Ford, Reagan near '1130'

By The Associated Press

President Ford and Ronald Reagan each scored sweeps on the last day of GOP state convention voting Saturday. But Ford ended the day with a net gain of 15 votes over Reagan, and moved to within 64 delegates of the Republican presidential nomination.

Ford took all 35 delegates at stake in the Connecticut convention, bringing his delegate total to 1,066, according to The Associated Press tally. Reagan has 1,020 of the 1,130 needed for nomination.

Reagan won all 20 delegates available at the Utah convention in Salt Lake City.

Both victories were expected and left the balance of power with the 172 delegates who remain uncommitted. No more delegates remain to be chosen before the party meets for its national convention Aug. 16 in Kansas City.

Ford called for unity at the Connecticut convention in Hartford, to "center our attack not on fellow Republicans but on this Democratic Congress, the Democratic platform and the Democratic ticket which tries to be all things to all people.

"Now we must resolve to stop fighting each other and start helping each other."

It was his first political address since Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale won the Democratic presidential and vice presidential nominations on Thursday.

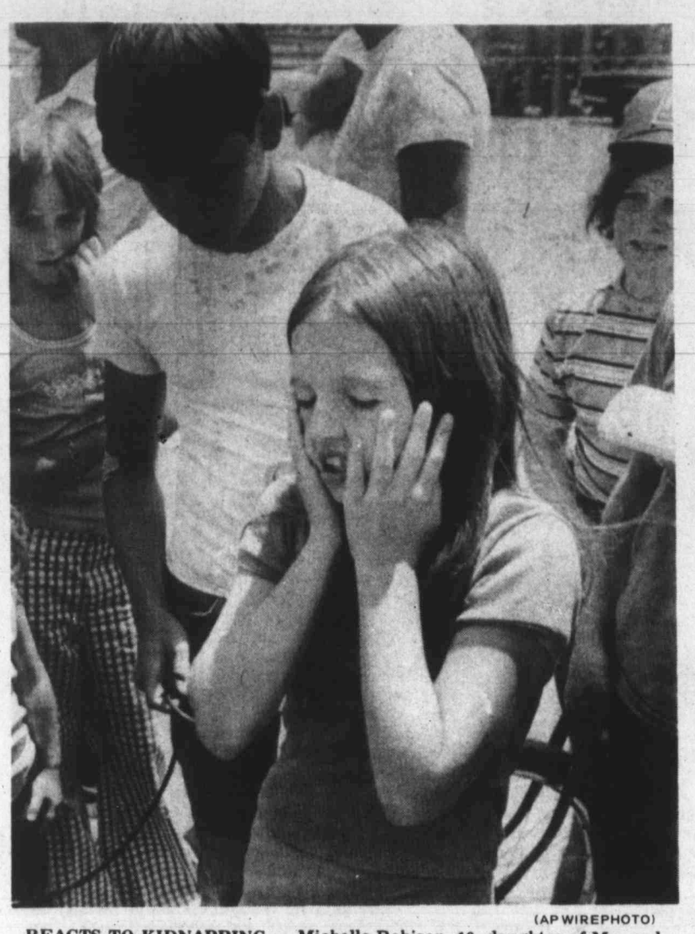

Ford got a rousing welcome at the Hartford convention, but outside the hall a group of about 50 Reagan supporters chanted "We want Reagan" and waved placards.

The Reagan camp claimed Connecticut party leaders had stacked the deck against them at the convention by refusing to give them 20 per cent of the delegation. They contended that proportion of the convention supported Reagan.

While Ford called for unity in Hartford, Reagan was repeating is attacks on the President's foreign and domestic policies, telling Utah delegates that Ford had created an illusion of prosperity by deficit spending in an election year. And he charged that Ford had failed to tell Americans the truth about the nation's military weaknesses.

"We're told that we're having a solid economic recovery. I don't believe that. We've been given the illusion of prosperity in an election year by printing press money. But what happens then?

"You cannot spend your way to prosperity. You cannot build prosperity by going into debt."

REACTS TO KIDNAPPING — Michelle Robison, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Robison of Chowchilla, reacts to a newsmans' question as she arrived with her parents at police headquarters for fingerprinting Saturday. The 26 children arrived home safely early Saturday morning after being found near Livermore.

Kids ask 'why'

'Joke' turns nightmare

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) — At first, some of them thought it was a joke. But after the 26 children and their driver were spirited from a school bus and buried alive in a van at a quarry nearly 100 miles away, many began doubting they would ever return home to this central California farm community.

After they were locked up in their dark subterranean prison by three armed and masked men, the children bravely sang songs to keep their spirits up. Some wet their pants, and one fainted.

"We kids were asking all the time why they were doing this to us," said 9-year-old Jennifer Brown. "They didn't say anything."

"We didn't think we'd ever get out," 11-year-old Michelle Robison said Saturday after being reunited with her family. "I thought it was a joke at first. But I didn't when they put us in the vans."

Bus driver Frank Ray Jr. tells the story of how three men kidnaped him and 26 children on a school bus he was driving and buried them alive. See page 2A for photos and story from the scene.

Darla Daniels, a deeply tanned 10-year-old who aspires to movie stardom, said the bus from Dairyland Unified School District was stopped Thursday afternoon by three gunmen who blocked the roadway with their van. She said the gunmen were wearing ties, but later switched to white coveralls.

During the ride north to a Livermore quarry, Darla said, the two-van caravan stopped three times so the kidnapers could refuel the vans from gasoline cans they carried. She said the children were hot because they were covered with a tent-like tarp, and they weren't permitted to go out to the bathroom, so "all of us had to go in our pants."

They were herded down a ladder and locked into a World War II vintage moving van covered with earth. The kidnapers provided them with two packages of potato chips, three packs of cereal, including Cheerios, and eight gallons of water. Then they were left alone with only a flashlight for light.

The children and their driver, Frank Edward Ray, did what they could to keep their fear under control in the stiffling underground atmosphere. "We were singing songs like on the radio," Darla said.

Mike Marshall, 14, who spent five hours digging an escape hole, said "I thought we were going to die down there." As he dug towards freedom, Mike said he "didn't know if they were going to be there pointing guns at our heads or what."

'Jerry McCune' sought after bus kidnaping

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) — Three men who engineered the bizarre kidnaping of 26 children and their school bus driver were mysteriously silent throughout most of the ordeal but may have slipped up by using one of their names in front of the victims.

Authorities issued an all-points bulletin Saturday for a "Jerry McCune" in connection with the case. They declined to say how they got the full name, but two of the victims said they heard one kidnaper address another as "Jerry."

There was no further identification of McCune.

Tax cut extension number one item for Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Extension of the present individual income tax cuts for Americans is a No. 1 item of business when Congress returns Monday from a two-weeks recess.

Also awaiting decision is an extension of the revenue sharing plan for state and local governments.

The congressional recess which began July 2 covered both the Fourth of July holiday and the Democratic National Convention. Members will recess again Oct. 12 through Aug. 20 for the Republican National Convention. They plan to end their 1976 session on Oct. 2 to give time for campaigning before the November election.

The tax cuts were enacted last year and technically expired on June 30. But a law was enacted to freeze tax-withholding rates at the June 30 levels until Sept. 1 to give Congress time to decide on an extension.

If the cuts are allowed to expire it would mean $445-per-year tax increase for a four-member family earning $6,000 a year. The yearly tax hike for a typical four-member family earning $15,000 or a single person making $25,000 would be $180. A couple with no children and earning $10,000 would face a $204 tax increase.

Committee wants some state agencies nixed

AUSTIN (AP) — A subcommittee of the "Hobby Commission" has recommended abolishing such state agencies as the state welfare department and the youth council.

Their services would be continued under a different system.

The proposal still must go before the so-called Hobby Commission, which is studying ways to economize in government, before the commission would submit it to the legislature.

Viking craft landing on Mars set Tuesday

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — With little of the hoopla that attended America's moon landing just seven years ago, the United States will attempt on Tuesday a feat of space exploration in many ways more difficult and less assured of success.

Early in the morning, Viking 1 will attempt to land its small biology laboratory safely on the surface of Mars to conduct its automated tests and see whether there is life on the red planet.

More than 200 million miles away, hundreds of space engineers and scientists will wait in suspense as the unmanned probe falls toward the surface, hopefully for a safe, gentle landing.

As valuable as the probe is — more than eight years of planning and the country's most advanced technology — direct control of its landing is not possible because Mars is so distant that radio waves take 18 minutes to travel there from Earth.

Once released by the orbiting mother ship, the 2,000-pound lander will be guided by a computer as it falls toward its target area, switching on small rockets in the last few seconds to cushion its landing. Because of the radio lag, no one will know until 18 minutes after its touchdown whether it landed or crashed.

The ambitiousness of the billion-dollar mission reminds one Viking official of the myth of Daedalus and Icarus. That father and son fixed feathered wings to their arms with wax in attempting to fly, but the bolder Icarus flew too high and the sun melted his wings.

"All along we've designed this mission more like Icarus than Daedalus," said Dr. Gentry Lee.

Indian burial site found in Reeves Co.

PECOS, Tex. (AP) — A Pecos surveyor reported discovery of an apparent Indian burial site in Northwest Reeves County that yielded a large number of well perserved artifacts, including the remains of three children.

Frank Granado said he found the remains Friday along with woven mats, bowls, nets, bone implements and snake rattles in two burial mounds inside a deep cave in rugged terrain.

He brought the artifacts to Pecos and plans to return to the cave, the location of which he has not yet divulged, for further digging.

Granado is making efforts to have the artifacts identified and dated.

He said he and a surveying party discovered the cave three years ago but it was occupied by a mother bobcat and a litter of kittens.

A few weeks ago he and his helpers went back and discovered what may be one of the most significant archelogical finds in this area.

Judge rules shooting accidental

Aaron Douglas Wilemon, 33, of 1314 Mt. Vernon, was the victim of "an accidental self-inflicted gunshot wound" shortly after 10:30 Friday night.

County Judge Bill Tune made the official ruling Saturday afternoon.

Officer Robert Sims, Lt. Robert Dugan and Det. J. D. Carter were dispatched to the scene when a report came to the Police Department from Alert Amublance.

Upon arrival, the officers found Wilemon lying on the couch with a bullet wound in the left side of the chest.

The police report indicated that he was already unconscious, and was taken to Malone-Hogan Hospital where he was pronounced dead by Dr. Burnett shortly after arrival at the emergency room.

Initially, Judge Tune held a ruling on the death pending further investigation. According to Tune, he investigated "four hours" Friday night and "three hours" Saturday morning before making the official ruling.

A local radio station erroneously reported Saturday morning that the shooting had been a murder. When asked how news such as that could have been gleaned, Tune replied, "I don't know."

The weapon involved in the accidental shooting was a 22 cal. pistol, Tune indicated.

Both Wilemon's mother and father have died in the past two months due to natural causes, a funeral home spokesman confirmed.

Services for Wilemon will be at 2 p.m. Monday at the Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with Rev. A.L. Gatewood, pastor of Salem Baptist Church, officiating.

Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park.

He was born May 6, 1943 in Big Spring and was raised here, graduated from Big Spring High School and attended Howard College.

Wilemon was a PBX installer for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. and was a member of the Westside Baptist Church. He was also a member of Big Spring Lodge, number 1340 A.F. & A.M.

He was married Dec. 14, 1964, to Janice Owens in Big Spring.

In addition to his widow, survivors are two daughters, Tasha Wilemon and Tera Wilemon, both of the home; three sisters, Mrs. Dorothy Harland and Mrs. Shirly Cupit, both of Big Spring, and Mrs. Betty Jo Click, Rendon; two brothers, Hermon Wilemon Jr., Sand Springs, and Billy Wilemon, Kennedale; and his grandfather M.A. Wilemon, Big Spring.

Pallbearers will be Gary Taggart, Travis Crow, Charles Buzby, Jackie Crawford, Max Brashears, and Joe Spindler. All employes of Southwestern Bell Co. are considered honorary pallbearers.

No date set for statement

A new date for the release of the environmental impact statement on Webb Air Force Base will not be set until sometime next week, the Pentagon said Saturday.

Earlier, a spokesman for the Pentagon indicated that a "ballpark" date which would pin the release of the impact statement down at least to a particular month might be available.

The spokesman would say Saturday only that there is no chance the impact statement will be released within the past week.

The Air Force is preparing the impact statement as a part of the study on possible closing which has been announced for Webb. The statement was to have been released to the public in June, but was postponed to July. Earlier this week the release was postponed again.

No specific reasons have been given for the delays.

Rainfall total up near normal

As of late Saturday evening, the U.S. Big Spring Experiment Station had received 0.52 of an inch of rain.

This brought the total for July to 3.37 inches, and the total for the year to 9.99 inches. Normal total rainfall on this date is 9.77 inches.

Last year on this date, 13.95 inches had fallen.

'Leisure' debuts in today's Herald

Today's issue of the Big Spring Herald contains a new pull-out magazine called "Leisure."

"Leisure, which can be found weekly in Section D, replaces the old TV This Week section in the Sunday Herald.

In addition to a local cover story each week and other special features, the magazine will have a new computerized television log format.

"The new logs will be the most complete and most accurate available in West Texas," Publisher J. Tom Graham said. "We hope that Big Spring area folks will like them as much as we think they will.

"We believe that after our readers use the new larger and more complete logs for a few days, they will never want to go back to the inaccurate and clumsy box format."

Action/reaction: Earlier mail?

Q. What can we do about getting an earlier out-going mail from Big Spring?

A. "We could petition the station manager in Midland, David Holster, and he would take it under advisement," stated Postmaster Frank Hardesty, "but a lot of thought has gone into this, and the 4:05 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. dispatch seem to handle the volume of mail (out of Big Spring)."

Mr. Hardesty pointed out that the object of the department is to get "next day" delivery, and any earlier out-going mail would not speed up matters, and would not be of sufficient volume for the automatic machines in Midland anyway.

Offbeat: Bad week for Orogrande

OROGRANDE, N.M. (AP) — It's been a bad week for this little southern New Mexico village. Things just quit working.

The pipeline that brings water from the Sacramento Mountains broke Thursday and left the village of about 150 population without water.

The town, located about midway between Alamogordo and El Paso, Tex., turned on the standby waterline from Juniper Lake, but found it unusuable because it was clogged with sediment, explained Mrs. Lester Hayden, whose husband heads the Orogrande Water Association.

A four-wheel-drive vehicle was sent up the mountain to search for the leak. That didn't work because the area had unusually heavy rainfall, and even the rugged vehicle bogged down in deep mud. They hadn't found the leak by Saturday.

The National Guard, under orders from Gov. Jerry Apodaca, was bringing water to the town in a 1,000-gallon tank truck this weekend.

And nearly all the telephone lines are down.

"Somebody went up there last night (Friday) and cut out a big section of the phone lines. They stole the cable," said a sheriff's deputy.

The telephone company brought in more line, and the deputy said service was partially restored. Attempts to call into Orogrande produced only busy signals for more than an hour.

However, noted an optimistic state policeman, "They've still got electricity."

27 kidnaped from bus end 36-hour ordeal

Children buried alive, all found safe

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) — Shivering and dazed, 26 children and their school bus driver came back from a 36-hour journey of terror Saturday and told of being buried alive by mysteriously silent kidnapers.

The victims of the unprecedented mass kidnaping told of a nightmarish descent into an earth-covered truck which they believed was fashioned as their coffin.

"We thought we'd had it," said the shaken bus driver, Frank Edward Ray, 55, who related to reporters the ordeal in which he and "my kids" dug out of a stiffling underground cell in a remote gravel quarry.

The quiet kidnapers — three masked men with guns — barely spoke to their victims, Ray said, ignoring the children's desperate cries of "Why?"

"The kids kept hollering, 'Why'd they do this to us,'" Ray said. He added: "I don't know, either."

Investigators, too, seemed baffled. The kidnapers' motives and actions were unexplained.

At dawn, when the youngsters were carried home by tearful parents, the abductors were still at large. An all-points bulletin was issued for three unidentified men.

The incredible voyage — in which children from simple farm families vanished without a trace Thursday afternoon — threw this tiny rural town into communal grief that turned to joy when the youngsters returned home Saturday.

"Welcome home, kids," said a placard at City Hall where the weary but unharmed children arrived in the moonlit predawn hours. They were greeted by whistles, cheers and tears from neighbors and kin who had waited through the night.

The children, ages 6 to 14, were rumpled and dirty, most of them lost in oversized prison jumpsuits hastily brought in to replace clothing taken by the kidnapers.

The driver of the chartered Greyhound bus which brought them home from Livermore, 95 miles to the north, said one small girl had a nightmare and cried out: "Please leave me alone!"

The youngest children were carried home asleep on a parents' shoulder. Older children trudged out unaided.

GOING HOME — Rodney Park of Chowchilla cuddles his children Andrea, 8, and Larry, 11, after their early morning reunion. The two children were among 26 school children and their bus driver that were abducted on the way home from school Thursday afternoon. All were found unharmed.

BACK HOME — Dairyland school bus driver Frank Ray Jr. steps from the bus that brought him, and 26 school children, home to Chowchilla after they were found unharmed Friday night.

"They're great!" said a joyful mother. "I'm okay," murmured a teenaged boy. But the fear that the kidnapers brought remained at sunrise.

Mayor Jim Dumas revealed that his wife, Lorene, received a telephone call soon after the children surfaced. An anonymous woman told her: "The children have been found, but it's not over. There will be others," then sobbed and hung up. The mayor said he hoped it was a crank call.

An all-points bulletin was issued for the three unidentified abductors and two Dodge vans, one black and one white, both with citizens band radio antennas.

Residents hailed the bus driver as a hero. Ray, the only adult victim, poured out the most complete details of the frantic underground hours in which he comforted sobbing children, poured water on their heat-parched bodies and clawed at the gravel and dirt he feared would entomb them.

He said about the only time the kidnapers spoke was to ask the name and age of each victim, and demand bits of their clothing.

"They didn't do much talking I ever heard," Ray said. "We tried to talk out and beg them, but I never heard an answer."

The stocky, dark-haired bus driver, red-eyed and trembling, faced about 200 reporters and photographers who had descended on this town of 4,500 residents when word spread of the strange disappearance. Blinking at the glare of television lights, Ray was still grimy from his ordeal and expressed surprise at the massive search which had been launched.

"I was hoping," he said, "but I guess nobody thought we were down there."

He said he believed they had saved their own lives in a determined escape, because air was getting scarce and the roof nearly caved in.

The surrealistic adventure was traced by Ray from 4 p.m. Thursday when he dropped off three summer school students and continued on with the remaining 26.

"There was a white van parked in the road," he said. "I slowed up to go around it, and a man jumped out of the van with two guns."

He said a black van joined the first one and two more armed men ordered Ray to the back of his bus.

"They turned down into a slough, with the bus with all my kids on it," said Ray. Then, behind a camouflage of brush, the abductors loaded the children into the vans whose windows were covered with plywood.

"I was in the black van. It was dark in there. We traveled and traveled on and on. I don't know where we went," Ray said.

It was a hot day, and Ray said the kidnapers turned off the air conditioning after awhile. "I thought we were going to suffocate," he said.

That thought became more intense, he said, when the vans stopped at 3:30 a.m. Friday and he and the children were herded into an underground pit.

It was then, he said, that one of the kidnapers asked for Ray's pants and boots and pieces of the children's clothing.

"He unloaded all the kids and asked their names and ages. He gave me a flashlight and I had to escort the kids down," he said.

The kidnapers had provided a ladder which reached down into a partially earth-covered enclosure which appeared to be the body of a truck lined with mesh wire.

"He pulled the ladder up and put a steel plate over the top," Ray said. A large box and dirt were piled on top, he added.

Inside, he said, the kidnapers had left food and water.

