Sanders retrieved after 16-hour ordeal

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The body of a young Hereford man was recovered early Friday morning after a 16 1/2-hour ordeal in a grain-filled warehouse at Peavey Grain Co.

Harold Sanders Jr., 18, who had graduated from Hereford High School on June 4, died at about 11:40 a.m. Friday. He was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine.

Although an autopsy has not been performed on Sanders, it is believed he suffocated from the immense pressure of the grain surrounding him.

Sanders had just started work on Monday, a summer job that was to include various odd jobs around the grain-handling facility on South Lee Street.

The warehouse, which could hold 400,000 bushels of grain, was about half-full. Sanders and other employees were shoveling grain into the "pit" in the base of the warehouse.

A fellow worker said that Sanders had gotten into the larger mound of grain in the eastern half of the warehouse when the huge slope of grain began avalanching.

Before Sanders could move out, he was swallowed in the grain.

The workers around him tried frantically to free him. Some then ran for help.

A handful of persons at the facility raced into the warehouse and were able to free Sanders' head from the grain and tried to place sheet metal around the youth.

Witnesses said the pressure of the grain was constantly crushing the metal in toward Sanders.

Volunteer firemen and emergency medical personnel were at the scene moments later. They called for a load of plywood from McCaslin Lumber Company to be used to create a less-pliable shield around Sanders, and then began trying to shovel the grain.

A steady flow of onlookers came to the scene. Johnny Amaro, who was acting as fire chief with Fire Chief Mike Watts and Assistant Fire Chief David Spain both out of town, asked most of them if they were "there to help or there to watch." Almost all said they were there to help. At the least, they helped move the plywood into the warehouse, or helped put together the hose and pipe for the first evacuator unit, which came from Hereford Grain Corporation. Many of them accepted assignments to go into the warehouse, man a scoop, and try to free Sanders.

The rescuers worked feverishly for over two hours to try to free Sanders, who was breathing on his own much of the time with the aid of oxygen.

Once, Sanders was free past his waist, but when an attempt was made to pull him free, his belt broke and he was covered in a shallow layer of grain.

Many of the persons working with the rescue attempt, then the work to retrieve the young Sanders from the grain, had a thick coating of grain dust, sweat, and sunburn.

Workers from other grain handling facilities, including much of the work force at the Frito-Lay Southwest Grain Handling Division, manned machines that siphoned the grain from the warehouse into trucks. The City of Hereford provided trucks to help haul the grain.

With up to 200,000 bushels of grain to move from the warehouse, a semi-load or a bobtail truck-full at a time, the process was slow and dusty.

Meanwhile, rescuers and emergency medical personnel could only sit by, watch and wait for a time when it would be safe to try to retrieve the young man.

Volunteer firemen Bill Watts and Joe Hamby, looking as if they had just taken a bath in a talcum powder box, sat in a fire department vehicle at about 6:30 p.m., taking a break from what had then been a nine-hour long ordeal.

They were among the first rescue personnel at the scene. They had been in the warehouse, shoveling the grain

Hurry up and wait

For these volunteer workers and other persons trying to free Harold Sanders Jr. from a mountain of grain at Peavey Grain Company on Thursday, it was a frustrating day. These workers are attempting to siphon grain from the warehouse to allow rescuers to free the man. A host of persons worked for over 16 hours before the young man's body was finally recovered early this morning.

away from Sanders and trying to maintain the plywood barricade around the young man.

Watts said that one of his legs had "fallen asleep" while it was bent under him while he was trying to scoop the grain away.

Suddenly, Watts was swallowed up by the constantly-flowing grain. He almost completely disappeared.

"Joe just grabbed me by the chestbone," Watts said.

"I just grabbed him by the chest," Hamby said. "I wasn't going to watch him go under."

Many of the persons who worked with shovels during the two hours that Sanders was alive in the grain told how they would be shoveling the grain away from around the man. After about a minute of manning their scoops, they would look down and see that they were already covered up to their knees in grain.

Throughout the evening and into the night, rescuers remained frustrated. The workers honestly thought many times it would be "just another two hours" before they could finally go in and retrieve Sanders. Each time, they were frustrated.

Conditions began to improve about 9:30 p.m., and volunteer firemen decided they would make a concentrated effort at about 10 p.m.

The firemen went in and tried to dig around the man, but their efforts were again futile because of the constantly-flowing grain.

After the 10 p.m. attempt, firemen weren't so optimistic. "It'll be another three or four hours," one of them reported. This time, the forecast was accurate. Four hours later, at about 2 a.m., or 16 1/2 hours after they started, they were finally able to free Sanders from the mountain of grain.

"I don't know how many people and companies showed up to help, but I want to thank all of them," Amaro said this morning.

Services will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at Rix Funeral Chapel with Mark Powers officiating. Burial will follow in Restlawn Memorial Park.

Mr. Sanders was a member of Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witness and had been active in the Drama Club at Hereford High School, from which he had graduated on June 4.

Survivors include his mother, Dorothy, of Hereford; his father, Harold Sanders Sr., of Clovis, N.M.; three sisters, Tabitha, Myra and Rachel, all of Hereford; two grandmothers, Gloria Salughter of Clovis and Lisa McLaughlin of Sudan; his great-grandmother, Phillis Armstrong of Clovis; four aunts; an uncle; and a host of relatives and friends.

