Midland unemployment holds steady at 2.9 percent

Tall City loses first-place ranking, falls to second-lowest in state behind Amarillo

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

Midland unemployment held steady, according to April figures released Friday by the Texas Workforce Commission.

The commission reported the Midland metropolitan statistical area had an unemployment rate of 2.9 percent in April, unchanged from March and up from 2.6 percent last April.

Midland lost its place as the Texas MSA with the lowest unemployment rate, slipping to second behind Amarillo, which had a 2.7 percent rate in April. Odessa unemployment inched up to 3.8 percent from 3.7 percent. Odessa and Longview were the only MSAs to report month-over-month increases.

The number of non-agricultural jobs was unchanged at 99,100 and is well above 93,300 reported in April 2014. A 400-job loss in Midland's dominant industrial sector — mining, logging and construction — and 100-job loss in the professional and business services and the government sectors were offset by a 500-job gain in leisure and hospitality and a 100-job gain in trade, transportation and utilities.

Willie Taylor, chief officer of the commission's Workforce Solutions, Permian Basin, said that, at the Workforce Solutions offices in the 17 counties he oversees, people are coming in to file first-time unemployment claims. But he said the offices also are placing 600 to 650 people in new jobs each month.

"That's a good sign we may be more diversified economically than we think," Taylor said.

The Texas House on Friday approved a bill sponsored by Rep. Tom Craddick and authored by Sen. Kel Seliger to designate a portion of State Highway 191 as Sergeant Michael Naylor Memorial Highway, according to a press release from Craddick's office.

An hourslong standoff ensued that ended in Higgins surrendering to law enforcement officials, according to a previous Reporter-Telegram article.

Driver charged in October fatal hit-and-run

■ Bond set at $1M for felony second-degree manslaughter

From staff reports

Midland police arrested a Midland woman Thursday on suspicion of being involved in a fatal hit-and-run wreck in October, according to a city press release from city spokeswoman Sara Bustilloz.

Kelly Bradbery, 21, has been charged with felony second-degree manslaughter in the death of 27-year-old Francisco Iglecias. Bradbery was being held Friday on a $1 million bond, according to Bustilloz.

Bradbery

Iglecias' family has been notified of the arrest.

The investigation revealed that a black Camaro and Bradbery's Jeep Liberty were both traveling southbound on Midland Drive about midnight on Oct. 22. The two cars were facing a green light as they approached Neely Avenue, while Iglecias was walking in the crosswalk.

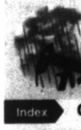

Bradbery's vehicle, which was traveling on the inside lane, allegedly hit Iglecias first, knocking him to the ground. He was then run over by the Camaro. Iglecias was pronounced dead at the scene.

Bradbery allegedly fled the scene and police put out a notice for a green SUV with damage to its front right portion, according to the release.

The driver of the Camaro stopped at the scene and was considered a secondary vehicle in the wreck, according to Bustilloz. Charges have not been brought against that driver, she said.

The lead investigator of the hit-and-run case saw a Jeep on May 16 with damage consistent with the damage to the vehicle in the hit-and-run case, according to the arrest affidavit. When the vehicle stopped, the officer spoke to the driver, who said that a friend — later identified as Bradbery — owned the car and had

Group that organized biker meeting gets proclamation

■ Waco City Council designates May as "Motorcycle Safety and Awareness Month."

By Betsy Blaney
Associated Press

WACO — Days after a biker shootout at a Waco restaurant, the same group that organized the motorcyclists' meeting that turned violent received a proclamation from the Waco City Council designating May as "Motorcycle Safety and Awareness Month."

The council issued the proclamation Tuesday, two days after nine people were killed in the shootout at a Twin Peaks restaurant in Waco. The proclamation was to be presented to Steven Cochran on behalf of the Confederation of Clubs, which had organized the Sunday biker meeting, but Cochran decided not to attend the City Council meeting, Waco City Secretary Esmeralda Hudson said Friday.

Cochran declined an interview with The Associated Press on Friday, but posted a picture of the proclamation on his Facebook page. In his post, he said he and Sandra Lynch accepted the proclamation in absentia.

Lynch couldn't attend because she is one of about 170 people who were arrested after Sunday's shootout. She remains jailed on a charge of engaging in organized criminal activity.

Investigators have said the shooting began during an apparent confrontation between two rival motorcycle gangs, then spilled into the parking lot. Police said they returned fire after being shot at.

Some bikers have complained that police acted too hastily in making arrests and scooped up riders who had nothing to do with the violence.

In his Facebook post, Cochran praised Waco City Council members for their support of motorcycle safety but complained about the Waco Police Department's characterization of the bikers at Sunday's meeting.

"I felt it was prudent to not have a public display at the city counsel meeting after all being hardened gangsters according to the Waco PD we didn't want to put anyone in harm's way quite unlike the local police department did at Twin Peaks," he wrote.

Hudson said the city issues the "Motorcycle Safety and Awareness Month" proclamation annually. Nothing was said about the proclamation at Tuesday's meeting, she said.

Also Friday, Texas lawmakers approved motorcycle safety legislation that supporters say was going to be discussed at the bikers' meeting.

The measure, which now heads to Republican Gov. Greg Abbott, would funnel some of the state's motorcycle-related fees to state Department of Transportation campaigns that remind motorists to share the road and look twice for motorcycles. Some fees already help boost the Texas Department of Public Safety's motorcycle education efforts.

"We need to be more visible to the general public, which these campaigns do," said Ty Yocham, who was among five men wearing leather jackets and vests who watched from the Texas House gallery as the chamber approved the bill.

The men advocated for the legislation in place of three bikers who helped write the legislation but were among those jailed following the shootout.

Things to know about the next Texas budget

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The first state budget under Republican Gov. Greg Abbott spends lavishly on border security, defunds one of Rick Perry's signature initiatives and includes the biggest tax cuts in a decade. The House and Senate are expected to give final approval next week to the roughly $210 billion spending bill.

A new budget is the only thing the Legislature is constitutionally required to pass before adjourning June 1. Here's a look at some of the highlights:

■ Border security

Perry spent nearly $1 billion over the previous decade putting armored gun boats, spy planes and even the National Guard on the Texas-Mexico border. But it took Abbott only five months to write a check for nearly that amount: More than $800 million is set for border security, which was a dominant issue for Republican candidates in 2014.

■ Public education

Texas classrooms are getting roughly an extra $1.5 billion — that works out to about an extra $100 per student after a relatively quiet session on school funding after the issue dominated the Legislature in 2011 and 2013. But it could roar back to life soon enough. An ongoing lawsuit over how the state pays for education remains in the hands of the Texas Supreme Court, and a ruling later this year could force lawmakers back to Austin to design a new school-finance system.

■ Planned parenthood

Two years after passing some of the toughest abortion restrictions in the country, Republicans are now removing Planned Parenthood from a state program that provides cancer screenings for low-income women. The decision severs funding for more than a dozen Planned Parenthood clinics that don't provide abortions on-site. Planned Parenthood got about $1.2 million in taxpayer funds under the cancer screening program last year.

■ Tax cuts

A $3.8 billion package of tax cuts for businesses and homeowners is less than what Abbott and other GOP lawmakers had bragged was possible this session. Homeowners would save roughly $120 a year on property taxes, though critics say those savings will be eaten up by rising appraisals.

■ Attendants for the disabled

Disabled-rights activists blocked the doors to Abbott's office this week in protest of wages for attendants who help the disabled with their day-to-day lives. Although Abbott, who has used a wheelchair since 1984 after an accident left him paralyzed from the waist down, encouraged advocates by calling for more funding it fell short of the $10 hourly wage they sought.

Open carry handgun bill

Texas Republicans pushing to pass the two major firearms bills of the legislative session have stumbled amid efforts to restrict police powers over people carrying handguns.

Senate leaders called for a Friday vote on allowing licensed open carry of handguns. They also announced a deal with the House to allow concealed handguns in college classrooms.

But quick passage of the open carry bill unraveled under bipartisan attempts to ban police from demanding that people carrying guns show their permits to do so. Supporters say it prevents police from harassing law-abiding citizens and racial profiling of minorities.

Opponents, though, counter that police must be allowed to figure out who is legally carrying a handgun.

The debate comes less than a week after a biker shootout in Waco killed nine.

Veteran education

A Texas lawmaker has pushed back a vote on a much-watched bill that would make cuts to a free college tuition program for veterans' children.

The bill — meant to address the program known as the Hazlewood Act's rising costs — was briefly discussed Friday. But Republican Rep. John Zerwas postponed debate until Sunday, citing the measure's "complexity and emotion."

Before floor discussion even began, Democratic Rep. Joe Farias made an impassioned plea opposing Zerwas' bill. The Vietnam veteran told colleagues, "Think twice, and open your heart to those that have endured the most."

Already Senate-approved, the bill tightens veteran eligibility requirements, cuts the number of free tuition hours and stipulates that benefits expire.

The program's cost to Texas public universities has climbed from $24.7 million in fiscal year 2010 to $169 million last fiscal year.

On deck

Both the House and Senate convene this morning for a joint session commemorating Memorial Day. Gov. Greg Abbott will give an address as officials honor Texas veterans killed over the past year.

Quote of the day

"My understanding is your bill creates the official state crustacean for the state of Texas. Really?" — Rep. Matt Rinaldi, R-Irving, to Dickinson Republican Rep. Wayne Faircloth. Faircloth's resolution designated the Texas gulf shrimp as the state crustacean passed the House on Friday.

Local ban nullified by state, fracturing resumes in Denton

Associated Press

DENTON — A North Texas city whose fracturing ban prompted lawmakers to limit such local power says a driller has revealed plans to resume fracturing gas wells in the city.

According to documents obtained through an open records request, the Denton Record-Chronicle reported Vantage Energy notified the city early Tuesday of its plans to begin fracturing on Denton's west side, beginning next Wednesday. The notice came the morning after Gov. Greg Abbott signed House Bill 40 into law Monday afternoon, limiting local authority to restrict fracturing.

During last November's election, Denton voters banned fracturing within the borders of the city of about 125,000 residents, eliciting immediate vows by oil and gas drillers to topple that ban. The state and the drillers filed lawsuits challenging the ban in court, and the Legislature fulfilled the drillers' vows last week.

The Denton ban remains on the books, but Mayor Chris Watts said the new state law likely renders it unenforceable and would likely stymie any effort to block Vantage plans to finish its gas wells.

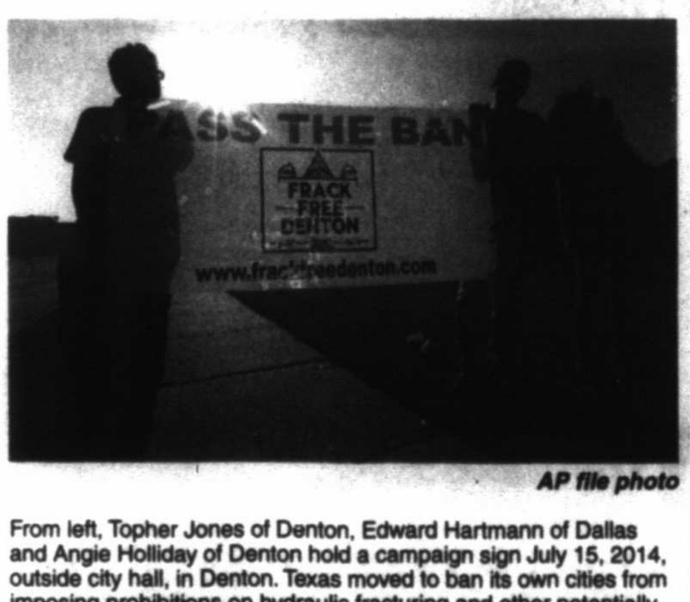

"It's my understanding we don't plan on seeking an injunction," Watts told the Record-Chronicle. As for the lawsuits still on the court dockets, city officials will be discussing those soon, Watts said.

"Where we go from here hasn't been determined," he said.

A call and email to a Vantage energy spokeswoman by The Associated Press were not returned.

The new state law has yet to be tested, however. "That's the whole fun part of HB 40 — figuring out what it is and what it isn't," Watts said.

As for the grassroots fight in Denton against fracturing, Frack Free Denton President Adam Briggle said that fight will continue.

Girl, 14, gets 40 years in custody for drowning baby

A 14-year-old Dallas girl has been sentenced to the maximum 40 years in custody for drowning an infant she was watching.

A juvenile court judge in Dallas on Friday sentenced the teen, who was not tried as an adult on the capital murder charge.

The teen earlier acknowledged being "responsible," the term used in juvenile courts, for the January death of 2-month-old Justice Hall.

Authorities believe the teen didn't want her mother to adopt Justice. The family kept the baby because the infant's mother was in jail.

The teen's mother was at work when her daughter drowned the baby in a bowl of water.

A juvenile court judge will decide, before the teen turns 19, whether she'll be paroled or be moved to an adult prison to finish her sentence.

Hispanic ranchers cite discrimination in grazing suit

By Susan Montoya Bryan
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — It's up to a federal judge to decide whether to let a case move forward in which a group of Hispanic ranchers is suing the U.S. Forest Service over a decision to limit grazing on historic land grant areas in northern New Mexico.

The ranchers claim the agency is discriminating by trying to push them from land that has been worked by their families for centuries.

U.S. District Judge James Browning heard arguments Thursday on a motion by the Forest Service to dismiss the case. He's expected to make a decision by September.

At stake, ranchers say, is a piece of Hispanic culture and the economic viability of several northern New Mexico communities that depend on access to surrounding lands for everything from grazing to firewood.

Simeon Herskovits, an attorney for the ranchers, argued that the Forest Service was using the motion to short-circuit a full-fledged discussion of the issues raised by the case. He also suggested that the agency failed to understand the intrinsic cultural connection the ranchers have to the land.

"There's a very special relationship, history and heritage that exists in parts of northern New Mexico. This must be considered carefully," he said.

The lawsuit centers on a 2010 decision to cut grazing by 18 percent on the Jarita Mesa and Alamosa grazing allotments, which are part of an area recognized by the federal government for special treatment aimed at benefiting land grant heirs.

The Forest Service has argued that management practices by the ranchers contributed to overuse of meadows in the two allotments and that fences were either poorly maintained or in disrepair.

The ranchers disputed those claims, pointing to what they called the agency's failure to manage wild horses and elk grazing in the area. They said the decision to curb livestock grazing was retribution for them speaking out about Forest Service management practices.

Defense attorney Andrew Smith raised questions about whether some of the ranchers could sue the agency in the first place. He said some didn't hold grazing permits and others didn't file administrative appeals when the district ranger first issued her decision to limit grazing.

