Aircraft carrier sent to Persian Gulf

Crewmen on the USS George Washington inspect their F-14B "Tomcat" fighters on Friday in the eastern Mediterranean. Raising the stakes in Iraq, President Clinton on Friday ordered the aircraft carrier USS George Washington to the Persian Gulf to prepare American forces "for any contingency." It is expected to join the carrier USS Nimitz, already on station in the gulf, in a week.

Clinton sends 2nd carrier in high-profile military buildup

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Declaring the United Nations must not shirk from a showdown with Iraq, President Clinton ordered a second aircraft carrier to the Persian Gulf Friday in a high-profile military buildup. "We have to steel ourselves and be determined," Clinton said.

The Pentagon also was considering sending F-117 stealth fighters, used for precision air strikes, and other Air Force warplanes. Defense Secretary William Cohen said the administration was "reviewing all sorts of options" for military moves.

The United States continued to press for an elusive diplomatic solution, but the arms buildup underscored the possibility of military action. With some allies reluctant to use force, the White House asserted Clinton could act on his own if necessary.

Urging a united front, Clinton said, "It's too dangerous an issue that would set too powerful a precedent about the impotence of the United Nations if we didn't proceed on this."

In Iraq, the last 68 U.N. weapons inspectors boarded a plane and flew to Bahrain, leaving in solidarity with the six American members of the team who were expelled.

Foreign Minister Mohammed Saeed al-Sahhaf said Iraq would not be surprised if the crisis escalated into a military confrontation and accused the United States and Britain of seeking such a clash.

Television broadcasts from Iraq have shown scenes of civilians gathering in Saddam's palace to act as "human shields" to deter attack. At the United Nations, Secretary-General Kofi Annan said, "We were

WASHINGTON — Relentless political pressure forced a top civilian Army official to resign Friday after she called the Marines "extremists" and made fun of their uniforms. Sara Lister, assistant secretary of the Army for manpower and reserve affairs, had been scheduled to leave in a week, but critics insisted she go immediately.

Officials treated to reception for recycling facility

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A group of state and city officials are being treated to a reception today at the recently reopened Materials Recovery Facility (MRF), which has been significantly upgraded in recent months.

The Recycle Midland company provided the estimated $600,000 upgrade to their facility, which included sealing the entire operation in 63,500 square feet of building space and building a perimeter fence to contain windblown wastepaper.

Recycle Midland is a private company required to do business under this name while they contract with the city. The company also is known as Texas Limited Liability Co., which was formed in 1996 by five partners from Midland and Odessa, explained Phil Handley, director of operations for the MRF.

Today's ribbon-cutting ceremony is showcasing the MRF for industry and government officials. The director of the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission is to be

DeZavala students, staff pay tribute to America's veterans

By Ed Todd

Tears freely welled in Diana Boykin's eyes as she recalled those years a generation ago when her father went off to war, and she grieved.

She was but a child and as young then as her students at DeZavala Elementary School are today.

"I was young and really didn't understand why" her father, U.S. Army Sgt. David Gallivan, was twice called to the Vietnam War.

She remembered waving good-bye to her father those years ago.

"All I knew was that I was jealous of this thing called 'war' because it demanded all of my dad's attention," Mrs. Boykin said Friday at DeZavala's Veterans Day program, which especially featured the school's first-graders who made tributes to the nation's freedoms and liberties that were won through the sacrifices of others.

As the war faded away, Mrs. Boykin said she "grew up and grew to understand why he left to serve our country."

Shoe boxes of holiday gifts to be sent overseas

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

Wanted: shoe boxes filled with gifts to send overseas to children in war-torn countries. The idea appealed to Midlander Brenda Schwartz, who had searched for a project that fulfilled her desire to do something that counted.

"A lot of their parents have been tortured, murdered, and they have been just left homeless orphans," Mrs. Schwartz said. "I saw how over in America we have too much. My children have plenty, more than they need."

Operation Christmas Child offers the opportunity to touch a war-torn child with a gift for Christmas. This year, the organization will reach out to children in Bosnia, Croatia, Romania, Russia, Kenya, the Middle East and Southeast Asia.

Participants first decide if they want to send to a boy or girl and the age of the child. Age categories are: infant; 2-4; 5-9; and 10-14.

The gift items must fit in a shoe box, which may be filled with whatever the giver would like to send for the needs and desires of the specific age selected. Suggested items include, but are not limited to:

- Infants: blankets, clothes, diapers, baby wipes;
- 2-4: clothing, toys, winter caps, gloves;
- 5-9: toothbrush, toothpaste, comb, brush, toys such as a small doll or a matchbox car, flashlight;
- 10-14: hygiene items, underclothes, socks, T-shirts, solar calculators, school supplies.

"Anything that will fit into a shoe box," said Mrs. Schwartz, confiding that some people select boot boxes to mail their gifts in.

She said that before dropping off the box, the sender should enclose in the top a check or money order for $5 (made payable to Samaritan's Purse) for overseas shipping charges. On the top of the box should be writ-

Midland sees slight accumulation of snow, sleet

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

Even the Odessa Jackalopes could have practiced on a Midland parking lot Friday night.

As of 10 p.m. Friday, a 0.10 inch layer of sleet and snow had accumulated over the Tall City with the help of 25 mph winds from the east. The wind chill at that time was 6 degrees, according to the National Weather Service.

"We've had a mixed bag of precipitation over the northern part of the Permian Basin," said Robert Boyd, a meteorologist with the NWS office at the Midland International Airport.

Boyd noted that the NWS office might have seen more precipitation than Midland residents did in their own backyards. He estimated that 1 inch of snow might blanket the basin by this morning.

Midland Police Department officials said that six minor car accidents were reported between 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. Two of those accidents, officials said, occurred on Interstate 20. Texas Department of Public Safety officials said they did not have any major accident reports at press time.

Furthermore, a freeze warning was placed by the NWS for the counties of Andrews, Borden, Crane, Dawson, Howard, Glasscock, Martin, Midland, Pecos, Reeves, Ward and Winkler. At press time, wind chills were expected to range from minus 15 over the northern basin to near 5 for Pecos County.

Meanwhile, Midlanders should think twice before touching their thermostats.

Although the cold front sweeping across the Permian Basin late this week is likely to fade by Monday, Midlanders might not be so comfortable knowing that more frigid winds should surface during the mid-week, said Accu-Weather forecaster Ken Reeves.

Reeves told the Reporter-Telegram on Friday that the first front, which originated from a Canadian air mass, should be at its peak today.

"The cold air has been pouring southward through the central plains in the past couple of days. Now there's a ten whether it's for a boy or girl and the age. The lid should be secured with a rubber band. The box and lid may be wrapped as long as the lid lifts off for Customs.

When Mrs. Schwartz read about Operation Christmas Child, she decided to move from the sidelines onto the field.

"Last year was my first year to be involved, and that was the first time the Permian Basin really participated," Mrs. Schwartz said of the program organized by Samaritan's Purse of Boone, N.C.

Established in 1970 by missionary Bob Pierce, Samaritan's Purse is under the leadership of Franklin Graham, son of evangelist Billy Graham. Mrs. Schwartz became aware of Samaritan's Purse when she read Franklin Graham's book, "Rebel With a Cause." The road leading her to Graham's book began with reading the book Jim Bakker wrote while in prison, "I Was Wrong." Graham was among the ministers who visited Bakker there.

"When Jim Bakker got out of prison, Franklin Graham reached out and helped him, and Franklin Graham was involved with Samaritan's Purse," Mrs. Schwartz said. "And I thought to myself, 'If you want to get involved, this is what you can do. I called in and got one of their packets, and this is how this whole thing got started here."

Last year, Mrs. Schwartz and a friend drove to Dallas to drop off the 219 shoe-box gifts collected in this area. The number of gifts wound up being just perfect.

"That's all my car would handle at the time," Mrs. Schwartz said. "It's incredible."

Mrs. Schwartz, who grew up around San Angelo, had no experience driving in "a big town."

"We didn't have any trouble going to Dallas despite an imminent ice storm. We drove straight to the church, Prestonwood Baptist, unloaded, and we headed straight home."

Mrs. Schwartz was amazed when she arrived at the Dallas church.

"It was so big and beautiful. They had three weddings going on at this big church, and they had all these huge crates in what they called the mall. There were long tables filled with boxes. People were pouring in with boxes even with the weddings that were going on. And several 18-wheeler trucks were lined up to carry the boxes to New York City. They collect them all over the country. When they hit New York City, they go abroad from there."

While she was at Prestonwood Baptist Church, Mrs. Schwartz had the opportunity to meet Ross Robinson, who was in charge of missions for the Dallas church.

"He has been over to Bosnia twice to distribute these boxes," Mrs. Schwartz said. "It was very exciting to hear his stories. When you do stuff like this, you never know where it's really going. When you send money, you never know where it's going to end up. This was a man who had first-hand experience."

Despite all the "miracles" Mrs. Schwartz experienced in coordinating the Permian Basin effort last year and her awareness that "it is better to give than to receive," she remained undecided until recently if she would coordinate the project again this year.

"I've been praying about it," Mrs. Schwartz said. "The Family Bookstore called. People were calling them and saying, 'I have these boxes. I want to know where I'm supposed to leave them this year?' As the calls continued to come in, I began to realize, 'Yes, this is my project,' and we would do it again."

This year, the following locations have been designated as pick-up points: Family Christian Bookstore, Midland and Odessa; Halfmann's General Store, Garden City; Stanton Care Center, Stanton; Volgar Insurance, Lamesa; Cornerstone Christian Bookstore, Big Spring; Commercial Credit, Fort Stockton; Greenwood Baptist Church, Greenwood; and Ronda's Quick Stop, St. Lawrence.

Mrs. Schwartz will gather the shoe-box gifts Nov. 22.

"We encourage all the churches to be involved," Mrs. Schwartz said. "We don't get into denominational issues. It takes every one of us to put such a massive project together.

"This is really not my project, this is God's project," Mrs. Schwartz said, acknowledging that knowing "somebody over there has a little Christmas present just because of something I had done" was a tremendous feeling. "I'm praying that someday the Lord will let me go over there, too, to see the hands that receive these boxes."

GULF: Iraqis seem to be preparing in case of attack shocked" by the pictures. "I don't think women and children should be used in that situation."

In other preparations for a military attack, the Iraqi government began rationing gasoline. Each private car was to get 10.4 gallons for four days and government cars were to get twice that.

"In these immortal days, in which the most glorious examples of steadfastness are being set by our great people as they write a bright new chapter in the great and eternal mother of battles, we would like to reassure dear citizens that their needs for oil products will be met," Iraqi television said in a broadcast monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp.

The USS George Washington, diverted from the eastern Mediterranean, will arrive in the Persian Gulf in about a week, joining the carrier USS Nimitz. Together, the two huge ships bring 100 combat aircraft and 50 support planes to the Gulf.

The George Washington will be accompanied by three cruise missile-carrying ships -- the attack submarine USS Annapolis, the destroyer USS Carney and the cruiser USS Normandy — along with the support ship USS Seattle.

Raising the stakes, Clinton said, "This is not just a replay of the Gulf War" where a U.S.-led coalition ejected Saddam Hussein's forces from Kuwait. "This is about the security of the 21st century and the problems everybody is going to have to face dealing with chemical weapons."

Despite Saddam's defiance, some American allies — notably France, Russia and Egypt — were decidedly cool about military options. It appeared unlikely the Security Council would sanction the use of force unless Saddam directly threatened his neighbors or fired on U.S. spy planes.

"Obviously, diplomacy is not exhausted since we have a number of people, from the president on down, engaged in it at this moment," White House press secretary Mike McCurry said. But he asserted anew that the United States would act alone if necessary. "Diplomacy may not work," McCurry said.

At the Pentagon, Cohen was asked if the United States has the ability to bomb Iraq into submitting to the U.N.'s wishes. "Our purpose is not to bomb him into behavior-modification as such," he said. "We're not looking to bomb anyone into the Stone Age or into any kind of submission."

Correction

Due to an inadvertent transposition of the names "Recycle Midland" and "Keep Midland Beautiful," a report in Friday's Midland Reporter-Telegram incorrectly cited Keep Midland Beautiful as the entity that dealt with the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission and raised $600,000 for the new Materials Recovery Facility. This should have been listed as the Recycle Midland company. Keep Midland Beautiful is a non-profit organization while Recycle Midland is a private company funding the recycling project through local investors.

Also, although the Materials Recovery Facility is having a grand opening today, the event is by invitation only and not open to the public. The public is welcome to tour the facility on other days, but it is not possible to include the public in ceremonies today.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the errors.

Clarification

Part-time college freshmen and sophomores also can qualify for the Hope Scholarship Credit.

A story in Friday's edition of the Reporter-Telegram failed to mention that.

SNOW: Second cold front expected to hit by mid-week

(From 1A)

cold front making its way south through Texas," Reeves said. "Behind that, there will be a pretty strong surge of cold weather throughout the weekend."

The front, Reeves said, traveled from the Rocky Mountains eastward toward New Mexico, Colorado and, of course, Texas.

"Even northern parts of Florida should be seeing the cool air," he said.

The high in the Tall City today is expected to be a bit shy of 40 degrees, he said.

"That's pretty impressive because it's just about 30 degrees below normal temperatures. The high is normally 67 at this time of the year, so with a high near 40 means it's really cold," Reeves said. "I do expect a bit of moderation Sunday under a fairly sunny sky. That should push temperatures back to the low 50s."

The only possibility for snow, he said, was Friday's freeze.

A second mass of cold air coming to the basin during mid-week might have local residents reaching for their winter jackets, but should not be as chilling as the conditions seen this weekend.

"I expect some moderation Monday and Tuesday and perhaps another cold front on Wednesday," Reeves said.

Snow accumulations in the Panhandle are expected to be 1 to 3 inches over the south plains by this morning. The highest accumulations are expected to be at the southwestern Panhandle.

The NWS suggests that pets should be moved indoors during night hours. Growers and garden owners should take necessary measures to protect sensitive vegetation from dying.

POLICE REPORTS

Federal sentence

Three men were sentenced this week at the U.S. District Court in Midland on felony marijuana possession charges stemming from two February drug busts.

According to a report from the FBI office, Odessans Gilberto Perez-Herrera and Jose Alfredo Corrales and Pecos resident Juan Ramon Mendoza Mejia were sentenced by Judge Royal Ferguson Monday for being in possession of large amounts of marijuana.

Herrera, 37, was sentenced to 12 months in jail. Mejia, 28, received a 33-month sentence, while Corrales, 24, received a 29-month sentence.

Perez and Mendoza were arrested Feb. 4 for delivering 136.66 pounds of the narcotic to FBI and Permian Basin Task Force officers, according to the report.

Corrales was arrested Feb. 11 after a DPS trooper found 342 pounds of marijuana inside the vehicle the defendant was driving.

Agents traced both marijuana caches to Theodore Michael Brewster, 46, of Van Horn. Brewster has been found guilty on two counts of felony drug possession. His sentencing hearing is set for Dec. 10.

Autopsy findings

ODESSA — Police have ruled the suspicious death of an Odessa infant as a sudden neonatal death.

Police had received the report at 4:40 a.m. Sept. 12 from a residence at 806 N. Golder Ave. A woman told police that her 1-week-old boy was not breathing.

An autopsy was performed later that day.

A month later, police classified the incident as a natural death.

RECYCLE: Mist system was praised elsewhere

(From 1A)

among the notables attending. The event is by invitation only.

Members of the public are invited to tour the MRF facility on another day. Tours can be arranged on most business days by calling 520-2700.

Today's event is in conjunction with Texas Recycles Day, which was designated Nov. 15 by Gov. George W. Bush.

The MRF, which opened for business in March 1997 at an original cost of $1.9 million, has been upgraded with "state-of-the-art" technology to remove odors, Handley said.

On a typical day, the MRF receives about 400 tons of municipal solid waste, delivered either by city trucks or WesTexWaste trucks, which is Midland's private trash disposal company, Handley said. The average weekly intake is estimated at about 1,990 tons of solid waste.

From this massive flow of waste material generated by Midland residents, government entities and businesses, the MRF recovers seven tons of aluminum, 18 tons of glass, 50 tons of steel and 289 tons of paper products each week.

This translates to about 18 percent of the total waste stream diverted from the landfill and being recycled into usable products, he said.

The facility currently runs two processing lines and a third is expected to be installed by December.

Some problems occurred during the summer months when high winds began blowing paper off the MRF site and onto neighboring businesses. In addition, a strong garbage smell was troubling people in the area on some days.

To correct this problem, MRF officials enclosed the entire 63,500 square feet of the concrete "tipping pad" and added blowers to provide an air curtain over open truck doors, keeping paper from blowing out of the building and slowing the mix of interior and exterior air, Handley explained.

Even inside the building there is no odor problem, because of a 178-head misting system, which is the latest technology in industrial odor control.

Handley searched through a number of alternatives, but the praise this mist system received from other companies using it around the country settled the decision.

This system sprays a colloidal solution of eight natural oils, which bind chemically to the noxious gasses produced by decomposition.

A walk-through of the newly enclosed facility speaks to the effectiveness of this system. Since the recent cold has cut down on the rate of decomposition in the waste, the mist system sprays only a few seconds every four minutes with less than a 1/4-strength mixture.

"It's just idling right now," Handley said.

Inside the building, standing next to bundles of garbage waiting to be moved to the landfill, the smell is hardly noticeable.

"It's completely non-toxic — you could take a bath in this," Handley said of the oil and water mixture.

TRIBUTE: Students presented small flags

(From 1A)

Yes, she told the students and veterans, she was bereft of her father for "four crucial years of my childhood.

"But, those years seem so small compared" with the losses others suffered when their loved ones sacrificed their lives for their country.

In noting that the focus of the Veterans Day program was "to honor our veterans," Mrs. Boykin turned to her father and hugged him.

Her father, the U.S. Army's Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) instructor at Odessa High School, was at the ceremony with OHS' drill team.

Earlier in the program, the Midland High School Band, directed by Clyde Wilson, performed a medley of patriotic and romantic songs, including "Over There" ("The Yanks Are Coming"), "Yankee Doodle Dandy," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," armed forces' theme songs, and "I'll Be Seeing You."

Saxophonist Tom Braxton, whose father served in World War II, played a rendition of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

"It is a very emotional song," Braxton reflected, "because I know the sacrifices through history that people have made to make this country a reality and to keep it (free) the way it is. So, it means a lot to me."

From out of the cold, the DeZavala students moved into the school's auditorium where, among other salutes to the nation and to those who served their country in war and peace, the first-graders presented "The American Spirit" program.

> 'I had a couple of tears roll down my eyes.'
> — veteran Isidro 'Sid' Treviño

The DeZavala Honor Choir, the Singing Eagles, sang patriotic selections, and the DeZavala Strings played "Songs of the Fighting Men."

Sue Roseberry sang "The Star-Spangled Banner," Ron Walker sang "One Moment in Time," and Tom Revilla rang out with "God Bless The USA."

"Together," said U.S. Air Force veteran Jim Rodriguez, who was the event's featured speaker, "we can all say we are proud to be Americans."

The veterans — from World War II forward — in the audience were presented miniature American flags by DeZavala students.

"It's a great honor for those children to greet us like they did," said Eddie Krupa, a decorated World War II veteran who was a B-17 gunner on D-Day and the Battle of the Bulge, "and we did fight in the war, and they respected us. And it was a fine show," Krupa said of the student's celebration.

"I had a couple of tears roll down my eyes," said veteran Isidro "Sid" Treviño, who served in war-ravaged Europe.

World War II Army veteran Ciro Sanchez observed that the DeZavala students represent "what America stands for. All races and nationalities coming together here, celebrating Veterans Day," in peace and harmony.

Vietnam War Navy veteran Don Hudgins said that witnessing the DeZavala's seventh annual Veterans Day observance "is a deep honor.

"So many times," said Hudgins, who is commander of the American Legion in Midland, "we see in the paper and hear of people desecrating the flag" and otherwise being disrespectful to Old Glory. "And here it is just wonderful to have our young people here in Midland, Texas, paying tribute to the veterans and also paying a lot of respect to the flag and to the nation."

World War II Navy veteran Ritzie Williford said that she was heartened to witness the young students bear witness to patriotism. "It is the best time for them to really begin to understand what all the country really stands for and (to sense) patriotism."

DeZavala Principal Barbara Watson said that the school's Veterans Day observance "gives us an opportunity to bring it (patriotism and duty to country) to the forefront, so that all of our children can recognize the contributions and the sacrifices that our veterans and our service people have made and just to be proud" of America.

"It's a wonderful feeling when the children are all standing and singing 'This Land Is My Land' and some of the other patriotic songs," Mrs. Watson said. "It's a great opportunity to instill in them a little bit of patriotism that seems to be sliding away these days."

First lady employs subtlety to urge human rights, education, equality

SAMARKAND, Uzbekistan (AP) — In Kazakstan, Kyrgyzstan and Uzbekistan, Hillary Rodham Clinton is urging government leaders to "create a civil society" — code words for cleaning up their human rights records.

She is encouraging girls to "become as educated as you possibly can," without mentioning indications that they are working or married instead because their governments do not compel their school attendance.

AP Photo

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton walks on stage with a group of Uzbek dancers during a tour of Registan Square in Samarkand, Uzbekistan, Friday.

Social prescriptions wrapped in diplomatic language have been Mrs. Clinton's calling card on her visit to the developing republics of the former Soviet Union.

On Friday, she suggested that warring societies in some volatile countries should learn from the Jews, Christians and Muslims who have lived peacefully in Samarkand for thousands of years.

Indeed, there is concern that rapid changes in some former Soviet republics such as Tajikistan could prompt violent resistance. But Mrs. Clinton cited other examples.

"In Bosnia and Rwanda, in Northern Ireland and in the Middle East, you will ... see places where extremists hijack holy traditions, not to lift people up closer to God but to push them apart," she told about 100 Uzbeks at the Afroseyob Hotel in Samarkand.

