Council to consider jet skis at Moss Creek

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Jet skiing may be allowed this spring at the city's Moss Creek Lake. The Big Spring City Council will consider it Tuesday when they meet at 5:30 p.m. in the cafeteria of Big Spring High School. Also being looked at is a hike and bike trail at Big Spring State Park. Both ideas were among 33 goals listed in a preliminary draft released last month by the Tourism Task Force of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce. "Anything we can do to bring recreation into the city will help our tourism effort and the businesses that are affected," said Marae Brooks, director of the chamber's Convention & Visitors Bureau. A proposed ordinance would allow use of contained skiing units, a jet ski or wave runners, on weekends from 6 a.m. Saturday to 10 p.m. Sunday. On weekends with holidays on Monday, that would be extended to 10 p.m. Monday. Units must run in counter clockwise patterns. Animals won't be allowed in lake. The Tourism Task Force not only suggested the lake should be opened to jet skiing but that jet ski tournaments should be held, starting in spring. Also suggested is that the lake be cleaned up. A city proposal on hike and bike trails hasn't been released. The Task Force suggests incorporating terrain and landscape of the state park as well as South Mountain and One Mile Lake into orchestrated nature trails by spring 1995. The tourism plan, expected to be released in final draft by November, targets natural resources, history and entertainment. A key proposal is attracting a first-class hotel such as a Marriott Courtyard to be built on the south shore of Comanche trail Lake by May 1997. Many attractions would be centered around the hotel, lake and nearby parks. But it also deals with historical and other natural attractions of the area.

Multitude of reasons lead to collider's death

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The death of the superconducting super collider is being blamed on everything from a lack of presidential support to the insurgency of a House freshman class eager to prove its budget-cutting credentials.

In the end, a confluence of factors brought down an $11 billion program with a scientific mission that few could explain and that many fingered as a prime example of wasteful government spending.

After withstanding congressional attacks for three years, the giant atom smasher was felled last week by Congress' current preoccupation with reducing government spending, critics and advocates said.

"There's a growing awareness in the Congress that spending is going to have to be cut to get the deficit under control. And where are you going to cut if you don't cut things like the super collider?" said Rep. Jim Slattery, the Kansas Democrat who led House opposition to the Texas-based physics experiment.

And nowhere did the fiscal restraint message resonate louder than in the huge House freshman class swept into power last year on promises of deficit reduction. Eighty-two of the 114 first-termers voted to pull the plug on a project that has already cost $2 billion.

Proponents suggested bitterly that little, if any, savings from the collider's demise will go toward deficit reduction.

"The freshman class came in with out a commitment to anything and not much of a vision for the future," said Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who ran the pro-collider campaign in the Senate.

"They'll end up not reducing the deficit and making some hot-dog votes out there that are high visibility and this will play in the press, and then the damage will be done over a period of many years to science and the pursuit of technology in this country."

Added Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas: "The biggest factor is there were a lot of people who wanted to kill the (collider) so they could spend the money on something else."

The project wasn't helped by the steady drumbeat of criticism charging management ineptitude and financial turmoil.

Outside investigators issued scathing reports suggesting the potential for hundreds of millions of

Texas RV Park highest rated in area

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

Jerry Worthy, owner of Texas RV Park of Big Spring, is proud that his RV park is the highest rated in this area of the state. "This attracts people to pull off the highway and make this their destination for at least a little while," he said.

Worthy founded the park on October 25, 1989, along with his son Jeb. Texas RV Park of Big Spring provides spaces for travelers in RV's, as well as for RV club rallies, construction workers, and temporary residences for visitors.

The park has expanded over the last five years to include 82 spaces; it can be expanded to 103 if needed. Worthy has also branched out with a retail RV dealership that includes service and repair capabilities.

The retail dealership is located eight miles north of the park on U.S. 87 at 3113 South 87. The dealership stocks and sells Fireside RV's, made in the United States and Canada. "It is a sturdy, well-insulated RV that is noted for its design and style," said Worthy. The dealership and repair facility will have its grand opening soon.

Worthy has added two more people to his staff due to the expansion of his business. He credits this expansion to the park staff's commitment to quality. "We feel that we can attract visitors and tourists to our Big Spring RV park only if it is as good as we can make it, and if we maintain it with facilities for them to completely meet their needs and requirements."

Proposition 14 to address prison facilities

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 14th of a daily 15-part series looking at pros and cons of 16 proposed constitutional amendments.

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Proposition 14 on the Nov. 2 ballot would authorize $1 billion in bonds for corrections facilities.

Of that, $258.8 million plus $169.2 million from a 1991 bond authorization would be used to build 22,000 state jail beds by 1995, including a second 1,000-bed facility in Mitchell County. Another $39.2 million would be for correction facilities, medical, holding warehouse and agriculture use and $21.5 million for youth corrections. The rest would be used for future needs.

Together with $2 billion in voter-authorized bonds in 1987, 1989 and 1991, it would double prison-bed capacity from 60,000 now to 128,455, alleviating a backlog of some 26,000 state prisoners held in county jails. The 22,000 jail beds would be used to house non-violent felony offenders up to two years, a new penal code classification going into effect.

Supporters say more jail space is needed and would be cheaper in the long run, according to the House Research Organization. It costs just $19.8 million a year to operate a 2,000-bed state jail compared to $24 million for a prison. Money appropriated to counties for backlogged state prisoners the next two years is $90.5 million. Bonds can be afforded. Texas is 38th among states in debt per capita.

"An absolute must if we are to deal with the violent criminal in a meaningful way," said State Rep. David Counts of Knox City.

Opponents say, according to the research report, that money would be better spent solving societal problems that cause crime, drugs, alcohol, education and targeting at-risk youth. While state debt is low compared to other states, it is fifth highest for combined local and state debt among the 10 most populous states. The 20-year payback on $319.5 million in bonds is $528.2 million.

"Prison construction will always lag behind demand - the more prison beds the state adds, the more prisoners the courts will send to fill them," it states. "If education and social services were adequately funded, the need for prisons might decrease."

New lobbyist takes helm of gay rights

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's new lobbyist for gay and lesbian rights has been known for her vocal participation in protests on the front steps of the Capitol.

But when Dianne Hardy-Garcia moves her fight from the Capitol steps into its chambers, she says her once radical approach to gay rights will become tempered.

Hardy-Garcia, of Austin, has participated in radical gay political groups such as the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power (ACT-UP), Queer Nation, Lesbian Avengers and the Women's Action Coalition.