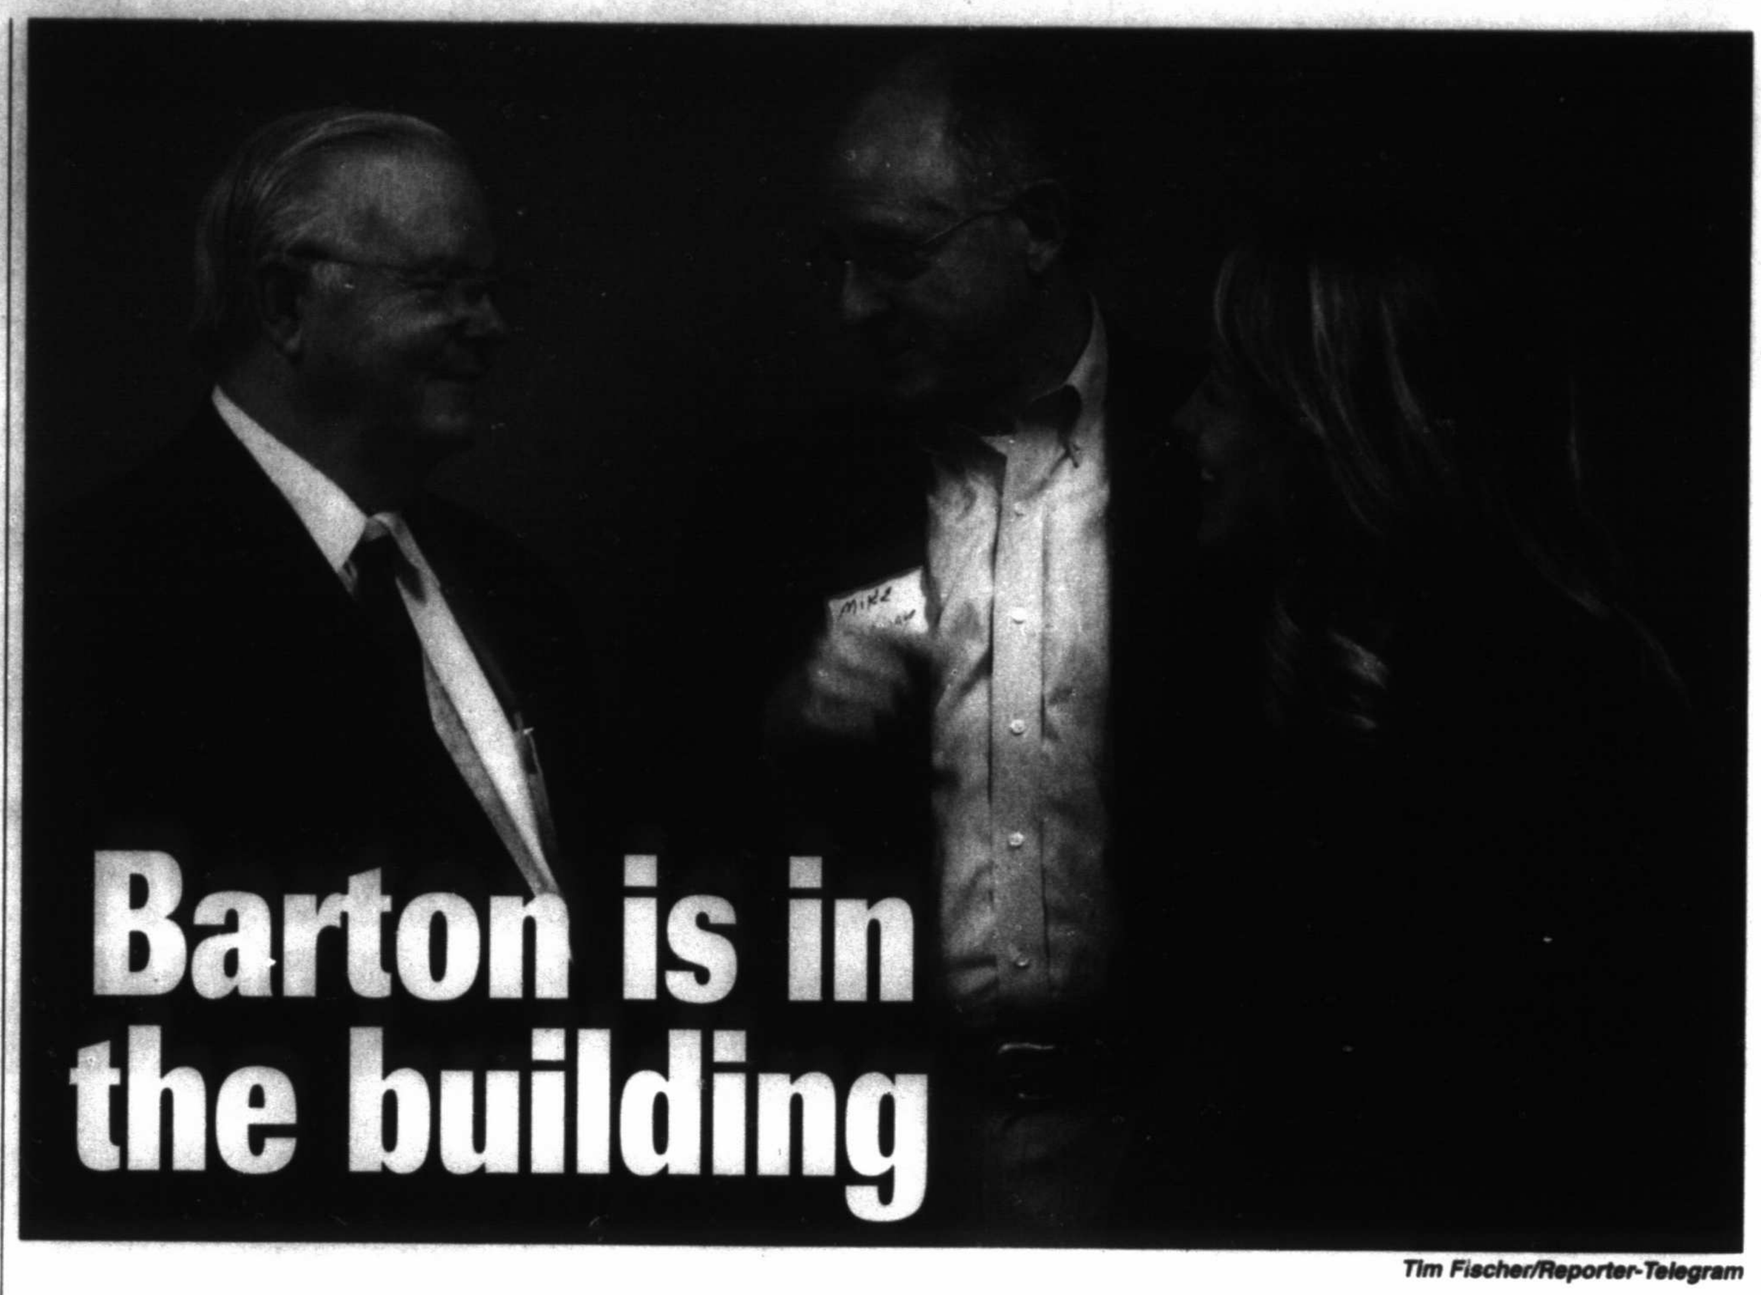

Smith also argued there was no evidence to show that limiting the business of one rancher would affect the community.

David Sanchez of the Northern New Mexico Stockmen's Association said half of the grazing fees collected by the federal government come back to the county to fund schools and other projects.

Sanchez said the area is rural and traditional industries such as ranching and woodcutting are the only source of income for some families.

"What's left for these people? If the government wants them all on food stamps, then take away their grazing permits," he said. "The government is attacking poor people. It's like David and Goliath."

The ranchers' lawsuit chronicles a history in which they say the property rights of Hispanics have been ignored and an institutional bias has been allowed to continue despite the Forest Service's obligation to accommodate their dependency on the land.

El Paso police shoot, kill man who confronted them with gun

Associated Press

EL PASO — El Paso police say two officers fatally shot an armed 22-year-old man after he attempted to get inside a children's day care center.

Police spokesman Sgt. Chris Mears said officers on Thursday morning shot the man, who wasn't identified, after he ignored commands and made a "threatening motion" with his gun toward them.

The man died at the scene. It's the third fatal shooting by El Paso police this year.

Officers had responded after receiving a report of a man who appeared to be distraught and holding a gun to his head while walking behind a business. Several schools nearby were placed on lockdown as a precaution after being alerted by police.

"We do know that literally seconds before the officers' arrival, the subject had been banging on the back door, trying to make entry into the day care," Mears said. "And so this situation, as tragic as it is that the man died here at the scene, could have been much more tragic."

Some residents near the Kids Campus and Daycare said they heard several gunshots. Edmundo Lopez said he and his wife were home when they heard "two or three shots."

Police didn't say what type of gun the man had or how many times he was shot. The officers, whose names weren't released, have been placed on administrative duty.

One officer has been with the department for six years and the other for around five months, Mears said. The shooting remains under investigation.

In January, police fatally shot 33-year-old Andy Martinez after he displayed a handgun during a traffic stop. In April, police fatally shot 22-year-old Erick Emmanuel Salas Sanchez when he used a metal object to threaten officers responding to a burglary call.

No indictment for officer in fatal shooting

GALVESTON — A Southeast Texas police officer will not face charges in the 2014 fatal shooting of an armed man during a fight outside a bar.

A Galveston County grand jury on Thursday declined to indict Texas City Officer Christopher Ham.

Authorities say Ham fatally shot Carlton Smith Jr. on Dec. 26 outside a Texas City nightclub as the bar closed and a fight broke out in the parking lot. Investigators say a woman had a gun and fired into the air. Smith then obtained the weapon from her.

Surveillance video shows Ham, who was the first officer on the scene, twice ordered Smith to drop the gun before the suspect fired into the nearby crowd. Ham then opened fire, fatally shooting Smith.

Santa Fe teacher won't face charges for book-throwing

Associated Press

SANTA FE, N.M. — Prosecutors dismissed child abuse charges Friday against a Santa Fe middle school principal and teacher over allegations the teacher threw paperback books that hit two students.

In a case that pitted school officials against police, the 1st Judicial District attorney's office said in a court filing that De Vargas Middle School teacher Marcy Slaughter and Principal Marc Ducharme would not be prosecuted. District Attorney Angela Pacheco said Slaughter's alleged action qualifies as a petty misdemeanor battery, but prosecuting Slaughter "serves no legitimate purpose," Pacheco wrote.

Pacheco is, however, requiring Slaughter get anger management counseling.

A lawyer listed as Slaughter's defense attorney in the case did not immediately return a request for comment Friday.

DPS increases patrols

The Texas Department of Public Safety has increased trooper patrols this Memorial Day. Troopers will be looking for drunken drivers, and speeding, seat belt and other traffic violators statewide through Monday.

Last year during the Memorial Day weekend, DPS troopers arrested 413 drunken drivers and issued 5,439 speeding citations, 1,053 seat belt and child safety restraint tickets and cited 684 drivers for driving without insurance. Additionally, troopers made 182 fugitive arrests and 168 felony arrests.

DPS is participating in the "Click It or Ticket" enforcement campaign to encourage drivers and passengers to comply with state seat belt laws.

An outpouring of support came from the community in the wake of Naylor's murder, which was the first line-of-duty death in Midland County Sheriff's Office history. More than $84,000 was raised for Naylor's widow, Denise, from private donations and fundraisers, according to a previous Reporter-Telegram article.

As passed by the Senate and the House, Senate Bill 2041, will require the Texas Department of Transportation — subject to a grant or donation of funds — to design, construct and erect markers on the highway in honor of Naylor.

At a board meeting last week, members said they're still hiring skilled workers such as truck drivers and welders, Taylor said.

"The good thing is, the market will be good for those students coming out of college or coming out of high school and wanting a summer job," he said.

For the 12 months from April 2014 to April 2015, Midland added 5,800 new jobs for a 6.2 percent growth rate. Of those, 2,100 were in the trade, transportation and utilities sector and 1,700 in the mining, logging and construction sector. Another 1,000 jobs were added in the leisure and hospitality sector.

Midland's civilian labor force held steady, losing 100 jobs from March to April. However, Taylor said both the Midland and Odessa school districts have reported losing students.

Taylor said he will be closely watching the May report.

"If we don't see a big jump in May, that means the market is holding steady," he said.

Statewide, the unemployment rate held steady at 4.2 percent , the lowest since July 2007. Texas had seven straight months of jobless rate declines through March. In April 2014, statewide unemployment was 5.2 percent.

Texas added an estimated 287,000 seasonally adjusted jobs over the past year, according to the commission.

The highest unemployment rate was in McAllen-Edinburg-Mission at 7.3 percent.

told him the damage had occurred in a parking lot months before.

When police picked up Bradbery for further questioning, she admitted to being involved in the Oct. 22 crash, according to the affidavit.

She was traveling between 50 and 55 miles per hour in a 40-mile-per-hour zone. As she approached a red light at Neely Avenue, the light turned green and she continued southbound but did not reduce her speed. Only when she entered the intersection did she see Iglecias, who she then hit, according to the affidavit. Bradbery saw him get hit by the Camaro and she continued driving, according to the affidavit.

At one point she turned around and headed back to the scene, but when she saw people running out to assist Iglecias, she fled to her residence, according to the affidavit.

If convicted of the second-degree felony, Bradbery faces between two and 20 years in prison.

DC authorities: Ex-con had help in wealthy family's slaying

By Jessica Gresko
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An ex-convict denied bond on a murder charge Friday had help from others holding a family captive inside their mansion for at least 18 hours, authorities said, and their investigation is continuing.

During their ordeal, the business executive and his wife told others to stay away — even ordering a pizza deliverer to leave two pies at the door — as they frantically arranged for $40,000 in cash to be dropped off at the home.

But once four neat stacks of $100 bills were left on the seat of a red sports car in the family's garage, Daron Dylon Wint brutally struck and stabbed Savvas Savopoulos, the CEO of the American Iron Works company where he had once worked as a welder, Wint's charging document said.

Savopoulos' wife, Amy, their 10-year-old son Philip and their housekeeper Veralicia Figueroa also were killed, and then the house was set on fire with matches and a flammable liquid.

The fire began on the queen-sized mattress where the boy's body was stabbed and burned, authorities said.

Firefighters found the adults' bodies in the next room. Evidence shows the women suffered "blunt force and sharp force trauma" before the $4.5 million mansion was set on fire.

Authorities linked what may have been two different men to Amy Savopoulos' blue Porsche 911 the day of the killings. One, "with short, well-groomed hair," was spotted driving erratically away from the crime scene. Another, wearing a dark hoodie, was videotaped carrying a bucket near where the Porsche was set on fire later that day.

The pizza gave Wint away. His DNA was found on the crust of a partially-eaten slice of pepperoni, one of two pizzas ordered by Amy Savopoulos the night of May 13 while the group was "being held against their will," an affidavit said.

A woman believed to be Amy Savopoulos paid for the pizzas by credit card and told the delivery person to leave the food on the porch, because she was "nursing her sick child" and would not come to the door, the document says.

Wint, who was tracked down by U.S. Marshals and arrested Thursday night with two other men and three women, appeared in a white jumpsuit in court Friday.

A court document said authorities believe the killings "required the presence and assistance of more than one person." None of the people detained with Wint were immediately charged with any crimes.

Wint is being represented by Natalie Lawson, a public defender. His defense argued that authorities lack probable cause, since a suspect seen driving the Porsche had short hair. Wanted posters issued while Wint was a fugitive showed him with long hair.

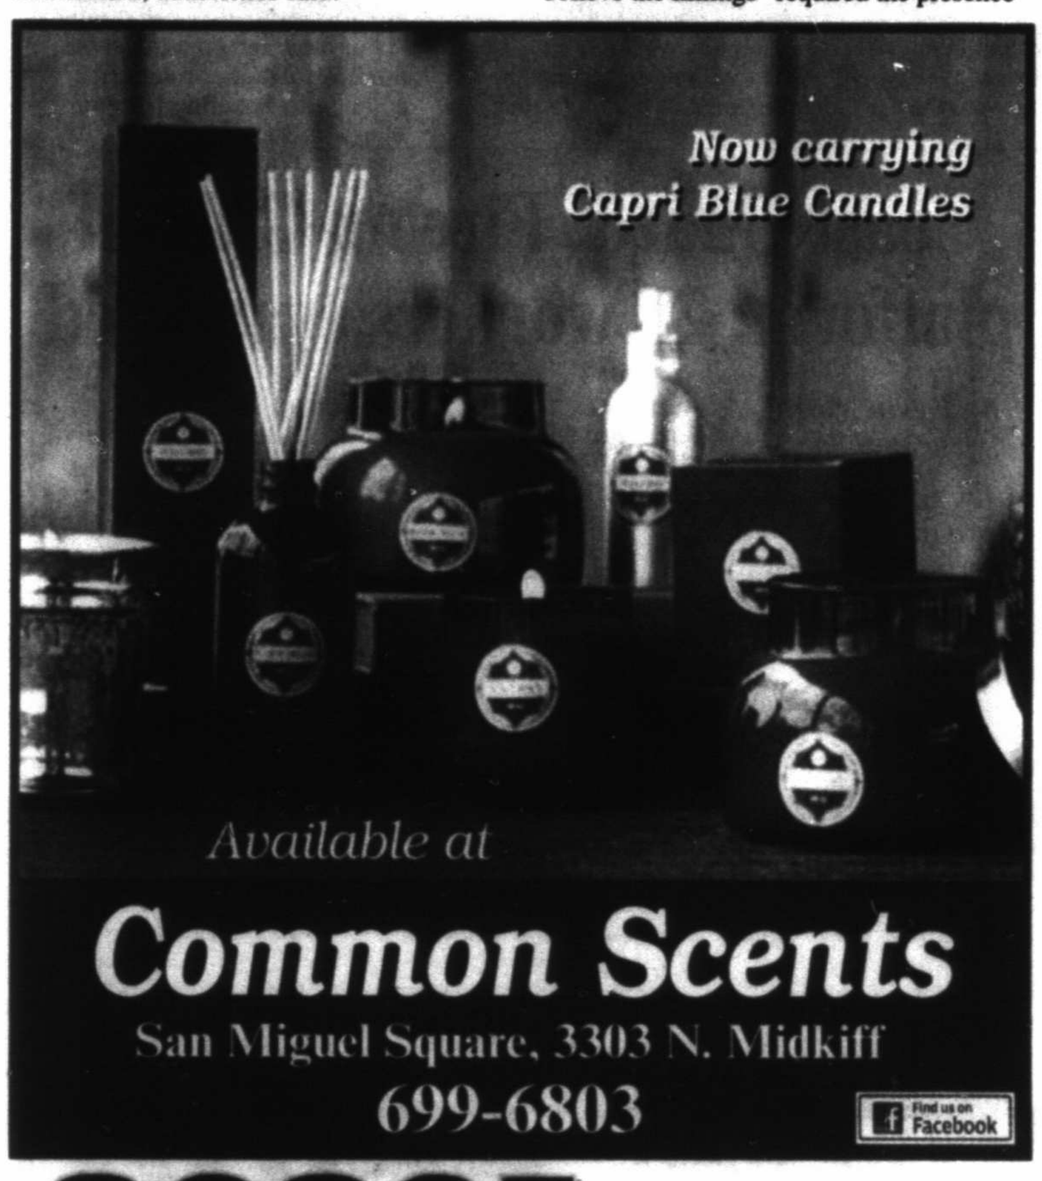

D.C. Superior Court Judge Errol Arthur agreed with Assistant U.S. Attorney Emily Miller to deny bail, noting that Wint was arrested with some of the missing money, and that the DNA from the pizza ties him to the slayings.

U.S. marshals and police had tracked Wint to New York and back before dozens of officers swarmed a car and truck in the nation's capital, arresting the whole group without a fight.

"We had overwhelming numbers and force," Robert Fernandez, commander of the U.S. Marshal Service's Capital Area Regional Fugitive Task Force, told The Associated Press on Friday. "They completely submitted immediately."

"I don't think they knew we were tailing them until the moment we swarmed in on them," said Fernandez.

The truck, which belongs to Amerit Fleet Solutions, is a rolling garage equipped to service vehicles away from fixed locations. Spokeswoman Karen Vinton said the California-based company is cooperating with authorities.

CALIFORNIA

Oil shouldn't spoil vacations for beach tourists

GOLETA — Images of sticky black beaches and stories of the stink of oil from a broken coastal pipeline shouldn't force canceled plans for the vast majority of tourists planning ocean vacations in California.

People who had immediate plans at two popular state-owned beaches — Refugio and El Capitan — need to make new ones, as those two spots in the immediate line of the oil spill in Santa Barbara County are closed through Memorial Day weekend and the coast highway next to them has seen slowdowns for the cleanup operations.

However, they represent just a segment of the beaches in Santa Barbara County, the pristine and often pricey stretch of coastline whose boosters bill it as "America's Riviera."

The tourism group Visit Santa Barbara and its members are trying to spread the word that almost all of the area, including every hotel and resort, is open for business, spokeswoman Karna Hughes said Thursday.

"The spill hasn't reached the waters off Santa Barbara," Hughes said.

The slick from the pipeline, which burst and spewed into the ocean on Tuesday, now covers nine miles of ocean, but it's diluting as it spreads and is still 15 miles from Santa Barbara itself.

A handful of reports of bits of oil reaching further south may be the naturally occurring seepage that happens in the oil-rich area.

"There are some scattered tar balls but those may not even be associated with this spill," U.S. Coast Guard Capt. Jennifer Williams said at a news conference Thursday night.

Business leaders throw support behind coal plant proposal

ALBUQUERQUE — Business leaders on Thursday outlined the economic devastation they say could come if New Mexico regulators fail to approve a plan to shut down part of a decades-old coal-fired power plant to meet a federal mandate.

The Public Regulation Commission is close to deciding whether to approve a plan by Public Service Co. of New Mexico to close part of the San Juan Generating Plant and replace it with a mix of more coal along with nuclear, natural gas and solar power.

Members of the Association of Commerce and Industry, the Albuquerque Hispano Chamber of Commerce, Four Corners Economic Development and other groups are siding with the utility.

Coast Guard: Fire on Gulf oil platform; 28 workers evacuated

By Kevin Mcgill
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — An early morning fire forced evacuation of 28 workers from an oil rig off Louisiana's coast early Friday.

The fire was still burning Friday evening, the Coast Guard and an environmentalist who flew over the site said.

