Texans have new laws to observe

AUSTIN (AP) - The 1997 Texas Legislature may be gone, but its decisions are hardly forgotten.

John Bender, communications director of the Texas House, said the 1,030 new laws passed during the legislative session that ended June 2 take effect Sept. 1.

The laws cover everything from saving water to destroying fire ants; from separating kids from tobacco to matching them with adoptive parents; from getting tougher on sex offenders to making it easier for low-income folks to get mortgages.

The legislation receiving the most attention during the 140-day lawmaking session got a jump on the rest of the new laws. That's the $1 billion reduction in local school property taxes. It was authorized in a constitutional amendment approved by voters on Aug. 9.

Some highlights of the new laws:

STATE BUDGET

Another Sept. 1 means another new state budget. Lawmakers approved spending $86.2 billion over the next two years. That total includes an increase of $5.5 billion in state money, a 6.8 percent boost over the past two-year budget.

SEX OFFENDERS

The Legislature got tough on sex offenders.

Heading the list is a "two strikes and you're out" law. It automatically sentences a person to life in prison if convicted of certain sex offenses two times. The convict will have to serve at least 35 years, after which parole will be an option if two-thirds of the parole board agrees

Another law will dramatically increase the number of sex offenders required to register with law enforcement authorities after release from custody. Texas already has 17,600 registered sex offenders living in neighborhoods, with 22,000 more behind bars. At least 4,000 will be released over the next four years, Attorney General Dan Morales has said.

Now, registration will be required by those convicted as far back as 1970. Offenders who receive probation - estimated to be 90 percent of those caught - also must register, Morales said.

A third law creates new procedures for sex offenders placed on probation. It allows extension of probation from a maximum of 10 years to a maximum of 20 years and creates intensive supervision of parolees.

CRIME VICTIMS

The maximum amount of compensation crime victims may receive from the state victims' fund is doubling. Victims who suffer catastrophic injuries causing permanent and total disability may be awarded $100,000, up from $50,000. Other victims will see the limit raised to $50,000 from $25,000. "Victims of crime need and deserve all of the emotional and financial support that we can give them," Morales said.

DRUNKEN DRIVING

Teen-age drinkers will feel the effects of another new law. It becomes illegal for people under 21 to drive with any amount of alcohol in their blood system. Underage drinkers who drive will lose their licenses for 60 days on the first offense, 120 days on the second offense and six months on the third and subsequent offenses.

They also will face criminal charges punishable by up to 40 hours of community service and $500 in fines for the first offense, with up to six months in jail and a $2,000 fine for third and subsequent offenses.

SMOKING

Lawmakers also got tougher on teen-age smokers, strengthening efforts to keep kids from tobacco.

A new law prohibits minors from possessing tobacco, requires education and awareness programs for minors caught with tobacco, charges retailers a fee to cover costs of enforcement and education, prohibits the distribution of free samples or coupons, restricts outdoor tobacco advertising within 1,000 feet of a church or school, and requires sellers to ask for photo ID to verify proof of age of tobacco buyers.

NURSING HOMES

The Legislature turned its attention to nursing homes as well. One of several new laws will set minimum standards for the quality of care and quality of life in nursing homes, along with residents' rights and other new standards.

ADOPTION

Based on recommendations from the Governor's Committee to Promote Adoption, legislators approved a bill designed to protect parental rights of fathers while speeding up adoptions for children whose fathers are unwilling to assume responsibility for them.

CHILD CARE

Criminal and child abuse histories will be checked under the new law being applied to those who are paid to provide home child care for three or fewer children who aren't relatives. Sponsoring Rep. Sherri Greenberg, D-Austin, said, "Since the state already conducts background checks on public school teachers, Big Brother-Big Sister volunteers and others, it only makes sense to have background checks on those who take care of small children."

Family pushed artist

Garcia's art wins awards

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

Jo Garcia's been doing things with her hands all her life, but it took the push of her husband, Rumaldo, and their children to get her to try her hand at art.

Garcia, who was a hairdresser in Hereford until 1986, hasn't had any formal art training, but she's claimed some prizes in competition. In fact, her first work received third-place honors in a show in Colorado.

"I've been doing art always, since I was a kid," Garcia said. "I'd play with anything I could get my hands on, but I didn't really start sculpting until '96.

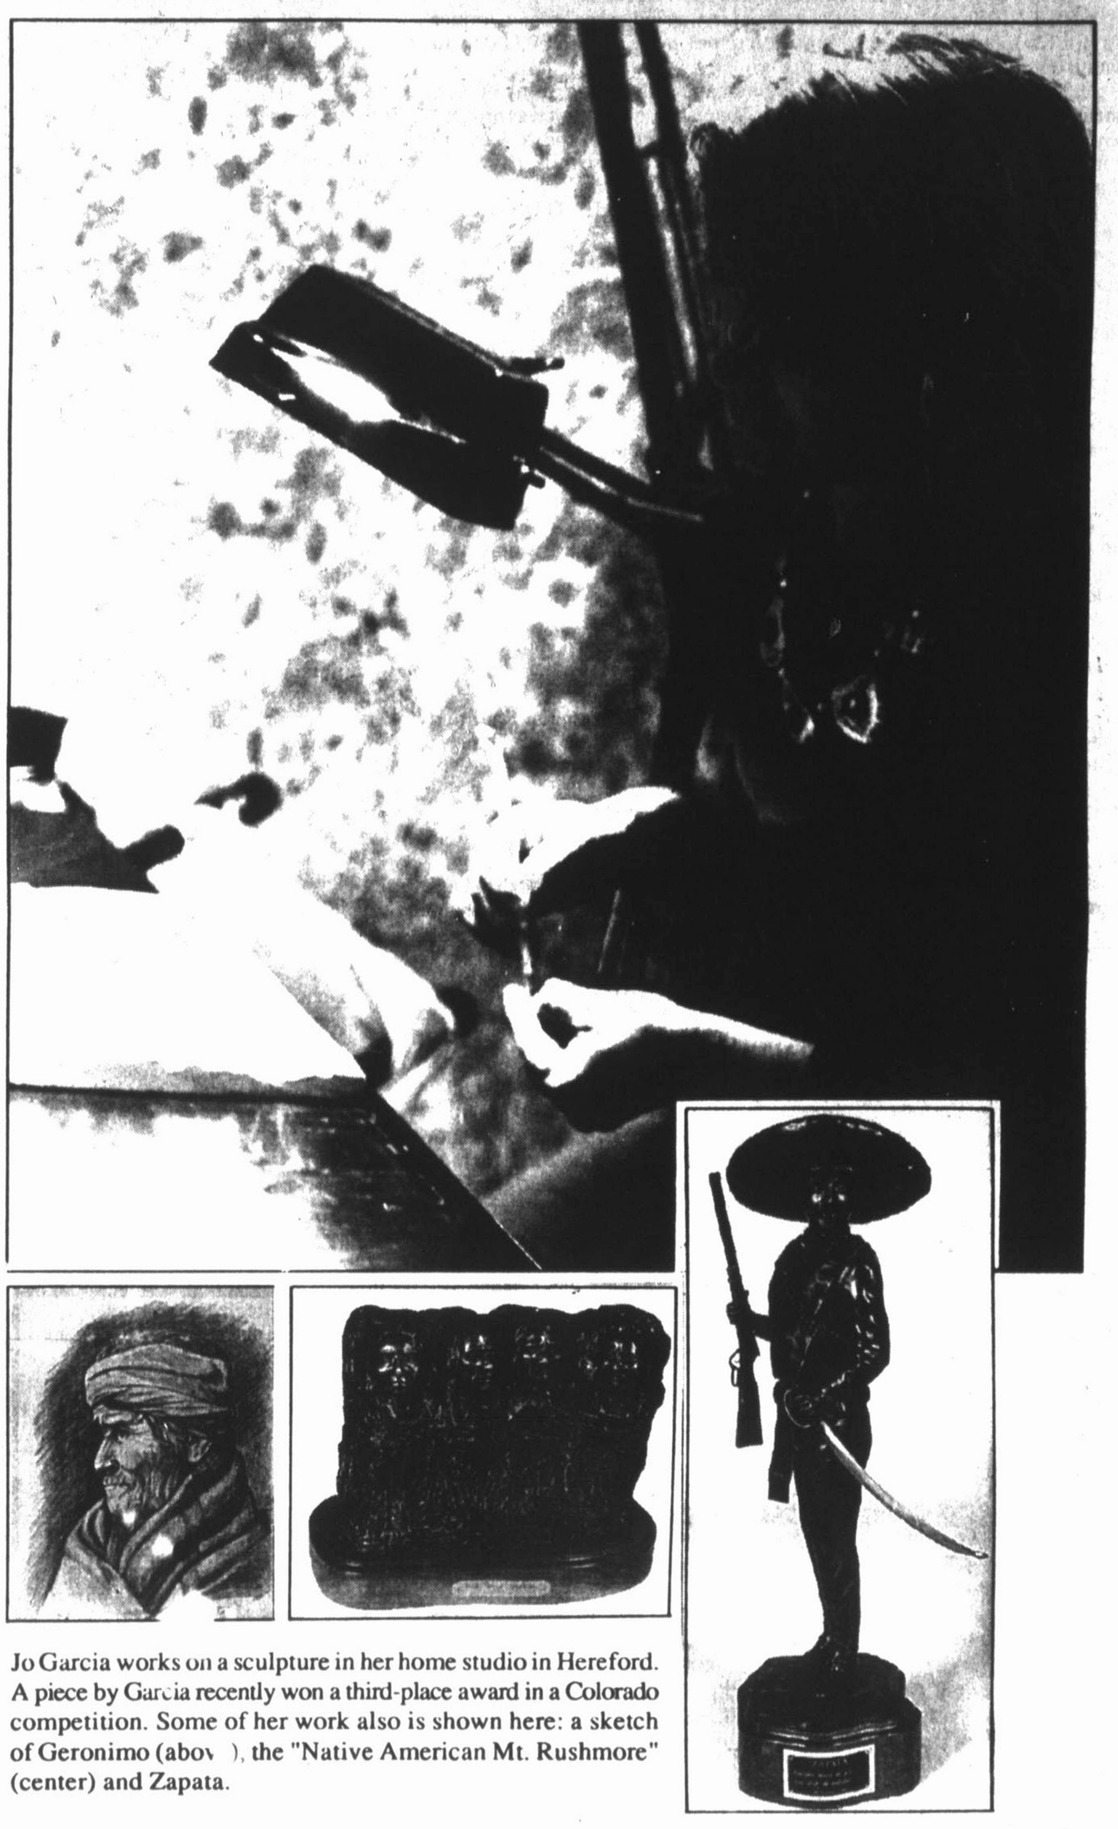

"I never have really taken lessons. I just start by books, learning how to use certain tools ... just this week I got some color pencils. I've been doing sketching always, but my son said, 'Mom, why don't you put some color in it?'"

So, she purchased some color pencils, read some books about color pencil artwork, and has begun to move into new areas of art.

She got a start in sculpting when visiting her son, who was opening a business in Loveland, Colo. She went to the Loveland Academy and signed up for a workshop that always was under way.

"I was completely lost. I thought, 'What did I miss?' But the artist said that if you don't learn from him, you'll learn from someone in the class, and I learned a lot," she said.

She did her first sculpture in that workshop, and she acknowledges she knew very little about perspective.

Jo Garcia works on a sculpture in her home studio in Hereford. A piece by Garcia recently won a third-place award in a Colorado competition. Some of her work also is shown here: a sketch of Geronimo (above), the "Native American Mt. Rushmore" (center) and Zapata.

"I would just stand back across the room and look at it. But I got the arms, the legs - everything - right," she said with a laugh.

That first sculpture, "Zapata," was cast in bronze and is displayed on a stand in her husband's office in their home on U.S. Hwy. 385 South.

Although Garcia enjoys sketching - and she has numerous sketches, including pencil works of the Native American leaders Geronimo and Quanah Parker, and the late Grateful Dead guitarist Jerry Garcia, displayed in her home - she said sculpting has become her first love.

"Sketching has always been fun, but now that I've discovered sculpting, I can get lost in it. I just love it and working in three dimensions," she said.

"I don't know if I should take some courses," she said. Then, she recalled an attempt at studying art through correspondence when she was a teenager.

"When I was a kid, I tried one of those (correspondence) courses that you see in magazines. I did an oil painting from out here, but the man said it was too dead, it needed some more color in it. So he redid it, making a barn red and a lot of other

Study concludes climatic catastrophe is in the making

NEW YORK (AP) - Delaying reductions in greenhouse gas emissions could cause a sudden climate catastrophe in northern Europe, a new study concludes.

The longer the world waits to decrease the production of carbon dioxide and other pollutants that warm the atmosphere, Swiss researchers found, the greater the chance that the North Atlantic's major currents will abruptly stop during the next century. If they do, Western Europe could suddenly freeze.

"This is very much a precautionary warning that there is such a risk," said Stefan Rahmstorf of the Institute for Climate Impact Research in Potsdam, Germany. "But we cannot calculate that risk."

Atlantic Ocean currents carry enormous amounts of heat from the tropics to Europe, keeping places like Copenhagen and Glasgow mild even though they lie farther north than Moscow and Edmonton. A sudden influx of fresh water to the North Atlantic could disturb the ocean's circulation enough to shut it down.

Because global warming is expected to increase precipitation, especially in northern climes, researchers are concerned that rain and snow could supply the fresh water that would shut down the North Atlantic's circulation, sending Western Europe into a deep freeze. That happened several times at the end of the last ice age, when melting glaciers provided the fresh water to produce centuries-long cold snaps.

In 1993, scientists estimated that pushing greenhouse gases to a threshold between twice and four times their natural level would probably trigger the same process.

The current study goes one step further, concluding that it isn't just the amount of greenhouse gases that determines whether the North Atlantic's circulation will be disrupted. The rate of carbon dioxide increase is also important, Thomas Stocker and Andreas Schmittner of the University of Bern, Switzerland, conclude.

They estimate that reaching an atmospheric carbon dioxide concentration of 750 parts per million - about twice the present value - within 100 years could turn off the North Atlantic circulation.

"This sensitivity ... to the rate of change of atmospheric carbon dioxide concentration has potentially important implications for the choice of carbon dioxide emission scenarios," the researchers write in the Aug. 28 issue of the journal Nature.

Representatives of the world's nations will meet in December in Kyoto, Japan, to discuss reductions in greenhouse gas emissions. Although scientists have concluded that greenhouse gas reductions are necessary to curb global warming, they cannot say for certain how much emissions need to be reduced.

So the study further reinforces something that scientists already knew - waiting to begin reducing carbon dioxide emissions exposes the world to an uncertain amount of climate risk.

"I can promise that in 10 years we will know a lot more about it," Rahmstorf said. "The problem is that it wouldn't be advisable to wait for 10 years in the political arena and do nothing."

Post Office expects billion dollar year,

Excess lowers debt by millions

WASHINGTON (AP) - Another billion-dollar profit may be in the post office's future.

Postmaster General Marvin Runyon said Monday the U.S. Postal Service "may earn another billion dollars in net income this year."

That would make it the third straight year for such profits at the agency.

Surpluses in 1995 and 1996 totaled $3.4 billion, allowing the Postal Service to reduce its outstanding debt from $6 billion to $2.7 billion.

The past 36 months were "the finest three years in postal history," Runyon told a meeting of the National Association of Postmasters in Philadelphia.

Runyon's remarks did not include any comment on the possibility of delaying a proposed 1-cent increase in the current 32-cent first class rate.

Tirso del Junco, chairman of the Postal Service's board of governors, said Saturday that continuing profits at the agency could result in a postponement of that price rise.

The complex process of increasing postal prices means that an increase could not be imposed before next May at any rate, but no official date has been set for the change.

Del Junco told The Washington Post he would "like to push the (increase) date back" because of the profit the agency expects to make from handling extra mail during the 15-day UPS strike. During the UPS strike the Postal Service handled between 1.8 million and 2.4 million extra items per day.

"We delivered 9 billion pieces of mail during the strike, as much as we handle at the height of the holidays. The bottom line is, we delivered," Runyon said.

The post office's continuing profitability breaks away from a three-year cycle that had occurred often in the past, with the post office making money in the year following a rate increase, breaking even the second year and then going into the red as costs increased, leading to another rate hike.

Runyon also used the Philadelphia speech to respond to efforts by competing services to get Congress to limit the agency's international Global Package Link service.

"A bold, effective Postal Service is not something they want to see," Runyon said.

Instead of improving their international services to compete with the post office, he said, competitors "went running to Congress, making claims that we have special advantage in moving merchandise through customs. ... The issue isn't customs, its customers," he proclaimed.

EX-JUDGE MUST PAY ESTATE

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - A federal bankruptcy judge has ordered former Taylor County Judge James McMillon to pay more than $200,000 to an estate he mishandled.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John C. Akard handed down the ruling Friday, accusing McMillon of "self dealing" in the matter. McMillon was ordered to repay his $50,000 executor's fee, two $6,500 loans, attorneys' fees and court costs to the estate of Rosalyn Skiles Awtry. He also must pay triple that amount in punitive damages.

"This court is upset about this matter," Akard said. "This matter is egregious."

The verdict means Ms. Awtry's assets will be transferred to the last surviving beneficiary, a charitable trust, nine years after her death.