"I have come to learn from you," she added. "To learn from you not only about your rich past and rich culture, but also about the deeply rooted traditions of respect for religious and ethnic differences which have enabled this culture to flourish for so many generations."

Administration officials say that the more values and goals the republics share with the United States, the fewer the chances that they will create political and economic alliances with American foes.

Mrs. Clinton's agenda during her eight-day, five-nation tour, is mapped carefully around diplomatic land mines.

According to the State Department, Uzbekistan's human rights record has improved but serious problems remain. The government denies registration to independent political parties and other potential critics, and public meetings and demonstrations require approval. Islamic leaders have been harassed and arrested, and there is significant discrimination and domestic abuse against women.

Besides Mrs. Clinton's visit, the United States has made many efforts to promote friendship with the republics.

Early this month, for example, paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division from Fort Bragg, N.C., participated in a six-day training mission with troops from nations trying to create a peacekeeping force in Central Asia.

And American aid has flowed into the region.

Mrs. Clinton, for example, held a photo session on the tarmac in Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan, this week with a truckload of $2 million in drugs and clothes from Project Hope. And she has presided over the openings of two women's clinics supported by American dollars. The United States is paying for 12 other such clinics in the independent republics.

To symbolize peaceful coexistence between different cultures, Mrs. Clinton visited a 400-year-old synagogue in Samarkand that survived Soviet efforts to disband it. It is just down the street from a mosque and a traditional Muslim fountain.

Mrs. Clinton also visited several Muslim landmarks including the tomb of Tamerlane, a powerful and feared 14th century ruler.

Trunk showing takes on new meaning at Indian elephant fair

SONEPUR, India (AP) — Under the shade of a mango grove in eastern India, four men leisurely haggled over the price of a magnificent 10-foot-tall elephant.

"At least 1 million rupees," owner Ram Lakhan Verma said, demanding the equivalent of $27,000 for the 25-year-old Bhola. "Look at his tusks. Look at his nails. He is a healthy male in his prime."

"Too much, too much," replied the prospective buyer, unimpressed by the long tusks covered with brass rings or Bhola's leathery body painted in vivid colors.

The deal fell through. No problem: there are dozens of other elephants to choose from.

More than 100 gaily decorated elephants quietly chewed on sugarcane and rice paddy along the Ganges River while their owners waited for buyers at Asia's oldest and largest elephant fair, a monthlong jamboree that began Friday.

The elephants came from across India to Sonepur, a dusty village in the eastern state of Bihar that has hosted the annual fair for at least 300 years.

Hindu mythology tales describe a fierce battle between a divine elephant and a vicious crocodile that is won by the elephant. Some people claim the battle took place in Sonepur.

Hundreds of thousands of people thronged the fair Friday to buy and sell elephants, horses, cows, buffaloes, goats, dogs and birds. Some just came to have a good time.

Crowds milled about the elephants — the star attraction — gawking at the brass rings on their tusks and ears and the bright designs painted on their bodies.

AP Photo

Mahouts ride their elephants in the Gandok River for a wash on the occasion of Kartik Purnima, while thousands of people bathe on the other bank, at Asia's largest cattle and elephant fair in Sonepur, in the Indian state of Bihar Friday.

The number of elephants available for sale has dwindled over the years, Verma said. The Indian government has banned capture of wild elephants to help animal conservation.

But elephants still are sought by loggers, who use them in forests to haul trees since machines often cannot maneuver through the vegetation.

Rich Hindu temples also use elephants during religious ceremonies, often to carry idols of the gods through the streets. Others hire out the animals for weddings and festivals.

Though many people own elephants as an investment — earning good profits off the sale of a full-grown animal — the prime reason for having elephants is social status.

Elephants are a status symbol among wealthy land owners, especially in rural India.

The rich have vast farm fields and orchards that can satisfy the voracious appetite of the beasts. An adult elephant eats 450 pounds of sugarcane, rice paddy and grass a day — one-fifth its body weight.

No end to flooding in Somalia; death toll hits 520

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Heavy rain and swollen rivers roaring down from the mountains in neighboring Ethiopia hampered international efforts Thursday to rescue Somalis trapped by nearly a month of flooding.

In the last 24 hours, at least 72 people drowned in the flooded Juba Valley, bringing the death toll to 520 since rains began Oct. 5, Wendy Driscoll of CARE International said. Aid workers feared the number of dead could be much higher.

In villages south of Baidoa, the situation was so bad that some residents climbed to the tops of trees to escape the flood waters — and have been stuck there for nearly a week, aid workers said.

Stockpiled food and emergency supplies have been threatened by rising waters, airfields have been flooded and bridges washed away. Relief workers have reported an outbreak of disease among livestock in Badhade, where at least 11,000 head of cattle have died.

In some places, landmines planted during Somalia's six-year civil conflict have risen to the surface, posing yet another hazard.

The Juba River Valley, 250 miles southwest of Mogadishu, is the breadbasket of Somalia. Floods have destroyed most of the harvested reserves and freshly planted sorghum, a staple grain crop.

The United Nations and the International Committee of the Red Cross have started flying in medicine, blankets and plastic boats to the three airstrips still above water.

The European Union said Thursday it was allocating $2.5 million to the Somali operation, and the United Nations is negotiating with France and Germany to get helicopters for an evacuation operation.

The faction leaders who rule this East African nation of 7 million — the same ones who forced out U.S.-led peacekeepers in 1995 — have appealed for more aid. But the bitterness remaining from that mission has made foreign governments and relief agencies reluctant to mount another large-scale effort.

Somalia has had no central government since January 1991, when clan-based factions ousted the late dictator Mohamed Siad Barre. Since then, the fighters have turned their guns against each other.

Wife of Chinese dissident appeals for help

BEIJING (AP) — An imprisoned human rights advocate has been beaten repeatedly by police, prompting his wife to appeal to the Red Cross to investigate, a human rights group said Friday.

On one occasion, police got other prisoners to beat Yao Zhenxiang because he was too sick to work, the Hong Kong-based Information Center of Human Rights and Democratic Movement in China said.

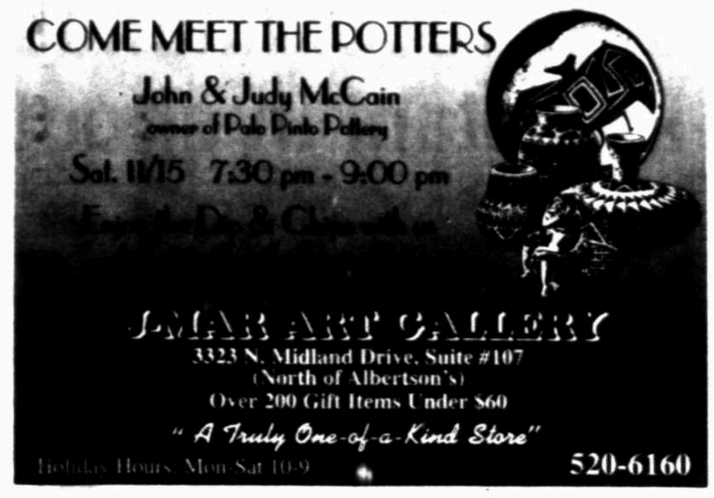

Yao was beaten again by police for being unable to work after Chinese President Jiang Zemin returned earlier this month from a visit to the United States, the group said.

Yao also still suffers the effects of a police beating after he was arrested in April 1996, the group said.

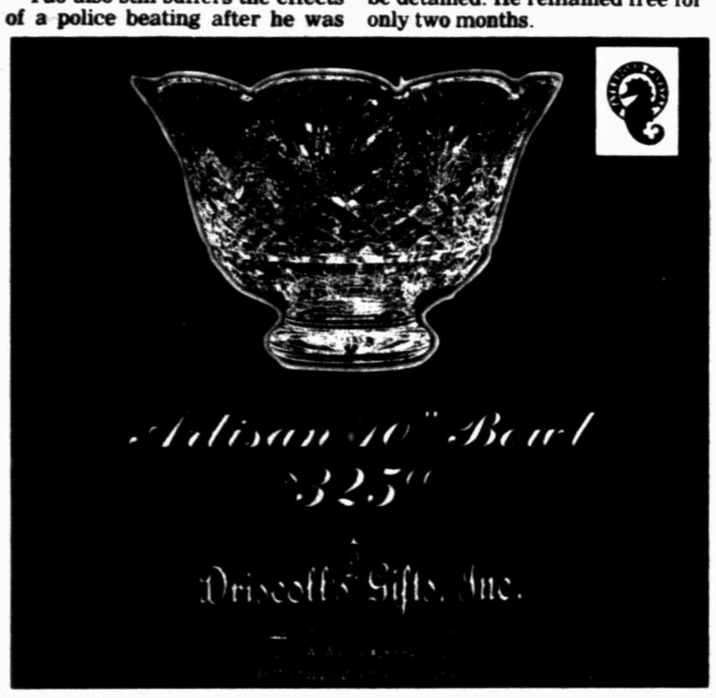

His wife, Zhu Yaping, appealed to the Red Cross to send representatives to Dafeng in eastern Jiangsu province to investigate her husband's condition, the group said.

Yao is serving a three-year sentence on charges of distributing pornography, a punishment that was imposed without a trial.

Yao was a member of a Shanghai-based human rights group that for years tried to gain official recognition. He fled China and almost ever arrest in 1994 but returned in 1996, after reportedly receiving assurances he would not be detained. He remained free for only two months.

Yao also still suffers the effects of a police beating after he was arrested in April 1996, the group said.

His wife, Zhu Yaping, appealed to the Red Cross to send representatives to Dafeng in eastern Jiangsu province to investigate her husband's condition, the group said.

Yao is serving a three-year sentence on charges of distributing pornography, a punishment that was imposed without a trial.

Yao was a member of a Shanghai-based human rights group that for years tried to gain official recognition. He fled China and almost certain arrest in 1994 but returned in 1996, after reportedly receiving assurances he would not be detained. He remained free for only two months.

Jury recommends death for Pakistani in shooting at CIA

'It's hard to find a man who is less unhappy about what he did than this man. He doesn't have an ounce of sorrow for killing Frank Darling, not an ounce.'

— Robert F. Horan, prosecutor

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — A jury deliberating under heavy security Friday decided a Pakistani should get the death penalty for gunning down two CIA employees outside the spy agency's gates.

Mir Aimal Kasi, 33, showed no emotion as the decision was read. One of his lawyers leaned over and rubbed Kasi's back.

The decision came two days after four American oil company auditors were shot to death in Pakistan, apparently in retaliation for Kasi's conviction on Monday. A group that claimed responsibility for the ambush threatened more attacks if Kasi was sentenced to death.

The judge had ordered the jurors sequestered after the killings to shield them from news coverage. They were also kept under armed guard.

Kasi was found guilty of killing Frank Darling, 28, and another CIA employee, Lansing Bennett, 66, on Jan. 25, 1993. He opened fire with a rifle on morning traffic outside CIA headquarters. Prosecutors said the attack was vengeance for what Kasi considered U.S. meddling in Muslim countries.

The jury had the choice of death by injection or life in prison. Its decision is only a recommendation, but Virginia judges generally abide by a jury's decision to impose the death penalty. Sentencing was set for Jan. 23.

Kasi was charged with capital murder only in Darling's death, in part because of evidence that Kasi first wounded Darling, then shot the helpless man in the head as Darling's wife cowered beside him. The close-range shot with an AK-47 assault rifle blew part of his head off.

During closing arguments Thursday, the defense portrayed Kasi as a brain-damaged loner whose rampage was senseless, while the prosecution said he was a merciless, politically driven killer.

The jury took seven hours to decide.

In an elevator afterward, Kasi's uncle, Amanullah Kasi from Pakistan, wept and wiped his face with a handkerchief. Kasi's older brother, Mir Weis Kasi, said the family will appeal.

"Praise God is all I can say," Rich Becker, Darling's father-in-law, said as his daughter, Judy Becker Darling, wept softly. "We are grateful to God and elated that after five long years, justice has been finally served."

Kasi bought a one-way ticket to his native Pakistan hours after the shooting and left the next day. He eluded a global manhunt for 4 1/2 years. The FBI tracked him to a Pakistani hotel and arrested him in June, then returned him to Virginia.

According to testimony, Kasi made several confessions, each time saying the killings were vengeance for U.S. involvement in Muslim countries. Kasi did not testify during his trial.

Defense attorney Judith Barger argued that Kasi should get life in prison because he has never functioned normally, having suffered brain damage at or near birth.

Prosecutor Robert F. Horan argued that Kasi killed in anger and showed no remorse for the killings.

"He is proud of it. He set out on a mission to kill people and he accomplished it. It doesn't bother him," Horan said.

The prosecutor added: "It's hard to find a man who is less unhappy about what he did than this man. He doesn't have an ounce of sorrow for having killed Frank Darling, not an ounce."

After returning the verdict on Monday, jurors sent a note to the judge expressing fear for their safety. The note came to light in court on Wednesday after the slayings of the four U.S. businessmen.

Fairfax County spent $1.5 million before the trial to bolster security at the courthouse and adjoining police complex where Kasi was jailed.

Barricades were erected on streets and massive concrete planters were placed across the lawn to block truck bombers. Cars entering the court complex were stopped, and some were searched.

Army official resigns after political pressure imposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Relentless political pressure forced a top civilian Army official to resign Friday after she called the Marines "extremists" and made fun of their uniforms. She had been scheduled to leave in a week, but critics insisted she go immediately.

The remarks by Sara Lister, assistant secretary of the Army for manpower and reserve affairs, sparked denunciations from Marines, lawmakers and the Republican Party. Even as Congress rushed to adjourn Thursday, the House unanimously adopted a resolution calling on Lister to resign.

On Friday, less than 24 hours after Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said Lister's apology had been accepted, Army officials quietly acknowledged that what was being accepted — a week earlier than previously planned — was her resignation.

A senior Army official denied that she was prodded to quit and said it was never her intention to disparage any of the services.

The rapid departure of a senior civilian appointee to the Pentagon underscored the Clinton administration's continued vulnerability and sensitivity to criticism on military issues. It also pointed to the popularity on Capitol Hill of the Marine Corps, which quite openly underscores its separateness and uniqueness from the other services.

Lister made the remarks at a public seminar in Baltimore Oct. 26. She said she considered the Army "much more connected to society than the Marines" and added, "The Marines are extremists. Wherever you have extremists, you've got some risks of total disconnection with society." She also said the Marines "have all these checkerboard fancy uniforms" compared to the "muddy boots" Army.

The Washington Times obtained a tape of the remarks and published a story Thursday. The paper quoted Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Charles Krulak as saying Lister's remarks had dismissed "222 years of sacrifice and dedication" of the Marines.

"This is the most outrageous thing I have ever heard," said Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., a former Marine.

Assistant Army Secretary Sara Lister, the Army's top personnel official, is shown in an undated handout photo. Lister resigned Friday after a storm of protest arose over her remark that the Marine Corps is an "extremist" organization, according to a senior Pentagon official.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich wrote to President Clinton calling for her immediate dismissal.

Lister, who has pushed for a greater role for women in the military, hastily apologized for her "inappropriate" choice of words. She also protested that her remarks were taken out of context.

The Pentagon at first seemed satisfied with the apology. But the momentum against Lister was becoming overwhelming.

Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., noting that Lister had earlier planned to step down from her position on Nov. 21, said, "Perhaps it wouldn't be too early for her to think about accelerating that retirement."

The reaction took on a sharply partisan tone in part because Republicans see military matters as an area of weakness in an administration headed by a president who avoided service in Vietnam.

In addition, the military itself is perceived as an increasingly Republican institution. The Wall Street Journal earlier this week reported on a Harvard University study showing that 67 percent of uniformed service members identified themselves as Republicans, up from 33 percent in 1976.

The Republican National Committee reminded reporters that Clinton, as a college student, had once written that he had come to loathe the military. Republican National Committee Chairman Jim Nicholson called Lister's resignation "a swift and decisive tactical retreat that was clearly the only logical course of action."

Within the Marine Corps there was, mixed with the anger over Lister's remarks, a certain pride about the unique role of the corps.

Radio talk show host and former Marine Oliver North said Lister should have referred to the Marines as "extremely brave, extremely dedicated, extremely fit, and extremely faithful."

The Marines, the smallest of the four military services, call themselves "the few, the proud." Their 12 weeks of recruit training is the longest in the military and ends with a 54-hour "crucible" in which recruits are put through an exhausting series of mental and physical challenges. Marines are also the only service that trains male and female recruits separately, a policy that has brought the service under criticism from advocates of women in the military.

The attacks on Lister's comments were not restricted to the Republican Party. Rep. Paul McHale, D-Pa., a former Marine, supported Solomon's resolution calling on Lister to resign.

Lister's remarks, McHale said, "were not taken out of context. They were not misinterpreted. They were simply wrong. Unfortunately for Assistant Secretary Lister, she was simultaneously articulate and foolish."

Turkish Kurd hunger striker Freda Beyrikan, left, talks with Kathryn Porter, wife of Rep. John Porter, R-Ill. on the Capitol steps Thursday. Turkish Kurds in the fourth week of their hunger strike to protest Turkey's oppression of its Kurdish population are finding nourishment in the support of human rights activist Porter.

Congressman's wife aiding Turkish Kurd hunger strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kathryn Cameron Porter, a human rights activist and congressman's wife, has spent most of her days in recent weeks keeping a vigil outside the U.S. Capitol with Turkish Kurds staging a hunger strike.

Porter began her own fast on Oct. 20 with five others. A diabetic, she became ill and was forced to break off her fast after six days.

She is still eating just one small meal a day, and joins the two remaining hunger strikers for as much of their 10-hour-a-day vigil as she is able.

"Sitting out here is nothing compared to what real people are experiencing," said Porter, 49, who served in the Reagan and Bush administrations. "I hope it touches people's hearts."

The group is protesting Turkey's imprisonment of Leyla Zana, a Kurdish woman elected to Turkey's parliament who was convicted of treason after telling Congress of Kurds' plight. Turkey also has been criticized for mistreating its 12 million Kurds through forced evacuations and bans on their language.

Three other hunger strikers became so sick they had to drop out. The two left subsist on vitamins and electrolyte-replenishing fluids.

Porter served as the Energy Department's special assistant for international affairs in the Reagan and Bush administrations before turning full time to human rights issues. She founded The Human Rights Alliance last year. Her husband, Rep. John Edward Porter, R-Ill., co-chairs the Congressional Human Rights Caucus. The couple has five grown children and one grandchild.

Porter, a veteran of 10 terms in Congress, said he fully supports his wife's effort, but worries about the toll he sees it taking on her.

"I can't tell you how proud I am of her," the congressman said. "I think hunger strikes are very effective ... but you have to live to fight another day."

FDA wants warnings against mixing alcohol and pain pills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anyone who regularly has three alcoholic drinks a day should check with a doctor before taking aspirin, Tylenol or any other over-the-counter painkiller, the Food and Drug Administration says.

The Food and Drug Administration said Friday it wants to put that warning on every bottle of nonprescription pain pill, citing risks of stomach bleeding or liver damage.

"Consumption of excessive alcohol while taking pain relievers can be dangerous to your health," warned Dr. Michael Friedman, FDA's acting commissioner.

The warnings aren't law yet: Drug makers and the public have 75 days to comment, and the FDA will consider the responses before making a final decision.

Some pain pills, including Tylenol, voluntarily carry certain alcohol warnings already. The danger made headlines in 1994, when a Virginia man won an $8 million lawsuit claiming he needed a liver transplant after mixing Tylenol and his habit of wine with dinner.

Friday, the government proposed warnings that anyone who drinks three or more alcoholic beverages a day should ask a doctor before taking:

■ Acetaminophen, sold under the brand name Tylenol and other names, because alcohol use may increase the risk of liver damage.

■ Aspirin; ibuprofen, the active ingredient in Advil and other brands; ketoprofen, the active ingredient in Orudis KT and Actron; and naproxen sodium, the active ingredient in Aleve, because alcohol use may increase the risk of stomach bleeding.

The Aspirin Foundation of America, an industry group, said it will fight the warnings. Tylenol maker McNeil Pharmaceuticals said it would review the FDA's proposal, which would require a more explicit warning than Tylenol uses now.

Doctors already know that all brands of pain pills — even though they're sold without a prescription — can cause various side effects, including stomach ulcers and liver damage.

The question is how much alcohol increases the risk, and how many drinks it takes.

What if you had three glasses of wine with dinner several times a week, instead of every day? Does the risk rise if you take a low-dose aspirin every day for heart disease?

The FDA couldn't say on Friday.

Few people are hurt by mixing alcohol and pain pills each year, said Dr. David Flockhart of Georgetown University. But those who are, are hurt severely — and there's no way to predict in advance who can tolerate the mix, he said.

"You're talking literally the death of their liver or a dangerous ulcer that could kill somebody," said Flockhart, who called these at-risk patients "sitting ducks."

Specific studies haven't been done on every pain pill. Take aspirin. The FDA decided alcohol and aspirin were risky mostly because of biology: They both irritate the stomach lining in the same dangerous way.

Flockhart said heart patients on aspirin therapy aren't at any higher risk from alcohol than the average aspirin user, because their daily dose is low.

As for people whose drinking habits fluctuate, the FDA is tracking some reports of occasional drinkers who suffered pain-pill side effects.

"The (proposed) warnings say three drinks or more daily, but that doesn't mean if you're having three drinks every other day you shouldn't consult your doctor," advised Dr. Linda Katz, FDA's nonprescription drugs chief.

Consumers think over-the-counter drugs are "totally benign, and they're not," she added. "People can do reasonably well with these products if they understand how to minimize their potential risks. One of the ways ... is to minimize alcohol use."

Teacher who had sex with sixth-grader gets six months

KENT, Wash. (AP) — A teacher who had sex with a 13-year-old boy and gave birth to his child was sentenced to six months in jail Friday after the boy's mother said the woman "has been punished enough for her mistake."