No injuries were reported. Workers were evacuated by an offshore supply vessel that reported the fire at 2:50 a.m. in state waters near Breton Island off Louisiana's southeastern coast, the Coast Guard said in a news release.

Texas Petroleum Investment Co., the owner and operator of the platform, estimated that no more than 120 barrels of crude oil — about 5,040 gallons — were stored on the platform. Coast Guard officials later estimated the maximum potential release at 130 barrels, or 5,460 gallons. The Coast Guard had earlier worried that storage tanks on the platform were filled to their capacity of 168,000 gallons.

Authorities hoped to avoid a spill, but skimmers and oil containment boom were being dispatched to the area in case they were needed, the Coast Guard said in an afternoon news release.

Early Coast Guard reports said there was a light sheen of oil stretching for more than a mile in the area of the platform after the fire.

"There was definitely a sheen coming off of it, but I've seen a lot worse," Jonathan Henderson, an organizer with the environmental organization Gulf Restoration Network, said after a flight over the site.

"The production platform where the fire occurred gathers oil and then pumps it through a pipeline, so there is little oil stored on site and all wells feeding the platform have been shut down," David Marguiles, spokesman for Texas Petroleum Investment, said in an email.

The statement said a compressor on the platform is believed to have caught fire.

A STORY OF VICTORY
A SONG OF MARK BERRYHILL

She is young and so exceedingly beautiful, and yet maturity is walking with her.
Her eyes are fixed steadfastly upon her Heavenly Father, and He is so very attentive to her prayers.
The beauty within her heart has yet to be painted, and yet the Master is ever presently ready to create.
Her brother on the other hand is young and strong and so very handsome.
The love God possesses for His lambs is greater than either the realm of space or that of time, His love for His children as well as for His creation is incomprehensible.
The favor of God is a gift extended to His children for only one reason, each one of you are the reason for His existence.
At conception the journey of life begins, and likewise at conception the mortal body begins a race towards death.
Although physical appearance is so very fleeting,
the spiritual beauty of hearts knows no death,
His grace and His blood are Victorious!

In the name of the Father, and of the Son,
and of the Holy Spirit.
Amen, and Amen.

Senators sing blues over impasse; GOP hopefuls stuck in DC

By Laurie Kellman
Associated Press

"It's just a great happy event, with people sitting on the bank having dinner, having a glass of wine and looking out over the river. I think I'm not the only one who'll be ready to go home."

Sen. Lamar Alexander, speaking about his plans for after the Senate's impasse

WASHINGTON — Two senators have a plane to catch to Cuba, others were hoping to impress Republican presidential primary voters and then there's Sen. Lamar Alexander, who is slated to deliver a sunset piano performance of "Ol' Man River" on the banks of the Mississippi.

The Senate's slow-motion amble toward Memorial Day break threatened all that.

"It's not the weather; it's the Senate that's the problem," said Alexander, the Tennessee Republican and former governor, as he waited out the impasse in his office Friday. On a borrowed Senate piano, he tapped out "The Memphis Blues," with a wink, eager to head home for the performance Saturday with the Memphis Orchestra. He's got seats on two separate plane flights home booked for today.

"I," he resolved, "will be there."

Beneath the lofty rhetoric about constitutional rights and the U.S. role in international commerce lay more immediate priorities for senators: How to somehow resolve disputes over trade and government surveillance in time to leave town for campaigning, overseas trips and a musical performance.

Sen. Tom Udall, D-N.M., cooled his heels on Capitol Hill just hours before he was to lead a congressional delegation to Cuba. Also up in the air: Sen. John McCain's plans to lead colleagues on a trip to Vietnam on the 20th anniversary of the normalization of diplomatic relations, and to Singapore. Sen. Ted Cruz's father spoke for him at the Southern Republican Leadership Conference in Oklahoma on Friday, while two other GOP presidential hopefuls, Sens. Lindsey Graham and Marco Rubio, sent taped addresses to the event.

Nothing seems to move the Senate as urgently as a looming vacation and all of the campaigning, foreign trips and free time that implies. Yet a full day after the House voted to pass or extend the policies in question, the Senate was still lunching, talking and meandering around the Capitol — and talking some more.

At issue Friday were extending the expiring provisions in the Patriot Act that give the National Security Agency its surveillance power, extending transportation funding for two months and giving President Barack Obama authority to negotiate a sweeping trade agreement with Pacific nations.

Late Friday night, the Senate passed the trade measure but struggled to agree on how to move ahead on the surveillance legislation.

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., deployed a well-used trick: threatening to stay in session until the remaining issues are resolved, even if that means taking a bite out of the weekend.

"I want to remind everybody we're going to finish this bill before we leave," McConnell said Thursday evening from the Senate well, making eye contact with each of the colleagues gathered around him. "There's a path forward if people want to take it, that could complete all of this work at a reasonable time ... or we can make it difficult, but the end won't change. And so I would just encourage at least some level of cooperation here."

As the hours ticked away, Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy, meeting his wife, Marcelle, by the Senate subway trains, shrugged and said he hoped to visit the couple's grandkids in Vermont this weekend. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, rolled his eyes and chuckled as he rode the subway back to his office, his only plans to return around 5 p.m. for procedural votes.

Across Constitution Avenue in the Dirksen Senate Office Building, Alexander tickled the keys of an instrument he's played since he was 4. He's played the AutoZone Sunset Symphony Grand Finale twice before — in 1996, the year he ran for president, and in 2008.

"It's just a great happy event, with people sitting on the bank having dinner, having a glass of wine and looking out over the river," Alexander said. "I think I'm not the only one who'll be ready to go home."

Obama signs bill giving Congress a say on Iran nuclear deal

By Jim Kuhnhenn
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Though he once vigorously opposed its involvement, President Barack Obama signed legislation Friday that gives Congress the power to review and potentially reject a nuclear deal with Iran.

Achieving a deal with Iran is a central element of Obama's foreign policy ambitions, and the new law imposes conditions on his ability to act on his own. He signed the measure without ceremony Friday at the White House.

Negotiators from the U.S., China, France, Russia, Great Britain and Germany are seeking a deal with Tehran by the end of June. Israel and some Persian Gulf nations worry Iran is simply delaying its nuclear ambitions to get economic sanctions lifted.

The legislation would bar Obama from waiving congressional sanctions for at least 30 days while lawmakers examine any final deal. Congress would have to pass a resolution of disapproval to reject an agreement, an action Obama likely would veto. Obama had initially threatened to veto legislation that placed conditions that Iran would never accept.

On Friday, speaking to a Jewish congregation in Washington, Obama sought to offer assurances that he wanted an ironclad compact.

"I will not accept a bad deal," he said. "This deal will have my name on it, so nobody has a bigger personal stake in making sure that it delivers on its promise."

Sen. Bob Corker, the Tennessee Republican who chairs the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and helped write the legislation, said the Obama administration must make sure it addresses concerns raised by Congress.

"Our negotiators should take advantage of the added leverage to force further concessions from the Iranians so that any agreement reached is verifiable, enforceable and can assure the American people Iran will not be able to develop a nuclear weapon," he said.

Obama also signed legislation that prevents the government from subjecting death benefits for the families of fallen police officers to federal income tax. Sponsors of the bill, which received unanimous support in the House and Senate, said the law would ensure that the families of public safety officers killed on duty receive their full benefits.

Clinton got now-classified Benghazi info on private email

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton received information on her private email server about the deadly attack on U.S. diplomatic facilities in Benghazi that has now been classified.

The email in question, forwarded to Clinton by her deputy chief of staff, Jake Sullivan, relates to reports of arrests in Libya of possible suspects in the attack.

Because the information was not classified at the time the email was sent, no laws were violated. But Friday's redaction shows that Clinton received information considered sensitive on her unsecured personal server, which came to light just as she was beginning her presidential campaign.

Clinton, campaigning in New Hampshire, said Friday she was aware that the FBI wanted some of the email to be classified, "but that doesn't change the fact all of the information in the emails was handled appropriately."

Asked if she was concerned it was on a private server, she replied, "No."

The information was not classified at the time the email was sent but was upgraded from "unclassified" to "secret" on Friday at the request of the FBI, according to State Department officials, speaking on condition of anonymity because they weren't authorized to discuss the decision. They said 23 words of the Nov. 18, 2012, message were redacted from Friday's release of 296 emails totaling 896 pages to protect information that could harm national security and damage foreign relations.

Officials who received the email have been informed that the 23 words are now classified as "secret" and that they should take appropriate measures to protect it in any files they may have, the officials said.

About 40 dead in firefight on ranch, Mexican official says

By E. Eduardo Castillo and Mark Stevenson
Associated Press

ECUANDUREO, Mexico — About 40 people were killed Friday in what authorities described as a fierce gunbattle between suspected drug traffickers and federal forces on a ranch in western Mexico, the deadliest such confrontation in recent memory.

Almost all the dead were suspected criminals, said a Federal Police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to talk with journalists. Unconfirmed reports said at least one police officer died.

Few details on the reported gunbattle had been released, but photographs from the scene show bodies, some with semi-automatic rifles and others without weapons, lying in fields, near farm equipment and on a blood-stained patio strewn with clothes, mattresses and sleeping bags.

Video obtained by The Associated Press showed federal police coming under fire and bodies strewn throughout a ranch, known as Rancho del Sol, according to a local police official in the town of Puerto de Vargas. The official wouldn't give his full name to the AP but said his department received a report of the confrontation from fellow police in the neighboring town of Ecuandureo and was told to keep residents calm.

The confrontation started when federal police officers tried to pull over a truck on the highway near the ranch, and as they got close people inside the truck opened fire, Michoacan Gov. Salvador Jara told Radio Formula.

According to an account of events circulated among federal police units, the first report of gunfire came in at about 8 a.m. Friday. The government dispatched special forces and a Black Hawk helicopter as reinforcements.

According to the federal police account, which was not immediately confirmed by top officials, units confiscated dozens of high-caliber weapons and a rocket launcher after the shootout. There were also six burned vehicles that sent huge plumes of black smoke visible to nearby areas.

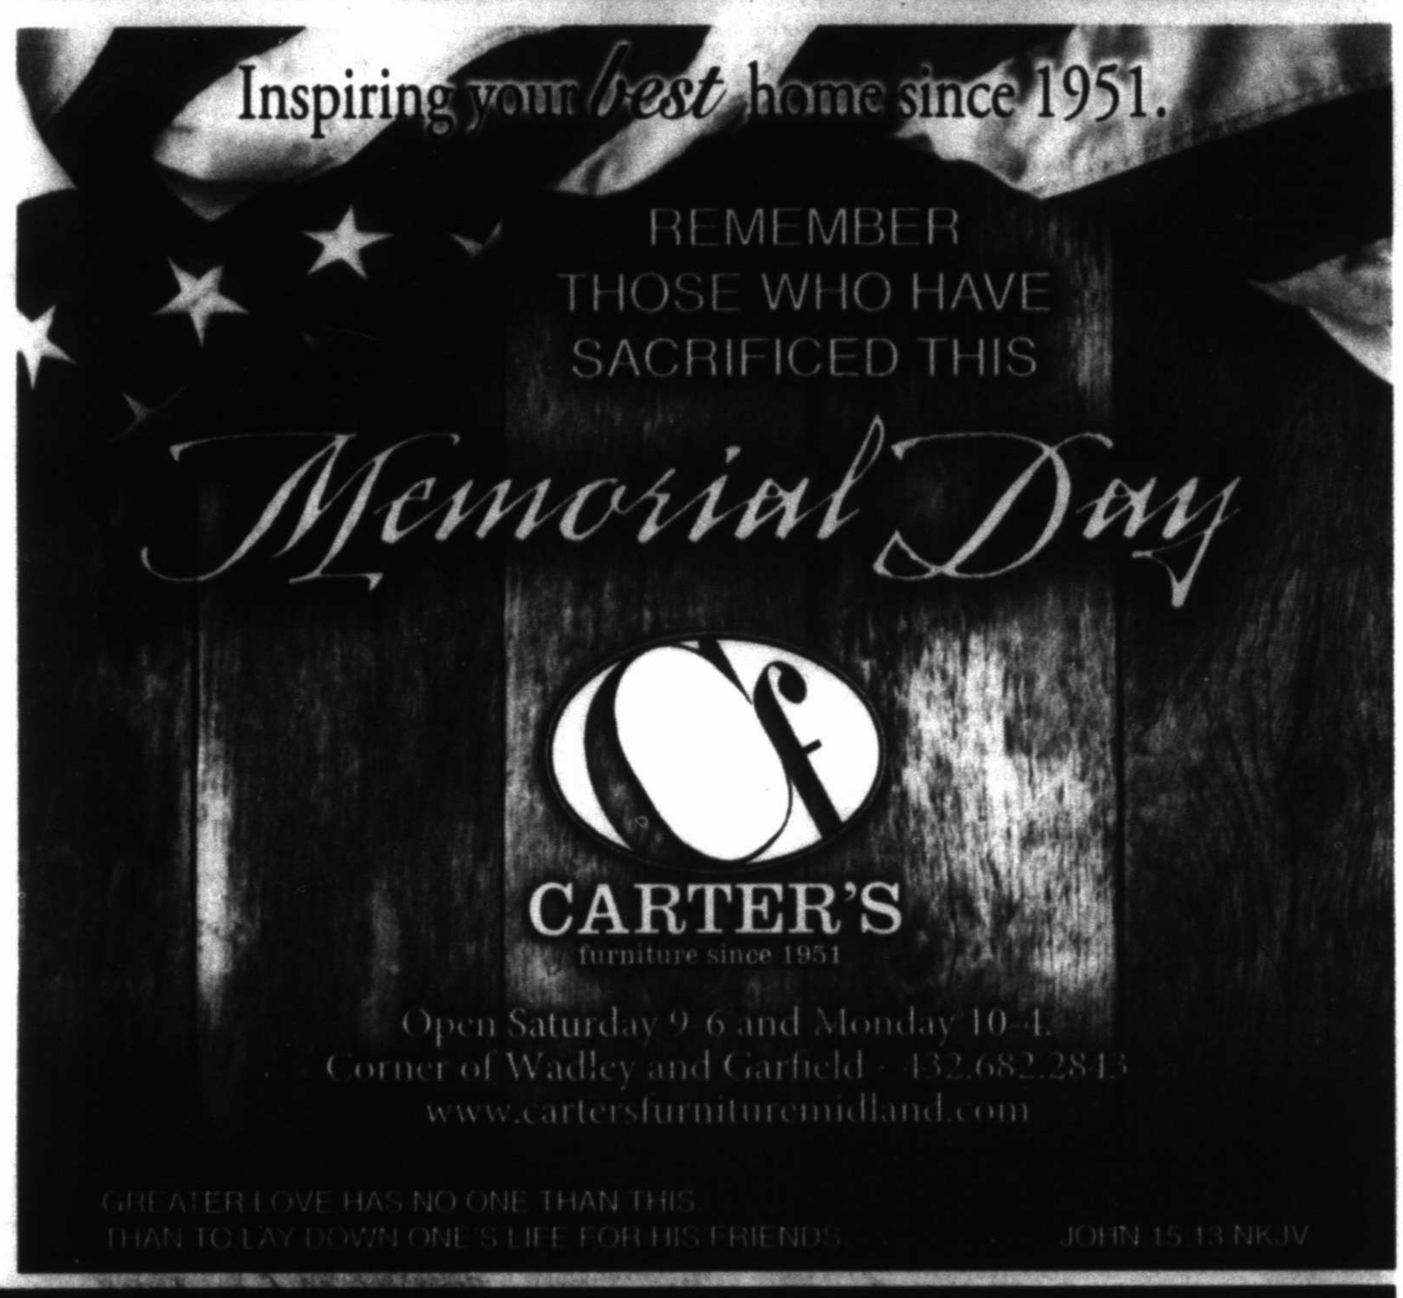

The confrontation occurred near the border of Michoacan and Jalisco states, an area known as being dominated by the Jalisco New Generation cartel and the scene of numerous incidents of cartel violence in recent years.

The scene of the shootout is close to the community of La Barca, a Jalisco town where authorities in 2013 found more than five dozen bodies in mass graves linked to the Jalisco cartel. In 2014, gunmen killed the mayor of a nearby town, Tanhuato.

While there was no immediate confirmation on the identity of the suspects, Jara told Milenio television that "it was most likely" the Jalisco cartel was involved. The group has mounted several large-scale attacks on federal and state forces in recent weeks.

Bulldogs suffer tough loss to Frenship in 8 innings

Wolfforth Frenship leads series, 1-0

HOBBS, N.M. — For the first time this postseason the Midland High baseball team is now trailing in a series, by way of a gut-wrenching 6-5 loss in 8 innings to Wolfforth Frenship, Friday at Thunderbird Field.

MHS coach Barry Russell said his team didn't do enough to win against a quality opponent.

"We had opportunities all day long," Russell said. "We had runners all over the bases and just didn't get it done. We just made mistakes all day long, too many silly things that we're better than. To beat a team like that you've got to be perfect and we weren't perfect today."

With Friday's win, Frenship took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three regional quarterfinal series. Game 2 is set for noon CDT today at Thunderbird Field.

Game 3, if needed, will follow 30 minutes after game 2.

The Bulldogs (23-9) trailed for most of the game but rallied back and even took a 5-4 lead in the top of the eighth inning, courtesy of a first-pitch home run to left field by Bradon Scrivner.

"When I hit it, I knew it was out, honestly," said Scrivner, who was rushed by his teammates as he crossed home plate. "I went up there just trying to get a hit, trying to get something going and I just happened to catch all of it."

But Frenship didn't go quietly. With one out in the bottom of the eighth, the Tigers had already tied the game and had the go-ahead run on second.

MHS reliever Brooks Betcher next induced what appeared to be a routine double play ground ball, but it bounced off of Luke Edmondson's glove and into right field as the winning run scored for the Tigers.

The Bulldogs took an early lead in the top of the first when Cort Hale scored leadoff hitter Ethan Barker on an RBI ground-out.

Maroon beats White in spirited Lee spring game

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

Lee's spring football season has been about fostering competition and that was manifested in Friday's spring football game at Grande Communications Stadium, which capped off the four-week session.

Instead of using a generic first-team offense versus first-team defense type of format, the Rebels split their squad in half with key players evenly distributed onto two different teams, Maroon and White.

This format, similar to a college spring game, gave the players a chance to compete for a win, and have bragging rights for a day.

The Lee Maroon team was able to boast after it defeated the Rebels White squad 24-7.

"It was a fun night," Lee head coach James Morton said. "We wanted this to be about the kids and less about us as coaches. Just watch them get after it and see how they respond to good things."

The format allowed the Rebels coaching staff to see how a multitude of less experienced players would handle a starting role.