McMillon and his attorney, Thomas Wheeler, declined comment on their way out of court Friday.

HOUSTON VOTE ON AFFIRMATIVE ACTION SET

HOUSTON (AP) - More than 20,000 signatures have been verified on a petition to repeal the city's affirmative action policy, setting the stage for a Nov. 4 election on the issue.

The City Council must approve inclusion of the Houston Civil Rights Initiative on the ballot, but a council vote is considered a formality.

Initiative leader Edward Blum said the verification shows the support in the community to end affirmative action in the city's government.

"We have found that most people are very hostile to the idea of racial and gender preferences," Blum told the Houston Chronicle on Friday.

"It's up to us not only to describe to them what the city is doing, but also how the success of passing this initiative will compel our city leaders to find alternatives to what they are doing now," he said.

MURDER CHARGE SHOCKS TOWN

KAUFMAN (AP) - When Almon Derwood Sikes, a popular Kaufman auto supply and appliance dealer, lost his wife in July 1990 to what authorities ruled were natural causes, the small East Texas town was saddened.

When Sikes was arrested Aug. 21 on charges that he murdered his wife of 42 years seven years ago, the town was shocked.

His arrest has flooded the streets of this town of 5,500 people, about 45 miles southeast of Dallas, with rumor and speculation.

"If you go into a store, neighbors are getting into each other's faces, hollering about this," resident Corey Cassells told The Dallas Morning News for a story in Saturday's editions. "People have their own theories. They've gotten to talking about O.J. Simpson and that kind of mess."

SHERMAN WORKERS SHARE JACKPOT

AUSTIN (AP) - Eight employees of the Folger Coffee Co. in Sherman on Friday collected a $6.5 million check after winning part of the $38 million Lotto Texas jackpot on Aug. 20.

The eight, from Sherman, formed the BPWU partnership, which they said was taken from their employer's motto - "best part of waking up."

The winners are: Micheal Davenport, Ray Petree, Pat Russell, Nancy Ary, Sherry Ramsey, Kathleen Ray, Lillis Martin and Genele Rae Eichler.

TEXAS AFL-CIO SUES GOVERNOR

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas AFL-CIO on Friday sued Gov. George W. Bush, charging that he failed to follow state law and appoint a worker representative to chair the Texas Workers' Compensation Commission.

Ray Sullivan, a spokesman for the governor, called the lawsuit "groundless and unnecessary."

The AFL-CIO's lawsuit, filed Friday, says that Bush failed to alternate the chairmanship between an employers' representative and an employees' representative.

"The law allows the chairman to serve a full two-year term, and our appointee has only served for 23 months. In addition, it is appropriate for him to serve until a successor is named," Sullivan said.

The lawsuit seeks to compel appointment of a wage earner to chair the agency.

GTECH APPEALS DECISION ON REBID PROCESS

AUSTIN (AP) - The company that operates the Texas Lottery's on-line games, GTECH, Friday appealed a decision denying its protest of a rebidding process for the lucrative contract.

The Lottery's executive director ruled against GTECH's protest Monday. The company has filed an appeal with the full commission, which meets next week.

NAVY CONTRACTOR STIFFS WORKERS

WICHITA FALLS (AP) - Employees at the Navy's satellite surveillance system have not been paid for a month and are threatening to stop work if the situation continues, the Wichita Falls Times Record News reported in its Saturday editions.

"Today is one month since they've been paid," said Larry Chamberlain, business manager of the Electrical Workers Local 681, which represents workers at the Naval Space Surveillance System, or NAVASPUR.

"They gave them checks that bounced and then they kept saying, 'Run it through again, run it through again,' and then they'd bounce again," Chamberlain said. "Three and a half weeks after the first checks bounced, they finally got replacement checks."

Minnesota reduces welfare roles,

Recipients move towards self-suffiency

By BETH SILVER
Associated Press Writer

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) - A Minnesota pilot welfare project that combines a work requirement with generous cash benefits shows promise for moving long-term recipients off assistance, traditionally the toughest group to help.

According to a study being released Thursday, the program was most successful in urban areas, where long-term single parents were 39 percent more likely to be employed and 16 percent less likely to continue living in poverty. Long-term clients are those on assistance for more than two years.

"It is among the most significant efforts in the nation and it is now proved to be so," said Deborah Huskins, assistant commissioner at Minnesota's Department of Human Services.

However, the study of 9,000 welfare recipients found the program did not move people off the welfare rolls any faster, and it cost the state $45 more per person than the old welfare program, called Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

"It's awful early to say that we have any answer to the long-term dilemma or even the medium-term dilemma," said Sid Johnson of the American Public Welfare Association.

Like other states, Minnesota's welfare rolls have dropped dramatically over the past few years - down 19 percent since 1993.

But the pilot program found a way to increase employment while reducing poverty - a unique achievement, said the report by Manpower Demonstration Research Corp. of New York, a social science research firm that has evaluated dozens of welfare-to-work programs across the country.

Welfare reforms that push people into jobs often fail to pull them out of poverty because the work pays so little, the research firm explained.

The key was requiring single adults to start working within two years of receiving benefits while also allowing them to keep more of their monthly welfare check, said one of the study's authors, Virginia Knox.

Families on the pilot project received benefits until their combined incomes reached $22,470, or 40 percent above the federal poverty level, for a family of four. Under AFDC, they would have lost assistance once their income reached about $13,600.

"Not only did (Minnesota) increase employment ... more unusual is that it reduced poverty for people who were working," Knox said.

The project, called Minnesota Family Investment Program, has been operating since 1994 in eight counties. Lawmakers used it as a blueprint for a new statewide welfare law that takes effect in January.

Sontha Reine of Minneapolis, who has been on assistance since her husband left her with two young children five years ago, said the differences between AFDC and the trial program were astounding.

Reine, 36, now works 20 hours a month in security at the Mall of America in suburban Bloomington.

"I did another one, but I must have had the same critic because the same thing happened, so I quit after two lessons," she said.

After that, she decided to teach herself, although she does get critiques from her brother, also an artist.

"He helps me. He says that everyone's different, that art is from within you, so it's not right to change someone else's technique. You can help, but you shouldn't try to change someone else's work.

"We exchange ideas, but we've never worked together. Maybe we will," she said.

Since jumping in to art full time, Garcia displayed some work at the citywide garage sale in July, showed work at an art show at the Las Tiendas Gallery in Amarillo, and entered two pieces in a show in Greeley, Colo., for which one piece recieved third-place honors.

She also has work displayed in the "Echoes in the Canyon" show in Quitaque, and next month will have pieces on display at the Deaf Smith County Library.

She's also joined the Amarillo Fine Arts Association and one in New Mexico, which will allow her to exchange ideas with other artists - and get her name known.

LAWS

WATER

For the first time, Texas has a water plan.

This new law addresses policy on drought response management, water management, marketing, water transfers, surface and groundwater supplies, financial assistance to local governments and small community assistance. It requires detailed data to pinpoint where and how much water the state has in an effort to develop ways to conserve and maximize future use.

HMOs

The Texas Legislature broke new ground nationally as it approved several laws governing managed medical care.

Heading the list is law making Texas the first state to allow managed-care organizations to be sued for medical malpractice if their decisions to delay or deny treatment harm a patient.

Another law expands HMO patient protection, puts into law existing state rules on the managed-care plans and transfers oversight of quality of care from the Texas Department of Health to the Department of Insurance. A third speeds up review processes for patients with life-threatening conditions.

LOW-INCOME HOUSING

Lawmakers created the Texas Affordable Housing Corp. to engage in mortgage banking to help provide housing for moderate and low-income Texans.

TELEPHONES

Two new laws are taking effect that will be noticed by phone customers.

The first makes it illegal for telecommunications companies to switch a customer's telephone service provider without the customer's OK. The second requires telephone solicitors to stop blocking their identities when calling potential customers who may have caller ID devices. That law also imposes a time limit of 30 seconds on automatically dialed calls to consumers.

SPORTS STADIUMS

Cities and counties will be able use local tax money to finance sports stadiums or civic venues. This new law allows local voters to decide whether to raise taxes or implement new fees to finance the structures. Voters may choose among a variety of funding options, ranging from raising sales and rental-car taxes to charging a tax on admission to the venue.

FIRE ANTS

A provision in the state budget might lead to relief for homeowners, farmers, ranchers and anyone else who's felt the sting of a fire ant. Lawmakers provided $2.5 million in each of the next two years for research into long-term, cost-effective and ecologically sound methods of controlling the tiny pests. Funding also will go to organize community-wide fire ant management programs.

HORSE THEFT

And finally, in the "Where else but Texas?" category, lawmakers decided to make things harder for horse thieves. The new law requires the Texas Agricultural Extension Service to provide theft prevention training for horse owners and identifies law enforcement agencies that are responsible for training their employees to investigate horse thefts.

Allstate customers to get refund

AUSTIN (AP) - An estimated 750,000 consumers will receive $42.7 million from three Allstate insurance companies in the largest refund ever ordered by the Texas Department of Insurance against an automobile insurer.

Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer signed the agreement Friday, ordering refunds for consumers allegedly overcharged for auto liability policies.

"I'm pleased that Allstate agreed to end this controversy by reducing its rates and refunding the amounts its policyholders were overcharged," Bomer said.

"I want the industry to understand clearly that the Texas Department of Insurance will be challenging rate filings which are not accurate or in compliance with the law," he said.

The refunds will range from $5 to $100, depending on the amount of premiums paid and duration of the coverage.

Customers will receive refunds either as checks or as credits against premiums for current or renewal policies. Former policyholders will receive checks.

Allstate is the state's third-largest personal auto insurance company, with approximately 14 percent of the market.

The action affects customers of Allstate Insurance Company, Allstate Indemnity and Allstate Property & Casualty purchasing auto insurance policies between June 30, 1995 and Sept. 8, 1997. In agreeing to the order, Allstate denied any violation of state insurance laws.

"Allstate believes this settlement is in the best interest of our customers, employees and shareholders," said company spokeswoman Sharon Cooper in Dallas.

"It is a clear example of why differences between insurance companies and regulators should be resolved within the (insurance department) and not through costly, unnecessary litigation. The settlement represents Allstate's strong commitment to work with TDI on issues that arise in the normal course of business," she said.

Friday's order ended a case that began when the department found what it said were discrepancies in auto liability rates filed by Allstate in 1995 and 1996.

The agency charged that the rates were excessive for several reasons, including a built-in subsidy for auto liability policies the Allstate companies issued to participants in the state's high-risk plan, and use of a smaller tort reform rate reduction factor than required by insurance department rules.

Rod Bordelon, the state's Public Insurance Counsel who represents consumers, praised the agreement.

"We simply thought it was appropriate to refund the money to the policyholders. After all, if they were overcharged, it's their money," he said.

Allstate filed acceptable new rates effective Sept. 8, the insurance department said.

In their new rate filing, the three companies agreed to offer the optional 10 percent good student and student-away-at-school discounts, which they hadn't previously made available, officials said.

HOOTIE'S VOCALIST ACCUSED OF FIGHTING

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) - A man says he was just trying to make participants in an argument hold their hands when he was punched by Hootie and the Blowfish's lead singer.

Ronald Woltze of James Island, near Charleston, said he was trying to defuse an impending fight outside a convenience store early Friday when he was hit several times and thrown to the ground by Darius Rucker, The (Charleston) Post and Courier reported Tuesday.

No charges have been filed.

The Real World

Forget the soaps

School's back in session, and like most moms, I thought I'd heard all the complaints.

"Why do we have to go to school?, It's to early to go to bed! My teachers don't like me" and all the rest, but the other day my oldest kid pulled a new one on me.

She asked me to find some excuse so she could miss one of her classes, on a daily basis, to watch a soap opera.

"Oh yes! I'll get right to it!" (In her dreams.)

I can't tell her to tape it, because the VCR is on the blink. Never mind, I don't really want her watching it anyhow.

Now, I never understood why people got hooked on the stupid things, but all through college, and even before, I knew people who scheduled their day around certain soaps.

The few times I've ever watched one of the programs, it seems the same thing is going on, just with different characters.

Someone is dying or dead; everyone wears mega-jewelry everywhere they go; the poorest of characters live in extreme luxury and someone has just returned from the dead or missing.

I always considered real life far more intriguing than any soap could ever be.

First of all, I've never known anyone to come back from the dead, with the exception of some acquaintances who decided to give up the bottle.

I look at all the good jewelry owned by the my entire family, 30 years worth of friends and all the jewelry that finds its way to the local pawn shops and it still doesn't equal the amount worn by one character in any of the programs.

My friends and neighbors are hard-working people, who have had their fair share of life's ups and downs, but have never lived in anything like the fantastic homes in some of the soaps.

The people I come in contact with consider a two-year-old Chevy a new car. They don't even consider a new Rolls Royce.

With so many people addicted to the daily soap operas, it makes me wonder what are the addicts missing in their own lives to make them turn to the daytime dramas.

If they are in desperate need of love, wouldn't they get more from adopting a homeless animal or, better yet, volunteering with any number of organizations which cry for help?

Romance and passion, an overpowering feature of daytime dramas, has to exist within a relationship and there has to be more to it than just jumping in the sack with someone.

Like everything in life, you only get out the same amount you put in.

Personally, I plan to put in as much as possible so that the life I lead will be richer and fuller and far more rewarding than anything acted out by Victor, Victoria, Eric, Stephanie or any of the others phonies.

Please feel free to join me, and leave the soaps to those individuals who can't make a go of it on their own.

Just Trying to Help

City needs copter

The feller on Tierra Blanca Creek just got back from a pleasure trip. He took his mother-in-law to the airport.

We've been residents of Hereford for a little under three years now, so I've still got 17 more to go before I get off the newcomer's list. That's OK, but I've been trying to think of ways I could help attract those industries like Mike Hatley and Don Cumpton and the city leaders are trying to land.

The paper recycling folks were taking a look and maybe it won't turn out to be pulp fiction. Don, Mike and Co. are working hard and that will pay off in days to come, but I want to do my part, too.

Therefore, I think we need a traffic helicopter. Bigger, successful cities have a traffic helicopter. You can bet Milsap and Cleburne don't have one. With the county and city making up their budgets now, maybe we ought to look at getting a good used one. That would add a lot to our city, especially during the 25 Mile Avenue reconstruction.

We could get Chip or Capt. Billy from KPAN up there during rush hour for traffic reports, which could be helpful and personal.

Imagine Don or Mike driving visiting business scouts around and tuning in to KPAN:

"This is Capt. Billy high over Hereford. Don't worry, I'm in the KPAN traffic chopper. Traffic is stacked up 22 cars deep in the southbound lane of 25 Mile Avenue and the Park Avenue exchange this morning. We suggest an alternate route of either Avenue B or a stopoff at Troy's Sweet Shop for a donut and a cup of coffee. Also, Mrs. Jones, we see you are headed east on Park. You need to know you left your garage door up. Heather, your mother called and wanted us to remind you that you are not to put your makeup on in your car on your way to classes this morning. And, you boys down at the courthouse can rest easy a few more minutes, Judge Simons still hasn't left the house yet. This morning's traffic report has been brought to you by Troy's Sweet Shop."

Until the evening rush hour, the chopper could spray crops or mosquitoes. We'd blow the likes of Cleburne and Milsap away.

Just trying to help.

oOo

It seems we have had to do this too often in Hereford lately. Maybe it's just my age and I notice it more now. We had to say goodbye for now to Donnie Owen and Charlie Bell.

Donnie Stagner Owen moved to this country when it was still very young. She stayed until she was very old. When she passed away this last week, she had spent nearly a century making people feel special. It takes a special person to make a person feel special. That, however, was Donnie's specialty.

Charlie was a presence in Hereford for nearly 40 years. He brought music to the band, protection and a sense of security to his clients, but mostly he brought joy to the hearts of family and friends.

They were good'uns and we will miss them greatly.

Reflections

Cartoon just not appreciated

Every editorial cartoonist probably has drawn at least one favorite cartoon that he or she thinks is an excellent example of what an editorial cartoon should be - funny, insightful - but one that manages to be unappreciated by others.

Bill Mauldin, my personal cartoonist hero, wrote in "Up Front," his best-selling book of recollections about World War II, abouthis experience with one of his favorite cartoons. In recalling his experience with the cartoon, Mauldin wrote:

"Once I thought I did a very funny cartoon. It was a picture of an old-time cavalryman shooting his jeep, which had a broken axle. It is one of those cartoon ideas you think up rarely; it has simplicity, it tells a story, it doesn't need words. It is, I believe the very best kind of cartoon.

"At the time I was stationed at Fort Devens with my division, the feature editor of Yank, the Army weekly, asked me to send him some stuff. I did, but he didn't like the material. He had just come from a civilian magazine, where the only army cartoons showed jeeps jumping over mountains. After about a dozen drawings, I stopped sending stuff to him, but he did use the cavalary cartoon. He reduced it to postage-stamp size and ran it on the last column of the last page. One sneeze by the puniest typesetter and I'd have been blown right off the page ...

"I revived the old cavalry sergeant in the Stars & Stripes, where I have a regular two-column space which can't be made any smaller. I shall keep reviving that cartoon until somebody appreciates it."

While cartooning never gained the fame (or earned the fortune) of Bill Mauldin, I have managed to have drawn at least one cartoon that I believe has not been properly appreciated.