Mary Kay LeTourneau, 35, hugged her lawyer amid sighs from supporters, including the boy's family, as the judge announced the sentence.

Having already served 100 days, she still faces almost three months in jail. She was ordered into a three-year sex offender treatment program and is barred from contact with the boy, now 14, and their 4-month-old daughter.

Mrs. LeTourneau, formerly a popular and well-regarded teacher in suburban Seattle, pleaded guilty in August to two counts of second-degree child rape.

Fighting tears in a voice nearly inaudible over the clicking shutters of photographers, she pleaded for a chance to restore her shattered life.

"I did something that I had no right to do," Mrs. LeTourneau told the court after sentencing. "I give you my word it will not happen again. ... It was wrong and I am sorry."

Turning aside a prosecution recommendation for a 6 1/2-year sentence, Superior Court Judge Linda Lau said she was persuaded that the defendant "does not pose a risk to the community under this sentencing option."

She said Mrs. LeTourneau must undergo closely supervised treatment and monitoring as a sex offender. If she violates any terms of her sentencing, the judge said she would face a seven-year, five-month prison term.

"Whether you stay out of prison is completely within your hands. It will not be easy. You will not simply be released into the community to live your life as you did before," the judge said. "Violations in any degree will simply not be tolerated."

Mrs. LeTourneau was a married mother of four when she began having sex with the boy in the summer of 1996, after his sixth-grade year in her class. She also had taught him in the second grade.

In interviews, he has said they planned the pregnancy together and exchanged rings.

Their daughter was born in May and is being reared by the boy's mother, who told the judge that a prison term for Mrs. LeTourneau would saddle her already troubled son with a crushing burden of guilt.

"Mary is not a bad person, she's just a human being that made a terrible mistake," said the mother, who was not identified to protect her son's privacy. "I feel that Mary has been punished enough for her mistake."

In urging treatment, defense attorney David Gehrke said his client has already endured "massive punishment."

Sales decline, stable prices signal unwanted economic chill in October

WASHINGTON (AP) — A chill ran through the economy in October. A second consecutive drop in retail sales and near-stable wholesale prices suggest the long-awaited economic slowdown is taking hold just before the holiday shopping season.

Shoppers spent a seasonally adjusted $213.7 billion last month, down 0.2 percent, the Commerce Department said Friday. That came after a 0.1 percent decline in September.

Both drops surprised most economists and troubled a few, coming close to Christmas. Retail sales make up about a third of the economy's output and holiday sales account for as much as half of many retailers' annual revenues.

Still, much of the weakness was attributed to a slump in auto sales after summertime dealer rebates expired. Department store sales picked up last month as cool weather encouraged fall clothing purchases.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said prices paid to producers such as food processing plants and factories inched just 0.1 percent higher in October.

That followed a sharp jump in September and a moderate rise in August. But with a record seven consecutive declines from January through July, the Producer Price Index has declined at a 1.2 percent annual rate during the first 10 months of the year, compared with a 2.8 percent increase for all of 1996.

"We seem to be very, very fortunate in the sense that we're not seeing anything that resembles a surge in spending that could create inflationary pressures," said economist Norman Robertson of Smithfield Trust Co. in Pittsburgh.

The deceleration, if it persists, could be just what the Federal Reserve ordered, analysts said. It would allow the central bank to postpone — perhaps indefinitely — an interest-rate increase aimed at ensuring inflation remains tame.

"What's happening now is in lieu of interest rates going up. It's not all bad," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch. "Growth was going to slow next year, no matter what. It was going to slow on its own, or the Fed was going to make growth slow."

Some economists, though, saw danger in the softness coming before the economy had felt the full impact of domestic stock market turmoil and deteriorating export sales to Asia.

"If the stock market gets in (further) trouble, we think a recession will become probable," said economist David Levy of the Jerome Levy Economics Institute of Bard College in Mount Kisco, N.Y. "The downside risks are very serious."

But the numbers didn't ruffle Wall Street. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 85 points to close at 7,572. Interest rates on the benchmark 30-year Treasury bond held around a 21-month low of 6.09 percent.

In details, the Commerce Department said auto sales fell 2 percent, the second sizable decline after robust gains from June through August. But department store sales jumped 1.1 percent, the biggest increase in nine months.

Sales also rose at clothing shops and drug stores. They fell at restaurants and bars and building-supply and hardware stores. Furniture sales were unchanged.

Producer prices were well-behaved overall in October, despite a 16.8 percent surge in vegetable costs that helped push food prices up by 0.4 percent. That included a near-quadrupling of cauliflower and a doubling of broccoli. But meat and egg prices fell. A 6.4 percent drop in pork was the most in almost a decade.

Dallas suburb sees a surge in heroin deaths

PLANO (AP) — When a friend offered 18-year-old Marshall Hampton some heroin, Hampton said no, not wanting to deal with a messy needle or run the risk of AIDS. He considered himself a "smart user."

But when Hampton's friend told him the latest heroin from across the border could be snorted like cocaine, he couldn't wait to try it.

Within two weeks he was spending $200 a day on the drug. To support his habit, he started pawning electronics, breaking into houses and stealing money from friends.

"I couldn't get away from it," said Hampton, who is now in rehab. "It started to eat away at my soul. I'd do anything to get it and anything for it."

Hampton's hometown of Plano, a prosperous suburb of 188,000 people just north of Dallas, has seen 11 teen-agers die of heroin overdoses in the past 12 months — all from inhaling the drug, a practice youngsters are convinced is safer than using a needle.

Similarly, in the well-to-do suburbs near Fort Worth, there have been four heroin-related deaths in the past year. The youngest victim was a 13-year-old boy.

Law enforcement officials are seeing a new kind of heroin user, bred not on the streets but in comfortable neighborhoods of soccer fields and good schools.

"These kids in the suburbs think they know all of the ins and outs of using drugs and they have a lot of money to spend," said Jane Maxwell, chief of research for the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse. "They hear stories about people dying in the inner city but they think, 'They just didn't know what they were doing. They must have used a needle.'"

The truth about the drug is that it is at least as deadly as cocaine, drug experts say.

Colombian dealers competing for the suburban market are increasing the purity of the drug to close to 90 percent, researchers say. They are also mixing it with other drugs to increase the bulk. Using the drug is like playing Russian roulette.

"Yesterday's dose may bring a good high," Maxwell said. "Tomorrow you could take the same amount and it will kill you. These kids really don't know what they're getting into."

The high concentration allows the drug to be snorted, but in the end, most suburban addicts turn to needles, because "there is only so much you can get in through your nose," Maxwell said. "And the use of needles will inevitably lead to an increase in AIDS in the suburbs."

On Thursday night, about 1,500 parents, teachers and law enforcement officials packed a community center to discuss the outbreak of heroin use in Plano, an upper middle-class suburb that is home to a number of big corporations, including Frito-Lay, Dr Pepper/Seven Up, J.C. Penney, EDS, Texas Instruments and Kimberly-Clark.

> 'Don't look to us to solve this problem. We can't do it. We can't be in your home without a warrant. This is your problem.'
> — Rick Moore, Plano police officer who specializes in drug prevention

"We were blindsided by this problem in our community," Police Chief Bruce Glasscock said. "We didn't see it coming." But he added: "Now is the time to react and react swiftly."

A panel that included a federal drug official and an expert on addiction took questions about heroin use. Parents anxiously grilled the panel about what to look for when they suspect a child is using heroin.

They were told that heroin users might be apathetic, suffer memory loss, receive poor grades and wear long sleeves to hide needle marks. Parents were also told to take note if kitchen utensils or coffee grinders — items that could be used to prepare heroin — are missing.

Some parents even asked about how to turn their child in to police.

"I'm not the only one here who has a child on heroin who wants him to go to jail but doesn't know how to go about doing it," said a woman who identified herself only as Mary.

Customs spokeswoman Judy Turner said heroin use in the United States has grown steadily in recent years, both in the cities and suburbs.

"The drug has been made popular by movies and models, and now people want it," Maxwell said. "That shouldn't be any surprise. Suburban youth also have plenty of money and sometimes not much supervision."

Rick Moore, a Plano police officer who specializes in drug prevention, shifted much of the responsibility onto the parents at the town meeting.

"Don't look to us to solve this problem," Moore said. "We can't do it. We can't be in your home without a warrant. This is your problem."

He added: "There is no room in this war for parents who won't be honest with themselves. We all need to take an inventory of our situation."

Plano is where eight teen-agers committed suicide during a 18-month span beginning in February 1983. Some of the youths knew each other but not all of the suicides were linked.

'Jailhouse Houdini' recaptured

DECATUR (AP) — A convict known as a "jailhouse Houdini" for repeated escapes that included crawling through sewer lines and blending into a courthouse crowd during a recess in a trial is back behind bars.

Again. For now.

This time, Kenneth Paul Putnam was captured in Decatur in a motel room with his girlfriend early Thursday after someone recognized him on TV's "America's Most Wanted." He had been on the lam 18 months this time, ever since he conned Georgia authorities into transferring him from a maximum-security prison to a county jail where he simply went over the fence.

Putnam, 39, has escaped at least five times in the last 18 years.

"This is one of those people who's constantly looking for any opportunity," said Mike Light, Georgia Corrections Department spokesman. "He's slick, and he's constantly just looking for another way to get out."

"I don't like being locked up," Putnam told The Dallas Morning News from a Dallas lockup. "There's a bunch of animals in prison. I know I need to pay for what I've done, but I don't want to be here."

Sheriff Billy Bernhardt of Georgia's Gilmer County said Putnam persuaded prosecutors to move him from a state prison to a jail by claiming to have valuable information on some bank robberies.

Until the "America's Most Wanted" broadcast, the escape artist had been staying at a trailer park in Seagoville, outside Dallas.

Separatists added to indictment

DALLAS (AP) — Two more Texas separatists have been added to the federal indictment that charges Republic of Texas leader Richard McLaren and others with bank and wire fraud.

Richard George Kieninger, 70, of Quinlan and Linh Ngoc Vu, 32, of Carrollton, have also been charged with several counts of mail fraud, the U.S. attorney's office said.

In addition, Kieninger is charged with several bank fraud counts.

A grand jury returned a superseding indictment on Nov. 6 to add Kieninger and Vu to the case. The court unsealed the indictment on Wednesday.

McLaren and other Republic of Texas members were charged last spring with issuing worthless "warrants," which look like cashier's checks. Prosecutors say the bogus documents were used to set up fraudulent bank accounts and pay bills.

Authorities say losses total in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The Republic of Texas movement does not recognize state law, instead claiming the sovereign nation was illegally annexed by the United States in 1845. Members claim the right to issue warrants backed by national assets.

McLaren and associate Robert Otto were convicted recently on state charges related to their week-long standoff with law officers near Fort Davis last spring.

Computer legal adviser to make opening statement

By Geanne Rosenberg
N.Y. Times News Service

Artificial intelligence, or computer-based reasoning and problem solving, has, after years of hype and disappointments, begun to come of age in a few fields marked by clear rules and precise terms. It has been used to help doctors diagnose diseases; it has been used to beat the chess champion of the world.

But another goal in artificial-intelligence research has proved more elusive. For more than 25 years, experts in artificial intelligence in the United States and Western Europe have tried to figure out how to teach computers to think as lawyers do.

Lawyers who have followed the efforts have been skeptical, doubting whether computers could perform legal reasoning. But next month, their skepticism will be tested by the Virtual Patent Advisor, a new software product designed to identify and help avoid patent conflicts.

In December, General Electric Co.'s GE Power Systems unit, based in Schenectady, N.Y., plans to introduce the system, the first in a series of virtual legal advisers intended to prevent and help solve corporate legal problems.

The result of research by Jnana Technologies Corp., the Virtual Patent Advisor aims to help identify patent-infringement problems. The system, which can run on a desktop computer and can use the Internet, questions an engineer to define the structure and purpose of an invention idea and then searches data bases and compares design features with existing patents.

It can then create lists of potentially conflicting patents, apply rules of patent law to the facts it has gathered and generate reports to the company's lawyers.

Ideally, the engineer, apprised of potential conflicts, could alter the design or turn to the company to find some other solution. Robert Lampe Jr., a senior patent lawyer at GE Power Systems, said he expected the product would reduce to less than an hour a process that now takes as long as a week. "It's a tremendous productivity tool," he said.

Computers have long been used to conduct key-word searches in legal research and to prepare tax forms and wills. But David Johnson, chairman of Counsel Connect and co-director of the Cyberspace Law Institute, said the virtual advisers would go well beyond this, bringing together case-based and rule-based reasoning capacities and the ability to draw on multiple data bases.

At least one doubter was intrigued

Nikon's Coolpix 300 is more than a digital camera — it's a personal imaging assistant.

Able to capture 640-by-480 dpi still images, Coolpix 300 also records audio, lets you overlay handwritten annotations directly onto files and even stands in as a video conferencing camera.

Images are recorded through a fixed lens with a wide range of shutter speeds for most lighting conditions, and a 2.5-inch LED display serves as the viewing screen, user interface and writing pad. The low-resolution images are not great for printing, but are suited for Web pages and e-mail.

Coolpix retails for $700 and can be seen at http://www.nikonusa.com.

Super drives

I've puttered around in a lot of different areas, and I can't remember one that has not been enhanced, at least in some small measure, by 3M Co.

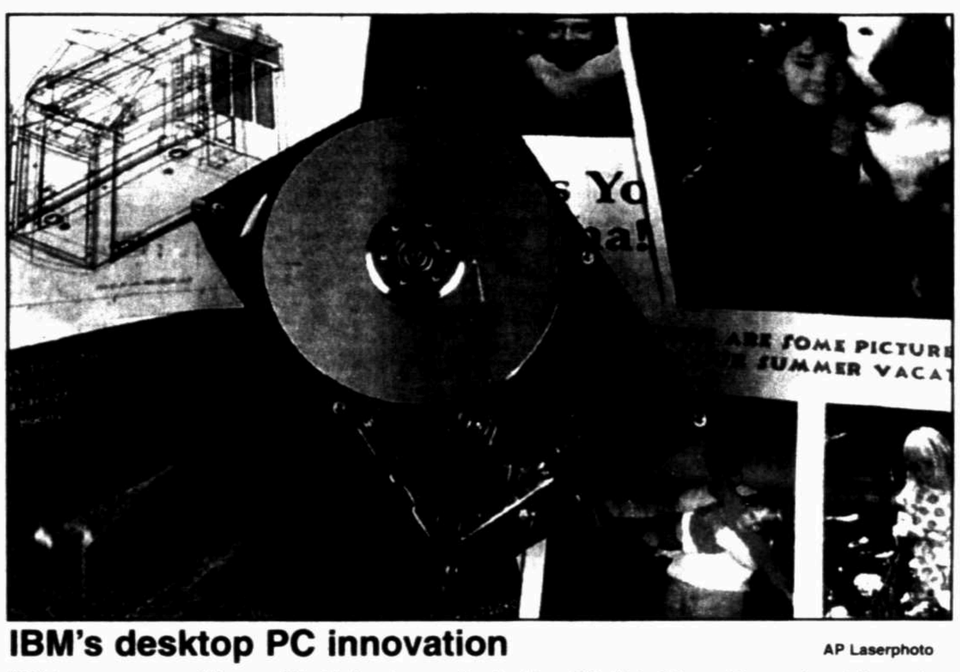

Its research has now boosted the capacity of the standard floppy disk drive from its long-time maximum of 1.44 megabytes per disk to a whopping 120 megabytes.

I've been working with the Imation Superdisk parallel port drive, an outside-the-box drive that handles both standard floppies — even old double-density ones — and new 120-meg floppies. This model plugs into the printer port, has a pass-through for the printer, and gets its power from the wall and not the computer power supply.

It would be more practical, of course, as an internal drive replacing the existing 1.44-meg drive. Indeed, Compaq is shipping some of its computers with an Imation internal drive. However, a lot of computer users are very leery of things like replacing disk drives, and the external model certainly will be attractive to them. There's nothing to installing it but plugging it in and running the software that comes with it.

It comes in a nice computer-colored box with an arched top. Fortunately, it's not arched so much that my telephone won't sit on it. The drive will work with any 386 or better computer running any version of Windows 3, 95 or NT 3.51 or higher.

The rural side of cyberspace

By Charles Stough
N.Y. Times News Service

When the catalog arrived offering purple gourmet potatoes for $8.50 a pound, the rural Georgia resident gasped, then laughed. And because he was a contributor to misc.rural, a Usenet newsgroup, he shared the sensation with his pals in cyberspace.

"Think that's bad?" another country denizen responded. "Here in the Ozarks in Missouri they are selling houses that would normally only sell for around $40,000, to the yuppies from St. Louis and other areas, for close to $100,000."

This is something of an irritant to country folks. Misc.rural, a happy little group usually devoted to sharing information about common pests, water well maintenance and tractor repair, fairly hums with the outrage.

On the one hand, they observe, the world's city sophisticates sneer at their country cousins for doing without all those urban marvels — posh dwellings, convenient shopping, theaters and restaurants. And $8.50 mail-order potatoes.

On the other hand, the ruralites also observe, one of the signs that a city dwellers have made it is when the hip urbanites and their 1.8 children can afford a weekend place in the country to flee all that sophistication.

Country folks just can't hardly stand all that sophistication — the yowling kids in the country store, the exasperation when the gas station doesn't stock Volvo parts, the habit of rudely leaving other people's gates open, the motorcycles in the woods, the litter.

And then there's the real estate thing. Farming only pays if you can do it on farmland. When a country village graduates to exurb bedroom community and the condos pop up, cornfields turn into undeveloped building sites. At those tax rates and the price of corn per bushel, it doesn't make sense to plant.

"That's a problem here as well in North-Central Virginia, between Washington and Richmond," another misc.rural contributor said. "When we bought here eight years ago land was in the $800-1,000 an acre range where we are, more expensive closer to town. Good land too.

"Now the 10 acres across the road from us is up for sale at $50,000. The only thing that we can fig-

Intel reports flaw in Pentium chip, sees little impact

N.Y. Times News Service

Intel Corp. said it discovered a flaw in its Pentium processors, though it isn't one that computer users are likely to encounter in the normal operation of their machines.

Computers with Pentium processors and Pentium processors with enhanced MMX technology freeze up when a certain set of instructions aimed at crippling the chip are sent to it, Intel said.

Those instructions have to be sent to the chip by the user intentionally, the world's biggest chipmaker said. That means users are very unlikely to encounter the flaw accidentally, Intel said. Turning the computer off and on solves the problem. Rooting out the cause of such flaws is crucial for Intel because its processors have suffered more severe flaws in the past.

Intel in May acknowledged an error in some advanced math operations in its Pentium Pro and Pentium II chips. A similar one in its Pentium chips in 1994 cost the company $475 million in replacements.

"We are aggressively pursuing the issue," said Intel spokesman Chuck Mulloy. "We have to take every one of these seriously."

The new flaw doesn't affect Intel's more advanced Pentium II microprocessor or its Pentium Pro, Intel said.

Dear Amy: Where can I find Web sites that allow me to play games?—Aaron, El Paso, TX

Dear Aaron: One of the best games I know to play on the Internet is CyberSurfari and it's going on right now. Not only is it fun but you and your friends can win up to $1,000! You play CyberSurfari by surfing the outposts for treasure codes. It's a virtual scavenger hunt that sends you around the world. Get started at http://www.lycos.com/cybersurfari/ Good luck!

CWEB: JobWeb allows prospects to research potential employers

address: http://www.infoseek.com/Careers/Find_an_ideal_job/Job_interview_tips?svN4.

This page is simply a list of hot links that will take you to sites on the Web that offer information on job interviews. Since interview tips differ greatly based on the type of job you're seeking (folks interviewing for a job as head of a company's computer technology division and graduates looking for a first job have different needs), that sort of diversity is important.

Now that you have the preliminaries out of the way, it's time to start searching for a job. You'll need more than one Internet site (and, of course, you'll want to pursue the traditional sources of newspaper classified ads and word of mouth), since you'll want as many leads as possible during the early days of your search.

We'll start at a site called JobWeb — linking jobs, job seekers and job-search information at http://www.jobweb.com/. This is a good source since it offers more than job listings. It also has links that will help you research potential employers, links that take you to sites maintained by human resources professionals and links that offer still more search tips.

There's also an online magazine devoted to information for job seekers and another that provides news stories about employment trends.

The next site, called JobHunt: On-Line Job Meta-List at http://www.job-hunt.org/, does a great job of segregating jobs according to the type of industry or skill needed. You'll also find links to job search groups representing academia, government and other special employers.

Just to be clear, the Web is filled with job-listing sites; these are only a sample. If you are a specialist in a specific field, you'll want to search out sites that are devoted to that profession. And when you search, remember that some of the best job information is found on pages that don't promote themselves as job-listing sites. The home page for a professional group may well include job listings, too.

Finally, if you don't know exactly what kind of job that you want, you'll find tips on matching your skills and a job at a page that contains the online edition of the classic book "What Color is Your Parachute." It's located at http://washingtonpost.com/parachute.

LEGAL: Computers unable to discern human inflections

by the idea. "It sounds like it would make legal practice more fun — get rid of the drudgery," said Ronald Dworkin, a professor of law and philosophy at New York University and a professor of jurisprudence at Oxford University.

"But I guess what I'd insist on is that this is all limited by the fact that the law is essentially imaginative and interpretive," he added. These qualities, he said, "can't be programmed, no matter how sophisticated the programming techniques."

Wendy Gordon, a law professor at Boston University, said she was concerned that a computer, unlike a human, could not perceive voice quality, facial expressions and other cues that signal confusion or ambiguity.

And Robert Sheehan, executive partner at Skadden, Arps Slate, Meagher & Flom, said, "The most advanced cutting edge of the law is always where you're able to take a set of facts and come up with a novel idea." Software, he said, "won't be creative."

But those who work in artificial intelligence say that to the extent that law relies upon tightly woven arguments supporting precedent and well-defined rules, it can be a perfect template for artificial intelligence.

