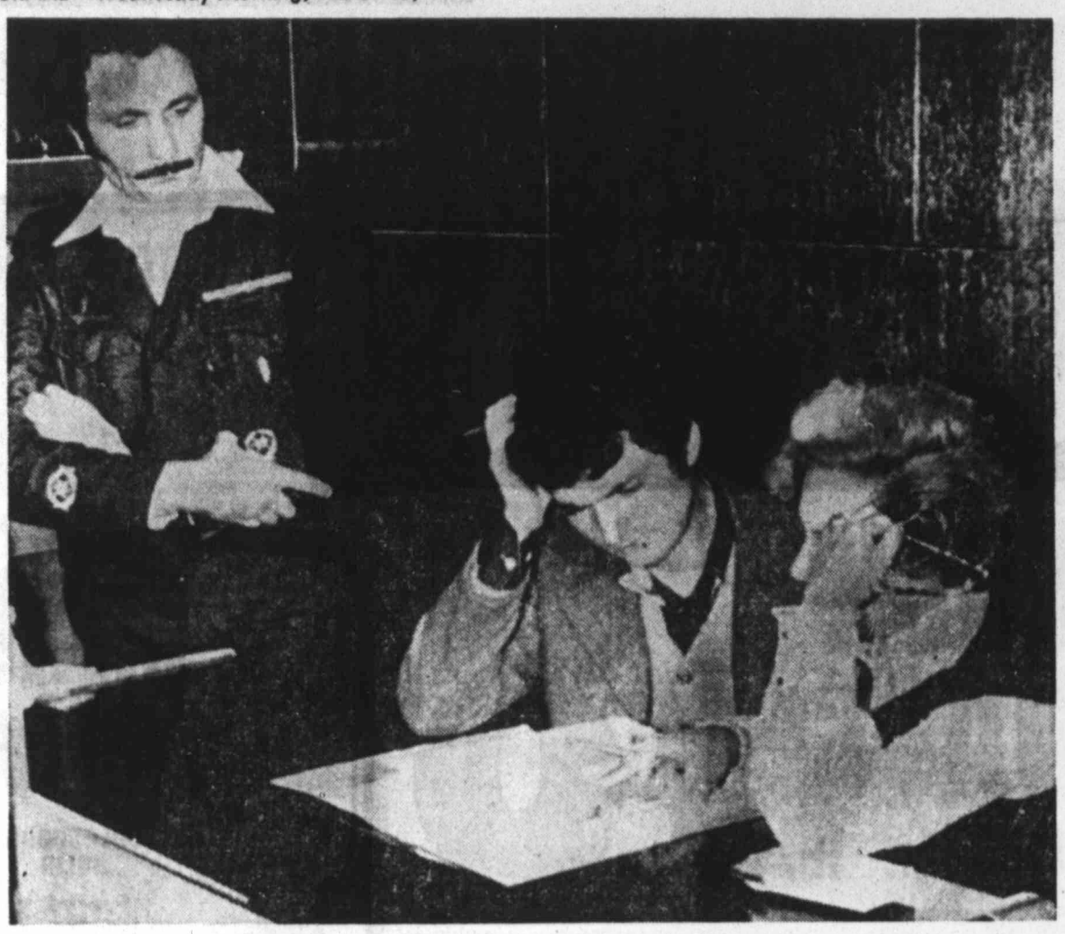

Human rights groups began protesting soon after officials said he was suspected of "a crime against the state."

Twenty-eight U.S. senators recently sent a letter to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev asking that Shcharansky be released.

In November, U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance urged the Kremlin to call off the trial.

If the Russians have no substantial case againt Shcharansky, diplomats believe they still would go ahead with a face-saving trial but give the defendant a light sentence.

Some diplomats suggested Moscow would simply expel the dissident, but this would amount to the Kremlin caving in, because Shcharansky has been pressing for permission to emigrate since 1973.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Sami Esmail, 23, a Michigan State University student, claimed before an Israeli court Tuesday that he was kicked, beaten and mentally pressured into admitting membership in an outlawed Palestinian organzation.

He pleaded innocent and asked the three-judge panel to throw out the statement.

Although pale from being jailed since Dec. 22, the American citizen of Palestinian descent appeared calm as the trial opened.

His attorney, Felicia Langer, said he was beaten and kicked, had his hair pulled, was forced to strip in cold weather, was deprived of sleep and was interrogated in Arabic, not his native English.

He could get 25 years in prison if convicted.

The court is expected to rule on the admissibility of the alleged confession Wednesday and adjourn until Mar.29.

Esmail is charged with having trained in Libya for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. He was arrested Dec. 21 when he arrived in Israel, saying he wanted to visit his dying father, a naturalized American citizen who had returned to Ramallah on the Israeli-occupied Arab West Bank.

Esmail is not accused of committing a crime in Israel. Israeli courts can try persons for committing anti-Israeli security offenses abroad.

Police testimony supported Mrs. Langer's claim that Esmail was not allowed to see his father until he signed the statement.

Spectators packing the tiny courtroom included relatives, U.S. Consul James Ferr, Detroit attorney Ernest Goodman representing the National Lawyers' Guild, and Robert Barr and Ruth Ann Osborn of Michigan State's engineering department, where Esmail was a graduate student.

Barr and Mrs. Osborn will be character witnesses.

Groups supporting Esmail have sprung up in several American cities. Rep. Bob Carr, D-Mich., and Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., have expressed concern to Israel that an American citizen is being tried in Israel for an act outside that country that is not illegal in the United States.

Esmail and Terry Fleener, 23, of San Antonio, Texas, are the only Americans held in Israel on terrorist-related charges. She was convicted of gathering information for an Arab terrorist group, was sentenced to five years in prison, and is appealing.

The FBI has been accused of providing Israel with data on Esmail.

Goodman said, "I know for a fact that the FBI sent the information, and this is a cause of great concern to the National Lawyers' Guild."

Goodman told reporters it would be dangerous if other countries followed Israel's example of prosecuting persons for acts committed outside the country.

Esmail's bother Azzam, 21, said his brother was active only in politics.

"If he were a member of the PFLP, he would not be so crazy as to come here," he said.

Freed American Businessman Tells About Ordeal In Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American businessman recently released by Cuba after 14 years detention said Tuesday he had to endure "the most inhumane conditions imaginable" during parts of his confinement.

Frank Emmick, 62, was freed last Jan. 1 with a heart condition after serving slightly less than half of a 30-year jail term on charges — which he emphatically denied — of being chief of the CIA in Cuba.

Emmick suffered a heart attack a few days after his release from prison — his third since his confinement — and only now did he feel strong enough to tell his story.

Emmick, who was in the frog leg export business before his arrest, gave his account during an hour-long appearance at a luncheon sponsored by the American Security Council, a conservative group.

From a prisoner communications network throughout the island, he estimates there are about 40,000 political prisoners in Cuba, down from a high of about 100,000 a decade ago. Last year, Cuban President Fidel Castro put the figure at between 2,000 and 3,000.

The early days of his confinement were the worst, he said. There were five months of "horrible incommunicado" after his arrest on Sept. 12, 1963. There were months spent in an underground dungeon at a two-century-old fortress, where some 650 prisoners were "jammed like sardines, forced to sleep on an old, poorly cemented floor full of earthen potholes, rats, vermin, etc., with little ventilation and where the sun, moon or stars could never be seen," he said.

Returned to the fortress after his 1964 trial — "a joke, a travesty of justice" — he was located in aboveground galleries with other condemned prisoners.

"The conditions were atrocious, barbaric, impossible for a sane man to comprehend. Between 4,500 to 5,000 men, permanent and transient, living in the most inhumane conditions imaginable," he said.

He said an old fortress built for 500 persons was "jammed to the ceiling in four-tier beds located everywhere possible.

"The medical attention was practically non-existent; only a six-bed infirmary, no dental facilities, abominable food with no protein whatsoever," he said.

In 1964, he said firing squads executed 20 to 25 persons per week on the average and as many as 27 in one night. He spent six years at that prison before his transfer to a former women's prison outside Havana. There, he said, the sanitary conditions were relatively good but "the food and discipline were very bad."

He said his big break came following a trip to Havana late last year by Democratic Reps. Fred Richmond of New York and Richard Nowland of Minnesota.

He had suffered heart attacks in 1973 and in 1975 and said the two congressmen appealed to Cuban authorities after noticing his weakened condition during an interview with him.

There were 2.3 million cattle in North Dakota in 1975.

Blue Grass Fans Head For Fiddlers Convention

UNION GROVE, N.C. (UPI) — The Annual Old Time Fiddlers Convention, an event which began 54-years ago as a modest effort to raise money for a rural school, cranks up again next week with tens of thousands of fans expected to attend.

The event, the largest country music festival held in the country each year, will begin March 22 and end in the early hours of Easter Sunday when the champion fiddler and the best of the blue grass bands and instrumental players are picked.

Last year's event drew an estimated 130,000 people who spread out over 70 acres of pastures on J. Pierce VanHoy's farm to hear more than 200 bands and scores of individual players.

The convention has become a spring ritual for young blue grass fans along the East Coast. They camp in VanHoy's fields, enjoying the music, campfires and often-times drugs.

While drugs, particularly marijuana, are used openly, police have regularly described the massive crowds as wellbehaved. Drug and drunkenness arrests usually do not exceed 100 or 150 for the duration of the event.

VanHoy will open the gates to his farm off Interstate 77 Wednesday, though the competition will not begin until the following night.

"We'll sell tickets as long as we have room," he said. "It's been so lousy this winter, I think everybody's due for a break."

Bank Charter Overturn Sought

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Although the State Banking Board is scheduled once again to consider applications of three proposed banks in South Lubbock, there is a possibiity the matter may be aired in the Travis County Courthouse prior to the June 5 board hearing.

The organizers of the proposed Liberty State Bank have filed suit here asking the court to overturn or send back for further consideration the decision of the board denying the three original applications for bank charters.

The lawsuit contends that the board's denial of the applications "was not supported by substantial evidence" and that the members of the board considered information about the issuance of a federal charter to "an affiliate bank of Lubbock National Bank" without giving the applicants prior notice or an opportunity to present evidence related to the affiliate bank.

The discussion of the federal charter was not based on information appearing in the record, the organizers complain, and this "denied due process" to the applicants.

The lawsuit also alleges that the board's order recites testimony which was "merely statements of opinion of unqualified witnesses" and charges that the testimony of those witnesses was "purely argumentative in nature."

The organizers further complain the board's order "overlooks and apparently ignores pertinent, relevant and material expert testimony" peresented on behalf of the applicants by three economists which, the organizers charge, shows a "public need" for a bank in the area.

The suit also points out that the proposed Liberty State Bank application was the first of the three to be filed and, and as such, it would be "legally and logically entitled to preference, other things being more or less equal" of consideration if it were found that only one bank were to be warranted for the area.

The Liberty State Bank organizers and directors listed as plaintiffs in the lawsuit include W.R. Collier, Don Hodgeons, Harmon Jenkins, Weldon Gibbs and Harold E. Humphries.

Members of the defendant State Banking Board are Banking Commissioner Robert E. Stewart, State Treasurer Warren G. Harding, and citizen board member, Sam E. Carter.

EXPLORER TRACKED — A NASA meteorological reserach satellite — Nimbus-6 — is tracking the 3,728-mile journey of a lone Japanese explorer venturing by dog sled from northern Canada to the North Pole and return, traveling the length of Greenland's isolated interior. The six-month journey started March 4. NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center, Greenbelt, Maryland, is undertaking the tracking task at the request of the Smithsonian Institute which has a scientific stake in the venture.(NASA Photo)

NASA Satellite Tracking Trip Of Japanese Explorer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Japanese explorer making a solo dogsled trip over the North Pole has shot to death a polar bear that earlier had ripped apart his tent and ate his dogs' food, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported Tuesday.

The bear made the mistake of attempting a second raid on the overnight camp of Naomi Uemura. His dogs alerted the sleeping explorer and he shot the intruder at a distance of 75 feet.

A NASA satellite, Nimbus 6, is tracking a radio transmitter on Uemura's sled to pinpoint his location as he makes a 3,700-mile trek from northern Canada to the North Pole and down the length of Greenland.

The agency also receives periodic reports on his progress from expedition radio bases in contact with Uemura. From these reports, NASA learned the saga of Uemura and the bear.

The 37-year-old adventurer began his journey March 6 from Cape Columbia on Ellesmere Island in Canada's remote Northwest Territories.

The first attack occurred last Thursday when the polar bear tore into the tent where Uemura was sleeping and made off with the supply of dog food.

NASA said the second attack in which the bear was killed took place a day later. Neither Uemura nor any of his 17 dogs was hurt in the raids. A new tent and food supplies were airdropped to the explorer so he could continue his journey.

The space agency's Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland, which is receiving the satellite signals, said rugged ice ridges have slowed Uemura in the early going and in the first week he has covered only about seven miles. The pace will pick up when he hits open ice stretches. The trip is expected to take six months.

Along the way, Uemura is to take systematic snow, ice and air samples for Japan's National Institute for Polar Research and the Water Research Institute of Japan's Nagoya University. He also is to look for igloos, artifacts and other evidence of ancient habitation in Greenland.

The satellite position data will help in pinpointing exactly where Uemura collects samples or locates other items of interest.

Western Water Battle Seen Via Carter Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's plan to increase energy development in the West could pit farmers, and possibly even homeowners, against energy companies in a battle for scarce water supplies, government officials told Congress on Tuesday.

Representatives of the Interior Department and the Environmental Protection Agency told a Senate Energy subcommittee that since most water in the arid and semi-arid West is already accounted for, stepped up extraction of energy supplies could pose major problems.

"Energy development in the West will greatly intensify existing water problems," said Alan Merson, a Denver-based EPA official.

And Assistant Interior Secretary Guy Martin told the panel that the large quantitites of water needed for new energy development such as oil shale and coal gasification as well as for electric power generation will have to be obtained from various existing uses.

"In the West, agriculture is the most significant existing use," Martin noted.

He said that energy companies "can pay considerably higher rates for water than other competing uses and might bargain for the available supply."

Sen. Floyd K. Haskell, D-Colo., chairman of the energy production subcommittee, sounded the same theme, noting "competition for water will become more pronounced."

"Agricultural or residential (water) users are in a poor position to compete with energy industries which can afford to pay 10 to 100 times as much for water without destroying the economics of their operations," Haskell said.

His subcommittee is holding hearings on whether there is enough water in the West to accomodate increases in energy development called for in Carter's energy proposals.

Haskell cited such water-thirsty projects as oil shale development, coal slurry pipelines, coal gasification and liquifaction and cooling for new electrical plants — projects expected to be stressed in "Phase Two" of Carter's energy proram, now being assembled by administration officials.

Deputy Energy Secretary John F. O'Leary told the panel it might be making too much of the water demands of the energy industry in the West.

The trend that sees more and more Americans moving "to the sunbelt will be a much more pervasive influence on water resource requirements," O'Leary testified. And he said expansion of industry in general, not just energy companies, in the West will put tough demands on water supplies.

O'Leary acknowledged that much of the water that will be used by energy industries will have to come from existing sources in the West, especially agriculture. He said irrigation of farmlands now accounts for 90 percent of all water used in the West.

"In certain cases, it appears that selected transfer of water use from agriculture to energy might be achieved by improved use of water on farms and choice of different crops," he testified.

That brought a sharp rebuke from Sen. Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., who said such steps could place another burden on already financially strapped farmers.

O'Leary agreed that "we must be careful to avoid any major disruption of agricultural operations or unacceptable social impacts."

The energy official said water supply and demand will be considered as the administration puts together Phase Two of its energy plan.

Woman Of Modest Means Leaves Wealth To Heirs

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Mildred McAndrew Greene didn't have much money to divide among her heirs when she died, but she counted her wealth in other things and apparently hoped her family would too.

Mrs. Greene, who died in January at age 67, wrote a will in which she parceled out the trees and shrubs in her yard to her relatives.

"I leave to the boys my once-beautiful boxwoods, to each grandchild their own rose to tenderly and lovingly care for and with the sweet desire that they will live as pretty as the rose.

"To each of my children and grandchildren, I bequeath one and every tree, regardless of how scraggly or twisted, with the thought that they are nature's most beautiful productions, giving oxygen, cooling the air ..."

"To each of you I bequeath the trees' psychological effect upon people, their calm as a haven for times of tension and everyday living," Mrs. Greene wrote.

"Mother was a wonderful woman," said Mrs. Jewel Norwood, one of Mrs. Greene's three daughters. "She left us with some beautiful things.

"Our mother was wealthy," agreed Stanley Greene, one of her four sons. "And we're all much richer because she lived."

Solons Criticize Limit Proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal to limit the tenure of members of Congress, sponsored largely by freshman senators, got a cool reception Monday from a subcommittee chairman who is serving his third Senate term.

In a statement opening hearings by the constitution subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said he had "serious reservations on the merits of these proposals."

Bayh, who was first elected to the Senate in 1962, said the subcommittee should determine whether the two proposed constitutional amendments would weaken the legislative branch and whether the federal government would work as well "if it relied on less experienced federal legislators."