I was with the Daily Iberian, an afternoon newspaper in New Iberia, La., where I wroked as news editor and doubled as editorial cartoonist. Because I also covered the Port of Iberia and, briefly, the Iberia Parish government, the publisher decided that I shouldn't do cartoons under my own name. He thought the paper could catch some flak if I were drawing cartoons about the people whom I was covering.

I thought that was unnecessary because I had been doing that double duty for years and there had been no problems; however, I agreed to use a pseudonym for my cartoons.

I chose my paternal grandmother's maiden name, so for nearly three years in Louisiana, I was "Norwood" at the drawing board.

Louisiana was also the place where I drew the cartoon that I think hasn't been properly appreciated.

The cartoon was the result of the big and very expensive screwup by NASA.

With much fanfare, the space agency had launched the Mars Observer, a billion-dollar project that would take a look up close at Mars and send back what it had seen to the NASA scientists waiting several million miles away on Earth. After months of travel, the satellite was in position near the planet and hundreds of NASA scientists were poised to receive all of the data.

But, nothing happened.

Silence.

There was nothing but very, very expensive dead air.

The satellite didn't transmit.

I drew a cartoon of the satellite - asleep - as it flew by Mars and submitted it to the editorial page editor. He toosed it in a drawer and used another cartoon. While the television newscasts featured frustrated NASA administrators and scientists rying to put a favorable spin on the debacle and newspaper columnists took potshots at the beleaguered space agency, my cartoon remained in the desk drawer.

Finally, after all the furor had died down and the Mars snafu was fading from memory, the cartoon was used.

I asked the editor why the cartoon had stayed in the drawer rather than being used in a timely fashion, he said he'd made up the editorial pages several days in advance, and it just didn't fit the hole for cartoons.

I was miffed. I had drawn what I believed to be an excellent cartoon. It was one that fit all of the Mauldin criteria for a good cartoon: It was funny; it told a story; it didn't need words.

But it was unappreciated.

Like Bill Mauldin, I've kept pushing that cartoon. A few months later, while working in New Mexico, I was aksed to talk to a group of elementary school students about cartooning. I took that cartoon and showed it to the kids. Although they were mildly amused, they were much more impressed by a toss-off I did of Ross Perot.

Still, a lack of appreciation.

I swore that I would continue to push that cartoon until it got the reception I think it deserves. I remember that if at first you don't succeed, try, try again.

So ....

What Others Are Saying

By The Associated Press

Austin American-Statesman on state open records law:

A state judge's decision to set aside temporarily a law restricting public access to traffic records is a good sign for a bad law.

State Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth, sneaked the restriction into an otherwise non-controversial bill last legislative session after the governor vetoed a similar bill. The law the governor signed includes language that limits traffic accident reports to those who know the name of a person involved and the date or location of the crash.

It is a patently wrong-headed law that keeps information from the public that pays for it, pays to compile it and owns it. And it can be information the public needs.

Compiling accident reports allows the press and public to know the most dangerous intersections and roadways in a community. That can be valuable knowledge for drivers seeking to avoid danger and for governments charged with ensuring highway safety.

Many of the legislators who voted for the law Gov. George W. Bush vetoed, and accepted the language slipped into the bill he signed, argue that it is aimed at curbing abuse, not the public's right to know. Restricting access was meant to keep the names of those in traffic accidents shielded from various ambulance-chasing professions and businesses seeking easy customers.

But in trying to hide the information from those individuals and entities looking for business, the Legislature kept the information from nearly everyone. Yet that is information paid for by tax dollars and the public that owns it should have access to it.

The Texas Legislature has been down this road before. It continues to struggle with the notion that people should have unfettered access to the information that serves the public.

The temporary injunction granted by State District Judge Paul Davis keeps the bill from becoming law on Sept. 1 and allows both sides of the issue to work a resolution. Both the newspaper groups opposing the law and lawyers for the State Attorney General's office charged with defending it seem willing to negotiate.

Open records are a public trust, not secrets to be revealed to only a knowing few.

Clinton will have to do fast talking

Washington Today

By Walter R. Mears

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON - It's going to take some fast talking to get the kind of fast action President Clinton wants from Congress to let him negotiate trade deals that legislators can't amend.

Fast track trade authority, which one Democratic foe describes as "a kind of inside baseball term," has been granted every president since 1974, but Clinton's renewal request faces stiff opposition, left and right.

He wants it approved this year to prepare for talks next spring on a broadening of the North American Free Trade Agreement, toward the Western Hemisphere free trade zone he envisions by 2005.

But opponents argue that NAFTA hasn't produced the benefits promised before it was narrowly approved in 1993, pointing to increased trade deficits with Mexico and Canada and claiming the deal has cost U.S. jobs.

The administration disputes that. But its latest NAFTA appraisal, which shows modest U.S. economic gains, is short of the expansive forecasts issued during the push to get that accord approved.

Clinton has just broadcast the first installment of his campaign to win fast track legislation in the fall, a timetable criticized by some of his congressional supporters for providing too late a start.

The measure hasn't been formally introduced in Congress, although the president has set up a plan to lobby for it. There's to be a White House sendoff for fast track on Sept. 10.

The delay, which has drawn warnings from some advocates of renewal that there won't be time to get it done before Congress adjourns, stems in part from disagreements over how, and whether, the measure should deal with labor standards and environmental protection by U.S. trading partners.

Liberals want them tied to any trade deals; Republican free-trade advocates, a vital bloc for approval, don't.

Urging fast track approval in a radio talk Saturday, Clinton dealt with that problem only by saying that he "will continue to promote worker rights and responsible environmental policies with our trading partners."

The renewed trade authority has been an administration aim all year, but on hold. Charlene Barshefsky, the U.S. trade representative, advocated it to the Senate Finance Committee on June 4, and got complaints about the delay.

She said the Cabinet recommended the timetable because "fast track will take substantial presidential and vice presidential time" that couldn't be spent on the trade issue during months dominated by budget and tax issues.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said at that session that political calculations were behind the delay, suggesting it was to serve Vice President Al Gore's presidential aspirations in 2000.

While the trade issue could be a problem for Gore, since organized labor opposes fast track, waiting wouldn't help. Better to get it passed, and argue that it is working, than to prolong the argument.

Rep. Dick Gephardt of Missouri, the House Democratic leader and a virtually certain rival in the next presidential campaign, opposes the trade measure without labor standards and environmental requirements, and probably will vote against fast track anyhow.

With fast track authority, an administration can negotiate trade agreements for expedited congressional action with no amendments allowed, only up or down votes.

GOP activists are tired of harmony

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Enough of this.

All that harmony and sweet bipartisanship over the budget accord - which produced the first major tax cut in 16 years and a balanced-budget plan - has some activist Republicans rolling their eyes.

They're ready for a return to some old-fashioned confrontation, and new ways to distinguish themselves from President Clinton and other newly centrist Democrats.

After all, what are lawmakers going to do for an encore for the rest of 1997?

"There is a huge vacuum waiting to be filled with an agenda," said GOP pollster Frank Luntz, who has done extensive polling for congressional Republicans.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, trying to mend his own image, is suggesting that the truce with the Clinton White House may be at an end.

During a nine-state nationwide tour, which ends this week at a "dinosaur dig" in Montana, the House speaker has shown a new assertiveness.

He is promising to battle Clinton this fall on welfare overhaul, has suggested he might write a new version of the "Contract With America" for 2000 and is pressing for additional tax cuts - one each year.

"I find people really light up at the idea that we're being frugal with money in Washington," the speaker said in a recent pep talk to GOP members about to return to Washington from their long summer break.

Adding welfare overhaul to the fall House agenda all but assures a contentious battle with the White House - and could help restore Gingrich's standing among rank-and-file Republicans.

Gingrich is trying to reassert his leadership after the abortive coup attempt against him earlier this summer - and to shore up support among conservatives, who contend he and other GOP leaders compromised too much with the White House on the budget accord.

The criticism has been particularly sharp from outside Washington, including from two would-be 2000 GOP presidential hopefuls, former Vice President Dan Quayle and publisher Steve Forbes.

On Tuesday, Forbes said, "The party has temporarily lost its way. That budget deal was an abomination."

The Republican Congress and the Clinton White House agreed to a drastic overhaul of the welfare system last year, giving control over the programs to the states, and requiring recipients to find work within two years.

But many governors - including some Democrats - have grumbled over Labor Department rules that require the minimum wage and other labor laws to apply to those with subsidized jobs under a welfare-to-work program.

Many governors suggest that will frighten off private companies in the program. States, they fear, could get stuck holding the bag.

"We ought to finish welfare reform," Gingrich told a group of receptive Midwestern governors last week. "The Clinton administration, working with the unions and bureaucrats, is trying to undermine and destroy welfare reform."

Gingrich is returning to "his ideal role, as an idea generator for others, for the party," said University of Virginia political scientist Larry Sabato. "He's reasserting his leadership, but the potential for a comeback is very limited. Most Americans are turned off to him. They just don't like him."

Another problem facing Gingrich, suggests Stuart Rothenberg, a political newsletter publisher, is that neither Republicans nor Democrats have clear programs for the post-budget-deal period.

"There are a lot of question marks," he said. "Nobody's sure what to do next."

Democrats, of course, control the White House and their agenda is pretty much set near-term by what Clinton espouses.

But the predicament can be particularly vexing for Republican incumbents as the 1998 midterm elections draw nearer - and as Republicans hope to not only maintain but to widen their control of the House.

"While they (Republicans) might run on the budget agreement, they're looking for additional things to differentiate themselves from the Democrats,' said GOP pollster Luntz.

"These guys want to know what they're going to do, what they're going to accomplish in the next year and a half," he said.

Clinton's hawking has some wincing

Capitol Notes

By Sandra Sobieraj

By SANDRA SOBIERAJ
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton wasn't hawking collectible ceramic kittens or cubic zirconia pendants. Still, he seemed a bit embarrassed as he assured his audience: "We have a toll-free number. It's 1-888-USA-JOB1."

Under Clinton, the presidential bully pulpit can resonate like the Home Shopping Channel, with speeches increasingly laced with references to toll-free hot lines and Internet sites.

Three times during a recent speech in St. Louis, Clinton repeated the 1-888 phone number for businesses interested in hiring welfare recipients. He then confessed with a self-conscious chuckle: "I feel like I'm hawking something on one of those channels on television."

One faction of White House officials argues that it's an effective communications ploy in keeping with changing technology. Other aides - and some historians - wince.

"It too heavily smacks of hucksterism," said Stephen Hess, presidential scholar with the Brookings Institution, a liberal think tank.

"He's not promoting widgets but he's using the same technique and it's a cheapening technique," Hess said. "He should break himself of it if that's not part of the legacy he wants to leave."

As Miami businessmen are being investigated for a pyramid scheme that used the president's photo to help advertise home necklace-making kits, Clinton's own promotional ventures - no matter how worthy the cause - raise eyebrows. At least three top White House aides have privately grumbled that it's tacky and have tried to excise the references from Clinton's speeches.

Four days after the St. Louis speech, Clinton was at it again, prodding parents in his weekly radio address to call an 800 number for Education Department information on scholarship programs and new tuition tax breaks.

It worked: That weekend, Education officials answered 1,900 calls - 13 times the average weekend volume. The welfare-to-work hot line took 400 calls, or quadruple the daily average, on the day of Clinton's St. Louis speech.

Toll-free hot lines and Internet sites "are the ways that Americans communicate these days, how they get information about the things they care about," White House spokesman Barry Toiv said. "When it's appropriate - and only when it's appropriate - the president can do a better job than anybody else of publicizing that."

Republican media consultant Alex Castellanos saluted, in general, the strategy of inviting people to contact officials. "It's another way to say that we listen to you," Castellanos said. But, he added, it demeans the office of the president.

"To drag the presidency any lower, he'd have to do the limbo," Castellanos said.

As uncomfortable as Clinton sounds slipping into pitchman mode, his mere willingness to make the pitch surprises some longtime aides. Veterans of his 1992 campaign remember how, despite staff-level commitments to have the would-be president hawk a fund-raising hot line for state Democratic parties, Clinton refused.

Rival candidates Jerry Brown and Ross Perot - neither of whom Clinton considered role models for a serious campaign - were spouting their own toll-free phone numbers at the time.

Without Clinton's cooperation, Democratic National Committee officials made a game of printing the number on banners and placards, and offering prizes to staffers if the number showed up in news footage from Clinton campaign stops.

But then, Clinton only had eyes for the White House. These days, he looks beyond.

Advertising an Internet link for information on celebrations of the upcoming millennium, Clinton joked to an audience at the National Archives: "I decided that I have a future giving out 800 numbers and Web sites."

Without it, no deal would be firm until the House and Senate had acted, since amendments could change what had been bargained and force renegotiation.

Clinton said he would use it "to negotiate tough new trade agreements" that will keep the economy growing. "It will help me to negotiate more open markets with specific countries, especially in Latin America and Asia," he said.

"Our workers and our businesses are the best in the world but they can't compete in the slow lane," Clinton said. He said the power he wants renewed will "keep American prosperity on the fast track."

But then, the opponents can play on the words, too.

"There is fast food, fast talk, fast track," said Sen. Byron L. Dorgan, D-N.D. "It all kind of connotes doing something unusual, not taking time to prepare."

And the argument is only beginning.

In between

Seven-year-old Nick Hernandez, a member of the Colortyme soccer team, advances the ball through two players for Nocturnal Illusions earlier this week at Langley Memorial Park. The game was part of the Hereford Youth Soccer League play.

'Cats corral Herd

By DONALD M. COOPER
The Brand

Going into the season opener, Hereford Coach Craig Yenzer expressed optimism about the prospects for the new season - if the youthful offensive and defensive lines come though.

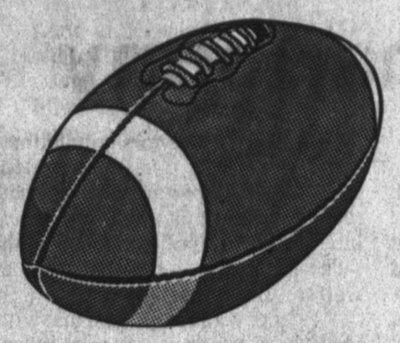

Unfortunately for the Herd, the offensive line wasn't able to control the line of scrimmage in Hereford's 17-0 loss to the Lovington (N.M.) Wildcats.

The Herd was held to 146 total yards in the contest, with just 100 yard coming on the ground.

Tailback Henry Hernandez was the leading rusher for Hereford, managing 47 yards on 13 carries. Quarterback Jeremy Urbanczyk was the second-leading rusher, picking up 25 yards on nine carries.

Urbancyzk completed five of 12 passes for 46 yards, with all five tosses being pulled in by split end Jeremy High.

The Herd missed a golden opportunity to turn the game around just before halftime as the offense pushed to inside the Lovington 5. However, the Wildcat defenders held as the Herd pounded the middle on third and fourth down inside the 1 and the first half ended with Lovington holding a 10-0 lead.

The Wildcats used the arm of quarterback Heath Ridenour to increase the lead to 17-0 midway through the final period.

Ridenour, a junior, connected with wide receiver Link Blevins for 12 yards and a touchdown, with Mario Contreras booting the PAT.

Contreras also was good on a field goal with 3:20 remaining in the first quarter. His 26-yard effort gave the Wildcats a 3-0 lead.

The drive was marked by a roughing the kicker penalty against the Herd. Given a second chance, the Wildcats moved close enough for Contreras' field goal.

Penalties proved costly to the Herd, who were flagged 10 times for 91 yards. Forty-six penalty yards came during the first half.

Lovington's first TD came in the second period when tailback Fabian Contreras scored on a four-yard run.

The key play in the scoring drive was a 65-yard pass from Ridenour to tight end Dave Leonard. For the night, Ridenour was seven of 19 for 162 yards.

The Herd will be back in the friendly confines of Whiteface Stadium on Friday night. The Herd will play host to Amarillo Tascosa.

The Rebels will be making their 1997 debut and will feature a speedy squad that some observers are seeing as a contender for a playoff berth.

Soccer's gaining in popularity

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Soccer is the fastest-growing sport among high school girls and boys, but football remains the favorite of boys and basketball is still tops among girls, a national survey found.

Soccer programs drew an additional 17,349 girls and 12,859 boys in 1996-97 over the previous year, according to the Kansas City-based National Federation of State High School Associations. The federation has been surveying its 51 member associations since 1971.

A total 226,636 girls and 296,587 boys took part in high school soccer last year, placing the sport fifth in boys and girls sports programs across the country, the federation said in a report Tuesday.

Among all high school sports last year, football ranked first with boys with nearly 1 million participants, followed by basketball with more than 540,000.

Basketball remained the most popular sport among girls, with 440,000 participants last year, followed by outdoor track and field with 385,000.

Total high school sports participation grew for the eighth straight year, to more than 6.1 million students. That's up more than 175,000 from the previous year, and is the second-highest mark in the 27 years of the survey.

It is topped only by the "baby boom" figure of more than 6.4 million in 1977-78.

Girls' participation hit a record last year with 2.74 million, up 104,107 from the previous year. The other popular sports among girls were, in order: volleyball, fast pitch softball, tennis, cross country, swimming and diving, field hockey and indoor track and field.