Maroon running back Ashton Akbar and White defensive end Nathan Lopez shined in the scrimmage after playing part of the 2014 campaign on the junior varsity team. Both are seniors-to-be.

Akbar broke loose on a 70-yard run, the longest play from scrimmage in the game. The play was a short yardage rushing attempt right up the gut on third-and-3, but Akbar was able to find daylight and run away from the White defense.

"It is my favorite play actually," said Akbar of the play into the teeth of the defense. "I love contact."

Akbar finished with 98 yards rushing. Akbar said the Maroon-White setup cultivated some good natured ribbing from both sides during the week.

"It was a lot of it all week long," Akbar said. "Just talking, 'Maroon team, White team,'"

Lopez made his presence felt with a fumble recovery, a sack and a tackle for loss on a rushing attempt.

Harden's unique game hard to stop

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Whether he's stirring the pot after a big shot or flailing his arms to draw contact en route to the basket James Harden evokes strong reactions from fans and players alike.

The internet abounds with people complaining that his game isn't aesthetically pleasing, but he's even tougher to stop than his game is to like.

The Warriors did shut him down on the final play to take a 2-0 lead in the Western Conference finals. There is a lot of ongoing chatter about his decision to pass the ball to teammate Dwight Howard at the 3-point line in the final seconds. The talk will likely continue until Game 3 tips off on Saturday.

But the discussions won't deter the Rockets' bearded star as Houston looks to hold serve at home. And whatever success they have, it will start with Harden.

Fear the Beard? Love the Beard? Hate the Beard?

Opinions vary, but everyone who knows basketball seems to respect the game of arguably the best shooting guard in the NBA — especially the Warriors.

"He gets a head of steam going towards the rim, and it's tough to stop," Warriors coach Steve Kerr said.

Harden has one of the most complete offensive arsenals in the league.

"Obviously he can shoot that pull-up shot, and he can get all the way to the rim, and he's a great passer ... we try to do what we can to slow him down, make him take tough shots, and sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't," Kerr said.

Don't forget this 3-point range and that he is shooting 90 percent from the foul line.

But Harden, the MVP runner-up to Golden State's Stephen Curry, just doesn't have a game as lovable as other stars. He doesn't have Curry's flair, doesn't dominate like LeBron James or wow fans with Derrick Rose-like athleticism.

Nonetheless, he gets it done — often by getting to the line.

Harden led the league in the regular season in both free throw attempts (824) and free throws made (715) in a season where nobody else compared to his knack for getting to the line. Second-place Russell Westbrook attempted 170 fewer free throws than Harden and made 169 less.

He got to the line 10 times a game in the regular season and is averaging 10.1 trips in the postseason.

Na closes with 'good bogey,' leads wet Colonial

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Kevin Na had gone 26 holes without a bogey at Colonial before his last tee shot Friday was swept away by flowing water after going into a rain-swollen drainage culvert.

Not even that could dampen Na's second round that gave him the lead halfway through the soggy tournament.

Na took the penalty drop near the 17th fairway, and hit a blind approach shot over bleachers to the back side of the 18th green. His two-putt from 20 feet wrapped up a 4-under 66.

"A good bogey," Na said.

At 10-under 130, he was two strokes ahead of Ian Poulter (67) and three up on 2013 Colonial winner Boo Weekley (69).

Na also made some long birdie putts. His 30-footer off the fringe at No. 14 came right after rolling in a 22-footer at the 13th, where he broke into a dance for the rowdy fans surrounding the par 3 situated on the edge of Hogan's Alley.

"I want to call it the Big Bird dance. ... It just came out. I wasn't really thinking about it," the 31-year-old Na said. "You know, the crowd has been very supportive. I felt like I was from Texas."

Masters champion Jordan Spieth, a real Texan, was alone in the lead without a bogey before losing four strokes in a two-hole span.

Spieth finished with a 73, nine strokes worse than his opening round 64 that had him in a four-way tie on top. He dropped seven strokes back at 3 under, in a crowded tie for 15th place

"I had a goal in mind, and it was a higher score than (Thursday) given the conditions," said Spieth, the 21-year-old Dallas player playing consecutive weeks at home in North Texas. "I wanted to no blemishes, and then we held that late through 12 holes."

There were periods of steady rain for the morning groups, but no delays. That was after Thursday's first round started three hours late following more than an inch of rain fell overnight.

With more inclement weather expected Saturday, including the possibility of severe storms in the afternoon, players in the third round will be grouped in threesomes instead of the normal twosomes and go off both tees Nos. 1 and 10.

The lead group of Na, Poulter and Weekley was scheduled to tee off around 9 a.m. Saturday, more than 3 1/2 hours earlier than usual for the leaders' group at Colonial.

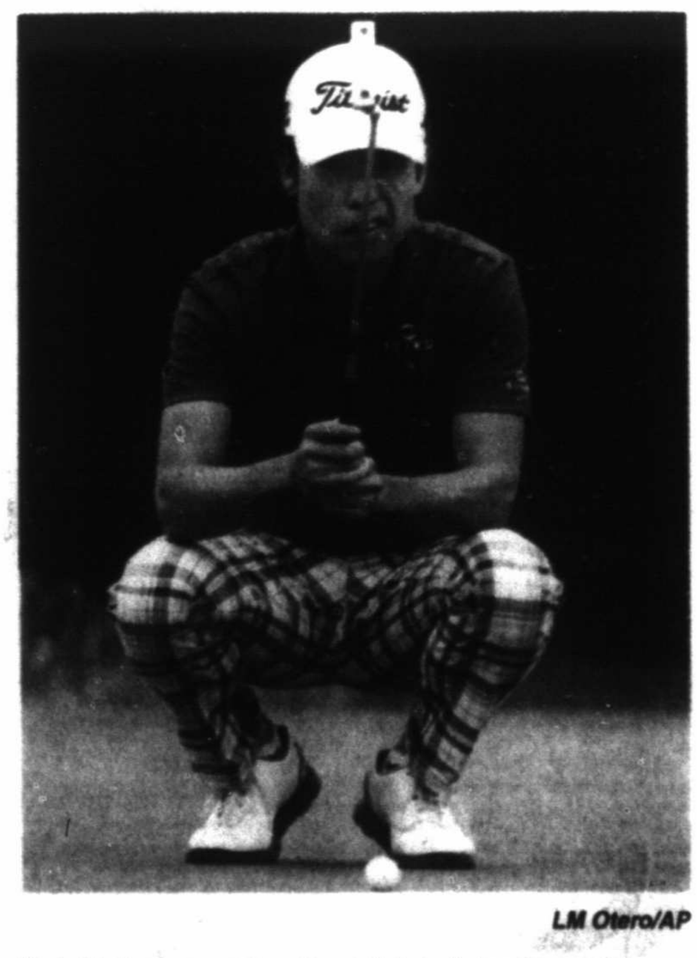

Heavy rain also was in the forecast Sunday.

Poulter, playing his first Colonial since 2010, had bogeys on his first and last holes Friday. His only bogey Thursday came on his last hole, costing him a share of the first-round lead.

A half-inch adjustment in his putting grip has paid off at Colonial, with only 25 putts in each of the first two rounds.

When going through boxes of pictures to find some to put on the wall in a new guest house he is building, Poulter came across one when he noticed the forefinger of his left hand

James leads Cavs to win over Hawks, 2-0 series lead

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

Cavaliers	94
Hawks	82
Cleveland leads series, 2-0

ATLANTA — LeBron James scored 30 points and the Cleveland Cavaliers took total command of the Eastern Conference final even without injured star Kyrie Irving, routing the Atlanta Hawks 94-82 on Friday night for a 2-0 lead with the series heading to Ohio.

The Cavaliers made it a blowout with a dominating third quarter. James scored 11 points, the Hawks shot just 32 percent (7 of 22), and Cleveland led by as many as 20 before settling for an 84-66 lead heading to the final period.

Irving was scratched before the game because of an ailing left knee. He wasn't missed a bit.

James assumed many of the ball-handling duties, taking advantage of DeMarre Carroll clearly not being at 100 percent after he went down with a knee injury late in Game 1. Carroll started after being carried off the court just two nights earlier but hardly looked like the "Junkyard Dog."

He wasn't the only one struggling. The Hawks looked totally outclassed for one of the few times all season.

The Cavaliers can wrap up the best-of-seven series simply by winning at home. The next two are in Cleveland, beginning with Game 3 on Sunday night.

Tristan Thompson led another dominating performance for the Cavaliers on the boards. He had 16 rebounds and Cleveland finished with a 47-39 advantage.

When Thompson dunked off a pass from James with just under 5 minutes remaining, the Cavaliers had a 93-74 lead and many Atlanta fans began heading for the exits, perhaps knowing they had seen their team for the last time in this most unexpected season. Atlanta won a franchise-record 60 games to claim the top seed in the East, but the Hawks were picked apart by the best player in the world.

Forget the Big Three.

The Big One was plenty of the Cavaliers, who are two wins away from returning the NBA Finals and taking another crack at their first championship.

This is why James returned to his de facto hometown after spending four years in Miami, leading the Heat to a pair of titles. The Cavaliers assembled a Miami-like trio with James, Irving and Kevin Love, but the King is doing just fine on his own with Irving hobbled and Love out with a season-ending injury.

The Hawks had hoped that Carroll's appearance would provide an emotional boost. An injury that looked much more serious when he helped off the court in Game 1 turned out to be only a sprain, and he drew a big cheer from the crowd when he did his customary sprint across the court during the opening introductions.

But at less than full speed, Carroll had no chance trying to guard James, who made 10 of 22 shots including a pair of 3-pointers. When the Hawks began collapsing toward the lane, trying to give Carroll help, James always seemed to fine the open man — often lurking behind the 3-point arc.

James had 11 assists, and the Cavaliers finished 12 of 30 beyond the arc. The King just missed a triple-double, grabbing nine rebounds.

Dennis Schroder led the Hawks with just 13 points. Carroll managed only six points in just under 34 minutes.

Carroll wasn't the only one hurting. Kyle Korver got his right ankle rolled going for a loose ball late in the third quarter and didn't return. Al Horford banged his knee early in the fourth and hobbled to the bench, though he was able to finish out the game.

It didn't really matter.

By the end, the Hawks had cleared their bench.

TIP INS

Cavaliers: Cleveland has outrebounded the Hawks 96-76 over the first two games. ... Iman Shumpert hit four 3-pointers and finished with 16 points.

Hawks: Made only 42 percent from the field, including 6 of 26 from 3-point range.

HARDEN

From 1B

"He does a great job of swinging his arms out and trying to seek out contact," Golden State's Andrew Bogut said. "It's kind of an unorthodox basketball play, but he's very smart with it."

And he's left-handed, which some would say is also an advantage.

Harden handles the ball more like a point guard, and teams throw several different guys at him to try and slow him down. The Warriors have tried it.

He scored 28 points in Game 1 against Golden State and poured in 38 in Game 2. Though the Rockets couldn't steal a road win, they feel good.

"We had plenty of opportunities to win both of the games, so we have all the confidence in the world," said Harden, who is doing a bit of everything for the Rockets.

He finished just one assist shy of a triple-double in each of the first two games in this series after collecting a triple-double in Game 5 against the Clippers.

"We have to stop him from going downhill," Golden State's Andre Iguodala said. "When the guy gets downhill, he's either going to get a basket or an assist or get the benefit of the doubt with the whistle. It's tough, but we've got to stop it."

Klay Thompson said the goal is to force Harden right so he's using his non-dominant hand.

"But he's got incredible ball skills," Thompson said. "He's a great ball-handler, he's a big, strong guy. He lulls you to sleep, and he's a great finisher."

Then there's that celebration once he gets "cooking."

Houston fans love Harden's pot-stirring gesture and many have started wearing chef's hats to pay homage to it. Harden said it's caught on with non-Houston fans, though not always in support of the bearded one.

Clippers guard Austin Rivers mocked it when he got on a hot streak in their series against Houston.

It didn't faze Harden, who said he's "just trying to be who I am and just go out there and make an impact on the game of basketball and for myself."

The Rockets hope he can stir it up enough for win in Game 3.

Lundqvist stands tall, Rangers beat Lightning in Game 4

By Fred Goodall
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Henrik Lundqvist stopped 38 shots to rebound from two subpar performances and help the New York Rangers shut down the Tampa Bay Lightning 5-1 on Friday night in Game 4 of the Eastern Conference finals.

Rick Nash had two goals and an assist, and former Lightning captain Martin St. Louis ended a playoff scoring drought with a third-period goal for New York. The Rangers evened the best-of-7 series 2-2 heading back to New York for Game 5 on Sunday night.

Lundqvist allowed 12 goals in losing Games 2 and 3, but redeemed himself by handling nearly everything the speedy and skilled Lightning threw at him.

Tampa Bay's Steven Stamkos scored for the third straight game, briefly making it 1-1 before New York's Chris Kreider and Keith Yandle struck within a 2-minute span for a 3-1 Rangers lead.

Brewers' Smith suspended 8 games

By George Henry
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Milwaukee Brewers manager Craig Counsell didn't see a shiny substance on reliever Will Smith's right arm until it was too late.

Atlanta Braves manager Fredi Gonzalez had already emerged from the dugout to ask umpires to check to see if Smith was cheating.

"Fredi did what he had to do, I understand," Counsell said. "He's competing, he's trying to win a game. That's what he thought he had to do."

Smith was suspended for eight games by Major League Baseball on Friday for having a foreign substance on his arm in Thursday's 10-1 loss to the Braves.

Because Smith plans to appeal, the penalty is on hold. Smith will be available for Friday night's game.

"He wants to question the severity of it," Counsell said. "For a reliever, eight games is pretty significant. His contention is with the length of the suspension."

Smith, a left-hander, was ejected for having rosin and sunscreen on his right forearm in the seventh inning. He hit the first batter he faced, pinch-hitter Pedro Ciriaco, when his pitch bounced in front of the plate and glanced off Ciriaco's leg.

Before Smith made his only pitch to the next batter, Jace Peterson, Gonzalez saw him rub his left fingers on his right arm. That's when the Atlanta manager asked for a timeout.

"The biggest thing there was that it was so blatant," Gonzalez said. "If he had gone the whole inning and never went to it, I would've never said a word."

Smith said he put the substance on his forearm before warming up in the bullpen on a brisk night. He expressed regret for not wiping it off before entering the game, adding that he uses the rosin and sunscreen mix to help him feel the ball better.

"That's it. It's the grip," Smith said. "It's not going to spin more. You're not going to throw harder. You've got what you got."

It's widely acknowledged pitchers use similar practices to grip the ball better even though it's against the rules. Atlanta's Freddie Freeman believes most batters prefer that pitchers use a substance because it decreases odds of getting hit.

"Every pitcher does it," Freeman said after Thursday night's game. "As a hitter, you want them to do it so they'll have a better grip so we won't get hit in the head."

Gonzalez said Smith should've been more careful.

"I'm sure everybody has a little something — which I'm OK with that, too — but come on," Gonzalez said. "You don't pull a file out of your back pocket and rough one up and do whatever you want to do. I feel like it's my job and my responsibility to my team to do that. I really don't care what anybody else says."

Crew chief Jim Joyce tossed Smith from the game after touching the substance. Television cameras showed a close-up of the substance shining on his arm.

Smith yelled at Gonzalez in the Braves' dugout as he walked off the field.

Gonzalez was adamant Friday that he wasn't trying to embarrass Smith, who grew up 40 miles southwest of Turner Field in Newnan, Georgia.

"It's a shame," Gonzalez said. "This guy's a hometown guy?, supposed to be a great kid. And guess what? If we make a trade for him, I'd love him coming out of my bullpen. He's got good stuff."

RANGERS 10
YANKEES 9

NEW YORK — Prince Fielder launched two long homers, drove in four runs and helped the Texas Rangers hold off the New York Yankees 10-9 Friday night for their third straight win.

Quickly down 7-0 and still trailing 10-5, New York rallied in the eighth inning on pinch-hitter Garrett Jones' three-run homer.

Journeyman Ross Ohlendorf took over to begin the ninth, gave up a one-out home run to Mark Teixeira and walked Chase Headley with two outs. Stephen Drew followed with a comebacker that glanced off Ohlendorf, and second baseman Tommy Field swooped in to get the out at first.

Ohlendorf wound up with his first career save. Shawn Tolleson earned saves the previous two days for Texas and didn't warm up.

Back home after a 2-7 trip, the Yankees watched Fielder's three-run shot sail into the second deck during a seven-run burst in the third inning.

TIGERS 6
ASTROS 2

DETROIT — J.D. Martinez hit a three-run homer and Alfredo Simon pitched seven strong innings as the Detroit Tigers beat the Houston Astros 6-2 Friday night.

Simon (5-2) got the win, allowing two unearned runs on four hits and a walk in seven innings. Simon, who struck out five, used his slow curve effectively, throwing it so softly once that it didn't register on the radar gun.

Joba Chamberlain pitched a perfect eighth with a one-run lead, and Tom Gorzelanny finished after Detroit scored three times in the bottom of the inning.

Collin McHugh (5-2) lost for just the second time in his last 14 decisions, giving up three runs on nine hits and a walk in seven innings. McHugh's two losses have been in his last three starts after he had gone unbeaten in 16 outings dating back to last August.

MARINERS 4
BLUE JAYS 3

TORONTO — Nelson Cruz hit his big league-leading 17th home run, Felix Hernandez became the first seven-game winner in the majors and the Seattle Mariners beat the Toronto Blue Jays 4-3 on Friday night.

Hernandez (7-1) bounced back from his first loss of the season to pitch seven sharp innings, lowering his ERA to 2.19.

RAYS 5
ATHLETICS 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Evan Longoria hit a three-run homer off Scott Kazmir and the Tampa Bay Rays powered past the Oakland Athletics 5-2 on Friday night.

Steven Souza Jr. and Tim Beckham added solo home runs for the Rays, who won for the fourth time in five games and remained in first place in the AL East.

ANGELS 12
RED SOX 5

BOSTON — Chris Iannetta and Erick Aybar homered in the Angels' nine-run fifth inning, and Albert Pujols also hit a home run on Friday night to lead Los Angeles to a 12-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Mike Trout had a pair of hits — both in the fifth inning, when the Angels sent 13 batters to the plate and took an 11-3 lead. Boston loaded the bases in the seventh with nobody out and two runs already in, but Jose Alvarez struck out David Oritz and then got an inning-ending double play.

Interleague

INDIANS 7
REDS 3

CLEVELAND — Brandon Moss homered and drove in three runs, leading the Cleveland Indians to a 7-3 win over the Cincinnati Reds on Friday night.