Ray also said he felt indications that the kidnapers planned to return. But hope faded when they slammed the steel door and began to clip the mesh wires which he said supported the earth above the truck body.

"We could hear them clipping the wires. We started trying to dig out, but the ceiling caved in. We thought that we'd had it right then."

When the sound of clipping stopped — what seemed a very long time later — Ray said he and the boys decided to dig again. He said they felt they'd be as likely to die locked in the stifling tomb as they would be digging through the falling dirt.

RELIEVED MOTHER — Mrs. Frances Williams, left, whose daughter, Lisa Barletta, 12, was among the children abducted from their school bus Thursday, is embraced by a friend, Barbara Kjostad, after learning the children and driver were found unharmed.

"We could hardly move the steel plate," he said, but the kidnapers had left mattresses inside and "we piled up the mattresses and got the steel plate up."

Then, he said, another barrier blocked them — "another box on top which was covered with dirt." He said they clawed at it with their hands and poked at it with a small block of wood.

"The dirt would fall down and cave in on us. We'd pour water over our heads to cool down and come up to dig some more."

During the battle to get out, he said, the smaller children were frantic. "We had a lot of crying and begging for their mamas. But I quieted them down ... I just told them to stay calm."

Finally, at about 7 p.m. Friday, Ray said, "we got out."

"One of the children was digging out. He was raking dirt out," he recalled. And suddenly, 11-year-old Robert Gonzales broke through to the light.

"Then Mike Marshall, the big boy, helped," Ray said of the 14-year-old. "I handed the kids out to the other boys."

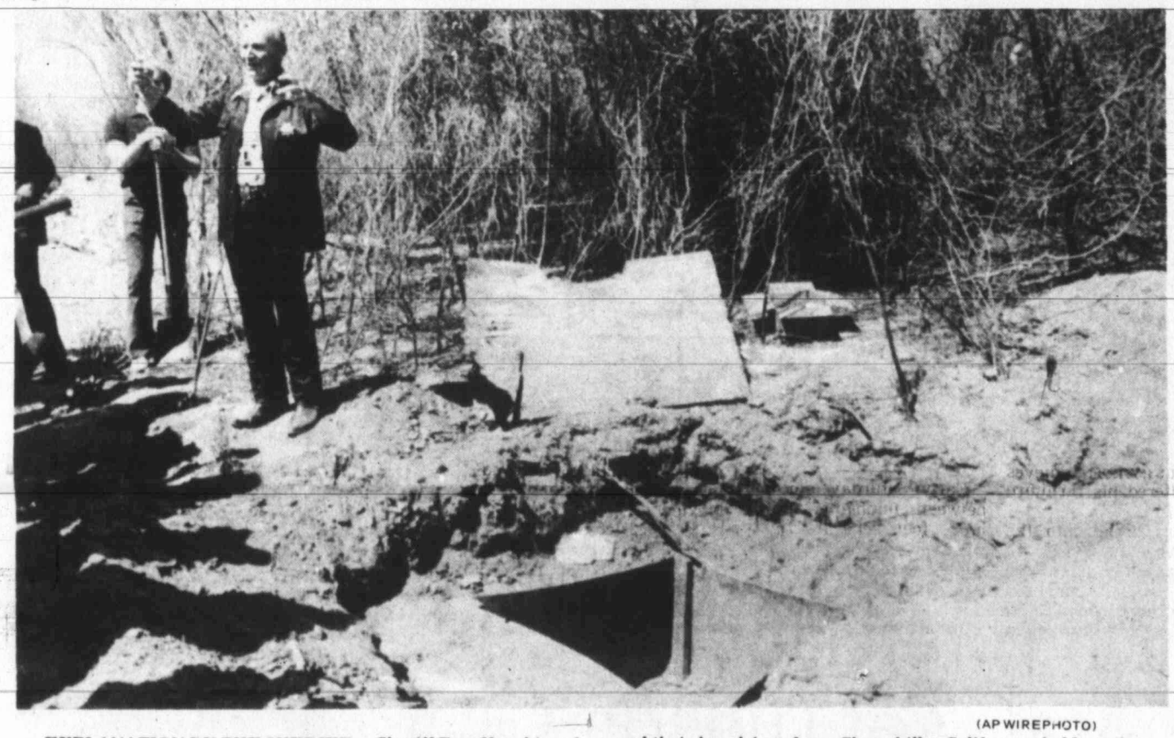

Ray, the last one out of the enclosure, said that as he staggered up into the rock quarry he spotted a worker. "He was about 200 yards away standing on gravel. We told him what happened. He said he heard about it on the radio. The sheriff and police and all were there. We had a big crowd," Ray said. "We all got home safe."

The bus driver, who had not slept in 50 hours, still appeared stunned as he sat beside his wife, Odessa, and told his story. He said he never doubted the abductors planned to kill him and the children and declared, "I wouldn't let them live if I got a hold of them."

His bitterness was voiced by other members of the community who gathered at the City Hall. "You know," snapped one man, "we believe in capital punishment."

Ray said he thought he could identify at least one of the kidnapers, although they never removed their stocking masks during the ordeal.

"I never saw their faces without the masks on, but I'd recognize one if I ever saw him again," he said. "I looked at him the whole time I was helping those kids down the ladder."

EXPLANATION BY THE SHERIFF — Sheriff Tom Houchins of Alameda County is pictured during a news conference Saturday afternoon at the site in the rock quarry where 26 school children and their bus driver from Chowchilla, Calif. were held captive. Officials said the captives were taken into a buried van through the hole in center foreground.

Bulldog kills five-year-old

CASTRO VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A 5-year-old boy was killed by the family's pet bulldog when the animal locked its jaws on the child's neck, authorities said Saturday.

The dog sank its teeth into the boy's neck and would not let go until a neighbor stabbed it with a butcher knife, an Alameda County sheriff's deputy said.

Michael McNair was dead on arrival Friday at Eden Hospital.

The pet bulldog later was ordered destroyed by the boy's father, the deputy said.

Because a bulldog's lower jaw is longer than the upper jaw, it is physically impossible for the dog to let go while there is any tension on whatever it is gripping.

Sheriff's Lt. Keith Boyer said the boy was attacked in the McNair home Friday afternoon while his parents, Lee and Sharon McNair, were at work. His 14-year-old sister, Kim, ran from the house screaming for help.

A neighbor, Alvin Olviera, 40, tried in vain to drive the dog off by first beating it with his fists and then hitting it with a cement water heater cover, Boyer said.

"He had to stab the dog between the shoulders with a big butcher knife to get him to release his grip," Boyer said.

Neighbors and John Moore, chief of the Animal Control Shelter, said they did not know why the dog attacked the child.

"The youngster came into the house shortly before 1:30 p.m. and was rather exuberantly moving around. All of a sudden the dog grabbed him and took him by the neck," Boyer said.

BS aircraft officer suggests agreement

Guilford L. Jones, an attorney and officer with Big Spring Aircraft Inc., has written Louis Rosenbaum, president of Trans Regional Airlines, suggesting a written rental agreement.

The letter is dated July 12, the day representatives of Rosenbaum, Big Spring Aircraft and the Chamber of Commerce met with County Commissioners Court.

It states in part:

"As spokesman for Big Spring Aircraft Inc., I made it quite plain that we have no objection to your continued tenancy of this space as a terminal for scheduled airline service, provided we reach an agreement on all of the terms and conditions of rental, and that it be reduced to a written agreement."

"We will not agree under any circumstances for this terminal space to used by anyone competing in the charter service or other aspects of a fixed-base operation business," Jones wrote. (Use of a hangar for fixed-base operations has been suggested).

"I hope you will respond in a businesslike manner," Jones concluded. "If not, you will leave us with no recourse except to proceed with our eviction suit."

Ends 19 years in probation work

Dibrell believes in probationers

By JOHN EDWARDS

"A big percentage" of defendants granted probation never commit serious crimes again, said John Dibrell, adult probation officer.

"Most people we have want to do the right thing," Dibrell, owner of a local sport goods store, said.

"I think the probation program is really good," Dibrell said. "It helps a lot of people."

While Dibrell did not start working part-time as adult probation officer until 1957, he had devoted a number of years to another program which he believed developed good citizens — sports.

"YOU HAVE to have a lot of pride, have to work, sacrifice — all those things," the former Big Spring Steer football coach said. "I think it's good for everyone. It's definitely a part of school."

Dibrell ends a long career in public service Aug. 1 when his resignation becomes effective. He will continue to operate his store.

Probation office work, added to his private business, had overloaded him.

"We have enough people now we need a full-time probation officer," Dibrell said.

There are 416 adult probationers in Howard County.

Dibrell felt the community was "fortunate" to have Guy Talbot as his replacement.

Jeanette Nichols, formerly a bank employe and deputy district clerk, will be assisting as secretary. District Judge Ralph W. Caton appointed them to the probation office for felony offenders.

County Commissioners Court Monday is expected to confer with County Judge Bill Tune about naming a probation officer for county court, possibly Talbot.

JOHN DIBRELL

Talbot shared many of Dibrell's views about probation. As a full-time probation officer, Talbot will be able to spend more time with the program.

"I WILL maintain a strict program," Talbot said. "Failure to follow the orders of the court will result in a recommendation to the district attorney to seek revocation of probation."

Probationers pay the cost of representation by an attorney in district court, court costs, a $5 or $10 monthly supervisory fee and restitution for any damages caused by the crime.

"They're not a liability or cost or burden to anyone," Talbot said. Probationers must report to the probation office monthly.

"We have found in the past that many make good employes," Talbot said. "They have to be. They have a responsibility to themselves and also to the court."

TALBOT, 29, has been special investigator for District Attorney Robert H. (Bob) Moore III three and one-half years. Since October 197, Talbot has been serving additionally as assistant adult probation officer.

Prior to public service, Talbot was a private investigator. He has been an investigator for Dean Claim Service and credit manager for Hemphill-Wells Co.

Talbot has an associate arts degree from Howard College and bachelor of arts degree from Angelo State University. He is also a graduate of the Permian Basin Law Enforcement Academy at Midland.

DIBRELL, A native of Colorado City, and his family moved from the area city when he was six weeks old. He attended school in San Antonio.

In 1934, Dibrell was graduated from St. Edward's University in Austin with a major in history.

At St. Edward's, Dibrell played end in football and ran track. The next three years, he was the varsity football coach for ends at the University of Texas under Head Coach Jack Cheyigny.

Dibrell was assistant football coach and head track and basketball coach at Schreiner Institute in Kerrville for two years. He coached football at Post High School and Colorado City High School two years each.

Dibrell was the head coach of the Big Spring Steers from 1942 to 1947. Then, he opened a sporting goods store at the site of a Johnson Street service station. Dibrell's Sporting Goods now is located at 1307 S. Gregg St.

When then County Judge Ed Brown died in about 1950, Dibrell was appointed to complete the unexpired term of office.

Dibrell served on the board of trustees of the Big Spring Independent School District nine years, including time he was president of the board.

The late District Judge Charlie Sullivan appointed Dibrell adult probation officer in September 1957.

"At that time, they didn't have any probation from the county court," Dibrell recalled.

Dibrell is married. His wife, Juanita, was formerly from Lufkin, Tex.

Drug Agency revamp 'fails'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling drug abuse a national tragedy, Senate investigators said Saturday that a reorganization intended to strengthen federal efforts to combat the traffic in illicit drugs has failed.

In the three years since the Drug Enforcement Administration — DEA — was established, the nation's illicit drug traffic has grown, said a report of the permament investigations subcommittee, a unit of the Senate Government Operations Committee.

"The number of drug addicts continues to increase at a rapid rate, brown heroin from Mexico continues to come into this country in massive amounts and drug abuse continues to spread into rural and suburban areas," it said.

The subcommittee's report was based on an investigation and hearings conducted last year.

RAINY DAY WRECK — Local units of the police and fire departments, and an Alert Ambulance responded to a reported major accident at the corner of Mt. Vernon and Washington Place. Cars driven by Monroe Connell, 2822 35th, Lubbock, and James Slaugh, 606 Holbert, collided on the rain-slick thoroughfare. Gasoline spilled onto the pavement, (notice fire hose under trunk of station wagon), and passengers in the Slaugh vehicle, mostly small girls, were taken to Hall-Bennett Hospital by Alert Ambulance personnel. No one was believed to be injured seriously.

FBI chief fires no. 2 man

WASHINGTON (AP) — Director Clarence M. Kelley's dismissal of his top assistant in the FBI marks his first sharp response to one of two separate investigations by the Justice Department that could be more devastating than recent congressional inquiries.

The congressional probes brought headlines about abuses in the past, during the days of the late Director J. Edgar Hoover. But at least one of the Justice Department investigations raises the possibility of criminal charges in the present. And both have raised questions about Kelley's ability to control the bureau.

In a decision reached on a sickbed at Bethesda Naval Hospital, Kelley fired Associate Director Nicholas P. Callahan on Friday night — despite Kelley's own recent declaration that "I have no suspicions" about him.

Kelley is in the hospital for treatment of a painful back ailment.

Callahan, 62 and an FBI agent for 41 years, became a target of one of the two Justice Department investigations. This probe began after allegations of financial kickbacks in the FBI's purchase of electronic eavesdropping equipment.

However, the investigtion grew beyond kickbacks and began to involve abuses of power, department and FBI sources said. They said Callahan was not implicated in financial wrongdoing. "It's not a financial corruption thing at all," one investigator said.

Other sources said allegations against Callahan involve "abuses of power." But they refused to say what those abuses might be.

Callahan, one of the bureau's old hands from its Hoover days, had been eligible for retirement for several years. But Kelley fired him without allowing him to retire. The FBI said it does not know what impact this will have on his pension.

Skyjackers get 100 year jail sentences

HOUSTON (AP) — A man and his two sons, convicted of skyjacking an airliner, have been sentenced to 100 years each in prison.

Charles A. Tuller, 52, Bryce M. Tuller, 23, and Jonathan R. Tuller, 21, were assessed 50-year life sentences each on the two counts Friday.

U.S. District Court Judge Allen B. Hannay ruled that the terms are to run separately with life sentences the three already have been assessed in Virginia.

The three were convicted June 24 by a jury on air piracy and kidnaping charges.

Tullers of Alexandria, Va., were indicted after an Eastern Airlines agent was shot to death Oct. 29, 1972 as four men skyjacked a jetliner from Houston Intercontinental Airport to Cuba.

The Tullers returned to the United States last July after spending nearly three years in Cuba.

William White Graham, 21, of Alexandria, Va., also was indicted with the Tullers. He is still believed to be in Cuba.

The Tullers are under life sentences in Virginia for the slaying of a police officer and a bank employe during an attempted bank robbery there shortly before the Houston skyjacking.

Tuller and his sons also were charged in state court here in the fatal shooting of Stanley E. Hubbard, 34, the airlines ticket agent.

However, following the sentencing in federal court, Harris County Asst. Dist. Atty. Allen Stilley said the state had dropped the charges.

Stilley said that even if the state prosecuted the Tullers it would be unable to seek the death penalty which at the time had been struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court. The slaying also occurred, he said, before the new Texas capital punishment law was passed.

Burglars take drugs, beer

Burglars and thieves were again busy the early part of the weekend, keeping investigating officers busy as well.

Carver's Pharmacy, 310 E. 9th, was the scene of a burglary Friday night. A substantial amount of prescription drugs, and similar items were taken.

Larry Peterson, 306 NW 5th, reported to police that when he returned home he found that burglars had broken into his house, by smashing a glass in his front door.

An 8-track tape console valued at $565 was taken. Also $400 in cash, a $320 45 cal. revolver, and 26 men's suits valued at $2,300 were removed from his house.

A pool stick was broken, and in addition to other damages, the total was placed at $3,631. The thieves also scattered his furniture around.

Burglars broke into the Wagon Wheel at 1611 E. 4th by cutting the screen and opening a window. Thirteen cases of beer valued at $71.50 were taken from the walk-in cooler.

The Harris Lumber yard was the scene of another burglary. Thugs there broke the glass of a window in the lumber storage area, and removed an undetermined amount of items.

Burglars also broke into the Broughton Truck and Implement Co. on the Lamesa Highway by forcing the door with a tire tool. Property damage was placed at $20, and an estimated $3 in coins was removed from a Coke machine.

Criminal mischief was again on the prowl in the city. Vandals threw rocks through the windows of six trucks at the Planter Gin, 105 NE 2nd. Damage was placed at $700.

Homer Hess, 2404 Runnels, reported to police that someone had broken five windows to his residence, three windows to his camper, and had flattened two tires. Damage was placed between $75 and $100.

Charles Campbell Jr., 1506 Cherokee, advised lawmen that an unknown female came to his residence, exchanged a few words of anger, ran to the kitchen in the home, broke out the window in the door, and left.

Gerald L. Gibson, Rt. 2, Box 16, reported that persons unknown had damaged the left side of his vehicle with a sharp instrument. Damage was placed at $20.

Early Saturday morning between midnight and 1 a.m., four separate fights were reported to local police which resulted in bruised knuckles, one man being taken to Webb AFB hospital with minor injuries, and one drunk belligerent pedestrian being jailed for public intoxication and disorderly conduct.

Traffic accidents again kept patrolling officers occupied Friday and Saturday.

In the 600 block of Washington Blvd., on wet pavement, cars driven by Monroe Connell, 2822 35th, Lubbock, and James Slaugh, 606 Holbert, collided. Passengers were taken to Hall-Bennett hospital by Alert Ambulance, but only for observation, according to sources at the scene.

In minor fender-bender action, in the 200 block of South Runnels, a parked car owned by V.L. Perkins, 1017 Ridgeroad, and a car belonging to Yvonne Roberts, Rt. 1, Box 563, collided.

In the 300 block of E. 4th, Annette Lipham Knox, 628 Caylor, and Faustino T. Aguilar, 1201 Lamar, collided in their vehicles.

The corner of 7th and Main was the scene of a minor accident between cars driven by Sherry Craddock, Rt. 1, Box 694A, and Gertrude Rodricks, 1313 Mt. Vernon.

Cars driven by Virgil Cathcarr, Box 983, and Joe Bradley, 4006 Bradley collided in the 1100 block of E. 3rd in a minor accident.

Oil execs get jail sentences

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Two Dallas petroleum company officials have drawn jail sentences for using the mail to defraud investors in Texas and New Mexico.

U.S. District Court Judge D.W. Suttle sentenced William Robert Cook and Charles Stafford Jackson to five hears each on every count of a 15-count indictment.

While the total sentence against each man was 75 years, Suttle arranged the times Friday so that they would serve no more than 10 years.

Cook, according to court records, was identified as the owner of Olympic Petroleum Corp, Dallas; Jackson, as the company's sales manager. They were convicted of mail fraud in May.

The government alleged in court documents that Cook "through his fraudulent machinations obtained some $9 million dollars.'

In court documents U.S. Atty. John Clark of San Antonio claimed that Olympic "collected $9 million and drilled at least 88 holes in which investors had interests" according to a report by court appointed receivors assigned to manage Olympic's affairs.

"The receivors' report goes on to say that it appears that Olympic received money from investors for at least 11 wells, and possibly more, that were never drilled," according to one document filed by Clarc in federal court.

Investors in Texas and New Mexico were victims of the scheme, the government said.

He Built Bridge Of Friendship

Because of the environment at Webb Air Force Base, Lt. Col. Mahmood Saleh Birjandi thinks it is an excellent place for students from other countries to learn the demanding skills of becoming a jet pilot.

Col. Saleh expressed this opinion last week after it was announced that he will be leaving the post of country liaison officer at Webb for a great assignment in San Antonio.

HIS MANY friends here in Big Spring cannot be sad to see him leave because of the terrific assignment he has been chosen to fill. He will be senior country liaison officer for Iran at Lackland AFB in charge of all Iranian liaison officers in the U.S.

