Schleicher County ISD Setting Pace For U.S. Classrooms

A technology-based high school curriculum already in place in Schleicher County Independent School District was recommended for textbook adoption for the first time in Texas. The Texas Learning Technology Group (TLTG), with the support of districts across the state, has made a major breakthrough in interactive videodisc curricula that could positively impact schools nationwide.

On August 19, the State Textbook Subject Area Committee submitted the recommendation of the TLTG Chemistry curriculum to Texas Commissioner of Education Lionel Meno. If adopted by the State Board of Education in November, the interactive curriculum can be ordered by school districts next spring. State textbook funds will pay for the courseware.

The Schleicher County ISD was involved in the design and development of this innovative curriculum, which is a combination of technology-based lessons, print materials, and lab experiments.

"TLTG has taken unique steps to revolutionize classroom teaching across the country, and its goals in education have been in concert with that of the nation," said Paula Hardy, TLTG director. "Behind this solid undertaking is the promise of major improvements in the development and delivery of science and math curricula."

"Already, increasing numbers of states are recognizing multimedia's instructional worth, and teachers are landing it as their most valuable teaching tool. Students, too, are developing a preference for this interactive learning method and identifying multimedia as an easier way to understand scientific concepts. TLTG is moving education forward by helping teachers make the most of every moment through innovative teaching methods, utilizing ways other than lecture to convey information," said Don Sheffield, TLTG chair and board president of Carrollton-Farmers Branch ISD.

The national education goal in the area of science and mathematics is straightforward: "By the year 2000, U.S. students will be first in the world in science and mathematics achievement." Unfortunately, data from international assessments during the 1980s point to relatively poor achievement by American students compared with youths in other countries.

Hardy said TLTG recognizes that courses must be reconstructed to make the classroom an optimal and effective learning environment. "This is tantamount to our nation having the many scientists, technicians, and teachers needed to carry on the explosive growth of scientific research, development, and application we have seen in recent years," she explained.

The Texas Learning Technology Group, based in Austin, is a nonprofit organization formed to bring advanced learning technology to the classroom to increase student achievement and interest. Created in 1985 through the efforts of the Texas Association of School Boards, TLTG has taken the lead in bringing advanced videodisc-based curricula to the classroom.

City Council Holds Line On Taxes

A Public Hearing on the City of Eldorado's budget was held Monday, August 2, 1992, and after final comments, a budget of $771,000 for the Utility Fund and $243,829 for the General fund was adopted. Of this total budget of $1,014,829, 16% ($162,701.50) is derived from property taxes. This means that the balance of operating funds are derived from operating the City's Utility Department and various other operating revenues including utility franchise receipts and sales tax receipts. The 1992-93 budget is 4% larger than the 1991-92 budget; however, no rate increases were determined necessary. No citizens were present at the Public Hearing.

In a separate action, after a review of the published 1992 property tax effective rate and the revenues calculated based on the effective rate as applied to current property values, it was determined that even the allowed 3% rate increase as calculated by the Schleicher County Tax Appraisal District was not significant and was not necessary in order for the City departments to function. Therefore, after studying tax rate options and the corresponding revenue generated, the City Council unanimously voted to set the 1992 rate on the effective rate without any increase. Due to an increase in new property, this resulted in a decrease in the tax rate from $.7761/$100 to $.7745/$100.

Said Mayor John Nikolaik, "In reviewing our budget requirements for this year we have prepared a budget that will allow us to operate the city without a tax increase. We are pleased that we were able to work this out. The addition of more people in our community has given us a higher total budget than last year without our having to raise the rate."

Copies of the City's 1992-93 Budget are available at the City Hall, as well as copies of financial records and notes used.

Publisher's Note:

Although I have often questioned the need for the replication of services offered by City government and County government, I believe that this action, taken by the members of the City Council, is an intelligent move. I only wish that our state and federal governments could learn something from their example.

The time has arrived for all government agencies to become committed to cost containment and work within balanced budgets.

September - "Recycle Eldorado Month"

On August 24, 1992, Mayor Nikolaik issued an official proclamation designating September as "Recycle Eldorado Month" and kicking off another successful year of the program. The proclamation states that the program is designed to educate, initiate, and sustain the concept of recycling and encourages citizens to give consideration to this timely environmental matter. Citizens are urged to sort and save recyclable items at their homes and businesses and bring them to the Recycling Center.