Among boys, other favored sports were, in order: outdoor track and field, baseball, soccer, wrestling, cross country, golf, tennis and swimming and diving.

Boys' overall participation grew to 3.7 million, up 72,000 from the previous year. Its the highest mark for boys since 1978-79.

With the exception of a slight decrease from 1987-88 to 1988-89, participation has risen each year since the 1983-84 year, the group said.

Sealy's No. 1

DALLAS (AP) - More than anything, the 1997 high school football season is about history.

Sealy, winner of the last three Class 3A titles, will be going for four in a row - something no school has done since the University Interscholastic League began crowning champions in 1920.

La Marque, the last consolidated Class 4A winner and the first 4A Division II champ, will try to become the first team to rule 4A, or its equivalent, three straight years. La Marque also could become the first school to appear in fifth consecutive title games since the UIL broke into classes in 1948.

With all that at stake, Sealy coach T.J. Mills and La Marque's Alan Weddell don't mind the added burden of being ranked No. 1 in their classes in The Associated Press' preseason high school football poll. The other No. 1s are Tyler John Tyler in 5A, Groveton in 2A and Tenaha in 1A.

FOOTBALL

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) - NFL ticket prices went up six percent for this season, according to a survey by Team Marketing Report, a sports industry newsletter. As a result, a family of four will pay an average of $221.17 to see the pros in person. The Washington Redskins lead all teams with 48.3 percent increase.

CORAL CABLES, Fla. (AP) - The University of Miami will not have to forfeit last year's Carquest Bowl victory or the $750,000 it earned for playing in the game despite using an ineligible player, the NCAA said.

Miami's program could still face penalties, though, if it is determined that athletic department officials knew Yatil Green took the money and allowed him to play without informing the NCAA.

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) - Pro Bowl defensive tackle Bryant Young signed a six-year, $26 million contract extension with the San Francisco 49ers. Young, whose current contract was set to expire at the end of this season, received a $5 million signing bonus and the annual average of $4.33 million through the year 2002 makes him one of the league's highest paid players.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) - Baseball's realignment committee, still struggling to develop a proposal that can gain approval, will meet Wednesday in Chicago with the sport's ruling executive council.

With the Mets, Cubs and other National League teams threatening to block the complete realignment plan - which would put both New York teams in the American League and both Chicago teams in the National League - the committee this week began formulating plan that would not move the Mets or the White Sox.

NEW YORK (AP) - Baseball owners, preparing for next month's vote to realign the American and National leagues, proposed eliminating the designated hitter.

Management negotiator Randy Levine told the players' association that owners wanted to eliminate the DH in several years but did not set an exact time, saying it was a subject for negotiation. Union head Donald Fehr did not immediately reject the proposal, but said his side was unlikely to accept it.

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) - Former major league pitcher Steve Howe was charged with drunken driving in connection with the motorcycle crash that critically injured him on Aug. 19. Howe, 39, suffered collapsed lungs and a ruptured trachea in the accident. He was also charged with operating a motorcycle without the proper license.

BOSTON (AP) - Boston Red Sox rookie Nomar Garciaparra extended his hitting streak to 30 games, tying Sandy Alomar for the longest in baseball this season. Garciaparra's streak is a record for AL rookies.

CINCINNATI (AP) - Pete Rose Jr., the son of major league baseball's career hits leader, will be promoted from Class AA Chattanooga and start at third base for the Cincinnati Reds on Monday, when baseball teams expand their rosters.

GOLF

MUNICH, Germany (AP) - Ireland's Padraig Harrington, seeking a Ryder Cup berth on the European team, fired an 8-under-par 64 to take the lead at the halfway point of the BMW Open.

Harrington's total of 14-under 130 was one stroke better than first-day leader Fabrice Tarnaud of France. Scotland's Colin Montgomerie is two strokes back at 132. Spain's Jose Maria Olazabal, who needs a top 20 finish to grab one of the 10 automatic berths on the European team, just made the cut at 139.

BASKETBALL

ATLANTA (AP) - Atlanta point guard Mookie Blaylock, who led the NBA in steals last season, has agreed to a four-year contract extension with the Hawks. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

Blaylock, entering his ninth NBA season, sixth with the Atlanta, is the team's career leader in 3-pointers with 883.

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) - Mississippi State basketball junior guard Bart Hyche will be suspended for the first two games of the 1997-98 regular season after pleading guilty last week to a drunken driving charge. Bulldogs coach Richard Williams said Hyche will also sit out two exhibition games before the season.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - The Los Angeles lakers signed free agent forward Rick Fox to a one-year, $1 million deal, ending a two-month pursuit that involved the Lakers, Cleveland, Atlanta and New York.

Fox turned down Cleveland's four-year offer worth $20 million and Atlanta's promise of a guaranteed starting job for the championship potential of the Lakers.

TENNIS

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) - Jimmy Connors heads the list of of nominees for selection next year into the Hall. Also on the ballot, which is voted on by members of the international tennis media, are Francoise Durr of France, Ken McGregor of Australia and American Nancy Richey.

Herman David is included on the International Masters Panel ballot, which honors individuals for outstanding contributions.

HOCKEY

NEW YORK (AP) - In a trade involving two recently disappointing left wings, the New York Rangers traded Luc Robitaille to the Los Angeles Kings for Kevin Stevens.

SOCCER

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Diego Maradona failed another drug test as in the fifth comeback attempt of his troubled career. He tested positive for "prohibited substances" after the first league game of the season on Sunday.

Mauricio Macri, president of Maradona's club, Boca Juniors, said the player had apparently taken cocaine. Maradona, who has served a pair of 15-month suspensions after flunking drug tests, has three days in which to demand a second test.

OLYMPICS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - Police say claims of responsibility for the bombs at two Swedish stadiums apparently didn't come from the perpetrator.

Two letters sent from Sweden to The Associated Press bureau in London claimed the bombs and fires were the work of an extremist group called "We Who Built Sweden." Police say it is not clear if it exists as an organized group.

Although police have made no arrests in two stadium bombings this month, Stockholm's police superintendent said that public safety could be ensured if the city hosts the 2004

BOXING

LAS VEGAS (AP) - WBA champion Evander Holyfield will try and unify two parts of the heavyweight title against IBF champion Michael Moorer on Nov. 8. It will be Holyfield's first fight his June 28 fight against Mike Tyson.

Green Bay now wants to entertain

By The Associated Press

Green Bay turned its fans on with the Lambeau Leap - and a Super Bowl championship, of course. Cleveland loved the Dawg Pound, before Art Modell closed it down by leaving town.

Jeff Blake wants Cincinnati - once the home of the "Who Dey" cheer, the "Ickey Shuffle" and "The Jungle" - to have something of its own.

"That's what you need nowadays. That's what the fans like to see," the quarterback said. "I mean, before I got here, this place was dead. No celebrating, no nothing. You score a touchdown and just hand the ball to the ref and head to the sidelines.

"That ain't entertainment. People want to be entertained. That's one thing we really want to get into this year, fan participation."

Raiders at Oilers

Bruce Matthews, who started 212 games for the Houston Oilers, will start the first NFL regular-season game for the transplanted Tennessee Oilers when they play Oakland.

Curiosity could be the magnet that draws many people to the Liberty Bowl, but Steve McNair, Tennessee's starting quarterback, thinks they'll soon become Oilers rooters.

"The fans will grow to love us," he said. "Especially as we go through the season and we win and keep winning."

Cowboys at Steelers

Kordell Stewart, who did a little of everything on offense for Pittsburgh in his first two NFL seasons, will start at quarterback after an exhibition season in which he completed 26 of 41 passes for 347 yards and four touchdowns, with no interceptions. Dallas cornerback Deion Sanders will be looking for his 35th career interception.

Chargers at Patriots

Pete Carroll, the replacement for coach Bill Parcells, who guided New England to the Super Bowl last season, is a defensive specialist. Offensively, he will be counting on quarterback Drew Bledsoe, running back Curtis Martin and wide receiver Terry Glenn. Stan Humphries will be throwing to Tony Martin for San Diego.

Jets at Seahawks

New York, coming off a 4-0 exhibition season, will be trying to match its 1996 regular season victory total - one. Neil O'Donnell, who played only six games last season because of injuries, will start at quarterback for the Jets. Warren Moon, a longtime starter for Houston and Minnesota, will back up Seattle quarterback John Friesz.

Chiefs at Broncos

Kansas City's Marcus Allen has run for 1,583 yards against Denver during his career. John Elway of the Broncos has been intercepted 34 times and sacked 71 times by the Chiefs. Seven of the last 12 games between the clubs have been decided by four points or less.

Vikings at Bills

Jim Kelly won't be on the field when Buffalo tries to boost the NFL's best September record in the 1990s to 23-5. Todd Collins, replacing the retired Kelly, will be looking for his third victory in four starts. Minnesota's Brad Johnson will try and improve on a 1996 season in which he was the NFL's third-ranked passer.

Colts at Dolphins

Indianapolis quarterback Jim Harbaugh has a 105.6 rating as a passer in his last four games against Miami. The Dolphins' Dan Marino has beaten the Colts 18 times. Five of the last eight games between the teams have been decided by four points or less.

Jaguars at Ravens

Rob Johnson starts in place of injured Mark Brunell at quarterback for Jacksonville, which won its last five regular-season games in 1996. Baltimore quarterback Vinny Testaverde is coming off a career year in 1996 in which he passed for 4,177 yards and 33 touchdowns.

49ers at Buccaneers

San Francisco receiver Jerry Rice needs six points to become the first non-kicker in NFL history to score 1,000 points. The 49ers have won five straight season-openers. Tampa Bay won five of its last seven games in 1996.

Falcons at Lions

It will be a reunion for cornerbacks Bryant Westbrook of Detroit and Michael Booker of Atlanta. They were teammates at El Camino High School in Oceanside, Calif. The Lions' Barry Sanders has rushed for 120, 108 and 163 yards in his last three openers.

Eagles at Giants

New York coach Jim Fassel is making his regular-season coaching debut on his 48th birthday. Philadelphia coach Ray Rhodes is 4-0 against the Giants. Ricky Watters is attempting to become the first Eagles player to record three straight 1,000-yard rushing seasons.

Saints at Rams

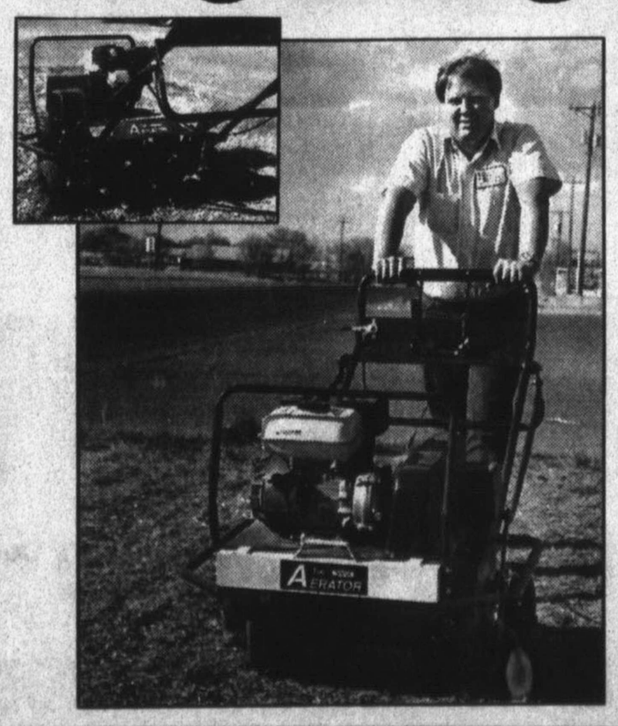

In a matchup of former television analysts, New Orleans' Mike Ditka returns to the sidelines to face St. Louis' Dick Vermeil. Ditka once coached Chicago to a Super Bowl victory, and Vermeil directed Philadelphia to a Super Bowl appearance.

Redskins at Panthers

Charlotte is a good place to begin the season for Carolina quarterback Steve Beuerlein, starting in place of injured Kerry Collins. The Panthers were 8-0 at home last season. Washington comerback Darrell Green is 15 games short of becoming the Redskins' career leader in games played.

JUDGE DISMANTLES FOOD LION AWARD

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - In a decision that angered jurors, a judge wiped out 90 percent of a $5.5 million fraud verdict against Capital Cities-ABC Inc. for an expose accusing Food Lion of selling rotting grocery meat.

U.S. District Judge Carlton Tilley on Friday reduced the award to $315,000, giving Food Lion 14 days to accept or face a retrial on the punitive damages portion of the case. Jurors said they were shocked.

"That's a joke," foreman Gregory Mack said. "You're looking at a situation where we're barely punishing the network. That's a penny against their net worth. They can afford a penny to get a story worth $100,000."

Jurors in January awarded Food Lion $5.5 million in punitive damages and $1,402 in compensatory damages in the wake of the expose that accused the grocery chain of selling rat-gnawed cheese and spoiled meat.

Although Food Lion denied the accuracy of the 1992 "PrimeTime Live" story, it did not go after ABC for libel or slander. It instead sued the network for fraud, trespass and breach of the duty of loyalty.

The jurors found ABC liable after Salisbury-based Food Lion proved the network lied to get jobs in North Carolina and South Carolina for undercover reporters who then wore spy cameras and hidden recorders.

MEXICO BOOSTS CONSULATE SERVICE

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - The latest U.S. crackdown on illegal immigration has prompted Mexico to increase border consulate services for its citizens who may be in this country illegally, a ranking Foreign Ministry official said Friday.

"We are going to increase our capacity to serve our people so that they don't feel that they are totally vulnerable or without defense," said Juan Rebolledo Gout, Mexico's undersecretary for bilateral relations.

Rebolledo insisted the action is not meant as a pointed message to the U.S. government as it renews efforts to control illegal immigration through "Operation Rio Grande," which began Monday.

"We are not going to tell the U.S. how to organize its border, but we are going to remind it that every time there is an operation in the U.S., there will be reverberations on the other side," the diplomat said.

The Mexican government will increase the budget for protective services at border consulates by more than $7 million, Rebolledo continued.

ART, ANARCHY AND NUDITY IN THE DESERT

GERLACH, Nev. (AP) - Willie Two Feathers brought a buffalo head from South Dakota. An ice sculpture melts slowly in the heat, destined for a communal licking. Art is created, only to be burned.

Welcome to the Burning Man Festival, a four-day celebration of anarchy, nudity and drunkenness.

The 40-foot namesake sits above the makeshift town, a wooden effigy that will be put to the torch Sunday in the climax to this counterculture version of the Labor Day weekend.

By then, organizers predict 16,000 free spirits, artists and performers will be on hand. Several thousand have already arrived, dusty yet happy after the 77-mile trip from the nearest major highway to a wide spot in the desert 125 miles north of Reno.

This is the 12th year of the festival that began in 1986 when artist Larry Harvey built and burned a replica of a man representing his girlfriend's new love on a beach near San Francisco. It grew from there, moving to Nevada's Black Rock Desert and last year to neighboring Pershing County, where more than 10,000 people attended.

RIVER CLOSED BECAUSE OF ILLNESSES

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) - Two states have closed nearly a third of the Pocomoke River to boaters after seven people became ill and showed symptoms health officials blame on a waterborne toxin.

Maryland Gov. Parris Glendening closed seven miles of the 40-mile river from its mouth, while the Virginia Marine Resources Commission shut down that state's section, about six miles.

The illnesses were "likely" related to pfiesteria, a single-cell organism that is believed to kill fish by feeding on blood and leaving them with open sores. Officials suspect pfiesteria of killing 11,000 fish on the river earlier this month.

Despite his decision, Glendening urged people not to panic and said there is no reason to avoid Chesapeake Bay or its seafood. Health officials agreed.

Thirteen people complained of various health problems after coming into contact with the river or with dead or dying fish.

GEORGIA FILES SUIT AGAINST TOBACCO INDUSTRY

ATLANTA (AP) - Georgia became the 41st state to sue the tobacco industry, accusing cigarette companies of planning and executing a public health crisis that cost millions of dollars to treat smoking-related illnesses.

The lawsuit filed Friday in Fulton County Superior Court seeks at least $8.3 billion.

Forty other states have filed similar suits. Florida signed an $11.3 billion settlement with the companies Monday and Mississippi settled earlier this summer for nearly $3.6 billion.

The lawsuit contends the industry suppressed facts about the hazards of using tobacco. Georgia said it has incurred $2.78 billion in Medicaid costs since 1968 for treating indigent smokers.

The state could recover three times that amount because the suit was filed under Georgia's Racketeering Influenced and Corrupt Organization law, which allows triple damages. The state also wants unspecified punitive damages and an order that would halt marketing and advertising of tobacco to children.

Defendants include Philip Morris Inc., the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Brown and Williamson Tobacco Corp., the American Tobacco Co., the American Tobacco Council, the Council for Tobacco Research and others.

Names in the news

MADONNA

NYACK, N.Y. (AP) - The three most important things about real estate in Rockland County these days? Location, location - Madonna.

The pop star has been looking at mansions on the Hudson River in and around Nyack, a short drive north of New York City, according to real estate agent Dale Lydecker.

Madonna's friend, talk show host Rosie O'Donnell, lives in Helen Hayes' old house in Nyack and Madonna "certainly seems interested in the area," Lydecker said this week.