That is because the fields best suited for artificial intelligence are the highly mathematical ones that have "very little subjectivity in them, like chess," said Edwina Rissland, professor of computer science at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and president of the International Association for Artificial Intelligence and the Law.

The fields that lend themselves least to artificial intelligence, she added, are those "in which it's very hard to pin down the meanings of the words."

Probably much harder than law, she added, "would be things like politics and further still would be something like psychiatry."

Professor Rissland said that research into the use of artificial intelligence in legal contexts had divided into two general categories.

In the first, rule-based reasoning, the computer uses if-then statements to move from facts to conclusions or from possible conclusions to supporting facts. In the second, case-based reasoning, experience from previous, analogous cases is applied to solve new problems.

> 'Probably much harder than law would be things like politics and further still would be psychiatry.'
> — Edwina Rissland, computer science professor, Univ. of Massachusett

Professor Rissland, in more than a decade of research, pioneered computerized case-based reasoning and constructed a system that meshed the two forms of reasoning.

Frederic Parnon, a lawyer, ran across Professor Rissland's work in 1995 when he decided to devise software systems that could perform legal functions. He later founded Jnana, which developed the Virtual Patent Advisor.

Professor Rissland has served as an adviser and occasional consultant on Jnana's virtual advisers, though she has no financial stake in the project.

After spending two years creating the underlying technology for the systems, Jnana approached large corporations and asked them to support development of applications addressing specific legal concerns in exchange for favorable licensing terms.

In trying to identify a prospective client for a new technological product, Parnon said, "You have to get this confluence of someone who's enlightened, who has a business problem to solve; then there's a fit."

GE was the first large company to sign on. Several other companies are considering participation in other adviser systems.

Parnon said that a telecommunications company, which he would not identify, was working with Jnana to develop a system to advise managers about human resources. A major legal-research company, he said, is interested in software that will query legal researchers about facts, search data bases and send researchers to the appropriate areas of the law.

Parnon declined to provide details of the development costs or licensing terms. But companies that have not participated in development would pay for the software at an annual cost equivalent to the salary of a junior lawyer.

But even artificial-intelligence experts acknowledge its inherent weakness. "It's hard for a good lawyer to come up with novel, inventive arguments," Professor Rissland said, "and it will be even harder for a machine to do so — probably."

Defying a juggernaut, Netscape looks for place in Microsoft's world

By Steve Lohr
N.Y. Times News Service

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. — Around Netscape's corporate campus here in Silicon Valley, the company's big rival to the north is sometimes referred to as the "Chinese army" — an adversary with seemingly limitless troops. In terms of money and manpower, head-to-head comparisons of Netscape Communications Corp. and Microsoft Corp. are a misnomer. "Our nose is firmly pressed against Microsoft's shin," one Netscape executive said.

Until recently, the company that fueled the Internet revolution appeared to be in decline, withering under Microsoft's assault. Netscape's share of the market for Internet browser software was falling and experts predicted further sharp losses to Microsoft. Business magazines from Fortune to Red Herring questioned Netscape's ability to compete, if not survive. In August, the Aberdeen Group, a research firm, published a report with a title that captured the consensus of industry opinion: "Netscape's Diminishing Role as an Internet Superstar."

But Netscape's star has regained some of its luster lately, prompting a reassessment of the outlook for the company even before Washington's decision last month to enter the browser war. The Justice Department is seeking a court order to stop Microsoft from forcing computer makers that use its Windows operating system to also use its Internet Explorer browsing program. A federal court will probably not rule on the matter for months, yet the impact of the Justice move, if any, may be to slow Microsoft's advance in the browser market.

Yet even without Washington's help, Netscape has recently shown more staying power than the industry skeptics thought possible. Last month, for example, Netscape reported strong third-quarter financial results, with both revenues and profits rising 50 percent, silencing worries that the company's growth was stalling.

"Netscape has held up remarkably well, better than a lot of people expected, myself included," said David M. Smith, an Internet software specialist at the Gartner Group, a research firm.

Still, life is always risky for an upstart leader in a young market that the Microsoft mothership in Redmond, Wash., is determined to rule. Many other companies, to be sure, are up against Microsoft in segments of the Internet software market, including Sun Microsystems, Oracle, IBM and Novell. They are all partners with Netscape in various ways in an informal "anybody-but-Microsoft" camp. But Microsoft's other major competitors are older, bigger and diversified, benefiting from the ballast of other businesses.

As a pure Internet company, Netscape does not enjoy those advantages. That is why the fast-growing, profitable 3-year-old has seen its stock price fall by nearly 40 percent in the last year. "Microsoft depresses our stock price because we're perceived as being in its cross hairs," explained Peter Currie, an executive vice president for Netscape.

The person principally responsible for charting a course that enables Netscape to survive, even thrive, in the shadow of Microsoft is its president and chief executive, James L. Barksdale. And Barksdale, by all accounts, deserves much of the credit for Netscape's resilience to date. He has brought strategic direction and management discipline to the young company, according to industry executives and analysts, and he has proved to be a skillful salesman who can persuade button-down corporate America to buy from an Internet pioneer.

"Barksdale is the guy who adds adult credibility to what would otherwise be a band of techies," said Richard Shaffer of Technologic Partners, a research firm.

In some ways, Barksdale is an unlikely software executive. At 54, he is twice the age of many of his employees. A Southerner, born and raised in Jackson, Miss., he is laconic of speech, fond of homespun one-liners populated by snakes, dogs, chickens and country porches — known as Barksdaleisms at Netscape. His is not a personal style familiar to the software business, a hyperkinetic industry where people typically try to win arguments by simply talking faster than anyone else.

Barksdale, however, has spent most of his career on the sober side of the software business — buying it instead of selling it, using it instead of creating it. He is probably best known for his 13 years at Federal Express Corp. where he rose to become chief operating officer, serving as the principal architect of the computerized tracking and delivery system so critical to the company's success.

"Jim Barksdale's great strength is in understanding the uses of technology," said Frederick W. Smith, the chairman of Federal Express. "He's not a technologist, but a manager who is technologically literate."

Friends and colleagues describe Barksdale as a brilliant and charismatic leader. While traveling with Barksdale recently, L. John Doerr, a leading venture capitalist in Silicon Valley and a director of Netscape, said: "Fedex drivers would see him on the street, come over and give him a high five. He's inspired great loyalty wherever he has been. He is one of the great business leaders of America."

In a leadership gesture not lost on his team, Barksdale cut his own salary to $1 this year, explaining that the company could do better things with the money.

Barksdale, of course, is also an intense, relentless competitor. To his rivals at Microsoft, the clearest evidence of Barksdale's no-holds-barred approach is Netscape's legal strategy. He constantly tells his workers that the company must rely only on its success in the marketplace, but Barksdale has prodded Washington to take antitrust action against Microsoft.

The Netscape campaign, according to Nathan Myhrvold, chief technology officer of Microsoft, resembles a "Nixon-era dirty tricks team."

"Don't believe this notion that Barksdale is some gracious Southern gentleman," Myhrvold added. "That's nonsense."

Barksdale understandably takes a different view of his company's antitrust appeals. "Microsoft is a great company," he said, "and it would be even better if it did it legally."

RURAL: Debate at the virtual drug store

ure out is that our locale is beginning to turn into a bedroom community for the commuters between Richmond and D.C.... It's a pretty piece of woodland with lots of deer and turkey in it. I'd hate to see someone build on it and ruin the habitat for those animals."

"Yeah, and in Jackson Hole, Wyo., the billionaires are shoving out the millionaires," another complainer added, "who are making their way down to Pinedale, Wyo., driving up prices, and making it impossible for me to build the house of my dreams there, which just a few years ago was within the realm of possibility! Sorry, I just needed to get this out!"

City slickers can rebut, of course. But there aren't any newsgroups promoting the lifestyle of the urban free-fire zone, elevated train noise, soot and smoke, so convenient to opera and museums. But if there were, the contributors would ask why some porch muffin should be the last guy allowed to spoil a patch of wilderness.

The urbanites can expect some opposition. One country dweller is plotting to post convincing signs saying something like "Toxic Waste Disposal Area," at least until he can talk up his Plan B.

Plan B involves getting the government to declare a forest protection system, similar to the the federal witness protection program, so the FBI and marshals service will tenderly protect the deer and turkeys as they do the former contract killers.

Well, not every suggestion in misc.rural is a barnburner, you should pardon the expression. What's important is that they have a place to talk, like the chat around the pot-bellied stove down at the general store.

Of course country residents have always had that, but in the cyber equivalent there is no stove and no store, just the conversation.

CWEB: JobWeb allows prospects to research potential employers

address: http://www.infoseek.com/Careers/Find_an_ideal_job/Job_interview_tips?svN4.

This page is simply a list of hot links that will take you to sites on the Web that offer information on job interviews. Since interview tips differ greatly based on the type of job you're seeking (folks interviewing for a job as head of a company's computer technology division and graduates looking for a first job have different needs), that sort of diversity is important.

Now that you have the preliminaries out of the way, it's time to start searching for a job. You'll need more than one Internet site (and, of course, you'll want to pursue the traditional sources of newspaper classified ads and word of mouth), since you'll want as many leads as possible during the early days of your search.

We'll start at a site called JobWeb — linking jobs, job seekers and job-search information at http://www.jobweb.com/. This is a good source since it offers more than job listings. It also has links that will help you research potential employers, links that take you to sites maintained by human resources professionals and links that offer still more search tips.

There's also an online magazine devoted to information for job seekers and another that provides news stories about employment trends.

The next site, called JobHunt: On-Line Job Meta-List at http://www.job-hunt.org/, does a great job of segregating jobs according to the type of industry or skill needed. You'll also find links to job search groups representing academia, government and other special employers.

Just to be clear, the Web is filled with job-listing sites; these are only a sample. If you are a specialist in a specific field, you'll want to search out sites that are devoted to that profession. And when you search, remember that some of the best job information is found on pages that don't promote themselves as job-listing sites. The home page for a professional group may well include job listings, too.

Finally, if you don't know exactly what kind of job that you want, you'll find tips on matching your skills and a job at a page that contains the online edition of the classic book "What Color is Your Parachute." It's located at http://washingtonpost.com/parachute.

LEGAL: Computers unable to discern human inflections

by the idea. "It sounds like it would make legal practice more fun — get rid of the drudgery," said Ronald Dworkin, a professor of law and philosophy at New York University and a professor of jurisprudence at Oxford University.

"But I guess what I'd insist on is that this is all limited by the fact that the law is essentially imaginative and interpretive," he added. These qualities, he said, "can't be programmed, no matter how sophisticated the programming techniques."

Wendy Gordon, a law professor at Boston University, said she was concerned that a computer, unlike a human, could not perceive voice quality, facial expressions and other cues that signal confusion or ambiguity.

And Robert Sheehan, executive partner at Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom, said: "The most advanced cutting edge of the law is always where you're able to take a set of facts and come up with a novel idea." Software, he said, "won't be creative."

But those who work in artificial intelligence say that to the extent that law relies upon tightly woven arguments supporting precedent and well-defined rules, it can be a perfect template for artificial intelligence.

That is because the fields best suited for artificial intelligence are the highly mathematical ones that have "very little subjectivity in them, like chess," said Edwina Rissland, professor of computer science at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and president of the International Association for Artificial Intelligence and the Law.

The fields that lend themselves least to artificial intelligence, she added, are those "in which it's very hard to pin down the meanings of the words."

Probably much harder than law, she added, "would be things like politics and further still would be something like psychiatry."

Professor Rissland said that research into the use of artificial intelligence in legal contexts had divided into two general categories.

In the first, rule-based reasoning, the computer uses if-then statements to move from facts to conclusions or from possible conclusions to supporting facts. In the second, case-based reasoning, experience from previous, analogous cases is applied to solve new problems.

> 'Probably much harder than law would be things like politics and further still would be psychiatry.'
> — Edwina Rissland, computer science professor, Univ. of Massachusett

Professor Rissland, in more than a decade of research, pioneered computerized case-based reasoning and constructed a system that meshed the two forms of reasoning.

Frederic Parnon, a lawyer, ran across Professor Rissland's work in 1995 when he decided to devise software systems that could perform legal functions. He later founded Jnana, which developed the Virtual Patent Advisor.

Professor Rissland has served as an adviser and occasional consultant on Jnana's virtual advisers, though she has no financial stake in the project.

After spending two years creating the underlying technology for the systems, Jnana approached large corporations and asked them to support development of applications addressing specific legal concerns in exchange for favorable licensing terms.

In trying to identify a prospective client for a new technological product, Parnon said, "You have to get this confluence of someone who's enlightened, who has a business problem to solve; then there's a fit."

GE was the first large company to sign on. Several other companies are considering participation in other adviser systems.

Parnon said that a telecommunications company, which he would not identify, was working with Jnana to develop a system to advise managers about human resources. A major legal-research company, he said, is interested in software that will query legal researchers about facts, search data bases and send researchers to the appropriate areas of the law.

Parnon declined to provide details of the development costs or licensing terms. But companies that have not participated in development would pay for the software at an annual cost equivalent to the salary of a junior lawyer.

But even artificial-intelligence experts acknowledge its inherent weakness. "It's hard for a good lawyer to come up with novel, inventive arguments," Professor Rissland said, "and it will be even harder for a machine to do so — probably."

Defying a juggernaut, Netscape looks for place in Microsoft's world

By Steve Lohr
N.Y. Times News Service

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. — Around Netscape's corporate campus here in Silicon Valley, the company's big rival to the north is sometimes referred to as the "Chinese army" — an adversary with seemingly limitless troops. In terms of money and manpower, head-to-head comparisons of Netscape Communications Corp. and Microsoft Corp. are a misnomer. "Our nose is firmly pressed against Microsoft's shin," one Netscape executive said.

Until recently, the company that fueled the Internet revolution appeared to be in decline, withering under Microsoft's assault. Netscape's share of the market for Internet browser software was falling and experts predicted further sharp losses to Microsoft. Business magazines from Fortune to Red Herring questioned Netscape's ability to compete, if not survive. In August, the Aberdeen Group, a research firm, published a report with a title that captured the consensus of industry opinion: "Netscape's Diminishing Role as an Internet Superstar."

But Netscape's star has regained some of its luster lately, prompting a reassessment of the outlook for the company even before Washington's decision last month to enter the browser war. SATURDAY, NOV. 15, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 15, 1997:
Maturity is needed in this complicated year. There will be times when you feel that an emotional meltdown is imminent. Think before you speak, and watch what you put in writing. Luck and a helpful attitude will take you where prodding or arguments will not. Family and friends are endeared to you, even when you lose your temper now and then. Still, don't push your luck. If you are single, you might find yourself falling in love every other week. If attached, listen as much as you talk, and allow for equality in your relationship. GEMINI can be unnerving.

BORN TODAY
Actor Ed Asner (1929), singer Petula Clark (1932), former TV judge Joseph Wapner (1919)

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ Combativeness is unnecessary; you will get what you want, regardless of what you say. Someone disagrees but is only giving you a run for your money. He knows you're right! A neighbor gets on your nerves; you don't have to have the last word. Tonight: Take time alone.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Expect a problem if you are seeking a loan or paying a bill; a mistake is likely to happen. You will resolve it quickly, though. If you don't want to be called into work at the last minute, unplug your phone. Tonight: You are nowhere to be found!
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ There isn't a battle of wits you can't win; timing is exceptional. Still, expect another to try to dethrone you from the top of the heap. You don't have to worry, as long as you don't engage in an ego-driven confrontation. Keep everything light. Tonight: You can't stop laughing!
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Take a low-key approach to the day; there is plenty of time later in the weekend to involve yourself. Today is great for pampering, resting and enjoying. Someone wants to entice you to come out when you feel a bit tired. Catch up with him later. Tonight: Get extra ZZZs.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ A friend puts your resolve to the test. Why should you get involved? Your strength and ideas stand on their own. Refuse to be swayed by another's weak attempt to upset you, thinly disguised as repartee. Tonight: Chat away on the Internet.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ A co-worker makes a demand you find insulting. You could be taking it too personally. If you want to help, then do; if you don't, be gracious about it. Don't burn bridges. You won't want to grovel to get back in that person's good graces. Tonight: Expect a surprise.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Energy and popularity are high. Everything you say entertains and inspires; others applaud your cleverness. Don't hide your light; this is your time to shine. Luck, opportunity and camaraderie combine perfectly. Tonight: Keep the good times rolling!
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Most of what you hear falls under the heading of "more information than you needed to know"! Rather than cutting off another, go within. You may not agree with the way someone expresses himself, but you know that he is basically good. Tonight: Take it easy.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You and a partner bump heads in a good-natured way; keep it light and you'll laugh the day away. If single, someone catches your eye as you run errands. Appreciate another for his differences; don't require him to be like everyone else. Tonight: Ask out a new friend.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ A friend approaches you with an enticing moneymaking opportunity. Still, for some reason, you might not want to jump on it yet. Investigate it thoroughly, and take your time. When it all falls into place, you'll wonder why you waited! Tonight: Work the angles.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ The blush of romance indelibly covers your face; you can't get enough of the love and laughter an admirer provides. This could be as close to made in heaven as it gets! Take off on an adventure together. No telling what you'll find! Tonight: You know how to wow them!
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ The active chatter and air of discord might be too much for you to handle. You deserve peace, so seek it. Of course, that could be easier said than done. Nevertheless, assert your right to do as you please. Tonight: Rent a video.

Oprah denies report she's planning to help Payton, Jordan buy Bears

CHICAGO — Maybe someone with lots of money will help Walter Payton buy the Chicago Bears and fulfill his wish to be the first black owner in the National Football League. But Oprah Winfrey says it won't be her.

Her company, Harpo Productions, issued a statement Friday denying a report in the Chicago Sun-Times that Winfrey was among a group including Payton and Michael Jordan that wants to buy the team.

In any case, the team is not for sale, Bears spokesman Brian Harlan said Friday. He added: "There is no indication that the team will be for sale in the foreseeable future."

Payton, the NFL's career rushing leader, does want to buy a football team but would need substantial financial backing. Financial World magazine recently estimated the value of the Bears at $204 million, while Crain's Chicago Business put Payton's income at $3 million a year.

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Hootie and the Blowfish have settled a $150 million lawsuit by a music promoter who claimed he discovered the band and then was left in the dust when Hootie hit it big.

The terms, agreed upon Monday, were not disclosed.

Lawyers said it was cheaper to settle than to go to trial.

Henry Neuman claimed in the 1996 lawsuit that he discovered the band while serving as host of a talent showcase that Hootie won five years earlier in Rock Hill, outside Charlotte, N.C.

Hootie and the Blowfish have settled a lawsuit by a music promoter who says he discovered the band.

The band signed a contract with Neuman as personal manager for three years, starting in 1991.

Neuman claimed he was pressured into signing a release after Hootie struck gold in 1994 with "Cracked Rear View," which sold more than 14 million copies — the second-biggest debut album in history.

PEMBROKE PINES, Fla. — An actor who played an HIV-infected character on "The Guiding Light" is using himself as Exhibit A when it comes to the dangers of unsafe sex.

Scott Fried, who played Bart on the CBS soap opera two years ago, told students at Broward Community College on Wednesday night that he contracted the AIDS virus almost a decade ago.

"I got infected the first time I had unsafe sex," said Fried, who lives in New York. "If that scares you, good."

LOS ANGELES — "Leaving Las Vegas" star Elisabeth Shue has given birth to her first child.

Miles William Guggenheim was born Tuesday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said Shue's publicist, Stephen Huvane.

The Oscar-nominated actress is married to Davis Guggenheim, who has directed episodes of "NYPD Blue," "ER" and "Party of Five."

Her latest role is in Woody Allen's "Deconstructing Harry," which comes out Dec. 12.

Elisabeth Shue has given birth to her first child.

SALT LAKE CITY — A chance to work in his home state persuaded Donny Osmond to don his Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat once again.

The 39-year-old Osmond, who lives in Provo, retired from the Tim Rice-Andrew Lloyd Webber musical "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" last year after playing Joseph in a five-year world tour.

Lloyd Webber wanted Osmond to appear in a videotaped version. Osmond, whose wife, Debbie, is expecting their fifth child in March, would not go on the road again but was willing to do a five-week run in Salt Lake at the University of Utah. It begins Jan. 15.

BARCELONA, Spain — They were whistling at the Spice Girls, all right — booing and whistling.

Hundreds of people at the Prisa publishing group's Onda entertainment award ceremony booed the five popular British pop divas off the stage Thursday after they refused to allow pictures to be taken while they performed.

The band cited a contract clause in demanding that all photographers leave the concert hall. When the shutterbugs refused, the band demanded they put their cameras down and made many of them pledge not to transmit or publish pictures of the performance. Their set finished and the booing started.

The Onda prize was given in recognition of the band's contributions to music.

Fall Festival proceeds to go toward new church at St. Stephens

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

What lies ahead for parishioners at St. Stephens is a tough task, but one that will likely bring a gratifying conclusion. Just 10 days after receiving an OK from Bishop Michael Pfiefer, fund raising efforts at the church will kick into high gear in order for the church to meet its goal of occupying a new sanctuary by Easter Sunday, 2000.

Individual gifts from parishioners have been coming in for some time and the church's annual main fund raiser is today on the church grounds. In years past, the fundraiser has been a chili supper. A chili-less chili supper was proposed but failed to raise sufficient interest. As a result, today from 2-8 p.m. parishoners and friends of the church will host the first St. Stephen's Fall Festival.

The schedule of events includes:

- 2 p.m.: Country Store opens. The store will remain open until all items are sold.
- 3-7 p.m.: Turkey bingo.
- 4-8 p.m.: Dinner.

A cake walk and youth games will be operating throughout the festival and a gold raffle begins at 7:30 p.m.

BBQ plate tickets are $5 for adults; $3.50 for kids 12 and under. Menu items consist of beef, chicken or sausage; beans and coleslaw.