The proposal also drew oppposition from a panel of political scientists.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., one of the sponsors of the proposed amendments, said on the other hand that a term limitation would revive "the concept of the citizen-legislator" and guard against "the dangers inherent in the rise of congressional careerism."

"We will remind each member of Congress that he is not, by virtue of his election, a member of some ruling class, but a citizen on leave to his government," Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., a co-sponsor, added.

Another sponsor, Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., said, "All too often we forget that we are farmers, teachers and businessmen, not Greek gods."

DeConcini, Danforth and Hayakawa all are serving their first terms in the Senate. Other Senate sponsors of the amendments are freshman Sens. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., and Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who is in his fourth term.

DeConcini said the hearings are believed to be the first ever held by a congressional panel on the issue, although dozens of similar proposals have been introduced in the past.

Both of the proposed amendments would limit senators to two six-year terms plus two years of an unexpired term. One would limit House members to seven two-year terms and the other to six two-year terms, plus one year of an unexpired term. The terms already served by congressmen in office when the amendments took effect would not count.

BURIAL BENEFITS!

NO PHYSICAL EXAM NEEDED!

Social Security provides $255.00 for burial—far short of the amount needed to pay today's funeral expenses. According to a survey conducted by the Wall Street Journal, the average funeral in the United States costs $1600.00. By the time last illness expenses (hospital and doctor) are added, these costs may approach $2,000.00 to $3,000.00.

Combined Underwriters has designed Policy Form 74-LW which is a whole life nonparticipating policy which will assist you in meeting these final obligations. Rates can never be increased on this funeral service policy.

This plan is available on an individual or family basis. Other plans are available, including coverages for those persons with health problems. To obtain complete information for yourself and your family, without obligation, return the coupon and this information will be furnished.

Airport Panel Approves Airline

A-J Correspondent

CLOVIS — Air Midwest, a certificated carrier out of Wichita, Kan., was facility in the tri-city area. He hoped there would be a possibility of its being built at Clovis.

The resolution passed by the airport committee will be presented to the city commission at their regular weekly meeting Thursday night.

Less than a year ago the city of Clovis erected a terminal at Cannon Air Force Base at a cost of approximately $35,000 for Texas INternational Airlines. The airline recently declared its intentions of abondoning its service to Clovis.

Crown Air, which has been offering service from Clovis to Albuquerque and Clovis to Lubbock, made a bid for replacing Texas International seveal weeks ago following the announcement.

Since that time several airlines have expressed an interest in succeeding TIA. March 2 the Clovis city commission declined to adopt a resolution favoring Crown Aviation as the successor to Texas International Airlines as the airport board previously had rejected a motion to rec-ommend designation of Crown Aviation as the city's choice.

Jim Malloy, chairman of Clovis Industrial Commission, told the city commission at the March 2 meeting that the federal Civil Aeronatuics Board has indicated in would "look closely" at approval of a certificated airline for Clovis when TIA is no longer in the picture. He said several small airlines have indicated an interest in achieving certification.

It was brought out that although achieving certification is costly and time consuming, an airline must have CAB certification before it is elible for federal subsidy money. TIA is currently getting about $790,000 annually as a subsidy for serving Clovis, Roswell, Carlsbad and Hobbs.

Bill Davis of Crown Aviation said he felt a commuter airline could operate at Clovis without the necessity of getting aid in the form of subsidy.

John Hamilton, a partner in an airline called Air New Mexico based in Roswell, told the city commission at a recent meeting that while his airline could not immediately begin service to Clovis, Air New Mexico was interested in serving all of southeastern New Mexico including Clovis. Application has been made for certification of Air New Mexico, he said. He indicated he would like to make a firm proposal at a later date.

Tech Energy Symposium Opens

Americans will have to alter the structure of society and increase total productivity to meet the rising costs of alternative energy sources, according to Dr. Harry W. Parker, professor of chemical engineering at Texas Tech University.

Parker gave the opening address for the "Energy Outlook '78" symposium which began at Texas Tech Monday afternoon and will continue through today.

Parker worked for 14 years in research for Phillips Petroleum Co. Most of his research was in oil shale and commercial utilization of mesquite.

"Adjustments of the entire political, economic and social structures are needed to find solutions to the energy problem," he said.

Problems in dealing with energy solutions include the fact that inflation increases construction costs and those costs increase energy costs.

Low intensity and intermittent availability are also factors in the high costs of alternative energy sources such as solar, geothermal and wind power, according to Parker.

The speaker said America is a high energy society, and that there are no "cheap" alternatives. "To use some of the energy alternatives available, there will be a decrease in the standard of living and increased social strife," Parked added.

Parker proposed increased productivity, conservation to a limit and public education as solutions.

"There is no cheap way out, but long hard work in all fields will be needed for solutions to the energy problem," Parker concluded.

Other speakers for Monday's activities included Dr. David K. Davies, professor and chairman of the Department of Geosciences at Tech, and U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger.

Dr. Stephan Riter, Texas A&M engineering professor, will speak tonight.

Students Compete In Academic Meet

Argentine Prison Inmates Riot

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Inmates at Argentina's largest prison attacked guards and set fire to bedding and furniture Tuesday and police said 44 persons died and 30 were injured seriously before the riot was crushed.

It was among the worst prison riots on record, surpassing the death toll of 43 at New York's Attica prison in 1971.

Prison officials said the dead were asphixiated as flames spread through a cellblock housing 161 men at the crowded Villa Devoto prison 10 miles northwest of the city center.

But residents near the high-walled prison said they heard gunfire and explosions during the uprising, which broke out at 6:20 a.m. (7:20 a.m. CST) and was reported under control at 9 a.m. (10 a.m. CST.)

Police said guards were among the casualties, but did not say how many.

An official communique said the rioters attacked guards during a morning inspection and blockaded the entrance to the cellblock with bedding when their attack failed. They set fire to the bedding, and flames spread through the cellblock before firemen could move in, it said.

Prison guards lobbed teargas grenades into the second floor of the cell block as army troops surrounded the prison to prevent escapes.

The independent news agency Noticias Argentinas said one guard was taken hostage early in the uprising and later killed.

The agency said two cars raced past the prison entrance shortly before the riot and fired at guards, but that report was unconfirmed by official sources.

After the riot ambulances escorted by police motorcycles took the injured to hospitals with burn centers.

The prison was built for 2,500 prisoners but reportedly houses more than 4,000, about 80 percent of them women. Local human rights groups claim 2,000 of the inmates are political prisoners jailed since the armed forces seized power two years ago and moved to eliminate leftwing guerrillas.

Prison officials said all prisoners in cellblock seven, where the riot erupted, were common criminals.

Many prisons in Argentina have become overcrowded as arrests of suspected subversives swelled their populations.

The military junta says it holds about 3,600 political prisoners, but human rights sources here and abroad say 7,000 to 15,000 other Argentines have disappeared since the coup.

Last year the Carter administration reduced military and economic aid to Argentina in an effort to end alleged abuses of human rights. Argentina responded by rejecting all U.S. military aid.

House Votes To Keep Present Debt Ceiling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee, whose bill to raise the limit on the national debt by $72 billion was rejected by the House last week, voted Tuesday to retain the present ceiling through July 31.

A bill freezing the limit at $752 billion until Aug. 1 was approved unanimously, but not without some grumbling.

Rep. Abner Mikva, D-Ill., noted that the measure would require Congress to take another vote on a higher debt limit in July — in the heat of the primary-election campaign.

"That's a real political pickle," Mikva said after the vote. "I've swum upstream as many times as I'm going to."

Mikva added that the timing gives opposing candidates for Congress a golden opportunity to accuse incumbents of voting for uncontrolled spending if they don't oppose the higher debt.

Voting for the higher limit only acknowledges the debts already run up by the government. Raising the ceiling only authorizes the Treasury to borrow the money to pay the debts.

"It's such a dumb idea that people think there is more to it than there is," Mikva added.

Mikva's comments indicated why House Democratic leaders are trying to end the periodic requirement that the debt ceiling be raised. But the House last week defeated that effort, which would have resulted in the ceiling being established automatically as part of the congressional budget-making process.

Although there is widespread agreement that the debt ceiling has done little to reduce federal spending, some members say Congress needs to have to vote directly on the issue at least once a year in order to be aware of the size of the debt.

The existing limit of $752 billion expires on March 31. In the absence of further congressional action, the government's borrowing authority would drop then to $400 billion, leaving the Treasury with no way to pay its bills.

The Ways and Means Committee voted earlier this month to raise the ceiling to $824 billion through March 1, 1979. That figure was slightly below what the Carter administration had recommended.

The House last week voted 248-165 against that limit. That left the committeer of simply dice of arbitrarily slashing the proposed ceiling or of simply delaying a decision for a few months. The panel chose the latter.

Settlement Reached In Eviction Lawsuit

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Adeline K. Moffett, who reacted to billionaire John D. MacArthur's eviction order by filing a $200 million suit, has agreed to an undisclosed cash settlement with attorneys of the late tycoon.

Mrs. Moffett, former wife of onetime Standard Oil Board Chairman James Moffett, and MacArthur began their feud when she refused to pay her apartment rent after her antique furniture was damaged in 1969 by a roof leak in the building owned by MacArthur.

When MacArthur evicted her from the $150-a-month apartment in 1973, Mrs. Moffett sued, saying she suffered from the eviction publicity.

Terms of the settlement were dictated by MacArthur before he died last January, said the billionaire's aide, Ron Kairella.

"The amount probably won't pay half her attorney fees," Kairella said. "Mr. MacArthur's attitude was that, just because he was wealthy, why should he have to support a bogus claim for a woman who was once wealthy and now is destitute?"

Temple Banker Faces Sharp Questioning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Temple banker H.K. Allen, President Carter's nominee as vice chairman of the U.S. Export-Import Bank, underwent sharp questioning about some of his bank loans during his confirmation hearing Tuesday.

Most of the questions were asked by Sens. William Proxmire, chairman of the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, and Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., a committee member.

Proxmire, D-Wis., said he was concerned about loans made by the First National Bank of Dallas to Allen from 1960 to 1972 and which eventually totaled $1 million.

Proxmire said he was specifically concerned about the preferential interest rates accorded Allen that were from two to four percentage points below the prime interest rates at that time.

The senator also asked Allen if he was aware of an FBI investigation of his stock loans, meaning he borrowed money to buy stock in other banks.

Allen said he was told about the investigation about two months ago.

The banker said that after 1972 the interest rates he paid on loans from First National of Dallas were at the prime rate because of questions that were raised.

The FBI report indicated the U.S. attorney in Dallas at that time felt Allen was not engaged in any wrongdoing and that it was a common practice in Texas.

Proxmire and Stevenson also questioned Allen as to his qualifications to be vice chairman of an organization dealing with world banking.

Sen. John Tower of Texas, a committee member who supports the Allen nomination, was at the hearing Tuesday.

An aide to Stevenson, Bob Russell, told the Dallas Times Herald Monday that Stevenson asked the White House to withdraw Allen's nomination to avoid "potential embarrassment."

Allen has three small Texas banks and is a director of First International Bancshares Inc, a giant Dallas-based bank holding company. He was nominated by Carter last December to the $50,000 a year post.

A White House spokesman said Monday that Carter would stand behind his choice of Allen.

"We think Mr. Allen is well qualified for the position," deputy White House Press secretary Rex Granum said. "We certainly hope and predict that he will win confirmation."

Stevenson and Proxmire feel Allen doesn't have the experience to serve on the board of the import-export bank, known as EXIMBANK.

"He's just a small town banker," Russell said. "The senator (Stevenson) feels that he just doesn't have a broad understanding of the world."

Russell said Stevenson approached top White House officials last month and asked the Carter withdraw the nomination, but the President refused.

"We gave them an opportunity to avoid potential embarrassment," Russell said.

There were 71 cities world-wide that had populations of one million or more in 1950. By 1975, this figure had jumped to 181, says the Population Reference Bureau.

Stove Club Solves World's Problems

Ashton and several other members of the Hot Stove Club were gathered for their usual early morning chat around the big stove tucked away in a corner of the cluttered store.

"We give our expert advice to President Carter and Gov. (James A.) Rhodes," he added.

It's 9 a.m. There's coffee on the stove and the well worn chairs are filled. "If you don't come early, you don't get a seat," one club member said with a grin.

The hardware store has been in the Connell family for 106 years. The Hot Stove Club was begun on the store's 100th anniversary in 1972, said Ralph Connell, the proprietor. That's when Connell set the huge potbellied stove up in a corner he'd dedicated to nostalgia.

Fred A. Kibbey, a charter member of the fireside sitters who works in the store, said that although "there's always been a crowd here mornings," the stove went unused until last winter's gas shortage.

"We fired it up then," he said, to heat the ground floor of the store. Offices above are heated by a furnace.

The "loafers," as Connell calls his morning visitors, enjoyed the stove so much that "this winter, we just naturally fired her up."

The store opens at 8 a.m. Club members begin arriving about an hour later, Kibbey said. By 10, the meeting's dispersed, although some may return in the afternoon, he said.

The club has maybe 20 members and dues are a lump of coal and a couple of chunks of wood.

"Every now and then, one of them brings in a few sticks of wood" to help stoke up the old potbelly, Connell said. Mostly the oldtimers drink coffee and talk.

Most of the fireside philosophers are retired, said Kibbey, himself a retired postal employee who began work at the store five years ago.

Ashton, 68, and Ed Tope, 63, are also former postal employees.

Tope said he's whiled away his mornings in Connell's since a heart attack slowed him down in 1972. "I had to have some place to spend my time and enjoy it."

"I know them all real well," Connell said. "If we're real busy, they even help out sometimes."

Official Says State Department Reviewing U.S. Status Of PLO

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is reviewing the status of the Palestine Liberation Organization in the United States, department spokesman Hodding Carter said Tuesday.

But department officials said it was not clear that the United States can do anything about the PLO's United Nations mission and information office in New York.

Israeli Ambassador Simcha Dinitz asked the department to close down PLO operations in the United States after a PLO terrorist group attacked a tourist bus in Tel Aviv last weekend, killing 33 people. The Israelis are trying to have the PLO branded as a criminal organization in international circles.

The PLO has been granted observer status by the United Nations over U.S. and Israeli opposition. As such, its mission in New York is protected by the U.N. Headquarters Agreement.

The agreement which accompanied the location of U.N. headquarters in New York obliges the United States not to interfere with diplomatic missions and guests invited to New York by the United Nations, according to one department legal expert who asked not to be identified.

The Palestinians have also had an information office in New York since 1965. The legal expert said its status was not as clear as that of the U.N. mission.

The legal adviser said that the information office is run by permanent resident aliens who are entitled under law to be in the United States.

Under a 1977 law sponsored by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., the government cannot flatly bar all members of any organization unless it can show that they jeopardize national security. In individual cases it must show that the individual, and not just his organization, is a threat to security.

The legal adviser did not know the size of the PLO groups in each of the New York offices.

Area's Alcohol Outlay Cited

By FRANK COATS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Citizens in the 15-county area served by the South Plains Association of Governments annually spend up to $30 million on alcohol, according to an update of a regional alcoholism plan.

The Regional Alcoholism Plan for 1978, adopted Tuesday by the governmental panel, further states that alcohol abuse and alcoholism cause problems for 88,500 people in the area and cost more than $45 million in health care, law enforcement, traffic mishaps and social services each year.

The program adopted — which will cost about $1 million — outlines long range goals and the short range objectives of the program in some detail.

The long-term goals include having a regional network of treatment and rehabilitation services; available public information and education services; service training for people working in criminal justice, health or social welfare; established procedures for treatment and diversion of alcohol offenders; and working with employee assistance programs.

The short term goals include remedial education classes for persons convicted of driving under the influence of alcohol; establishing special needs studies for minorities, young persons, women and the elderly; and an extended living facility.

This last listed item is for people who need more rehabilitation than the current 90-day stay in a halfway house allows, Ed Paul, Alcohol and Drug Abuse Coordinator for SPAG, said.

The estimated cost for this facility is $50,000.

The $1 million in funding for the program will be divided into $350,000 in state funding, $100,000 in federal, and $550,000 in other funding.

Paul said the unidentified funding would come from various sources, such as a man working while in a halfway house and contributing part of his salary toward his treatment.

The association also gave favorable comment to second-year funding for Project Intercept, the alternative schooling plan for those students who previously would have been expelled or suspended.

The grant for the funding, which will come from the Criminal Justice Advisory Committee, reaches a total of $97,145, out of which Lubbock County will contribute $5,080 and the Lubbock Independent School District — which administers the program — will contribute $25,211.

Dorothy Miller, director of the Criminal Justice Committee of SPAG, reported Project Intercept as having an 88 percent success rate, with all but five of 42 assigned students being returned to normal classes.

The board also delayed any discussion of the SPAG contract with the Texas Boys Ranch.

"Vocational Training and Remedial Education" was the title of a program funded by the Criminal Justice Division on SPAG's recommendation which is implemented at the Texas Boys Ranch.

The Criminal Justice Advisory Committee is currently monitoring the program because only 25 percent of the clients served are Texas Boys Ranch residents.