On Nov. 1, she takes the helm of the Austin Lesbian/Gay Political Caucus. The job pays $28,500 a year, and the lobby's annual budget is about $75,000. Texas is one of three states with a full-time gay and lesbian rights lobbyist.

Hardy-Garcia succeeds Laurie Eiserloh, who is leaving after three years to pursue a career as a trial lawyer. Eiserloh replaced Rep. Glen Maxey, D-Austin, who was elected to the state Legislature in 1991.

Shuttle trip at halfway mark

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Columbia's astronauts breathed in and out a tube attached to a gas analyzer to test their lungs and worked up a sweat bicycling high above Earth.

Today marks the halfway point of the 14-day medical research mission, the longest shuttle flight ever planned by NASA.

On Sunday, five of the astronauts took turns at the breathing machine for a lung function study. Physician David Wolf repeated the procedure several times to make sure he got it right.

"We want perfect data," Wolf said.

The science astronauts also drew more blood from five of the 48 rats on board. The rodents had been injected with iron and iodine Saturday so researchers could measure red blood cell production and destruction.

Pilot Richard Searfoss performed one of the few non-medical experiments Sunday evening. He guided Columbia through a series of flips and spins to gauge the effects of acceleration on shuttle systems and science payloads.

Baptists open state convention

DALLAS (AP) — This year's Texas Baptist state convention will stress unity among conservatives and liberals despite past problems between the different factions, officials said.

About 8,000 Baptists were scheduled to open their annual statewide meeting today in Dallas.

"There is a growing sense of unity among Texas Baptists," said Richard Maples, 59, who is ending a two-year term as president of the 2.5-million-member Baptist General Convention of Texas.

"It is evident that our pastors and people are determined to preserve the fellowship of the state convention and put behind them the controversy that has long plagued the Southern Baptist Convention," said Maples, pastor of First Baptist Church in Bryan.

A successor to Maples will be chosen during the two-day meeting. Other issues likely to be discussed are attempts by conservatives to cut back $4 million in annual appropriations to Baylor University and whether to eliminate the $60,000 in support given to the Baptist Joint Committee in Washington, D.C.

Two candidates are vying to succeed Maples — the Rev. Wayne L. Allen, 64, of Carrollton, and Jerold McBride, 61, of San Angelo. Both describe themselves as theological conservatives.

Aides to assist prosecutors in new case

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Two aides who were indicted along with U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison say they will assist prosecutors in their investigation of alleged wrongdoing within the state Treasury.

Mrs. Hutchison, 50, was indicted last month on charges of using state employees and equipment for political purposes while serving as state treasurer, then destroying records as part of a cover-up.

She resigned her 21/2-year tenure as treasurer after winning landslide election to Lloyd Bentsen's vacated Senate seat June 5 over Democrat Bob Krueger.

Former Deputy Treasurer Michael Barron will cooperate with Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle in his probe of the Treasury under Mrs. Hutchison, said his attorney, Chris Gunter.

The other indicted Hutchison aide, David Criss, said that he "won't be the scapegoat" and also would cooperate with prosecutors.

Criss and Barron also were indicted on charges of official misconduct.

Their promises to help come just days after Earle announced he would seek to throw out the indictments because a grand juror was found to be ineligible. He said he would pursue new indictments from another grand jury.

Gunter said he hopes his client's cooperation will mean Barron won't be indicted again. However, he would not say whether he was trying to negotiate immunity from prosecution in return for his client's testimony.

Barron maintains that he had computer and telephone records destroyed on orders from Mrs. Hutchison. The senator contends the records belonged to her and not the state.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle, right, Assistant District Attorneys Steve McCleary, center, and Claire Dawson-Brown arrive at the Travis County grand jury building to hear the testimony of U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison Sept. 9 in Austin. Earle announced last Friday he is dropping ethics charges against Hutchison but plans to seek new indictments from a second grand jury. Hutchison's case, along with 300 others, were called into question because one juror had a theft charge pending against him.

Criss, who resigned last year as Treasury planning director, has admitted he did political work for Mrs. Hutchison on state time. He also contends Mrs. Hutchison lied when she said she didn't know about his activities.

Mrs. Hutchison has denied any wrongdoing.

Mrs. Hutchison's attorney, Dick DeGuerin, said over the weekend that no documents were destroyed illegally under the senator. He said the only records ordered erased from the agency's computers were documents that should not have been there in the first place.

"Because records are discarded doesn't mean there has been a violation of the law," DeGuerin said.

"First the state says it's a crime to put personal business on a computer, then they say it's a crime to take it off," he said. "For them, a year and a half later, to claim that this was destruction of records is politics in its purest form," he said.

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, has maintained the district attorney's investigation is a partisan conspiracy to derail her political career. Earle, a Democrat whose office carries the responsibility of investigating state officials, said his office is merely doing its job.

Investigation finds Guard brass did retaliate

The Associated Press

CORPUS CHRISTI — A summary of a yearlong state and federal investigation into the Texas National Guard says top officials retaliated against Hispanic guardsmen after they filed discrimination complaints and provided false information during probes into the allegations.

The Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported in its Sunday editions on the report, which went to Gov. Ann Richards.

The governor has refused to release the findings, but the newspaper obtained about 250 pages of documents that include investigators' findings, military records and testimony from hearings conducted during the investigation.

The newspaper said allegations of discrimination within the agency date back at least 16 years.

According to the documents, investigators concluded that "no other reason other than discrimination was shown to explain the disparate treatment" within the Guard.

The investigation, which began in June 1992, was prompted by discrimination complaints by a Corpus Christi chapter of the American GI Forum, a Hispanic organization.

Juan Hinojosa, a former state representative and a McAllen attorney, conducted the investigation along with officials from the National Guard Bureau in Washington, D.C.

The investigation, which examined 31 complaints, concluded that several Hispanics were retaliated against for speaking out.

In one case, the report found, a Hispanic guardsman was threatened with nonjudicial punishment for pursuing his discrimination complaint. The state contended that the actions were in response to alleged misconduct.

But the investigators found that punishment threats were "intended to dampen (the guardsman's) enthusiasm in pursuing his complaint and can thus be viewed as a reprisal action."

In another case, investigators found that Homero Palacios, a Corpus Christi soldier, received a bad evaluation in November 1991 after he filed a discrimination complaint.

The timing of the negative appraisal "suggests a relationship between the two," and the comments on the evaluation "are directly related to issues mentioned in the complaint," the report says.

The report also found that some Guard officials provided false information during internal hearings into certain discrimination complaints.

Sgt. Manuel Saenz, a former Corpus Christi soldier, testified during the hearings that he was discriminated against when he was removed from the Guard.