Madonna, who played Eva Peron in the film version of "Evita," wants a place with privacy and a view of the river. She's not insisting on a big spread but apparently hasn't set a price range.

She recently checked out a $3 million mansion, Lydecker said.

ELLEN DEGENERES

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - A television station has had a change of heart about "Ellen."

In April, WBMA was the only ABC affiliate in the nation that refused to air the episode of "Ellen" in which the central character, played by Ellen DeGeneres, announced she was a lesbian. It also refused to air subsequent episodes in which she told friends and relatives she was gay.

With reruns filling the airwaves, WBMA has given up the fight. The network is to show the episode again next week, and the station plans to let it air.

MICHAEL JORDAN

LAS VEGAS (AP) - He's got a new $33 million contract, so why shouldn't Michael Jordan head straight to the mall?

The Chicago Bulls star, in Las Vegas to conduct a basketball clinic, was among VIPs who on Thursday attended the opening of a $90 million expansion to the Forum Shops at Caesar's Palace, a Strip attraction billed as "the Shopping Wonder of the World."

He missed a 30 minute show by singer Tony Bennett, attended by 2,000 special guests, but got in some window-shopping.

Surrounded by security guards and screaming fans, Jordan stopped in the fancy men's clothing store Bernini Collection, carrying on an animated conversation with clerks as crowds gathered at the window. He also dropped by the Victoria's Secret lingerie shop.

Asked as he walked out of the store what he thought of his new contract, Jordan just grinned and walked away.

ROBERT DEAN SMITH

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) - Robert Dean Smith was waiting in the wings at just the right time.

The American tenor was backstage at the Bayreuth opera festival watching Peter Seiffert sing the lead tenor role in Wagner's "Meistersinger of Nuremberg" on Thursday. Then Seiffert, who has had a cold, had to bow out halfway through the final act.

Smith got 10 minutes to throw on a costume before he was sent out to sing the last aria.

"I was just worried that I would mess up," Smith said Friday. "I had no time to think or prepare, I was just on auto pilot."

Smith, 41, made his Bayreuth debut last week when Seiffert took three days off to recover from the cold that flared up again Thursday.

Next year, Smith will return to the festival - this time in regularly scheduled performances.

JUNIOR WELLS

CHICAGO (AP) - Harmonica great Junior Wells is being treated for lymphoma, but hold off on singing the blues. His manager says the prognosis is good.

The 62-year-old Wells, who first made his mark playing in Muddy Waters' band, has canceled several appearances to accommodate treatment for the ailment, which is a cancer of the lymphatic system.

Manager Marty Salzman said this week that Wells was diagnosed after complaining of weight loss, exhaustion and shortness of breath.

Wells recently completed scenes for the movie "Blues Brothers 2000," and also recorded a track for a Rolling Stones tribute album called "Paint It Blue: Songs of the Rolling Stones."

JONES: SURVIVORS' TESTIMONY SUNK DEFENSE

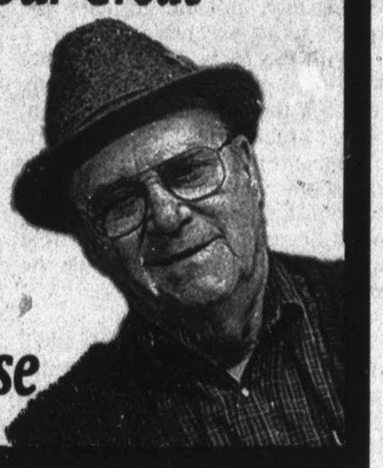

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) _ Once jurors cried at the testimony of victims of the Oklahoma City bombing, there was virtually no chance of acquitting Timothy McVeigh, his former attorney says.

The accounts of children, parents, husbands and wives killed in the bombing, plus news stories that McVeigh confessed, helped prosecutors overcome a weak case, Stephen Jones said Friday in an interview two days after he was taken off McVeigh's case.

One of the first witnesses, a young mother who lost her 16-month-old son in the blast, brought nearly everyone in the courtroom to tears.

In a changing world, to often, the ones who are left out, forgotten about or just left to cope with a situation are the ones who need the most help in rough times -- the children.

Today's children know the problems of divorce, long distance separations of family, drugs, peer pressures and the violence of street gangs.

Counteracting the devastating effects of today's society, one volunteer organization stands heads and shoulders above any other - Big Brothers, Big Sisters.

Locally, statewide and nationally the Big Brothers, Big Sisters program matches children between the ages of 5 and 17 with an adult, who can simply be a child's friend and confidant.

Alva Lee Peeler, the director of the Hereford Chapter of Big Brothers, Big Sisters, said "Big brothers and big sisters don't have to do anything special. Just give a little time, and accept the kids as they are, without judgement, just a little love."

"For the best results we try to get Bigs and Littles to commit to the relationship for at least one year. This gives both people the opportunity to grow and get to know the other," said Peeler. "But it's only an hour or so each week, not much time in the big scheme of things."

All the children in the program come from single parent families, said Peeler, mostly single moms, but over the years there have been at least three single fathers and even a few grandmothers with custody of children, who benefitted from the program.

Many of the children come from homes where the problems are much deeper than divorced parents, living long distances apart.

The children from the troubled homes often have come out of foster homes and are returning to their parents' homes. Some have known the horrors and trauma of abuse, neglect, or assault.

The one thing they all have in common is the need to be loved and accepted and to know there is someone who cares.

Public/Private Ventures, a Philadelphia-based national research organization, conducted an independent study in 1992-93 using more than 950 children in eight states and the Big Brother, Big Sister programs in major cities.

In the study half, the children were matched with a Big Brother/Sister, while the rest were assigned to a waiting list, or a control group.

Researches followed the groups for 18 months and found the matched youngsters were

*46 percent less likely to begin using illegal drugs

*27 percent less likely to begin using alcohol

*52 percent less likely to skip school

*37 percent less likely to skip a class

*more confident of their school performance

*one-third less likely to hit someone, and *getting along noticeably better with their families.

The Big Brothers/Big Sister program provides more than just a friend to the children known as Littles.

It provides a support network for the single parents and the families which are often separated by great distances from the traditional extended family of grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins.

"Single parents just can't do it all. Sometimes they need a break, but if there isn't someone to provide that break, sometimes they find themselves on the verge of abuse, or giving up," said Peeler.

"The Bigs give the parents that badly needed break."

Peeler said that in addition to providing the children with an older friend, the program helps families through stressful times of the year.

Volunteers make sure families of the little brothers or sisters have a good Christmas, or they make sure necessary school supplies and clothes are available, but more than anything else they provide a role model to children and their families.

Peeler said entire families feel the influence of a big brother or big sister.

"One of the most touching things I can remember is a thank you letter from a six-year-old, who just wanted to let us know how much the organizaion helped his family," she said.

"We tell the children that we can't replace their parents, but we can give them a friend and the means to make acceptable choices," said Peeler.

Currently the local program has about 40 volunteers and are desperately in need of at least six big brothers.

"All of our little sisters are matched, right now," she said. "But we always get a lot of applications when school starts. We can always use volunteers."

"The hardest part is telling the children we haven't got them matched, but don't give up," she said.

In the twelve years Peeler has been with the program, only once has she had matches for all the Littles.

Sometimes a little brother or sister will have to wait for nearly a year for a match, but they never quit trying to find the perfect match.

Teresa Perez and Laura Montgomery are one of these perfect matches.

Laura, an eighth grader, who has had some personal problems has been with Teresa for nearly three years, said "Having a Big Sister gives me someone to talk to about problems at school and home. Sometimes she shows me better way to deal with them."

"I find it very rewarding to be in someone's life, especially when they are at such an impressionable age."

The Hereford chapter of Big Brothers, Big Sisters has found its way into a book written by a Big Brother in Boston.

The book, "A Big Impact, Big Brothers Making a Difference" written by Richard Greif highlights Mike Folloman and Chad Betts, a local Big and Little match.

Betts and Folloman are no longer in the area, but Peeler said, they were a really good match and both were blessed with the relationship they developed.

"The volunteers make this program work. Without them we couldn't make the differences we do," said Peeler.

The little brother or sister and their family gets the support, friendship of the Bigs, but what do the Bigs get from the relationship?

> "We tell the children that we can't replace their parents, but we can give them a friend and the means to make acceptable choices."

> Hereford chapter Big Brothers/Big Sisters

"I think they all feel the blessings they receive from giving their time and energy to someone, who really needs it," said Peeler. " But they all come away with something different."

Laura is Teresa's third little sister and says that sometimes, between working on her master's degree and her own family she feels a bit guilty about not spending more time with Laura.

"But, the time we spend together is quality time. And it gives me a chance to come face to face with some of problems my children will face in a few years," Teresa said.

Oscar Williams and Ryan Buchanan are a relatively new match, less than a year together and are still working on building that trust necessary for a great match.

"It gives me a different perspective from being a little league coach and being able to go to their games and cheer them on. I like staying in touch with the kids." said Williams.

Williams said he had his last little brother for more than nine years and is pleased to know he had a positive impact on the young mans life.

"He lives and works in Amarillo and comes by to see me occassionaly. I'm really glad to how well he's doing and to know I helped him in someway."

Ryan says he likes having someone to watch movies with or play ball with and thinks that if he had a crisis he could talk to Oscar.

Big brothers and sisters are closely screened before being accepted as volunteers.

Criminal justice checks, reference letters, psychological tests and home visits all go into the screening process.

Program directors do everything they can to guarantee that not only are good matches made, but also that the volunteers are suitable, safe and acceptable associates for children.

Parents should contact the school counselors in regard to applications to enroll their children, said Peeler.

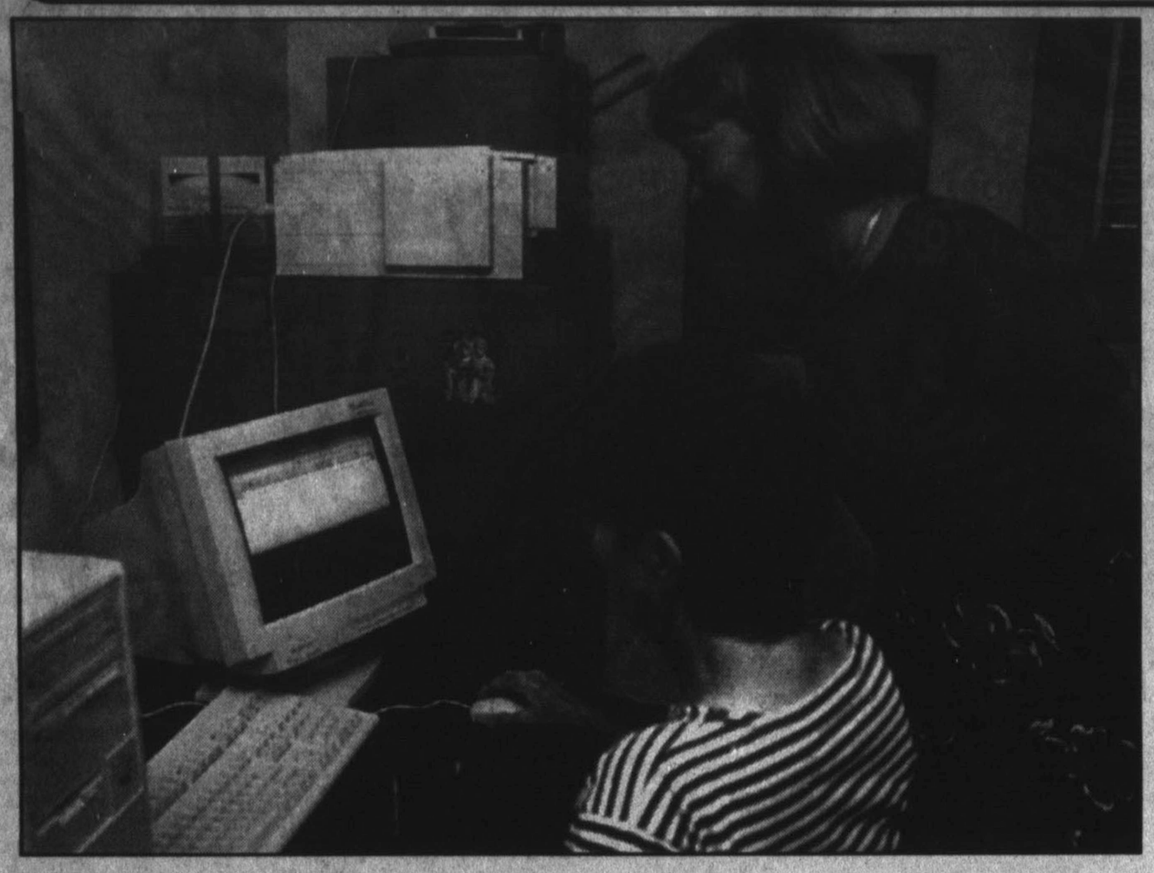

People interested in volunteering with the organization should call or go by the office, located in the YMCA building.

*Big Brothers, Big Sisters program is a United Way agency.

Laura Montgomery and Teresa Perez spend a little quality time together, enjoying each other's company.

New museum computer

Donna Brockman, seated, director of the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum and Jeri Bezner, president of the Deaf Smith County Historical Society, check out what the museum's new computer system has to offer. The computer was purchased with funds from a grant awarded by the Amarillo Area Foundation through the Panhandle Museum Resource Sharing Consortium.

Museum awarded grant through resource sharing consortium

Being a member of the Panhandle Museum Resource Sharing Consortium has already benefitted the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum.

The museum has received a grant of just under $25,000 to be used for a computer and for educational purposes.

The grant was written by Jeri Bezner, president of the Deaf Smith County Historical Society, and submitted to Andi Gwyn, resource sharing coordinator for the consortium. It was combined with grants written by other Panhandle museums and submitted to the Amarillo Area Foundation.

Nine museums, including the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum, were awarded funds.

"We already have the computer and have begun working on the educational phase," said Donna Brockman, executive director of the museum.

The computer system will allow all artifacts of the museum to be identified and cross-referenced in several different areas.

Funds were included in the grant to cover the cost of educating an individual in the use of the cataloging program.

"Also covered in the grant was money to pay the salary of one person for 12 months to help put together the educational information," said Bezner.

Currently the museum has two "trunk exhibits" which are presented by volunteers to area schools. These exhibits are "Pioneer" and "Indian."

Valerie Artho was hired with money from the grant to help build on this existing school trunk program by compiling a "Cowboy" trunk.

"Valerie is gathering information and looking for items, like spurs, from early day cowboys," Bezner said. "She is also talking to teachers to learn what educational elements are needed in the programs."

The purpose of the trunk programs is to provide essential information that can be connected with existing studies, not just be presented as a detached program, according to Bezner.

Some portions of the grant required matching funds. The money, totaling $2,500, was provided by the Deaf Smith County Historical Society.

"The society has fund-raisers during the year in order to have the money available for just such as this," Bezner said. "This is one way to help preserve the quality of our museum without additional cost to the county."

The historical society has provided the material necessary to remodel the museum office in order to accommodate the new computer system and Dean Hacker is in the process of doing the work.

As a member of the Panhandle Museum Resource Sharing Consortium, other benefits for the local museum will include the ability to share facts and develop and exchange better programs, according to Brockman.

"We want people to consider our museum as an educational resource," Bezner said.

Teachers can book requests for the trunk programs by calling Brockman at the museum. The programs are also available for presentation to study clubs and local civic organizations.

Officers of the board for the historical society, in addition to Bezner, are Cindy Cole, vice president; Cheryl Betzen, secretary; and Peggy Hyer, treasurer.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

If a child lives with praise, he learns to appreciate. An adult can get along without daily praise. A child cannot. He must have it to develop. He will shrivel up without praise. -- John M. Drescher

Exciting things are happening in all areas at HJH. From Geography Bee practice to keyboarding and computers to our hustling, bustling Industrial Tech classes, we do have our students involved!

Geography Bee students have received study materials and are beginning practice. They are to report to Room 5 as many mornings as possible. We have several quality geographers but will still accept more for our team.

Keyboarding classes taught by B.J. Reiter are working on the keyboard arrangement unit. They are learning to type the alphabet from the home key position. Students who take keyboarding in junior high and pass the course, may take an end-of-course test, which if they pass, they will not be required to take keyboarding in high school.

The computer labs, taught by Kaye Harris and Nelda Rogers, will be open for students' use and also for use by any teacher who can get to the lab during HAT. Any project that students are working on for any class are "fair game." This is not a time for playing games, (especially since we do not have any!). Programs available are Corel Office: WordPerfect, Quattro Pro (spreadsheet) and Paradox (database). Also available are Grolier's Encyclopedia, Corel Presentations and Hyperstudio. All of these could be used for various classroom projects. The lab teachers will help students during HAT if teachers will just send them there.