Deng lauded by paper for stance

BEIJING (AP) - The leading national daily today lauded the hard-line tactics of senior leader Deng Xiaoping and appealed for "unity of thinking" in a sign China's rulers intend to further stamp out political dissent.

The call by the Communist Party's People's Daily came as the state moved to expunge opposition through arrests, death sentences and a barrage of pro-government propaganda.

On Thursday, a Shanghai court sentenced three men to death for setting fire to a train in an anti-government riot. They were the first to receive the death sentence of more than 1,000 people arrested since protests broke out around the nation following the June 3-4 military assault on Beijing demonstrators.

The People's Daily editorial praised the "keen insight and scientific judgment" of the 84-year-old Deng in his June 9 address to military officers involved in the attack in the capital.

The government variously says 200-300 people, mostly soldiers, were killed. Unofficial Chinese and Western intelligence reports say troops fired on unarmed crowds and killed up to 3,000.

The editorial said the rebellion in Beijing has been put down but "some people still harbor ideological hangups."

"Therefore, it is necessary to seek unity of thinking covering the whole party and the whole people by seriously studying the important speech made by Deng Xiaoping."

The paper said China must abide by "one center and two basic points." The center, it said, is the party and the people. It defined the two points as principles of Communist rule and socialism in addition to continued open-door and reform policies.

The editorial indicated the ruling party will no longer tolerate criticism of its policies, as it did to a limited extent in the months before the crackdown.

In his June 9 speech, Deng said the Beijing protesters rallied under the slogans "down with the Communist Party" and "overturn the socialist system." He said their goal was to establish a Western-style bourgeois republic.

Although many did praise Western democracy, their stated goals were much more modest: to open a dialogue with the government, guarantee a free press, and end corruption among officials.

The official media has let loose a flurry of reports condemning the protesters and defending the party line.

In its report on the three Shanghai men, the official Xinhua News Agency said they had "frenziedly smashed the railway cars and set fire to police motorcycles and the cars" of a train during the June 6 attack.

Crowds burned the train and injured 21 security officials who tried to put out the blaze after it ran through a protest barricade, killing six people.

Seven more people were on trial in the case, Shanghai radio said.

Most of those arrested have been workers, but the government has also issued all-points bulletins for 21 student leaders. Only three of those have been arrested or reported to authorities.

The official news agency Xinhua on Thursday fired a new salvo of criticism at the U.S.-funded Voice of America. "The VOA has daily concocted and spread rumors to incite disturbances and rebellions," it said.

On Wednesday, China ordered the expulsion of VOA Beijing bureau chief Alan Pessin and Associated Press reporter John Pomfret. It accused them of violating martial law rules, which banned reporting of the protests.

Among the hosts for Saturday's annual Rhinestone Roundup, to be held at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center, are, from left, Bill and Karen Bankston, Brenda and John Elliott, and Renee and Randy Hefflin. The Roundup is the major fundraiser for the CHOF.

Baptist views change on Vegas

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Skeptical Southern Baptists and Las Vegans sized each other up this week as the town some have dubbed Sin City played unlikely host to the passionate opponents of gambling and drinking.

Stan Pritchett, a delegate to the Southern Baptist Convention, and cabbie Don Capaldi termed the three-day event a draw - with eyes opening on both sides of what has been called the meeting of the high rollers and the Holy Rollers.

The gathering for the nation's largest Protestant denomination ended Thursday.

"They're nice, decent people; they even gave me a Bible," said Capaldi as hundreds of Baptists passed out Bibles and imparted their faith to tourists and residents. "I don't think they can do much about our image, or our thinking."

Down the neon-bathed thoroughfare known as the Strip, Pritchett approached tourists who hurried between casinos Wednesday to beat the 100-degree-plus heat.

"The people have been generally very friendly," said Pritchett of Pensacola, Fla. "We thought people would look at us like a calf looks at a new gate. Generally the people have been very friendly. The atmosphere here is like almost any place, except for the gambling."

Ted Wakeman, pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Fallon, 380 miles to the northwest, said he takes exception to the image rap.

"I get a little upset with the people who came here from back East and are bad-mouthing Nevada," Wakeman said.

"A lot of people thought they'd come here and find a lot of people gambling and drunk," said Annette Edwards of Nashville, Tenn., who tended one of the booths in the exhibit hall. "That's just the impression people who live outside of here have. But it wasn't like that at all."

"I would think from all I've heard that the convention would look with favor on our returning to Las Vegas in the future," said Al Shackelford, the Southern Baptist Convention's vice president for public relations. "I have heard nothing but good reports about the people of Las Vegas."

At the Stardust Hotel and Casino, spokesman Jim Seagrave said slot machine play for the hotel was down considerably for the week.

Pages of the Las Vegas phone book were distributed so that the 20,423 convention delegates and others could pray for the city's 700,000 residents.

Some 1,800 Baptists fanned out across the city last weekend, knocking on doors in a mission to save souls. They reported polite response.

"I really have been impressed with Las Vegas," said Stanley Clark, a church volunteer. "We've been in a lot of other cities that, to use a term, are more Sin City than Las Vegas is."