After serving at St. Elizabeth Ann Seton in Odessa since its establishment in 1981, Fr. Jim Bridges has been parish priest at St. Stephen's since July 1996.

"We began last January asking the bishop if we could move toward completing our parish plan, which includes a new church building," Fr. Bridges said. "He was fairly encouraging, but he said we would have to remove the debt of the all-purpose building we have used as our church."

Now, the church is in the process of raising half the total building cost so actual construction can begin.

In the time since Fr. Bridges has arrived at St. Stephens, the parish community has grown from 400 to 620.

"The people here minister more to me and my spiritual needs than me to them," Fr. Bridges said, who added that parishioners have responded generously to fund raising requests, "because they want to help pave the way for a new church."

The building committee has been in existence for three months, working while waiting for the bishop's go ahead.

Building committee members include Pat Brazan, Andy Sustaita, Linda McBride, Doxie Watson, Dorothea Logan, Elizabeth Long, Joe Kiowski, John Curtis, Melissa Torres, Cindy Shropshire, Domingo Carrizales, Bob Leibrecht, Tim Repman, Mary Louise Hunt, Sheila Payne and Ernest Ramirez. James Tom serves as the committee's financial advisor.

In the time since Fr. Bridges has arrived at St. Stephens, the parish community has grown from 400 to 620.

The current building at 4601 Neely is really designated as an all-purpose building, but it has served as the only building the church has ever had, until the new sanctuary is completed.

Although the Fall Festival, when it was known as the chili supper, is the church's parish fund raising "event" of the year, other efforts are vital.

"When building a building, major fund raising is when you have large gifts," Fr. Bridges said. "When you have to raise hundreds of thousands of dollars, gifts are like drops of rain, but sometimes you have really large clouds."

The main thrust of funding for new church buildings, Fr. Bridges said, comes when a design is submitted and approved by the building committee. But with the Fall Festival, the general public's support is sought after, too.

"We've had an annual chili supper for the last 15 years and we've had a country store, auctions, a lot of events and our gold raffle," Fr. Bridges said. "We depend on the public. The public is invited to attend and buy things from our country store and the arts & crafts."

Hope.

There's Plenty To Go Around.
Wouldn't it be great if we went through life without any problems? Well, that's not the way things are. We all struggle. But there is a way to face whatever comes along with peace, and with confidence.
We're your neighbors, the people of The Lutheran Church–Missouri Synod, and we invite you to celebrate with us that special hope and peace that Christ alone can bring.

180th anniversary

On the eve of Nov. 12, the Baha'i Community of Midland joined millions of Baha'is around the world in observing the 180th anniversary of the birth of Baha'u'llah, prophet founder of the Baha'i Faith.

Unique to the 180th celebration in the United States is the inaugural election of regional councils, a new element of Baha'i administration between the local and national levels. The four councils will be formed in the northeast, southern, central and western area of the county in response to the increasing needs of an expanding Baha'i community. The anniversary of the birth of Baha'u'llah was chosen for the elections because of the date's special significance to Baha'is.

Baha'u'llah, whose given name was Mirza Husayn-Ali, was born into Persian nobility in Tehran, Iran, in 1817. His followers are known as Baha'is.

His teachings center on the oneness of God, the oneness of religion and the oneness of humankind.

"Baha'i's teachings also include the urgent need for the elimination of prejudice of all kinds and creation of a world federal system of government to establish and maintain universal peace," said a release from Lisa Schaffer-Harris, member of the local spiritual assembly of the Baha'is here.

"The Baha'i Faith now stands as the second most widely spread world religion after Christianity with members in more than 200 countries, territories and islands," the release said.

Around 133,000 Baha'is reside in the United States.

- What if my physician prescribes care for a few weeks and find I need someone for more or less time?
- I understand you screen your caregivers. What does this entail?
- How do I keep abreast of my health status–from nurse or via the doctor?
- Who continues to be responsible for the care of the patient?

Shark Shootout

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Peter Jacobsen and John Cook carded a 10-under-par 62 Friday under the alternate-shot format to take a three-stroke lead in the $1.1 million Shark Shootout.
The teams of John Daly-Fuzzy Zoeller, Brad Faxon-Lee Janzen and Mark Calcavecchia-Andrew Magee completed the first of three rounds at 65.
Scott McCarron-Bruce Lietzke and Scott Hoch-David Duval were next at 68. Defending champions Jay Haas and Tom Kite were eight shots off the pace at 70.
Rounding out the field at 71 were the teams of tournament host Greg Norman-Steve Elkington, Lanny Wadkins-Craig Stadler and Chip Beck-David Frost.
On Friday, each player hit a drives, with the better selected as the spot for the second shot. The player whose drive wasn't selected hit the second shot, and the players alternate shots until the ball is holed.
"This is definitely the scariest format to play in this competition," Jacobsen said. "You just hate to hit a bad shot and leave your partner with a difficult shot."

Sandies send Lee home early

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

AMARILLO — On a night better suited for the hockey playoffs, the Midland Lee Rebels made an early exit from the 1997 state football playoffs, falling in bi-district to the Amarillo High Golden Sandies, 24-7, on the snow-covered Dick Bivins floor.

LEE
Midland Lee 7
Amarillo High 24

It was a day where the odds seemed to go against Lee from the very beginning, beginning with a trip on icy roads. The Lee band and other support groups were left at home as game time temperatures dropped to 17 degrees with a wind chill factor of minus-10 at times.

On top of that, the Rebels had to play without starting fullback Stacy Jones, who couldn't go on a bad ankle and many of the team members were trying to play with the flu on a night that should only be reserved for Christmas Eve.

Lee coach John Parchman wouldn't use the weather factor as an excuse although the Rebels' vaunted running game became little more than an exercise in futility.

"We just couldn't move the ball very well," Parchman said. "We really missed Stacy Jones. The others came in and tried hard, but Stacy is really a big part of our offense. We have no excuses. The weather was just as bad for them as it was for us, and when the wind died down early in the game, it just wasn't that bad as far as the cold was concerned. There was a huge footing problem out there, however."

Lee ended its season at 5-5 after a roller coaster season of ups and downs.

"This team showed a lot of character this year, coming back and getting into the playoffs and I hope that isn't lost on this group," Parchman said. "They deserve a lot of credit for that."

For Amarillo High coach Larry Dippel, it was a big monkey off his back as he saw his team climb to 9-2 and a date next Saturday against El Paso Irvin in the area round at the Sun Bowl in El Paso.

"We finally beat a Midland Lee team," said Dippel, who now owns a 2-5-1 record against the Rebels in the playoffs. "We got some big plays in the snow that just might not have happened on a regular turf. There is just no way you can predict how a game like this will go. Lee takes a 7-6 lead on us and we come right back with a long punt return to take the lead back. That was big for us."

As one would expect, the game on the frozen tundra turned into two teams juking it out until a break came along. Amarillo High got four huge breaks and cashed in.

Stanton gets by bi-district

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

LAMESA — Stanton High proved in Friday night's Region I—2A bi-district game against Shallowater that it doesn't matter how often you have the football, but what you do with it when you have it.

Shallowater ran 14 offensive plays before the Buffaloes ever made an offensive snap — and the Mustangs trailed by seven points. For the game, Shallowater ran 20 more offensive plays than Stanton and gained six more yards offensively, matching the number of points the Mustangs put on the board.

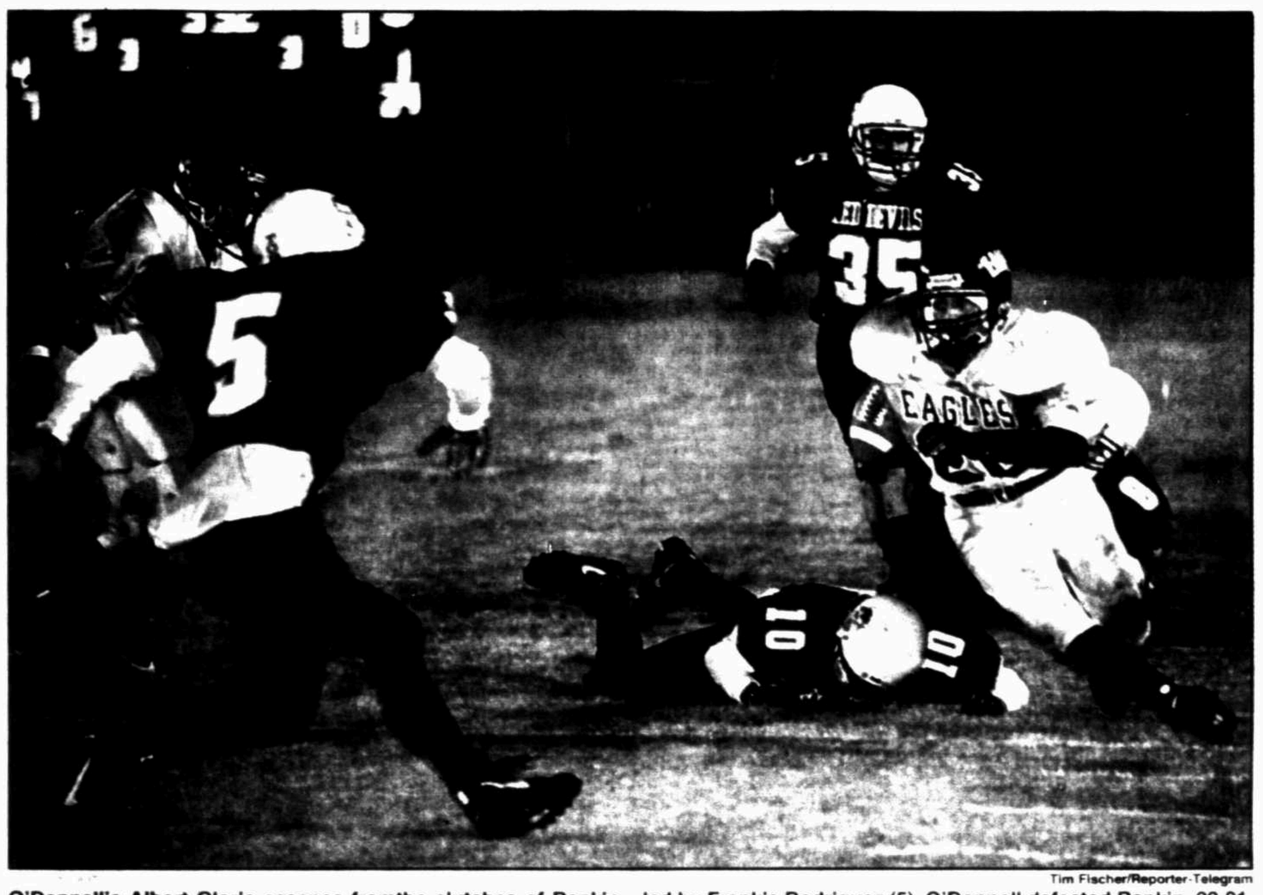

By the time Shallowater put those points on the board, the game might as well have been decided. The Buffaloes simply broke the backs of the Mustangs with their early big play capability and coasted to a 35-6 win at Tornado Stadium, which not only kept their record perfect at 11-0, but exacted revenge for last season's thrilling, yet heartbreaking, 32-31 loss to Shallowater in the first round.

"It felt so bad last year in the locker room after the last game," said Stanton quarterback Kyle Herm, who accounted for four touchdowns via three different methods against Shallowater.

It was appropriate that on the first score, it was Herm and another Buffalo who were part of last year's disappointing loss who struck the first blow against the Mustangs (5-6).

Shallowater had moved prudently on the opening drive of the game, picking up three first downs and putting the ball in Stanton territory while eating up the

Rangerettes advance into regional final

Staff Report

LUBBOCK — The Greenwood Rangerette volleyball team continued its longest playoff run in the program's seven-year history, advancing to the Region I-3A finals after a 15-9, 15-10 win over Clifton Friday night at Monterey High School.

Greenwood (29-6) advances to play Aledo at 11 a.m. today to decide who goes to the state's Final Four.

"It was a great team effort," Greenwood coach Patti Purser said. "Clifton was a good team, and we were behind in each game. It could've easily gone to three games. We absolutely needed to play well because they had us back on our heels. We adjusted real well and our passing was on tonight. It was awesome!"

Junior Mandy Choat led the team with 10 kills while senior Karen Gasch fired down seven. The two also combined for seven blocks. Sophomore Stephanie

O'Donnell knocks off Rankin

By Tom Ruiz
MRT Correspondent

The sleet that came down in the first half, grounded the O'Donnell Eagles offense in its Class 1A bi-district game against the red hot Rankin Red Devils.

But the Eagles, 7-4, were cleared for takeoff in the second half and overcame a 21-6 deficit to rally for a 22-21 upset win over the 10th-ranked Red Devils at Midland Memorial Stadium Friday night.

The Red Devils, winners of nine consecutive games going in and who a week before had knocked off then top-ranked Wink, were out to prove that its win over the Wildcats was not a fluke.

The Red Devils, who end the season at 9-2, displayed that demeanor early by racing out to a 21-6 halftime lead. Rankin could've easily been up 28-6, had a 95-yard game opening kickoff return by Frankie Rodriquez had been nullified because of a holding penalty.

Led by Ricky Guadarrama's first-half touchdown runs of 24 yards and one yard and James Gaines' 30-yard scoring run off a fumble, Rankin looked to be in the driver's seat.

"We played hard, but we didn't get it done when we had to," said a disappointed Rankin coach Greg Althof.

The Eagles, however, came out like gangbusters in the second half.

The Eagle defense held Rankin all four times it touched the ball, while O'Donnell offense led by Felix Perez, who slipped and slid for 117 yards, went on two time-consuming drives.

The first TD drive used up almost five minutes of the clock as the Eagles went 51 yards on 10 plays. Perez capped off the drive with a diving catch of a five-yard pass from Manny Gutierrez in the corner of the end zone to cut the lead to 21-14 in the third quarter.

"The kids worked hard all year long and they executed well in the second half," said O'Donnell coach Kurt Ashmore.

The momentum of the touchdown began to de-ice the sleet off the Eagles' high flying offense. Minutes later, O'Donnell went on another sustained drive that went from its 42 to the Rankin seven-yard line. The only thing that kept them out of the end zone was a determined Red Devils' defense.

Early in the fourth quarter, the Eagles again put together a nine-play, 56-yard

Midland College's Banks signs with Tech

Staff Report

Midland College Chaparral basketball players Jevon Banks and Harold Arceuneaux are heading to Division I colleges after this year.

Banks, a 5-10 freshman guard from Las Vegas, Nev., signed with Texas Tech on Friday, while Arceuneaux, a 6-5 sophomore forward from New Orleans, La., signed to play with Weber State.

In four games played with the undefeated Chaps, Banks is averaging 7.5 points, 1.8 assists and two rebounds per game. He is shooting an average of 40 percent from the field and 37.5 percent from 3-point range.

"Jevon is very athletic and has the ability to play either the (point or shooting) guard," Tech coach James Dickey said. "He is an explosive offensive player who has great quickness and who will be an excellent defender."

Banks was a standout at Valley High School where he averaged 17.5 points, 6.1 rebounds, 5.0 assists and 5.0 steals.

He joins Lamesa senior center Andy Ellis and Tyler Junior College forward Brodney Kennard in choosing Tech during the early signing period, which ends Wednesday.

Due to disciplinary reasons, Arceuneaux has played in only one game this season for MC. In the 96-78 win over Kirtland Air Force Base, Arceuneaux scored six points. Before coming

Odessa High earns first playoff victory since '53

By Stewart Doreen

ODESSA — On a Friday night when the bitter cold and wet elements made playing football a nightmare, Odessa High's dream season continued with a 15-3 Class 5A Big School bi-district win over Lubbock Coronado in Ratliff Stadium.

The victory snapped a two-game losing streak, but more importantly, gave "Big Red" its first playoff win since 1953.

"I'm happy to still be going," OHS coach Randy Quisenberry said. "I think it was important for a lot of people to get the first playoff win. It feels good, and I can't tell you how proud I am of the players. They never gave up."

"This is a bunch of hard workers," said linebacker Chad Webster of extending this magical season. "(Past OHS teams) haven't had the coaching and hard workers that we have, and it's paying off for us. We knew it would be hard, but didn't want it to stop."

The Bronchos (8-3 overall) defeated Coronado for the second time this season. They did so thanks to a defensive effort that held Coronado to just 49 yards rushing as a team. More importantly, they held Coronado's Tyson Taylor, who came into the game as the eighth leading rusher in Class 5A with 1,685 yards, to 50 yards on 24 carries. It was Taylor's worst outing of the season. Taylor's previous low (71 yards on 24 carries) came the last time OHS and Coronado met in the third week of the season.

"We heard a bunch of talk about him being injured and not playing his best game," Quisenberry said. "We showed it was not a fluke."

Quisenberry pointed specifically to a series in the third quarter when the Bronchos held Coronado to a 22-yard field goal by Andy McDannels after the Mustangs had first-and-goal at the three-yard line and second-and-goal at the one.

New Mexico pounds new-look Jacks, 10-3

By Ted Battles
MRT Correspondent

ODESSA — Odessa's Jackalopes face El Paso's Buzzards at 7 p.m. today in the Ector County Coliseum — not exactly a treat to be savored after New Mexico turned the Jacks' Shack into a house of horrors Friday.

Perhaps the less said about that game the better. It was bad enough, but not as bad as the scoreboard made it out to be. When the dust of the debacle settled, the lights on the board read "54-3".

It only seemed like it. New Mexico won, but only 10-3, stretching the Jacks' winless string to 10 games.

Todd Marcellus, who turned the hat trick with three goals and two assists, flashed the red light 3:05 into the game on a power play and added another power play goal 12:43 into the first period.

Sylvain Naud made it 3-0 at 12:43, also on a power play.

The Scorpions struck again at 1:02 of the second period on Craig Hamelin's goal for a 4-0 lead before Odessa's Matt Johnson scored a minute and 23 seconds later on an assist from Derek Pajot.

Marcellus added his third goal seven minutes into the period for a 5-1 lead and Naud added his 14th goal of the season, scooping up a loose puck and walking in on goalie Evgny Ryabchickov, one of 10 new players added by the Jacks since they last played at home.

Despite a Jacks goal by Paul Fioroni, another new hand, New Mexico led 7-2 at the end of the second period.

Although the new players didn't halt the Jacks' tailspin, they showed the muscle that coach Joe Clark is seeking to add. The Jacks didn't win the game, but bloodied some noses in a series of rousing fights.

In fact, that might have been one reason attempts to chat with Marcellus after the game were thwarted.

It was 10-2 when Sami Laine added the Jacks' third goal 18:50 into the third period.

Some 3,900 fans opted for the warmth and comfort of WPHL action over the opportunity to suffer frost bite in some football stadium on the first playoff Friday.

It's obvious that it is going to take time to blend the new players into a cohesive, functional unit. The Jackalopes that started the season probably would have done well on the Olympic-sized rinks Clark became accustomed to in his years coaching in Scandinavia. On the smaller NHL-sized rinks, speed and quickness are negated by bigger players.

SLAP SHOTS: With one exception from New Jersey, all of coach Gary Unger's New Mexico players are from Canada. ..The Jacks have 10 Canadian players, five from the U.S., two from Sweden, two from Finland and a Russian goalie....Odessa concludes its three-game run with a 6 p.m. Sunday game against San Angelo....Friday's game was a parade of penalties, 12 against New Mexico and 12 against the Jacks. Five Scorpion goals came on power plays and two Odessa goals came on power plays.

Lady Chaps come back vs. Blinn at San Jacinto Classic

Staff Report

HOUSTON — The Midland College Lady Chaparrals had to bounce back both mentally and physically against Blinn College Friday night after a two-point loss to McLennan College in the San Jacinto Classic the night before.

It wasn't pretty and it wasn't easy, but the Lady Chaps beat Blinn, 69-65, to go to 3-2 on the season.

"We trailed the entire game and just didn't have enough energy on defense," said MC coach Ron Jones. "We were down until the last 7-8 minutes.

"We played good defense down the stretch and Janice Thomas got a lot of big rebounds. Candy Mitchell, even though she's playing with a hurt ankle, got in the game and played some good defense. We had to fight hard to win."

Autumn Johnson led MC (3-2) with 13 points, Fatimah Holiday added 12 and Mitchell chipped in with 11 points.

The Lady Chaps play host team San Jacinto at 3 p.m. today.

"They're a big team and seem to be much-improved over last year," said Jones about San Jacinto.

Cooper 28, Tascosa 14

LUBBOCK — Brandon Stover's return to the helm of the Abilene Cooper offense was a successful one as the senior quarterback led the Cougars to a 28-14 win over Amarillo Tascosa in the bi-district round of the Class 5A small school playoffs Friday night in Jones Stadium.

Stover, who missed the last half of the season with a broken bone in his foot, hit Mark Rau with a eight-yard touchdown pass for the first score of the game and then scored on a one-yard sneak to put Cooper up 14-7. Both TDs came during Cooper's 21-point second quarter.

Stover's return sparked the Coogs, 10-1 overall, in a game that also featured a great battle on the ground. Cooper's Robbie Johnson, who scored on runs of 14 and 77 yards, had 213 yards on the ground while Tascosa's Ricky Captain amassed 223 yards an one TD.

Cooper raises it record to 6-1 in the playoffs versus 3-5A schools. Tascosa, which is coached by former Midland High coach Doug McCutchen, is 0-7 versus 4-5A.

Cooper next will play 9-2 El Paso Soccoro, a 48-0 winner over El Paso Jefferson Friday.

MHS' Green, Lee's Ibarra earn all-district honors in volleyball

Staff Report

Two Midland volleyball players were honored with first-team spots on the 1997 4-5A all-district volleyball team.

Midland Lee senior Cecilia Ibarra and Midland High junior Niki Green were given the nod by District 4-5A coaches, each making their first appearance on 4-5A's first team.