The other 75 percent are students from the Roosevelt Independent School District, which does not have a vocational program available.

Panel To Discuss Ticket-Fixing Charge

HOUSTON (UPI) — A television reporter Tuesday said the Texas Commission on Judicial Conduct, at its regular meeting this weekend, will discuss alleged ticket-fixing by local police and judges.

A commission spokesman refused to reveal the subject of the meeting Friday and Saturday in Austin. A police spokesman and the presiding municipal judge in Houston denied improper dismissal of traffic citations.

Bkt Marvin Zindler, reporter-commentator for KTRK-TV in Houston, said the commission staff has asked him to bring videotapes that he said prove illicit fixing of traffic citations for friends and fellow officials.

"I'd say that almost every judge in Harris County has been involved in dismissing tickets, but to me it's ... ticket-fixing," Zindler said.

"You've got thousands of people who are not VIPs that have to pay their traffic tickets and then the VIPs and the politicians get their tickets taken care of and I think it's wrong."

Zindler said his "primary target" is Rodney D. Parrott, presiding judge of the municipal court in Houston.

"I don't think Judge Parrott ought to be in office," he said. "He has fixed more tickets than anybody else in the State of Texas."

Parrott rejects Zindler's charges.

"I think it's entirely false, misleading, irresponsible reporting and other than that I have no comment on it," said Parrott, president of the American Judges Association and the Texas Municipal Courts Foundation.

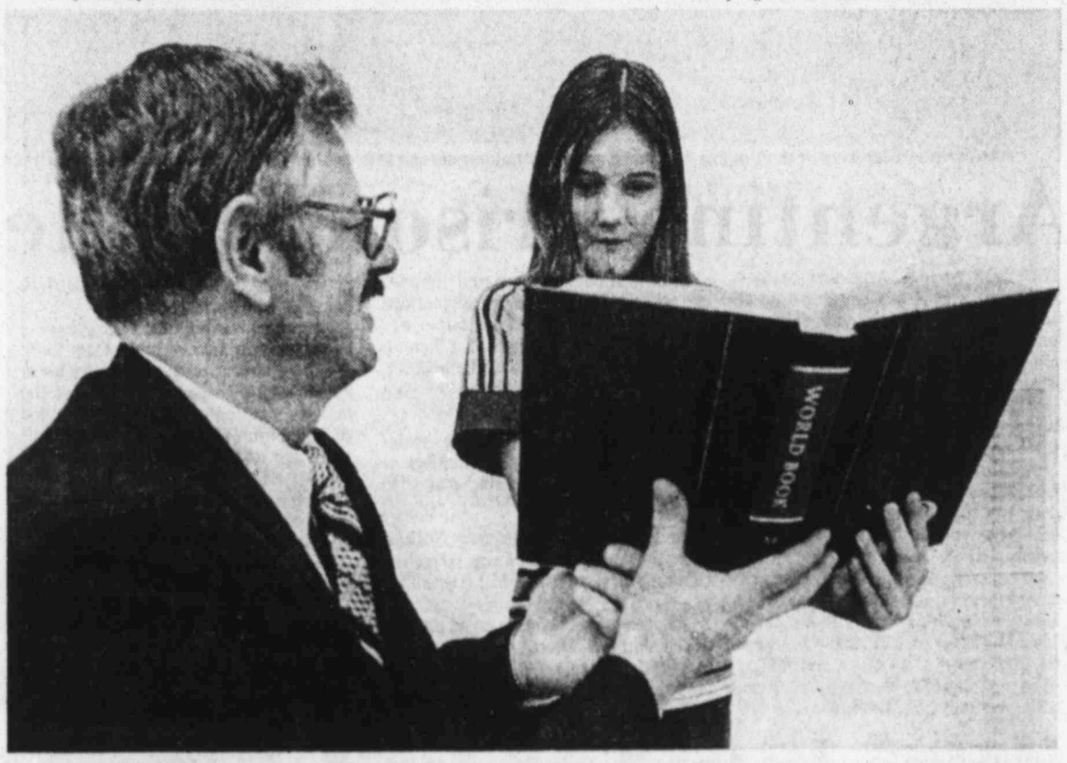

Spokesman Rick Hartley of the Houston Police Department also denied Zindler's charge.

A spokesman for the commission said, "Mr. Zindler can talk, but we can't. We're just prohibited by the constitution (of Texas)."

The 11-member commission of judges, attorneys and lay people appointed by the Texas Supreme Court, the State Bar of Texas and the governor has the power of subpoena and investigation in cases of alleged judicial misconduct.

If the commission decides to investigate a matter, they usually appoint a special master who holds a hearing and makes findings of fact which are presented to the commission.

The commission then decides whether a judge is innocent or reprimand or removal by the Supreme Court is in order.

TOP MYSTERY SLEUTH — Kay White, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary White of 3416 49th St., takes a look at still another book as one of the winners of the annual Multiple Sclerosis Read-a-thon sponsored by the Lubbock chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society. Kay will receive a set of World Book Encyclopedias for reading the most to help solve the mysteries of multiple sclerosis. Jim Bales, district manager for World Book and Childcraft, will make the presentation. MS Mystery Sleuths, Lubbock participants in the project in grades 4,5, and 6, have read 6,842 books this year, collecting $6,641.28 through sponsors agreeing to pledge small sums for each book read by a student within a defined time. Nationally, the MS Read-a-thon fund-raising goal for 1978 is more than $13,000,000. (Staff Photo)

Californians Feel Quake Aftershock

LA HABRA, Calif. (AP) — A small earthquake aftershock rolled through this eastern Los Angeles County community Tuesday, but aside from one cracked window, no damage was reported.

The tremor, rated by California Institute of Technology seismologists at 2.6 on the Richter scale, touched off a flurry of calls to police.

"Most of them just wanted to know if it had been an earthquake," a police dispatcher said. "But there was almost no damage. Just one cracked window."

Tuesday's temblor was an aftershock to Monday's quake, which registered 3.4 on the Richter scale but caused minimal damage.

Both were centered one mile west of this residential community along the Los Angeles-Orange county border.

'Just Another Dish' Valued at $1750.00.

NORTHBROOK, Ill.—A major art exchange here reports that a man who found several "dishes" in his attic was amazed to learn that one was valued at $1750.00.

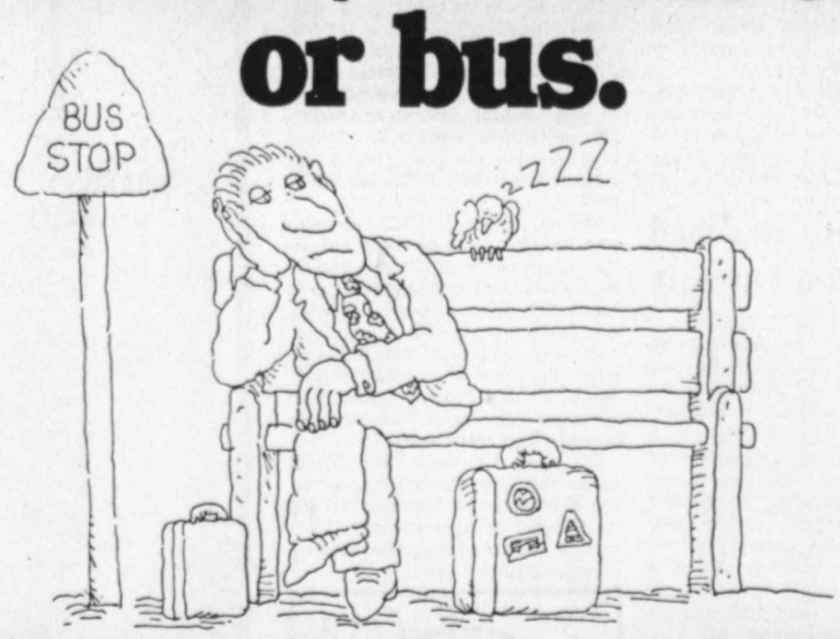

The exchange says that, while this price is unusually high, exceptional collector's plates have been appreciating quickly on the market.

To aid investors, the exchange offers a free report on what to look for, when to buy, what to pay and much more, including opportunities in promising plates still at low prices.

To get your free report with no obligation, just send your name, address, and zip code to the Bradford Exchange, 85411 Bradford Place, Northbrook, Illinois 60062. A postcard will do. To be sure of receiving your free copy, please mail your request before Saturday of next week.

Chamber Fete To Feature Tech Coach

Texas Tech University head football coach Rex Dockery will be a featured guest at this month's Lubbock Chamber of Commerce Breakfast Club Thursday at 7 a.m. in the Palace, 50th Street and Avenue Q.

Special guests will be the city council and school board candidates, who will be subjected to a short "roasting" during the breakfast program.

Results of the Southwest Junior Livestock Show, which ended its three-day run Wednesday, will be announced during the breakfast. Cindy Sageser of Cotton Center and Aricka Speer of Idalou, SJLS 4-H and FFA Princesses, respectively, also are scheduled to attend the breakfast.

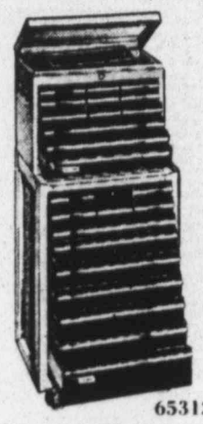

Sponsor for the breakfast is Service Title Company, with Bill McAlister serving as emcee and Bernie Howell providing organ music.

A drawing for $20 will be held at the close of the breakfast. Only Chamber of Commerce members are eligible for the drawing and must be present at the breakfast.

CONTEMPORARY 2 Story
If your tastes dictate a home that is not like every other home on the block — our opinion is that you will LOVE this 2 story contemporary home with a blush of conservatism. Master BR on the ground floor, separate powder room, superb dining area, lovely den-living that is complimented by a handsome firepalce and beautiful staircase. Upstairs there are two bedrooms (terrific view) and a semi-pullman bath. Summer fun is yours on a 22x12 covered and protected patio. Price 46,950 WE REPEAT 46,950.

A LEFF-RIGHT HOUSE
Curved streets make it slow moving to get to. But WOW for pleasant living and safety for the kids. Extremely nice 3 BR with a living room that has an attractive wrought iron separative for pleasant dining. Refrigerated air, 2 car garage and a very pretty color format. AND BEST OF ALL this home is only 28,500 with payments of $251.00. The loan is established & the equity is $6848.00. We believe this is one-if not the most reasonable-equity in our city. Check this home $6848 EQUITY

When young people sign up for newspaper route work, they are really signing up for independence. The kind of independence that goes with earning your own money, running your own business and dealing with people on a one-to-one basis.

Our carriers are young business men and women. They provide a vital service, handle their own finances and reap a handsome profit from their efforts. What better training to prepare them for the future?

If you are interested in stepping into the business world and declaring your own independence, contact our carrier manager right now. He'll give you all of the important facts about carrier work. Then, if you are still interested, he'll provide the pen and show you where to sign . . . even if your name is John Hancock.

NOTIFICATION OF FUND AVAILABILITY (NOFA) Number TX16-0015. The Department of Housing and Urban Development will accept Preliminary Proposals for newly constructed family housing units under the Section 8 Housing Assistance Payments Program, to be located in the following Texas Council of Government areas: Nonmetropolitan: Texoma Regional Planning Commission. Metropolitan: Panhandle Regional Planning Commission (PRPC), South Plains Association of Governments (SPAG), Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission (PBRPC), West Texas Council of Governments (WTCOG). Proposals may be submitted by Public Housing Agency (PHA) Owners or by private individuals authorized by PHA's to submit on their behalf. Metropolitan Areas (PRPC, SPAG, PBRPC, WTCOG) Contract authority in the amount of $775,000 is being made available to provide assistance for an estimated 100 units for large families (3 or more bedrooms) and 150 units for other families for a total of 250 units. Proposals for metropolitan areas must be received by 1:00 P.M. on April 7, 1978. This deadline may be shortened or extended by HUD. In such case HUD will notify all parties who have previously registered with the field office requesting such notification. Nonmetropolitan Areas (Texoma) Contract authority in the amount of $217,000 is being made available to provide assistance for an estimated 24 units for large families (3 or more bedrooms) and 46 units for other families for a total of 70 units. Projects to be located in nonmetropolitan areas are not subject to a submission deadline. However, if a sufficient number of non-metropolitan proposals to fully utilize the available contract authority are not submitted prior to 1:00 P.M. on April 7, 1978, HUD may cancel this Notification and reallocate any unused funds to another nonmetropolitan allocation area. Submission deadline shall not apply to Proposals for projects in which the number of assisted units will be limited to 20 percent or less of the dwelling units. However, such proposals received after the deadline will be reviewed only if sufficient contract authority remains from this Notification to fund the proposal. If additional funds are made available the estimated maximum number of units in the Metropolitan and Nonmetropolitan Areas may be exceeded for this NOFA. In addition we will issue a NOFA for those allocation areas (COG's) not covered herein. Appropriate instructions, forms and other program information are contained in a Developer's Packet which may be obtained from the following: Dallas Area Office, Department of Housing and Urban Development, 2001 Bryan Tower — 4th Floor, Dallas, Texas 75201. New York City Again Eyes Federal Treasury

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Tokyo and New York City, two of the largest cities in the world, are in deep financial trouble. New York is near default and Tokyo has been rescued from bankruptcy, at least temporarily, by its federal government. Here, in the first of two parts, is a look at New York City's financial situation.)

By LEE MITGANG

NEW YORK (AP) — For the third straight year, New York City is unsure if it can avoid bankruptcy. It is a fate that is unavoidable, the city says, unless President Carter comes to the rescue.

Although New York's problems are no less urgent than they were three years ago when default first threatened, a hoped-for federal, state and local partnership to guarantee the city's survival appears to be taking shape.

A Carter program designed to ensure New York's survival was presented by Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal to Congress on March 2. It offered a 15-year federal guarantee on $2 billion in long-term city bonds on a "standby basis," that is, effective only if the city tries and fails to borrow on its own.

But the idea of backing city bonds with federal credit was turned down three years ago when the city was shut out of the bond market, and is almost certain to face a tough battle on Capitol Hill.

The city has three problems. The first is a $457 million budget deficit projected for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Second, the city still can't borrow on its own. Like all cities, New York's monthly expenses come in a steady flow, but the tax money and state and federal aid needed to pay its bills comes in far less evenly. Short-term borrowing is therefore necessary.

However, the temporary short-term loans New York received from the federal government and city pension funds under a three-year emergency plan expire on June 30. So far, the city has failed to persuade Carter to back an extension of the emergency loans.

The third problem is that the city must find a way to sell long-term bonds needed to repair badly deteriorating schools, buildings and other city-owned facilities, or to build new structures. If Carter's plan is passed in Congress, this problem would be partially solved.

Newly elected Mayor Edward I. Koch is relying on city banks and city and state pension funds to buy those federally-backed bonds and extend the city an additional $2.5 billion to $3 billion in credit to meet the city's capital needs through 1982.

If not, Koch said in a recent interview, "then we have no financial plan and we won't be able to get out of this mess."

Like Tokyo which has also had to go begging for federal aid to avoid bankruptcy, Koch quipped, "New York could also use some yen."

The city has nearly solved its immediate budget problem. Gov. Hugh Carey, aiming to please in a gubernatorial election year, has promised the city $200 million in state aid to help balance next year's budget.

Koch himself promised $174 million in budget savings, including tightening welfare rolls, cutbacks in city purchases and a partial hiring freeze.

In his four-year plan outlined in January. Koch proposed job cutbacks totaling 20,000, added to the 61,000 already eliminated from the workforce in the past three years. Included would be 1,000 fewer police in the coming year.

That leaves a budget hole of only $83 million to plug by June, and Koch says Carter has indicated he is willing to take "administrative steps" not requiring congressional approval to fill the gap.

The situation suggests another down-to-the-wire race against bankruptcy in June, but Koch appears confident he can muster support for the city in Washington.

"We obviously will know well before June whether or not sentiment for passage of the necessary legislation is there, and I'm convinced it will be," he says.

Perhaps the biggest obstacle to the city's well-being is labor talks that began Feb. 27, affecting 225,000 of the city's 250,000-person workforce. The outcome will determine whether the city's delicately balanced budget for next year will stay balanced.

City unions are demanding large — though as yet unspecified — pay hikes to make up for a partial wage freeze and deferrals that took effect as part of the city rescue plan devised three years ago. Many workers did, however, receive cost-of-living and productivity increases ranging from 6 percent to 15 percent during that time.

But Koch, who won election in November with a get-tough-with-the-unions campaign, has asked unions to surrender roughly $400 million in fringe benefits. Union officials responded the city appeared "intent on a confrontation."

"We cannot give what we don't have," Koch said in an interview. "If there's no food in the cupboard, we can't have a party, and that's the bottom line.

"If there are to be increases, they will have to come in one of two ways: by the unions demonstrating there are monies in the budget I am not aware of. Frankly, I don't think there is. Or, if they are able within the limitations of current salaries to find ways of saving costs through productivity in some form, then I am happy to negotiate over that ... But what we don't have, we can't give," Koch says.