In September of 1991, a "Recycle Eldorado Program" was officially launched in Eldorado with the placement of recycling receptacles on the City's lot at 510 SW Main Street, adjacent to Poynor Construction's office and across the street from Casa Arispe. During the past year aluminum cans, metal cans, colored glass, and clear glass have been transported to recycling market centers by City personnel. Paper from various offices and homes in Schleicher County have been transported by the Extension Office to a paper market representative. Recycling does work and now that the program is off and running, improvements in the local program are planned.

New signs have been ordered to more clearly mark the Recycling Center and to identify the various receptacles. Signs for placement on the highway are being ordered. Anyone having any questions may contact either the Extension Office or contact the City Hall.

Watch for "Recycling Tidbits" in your newspaper during September and throughout the year. The program is supporting itself - and it is making a difference in Eldorado!

4-H Open House

by Nancy Lester

It is time to start our 4-H projects for Fall. Each year we are required to have re-enrollment for anyone who wants to be involved in 4-H. This means cooking, livestock projects, sewing, method demonstrations, rifle, camp, drill team or whatever else you might want to be involved in. We are having our open house so that everyone can come by and fill out new enrollment forms. Please mark your calendars. We want you to be an active 4-H member!

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service are open to all people regardless of age, color, creed, sex or socio-economic condition.

City To Recycle Tires

Good news, the City of Eldorado has worked out an arrangement with Safe Tire Disposal of Odessa, Texas, for a van to be parked at the City Hall to collect tires for disposal. The van will hold approximately 1000 tires.

The following procedure must be followed:

1. Tires must be brought in during working hours to the van at the City's lot across from the Post Office.

2. After checking with City Hall and completing manifest form, tires must be properly stacked within the van by the person disposing of the tire.

There is no charge for the service. Tires cannot be accepted at the Landfill and this will afford Schleicher County residents an opportunity to dispose of tires in a painless and simple manner.

Enriquez/Valdez Win Golf Tournament

This past week-end, the Eldorado Golf Club hosted the 20th Annual Jack Hext Memorial Two-man Golf Tournament. The tournament was won by Steve Enriquez and Memo Valdez from San Angelo.

Eighty eight golfers played the Eldorado course in this year's event. Most golfers claimed that the course played more difficult on Sunday than on Saturday due to Sunday's higher winds.

According to Club representatives, this was one of the most successful events in the Club's recent history. The fairways and greens were in marvelous condition thanks to the hard work of Mike Prater and Micky Rathbone.

Special thanks were offered by the tournament committee to Geniva McQuarter, Mabel Prietag and Charissa Halbert for their hard work during this event.

The Eagle Dairy Mart served a marvelous meal of chicken and fish to close to 100 golfers and spouses on Saturday night.

The scores follow:

Editor's Journal

TOP OF THE DIVIDE by Thomas Giovannitti

There seems to be a resurgence of card collecting. I wish, now, I had saved all of those early "Willie Mays" and "Joe DiMaggio" bubble gum cards, they would be worth a fortune today. Alas, I didn't save any of them.

Nicolas has saved basketball cards for some years and even Annamarie is saving baseball cards. The cards have nice pictures with statistics about the player featured on the front. I may be one up on the kids this time. Sears, for members of the Craftsman Club, has initiated its "Premier Edition" of the Craftsman collector cards.

I wouldn't kid about something as important as this! There will be 110 in this original set. I already have six of them sent to me by Sears. It says that Craftsman workingman's gum is included but I did not find a piece in my first pack. I am sure it was an oversight. Now, these are the official cards of "America's #1 name in Tools. I am sure the "Snap on" folks would probably challenge that statement but I read it right on the package so it must be true.

The beautiful color picture of a circular saw is not all I got on one of the cards. On the other side are all of the important facts and statistics. There is a cut away diagram of the working parts, the specifications such as the horsepower and the type of blade. More importantly there are "buyer's inside Story" which give valuable information such as how light the saw is to reduce operator fatigue. You read it here first folks!

I can see the crowds gathering at the next collector's card swap. Why, there will be a whole selection devoted to tool cards.

Burly guys with tattoos on their arms will be trading Jig saw cards for tool chest cards. In fact the circular saw card is called a "Best in the Biz", sort of an all star of the machine cards.