Ibarra

Green

Ibarra has come a long way since her junior season. She played middle blocker/setter, one of the toughest combinations in the game. As hitter, Ibarra brought the ability to team with Marlo Nordt to run a quicker offense. She also provided Connie Alexander's team, which finished the season at 14-14 overall and 5-7 in district, another consistent setter.

Green earned a spot thanks to a solid all-around game. The junior setter worked the floor for the Lady Bulldogs (16-14 and 6-6) as a team leader, running the offense and serving as a vocal leader for the team. Green also showed her ability as a solid front line performer.

MHS and Lee put three more players on the second team. Along with Nordt, a sophomore setter, junior middle hitter Maurion Strambler was chosen for Lee as was junior Heidi Lange for Midland High.

Among the district's honorable mention selections were MHS' Alicia Kirk and Kyleigh Griffin and Lee's Stephanie Slaughter and Toya Clater.

Permian, who won the district championship and advanced to the region round of the Class 5A playoffs, took many of the top spots on the 4-5A list. Senior middle hitter Katrina Jordan was named the district's Most Valuable Player.

OHS: Bronchos beat Mustangs again

on the goal line was a big momentum change," Quisenberry said. "The kids just fought their guts out."

Odessa High carried a 9-0 lead to that point before the Coronado field goal. The Bronchos played and won the field position war in the first half, and it paid dividends. The first score came on a 25-yard field goal on OHS' second drive — one that started on Coronado's 25-yard line after an 18-yard Coronado punt.

The second scoring drive also started in Coronado territory — on the Mustangs' 48. The Bronchos then took the ball on an 11-play drive and ran the ball down Coronado's throat. All 48 yards of the drive, which included one third- and one fourth-down conversion, came on the ground. The final blow was a one-yard quarterback sneak behind right guard by Rick Leach.

"We knew it would come down to the line and defense," Leach said. "We have played games in unusual conditions and won all of them. We weren't going to let them come in and take this one."

Leach again capped another drive — this time from four yards out. That drive, like all the other OHS scoring drives, started inside Coronado territory.

One Broncho who also came up with a big game was running back Freddy Espinoza. The senior ran for 98 yards and was especially huge on OHS' second scoring drive with rushes of nine, 14 and 18 yards.

For the game, the Bronchos handled the cold and sloppy conditions rather well with 157 yards on the ground.

The Bronchos, who whill play the winner of today's El Paso Franklin-El Paso Montwood game, continued what has been a magical season. Before the game, Quisenberry said the conditions were eerie and something he had never seen before, and despite the fog, freezing rain and cold, his team succeeded. And for yet another time this season, history was made in Broncholand.

NOTES: The Coronado loss snaps a two-game winning streak at Ratliff. The Mustangs had defeated OHS 20-7 in the regular season last year and defeated Permian 23-7 in bi-district... The game was OHS' first home playoff game since 1953. That game was played at W.T. Barrett Stadium... It was OHS' first playoff game since 1990... OHS now leads the series 6-1 and is 12-5-1 in the playoffs.... If Franklin beats Montwood, OHS will host Franklin Friday at Ratliff Stadium. If Montwood wins, the Bronchos travel to El Paso...

LEE: Sandies end Rebels' season

(From 1C)

Ricky Hill came up with two huge plays. He broke into the clear on a 90-yard run in the first quarter for a 6-0 lead for the Sandies.

"The 90-yard touchdown really surprised me. (Johnny) Johnson got a block for me at the line and then there was no one there," Hill said. "It seemed like everything was at a standstill, waiting for something to happen and we got the big plays. That's just the way it goes sometimes."

Lee came back to take a 7-6 lead early in the third quarter when quarterback Jeremy Deramus hit tight end Brian Boyd with a 26-yard TD pass, one where Boyd broke a tackle at the 15 and strolled the rest of the way.

Deramus ended his last night as the Lee quarterback with 108 yards passing on a night when you wouldn't expect a passing attack. Boyd, also a senior, caught three passes for 61 yards in what might have been his career game as far as offensive production is concerned.

But AHS quarterback Brent Bullard also passed the 1,000-yard barrier for the season with 134 yards passing, and following Hill's 64-yard punt return, Bullard hit Johnson with a 24-yard scoring strike to put the game away at 18-7 with 2:53 left to play.

"Lee couldn't run the ball against us, and we couldn't run against them, except the one long run we made," Dippel said. "We thought going in that we would have to be able to pass some, but when the snow came, I didn't think the passing game would be that good. Both quarterbacks did a good job of throwing the ball."

Lee running back Josh Norman also played his last game, gaining only 57 yards rushing, finishing his career as the second best all-time rusher at Lee with 3,809 yards.

AHS got a late touchdown when Travis Holland intercepted a Deramus pass and returned it 61 yards for a score. Deramus still came back to guide Lee to the Amarillo four-yard line where time finally ran out on the Rebels.

The Lee defense stopped Amarillo on fourth down conversion tries three times. J.R. Norman had an interception, linebacker Tim Villegas had a couple of key stops, but it still came down to the big plays that the Sandies converted.

It was a crazy game for a crazy season.

(From 1C)

to Midland College. Arceuneaux was an Honorable Mention All-American at the College of Eastern Utah and was named league MVP and All-Region. He also set a school record for points scored in a single game with 52.

Midland College coach Pat Rafferty says the signings says a lot about this year's team.

"That's what they come here for — to get the opportunity that they didn't get out of high school," Rafferty said. "It's good that they got this decision behind them so they can concentrate not only on playing the rest of the season but also concentrate on their books.

"This tells us that there's a lot of potential for this team."

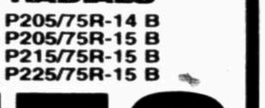

Rafferty added that there's still a possibility that 6-5 guard James Ware might also sign with Tech but still is weighing his decision.

BIG 12 GAMES TODAY

DALLAS (AP) — Here are previews of this weekend's Big 12 football games:

Texas Tech at Oklahoma State

TEXAS TECH (5-4, 4-2 Big 12 Conference) at OKLAHOMA STATE (7-2, 4-2 Big 12 Conference), 2 p.m., Lewis Field, Stillwater, Okla.

The series: The teams just missed being conference partners prior to 1996 during the course of their 24-game series, which began in 1935 with a 14-0 Red Raiders' win in Lubbock. Tech leads the rivalry 13-8-3 after last autumn's 31-3 triumph at Texas Stadium in Irving and was a Southwest Conference member from 1960-95 in football. The Cowboys belonged to the SWC from 1915-24 and later became part of the Big Eight Conference in years which exactly paralleled Tech's prior SWC status from 1960-95.

The coaches: Tech's Spike Dykes is 68-56-1 (12th season, all with the Raiders), overall, 2-1 against the Cowboys, 9-5 in Big 12 play, and 2-4 in bowls. O-State's Bob Simmons is 16-16 (third year, all with the Cowboys) overall, 0-1 vs. T-Tech, 6-8 in Big 12 battles, and 0-0 in bowls as a head coach. Dykes and Simmons both served apprenticeships at solid Division I-A programs at Texas, New Mexico and Mississippi State (Dykes) and Bowling Green, Toledo, West Virginia, and Colorado (Simmons) before accepting their current posts. Dykes was 1996 Big 12 Coach of the Year (coaches' poll) while Simmons is a candidate for the inaugural Football Writers Association of America Eddie Robinson Coach of the Year.

The teams: Things have changed drastically at both schools since the squads battled in Sept. 1996 at Texas Stadium. Oklahoma State has gone 8-2 in its last 10 games, including a 37-17 season finisher in '96 against Baylor. The Red Raiders are playing for pride and the South Division crown after disqualifying itself for 1997 postseason play.

Key individuals: Tech RB Ricky Williams stated his case for Freshman All-America honors with 25 carries for 131 yards at Texas last week. He needs 47 yards to topple Byron Hanspard's 1994 Red Raiders freshman rushing mark for a season. WR Malcolm McKenzie leads the league with 40 catches for 421 yards (4.4 grabs per game) while DE Montae Reagor (10 sacks) is a splendid pass rusher. Cowboys' QB Tony Lindsay (61-of-102 passing for 966 yards, nine TDs, 9.5 yards per attempt) paces the loop in passing efficiency at 162.6. DB Kevin Williams (six interceptions) remains atop Big 12 stats while SS Ricky Thompson (66 tackles, 38 unassisted) has been giving great run support this season.

Incidentally: Oklahoma State outgained Oklahoma in their 'Bedlam Series' for just the third time since 1949 last week with a 317-198 advantage in total offense. The Red Raiders' Dykes has been coach in five of Tech's 12 all-time victories over Texas. OSU's Kevin Williams tries to become the first defender to intercept seven passes in a season since Mark Moore in 1985. Tech is 2-2 on the road in 1997.

Texas A&M at Oklahoma

TEXAS A&M (7-2, 4-2 Big 12 Conference) at OKLAHOMA (3-7, 1-5 Big 12 Conference), 6 p.m., Memorial Stadium, Norman, Okla.

Television: Fox Sports Net (FSS) national cablecast.

The series: The Aggies and Sooners tangle for the 16th time as Oklahoma brings a 8-7 lead in a 94-year old standoff. OU won the 1903 holdiffer 6-0 before the teams met again in 1919 as A&M conquered the Sooners. Texas A&M owns positive verdicts over Oklahoma in the last two meetings, 33-16 in 1996 and 36-14 in 1994 (both at College Station). OU downed the Ags 44-14 at Norman in 1993.

The coaches: A&M's R.C. Slocum is 81-23-2 (ninth season, all with the Aggies) overall, 2-1 against the Sooners, 8-6 in Big 12 skirmishes, and 2-4 in bowls. OU's John Blake is 6-15 (second year, both at the Norman university) overall, 0-1 vs. TAMU, 4-10 in the Big 12, and 0-0 in bowls as a head coach. Slocum has qualified more Aggies teams-seven for bowls than any other Texas A&M taskmaster and has the fourth best winning rate (.774) among active Division I-A coaches. Blake has the rare distinction of playing and coaching in nine bowl games from 1979-92 as well as earning a Super Bowl ring as an assistant coach for the Dallas Cowboys and former OU coach Barry Switzer.

The teams: High-scoring matches have been the order of the day for the last nine meetings of these teams with a combined 757 points. A&M's rushing game has responded with 213 yards per game (17th nationally) while Oklahoma has the 10th best running attack in NCAA Division I-A with 228 infantry yards per bout. The Aggies have a 36-yards per-game advantage in rushing defense (147 to 183).

Key individuals: Aggies' LB Dat Nguyen has enhanced his Butkus Award candidacy with a team-leading 98 tackles (nine for losses) while punter Shane Lechler (48.1 yards per game, second nationally) is a sound candidate for the Tatupu Special Teams Award. Former non-scholarship strong safety Rich Coady (69 tackles) leads the secondary and has 21 consecutive starts at his position. OU seeks the kind of performance which produced twin 100-yard-plus rushers De'Mond Parker with 171 yards and QB Eric Moore with 141) against Baylor. Parker is the first back-to-back 1,000-yard season rusher for the Sooners since Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims in 1978-79. DT Kelly Gregg (84 tackles) steps up the middle for the Sooners.

Incidentally: Texas A&M All-America candidate kicker Kyle Bryant needs two field goals to break Tony Franklin's school career record of 56 field goals from 1975-78. The Ags' Nguyen averages 10.6 tackles per game over 32 battles. Parker's best individual rushing effort in 1997 came against another team from Texas — the UT Longhorns — in the Dr Pepper Red River Classic in Dallas with 297 yards.

Baylor at Missouri

BAYLOR (2-7, 1-5 Big 12 Conference) at MISSOURI (6-4, 4-3 Big 12 Conference), 1 p.m., Faurot Field, Columbia, Mo.

The series: The Tigers raised their edge against the Bears 4-2 after a wild, triple-overtime (longest contest in Big 12 history) win 49-42 over Baylor at Waco last fall. That was BU's first loss to Mizzou in two meetings at Waco while the Bruins defeated Missouri 27-0 at Columbia in 1972-coach Grant Teaff's first year at the Baylor helm. All BU-Missouri meetings from 1970-87 were played at Faurot Field.

The coaches: BU's Dave Roberts is 66-56-3 (11th season) overall, 2-7 (first year) with the Bears, 0-0 against the Tigers, 1-5 in Big 12 bouts, and 0-0 in bowls as a Division I-A head coach. Missouri's Larry Smith is 127-106-7 (21st season), 17-26-1 (fourth campaign) with the Tigers, 1-0 vs. the Bears, 7-8 in Big 12 tussles, and 2-5-1 in bowls. A Roberts-coached team will miss postseason play for just the second time in the last six years of his head tenures as Baylor continues the rebuilding process. Smith, the nation's 12th-winningest active NCAA Division I-A mentors in terms of victories, is in position to join Rice's Ken Hatfield as the only current taskmasters to take four different colleges to bowl berths.

The teams: Last year's evenly-matched battle was a result of solid running games and weary defenses on both teams' parts. The Tigers have added a quick-striking passing repertoire to their game plan while the Bears interject shotgun formations, irregular options and reams of other gadget plays to keep opponents off balance. The two expected starting quarterbacks have seven years of starting experience.

Key individuals: Junior SE Derrius Thompson (28 catches, 327 yards, one TD) of the Bears has been a favorite target of senior QB Jeff Watson (128-of-227 passing for 1,333 yards and just four interceptions), who plays his final career home encounter next week against Oklahoma State. CB Matt Anderson (two interceptions) has been a consistent starter. Tigers' FS Harold Piersey (95 total tackles, 2 TFL, four interceptions) and LB Barry Odom (87 stops) are a potent pair defensively. TBs Brock Olivo and Devin West have combined for 1,116 rushing yards and 14 TDs.

Incidentally: The Bears' 23-21 win over Texas represented BU's first triumph over UT since 1992 and the third victory by the Bears over the Longhorns in the 1990s. Other than Oklahoma, the Tigers have enjoyed reasonable success in their series with Nebraska as evidenced by 16 wins in 42 tries at Columbia vs. the Huskers. BU safety Rodney Smith had a career-best 19 tackles against Michigan in '97.

Kansas at Texas

KANSAS (5-5, 3-4 Big 12 Conference) at TEXAS (3-6, 1-5 Big 12 Conference), 1 p.m., Darrell K. Royal-Memorial Stadium, Austin.

The series: The Jayhawks and Longhorns meet for just the fourth time in history and for the first occasion in Austin after playing in Lawrence in 1901, 1938 and 1996. Kansas won 12-0 and 19-18 in the first two meetings before the Longhorns prevailed 38-17 at KU's Memorial Stadium last season. The Jayhawks risk their 2-1 series lead but are not newcomers to the state of Texas. KU has played in the Lone Star State 15 times since its first sojourn to TCU in Fort Worth in 1942.

The coaches: KU's Terry Allen is 80-81 (ninth campaign) overall, 5-5 (first year) with the Jayhawks, 0-0 against the Longhorns, 3-4 in Big 12 skirmishes, and 0-0 in bowls as a head coach. UT's John Mackovic is 84-63-3 (13th season) overall, 40-27-2 (sixth year) with the Longhorns, 1-0 vs. the Jayhawks, 7-7 in the Big 12, and 2-4 in bowls. Allen is getting familiar with the state of Texas after tangling with Texas Tech at Lubbock on Oct. 11 and 17-7 loss. UT's Mackovic coached for four seasons with the Kansas City Chiefs in the NFL and helped maintain a large fan base in KC suburb Lawrence.

The teams: Noted for its strength in the specialty areas, Kansas hopes for a low-scoring battle which might come down to a punt return, kickoff runback or blocked boot. Texas has played in numerous high-scoring struggles such as a 47-30 loss at Colorado and a 38-31 triumph at Rice. The Jayhawks must find a way to slow down a Longhorns' balanced offense which averages 390 yards per game.

Key individuals: Kansas DB Jamie Harris (three interceptions) teams with fellow secondaryman Jason Harris (three blocked kicks in '97) for a number of pass breakups. Fellow DB Tony Blevins (21 punt returns, 112 yards, one TD, 86 tackles) is one of several key specialty players. Longhorns' RB Ricky Williams (220 carries, 1,499 yards, 20 TDs) continues to harass opponents and leads the nation in rushing. SE Bryan White (20 catches, 247 yards) has had to shoulder part of the receiving load after a season-ending injury to Wane McGarity. Punter Mark Schultis (40.5 average) can change the direction of the field when he gets his leg into a long one.

Incidentally: Kansas' last two final games have been barn-burners, a 42-25 loss at Missouri in 1996 to close the coach Glen Mason era and a 51-30 win over UCLA in the 1995 Jeep Aloha Bowl in Honolulu to give a rude welcome to Bruins' head coach Bob Toledo. Texas leads all Big 12 schools with 37 all-time bowl appearances-most recently the 1997 Tostitos Fiesta Bowl against Penn State.

Iowa State at Nebraska

IOWA STATE (1-8, 1-5 Big 12 Conference) at NEBRASKA (9-0, 6-0 Big 12 Conference), 11:30 a.m., Memorial Stadium, Lincoln, Neb.

Television: FOX.

The series: Nebraska has a 75-14-2 advantage as the teams meet for the 92nd time Saturday. The Huskers won 49-14 at Ames, Iowa, last year, but the Cyclones have the distinction of being the last team to down the Nebraska squad in conference play. ISU, under then-coach Jim Walden, upended Nebraska 19-10 in Ames in 1992 before the Huskers began their 37-game winning streak in Big Eight and Big 12 tilts.

The coaches: Iowa State's Dan McCarney is 6-25 (third year, all with ISU) overall, 0-2 against the Huskers, 2-12 in Big 12 bashes, and 0-0 in bowls as a head coach. The Huskers' Tom Osborne is 251-49-4 (25th year, all at Nebraska) overall, 23-1 vs. the Cyclones, 14-0 in the Big 12, and 11-13 in bowl bouts. McCarney is accustomed to big games against ranked opponents from his 1972-74 playing days at Iowa (team captain in '74) and assistant coaching stints at Iowa and Wisconsin under Nebraska grad Barry Alvarez. Osborne has been associated with the Nebraska program as an assistant or head coach for 36 seasons and joined the late Bob Devaney in 1962 as an aide in making one of football's great turnarounds.

The teams: The Cyclones have been in giant-killing situations on several occasions and have come close in such encounters as a 49-42 loss at then-seventh-ranked-nationally Colorado in 1996 and 43-38 loss to the Buffs last week. Nebraska joins ISU in presenting two of the conference's top rushing attacks. The Huskers lead the nation with a 394.8 yards per game rushing average while ISU has climbed 14 places in NCAA infantry stats over the last six games.

Key individuals: LB Michael Cooper (97 stops this year, 341 career-fourth-best in ISU annals) is a steadying influence on the Cyclones' defense while freshman punter Carl Gomez (42.7 average, 36th nationally) has been a great asset. Kicker Jamie Kohl (8-of-12 in 1997 field goals) made 11 consecutive field goals during one juncture in 1996-97. Huskers' QB Scott Frost (139 carries, 852 yards, 6.1 average per carry, 14 TDs) leads all Big 12 signal callers in rushing average. All-America OG Aaron Taylor continues to clear massive holes for rushers such as yearling Correll Buckhalter (49 rushes, 290 yards).

Incidentally: The Cyclones feature just one regular from Nebraska-Omaha resident Cooper-on the '97 roster. The Huskers' steady passing game features catches this autumn by 16 different receivers. WB Lance Brown and SE Kenny Cheatham currently lead the multitude with 10 apiece. ISU's final game (and third straight telecast) of the campaign is next week against eighth-ranked Kansas State in Ames.

Colorado at Kansas State

COLORADO (5-4, 3-3 Big 12 Conference) at KANSAS STATE (8-1, 5-1 Big 12 Conference), 2:30 p.m., KSU Stadium/Wagner Field, Manhattan, Kan.

Television: ABC regional telecast.

The series: The Buffaloes hold a 38-12-1 all-time bulge in the series, which started with a 14-6 victory by Kansas State in 1912. The Buffs also have dominated the last 12 games at 11-0-1, including a bone-chilling 12-0 win in Boulder last year. K-State tied Colorado 16-16 in 1993, and the Wildcats' latest triumph was a 38-6 win in Manhattan in 1984. Colorado is 5-1-1 on its last seven visits to KSU Stadium.

The coaches: Colorado's Rick Neuheisel is 25-8 (third season, all with the Black and Gold) overall, 2-0 against the Wildcats, 10-4 in Big 12 tilts, and 2-0 in bowls. K-State's Bill Snyder is 63-37-1 (ninth season, all with the Wildcats) overall, 0-8-1 vs. the Buffaloes, 11-3 in Big 12 blasts, and 2-2 in bowls. Neuheisel possesses one of the best third-year winning percentages (.758) of any NCAA Division I-A grid boss. Snyder is the winningest coach in Kansas State history in terms of total victories and in victory rate (.629) for any Wildcats' coach with five or more years at the helm. The Colorado coach never has lost to the Wildcats while Snyder seeks his first triumph over the Buffs as a head coach.

The teams: Depending on the success or failure of both teams' defenses, the game has the trappings of a fireworks display. The Wildcats allow just 239.5 total offense yards per game-fifth nationally-while KSU is 12th in the country in scoring offense with 35.3 points each outing. The Buffaloes are second in the Big 12 in passing yards per contest with 220.7 and score 28.4 ppg.

Key individuals: DB-KR Ben Kelly of CU continues to lead the nation with a 34.6 average (19 runbacks for a school-record 658 yards, while OLB Hannibal Navies (120 tackles, 77 unassisted) is one of the nation's top defenders. FS Ryan Sutter (team-high 134 stops) is one of 16 semi-finalists for the Mosi Tatupu National Special Teams Award. Wildcats' punt return ace David Allen had a 70-yard runback for a TD against Kansas and is 16th nationally with 13.4 yards per try. Kicking specialist Martin Gramatica is a semifinalist for the Groza Award and leads the country's 43 most productive kickers with a .941 percentage on field goals (16-of-17). QB Michael Bishop (63-of-147 passing for 1,269 yards and 11 TDs) leads the Big 12 in yards per completion with 20.1.