Carlos Carrasco (5-4) allowed two runs in six innings, sending the Reds to their season-high sixth straight loss.

ORIOLES 8
MARLINS 5

MIAMI — The Miami Marlins made a costly error, repeatedly squandered scoring chances and remained winless after five games under new manager Dan Jennings, losing to the Baltimore Orioles 8-5 Friday.

The Marlins fell to 0-8 on their homestand with two games to go. Jennings is off to the worst start by a first-time manager since Brad Mills opened 0-8 after taking over the Astros in 2010, according to STATS.

ROYALS 5
CARDINALS 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kendrys Morales hit two home runs and had five RBI, Chris Young gave up six hits in six innings and the Kansas City Royals defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 5-0 Friday night.

The Royals improved to 27-14, the best record in the majors, while the Cardinals dropped to 27-15, best in the National League.

METS 1

PITTSBURGH — Gerrit Cole struck out 10 over 8 1/3 dominant innings to outduel New York Mets rookie Noah Syndergaard and lift the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-1 win Friday night.

Cole (6-2) gave up just six hits — all singles — and walked one to lower his ERA to 2.05 as the Pirates won for just the second time in their last eight games. Mark Melancon got the final two outs for his 10th save.

NATIONALS 2
PHILLIES 1

WASHINGTON — Bryce Harper hit another home run and Max Scherzer had another dominant outing to help the Washington Nationals beat the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 on Friday night for their sixth straight win.

Harper's homer, his 11th in 14 games, tied the score 1-1 in the second inning and Ian Desmond's RBI double drove in Scherzer with the go-ahead run in the sixth. The NL East-leading Nationals are 18-4 since April 28.

BRAVES 0

ATLANTA — Ryan Braun homered and drove in four runs, four Milwaukee pitchers combined to hold Atlanta to three hits, and the Brewers beat the Braves 11-0 on Friday night.

On a day that began with Major League Baseball suspending reliever Will Smith eight games for using a foreign substance to doctor his pitches, Milwaukee wasted little time beating up on Braves starter Eric Stults (1-5).

BULLDOGS

From 1B

But Frenship immediately tied things up at one apiece against MHS starter Jacob Mata.

Trailing, 3-1, in the top of the third, Hale delivered again for the Bulldogs, as he shot a double down the third base line to bring home Jaxon Hallmark.

Frenship tallied another run in the bottom of the third, but Mata and reliever Brooks Betcher, who came in to start the fifth inning, combined to hold the Tigers scoreless for the next four innings.

MHS tied the game at 4 in the top of the sixth thanks to an RBI single to left field by Edmonson. Jordan Luna Howell scored the tying run on a wild pitch by Frenship pitcher Karmley Green, who had come in to relieve starter Claborn with two outs in the fifth.

However, MHS committed three errors and hit four Frenship batters with pitches in the game to help the Tigers in the come-from-behind victory.

"We just have to play better," Russell said. "We stayed right with them at 5-4, and we just didn't play good. We have to be better."

Added Scrivner: "We need to come out and play our hardest. They're (Frenship) a great ball club and we have to do everything right to beat them."

Scrivner led the Bulldogs by going 3-for-4 with a home run. Sam Bertelson also went 3-for-4, including a double. Mata pitched four innings and allowed four runs, all earned, on seven hits. He struck out five, walked two and didn't get a decision.

From 1B

play of the game set up White's only score, a 1-yard rushing touchdown by Tony Jones.

Lopez says the team has embraced the competitive environment the coaches have nurtured this spring.

"We're always revving it up," Lopez said. "We're always getting after each other, trying to push each other to the best we can, trying to make each other better. That's what we do."

Lopez was not the only Rebels defender to wreck havoc in the backfield.

Maroon defensive lineman Josh Carrasco recorded a pair of sacks and teammate and linebacker Mason Hubbard registered two tackles for a loss.

On offense, Maroon's first team accounted for 17 points. Quarterback Sema'J Davis engineereed two touchdown drives for Maroon.

In the third quarter, Maroon took a comfortable 17-7 lead when C.J. Robles rushed for a 5-yard touchdown on an end around.

Maroon padded its lead to 24-7 shortly thereafter when quarterback Trey Jacobo connected with Grant Brown on a 23-yard touchdown pass on a fade route.

In addition to seeing younger players in more magnified roles, Friday's affair was an opportunity to see how established players like Kaleb Nunez would handle playing both ways. Nunez, an accomplished tight end, caught a 20-yard reception to move White into the red zone in the fourth quarter.

Later in the quarter, Nunez batted a pass down while rushing off the edge at defensive end, his new position.

"There's several of those guys that are going to be two-way players for us," Morton said. "He's definitely one of those guys."

Scandrick signs 1-year extension with Cowboys through 2019

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

IRVING — Cornerback Orlando Scandrick has the raise he sought by skipping the first two weeks of voluntary offseason workouts with the Dallas Cowboys.

The eighth-year veteran signed a one-year contract extension Friday, adding $9.5 million to what's now a five-year deal worth $20 million through 2019.

It's the second time in three years the Cowboys have reworked contract terms for Scandrick, who showed up last week to talk to team executives and has been working out with the team this week.

Dallas' best cornerback last year, Scandrick was to make just $1.5 million this season, which was set to be fourth among the team's cornerbacks once first-round pick Byron Jones of Connecticut signed.

Now the 28-year-old Scandrick will get $4 million, while Brandon Carr is in line to make $8 million after going without an interception for the first time in his career last season.

Scandrick, a fifth-round pick in 2008, has seven interceptions and 52 pass breakups in 102 games. Of his 48 starts, 29 have come the past two seasons with the Cowboys dealing with injuries and performance issues with other cornerbacks.

The former Boise State player had a four-game suspension reduced to two games at the start of last season after Scandrick tested positive for a banned stimulant in the offseason. The reduction came after the NFL revised its drug policy.

"We stand strong about what a good player he is, how much we need him, how much he helps us and would like to get something satisfactorily worked out with him," owner and general manager Jerry Jones said last week.

Carr is going into the fourth year of a six-year, $50 million free agent contract he signed in 2012. While the Cowboys would like Carr to take a pay cut, releasing him to save salary cap space is risky because of uncertainty surrounding 2012 first-round pick Morris Claiborne.

Dallas traded up eight spots to get Claiborne at No. 6, but he hasn't met the expectations associated with the bold draft move. The Cowboys recently declined to add a fifth year to his rookie contract, and Claiborne isn't expected to be ready for training camp as he continues the recovery from surgery for a torn patellar tendon in his left knee.

Claiborne missed the last 12 games in 2014 and has been sidelined by injuries for 19 games over three seasons. He has three interceptions and 15 pass breakups in his career.

The Cowboys let Sterling Moore go to Tampa Bay in free agency after a strong 2014 season. Tyler Patmon, an undrafted rookie last year, also figures into the plan for Dallas.

Goodell will not recuse self from Brady appeal

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Roger Goodell will hear Tom Brady's appeal of his four-game suspension for his role in the deflated footballs scandal.

Goodell will not withdraw from what the commissioner considers his responsibility of hearing the appeal, according to several people with knowledge of the decision. Those people spoke on condition of anonymity because no official announcement has been made.

The union asked Goodell to remove himself from that role because it said he lacked impartiality and that Goodell would be called as a witness. NFL lawyers, however, have recommended to Goodell that he should not recuse himself.

No date has been set for the appeal, although the collective bargaining agreement calls for it to be heard within 10 days. However, both sides can agree on delaying a hearing, which would need to be held by Wednesday without any requested delays.

Brady was suspended for the first four games of the 2015 season after a league-sanctioned report by attorney Ted Wells found the New England quarterback "at least generally aware" of a scheme to illegally deflate footballs used in the AFC title game win over Indianapolis. On Wednesday at the spring owners meetings, Goodell said he was aware of the union's request but had not yet had time to examine it.

Since then, league lawyers were able to look it over and make their recommendation he remain on the case.

But it seemed clear Wednesday that he planned to oversee the appeal hearing.

"It's my job here to make sure we're doing everything to protect the integrity of the game, protect our policies, protect our procedures," Goodell said then. "We have a process that has been negotiated with the union that has been in place for decades. It's my responsibility and it's something that we've had in place for a long time."

Troy Vincent, the league's executive vice president of football operations, handed down the suspension to three-time Super Bowl MVP Brady, one of the sport's biggest stars. Vincent also fined the Patriots $1 million and stripped them of a first-round draft pick next year and a fourth-rounder in 2017.

On Tuesday, Patriots owner Robert Kraft, among the NFL's most powerful and influential men, said he will not appeal those penalties.

But Brady has hired attorney Jeffrey Kessler, who has taken on the league in a variety of other cases through the years, and could take his case to court should his punishment not be reduced after appeal.

Montreal Alouettes sign openly gay defensive end Michael Sam

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Michael Sam has found a pro football job. In Canada.

Sam, the first openly gay player drafted in the NFL, signed a two-year contract Friday with the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football league.

General manager Jim Popp considered Sam's sexuality a nonissue.

"Michael Sam is a very good football player, and that's the reason we signed him," Popp said. "He's an outstanding pass rusher."

He also was unemployed after failing to stick with two NFL teams last season.

Sam came out before last year's NFL draft. He was selected in the seventh round by the St. Louis Rams and cut in training camp. The Dallas Cowboys signed him to their practice squad but released him in October. Sam then made another unsuccessful attempt at an NFL job at this year's veterans combine.

"I cannot wait to put on the pads, get back on the field and work hard each and every day with my teammates to bring a Grey Cup to the great fans here in Montreal," Sam said in a statement.

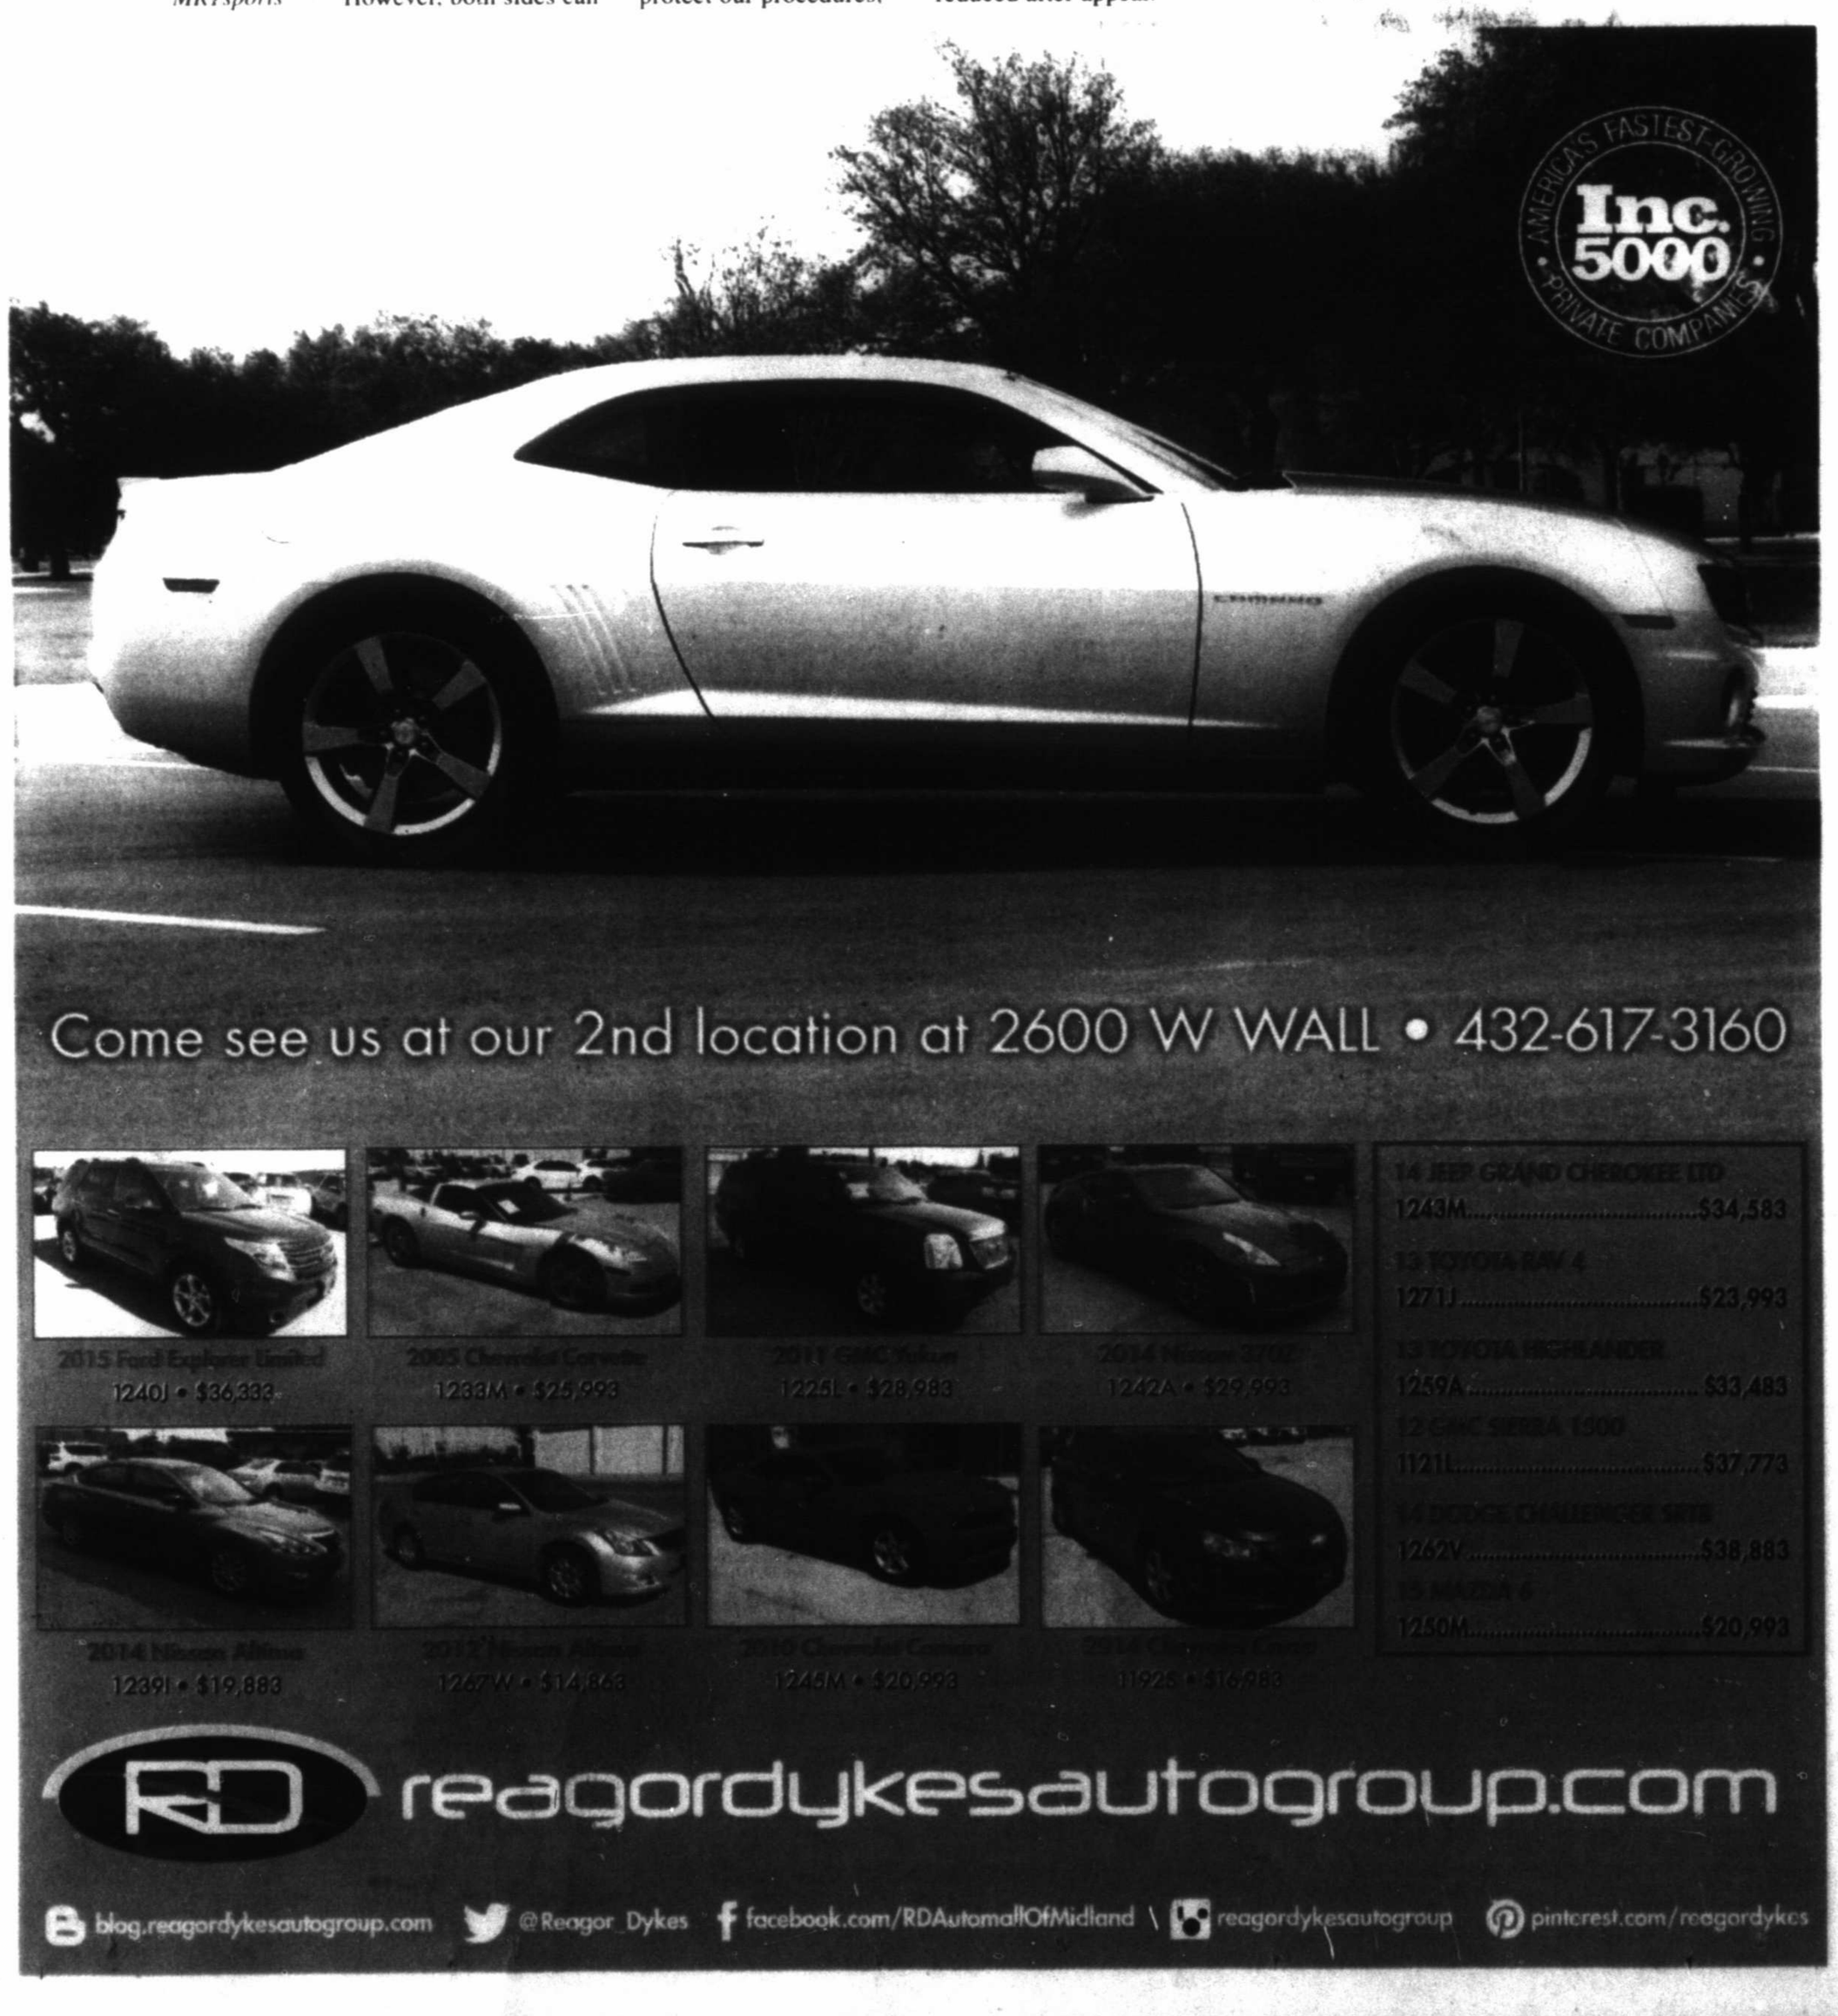

The 25-year-old defensive end will be introduced at a news conference Tuesday in Montreal and report to training camp the following day. The regular season opens June 25 when Montreal hosts Ottawa.