Saenz's superiors testified that he was given a medical discharge. But

Two state custody battle to continue

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Twin girls who lost their father to AIDS and whose mother committed suicide are caught in a custody battle crossing two states.

Judges in Texas and Minnesota have awarded custody of the 5-year-old girls, Natasha and Felicia, to different parties, and the legal fight is expected to continue.

At the center of the dispute is the last wishes of Rob Schlaepfer, the girls' father.

Five months before his death Sept. 2, Schlaepfer had a will drawn up that called for his daughters to be raised by a couple in Duluth, Minn., who had become the twins' foster parents. It was to replace an earlier will in which the girls' paternal grandmother was named as guardian.

The girls are living with Phyllis Durichek, their grandmother and Schlaepfer's mother, who took the twins from Minnesota back to Houston following her son's death. The Minnesota couple is fighting to get them back.

Schlaepfer was living in Duluth when he was diagnosed with the AIDS virus. His daughters, who have tested negative for the HIV virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, were only 6 months old.

Schlaepfer infected his wife, who killed herself with an overdose of methadone in 1990.

As the disease continued to take its toll on Schlaepfer, an older couple became foster parents to the twins. They would care for them whenever their father and mother needed a break. Those foster parents were eventually replaced by Kandi Geary, a teacher at the school the twins attended, and her husband, Lance Rhicard.

They say they became such close friends that Schlaepfer eventually asked them to consider raising his daughters after his death.

"He talked about it with his counselors, his social workers, his friends," Rhicard recalled. "I don't know what prompted him to finally ask us. He loved our family very much, and we cared deeply for him. He knew that his girls loved us, and we loved his girls."

Rhicard says Schlaepfer was firm in his decision to leave the twins with him and his wife.

Schlaepfer's mother and stepfather, however, dispute that notion. They say Schlaepfer even refused a request to sign over custody of his children to Geary and Rhicard.

"He was getting upset," recalled Schlaepfer's brother, Rick, who supports his mother in the custody dispute. "He didn't hardly have the energy to talk, but he was telling them right out he wasn't going to sign it."

The family says Schlaepfer's refusal to sign the papers is a repudiation of the will that called for the twins to be left with Geary and Rhicard.

Rhicard disagrees, saying Schlaepfer refused to sign the papers because he could not let go of his children while he was still alive.

"His girls had kept him alive," Rhicard said. "They had given him the hope and the strength to fight his disease, and by signing that, he just didn't want to give up."

On Sept. 15, a Houston judge named Mrs. Durichek the sole managing conservator of the twins. Meanwhile, a judge in Duluth has granted temporary custody to Geary and Rhicard.

The legal battle is expected to continue for months, and both sides remain resolute.

"I love these kids. They're my own flesh and blood," says Mrs. Durichek.

But Geary and Rhicard say Schlaepfer's family deceived him and his daughters.

"They have betrayed every single wish he had," said Geary. "It's unbelievable."

Crime bill passage urged with tougher sentencing

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden urged quick passage of a crime bill Sunday and said he would support tougher mandatory sentencing in exchange for Republican backing of gun control.

"I'll make a deal with you right now, Phil, before all of America," the Delaware Democrat told Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Biden said he would support Gramm's demands for strict sentencing requirements for crimes involving guns if Gramm would drop his opposition to the Brady bill. That legislation requires a five-day wait for purchase of a handgun, and a more comprehensive ban on assault weapons.

Bills introduced in Congress last month would provide $5.9 billion over five years to put 50,000 more police officers on the streets, specify new federal death penalty crimes, restrict death-row inmates' rights to federal appeals and establish alternative punishments such as boot camps for young, non-violent offenders.

Congress will separately take up the Brady bill, named for former White House press secretary James Brady, who was shot in the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan.

The crime legislation is similar to a measure that failed last year after Gramm and other Senate Republicans threatened a filibuster.

Gramm stressed that "when we pass a crime bill, we're going to have minimum mandatory sentencing for gun violations."

He said he wanted 10 years in prison without parole for possessing a firearm during a crime or a drug felony, 20 years for firing a weapon with intent to do harm, life imprisonment for murder, and the death penalty in aggravated cases.

Bizarre mutilations of horses confounding Maryland police

The Associated Press

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. — Herman D'Auliero used to worry about stray rifle shots striking his horses during deer hunting season. Now, he worries about something more sinister.

On Oct. 18, D'Auliero discovered his 12-year-old thoroughbred stallion had been attacked in its pasture and deliberately mutilated — stabbed in the genitals with a knife. The retired racehorse, named Revere Paul, apparently broke its neck during the attack and had to be put to death.

It was the sixth intentional mutilation of a horse's sex organs to be confirmed by Maryland police since June. Police said they are trying to link the cases, which occurred in suburban counties near Washington, Gramm, responding to Biden's challenge, said he was against gun control. "The way to deal with crime is not taking away guns." He said the five-day waiting period stipulated in the Brady bill was "not a big deal," but warned that Attorney General Janet Reno was moving toward a gun ban.

"If someone is going to break into my mama's house, they've got to worry not just about the sheriff and the police chief, they've got to worry that she has a gun and she might shoot them."

"We're not going to take Phil's mama's gun," Biden said. "If you want to do something about crime," he said to Gramm, "step up to the ball, old buddy. Don't filibuster this time."

Reno, speaking earlier on the same program, said waiting periods, stiffer bans on assault weapons and a proposal to prohibit the sale of handguns to minors were "very important first steps, but we've got to go further in making sure that people who have a gun and use it in the wrong way get punished."

She said she also supported state licensing of guns. Asked about the National Rifle Association and its campaign against gun controls, she said, "I don't think they make things very good."

Reno also suggested on NBC's "Meet the Press" that putting more trained police on the streets of Washington, D.C., was better than introducing the national guard, as requested by Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly.

"I think it is imperative that we get the crime bill passed so that we get community police to the streets in forms and fashions that can prevent crime," she said.

Vice President Al Gore responded similarly on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," saying the national guard issue "shows why President Clinton's crime bill needs to be passed this year."

but have no suspects.

The attack at the D'Auliero farm, about 15 miles southeast of Washington, was the first to a male horse.

"I was stunned," D'Auliero said. "It was very depressing. I couldn't understand why anyone would do something like that. He was a very gentle horse."

D'Auliero said he believed his horse had been tied by the neck to a tree and had hurt itself trying to get away. A veterinarian said it appeared the attacker was trying to castrate the animal.

It's possible more than one culprit is involved, said Trooper Gary Bachtell of the Maryland State Police.