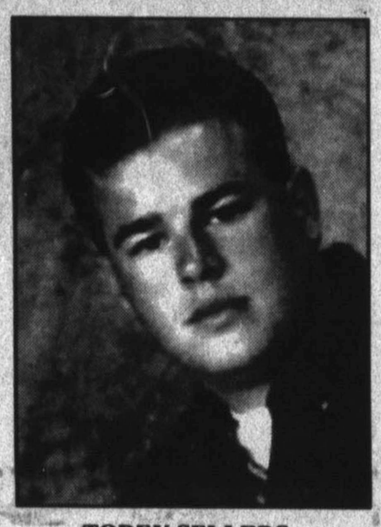

The automotive technology class has some new equipment this year. During the summer, Billy Rowe, (HJH), and Monty Smith, (HHS), participated in a General Motors training session at San Juan College in Farmington, N.M. A drawing was held for equipment that the college was no longer using. Rowe received a diagnostic computer called a CAMS machine and a 1993 Chevrolet 4X4 pickup for the HJH program. Smith received an experimental Toyota super charger for cylinder engine, two front wheel drive transaxles and two rear wheel transmissions to use in the HHS program. This will give students in each program the chance to train on modern equipment found in today's vehicles. Thanks to San Juan College, General Motors Corp. and Toyota for this great contribution to our programs.

The welding and woods classes are beginning some exciting projects which will be reported on soon.

Junior Historians have had a good beginning at recruitment. The returning members and the new members are planning a field trip for late September or early October.

Individual school days pictures will be taken on Tuesday, Sept. 23. Football and volleyball pictures will be taken on Sept. 24.

Caring for a Crying Infant

Crying is how babies communicate. It is not unusual for babies to cry from two to five hours a day!

This can be very tiring and frustrating for a caregiver. As you get to know your baby, you will begin to recognize different kinds of crying and learn how to meet your baby's needs. There will be times, however, when you will not know what to do.

Here are some tips for coping with a crying baby:

1. Always respond immediately. You will not spoil a baby by picking them up. In fact, your baby may become even more upset the longer you let them cry.

2. Try to find out what your baby is telling you. Is she hungry or in need of a diaper change? Is he too hot or too cold? Perhaps a pin or a clothing tag is irritating her skin.

3. Sometimes, if you hold a baby close and breathe slowly, the baby will feel your calmness and stop crying.

4. Sing or talk to your baby softly while rocking them or taking them for a walk.

5. Some babies like the soothing sound of a running vacuum, hair dryer or clothes dryer.

6. Give your baby something to suck, such as a pacifier or your little finger. This helps a baby feel secure.

7. Your baby might be bored. Offer the baby a distraction, such as a toy to look at or a change of scenery.

8. When nothing seems to work, it is OK to put your baby down and let them cry, especially if you feel yourself getting frustrated. In fact your baby may be overstimulated and just need to rest. Put the baby in his or her room and shut the door. You can check on them every 15 minutes for your own peace of mind.

Remember, no matter how frustrated or angry you feel, never shake a baby. Shaking can cause brain damage, blindness, or even death.

Being a parent isn't always easy, but it's worth it!

Couple repeats vows in Las Vegas wedding

MRS. IGNACIO QUINTERO
...nee Nancy Griego

Nancy P. Griego of Hereford and Ignacio Quintero of Olathe, Kan., were united in marriage Friday in the Monte Carlo Hotel in Las Vegas, Nev.

The bride is the daughter of Joe and Sara Griego of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Ralph and Gloria Quintero of Amarillo.

Bridget Beltran, daughter of the bride, was maid of honor. Dick Jay served as best man.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length, straight, fitted gown of white satin with a sweetheart neckline accented with white satin roses.

She carried a cascading bouquet of red roses.

A reception for members of the immediate families is planned for Sept. 6.

The bride is a graduate of West Texas A&M University. She is employed by Hereford Regional Medical Center as the administrative manager for the Women and Children's Health Clinic, director for Women's and Children's Crisis Center and supervisor of the Children's Trust Fund program.

The groom is manager of technical training and rules for Burlington Northern Santa Fe at the Technical Training Center in Overland Park, Kan. Previously he was a conductor and locomotive engineer for Santa Fe in Amarillo.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I loved your Gem about Bostonians who talk funny. Question: "Where did the 'r' from Harvard go?" The answer is "To Cuber and Africker." When Midwesterners hear the word "core," they immediately visualize the inside of an apple. In Boston, they are talking about an automobile.

When I was in grade school (I'm now 84), the study of geography included knowing the main products of the area. Some joker observed that the difference between Boston and Chicago was that the former was known for boots and shoes and the latter for shoots and booze. I thought that was pretty clever. -- Racine, Wis.

Dear Racine: That "clever" comment about Chicago must be at least 50 years old. It harks back to the days of Prohibition and Al Capone. Today, Chicago is known throughout the world as the city of Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls.

Ours is a world-class city with beautiful parks and a lakefront that is the envy of the nation. People from all over the world come to Chicago to see incredible architecture by Frank Lloyd Wright, Daniel Burnham, Louis Sullivan and Mies van der Rohe. The Chicago Symphony is world famous, as is the Lyric Opera. Our Art Institute is a gem, and the Museum of Science and Industry is spectacular. We have many stellar restaurants and a thriving theater district. Educational opportunities at the University of Chicago, Northwestern University and Loyola University are excellent. Our crime rate has dropped dramatically, and last year, our mayor, Richard M. Daley, was president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, representing all mayors in the country.

I could live anywhere I wish, but I choose to live in Chicago. I guess you might say I'm an unreconstructed Midwesterner, having been born and raised in Iowa. But my heart is, and always will be, in Chicago.

Dear Ann Landers: I just came across another beauty for your lawsuit collection. Here it is:

"A self-described milk-a-holic is suing the dairy industry, claiming that a lifetime of drinking whole milk contributed to his clogged arteries and a minor stroke.

"The 61-year-old man believes he might have avoided his health problems if he had been warned on milk cartons about fat and cholesterol. 'I drank milk like some people drink beer or water,' he said. The federal lawsuit names the local supermarket and the Dairy Farmers of Washington as defendants. The man wants warning labels on dairy industry products and on all ads and commercials.

"'If tobacco products can be required to have warning labels, why not dairy products?' said the man, a former smoker. He is also seeking reimbursement of his medical expenses and unspecified compensation for personal injury. Since his stroke three years ago, the plaintiff drinks only non-fat or skim milk."

I learned about skim milk 50 years ago. Where was this character then? I hope you will print it. Thanks, Ann. -- Vivian in Sacramento, Calif.

Dear Vivian: Thanks for sending on that Associated Press story, dateline Seattle. I shall watch with interest the outcome of this suit and keep my readers posted. P.S. If it does not make national news, I hope my readers of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer will let me know what happens.

Gem of the Day: Best definition of a man who has retired (sent in by his wife, of course): twice as much husband -- half as much money.

Feeling pressured to have sex? How well-informed are you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet "Sex and the Teen-ager." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.55.)

Discipline and the Single Parent

All parents sometimes feel frustrated and overwhelmed in dealing with children. This is not a problem just for single parents. Single parents can manage their children's behavior in effective and rewarding ways.

*Effective parenting.

There has been a long debate over whether parents should be strict or permissive. Research tells us that the answer is some of both. Studies have shown that effective parents expect mature behavior from their children and set clear standards. They firmly enforce limits and standards.

On the other hand, the research also shows that effective parents encourage individuality and independence by allowing children to think how to solve their own problems. These parents encourage discussion of issues, standards and problems.

Perhaps most important, they recognize the rights of both parents and children. Children are expected to be responsive to parents' demands and parents accept a similar responsibility to be responsive to children's needs.

*Effective single parenting.

According to the research, this same style of effective parenting promotes the well-being of children from single-parent families. Children accustomed to this style of parenting generally get along better with their peers and have high self-esteem.

These children develop a greater ability to think for themselves and they do better in school. They also gain greater self-control.

*Discipline Principles.

Several important principles are related to effective parenting.

Clarifying expectations means parents must know what they expect of their children. As a single parent, you may want to decide what kinds of behaviors will be expected of the children and even write them down.

As you think about your expectations ask yourself, "If this appropriate for my child at this or her age?" If you're unsure, talk to friends and childcare providers or read some parenting books.

After you have determined your expectations, discuss them with your child in a positive manner. Say "I want you to put your toys in the closet," rather than, "Don't leave your toys on the floor." Clear expectations teach children that rules of life exist.

Consistency provides the child with an ordered world that he or she can understand. The child learns, for example, that it's not okay to eat in the living room because that rule is repeatedly stated and enforced. It's impossible for children to learn appropriate behavior if the rules are enforced only some of the time.

Research has also shown that when negative behavior is not constantly discouraged, it becomes harder to change.

Responsiveness also affects discipline. It's important for parents to take the child's needs and wants into consideration when making rules. Perhaps, for example, a child is crying and complaining. If this is a frequent behavior, you may respond very differently than you would if the child did not get much sleep the day before and has been upset during the day.

On bad days it may be hard to be responsive to our children's needs. But in the long run, responsiveness is important to effective parenting. While attempting to be consistent, be responsive to the particular circumstance. In most cases it's possible to be both consistent and responsive to the child's needs.

Explanations and reasons help children understand the effects of the behavior on others. Good explanations tell the child how his or her behavior makes others feel.

Explanations that focus on the feelings of others, that encourage the child to apologize or make amends for a wrongdoing, all help the child better understand people's needs. For example, when a child hits another child, you might say, "You don't hit other people because it hurts them." Provide explanations to your children at a level that they can understand.

The explanations you provide your children will serve as their guides for behavior in the future. As they learn how their behavior affects others, they will increasingly control their own actions.

None but a well-bred man knows how to confess a fault or acknowledge himself in an error.

—Benjamin Franklin

Military Muster

Marine Pvt. Juan A. Garza, son of Cecilia G. and Jose A. Garza of Hereford, recently completed basic training at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego.

Garza successfully completed 12 weeks of training designed to challenge new Marine recruits both physically and mentally.

Garza and fellow recruits began their training at 5 a.m., by running three miles and performing calisthenics. In addition to the physical conditioning program, Garza spent numerous hours in classroom and field assignments which included learning first aid, uniform regulations, combat water survival, marksmanship, hand-to-hand combat and assorted weapons training. They performed close order drill and operated as a small infantry unit during field training.

Garza and other recruits also received instruction on the Marine Corps' core values -- honor, courage and commitment, and what the words mean in guiding personal and professional conduct.

Garza and fellow recruits ended the training phase with the Crucible, a 54-hour team effort, problem solving evolution which culminated with an emotional ceremony in which the recruits were presented the Marine Corps Emblem, and wer addressed as "Marines" for the first time since boot camp began.

Garza joins 41,000 men and women who will enter the Marine Corps this year from all over the country.

He is a 1995 graduate of Hereford High School.

Food and Family

By LAWRENCE HEADLEY

On the subject of food allergies in infants.

During a baby's first year, his or her digestive tract is still developing. It's not uncommon for certain foods to cause allergic reactions to food -- such as skin rash, diarrhea and prolonged crying.

From birth to five months, babies should be fed only breastmilk or formula. Infants who appear to be allergic to breastmilk are usually reacting to a substance in their mother's diet that's transmitted through her milk.

Older babies may have allergic reactions to a variety of solid foods. Some foods cause more problems than others, but some to be careful about are orange juice, cow's milk, wheat, eggs, chocolate and fish.

Ask your doctor for more information about the signs and treatment of food allergies that might be affecting your baby.

This information comes from WIC -- The Women, Infants and Children Nutrition Program. For a free magazine on nutrition call us at 1-800-WIC-3678.

Welcome to the World

The merchants and health care providers of Hereford wish to recognize these new babies recently born to Hereford parents.

This week's recipients of a free, commemorative baby plate:

*Matthew James Zamora born July 14 to Mr. and Mrs. Florencio Zamora.

*Sylvia Cantu born Aug. 8 to Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Cantu.

*Cristian Omar Enriquez born Aug. 14 to Ms. Eleticia Enriquez.

Leave something to wish for, so as not to be miserable from every happiness.

— YOUR EYES —

Contacts "stuck?"

Before the optometrist signs off a patient as a competent contact-lens wearer, the individual must know how to insert and remove lenses properly to avoid damage to the lenses or the eyes. In time, the wearer learns to do this easily and naturally.

Occasionally, though, even for a wear who has mastered these skills, a lens can get "stuck." It can be difficult to remove a contact lens. Sometimes the lens seems to be sticking to the cornea, or may have slipped onto the white of the eye, ending up in the wrong place above or below the cornea or in the corner.

Stop! Don't try to dig it out. Best bet: flush the eye with rewetting solution, wait moment or two and try again. If the lens seems to have slipped off the cornea, roll the eyes and look to the extreme right or left; the lens should slip into place. Or look in the mirror, with a light to the side of the eye. Can you see the len's shadow? In a pinch, call the optometrist for help.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Words of Wisdom XIX:
Authors Unknown and Anonymous

Frequently during the months when I must write five weekly columns, I turn to quotations of famous folks. Wise words are always food for thought and a good quote can punch up an article or add power to a speech.

There are many sources of such quotations. I have four good books with more than 35,000 quotes on hundreds of topics in my office. These books contain the wise sayings of great statesmen and philosophers, the wit of comedians and entertainers and the common sense of sage writers and orators.

I also have a file wherein I keep good advice and wise words that have no known author. Wisdom without attribution. This week's column is drawn entirely from the pens of those two famous authors "anonymous" and "unknown." I hope you enjoy them.

Serious thoughts

• Three keys to a happy life: hands that work, a mind that thinks and a heart that loves.
• The reason dogs have so many friends is because they wag their tails and not their tongues.
• There are two great fools: He who trusts no one and he who trusts everyone.
• A smile is a gently curved line that sets a lot of things straight.
• Wise is the man who builds friendships rather than wealth.
• It is fine to believe in yourself, if you're not too easily convinced.
• Do well small tasks now, and great things will come to you later, asking to be done.
• When you have nothing to say, say nothing.
• Short, kind words have endless echoes.
• Even if you spill the pail of milk, keep feeding the cow.
• If you want to know how to run a big business, ask a man who's never owned one.
• It pays to advertise. There are 26 mountains in Colorado higher than Pike's Peak.
• Most successful people don't quit a quitting time.
• In business, as in forest fires, big problems will always start out small.
• If you're not willing to write it down and sign it, you probably shouldn't say it.
• You have a brain in your head and you walk on two feet, you can choose where you go as you travel life's street.
• If you enjoy the shade, plant a tree.
• Sometimes opportunity knocks very softly.

On the lighter side

• Sign in an empty store window: "We undersold everyone."
• Teenager to parent: "If I can't use the car tonight, may I borrow your wallet?"
• You can rely on a rabbit's foot if you like, but remember, it didn't work for the rabbit.
• There are days when all goes well; but don't be frightened, it won't last.
• A learned economist wrote a 200-page book titled "A Short History of Money." A wise editor shortened it to six words: "I had some, now it's gone."
• I don't mind telling you exactly what I think. I think I'm undecided.
• Now that I'm retired, I'm still kicking .. but I'm not raising much dust.
• It's hard to believe we could rack up our federal debt by buying everything from the lowest bidder.
• If money grew on trees, some people wouldn't shake a limb to get some.
• A jackass in a tuxedo is still a jackass.
• If you're skating on thin ice, skate real fast.

The library programming schedule is being planned and is becoming full rather quickly. There have been a few of you who have asked about piano lessons for adults. Because of Sue Cherry's many talents, the library is now offering beginning piano classes with Sue as the instructor. If you are interested in this class please call the library at 364-1206 to register or for more information.

As Service Coordinator, Sue Cherry is very willing to share her many talents with you. If there is a needlecraft you would like to learn or painting or some other craft, please let us know. The library staff is willing to help you with any number of crafts and skills. We would like to know what specific things you are interested in learning. If we, the staff, are unable to teach the class, we will search the community for someone who can. Please let us know what kind of programs you would like to have.

If your talent is finding good books and new authors, we would like to hear from you also. If you would like to recommend a good book, let me know and Martha and I will include your recommendations in our articles each week. Now for a look at the new books for this week.

Have you ever been on a Caribbean Island vacation? Have you ever dreamed of going on a nice relaxed Caribbean Cruise? Stone Barrington had that kind of vacation planned in Stuart Woods new book Dead in the Water. Stone has just arrived on the Caribbean island of St. Marks, taking in some of the sites and fresh air when a young woman sails into the harbor.

It is very strange that the woman arrives entirely alone on a very large yacht, when at the beginning of her journey she was traveling with her husband, a well-know writer. The Minister of Justice, Sir Winston Sutherland, reviews the evidence that points to Allison Manning as an evil doer.

Well there goes the nice peaceful vacation that Stone had planned. Now he gets involved in an attempt to prove Allison's innocence. Well one can't do much outside anyway with the large hurricane on its way.

Trouble just follows some people and poor Mr. Stone seems to be one of those people.

Master storyteller Faye Kellerman has written another "heart stopper" entitled Serpents Tooth. It begins in a trendy L.A. restaurant. In a matter of seconds a lone gunman turns the restaurant into a slaughter house. Even after 20 years of experience, Lieutenant Peter Decker is horrified at the sight.

In the aftermath, Lt. Decker tries to make sense of tragedy. There is enough of the gunman's face left to identify him as Harlan Manz, a former bartender and would-be actor. Decker's investigation brings up more and more questions and fewer answers.

When the trail leads into the world of Southern California where everything can be bought, Decker finds allies in unexpected places.

Cain by James Bryon Huggins is a modern day Frankenstein story. In an attempt to create the ultimate soldier, the CIA and a team of scientists resurrect a dead man. When Cain awakens he is transformed into the ultimate predator.