Col. Saleh said the environment at Webb, such as the acceptance of foreign student pilots by the community, made this base a most productive spot for the program.

He noted that since the program had been at Webb it had been almost 100 per cent productive. With the environment here, the skills of the instructors, the lack of distractions, there have been very few student pilot washouts.

COL. SALEH ADDED that he will be in Washington in September, and he said he plans to put in a good word for Webb.

Col. Saleh thanked the people of the community for their friendship and what they had done for him and his family.

But the community owes Col. Saleh the thanks for the many things he has done during his stay at Webb to build a bridge of friendship and communication between our part of the world and his.

We wish him the best of luck in his important new job.

Jimmy rides the Tiger

Robert Novak

NEW YORK — In a private room at Manhattan's posh "21" restaurant Sunday afternoon, Jimmy Carter repudiated his own staff's capitulation to feminist demands thereby revealing hidden but intense stresses within his campaign that might be duplicated in a Carter administration.

The feminist demand for a flat 50 per cent women's quota at future Democratic national conventions, though the major backstage conflict at this somnolent convention, will not determine the party's fate. But it is important for what it portends about Carter's relationship with burgeoning left-of-center advisers at the middle level of his campaign.

IN THIS CASE, Carter pulled the leash up short on a staff decision to accept a women's quota. But party insiders question whether the candidate and his inner circle can control a staff that is tilting left now and will soon lean even more that way as more liberal political operatives are signed on daily.

This liberal infusion, like much of the Carter campaign, is a calculated tactic of his high command. Rather than embrace McGovernite positions which could endanger his moderate-to-conservative constituency, Carter instead has tried to co-opt liberals by taking them into the campaign and surrounding them.

One McGovernite co-opted early this year is Anne Wexler, the former Connecticut reform leader who now runs the Washington office of Rolling Stone magazine. As Carter's chief agent during last month's rules committe sessions, Ms. Wexler eagerly bowed to Black Caucus demands that shattered delicate compromises worked out since 1973.

ARRIVING HERE last weekend, Ms. Wexler continued the pattern. Carter had flatly rejected a 50-50 women's delegate quota for 1980, outraging women activists. But Ms. Wexler swiftly worked out a "compromise" with Rep. Bella Abzug of New York and other leaders pledging "all feasible efforts" to achieve sexual parity. The Abzug mood changed instantly from outrage to sheer delight.

That was the situation when the Democratic party's mighty gathered at "21" for a Sunday brunch honoring national chairman Robert S. Strauss. Carter, accompanied by his wife Rosalynn, was led into a private room for lecture from Strauss, national committee executive director Mark Siegel and three worried state chairmen.

Carter was told that the "all feasible efforts" language agreed to in his behalf by Ms. Wexler was nothing more nor less than a quota. If the women were given a quota, why not one for blacks, Latinos, youth and what-have-you in a devolution to the miasma of Miami Beach, 1972? So Carter was aked, do you want a women's quota?

Immediately grasping the nuances of the rules fight, Carter replied he opposed quotas and wanted no part of the Wexler-Abzug accord. He then promised he would leash in Ms. Wexler. True to his word, a new, watered-down language was written which supports a future men-and-women equality among delegates but is surely not a quota.

THE PROBLEM will probably get worse, not better, judging from plans to beef up Carter's campaign with left-of-center political practitioners. They are being hired partly because they are unquestionably the party's best, most avid operatives — but partly because Carter wants them corralled, not loose.

In doing so, however, he risks a return to the suicidal politics of the left wing. Can Jimmy Carter ride the liberal tiger without being eaten up? That nearly happened here on women's quotas.

REMEMBERING...

By BILL D. BROOKS

BRUSH ARBORS

Church houses got awfully hot during the summer even with the windows wide open so when the weather started warming up the men in the community got together to re-do the brush arbor.

A brush arbor was a wooden framework built on the top of tall straight poles. The structure was covered over with tree limbs that formed a shade while the sides were left open to allow breezes to blow through. It was an outdoor meeting place that provided the coolness of a shade tree, a joyful diversion from the sweltering church building.

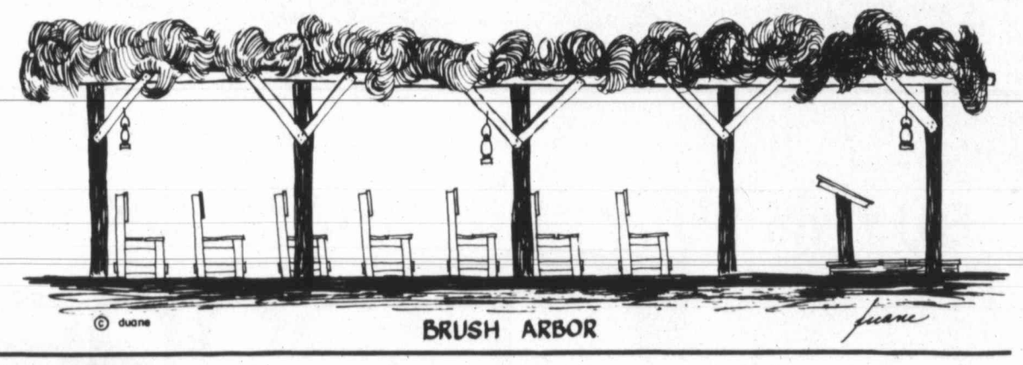

The framework had been built years before but it was recovered with fresh new limbs each summer to give a better shade. First, the old brush was stripped off, taken out, piled up and burned. The men would take a wagon down to the cedar breaks to cut new brush. The scrub cedar trees made the best covering for a brush arbor because the foliage was thick and would stay on the limbs longer than other types of leaves. The wagon would come back piled high with the good smelling boughs and would be greeted by several youngsters eager to help any way they could.

When the top was complete it was ready for the first revival meeting. Traveling evangelists would pass through the country holding meetings two to three weeks long in the brush arbors of first one community then another. Just about everyone in the community or those within buggy distance attended. Some came to get their religion renewed, others because it was something different to do for a change.

The hard-packed dirt floor was covered with new sawdust from some nearby mill. Where no sawdust was available hay was sometimes used. When "kneeling" time came the sawdust helped keep the knees of the repenters cleaner.

Most of the time preaching lasted way into the night so the younger children were put down on quilt pallets outside of the arbor where they could sleep through the service or sit and play if they didn't make any fuss.

The arbor would be used for several revivals in the course of the summer and the people braved mosquitoes, candle bugs, dim lights and hot weather to hear the gospel preached. In later years the old arbors were replaced with more permanent structures called tabernacles. The tabernacles were built with the same idea in mind but they had wood shingle roofs and side panels that could be opened or closed to prevent blowing rain from coming in. Some of these can still be seen in rural communities today but few are used since churches have been air conditioned.

BRUSH ARBOR

Some have natural virus protection

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What do you know about this swine virus? I'm particularly interested in how it gets around. —T. H.

The swine flu strain, officially known as "A New Jersey-11-76," was first identified in 1938. It is apparently closely related to the virus that killed 20 million people in the 1918 outbreak. In 1957, a form of the same virus (the Asian or Hong Kong variety) also was very lethal.

The mode of transmission is the same as with any virus strain — by droplet infection, the same as with the common cold. Someone sneezing or coughing into your face can transmit it

Some people possess antibodies (protective organisms) against most virus infections. It is estimated, for example, that about 20 per cent of the population have it against the swine virus. But public health people look at it another way — 80 per cent of us do not possess such protection.

The term "swine flu" may have created some misunderstanding among folks. It is called that because the structure of the virus resembles that of a common virus found in swine. That one has up to now not affected man.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My five-year-old grandson is grinding his teeth at night when he is sleeping. I have heard that grinding teeth when asleep is a symptom of worms. I would like to have your opinion of this. — Mrs. V.B.

It's possible he has pinworms, and the teeth grinding can be a symptom. Often the distress is felt more at night while asleep as they tiny worms move about. The child would also tend to be restless during the day.

He wouldn't be alone. There are about 200 million pinworm sufferers in the world (18 million in the U.S.) and most of them are children. The pediatrician could easily determine if your grandson has them. There are several effective drugs to combat them.

Getting rid of the eggs can be more difficult. Painstaking hygiene precautions must be taken so that there is no recurrence or danger of other family members getting them. I have written a booklet on pinworms — available for 25 cents sent to me in care of the Big Spring Herald, along with a stamped and self-addressed envelope. In it are a number of tips on how to fight pinworms.

Tooth-grinding (bruxism) can also be related to tension and neurosis.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am an 18-year-old female. I have gas trapped in my stomach. This causes indigestion with fullness and bloating.

I eat during the day and still get bloated and my stomach does not go down until the next morning. Then, when I eat breakfast it starts all over again. I am not overweight (5-foot-5 and 128 pounds). Can you help? — Miss G. E.

You don't tell me whether you pass gas during all of this, so I assume that is not a part of your problem. If not I would suspect a nervous condition. This situation is not uncommon among adolescent girls who have been disappointed in love. Emotions can have a lot to do with such things.

The fact that your bloating seems to be a daytime affair and is relieved at night (when your system is relaxed) indicates that daytime emotions may be involved.

Another, less romantic cause than blighted love can be some food to which you are allergic. And, of course, rapid eating and air swallowing could be your problem.

Whatever the reason, you should have a GI examination to detect any obstruction of the colon or other similar disturbance. If the problem is not brought under control it can lead to these developments in the digestive tract.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Editor:

It's rather upsetting to read letters criticizing our town, I do believe we celebrated the American Bicentennial as much as any town, even our natural oil pumps still carry the colorful colors along our hiways.

Our ranchers and farmers needed the rain as well as our town, more than we needed the fire works, and after all we had the fire works, so what's the gripe? And what is Big Spring without our annual rodeo? The crowds each year speaks for itself. The money from these crowds helped so many needy organizations.

As for Mrs. Springsted's letter, I wish her a big fire work blast next year in whatever city that is lucky enough to get her. When she departs that town, she will probably write her version of it to their editor.

I have been many places, but still love this old town, where I was raised. We have come a long way since I was a kid. We have the best hospitals in most of the USA. We have our college, and our industries grow more each year, our city officials fight daily for our interest. What is all this compared to a few minutes of fire works. Any one can set off a fire cracker, but it takes real people to build a town.

The Fourth is gone, therefore it is time to think of our town and our President election to make our town still better. I am thankful that we are free people and can speak out, I love Big Spring and our whole USA. I am proud to be an American.

I won't say whether I am a Republican or a Democrat, I will only say I will hug your elephant if you will kiss my donkey.

God bless our town and all the people that love it and also those that don't.

Dear Editor:

After reading Mrs. Carpenter's remarks Thursday in The Herald regarding the 4th and 5th at the park brings to mind the old Chinese proverb, he who tooteth not his own horn, the same remaineth not tooteth . . . but one must be careful not to run ones battery down. Mrs. Carpenter said that Danny Valdes was out to the park taking pictures on his time off or his own time. I thought he was out there on special assignment from The Herald which is normal thinking, but if he was out there taking pictures on his own time then of course he could take whatever pictures he so desired . . . so my humble apology to Danny.

I thought it was always to the interest and likeness to the newspaper to cover all events of interest of the public under such occasions, now if the photographer had taken pictures of all the events at the park and had not room to run them in the paper, then that presents another picture . . . so I guess he got too many pictures in the first place to run in the last place . . . But you see, this same thing happened last year at the park, at the July 4th . . . there was no mention nor photos in the papers of these christian activities, even though six or seven of the local churches with their singers took part, I think they were all wonderful and I was, and am proud of every one that had a part to bring joy, peace, happiness with their singing to those that listened . . .

I wish to thank the Latan American Assembly of God Church from the north side for their help this year, they sang in both languages. Also thanks to the First United Pentecostal Church for their beautiful singing and music offering, and to the Osborn family. Many were out of town and could not be with us. The Pearce Family was out of town due to a death in the family.

Carter keeping tabs

Jack Anderson

NEW YORK — Jimmy- Carter, looking ahead to the possibility that he may become president in January, has expressed an intense interest in the Senate leadership struggle.

He has questioned a number of senators about the outcome, which is expected to narrow down to a choice between Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D.-Minn., and Sen. Robert Byrd, D.-W.Va.

CARTER'S PRIVATE questions indicate concern that Humphrey, as a national leader with his own following, might use the leadership post to push his own policies.

The Democratic presidential candidate seems less concerned about Byrd who is a political mechanic more interested in running the Senate than in policymaking.

Carter satisfied himself after a 20-minute visit with Byrd that they could work together, our sources say. But at this writing, Carter hadn't spoken to Humphrey about the leadership race except for a brief reference to it on the telephone.

When the late Lyndon Johnson ran the Senate, he dominated its backrooms, wheeling and dealing, suffociating his supporters in his embrace, trampling down his opponents with the finesse of one of his prize bulls. As the Senate Democratic leader, he became almost as powerful as the President.

HIS SUCCESSOR, Sen. Mike Mansfield, D.-Mont., is as different from Johnson as ginger ale is from a martini. Mansfield relies on friendly persuasion to work his will. He never pressures, never pushes.

Humphrey, if he should now replace Mansfield, would be a more aggressive Senate leader. For that matter, Byrd has also shown an independent streak.

Of the 60 Democrats now in the Senate, Byrd told Carter that 33 had promised to vote for him. Byrd added that he expected to line up another half dozen by January. However, Humphrey has disputed Byrd's arithmetic, claiming that most senators are still uncommitted.

Meanwhile, another contender for the Senate leadership, Sen. Ed Muskie, D.-Me., offered privately to withdraw from the race in Humphrey's favor. Then Humphrey approached Sen. Ernest Hollings, D.-S.C., another contender, about withdrawing. Humphrey mentioned that Muskie had offered to pull out.

This got back to Muskie, who felt Humphrey had violated his confidence. Our sources say Muskie's nose was out of joint. We checked with Humphrey, who acknowledged that Muskie's nose "was bent slightly" over the incident. We couldn't reach Muskie for his comment.

CARTER AND KISSINGER: If the presidential election came down to a choice between Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger would pick the peanut farmer.

Sources close to Kissinger say he would stay out of the campaign if Reagan were nominated and would not speak out against the Republican candidate. Those who have heard Kissinger discuss the candidates privately, however, say he is the least enthusiastic about Reagan.

On the campaign trail, Carter has denounced Kissinger's secretive style and his "one-man policy of international adventure," calling him the "Lone Ranger." But Carter's foreign policy pronouncements don't really differ much from what Kissinger has been saying.

CARTER APPEARS to be more friendly toward the underdeveloped nations and more interested in Latin American affairs. But on most other basic issues, Carter and Kissinger seem to share similar opinions.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My husband's body was cremated, and I expect mine to be, then be buried with him in the same grave. In your understanding of God's teaching, will these ashes be raised at Christ's return even as the dead who have not been cremated? — H. C.

DEAR H. C.: When life leaves the body, it starts immediately to decompose. The option of cremation, which is a necessity in some densely populated countries, in no way affects the resurrection. The Bible says all shall be raised. "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation" (John 5:28, 29).

When John spoke of doing "good" here, he meant the act of faith in Jesus Christ. It is only the believers in Jesus who have the promise of heaven.

You can rest assured that the condition of the body is no problem to God. Mark assures us, "then shall He send His angels, and shall gather together His elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth" (13:27). What a hope this is — and what an encouragement to all who have faced death and seen family members fall asleep in Jesus.

'Final reunification of North and South'

The people ran Demo convention

NEW YORK (AP) — It was an affair without passion, a marriage without romance. And the Democratic National Convention was performed with all the precision of a prearranged royal wedding.

But after their flings, their spats, their divorces of the past decade, Democrats were ready for Jimmy Carter, the outsider who barged into the party and became the bridegroom.

After eight years out of the White House, they yearn for a winner.

So ended the four days of New York, a national convention Carter praised for its show of decorum and order, "without any fights or free-for-alls.

"Among Democrats, that can only happen once every 200 years," the former Georgia governor said.

It happened because Carter made it happen, by winning the Democratic presidential nomination so convincingly, and so early, that the convention could only ratify, not decide.

Seldom if ever has a man gained that political pinnacle with as few debts to the establishment, the party power structure. Carter said his position was almost unique.

Even before his triumphant entry into Madison Square Garden on Thursday night, Carter said he had had enough conventioneering. "I'm ready to get out of the hotel suites and the conventions and get back to the people," he said.

Your Richard J. Daleys and Hubert H. Humphreys and Carl Alberts go to the people, too, but they savor the political theater of convention time. In New York, however, the play ended with their bidding farewell to the party power they have wielded at conventions past.

Command had passed, to an unfamiliar leader and a new generation.

And that passage was dramatized when Humphrey, his own last hope for the White House long since vanished, stotd at the platform to hail the vice-presidential nomination of a man who could be his son, and is his protege.

For Sen. Walter F. Mondale, 48, undertook his earliest political ventures 28 years ago, as a volunteer, in Humphrey's first Senate campaign.

Humphrey said the team of Carter and Mondale represents a turning point in American politics, and so it does.

"This ticket ... represents the final reunification of North and South," Humphrey said.

"We are a new generation of leadership," cried Mondale, a mundane orator but suddenly, in his new role, speaking with fiery vigor. "We are strong. We are experienced, And we are ready."

Their's is a young ticket; Carter is 51, three years older than his running mate.

If they win, and are re-elected, the Democrats' course could be set for nearly a generation.

As a 56-year-old vice president, Mondale would, in 1984, be a powerful prospect for the White House.

And that would hold even if Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts wanted the nomination. He would be 52.

Kennedy, heir to the family political legacy, long has been considered a man who could have national nomination for the asking — or the accepting.

He never asked, and now he may not be asked. If he wants a future nomination, he may well have to campaign for it, like a Democrat of any other name.

Carter not only defeated the political establishment, he took it over and changed its address. "We're going to run the campaign from Atlanta," said Hamilton Jordan, 32, his campaign manager. "Chairman (Robert S.) Strauss is going to run the party from Washington."

It wasn't said, but it was clear: the party will be run as Atlanta wants it run.

There was other evidence of the turning point the Democrats had passed.

There was Sen. Edmund S. Muskie surrendering his hopes for national office and going home to Maine to campaign for another term. Carter had considered him for vice-presidential nomination — it would have been Muskie's second — and the 62-year-old senator clearly wanted it.

"Well, I almost lost control," he said, after Mondale got it. "Now I'm re-establishing it and I'm beginning to feel comfortable again ... I think this is the end of national politics, in the sense of being on a national ticket, for me."

There was the hard-to-hear speech of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, crippled in one campaign, stripped of his Southern power base in another, and, by his own account, done with presidential politicking. For old-time's sake, he said, as from countless platforms before, that Americans would be better off if those bureaucrats in Washington had their briefcases thrown into the Potomac.

And the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr. boomed a final benediction over an audience that included George C. Wallace.

It was a convention of unity, but it was not one of drama or high emotion or spontaneous cheers. one were the staged demonstrations of yesteryear, when Democrats marched the floor behind brass bands to cheer the men who would be nominees.

For one thing, there wasn't room on the floor of Madison Square Garden; the aisles weren't wide enough. And for another, the convention was staged so as to avoid wasting precious, free national television time on such displays. The rules gave a candidate 15 minutes for his nominating speeches; the major events came, as planned, during prime time, or at least before midnight.

But it was more than rules and planning; it was mood. It was as though the delegates had become New Yorkers, as blase as their hosts.

They went about their business, chose their nominee, applauded their heroes and heroines, waved the Carter-Mondale signs.

(AP WIREPHOTO)

For Carter's entry on Thursday night, it lasted six minutes, then quieted so the nominee could pledge to lead them on to a restoration of faith, and trust, and honesty, toward great national deeds.