Police west of Washington, in Loudoun County, Va., made an arrest two years ago in a similar series of attacks.

If only one succeeds, then we all succeed

HUD Secretary Henry Cisneros told students at College Heights Elementary School "Whatever your start, whatever your background in Big Spring, Texas, you can be whatever you want to be."

And, with a little encouragement from family and teachers and some hard work, students in the Big Spring Independent School District can be what they choose to be.

Cisneros words are true not only for the students of College Heights but for all of us. He is a prime example of working your way up from humble beginnings.

But, it is up to us to make those words a reality for ourselves. Role models, like Cisneros, can provide the inspiration to make the work easier to do. And, encouragement from the family can go a long way to make that goal a reality.

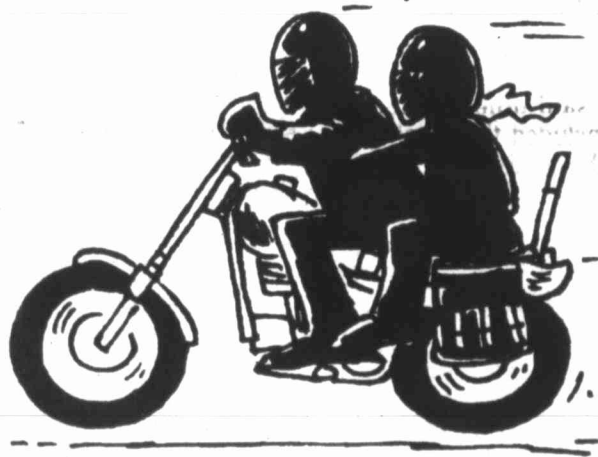

It is something we can work on separately or together, supporting each other in our quests to become all we can.

The more we support each other in this endeavor, the more we are encouraged to dream, the better off the future of this country will be. And, that is beneficial for all of us.

If one child succeeds where it seemed like he couldn't, then we have all succeeded.

Lurking in 'pure' spring water

It tickles me to watch otherwise bright people pay for bottled water described as "Pure Spring."

I depend on a spring for water. I know that it tastes better and might even be healthier than a government brew.

The spring in this hollow is a good one and has never run dry, not in even the rainless summer of 1988 when the Mississippi River bed had cracks and Delta farmers were hollering drought.

But the "pure" part of springs must cost extra. If I sold water from my source, truth in advertising, or at least my conscience, would force a label that said something like: "Pure Adventure Spring Water," or "Spring Water With Lots of Extra Ingredients."

Now and then I have to haul a compressed air tank to a joint in the hose and blow the sand out of the line. This maintenance is an adventure in itself, the kind of thing that on blustery winter days can make you feel sorry for yourself and long for a condo.

But once I'm about the business, I begin to feel better. Wading about in the creek where the pipe floats, watching for snakes while wrestling with the pipe, I become a pioneer, virtuous and independent. Especially when I have help.

I can imagine Jessica Lange doing this kind of thing on her New Mexico farm.

Besides, usually a few quick blasts and the water is flowing again. No big deal.

Last time, however, was different. I could feel it down deep in my gum boots as I lugged the tank to the creek. The pattern of water loss had been strange, slowing for a few days and then stopping.

I pulled the black pipe from either end of a metal gate valve that can adjust the flow. Water gushed from the business end, the one from the spring. No problem there, I thought.

Then I stuck the air hose into the line that goes under the ground to the house, and I blew.

Just to make certain that every part of the line was clear, I held the short connecting valve up and tried to look through it. All I could see was blackness.

The compressed air was all but gone by now. So I put my lips together and blew.

Out of the other end of the eight-inch valve popped a dead, bloated salamander. It smelled like low tide. It tasted worse.

As obstructions go, this one was gross. I screamed, of course, and then spit more times than a baseball team. I longed to gargle with Clorox. Jessica Lange would never have kissed a dead salamander.

The salamander had slipped through the regular water line but stuck in the skinnier valve. The critter had slowed my water at first, then acted as a stopper in its almost-final resting place.

I know what you're thinking, if you've stayed with me this long, here in the sinister creek full of dead things. You're thinking you would never again drink from a line where a dead salamander once floated.

But you're wrong. You would. It didn't even take me that long to forget about the rabbit that drowned in the reservoir at the spring. Sure, for a while I half expected to pull a rabbit's foot from the tap like a kitchen magician.

The queasy feeling passed, though, and soon I was guzzling impure spring water as if I had never seen Thumper doing lackluster laps. So, too, will fade memories of the salamander.

When my mother visits, she brings her own water in plastic jugs. I have noticed other guests avoiding the tap. Fine, but consider this.

Not too long ago I read a story about the proliferation of companies selling bottled water. It's a thriving industry, and the report said there are few standards for bottling and selling water.

I think anyone who sells water should be made to list salamander and sand content. And if a rabbit has drowned in the spring in the last six months, the vendor should be forced to reveal that fact, too.

Rheta Grimsley Johnson, winner of the American Society of Newspaper Editors' Distinguished Writing Award, the National Headliners Award for Commentary and the Ernie Pyle Award, is author of "Good Grief: The Story of Charles M. Schulz," Pharos Books.

He's just ahead of the trends at the beginning of the 20-minute drive, because his friends said, "Hello, Mr. McFeatters," and at the end because they said, "Thanks, Mr. McFeatters."

But during the drive I disappeared completely, not only out of sight but out of four adolescent minds.

I know I was there because the discussion was not one easily forgotten. One kid said that teachers should not deduct points for "stupid" mistakes. Another said that doing so would unfairly penalize "really stupid people" because a stupid mistake might actually require some effort and sophistication on their part. A third suggested the original speaker might well fall into that category.

Sometimes I don't disappear but apparently leave a hazy, vaporous outline.

A case in point: I buy my morning coffee and danish at one of those places that has a roped-off zigzag where the customers line up. Quite often, I will be alone at the front of the line, and one of the counter help will suspiciously scan the empty — except for me — queue and then, as if sensing but not seeing a presence, ask the room at large, "May I help someone?"

The counter clerk then seems startled when I materialize at the counter. I think that one reason the shop quit making coconut danishes, my regular choice, was that the help, whose numbers are drawn from a refugee group whose origin changes weekly, began to fear that those particular danishes attracted ghosts.

One school of thought holds that I am not invisible but, being 50-something, white and male, am a member of the last group in American society that can be safely ignored without unpleasant legal consequences.

I prefer to think not. I prefer to think that I am cutting-edge, trend-wise. The trend is toward clear gas, clear toothpaste, "Crystal Light" soft drinks, clear beer, why not transparent people?

