Coup attempted in Mauritania

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Iraqi news agency today reported an apparent unsuccessful coup attempt in Mauritania, a mainly desert Islamic republic on the western bulge of Africa. Some casualties and street fighting were reported.

The agency said the presidential palace in Nouakchott, the capital, was attacked with artillery and medium-range weapons in the seeming attempt against the ruling military Committee of National Salvation.

The palace attackers were groups of Mauritanian army officers and soldiers who engaged in fighting with presidential guards after the shelling, the agency said. It added that street fighting flared in other parts of Nouakchott after the assault on the palace, which left several guards killed or wounded.

The agency quoted Radio Nouakchott as saying that Mauritania had been subjected to an "indirect foreign invasion" organized "with outside links."

The broadcast said "our armed forces are in full control of the situation" and appealed to the population for "calm and self-restraint," the agency said.

Reagan program starts through Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's economic program begins moving through Congress this week as the Senate votes on scrapping higher dairy subsidies and its budget writers draft their own plan for deep cuts in federal spending.

Reagan's recommendation for scrapping the scheduled April 1 increase in dairy price supports was endorsed by the Senate Agriculture Committee earlier, and Majority Leader Howard Baker predicted the full Senate will go along. A vote is expected Thursday.

The House Agriculture Committee holds its own hearings on the subsidy increase Tuesday, with a vote scheduled the following day. The prospects there, however, are dimmer, with committee leaders predicting the Democratic-controlled House will be more reluctant than the Republican Senate to approve the cut.

The Senate Agriculture Committee, its own work on the milk subsidies finished, turned its attention today to the food stamp program, which Reagan wants to cut by $2.3 billion next year. The president may have a strong ally on that issue, since the committee's chairman, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has been a vocal critic of food stamps in the past.

The Senate Budget Committee, meanwhile, was beginning a three-day budget-cutting blitz today amid a pledge by its chairman, Sen. Peter Domenici, R-N.M., "to move events quickly" by keeping the panel in session until at least 10 p.m. every day, if necessary.

Technically, the committee is drafting instructions for other Senate committees to follow in deciding which programs to cut.

Reagan proposed $48.6 billion in cuts from the 1982 budget, and Domenici said the committee will approve cutting at least that much, although not along the precise lines the president recommended.

The committee is expected to balk at some of the cuts Reagan wants in child nutrition programs, and it also may reject his proposal to eliminate money earmarked for legal aid for the poor. But Domenici and others have suggested the committee may recommend making up the difference by changing the way Social Security benefits are adjusted for inflation.

Reagan's program may face more extensive changes in the House, where Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas has sent his colleagues a letter reminding them: "No president has ever achieved enactment of his entire program... The people want Congress to be cooperative. They do not want it to be supine."

On non-economic matters in Congress this week, a Senate appropriations subcommittee was expected to endorse the administration's decision to increase military aid to El Salvador.

Collegiate bull rider fighting for his life

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Tommy Castenson, a 22-year-old nationally ranked collegiate rodeo performer, fought for life in an intensive care unit early today after being thrown from a bull Saturday night.

Officials at John Peter Smith Hospital said the Sam Houston State University student was in critical condition. They told Castenson's family that two vertebrae near the base of his skull were fractured.

Castenson's sister, Sally Baie of Tulsa, said there was also evidence of brain damage, which probably occurred during the several minutes that no oxygen reached his brain.

Paramedics, emergency medical technicians and an unidentified doctor from Pennsylvania worked for 45 minutes on the floor of the Cowtown Coliseum to save Castenson's life.

The doctor, who said only that he was a surgical resident at a Pennsylvania university, slipped away without telling anyone his name.

By some estimates, Castenson died four times. Two Fort Worth paramedics say they revived him twice.

A pair of emergency medical technicians said they may also have revived him twice, though they were not sure. One said Castenson's eyes alternated between being alert and blank.

"His face was blue," one observer said. "It was as blue as your britches."

The rodeo was over when Castenson was hurt, and only about 75 of the original 1,500 spectators remained.

Most stood silent, though some children cried. "His face was blue," one observer said. "It was as blue as your britches."

Castenson was thrown in a violent ride of a powerful but undistinguished bull named J5. He was repeatedly tossed high into the air.

"It looked like he was doing handstands up there," one witness commented.

Castenson, whose father Roland is a dairy farmer and real estate salesman from Bryan, was rushed to the hospital and hooked to a respirator.

"We will never know how it happened," Mrs. Baie said of Castenson's injury. "We don't know whether he did it when he hit the ground, or if it happened when he was on the bull."

"It's like having a heart attack right before a car accident; there's no way to tell," Mrs. Baie is a former nurse.

No ambulance was on call for the rodeo. Witnesses estimated the one that arrived came 15 to 25 minutes after J5 pitched Castenson to the ground.

Mrs. Baie and Castenson's brother, Paul Castenson, criticized promoter Steve Murrin, saying they had never heard of a rodeo with no ambulance on call. They said Murrin told their parents he couldn't squeeze the ambulance into his tight budget.

"Mother told him, 'If you really wanted to, you could find room. It might hurt somewhere else, but if you wanted to, you could make room.'"

"He just hung his head."

Murrin had hired two emergency medical technicians, Ed Cate and Joe Wayne Martin.

Earlier in the night, two riders had taken bad spills, though neither suffered serious injury. Just before Castenson was thrown, a bull stepped on a rider, badly bruising his back.

Two bulldozers, men who chase a steer on horseback a short way before one leaps on him and wrestles him to the ground, lost their bearings and slammed into a gate.

The blow threw both men to the ground.

Castenson, scheduled to graduate from Sam Houston State this summer, with a degree in agriculture and economics, began riding as a high school student in Bryan.

He placed first in the Southwest region of the Intercollegiate Rodeo Association in the 1979 finals and was eighth in the national competition the same year.

WALKING AWAY WITH AWARD. Light Weight Hereford division winner in today's Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show was Allen Cook, above, of the Roberts County 4-H Club. Other winners in the division were, Chad Breeding, second, and Joe Bilbrey, third, both of the Roberts County 4-H Club.

Hostage says shooting of diplomat accidental

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The Moslems among the 101 freed hostages from a hijacked Pakistani airliner flew to Saudi Arabia today for a two-day thanksgiving at Islam's holy shrines. One of the Americans who suffered through the 13-day ordeal said the killing of a Pakistani diplomat-hostage may have been accidental.

Frederick Hubbell of Des Moines, Iowa was reunited with his parents in Frankfurt, West Germany after stepping off a Lufthansa flight from Damascus, Syria, where the hostages were freed Saturday after Pakistan released 54 political prisoners.

Hubbell, 30, also planned to meet his wife Charlotte in Frankfurt. Mrs. Hubbell, also a lawyer, was on board the Pakistan International Airlines jet when it was hijacked over Pakistan on March 2. The three Pakistani hijackers released her and other women and children passengers in Kabul, Afghanistan five days later.

She was in New Delhi, India on Monday, and planned to fly from there to Frankfurt to meet her husband.

The plans of the other American ex-hostage, Craig R. Clymore of Laguna Hills, Calif., were not known. He is wanted on drug charges in the United States. The State Department revoked his passport and said it would issue him documents valid for travel only to the United States.

The United States has no extradition treaty with Syria.

A third hostage identified during the 13-day hijacking as an American turned out to be a Canadian using the name of Lawrence C. Mangum, a Brooklyn furniture mover whose wife said he had never left the United States. The Canadian government said it believed he was Lawrence Lome, who escaped from a Canadian penitentiary in 1976 while serving a term for importing narcotics.

A spokesman in Ottawa said Canada has no extradition agreement with Syria, but the Syrian government was expected to help get the fugitive back to Canada.

The freed Moslem hostages, mostly Pakistanis and Arabs, were guests of the Saudi government on their tour of Mecca, the birthplace of the prophet Mohammed, and other Moslem holy places.

Hubbell told reporters in Frankfurt he and the other hostages were kept in the dark about negotiations during the ordeal.

"The worst moment was when the Pakistani was shot," he said, referring to the killing of a hostage in Kabul on March 6.

But in an interview broadcast on the CBS "Morning" show, Hubbell said the shooting may have been accidental.