His 38-minute address was punctuated with applause and cheers. But these were not the wildly cheering, hard-to-silence Democrats of past conventions. Here, the man with the gavel was in control.

Had there been an applause meter for spontaneous ovations, it probably would have given the highest rating to Rep. Barbara Jordan of Texas, the black congresswoman who said in her keynote speech that her presence there was evidence that the American dream of equality can now be fulfilled.

Carter's convention was as controlled and carefully mapped as was the campaign that brought him from the lonely lot of a one-term governor with no power base to the highest prize his party can award.

Now his task is to stir in the campaign the fervor and intensity that seemed lacking at the convention. He has done it before, to win the 19 presidential primary elections that sealed his nomination. He is a tough, adroit campaigner, an engineer who plans every move.

At the moment, he has a head start. The latest Gallup poll, completed on June 28, rates him the leader over President Ford, 53 per cent to 36 per cent, and over Ronald Reagan, 64 per cent to 28 per cent.

The gap may become even wider now that Carter has been nominated, for the Republicans won't make their choice until Aug. 18. When they do, when it is one Democrat versus one Republican, the ratings are almost certain to become closer.

Carter knows that, and he warns at every opportunity against overconfidence among Democrats.

For Carter, there is a long path to be traveled. But it is a measure of how incredibly far he has come that the candidate, once raked among the least likely to succeed, now is counseling the Democrats against overconfidence.

"My name is Jimmy Carter and I'm running for president," he used to say to incredulous voters, and more than a few walked away shaking their heads and smiling skeptical smiles.

"My name is Jimmy Carter and I'm running for president," he told the 7th Democratic National Convention Thursday night. And they cheered their commander.

Texas quints party more a carnival

LEWISVILLE, Tex. (AP) — It was more of a carnival than a birthday party Saturday as the Davis quintuplets celebrated their first in style with ice cream and cake.

More than 30 children with their parents showed up for the celebration—which actually was one day early.

It also was another special day for the Jerry Davises—Lewisville Market Day. Proceeds from the garage sales and booths and an auction will go to the Davis Quint Fund. The fund will be used to build a home for the family.

Jaycee Greg Blaydes said the fund was at $30,000 before Saturday and it was hoped another $10,000 could be raised.

Groundbreaking ceremonies at the new home were set for Sunday and the house is expected to be completed by Christmas, Blaydes said.

Most of the birthday gifts were clothes for the rapidly growing four girls and boy.

Mrs. Davis said the quints are standing up with a little help now and weight between 20 and 23 pounds.

The children — Christa, Casey, Charla, Chanda and Chelsa — are the only surviving quintuplets in Texas, one of eight in the United States and one of 18 in the world.

Crime check program gets good response

The reactivated "Operation Crime Check" program of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce has produced about 50 phone calls from citizens wanting to help police fight crime, chamber Manager Terry Hanson said Friday.

Hanson reported on the program at the Public Affairs Council meeting of the chamber at noon in the American Restaurant.

He said the first month brought in many calls but that they had slacked off now. He asked members of the news media for assistance in keeping the program before the public.

Ralph Brooks, who chairs the council, said that the program is needed now more than ever.

"Burglaries definitely are on the increase in the city," he said. "There has been a rash of them in the past week."

The number to call for reporting information which might help police solve a crime is 263-6769.

In other business, the council heard a report by Housing Committee Chairman Jeff Brown that the housing market has remained surprisingly strong following the Air Force announcement that Webb Air Force Base was a candidate to be closed.

Brown said the market stopped for a two-week period following the announcement, then came back strong.

"Houses are selling well in all price markets," he said. "We are over the trauma of the Webb announcement."

But he added that he thought the market will improve further after a final decision on Webb is made, and he foresaw no great discounting of house prices.

Brown said that the military buyer was gone from the market, but the market is performing well without him.

"Where all these people are coming from, I don't know," he said.

In a report on the Bicentennial activities, Mrs. Johnnie Lou Avery, co-chairman, said that the five-day July 4 celebration here was successful with the only disappointment caused by bad weather.

Although the Bicentennial commission is officially disbanded, several Bicentennial activities remain. Among them are a film offered by U.S. Senator John Tower on Washington, D. C., to be shown in August; two variety shows; one concert; and the U.S. Armed Forces Caravan which will be here Dec. 3-5.

The council also voted to encourage keeping the "Let Freedom Ring" program as a Big Spring July 4 tradition.

Shriners appeal for blood for burned, crippled children

Three years ago, an eight-year-old boy in Big Spring walked up to an abandoned car, and lit a match to try to see in the gas tank.

There was still gas in the tank and in the ensuing explosion, he was severely burned.

He was from a low income family and the Shriners footed the bills to send this child to their burn center.

Year after year, Shriners help crippled and burned children. And they do so with the very best doctors and technicians available.

Now they have come up against something money cannot buy. They work and raise funds for their hospitals by circuses, which also entertain children.

They also invite local crippled children to a special party at Christmas.

But suddenly available blood sources have been halted. Blood banks are hesitant to purchase blood because much of the blood sold is turning out to be unusable.

The local Shriners are trying to get 500 pints of blood donated for their burn centers. Half of it will stay in the West Texas blood bank and the other will go directly to Galveston to their burn center.

Donors will give blood at the Shrine Building at 101 Goliad on July 21, July 31 and August 15. Anyone who can help by giving a pint of blood for a burned child is asked to call 267-5217 or 263-1177 for specific details.

Spend $250,000 in legal fees

Carillos fail to win single battle

EDINBURG, Tex. (AP) — The once politically powerful Carrillo family of Duval County has spent an estimated $250,000 in legal fees in the past two years and have yet to win a courtroom battle.

The estimate was made by a member of the family Friday as they awaited the outcome of jury deliberations on punishment for former District Court Judge O.P. Carrillo.

The impeached judge had been convicted earlier in the day of a felony theft charge accusing him of stealing $5,625 from the Duval County Conservation and Reclamation District, a controversial water district, to buy a station wagon.

The wait was long again, but the results were the same. Family members were hoping the former judge would get probation. The jury ruled that he must go to prison for four years.

The big losers so far in the Carrillo legal battles have been O.P. Carrillo and his brother, suspended Duval County Commissioner Ramiro Carrillo. The former judge was removed from office after the Texas Senate found him guilty of an impeachment charge.

The two Carrillo brothers also face prison sentences following their conviction in federal court at Corpus Christi on charges of conspiring to file false income tax returns and on charges of filing false tax returns.

In addition to his conviction here, the former judge also faces eight felony indictments in Duval County and one felony charge in Jim Wells County.

The suspended commissioner was suspended from office recently by District Court Judge Darrell Hester of Brownsville after the judge ruled Carrillo had used county equipment and labor for private use.

In addition to charges against the former judge and the suspended commissioner, several other members of once powerful South Texas family also face criminal charges.

Former State Rep. Oscar Carrillo is to be tried at Pleasanton in September on theft charges, D.C. (David Carrillo) Chapa, 84-year-old patriarch of the Carrillo family, is to be tried later this year in San Antonio on theft charges and D.H. Carrillo, a son of the former state representative, also faces trial this year on felony theft charges.

Earlier, Rogelio Guajardo, a nephew of the Carrillo brothers, pleaded guilty to an official misconduct charge and received a probated prison term.

"They're trying to wipe out the Carrillo family, but we'll be back," said Oscar Carrillo.

Juvenile confinement decreases delinquency

When youths are ordered confined by the Texas Youth Council, as two boys were during June, juvenile delinquency in the area diminishes, Ed Cherry, juvenile probation officer, said.

During June, 22 cases of delinquent behavior were referred to Cherry by law enforcement officers.

Of these, four were for burglary, five for disorderly conduct and three for running away from home.

Other offenses including petty theft, possession of alcoholic beverages, possession of marijuana and drugs (one referral), auto theft, vandalism, driving while intoxicated and violating the Suspicious Person Ordinance.

Cherry counseled 36 children during the month and spoke with parents about 13 cases.

He counted 24 juveniles being handled throgh a voluntary adjustment program. There were six boys and one girl on official probation. And there were six boys and one girl on parole from the Texas Youth Council.

At month's end, eight boys from Howard County were under the care of the Texas Youth Council. A number of youths were being kept in private institutions.

Local pair are hosts

German couple will remember Big Spring

By MARJ CARPENTER

Last November, Major and Mrs. James R. Wilhelm read in the Big Spring Herald about a program sponsored by the American Host Foundation whereby English-speaking European visitors would be guests in the Big Spring area for a 10-day period during 1976.

The Wilhelms decided to apply to play host and this month, they were sent a charming German couple named Rolf and Ute Starck from Hamburg.

The Wilhelms tooks their host duties seriously and showed the couple a wonderful time. They took them to the Bicentennial events here in Big Spring and also visited Carlsbad Caverns, Ft. Davis, attended the melodrama at the Colorado City Playhouse and visited the McDonald Observatory.

"Everybody thinks Big Spring is so far from everything and you can see many things here," Rolf said this week. "We loved it. They even took us to see an oil well in action and so many other things."

Both families love to swim and they went swimming in the outdoor pool at Balmorhea. They also both share an interest in classical music. "I think they matched up our hobbies," Major Wilhelm said this week. "We got along great."

The Starcks are from Hamburg, which is in West Germany, but not many miles from East Germany. It's about the size of Houston.

They brought a beautiful pictorial book which is in German and English and shows scenes in Hamburg. It even shows the Lutheran Church in which the Starcks were married.

They also attended Lutheran services while in Big Spring. "The Lutheran Church is strong in West Germany, but it is difficult to be a Christian in East Germany," they pointed out.

Starck teaches English, religion and philsophy in what they call a grammar school, which is the equivalent of our junior colleges. She works for British Petroleum where they are trying to make artificial blood hormones in the laboratory.

She said other oil companies with offices or labs or some type of business in Hambufg include Fina, Mobil, Texaco, Shell, and Exxon. Companies such as Reynolds Aluminum and IBM also are there.

Then she laughed and said, "We also have Safeways, Baskin-Robbins and just recently three McDonalds. So we now have hamburgers in Hamburg."

She did a shopping tour through the local supermarkets and said, "Food is much cheaper here. So is gasoline, rent and everything else."

They also went to the Globe Theatre in Odessa and enjoyed it. They were interested in Shakespeare. Rolf spent one year teaching German in England. "That was difficult," he recalls.

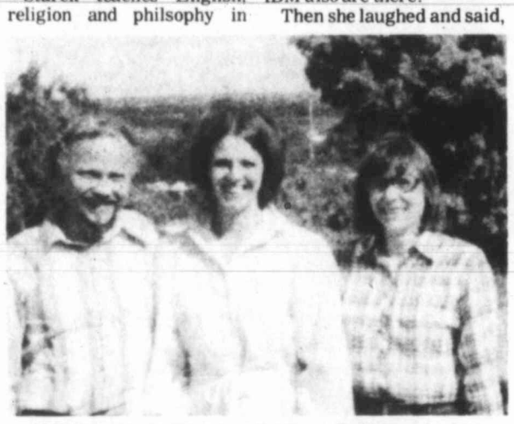

The Wilhelms said the fireworks in Germany are reserved for a few days near Christmas and the New Year and these are the only days they can be fired off.

They enjoyed everything about West Texas and especially about their hosts – the James Wilhelms and their three children.

Big Spring was well represented by this family, who left a wonderful impression on two people from another land.

The Starcks went on to Arizona where they will see the Grand Canyon.

But somehow, from their enthusiasm about Big Spring, we think they will also remember the sunsets off the back patio of the Wilhelm home.

Meat packer is charged

WASHINGTON — Osburn's Packing Co., Inc., Tyler, Tex., has been charged with violating payment requirements of the Packers and Stockyards Act, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) said today.

Osburn's Packing Co. purchases livestock for slaughter purposes throughout east Texas, western Louisiana, and western Arkansas.

USDA's Packers and Stockyards Administration charged in an administrative complaint that Osburn's Packing Co. failed to pay, when due, the full purchase price for more than $69,000 worth of livestock from Aug. 18 through Oct. 2, 1975.

The complaint specifically alleges that the firm delayed payment for periods ranging from 8 to 20 days.

Filing of the complaint does not prove that Osburn's Packing Co. has violated the Packers and Stockyards (P&S) Act. The firm has a right to a hearing to determine if the evidence supports the charges. If the charges are proven, the firm would be placed under a cease and desist order.

Wilty pleads guilty to DWI

Keith J. Wilty, 25, Route 2 Box 124, pleaded guilty in 118th District Court Friday to second-offense driving while intoxicated.

He was placed on probation for five years.

The first offense was in Louisiana in March 1974; the second, in Howard County Wednesday.

Antiques revive former cotton town

JONESVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The T. C. Linsey & Co. general store was built in the early 1920s to serve the cotton community around this tiny East Texas community.

But when the cotton farmers went broke, people stopped coming by — until owner Sam F. Vaughan turned the store into a mini-museum of East Texas artifacts.

"After the government changed the farming program and starved the farmers out, business dropped off terrible bad, and we had to do something to get people to come to Jonesville," said the 67-year-old Vaughan.

"I found out right fast that the more items of yesteryear that I'd hang around on the walls, the more people would come to see them," he added.

Now people come from nearby Longview, Lufkin, Marshall and Shreveport, La., to buy groceries and hardware and view Vaughan's array of antiques, displayed throughout the store.

Vaughan has been collecting the antiques - and running the store - for about 50 years. He said the collection has become more than a hobby.

For example, Vaughan negotiated some 10 years before acquiring his pride and joy — a large, hand-cranked pea thrasher that's about a 100 years old.

"I get a lot of things from my old friends, folks I've been dealing with 40 or 50 years," he said. "Some of them just flat give things to me."

Walt Disney movie producers found the old style Harrison County store was a perfect setting for three movies.

Vaughan even got a small part in one movie, "The Secret of the Pond," in which he only had to sell shells in the store to a hunter.

"But they made me sell those shells so many different times, I was about ready not only to give up movie-acting, but the general store to boot," he declared. "You have to please the sound man, the camera man — about four or five bosses."

But last fall, on his 67th birthday, Vaughan got to watch himself sell those shells on the Wonderful World of Disney television program.

Vaughan has his share of inquiries from city antique dealers as well. And he said he'd let go of some of the antiques, even the prized pea thrasher.

"If you just had more money than you had sense and you was to give me some ridiculous price that I couldn't refuse, you could have it," he stated.

Howard youths in 4-H show

The District VI 4-H Horse Show was held in Fort Stockton with two Howard County 4-H'ers participating.

Jackie Buchanan of Gayhill 4-H placed first in the tie-down calf roping event, and Dana Westbrook, also of the Gayhill club, placed ninth in the registered mare class.

Buchanan will be going to the State 4-H Horse Show in Amarillo July 21 to enter the tie-down and breakaway roping. The 4-H'ers were accompanied by Ross Westbrook, adult leader, and Ronnie Wood, county extension agent.

Farmers say 'too wet'

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Agriculture Extension Service at Texas A&M repo. ts that too much rain in southern sections of the state is causing some problems to farmers.

Service director Dr. Daniel Pfannstiel said cotton bolls are beginning to rot and sorghum heads are sprouting.

In addition to these problems, the siege of moisture that has covered much of South Texas and the Coastal Plains has brought harvest operations to a standstill, Pfannstiel said. Harvest of corn and sorghum along with the rice harvest had started in Southeast Texas and the Coastal Plains while hay harvesting had been widespread.

Crops are generally making good progress in other sections, with irrigation continuing heavy in the High Plains. Some western areas have gotten scattered rains but more is needed for dryland crops, said Pfannstiel.

Watermelons and cantaloupes continue to move to market, with the Pecos cantaloupe harvest about to get into full swing. Vegetable production continues in most sections except in southern counties where preparations are in progress for fall plantings.

Screwworms, ticks and flies continue to plague livestock in southern sections while in some western areas livestock conditions are somewhat below average.

Reports from district Extension agents showed the following conditions:

Panhandle: The wheat harvest is over, with dryland yields generally better than expected. All crops are making good growth although some were planted late. A good general rain is still needed for crops and ranges.

South Plains: The area's crop picture has improved due to recent rains, especially in the dryland areas. However, irrigation continues in parts of the area. Pasture and range conditions should improve with recent rains.

Rolling Plains: Some crops are in critical need of moisture with cotton fruiting and sorghum heading. Most of the guar crop has been planted. Farmers are busy plowing wheat land and baling hay crops. Alfalfa has been producing excellent yields.

Far West: Most parts of the area received rain during the past week, with heaviest amounts falling east of the Pecos River. The moisture should give a big boost to dryland crops and pastures and ranges.

West Central: Much of the area has received rains of up to eight inches, boosting crops and pastures and ranges. Cotton and sorghum are growing well. Livestock are in good shape although markets are weaker.

Brucellosis eradication not in sight

FORT WORTH — Texas cattlemen will never see the complete eradication of brucellosis, according to Dr. J. H. G. Roerink, a world authority on the disease who held a special meeting with officials of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers in Amsterdam, Netherlands, in late June.

Dr. Roerink proposed a new slant for the U.S. program by stating that for all practical purposes brucellosis can be strictly controlled through a regular 40-20 vaccine program, replacing the present strain 19 vaccine now in wide use in the U.S.

Best cotton crop seen in county

LAMESA — "We are in the best shape we have ever been in at this time of year that I can remember," County Agent Lee Roy Colgan said here this week in regard to the condition of the cotton crop.

"Of course, we would like to have about 60 days of bright sunshine now," he laughed. However, he said, "Thus far this year, the rains have come at just the right time and the cotton crop as a whole looks great."

He admitted that there was some concern about boll weevils, because they are on the increase in West Texas. "However, I don't think it's a hugh problem at this time."

The agent said that the complete cure for boll weevils in West Texas would be worse than the disease because it would mean not planting cotton for one year. I think the weevils probably can be controlled," he added.

He said that four areas in Dawson County had hail damage earlier in the year and even though it was disastrous to those individual farmers, that it had only affected around 3,000 acres of cotton.

"At this time, we have between 275,000 and 290,000 acres of cotton on 430,000 actual acres in skip row planting in this county," Colgan added.

The four areas of hail included a crop one mile east of Lamesa; one southeast of town by Midway, one southwest of Lamesa and east of Patricia and one four miles southwest of Welch.

"The farmers who can get into the fields are chopping at this time," Colgan added. Then he gave a big grin and said one more time, "The crop simply looks wonderful."

Colgan is outgoing president of the county agents association of Texas with Bill Collier of Waco, incoming president. Colgan will attend both the state meeting and the national meeting in Richmond, Va. this summer.

Colgan said, "I'm glad that job is nearly behind me. But I'm especially glad for the present condition of the crops in Dawson County."

Cotton prices show net loss

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices of active cotton futures in the domestic market moved over a trading range of 1,152 points this past week, ending the week with a net decline.

At the close of trading Friday, No. 2 contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange were off 102 to 952 points, following advances in the previous week of 20 to 159 points.

Volume of trading was estimated at 2,032,600 bales for a daily average of 406,500. he week before, voluoe reached 1,890,300 bales for a daily average of 472,600.

Open interest was reported by the NYCE as of Thursday at 3,590,800 bales, an increase of 146,400 from that of the preceding Friday. It wasthe largest open interest since Dec. 31, 1952, when it was reported at 3,603,000 bales.

The decline was attributed by brokers to profit taking following recent advances and declines in western markets.

Queen formally opens Olympic games

(AP WIREPHOTO)

LIGHTING OF THE TORCH — Sandra Henderson of Toronto holds the arm of Stephane Prefontaine of Montreal as the Canadian couple puts the torch to the bowl of the Olympic flame Saturday during opening ceremonies of the 21st Olympic games in Montreal.