Incidentally: Since 1989 Colorado is 5-3-2 in games when the Buffaloes have exceeded 400 yards in total offense. QB John Hessler is third in Buffaloes' career passing yards with 4,218. The Wildcats need one win to reach the nine-victory mark for the fifth consecutive season-a feat managed currently only by fellow Big 12 member Nebraska. KSU also has a sterling road record of 17-6 since 1994.

OSU coach expects Tech game to be different without Hanspard

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Last year's game against Texas Tech was painful to watch for Oklahoma State coach Bob Simmons.

A defensive coach, Simmons saw Byron Hanspard shred his players all afternoon and run for 272 yards in a 31-3 Red Raider victory.

"You've got to give some credit to Hanspard, he really made us look bad," Simmons said. "And the fact that we were young I think had something to do with it. But we didn't tackle well at all. That was really the difference in the ballgame."

Texas Tech doesn't have anyone like Hanspard now, and Oklahoma State's defense is greatly improved. There haven't been many missed tackles during this season, which continues at 2 p.m. Saturday when the teams meet at Lewis Field.

The defense helped carry No. 24 Oklahoma State to a 6-0 start, then collapsed late in two consecutive overtime losses, to Missouri and Texas A&M. The unit played well again last week, forcing six turnovers and limiting Oklahoma to 198 yards in a 30-7 victory.

The Cowboys are now plus-13 in turnovers. They have converted their 26 forced turnovers into 13 touchdowns and four field goals; last year, they scored just two field goals off forced turnovers.

"They're scary to watch because they know how to win and they do what it takes to get the job done," Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes said. "I think they've done a remarkable job."

His Red Raiders (5-4, 4-2) are tied with OSU and Texas A&M for the South Division lead. But they're playing only for pride now, since the school has said it will not play in the postseason.

That announcement came last week after the NCAA found violations in 18 areas of the Red Raiders' athletic program. Dykes said that shouldn't affect the way his team finishes the season.

"I don't think you have to have a carrot dangling at the end of the string to play good football," he said. "You sign on to play football. You play your best every time you go out, I think, irregardless of what the lure is to be successful."

The Red Raiders have won four of their past six games, with the losses coming against then-No. 1 Nebraska and Kansas State. Both of those games were competitive — 29-0 against Nebraska, 13-2 against Kansas State.

Last week, Tech gave up 465 yards but stopped Ricky Williams' streak of four consecutive 200-yard rushing games. He had just 80 on 21 carries.

"The Tech defense plays lights out. They just play hard all the time," Simmons said. "I think other than the Tennessee game where they just got outmanned, and maybe North Texas, their defense has been consistent during the majority of the season."

The Red Raiders lost both those games during a 1-2 start. But the offense has matured and the Red Raiders have done a good job of protecting the ball while getting good play from the defense.

School officials hope for a bigger crowd in Saturday's home finale than the 33,300 that then-No. 12 OSU drew for Missouri three weeks ago. Safety Maurice Simpson said the size of the crowd is no big deal to the team.

"We just try to entertain the people who do come," he said. "And if they don't want to come, then they're just missing out on a good football team."

Sooners hope to salvage season

By Owen Canfield
AP Sports Writer

NORMAN, Okla. — No. 18 Texas A&M needs a victory over Oklahoma on Saturday to keep alive its Big 12 South Division title hopes. At least publicly, coach R.C. Slocum doesn't expect an easy time getting that done.

The Aggies are playing a team that has won just three games and will be without its best offensive player, tailback De'Mond Parker. But Slocum sees enough talent on the roster to be concerned.

"When I look at them, I'm surprised that their record is not better than it is," he said. "But I know they've had some fumbles, they've had some injuries and some things like that are a little bit misleading with this team."

The Sooners (3-7, 1-5 Big 12) committed six turnovers last week in a 30-7 loss to Oklahoma State. They have 28 turnovers for the year, compared with just 10 for their opponents.

Texas A&M (7-2, 4-2) has done a much better job protecting the ball. The Aggies have turned it over a dozen times and forced 23 turnovers.

Oklahoma State coach Bob Simmons said if the Sooners play as well on defense as they did last week, and protect the ball, they have a chance to pull off the upset. Tight end Stephen Alexander, for one, agrees.

"I think as long as we can just eliminate those things and not have any penalties, I think we can have a good shot at winning," he said.

Alexander is one of 16 seniors who will be playing their final home game. Those who have been in the program four years have played for three coaches and have never had a winning season, with just 17 victories during that span.

"I just feel for the other guys, too, the rest of the senior class that have had to go through this," Alexander said. "It's been very tough for us. We've put in a lot of time and hard work, and for it not to pay off, it's just very frustrating."

Another source of frustration has been the stomach injury suffered by Parker four games ago. He has carried just 13 times since then, and may not play again this season.

Not having Parker in the lineup will make things easier for the Aggie defense, which is ranked fourth in the Big 12. But Slocum said Brandon Daniels and reserve quarterback Eric Moore are problematic.

"Both of those guys are capable of taking it all the way if you misplay them on the option or quarterback draws or quarterback counters that they run," he said.

Texas A&M has gotten good quarterback play from Branndon Stewart, who is third in the league in passing efficiency. He has completed 60 percent of his throws, with nine touchdowns and just two interceptions.

Stewart started the year sharing time with Randy McCown. Stewart played all the way against Oklahoma State two weeks ago and rallied A&M from a 22-7 deficit in the final six minutes of regulation. The Aggies won in overtime.

Last week against Baylor, he completed 18 of 25 passes for a season-high 231 yards. In the past 10 quarters, Stewart is 48-of-75 for 583 yards and five touchdowns with no interceptions.

"I feel comfortable on offense and I have a feel for what the defense is doing," he said. "I think the key for me is just the experience of last year and just playing more football."

Dallas owner talking about being assistant coach for 1998 season

IRVING (AP) — No, Jerry Jones won't be the Dallas Cowboys' next head coach. But the sheriff at Valley Ranch says he might move from his luxury owner's suite to the coaching booth by next season.

Jones told the Washington Post in a story for Friday that he sees coaching as his next great challenge.

"I won't be head coach," Jones told the newspaper. "But you will see a very involved general manager in coaching aspects."

"I'm talking about pushing it to the edge. I want to try some things that haven't been done. Sure, we'll be criticized. There'll be naysayers."

Jones said he's unclear about the timetable, but he indicated he could be assisting the Dallas coaching staff by next season.

He added that he has been moving in that direction this season, looking at game films with head coach Barry Switzer and attending staff meetings and practices.

"It's not inconceivable to me you could see in-game, weekly preparation on my part," he said. "More than likely, I might be sitting in the box with the coaches. I won't do it this year, but I see it happening in the future."

Jones, 55, already serves as his own general manager, business manager and personnel manager. He has suggested several times that coaching, even taking over as head coach, might be in his future.

Speculation about such a move has increased with criticism of Switzer, disagreement within the team about his coaching style and the Cowboys' 5-5 record this season.

As he has in the past, Jones wouldn't speculate as to Switzer's future.

"I have not answered that on a straightforward basis this season," he said. "As I'm sitting here with you now, Barry is the coach for 1998. That's a hedge. It should be a hedge."

Rose Bowl picture can clear up this weekend

By Josh Dubow
AP Sports Writer

The Run for the Roses will look a lot clearer Saturday night.

Going into this weekend, five Big Ten teams and four Pac-10 teams have shots at a Rose Bowl bid. When the final gun sounds after Saturday night's game between No. 16 Arizona State and Oregon, that number will be considerably less.

Wisconsin, Purdue, Penn State, Ohio State, Arizona State and UCLA would be eliminated with losses Saturday. Michigan, Wisconsin and Washington would go to Pasadena if they win out.

The two most important games of the weekend are No. 1 Michigan at No. 23 Wisconsin and No. 13 Washington at No. 9 UCLA. A Michigan win eliminates Wisconsin, Penn State and Purdue from Rose Bowl consideration.

The Wolverines (9-0, 7-0 Big Ten) moved into the top spot after pounding then-No. 2 Penn State 34-8 last Saturday. With No. 4 Ohio State on the horizon next week, Michigan coach Lloyd Carr wants to keep his team focused on the present.

"I think the most important thing for us to understand going into Madison is that this game is a championship game," Carr said. "If we win it, obviously, we have gained at least a tie."

Being No. 1 is new to the Wolverines, who have claimed the top spot for the first time in seven years. Michigan hasn't won a game as No. 1 since 1977 against Wisconsin. One of the Wolverines' two losses as No. 1 came to the Badgers in 1981.

AP Laserphoto

Lloyd Carr's top-ranked Michigan team can take another step toward the Rose Bowl with a win over No. 23 Wisconsin Saturday.

"This is something new, we've never been No. 1," tight end Mark Campbell said. "The guys probably don't know how to respond. We've got to basically put it out of our minds. All we can do is play Wisconsin."

The Badgers (8-2, 5-1) find themselves in the middle of the Rose Bowl picture, although a trip to Pasadena would take an upset of the heavily favored Wolverines, followed by a remarkable upset of No. 6 Penn State.

"I don't know if we're good enough to match up with the Michigans and the Penn States of the world," coach Barry Alvarez said. "But we're right there."

Washington (7-2, 5-1 Pac-10) can return to the Rose Bowl with wins against UCLA (7-2, 5-1) in Pasadena and No. 14 Washington State.

"We understand the ball is in our court," Washington QB Brock Huard said. "We also understand UCLA wants the ball very badly."

The other six teams need varying degrees of help, and considerable understanding of the two conferences' complicated tiebreaking rules, to spend New Year's in Pasadena. Ohio State coach John Cooper said all his team can do is win now and worry later.

"I think you can go crazy at this time of year worrying about that stuff," said Cooper, whose Buckeyes (8-1, 5-1) are host to winless Illinois.

The other games with Rose Bowl implications are Penn State (8-1, 5-1) at No. 19 Purdue (7-2, 5-1) and Stanford at Washington State (8-1, 5-1).

In other games Saturday, it's Wake Forest at No. 2 Florida State, Iowa State at No. 3 Nebraska, No. 5 Tennessee at Arkansas, No. 16 Auburn at No. 7 Georgia, No. 8 North Carolina at Clemson, Colorado at No. 10 Kansas State, Notre Dame at No. 11 LSU, No. 12 Florida at South Carolina, No. 17 Mississippi State at Alabama, No. 18 Texas A&M at Oklahoma, No. 21 Syracuse at Pittsburgh, No. 22 Iowa at Northwestern, Texas Tech at No. 24 Oklahoma State and Baylor at No. 25 Missouri.

UCLA brings a seven-game winning streak into Saturday's game and to stay alive needs to beat Washington. The Huskies, coming off a 31-28 loss to Oregon, haven't lost two straight regular-season games since 1989.

"They've played real well after a loss," UCLA coach Bob Toledo said. "They're going to be angry. Hopefully, we'll be just as angry."

The Bruins have faced the Huskies after they lost in each of the last two seasons, and what happened wasn't pretty — Washington beat UCLA 38-14 after losing to Oregon in 1995, and 41-21 after losing to Notre Dame last year.

"When our backs are up against the wall, we seem to fight and scrap pretty hard," said Huard, who didn't play against Oregon because of a sprained left ankle, but will start against UCLA. "It's time for us to step up. Our backs are against the wall."

Penn State is also coming off an embarrassing loss. The Nittany Lions fell four spots in the poll after the loss to Michigan — Joe Paterno's worst home loss in 32 years at Penn State. Paterno's crew needs to rebound against a Purdue team looking for its first eight-win season since 1980.

"We can't go out there with just a bunch of blood in our eyes thinking we're going to make somebody pay," Paterno said. "We've got to go out with the idea hopefully we can scratch a one-point win out of this. Purdue's good, and we're not very good right now."

Georgia, Auburn try to keep pace in SEC

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

ATHENS, Ga. — Georgia and Auburn were the dominant teams in the Southeastern Conference during the 1980s.

The Herschel Walker-led Bulldogs won three straight championships beginning in 1980. Auburn broke that streak in 1983 and closed out the decade with three titles in a row under Pat Dye.

The '90s have been different. An unbeaten Auburn team couldn't win the title in 1993 because of probation, while Georgia fell on hard times after Vince Dooley retired as coach.

On Saturday, both teams will try to remain in contention for that elusive first SEC championship of the '90s. No. 7 Georgia (7-1, 5-1 SEC) needs a victory to stay on pace with Tennessee in the East Division; No. 16 Auburn (7-2, 4-2) is part of the convoluted West Division race.

"This is definitely a lot more enjoyable," said Mike Bobo, Georgia's senior quarterback. "I thought when I came here I would go to a bowl game every year, but it didn't work out that way."

Not that Bobo is complaining. He thinks the success of this year's team is directly related to Georgia's past struggles.

"It not only made me tougher, it made the whole team tougher," Bobo said. "We've grown tighter. We depend on each other a lot more. We're not a lot of individuals. I think that's what makes us special. We are a team."

Georgia was off last week, a convenient bit of scheduling with the Bulldogs coming off a stunning 37-17 victory over Florida.

Tar Heels win for Guthridge

Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Bill Guthridge and No. 4 North Carolina got a gimme Friday night in the program's first game in 36 years without coach Dean Smith.

The Tar Heels, 28-7 and a Final Four team a season ago, dusted off Middle Tennessee State 84-56 in the program's first game without Smith as head coach since Feb. 25, 1961.

■ Top 25 Men

Shammond Williams led the Tar Heels with 17 points, while Freddie Martinez led the Blue Raiders with 10.

The Tar Heels, playing in the earliest opener in school history, recorded the victory without preseason All-American and last year's leading scorer Antawn Jamison. He is sidelined with an elbow injury and did not dress.

No. 2 Kansas 99, Santa Clara 73

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Pre-season All-America Raef LaFrentz dominated the inside with 22 points and 19 rebounds as second-ranked Kansas defeated Santa Clara.

Paul Pierce, like LaFrentz a a pre-season All-American, scored 18 points to go over 1,000 in his career as Kansas started its 100th season with a rout of the undersized and inexperienced Broncos.

No. 5 Clemson 67, North Carolina-Wilmington 50

CLEMSON, S.C. — It wasn't as flashy as last year's opener, but Terrell McIntyre charged up No. 5 Clemson with six second-half 3-pointers as the Tigers pulled away to a victory over North Carolina-Wilmington on.

The Tigers hit the college basketball jackpot in their first game a year ago, a rousing 79-71 victory over defending NCAA champs Kentucky on ESPN. It sparked them to a 16-1 start and the round of 16 in the NCAA tournament.

No. 7 South Carolina 76, Maryland 72, OT

MINNEAPOLIS — Melvin Watson's 3-pointer with 10 seconds left in overtime gave No. 7 South Carolina a win over Maryland in the first game of the Black Coaches Association Classic.

AP Laserphoto

North Carolina coach Bill Guthridge applauds his team's effort in a 84-56 win over Middle Tennessee State Friday in Chappel Hill, N.C. The game was the Tar Heels' first without Dean Smith, who retired before the season.

Watson, who forced overtime with a 3-pointer in the final minute of regulation, hit the winning shot 20 seconds after Laron Profit had given the Terrapins a 72-71 lead with a 3-pointer of his own.

No. 15 Iowa 105, Chicago State 60

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Ryan Bowen had 20 points and 11 rebounds, and freshman Dean Oliver made a successful debut at point guard as No. 15 Iowa breezed over Chicago State.

The Hawkeyes were never threatened in their season opener, opening up a 14-0 lead less than five minutes into the game and building a 47-18 halftime edge.

No. 24 Temple 59, No. 17 Indiana 53

PHILADELPHIA — Julian Dunkley scored 12 points on four 3-pointers and No. 24 Temple's determined defense forced 23 turnovers in a victory over No. 17 Indiana.

A.J. Guyton had 15 points for the Hoosiers, who were playing the earliest season opener in school history. Temple (2-0), which beat Auburn 68-42 Tuesday, had 19 steals to tie a school record.

Bulls whip Hornets with tardy Rodman

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan got his offense going early as Dennis Rodman was arriving late. Together, they led the Chicago Bulls out of a modest two-game losing streak.

Jordan shook off a shooting slump to score 28 points and a tardy Rodman hauled in 14 rebounds in 23 minutes as the Bulls hit 100 points for the first time all season, beating the Charlotte Hornets 105-92 Friday night.

Celtics 103, Raptors 99

BOSTON — Antoine Walker had 22 points and 18 rebounds and much-maligned rookie Chauncey Billups scored a career-high 22 to give Boston its second consecutive win.

Walt Williams had 25 points and 12 rebounds and Damon Stoudamire had 17 points and nine assists as the Raptors lost their fifth straight game.

■ NBA Roundup

Dana Barros scored 18 — shooting a perfect 6-for-6 from the field — as the Celtics matched their longest winning streak of last season when they won just 15 games during the worst season in franchise history.

Pacers 82, Heat 78

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored 21 points, Rik Smits added 16 and Indiana survived a fourth-quarter rally by Miami.

Miami had a chance to tie, but Terry Mills stepped out of bounds with 0.7 seconds left and the Heat trailing by three. Smits wrapped up the scoring by hitting one of two free throws with 0.3 seconds left.

Magic 103, Nuggets 85

ORLANDO, Fla. — Horace Grant scored 21 points and Bo Outlaw had 18 points and 11 rebounds to lead Orlando over winless Denver.

The Magic bounced back from an embarrassing 26-point loss to Sacramento despite playing without leading scorer Penny Hardaway, who was sidelined because of tendinitis in his left knee.

Hawks 104, Kings 103

ATLANTA — Christian Laettner scored 18 points and Alan Henderson came off the bench for 17 as unbeaten Atlanta extended the best start in franchise history.

STANTON: Buffaloes advance to area clock and keeping Stanton's offense off the field as long as possible. The Mustangs had to punt and they would take the ball back two plays later, but only after disaster struck.

A short punt into the frigid wind by Chad Schoor was fielded by Stanton's dangerous Tyron Davis at the 17-yard line, and the Shallowater punt coverage unit seemed wisely to converge on Davis as he headed to the center of the field. Problem was, they ignored Herm, who had taken a handoff from Davis and headed up the right sideline before the Mustangs realized it. Herm beat Grant Dickerson, the one Mustang who seemed to have an angle on him, and 83 yards later he was in the end zone and Stanton had a 7-0 lead.

"They saw Tyron going one way and they all pursued him real well, but when I got the ball there was no one there," said Herm, speaking like a Shallowater special teams coach who was dissecting his team's failure on the play.

It would be all that the Buffaloes would need.

Stanton got the ball back at Shallowater's 46 after a three-and-out series by the Mustangs, then got a 22-yard run by Jody Louder and a 24-yard rumble into the end zone by James Jenkins to make it 14-0. While Stanton never really appeared in danger after that, the Buffaloes never hit a rhythm offensively either.

"I thought early in the game we took it to them but then I got greedy," said Stanton coach Mark Cotton.

Instead of sticking with the basics of pounding the ball in weather less than ideal for Stanton's vaunted passing game, the Buffaloes went for the kill through the air, but without the results they wanted. On two of their next three possessions, the Buffaloes saw drive die before they could start due to interceptions.

In between the two interceptions he threw, Herm completed a 21-yard scoring pass to Davis to stretch the lead to 21-0. That was the highlight of a less than stellar passing night for Herm, who completed four of nine for 65 yards.

"The conditions had something to do with it, but I didn't throw the ball very well," said Herm, who capped Stanton's night with scoring runs of three and 11 yards. "I'm going to have to throw the ball better as long as we're in the playoffs."

That will be at least as far as the area round next week, when Stanton will most likely travel next Friday night to San Angelo to play Albany. Albany was a surprising 13-8 winner over unbeaten Eldorado Friday.

By then, the Buffaloes, who have never advanced more than two rounds deep in the playoffs, will have had an opportunity to thaw out from a game played in conditions colder than Don Corleone's stare. Cotton, who was sick all week, ignored doctor's orders to stay in the press box and instead took his usual place on the sidelines against Shallowater. He certainly had to be pleased with the final results, even if the weather rendered the passing game less than explosive as Stanton committed eight penalties for 67 yards.

"I don't feel sick right now," a pleased Cotton said after the game. "We did some things really well and other things sloppy. I don't know if that was us or it was the weather."

In any case, Stanton will be playing in the area round this season unlike last year, and Cotton said experience is the difference.

"Last year we were a little green and we didn't know what it was all about," Cotton said. "This year we do."

drive that led to the winning TD.

"We left everything on the field," said Ashmore as his team methodically marched to victory.

Perez nailed shut the Red Devil coffin on a heart-wrenching nine-yard TD run.

During the run, it seemed that Perez fall to the ground, but like an Olympic ice skater he kept his balance before falling into the end zone.

Still trailing 21-20, Ashmore opted for the two-point conversion.

"The way we were kicking, the situation called for the conversion," said Ashmore, whose kicker had missed their first PAT and also missed a 22-yard field goal attempt in the first half.

The Eagles, however, faked the PAT and Ruben Nambo threw to Ramiro Montez for the winning points.

With the win O'Donnell will play the winner of Springlake and Gruber next week.

For Rankin, the season ends with well-district title championship.

"There's a lot of hurt in that field house," said Althoff. "I'm proud of them. They never quit."

V-BALL: Rangerettes face Aledo

(From 1C)

Willis added five kills for the Rangerette offense.

"There was great front line play from Karen Gasch, Mandy Choat and Stephanie Willis, and the passing was excellent throughout the match," Purser said.

The win was the 20th straight for Greenwood, which has not dropped a match since Sept. 9. The straight-game victory means that the District 4-3A champions have still not dropped a game in their three-match playoff run.

The Rangerettes' great season hopes to continue as they play Aledo (23-10). Aledo defeated Alpine 15-11, 15-0. Purser knows that her team needs to do a lot better if they expect to win.