Survey coming on HB 72

AUSTIN (AP) - A poll of public school teachers in 50 districts across the state could illuminate weaknesses in education reforms mandated five years ago, says an official of a Texas teachers' union planning such a survey.

John Cole, president of the Texas Federation of Teachers, said the state's teachers will be asked to grade 10 areas of reform, including "no-pass, no-play" requirements, minimum skills testing and teacher career ladders.

"We have all of these reforms now implemented ... and we can now stop and take a look and see how well these things are doing," Cole said Thursday during a news conference to announce the survey.

"We can see which ones the teachers think are worth keeping and which ones should be scrapped," he said. The survey, to be completed by fall 1990, could lead to changes in the reforms set out by House Bill 72 in 1984, Cole said.

"If there are specific reforms that just consistently ... show up as real losers, that would be an opportunity to go to the Legislature and say this one needs to be fixed, repealed, changed," Cole said.

He said the survey results also would be given to the State Board of Education.

Cole said the federation, with a membership of 15,000, hopes to poll most of the state's teachers. He said the 50 school districts would probably include some in Dallas, Houston, Austin and San Antonio.

Cole criticized efforts by the 1989 Legislature to equalize state aid to poor and wealthy school districts.

"Unfortunately, the Legislature failed to deal with the school finance issue in any meaningful way, and that is a time bomb that is ticking away at the heart of our whole education system," Cole said.

"Until it is dealt with, our education is going to continue to suffer," Cole said.

He said "it will be interesting" to see whether the survey results reflect the funding inequities, but that he didn't expect them to.

Some scientists today believe that a previously unknown natural anti-gravity force makes an iron weight fall more slowly, although to an extremely small degree, than an aluminum one, says National Geographic.

"The Tempest" scheduled

The Kismet Group Theatre opened its second stimulating season Thursday with The Tempest by William Shakespeare. A year's effort on the part of sculptor Mark Medina has created an impressive set for The Tempest; performance dates are Thursday through Sunday, June 15, 16, 17, 18.

Since last summer's debut season, Kismet is expanding into larger facilities and is introducing a new troupe of young, professionally trained actors. The actors come from a consortium of colleges primarily in New York. Kismet will also be using some of Amarillo's own actors.

The old post office at 608 Independence has been renovated by the Algonquin Cafe/Theatre. The Algonquin Cafe/Theatre is now the home of the Kismet Group Theatre.

Tickets range from $5-12. For more information call (806)358-1110 or write: The Kismet Group Theatre, 608 S. Independence, Amarillo, Tx. 79106.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR READERS:

Don't be a victim of credit-card fraud! Everyone pays for it, even if it doesn't actually happen to you. The Federal Trade Commission suggests the following precautions.

Sign your new cards in ink as soon as they arrive and carry them separately from your wallet if possible.

Keep a record of your card numbers in a secure place, their expiration dates and the phone number and address of each company.

When using your card, keep it in view whenever possible. Draw a line through blank spaces above the total when you sign card receipts and void or destroy all carbons and incorrect receipts.

Save your card receipts to compare with your billing statements and open billing statements promptly and reconcile your card accounts each month, just as you would your checking account.

Report immediately and in writing any questionable charges to the card issuer.

If you take these precautions, you may lessen the chances of being a victim of fraud. Believe me, it's not only costly but it can be annoying, so protect yourself. — Heloise

Three tied for Open lead UIL to study 6A proposal

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - For years, only his scores have been fat. Now, Jack Nicklaus is shedding strokes, too.

Winner of 18 major tournaments, the man called "Fat Jack" when he joined the PGA Tour in 1962 is bidding for yet another title - the 1989 U.S. Open.

"I don't know what's going to happen tomorrow or the next day," said Nicklaus, one shot off the lead after Thursday's first-round 67. "But at least it's shown me that I can still play a little, sometimes."

Bernhard Langer of West Germany, tour veteran Payne Stewart and newcomer Jay Don Blake shared the first-round lead at 4-under-par 66 on Oak Hill's 6,902-yard East course, where a week of rain turned putting surfaces from teflon to velcro.

"The course was surprisingly dry on the fairways," said Scott Simpson, who was tied with Nicklaus. "No roll, but the greens are holding, and that's good for scoring."

Also at 67 were Tom Kite, Joey Sindelar and Tom Pernice.

Langer, who had only one par in the final 10 holes, had eight birdies and four bogeys in his round. His bogey on the 18th prevented him from equalling the best round ever played here during three Opens - John Spray's 65 in 1968.

"It was kind of an up-and-down day," said Langer, the 1985 Masters champion. "I didn't think there were eight birdies out there. That kind of surprised me."

Nicklaus, 49 years old and in his 33rd straight U.S. Open, started the day with a bogey.

He finished the day without another bogey and four birdies, including a near eagle on the 594-yard, par-5 13th when he fired a 9-iron past the cup on his third shot, backed it up and just lipped it the hole, settling for a tap-in birdie.

Nicklaus won his last major in 1986, the Masters.

Rain fell only sporadically on Thursday, although more was forecast for today and possibly Saturday. Still, Langer agreed with most of the other golfers that it had helped scoring rather than hindered it.

"The greens must be playing a little easier," he said. "For one thing, you can hit a lot of shots more at the hole, and they may be putting just a touch slower."