Financially speaking, New York's annual woes are the direct result of borrowing and budget practices that caused its credit in the bond market to collapse three years ago. Since then, it has relied for its borrowing needs on federal loans, purchases of city debt by city pension funds and the Municipal Assistance Corp., an emergency borrowing agency set up by New York State.

Reform is taking place, both in computerizing the city's financial record keeping to make its budget numbers numbers believable, and gradually phasing out the gimmick of paying for current expenses by borrowing.

Felix Rohatyn, chairman of Municipal Assistance Corp. and the architect of the 1975 plan that rescued New York from bankruptcy, predicted recently the city won't be able to convince ordinary investors to buy long-term bonds before the early 1980s. At that time, the city's budget is supposed to be truly balanced according to "generally accepted accounting practices."

Until then, city and state officials are nearly unanimous that the city's cash and borrowing needs cannot be met without some kind of federal crutch.

Open House Scheduled

The Vocational Education for the Handicapped (VEH) program will host an open house and dedication at 10 a.m. Thursday in Ballinger Elementary School, 1110 40th St.

Guest speaker will by John Morgan, program specialist for the mental retardation division of the Texas Rehabilitation Commission.

The program trains handicapped students for future employment.

The More Things Change. . .

DEAN WEESE HAS seen a netful of changes since coming to Plainview and Wayland Baptist College about five years ago. And not all of those changes involve grillwork on new autos, expansion of the taco stand down the street or computerized registration techniques.

It's a changing world of girls athletics in which Weese lives and coaches. But just as it was a decade or so ago, Wayland is still right in the middle of it. Actually, near the top of it would be more accurate.

Take this week. Weese is preparing his Queens for the latest round of playoffs leading to the women's national collegiate basketball championship. Getting there is one change, but being there isn't; Weese has had his Queens on that national level three of the past four years.

Now, however, there is a different route to the finals. And the detour comes this week. It's known as a satellite tournament—actually four of them—and the winners from the series will make up the Final Four for the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (the female equivalent of the NCAA) championship tourney.

The Queens will be playing Ohio State Friday night at Denton (North Texas State), with Missouri and North Carolina State playing in the other tilt. The two winners collide Saturday for the championship.

From there, the four winners will converge on UCLA next week for the final scrap.

"IT'S A NEW format," Weese said Tuesday, in speaking of the satellite tournament. "It's on a one-year trial basis. We've had problems in the past finding a facility to handle 16 teams in the nationals, you need such a large coliseum and so much expense. But, they thought they'd try this and they can pay expenses for four teams."

The four satellite tourneys have drawn the winners from the AIAW's 12 regions, and, from last year's performances, four regions can send their runners-up to fill out the brackets. Thus, WBC (the Region IV winner) is going to Denton, and the runner-up (Stephen F. Austin) is going to another region.

Ohio State and Missouri are region winners, North Carolina a runner-up (after losing to Tennessee).

"I don't know, I've had some feedback from this (satellite) format. Some people are hesitant to go all the way to California to see two ball games, but they would have gone if more games were to be played (as in the 16-team field)."

IN HIS PREVIOUS four years at Wayland, after coming out of Spearman High, Weese has coached the Queens to the nationals three times, missing out only last year. Twice the Queens finished fifth, and two years ago, they were third.

But, those teams probably couldn't have fared so well now. The talent-level change has been for the better.

"It's unbelievable how much better the nationals are," Weese commented. "It's a combination of things. The high schools are getting better programs, consequently more scholarships are available.

"There is more publicity given to women's basketball. And the big schools. . . their programs are getting so good. They've put a lot of money into their programs."

This is indicated by the teams now barging to the top in the rankings. Whereas the Immaculatas and Delta States were the powers just a couple of years ago, the names now run more to the UCLAs, the LSUs, the Tennessees, and the North Carolina States.

"Girls are wanting to go to college to play basketball now, whereas not that many wanted to play a few years ago."

IN THE STATE, Texas has drastically beefed up its program, as has Tech and the other large universities. Baylor went to the nationals last year, beating out the Queens.

But, Wayland has been able to hang in with the larger schools. And, this time, Weese isn't moaning about his presence with the three schools whose combined enrollment tops 80,000.

"It's hard to rate," said Weese. "Possibly, we should be able to beat Ohio State. And North Carolina could beat Missouri. But, there, it would be a tossup, since they beat us 12 points up there (in January). I think we have as good a ball club at North Carolina; I don't think anyone is as tough as Stephen F. Austin and Louisiana Tech (in last week's regional meet).

"Stephen F. is just playing super, and it was one of those games where you sat there with a 15-point lead, and it seems like 2 (WBC won 86-70). But, we're going to have to have an outstanding performance from one player and steady games from the other starters. We're so well balanced that we'll be in good shape (with this plan).

"We had four outstanding players (Breena Caldwell, Marie Kocurek, Kathy Harston, Valerie Goodwin) in the tournament. But, (overall) we played as well as we have all year."

Not everything has changed.

'Football' Races Set

It's the Thumb & Finger Relays, and it's the football players vs. the football players.

Today at 3:45 p.m. in Jones Stadium, the Tech footballers will be matched, according to size and speed, in a series of races, it was reported.

The track meet is open to all fans, Tech officials reported.

The Tech footballers have been undergoing off-season conditioning and running work in preparation for spring training, and the track meet is a part of the program.

Nebraska Invades 'Drum'

The 17th-ranked Texas Longhorns outtalked the Cornhuskers in a fussfight for the right to host the National Invitational Basketball Tournament quarter-final game, leaving some bruised feelings in Lincoln, Neb.

And the home court advantage— particularly in the case of Southwest Conference co-champion Texas— is not something to be taken lightly; nor the coaching prowess of Lemons, who sometimes plays the clown then goes home with your wallet.

"Even though he is known for his wit, Abe is also at the top of the list of great college coaches today," said Cipriano. "He has done a tremendous job at Texas. . . playing at Texas will be a very tough assignment since nobody has won there yet this year, and Texas has played some very tough teams in Austin."

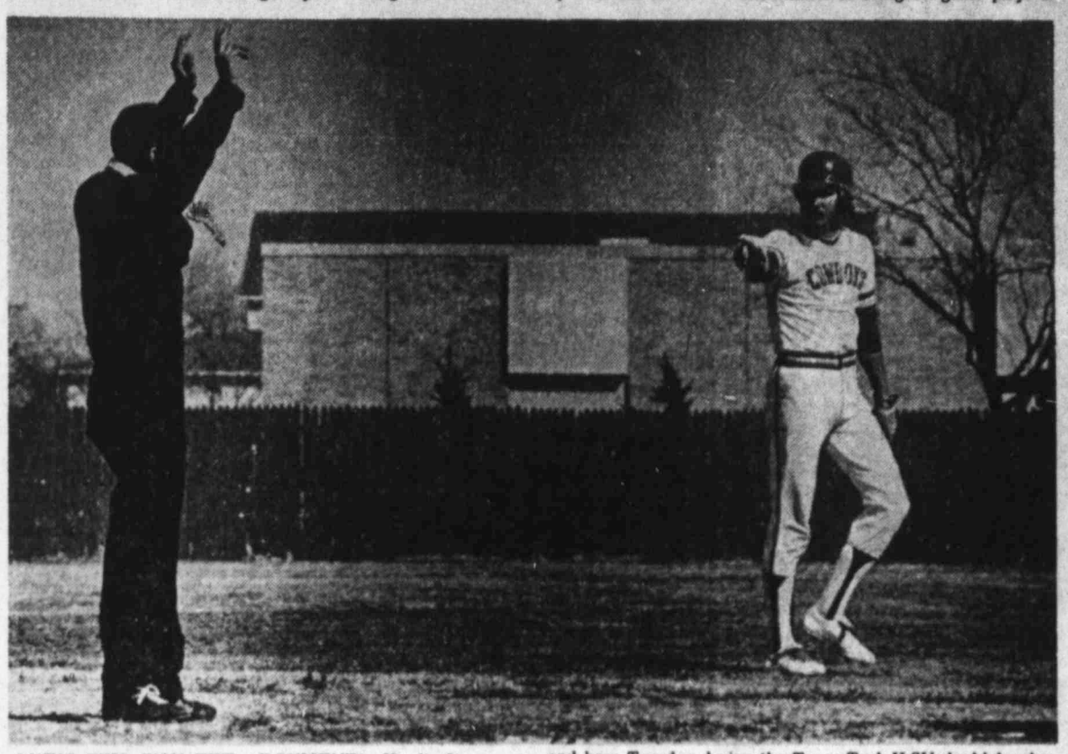

Cipriano has certainly done his homework. Texas is 14-0 in the new basketball facility.

A crowd of 14,000-plus watched Texas whip Temple 72-58 in a first round NIT game last Friday night. Nebraska nipped Utah State 67-66 as reserve forward Andre Smith came off the bench to score 18 points.

Nebraska, which is 22-7, could become the winningest team in the school's history with a victory. The 1920 team was 22-2.

Texas, 23-5, has the second best record in its history and is the highest scoring team in the school's annals at an 83.4 points-per-game clip.

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University athletic director Dick Davis resigned Tuesday in a move he described as a mutual one between himself and university president Dr. James Zumberge.

Davis, who held the post for four years, denied he was under any pressure to quit but confirmed his decision was not one-sided.

"I think it was a mutual thing between Dr. Zumberge and myself," Davis said. "Dr. Zumberge is new, and he would like to bring in some new people. It was not all my thinking. It was strictly a hand-in-glove operation between myself and Dr. Zumberge."

Zumberge said associate athletic director Dudley Parker will serve as acting.

WTC Falls To Casper In Tourney

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (Special)—Casper (Wyo.), the nation's top-ranked junior college basketball team, downed Western Texas College 61-57 Tuesday night in the first round of the National JC Tournament.

Casper thus advanced in the winners' bracket, while WTC will face a losers-bracket game at noon Thursday against Faulker (Ala.) State, the loser of Tuesday night's late game against Independence (Kan.).

Casper, 33-3, gradually pulled away in the first half to a 12-point advantage (28-16) that it held at intermission.

However, the Texans, 29-8, slowly chopped that down in the second half and came to within one point at 44-43 when John Morehead sank a tip-in with 7:58 remaining in the game.

However, the losers could get no closer, as Casper again pulled away to a seven-point advantage.

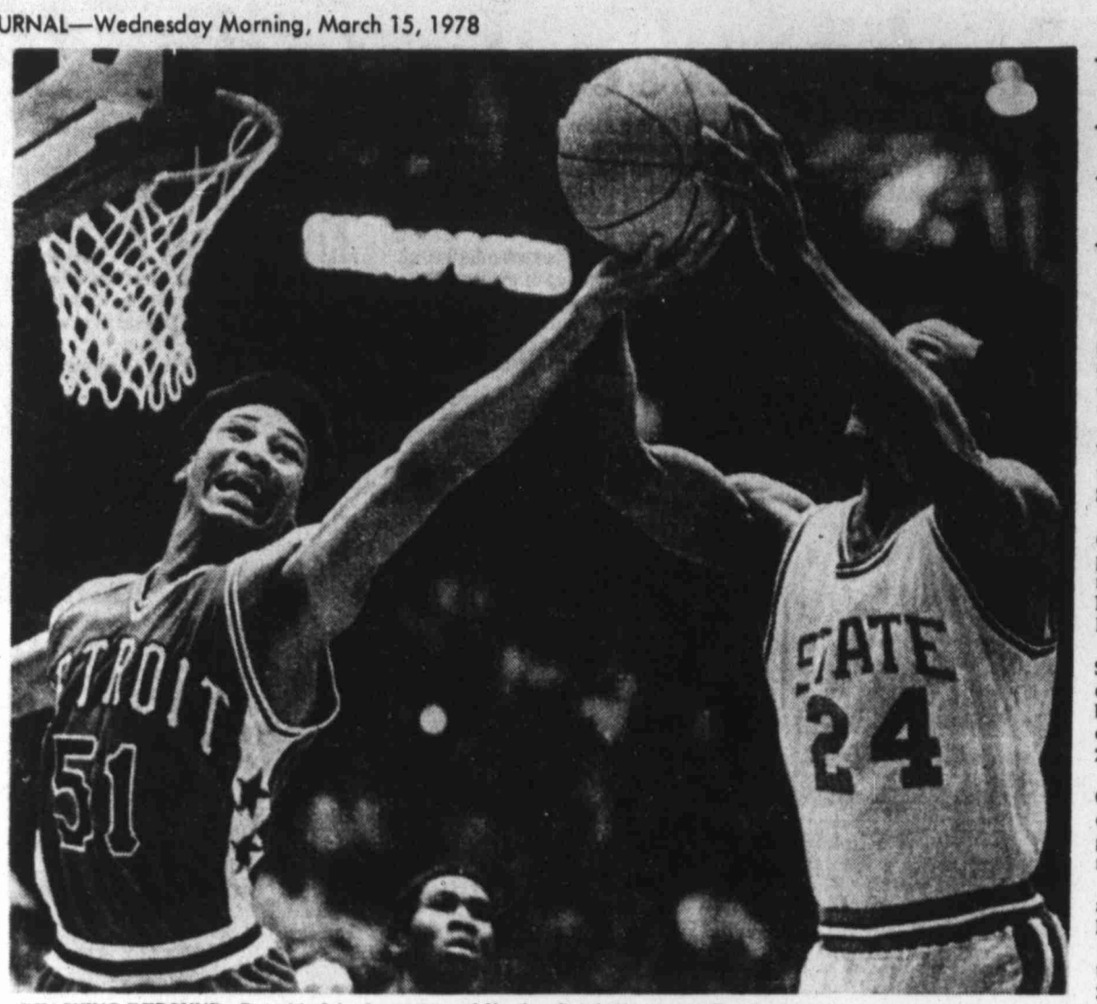

Kevin Sprewer topped Casper with 14 points, while Gerald Mathison scored 12. Doug Worthington led the Texans with 14 points, while Adam Beadle added 13 and Julio Gallardo nine.

Rutgers Edges Indiana State

By The Associated Press

Center James Bailey hit a jump shot with 17 seconds remaining to give Rutgers a 57-56 victory over Indiana State in a National Invitaion Tournament quarter-final game Tuesday night in Piscataway, N.J..

Rutgers, 23-6, will face the winner of Wednesday night's Nebraska-Texas contest in the NIT semifinals at Madison Square Garden Sunday.

Bailey, who played only 18 minutes because of foul trouble, scored just 13 points, but tallied the Scarlet Knight's final seven points. Abdel Anderson led Rutgers with 16 points while Hollis Copeland added 12.

All-America Larry Bird of Indiana State took game honors with 23 points, despite a box-and-one defense employed by Rutgers. Forward Harry Morgan added 18 for the Sycamores, who dropped to 23-9.

Ed Hopkins scored 18 points to lead Georgetown University to a 71-62 victory over Dayton Tuesday in a quarter-final game of the National Invitational Tournament in Dayton, Ohio.

The Hoyas from Washington, D.C., will advance into Sunday's NIT semifinals in New York City.

Hopkins hit 10 straight points for his team after Georgetown had fallen behind 33-32 early in the second half. The senior center's basket with 13:55 remaining in the game put the Hoyas ahead 38-37 and they led from then on.

A sellout crowd of 13,458 cheered wildly as Dayton came back from a 29-28 deficit and took the lead on the first basket of the second half. The Flyers built their margin to 37-34 before Hopkins scored three straight baskets and Georgetown increased its lead after that.

Kendall "Tiny" Pinder scored 18 points and Hawkeye Whitney added 17 as North Carolina State defeated 18th ranked Detroit 84-77 Tuesday night in the quarter-finals of the National Invitation Tournament in Raleigh, N.C.

After scoring the last eight points of the first half to take a 44-38 advantage, the taller Wolfpack dashed to a 55-44 margin three minutes into the second half.

But the Titans closed the gap to 61-58 with 11:06 to play on a bank shot by forward John Long. The Wolfpack surged ahead once more, and the game remained relatively close only because of N.C. State's inability to hit its free throws.

In the last 9:16 of the game, the Wolfpack failed to convert the front end of eight one-and-one opportunities.

Clyde "The Glide" Austin had 12 points for the Wolfpack, who improved their record to 20-9, and freshman Donny Perkins scored 10.

Terry Tyler, Detroit's 6-foot-7 center, led the Titans with 19 points, including 15 in the first half. Long scored 17, Terry Duerod had 16 and freshman Kevin Smith had 12, all in the second half.

The Wolfpack now advances to the NIT semifinals next Sunday at New York's Madison Square Garden. Detroit ended its season with a 25-4 record.

By The Associated Press

Foster, the National League's Most Valuable Player with a .320 batting average, 52 home runs and 149 RBIs, slugged three homers and a double as the Cincinnati Reds outslugged the St. Louis Cardinals 11-10 Tuesday in an exhibition baseball game.

Despite Foster's heroics, the Reds needed Mike Lum's 2-run homer in the ninth inning to offset a pair ot 3-run shots by St. Louis' Dane Iorg.

Meanwhile, the New York Yankees showcased Holtzman for the last time before Wednesday's interleague trading deadline and the Atlanta Braves combed the veteran lefty for 7 runs and 9 hits in two innings in an 11-1 romp.