I am ahead of my time. I just wish people could see that.

Advisors wanted to lend credibility to foreign policy

Scripps Howard News Service

Some Clintonites are calling the president's foreign policy a "work in progress." And well they might. Bill Clinton and his groping international team have not met the — admittedly extraordinary — challenge of setting a steady course for the nation through the uncharted waters of the post-Cold War world.

Power abhors a vacuum, and one result of the administration's unconvincing management of foreign crises — especially in Bosnia, Somalia and Haiti — is assertiveness in Congress. Senate minority leader Bob Dole threatens to legislate curbs on the president's discretion to send U.S. troops to Haiti.

Quite rightly, Clinton resists this latest congressional sortie in the 200-year struggle between executive and legislative branches over control of foreign policy. The Constitution divides power between the president, who is commander in chief, and Congress, which holds the purse strings and has the right to declare war. Like his predecessors, Clinton must defend the prerogatives of his office — never mind the irony that in the past his party eagerly shackled Republican presidents, through the War Powers Act, for example, and the Boland amendments.

For that matter, never mind the institutional battles. The more important question is the substance of policy, toward Bosnia, Somalia, Haiti and trouble spots to come. An indecisive leader prone to consult too long, not too little, Clinton seems unlikely to strike out in directions offensive to most on Capitol Hill.

Indeed, the president is only too eager to have Congress share big risks. When his meandering policy toward the former Yugoslavia pro-

Entertainment without the raunchiness

The television remote control device is one of the few things mechanical or electronic I can successfully operate.

By that I mean I can turn the television on, I can turn it off, I can control the volume and I can switch the channels.

It is also one of the few modern conveniences I consider a true convenience.

The electric toothbrush certainly isn't. Somebody gave me one of those. I put the toothpaste on the brush, but when I hit the juice, the brush vibrates so violently by the time I get it to my mouth, it has shaken the toothpaste off. Toothpaste in your eyes burns.

The automatic coffee maker really isn't automatic. If it were automatic it would locate those little packs of coffee I can never find in my kitchen and then pour the water in itself.

Do you realize what we had to do before we had those remote magic clickers?

We actually had to get up off our rears, walk over to the set and manually turn the channel changer.

Had it not been for the magic clicker, I wouldn't have had the warm, wonderful experience I had recently.

I had retired early and turned on the television in my bedroom.

"I'll lie here," I said to myself, "and watch a good movie."

I knew I could use the magic clicker to find one. I wouldn't have to jump up and out of bed, switching channels in my search.

I began at the lower end of the channel range where HBO is and Cinemax and the Movie Channel are located.

On one, 14 people were shooting automatic weapons at one another. Blood was gushing. I hit the magic clicker.

On the next channel a man and a woman were engaged in heated dialogue. In 30 seconds they each used the "T" word in a veritable buffet of variations: "There was a time you couldn't say 'pregnant' on television."

On to the third channel. Jim and Margaret Anderson didn't even sleep together on "Father Knows Best." There was enough skin showing in the first 30 seconds of the movie showing on this particular channel to reupholster an entire Greyhound bus.

So on I went. Through the mindless sitcoms of the network channels. Through CNN and war and famine and disease and Hillary. Through TNN and men in cowboy hats line dancing with women in dire need of NordicTrackers.

And, then, to TNT. They were showing "Lassie" movies on TNT. Can you imagine that? In the quagmire of sex and violence, midst the medium that spawned Beavis and Butt-head and rock videos and the ever-increasing innuendos of the sitcoms, I found Lassie.

What I watched, in its entirety, was "Son of Lassie," colorized, but otherwise as pure as ever.

Peter Lawford, of all people, was an RAF pilot and he was shot down behind Nazi lines with Laddie, Lassie's own.

They became separated and Laddie goes on the inevitable search to find his master. There were fresh-faced, laughing children in the movie and good people fighting evil and one determined dog.

It was my best television moment since Aunt Bee went to Mt. Pilot and Andy and Opie made her feel unneeded by keeping the house spotless while she was away.

Nobody used the "T" word. Nobody blew off anybody else's head. Nobody got naked.

It's still in that box, though limited, entertainment without the raunch. You just have to look for it, and the magic clicker, bless it, puts it at your fingertips.

See Laddie run. I dreamt that night the Beav and I went spitting off a bridge.

Hutu tribe refugees cross the border near Douame Ruhwa Rwanda after walking over 50 kilometers from Burundi. Tribal violence believed to have blared between the Tutsi and Hutu after a Burundi army coup overthrew President Melchior Ndadaye Thursday. On Sunday, more than 4,000 people marched through the streets of Bujumbura calling for the release of the bodies of President Ndadaye and others killed in the coup.

Help sought as Burundi coup weakens

The Associated Press

BUJUMBURA, Burundi — The ousted prime minister of Burundi appealed on Sunday for foreign military intervention to restore order and reestablish democracy in this Central African nation.

The appeal by Sylvie Kinigi came amid signs that the military coup was beginning to weaken in its fourth day.

Along with suppressing Burundi's infant democracy, the coup has raised the specter of renewed fighting between the Hutu and Tutsi tribes, one of Africa's goriest ethnic rivalries.

"Already people are killing each other, Hutus and Tutsis, and we have no power," Kinigi told reporters at the French Embassy in the Burundian capital, where he and seven other ministers have been taking refuge since the coup.

"We are asking countries with good relations with us to send us troops," he said, but did not identify the countries.

The coup began with the storming of the National Palace before dawn on Thursday. The military has acknowledged that President Melchior Ndadaye was killed shortly after the storming.

Ndadaye had become the country's first freely elected leader in June. The 40-year-old former businessman also was the first member of the majority Hutu tribe to lead the country since independence from Belgium in 1962.

The military consists almost entirely of Tutsis.

There were, however, signs of division within the military, and Western ambassadors met with army officers Saturday and Sunday in an attempt to get them to hand back power to what remains of the elected government. France, Belgium and the United States backed up their demands by cutting off millions of dollars in aid.

Cabinet ministers who survived the coup have formed a government-in-exile based in Kigali, the capital of neighboring Rwanda.

The ministers on Sunday rejected an offer by the army's chief of staff to restore the government to elected officials in return for an amnesty for the military.

"The criminals who overthrew democratic institutions and killed democratically elected leaders must be brought to justice to be judged and punished," Leonard Nyangoma, the former civil service minister, told reporters in Bujumbura.

Nyangoma said others killed by the military included the speaker of Parliament, the minister of interior and the head of the intelligence service.