Hubbell said diplomat Tariq Rahim was pistol-whipped before being shot in the plane's first-class section, about 15 feet from where the hostages were seated.

"While the first hijacker was hitting the individual — it's hard to tell whether it was accidental or whether it was on purpose — the gun went off and the individual was shot and was rendered unconscious and was subsequently dragged off the plane, and died as we learned later a couple of hours after being dragged off the plane," he said.

Hubbell did not disclose his immediate plans beyond saying he wanted to have a physical checkup.

Mrs. Hubbell said in the Indian capital that the hijackers claimed they were trained by the Palestine Liberation Organization and once forced Rahim to play "Russian roulette."

The hijackers and Pakistani prisoners whose freedom they obtained were given temporary asylum in Syria after Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy withdrew his offer of haven to them. There was no indication what country might accept them.

The second longest hijacking in aviation history ended Saturday when the prisoners freed by Pakistan's military government arrived in Damascus, and the three young opponents of military rule surrendered to Syrian police.

Meanwhile, Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq charged that Afghanistan's Soviet-backed communist government supplied the hijackers with automatic weapons and explosives after they diverted the Boeing 720 jetliner to Kabul, the Afghan capital, during a domestic flight on March 1.

Defense Minister Mohammad Rahim Khan told reporters the three young men were "armed only with pistols" when they took over the plane, but at Kabul "many people went aboard," and afterward the hijackers "produced...grenades and explosives they had wired to blow up the plane."

"You can draw your own conclusions," he said.

The freed passengers and crew members spent Saturday night in a Syrian military hospital. Doctors there said they were "in much better shape than we thought they would be." A U.S. Embassy official said the Americans were "full of beans, telling jokes and keeping everybody happy."

Embassy officials escorted Clymore, Hubbell, the mystery man "Mangum" and a South African official of the World Bank named Geoffrey Balkind to a Damascus hotel on Sunday.

Although Clymore refused to talk about the drug indictment against him and "Mangum" refused to discuss his identity.

Americans caused Pakistan 'cave-in'

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Pakistan "caved in" to the hijackers holding more than 100 hostages on a Pakistani airliner chiefly because of the hijackers' threat to kill the three men with American passports. Third World diplomats in Damascus believe.

These sources said the Reagan administration told the Syrians and the Pakistanis governments should not give in to terrorists, that hijackers should be brought to justice — but that the United States hoped the ordeal would end without loss of life.

"When you remember that the Pakistanis were criticized by the United States for not moving quickly enough to stop the attack on the U.S. Embassy in Islamabad in 1979, and you know the U.S. hostage crisis is still on people's minds, you have to assume the Pakistanis put greater weight on the last part of that policy," one diplomat said.

In November 1979, less than a month after the capture of the U.S. Embassy in Iran, Moslem militants stormed and burned the U.S. Embassy in the Pakistani capital and killed a Marine guard.

The hijackers freed their 101 hostages Saturday after holding them for 13 days and gaining the release of 54 imprisoned opponents of Pakistan's military government.

Taxes-are you paying too much?

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Millions of Americans are giving the federal government more than they have to, says a New York accounting expert who claims people frequently overpay their income tax bills because of ignorance and laziness.

Herbert M. Paul, a partner in the management consulting and accounting firm of Touche & Ross, said taxpayers generally "don't know what they're entitled to" and don't want to "go to the bother" of doing all the paperwork. As a result, he said, they "end up paying too much."

The majority of taxpayers, for example, do not itemize deductions. They use the standard deduction, formally known as the zero bracket amount and now equal to $2,300 for single persons and $3,400 for married couples.

Paul said, however, that taking the standard deduction may be a mistake. "Most people," he said, "if they truly go through their records, should itemize." He said the deductions they could claim would add up to more than the standard amount.

If you're buying a house — and more than half of all Americans are — it usually pays to itemize, Paul said. You can deduct your property tax payments and the interest on your mortgage.

You also should itemize, Paul said, if you "live in a state with a personal income tax." State and local income taxes are deductible on your federal return if you itemize.

High interest rates — not only for mortgages, but for other loans as well — also can make it profitable to itemize since interest, including the interest you pay on credit cards, is deductible.

Itemization does not automatically increase your risk of an audit. Paul said audits generally occur because:

—Your deductions are higher than average for your income bracket.

—Your tax return includes a particular item which, for one reason or another, the Internal Revenue Service is investigating.

—Your return happens to be the one selected by a computer on a random basis for checking.

Don't panic if your return is audited. "It's not an accusation," said Paul. It is simply a matter "of proving what you put on the tax return," he said. "If you have documentation, you will simply wait it out and wait out."

Most people get a refund after they file their returns. And while the refund may seem like a welcome bonus, Paul said it does not make good financial sense to overpay your taxes all year long just so you can get some back later on. "It doesn't earn you any interest. It's a poor investment," he said.

If you find that the amount of money withheld from your paycheck habitually leaves you overpaying — or underpaying — your taxes, ask your employer for a new form W-4. You can adjust the number of exemptions you take so that the amount of tax withheld from your paycheck will be increased or decreased.

French comedian leaves politics

PARIS (AP) — France's most popular comedian has withdrawn from the presidential race, ending a tongue-in-cheek campaign that delighted the public and angered the politicians.

"Better to vote for a fathead than for someone who treats you like a fathead," was the campaign slogan of Michel Colucci, a junior high school dropout best known by his stage name, Coluche, whose bizarre five-month campaign brought him a flood of hate mail and a police escort.

His withdrawal from the race was announced Sunday by his agent. The comedian was expected to give his reasons for dropping out in an interview to be published today in the first edition of a new satirical daily newspaper called Charlie-Matin. He also called a news conference today.

The bespectacled 32-year-old comedian, who sports bright yellow tennis shoes, seersucker overalls and a red, white and blue sash, outraged politicians with his mocking campaign.

His only campaign pledge was "If elected, I will not take office."

His party: "I am the abstentionist candidate, the candidate for homos, taxi drivers, hairdressers, drug addicts, alcoholics, the candidate of minorities."

Opinion polls indicated the chubby comedian, who peppers his speech with foul words, might get 10 to 15 percent of the vote in the first round of the presidential election April 26.

Gas poisoning kills three persons

ALLENTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Authorities say they still are baffled about the deaths of a married couple, both business executives, and a handyman who apparently died of carbon monoxide poisoning from a car left running.

Ernest Korn, 62, and his wife Elaine, 59, were found dead Friday in their home in this suburban Bergen County community along with handyman Richard Job of Avon-by-the-Sea.

Korn was vice president of the New York office of Texas-based Mid-Continent Supply Co., an oil drilling equipment supplier. Mrs. Korn was president of the Paramus Chamber of Commerce and head of the merchant sales division of Midland Bank & Trust Co. in Paramus.

"We don't know what happened," Bergen County Prosecutor Roger Breslin said Sunday. "It could have been accidental, it could have been a multiple suicide, it could have been a murder-suicide. We have to continue the investigation. It's much too early to tell what happened."

Breslin said the toxic gas came from Mrs. Korn's car, which

He was not expected to make it into the runoff voting May 10. President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and Socialist Party chief Francois Mitterrand are expected to be the two candidates then. But many politicians feared Coluche's popular, highly-publicized campaign would attract enough support for him to become an official candidate in the race, entitling him to television time on the government-controlled networks.

To become an official candidate, contenders must obtain 500 signatures before the end of March from 43,000 officials around the nation. A month ago, Coluche said he had pledges of 632 signatures. Other presidential candidates privately expressed disgust at the thought of having to appear on television campaign programs with the comic.

Coluche's announced his candidacy for the Elysee Palace, the presidential residence, in October. More than 200 committees formed throughout the country to support him. Fifty celebrities signed a petition backing him, including film directors Roman Polanski and Jean-Luc Godard.

Coluche appeared at one campaign rally dressed only in a bunch of grapes. He delighted in reminding the public that he was reaping an enormous amount of free publicity from his campaign. He contended it all cost him only 17 francs — $3.60 — the price of the telegram that announced his candidacy.

was found with the ignition on in a garage attached to the ranch style home.