"Still, the rough is very, very tough. It's wet and heavy, and the ball doesn't go anywhere, and you don't get any run on the fairways."

When Langer came to the 18th - a 440-yard par-4 - he was five under par after his only regulation hole on the back nine. He just barely made the 18th green with a 5-iron second shot, then 3-putted from 60 feet. That made up for the 60-foot birdie putt he made on the par-3 11th.

Stewart won the Heritage Classic earlier this year but has yet to win a major tournament.

"I don't think my career will be complete until I win a major," Stewart said. "I'm not saying I will, but I'm not saying I won't."

Stewart's first round was much the same as Langer's - up and down. He turned in 2-under 33, then got to four under with birdies at Nos. 12 and 14, both par-4s. He then bogeyed the 15th and 16th, and finished with birdies at 17 and 18, where he holed a 20-foot putt.

Blake, in his third year on the tour at age 30 and never a winner, had a more consistent round of 33-33. It included just one bogey, the 177-yard, par-3 15th, where he plopped a 6-iron 40 feet from the hole and three-putted. Kite shot 32-35, Simpson and Sindelar had 33-34, and Pernice shot 36-31 with four birdies on the back nine.

At 68 and two shots back were Nick Faldo of England, Kurt Beck, Dillard Pruitt, Larry Nelson and Raymond Floyd.

Defending champion Curtis Strange finished the day at 71. Seve Ballesteros of Spain, the No. 1 player in the world, shot 75 after bogeying four of the last seven holes.

AUSTIN (AP) - The University Interscholastic League policy committee says study is needed on proposals to add a Class 6A division to UIL competition and to change a rule allowing waivers for foreign exchange students to compete in UIL events.

Paul Smith of the Texas Tennis Coaches Association asked that the ban on foreign students be reinstated. "We feel that Texas students are being restricted in participation in UIL competition and being robbed of scholarships," Smith said Wednesday.

Ann Grabhorn-Friday, soccer coach at Anderson High School, said "a major purpose of the foreign exchange program is for us to be ambassadors of American and Texas goodwill."

"Texas hospitality is legendary, and it is sad to think that we are about to say, 'You kids are welcome, but only so long as you don't play interscholastic sports,'" she said.

A UIL staff member said 482 foreign exchange students were granted waivers to participate in UIL competition during the 1988-89 school year.

The 6A bracket would allow more equal competition by embracing schools with more than 1,571 students.

It is estimated it takes five years for a new franchise in the NBA to have a winning season.

based on 1987 enrollment figures, said Andy Griffin, football coach and athletic director at White Oak High School.

The plan would not increase loss of school or study time, and traveling distances would not be appreciably greater than the current five-division system, which has been in place since 1951, Griffin said. He said his plan would have 215 schools in the top division.

The key reason for the top conference is to reduce disparities in the enrollments of competing schools, he said.

"In the past, we have had schools twice as large as smaller schools in the same conference," Griffin said, adding that only in 6A would such a wide range of enrollment continue to exist.

Using 1987 enrollment figures, Griffin's plan would have 145 schools with 876 to 1,571 enrollment in 5A; 145 from 443 to 875 in 4A; 145 from 262 to 442 in 3A; 210 with 130 to 261 in 2A; and 118 with 129 and under in 1A.

Only two classifications, 6A and 2A, would have as many as 32 districts, allowing them no byes in the state playoffs.

UIL attendance figures for the 1988-89 and 1989-90 school years have schools with 1,470 and above in 5A; 740 to 1,469 in 4A; 300 to 739 in 3A; 145 to 299 in 2A; and 144 and below in 1A.

Policy committee members voted to ask the UIL Legislative Council, which formulates rule changes, to set up a committee to study the proposal. Griffin said polls he has conducted among his fellow coaches indicate 70 percent favor the addition of a 6A division.

Bill Farney, UIL athletic director, said the six-conference plan has been discussed previously but presented travel problems and never has been put to a vote by UIL member schools. Schools three years ago voted down a plan to set up a separate state football playoff bracket for the state's larger schools.

Policy committee members voted for a staff survey on a proposal to add spirit groups and drill teams to UIL competition.

Items presented at the meeting are expected to come before the UIL Legislative Council when it meets in October to consider possible rule changes.

Canadian steroid probe continues

TORONTO (AP) - Justice Charles Dubin, the man heading the Canadian drug inquiry called in the wake of the Ben Johnson scandal, figured he'd heard enough cheating stories to last a lifetime.

He heard one more on Thursday, and didn't like the sound of it.

This time it was Rob Gray, a champion discus thrower turned lawyer who spent four hours on Thursday confessing his use of the same muscle-building drugs that cost Johnson an Olympic gold medal and world record.

"You know it's cheating," the diminutive justice told the 6-foot-2, 260-pound Gray, who failed a drug test and is under a life suspension from the sport. "You aspired to a professional life. How could you?"

"Your desire to win takes over everything," Gray, 32, replied.

That did not satisfy Dubin, a shoemaker's son who spent 29 years as a defense lawyer before moving to the bench in 1973. He challenged Gray's contention that he was justified because everyone was doing drugs.

"You go to law school and I guess on occasion in your academic career, somebody would have cheated. Does that mean other people should follow suit?" Gray asked. "If I had started the profession of law and found out that all the top counsel were doing something that was against the rules ... and that was the way to get to the top ..."