The head of the country's powerful Roman Catholic Church, Bishop Bernard Bududia, added his voice to those calling for the army to stand down and give the government back to civilians.

Bududia's statement was broadcast on Burundi Radio, which is in the hands of the military-backed government, a possible indication that his appeal had the backing of the coup leaders.

In addition, the church has strong support among the majority Hutu tribe. Actions against the church were seen as one of the main factors that prompted a 1987 coup against President Jean-Baptiste Bagaza.

On Sunday, 4,000 people marched through the streets of Bujumbura carrying placards calling for the release of the bodies of Ndadaye and others killed in the coup.

Soldiers in trucks followed the marchers, but there was no violence.

The offer to restore the toppled government in exchange for amnesty came from Col. Jean Bikomagu, widely thought to have been one of the coup leaders.

But Bikomagu and Francois Ngeze, the former foreign minister installed by the military as the new head of government, disclaimed any responsibility.

Ngeze, a Hutu despised by fellow tribesmen as a puppet of the Tutsis, said he was asked by the army to assume power after "an unidentified group of coup plotters overthrew the government."

An estimated 100,000 Hutus already have fled to Rwanda amid reports of arrests and massacres by the Tutsi-dominated army, but reporters who drove the 70 miles to Bujumbura from the Rwandan border on Sunday saw no evidence of fighting.

But Rwandan television in Kigali showed hundreds of bodies floating on the Akanyaru River on the border between Rwanda and Burundi.

Dear Beakman,

What makes the pupil of your eye turn red when you get your picture taken?

Lorraine Dufour
Headingley,
Manitoba

Dear Lorraine,

Great question! The thing that makes cats' eyes seem to glow and the thing that makes the fenders of a bicycle seem to light up is the exact same thing that makes your eyes seem to glow in some flash pictures.

It's light that's bouncing. Think of light as a basketball. It gets thrown into your eyeballs by the flash. The light bounces around inside your eyes. And if your eyes are open far enough, some of that light will bounce back out into the camera.

It can make you look all weird, which is perfect for autumn and Halloween when people actually like to look weird.

Beakman
Beakman Place

getting the red out

WHAT YOU NEED:
2 flash cameras - 2 photographers - a group of friends who can get into the idea of looking weird

WHAT TO DO:
Wait until evening, when light is low. Don't turn on all the lights - just enough to see. Set up a pose with the people in the room. Make sure they're all looking directly toward the cameras. The cameras should be right beside each other. One of the photographers should start counting. Both photographers should get ready to take a picture.

MORE STUFF:
On 3, take the first picture. Take the second on 5. Tell your friends that it's going to happen this way so they can keep their pose.

SO WHAT: The first picture should have some red eyes in it. That's because people's eyes will open wide to let them see well in the dimly lit room. The light from the first camera will make people's eyes close down, so there will be fewer red eyes in the picture taken with the second camera.

deep into your eyes

When there isn't much light, the iris (EYE-ris) in our eyes opens up around the pupil. That lets in more light.

Eye A is what your eye looks like in bright sunlight.

Eye B is what your eye looks like in a dimly lit room. Flash photos shine a really bright light into your eyes. The light bounces around inside your eyes. If your iris is open, some of the light will bounce back out into the camera.

The light that bounces back out is what makes you look weird.

Try this: Sit in a dark room like the bathroom - for several minutes. Turn on the light and look into a mirror. Look closely into your eyes. You Can actually see the iris close the pupil.

P.S. from Jax: Something else that seems to glow is really only bounced light. It's the moon, which bounces light from the sun.

Howard athletics searches for 'parents'

The Howard College Athletic Department is searching for "Adopt-A-Hawk" parents for the '93-94 season.

The "Adopt-A-Hawk" program affords local residents an opportunity to be a part of HC athletics by providing a home atmosphere away from home for the Hawk and Lady Hawk players.

"Our adopted parents give our athletes someone to take a special interest in them and display our West Texas hospitality," said HC Athletic Director Royce Chadwick. "Many of our youngsters are nervous being away from home for the first time. Adopted parents make them feel more at home by offering an occasional home-cooked meal and a supporter in the stands."

Deer season starts Nov. 6

Land owners and hunters are reminded of the regulation changes for Howard County during the upcoming deer season, which opens Nov. 6 and runs through Jan. 2.

Special antlerless deer permits are no longer required for harvesting doe deer in Howard County. The new either-sex deer season requires that antlerless deer may be tagged with the appropriate tag from the hunting license. Buck deer must also be tagged with the appropriate tag from the license.

The bag limit is two does and one buck for Howard County and does not represent a change from last year's limit. Anyone harvesting a deer in Texas must cut or punch out the month and day from the license tag and attach the dated tag to the carcass immediately after harvesting the animal.

For further information concerning deer harvest rates or wildlife management, contact wildlife biologist Bill Del Monte at 915-798-3152 in Nolan.

Oilers rise from slumber, beat Bengals

By The Associated Press

The stormy week for the Oilers ended with a 28-12 victory over winless Cincinnati (0-7). Warren Moon threw for two touchdowns, including the first in the NFL for Gary Williams, as the Bengals remained winless at the Astrodome since 1984.

Houston (3-4) took lots of heat this week for its treatment of tackle David Williams. Williams, who skipped last Sunday's game to be with his wife and first-born child, was docked his weekly paycheck of $111,111 for missing the victory over New England. But he returned to the starting lineup against the Bengals.

"I'm just glad I got this game behind me," Williams said. "It's just incredible how things have gone. It amazed me last week how they snowballed. Hopefully that's all behind us now."

Browns 28, Steelers 23

With Eric Metcalf returning punts, who needs much more offense?

Metcalf capped a day of big plays by both teams with his second punt runback for a touchdown Sunday, going 75 yards with 2:05 remaining to lift the Cleveland Browns over the Pittsburgh Steelers 28-23. That TD tied an NFL record because Metcalf had gone 91 yards with a punt return in the second quarter.

Metcalf's heroics were the centerpiece of a wild game in which teammate Michael Jackson took a short pass and went 62 yards for a score; Pittsburgh's Neil O'Donnell passed for a career-high 355 yards, hitting 25 of 39; Eric Green caught six of those for 108 yards; and Pittsburgh had four sacks.

The Browns (5-2) have beaten the Steelers (4-3) 11 of the last 12 meetings in Cleveland.

Packers 37, Buccaneers 14

The idea was simple: get the ball in Sterling Sharpe's hands. Green Bay (3-3) did by throwing to the record-setting receiver, letting him run and putting him at quarterback for two snaps, when he even threw a pass.