The body is now inhabited by the princes of hell. A soldier whose family was taken by a terrorist's bullets, a priest who has lost his faith and a beautiful young scientist form a team who will fight the deadly creation to save themselves and all mankind.

Paul Lindsay's Freedom to Kill finds Disney World the target of a terrorist armed with biological weapons. An Ebola-type virus is unleashed at Disney World. Car bombings on interstate highways, children's medicine bottles laced with poison and plastic explosives on a 747 are the work of one serial mass murderer.

Called the Cataclysmist by the papers, the killer is determined to bring the U.S. Government to its knees. Mike Devlin, the G-man voted most likely to be fired, and the FBI must stop the killer. With tenacity, wit and excellent investigative skills, Devlin races to break the case before the nations security and his own family are destroyed.

Prisoner 1167: The Madman Who Was Jack the Ripper by James Tully is the book many of you have been waiting for.

James Kelly was criminally insane and sent to Broadmoor, Britain's most famous Lunatic Asylum, in 1883 for stabbing his wife to death. In 1888 he escaped.

Kelly's own account of his travels through England, France, Canada and the U.S.A. was an adventure in itself. But there were gaps in his story that coincide with the date of the Ripper murders.

On Feb. 11, 1927, a strange old man rang the bell at the Broadmoor Gates and the warders quickly ushered him inside, for they knew this was the infamous James Kelly.

Tully's research reveals evidence from previously secret files showing that the police were well aware of Kelly's activities, but failed to find him. The police then covered up their mistakes and it is only now that the whole truth can be told. Check out this book to get "the rest of the story."

Farm and Ranch

Big-city kids learn to be inner-city farmers

PERRYVILLE, Ark. (AP) - No overalls or straw hats in this crowd.

Fresh from Chicago's Cabrini Green housing complex and another development in Milwaukee, a dozen kids are visiting Arkansas to learn how to become inner-city farmers.

Growing cucumbers may keep 16-year-old Helen Marshbanks from joining a gang. Raising catfish under an apartment window sill may put more food on the table for the family of 14-year-old Darius Moore.

For 19-year-old Eric Brown, urban farming is a "cool" complement to playing basketball and watching television. "I want to be a writer when I grow up," Brown said. "But this thing, yea, it's been real cool."

"For me, doing these kinds of projects has kept me out of trouble and out of gangs that are in my neighborhood," Marshbanks said Monday.

All are at a four-day, inner-city farming seminar at the Heifer International Project, an international grassroots organization.

The seminar, held on Heifer's 1,100-acre ranch in central Arkansas, provides some of the budding farmers their first time out of the city. They stay at the "Heifer Hilton" - a barn that sleeps about two dozen.

For many here, growing things isn't new. Marshbanks is already involved in one of Chicago's inner-city gardening projects, where community members grow vegetables, then sell them to restaurants.

The seminar aims to show how to boost inner-city crops and expand into rooftop beekeeping, catfish harvesting, worm composting, goat-cheese making and organic farming.

The crops and produce can feed a family or be sold for cash, said Rex Enoch, global education manager for Heifer International.

"Even if these kids don't end up becoming farmers, these projects can help a family who doesn't have a lot of money for food, and it also gives them something to do," says Jonathon Woods, an aquaculture trainer from Toronto.

"Two essential things needed for these projects to work is a desperation for food and accessibility of land - two things quite common in American cities," he said.

The idea is a step beyond community gardens, common in Chicago and most other North American cities, to urban farms. Europe already has about 850 of them, Enoch said.

One day is devoted to learning to harvest fish - catfish and trout work best in an apartment environment, with barrels serving as tanks.

Composting techniques use earthworms and kitchen scraps to produce fertilizer.

Another technique is how to make cheese from goat's milk - a simple process of heating the milk, separating the curds from the whey, then wrapping the product in cheese cloth.

"We feel really good about doing this," Moore said. "There are a lot of people who can't afford things in our neighborhood. I think when people see what we're doing, they'll want to get involved too."

Learning professional techniques could help the gardening projects already running and encourage donors to keep them afloat, Marshbanks said.

"We can see what a difference it's made in our neighborhood," she said. "It makes people happy."

Black farmers file suit against USDA

Suit charges loan discrimination

WASHINGTON (AP) - Hundreds of black farmers say the Agriculture Department refused to review their loan applications in a timely fashion and then ignored their complaints.

Now, 641 black farmers have filed a class-action lawsuit seeking $513 million in damages.

"When the farmers filed complaints, the department willfully either avoided processing and resolving the complaint by stretching the review process out over many years or conducted meaningless, or 'ghost investigations,' or failed to take action," alleged the lawsuit, filed Thursday in District of Columbia district court.

One named plaintiff, Tim Pigford, a farmer in Riegelwood, N.C., claims local USDA officials handled his loan application differently from those turned in by white farmers. He said the delay caused him to lose his land and eventually to stop farming.

"Pigford has suffered frustration, humiliation, anxiety and other mental distress at his inability to obtain redress from USDA for the racial discrimination committed against him," the lawsuit said.

The action is the latest addition in a backlog of complaints against the department. Black farmers long have complained of racial discrimination by local USDA officials that they say is the cause for their dwindling numbers. They now represent fewer than 1 percent of the nation's 1.9 million farmers.

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said today the agency has made civil rights a top priority but declined comment on the lawsuit.

"On our watch here, we're going to make this department the premier civil rights leader in government, I can tell you that," he said.

In February, he announced his intention to clear within 120 days a longstanding backlog of 875 discrimination complaints involving farm loan programs. The agency's civil rights enforcement office, disbanded in the 1980s, has been recreated and is adding staff to help eliminate the glut of complaints.

Other discrimination lawsuits are pending in federal courts.

Glickman has pledged to eradicate discrimination within the department.

Arrowhead Mills names new CEO

Mark Novak has been promoted to president/chief executive officer of Arrowhead Mills INc., one of the nations's largest organic and natural food companies.

Arrowhead Mills Chairman J. Gary Shansby said Novak's leadership was responsible for Arrowhead becoming "a stronger, better balanced, more competitive and larger and more profitable company."

Novak began his business career more than 20 years ago with a wine distribution company in Ohio. He then joined Geyser Peak Winery in 1978 as a regional sales manager for the mid-eastern states, managing distribution and retail sales as well as sales training.

Two years later, Novak became a part of the retail management training program of Kroger Co. and, in 1981, he became manager of distribution operations, purchasing and customer service for the Federation of Ohio River Cooperatives, a major natural food wholesaler.

Novak joined Arrowhead Mills in 1993 as a purchasing manager and rapidly advanced to his most recent post in 1995.

He is an accounting graduate of Franklin University of Columbus, Ohio and now resides in Canyon.

Arrowhead Mills, headquartered in Hereford, is a $30 million a year company and markets more than 350 certified organic and all-natural products, from traditional grains, flours and beans to innovative heat-and-serve soups, chilis and pasta dinners.

Grain sorghum board needs to seat five

Texas grain sorghum producers have the opportunity this year to run for a seat on the Texas Grain Sorghum Board.

Any sorghum producers in Texas is eligible to vote in the election or to serve as a director on the board.

The fifteen-member board administers the checkoff funds which are collected on Texas grown grain sorghum.

An assessment of 20 cents per ton is collected and used to fund programs for research, insect and disease control, education and promotion of Texas grain sorghum.

Members of the Texas Grain Sorghum Board represent every grain sorghum producing region in Texas. Under the assessment program, the state is divided into five districts, with three representatives per district on the board. Directors are elected for six year terms.

This year five directors will be elected; one from West Texas, Central Texas, Panhandle, the Coast and the Valley.

To be listed on the ballot, a prospective director must submit a nomination form certifying they reside in the district to be represented and will be willing to serve if elected.

The nomination form must be signed by the nominee and ten other eligible voters, residing in the same district.

Forms may be obtained from the Texas Grain Sorghum Board office by calling (806)298-4501. Ballots may also be obtained from local county extension offices. Deadline for returning the completed forms is October 13.

Ballots will be mailed to eligible voters. To be counted in the election, ballots must be mailed to TGSB office, postmarked no later than midnight November, 21.

Organic farming boosts businesses

WINTERS, Calif. (AP) - Russell Lester finds organic farming good for business as well as for the environment.

Lester, who grows 230 acres of certified organic walnuts, said he stopped spraying walnuts because the spray schedule "was out of sync" with his almonds.

"Come to find out, I didn't have many pests when I stopped spraying," he said. "I felt it was because of the softer usage of chemicals."

His crop's worm count was a low 1 percent without sprays, convincing Lester to switch his orchard to organic and get certified in 1992. He says yields remain comparable to walnuts that are sprayed regularly.

Lester has embraced biological techniques since his family sold their century-old fruit and nut ranch in Santa Clara County, Calif., and resettled near Winters in the early 1980s.

He uses cover crops as a host for insects which eat pests that could damage his crop.

"We have thousands and thousands of employees out here to eat our bugs," Lester said of the insects. "So we've got to provide employee housing and food" by keeping a cover crop on the ground.

Besides, the cover crop keeps the hard clay in one orchard from cracking, a cheaper solution than spreading gypsum at $200 an acre.

Lester also has a small chipping machine that grinds up limbs during pruning and blows tiny chips back onto the ground.

"There's lots of nutrients in these branches," he says.

And recycling is better for both the air and ground than burning the prunings, Lester said while conducting a tour of walnut orchards that use biological methods in the Sacramento Valley, 80 miles northeast of San Francisco.

"If you've ever seen anything grow on a burn pile, good luck; it's real toxic," Lester said. "Recycling puts it back into the ground where it goes back into the trees in a few years.

"It's a continuous loop. In the meantime, it's a soft and beautiful soil. Adding this organic material to the soil is really good for it."

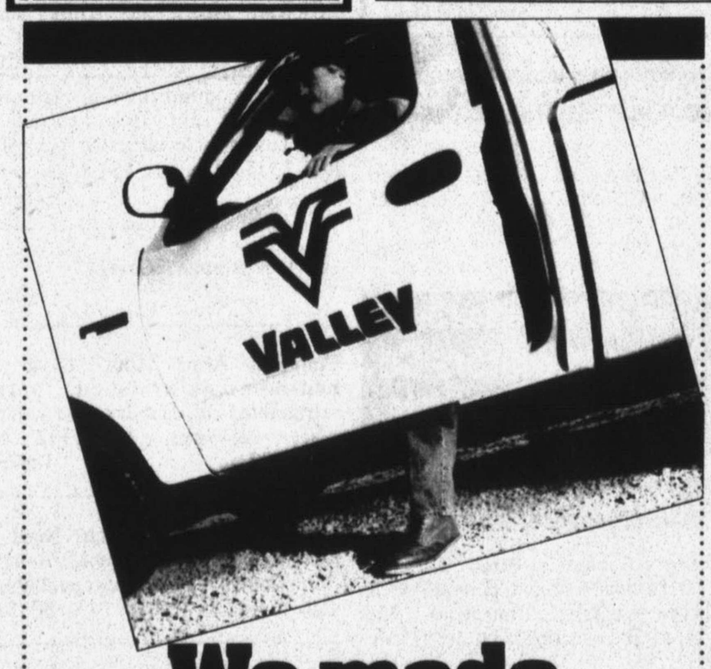

Ground water that irrigates his trees also gets recycled in a basin the size of a swimming pool at the lower end of his orchard.

A couple of innovative ideas are being tried around this pond. Robert Bugg, a University of California entomologist, has planted nearly extinct trees and bushes there to attract beneficial insects, particularly during seasons when the ground cover is gone.

"The whole idea is to have a perennial insectary - something out there blooming for our employees (beneficial bugs) when there's nothing in the orchard," Lester explained. "We're trying to create little islands of habitat."

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

-- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

The House of the Week

Elegant and Economical

G-54

A DECORATIVE COLUMNED ENTRY, shuttered windows, and a stucco-and-stone facade lend an air of distinction to this economical home.

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

Plan G-54, by HomeStyles Designers Network, makes the most of its 1,429 square feet of living space. A sense of openness in the main living area is achieved by means of a well-organized layout.

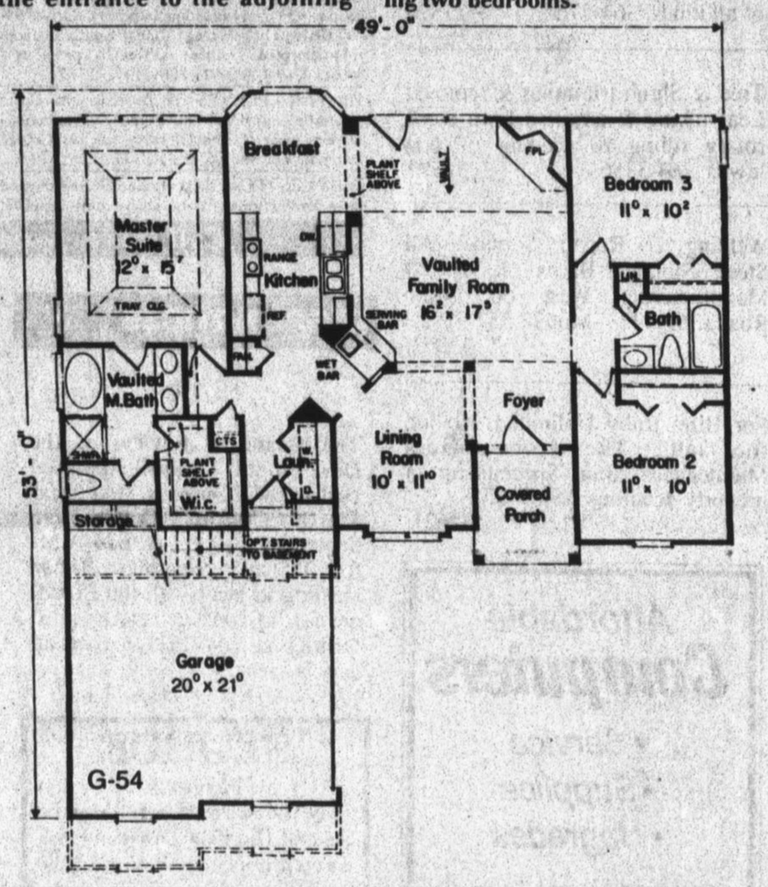

The focal point of the interior is the huge central family room. This space is enhanced by a corner fireplace, a 15-foot-high vaulted ceiling and a serving bar that extends from the kitchen and includes a wet bar.

A decorative plant shelf adorns the entrance to the adjoining breakfast nook which has a bay window. The attached kitchen offers a pantry and a pass-through to the family room.

The formal dining room is easy to reach from both the kitchen and the family room, and is set off by columned arches and a raised ceiling.

A tray ceiling crowns the secluded master suite, which also features a vaulted private bath with dual sinks, an oval garden tub and a large walk-in closet.

At the other end of the home, and to the right of the foyer, is a hall bath that serves the remaining two bedrooms.

THE FOYER opens ahead to the family room, and to the side to the formal dining room, which is defined by columned arches. A handy serving bar separates the kitchen from the family room. The kitchen also has a bayed breakfast nook. The space-saving laundry room is hidden by a set of bifold doors. Set apart from the other bedrooms, the master suite is a welcome retreat. Two additional bedrooms share a full hall bath.

G-54 STATISTICS

Design G-54 has a family room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast room, three bedrooms, two full baths and a utility room, totaling 1,429 square feet of living space. This plan includes a daylight basement, crawlspace or slab foundation, and 2x4 exterior wall framing. The two-car garage, with its storage area, provides 436 square feet of additional space.

Great shows scarce in mundane fall lineup

By John Crook
©TVData Features Syndicate

In a stroke of delicious irony, one of the most closely scrutinized network races in years will feature a list of new fall entries that are remarkable only in their ordinariness.

With a roster of new shows that includes both superior dramas and comedies, CBS is poised to make a serious run at top-rated NBC, which is fielding its weakest new shows in several years. True, the peacock network does have the show everyone is justifiably pegging as the next huge smasheroo – Kirstie Alley's screwball comedy Veronica's Closet, with scene stealers Kathy Najimy and Wallace Langham backing up the star in the can't-miss Thursday time slot hammock between Seinfeld and ER – but elsewhere, NBC may have tried to clone the Gen-X formula sitcom once too often. And none of the network's dramas deserves serious attention.

CBS Entertainment President Leslie Moonves isn't idly boasting when he says that his network has the season's two best dramas and the two best (or, at least, two of the best) comedies.

Steven Bochco's new, gritty ensemble cop show, Brooklyn South, would dress up any network's lineup, and CBS has positioned it in one of its best time slots: capping Monday (Chicago Hope was bounced to Wednesday to make room for it). Shockingly violent on occasion, there's also a cool, retro Hill Street Blues feel to it. Jon Tenney, Dylan Walsh and Klea Scott are among the stars.