The Yankees are eager to swing a deal for Holtzman, who is coming off a 2-3 season and a 5.75 earned run average, but the pitcher, who lives in Lincolnshire, Ill., will only accept a trade to either Chicago team or to Milwaukee.

While Holtzman is odds-on to become an ex-Yankee before too long, some of his former teammates pitched Tuesday with mixed reviews.

Mike Torrez, the Yanks' World Series hero who played out his option, worked four innings and allowed an unearned run as the Boston Red Sox downed the Toronto Blue Jays 3-1.

But ex-Yanks Doyle Alexander and Dock Ellis were hit hard as the Baltimore Orioles crushed the Texas Rangers 12-1. Alexander was pounded for 6 first-inning runs and Ellis later surrendered 3 more.

Detroit's Mark "The Bird" Fidrych, on the comeback trail, won his second spring game as the Tigers beat the Philadelphia Phillies 8-3. Fidrych yielded 1 run in three innings.

Tony Perez belted a 2-run homer and an RBI double as the Montreal Expos defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers and Wayne Nordhagen's 3-run homer helped the Chicago White Sox hand the winless Pittsburgh Pirates their fifth consecutive setback 7-5.

Midland Rips Ponies 15-6

MIDLAND (Special) — Designated hitter Jim Zachory and catcher James Allen combined for nine RBIs to pace Midland High to a convincing 15-6 high school baseball win over Lubbock Coronado Tuesday afternoon.

Coronado, now 2-6 for the year, jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the second inning behind key hits by Donny Atterburn, Jim Wells and Robert Ledbetter.

But the Ponies, after owning a 6-3 margin, were unable to hold the advantage as MHS scored seven runs in the fifth and five more in the sixth.

Zachory was the game's leading hitter, going 3 for 5 at the plate. Allen blasted a home run along with a double aid Midland's cause.

Wells paced Coronado's offensive output with a pair of hits.

Starter Ricky Powell was saddled with the loss. Russell Johnson relieved Powell in the fifth. Dennis Pusser came on mop up duties in the sixth of Coronado.

Dimmitt Trio All-District

From Dimmitt were Rocky Rawls, Mark Summers and Jim Bradford.

Also honored were Rusty Lamar and Bobby Patton of Morton, Jeff Whiteside and Kevin Kothmann of Friona, Tommy Twitty Littlefield, and Charles Briscoe and Dean Northcutt of Muleshoe.

Olton placed two of its starting forwards, Melonie Whitten and Dusty Kinnison, on the all-fem squad.

Along with Misses Whitten and Kinnison, also honored were forwards Lori Dyer of Dimmitt, Evelyn Grace of Muleshoe, Gayle Williams of Morton and Varla Welch of Friona.

Valley Coach Quits

TURKEY (Special)—Rick Dill, head football coach at Class B Valley High School for the past two seasons, submitted his resignation Tuesday, school officials reported.

Following the resignation, Valley Supt. Wilbur Leaper announced that he will accept applications for the positions. Coaches interested in the position can contact him at Valley High School.

Dill's Patriots last season compiled a 7-3 record, losing all three games in district.

On March 3, 1920, the Montreal Canadiens defeated Quebec 16-3 in a National Hockey League game.

Lubbock High Runs Past Brownfield

Lubbock High exploded for nine runs in the first three innings and defeated Brownfield 12-8 Tuesday in Mackenzie Park.

The Westerners raised their baseball record to 7-1 overall by receiving clutch hits from the top of their batting order. Leadoff man Noel Jaime doubled in a run, knocked a two-run home run and scored on two other occasions during Lubbock rallies.

Lubbock scored three in the first when Roy Morin's 2-run single to rightcenter scored Jamie Greene and Ernest Day. Greene reached base with a single and Day's double to left drove in Jamie, who was hit by a pitch at the start of the game.

The Westerners added two more tallies in the next frame when Jaime crushed his 2-run blast to left, scoring DH Pete Del Busto, who had singled.

Then in the next frame, a two-base error by Brownfield's second baseman allowed Andy Vasquez to score from second and Morin from first while batter Bobby Ibarra advanced to second base. A base on balls to Del Busto placed runners on first and second before Jaime doubled in Ibarra and Day's squeeze bunt chased Del Busto to the plate.

"We played a lot of the younger kids after we got ahead 9-3," said LHS coach Vince Buffamonte. "We played a little better than we had been but our pitchers still have to learn location on their pitches."

The Westerners open the Monahans tournament Thursday against Odessa High.

"Dick's record involved the recruiting of a number of outstanding coaches including Ron Meyer, head of SMU's aspiring football program; Sonny Allen, who is responsible for the university's hopes for a basketball team of national stature; Earl Stewart, golf coach; Steve Adair, baseball; Jim Benedict, soccer; and Bill McClain, tennis," Zumberge said.

"In addition, Davis has been instrumental in establishing a strong woman's athletic program..."

Davis, who played football for the Mustangs in the late 1940s, said he first discussed the possibility of resigning three months ago with Bobby Stewart, the school's board chairman.

Red Raiders Stop H-SU In 6-5, 13-7 Decisions

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Early power displays by Hardin-Simmons were to no avail in both games Tuesday afternoon, as Texas Tech overcame them to sweep a doubleheader from the Cowboys by counts of 6-5 and 13-7 at the Tech diamond.

The victories increased the Raiders' winning streak to four games and evened their season record at 9-9, the first time Tech has reached that level since after the initial twin bill of the campaign.

In the first game Tuesday, the visitors took advantage of three walks, a walk, a single and a triple to score five second-inning runs and take a 5-0 lead.

With one out, Ed Thomas reached base on Tech third baseman Rusty Laughlin's fielding error. After walks to Bobby Lawson and Brad Mann, third baseman Barry Russell singled to drive in Thomas, and second baseman Rusty Hamric walked to force in Lawson.

Next came the big hit of the inning, a line-drive triple of the left-centerfield alley by shortstop Larry Tatum that drove in three runs.

Tech, however, quickly narrowed its deficit with a run in the second and three in the third inning.

Catcher Scott Leimgrubrer's pop-fly double to right-center scored Brooks Wallace in the second, Randy Newton and Craig Newton each had run-scoring doubles in the third, along with Leimgruber's RBI-single.

Two H-SU errors in the third helped the Tech cause, also.

Freshman righthander Larry Womble, who had relieved starter Robert Bryant after Tatum's triple in the third, held down after that, allowing just three hits until he required relief help in the final inning.

Meanwhile, the Raiders rallied for the victory. After one was out in their half of the sixth inning, second baseman Johnny Vestal walked, and Laughlin followed with a home run over the leftfield fence that gave Tech its winning margin.

Womble, 1-2, gained the pitching victory, while the loss went to Don Lawson, a persistent Tech nemesis since the 1976 season.

Hardin-Simmons, 10-7, got a quick lead in the second game, too. Tech hurler Gary Moyer struck out the first two batters he faced in the first inning, but then gave up a single to Alan Lakatta and a long, two-run home run over the leftfield fence to first baseman Phillip Tippen.

The Raiders, though, tied it in their half of the first. Newton's infield ground ball drove in Laughlin, and Selby singled to score Newton.

Tech then scored four runs in the second frame and six more in the third that was too much for a late Cowboy rally to overcome.

RBI-hits by Vestal, Newton, Selby and Wallace accounted for the second-inning runs.

The Raiders then sent 11 batters to the plate in the third. Newton drove in two runs with a single; designated hitter Mike Farmer singled for another pair of runs; Wallace's ground single drove in the fifth of the inning; and Noonan later scored when H-SU third baseman Barry Russell let John Keller's ground ball go through his legs.

The Cowboys combined two walks, three singles and two Raider errors for five sixth-inning runs, but it wasn't enough to overtake Tech.

The Raiders' final run came in the sixth inning, too, when catcher Dan Hejl reached base on Hamric's error and Laughlin later belted a triple.

LCC Bops Jarvis Three Times

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

"We certainly need those," admitted Tim Leslie moments after Lubbock Christian College had completed its tripleheader sweep of Jarvis and evened its record at 9-9 Tuesday.

"Now maybe you'll see us playing like we're capable. We certainly got the hits today and that should continue."

The slugging first baseman led the way Tuesday, ripping eight hits, including four homers, one a towering shot just to the left of the 400-foot barrier in straightaway center the Chaparrals romped 14-4, 22-3 and 15-5 over Jarvis Christian.

Surprisingly, the Chaparrals, who have now won six in a row, ll behind in every game, trailing 2, 1 and 4 runs after Jarvis finished its first swings. But after that, it was all LCC as the Chaps banged out 45 hits on the day and upped their team average 38 points to .328.

And Leslie was among the leaders there, too, as he hiked his average 48 points to .415.

Hays was also beaming afterwards. The winning streak, .500 record and sterling performance by the hitter had something to do with it, but he was also pleased by the fact starting pitcher John Ross and Mickey Crump each went the distance and picked up victories. Before Tuesday, the relievers had all six wins.

Roos weathered nine hits, but fanned nine and allowed only two earned runs in evening his mark at 1-1. Crump was wild in the beginning and walked five, but the sophomore southpaw allowed only four hits and fanned six. He just had to throw strikes after the Chaps scored times in the first of the first inning of the second game.

The third game victor was Bob McNicol, who won for the second time in as many days in relief. McNicol allowed only walk in 2 1/3 innings and whiffed two batters.

Meanwhile, the Chaps were exploding for nine homers. Tommy Inman ripped a three-run job in the first inning of the opener and Leslie followed with a solo shot, plus had a homer leading off the sixth.

Leslie, who now has a team-high 21 RBIs thanks to nine he got Tuesday, had a three-run blow in the second ,ing of the middle tilt and then unleased his drive to center in the first inning of the nightcap. "That was the only time I went with a pitch all day," he claimed.

MHS Waltzes Past Lee

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

When the wind blows out in Lowrey Field, the idea is just hit a high, hard one and let the wind do the rest of the work.

And Monterey's hitters had the right idea Tuesday in the Plainsmen's home baseball opener by clouting 13 hits and stranding only two base runners in a 14-5 spanking of error-prone Midland Lee.

The Plainsmen, now 3-2, committed only one error while the Rebels (7-4) committed seven miscues and many of them aided the Monterey scoring assault. Though it was hardly a day for pitchers, MHS senior Ron Reeves chalked up his second win and calmed down a few Lee rallies by striking out 12 Midland hitters. Neither of Midland's two pitchers could brag anywhere near that much.

Reeves weathered one difficult inning as Lee scored three times in top of the third to narrow Monterey's lead to 4-3. Then the Plainsmen batted around for five runs with the aid of one towering home run and three Midland errors in the bottom of third.

With one out in the frame, Phil Bruedigam lined a 3-1 pitch into right for a single. Dana Rieger followed by crunching a 2-run home run, which appeared to travel halfway to Slaton. The smash cleared the 400-foot markers in deep leftcenter field. From that point, the inning turned into a comedy of errors.

Bob Fannin raced to second on an error by the third basemen. Fannin advanced to third when Reeves reached second o as Lee's shortstop booted a grounder. Fannin scored on Mike Wooten's ground out. Reeves added the fourth run of the rally as Lee's second baseman booted a grounder off the bat of Monterey's Tom Bevins, who walked home on Ricky Pinkerton's triple to straight-away center field.

By then, Reeves only needed to avoid walks and prevent any major uprisings. Lee loaded the bases with no outs in the fifth before the MHS pitcher retired two consecutive hitters. Lee's second baseman Don Rasure looped his first of the season to right field, scoring one run. Then Lee's Chris Sapyta took a called third strike to end the inning.

Again in the top of the seventh, Lee scored a run and placed two runners on base but two Reb hitters watched the third strike slide home to catcher Jeff Harp. And yes, they were sliders.

"I feel like I can throw the ball where I want it a lot better than I could last year," Reeves said. "My slider was pretty good last year but my curve wasn't."

"He picked up a curve ball during the summer and he has better command of his pitches. It was to throw with the wind blowing in and Lee has some pretty good contact hitters,' the MHS coach said.

As many as three or four more Monterey runs might have crossed the plate with some better base running. Lee outfielders threw out greedy MHS runners at third base in the first, second and fourth frames. Two others were caught trying steal second. Still another was picked off first.

"This is a thing we haven't even worked on because we haven't been outside enough," Moegle said. "But I would rather we were overaggressive than underaggressive."

Lee's errors came in bunches — three in the third and three more in the sixth. The latter bunch helped Monterey ice the game with four runs in the sixth. Lee third baseman Richard Josefy bobbled Rieger's grounder to allow a run home. A throwing error during Monterey's double-steal attempt also allowed a run. Rieger, Reeves, Harp, Fannin and Wooten collected two hits each for the MHS which hosts Abilene Cooper Friday in Lowrey Field at 4 p.m.

Mahaffey Steps Toward Comeback

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — All but overlooked in the searing confrontation between Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf last weekend was the dramatic comeback of John Mahaffey.

"I'm loving it — loving every minute of it," said Mahaffey, once a half-step away from potential greatness but, for almost two years, a frustrated, frightened struggler whose career-threatening slump was compounded by physical and personal problems.

"There were times I was afraid I'd never play the tour again," he said.

There were good reasons for the fear.

For two consecutive years he had a chance to win golf's greatest prize, the United States Open. Each time he failed, losing in a playoff to Lou Graham in 1975 and then being overtaken in the last round by Jerry Pate in 1976. That alone would be enough to kill the careers of many men.

Immediately following the national championship in 1976 Mahaffey began developing problems. There was elbow trouble that sidelined him for the first half of the 1977 season and his marriage was in trouble and eventually ended in divorce.

About the time he was ready to come back from the elbow problem, he broke his hand in a household accident. The man who had been averaging more than $125,000 a season in winnings collected about $9,000 last year.

But the slump ended last week. His third place finish was worth $14,200, his largest check since the '76 Open. Perhaps of more importance was the manner in which it was won.

Mahaffey shared the second-round lead, but with Nicklaus and Weiskopf among the challengers and with John's recent history, had little hope of winning.

In Sunday's 36-hole windup, Mahaffey immediately blew himself out of contention with a fat 40 on his front nine. But the baby-faced battler continued to fight. He brought it back with a gutsy 30 on the next nine for a final-round 72.

"It is amazing how much you can lose," said Mahaffey, tempered and matured by his troubles. "You don't know or appreciate what you have until you lose it.

"I'm now hitting shots I haven't hit in two years. They don't always come off, but I have the confidence to try. And that's important."

There are still plateaus to reach that I'd achieved earlier, before we're ready to get into the winning thing," he said.

NFL Cracks Down On Showboats

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The National Football League voted Tuesday to clamp down on players who showboat and bait opponents and approved rule changes to open up the offense a more next season.

By a 26-2 vote (the league refused to divulge which teams voted for or against any proposals), the NFL owners decided to let officials throw the book at players guilty of "baiting or taunting" the opposition. It's a 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalty and could, NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle said, take the spark out of potentially explosive situations in which taunts become shouts and wind up as punches and brawls.

"What this is getting at," Rozelle said, "is things like deliberately spiking the ball in the end zone at the feet of an opponent or scoring and taking the ball and waving it in front of his face or jabbing it at him— deliberate, flagrant acts that can foment emotional problems in the football game. The owners felt this type of rule could help eliminate emotional incidents that could trigger fights in the course of the game.

"We've had some mail on this in the league office from fathers of little league football players saying that the kids really emulate what they see on television. . .that it does cause problems with the kids."

Rozelle said that "lesser instances, such as needling an opposing player, would draw a warning. If it were continued, then it would be an unsportsmanlike penalty."

The rule does not prohibit exhuberance or showboating such as the dancing performed by Houston's Billy "White Shoes" Johnson after one of his scoring sprints or Dallas' Tom Henderson's ball-spiking over the crossbar. The rule is designed not to wipe out emotion in general but only that kind directed specifically at an opponent with the obvious intent of embarrassing.

By a 27-0 vote, with one abstention, the owners approved a rule change to allow offensive linemen to fend off charging defenders with hands open or closed into fists and the elbows flexed or locked. Previously the hands had to be closed into fists and the elbows had to be flexed.

The change figures to slow down the defenders just a bit, and will also make it easier for officials to call (or not call) holding. It's still illegal for offensive linemen to grab opponents, but now the officials don't have to try and determine—often from screened-off positions—whether the elbows and hands were in the proper position.

The narrowest vote, 22-3 with three abstentions, came on the rule to cut down the times defenders can interfere with potential receivers. Previously a defender could "chuck" (make contact with) a receiver as often as he wished within a 3-yard zone of the line of scrimmage, then the receiver could be hit again further downfield.

Now the receiver can be chucked only once within a 5-yard zone, then the defenders have to keep their hands off him entirely, except to avoid being run over by the receiver.

By a 27-0-1 vote, the NFL owners approved the addition of a seventh official. The "side judge" will stand about 15 yards downfield to the defense's left. His addition will provide better downfield coverage on passing situations, eliminating a so-called dead zone in a 10-15 yard area beyond the line of scrimmage.