Sharpe caught 10 passes for 147 yards and four scores, three in the first half, when Green Bay (3-3) took a 24-0 lead.

He also ran for 5 yards and threw a 1-yard completion to Mark Clayton Houston Oilers Steve Jackson (24) and William Fuller, right, stop Cincinnati Bengal Harold Green for a 2-yard loss in the second quarter Sunday. Houston trailed 9-7 at halftime but came back to win 28-12. Houston is 3-4, while Cincinnati fell to 0-7.

while playing quarterback in the second quarter.

"When the Packers get in the red zone, they throw to Sterling Sharpe," said Bucs cornerback Martin Mayhew. "When it's third-and-8, they get the ball to Sterling Sharpe ... Their whole offense is based on getting him the ball. It's hard to shut him down entirely."

Sharpe, who refuses to do interviews, caught an NFL-record 108 passes last year. Sunday's effort was his 21st 100-yard game and his third against NFC Central rival Tampa Bay (1-5).

Brett Favre was outstanding, too, with 20 completions in 35 attempts for 268 yards and the four touchdowns.

"He's a hell of a player and we have to get the ball to him," said Favre. "After the first quarter, I knew it was going to be a good day for both of us."

In addition to the offensive onslaught at Tampa, Terrell Buckley, LeRoy Butler and Johnny Holland each had interceptions and Bryce Paup had two sacks.

49ers 28, Cardinals 14

At San Francisco, Jerry Rice and Ricky Watters spoke as loudly with their play as they did while complaining during the week.

Both said they weren't getting the ball enough. Against Phoenix (2-5), they were the focal points of the attack. Rice, with one touchdown catch in his previous five games, caught nine passes for 155 yards and two TDs. It was his 40th 100-yard receiving game but the first this season.

Lions 16, Rams 13

Jason Hanson's third field goal of the game, an 18-yarder with 4 seconds remaining, won it for Detroit (5-2), which is in first place in the NFC Central.

The visiting Lions, who got 91 yards from league rushing leader Barry Sanders and 249 yards passing from Rodney Peete, built a 13-0 lead. But T.J. Rubley, in his NFL debut for the Rams (2-5), replaced the struggling Jim Everett and threw two touchdown passes in the last 4:19. Tony Zendejas missed the extra-point kick after the second score, leaving the game tied.

Seahawks 10, Patriots 9

At Seattle, rookie Rick Mirer, displaying the poise of a veteran, drove the Seahawks 54 yards in 14 plays and threw a 1-yard touchdown pass to Brian Blades with 25 seconds left. John Kasay's extra point won it.

Seattle (4-3) beat New England (1-6) for the second time this season. But the Patriots, using a blitzing defense and three field goals by Scott Sisson, made life miserable for Mirer until the winning drive. The Patriots clearly missed their rookie quarterback, Drew Bledsoe, out with a knee injury. Scott Secules was 15 for 30 for 129 yards and two interceptions.

Bills 19, Jets 10

When the Bills stalled on offense time after time, the defense came to the rescue. Darryl Talley's 61-yard interception return gave the Bills their only touchdown. Steve Christie kicked four field goals and Thurman Thomas ran for 117 yards.

Until Talley grabbed Boomer Esiason's pass in the flat one play after New York's James Hasty had an interception, the Bills couldn't get in the end zone. And the Jets (2-4) didn't get there after an 80-yard drive to open the game led to Brad Baxter's 1-yard TD run.

Buffalo (5-1) held the ball for over 37 minutes, gained 413 yards and didn't punt until five minutes were left in the game.

Falcons 26, Saints 15

After opening the season with five straight defeats, Atlanta has won two straight. After beginning with five successive victories, the Saints have fallen twice in a row.

Bobby Hebert, the quarterback the Saints did not want, returned to New Orleans and hit 13 of 16 passes for 132 yards and two touchdowns. Hebert replaced Billy Joe Tolliver early in the game when Tolliver hurt his shoulder and made the Saints regret not re-signing him.

Crew members from Rusty Wallace's team celebrate after Wallace won the AC Delco 500 NASCAR race at the North Carolina Motor Speedway Sunday.

Wallace wins AC Delco 500, gains little in Cup standings

By The Associated Press

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. — The race for the Winston Cup championship is being run right out front.

Rusty Wallace, chasing Dale Earnhardt for the title, found the right setup midway through Sunday's AC Delco 500 and ran off to an easy victory, his ninth win of the season and the 30th of his career.

But he can't shake five-time champion Earnhardt, who also found the key in the final 100 laps on North Carolina Motor Speedway's 1.017-mile oval and ran second to Wallace.

Net gain for the winner, who now trails Earnhardt by 72 points with two races remaining — 10 points.

"It is frustrating to have done as much as we have this year and still be that far behind," Wallace said. "These races pay 180 points, each one of them, to win, and I'm only 72 behind. If he slips one time, I've got him. I'm going to be right up on his rear end. He knows it. And if I slip, he's going to check out on me."

But, despite the frustration, Wallace is enjoying the battle.

"I am enjoying the competition and it's anybody's game out there," the 1989 Winston Cup champion said. "It's kind of ironic that usually, when you're racing somebody for the championship, you find yourself racing with them no matter where you are on the track."

Earnhardt, whose Chevrolet Lumina trailed Wallace's Pontiac Grand Prix across the finish line by 3.23 seconds, said, "I think I could have caught Rusty if my right front tire hadn't been going down."

"It started going down with about 10 laps to go, and the car just wouldn't turn as good. I don't know if we could have caught him, but we're racing Rusty pretty hard."

Wallace agreed, saying, "When you've got a shot at a championship, you run your rear end off."

But he also said there was no way

Earnhardt was going to catch him, even if his tire hadn't gone flat.

"It wasn't real nervewracking because I knew I had another half inch of gas pedal left," Wallace said.

Wallace won $52,850, averaging 114.036 mph in the 492-lap event.

Bill Elliott was third in a Ford, followed by Harry Gant in a Chevrolet. A lap down were Ford drivers Mark Martin and Ernie Ivan.

Wallace started 18th and Earnhardt 22nd in the 41-car lineup, but both sliced quickly through traffic to move into contention.

Following the first pit stop by the leaders, during a caution period on lap 45, Wallace was sixth and Earnhardt seventh. Earnhardt was eventually able to lead the race, but it was Wallace who earned the five-point bonus for leading the most laps after taking the top spot for the first time on lap 312 and leading 179 of the final 181 laps.