Probably after the Premier Edition there will be a second set getting down to the less know tools such as routers and spring wrenches. The possibilities are endless. Of course, they are only available if you are a craftsman club member.

The U.S. Postal Service ruled that a Johnsonville, North Carolina, postmaster had to repay $44 in stamps and money orders that thieves made off with after he told them how to open a Postal service safe at his grocery store. Four gunmen had pistol-whipped him, threatened him, his wife and eight others and shot his son. The Postal Service said that he failed to "exercise reasonable care."

County Agents Report

Most ranchers have learned, often the hard way, not to overgraze their rangeland. Many homeowners and highway right-of-way crews ought take a tip from their country cousins. Oftentimes they're offenders when in comes to overgrazing their "range".

But wait, how can this be? These people don't have any livestock and many are keenly concerned with the environment. True, but what they do have is far more severe a grazer and much less selective than any four-legged critter; it's their lawn mower.

The fact is many homeowners and roadside mowing crews continue to "overgraze" with their mowers, according to San Angelo-based Extension Range Specialist Dr. Jake Landers.

"It's not that they mow too often," said the specialist. "It's that they cut too close to the ground. Green plants need a certain amount of leaf surface to remain healthy. When over half the plant is mowed off, energy must be drawn from the root to grow new leaves. The leaves with sunlight are needed to put energy back in the roots."

That's why Landers and other turf experts recommend removing only the top 1/3 of the plant. Standard West Texas bermuda grass lawns in mid-summer should have at least 1 1/2 inch high grass left after mowing; St. Augustine a little higher. The minimum height of grass in roadsides should be five to seven inches.

"We've all seen lawns scalped," said Landers. "The owner brags that he doesn't have to mow as often. That's because it takes time for the scalped grass to recover. While the lawn is trying to grow back, competing weeds are taking full advantage of the situation. The grass is damaged giving weeds a much better chance of becoming established."

"I've seen roadside mowers slice off the top layer of soil in places where the mowing surface wasn't level. Instead of grasses recovering as you'd probably think, chances are the areas will be covered by weeds by the next mowing."

Landers said it's a complicated process, but simply put, the shorter the grass, the shorter the root system. When the soil gets dry it's good to have deep roots. The deeper-rooted plants have the advantage of drawing water from well below the soil's surface. If the scalped grass' roots must supply more energy to grow more leaves than roots the plant will soon turn brown and possibly die. They just run out of water.

Though he may not have to mow as much Landers said the "yard scalper" pays for it through more frequent lawn waterings and clipping removal.

"The added watering costs more money," he said "but fighting all that cut 'hay' is the real headache. Close mowing exposes unsightly piles of grass clippings. To look nice, a scalped lawn needs the clippings removed. Mowed right, a lawn or roadside naturally hides and decomposes clippings between the healthy blades of grass without a thatch buildup. The clippings shade the soil, reduce the amount of water needed and provide food for earthworms."

Landers said measure the lawn height. If there's a question, set the mower at its highest or next highest setting; that's the proper height. "Above all" he concluded, "next time you're feeling environmental, don't cuss that cow, look in your own back yard, then raise that mower."

No Longer A Dream

by Lorain Hamilton

Just six months ago it was a dream. Thanks to the Texas Legislature for House Bill 7 directing the establishment of pilot projects in three counties to demonstrate the operation of a client access package, the dream to better serve the residents of Schleicher County with their health and human service needs will be a reality by October 1.

As a frustrated secretary, I found trying to access the proper services for residents in need was very limited. All that I had available to use as information and referral was a notebook with assorted pamphlets and business cards. Today I am project coordinator for the Schleicher County Rural Pilot Site, one of the most exciting and rewarding experiences of my life. Through the creation of a Community Resource Center residents of Schleicher county will have only one location to access services, instead of having to go to several locations and sometimes out of town. Co-location is not the only benefit of the resource center. A collaboration of 21 service providers have been meeting since June in an effort to make easy access to residents available. We like to think of the resource center as a place for "one stop shopping" for health and human service needs. The resource center will have at its fingertips automated information and referral. Service providers will be at the center on a regular basis. A full time employee will be at the center to assist the residents. The slogan of the Community Resource Center is "If you have a need, start here." We encourage the residents of Schleicher County to utilize the services of this center.