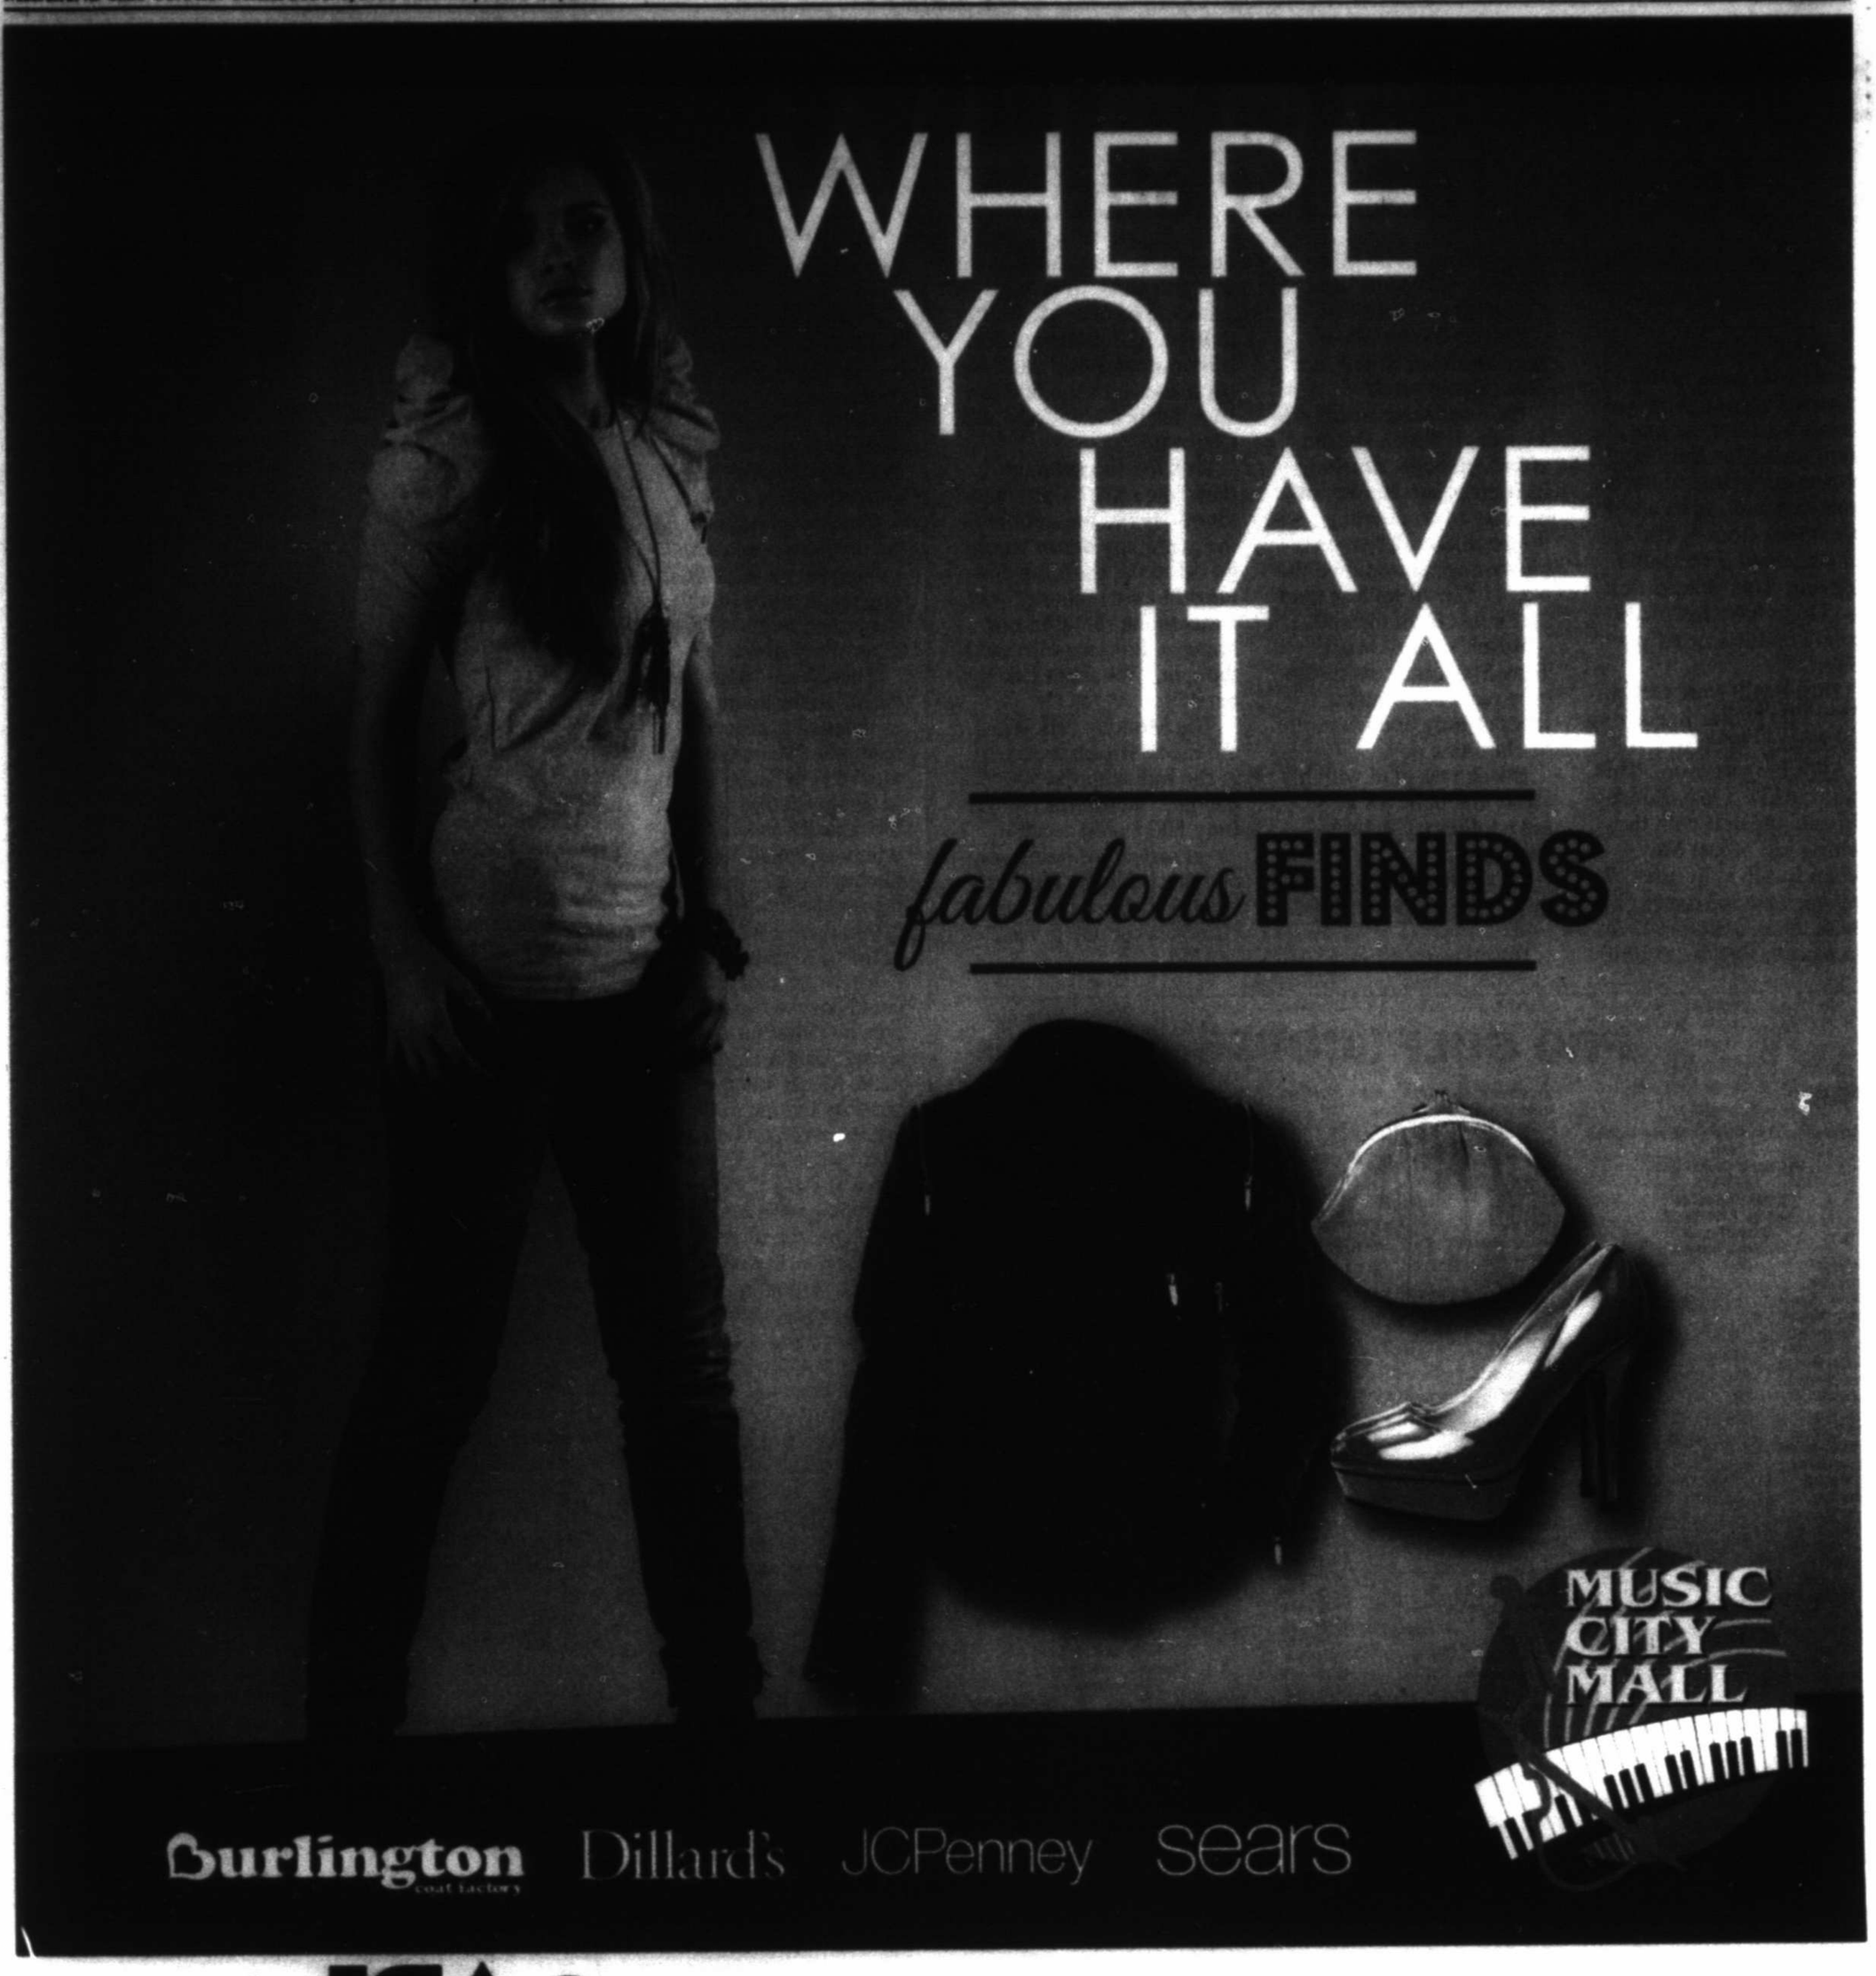

Sam starred at Missouri in college, earning SEC Defensive Player of the Year honors in 2013. After he came out, his NFL jersey was an instant best-seller and President Barack Obama publicly congratulated Sam and the Rams.

CFL Commissioner Jeffrey Orridge did the same Friday.

"Congratulations to the Montreal Alouettes on the signing of Michael Sam," Orridge said in a statement. "Our players come to us from different places, different walks of life and ultimately they take different paths to get to our fields.

"Today is another indication of how open and progressive the CFL is — consistent with our rich and storied history of great football tradition."

Kurt Busch brings double lessons to Charlotte

By Pete Iacobelli
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.C. — There's no bank of TV cameras surrounding Kurt Busch's hauler, no one monitoring his fluid intake to prevent dehydration, no golf cart waiting to whisk him away from NASCAR practice and off to Indianapolis. This year, Busch is glad to have his focus solely on the Coca-Cola 600.

Busch will start 14th at Charlotte Motor Speedway on Sunday night in NASCAR's longest event. This event is like a lazy Sunday drive compared with the whirlwind of last May, when Busch split time between two of America's most famous motor sports arenas chasing the double of finishing 1,100 miles at the Indy 500 and Coca-Cola 600.

"When the month of May was over, it felt like July," Busch said.

By most accounts, it was a success. Busch starred at Indianapolis, finishing in sixth place. He was on his way to completing the doubleheader when a blown engine sidelined the No. 41 Chevrolet less than 200 miles from the end.

Busch's team owner, Tony Stewart, remains the only racer to complete races at Indy and Charlotte on the same day.

Busch was glad with his effort and believes he's got another try in him — someday.

"It's something I'd like to possibly do again," he said.

Busch trained like a decathlete, monitored his diet and stuck to a strict schedule of rest. Mentally, though, he said he wasn't fully prepared for shuttling back and forth the 600 or so miles between Indy and Charlotte.

"It's hard to keep up with," he said. "There's a lot of days in the middle of the grind, my alarm would go off in the morning and I didn't know where I was. I was in the rental motor home in Indianapolis and I thought, 'What am I doing here?'"

The Monday following the races, Busch took part in the Indianapolis 500 banquet, he referred to the Indy 500 as last week's event instead of being run one day earlier. "That's when I realized how lost I was on what day it was," he said.

Djokovic looms in Nadal's toughest draw at French Open

By John Leicester
Associated Press

PARIS — The tennis equivalent of climbing three mountains, just to reach the Roland Garros final. Never have the obstacles loomed so large between Rafael Nadal and another trophy on the red clay of Paris.

The draw Friday could hardly have been more unkind for the nine-time champion whose confidence and reign as "King of Clay" look shaky.

There were "oohs" and "aahs" in the auditorium as defending women's champion Maria Sharapova plucked out Nadal's name to set up another potential blockbuster encounter with top-ranked Novak Djokovic. Only this time, the finalists of 2012 and 2014 are on course to meet in the quarterfinals.

Just to get that far, Nadal could have to beat one of tennis' rising stars, 10th-seeded Grigor Dimitrov, in the fourth round. And possibly lurking in the semifinals could be Andy Murray, the 2013 Wimbledon and 2012 U.S. Open champion who hasn't lost a match since marrying longtime girlfriend Kim Sears last month.

Nadal has faced tough draws before. In 2011, 2013 and again last year, he beat three top 10 players on his way to victory. And his 66-1 record at Roland Garros, with his only loss coming in the fourth round in 2009, means he cannot be written off despite recent chinks in his usually iron-clad clay-court game and self-belief.

Still, if the June 7 final again finishes with Nadal biting the Musketeers Cup, this Roland Garros could be his crowning achievement, given the traps awaiting him.

"I think I can do it," Nadal said Friday. "Do it is another thing."

The 28-year-old Spaniard has fallen to No. 7 in the ATP rankings since coming back from a right wrist injury, appendix surgery and treatment on his back, dropping his seeding to six, his lowest ever at Roland Garros. That left Nadal more vulnerable than usual to the bad luck that bit in Friday's draw. But tournament director Gilbert Ysern said there was never any thought of bumping up Nadal's seeding to shield him.

"Everybody had their eyes on this potential clash between Nadal and Djokovic," Ysern said. "Three or four years ago we thought about giving him a higher seeding when he dropped in the rankings because of a long lay-off due to an injury. But this year it's different, because his ranking dropped mainly due to his results on court. We did not even think about it and he did not ask for it. It's not his style to ask for anything."