The deaths apparently were a result of carbon monoxide poisoning, according to a preliminary report by the county medical examiner's office.

Breslin said the engine of the vehicle was not running because it had run out of gasoline.

The house was sealed, the garage door was closed and a ventilation duct connected the garage to the home, authorities said.

Marijuana seized on Texas coast

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Sixteen tons of high-grade marijuana, 14 would-be drug smugglers, a fishing boat, a truck rig, two cars, two motorized campers and six weapons were the haul in a massive, coordinated drug raid at a dilapidated pier north of here, agents said.

Dozens of local, state and federal agents cooperated in the raid at Seadrift, the biggest drug bust ever made on the Texas coast, a federal agent said.

A U.S. magistrate scheduled arraignment for the 14 today.

Sunday's raid ended a three-month investigation and also resulted in the seizure of a 76-foot, steel-bottomed shrimp boat, a tractor-trailer rig, two large recreational vehicles, six weapons and two late-model automobiles, said James Anderson, in charge of the DEA office here.

Two of those arrested were Cubans, one was a Colombian and the marijuana had a street value of $20 million, he said.

"The stuff was in burlap-covered bales," said Anderson. "It was fine leaf, no stems or seeds. It is in federal custody and will be destroyed, except for those samples saved for use as evidence."

Several undercover officers from different law enforcement agencies — Anderson would not reveal specific details — set up the big bust.

"We had been staked out all night," said Charles Conroy of the U.S. Customs office in Houston. "The arrests ended a months-long investigation."

"We knew they were coming," he said.

The agents said they waited in darkness until the marijuana had been loaded onto the truck and the delivery boat had departed before making the arrests.

"The marijuana had just been off-loaded onto the 18-wheeler," said Conroy.

There was the usual panic when the raid was triggered, with one of the men on the pier jumping into San Antonio Bay in an attempt to escape, but he was quickly fished out of the water and the rest of the men surrendered without struggle, the officers said.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Coast Guard chipped in by seizing the boat as it reached the mouth of the bay and arrested the three men on board.

Man being questioned about fires, tries escape

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A man being held in connection with a fire near Texas Christian University probably would be a free man if he had not tried to escape, police said.

The man smashed through a plate-glass window in trying to get away from officers and is now being held on charges of escape, a third-degree felony.

Meanwhile, arson investigators today began checking into a fifth case of suspected arson to strike the TCU area in the past eight days. The latest fire struck the University Baptist Church during Sunday services. There were no injuries and damage was estimated at $8,000, firemen said.

Investigators said the escape attempt came Saturday as the man was taken to the municipal courthouse for a bond hearing.

"All of a sudden we heard glass tinkling," said fire department arson investigator Chip Owens. "He went right through the window of a hallway and jumped 10 feet to the sidewalk below."

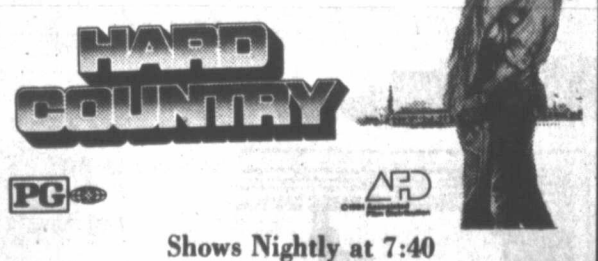

One of the (police) detectives went right through the window after him, Owens said. "The rest of us went out the west door of the building and were right behind."

After five blocks, Owens said, the man ran out of energy and was recaptured. He was treated for cuts on

House starts on regular bills

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — House members, for the first time since the Legislature convened Jan. 13, were able to work today on bills other than those declared emergencies by Gov. Bill Clements.

The calendar was headed by Rep. Tony Polombo's bill allowing police and telephone companies to reroute telephone lines of buildings where hostages are held.

Polombo, D-Houston, offered the bill as a means to keep telephone lines free for police and others attempting to negotiate the release of hostages.

He says that too often curiosity seekers and reporters seeking interviews keep the lines tied up and hamper negotiations.

Speaker Bill Clayton says the House will work Wednesday or Thursday on a Senate-approved bill raising the drinking age from 18 to 19 years.

Sponsors contend the bill, declared an emergency by Clements, will reduce the amount of drinking on or near high school campuses.

Because the House, for the first time ever, failed at the beginning of the session to suspend the constitutional order of business, only emergency bills could be considered during the first 60 days of lawmaking.

Friday was the 60th day, and with that barrier out of the way, business will pick up.

"I expect quite a slew of bills will be coming out (of committee) now. The committees held the non-emergency items. Now that that restriction is over, I expect quite a few will be coming out," said Rep. Susan McBee of Del Rio, chairwoman of the House Calendars Committee.

The committee has been holding about two dozen non-emergency bills, and they now may be placed on daily calendars for debate.

Senators customarily do not suspend the constitutional order of business, except on a bill-by-bill basis. With the 60th day past, they now may take up bills on a two-thirds vote instead of four-fifths.

That should mean action on some of the more controversial measures.

One such bill is Sen. Bill Meier's proposal to make it more difficult to file and win product liability suits.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covenants Commandment.

Unemployed migration

Want a job? Go where the jobs are. Many an unemployed worker is doing just that.

Let's face it, some industry is moving from northeast to south and southwest, and workers are moving with it. We dislike to see a firm move away, but we dislike still more to see laid-off people sit back and merely exist, from month to month, on unemployment compensation payments.

Leo Yourist, a Toledo, Ohio, news vendor, reports that Sunday newspapers from Houston, Dallas, Denver and even Phoenix and Los Angeles are selling like hotcakes to laid-off workers.

"We get more than 100 copies of the Dallas and Houston papers," said Yourist, "and they sell out in an hour. They don't care about the news, they care about the classifieds. They care about the jobs."

Employers are just as eager to get good workers as workers are to get good jobs. An employer from the North who is relocating in the South has a very real problem in manning his new plant. Fortunately is he who can build his new work force around at least a nucleus of experienced northerners.

To this end, some employers recently arrived in the South, are placing "help wanted" ads in northern newspapers. For every job-seeker who buys a southern paper, probably many more will check the classifieds in his hometown paper. And that makes sense, too, because it is a fact that while some industrial jobs have been lost, many other employment opportunities remain.

With some areas suffering an industrial recession, it is inevitable some of the workers may have to relocate. Others, if they would remain, are going to have to find some new line of work. Life adjustments such as these are difficult, but certainly necessary in today's economic climate.

By Edward Teller

In the midst of the 19th century Industrial Revolution, Frederick Engels, who like Karl Marx predicted societal upheavals, made another prediction: modern technology would have no influence on warfare. He argued that a rifle could shoot as far as a man could see and as fast as he could take aim. No further perfection of weapons would occur. Engels was tragically wrong. The machine gun — not taking aim but committing wholesale slaughter — determined the course of the next major war. Technology affected most other human activities before it exercised its influence as thoroughly on warfare, but today we know that warfare and technology bring about a most unpredictable and dangerous mixture.

It is a mistake to believe that peaceful and military applications of modern inventions can be neatly separated. In 1914, Germany seemed to have lost the war. Their offensive was halted before Paris. The British blockade had cut them off from Peru's guano, the only effective source of nitrogen for gunpowder. Then, a great German physical chemist, Fritz Haber, put new power in the hands of the German general staff by developing a way to extract nitrogen from the air. Thus, what would have been a painful incident of a few months was converted into four and a half years of horror. Yet by this same invention, Haber made it possible to mass-produce chemical fertilizers without which at the present time uncoupled millions would starve.

In the Second World War, with mechanized warfare, with radar, and with the eventual use of atomic explosives, the connection between technology and military strength became frighteningly obvious. The rapidly expanding reach of man's power has deprived the United States of the protection of ocean barriers, a fact which our minds have observed but with which our feelings and political actions have not quite caught up. Indeed, the United States today may well be no more secure than Poland was in 1939.

In this situation we have been led to rely on a development called security, a word whose technical meaning is to withhold secrets from enemies but whose implication is sorely misleading. Security appeared to work as long as the United States had unquestioned leadership in military technology. Unfortunately, Russian concentration on advanced weapons and the anti-technology movement in America have brought about a dangerous change. Today we know that the Russians are ahead of us in quantity of weapons. We are beginning to suspect that they may well be ahead in quality of weapons.