The new chucking rule will make it tougher for zone defenses since defenders will no longer be able to stand back 15 yards and clobber a potential receiver as he comes by. If a defender wants to chuck, he's got to come up and do it within that 5-yard zone.

Miami Star Puts Off Baseball

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — John Shoemaker should be playing baseball now. He's just as glad he's not, even if it means, he's had to put off reporting to spring training with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Shoemaker was due Tuesday in the Dodgers' spring training camp at Vero Beach, Fla. However, he and his Miami University teammates are getting ready for Thursday's National Collegiate Athletic Associaton basketball tournament game against Kentucky.

"It's (baseball) just going to have to wait a little," said Shoemaker. "If I'm going to make it in pro baseball, it's going to take six or seven years. You only have one senior basketball season in your life."

Besides, Shoemaker notes that his contract gives him an excuse for reporting late to the Dodgers' camp.

"The contract stipulates that I would join the Dodgers immediately after the season. Tournament games are part of the season," he said.

Shoemaker signed a contract to play baseball for the Dodgers a year ago. He began his pro career by batting .315 for Clinton, Iowa in the Class A league.

Anticipating his future in professional baseball, Shoemaker loaded his academic schedule for three years and, with the approval of several professors, he can complete work through correspondence and receive his degree in June.

He said that his early in high school his ambition has been to play third base in the big leagues.

Smaller Grid Programs Reject Relocation Effort

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The smaller football programs within Division I of the NCAA have turned thumbs down on an effort to be relocated in a division of their own, the Associated Press has learned.

—A handful of small football programs, heretofore obscure dots on the college football map, may soon be banking hundreds of thousands of dollars in television money and growing more prosperous than they ever dreamed possible.

—The 60-member College Football Association, formed three years ago to help the big-time powers achieve automony within the NCAA, can be expected to discard its low-profile and become more aggressive.

Tuesday was the deadline for the football-playing schools to declare a three-year commitment either to Division I-A or I-AA, created at the annual NCAA convention in January.

Designers of the restructuring plan hoped for roughly 80 members in I-A, the "major league" and a similar number in I-AA, the "minor league."

But a check by The AP found that I-AA will contain as few as 28 or 30 schools while membership in I-A has soared to a bulky 130 or so. The I-AA membership will be comprised mostly of the Big Sky, Yankee, Ohio Valley and Southwestern athletic conferences.

The NCAA planned no announcement of the divisional makeup for several days. And once the announcement is made, everybody has another 30-day period to change their minds, although that seems unlikely.

The four-year, $118 million contract the NCAA signed with ABC-TV last spring lies at the heart of the issue.

In line with previous NCAA television pacts, the contract guaranteed a minimum number of appearances for a group of Division I schools which ordinarily would get passed over for consideration. Referred to in contract wording as the "tier group," they are 17 independents who were not on TV the past three years and the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, the Missouri Valley, Southern, Southland and Mid-American conferences.

The NCAA Television Committee and the policy-making NCAA Council, in the restructuring plan, specified all I-A schools must compete on their merits for TV dollars. The tier group's guarantees of 16 appearances every two years then were transferred to I-AA, where the tier group schools were expected to relocate.

Under the mathematical ratio used to arrive at television guarantees, a Division I-AA made up of only 30 or so members would figure to get about 10 regional appearances every two years, with each game having a payoff in the neighborhood of $450,000. An "appearance" is defined as any time a school is seen on TV, meaning the televising of a game between two Yankee Conference members would count as two appearances.

Schools like Miami of Ohio of the Mid-American and Tulsa of the Missouri Valley, in the meantime, will be competing with the titans of the Big Eight, Big 10, etc., for much-needed television exposure and money.

Other bonanzas awaiting the small, elite band in I-AA include a national championship tournament and more television revenue. ABC is contractually obligated to telecast regionally two semifinal games and give national exposure to the championship match, adding another $750,000 or so to the kitty.

Penn State Tabs Harter Cage Mentor

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Dick Harter was a surprise choice Tuesday as new head basketball coach at Penn State, which used second effort to lure him from the University of Oregon.

"Get me two cars and a cash advance. I'm going out recruiting," the Pottstown, Pa., native told Penn State officials after arriving here in a plane delayed by fog.

Last week, Harter, 47, said after a visit that he'd remain at Oregon, where he began a new multi-year contract this past season.

However, he said Tuesday that Penn State had contacted him again and he decided Monday to accept the job, vacated when John Bach resigned amid his fourth-straight losing season.

"We talked further and that led to a sound decision on my part," said Harter, who'll be joined here by Jim Haney, his top assistant at Oregon.

"The week's wait was worthwhile, although we did lose some recruiting time."

There was no immediate word on how Harter has resolved his Oregon contract or the terms of his Penn State pact.

"The announcement from Penn State is a surprise to us," said Dr. John Caine, Oregon sports director.

Harter has a 13-year college coaching record of 217-134, despite taking over sagging programs at Oregon and earlier at the University of Pennsylvania, where he led his Ivy League teams to two NCAA tournament berths.

Haney, a native of Mt. Lebanon, Pa., played for Harter at the University of Pennsylvania and has been his assistant the past six seasons.

"I consider Penn State one of the outstanding opportunities in college basketball," Harter said despite the school's lack of a modern basketball arena.

National Urban Policy Stirs Round Of Debate

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following analysis of America's urban crisis highlights the issues confronting the Carter Administration as it prepares to announce a national urban policy. The transformation of urban jobs — from upwardly mobile, productive employment, to largely dead-end service employment — lies at the heart of the problem, the authors conclude.)

By ELLIOTT CURRIE
and PAUL ROSENSTIEL
Pacific News Service

President Carter's long-awaited announcement of a national urban policy, scheduled for March 22, has already set off a round of debates on the problems of American cities unmatched in volume since the riots of the early 1960s.

The debate, itself, can be counted the first positive result of whatever the Administration plans are for attacking the mounting crisis.

Analysis

But for the new policy (if, indeed, it is new) to achieve further results, it will have to recognize and cope with a few simple but devasting facts – something that past administration have been singularly unwilling to do. These include:

•The need to rectify government policies, on all levels, which have simultaneously accelerated the flow of unskilled rural and foreign migrants into American cities, while inducing major urban employers to move out of the cities;

•The constant degrading of urban employment, not only in terms of numbers of jobs available, but of the quality and opportunity for upward mobility of those jobs remaining;

•And the continuing effect of racial discrimination in urban housing and employment which, 10 years after the celebrated Kerner Report on racism, still is dividing America into two seperate nations, one poor and mostly non-white, the other affluent and predominantly white.

The thread that binds all all three issues is the crisis in the jobs. As employers, particularly manufacturers, have left the city, residents have had to make do with fewer and poorer jobs that have forced many, especially unskilled minorities, to depend increasingly on city services. But compounding the dilemma, the job shrinkage has also eaten away at the revenue base that funds those services.

New York City's recent problems are more easily understood when one considers that the city lost an average of 68,000 jobs each year between 1969 and 1974. But the jobs crisis exists in other cities as well, and its symptoms began appearing long before this decade. In the 1960s cities were already exhibiting a slower rate of job growth relative to population increases than the rest of the country. With the coming of the 1970s, these danger signs quickly turned into a calamity.

Isolating the central cities, where many of the newly arrived rural and foreign immigrants live, the picture is even more grim. Employment dropped three times as fast as population in central Detroit, over five times as fast in inner New York City, and nearly seven times as fast in the core of Philadelphia.

But not only are urban residents scrambling for fewer jobs, what they are fighting over are poorer jobs than before. Increasingly, urban manufacturing employment, which once made cities centers of production and generators of wealth, has declined as employers have moved to the suburbs, the South and overseas in search of cheaper, less unionized labor and other profitable amenities.

In Detroit, manufacturing jobs outnumbered service and government jobs nearly two to one in 1960. But by 1975 there were actually fewer manufacturing jobs than government and service jobs. In Philadelphia, manufacturing accounted for 37 percent of the jobs while service and government contributed 2.6 percent in 1960. But 1975 the numbers were nearly reversed: 25 percent manufacturing and 37 percent service and government. Since 1975, the picture has changed again as city governments, afraid of going the way of New York, have begun reversing the increase in local government jobs that once made up for part of the loss in manufacturing.

What these developments–especially the increasing importance of service employment–mean for city residents is clear from the wages paid in each of these industries. In 1970, average weekly earnings in Detroit were $148 in manufacturing, $143 in government and $101 in service jobs. In Philadelphia, manufacturing paid $118, government $149 and service jobs $105 a week. Nationwide, the average earnings of service industry workers in 1975 exceeded the federal government's official poverty line by only $850.

For the cities, the decline in quality and quantity of jobs inevitably spells burgeoning, debilitating poverty. An astounding 66.2 percent of Detroit's residents either working or wishing to work in the fall of 1970 were either not working, working part-time because they couldn't find full-time work, or working full-time at wages that didn't bring them above the Department of Labor's "lower" budget for an urban family of four. And the cities must increasingly bear the costs–in welfare payments,public safety, housing–for this enormous number of people who are basically willing but unable to provide for themselves.

The post-World War II arrivals to American cities thus face a much less promising job situation than their turn-of-the-century counterparts faced. But their problems don't stop there for, unlike the European immigrants of a few generation ago, recent arrivals are overwhelming non-white. New city dwellers from Mexico and Puerto Rico, Hong Kong and the Phllippines, Jamaica and the black rural South find that racial discrimination is still a barrier to those few jobs that exist.

To make matters worse, the resulting "white flight" of both residents and businesses further decreases job opportunities while undermining the ability of cities to provide social services for their new residents.

The influx of non-whites into cities is the result, most importantly, of a revolutionary transformation of agricultural life, both in the U.S. itself and abroad–a transformation that has been systematically forstered by government incentives and subsidies. The farm population of the United States was about a quarter of the nation's total in 1940, but only about one-twenty-fifth in 1975.

The mechanization of agriculature that produced this change had a particularly dramatic impact on the South, throwing millions of farm workers off the land and into the cities. Many of these were blacks–the number of black farmers operators in the South in 1969 was only a third the number of just 10 years before.

Altogether, between the end of World War II and 1970, roughly four million blacks emigrated from the South. As a result, blacks became an urban people almost overnight. Between 1950 and 1970 the proportion of the black population living in cities jumped from 44 percent to 58 percent.

A similar process of agricultural disruption funneling massive numbers of los-skilled workers into American cities took place in Puerto Rico and, most recently and dramatically, in Mexico.

The result is familiar. As minorities moved in, whites, lured by suburban amenities and propelled by social disintegration and racial fears, moved out. Between 1960 and 1974, the number of whites living in central cities droipped by about 3 million, or 6 percent, while the number of blacks rose by 3.8 million, or 38 percent.

The departing residents were not only predominantly white, they were also generally richer than those moving into cities–by 10 percent by 1973. Thus, between 1970 and 1974, the aggregate income of families moving out of the cities was almost $30 billion more than that of the families moving in. Coupled waith the loss of revenues from fleeing industries, this left cities with a shrinking capacity to meet the even greater service needs of an increasingly poor population.

It is against this basically simple but bleak reality that the Carter Administration now seeks to pattern an attack, and rally a national commitment, to reverse the on-going trends. The very simplicity and bleakness of the problem would seem to require nothing short of an imaginative, top-priority revamping of urban policy through all levels of government.

The Chemistry Of Conversion

By DAVID POLING

The New Testament informs us that Jesus had among two key personalities of his time — one a soldier, the other a member of the Sanhedrin.

A centurion in charge of the military post at Capernaum begged Jesus to heal his ailing servant. Jesus responded by saying that nowhere in Israel had he found such faith.

Sixth In A Series

Another time, Nicodemus, a member of the all powerful council, the Sanhedrin, approached Jesus one evening and said that he believed the Master to have been sent by God.

Men of power, influence and wealth were born again in the days of Jesus. We should not be surprised that celebrities in our own society are drawn to the love and message of the Gospel.

Sports personalities such as Roger Staubach and Craig Morton have indicated a personal commitment ot the Christian life. Morton, quarterback for the Denver Broncos and noted for having a constant good time as a single-celebrity, was married last year and announced that his wife's Christian influence had led him to commit his life to Christ. With friends in Dallas as well as Denver, the Mortons invest much of their private life in a Bible study fellowship.

Roger Staubach, the football idol of the Southwest and the hero for Cowboy fans, reflected on his faith in the book," Staubach: First Down, Lifetime to Go."

"I believe, but not because my parents told me so or because God is a security blanket. I believe on my own. Faith is a mystery, all right, but somehow in his own way God provides his Word for man and touches the mind and the heart of the believer, enabling him to accept the Word ... We must grow in faith. As we do, our lives become more Christ-centered ... I believe in Jesus Christ as the son of God. He is the redeemer of our sins and the savior for all mankind. He is my Lord and I believe he loves all of us with a constant and intense love."

With St. Paul, believers Morton and Staubach seem to be saying, "I press on toward the goal for the prize of the upward call of God in Christ Jesus.

Hobbs Creates Housing Agency

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS, N.M. — The Hobbs City Commission has created a housing authority to provide low income housing facilities to meet a housing shortage in the city.

The new housing authority will incorporate and be known as the Hobbs City Corporation. Its chairman is John Baerg and other members of the corporation are Woody Hatfield, Gary Don Reagan, Bill Razo and Zack Patterson.

Funding for low income housing is expected through the Housing and Urban Development Section 8 to finance the building of some 80 units of housing on city-owned land in the southeast section of Hobbs near Washington Elementary School.

Revenue bonds that will be repaid out of rental income will finance the building and the Hobbs City Corporation will appoint a manager for the housing unit when it is built. This method is expected to keep the city's staff and city commission "as far out of the housing business as possible."

When the project is completed, it will become available to low-income families who will be expected to pay about 25 percent of their income for rent. HUD will pay the remainder of the rent to the Hobbs City Corporation. These rentals will pay off the mortgage and pay operating and maintenance costs.

HUD has announced that some $280,848 is available to be allocated in five southeastern New Mexico counties before April 24 and "Hobbs is a prime area to receive these funds," according to Joe Harvey, Hobbs city manager.

Cotton, Building Destroyed In Fire

A-J Correspondent

QUANAH — Flames of undetermined origin destroyed a large cotton storage building and its complete stock of cotton and bagging material Sunday night.

According to the Quanah Fire Department, the blaze was discovered at the Quanah Cotton Oil Mill at about 9 p.m. Sunday.

Firemen remained at the scene throughout the day today to prevent the smoldering remains of several hundred bales of cotton from endangering other nearby buildings.

Equipment and men from the Childress and Chillicothe Fire Departments also battled the blaze.

No estimate was placed on the loss.

A railroad boxcar filled with cotton which was near the storage facility also burned.

However, the plant is continuing its operations.

Brown Named Wildlife Officer

A-J Correspondent

CLOVIS — The New Mexico Department of Game and Fish announces the stationing of Scott J. Brown as the new district wildlife officer for the Clovis-Portales area.

Brown received his B.S. in wildlife biology from Colorado Sate University and a M.S. degree in secondary education at the University of New Mexico.

A native of New Mexico, Brown was born at Santa Fe and grew up in Albuquerque.

Liquor Sales Petitions Issued

A-J Correspondent

SNYDER — Petitions calling for an election to legalize the sale of all alcoholic beverages within the City of Snyder were issued by the county clerk's office Monday afternoon.

The petition is calling for off-premises consumption only.

The committee will have 30 days to secure the required number of signatures, which is a number equaling 35 percent of the number of voters who cast ballots in the last governor's election.

Stark To Step Down As Crosby Sheriff

A-J Correspondent

CROSBYTON — Fletcher Stark, Crosby County sheriff for the past 18 years, has resigned his post, effective April 15.

Stark said he is stepping down for health reasons, adding that he no longer is able to operate his department in the manner he desires.

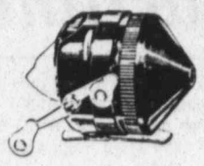

Stark, elected in the 1960 general election, was sworn in as sheriff Jan. 1, 1961. He has been re-elected each succeeding term.

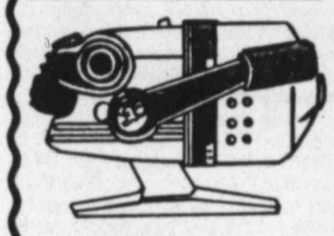

County Judge Robert Work said that commissioners will formally accept Stark's resignation at their April 10 meeting and will appoint a person to serve as sheriff until the Nov. 6 general election.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I am retired with most of my funds in preferred stocks: Commonwealth Edison, Gulf States Utilities, Michigan Wisconsin Pipeline, etc. The yield is good, but I'm worried about the call dates.

A. Withoug knowing the specific issues you hold, I can't say whether you have anything to worry about or not. Example: Commonwealth Edison has a long series of preferreds. Some are now selling above the price at which the corporation may pay them operative are low enough, the company could redeem the shares. If you paid above the call price, you would have a loss.

Some of the issues are selling well below their call price. Holders of such issues pray for a call — but I doubt their prayers will be answered...not soon, anyway.