Djokovic has never beaten Nadal in six attempts at Roland Garros. Despite the prospect of meeting him again in the quarterfinals, the eight-time major winner was in jovial mood as tournament organizers feted his 28th birthday on Friday by delivering a beautiful tiered cake to his news conference, shortly after Djokovic had finished explaining that Nadal, because of his almost unblemished record at Roland Garros, is still "definitely right up there in top favorites to win."

"Mmm," Djokovic said as he tucked into a gluten- and sugar-free slice, as per his diet. "Looks like my wedding cake."

Nadal has had his worst run-up ever this season to tennis' second major, losing five times on clay, including straight-set defeats to Murray in a Madrid final and in a Monte Carlo semi-final to Djokovic.

"It's not terrible. But if we compare with other years, obviously looks bad, no? That's always going to happen when you achieve a lot in the past," Nadal said.

In the women's draw, 19-time Grand Slam champion Serena Williams faces a potential third-round match against former No. 1 Victoria Azarenka, seeded 27th.

Williams will face a qualifier in the first round and said treatment has helped alleviate her painful right elbow. Her sister Venus got a tough first-round opponent in Sloane Stephens, a semifinalist at the 2013 Australian Open who has reached the fourth round for the last three years at Roland Garros.

The Williams sisters could then meet each other in the fourth round if they get that far. Fifth-seeded Caroline Wozniacki and sixth-seeded Eugenie Bouchard, who broke through last season by reaching the semifinals at the Australian and French Opens and the final at Wimbledon, also are in the Williams sisters' half. So, too, is fourth-seeded Petra Kvitova, a two-time Wimbledon champion still without a final in any of the other three majors.

On Sharapova's side of the draw, eighth-seeded Carla Suarez Navarro looms as a tough potential opponent for the second-seeded Russian in the quarterfinals. If both get that far, Sharapova and the losing finalist she beat last year, third-seeded Simona Halep, could meet in the semifinals. Sharapova begins the defense of her title against 49th-ranked Kaia Kanepi.

Nadal, as defending men's champion, was called upon to draw out the names of the seeded women, with fingers on his left hand already taped. Nadal rubbed his chin and looked less than comfortable as Sharapova drew out names of the men.

With Djokovic, Nadal, the third-seeded Murray and 2013 runner-up David Ferrer all in the same half of the draw, the road for Roger Federer on the other side opened up.

COLONIAL

was in a different spot. He first adjusted during the pro-am round Wednesday.

"It felt pretty good, and obviously it was pretty good (Thursday) and it's continued," he said. "It's angled further down toward the shot. So it's almost more parallel to the shot. ... It's probably only a position of half an inch difference to what it was, but sometimes half an inch makes a big difference on a feel."

About the same time that Poulter rolled in a 14-foot birdie putt at No. 6 to get to 8 under, Spieth was making a bogey two holes back after he missed the green at the challenging par-3 fourth and didn't make a 6-foot par- saver to drop to 7 under.

Spieth followed with a triple bogey at No. 5, taking a drop in the rough after hitting his tee shot way right into a hazard adjacent to the Trinity River. His approach rattled around in the upper branches of a tree before dropping about 75 yards short of the green.

With a steady rain falling, Spieth then missed a 4-foot birdie try at No. 6 and bogeyed the par-3 eighth from a greenside bunker.

"That's kind of unlike me. It's not something I do, compound mistakes," he said. "I had chances to bounce back there, and wasn't able to do it."

American Pharoah gallops in Kentucky, others in Belmont

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Churchill Downs via AP

American Pharoah, ridden by exercise rider Jorge Alvarez, works out at Churchill Downs on Friday in Louisville, Ky. The Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes winner is expected to be the heavy favorite to win the Belmont on June 6.

NEW YORK — Triple Crown hopeful American Pharoah went out for his first gallop since winning the Preakness, covering 1 3/16 miles at Churchill Downs in Louisville, Kentucky, on Friday.

Exercise rider Jorge Alvarez said the 3-year-old colt "didn't seem like he was tired or anything."

American Pharoah won the Kentucky Derby on May 2 and the Preakness last Saturday. He is preparing for the Belmont Stakes on June 6, when he will attempt to become the first Triple Crown winner since Affirmed in 1978.

American Pharoah is expected to have two timed workouts at Churchill Downs before he's sent to New York on June 3.

"It went very nice," said Jimmy Barnes, trainer Bob Baffert's assistant. "He's perfect - just the way he always is - so we'll gallop a little bit further maybe (Saturday), and then by Sunday we'll be back to his normal gallop at a mile-and-a-half."

Three of trainer Todd Pletcher's Belmont contenders had workouts at Belmont Park on Friday: Carpe Diem, Madefromlucky and Materiality. Carpe Diem, 10th in the Derby, and Peter Pan winner Madefromlucky ran together and were timed in 59.01 seconds for five furlongs. Materiality, sixth in the Derby, covered the same distance in 1:00.04 under regular rider John Velazquez.

"That was the best we've seen (Madefromlucky) breeze since we've got him," Pletcher said.

Also, Wood Memorial winner Frosted, who was fourth in the Derby, worked five furlongs in 1:01.45 for trainer Kiaran McLaughlin.

In Friday workouts at Churchill Downs, Conquest Curlinate worked five furlongs in 59.80 seconds and Keen Ice went six furlongs in 1:15.

Norman Casse, assistant trainer to his father Mark, said Conquest Curlinate — second in the Peter Pan at Belmont on May 7 — should like the longer Belmont distance.

"He's always been a much more effective route horse obviously, so we think the distance is just perfect for him," Casse said.

Tammy Fox, assistant to Keen Ice's trainer Dale Romans, said Keen Ice is "a big horse and a big grinder" and thinks he'll handled the distance "just fine."

Other Belmont contenders include Frammento, Tale of Verve, Mubtaahij and War Story.

Weidman, Belfort end 2-year dance in title fight at UFC 187

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press

Chris Weidman and Vitor Belfort have been waiting to trade punches since early last year. Way back then, Weidman was a new champion with no real injury problems, and Belfort had just knocked out his last three opponents with spectacular head kicks.

They'll finally get into the cage at UFC 187 in Las Vegas tonight. Weidman is returning from two significant injuries, while Belfort is a different man entirely — no longer enhanced by the sanctioned steroid use that his critics feel contributed greatly to his incredible late-career surge.

After three postponements, Weidman and Belfort are eager to close this prolonged chapter when they fight for Weidman's middleweight belt at the MGM Grand Garden.

"I knew at some point we would have to face each other. It's inevitable," Weidman said. "He's a guy who is on a three-fight winning streak, and he's never looked better. People are forgetting about that because he's been out for so long, and I'm prepared for the best Vitor we've ever seen."

Weidman (12-0) and Belfort (24-10) will fight shortly before Anthony "Rumble" Johnson and Daniel Cormier meet for the vacant UFC light heavyweight title.

The UFC's traditional Memorial Day weekend event is stacked, with an undercard including ironman lightweight Donald "Cowboy" Cerrone, heavyweight contender Travis Browne, the return of "The Ultimate Fighter" standouts Rose Namajunas and Uriah Hall, and two flyweight bouts with championship implications: John Dodson against Zach Makovsky and Joseph Benavidez against John Moraga.

Bid to topple Blatter from FIFA rests with Jordanian prince

By Rob Harris
Associated Press

LONDON — In soccer, the only certain winner seems to be Sepp Blatter.

Every threat to him has been seen off and a stranglehold on the seat of power in the world's most popular sport has been maintained since 1998.

Three men were vying to stop Blatter from winning a fifth term, but only one will now be on the ballot next Friday: Prince Ali bin Al-Hussein of Jordan.

Luis Figo had been the only former player in the contest, but the ex-Barcelona and Real Madrid star quit the race on Thursday. The former world player of the year denounced the election as a "plebiscite for the delivery of absolute power to one man."

Dutch soccer federation president Michael van Praag also withdrew his low-key candidacy with a week to go.

Both men had grown increasingly frustrated about their inability to get their voices heard within a sport that seems content with Blatter in charge. Touring regional confederation meetings in recent months, it was Blatter who was able to command most rostrums as the incumbent while his challengers were largely left to lobby for votes behind the scenes.

While Blatter has remained largely mute on his plans for a fifth, four-year term, Prince Ali, Figo and Van Praag produced vast manifestos. Between proposals to make FIFA more transparent and to expand the World Cup, the main selling point was purely that their name is not Blatter.

If regular fans had a vote, Blatter might be clearing out his office in FIFA's sleek Zurich headquarters next Friday. But the 79-year-old Swiss executive's support base remains so strong in the 209-nation organization, particularly in Africa and the Americas, that next week's result seems certain.

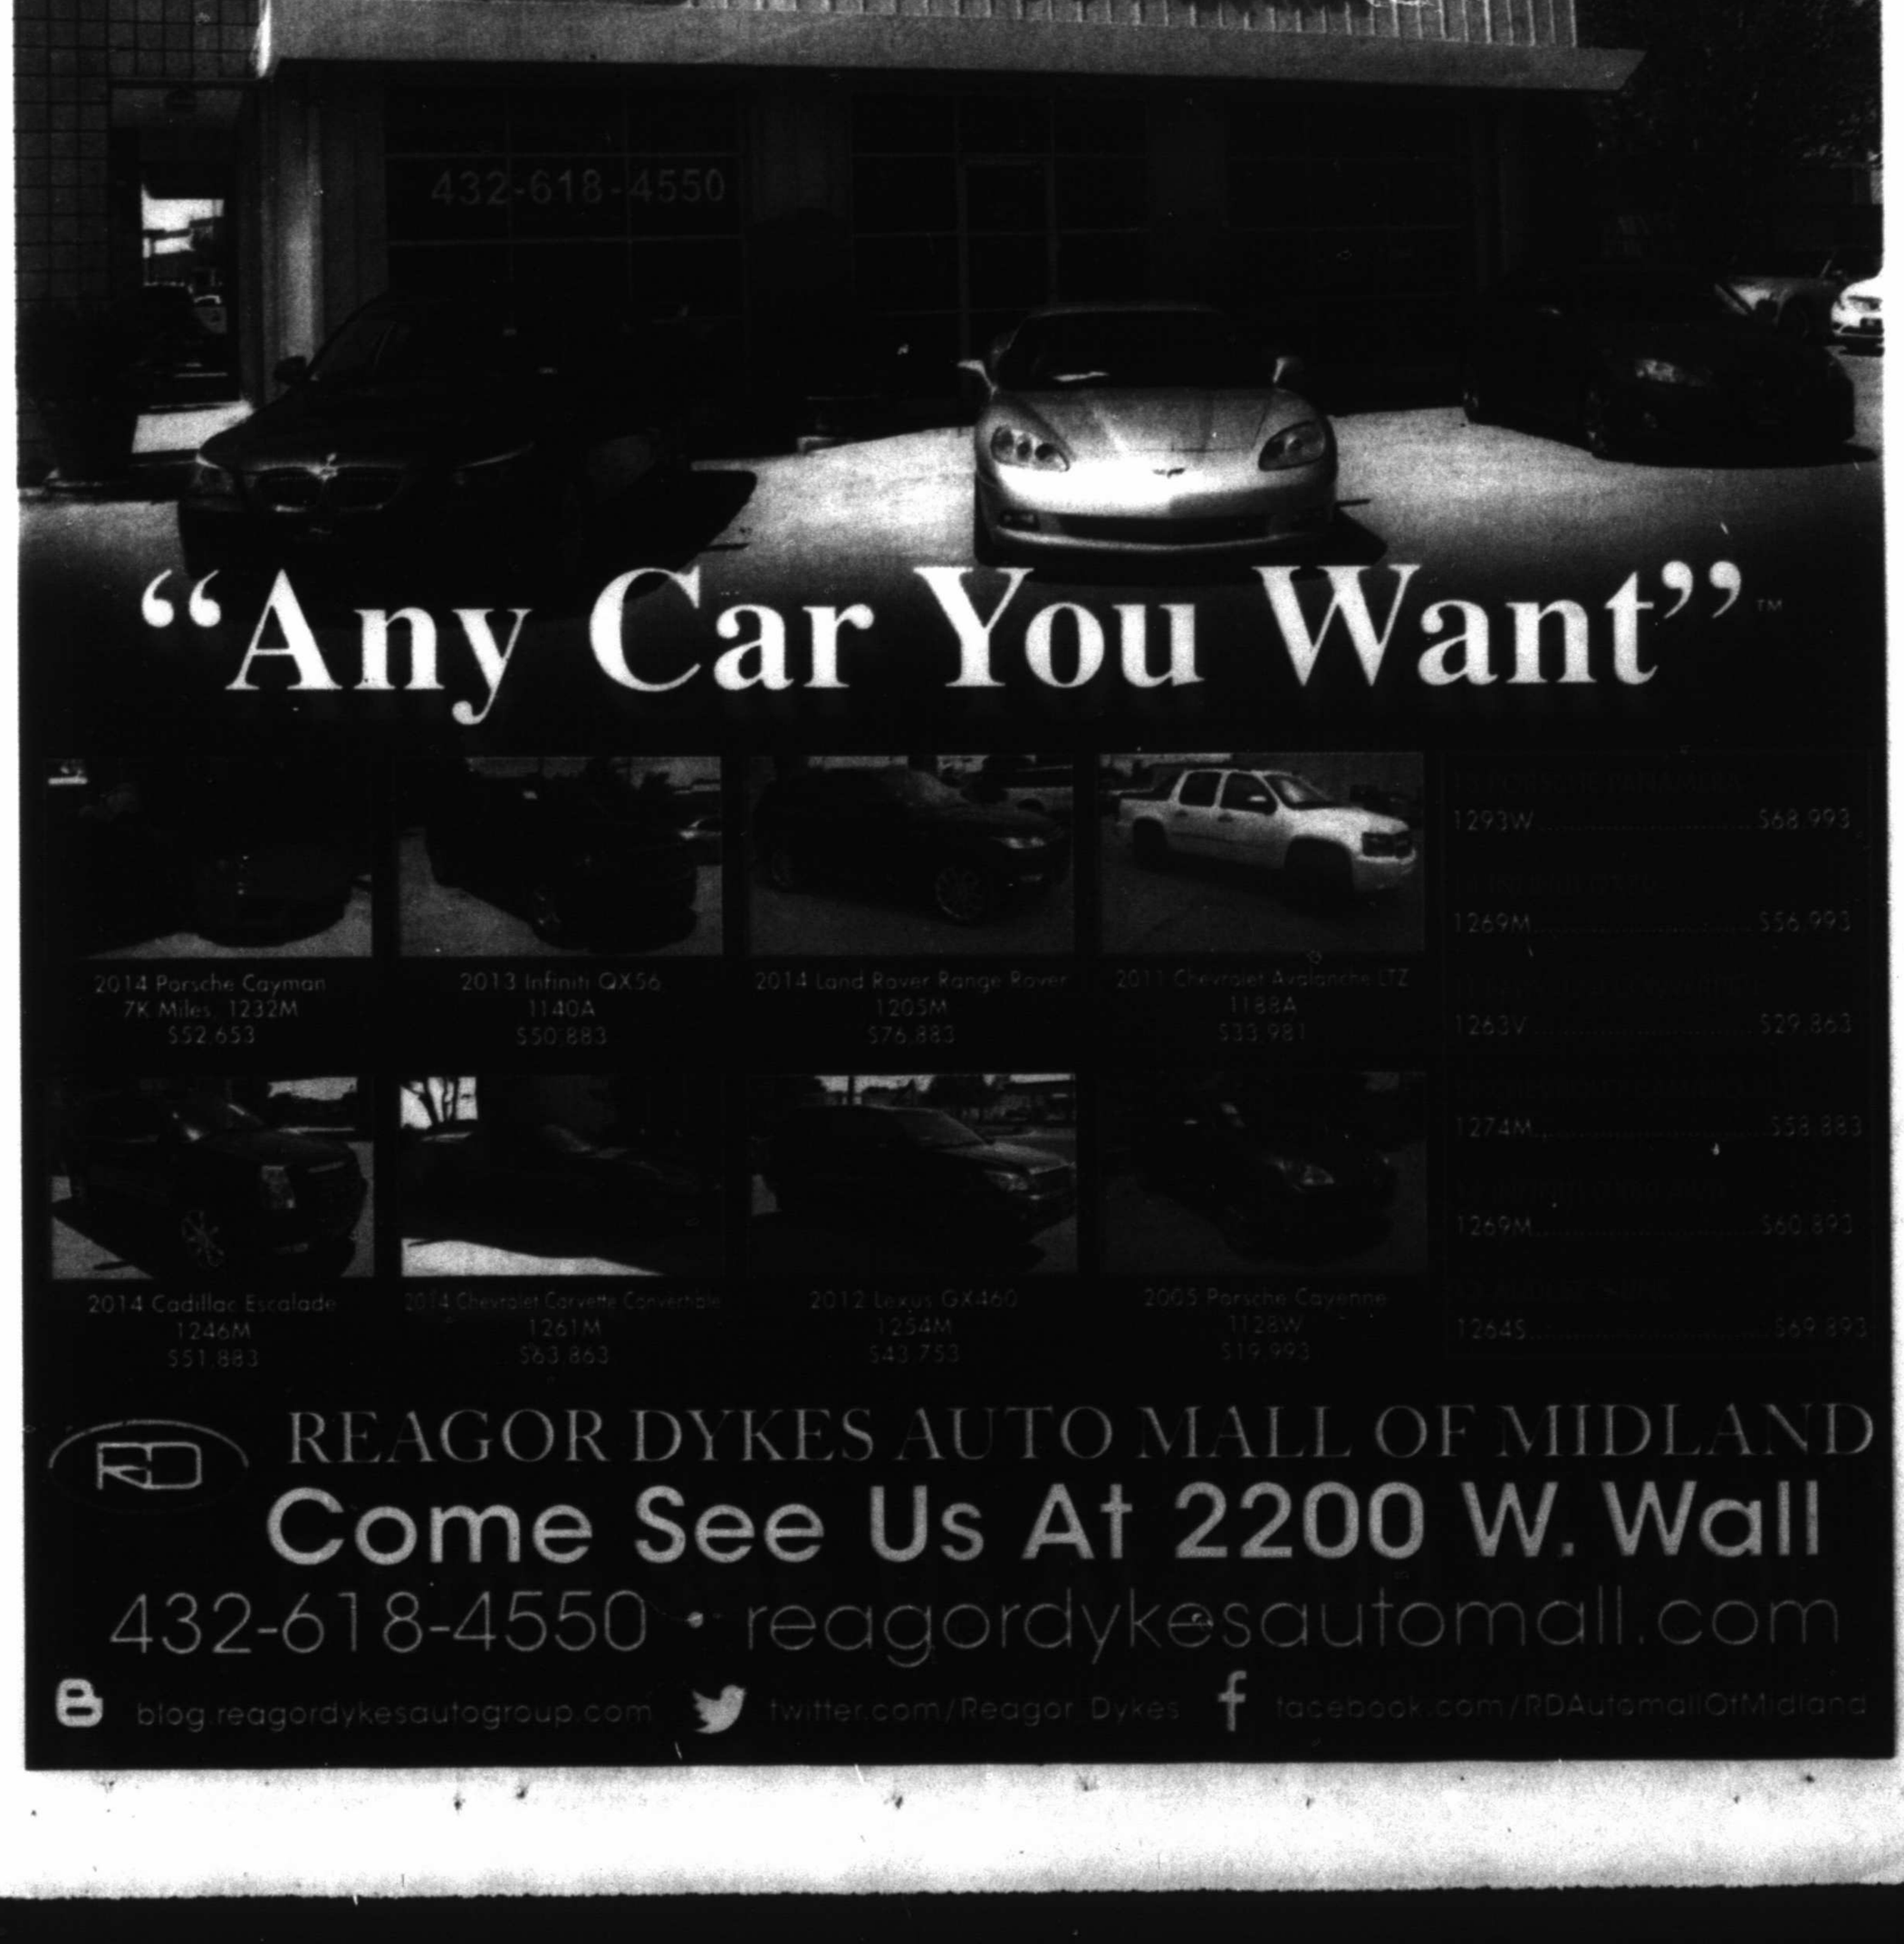

"I wonder why that is because whatever he does he is bashed, everybody seems to be against him," Van Praag told The Associated Press. "If you openly declare that you vote for Michael van Praag they are afraid if Blatter is re-elected that they maybe are afraid they will be removed from the list."