A rash of caution flags slowed the race early, with a "mystery car" bringing out three of them for oil on the track. But NASCAR officials were never able to determine which car was leaking, although they even went so far as to run the field slowly through the pit lane so officials could scan the cars during one of the early cautions.

Wild and crazy Series thrilled everyone - except the Wild Thing

Random thoughts while tearing up my Mitch Williams trading cards:

It was a marvelous World Series. Oh, it wasn't quite as grand as the great seven-game affairs of 1975 or 1991, but by the time Joe Carter hit that three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth to give the Toronto Blue Jays the world championship, fans knew they had watched one of the more dramatic, evenly played Series in recent history.

This Series had almost everything.

It had dramatics (Carter's clinching homer).

It had hitting (boy, did it have hitting).

It had individual heroics (Paul Molitor for the Blue Jays, Lenny Dykstra for Philadelphia).

It had a great pitching performance (Philly's Curt Schilling pitching a shutout in Game 5).

And it had a goat.

This year, the man who got fitted with the horns was Mitch Williams. Wild Thing, they call him, and there's hardly been a more appropriate nickname given a man.

Williams, the Philadelphia closer, saved 43 games for the Phillies this year and won two games and saved two in the National League playoffs against Atlanta. In short, the man knew what he was doing.

But you wouldn't have known it in the Series.

In Game 4, Williams took the mound in the eighth inning with the Phillies leading 14-9. By the time the smoke cleared, Toronto had scored six runs and the Phillies were behind 15-14.

But Williams saved his best meltdown for last. Game 6, the Phillies holding a 6-5 lead and three outs from forcing a seventh game. Philadelphia had fought back from a 5-1 deficit to take the lead against Dave Stewart, arguably one of the best postseason pitchers in history.

All they needed were three lousy outs and the game was theirs.

Enter Williams. Schilling, sitting in the dugout and sensing what was coming, put a towel over his head. He knew that, win or lose, Williams would make things interesting.

So did Molitor. "We knew something good would happen when Mitch came into the game," he said.

Williams walked leadoff batter Rickey Henderson, then forced Devon White to fly out. Molitor then singled to left, setting the stage for Carter, who deposited a Williams slider over the left field fence.

Game and Series: Blue Jays.

Goat horns: Williams.

To his credit, Wild Thing took the disaster like a man.

"In this game, you can't take it back," Williams said.

"I can't change what happened no matter how much I want to," he added. "I'm disappointed for my teammates because they busted their butts all season. But I'm not going to commit suicide. I'll be back next season and we'll have a good team."

At least he has the right attitude. Even if the game was contested by a bunch of millionaires with millions of people watching on TV, it was still just a game.

No countries fell, no economies went south (unless you count the personal kind) and no one died. All that happened was that the Blue Jays won one of the most hotly contested Series in recent history, a Series that will be remembered as much for what Williams didn't do as what Molitor and Dykstra and Carter and all the other heroes accomplished.

It was just a game, and next February they start doing it all over again.

Dear Abby - Letters...

Being adopted is not easy

DEAR ABBY: I keep reading letters in your column from natural mothers who don't want to be found by the children they gave up for adoption.

Every time I read one of those letters, I feel both angry and hurt. Angry because of the selfishness of these women, and hurt because I am adopted and it hurts to think that my natural mother doesn't even want to know me. No matter what the reason for giving us up for adoption, the bottom line is that we live our lives feeling rejected by our "real" mothers — the women who gave birth to us.

These women are more concerned about the questions that might be raised and the problems it would cause than they are about knowing the kind of people we turned out to be. Don't we have a right to know who we really are? Is it fair for us to grow up feeling that we never quite belonged and were never really wanted in the first place?

Being adopted isn't easy — always wondering if I look like my mother, wondering if she remembers me on my birthday, or if she ever regrets having given me up. Maybe she's dead, or maybe she's the lady who was standing next to me in the grocery store last week.

I love my adoptive parents and I owe them more than I can ever repay. They gave me the best life they could, and they'll always be my "real" parents. But there's someone missing, someone I'm afraid to look for, because if I find her, she may reject me again. — JUST ANOTHER ADOPTED KID

DEAR JUST: Not all adopted children were "rejected" for the convenience of their mothers. Many (and probably most) were put up for adoption because their birth mothers wanted them to have better lives than they could have given them at the time.

DEAR ABBY: I recently leased a studio apartment in a small complex — it's just the right size for me. When I first moved in, it was filthy, but I cleaned it up and now it's immaculate.

To my horror, I discovered that the neighbor woman with whom I share a wall is a prostitute and drug addict. People come and go at all hours of the night, and the television is on 24 hours a day. It stops for maybe three or four hours, then it starts all over again for another three-day orgy.

Her customers stand in the common patio and make a mess of it with cigarette butts and empty liquor bottles.

What should I do? Should I get a lawyer? Or are things so bad these days that the cops would be indifferent? —DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Your neighbor is clearly disturbing your peace. First, send written letters of complaint to this neighbor and to the building manager (keep copies for yourself). If the disturbance continues, call the police. And see a lawyer about getting out of your lease.

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

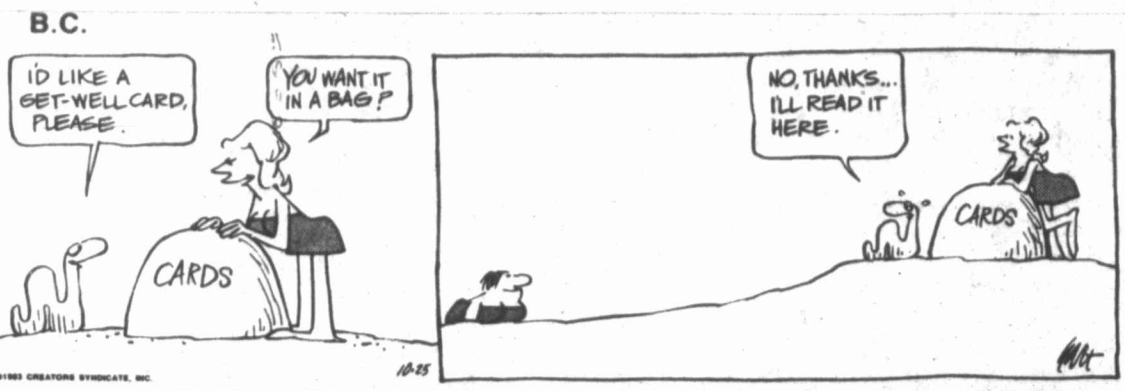

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? Get it off your chest by writing to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.