MONTREAL (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain formally opened the summer Olympics Saturday, facing almost 7,000 athletes under grey, cloudy skies as a crowd of 73,000 watched in person and a billion more around the world viewed the event on television.

"I declare open the Olympic Games of Montreal celebrating the XXI Olympiad of the modern era," said the Queen. Eight trumpets blared and 80 girls representing the temple virgins who accompanied the athletes into the stadium in ancient times formed the figure 80. That commemorated the 80th year of the modern Olympic era.

The Queen, wearing a coral outfit, sat with her husband, Prince Philip, through an opening pageant that lasted more than two hours. Her role was small but the significance of it was great. She spoke the 15 words in French and English in deference to this predominantly French-speaking province.

The Queen and Prince Philip had entered the stadium promptly at 3 p.m. EDT to a cheer from the sellout crowd. A bouquet of flowers was on the red podium in front of her in the royal box. A trumpet call sounded and Canada's national anthem resounded through the stadium, signaling the start of the colorful parade of athletes.

Pursuant with tradition, the little delegation from Greece, the country in which the Olympics originated, led the parade of athletes—some 7,000 of them from about 100 nations.

The original list was reduced by the last-minute withdrawal of Taiwan and the defection of numerous African nations protesting the entry of New Zealand.

After Greece, other countries paraded in alphabetical order under their French names.

Thus, the first on the red tartan track was Allemagne, namely West Germany.

The West Germans presented an imposing squad, the women in white jackets and dark skirts and the men in dark coats and gray slacks.

The Saudi Arabians appeared in Arabic dress with ankle-length robes and white burnooses. Also according to tradition, the flag bearers dipped their colors as thy passed the royal box.

Australia paraded in canary yellow dresses for the women and yellow coats and green slacks for the men.

Queen Elizabeth stood in the royal box and seemingly recognized every group which passed.

One of the first predominately-black teams was that from The Bahamas, a 15-member delegation in blue-and-white costumes. The Bahamaians were followed by Barbados, also with a large section of black athletes.

The black nations which deserted the Games had sought other black athletes, including those from the United States, to follow the boycott.

Each of the teams was preceded by a woman in white hoisting the team's official name. These placard carriers represented the vestal virgins who performed similar duties in the ancient Games in Greece.

One of the smallest squads to make an appearance was Belize, with two gray-haired officials and one athlete following the flag.

One of the smallest squads to make an appearance was Belize, with two gray-haired officials and one athlete following the flag.

The Brazilians, a large squad, paraded informally and waved at the crowd as they rounded the track.

The first black African country to make an appearance was Cameroon, attired in full pastel blue robes and red turbans. At this point, only Algeria had failed to answer the roll call.

Killanin clapped his hand, his first demonstration of emotion, when the Cameroon delegation paraded in front of his box.

The Republic of Congo was the second African nation that failed to appear, but the Ivory Coast marched as scheduled.

Cuba made an impressive showing with a large contingent of both men and women nattily attired in white suits and red tam o'shanters. The Cubans waved individual flags.

Egypt also failed to put a team in the opening ceremony.

A thundering cheer went up when the Stars and Stripes of the large United States squad emerged from the portico, leading a delegation of 470 athletes. The American flag was borne by a handsome blond swimmer, Gary Hall.

Philip Krumm, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, marched with six of his aides behind the American flag. The Yanks were dressed informally. The women wore blue slacks and white blouses with red shoulder bags. The men wore blue leisure suits and red ties.

Political fights over

Duels gain spotlight

MONTREAL (AP) — A butterfly duel between Billy Forrester of the United States and Roger Pyttel of East Germany highlights the first day of competition Sunday when the 21st Summer Olympic Games begin after weeks of bitter political wrangling.

The awesome East German women swimmers are expected to win the 400-meter medley relay for the only other swimming gold medal to be awarded on the first day of action.

The athletes finally take the stage after the Games have been sullied by bitter international political fights that resulted in the withdrawal of teams from the Republic of China and several African nations.

Still, about 7,000 athletes from 110 nations will compete for the gold, silver and bronze medals that mark the height of athletic accomplishment in 21 summer sports. The Soviet Union, United States and the two Germanys are expected to dominate the medal standings.

Swimming takes the early spotlight in these games, with the track and field events not scheduled to start until next Friday. The American men could win all 13 of their swim events and U.S. coach Doc Counsilman said "Every event will have a new world record except the 100-meter butterfly."

Likewise, the East German women swimmers could win all their events, but an American team will ty to block that possibility Sunday in the medley relay. Linda Jezek of Palo Alto, Calif., will swim the 100 meter backstroke leg of the event; Lauri Siering of Modesto, Calif., will swim the breaststroke; Camille Wright of New Albany, Ind., the butterfly, and Shirley Babashoff of Fountain Valley, Calif., the freestyle anchor leg.

Miss Babashoff, 19, is the American superstar hope in swimming but she will have difficulty upstaging East Germany's Kornelia Ender, who holds world records in the 100-and 200-meter freestyle events.

If the East Germans win the event, as expected, it will be that nation's first gold medal ever in women's swimming.

The 200-meter butterfly duel between Forrester of Birmingham, Ala., and East Germany's Pyttel could start the American men swimmers to the sweep they dream of. Forrester won the world championship in Cali, Columbia, in 1975 and Pytell holds the world record in the event. Mike Bruner of Stockton, Calif., has a good chance for a medal in the race.

The American and Russian basketball teams, which are expected to meet eventually for the gold medal, both get started in preliminary competition Sunday. The Americans, who lack the big center but have great speed and some outstanding pro prospects, take on Italy in the first round. Russia meets Mexico.

The United States won every Olympic basketball gold medal until 1972 in the Munich Games, when the title was virtually stolen from them in one of the Games' most bitter controversies ever. The United States apparently had won by one point but the officials required that the last three seconds played over, and then played over again until Russia finally scored and won, 51-50.

Aleksandr Belov, the man who scored that basket, is back on the Russian team along with 19-year-old Vladimir Tkachenko, who stands 7-foot-3.

U.S. coach Dean Smith of North Carolina has four of his own players plus such standouts as college player the year Scott May of Indiana, his teammate, Quinn Buckner, and Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame.

Gymnastics also gets under way Sunday with 14-year-old Rumanian prodigy Nadia Comaneci expected to grab the spotlight. American hopes in this sport hinge on Cardrie Englert, 18, of Tallahassee, Fla., who says she has nightmares about falling off the balance beam, and on Peter Kormann, 20, a junior Southern Connecticut State College.

Miss Englert, a national champion in both the free exercise and the beam, said, You can practice and practice but there is always the chance you will fall off the beam.

22 African nations boycott in eleventh-hour decision

MONTREAL (AP) — African countries, 22 in all, pulled ou of the Olympics en masse Saturday, depriving the Games in last-minute decisions of some of the world's best athletes and leaving the rebel nations with the threat of international sport sanctions.

There were divisions among the Africans themselves, and suspense gripped the Olympic stadium as teams marched in for the opening ceremony. A missing place symbolized an eleventh-hour decision to boycott the competition because New Zealand, accused of coddling the segregationist South African government, would not withdraw its team as the Africans demanded.

Most of the African athletes reacted with stoicism to the pull-out decisions, but a few, bucking possible reprisals at home, indicated they were disgusted by their governments actions.

The 22 African teams—joined by Iraq in a gesture of solidarity—were out of the Games in a movement that gathered momentum Saturday morning.

The teams to leave Saturday, joining Tanzania, Somalia, Madagascar, Mauritius, Gambia and Nigeria, which had announced previously they would not participate, were: Algeria, Kenya, Uganda, Ethiopia, the Congo Republic, Chad, Egypt, Central African Republic, Gabon, Ghana, Libya, Niger, Sudan, Togo, Upper Volta and Zambia.

Zaire and Malawi were also out of the Games, but their decisions were made known weeks ago and were related to their athletes not coming up to Olympic levels, rather than the New Zealand dispute.

With Taiwan added, this made a total of 26 countries originally planning to take part in the Games that did not join the opening ceremonies.

It meant that the Games would go on without the 1,500-meter duel between Filbert Bayi of Tanzania and John Walker of New Zealand.

Mike Boit of Kenya, a favorite in the 800, Ethiopia's distance specialists, Tua Eshetu and Miruts Yifter, and Nigeria's 400-meter challengers, Dele Udo and Felix Amadiyi, were also gone.

There was a threat of action to be taken, possibly as early as Monday, against the African rebels by the International Olympic Committee (IOC). Monique Berlioux, an IOC director, said its rules provide for "sanctions against national Olympic committees whose athletes enter the Olympics and then pull out."

The nature of the possible action was not detailed, but there was speculation the teams pulling out could be suspended from competition involving sports governed by international federations cooperating with the IOC.

Seven African teams—Mali, Morocco, the Ivory Coast, Cameroon, Swaziland, Tunisia and Senegal—joined the other nations marching into the stadium and past Queen Elizabeth.

But Jean-Claude Ganga, secretary of the African sports council, held out the possibility of more withdrawals, saying that communications problems with Africa may have slowed directions from some governments to their teams.

A PUTTER MUTTER — Dave Graham has a few words as he drops his putter after missing a short putt on the first hold of the third round of the Westchester Classic in Harrison, N.Y., Saturday. Graham continued to burn up the course on the early holes maintaining his 11-under-par lead.

Graham leads by 4

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP)— Steady David Graham, the transplanted Australian, fired a one-under-par 70 Saturday for a three round total of 12-under 201 and a four stroke lead in the $300,000 Westchester Classic.

The 30-year-old Graham, a winner in this country only at Cleveland in 1972, shared the lead in the first round of this 72 hole test after an eight under 63, and took a four stroke lead after 36 holes with a three under 68.

The slim built Graham, a golf club designer who now resides in Hollywood, Fla., carded three birdies and two bogeys in his Saturday round over the 6,603-yard par 71 Westchester Country Club course. He leads Mike Wynn of Crittendon, Va., who has earned $1,966 this year and is seriously considering giving up the tour if he doesn't do better.

The 31-year-old Wynn, whose best finish since joining the pro tour in 1972 was 12th at Houston last year, hung in with a one-under par 70, including three birdies and two bogeys.

Wynn, who has made only five cuts in 21 tournaments entered, shot a first round 64 to trail by a stroke, and a par 71 Friday for a 36 hole total of 135 that tied him with Carlton White and Larry Ziegler. His 70 Saturday left him at eight-under par 205.

Ben Crenshaw, a double winner on the tour this year and the third leading money winner, shot a third-round 69 for a 206, five strokes off the lead. Crenshaw, who was tied for third with Ziegler, who shot a 71 Saturday, would be within two strokes of Graham if not for a triple bogey on the seventh hole in Friday's second round when he put the ball in the water.

Johnny Miller, who won the British Open last week, shot a two-under 69 in the third round and was six strokes behind at 207 tied with Al Geiberger, Miller Barber, Fuzzy Zoeller and Jerry McGee.

Arnold Palmer, the 46-year-old one time superstar of the tour, rolled in three consecutive birdies on the front nine to raise the hopes of a typical "Arnie's Army" gallery who cheered and moaned with each stroke. But Palmer bogeyed the ninth hole and went over par on the 11th and 12th to finish with a one-over 72, five-under par for the tournament and seven strokes off the lead.

Jack Nicklaus shot a two under par 69 and had a 54 hole total of 212.

Stacy ties Rankin

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Hollis Stacy, firing the best round of the tournament, moved into a tie with Judy Rankin after Saturday's second round of play in the $70,000 Columbus LPGA Classic at Riviera County Club.

Miss Stacy added a 32-35—67 to her opening round of 71 to earn a tie for the top spot with a two-day total of 138, six strokes under par on the 6,200-yard layout.

The Hilton Head, S.C., player had five birdies and no bogeys in the round, scoring birds on No. 2, 7, 8, 9 and 10.

Bubba costs parking ticket

Oilers open training camp

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — After several long discussions and morning parking lot conference, Bubba Smith signed his 1976 contract Saturday to get the Houston Oilers' training camp off to a successful start.

All it cost Oiler assistant general manager Tom Williams was a parking ticket.

Oiler Coach O. A. "Bum" Phillips put the Oilers through the first practice at Sam Houston State University while Bubba Smith and Williams huddled one last time over Smith's contract.

Williams, who still has to sign Tody Smith and rookie Mike Oarber, considered his day successful despite getting a parking ticket, moments after signing Smith.

"I might have held out to miss more workouts at another team," Bubba Smith said jokingly. "But I couldn't do that to Bum."

"Heck, he had to sign," Phillips said. "The players wouldn't get off his back during the workout."

While Bubba Smith was scheduled to be in uniform for the afternoon workout, five other players, including Tody Smith and starting linebacker Robert Brazile, failed their physical exams.

Phillips said Brazile had to retake a blood test and Tody Smith had a swollen knee.

"All players, about two days before camp, decide they have to get in shape," Phillips said. "So he (Tody) went and got 500 pounds of weights and did some squats and 500 pounds is too much. He could have practiced today but we'll take another look Monday."

Three other players were not as lucky, however, and were waived after failing their physicals. They are quarterback Charles Napper, running back Jim Strong and defensive end Mike Walker.

"We saw 82 eager football players trying to do what they are supposed to do," Phillips said of the first workouts, held on a side practice field because Friday night rains had washed out the regular facility.

Bubba Smith, who backed up his brother Tody at defensive end and Curly Culp at middle guard last season, said there were no serious problems with his contract despite the lastminute signing.

Smith, Phillips and Williams met in a dorm parking lot Saturday morning shortly before the first workout and still were discussing contract. Williams and Bubba Smith appeared at practice a short time later.

"It was just a matter of terminology," Smith said. "I'm very happy with my contract now."

Concerning Williams' parking ticket, Phillips said "As a law-abiding citizen I think he deserved it."

Landry lauds Poke runners

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry seemed highly pleased Saturday with his fleet of running backs although Duane Thomas is hobbled and No. 2 draft choice Jim Jensen is not in camp.

"It's probably the best set of backs—as a group—that we've ever had in a training camp," Landry said.

He mentioned Preston Pearson and Robert Newhouse, last year's starters, Doug Dennison, Scott Laidlaw and Charlie Young, the back-up people with experience, and Ron Johnson, acquired from the New York Giants.

Sunday will be an off day for the club, and is the first break for the rookies who have been having two-a-day workouts for two weeks.

The Cowboys will have another six days of two-a-days before trimming down to just one drill a day.

They open the preseason at Oakland July 31.

Greg McGuire, seventh round draft choice from Michigan State, and Harry Goden, a free agent who has been in a Dallas camp before, left camp voluntarily, a spokesman said Saturday.

Cedeno beats Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Cesar Cedeno smacked a solo homer, his 15th of the season, with two out in the first inning, and Houston rookie Joaquin Andujar outdueled Tom Seaver as the Astros beat the New York Mets 1-0.

Cedeno's drive hit just above the orange line on the brick wall adjacent to the visiting team's bullpen in left field.

The loss lowered Seaver's record to 9-6 and was his first after four consecutive wins. Seaver last lost on June 9th.

Andujar, now 6-5, allowed only two runners to get past first base as he set the Mets down on five hits. In the first inning, Mike Phillips walked and Felix Millan singled, but Bruce Boisclair hit into a double play and Dave Kingman popped out.

Seaver pitched a three-hitter for eight innings, striking out 11 Houston batters to raise his total to 138. Andujar struck out five and walked two.

CONTROVERSIAL PLAY — New York Yankees' third baseman, Graig Nettles, steals second base in the third inning of play. Texas Ranger second baseman, Lenny Randle, tries for the out and is over-ruled by base umpire, Marty Springstead. The action occurred at Arlington Stadium, Saturday night.

Ranger's rally late and short

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Graig Nettles pounded three hits including a double and a homer for three runs batted in as the New York Yankees beat Texas 7-5 Saturday night for their fifth straight victory and the Rangers' tenth consecutive defeat.

Nettles doubled to climax a two-run first inning, singled and later scored in the third frame and hit his 13th homer with a man on in the fifth. The Yankee third baseman also had two RBI's in New York's 3-0 win Friday night.

Nettles homer down the right field line came off Texas reliever Mike Bacsik, who replaced starter and loser Steve Barr, 2-5, in the second inning.

Dock Ellis, 11-4, pitched 61-3 innings of five-hit ball to notch the victory, his seventh in a row after four straight losses. Dick Tidrow picked up his third save in four-games by retiring Jeff Burroughs with the bases loaded in the seventh.

He was racked for four runs in the ninth on four hits, including a three-runner by Mike Hargrove, his fifth of the year and a run-scoring triple by Roy Howell.

Thurman Munson, the All-Star catcher making a rare appearance in the outfield singled home Mickey Rivers in both the first and second innings as New York scored in four of the first five frames to take a commanding 6-0 lead.

Pokes lose element of surprise

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys surprised almost everybody, including themselves, when they bounced back from an 8-6 season in 1974 to earn a trip to the Super Bowl last season.

This year, however, the Cowboys won't be able to sneak up on many National Football League rivals.

Dallas lost the Super Bowl to the Pittsburgh Steelers in a thriller at Miami, 21-17, after a 10-4 record. Three of the losses were by a total of 11 points, the fourth to the St. Louis Cardinals by 14.

But now comes 1976.

"We won't surprise many people this year," says Coach Tom Landry as he herds the Cowboys at their summer camp at California Luthern College.

The reason, Landry says, is because any squad coming off a Super Bowl appearance will command great respect from its peers in the NFL.

The current prospects, however, are quite unlike 1975 at this stage of training.

Last summer Dallas had lost through retirement such proven stars as Bob Lilly and Cornell Green. Calvin Hill had jumped to the World Football League and several others were headed to the WFL.

Offensively, the Cowboys now appear set, with quarterback Roger Staubach the key. Staubach's supporting cast includes Drew and Preston Pearson, Robert Newhouse, Golden Richards, Doug Dennison, Jean Fugett, Billy Joe DuPree and prodigal Duane Thomas.

It is the defense and the kicking game hat concern Landry, who, since the retirement of Cincinnati's Paul Brown is the dean of NFL coaches.

Age is the villain. Landry hopes that it hasn't suddenly caught up with three of his defensive standouts, linebackers Lee Roy Jordan and Dave Edwards and cornerback Mel Renfro.

There was some concern about the three a year ago in camp, concern which disappeared as the campaign wore on.

"The real key," Landry says, "is whether you can take these veterans and bring them back for another year, or do you have to replace them with younger players."

Dallas wasn't overjoyed with its kicking game last year, but there is hope that at least the punting woes may be cured by the Cowboys' third string quarterback, Danny White, late of the WFL and Arizona State.

Landry isn't promising another Super Bowl team, but after last year, he probably won't be bowled over if the Cowboys make it to another one, in Pasadena's Rose Bowl next January.

Billions to watch XXI Olympiad

MONTREAL (AP) — Still the bickering. Halt the feuding. Let joy be kindled today when the fire of the XXI Olympiad is lighted before a billion spectators around the world.

More than 7,000 athletes march in Olympic Stadium today under the flags of their countries. A choir sings. Children dance. Thousands of pigeons are freed to the skies.

Because of a global television network, never before have so many eyes been turned upon so worthy a spectacle—the 2,000-year-old symbol of man striving for his best.

The olive wreaths have been replaced by medals. The single foot race has been multiplied many times. The ritual Olympic fire has been relayed by satellite.

But the purpose is the same, although the words are flashed on an electronic scoreboard in a concrete stadium: "The most important thing in the Olympic Games is not to win but to take part, just as the most important thing in life is not the triumph but the struggle."

Despite the noble purpose of the Games, political gamesmanship has forced two countries from the Olympics. As the standard bearers, flag bearers and athletes enter the field, Taiwan and Nigeria are absent, gone home to obey other principles.