The "list" is officials who are deployed to about 800 World Cup qualifiers as a FIFA representative, enjoying several days of luxury travel and hospitality.

"It is not just money that people always believe, I think it is more a matter of being a match delegate, being in a committee and things like that," Van Praag said. "That's the power. It's very hard to break through."

When Blatter pledged before his unopposed re-election in 2011 that it would be his last term, UEFA president Michel Platini emerged as the favorite to succeed his one-time mentor. When it became clear Blatter would renege on his pledge and stand again, Platini ducked out of a duel but remains a critic from the sidelines.

"I won't support Blatter anymore," the former France great announced at the 2014 World Cup.

Walker survives week with endless questions

By Michael Marot
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — As Derrick Walker strolled through the Indianapolis Motor Speedway garages one day this week, he was stopped by an old friend.

Roger Penske, like everybody else, wanted an update on IndyCar's investigation into the safety of the cars. The topic isn't going away anytime soon for Walker, who has been enduring the toughest week of his two-year tenure overseeing competition in the series.

"I'd be lying if I didn't say it's been a pretty intense week," said a weary-looking Walker.

From the moment three-time Indianapolis 500 winner Helio Castroneves' car hit the wall in the first turn and went airborne last Wednesday, Walker's world has been turned upside down. Josef Newgarden had his own scary crash, then Ed Carpenter wrecked on Sunday before qualifying began for the Indianapolis 500.

Suddenly, Walker had a major headache to deal with just days before the series' showcase race.

Some argue the three frightening airborne crashes in Indianapolis 500 practice could have been prevented with more testing on the new oval aero kits. Others contend the push to challenge Indy's speed records, on the 100th running of the famous race, was little more than a risky gimmick. Those in Gasoline Alley largely believe this is all part of racing, a dangerous sport that tests limits and sometimes has spectacular, scary scenes.

Walker can take some solace in the fact the drivers in the Chevrolet cars, which have gotten most of the attention, all walked away without any serious injuries. James Hinchcliffe, who needed surgery to repair a massive wound to his left leg from a broken wishbone on his Honda car, also has been improving.

But concerns from the public have not subsided, and an investigation into the cause of these problems continues.

Walker

Walker raised the ire of some teams with last weekend's decision to delay qualifying while he met with team owners about reducing the horsepower level for safety reasons. He also instructed teams to use the slower race-day setups, moves that were not initially met with universal approval.

"It was a tough situation because a lot of times in racing when decisions are made, it benefits some and doesn't benefit others," said Larry Foyt, president of A.J. Foyt Enterprises. "I wasn't happy because our cars were working really good (in qualifying setup)."

Following the changes, Foyt's cars qualified 21st, 25th and 29th.

Other Honda-powered drivers, such as Graham Rahal, expressed disgust, too, saying Honda should not be penalized for a problem that appeared to only affect the Chevys, which have dominated the series this season.

Rahal also correctly predicted that his speed would be about 3 mph slower than the four-lap, pole-winning average posted by Chevy's Scott Dixon (226.760 mph). Rahal is starting 17th after going 224.290 mph.

On Thursday, Marco Andretti echoed Rahal's sentiments and noted his car was better in the faster setups, though he qualified eight at 225.189. Chevy drivers had similar complaints.

Walker heard all of those arguments during a series of impromptu meetings in Gasoline Alley, but used his calm demeanor, an emphasis of safety and the credibility he has built up through the years to get most team owners on board.

"Obviously, that was not a popular decision," Penske said. "I think he's good at this because he's been under the gun as a competitor and he understands both sides of the fence. This week and this month have been tough because we usually don't see cars experiencing what we've seen."

Penske, Ganassi, dominate last Indy 500 practice

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Will Power ended the final practice session for the Indianapolis 500 up front — exactly where he doesn't want to be for most of Sunday's race.

Power posted the fastest lap in Friday's hour-long session, which was free of any incidents and dominated by the Chevrolets from Team Penske and Chip Ganassi Racing. The Australian turned a fast lap at 229.020 mph to give Penske the session.

He then downplayed being atop the leaderboard.

"It means nothing, really. It's just a big draft," said Power, who won the road course race at Indianapolis Motor Speedway to open the month. "You know, we'll see on Sunday."

What Power does know is that he'd prefer not to be the leader for the bulk of Sunday's race. The last few races have been marked by multiple lead changes, including a whopping 35 last year.

Given his preference, Power said he'd like to race near the front Sunday but not be the actual leader.

"No one is going to want to lead," he said. "You can't get away. In the old car, you could get away, so track position was really important. Now you sit half throttle on the straights. Last year, no one would pass me. Leading felt like one of the biggest mistakes of the race. You had to pit earlier, you get shuffled back."

Power, who starts second Sunday, doesn't have to worry about pole-sitter Scott Dixon giving him the lead when the checkered flag waves. Dixon was second fastest in final practice with a lap at 228.585, and the New Zealand driver was one of the few who has no qualms about leading during the race.

"Oh, I'll lead," he smiled.

Girl's constant messaging sends nanny on a guilt trip

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I was a full-time summer nanny for several years for the same family, now a preteen boy and girl. I loved them, had a great time on the job and have communicated with them occasionally through the years on birthdays and holidays. Eventually, I moved away for college and was no longer able to sit for them.

Both kids now are on Facebook, and I (foolishly) accepted their friend requests. I use Facebook to keep in touch with family members or for school group projects, so I am on only once or twice a week.

The girl messages me almost daily with "Hey" or similar short things. I am unable to dedicate time to this kind of interaction even within my own age group, but I feel bad leaving so many messages unanswered. What can I tell her? I'd love to catch up around holiday times like we used to, but I'd like to be left alone online. — BUSY, BUSY IN CHICAGO

DEAR BUSY: As I see it, you have a choice: Tell her the truth, and explain it just as you have written to me, or contact her parents and have them explain it to her.

DEAR ABBY: My mom and dad are fighting and getting mad at each other a lot. I am trying my best to make them happy with each other, but nothing seems to work. They told me they would always be happy together, but it does not look like it right now. What do I do? — NEEDING HELP IN FLORIDA

DEAR NEEDING HELP: I have heard from young readers who told me their greatest fear was that their parents would divorce. But sometimes there are worse things than being a child of divorce, and one of them is living in a household filled with tension and parents who constantly argue and fight.

You are not the cause of their unhappiness, and you cannot "fix" what's wrong in their marriage. Although you might wish to be the peacemaker, you must accept that it is not your responsibility. A marriage counselor might be able to help them iron out their differences, but the person to suggest it should be another adult; if possible, it should be a relative.

DEAR ABBY: I am a public school teacher with an etiquette question. I receive gifts at class parties that occur at Christmas, Valentine's Day and the end of the year. When I do, I respond with a written thank-you note a few days later.

However, during the course of the year, I also receive thank-you cards for being a child's teacher, tutor or club sponsor. Many times these thank-you cards contain gift cards. If I open it in front of the giver, I always give a verbal thank-you, but is it required to write a thank-you for a thank-you? — WANTS TO DO IT RIGHT

DEAR WANTS TO DO IT RIGHT: A thank-you for a thank-you is not required. However, a thank-you that's accompanied by a GIFT should be acknowledged with a written note.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, May 23, 2015:

This year you are so upbeat that some of your friends might not be able to relate to you the same way. Try to be more responsive to those in your immediate circle. In any case, you put the finishing touches on the fine art of having fun. If you are single, you easily could meet someone who causes you to have a case of the butterflies. Be selective, as the person you choose will be quite significant to your life's history. If you are attached, you often want to share more of what is happening in each of your lives. Traveling enhances your relationship, as it helps you both relax more. LEO has a way of evoking passion and humor from you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ Your inclination to have fun will push you into the role of ring leader. Know that any fantasy of a quiet day has gone out the window. You have the ability to bring many people together and have a great time. Tonight: Respond to the moment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You might be better off just relaxing at home. Invite friends over for a fun get-together. If there is a common game everyone likes to get into, make sure it is available. You are likely to hear good news from someone at a distance. Tonight: Add lots of fun to the moment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Return calls, especially if you have any hesitancy regarding your plans. One-on-one relating adds to your comfort and allows greater give-and-take. Your sense of humor might not be received well by someone you care about. Find out what ails them. Tonight: Among friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Be more aware of what you have to offer. Others often can't get close enough to you. Maintain your budget, even if you are out and about. In the long run, you will feel better about yourself. Honor a need to head in a new direction. Tonight: Having fun does not need to cost you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Be spontaneous with your decisions, especially with one suggestion that seems to tickle your fancy. You will be delighted by what unravels as a result, as will those around you. Let go of concerns, and be a little more frivolous. Tonight: Your wish is someone else's command.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ You might be taken aback by what is happening around you. Your sense of direction emerges when you let go and stop worrying. Make this a personal day, and make a point of enjoying yourself as well as others. Tonight: Keep it low-key.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Zero in on what is important. Your friends will be the focus right now, and they will be determined to make the most out of the moment. Let go of stress that is weighing you down. Deal with a loved one directly. Tonight: Where the crowds are.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Demands come in from a relative, boss or someone you don't feel you can say no to. Be aware of your boundaries when dealing with this person. Try to limit the time you have to be with him or her. Reach out to a loved one. Tonight: In the center of the energy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ You might be considering taking off at the last minute. Refuse to follow the same old routine, and allow yourself to break precedent. Ideas flourish once you put yourself in a different environment. Tonight: Read between the lines with someone who is flirting.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You will want to consider an alternative solution to a hassle that emerges with a loved one or dear friend. You might want to push to have your way, but nearly immediately you will be dealing with heavy resistance. Ask a family member for some advice. Tonight: Make nice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Defer to others. Be receptive to someone's idea about staying within your budget but having a great time regardless. You'll find that the more people you are around, the better time you'll have. A new friend could be very controlling. Tonight: Make the most of the moment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Find out what is going on with a loved one. Once you get your work done, you will be able to relax more. You could be happy with going to a late lunch or just catching a movie. Get into the moment. Tonight: Make the most of your company and your environment.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys, I'm rather new to being a real estate agent, but I'm fairly certain that last weekend's experience is out of the norm. A couple came in and asked if I would show them my listing for a very expensive house. I was so excited I told them to jump in the car and we'd go. Little did I know that their 140-pound Bull-Mastiff had to tag along. "Charlie" had to like the house in order for them to buy. So we loaded in and took off. It seems Charlie liked it because the couple wanted to make an offer, but only after coming back next week with Charlie's older and larger brother, Max. This seems ridiculous, but the commission might just be worth it. Any ideas on how to impress a dog with a 2.8 million dollar home?

Cash: You know, many people treat their pets like family, but this is the first time we've heard of a dog making a large investment decision.

Carry: It kind of makes you wonder if their bank is Bark of America?

Cash: One thing is for sure. This sale could be one of the most expensive doghouses ever sold.

Carry: I'm not sure there's any protocol for showing a house to a dog. After all, Charlie and Max are probably not impressed with Italian marble floors or hand-crafted stained glass. They'd probably be more excited with a fire hydrant on the front lawn!

Cash: However, dogs do have a very keen sense of smell. As a real estate agent, you may know that people find a home more appealing when there is a pleasant aroma lingering in the air, such as a fresh baked apple pie or homemade bread.

Carry: Imagine what the dogs would think if they walked in and smelled the aroma of a fresh pot roast in the oven.

Cash: Of course, if a few drippings dropped on the floor, I'm sure they wouldn't mind if it was accidentally left behind.

Carry: The truth is that if your potential buyers are eccentric enough to let their dogs make the final decision, there probably isn't much you can do. After all, you don't know how they decide if Charlie or Max actually like the place. If Max lies down in front of the fireplace, is that a good sign or is he just bored?

Cash: Your best bet is to simply accommodate the owners to the best of your ability. But pay attention. You never know when the dogs might give some good stock advice.

Fast Facts

Odor Eater

Most dogs like to sniff everything. And with just one whiff, your dog can take in a lot of information. That's because dogs have about 25 times more smell receptors, called chemoreceptors, than us humans. That allows them to sense odor concentrations 100 million times lower than we can. So when they sniff the sidewalk, they can tell if the neighbor's poodle has been by or if someone dropped a donut on their morning stroll. That's probably also how they tell when the mailman is coming.

Trust Fund

We've all heard of people who inherit millions from their heirs. However, believe it or not, at least 16 states now allow owners to establish trust funds for their pets and pass on an inheritance for their care. In 1993 tobacco heiress, Doris Duke, left $100,000 to her dog Rodeo. It's been reported that actress Betty White will be leaving $5 million of her estate to her pets. Even Oprah Winfrey is believed to have added her dogs to her will so they may continue living in the lap of luxury. Nowadays, it seems a dog's life isn't so bad.

Full Disclosure

As a real estate agent, you never know what might come up when you show a house. Last weekend I was showing an older home to a couple. After touring the upper floors, we ventured into the basement for a final look.

As we walked around the rather vacant space, I told the couple I had to disclose that the basement sometimes floods during a heavy rain.

"I'm guessing like a swimming pool," the gentleman commented.

"Why would you say that," I asked him.

Pointing to the far end of the room, he replied, "They wrote on the wall, 'Deep End'!"

2112 Evans Lane

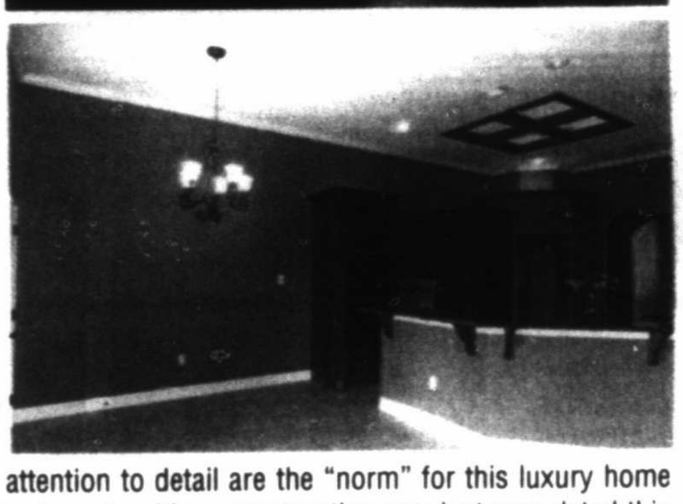

High end finishes, architectural enhancements and attention to detail are the "norm" for this luxury home located at 2112 Evans Lane in the Freeland Addition. Ready and waiting, construction was just completed this year. Located on 1.12 acres, it has 2,596 square feet (per plan) with four bedrooms, three full baths, two dining areas, one living area and an oversized three car garage. Schools for this neighborhood include Santa Rita Elementary, Goddard Jr. High and Midland High.

An exquisite iron front door (glass opens easily for cleaning) sets the tone for this upscale listing. Arched doorways, tall ceilings, double floor moldings, crown molding and stacked ceilings with painted inlays are just a few of the many "extras" you will enjoy in this home. Tile floors flow through the entry, den and kitchen. To the right of the entry is the formal dining room with a view of the front yard. A stacked ceiling, scraped wooden flooring and gorgeous iron chandelier combine to create a gorgeous backdrop to any dinner party.

Ahead of the entry is the den where a corner wood burning fireplace of stone and brick is the focal point of the room. Windows across the back wall provide a view of the back yard. The room is spacious and inviting and the perfect place to gather with family. Open to the kitchen, a granite wrap around bar separates the two areas. Six to eight barstools will comfortably fit at the bar; additional seating is nearby at the breakfast area. The kitchen features stainless Whirlpool appliances including double ovens, bronze fixtures, dark wooden cabinetry with decorative finishes (used throughout the home), a corner pantry and tile backsplash. A skylight provides natural light to the room. Nearby is the laundry room with six cabinets for storage and access to the spacious three-car garage.

A doorway from the kitchen leads to the formal dining area and hallway where there is as closet for storage, a sequestered bedroom and hall bathroom. All bedrooms in the home have plush carpeting, ceiling fans and large or walk-in closets. To the left of the entry are two more bedrooms with a Jack and Jill bathroom between them. Granite countertops, bronze fixtures, separate sinks and dressing areas make sharing easy.

A hallway from the den leads to the sequestered master bedroom. The stacked ceiling creates a spacious feel and windows provide a view of the back yard. The bath has dual sinks and dressing areas, jetted tub, separate shower with decorative tile and a walk in closet with built in shelves and dresser.

Out back, the yard is full of possibilities! A brick storage building with accessible well through the skylight makes it easy to service. Your covered porch is perfect for entertaining and has plenty of room for a table and chairs.

Additional amenities include: new construction, rear entry, sprinkler system, wood fence, sequestered master and mother-in-law plan, automatic garage door and water well with pump.

Come see this outstanding home for yourself! Open Sunday from 1:00-3:00 or call Sandy J. Hanson at (432) 638-3819. MLS# 102667.