"You would do it?" interrupted Dubin, his voice rising as he leaned forward in his high-backed chair.

"I don't know," Gray responded. The judge, looking increasingly disturbed after scolding Johnson for lying earlier this week, paused and studied the witness for several seconds.

"Where did this great desire to win come from?" he asked.

"From right here," Gray said, pointing to his chest. "From my heart."

Dubin, a lifelong sports fan, told the dark-haired, bearded lawyer the federal money he had received as an athlete was intended to "create the young Canadians who are going to be effective role models for others."

"You were a champion," Dubin said. "Wouldn't that dawn on you then: 'I can't do this; I'm supposed to be an example for others.'?"

Gray: "You wouldn't be a role model if you didn't do (drugs and win)."

Dubin: "That's a pretty poor role model, isn't it - to cheat?"

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Steve Howe, who hasn't thrown a pitch in the major leagues since a drinking incident ended his comeback attempt with the Texas Rangers, will be spending the coming weeks selling a new book.

Howe wrote "Between the Lines" with Jim Greenfield, a Philadelphia attorney and former newsmen, about his career, his cocaine addiction and recovery and the strains it put on his marriage, which has survived.

Howe, 31, doesn't rule out another comeback attempt and said several teams have shown interest in him, but would not name them.

"I'd love to be able to walk away from the game because I can't get anybody out anymore," he said. But the left-handed reliever who was the National League Rookie of the Year in 1980 and thrown out of baseball for cocaine and alcohol abuse, won't accept any offers until next season.

"I made the commitment to stay out of baseball for one full year," Howe said. "You have to understand that these commitments to myself are probably the most important things that I can keep for my recovery."

In an interview Tuesday, Howe was a reflective, humble man, far from the self-centered young upstart who thought he could control cocaine.

Howe, while pitching for the Los Angeles Dodgers, checked into a drug rehabilitation clinic in 1983 and was suspended from playing the 1984 season by then-commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Since then, he's played for the Minnesota Twins, the Texas Rangers, in the minor leagues and, last summer, for a semipro club in Mexico.

His last major-league stint ended when the Rangers terminated his two-year $1.2 million contract in January 1988 for an incident involving alcohol during a three-day minicamp.

At the start of his second season, in 1981, he said he was determined to prove he did not have a sophomore jinx. He kept his cocaine consumption to two or three grams a week, spending $3,000 in the four months between spring training and the players' strike.

"My case is a victory. By the grace of God we overcame this and I'm still alive. I still have my family. I still have so many things; I still have my health. I have a chance Lenny Bias will never get," he said of the University of Maryland basketball star whose death was linked to cocaine use.

LA takes Astros, 2-1, in another extra-inning game

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The Houston Astros underestimated Mariano Duncan, who helped rookie John Wetteland earn his first major-league victory.

Duncan hit a pinch single in the 11th inning to drive in Franklin Stubbs with the winning run as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat Houston 2-1 Thursday night to extend their winning streak to five.

"When I went up to hit, I was thinking squeeze," said Duncan, who pinch-hit for John Shelby. "If I didn't get the squeeze sign, I was looking for a pitch I could drive deep to the outfield."

Duncan's shot to center field bounced over the wall.

"We were going to get that run in no matter what," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said. "We were waiting to see how they were going to play it. My first thought was about the squeeze but we couldn't try the squeeze if they pitched out. Duncan eliminated the decision with his drive to center."

Stubbs led off the 11th with a single. After Mike Scioscia fouled off two pitches trying to sacrifice, Stubbs stole second. Scioscia then grounded to first base, moving Stubbs to third. Loser Juan Agosto, 2-2, intentionally walked Jeff Hamilton.

After a conference at the mound, the Astros brought their outfield in and pitched to Duncan. He hit the first pitch over the drawn-in outfield.

"I figured he (Duncan) hadn't played in a while," said Astros manager Art Howe. "I figured he'd be a little rusty but it sure didn't look like it. I didn't want to walk him because it would have put too much pressure on the pitcher with the bases loaded."

Wetteland pitched the 11th, allowing one hit, and struck out one.

"It was a great feeling getting my first major-league win," Wetteland said. "It's something I've dreamed about. The guys are really up right now. Five in a row is our longest streak of the season."

Wetteland was recently called up from the Dodgers' Triple-A affiliate in Albuquerque, N.M. "It was fortunate for me to get called up and seeing the Astros last week. I'm comfortable in knowing how I want to pitch to them," he said.

Tim Belcher pitched eight innings before leaving for a pinch-hitter. Belcher struck out eight of the first 11 batters and retired the side in five of the eight innings. He allowed four hits and struck out 10 while giving up one walk.

"I'd trade 10 strikeouts every time to get into the eighth or ninth inning with a chance to win the game," Belcher said. "I'd have a heck of a year if I could do that."

He allowed three hits and the Astros' only run in the fourth inning.

Louie Meadows led off the fourth with Houston's first hit, a single to center. Meadows stole second and advanced to third on Belcher's balk. After Belcher struck out Craig Biggio, Bill Doran singled to right, scoring Meadows. It was Doran's 999th career hit.