The song says "The Eyes of Texas are Upon You". Indeed, the eyes of Texas will be upon Schleicher County as we endeavor to implement the components of the client access package included in House Bill 7; to test the functionalities of the automation features; to implement the client flow; and provide experienced staff resources to the design team for development of the complete client access package for statewide implementation.

Resource Conservation and Development

Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) is a program approved by Congress in 1962 to be administered by the Soil Conservation Service which has been revitalized to accelerate resource and community development in RC&D areas. The USDA agency cooperates through the local soil and water conservation district to help other local sponsors plan and carry out the RC&D program.

Some goals of the program are:

1. To place greater emphasis on creating jobs, providing community services and community facilities to improve the quality of life in rural areas;

2. To promote expansion of existing industries and promoting new industries to locate in the area;

3. To improve existing facilities and bring to the area needed community facilities such as schools, hospitals, waste treatment facilities, roads and other needed facilities.

It is through this RC&D council that counties are provided assistance in finding financial assistance from federal, state or private grants or loans in carrying out community improvement projects.

Once a local RC&D council is formed, it will have opportunity to join an area RC&D council being formed by 14 area counties.

The Eldorado Divide Soil and Water Conservation District, the Schleicher County Commissioners and the Schleicher County Chamber of Commerce have agreed to be sponsors for the local council.

Anyone interested in supporting this council to help improve Schleicher County should contact Carrol Green or Tom Enochs.

Vander Stucken's Honored

Some 200 folks were on hand Tuesday, August 18, as the boys, staff and directors of West Texas Boys Ranch honored Joseph and Mabel Vander Stucken for their many years of friendship to the Ranch. The reception, held at St. John's Parish Hall in Sonora, drew friends from Sonora, Ozona, Junction, Menard and San Angelo.

Highlighting the afternoon was a short program by WTBR CEO Roger Ellison with help from the boys and Dave Gottshall, past executive director of WTBR. The Vander Stuckens were presented a plaque inscribed with a poem entitled "Joseph and Mabel" written by WTBR Ranch Manager Tim Jobe and some of the boys. The poem was read to the Vander Stuckens and friends by Sam Ellis, a 15 year-old at WTBR, and appreciation was expressed by Lee O'Daniel, 15, also from the Ranch.

Fourteen year-old Ben Manriquez and Steven Pilger carried in two special gifts from the Ranch - a sack of corn and a deer block. "Knowing the pleasure Joseph and Mabel receive from feeding and watching their deer and turkey, we thought these gifts might help us express our appreciation best," Ellison said.

Sixteen year-old Forrest Breeden gave the invocation and Brian Turk, 16, closed the program.

"I knew you were going to do something, and I have had a whole hour of suspense, but it was well worth it for these past few minutes" Joseph commented to the crowd. "And on behalf of the game, we thank you."

The Vander Stuckens passed out goodies to each boy from the Ranch.

"All of you that know Joseph, know he is not going to let ya'll do this for him without giving something back," said Reverend Monte Jones about the goodie bags.

For 40 years, the Vander Stuckens have shared their time, talent, and generosity with the boys at the Ranch. Joseph joined the board of directors in 1952, only five years after the Ranch was first organized. He served as president of the WTBR Board of Directors from 1966-1967, and is an Honorary Director for Life.

Joseph was instrumental in the development of the WTBR Trust, and served on the WTBR Board of Trustees for many years.

The Great Goat Gallop . . . Texas Sheep Dog Classic . . . Wool Bag Races . . . The Goat Pill Flip Off . . . You might ask, "What's going on?" It's all part of the 19th Annual World Championship Barbecue Goat Cook Off and Arts and Crafts Fair. The annual event swells the small central Texas town of Brady from a population of 6,500 to over 18,000 and in the past has drawn the focus of the United States to the center of the "Lone Star State."

For the past 19 years, Brady, the Geographic Center of Texas, has staged one of the most popular and well-attended cook offs of any kind. Annually 125 cooks gather in Richards Park to compete for the prize money and trophies, and the recognition of being the World Champion Barbecue Goat Cook Off winner. In the past the cook off has had contestants from as far away as South Africa, Mexico, Alaska, New York, California, Colorado, Illinois, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kentucky, South Carolina, and all across Texas.

Games, Games Games!!! Games for the young and old!!! Games - just fun to watch!!! Games held through out the day will include The Famous Goat Pill Flip Off.