"We know we're going to have to play with fewer errors because Aledo is a good team," Purser said.

Two-time Triple Crown jockey Arcaro passes

By Sandra Walewski
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Eddie Arcaro, who won five Kentucky Derbies and Triple Crowns aboard Whirlaway and Citation, died of liver cancer Friday at age 81.

After being hospitalized several weeks ago, Arcaro's health began to decline rapidly in the last 10 days, his son, Bob, said.

Bob Arcaro said his father was hoping to get back into a saddle one more time.

"It was 10 days ago or nine days ago, he and I went out for a bowl of pasta and a salad," he said. "We were talking about the jockeys of today, how great they were, how talented.

"He said, 'I wish I had a shot to ride again soon.' ... It's something I'll remember," he said.

Bob Arcaro said his father wanted to remain at home as his health deteriorated. His wife, Vera, and sister, Evelyn Maggio, of Cincinnati, were at his side.

Nicknamed "The Master," Arcaro came into prominence as a rider in the mid-1930s and continued near the top of his profession until his retirement in 1961. Along the way, the tiny man with the banana-shaped nose that became his trademark, rode 4,779 winners, earning purses of $30,309,543.

Arcaro, who became a network television racing analyst following his retirement as a rider, had 24,092 mounts in a career that began in 1931 when he failed to win a single race on horses that earned a combined $200.

The 5-foot-3 Arcaro rode his first winner at Agua Caliente, Mexico, on Jan. 14, 1932.

But he wound up setting the Derby record with five winners, a mark later equaled by Bill Hartack, and won the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes six times each. Those numbers are unchallenged, and Arcaro is the only jockey ever to ride two Triple Crown winners.

"But I don't kid myself," he said when asked to sum up his career. "I've been on many of the best horses. Take the best horse in any race and put any one of a dozen or more riders on him, and he'll come through."

Arcaro also conceded that by having the best mounts, he was under the most pressure to produce for owners such as Calumet Farms and C.V. Whitney. Other jockeys sometimes devised ways of stopping him and his simple riding philosophy: "Never go outside of two or inside of one."

Arcaro could be a tough customer. He had his license revoked for a year after a rough-riding episode in September 1942.

Mrs. Helen Whitney, who owned Greentree Stable, was in ill health when she wrote a letter to William Woodward, then head of The Jockey Club, asking that Arcaro be reinstated in 1943.

"I would like to see Eddie ride again before I die," she said and Arcaro's license was returned.

Some of Arcaro's great horses weren't easy to ride. One example was Whirlaway in 1941.

"Whirlaway had a tendency to bolt when he was out in front, so the other riders figured I wouldn't go out on the lead if I could help it," Arcaro said in recounting the Belmont ride that gave him his first Triple Crown.

"I planned to go to the front with Whirlaway if the leader went the first half in a slow :50. He did it in 49 4-5, and I shot my horse into the lead."

He was in front by seven lengths and finally prevailed by 2 1/2 in field of four horses.

"The chart said Whirlaway won easily, but he didn't. ... He was drunk at the wire," Arcaro said. "The Belmont distance was really too much for him, but the slow pace I was able to maintain enabled him to stick it out."

There were easier moments, but even Citation, whose 1948 Triple Crown was unmatched for 25 years, gave Arcaro a scare in the Belmont.

So sure was Arcaro that Citation would win that he boasted before the race: "The only way I can lose this race is if I fall off my horse."

Sure enough, Citation stumbled coming out of the gate that day, nearly unseating Arcaro. But he regained control and won the 1 1/2-mile race by eight lengths.

In addition to Whirlaway and Citation, Arcaro won the Kentucky Derby with Larwin in 1938, Hoop Jr. in 1945 and Hill Gail in 1952.

He also won the Preakness aboard Hill Prince in 1950; Bold in 1951; Nashua, who also won the Belmont in 1955; and Bold Ruler in 1957. His other Belmont winners were Shut Out in 1942, Pavot in 1945 and One Count in 1952.

Qualifying postponed at Winston Cup finale

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

HAMPTON, Ga. — Intensity is Mark Martin's specialty.

"I'm an obsessive, compulsive person," Martin said. "I think about racing all the time. That's my job and that's my passion."

That ability to focus on his job is also the reason that Martin believes he has a legitimate chance to vault from third place to the Winston Cup championship on Sunday in the season-ending NAPA 500 at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

Martin goes into the 500-mile event on the redesigned and slightly lengthened Atlanta oval trailing leader Jeff Gordon by 87 points and runnerup Dale Jarrett by 10.

Overtaking Jarrett would simply be a matter of finishing at least two or three positions ahead of him, but Gordon is a different story.

"Obviously, it's going to take a problem on his part for us to win (the championship)," Martin said.

Rain delayed the start of practice Friday until mid-afternoon, which forced NASCAR to postpone qualifying until Saturday. Instead of the usual two rounds of time trials, the 42-car field will be determined in one session following another hour of practice on the 1.544-mile oval.

Martin, who has won the last two championships in the all-star International Race of Champions series, said that experience has taught him how it feels to come from behind and to be the one being chased.

"I went into the last IROC race (in 1996) and I had to go win the race," Martin said. "If I was going to be champion, I had to race and win. Otherwise, I wasn't going to win the championship.

"I didn't worry about it. We went into it, we did it and we won.

"This year," he added, "we went into (the last race) with a huge lead, almost no way to lose, and I came within a whisker of losing. And I sweated it weeks and weeks before we went (to Michigan Speedway), and I sweated it the whole race."

The upshot of his story is that Gordon should not be feeling comfortable, despite the fact that he needs only to finish 18th or better to wrap up his second championship in three years.

"It would effect me," Martin said. "I know what kind of heartbreak it is to expect something. But let's face it, if nothing goes wrong, Jeff Gordon and his team are going to win this championship. We know that because it's not possible for them to run bad enough to lose it unless something happens."

Gordon apparently had no problem Friday in practice as he turned the fifth-fastest lap at 193.623 mph. Martin was eighth at 193.461 and Jarrett 11th at 192.808.

Terry Labonte, who wrapped up his 1996 championship with a fifth-place finish in this race, led the way Friday with a sizzling lap of 195.163.

All of the top speeds were considerably faster than the track record of 186.507 set in March on the old 1.522-mile oval by Robby Gordon.

"It's awful fast," Labonte said. "As long as nothing goes wrong, it's not too fast."

As for what it will take to win the pole, Labonte said, "The weather is supposed to be cooler than today, and I don't know if that will speed them up or slow them down on this track. But I think that speed (on Friday) will be close to the pole."

Ward Burton was close behind Labonte at 194.179, followed by Todd Bodine at 193.717 and rookie Kenny Irwin Jr. at 193.667.

Sampras ousts Rafter

HANOVER, Germany (AP) — Pete Sampras, a three-time champion of the ATP Tour World Championship, joined three rising stars Friday in the semifinals of the season-ending tournament.

In a year that has signaled the changing of the guard in men's tennis, two newcomers to the elite tournament advanced to the last four, Carlos Moya and Jonas Bjorkman.

Yevgeny Kafelnikov, the fourth semifinalist, is playing his third consecutive ATP championship but has reached the semis for the first time.

Sampras, who will finish as No. 1 in the world for the fifth straight year, a record he shares with Jimmy Connors, beat Patrick Rafter 6-4, 6-1 to clinch a semifinal berth.

"I put a lot of pressure on his service games with returning well and making him hit a lot of low volleys," Sampras said.

Rafter, the U.S. Open champion, needed to win a set to advance but was beaten soundly by Sampras, who improved his career record against the Australian to 8-1.

Sampras, Rafter and Moya all finished Red Group play at 2-1, with Moya advancing along with Sampras based on a higher won-lost sets and games average than Rafter.

A RARE VARIATION OF THE CORD L-29

By Tad Burness

Cord's classic 1936 and 1937 models are still well-known to millions because they frequently appear in car shows and automotive publications. Less known is Cord's earlier "L- 29, " a straight-eight, front-wheel drive road giant that was available from the latter months of 1929 to the early months of 1932. Stylewise, the L-29 Cord showed its relationship to its affiliates, the Auburn and the Duesenberg.

This "Elysee coupe" was built in 1929 as a special show car. It differed from most other early Cords in that it had a special, custom Weymann-built body made of "Zapon-Liss" fabric/leatherette panels attached to a wooden body framework.

Weymann was the foremost builder of fabric/wood bodies in the late 1920s and early 1930s; the advantages of this unusual type were extremely light weight, flexibility, and a quiet ride. But fabric bodies proved to be total disasters in automobile accidents, especially in a broadside intersection collision. British and American newspapers and magazines described in gory detail the deadliness of fabric car bodies in a wreck.

Moreover, fabric bodies could rapidly deteriorate if left outdoors unmaintained for long periods of time. This illustrated Cord even had to have a special aluminum plate around the area near the rear gas filler to protect the Zapon-Liss body from the bad effects of a few spilled drops of fuel.

This car was originally blue with a gray top. Later it was redone all in a pleasing shade of royal blue.

Originally, it was put up for sale at the New York Automobile Salon show for $7,500, though a standard, metalbodied L-29 was only $3,250 or less. In February 1930 the car was out west in California and photographed with famous band leader Paul Whiteman. Though Whiteman was a car fancier, there's no evidence that he actually purchased the L-29.

Later, the car was sold to the Stutz Used Car Exchange back in New York City for only $1,185, and in September 1932 that dealership accepted an offer of just $795, little more than one-tenth of its original asking price.

In 1959 the car was bought in Brooklyn, N.Y., by a collector from Louisville, Ky. He carefully restored the venerable relic, and the car was featured in the July 1965 issue of Car Life magazine, in an interestingly detailed photo story by Warren W. Fitzgerald.

Though Auburn and Duesenberg cars were available during the period from 1933 to 1935, the Auburn-Cord-Duesenberg group decided to remove the Cord automobile from the market even though more than 4,000 of the L-29s had been sold, beating the sales figures of the costlier Duesenberg. But a restyled and downsized streamlined Cord returned for two more years (1936 and 1937) with the 810 and 812 series, and the new model made history with its exclusive styling and features.

Minivan derived from best-selling Campy sedan

By Bob Plunkett
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

SHEBOYGAN, Wisc. -- On the beeline path of I43, which runs along western shores of Lake Michigan and links Milwaukee to Sheboygan, the new Sienna minivan from Toyota maintained a steady clip in the fast lane.

Even at legal freeway speed, the accelerator held obvious power, with more juice readily available beneath the driver's foot, thanks to a lively V6 engine borrowed from Camry, Toyota's popular mid-size sedan.

A stiff platform, also derived from Camry, felt substantial and created an expansive passenger compartment outfitted with three rows of seats and enough room for everyone in an extended family to travel in comfort.

Secure in a contoured bucket seat, driver gripped a small steering wheel and from time to time eyed an array of instruments, including the big tachometer at center left.

External noise stemming from wind and road, always difficult to prevent from intruding into the cabin of a vehicle in motion, seemed muted and controlled, creating an interior situation which remained as quiet as you'd expect from a fine luxury car.

And everywhere handy features appeared for convenience and comfort -- including up to 16 cupholders.

Clearly, with Sienna Toyota has figured out how to take the alluring properties of best-selling Camry and repackage them in the practical format of a minivan.

That's why I'm calling Sienna the Camry of minivans.

The theory goes like this: Sienna drives with the responsiveness of a Camry, the interior has the tone and caliber of features found in Camry, many of the components also show up on Camry, and it's as quiet as a Camry.

Sienna even comes off a production line that runs parallel to Camry at Toyota's second assembly plant in the Kentucky hills at Georgetown.

Overall, Sienna represents a first-class design which merits a close inspection in light of popular competitors.

In an expanded Toyota line of products badged with 1998 labels, Sienna replaces the former Previa minivan with more conservative exterior styling and a more practical plan. Sienna also sheds some of the bulk of Previa and increases the horsepower as well as enterior space.

It behaves like a mannerly sedan

Built upon Camry's front-wheel-drive platform stretched for nine more inches, Sienna's wheelbase of 114.2 inches measures somewhere between the distances of short and long versions of minivans by other automakers.

Thus, Sienna can maneuver nicely with an agility usually found only in smaller minivans, yet the interior volume of 143 cubic feet means there's more space inside for people and gear than the shorter versions provide and that room roughly compares to longer competitors.

Trim levels run from a price-leader 3-door Sienna CE to the mid-level LE with more content aboard and choice of three or four doors. The top model, 4-door Sienna XLE, carries captains chairs and fittings of luxury.

All four of Sienna's versions draw from the proven powertrain of Camry. The 3.0liter V6, rigged with twin cams and four valves per cylinder, produces a lustful 194 hp.

Sienna's engine combines with a 4-speed automatic transmission. On the tip of the column shift lever, a button allows driver to lock out fourth overdrive gear.

Punch it to downshift when exiting a freeway or descending a hill and you'll have good control.

More equipment lifted from Camry shows up at wheels with the independent front suspension system that relies on MacPherson struts, coil springs, gas-charged shock absorbers and an anti-roll bar. Hardware mounts to a subframe to reduce vibrations and ease the ride quality.

The exterior treatment seems rather subdued in the absence of flashy adornments. A typical minivan's rectangular boxy lines have been softened and rounded in a pleasing contemporary shape, with sharply sloped nose and windshield and a low roofline. A bottom wrap of cladding forms the visual statement of a broad base that looks like it's rooted to the ground.

Inside, the layout provides two bucket seats with adjustable height feature in front of a middle split bench or twin captain's chairs and the rear split bench.

Seatbacks in second and third rows fold forward and each seat may be unlocked and tumbled to remove when additional cargo space is needed.

Also, backs of second row seats contain built-in trays with cupholders so rear riders can use these folded seatbacks as tables.

This modular seat plan creates a flexible compartment that's quick to convert for people and cargo.

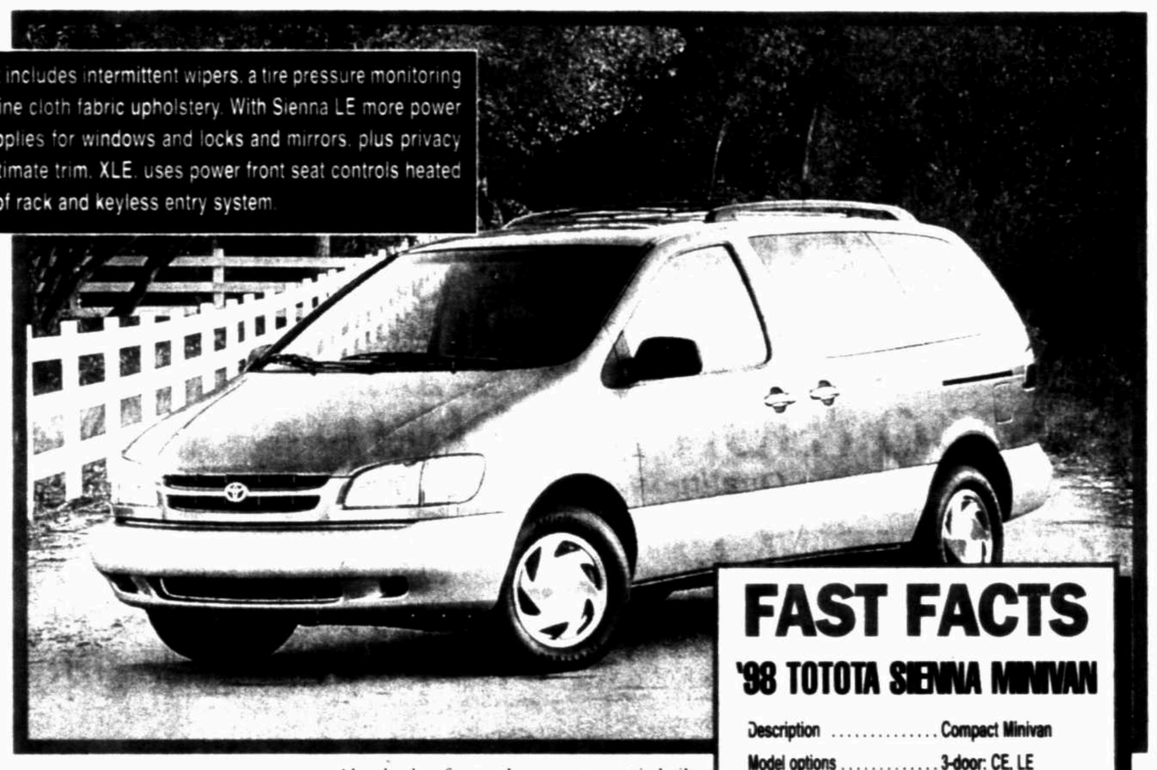

Above the entry-level Sienna CE, all editions stock a secondary rear air conditioning system for comfort.

Leather upholstery, power sliding door, a moonroof and 6-speaker stereo with CD deck appear on the list of options. ■

King of the Hill: '98 Chevrolet Suburban K1500

RoadWorthy!

By Kenneth Chester, Jr.

Uncompromised power, ruggedness and strength [illegible] passenger and cargo space in its class. [illegible] sport utility trailering capabilities. Simply the biggest [illegible]. These are the [illegible] that the folks at Chevrolet [illegible] appearing initially in [illegible] massive truck [illegible] down through the years. There is no mistaking the heft of this truck. With a curb weight ranging from 4825 to 5694 pounds, and seating for upto nine adults, it has plenty of girth to throw around. I wondered how this sport utility vehicle stacked up against the newest competition. I recently took one of these big Chevys for a ride to find out.

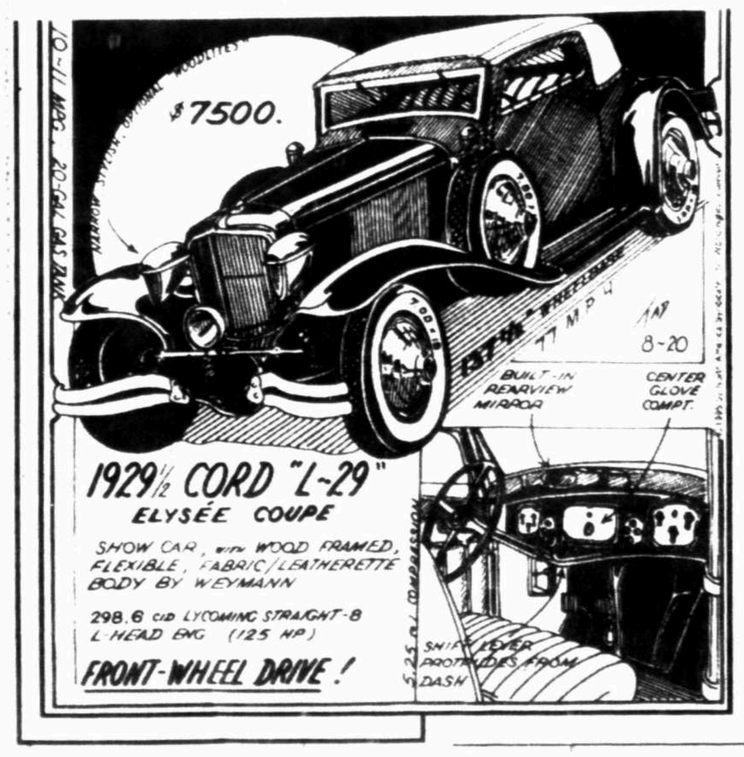

A Sport Utility Without Equal

The Chevrolet Suburban and its GMC badged twin share its exterior appearance and platform with the full size C/K pickup series, with its last major design change in the 1992 model year. Built in GM's Janesville, Wisconsin and Silao, Mexico assembly plants, the big Chevrolet truck available in two models, two or four wheel drive, and three trim packages. Standard, LS and LT. Buyers also have a choice of three engines — two gasoline and one diesel — as well as two automatic transmissions. A manual transmission is not available. I drove a K1500 model ("C" designates two wheel drive, "K", four wheel drive) equipped with a Vortec 5.7L V-8 (351) engine bolted to a smooth shifting 4L60-E four speed automatic. If you like sitting in your favorite easy chair in the living room watching the scenery go by, you will love the Suburban. With a full complement of analog gauges, displays and controls are laid out well, within easy reach of the driver. The dashboard also contains three power points to plug in various electronic tools and gadgets as well as two of the best dashboard mounted cupholders that I have found anywhere. Nooks and crannies abound to stow plenty of stuff. On the road, I found this big truck to be very responsive and carlike, not at all the brute that I expected. Driver visibility is excellent, with the seating throughout the truck large and very comfortable, regardless of where you may be sitting. The center console between the front seats and the cupholder/armrest in the middle of the second seat helps in making a trip in this vehicle a very enjoyable experience. Consumers that desire four wheel drive have a choice between the conventional "shift on the fly" Insta-Trac setup or the optional AutoTrac© system which manages traction needs automatically, allowing torque transfer from front to rear as needed — without driver intervention. A brief trip off-road reminded me that this is no wimpy truck. In fact, closer inspection revealed a sport utility vehicle designed to be very versatile — ready to respond to the many needs and demand of its owner — including seats that fold flat and/or out of the way easily to make a cavernous cargo area. According to the folks at Chevrolet, with the third seat removed and the second row 60/40 seats folded flat, the Suburban holds nearly 150 cu. ft. of cargo! Despite all the goodness that has been engineered into this truck, a few gripes: passengers can only access the third seat from the right side of the vehicle, and the seat adjustment hardware on models equipped with leather seating is awkward to use. Properly equipped, the Suburban can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 10,000 pounds. Underhood fluids are easy to reach but not clearly marked.

By the Numbers

Standard safety equipment includes: dual airbags, daytime running lamps, four wheel anti-lock brakes, PassLock theft-deterrent system, and steel side-door beams. EPA fuel economy figures for the Suburban range from 13 city/18 highway for the 1500 model to 12 city/16 highway for the 2500 model. Retail prices range from $25,065 for the C1500 model to $29,250 for the K2500. Destination charge adds $675. Supplies of this truck have always been scarce and there are no rebates. ■