It is a deeply disturbing thought that the 1980s may be quite similar to the 1930s. The complacency of democracies may lead now as it led half a century ago to disaster. Security in our hands has become a boomerang. It impedes technological progress, deters scientists from working on defense, separates us from our allies, and is totally useless now that Soviet military leaders have discovered our secrets but we have not learned theirs.

One can find a hopeful lesson in the 1940s, best told by a story only recently publicized. A remarkable British mathematician, Alan Turing, published a paper showing that any clearly defined mental activity can be performed by computing machine, more rapidly and more reliably than by humans. He proposed to the British government that this circumstance might be used to break the Nazi code of the Enigma machine. The result changed the course of the war. The Battle of Britain and the Battle of the North Atlantic were won because the British knew where the Germans planned to attack. Where Chamberlain failed, scientists came to the rescue.

One must not expect that technology will help us in the same way it helped in the past. Technology is apt to be surprising in form on every occasion. There is one branch of technology in which the United States has maintained leadership: This is electronics, particularly its application to ever more complex, smaller and less expensive computing equipment. We have managed to be ahead of the rest of the world in this field, not by using secrecy or security, but by acquiring know-how through the free cooperation of the best minds. It is quite possible that our survival depends on free cooperation and inventions similar to the invention of computers, if indeed there are men and women who, like Turing, recognize danger and invent a way in which power can be placed in the hands of those who prefer peace to the extension of power.

Today in history

Today is Monday, March 16, the 75th day of 1981. There are 290 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On March 16, 1978, Italy's former Prime Minister Aldo Moro was kidnapped in Rome by left-wing guerrillas. His body was found several weeks later in a car.

On this date: In 1521, Portuguese navigator Ferdinand Magellan reached the Philippine Islands.

In 1534, England severed all relations with the Roman Catholic papacy.

In 1969, a Venezuelan airliner crashed on takeoff from Maracaibo, killing 155 people.

In 1979, the Soviet Union vetoed a U.N. Security Council draft resolution aimed at ending China's invasion of Vietnam and Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia.

Ten years ago: Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir won a vote of confidence during a stormy parliament session in Jerusalem.

Five years ago: Laborite Harold Wilson resigned as Britain's prime minister.

One year ago: Jimmy Carter scored a narrow victory over Edward Kennedy in Puerto Rico's Democratic Presidential primary.

Today's birthday: Actor-comedian Jerry Lewis is 56 years old. Thought For Today: Victory belongs to the most persevering — Napoleon Bonaparte, French general and statesman (1769-1821).

American combat involvement for about 12 years made the Vietnam War the longest in U.S. history.

The ultimately sophisticated war

by Paul Harvey

Since Cain clobbered Abel with a four-pound club, effectiveness in combat has been measured in the foot-pounds of destructive energy which one man is capable of delivering.

Through the development of the slingshot and the crossbow, the catapult and the cannon — the damage one man could do increased in a rather steady incline — until August of 1945 when there was delivered into man's hands a weapon 400 million times more lethal than anything theretofore.

The divided atom nominated itself as the ultimate weapon; perhaps awesome enough to PREVENT war.

There is now a weapon more sophisticated than that.

A 19-year-old electronics expert in California — by initiating a variety of audio tones over his parents' telephone — was able to gain access to the telephone company's computer. He thus placed orders and initiated delivery to himself of a million dollars worth of merchandise.

And he was not caught stealing; he was finally caught selling the stuff.

Nobody knows how many computer manipulators never get caught. But the Chamber of Commerce of the United States guesstimates that computer crime costs somebody in excess of $300 million per year!

Now a sophisticated refinement of computer crime threatens our nation's very security.

Computers can themselves be "attacked," disabled.

A computer program of inestimable value could be "kidnapped," held hostage.

With "penetration" of another nation's computer networks, conceivably, a nation could be rendered impotent, helpless.

Stanford Research Institute's international consultant, Donn B. Parker, says, "Major nations have now become so dependent upon their computers that if those machines were suddenly crippled those nations would be defenseless."

He says there are presently technologists who know precisely how to bring a nation to its computerized knees.

Computer expert Bob McLeod of Jacksonville, Alabama, is one of them. Fortunately, he is on "our side."

He believes that future wars will be "electronic computer wars"; that "Armageddon may involve first the destruction of data banks."

Technology presently available could sabotage any nation's air traffic control; cause chaos...

Could manipulate worldwide weather forecasting, sabotage the money and commodity markets, alter computers that control distribution of energy, "turn us off!"

An enemy could throw a monkey wrench into computers and knock a nation off balance; disrupt the civilian population and snafu its military response.

Our FBI is studying ways and means of intercepting computer crime. It's logical to assume other governments are contemplating the computer as a weapon.

Supply-side uneconomics

By Oscar Cooley

The people on welfare, who are increasing in number, are being supported by the people who are working and earning, who are declining in number. Plainly, this cannot go on forever.

In fact, it could not go on at all without a third source of wealth. That source is the nation's capital, consisting of machines, buildings, land, supplies — all the stuff that is used in production. This is being used up and not replaced, as the idle consumers increase and the working earners decline.

Somehow, this doubly wasteful operation has to be reversed. The idle consumers must become fewer, the producers more numerous, so that the drain on the nation's stored-up capital will cease.

The cause of the imbalance is excessive wage rates which employers are forced to pay because of laws passed by politicians who thought they were benefiting workers when they, in fact, were injuring them; in short, laws that were passed because of ignorance of economics.

People are unemployed and on welfare because they ask too high a wage, higher than the market can pay. One principal reason the workers do this is that they are forced to by the minimum wage act, which Congress enacted because vote-controlled unions demanded it.

This law forbids anyone to work for less than a certain wage. This minimum wage is low, purposely so because the lawmakers wanted everyone to agree that no one should have to work for less than this wage. Less than $3.35 an hour? Perish the thought! So the minimum wage is widely approved.

It is one of the most wasteful and mischievous laws on the statute books. It forces people into unemployment — into living off their neighbors, which they devoutly hate to do — into consuming without producing. It forces the economy to use up its capital. It should be branded "supply-side uneconomics."

And it does not achieve the end that its chief advocates, the labor union leaders, said it would, that is, an increase in the wages of the people who are employed, for they are among the producers who are being taxed, more and more, to support the ever-increasing numbers of welfare recipients.

The welfare rolls are heavily peopled with teenagers and blacks, they being the lowest-wage earners and therefore the soonest to arrive at a point where their earnings are less than $3.35 an hour. The cruel nature of the law is shown by the fact that these low earners are the very ones whose need is greatest, who can least afford to be unemployed.

Minimum wage laws are a mistake because they clash with the basic economic laws of supply and demand. These economic laws cause prices — and wages, never let it be forgotten, are prices — to move to levels which equate supply with demand. When the supply of workers equals the demand, we have full employment. This ideal end is attained when, and only when, supply and demand are free to act.

Some have suggested lowering the minimum wage for teenagers only. Unionists oppose such a change on the ground that employers would lay off workers and hire teenagers in their places. But an employer would do this only if the teenager could do the work just as well. If that were true, why did he hire the adult in the first place?

Lowering the minimum wage for teenagers only would be a halfway measure. Washington would still be involved in wage-fixing, an area in which it has no business. We would still be afflicted with law-created unemployment, idleness, and want.

Supply of doctors will adjust

Have we too many doctors? Should youth who aspire to enter the medical profession be dissuaded from doing so?

This might be concluded from a recent report of the Graduate Medical Education National Advisory Committee. It said the United States will have an oversupply of medical doctors by 1990.

If a surplus of doctors impends, this should be reflected in a decline of doctors' fees. If this has occurred, it has escaped our notice. In New York City, we read, an office visit to a general practitioner typically costs $35. Nor are other health services exactly cheap; a day's stay in the semi-private room of a hospital today can cost $200 to $300.

Inflation accounts for only a part of these cost figures. Much is due to the demand for medical services, in relation to the supply.