The Gulf States preferreds listed in the stock guide are selling so much below call price that I should think you'd hope the stock guide are selling in the call area.

All the issues are good quality. Why not adopt a "what will be, will be" attitude and let them all ride. There isn't likely to be an early and meaningful decline in interest rates, such as would make redemptions feasible, anyway.

Model Portfolio for Retirement: A 50-50 (bonds and stock) empployment of about $78,000-$79,000, total, is set forth in this model list suggest by the N.Y. Stock Exchange firm of Wayne Hummer:

About $40,000 equally distributed among four bond issues: J.P. Morgan 8s of 1986; Black & Decker 8.45s of 1985; Ford Motor Credit 8 5/8s of 1986 and Allied Chemical 8 3/8s of 1983. Ratings run, respectively, from AAA to A. Yield is 8.3 percent, which is good for this relatively short-term list.

About $38,000 in $5,9000 to $7,200 lost of American Can, American Tel. & Tel., Chase Manhattan, Cleveland Electric, NICOR and Texaco. Yield from this equity portion, 7.8 percent. Yield of entire portfolio: 8.1 percent.

It couldn't hurt!

Q. I was recently widowed and will need an additional $250 a month to take the place of income that will soon stop. I have $5,000 in E bonds, about $5,000 in good stocks, and about $65,000 in various savings accounts.

A. I can't tell how much of the income from these investments you are now using. But a rough figure indicates that a total of $75,000 in assets could provice better than $6,000 a year from high grade corporate bonds.

Correction: A reader points out that a recent comment here to the effect that since Social Security income is not taxable it has no bearing on one's income tax bill is not correct. While it is true that money received from Social Security is not taxable income, these benefits in certain situations may affect the credit for "over-65" earned income as computed on the R & RP schedule of Tax form 1040.

HEARTLINE: I have just gotten home from being in the hospital because I had an operation on my foot. I am on Medicare. I have already taken care of my portion of the hospital bill. I had to pay the first $144.00. Now my doctor tells me that I need another operation and I should have it done next month. Will I have to pay this $144.00 again when I go back to the hospital? S.E.

A. You will not have to pay the first $144.00 hospital deductible if you go back in the hospital within 60 days from the day that you were discharged. If your next period in the hospital does not start until after you have been home for 60 days straight, then you are starting a new benefit period and you would have to pay this $144.00.

For people who are now on the Medicare program or will soon be turning 65 and going on Medicar, Heartline now has available their brand new 1978 version of "Heartline's Guide to Medicare." This book is still written in easy-to-understand, question and answer form, but the 1978 issue has much more information. Included are the new deductibles for part A medical insurance, more items and conditions that Medicare covers, a more concise explanation of reasonable charge, and detailed instructions on how to fill out your Medicare claim form.

You can receive the 1978 "Heartline's Guide to Medicare" by sending $1.75 to "Heartline's Guide to Medicare," 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. This book is completely guaranteed and if you not satisfied your money will be cheerfully refunded. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I am a widow. My husband died as a result of his service-connected disability. Since my husband's death, I have adopted a little boy. I have been receiving my medical benefits from CHAMPVA. Is my adopted son eligible for CHAMPVA also? N.F.

A: In your case, your adopted child would be eligible for the CHAMPVA benefits if you adopted him within two years after your husband's death. The only other time that adopted children are eligible for CHAMPVA is if they were living in the veteran's home at the time of his death.

HEARTLINE: I have heard that a person receiving a Civil Service annuity can have federal income tax withheld from it. Is this true? If so, how can I go about having it done? R.C.

A: Yes. The Tax Reform Act of 1969 authorized voluntary withholdings of federal income tax from annuities upon request of the annuitant. If a sufficient amount is withheld, the annuitant may be relieved from filing a Declaration of Estimated Tax, IRS Form 1040Es, and paying the estimated tax in quarterly installments.

Information about voluntary tax withholding from annuity payments may be obtained by writing Bureau of Retirement, Insurance and Occupational Health, U.S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D.C. 20415.

The annuitant should include his or her full name, annuity claim number and date of birth. (If a survivor annuitant, also include the full name and date of birth of the deceased person).

Childress Protests Phone Rate Hike

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — City officials have agreed to oppose proposed Southwestern Bell rate increases.

The city council has approved a suggestion by Mayor Pro Tem Walter Lockhoof that a letter be written to the Texas Utility Commission protesting the increases.

"The telephone company says the commission will have to approve the request because they are entitled to a 9.5 percent return on their investment," Lockhoof said, "but there's nothing in the statutes that says they are entitled to any certain percentage — just a fair return on their investment."

The proposed increases would raise one-party residential base rates in Childress by 75 cents a month, and base commercial rates by $1.60 monthly, officials said. Lockhoof noted that Southwestern Bell officials say they are seeking a 9.5 percent return on investment.

"In my opinion," Lockhoof said, "that's too much profit."

In other action, the city council has approved a recommendation to increase water rates to volume users except public agencies. Other users of more than 20,000 gallons of water per month will be asked to pay an increased rate for usage in excess of 20,000 gallons. In that use bracket the current rate is 50 cents per thousand gallons, and it will be increased to 75 cents per thousand. City Manager David Galligan explained that the 50 cent rate is less than the city pays for water.

Under 20,000 gallons monthly, the rates will remain the same: $10 for the first 10,000 gallons, and $1 per thousand up to 20,000 gallons.

The city officials also heard a requst from residents of the south section of the city for an overpass or underpass at the railroad crossing which connects them with shopping areas. Lockhoof said officials have been studying the matter for three years, and that the problem is also being researched by State Highway Department engineers here.

"The problem is where the money's going to come from," Lockhoof said.

He also noted that he and the city manager plan to attend an upcoming meeting to determine whether a federal grant might be obtained to fund the project.

The south side residents said the overpass or underpass is badly needed, and that ambulances and other emergency vehicles are often detained at crossings while trains pass through the city. The railroad tracks run through the city with only one underpass, and that one is at the extreme western edge of town.

Hill Sets Report At Plainview

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW— Attorney General John Hill will report on the progress of his investigation into possible anti-trust violations in the cotton seed-oil mill industry at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday in the Hale County Agricultural Center at Plainview.

A gubernatorial candidate, Hill also will discuss recent activities in McAllen where more than 200 protesting farmers were arrested when they attempted to block an international bridge on March 1.

Sponsored by the American Agriculture movement, the meeting will conclude with Marvin Meek, a Happy Union farmer, reporting on strike activities in Washington, D.C. The meeting is open to the public.

The Plainview meeting will be one of three Panhandle-South Plains speaking stops Hill will make on Wednesday. He also will be featured in Amarillo and Lubbock.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A $4 BILLION EMERGENCY CREDIT BILL for farmers squeezed by low prices was overwhelmingly approved Tuesday by the House Agriculture Committee.

Committee chairman Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said his panel's 39-4 approval of the administration-backed bill to head off potential farm foreclosures probably was only the first step in its moves to bolster a distressed farm economy.

"Farmers don't just need credit — they need adequate income," Foley said. "I'm satisfied that we're going to recommend some changes in the 1977 farm law...either in increased target prices, or land diversion, or some other mechanism to try to improve expectations of market prices for major crops.

"But this credit bill was an important first step," he added.

THE BILL WOULD AUTHORIZE A NEW two-year program of government-insured and guaranteed loans aimed at farmers who cannot pay their debts to banks and other non-government lending agencies.

Under the measure, the loans made with government-protected private capital could total $2 billion in 1978 and another $2 billion next year. Loans to individual farmers could go up to $400,000 and could be used either to pay debt installments or to refinance the farmer's entire indebtedness.

Loans administered by the Farmers Home Administration under the program also could be used to continue farm production but not to buy new land.

Spokesmen for the American Agriculture farm strike movement, which has been demanding congressional action to force a dramatic increase in crop prices, said they supported the credit bill as part of a temporary stopgap package to aid farmers while they seek passage of permanent new price-floor legislation.

THE HOUSE CREDIT MEASURE ALSO includes provisions raising the ceiling on standard Farmers Home Administration mortgage loans for low-income farmers from the current $100,000 to $200,000 on federally insured loans and $300,000 on government-guaranteed loans which may carry higher interest rates than the insured credit.

The ceiling on FmHA farm operating loans, now $50,000, would go up to $150,000 on government-insured loans and $200,000 on guaranteed loans. Other portions of the bill would allow family-farm partnerships and corporations to get FmHA loans and would extend a 1974 emergency credit program for livestock producers.

By an 18-6 vote, the House committee agreed with veteran vice chairman Bob Poage of Waco to delete an administration-proposed section of the bill changing the name of the Farmers Home Administration to Farm and Rural Development Administration.

Poage argued it would be a "gratuitous insult" to change the agency's name unless Congress thought it was doing a poor job. Anyway, he added, retaining the old name might save the taxpayers about $100,000 which would have been needed for printing new agency stationery.

FARM STRIKE LEADERS, MEANWHILE, said they were seeking to get the signatures of all 100 senators on a pledge to back a proposed "flexible parity" support plan for 1978 grains and cotton. The plan is to be considered in a Senate Agriculture Committee meeting today.

The plan, introduced by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and co-sponsored by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, would allow farmers to get increased support protection by making deep individual planting cuts.

Strike leaders favor that plan instead of a bill approved by the Senate committee Monday to pay farmers $2.3 billion to idle 31 million surplus cropland acres this year in an effort to bolster crop prices. The plan is supported by the Texas Farm Bureau.

Lubbock Youths Take Top Prizes At Show

By KETH HENLEY
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

Judge Paul Gross of Amarillo chose a mediumweight crossbred barrow exhibited by Bobby Richey Jr. of Wolfforth as all breed grand champion and a mediumweight Hampshire shown by Jana Winter of Idalou as the reserve grand champion.

Richey, 14, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Richey. The Frenship Future Farmer of America's (FFA) barrow was bred by James Mitchell of Wolfforth.

Miss Winter, 12, is a member of the Lubbock County 4-H. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Winter. Winter and his son, Jay, bred the reserve grand champion.

The Southwest show, dedicated to the late John Key of Lubbock, will conclude with the sale of prize winning animals at 1 p.m. today in the livestock pavilion.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean futures fluctuated wildly on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday, buoyed by weak dollar news and depressed in the final moments by reports that a coal strike settlement was imminent.

The soybean contracts finished 9 cents lower to 4½ cents higher.

Corn deliveries resisted the late selling to close an average of 2 cents higher, but wheat futures were eroded to steady levels.

News that a coal strike settlement may have been reached immediately depressed silver futures. Earlier, analysts traced an upswing in the soybean complex to strength in silver contracts that was based on continued concern about the worth of the dollar.

In addition, the Agriculture Department lowered its estimate of Brazilian soybean production to 10.5 million to 11 million metric tons.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed $1.75 a bale lower to $2.75 higher Tuesday.

News that Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland would not recommend a cotton set-aside program this year prompted selling of futures contracts, brokers said.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton advanced 62 points to 55.68 cents a pound Monday for the 10 leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

QUITTING "MAUDE" — Actress Beatrice Arthur relaxes at home Monday in Los Angeles with her dog Julie after announcing she is quitting the television series "Maude." "I have had six full years," Miss Arthur said. "It's been absolutely glorious, I've loved every minute. But it has been six years and I think it's time to leave." (AP Laserphoto)

'Maude' Star Announces Plans To Leave Television Series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Beatrice Arthur, whose Maude Findlay was created as a liberal foil to Archie Bunker, says she is quitting the hit television series "Maude."

"I have had six full years," she said in a telephone interview. "It's been absolutely glorious, I've loved every minute of it. But it has been six years and I think it's time to leave."

Miss Arthur is the third star to quit a Norman Lear series this season. Rob Reiner and Sally Struthers taped their last episode of "All in the Family" about 10 days ago. Carroll O'Connor and Jean Stapleton will continue the show alone next season.

Lear himself says he is taking a leave of absence from weekly television to give time to other matters.

"Maude" was a spinoff from "All in the Family" in 1972. The year before she had appeared on that series as Edith Bunker's liberal and liberated cousin. Lear had created Maude Findlay as a liberal to Archie Bunker's bigot.

"Not only will I now be free to do other things, but I can spend more time with my family," she said. "I don't plan to do anything immediately, just take it easy for a while."

Miss Arthur is married to theatrical director Gene Saks. They have two sons, Matthew, 16, and Daniel, 14.

Barbara Brogliatti, a spokeswoman for Lear's Tandem Productions, said, "She had been talking about it, but we certainly didn't expect it. We weren't warned." She said they learned of Miss Arthur's decision only last weekend.

Miss Arthur said that in the final show for this season, Maude is elected to Congress. She said it may run in three parts or as a 90-minute special.

"Norman had had an idea some time ago in which Maude becomes a congresswoman and moves to Washington," Miss Arthur said. "Norman said if you go on for another year we'll do it in Washington with a new cast. And if you don't it's a hell of a way to end the show."

Mrs. Brogliatti said she knew of no plan to find a replacement for Miss Arthur as Maude. She said, "Norman feels no one else could do Maude.

"But if CBS wants to do a series about a congresswoman it would then be cast with other people and would be an entirely different show. It would just retain the idea of a woman in Congress."

Effervescent Entertainer Keeps Audiences, Critics Smiling

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — Entertainer Bernadette Peters is aptly described as "all bubble and bounce" on stage — an image that doesn't seem to fit her soft-spoken, relaxed manner off stage.

But whether the good-looking blonde from Ozone Park, N.Y., is doing her showroom act or giving a low-key description of what makes it tick, the message is clear — she does her best to leave audiences and critics smiling.

"I think that in performing, the main thing is to be entertaining in many different ways," Miss Peters, 29, said in a recent interview while headlining here at the Sahara-Tahoe hotel-casino.

In her act, she sings ballads and standards, tap dances, does a comic take-off on country-western singer Dolly Parton, and mixes with her audience.

Performing in showrooms is what she likes best now because "if anything happens, it happens immediately with the audience. You find out right away how things are going. It's the closest you get to an audience."

To make it work, "you bring the best of yourself, if you can, to the stage," she says. "What I think about most is refining myself, working on myself, so I become better and better."

Her goal in the entertainment world, says the 5-foot-3-inch entertainer, is "be an original if I can. Not everybody is, but all the good people are."

Besides the stage act, she is also preparing for an album. And she's also hoping to do more movie roles in the future.

Bernadette has acted in several movies already, but she says some of the roles have been as "a hooker" and that's not quite what she had in mind.

The kind of movie role she envisions for herself is "a person with sort of a kid's mentality, kind of like a purity in her mind. There are certain people who go through life and no matter what happens, they're always untouched."

Portraying a modern-day version of a character like George Bernard Shaw's Joan of Arc might fit that category, she thinks.

"I would like to do something like that," she says. "It's more interesting than someone who is just sexy or dumb, or someone who is mean, or some nice girl which is kind of boring."

Bernadette started her entertainment career at age five on a televised children's show in New York. In her teens, she starred in an off-Broadway comedy, "Dames at Sea," and other shows and later acted on Broadway in "La Strada," "On the Town," and "Mack & Mabel."

She also got into television, with dozens of appearances on talk shows, specials, variety shows and others.

Her movie roles have included parts in Mel Brooks' "Silent Movie," "W.C. Fields & Me," "Vigilante Force," and others.

Her club shows have ranged from hotel-casinos in Stateline and Las Vegas to clubs in Los Angeles, San Francisco and New York.

The pace is hectic. "I go home (Los Angeles) and there's that damn suitcase," she says. "I want to unpack it, but I have a 'suitcase' room where I just drop it."

Eagles Stage Band Plans 'Spring Fever' Assembly

ROPESVILLE (Special) — The Eagles stage band will have its first "Spring Fever" assembly, slated to be an annual event, at 10 a.m. Thursday in the Ropes High School auditorium.

In addition to current popular hits, the stage band will perform selections from its first place performance at the Texas Tech Stage Band Festival.

There is no admission fee, and the public is invited.

GREEK CAVES

Greece has 6,500 caves shaped by the elements that form unusual iridescent forests of stone. These caves figured highly in Greek mythology, because the ancient Greeks believed them to be secret doors to the kingdom of the dead, known as Hades, ruled over by the divinity Pluto.

'Mac's' Odd Man Out Achieves Rock Success

By United Press International

For every rocker who cuts a record, there are a thousand kids with electric guitars who never get any further than the local bar band.

And for every band that makes it to the upper reaches of the record sales charts, there are a hundred whose music ends in the $2.99 cut-out bins.

Rock is the kind of game where the losers can be as talented as the winners; the losers are the ones who just don't have the luck and business sense they needed.

And little more than a year ago, Bob Welch was looking like one more victim of the rock 'n' roll meat grinder.

Those who have followed Fleetwood Mac's long, meandering trail to superstardom will recall Welch as the guy who fronted the band for three years, singing and playing guitar and writing most of the material.

Welch is also the guy whose departure made room for Stevie Nicks and Lindsay Buckingham, permitted Christine McVie to assume a stronger writing and singing role and, by extension, led to Fleetwood's current success.

Welch was, in short, the odd man out of Fleetwood Mac.