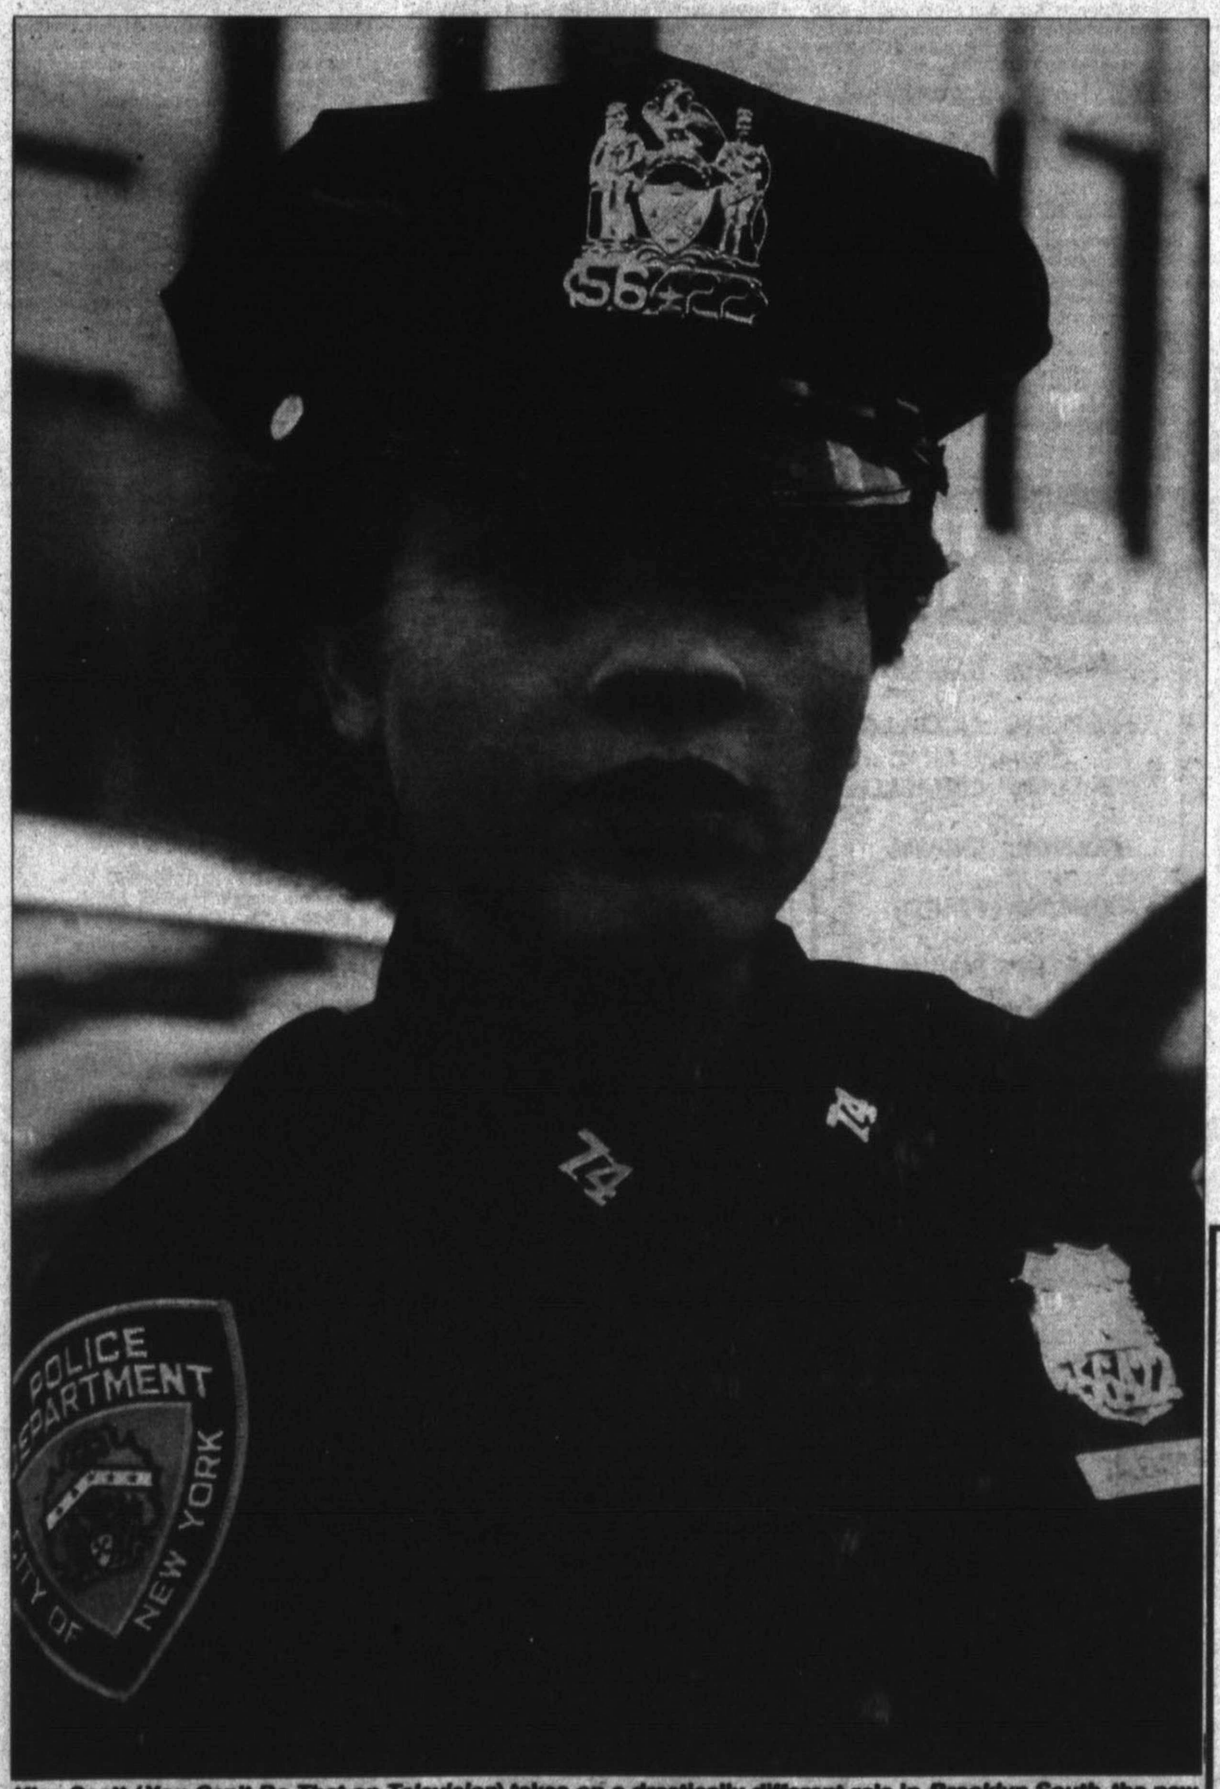

Just as good, and maybe even more promising, is Michael Hayes, a new Tuesday drama starring David Caruso as a U.S. attorney with a conscience. Since the pilot was shot, Paul Haggis has joined the show as a writer and executive producer. Haggis, the creative genius behind Due South and EZ Streets, is sure to keep the Hayes characters both complex and fascinating.

Among the CBS comedies, Friday's The Gregory Hines Show harkens back to The Courtship of Eddie's Father with its mix of sweetness and smarts, while Monday's George & Leo brings back comedy veterans Bob Newhart and Judd Hirsch as squabbling in-laws.

There's little on ABC's schedule that will pull the alphabet network out of its creative free fall. Mercifully, its programmers have come up with one sure thing: Dharma & Greg, a charming romantic comedy starring Jenna Elfman (Townies) and Thomas Gibson (Chicago Hope). Snugly ensconced in a Wednesday berth between Spin City and The Drew Carey Show, this delightful sitcom (and the entertaining Elfman) will be around awhile.

As for ABC dramas, the best of the bunch is Nothing Sacred, with Kevin Anderson giving a touching performance as an inner-city priest struggling with his own lapses of faith as he ministers to his troubled flock. Alas, some religious groups have begun denouncing this series sight unseen, thus perhaps critically injuring the kind of show many of them really need to see. Sacred deserves better, especially in its deadly Thursday time slot.

As for Fox, as usual, its new sitcoms all should be taken out and shot. The network flacks are heavily pushing Thursday's 413 Hope St., a drama set in a New York teen-crisis center. Young, unsophisticated viewers may actually embrace this well-intentioned but tired lump of cliches, but others won't be as kind. More hopeful is David E. Kelley's Ally McBeal, a wistful new Monday drama about a young lawyer. As of this writing, no episode had been released for review – not a good sign.

Klea Scott (You Can't Do That on Television) takes on a drastically different role in Brooklyn South, the new ensemble cop show from Steven Bochco. The violent CBS drama, scheduled to air Mondays, is one of the most promising new shows in an otherwise uninspiring fall season.

HOROSCOPES

August 31-September 6

ARIES – March 21/April 20
As the end of summer nears, so does the end of a romantic relationship. It was fun while it lasted, but don't be upset. He or she isn't the one for you. You'll meet your mate when you least expect it. As for your professional life, all goes well this week. Your efforts get you noticed.

TAURUS – April 21/May 21
While your sign is the bull, you feel more like a lamb this week, Taurus. You meet someone who intrigues you, yet intimidates you, and you don't know how to react to him or her. Just be yourself, and you'll make a good impression. Gemini plays a key role later in the week.

GEMINI – May 22/June 21
Things get a little overwhelming for you early in the week. You get overloaded with work, and no one has enough time to assist you. As for your personal life, it seems as if everyone needs your help — no matter how trivial a situation is. Keep your chin up, Gemini. Things will calm down by the week's end.

CANCER – June 22/July 22
Express yourself this week, Cancer. Don't keep your feelings bottled up inside; it only will make you feel worse. Whether it's a problem with a co-worker or a fight with a loved one, talk about the situation calmly. It will make you feel better and can make relationships stronger. Pisces plays an important role.

LEO – July 23/August 23
You're making the rules this week. Business associates come to you for answers to their problems, and loved ones look to you for guidance. Now's your chance to show how responsible you can be. However, don't let the power go to your head. Be loyal to your friends and honest to yourself.

VIRGO – Aug 24/Sept 22
You have to make a big decision about your personal life early in the week, Virgo. Think about what you really want, and look at all the pros and cons. Once you weigh all of your options, you can make your choice and stand behind it. Cancer and Scorpio play key roles.

LIBRA – Sept 23/Oct 23
Your good nature wins you praise from co-workers and loved ones. They admire your optimistic outlook on life. However, an event in the middle of the week can get you depressed. Don't let it; try to stay upbeat. Loved ones are there to listen. Leo plays an important role.

SCORPIO – Oct 24/Nov 22
Stand your ground when it comes to a confrontation at work. You know that what you've done is correct, and so do your superiors. As for your love life, take it easy this week. That person you've been seeing wants to step up the relationship. Think about what you really want before saying yes.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21
It is an easy week for you, Sagittarius. All goes well professionally and personally. You make a good impression with superiors at work, and you meet an intriguing person who has an interest in you. Enjoy yourself, but don't make any rash decisions. Taurus plays an important role.

CAPRICORN – Dec 22/Jan 20
Early in the week, you take a few steps closer toward a goal you've set for yourself. Be proud, and continue to work hard. A loved one turns to you in a time of need. Don't let him or her down. Share your joy with him or her. Your efforts are sure to be appreciated.

AQUARIUS – Jan 21/Feb 18
You have free reign at work this week, Aquarius. Superiors put you in charge of a project, giving you a chance to show what an asset you are. However, don't get carried away. That special someone asks you a probing question. Don't try to avoid it; just answer it truthfully. Virgo plays a role.

PISCES – Feb 19/March 20
Your humor wins the heart of someone with whom you'd like to have a closer relationship. Be yourself, and show him or her who you really are. Don't worry — he or she will be impressed. Pressures at home get you stressed later in the week. Try to remain calm and cool.

Ducks get the hook as ABC revamps Saturday morning

By Suzanne Gill

The Mighty Ducks and Ducktales are out; Pepper Ann and Science Court are in for Saturday mornings on ABC beginning Sept. 6.

In compliance with the new FCC rules mandating three hours of instructional or developmental programming each week, ABC and parent company Disney have produced a strong slate of shows for the fall.

"Not only have we met the guidelines, we have exceeded them by one hour," children's programming chief Geraldine Laybourne says. The former Nickelodeon president sought the advice of educational consultants on each new series.

Also, Walt Disney Animation President Dean Valentine notes, "We're trying to move away from doing ducks to something a little more vibrant and different."

Bring on the dog act. The new lineup begins with 101 Dalmatians: The Series, under the direction of Doug creator Jim Jinkins. In a new rural setting, the anthropomorphized pups send messages about responsibility, sportsmanship and dealing with bullies.

Over the next two hours, three animated series are layered between segments of the live-action signature show One Saturday Morning, featuring a studio audience, and quick animated pieces including Great Minds Think for Themselves, with Robin Williams in his Aladdin genie role giving youngsters the facts on historical figures who broke the mold.

Inside One are episodes of Brand Spanking New Doug and the new series Recess (about playground politics) and Pepper Ann (a 12-year-old redhead). Next up are The Bugs Bunny & Tweety Show, a Saturday staple since 1961; and Disney's Jungle Cubs and The New Adventures of Winnie the Pooh.

Finally there's Science Court, a cartoon sitcom destined to become many adults' guilty pleasure. Comic Paula Poundstone provides the voice of Judge Stone, who hears cases that can only be resolved through science. To help viewers remember concepts from condensation to inertia, each show includes an original song.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: There have been so many cast changes on Law & Order, but the quality has not suffered. Has Steven Hill, who plays District Attorney Adam Schiff, been there for the entire run? –R. Marry via e-mail.

A: Yes. With Chris Noth's forced departure in 1995 to make room for the younger Benjamin Bratt, Hill is now the lone remaining cast member from the show's first season in 1990.

Q: What exactly did Andy Gibb die from? –C.T., Fond du Lac, Wis.

A: Gibb suffered a fatal heart attack in March 1988, only days after turning 30.

Q: Will Millennium be back this fall? And how does Frank (Lance Henriksen) get inside the killers' minds? Is he a clairvoyant? –P. Qualls, Biloxi, Miss.

A: Expect Millennium to lighten up a little when it returns later this fall; neither critics nor viewers liked the "killer of the week" format of last season. There will be occasional comic relief from supporting characters, in the same way the Lone Gunmen function on The X-Files.

Also, Frank's family life is going to change for the worse. He and Catherine (Megan Gallagher) will split up for at least part of the season.

Finally, Frank is not clairvoyant, merely a very good profiler, for lack of a better term.

Q: Today I saw an old episode of Dallas in which the actress playing Sue Ellen's mother, Patricia, sounded a lot like the woman who played Charlton Heston's mother, Yochabel, in The Ten Commandments. Am I right? –Yvonne Studley, Thompson, Manitoba, Canada.

A: Yes, you are. Actress Martha Scott played Heston's mother in both The Ten Commandments and Ben-Hur. By coincidence, she also has played his wife twice onstage.

Q: After Gilligan's Island, didn't Bob Denver star in a very similar series called Dusty's Trails? No one but me seems to remember. –Easleyrun via e-mail.

A: Yes, Dusty's Trail (singular) was a 1973 comedy Western about a wagon train bumbling its way across the American prairie. It was a Gilligan clone, all right – Dusty (Denver) assisted the wagon master, Mr. Callahan (Forrest Tucker of F Troop) – and the slapstick comedy was the same.

Produced only for syndication (which is why some of your friends may not have seen it), the series was a horrible bomb that ran for only a single season.

Q: Did Michael T. Weiss of The Pretender use to play Mike Horton on Days of Our Lives? –J.B., Montgomery, Ala.

A: Yes, he did. The Pretender returns to NBC Saturdays later this fall. Look for it in early November.

SOAP WORLD

Callahan Head Over Heels for prime time

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Fans are up in arms over recent events on All My Children. I've had several frantic letters and e-mails concerning the fate of Maria (Eva LaRue Callahan).

Here's the scoop: Callahan has left the show temporarily to work on the United Paramount Network prime-time series Head Over Heels.

Her character is only assumed dead on AMC. Maria will be wandering around the woods with amnesia or something. If things don't work out in prime time, Callahan will return.

In other news: The Hudson brothers, Michael and John (Kale Browne, David Forsyth), won't be seen much on Another World.

Both actors were taken off contract status. They are to return to the show on a recurring basis. Word has it that Forsyth has no plans to work where he feels he isn't wanted.

It makes one wonder when the writers can't find story lines for talented actors.

Dear Candace: I read your column every Sunday in the Tele-Vision Soap Report. I'd like to know if the actress who plays Ashley on The Young and the Restless is Abby Dalton's daughter. She also was married to Lorenzo Lamas at one time.

I would like to know any information you have on her. –Ruth Brandel, Cary, Ill.

Dear Reader: Shari Shattuck (Ashley) is married to Ronn Moss (Ridge, The Bold and the Beautiful).

I'm thinking you may have confused real life with Falcon Crest. That's where you're getting the Lamas-Dalton connection from.

Dalton played Julia Cumson and Lamas played Lance Cumson on FC, but Shattuck was never on that show.

Shattuck has been in several feature films, including Spy Hard, Dead On, On Deadly Ground, Out for Blood and Arena, and you may have seen her in one of her guest roles on Babylon 5, Silk Stalkings and Life Goes On.

Shattuck lives in Los Angeles with Moss and their daughter, Creason Carbo.

Send questions of general interest to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, TVData Features Syndicate, Northway Plaza, Queensbury, N.Y. 12804, or e-mail to soaptalk@tvdata.com. Only questions selected for this column will be answered. Personal replies cannot be sent.