Rural areas, especially, have a shortage of doctors, who naturally tend to hang out their shingles where people are numerous and where hospitals in which to practice are handy.

Stephen D. Wilhide, director of the Southern Ohio Health Services Network, predicts that lack of doctors will continue to afflict rural areas. "By 1990," he says, "13,000 more physicians will be needed to bring rural and urban under-served areas to the desired ratio of one physician for every 2,000 people."

Our feeling is that this ailment, like most others, can be left to the doctors. Government health planners are not needed. The supply of doctors will adjust to the demand. The American people prize good health and have faith in the ability of their doctors to supply it. They will continue to pay the fees that insure good medical care.

In some areas that lack health services, doctors have set up group clinics in which two or more doctors function, specializing to a degree. This makes the rural area more attractive to the doctor and offers the patient more complete service at one location.

Intelligent, socially-minded youth always have been attracted to the medical profession and will continue to be. They should be encouraged in that ambition.

Unfavorable coddling

Competition is the spice that gives zest and robustness to the American free enterprise system.

The American economy since the founding fathers launched this nation has fared best in a "no holds barred" business climate.

Coddling any segment of big business or big industry will get this nation nowhere — ahead, but somewhere — behind.

It was difficult to understand the thinking of the junior senator from Texas, Lloyd Bentsen, a Valley-grown Democrat, when he joined another lawmaker in introducing a bill that would limit automobile imports from Japan to 1.6 million cars a year, through next year. That is, it is difficult to believe there is any "good" reason behind his action other than political — building up votes for his next bid for office.

Now his adventure into coddling industry is not just a partisan gesture. His partner in the introduction of the bill is a Republican, Jack Danforth of Missouri. We feel that both know better, that both know that in proposing limiting auto imports from Japan they are suggesting "barring" an important "hold" in the slug-out between the American car-builders and their competitive counterparts in Japan.

The prices of American cars already are astronomical. But a quota, such as Bentsen and Co. propose, would raise prices. The consumer would pay more.

One excuse the authors of the bill present is that the two-year limit on auto imports from Japan would give the American industry time — "breathing room" — to retool for more fuel-efficient and smaller cars to compete with the foreigners.

That's coddling. Why, some of the old sluggers, now in their graves, who competed with "no holds barred" for the American market here at home long before the foreigners ever were a threat, would call the coddling downright un-American.

The quota will not stop Japan. It may, in fact, be an incentive for the Japanese to extend their exports in concentration to other faraway places, potential markets for American cars if the American industry were more competitive.

In the face of the stiff competition from Japan, American carmakers can get down to the nitty-gritty and met the foreigners head-on. The U.S. industry in buying "breathing time" via the senators' proposal, would only delay their own adjustment to what will be necessary to compete strongly and effectively.

It is interesting to observe that across the Pacific "at home" in Japan the carmakers are highly competitive among themselves, and the competition there is so keen that their "no holds barred" efforts are making all of them strong. If one cannot stand the competition it must fall by the wayside.

That is the way it should be here. The coddling of the industry in any manner will only postpone success or failure, whatever is destined for the individual carmakers, and competition, domestic and foreign, can make those, who have the old American mettle, strong. What Bentsen and Co. proposes is nothing but a "shot in the arm" that will prove in the long run to be a debilitating factor and could expedite the decline of the American automobile industry.

"Poor devil He just learned that THE JAPANESE ARE NOT TO MARKET POWDERED WHISKY!"

No 'roulette' conferences for Clements

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Some of Washington's White House reporters are disturbed by what they call the "Reagan roulette" press conference.

In an effort to get past some of the confusion at previous presidential news conference, a question-by-lottery session was tried — once. Eighteen reporters who drew lucky tickets got to ask questions and the others just took notes. "There'll be no drawing for questions here," Texas Gov. Bill Clements said when he heard of the Washington incident.

"We'll continue to respond to the reporter who yells the loudest." And the former oil field roughneck has demonstrated several times he can yell the loudest.

Actually, Clements' weekly news conferences are fairly decorous. There's considerable loud talk and laughter but so far none of this jumping up and down and screaming to be recognized as shown by TV at some Washington conferences.

Clements' holds his meeting with news reporters about once a week in his public reception room. About 20 or 30 chairs are pulled up in a semicircle around his desk under the big crystal chandelier.

A sign reading "Press Conference" is hung on the door to discourage other than working press.

Usually from three to eight TV cameras and tripods are set up in front of the desk. TV stations in Dallas, Houston and San Antonio often send crews to the Capitol for the news conference.

The speaker's stand is crowded with microphones from the TV cameras and the tape recorders of broadcast and print reporters.

Clements' "kitchen cabinet" of close advisers gather at one end of the room ready to answer any of the questions that the governor may relay to them.

There's always Jim Kaster, his legislative liaison aide: David Dean, his legal expert: Tobin Armstrong, his appointments aide: Paul Wrotenberry, financial consultant: Alan Clark, administrative assistant, and usually Secretary of State George Strake.

Earlier Jon Ford, press secretary, has briefed Clements and some of his aides on likely questions to be asked and what he thinks reporters are interested in.

Rita Clements sits just outside the glare of the floodlights but where Clements can see her. She's his personal pep squad. Then about 10 or 15 minutes after the scheduled time for the conference, Clements comes limping in the door, a big grin on his face.

Some times he has an opening statement or appointment to announce.

At other times, he says:

"Well, what do you want to talk about?"

The questioning usually starts at a slow pace but often grows into spirited discussions, which Clements obviously likes. He talks just as loud and fast as anyone.

And he stays in control.

When he thinks a subject has been aired sufficiently he'll say: "Let's talk about something else for a while."

There have been times when pressed for a definite answer, he'll say: "I don't want to talk about that. Next question."

He doesn't like long speech-making questions. A reporter who is not accustomed to him may be interrupted and told: "I will not assume anything of the kind. That's an iffy question. What are you trying to say?"

After about 35 or 40 minutes, one of the senior correspondents will say "Thank you, governor," and the formal conference is over.

However, there usually are three or four reporters who gather around Clements for just one more question, usually with a home town angle. He continues talking until one of his aides leads him off.

There are impromptu news conferences any time Clements appears in public and meets a reporter.

Just put a microphone in front of him and he'll start talking," says one acquaintance.

There's no question that Clements is more accessible to reporters than any Texas governor since the days when Capitol correspondents had coffee every morning with Gov. Coke Stevenson.

Official's child porno stand stirs British flap

LONDON (AP) — A Conservative member of Parliament has accused the government of a cover-up for refusing to prosecute a retired diplomat implicated in a child pornography case. But Britain's attorney-general said the man's offense was "trivial" and didn't corrupt children.

House of Commons member Geoffrey Dickens claimed the ex-diplomat's involvement with an organization advocating legalization of sexual relations between adults and children made him "a tremendous security risk...and open to blackmail."

Dickens said he would demand that Home Secretary William Whitelaw name the man in Commons today. If Whitelaw refused, he said he would name him out of a sense of "duty."

Attorney-General Sir Michael Havers denied there was an official cover-up and told reporters the retired diplomat "committed the trivial offense of sending obscene material through the mail."

He said no charges were brought against the man because his actions were not considered to have corrupted children. "He was dealt with in exactly the same way as a number of others who had sent obscene material through the post," Havers said. "He was among a dozen other people on the fringes about whom the decision was taken not to prosecute. There's no question of him being given immunity. He was given a formal caution."

No other government officials would comment on the case, which posed a new problem for Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Experts say economy could prosper in '82

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — If President Reagan's tax and spending cuts are implemented, and if the Federal Reserve maintains a tight money policy, the nation's economy will begin to prosper next year, University of Michigan economists suggested today.

"By the spring of 1982, business investment activity begins to reflect the investment incentives in the tax cut program, consumer spending continues to reflect lower personal tax rates, and the economy begins to experience substantially more rapid real growth," the report predicted.

The university's annual economic forecast, released last November, was updated by E. Philip Howrey, Saul H. Hyman, Joan P. Cray and U-M President Harold T. Shapiro and released today.

Fifty-eight years for Bealls

The Beall Department Store chain is observing 58 years in business, having been founded in 1923 by Willie, Archie and Robbie Beall.