For days before the opening, there were squabbles and meanness. Now, perhaps, all that can be forgotten, or at least put aside.

Nevertheless, 70,000 spectators here get their money's worth of pageantry as does the worldwide audience estimated at 1 billion.

OPENING SPECTACLE REHEARSAL — Young Canadian girl athlete is under a streamer during a dress rehearsal for the Olympic Games opening ceremony Saturday.

FLAG REHEARSAL — Stadium attendants raise the Olympic flag skyward from inside the brand new Olympic Stadium at Montreal Friday in a rehearsal of the opening ceremony of the 21st Olympic Games July 17.

READY TO GO — Framed by the concrete roof of the Olympic stadium the stainless steel dish, where the Olympic flame will burn, appears to the onlooker.

THE FLAME ARRIVES — Canadian skiing gold-medalist Kathy Kreiner, carried the torch for the last kilometer to the cross atop Mont Royal where she passed it to veteran runner Gerard Cote.

LIGHTS TORCH — Veteran runner Gerard Cote lights the Olympic torch atop Mont Royal, Montreal, Friday night. The flame arrived in the Olympic city after its journey from Greece this week.

U.S. swim teams face different challanges

MONTREAL (AP) — The American men will be fighting complacency and the American women will be fighting fear as the two halves of the United States' swimming team find themselves in different power positions at the 21st Olympic Games.

The swimming competition begins Sunday with heats and semifinals in the women's 100-meter freestyle, the men's 100-meter backstroke and heats and finals in the men's 200-meter butterfly and the women's 400-meter medley relay.

The American men are the dominating force with a good chance to do better than in 1972 when they won nine gold medals, seven in events swum by Mark Spitz. The women, however, find themselves in the position of the underdogs for the first time since the late 1950s.

The American men have six world record holders on the team, including Brian Goodell and John Hencken, who each have a pair of world marks. The American women, who won eight gold medals at Munich, only have one world record holder, Shirley Babashoff, who will be competing in five individual events and two relays.

The East German women, who have never won an Olympic gold medal in swimming, could win nearly all of them this time. They hold world records in 12 of the 13 Olympic events and are led by super sprinter Kornelia Ender, who will be swimming in three individual events and two relays. Miss Ender is so versatile and good that she will not be competing in the backstroke, in which she held the world standard in the 100 meters earlier in the year.

The world records that survive this blitz by the American men and the East German women will be the exception, rather than the rule. One that may is Mark Spitz' standard in the 100-meter butterfly.

Spitz set the 100 butterfly record at Munich, one of four world records he established in individual races. He also swam on three record-setting relay teams.

No one will win seven gold medals here, although Miss Babashoff will swim in seven events. Miss Ender will be in five events and backstroke king John Naber probably in five.

Rugby squabble continues

More nations boycott games

MONTREAL (AP) — Four more African nations announced today they are boycotting the XXI Olympiad and other withdrawals were threatened only hours before the traditional ceremonies to inaugurate the summer games.

Jean-Claude Ganga, president of the Supreme Council for Sports in Africa, said as many as 11 African teams would withdraw in protest of a New Zealand rugby team's tour of South Africa, which has been eliminated from the games for its apartheid policies.

"Everybody will go out," he said. "Most of them are simply awaiting instructions from home. The delay is due to the difficulty in getting communications through to Africa."

Ethiopia, Kenya, Uganda and Algeria all announced their withdrawal today, joining Nigeria, Somalia, Mauritius, and Tanzania. All are protesting the participation of New Zealand, which they contend should be barred from the games for allowing the rugby team to compete in South Africa.

Ganga said that the Peoples Republic of the Congo, Gambia and Zambia also will withdraw. Officials of those nation said they were awaiting instructions from their governments.

Others awaiting instructions were Togo, Chad, Upper Volta, Senegal and the Peoples Republic of Congo.

Fifteen African nations decided on the boycott at a recent Organization of African Unity summit meeting. But there was not complete unanimity. Kenya's largest circulation newspaper, the Daily Nation, criticized its own team's withdrawal saying that there was nothing to be gained from a boycott.

Mike Boit and Sam Kipkurkat of Kenya were potential winners in the 800 meters.

An Arab behind Star of David

MONTREAL (AP) — There is an Arab marching behind the Israeli Star of David in Saturday's Olympic opening ceremony—a dark, quiet kid who was left to practice soccer alone on a Tel Aviv beach when his Jewish teammates went off to war three years ago.

Life is like that for Rifaat Tourk. He is a 21-year-old outsider in a society that might have reason to be suspicious, a man who in spite of his blue uniform with Hebrew letters must prove his loyalty every day, but without losing his pride.

"Yes, there is a difference," he said. "I'm an Arab. When I walk on the street in Israel I feel the difference. But when the team plays, we do it as a group."

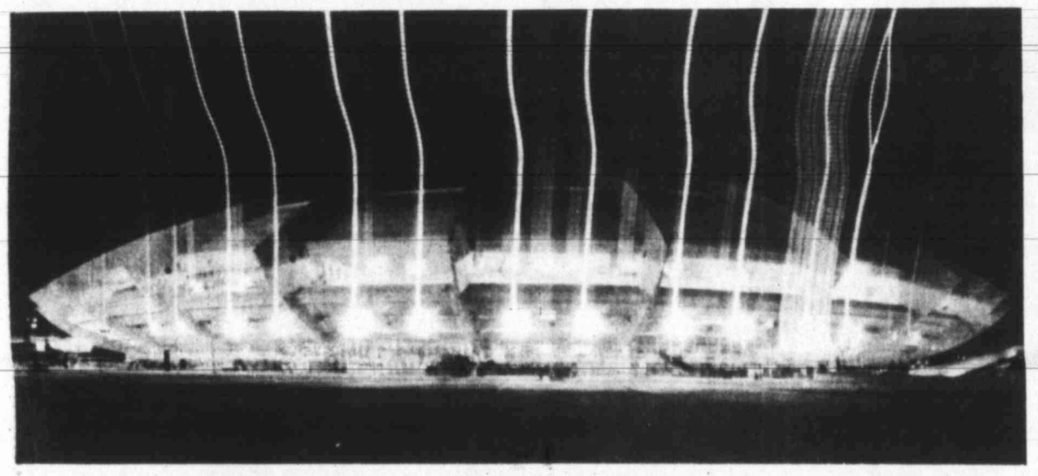

The difference is clear. When Israel fought the Arabs in the Yom Kippur War and Tourk's teammates went to their units, he stayed behind. Except for the small Druze community, no Arabs serve in the Jewish army. When Tourk, a fisherman with his father, wanted to take out his boat, he was told no. So he sat on the beach and juggled with a soccer ball alone.

Does he consider himself a Palestinian? "My parents were from Palestine. I'm from Israel."

How does he feel when Palestinians say they want to take Jaffa, where he lives, away from the Jews? "I don't want to talk about war, about terrorism, about fighting. I came to play soccer."

Influx of politics outflow of talent

MONTREAL (AP) — Politics are expected to cloud the Olympic movement in the next few years and China will be at the heart of it all.

The day of the opening ceremony of the Montreal Games dawned, but politics would not go away. As Taiwan and Nigeria walked out and other African countries were reported ready to follow, Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, set the likely scene between now and the next Olympic Games in Moscow in 1980.

"In the next year or two the whole China question must be discussed with reality," Killanin said.

That means more politics. The IOC must decide:

—Should Mainland China with its 800 millions be admitted to the Games, and on what terms?

—Will Taiwan continue to be recognized? Or will it be sacrificed to Peking, which says its athletes will never compete alongside those of the island fortress that calls itself the Republic of China?

Last year the All-China Sports Federation applied to the IOC for recognition, demanding that Taiwan be kicked out. And that led indirectly to the Taiwan row in Montreal.

Canada, under pressure from Peking, refused entry to Taiwanese athletes unless they dropped the name of the Republic of China. The IOC, after bitter protests over Canada's attitude, pleaded with the Taiwanese to call themselves Taiwan.

The Nigerian Olympic delegation enter Mirabel Airport late Friday as they prepare to leave Montreal after withdrawing from the games in protest against participating by New Zealand.

Taiwan athletes leave Boston, Saturday for home. They will not participate in the Olympic games in Montreal. The athletes sit at Logan International airport waiting for their flight.

U.S. track athletes on training track did not interrupt their work-out Friday when it was heavy raining after a sunny morning and noontime. Teton dam eaten away from inside, team says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Teton Dam was eaten away from within and was not destroyed by any outside cause, an Interior Department investigating team says.

But it's too soon to say whether last month's failure of the Idaho dam could have been foreseen or prevented, says Dennis N. Sachs, chairman of the Teton Dam Failure Review Group.

Sachs commented in an interview Thursday after the team listed four possible explanations for the collapse and said it will take further tests to pinpoint the cause of the June 5 disaster.

Sachs said his unit would try to coordinate its efforts with another Interior Department team headed by Los Angeles consulting engineer Wallace L. Chadwick to avoid duplicating costly testing. The State of Idaho also is investigating.

Announcing its interim findings, the Sachs team said, "the failure was a result of internal erosion," is, that water somehow seeped inside the dam and ate away at its earthern core until the dam was so weakened inside that it burst. The four possible explanations for this are:

—The earthen core of the dam directly over its foundation may have cracked, opening small channels for water intrusion.

—Water may have crept in between this earthen core and its rock foundation.

—The "grout curtain," concrete injected into the rock foundation to seal cracks and openings, may have been imperfeet, allowing water to seep through the foundation into the dam.

—Or water may have found unknown channels through the natural rock of the dam's right abuttment, finding its way around or under the "grout curtain" and then, unexpectedly, back into the dam itself.

The interim report said the group "has identified a number of aspects of design and construction of the dam that might have contributed to the development of internal erosion and rapid failure."

But Sachs said the team did not know whether any of these factors actually went wrong and would not know until it conducts further investigation and testing.

DONALD SNIPES

Snipes takes on extra duty at local plant

MEMPHIS — Donald G. Snipes, general manager of W. R. Grace & Co.'s Agricultural Chemicals Group plant under construction in Woodward, Okla., has assumed the additional post of general manager of Grace's plant in Big Spring, Tex. H. A. Schaedel will continue as manager of the Big Spring plant.

Snipes, 45, joined Grace, the international chemical company, in 1966 as assistant plant manager of the company's agricultural chemicals plant in Trinidad. He became plant manager of Grace's plant in Aruba, Netherlands Antilles, in 1969 and then served as production manager for the Memphis plant in 1974. He was named general manager at Woodward later that year.

A native of Memphis, Mr. Snipes received a B.S. degree in mechanical engineering in 1953 from the Illinois Institute of Technology. He served in the U.S. Navy from 1953 to 1956 as a naval aviator. He is a board member of the Woodward Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Rotary Club of Woodward and the administrative board of the First Methodist Church of Woodward.

Mr. Snipes is married to the former Audry L. Jacobs. They have four children and reside in Woodward, Okla.

Electric bills to rise again this summer

While Big Spring area consumers have lower electric rates than most of the rest of the state, according to Texas Electric Service Company, electric bills are going up these days as everyone turns on air conditioning to try to cool off.

Mainly because of air conditioning, people use a lot more electricity in the summer than in the winter.

"A typical residental customer will use about three times as much electricity in the hottest summer months as he does in the winter months," says Jack D. Redding, Manager of Tesco.

This summer is no exception. Late in June the customers served by Texas Electric's system required an all-time maximum amount of electricity at a given time (called the "peak" demand.).

Many consumers will feel more than the usual summer impact on their electric bills, for a variety of reasons. For one thing, this is the first summer season following the rate increase granted to Texas Electric last winter.

In addition to the increase in basic rates, fuel costs for the Company are higher this summer, causing further increases in electric bills.

A rate increase, higher fuel costs, and possible higher use could mean that many people will receive electric bills much higher than in the past.

Another factor is the design of Texas Electric's rates. "The rate increase was more for large users of electricity than for small users," Redding says. "So some customers may be alarmed at high percentage increases in their summer bills, when they use a lot of electricity. But the increase in the winter bills is less, so when taken on an annual basis the increase is not so large."

Redding points out that the increase was smaller for low users of electricity. "The impact on low users will be relatively small," he says. "But some of the largest users will see large increases."

Redding says the electric company is making efforts to help those customers faced with higher summer bills. For one thing, he says, the company offers an "average billing plan" to residential customers and churches. Instead of paying the high summer bills as they come in, you can use this plan and pay an average bill based on your past 12 month's use. This way you can spread your payments out over the coming months.

You can get information on this plan by requesting it in the message space on your electric bill or by calling the Texas Electric office.

Another thing consumers can do is increase conservation efforts to avoid wasting energy, Redding says. The company offers a free booklet with tips on how to save on air conditioning cost and save energy in other applications around the home.

Suggestions in the booklet include getting an air-conditioning inspection or "tune-up" to help it work more efficiently. You should also keep shrubbery trimmed back from the outdoor central air unit so there is room for good air flow.

Keeping the thermostat setting as high as you can will also cut down on your bill. And it helps a lot to keep windows and doors closed.

ARCO foreman gets award

Bobby D. Horn of Big Spring, production foreman for Atlantic Richfield in the Coahoma district, was presented at 25-year service award.

The award was made at the monthly safety meeting in Coahoma. L. E. Vandever, senior district production supervisor, presented the award.

Horn began working for the company in 1951 as a roustabout in Royalty and since that time has worked as pumper, unit operator and truck driver. He was promoted to assistant foreman in August 1967 and in September 1969, he was promoted to production foreman in the Coahoma area.

Two meet again after 30 years

In a recently published book, former Navy Chief of Operations Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr. writes about a "Texas farm boy . . . of keen intellect and amazing presence of mind . . . who on three occasions saved my life."

Zumwalt relates his favorite war story in the first chapter of "On Watch" (Quadrangle-New York Times Book Co., $12.50). The Texas farm boy, Rufus E. Fowler, a deficiency analysis specialist in the Webb AFB quality control branch, is part of that story.

The two got to meet up again July 6 in Ft. Worth, almost 30 years after their war experiences in the Pacific. Zumwalt was coming to Ft. Worth to address a July 7 breakfast to promote his new book and enhance his campaign for the Senate in West Virginia.

He was staying overnight in the home of Dr. Jack Duffy, a Ft. Worth physician. Zumwalt, Fowler and Duffy had served together in the destroyer USS Robinson during the final years of WW II.

"Our meeting was totally unexpected," said Fowler. "I got a call from Duffy, whom I hadn't heard from in years. He just knew I was from around these parts and kept checking until he located me. Anyway, he told me about Zumwalt and the book and that I was mentioned in it. Duffy asked me to come to Ft. Worth and I took off.

"Duffy was gonna surprise Zumwalt and not tell him that I was in town. But he couldn't keep the secret. We got together the night before the breakfast and talked until about 2 in the morning.

"Sure, all of us had gone our different ways since the war," continues Fowler. "But, they were still two of the nicest people you'd ever want to meet, especially Zumwalt."

After Japan had surrendered, the Robinson captured a 1200-ton Japanese gunboat, the Ataka. Zumwalt, then a lieutenant junior grade in command of the Robinson radar section, was given command of the captured ship.

With a small number of U.S. sailors, that included Fowler, and the captured Japanese crew, the Ataka treked up the Yantze River, headed for Shanghai.

Although the war was over, mainland China was occupied by thousands of Japanese troops. The Ataka followed by a mine-sweeper was the first contingent of American troops to sail up the Yantze since the war. A handful of Americans were already in Shanghai.

The Ataka reached the city and were met at the dock by Japanese troops. Zumwalt and another officer were followed by three hand picked sailors that included Fowler. A Japanese guard tried to stop them and Zumwalt writes, "In a beautifully executed double play, the lad from Texas disarmed him.

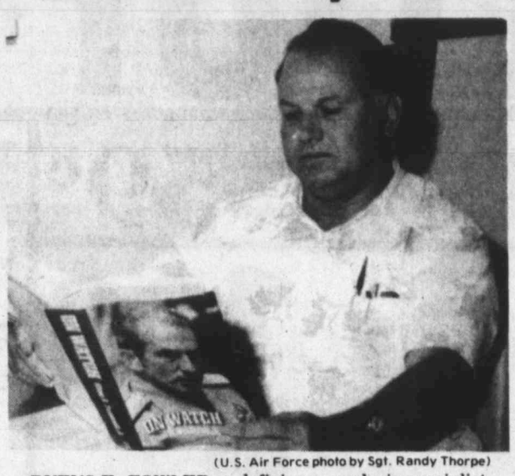

After telling the Japanese that many more Americans were on the way, the sailors on the Ataka set out to secure the dock. Ten of them took a nearby warehouse, capturing and disarming 45 Japanese soldiers. They brought the Japanese to the dock under the Ataka crew's guns.

"One Army officer jumped up and attempted to use his sword on me," writes Zumwalt. "Before I could shoot him, the priceless sailor from Texas knocked him down — to make the second time he had saved me.

Moments later, a Japanese Army captain drove up with an armed chauffeur and demanded to see Zumwalt. As an envoy, the captain demanded the release of the captured Japanese. Zumwalt disarmed him, "spun him around . . . grabbed him by the seat of the pants and rooster-walked him to the dock." Fowler followed Zumwalt with a Tommy gun.

The captain's driver suddenly pointed a gun at Zumwalt who quickly used the captain as a body shield. Zumwalt writes, "In the quickest reflex action, Fowler ducked around the car unseen by the driver who was trying to get a shot at me without creating a blowhole for the divine winds through his master's chest. Using his submachine gun as a lance, Rufus lunged into the driver from the rear, knocking him out and giving me my third excuse to wonder at the benevolence of Providence.

"When I got out of the Navy, Zumwalt sure wanted me to stay in," said Fowler. "He was trying to st it up for me to attend Annapolis. When he realized that I was getting out, he even offered to send me to college out of his own pocket.

Idea nets captain $585

Capt. Williams E. Sherman, staff judge advocate at Webb AFB, is $585 richer as a result of a simple suggestion he made.

His idea was that a DD Form 1843 and certain correspondence copies no longer be required on recovery claims handled by transportation offices.

Air Force headquarters officials determined that the suggestion would save about 33,000 pieces of correspondence each year along with postage. An immediate emergency change was made to Air Force Manual 112-1 and Captain Sherman received his check at the wing staff meeting this week.

Houston to host AFA convention

A number of members of the Big Spring chapter of the Air Force Association are journeying to Houston next week for the annual state convention July 23-25. Site of the meeting is the Stouffer's Greenway Plaza Hotel.

In the limelight will be two Webb AFB men — SMSgt. (chief selectee) Samuel R. Earl and Capt. Teed (Mike) Moseley. They will receive recognition as the Texas AFA Airman and Air Training Command Instructor Pilot of the Year respectively.

Homosexual discharge okay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dismissal of Leonard Matlovich from the Air Force has been approved by a federal judge who said, "the time may have arrived for re-evaluating the homosexual question."

Former Air Force Sgt. Matlovich, an avowed homosexual, said he was "shocked" and would appeal the decision upholding an Air Force regulation which says homosexuals are unfit for duty.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell dismissed Matlovich's suit against the Air Force Friday, ruling that the armed services have the right to establish standards of behavior.

Upholding an Air Force regulation requiring the discharge of any person found to have conducted homosexual acts, Gesell said, "It is now clear from recent (Supreme Court) cases there is no constitutional right to engage in homosexual actions."

But Gesell added criticism of the Air Force's "knee-jerk reaction to some of these cases," and suggested he might be making "bad law" in his ruling.

"This is a distressing case, a bad case," Gesell said after granting the government's request for a summary judgement. "It may be that bad cases make bad law," he said. "It's impossible to escape the feeling the time may have arrived for re-evaluating the homosexual question."