The Dodgers tied it in the eighth against reliever Dan Schatzeder. Alfredo Griffin walked and was sacrificed to second by pinch-hitter Dave Anderson. Kirk Gibson hit a high chopper to second baseman Doran. Unable to make a play on Gibson at first, Doran tried to get Griffin off third but threw wildly into the Dodgers' dugout as Griffin scored.

Gibson went to third on the two-base throwing error and Danny Darwin relieved Schatzeder. After walking Willie Randolph, he fanned Eddie Murray and Mike Davis.

Bob Forsch pitched the first seven innings, limiting the Dodgers to three hits.

"Forsch gave us seven strong innings, strong shutout innings," Astros manager Art Howe said. "He pitched super. I didn't expect him to go that far. He got us in a position to win the game. A 1-0 lead isn't like we blew the game."

Elsewhere, it was St. Louis 4, Montreal 3 in 10 innings; Atlanta 2, San Francisco 1; San Diego 1, Cincinnati 0 in 12 innings; Pittsburgh 5, Philadelphia 3; and New York 4, Chicago 3 in 12 innings.

Cardinals 4, Expos 3

At St. Louis, pinch-hitter Tom Pagnozzi singled home Milt Thompson in the 10th inning.

Pagnozzi's hit to right field came off Andy McGaffigan, 1-3, after Tony Pena's two-out RBI triple tied it for St. Louis in the ninth. Pagnozzi's single gave the victory to Todd Worrell, 1-1, as the Cardinals erased the Expos' early 3-1 lead.

Braves 2, Giants 1

At San Francisco, John Smoltz won his eighth game with a seven-hitter and Lonnie Smith homered.

Smoltz struck out nine and walked two in his third complete game of the year.

Padres 1, Reds 0

At San Diego, slumping Jack Clark broke up the scoreless duel in the 12th with a single that scored Mark Parent.

Parent singled with one out off Tim Lincecum, 2-2. After Garry Templeton singled Parent to second, Clark hit for reliever Greg Harris, 2-2. Kent Tekulve relieved Birtsas and Clark got his bloop hit.

Pirates 5, Phillies 3

At Pittsburgh, Doug Drabek didn't let three rain delays totaling two hours stop him. Drabek, 4-5, won his third straight decision.

He struck out seven, despite allowing solo homers to Randy Ready and Juan Samuel. Bob Kipper and Bill Landrum pitched the final two innings, with Landrum getting his third save.

Gary Redus and Jose Lind hit solo home runs for Pittsburgh. Randy Ready and Juan Samuel homered for Philadelphia.

Mets 4, Cubs 3

At New York, the Mets overcame a 3-0 deficit and outlasted the Cubs in the rain. Gregg Jefferies singled home the winning run with two outs in the 12th, ending a five-hour game.

Dave Magadan's two-out, two-run single gave the Mets a 3-3 in the ninth inning after Howard Johnson was walked intentionally.

Magadan drew a leadoff walk from Pat Perry in the 12th. Lee Mazzilli walked with two outs and Jefferies' third straight single scored pinch-runner Kevin Elster without a throw.

Orioles drop Yankees, 2-1

By The Associated Press

Rene Gonzales probably could roll out of bed on Christmas morning and get a base hit - as long as he was facing the New York Yankees.

A .203 hitter against everyone else in his 1 1/2-year major-league career, Gonzales raised his lifetime average against the Yankees to .370 with a two-out single in the 10th inning that gave the Baltimore Orioles a 2-1 victory Thursday night.

"I haven't played in a while (he was 0-for-9 and hadn't had a hit in almost two weeks), but he threw me the same pitch twice in a row and the second time I hit it off the hands, off the label, and it landed in deep shortstop," Gonzales said of his winning hit to short center off Lance McCullers.

In other American League games, it was Kansas City 5, Cleveland 4; Milwaukee 6, Toronto 4; Seattle 9, Minnesota 5. The Detroit-Boston game was rained out.

Gonzales' game-winning hit scored Mickey Tettleton, who opened the 10th with a double off McCullers.

"I'd be an idiot to say it's easy," said Gonzales, a utility infielder who came on after third baseman Craig Worthington was lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth. "Staying loose (to play defense) is nothing, but when you sit for weeks and have to go in and hit, it's different."

McCullers entered the game with a 2-1 lead after Richard Dotson scattered eight hits in seven innings and the Orioles promptly tied it on Randy Milligan's single, a stolen base and a single by Jim Traber, batting for Worthington.

Mark Thurmond, who pitched the 10th inning for Baltimore, was the winner. Jeff Ballard allowed two runs and 10 hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Royals 5, Indians 4

Bill Buckner reached 1,200 career RBIs by driving in three runs, two of them during a three-run eighth-inning rally.

The Royals trailed 4-0 after two innings and were behind 4-2 entering the eighth. But George Brett led off with a walk off Cleveland starter John Farrell and Bo Jackson singled off Doug Jones, who blew a save for only the third time in 17 opportunities.

One out later, Buckner doubled, scoring both runners. Pinch runner Bill Pecota went to third on Matt Winters' single and pinch hitter Pat Tabler grounded to second, scoring Pecota with the winning run.

Winner Bret Saberhagen gave up four runs and seven hits in seven innings. Jeff Montgomery and Steve Farr each pitched an inning, with Farr getting his 15th save.