The chain of stores was founded in Henderson, Tex. with the opening of the first store. This store, officially "Bealls Number One" is still in operation, but in a modern up-to-date shopping center.

For many years, Bealls was primarily a small east Texas chain selling only dry goods and shoes. In the late 50s, expansion to all corners of the state began with the average size store much larger than previous.

The 60s and 70s saw the most rapid expansion of the company with numerous new units in Texas and a move into Oklahoma. At the end of the 70s, 96 stores were in operation.

Beall officials are often asked what is the key to Bealls success? A firm reply is "Customer service, friendly home-town service, no matter where the store is located and complete satisfaction on every purchase."

In the 58 years of its operation, three presidents have headed the organization. W. F. "Willie" Beall, R. G. "Bob" Beall and Rovee Beall.

Operational headquarters are in Jacksonville, Tex., where the home office has been since the mid-1930s.

In addition to buying, accounting, credit, advertising, data processing and numerous other daily operations, a complete warehouse for distribution of goods is maintained.

A ready-to-wear buying office is operated out of Dallas.

In the spring of 1980, Bealls moved into the Houston market with the acquisition of five Battlesteins stores. This was the largest expansion effort in the company's 58-year history.

Before the end of the year, three additional Bealls were opened in Houston.

A fourth unit is expected to open in July 1981. Bealls bought the Meyer Brothers location in Meyerland Center.

Further expansion for 1981 includes new stores in Carlsbad, Las Cruces and Gallup, N. M. New Texas stores will be opened in El Paso and a single store in Big Spring. Stores will also be relocated in Killeen, Portland and Baytown downtown into large regional malls.

Refugee program expensive

FORT CHAFFEE, Ark. (AP) — The refugee relocation center at this Arkansas base has been a boon to the area's economy, federal officials say. But at least one local official says that's a boon his constituents could have done without.

The federal government has spent about $100 million to operate the center since it opened more than 10 months ago.

"They're going to miss the money when we're gone," said Mike Sweeney, a spokesman for the Cuban-Haitian Task Force at the center, which houses some 4,000 refugees who have not found sponsors. "This operation has been the biggest boost to the area economy they could have hoped for."

"Only those who are participating in it like it," counters Mayor Jack Freeze of neighboring Fort Smith.

According to Gene Abston, comptroller and assistant director for administration at Chaffee, the millions that have poured out of government coffers for the program include $2.5 million paid monthly to 2,050 civilian employees.

"Then there's $125,000 per month for electricity, thousands of dollars for water and $89,630 to local law enforcement agencies."

Another $897,000 has been spent for English classes taught under a contract with Fort Smith schools.

Although most food for the refugees is provided through Army rations, Abston said, Chaffee officials purchase perishables such as milk and fresh vegetables from local companies.

Dear Abby

Bad breath may be spouse's imagination

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My wife keeps telling me I have bad breath. I've consulted my doctors in medicine and dentistry, and they both have assured me that there is nothing abnormal about my breath. I have even asked some of my best friends, and all have affirmed that I do not have bad breath. Meanwhile, every time I go to kiss my wife, she pushes me away, saying, "Your breath is terrible!" This totally destroys any romantic impulses I might have, leaving me frustrated, rejected and depressed.

It has occurred to me that my wife is using this "bad breath" excuse to get out of having a normal husband-wife relationship.

Obviously, if this continues, it will be the end of our marriage. My wife is a very desirable woman of 58, and I love her very much. Please advise.

NO LOVE IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR NO LOVE: Your wife could be suffering from "olfactory hallucinations" (smelling imaginary, non-existent odors). If this is not the case, and she is keeping you at arm's length for reasons of her own, you have another problem. Your marriage smells!

DEAR ABBY: Fifteen years ago I chose a sterling silver flatware pattern and have accumulated two place settings. Since it has become so expensive, my husband discouraged buying any more.

You can imagine my excitement when an aunt came from another state to visit and in the course of the conversation I discovered that she and I had the same silverware pattern! She has a complete service for 12. How do I go about asking if I may have her silverware after her need for it has passed?

She is a very gracious lady in her 80s, very proper, well-to-do, and has many grandchildren. We are not close, but I correspond with her daughter.

When the time comes for this aunt to dispose of her silver, I would buy it if it were for sale. (It probably wouldn't be as expensive as brand-new silverware since it was purchased many years ago, and is "used.")

I would appreciate any suggestions you have on how to handle this ticklish problem.

THE GREEDY NIECE

DEAR NIECE: I would not "handle" this problem at all. Gracious, proper, well-to-do ladies in their 80s rarely "sell" their silver. They usually give it away or leave it to their closest kin.

Your aunt already knows that you and she have the same pattern. Any further mention of it on your part would be inappropriate and presumptuous.

DEAR ABBY: What has happened to you? You used to encourage married couples to do everything within their power to save their marriages. Lately, you give the impression that divorce could be the answer for some couples. Why?

WASHINGTON STAR READER

DEAR READER: Because I think it's more important to save people than marriages. And often, in an effort to save a marriage that isn't worth saving, people have destroyed themselves and/or each other.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

AMATEUR ASTRONOMER John Bortle has his own one-man observatory on a hilltop in New York and hopes some day to achieve

Star gazers search skies in lonely, rewarding vigils

NEW YORK — They are a special breed, the galaxy explorers. Their ranks are international, although most amateur astronomers are Americans and Japanese. There are 250,000 of them in the U.S. alone.

John Bortle is typical. On clear nights, about eight times a month, he rises at about 4 a.m. to search the skies from his hilltop 75 miles north of New York in a lonely but rewarding vigil.

"Some people play music but I prefer silence," he said.

Otherwise ordinary citizens set up telescopes on their roofs, take cruises halfway around the world in search of solar eclipses, and spend freely for star charts, books, constellation finders, star atlases and astronomy magazines because of aesthetic and passive intellectual reasons. Many are also drawn by the notion of making a real contribution to science.

"It's one of the sciences where there is need for a great body of wide-ranging observations, far more than can be made by the 3,000 professional astronomers in the U.S.," said Mark Chartrand III, former chairman of the Hayden Planetarium in New York.

Like bird-watchers, amateur astronomers range from meticulous note-takers to those who take part occasionally because the planets (or birds) have such nice colors. A handful of amateur astronomers specialize in comets, checking off their "M-list." Charles Messier, an 18th-century French astronomer, listed 107 objects that resemble the fuzzy cloud-like appearance of a distant comet. It's a triumph to sight all 107.

John Marshall, president of the Amateur Astronomers Association, a New York-area group with 500 members, has seen 106. "There's going to be one great bang when I get my cotton-picking hands on that 107th," he said.

Some of the truly dedicated go on cruises to better view eclipses and to hear lectures by the likes of astronauts Scott Carpenter and Wally Schirra.

The Astronomical League, P.O. Box 332, Des Moines, Iowa 50316, a federation of 170 astronomy clubs around the nation, can put new astronomers in touch with a club in their area.

Perfume going to the dogs

NEW YORK (AP) — Is your dog shunned on the street by other dogs? Do you secretly fear your 3-year-old toy poodle will wind up an old maid? Do other people's dogs seem to be having all the fun?

If you have answered yes to but one question, it's a sign. Your dog may be suffering the heartbreak of ... doggie odor.

Worry no more, Monsieur Chien, the French perfume for dogs, is almost here. If you have the right address, that is.

"We hope to have it in the test markets by June," says the British-accented Jennifer Adler. "You know, New York's Madison Avenue, Chicago's Miracle Mile on Michigan Boulevard, Los Angeles' Rodeo Drive, Southampton. Places like that."

And if this new product is snapped up in these parts of affluence, it just might be playing in the boondocks in time for your 1981 Christmas gift-giving.

You might also meet Mycroft, an English bulldog named after Sherlock Holmes' smarter elder brother. Mycroft is vice president and chairman of the board of The Gray Consulting Group of New York and London, the folks bringing us this new necessity.

Mycroft, it should be noted, is descended from a line that includes 11 international champions, including his father, grandfather and a first cousin. Alas, Mycroft lacked the chutzpah to be a show dog.