He says the last year he spent with them was "tense," largely because of a nasty lawsuit against their former manager, who had tried to make a fast buck by putting another band on the road under the Fleetwood name.

"We really struggled to get to the point where we could make another album and we won," says Welch, "and the record did all right, but it wasn't a giant hit. We were all kind of demoralized and me especially, writing and trying to co-manage the group (with drummer Mick Fleetwood). And I just decided I couldn't go on."

So while his former compadres went on to establish themselves as the premier rock group of the decade, Welch put together an ill-conceived band called Paris — a band that recorded three shaky albums, but which never attracted even so much as a serious cult following. With Paris' unlamented demise last year, Welch had apparently struck bottom.

It's times like that when friends come in handiest.

So, with a new solo album called "French Kiss" (Capitol) in the can and (though he didn't know it then) headed toward becoming a major hit, he decided to take up a longstanding offer from an old friend — Mick Fleetwood.

"When I left Fleetwood Mac, in January of '75, Mick and I remained close. And when I finished this album, Mick had just gotten their office running smoothly and I just asked him — well, you want to manage me now? And he said, 'Sure.'"

It was a move that heralded a rejuvenation of Welch's career; now, he is on the brink of major stardom.

"French Kiss" is basic, 1970s rock 'n' roll: the songs are simple and straightforward, the arrangements dense with layered guitars and strings, the beat solid and uncompromising. Welch has never been in better voice and the production is all but perfect.

It's a different kind of record for Welch, whose work with Fleetwood Mac and Paris was just a hair too complex and perhaps a bit to subtle for the audience he wanted.

"I didn't sit down and plan a tactic for this album," he says. "I just wrote songs ... and because there wasn't a band — Paris was over — I didn't have to let the band arrange the heart out of the songs. I decided I wouldn't mess with these songs — on the record they appear almost exactly as I wrote them."

For Bob Welch, it's as good a way as any to avoid the meat grinder.

ABC Tops Rating Poll

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC pre-empted a consistent ratings leader with an hour-long version of another hit program, and the shift had little effect on the networks' battle for the prime-time TV viewer, A.C. Nielsen Co. figures show.

"Laverne and Shirley," tops in ratings the previous two weeks, was dumped from ABC's Tuesday night lineup to rerun a 60-minute episode of "Happy Days" that turned out to be the week's most-watched show. Neilsen said it was seen in half the homes that were watching TV at the time.

NBC, which has struggled in the ratings much of the season, scored a triumph of sorts when its top-rated program, "Little House on the Prairie," finished No. 2 for the week ending March 12. Another of ABC's Tuesday night shows, "Three's Company," was third.

The ratings spread between the top two shows was significant — 33.6 to 28.8. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 33.6 percent watched at least part of "Happy Days." The show also had a 50 share, which measures homes actually watching television at the time a program is on.

Film Sound Tracks Selling Big

By United Press International

Recorded sound tracks from the movies have delighted lovers of good music since the trend started back in the 1940s with "Spellbound."

Some of the sound tracks have bordered on the classical, namely those by Demitri Tiomkin, Erich Wolfgang Korngold and Bernard Hermanm, to name a few. And there have been some fine scores by pop composers such as Henry Mancini, Paul Anka and Quincy Jones.

Currently, John Williams is riding high with two memorable scores — for "Star Wars" and 'Closen Encounter of 'the Third Kind"

Generally, music from a movie soundtrack, remains with the composer. That is, others do not play it — unless it has a couple of hit songs. This is not the case with the Williams' scores.

Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra have made an excellent recording of suites from "Star Wars and Close Encounters of the Third kind" (London ZM1001). There is some fast and jazzy music in the "Cantina Band" number.

Charles Gerhardt and the National Philharmonic Orchestra have recorded "Close Encounters of the Third Kind and Star Wars" (RCA ARL12698) and while it is a notable performance it lacks some of the grandeur of the Mehta gig.

Naturally, Williams' music for these two epics lends itself to electronic treatment at the hands of Patrick Gleeson and Tomita.

Gleeson's "Star Wars" (Mercury SRM1-1178) is performed on what is plugged as "the world's most advanced synthesizer." Even so, the synthesizer is not as resilient as Mehta's band, especially on the "Cantina" music. But it is something to be played over and over.

Only the main title from "Star Wars" finds a place in Tomita's "Kosmos" album (RCA ARL1-2616). It is interesting to compare it with the Gleeson arrangement. "Kosmos" includes "Space Fantasy." Tomita's arrangement of music by Richard Strauss and Richard Wagner.

Bernard Hermann wrote several fine scores for Alfred Hitchcock thrillers, among them "Vertigo." Music from the sound track of this film (Mercury SRC 75117) is worth re-issuing. Muir Mathieson conducted the Sinfonia of London in this undertaking.

Occasionally a sound track will produce a hit tune. For instance, "Terry's Theme" from "Looking for Mr. Goodbar" has something going for it. And it is included in a new Floyd Cramer piano album, "Looking for Mr. Goodbar" (RCA APL1-2644).

Cramer's keyboarding also features "You Light Up My Life," "It Was Almost Like a Song," "Nobody Does it Better" and "Don't Make My Brown Eyes Blue."

Finnish TV Popular In Soviet Estonia

TALLINN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The glossy world of Western television has attracted a huge following in Soviet Estonia, where viewers need only a rooftop antenna to pull in shows like "Kojak," "Peyton Place" and "Charlie's Angels" from stations in nearby Finland.

Nowhere else in the Soviet Union can foreign television programs be seen and understood, and the Western TV habit has clearly caught on in Estonia's capital.

Citizens snap up copies of Finnish Communist newspapers to tear out television listings, and even children can understand the programs because the Estonian and Finnish languages are so similar.

"The fact that our schoolchildren are watching "Kojak" on TV doesn't please me," said Enn Anupold, chief of the Soviet Union's own TV network in Estonia. "It's just violence. We would rather they watched concerts or theatrical programs on our television."

But many people believe the competition from Finland, just 60 miles away, has helped improve the Estonian network's own programs.

"If we put on a dull or a bad show, people just switch channels," Anupold acknowledges. "I think it's natural in our times for people to look at another channel if it's available."

Finland, a neutral country that tries to avoid antagonizing its giant Eastern neighbor, keeps a check on the political content of its TV programs. There is almost nothing about Soviet human rights on Finnish TV or other topics that the Soviet Union might consider objectionable.

Tallinn residents make no secret of their attraction to Finnish television. Two young students told recent visitors to Tallinn that Finnish TV is "definitely better" than Estonia's own. They talked in particular of Finnish animal programs.

A woman college student said with a giggle that she liked the "sex films" on Finnish TV — apparently a reference to risque shows that fall well short of pornography but would never make it on the Soviet network.

The official Soviet press often complains that Western television is rife with crime and violence that contributes to the decay of society. Many of the programs seen in Finland from the West contain violence, but Anupold doesn't seem to worry about negative effects.

"You shouldn't underestimate the influence of television, but you shouldn't overestimate it either," he said. "I deeply believe," he added with a smile, "that all the bad things going on in the world are not the fault of television."

He also said the average Estonian child watches TV for only about two hours a day, compared to much longer viewing periods in many Western countries.

Estonian TV operates mainly in the Estonian language, although it has nearly five hours of Russian a day as well. Programs include plays created especially for television and recordings from Tallinn theaters and concert halls.

"They watch us in Finland, too," Anupold said.

Hale County Stock Show Dates Bared

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — The 43rd annual Plainview Stock Show, open to 4-H, FFA, and FHA members in Hale County, has been set for March 21-23, according to Jim West, show president.

Animals entered in the show, to be held in the Hale County Agricultural Center at Plainview, are due in the show barn by 5 p.m. Monday. The sifting committee will begin work at 8 a.m. the following day.

Lamb judging will begin at 1 p.m. Tuesday by Kyle Smith of Seminole. Beef cattle judging starts at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday. Lanny Tucker of Hart will begin judging swine at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Late Rally Sparks Mart

NEW YORK (AP) — A late rally sparked by word of a new tentative agreement in the coal strike enabled the stock market to post its third gain in a row Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 4 points in early trading, closed with a 2.60 gain at 762.56.

The average had risen 9.96 points in the past two sessions.

Advances held a 5-3 edge on declines in the daily tally at the New York Stock Exchange, and the exchange's composite common-stock index rose .21 to 49.75.

Volume on the Big Board reached 24.30 million shares, against 24.07 million Monday.

The market opened on a weak note as the dollar encountered new pressure in foreign exchange, hitting a new low against the Japanese yen. The decline was attributed partly to disappointment over the U.S.-West German plan announced Monday aimed at shoring up the U.S. currency.

But once the initial flurry of selling was over, prices leveled off by mid-day.

New York (AP) — Tuesday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Sadat Condemns Terrorist Attack

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat condemned the weekend Palestinian terror attack on Israeli civilians, urged Israeli restraint and appealed to warring Middle East factions Tuesday to halt the "vicious circle" of attack and reprisal.

"Let us hope that we can overcome the sadness and this tragic action that has happened and establish peace once and forever in the area," the Egyptian president told reporters in the Nile valley town of Beni Suef, about 70 miles south of Cairo.

Despite Sadat's plea, the Israelis launched air, sea and ground attacks on guerilla bases in Lebanon, Palestinian sources said.

Sadat's statement in English, broadcast live by Cairo radio, was the first Arab denunciation of Saturday's Palestinian terror raid in which 33 Israelis were killed and about 80 wounded. It was Sadat's second attack on the Palestinians in recent weeks. Other radical and moderate Arab regimes had praised the raid as a bold move.

Sadat called for an end to "this vicious circle of action and reaction because it will lead to nothing."

"I am against anything done against the civilians," the Egyptian leader said, breaking a three-day silence on the subject. "This is our position here in Egypt. We had the same experience a few weeks before in Cyprus and have condemned this and anything against civilians. Really, I shall always condemn this irresponsible action."

Numerous foreign governments have urged Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to exercise restraint, and, apart from his vow Monday to Parliament "to cut off the arm of evil," and to "do what we have to do," there have been no outright retaliation threats. Egypt has conveyed a message to Israel, via the United States, saying a reprisal strike would only lead to more violence in the Mideast.

In Beirut, official sources said Lebanese Foreign Minister Fuad Butros asked the United States on Tuesday to intervene to avert an Israeli attack on Palestinian camps in southern Lebanon. A civilian exodus from the south was accelerated by fears of an Israeli reprisal raid.

Israel says the teeming refugee camps harbor Palestinian guerrilla bases.

The government sources said Butros told U.S. Ambassador Richard Parker the Lebanese government had no authority over the southern region bordering Israel and should not be held responsible for the Palestinian raid.

Sadat said, "I describe it as a very sad and tragic incident and when I heard that the Palestine Liberation Organization declared their responsibility about it I asked myself this question — what will be the result? I should have liked action towards the establishment of peace instead of starting revenge again, and the vicious circle."

PLO chief Yasser Arafat claimed three brigades of Israeli tanks, paratroopers and mechanized units were deployed for a large-scale assault on guerrilla strongholds in the south.

Sadat had condemned the PLO earlier after Palestinian gunmen assassinated Egyptian newspaper editor Youssef el-Sabaei in Nicosia, Cyprus on Feb. 18. That killing led to the abortive raid by Egyptian commandos the next day in an attempt to free hostages being held aboarda commandeered jetliner at Larnaca airport. Fifteen of the commandos were killed by Cypriot troops.

The PLO has called Sadat a traitor to the Arab cause for journeying to Jerusalem Nov. 19 and starting a direct dialogue with Begin A PLO statement after the raid said it was partly meant to forestall a peace settlement.

Sadat's characterization of the raid as "sad and tragic" relieved Israeli officials who had feared an Egyptian silence would mar the rapprochement begun in November.

"If people are to sit down and negotiate peace, this makes things smoother," said one official in Tel Aviv.

But Sadat has not abandoned the Palestinian cause. In negotiations with Israel he has called for total Israeli withdrawal from all Arab territories occupied in the 1967 Mideast war and the eventual creation of a Palestinian state, saying no peace is possible without settling the Palestinian question. Israel has rejected the Palestinian state, saying it would pose a security threat.

"Even if all the confrontation states reach settlements with Israel and the Palestinian question is not settled, we shall not establish peace," Sadat said.

The 11 Palestinian raiders landed on the Israeli coast Saturday about 37 miles north of Tel Aviv. They first hijacked an interurban bus and then a tourist bus, and tried to go to Tel Aviv with about 70 hostages to seize a hotel and free imprisoned terrorists.

They were stopped at a roadblock seven miles north of Tel Aviv and during a battle with Israeli forces, the bus exploded. Nine of the Palestinians were killed and the two others captured.

Brasfield Pre-Trial Motions Set

A-J Correspondent

WICHITA FALLS — Pre-trial motions were scheduled to be heard at 1:30 p.m. today here before testimony begins in the capital murder trial of 28-year-old Slatonite Philip Carey Brasfield.

Tuesday prosecutors and defense attorneys selected the final two jurors to hear the case.

Empaneled were 54-year-old Geneva Wright, a catering manager for the officer's mess at Sheppard Air Force Base here, and 25-year-old Ricky Lee Lamb, an employee of a local car dealership.

Brasfield is accused of the abduction-slaying of six-year-old Johnny Turner, Jr., on or about Oct. 26, 1977. The trial was moved here on a change of venue from Lubbock.

The first-grader's body was found half-naked in a ravine in the rugged Yellowhouse Canyon area near Slaton after one of the most intensive searches in Lubbock County history by lawmen from several agencies.

The grisly discovery came eight days after the youth first had been reported missing.

The indictment against Brasfield alleges he caused the child's death by asphyxiation conducted "in a manner and means unknown" to the grand jury. The indictment also alleges Brasfield murdered the boy during the course of a kidnapping, thereby raising the charge to capital murder.

If convicted, Brasfield will face either life imprisonment or death, the only punishment options under the Texas capital murder laws.

Wheelcovers Prime Target Of Thieves

If you like flashy wheelcovers, be forewarned: so do Lubbock thieves, as several recent incidents indicated.

There were at least 11 recent reports of stolen hubcaps, and, in one instance, tires and wheels were taken from a wrecked car.

Shirley Redden of 2802 65th St. said a mirror and her wheelcovers were taken from her vehicle Monday or Tuesday. She set her loss at $270.

Clyde Clemons of 5818 24th St. said his wheelcovers were taken during the same period, while his 1977 Thunderbird was parked in the 1600-block of 6th Street. Clemons said the accessories were worth $480.

Mary Francis Connelly of 4520 7th St. said she was not sure where her $125 hubcaps were stolen Monday or Tuesday, but thieves took Paul Airhart's $340 set while his car was parked outside his 2109 Raleigh Ave. residence Tuesday.

Also reporting stolen hubcaps were Dennis Barkley of 3001 S. Loop 289 ($200); Brent Washington of 6001 34th St. (value unknown); Mike Rodriguez of 3013 Grinnell St. ($200); Laura Jane Doring of 3404 Elkhart Ave. ($256); Goree Toliver of 1909 E. Brown St. ($120); Daryl Jones of 2625 74th Place ($300) and Kevin Dickson of 4012 38th St., who said the wheels and tires were taken from his wrecked vehicle while it was being stored in the 100-block of Sherman Avenue. Dickson set the value of his stolen property at $195.

Meanwhile, Jimmy Ray Pharr of Pharr and Pharr Construction, said someone stole a welder belonging to the firm from the Community Services Outreach Center, 2812 Weber Drive, Monday.

Michael Bryant of Midland said someone removed his vehicle's window Monday, then stole some cushions, helmets and 8-track tapes from his car while it was parked at a South Lubbock motel. He set his loes at $600.

Tony Ford of 4616 67th St. said someone had stolen $40 from his home during the past week.

Youth May Be Tried As Adult In Slaying Case

HASKELL (Special) — A 16-year-old youth being held in connection with the shotgun slayings of three Aspermont residents may be tried as an adult if petitions filed here Monday are approved by 39th Dist. Court Judge William P. Ratliff.

Dist. Atty. Joseph Thigpen Monday filed petitions seeking to have the boy tried as an adult for the murders of 38-year-old Herman Weldon Swink, his pregnant wife Ilka Ilene, 27, and his 14-year-old son Royce Wayne.

The youth has been held in Lubbock County Jail since Feb. 1 while authorities decided whether to seek certification to have him tried as an adult for the Jan. 24 slayings in Aspermont.

Authorities found the three shotgunned in their home about 5 a.m. after the Swink's other son, 16-year-old Roy Swink, broke through a plate glass window and drove across town to an uncle's. The uncle called police.

At the home, lawmen found the three had been murdered a short time before officers arrived. The Swinks had been married in September. She reportedly was seven months pregnant at the time of her death.

If approved, the certification of the boy as an adult would mean he would stand trial soon, according to Stonewall County authorities.

Ratliff earlier had set a Monday hearing for the adjudication proceedings under the family code. After the certification motion was filed, he set 10 a.m. Friday for discussion on the petition and canceled the Monday date.

Thigpen, though refusing to comment, issued a press release saying "the request was made because of the seriousness of the offenses and because the welfare of the community requires criminal proceedings."