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 4

Rob Deer hit two solo home runs and Gary Sheffield's seventh-inning sacrifice fly drove in the winning run.

Milwaukee reliever Tony Fossas earned his first major-league victory and Chuck Crim recorded his fourth save.

Mariners 9, Twins 5

Alvin Davis' grand slam off Steve Shields in the seventh inning gave Seattle a 7-5 lead and Greg Briley added a two-run homer off Lee Tunnell in the eighth. Infield hits by Omar Vizquel, Harold Reynolds and Briley loaded the bases before Davis hit the sixth grand slam of his career and his seventh homer of the season.

Reliever Dennis Powell retired the Twins in order in the sixth to gain the victory. Mike Jackson pitched the final three innings for his third save.

Nicklaus using old putter in Open

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - The old putter had been in and out of Jack Nicklaus' bag any number of times, tossed in the back of closet now and then, retrieved for a while and then discarded again.

It has been in semi-retirement since 1986 when Nicklaus rode a wave of birdies to his emotional triumph in the Masters. In its place, its owner used a fancy new stick, a longer one, equipped with a bigger head.

Old reliable was still there, though, you know, like an old friend you could always fall back on, just in case. On Thursday, Nicklaus decided it was time to do a little falling back.

So when he set off for the first round of the U.S. Open, Nicklaus had three replacement clubs in his bag, a wooden driver, a sand wedge he used last year, and the old putter.

They happen to be the three clubs a golfer uses most frequently, so when Nicklaus produced a 3-under-par 67, one stroke off the lead, his old sticks came in for some special attention.

The putter dates to 1962 and the Phoenix Open.

"The first five tournaments I played that year, I had no less than 34 putts per tournament," he said. "I tried a new putter and shot a 64 in the Pro-

Am. I've used it ever since except for a couple or three years."

Included in that putter's triumphs were Nicklaus' seven-stroke victory at the 1980 PGA, played, coincidentally at the Oak Hill Country Club, site of this year's Open.

Nicklaus remembered that and decided to put the old pal back in his bag along with the wooden driver and the sand wedge. Together, they produced results that bordered on the spectacular.

Logic tells you that Nicklaus can't win another major, not at age 49, not with his limited preparation, not with all the young lions out there.

But logic didn't matter at the 1986 Masters. And it didn't matter Thursday, even after some rather mediocre practice rounds.

"I had no reason whatsoever to believe I'd shoot three under," he said. "The way I played the last two days, there was no reason to believe that."

But with greens softened by week-long rains, Nicklaus' old putter performed flawlessly, much the way it had over this same layout nine years ago.

"I know I can play this course," he said. "I know I have played this course. If I'm seven strokes worse than

I was in 1980, which I think I am, at least I'm still in contention. That's a negative positive, I guess."

Perhaps it was the old putter, perhaps the wood driver, perhaps the resurrected sand wedge. Whatever the reason, Nicklaus shook down some thunder on drizzly Oak Hill.

For Nicklaus, it was plain, old-fashioned fun.

"To play a good round in the first round of the U.S. Open, that was fun for me," he said. "It showed me I can still play a bit at times."

Mahorn going from penthouse to outhouse

NEW YORK (AP) - Even the Minnesota Timberwolves felt a little sorry for Rick Mahorn.

The 6-foot-10 forward was a starter on the Detroit Pistons, who won the NBA championship on Tuesday night and were celebrating the victory Thursday when Mahorn learned he was now a member of the expansion Timberwolves. Mahorn left the party without comment.

"He went from world champion one day to 'Hello expansion' the next," player personnel director Billy McKinney said. "How would you feel about it?"

McKinney had a similar experience in 1980. He was on a successful Kansas City team, but was left unprotected and was taken by Dallas in the expansion draft.

"I'm sure I'd have the same reaction. In fact, I did," McKinney said. "He was left unprotected and he feels betrayed. He feels he's gone the extra mile for them and they didn't treat him right."

Mahorn was Minnesota's first of 11 selections in the expansion draft and second overall behind Sidney Green, who was taken by Orlando from the New York Knicks.

"Rick Mahorn is a professional," McKinney said. "It's been a great experience for him. He helped a team go from being good to being great. Now he can do the same for us."

Green, a backup forward-center for New York who figured to be a role player if he stayed with the Knicks, was delighted to be the first man on the roster of the Magic.

The 6-9 Green, who averaged 6.3 points and five rebounds for the Knicks, said it was "very complimentary of the Orlando Magic to make me the No. 1 pick. They saw someone they like. I'll play wherever they like. It's a challenge."

Green had no bitterness at all that he was left unprotected by the Knicks. "I wish them the best," he said.

Each NBA team except last year's expansion clubs - Charlotte and Miami - lost one player in the draft, with Orlando taking 12 players and Minnesota 11. Orlando won a coin flip Monday and opted to pick first in the expansion draft, while Minnesota will get the 10th pick and Orlando the 11th in the college draft on June 27.

Other players taken by Orlando were guard Reggie Theus of Atlanta, forward Terry Catledge of Washington, guard Sam Vincent of Chicago, guard Otis Smith of Golden State, guard Scott Skiles of Indiana, forward Jerry Reynolds of Seattle, center Mark Acres of Boston, guard Morlon Wiley of Dallas, guard Jim Farmer of Utah, forward-center Keith Lee of New Jersey and guard Frank Johnson of Houston.