Despite his placid personality and a rather unfortunate tendency to hyperventilate, which, in turn, produces a most unfortunate slobber, Mycroft does admirably as a huckster.

"He likes the attention," avers Ms. Adler. "He particularly likes to be up on a table. He thinks he's back in the show ring."

What dog might want to wear Monsieur Chien — Mr. Dog, that is?

"It's designed for the dog whose social life is the pits," says Ms. Adler. "I've noticed other dogs following Mycroft on the streets since he started wearing it," she adds, with a semi-straight face. Gray plans a $150,000 ad campaign, mostly in "upscale print media" in selected urban areas.

The product, an eau de toilette to be precise, comes from Laboratoire Alfamed, a big pet products company in Grasse, France, in the heart of perfume country. The company produces things like animal vitamins and flea collars and if the perfume goes well, they may give us nail polish designed for dogs and shampoos with a color rinse.

"We have a feeling we'll be finding people wearing it," Ms. Adler says of the polish. "It will be quite a lot stronger than regular nail polish since it is for dogs. It has some special stuff in it."

Colors for four feet include mauve, golds and greens. While the nail polish is somewhat speculative, the perfume is nearer at hand — or at paw.

"It's very seductive," says Ms. Adler, "but with a fresh lemony scent, the smell of springtime and all the naughty thoughts that come to animals at that time."

To the untrained human nostril, Monsieur Chien bears a decided resemblance to a man's after-shave lotion.

And the manufacturer's recommended place to wear it?

"Behind the ears, of course," answers Ms. Adler. She confesses that in Mycroft's case, she douses it all over him.

And, lastly, the price: suggested retail is $8 for the eight ounces.

But if you're the type who would let money stand in the way of your dog's social life, it's probably not for you anyway.

March is "National Nutrition Month." Why not spend this entire month weeding out poor nutritional habits and planting some good ones? A good place to start is your refrigerator and cupboards. Check the labels on all the food containers. You'll be surprised how many packaged foods contain salt, sugar, hydrogenated oil artificial colors and preservatives.

These long lists of ingredients make for complex reading.

Labels also fail to list the quantities of each item. Although on any label, ingredients are listed in order of predominance, specific amounts are not given.

Why not avoid all this confusion and buy wholesome, fresh food for your family. If a packaged food has ingredients that sound foreign to you, then it is better to leave it on the shelf at the store.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

March 17, 1981

Advancement in your chosen field is likely this coming year. That which you eventually gain will be substantial, but it may take you longer than you think to get it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Avoid teaming up with persons today whose goals aren't in harmony with yours, or you may wind up pulling in two different directions. Romance, travel, finances, luck and possible pitfalls are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Beware of tendencies today to take unnecessary gambles or foolish risks. Caution should be heeded, not tossed to the winds.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Important matters should be given top priority today. You tend to slow down as the day wears on and you may not complete that which you start.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're a good starter today, but there's a possibility you could be easily drawn off on tangents and end up missing your mark. Hold a steady course.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your patience today could be a bit shorter than usual. You must be careful not to make critical remarks when others fail to meet your performance standards.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You know how to acquire things today, but you could have problems holding on to that which you gain. Don't get careless once you have the bird in hand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Success in what you hope to achieve today will be easier if you strive to be cooperative. There's a chance you'll be a team player only up to a certain point.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Persons are willing to take you into their confidence today. The temptation to repeat what you hear will be great.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Treat your friends unselfishly today, but keep your generosity within reasonable bounds. Giving too much may make them feel uncomfortable or could cause you remorse later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Major accomplishments are possible today, but for some reason known only to yourself you may change course just when victory is within your grasp.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're pretty good at handling big problems today, but minor frustrations could throw you. Deal with the petty the same as you do with the large.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Subdue your impulsive tendencies today in business or financial matters. Rash or erratic actions could turn a profit into a loss.

Floyd savors Doral win before trek to big money

MIAMI (AP) — Although there's the possibility of a huge, quarter-million dollar prize awaiting him at the Tournament Players Championship, Ray Floyd didn't even want to think about it.

"I just want to cherish this for a while, a day or so, before I start thinking about that," an emotionally drained Floyd said after his dramatic victory Sunday in the Doral-Eastern Open golf tournament.

"It was match play all day (against his playing partner David Graham) but in addition to that, every time I looked at a leaderboard there were six other guys getting close."

"But that's what it's all about. The guys who win, the guys who can win, can pull off the shot they need in those conditions."

And Floyd, 38, in his 19th year of PGA Tour activity, pulled off just enough of them to acquire his 13th victory in a successful defense of the title he won a year ago on the 7,065 yard Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club, just a few miles from his home.

He achieved the repeat victory with a 4-under-par 68 that gave him a 273 total, 15 strokes under par. He led or shared the lead at all the 18-hole breaks, but he trailed Graham at one point on the final round and was pressured by Gil Morgan, Tom Kite, Leonard Thompson and Keith Fergus.

The triumph was worth $45,000 from the total purse of $250,000 and made Floyd eligible for a $250,000 bonus prize if he's able to win this week's Tournament Players Championship.

Graham, a former PGA champion and winner at Phoenix earlier this season, tied with Fergus for second at 274. Each had a closing 67 in the warm, sunny weather.

Kite was next at 275 after a 67, with Thompson and Morgan tied at 276, only three back. Thompson had a closing 69, Morgan 70.

Jack Nicklaus, who lost to Floyd in a playoff here a year ago, failed to make the cut for the last two rounds this year.

Floyd's victory also negated the opportunity for anyone to claim the $500,000 bonus prize put up by the sponsors of Inverrary, Doral and the Tournament Players Championship for any man able to sweep all three titles. Kite won at Inverrary and could have claimed $250,000 with a victory here, a bonus that goes to a player winning two of the three titles in succession.

Floyd now has a chance at that.

Playing well in front of the other leaders, Kite simply ran out of holes. He parred the last seven holes, grazing the cup on birdie putts on the 15th, 16th and 17th.

Morgan, Thompson and Fergus all faded at one time or another until only Graham was left to challenge.

He'd moved into position with an incredible eagle-birdie-birdie start and stayed within one shot of the top spot the rest of the way.

Persons planning to field fastpitch softball teams in both men's and women's divisions this summer are urged to meet at 7 p.m. tonight in room 202 at City Hall.

League fees, by-laws and team rosters will be among the items discussed.

An umpire from the Pampa Umpire Association will be present to discuss rule changes.

Representatives of slowpitch church league teams (men and women) will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday night in City Hall.

Lisa Raymond qualifies for state swim meet

AUSTIN — Lisa Martinez of Amarillo Tascosa won the 200-yard Individual Medley crown at the Class 5A state swim meet Saturday in the Texas Swim Meet.

Pampa's Lisa Raymond qualified for state in both the 200 IM and 100 breaststroke, but failed to make the finals.

Martinez, who went into the meet seeded third in the 200 IM, swam a 2:09.47 to win the event by more than two seconds. Carol Riddle of Houston Westchester was second with a 2:11.67.

Mayo hits hole-in-one

Pampa golfer Bill Mayo hit a hole-in-one at the Pampa Country Club golf course Sunday.

Mayo hit the hole-in-one on hole 16, a par 3 hole, using a four-iron. The ball traveled a distance of 170 yards.

Mayo said today he was "stunned."

"You don't expect it to go in, and all of a sudden, it disappeared," he said.

Mayo said he has been golfing seven or eight years and Sunday's hole-in-one was the first of his golfing career.

Alabama knocking on Mideast Championship's door

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Knock, knock.
Who's there?

Alabama-Birmingham.

Alabama who?

Well, it may sound funny, but there are Gene Bartow's Blazers knocking on the door of the Mideast regional championships in the NCAA basketball tournament.

How they got there is no laughing matter to Kentucky, however. The nation's eighth-ranked team was beaten by the UAB upstarts 69-62 Sunday in Tuscaloosa, Ala., as upsets continued to underscore this year's crazy-quilt tournament.

"Without question," said Bartow, "it was the biggest win in UAB history. It may be the biggest win in Gene Bartow history."

Bartow could become the first coach to lead three different schools to the Final Four. Previously, he had brought Memphis State and UCLA to that level.