"I'm shocked," said Matlovich, a 12-year veteran, would-be career military man, highly praised technical sergeant and Bronze Star winner in Vietnam.

Catholic laymen make committment

The Permanent Deacon:

Best of both worlds

By CANDY SMITH

Not for 900 years has there been a place in the Catholic Church for a married man to serve as an ordained servant. In the days of St. Stephen, the first martyr, the office was called the diaconate and the man was called a deacon. But the practice died out with the influx of priests.

For many centuries past, the term deacon meant a temporary state through which a man passed before becoming a priest. He might have only been a deacon for a day before being ordained as a priest.

Nine years ago, the possibility of the permanent diaconate was again looked into. It became a reality six years ago. The basic doctrine of the church has not changed, and according to its teachers, will not change.

But the office of ordained deacon, must like the liturgy, observance of holy days, and other outward symbols of the church, is undergoing a variation of form.

What this variation means in simple terms, is that even married laymen in the church can, after a period of training, make a lifetime commitment to the Catholic Church and assist in many of the duties formerly reserved only for ordained priesthood.

The ground was laid for the restoration of the diaconate in 1967 by Pope PaulVI in a issued document titled, "Motu Proprio." In the document, the permanent diaconate was approved with the condition of the consent of the bishops in each country.

"At the request of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, the Holy See granted permission for establishment of a permanent diaconate in the United States," said a publication of the diocese of San Angelo.

The qualifications established read, "With the consent of the local bishop, the Order of Deacon may be conferred on married or unmarried men of mature (35) years."

It does, however, prohibit remarriage by married deacons should they become widowers, unmarried ordained deacons from marrying and women from becoming deacons "at this time."

Three deacon candidates in Big Spring are on the last leg of their training. Wayne Rock and David King will be ordained as the first permanent deacons to Big Spring on August 28 at the Immaculate Heart of Mary Church here. Peter Gregg, now in training with the other candidates, will complete the instruction, but must wait five more years.

A stipulation of the diaconate is that the wife must agree to her husband's choice. The wife will not become a "deaconess" by virtue of her marriage and is not expected or allowed to take part in the ordained duties of a deacon.

The difference between a priest and a deacon is likened to the difference between a mechanic and a banker, said King. It's just a different profession entirely. A priest has been a deacon but a (permanent) deacon will never be a priest.

The deacon may, however, assist the bishop or priest during liturgical celebrations, perform Baptism, distribute the Eucharist, bless marriages, officiate at funerals, officially read the scriptures, and direct the Liturgy of the Word.

Other duties he may perform, especially in the absence of a priest, include works of charity and social assistance, leading and guiding the local Christian community and promoting the apostolic activities of laymen.

"The permanent deacon is not a 'mini-priest', a sub-curate, or a super layman. Rather he holds his own rightful place within the hierarchy of the Church," said the San Angelo publication.

The two-year training, said King, candidate for deacon in the Big Spring area, has "been a long haul."

The beginning sessions were instructed by Father Ballas, now with the University of Texas at Dallas. One of the foremost scriptural scholars, Father Ballas is said to be a Hungarian refugee who left Eastern Europe during the occupation of the 1950s. He has also studied in Rome.

The study of the liturgy, said King, was conducted by some of the best in the Church. The quality of the instruction, the constant presence of the bishop, the location, and other factors, make the pilot program here different from others.

"There are many deacons training but as far as we know, ours is unique," said Mrs. King. "The presence of the bishop, who has taken a leading role and has himself taught the scriptures," she said, "is a singular case. Nowhere else in the entire world has the bishop depicted such interest. That's how much they care," she added.

This is THE pilot program in the US.," she continued, "not associated with a university. Most of the programs are affiliated with a Catholic university, but we have none here."

An interesting aspect to the instruction, is the use of videotape machines. "After practicing a speech, you can play it back and see how you are teaching. You may find you have hands and feet moving that you didn't know about," said Rock.

"You find things that would be a stumbling block to teaching — like talking to the podium — and they can be pointed out as corrective criticism," he said.

Also, he said, people from Amarillo, Oklahoma City and other cities have visited here to study the curricula.

One more unique factor in the program is the active involvement of the wives. Although involvement is encouraged, it is not mandatory. Nevertheless the wives of the men training here have shown more than a dutiful interest.

Most of the wives, said Mrs. King, have attended the sessions in San Angelo with their husbands as if they were in training themselves. "They seem to have developed a bond which has made them want to attend. And the bond has brought them closer to their husband and created a closer family relationship.

"There have been a few special sessions for the wives, too," said Mrs. King. "I don't think in our own family we will see much change. David has always devoted a lot of time to the church, and I am accustomed to it and proud of him.

"It also means that the time we do get with him is enjoyed more. I have it especially easy because we work at the same place and get to see each other there," she noted.

The two years of training, in addition to liturgical and scriptural training, give detailed instruction in care of the sick. This includes spiritual counseling and information on mental hygiene. "We're taught to treat the sick as people and not as patients," said Rock. "And the same with juveniles. Instead of concentrating on delinquents, we are instructed to help all juveniles," he said.

Both King and Rock spoke highly of Bishop Levin's ability to get the foremost authors in each field to San Angelo for instruction each week.

Another unique facet is that, because there is no affiliated university to hold classes in, the San Angelo diocese rented rooms at special rates from Ramada Inn of San Angelo to hold classes.

Though many forms the church has taken have changed, one segment of the instruction has not. "Moral theology, the proper behavior for a Christian," said Mrs. King, "has not really changed." Practices may come and go, the moral code of the rest of the world may waver, but the befitting conduct of Christians has remained the same and is taught the same.

Intensive study of the documents of Vatican II and lessons in social welfare are other aspects of the study. To practice the skills learned in the course of the two years takes enough hours to be considered full-time. But it's not. Mainly because the candidates here hold other full-time jobs already and must use their free time to fulfill duties as a deacon.

Wayne Rock, an employe at Gamco, is also director of religious education for the Immaculate Heart of Mary parish. He is, in addition to that, a lecturer, social worker, and nursing home visitor. He is involved in youth groups, and men's clubs.

"Twenty-four hours is a reasonable limit," King interjected, to restrict one's activities. "And the sacrament of marriage is the most important," added Rock.

"But the men involved in the program are those who already devoted a great deal of work to the church," said Mrs. King. "In that respect, their activities will not greatly change."

David King, apart from being a full-time instructor at Howard College, teaches elementary religious education to pre-school through sixth grade at the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

One reason a deacon candidate must have the consent of their wives and children is because of the time taken away from them.

"I don't see any interference in my work," said Rock, "but if you ask whether it interferes with family life, the answer is yes." Weekends normally spent with the family may conflict with a schedule to visit a nursing home, or maybe you just can't paint the house."

Beyond the initial two years prior to ordination, there is one year of continuing education after ordination.

Peter Gregg, an employe of the Veteran's hospital, shared his experiences that led to his becoming the youngest deacon candidate in the San Angelo diocese, despite the fact that it will be half a decade before the fruits of his training can be realized.

"When I was in college," said Gregg, "I considered going into the priesthood, and decided that my need to get married was greater. So I went into social work which was as close as I could get to having the best of both worlds.

"I married Louise in September of '68 and we went into the Peace Corps in Bolivia. I think that was probably more beneficial to us than to the country," he mentioned. The Greggs came back to the States and he started work in a halfway house, later working as a caseworker in the State Hospital here. He began in 1973 the job he holds today at the Veteran's Hospital as a social work associate.

"In August 1974, I heard the announcement of the permanent diaconate. It struck me as very natural to consider. I told my wife and she agreed immediately. I had been active in church groups and as a lecturer and was accepted in the program despite my age."

Gregg was allowed to go through the training early although he will not be ordained for another five years. In August of this year, he will return to the University of Texas at Arlington's School of Social Work. Once ordained in the ministry, he said, he hopes to pursue spiritual direction, which encompasses preaching, teaching and counseling. "It is actually more than all that combined. The idea of spiritual direction is to keep the mind focused on God in everyday life," he added.

Gregg now functions as a lecturer and acolyte, an assistant minister who can assist the priest in distributing communion. "The acolyte has fallen out of use," he said, "except for alter boys which are very close to acolytes. They have taken the place of minor orders."

Gregg said his own personal theory as to why the age limit to the diaconate was 35 is that, because it is new, the Church wants men who are stable and somewhat settled. "In reinstating the diaconate, the Pope and bishops are dealing with unknown potentiality."

Gregg also teaches high school religious education at his parish along with Rock and King.

"All along my wife has given her consent. But usually, the wives' attitudes vary as to whether they consider the diaconate a shared ministry."

Despite the talk of women becoming priest, Gregg said he believes women deacons are a lot more likely to come about. After all, he noted, there are many references to 'deaconesses' in the Bible. As far as women becoming priests, there have never been any so far and there is 2000 years of tradition behind the religion. It's a good thing, but on the other hand we may miss a lot because a lot of excellent women could fill that role. A woman's role in the Church is still limited." he conseded.

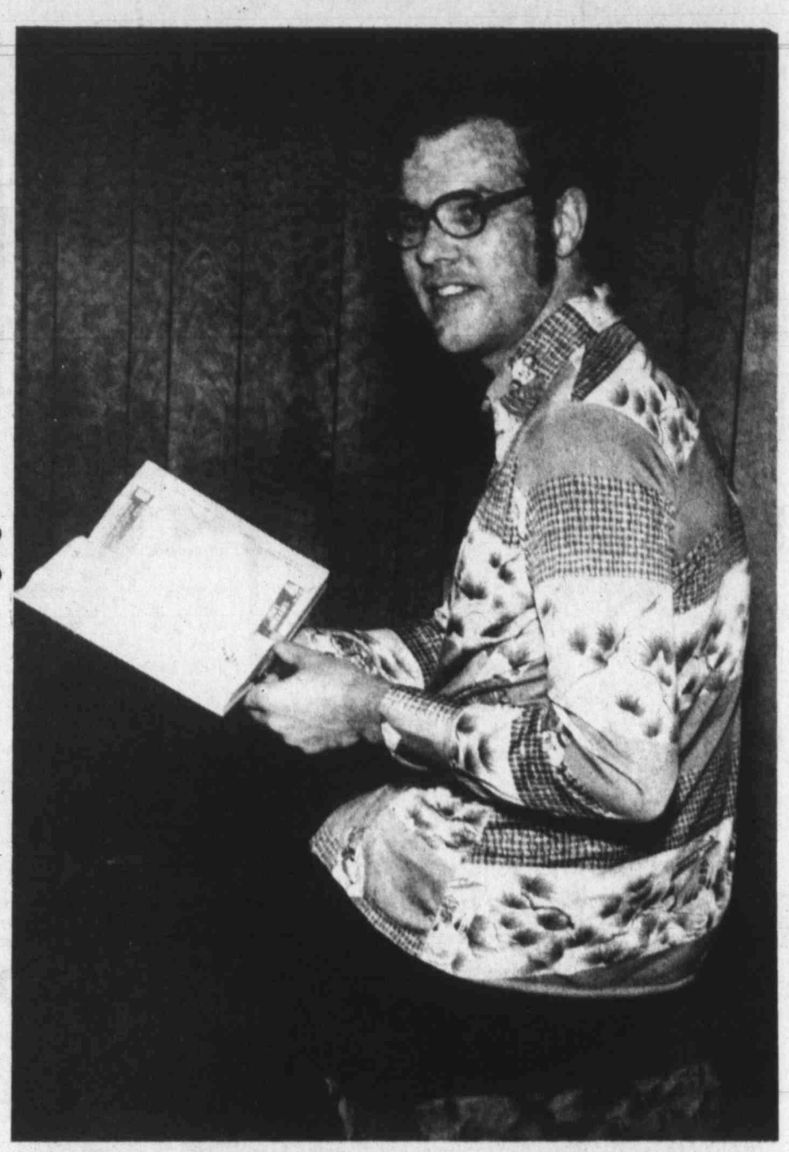

Because of new and different programs such as the permanent deacon, many people say the Catholic Church has become Protestantized, said Gregg. "Because of lay people participating in the Church, use of English in the venacular, etc., the effect of the Ecumenical Council may look that way," he added.

"There is, of course, some Protestant influence, but it was Pope John XXIII who opened the doors to let the fresh breeze of the spirit come in."

"The Church used to be so rigid and controlled. Now that is past. They are letting people have an influence on the Church.

So, times change and practices change. But, as they say, the basic doctrine has not and will not. They have only shifted form a little to find the best of both worlds.

THINGS WON'T REALLY CHANGE — Mr. and Mrs. David King, who have been active in the Catholic Church for decades, say their life won't be that much different when King is ordained. King is a professor at Howard College and Mrs. King teaches sewing and crochet at the college in Continuing Education.

New officers were elected for the NCO Wives Club at the business meeting Tuesday evening. Those elected will be announced at the installation dinner July 24.

The club's new advisor, Mrs. Jerry Grimes, wife of the base commander, received an arrangement of yellow flowers at the reception given in her honor.

A former member, Loretta Jennings was welcomed back along with a guest, Jean Fauver.

'The Lord put a big heart in that little body'

Delegate Shaw began life as a triplet

By CANDY SMITH

"I watch TV a lot more than normal now, trying to catch a glimpse of him," said Mrs. Delano Shaw, wife of one of the Texas National Delegates to the Democratic Convention.

"For Delano, I'm so happy That young man is very dear to us. I'm so excited and proud," said Mrs. R. C. Nichols, Delano Shaw's mother-in-law. "No one could possibly deserve it (nomination as a national delegate) more," she said.

Delano Shaw was born one of triplets to Mr. and Mrs. W. S. (Angeline) Shaw in 1936. They were the ninth, tenth and eleventh children of the Shaw family, named like true Democrats, Franklin, Delano, and Roosevelt.

"He's a little politician at heart, humble and unpretentious. Even his family learned of his nomination as delegate to the Democratic Convention through other sources. On the plane to New York, he sat next to Dolph Briscoe and former Sen. Ralph Yarborough. That'd be enough to turn any of our heads, but he didn't even say anything about it when he called from New York.

"The Lord put a big heart in that little body. We don't always get together with the same views in politics, but that's okay," said the mother-in-law.

"He has always told me that one thing he has learned is people could have a voice in their country's government. I've always said you can't have control over politicians because that's the way they are, but Delano has worked hard and his views have counted," said Mrs. Delano Shaw.

There's been a lot of work to this," Mrs. Shaw stated. "It's not just by chance that he was chosen as a national delegate. He's worked toward this goal for about eight years."

There's also much traveling involved and it's not always fun. One day he got off work and had to run catch a plane to get to Witchita Falls by that same evening for a meeting.

Delano Shaw is one of the few who apparently know where Carter stands on issues. "People say Carter evades issues. But Delano has recieved from Carter everything he is for and against in an itemized statement. We're stunned that more people don't know more about him (Carter).

"Interest groups," she said, "contacted him weeks before the convention and were well prepared. The abortion groups, anti-abortion, women's, busing, etc., all contacted him on a daily basis before they went, and this will cut down on the confusion when the time comes."

Mrs. Shaw said she did little prior entertaining except for local delegates who would come to the house to talk to Delano. Most of the work was secretarial.

"I had to gather information, fix up his personal data sheet, correspond with Carter, and compile it all, because Delano doesn't type and he wanted it all at his finger tips when he went to New York."

In a word, she is his personal secretary. "Also," she said, "he wanted me to go to New York with him."

"However, the Democratic party was not paying his expenses or contributing to them and I felt we were doing good to get him sent there. He attended a convention in Houston last month and will attend another in Fort Worth next September. He took off from work time without pay to go to Houston and the whole business is getting more costly than we had planned.

"He had first planned to use his vacation but we had already signed up for vacation time when he got chosen as delegate.

"At times I've gotten politically involved. Daddy was a county commissioner and I guess that was my first introduction to politics. Mostly I just follow along after Delano," she admitted.

"Delano," she said, "takes any publication he can and makes intelligent decisions, whether they are right or wrong. He gives me the articles to read and I'm right there behind him."

According to the Associated Press account of Democratic delegates at this year's convention in New York, delegates are generally better educated and wealthier than the average American.

Average delegate age is 42.9 and less than 14 per cent are under 30. "More than two of every five delegates have done postgraduate work and another two of that five attended or graduated from an undergraduate college. Only two per cent of the delegates have less than a high school education," the AP study said.

Fifty per cent of the delegates earn $25,000 or more and only 7 per cent earn less than $10,000 a year.

"More than one in six of every delegate is an elected public official, the largest occupational group. Lawyers and educators each comprise more than 10 per cent of the convention membership. Next come self-employed business persons and homemakers. The only other group with more than 200 members is union officials," says the AP.

It's no wonder then, that Delano Shaw has made a hit with the New York crowd, who are quick to notice a difference. It's not just the boots, hat and belt nor the stigma, good or bad, of being a Texan.

At 39, Shaw is younger than the average delegate, has a high school education, makes less than the widespread $25,000 and is an operator at the Cosden Oil and Gas Plant.

"He said he put his name down for nomination as a national delegate, but didn't have any idea he'd get chosen," said Delano's mother, Mrs. Angeline Shaw who lives here in Big Spring.

"I'm pleased he got the appointment," said Delano's wife. "It's a good thing some people are still taking enough of an interest to do something for our country."

Home canning tips listed

COLLEGE STATION — Home-canning season is at hand, and consumers should be sure their pressure canner produces a product safe to eat, Frances Reasonover, a foods and nutrition specialist, reminds.

She pointed out that a temperature of 240 degrees F. is necessary to destroy bacteria spores present in low-acid foods, which include vegetables other than tomatoes and rhubarb and most fish and poultry.

"If the bacteria is not destroyed, it grows in jars or cans of food in the absence of air. It produces a toxin that causes the deadly botulism poisoning," she explained.

Miss Reasonover is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"When selecting a pressure canner, look for features that assure adequate pressure can be safely reached and maintained," she said.

Look for these features:

—an accurate dial or weighted gauge that gives 10 pounds pressure at sea level and up to 15 pounds in areas of Texas with 2,000 feet and above sea level.

—rubber gasket or lugs that enable the canner to be airtight to help maintain

Pat Nixon recovering

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Pat Nixon, who is recovering from a stroke at Long Beach Memorial Hospital, begins occupational therapy Monday. But hospital officials say they still don't know when she will be able to go home.

Occupational therapy involves practice at completing daily tasks like picking up things and dressing.

Mrs. Nixon, 64, wife of former President Richard M. Nixon, is already undergoing two 20-minute physical therapy sessions each day — such activities as walking and arm and leg exercises.

She was admitted to the hospital July 8 after suffering the partially paralyzing stroke at home.

Balancing contemporary with the antique look

THE GILDED CAGE — Mikeska shows a flair for space, the difficult exemplified here in his choice of a glass topped table that creates an illusion of space where there is little. The Napoleonic period prevails around the room, nowhere more apparent than in the border at the ceiling.

By CANDY SMITH

"You have to like beautiful things," said Gene E. Mikeska, A.S.I.D., to create the kind of effect he has been successful with in interior design.

Merging the antique with contemporary is tricky and takes skill. Just the right touches in each style are combined, exemplified in Mikeska's dining area to become really striking.

Mikeska, who owns and runs the interior design shop "Lucelle's" next door to his redecorated home, has been redoing the entire house since January. What was once a old hot pink-colored house metamorphosized into a dazzling efficiency-sized showpiece of collectables reminicient of Napoleonic France.

Emerald green drapes of silk moire set off a brilliant color scheme. Where most people might have used a beige or light brown, daring use of bright green was managed here with skill, adding color without detracting from the rest of the room.

Explaining his choice of the emerald green drapes, Mikeska noted, "I like color and color is also exemplary of the empire period."

Because the room is small, said Mikeska, he used a glass top table that would not seem to fill space so much as a heavy wood that would usually be expected to match the surrounding furniture.

The bronze chandelier is a new reproduction he said. The Bombay commode, in the far left corner, is exemplary of the pieces Mikeska has collected from all over the world. With finesse of style, he has managed to fit a large and diverse collection into a small area without causing the room to look either overcrowded or incongruous.

For instance, classic French empire chairs balance well with the contemporary glass table. A deep Oriental bowl fits nicely next to a tall bronze Napoleonic candelabra.

However, the prevading influence on the room is the French empire style from the days of Napoleon. A classic touch is the border which appears to be drapery but which is actually designed on the wallpaper.

The centerpiece on the glass table was chosen to draw out colors in the room, especially the green of the drapes and the salmon stripes in the chairs. Alongside the centerpiece are very contemporary Rosenthal crystal candlesticks and Baccarat crystal animals.

Each piece of crystal, furniture and memoralia complement each other and join to create a desired effect.

"When you begin to buy," said Mikeska, "you must decide which direction you are going to move in. Then you begin to accumulate as you go on, bit by bit."

"And you must buy good things. If you buy discreetly, slowly, you will get a fine collection. Every little piece I have, I can tell you where I got it and what it means to me. Pieces from Italy, France, etc. I have done this for years."

"Also you must have the right backing to enhance your collection. A proper place to display them."

Mikeska has not only made a decorator's paradise of his living quarters, but has also worked miracles on his yard. Overrun with caladiums, hibiscus, schefelera, geraniums and highlighted by an antique campaign day-bed of the sort French generals used in their camps during war, and strewn with countless stone planters, the garden is another world. Most of the plants, he said, stay in his hot house during winter months. "But, the rain is bringing them out beautifully," he added.

A wood partition separates the house from the road and gives a cloak of privacy to the patio area, set with black wrought-iron chairs. Rows of red geraniums decorate the outside of the partition. Inside the patio, the area, once covered with dirt, is now red brick. Mikeska laughed, "I laid every brick myself. The garden is really the most beautiful part of the house."

If so, the interior is running a very close second.

GARDEN OF EDEN — The bricked patio is an unusual site in Big Spring and was made by Mikeska himself. Plants which usually reside in his hot house have bloomed beautifully since (or rather during) the rain.

Totie Fields in good spirit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedienne Totie Fields, whose left leg was amputated because of phlebitis, is expected to spend at least another three weeks undergoing physical therapy at Cedars-Sinai Hospital.

Her manager said Miss Fields was in excellent spirits.

SLOW SUMMER DAYS — One of the best features of his patio, other than the Napoleonic campaign day bed covered with a tent at the end of his patio, is the porch swing at the side of the house. The perfect thing for lazy summer days.

Parents try to cope when kids go wrong

DEAR ABBY: We have three grown children, all raised in a good Christian home with good examples to follow. But there's not one we can brag about. They're all college graduates, but they might just as well have been high school dropouts for all the good their education has done them.

The oldest, a son, 30, plays guitar with a rock group. He dresses like a bum, his eyes are always bloodshot, he's a vegetarian, skinny as a beanpole, and he's always dead tired. He has no plans for the future, and the only good thing we can say for him is he never asks us for money.

The two girls are another story. The 27-year-old lives in Mexico with a married man. She says he's an artist. She's supposed to be teaching English to Mexicans, but she always needs money. We send her half of what she asks for because I can't sleep nights thinking she may be hungry.

The 24-year-old is living with a group of people who are into some far-out religious cult. They meditate a lot, don't believe in working for money, but she's always asking for "donations" to feed herself and her "brothers and sisters" who seem to have her hypnotized.

Where did we go wrong? And what do we tell people who ask about our children?

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: You didn't necessarily go "wrong"; your children may have. And when people ask about them, tell them the truth, or if that's too painful, tell them (truthfully) you would rather not talk about them.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl who has a crush on a 15-year-old guy named Billy.

My problem is I don't know who Billy comes over here to see because I have a twin brother and an older brother who is 16, and when Billy comes over he is friendly with all of them.

Once he came over and spent the whole time talking to my mother while she did the ironing. I was in my room and he didn't even ask where I was.

I really like this guy, but I don't want him to know it. How can I find out for sure who Billy comes here so much to see?

LIKES BILLY

DEAR LIKES: If Billy is 15, I'd say the one he pays the least attention to is the one he comes to see.

DEAR ABBY: I recently told my 10-year-old daughter the facts of life, and I gave it to her straight. She took it all with the attitude we have about sex—it is sacred in marriage, never dirty, but easily cheapened. I was a little nervous, but I won't be when it's time to talk to her two younger sisters.

I hope she will always be able to talk freely to me about everything. I thought of an idea you might want to pass on to your readers.

We bought a folder and labeled it "Teen References." Into this folder will go every letter you print about premarital sex, drugs, liquor, early marriage, overprotective or absent or uncaring parents, etc. For every letter from a teen who advocates sex or drugs will be a letter from a teen who learned the hard way.

She thinks this is a great idea. What do you think?

MRS. J.B.

DEAR MRS. J.B.: You are some wise mama. I'll pass your flattering suggestion on.

Firemen's, policemen's pension hearing slated here July 23

Big Spring has been selected as one of the sites in Texas for a public hearing on firemen's and policemen's pension systems.

E. L. Short (D-Tahoka), chairman of the House Committee on Intergovernmental Affairs, and Doyle Willis (D-Ft. Worth), chairman of the Interim Subcommittee on Firemen and Policemen Pension Systems, today announced that the Subcommittee would hold the hearing in Big Spring on July 23.

The hearing will be held in the City Council Chambers and will begin at 10 a.m. and again at 2 p.m.

The subcommittee, whose membership includes Representative Latham Boone (D-Navasota) and Representative Ruben Torres (D-Brownsville), has held previous hearings in Brownsville and Houston with another hearing scheduled for Arlington next month.

The Subcommittee was charged with a study of the firemen and policemen pension system, retirement systems, and civil service systems as a result of the large volume of legislation on this subject that was introduced in the past session of the legislature.

Representative Willis feels that the response the subcommittee has received in other cities has been exceptional and is looking forward to hearing from all interested persons, groups, and organizations in the West Texas area.

Persons eligible to attend include mayors, city councilmen, city managers, county commissioners, firemen, policemen, and other public officials from towns throughout West Texas.

The meeting applies to Big Spring fire department, but not to the police department, which is listed under Texas Municipal League rather than Civil Service. Chief Alvie Harrison of the fire department will be among those attending.

WRONG WAY — Jan Bond, 22, of Denver, figured the one-way streets sign doesn't apply to kayaks when she went for a ride on a flooded city street this week. The Adams State College Student broke out her watercraft after a record-equallying three-fourths inch of rain poured on this city in the semi-arid San Luis Valley of south-central Colorado, which normally receives only 10 inches of precipitation annually. The record was set on July 15, 1974.

Government book store now open

HOUSTON (AP) — The nation's largest Government Printing Office (GPO) bookstore has opened in a Houston shopping center.

Thomas F. McCormick, public printer of the United States, said Thursday the store, with room for 3,500 government publications, is the largest of the GPO's 24 bookstores scattered across the nation.

Other stores in the network, including five in the Washington, D.C. area, are in federal buildings. The only other bookstore in Texas is in Dallas.

The Houston facility, in College Center on the busy Gulf Freeway, has 5,000 square feet of floor space.

McCormick said the objective of making the store more accesible to the public could cause some older stores to be relocated.

"If the results of the Houston venture turn out well, it may influence whether we will relocate some existing bookstores and where new ones might be situated," he said.

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN

The Books-By-Mail service of the Howard County Library has been in operation for one full year. The system makes library facilities available to persons unable to come to the library regularly or at all. These persons, elderly, handicapped or simply unable to get reliable transporation, will find the service both convenient and useful.

All library books available to regular patrons also are available to the Books-By-Mail patrons. Patrons may request books through interlibrary loan or from the regular book shelves. In addition, the library maintains a separate paperback collection and a large-print collection especially for the Books-By-Mail program.

How does it work? Call 267-5295 or write the Howard County Library, Fourth and Scurry Streets. The clerk will need your name, address and telephone number. As soon as possible, a catalog with the special collection and instructions will be sent to you.

The books check out for three weeks and will be mailed to you free of charge. A stamped, addressed label is sent with your selections to be used returning the books in the same mailing bag. You do not pay any postage.

We are currently revising the catalog to include short descriptions of the books. The large-print books will be marked for those who find regular print tiring.

About sixty members are already taking advantage of this service. The collection of large-print books has doubled.

Fiction and nonfiction, western, mystery and biographical books are all available and more.

Live bodies 'for laughs'

NEW YORK (AP) — Want to be on the laugh track in "Barney Miller" or tell the neighbors it's your "ooh" they heard on "Gambit"? No problem. Networks need and welcome live audiences for 39 shows now on the air.

And they say you'll find it easy in most cases to get free tickets for the 17 daytime game shows and 22 nighttime situation comedies or variety shows currently appearing on CBS, NBC and ABC.

But you'll have to visit Los Angeles to see most of them personally.

Only two now come from New York, both on ABC. They're the "$10,000 Pyramid," an easy ticket, and Howard Cosell's live variety show, which ABC calls a "hot-ticket" program, meaning ducats are scarce.

In Los Angeles, CBS has 12 nighttime programs and five daytime game shows taped before live audiences. In those respective categories, the count at NBC is five and six, while it's four and five at ABC.

Irreconcilable differences were listed as the cause of the divorce.

Moods ringing cash registers

DALLAS (AP) — Two Dallas entrepreneurs believe they are about to reap a million dollars from persons wearing their feelings on their sleeves — literally.

Jerry Oakes and his business partner Bill Johnson III will soon begin selling the mood shirts as a sidekick to the multimillion dollar mood ring fad.

Oakes recently acquired the international distribution rights to a process for printing T-shirts with ink "that changes colors with the wearer's mood." The two bachelors in their 30s were two of the first distributors of the mood ring last Christmas.

The shirts will go on the market in late July or early August and will come in four styles each selling for $7, Oakes said. The designs include a butterfly with spots that change color, a thundercloud with mood-changing lightning bolts, a cartoon character with eyes that switch colors and a changeable floam with the caption, "Light My Fire."

Oakes said he thinks the shirt will sell because of the great success of the mood ring.

"There's no question that the mood ring is the hottest fad that ever hit the United States and it's still selling overseas," he said.

"The reason it sold is the initial promotion and the magic of the fact the ring is related to mood and will change with the way a person feels," Oakes said.

For the new mood shirt business, Oakes and Johnson contracted with Mr. Fine Inc. of Dallas, a garment manufacturer, to distribute them through a variety of stores.

"Dallas will be one of the first areas in the nation to have the shirts," Johnson said, "because the big chains like Penny's will test them in their regional markets before expanding nationwide, and they'll start with the Dallas area."

The partners started their Dallas company, Arminda Inc. one and one-half years ago for the ring business. Oakes said they profited from part of the 40 million mood rings sold in the United States and overseas. Japan and Europe were the most successful markets overseas, he said.

Johnson conceded that the color changes are related to temperature and that air conditioning or sunlight will affect the mood printing.

"The gimmick does depend on temperature, but it still reflects your emotions," Johnson said.

"Your emotions have a direct effect on your body temperature — like a hot, flushed face from embarrassment or hands that are cold and clammy with fear," he said.

Oakes said a guide will be attached to the shirt so buyers can interpret their colors. For example black means cold and unemotional, green is calm and steady, and blue is excited and emotional.

Jim Croce widow wants death money

DALLAS (AP) — Lawyers for the widow of singer Jim Croce have argued in federal court here that Mustang Aviation of Dallas could be responsible for a plane crash in which Croce died.

The court hearing Friday was to determine who might be liable for damages resulting from the crash.

Croce, whose hits included "Bad, Bad Leroy Brown," and four men in his music group were killed in the accident in September 1973 at the Natchitoches, La., airport.

His widow, Ingrid, and relatives of the other four are seeking $8 million in damages from Bromley Corp. of Dallas, which does business as Robert Airways and Mustang Aviation. Their suit alleges negligence on the part of both companies.

Turning it around

By WILFRID M. CALNAN,
DIRECTOR HOWARD COUNTY FAMILY SERVICE CENTER

By the time this piece is in print, I will have completed a workshop in "Education for Family Living." This preparatory to our fall and winter programs at Howard County Family Service Center. We will offer series of Family Life Education to all groups that want them.

Behind this intent is a basic conviction. Rapidly we are approaching the stage when the number of marriages in any given community in a year will be equalled by the number of divorces. Forty years of permissive parenting have resulted in juvenile waywardness and delinquency that confound us. I simply contend that all of this can be turned around within ten years.

A few years ago, after Sputnik, an American President declared that we would land on the moon within ten years. We did. If we had this capability, we must challenge ourselves to change the course of the American family within a decade.

There is the danger of oversimplification. Yet, I do think that our course is simple. We need to see marriage for what it is. Not a euphoric state in which all dreams of Utopia come true. We need to see marriage as a contract between two vastly different people. The terms of that contract are commitments to merge divergent personalities, while assuring their primary individuality, to create intimacy — a special sharing of goals and concerns.

This contract cannot be prepared for or consummated by an announcement in the society pages of the newspaper, or by an agreement with a minister to perform a ten-minute ceremony. Rather, a marriage needs to be viewed from early in life as a vocation for which we need to prepare. As children and youth, we need to learn human behavior, particularly our own. We need to learn the problem-solving process so that we can cope with the vicissitudes of life. We need to understand the true nature of human sexuality, male and female, made to join each other physically and emotionally.

All these things we can learn as we learn the basic principles of science, the vagaries of English, and the intricate lessons of history. We need to learn these things while we are young. And we can.

Recently I was thrilled when an alert high school teacher invited me to talk with five of her basic science classes. We had the poorest setting for a discussion — the sterile benches and the high stools of the laboratory. Yet, we somehow contrived to sit together to discuss the basic issues of life — sex, drugs, family, parents, step-parents, step-brothers and sisters. It wasn't easy at first, but we got into it. I could not help but wonder at the end of the day what life might have become for these young people had we done this one day a week for a whole semester.

This experience could be replicated in many groups — university, young married, the middle aged and our senior citizens.

Parents can learn how to be parents. If they can build a house and plant a garden, why not this?

We are plagued by marital unhappiness, divorce, disappointed parents, unhappy children and youth.

We can turn it around, I repeat, with 10 years.

Inventories increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a drop in retail sales, manufacturers built up their inventories in May at a healthy $1.9-billion pace that reflects confidence in the economy, according to the Commerce Department.

Inventories grew by seventenths of 1 per cent, the department reported Wednesday. That was nearly double April's $1-billion increase, and the largest surge since December 1974, when goods and raw materials in stock burgeoned by $4 billion.

That occurred at a time when manufacturers were rebuilding stockpiles after letting them dwindle because of slumping sales during the recession.

May's sales figures slipped three-tenths of 1 per cent. It was the first sales decline in 14 months, and left sales at $186.4 million.

Economists say increased inventory growth eventually leads to new jobs. Inventories were up $829 million at the wholesale level, and $58 million at retail. The jump boosted inventories to $272.5 billion.

Meanwhile, the International Monetary Fund's second gold auction in six weeks resulted in the sale of 780,000 ounces of gold for $122.05 an ounce. That was off nearly $4 from the $126 an ounce that the precious metal fetched at the fund's June 2 auction.

Ridin' fence

An Irish tale

with Marj Carpenter

Bob Gill, 84, came over from Sweetwater for the Old Settlers Reunion in Stanton last week.

He originally went to Martin County in 1900 when he was eight years old. His father, William Gill was a stone mason.

His father had been born in Ireland and for many years, one of the favorite tales in Stanton was how Gill laughed on his deathbed.

It seems that the old gentlemen was sick quite a while and people took turns sitting up with him. One man was sitting with him and looked around for something to read.

He found an old Irish tale. He read it to Gill. The story was about an Irishman who died without leaving a will. The son asked an old man named Ken Reagan to crawl in the bed and play like he was alive while he got a lawyer.

The son instructed Reagan on what to say and what to put in the will. Reagan spoke in a weak voice under the cover to the lawyer. He parceled out the land like the son had told him to do until he got to the little triangular piece of land that he himself lived on.

He suddenly diversified and said, "This land, I will and bequeath to my old friend, Ken Reagan." The teller of the tale recalled that William Gill laughed heartily at the tale, and that it was later that night that Gill died.

William Gill, father of Bob, helped construct the old courthouse at Stanton that was torn down last year for progress.

There were nine Gill children. Bob can recall the early days of construction around the courthouse. An eight-year-old boy would.

He later "worked on every ranch in the area" including the Slaughter ranch, Cotton Robertson Ranch, George Jones and many others.

BOB GILL

Bob Gill was also a wild horse breaker and recalls breaking 70 head of horses at a ranch in New Mexico "when I was 19 years old." He grinned and said ruefully, "Boy, was I important in those days."

He raised three sons and a daughter. They include Vernon Gill, on a Garden City ranch; R. L. Gill, Sweetwater; Donald Gill, Fort Sumner, N.M. and Mrs. Ruby Beinhauer, Ruidoso, N.M.

Gill recalled that he attended the convent school for a while. I had to quit school and work pretty early, he recalls. "There were a lot of us kids."

His father died when he was 11 years old. "When your father died and you were as old as 11 and a boy, you went to work. I was a cowhand at a very young age," he said quietly and added, "That's why I was so good at breaking horses by the time I was 19."

This descendant of an Irish stonemason has retained the Irish sense of humor. He was one of the earliest settlers to arrive for registration in Stanton and he enjoyed seeing every old timer that came along.

His son and daughter-in-law had brought him for the event and said, "It's good to see Dad visiting with old friends."

And that's the way it was out near Stanton last week — while ridin' fence.

Drug, booze demonstration project slated

The Permian Basin is one of two regions in Texas selected to participate in a joint demonstration project in alcoholism and drug abuse prevention. This will be a unique project which will, in essence, combine and coordinate client services in prevention, crisis intervention, and early identification.

A joint meeting of the Drug Abuse Advisory Committee and the Alcoholism Advisory Committee is scheduled for Tuesday, July 27, at 7:30 p.m., at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission office, Terminal Office Building, Midland Air Terminal.

K. E. Beahan, executive director of the Texas Commission on Alcoholism, and Sam Price, acting director, Drug Abuse Division, Texas Department of Community Affairs, will be present at this meeting to introduce this demonstration project, and to explain area involvement.

'College Type' enrollment scheduled

High school registration this year has seen a complete change in style and will feature what is called "college type."

For the first time, students will be required to come in person and select the period and teacher of his or her choice for each course.

No one will be permitted to register for a friend or relative. Those who choose to wait will be given last choice in selection of classes and instructors, according to school administrators.

The registration is set to begin Tuesday, Aug. 17 with students who will be seniors to register that morning. A senior must have earned a minimum of 45 quarter units. Anyone with less cannot register on that morning.

Juniors will register in the afternoon Tuesday, Aug. 17. Juniors must have 30 units. On Wednesday morning, Aug. 18, sophomores with a minimum of 12 quarter units may register. On that afternoon, Aug. 18, freshman may register. These are students that completed the eighth grade.

Students should have already made course selections by the time they come for registration. Most students made these selections in the spring of the school year. Those who failed to fill out course selections, or new students in town, should go by the high school office as soon as possible to make course selections prior to the registration date.

1978's the year

ATLANTA (AP) — A joint committee on Presbyterian Union has set 1978 as the year for a vote that could lead to merger of the United Presbyterian Church and the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. Southern, the nation's two largest Presbyterian bodies.