Third-ranked Arizona State, No. 11 Wake Forest and No. 13 Iowa also were upset in Sunday's second round. That continued a dark trend for Top Twenty teams from Saturday when No. 1 DePaul, No. 2 Oregon State, No. 10 UCLA and No. 12 Louisville all went down.

Glenn Marcus converted 12 free throws in the final 5½ minutes to pace UAB's conquest of Kentucky. The Blazers, playing in only the school's third year of varsity basketball competition, blew a seven-point lead midway through the second half before rallying to beat one of the country's most honored teams.

"We couldn't get the ball inside and couldn't hit from outside," said Kentucky

Coach Joe B. Hall. "That's a tough spot to be in. They played a tough, inspired game. They're a good ballclub."

The victory sent the Blazers against Indiana in Bloomington, Ind., in Friday night's Mideast semifinals. Boston College will meet St. Joseph's (Pa.) in the other Mideast game. The Eagles got there with a 67-64 conquest of Wake Forest Sunday, a result that did no harm to the eastern basketball image.

"We've been kicked around in the East a little bit," said Boston College Coach Tom Davis. "Folks say we don't play good basketball, but I'd have to disagree..."

Leading the way for the Big East team was John Bagley, who scored 35 points, including four big ones in the final minute.

"We got impatient," said Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy, whose team was forced into 22 turnovers by the BC press. "We made some mental errors that hurt us in crucial parts of the game."

Arizona State was upset 88-71 by Kansas and Iowa lost to Wichita State 60-56 in the Midwest regionals at Wichita, Kan. Tony Guy scored 36 points to lead the Jayhawks' surprisingly easy victory over the Sun Devils.

"The problem was we did nothing on the offensive boards," said Arizona State Coach Ned Wulk. "Guy just murdered us early and played an outstanding game. They were definitely more up for it than we were. We seemed to get down on ourselves."

Arizona State thus became the third and last Pac-10 team to be knocked out of the tournament, with the earlier exits of Oregon State and UCLA.

In the other Midwest game Sunday, Wichita State beat Iowa with the help of a technical foul call on Hawkeye Coach Lute Olson near the end. The Shockers were awarded two foul shots after Olson inadvertently called a timeout when his team had none left, and Randy Smithson converted them for Wichita State with five seconds remaining.

"We had a communications breakdown on the staff," said Olson in explaining the mistake. "I was told we had one timeout remaining."

Smithson said he was aware that the Hawkeyes were out of timeouts at that point of the game and when he heard guard Bob Hansen call one, "I was elated."

Wichita State and Kansas will play each other in the Mideast semifinals Friday night at New Orleans. In the other game, Louisiana State will meet Arkansas.

Sunday's other second-round results went according to form, although fifth-ranked Virginia and No. 15 Tennessee both had tough times with their opponents in the East Regionals at Charlotte, N.C. The Cavaliers struggled past Villanova 54-50 behind Ralph Sampson's 17 points while Tennessee edged Virginia Commonwealth 58-56 on Dale Ellis' medium-range jumper with two seconds left in overtime.

The Cavaliers came back from a five-point deficit in the second half and Virginia Coach Terry Holland said the deficit was "the best thing for the team" because it fired up his players.

"It was a hard-fought win for us and we were a little tentative in the first half," said Holland. "In the second half we got the good shots early but the best thing for the team was that we missed them, got five points behind, then threw caution to the wind and played like the devil to stay in the game."

VCU Coach J.D. Barnett thought his unheralded team stood up well under playoff pressure.

"I thought we took it pretty well for most of the ballgame — 58-56 is not much of a difference, just a little crack between who wins and who loses," noted Barnett.

The results sent the winners to a meeting in Thursday night's East semifinals at Atlanta. In the other game, Brigham Young will play Notre Dame.

James Worthy scored 21 points and Sam Perkins had 19 as sixth-ranked North Carolina coasted past Pitt 74-57 in the West Regionals in El Paso, Texas.

News in brief

HINCKLEY, Ohio (AP) — For those who doubt the credibility of groundhogs, this small northeast Ohio town offers yet another harbinger of spring — buzzards.

To the delight of thousands of buzzard greeters, the gangly birds returned to their roosts Sunday, as legend claims they have every March 15 since 1818. There were 169 sightings Sunday, but officials say the biggest single huddle of buzzards numbered 17.

Legend says the first buzzards were drawn here by tons of decaying game killed in the Great Hinckley Varmint Hunt. The carcasses froze in the winter cold. When they thawed in the spring, the smell of rotting animals attracted the buzzards.

ATLANTA (AP) — Although prison officials say they do not meet the standards for parole, 1,100 Georgia inmates are being released beginning today to ease overcrowding in the prison system.

The inmates were serving time for nonviolent crimes, said Parole Board Chairman James T. Morris. Their sentences will be commuted, so they will not be placed under supervisory parole, he added.

The inmates being released "are all eligible, but have been denied parole. While they frankly do not meet the test of our standards for parole, they would have been released within six months anyway," Morris said.

PARK CITY, Ky. (AP) — About 450 Kentucky residents are back home after leaving anhydrous ammonia from a railroad car and a chemical spill from a train derailment forced separate evacuations, officials said. No injuries were reported.

About 300 evacuees returned to their Park City homes Sunday after an emergency crew fixed a railroad car valve that began leaking anhydrous ammonia Saturday. The car held 30,000 gallons of the chemical.

CHRISTIANSTED, St. Croix (AP) — The first three of a dozen Americans formerly held hostage in Iran are in St. Croix for a free vacation offered by a Milwaukee businessman who owns a resort here.

Oliver Plunkett offered all the freed hostages a week at his Hotel of the Cay in Christiansted harbor because he thought they deserved it after their ordeal in Iran.

Those who arrived Sunday were Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermening, of Cudahy, Wis., and fiancée Kelly Manion; Charles Jones of Detroit; and Col. and Mrs. Tom Schaefer of Falls Church, Va.

Other former hostages expected to arrive by today were Michael Howland of Alexandria, Va.; Leland Holland and Malcolm Kalp, both of Fairfax, Va.; Alan Golacinski of Silver Springs, Md.; Joseph M. Hall of Elyria, Ohio; Gregg Persinger of Seaford, Del.; William Daugherty of Ossining, N.Y.; Joseph Subic of Redford, Mich.; and Donald Cooke of Memphis, Tenn.

Free tours, a St. Patrick's Day dinner dance and an excursion to the neighboring U.S. Virgin Islands are on the guests' agenda.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — British rock star Eric Clapton is expected to be hospitalized for two to three weeks for treatment of a perforated ulcer that forced him to cancel his entire four-month North American tour, his personal manager says.

Clapton was rushed to a St. Paul hospital Saturday, following a Friday night performance in Madison, Wis. He was in serious but stable condition Sunday.

The singer's manager, Roger Forrester, said Clapton will be "losing himself — going away with his wife for a time to recuperate for many months" after his release from the hospital.

The manager said Clapton has been kept heavily sedated and is aware that he has a "major problem."

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — If history repeats itself, Robert Redford should clinch the Oscar for best director with his first effort, "Ordinary People."

Redford won the Directors Guild Award for the best directed film of 1980 at the Directors Guild banquet, held simultaneously in New York and Beverly Hills on Saturday night.

The directors have veered from the Oscars only twice in 33 years.

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Kennedy, son of slain Sen. Robert Kennedy, is honeymooning at an undisclosed location with his bride, Vicki Gifford, daughter of sportscaster Frank Gifford.

The couple exchanged wedding vows Saturday at a landmark Park Avenue church jammed with a who's who of political and sports figures.

A case of fatherly nerves prompted Gifford to kiss his daughter without first lifting her tulle veil.

About 100 spectators stood outside St. Ignatius Loyola Church to catch a glimpse of the Kennedy clan and other guests — including sportscasters Don Meredith and Howard Cosell; Sen. Edward M. Kennedy D-Mass., and his estranged wife, Joan; humorist Art Buchwald; and Ethel Kennedy, the groom's mother.

Although Caroline and John Kennedy Jr. attended their cousin's wedding, their mother, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, did not.

The newlyweds are both 24 years old.