Minnesota's other selections were forward Tyrone Corbin of Phoenix, forward-center Steve Johnson of Portland, forward Brad Lohaus of Sacramento, guard David Rivers of the Los Angeles Lakers, forward Mark Davis of Milwaukee, forward Scott Roth of San Antonio, forward Shelton Jones of Philadelphia, guard Eric White of the Los Angeles Clippers, guard Maurice Martin of Denver and West German center Gunther Behnke, whose rights were owned by Cleveland.

"We felt there were two ingredients we needed - a big rebounder to get us off to a good start and a scorer," said Pat Williams, president and general manager of the Magic. "We felt Sidney Green was the best rebounder available and Reggie Theus is a guy who can score a lot of points."

President Bob Stein of the Timberwolves said Mahorn was a key ingredient for the Pistons.

"It's hard to top being a starter for a championship team," Stein said.

McKinney said he would be happy with a starting front line of Mahorn, Steve Johnson and Corbin.

"If we can't sign any other frontcourt players, we'll still be happy," McKinney said. "We felt that going into it, we would get one of two players, Rick and Tyrone Corbin. I never dreamed both of those players would be available."

Minnesota also acquired a 1989 second-round draft pick from Milwaukee in exchange for taking Davis instead of another player.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS:

People say credit is the lifeblood of the economy. But when people don't pay their bills, they get into trouble.

I work for a collection agency. Every day I make at least 200 calls in an attempt to talk to people about their debts. You would not believe how nasty and abusive they can be.

Here is my message to all your readers who owe money:

1. Please be civil when I call. I want to help you before your creditor takes serious action.

2. Please don't tell me that you and your creditor have already agreed on a plan of convenient payment unless it is so. I will learn the truth eventually and your credibility will be damaged.

3. A check dated ahead is not illegal if it is sent to a collection agency. I'm required by law to hold your check, and if it is received more than 10 days before it is dated to go to the bank, I will send you a reminder in the mail.

I'm the only person who may be able to help you. So when I telephone or knock on your door, please be courteous and cooperative. I promise to do my best to work out a plan that will satisfy your creditors and make your life easier.--S.B., Dallas

DEAR DALLAS: Thanks for your letter. And now a word from me to those who owe money:

The worst thing you can do is try to duck the collector. If you demonstrate a genuine desire to pay, you will get plenty of help and your reputation will remain intact. Integrity pays off. Trust me.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A friend of mine recently married. Her father, who is above average, financially, gave her, his only child, a lavish wedding, costing more than $20,000. Everyone who went enjoyed it. No one criticized the parents for having such a lavish affair.

Another couple I know celebrated their son's bar mitzvah with a catered dinner at an elegant hotel. The cost was $22,000. Nobody said anything about the extravagant spending. A Catholic friend recently gave her son a confirmation party that cost $9,000. She had to borrow the money from her parents and her credit union.

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Olympic ice skater Tai Babilonia says she is ready to return to the rink, nine months after a suicide attempt during a time she "hit rock bottom."

Miss Babilonia posed with her skating partner Randy Gardner in Times Square on Monday to announce their professional return Wednesday at a show in Atlantic City, N.J.

"I'm excited about being back with my partner and scared to death about performing again," said Miss Babilonia. "But it was my decision to come back. I missed it."

Nine months ago, Miss Babilonia, 29, tried to kill herself by taking an overdose of sleeping pills.

Miss Babilonia and Gardner won the world figure skating title in Vienna, Austria, in 1979.

"PREPPING" FOR SURGERY

By Robert C. Park, M.D.,
President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Being prepared for surgery is an important for the patient as it is for the surgeon and the medical team. If you have been told you need an operation, you should know what you can do to prepare yourself, both physically and mentally, for the surgery.

The first thing you'll want to know is the type of surgery you need and when and where the operation will take place.

If you are having a minor operation, you may be scheduled for outpatient surgery (sometimes called same-day surgery). For this type of operation you don't need to go to the hospital. You can go to our doctor's office or a clinic, and you can go home the same day.

Major operations usually require a hospital stay or inpatient surgery. You will probably remain in the hospital for a few days after the operation so your doctor can monitor your progress.

Your body needs to be as healthy and strong as possible before an operation to ensure a speedy recovery. You may have to eat a special diet, stop taking medication, and get plenty of rest and exercise.

Most importantly, if you smoke, you should stop before your operation. To get the most benefit, you should stop at least two weeks before surgery. If you do stop, the risk of infection in your lungs will be lessened and you will be able to tolerate anesthesia more easily.

It's also important to have an empty stomach before an operation, so you should not eat or drink anything for at least six to eight hours before your surgery.

You should know as much as you can about your operation before you agree to it. This is called informed consent: it helps to assure that you know what to expect. It starts in your doctor's office - he or she will explain the details of your operation. Sometime before your surgery, you will be asked to sign a consent form that describes the operation, the reasons for it, and any risks involved. Don't be afraid to ask questions about anything you don't understand before signing the consent form.

Whether you have inpatient or outpatient surgery, your body will take a while to recover from an operation. If you have major surgery, it may be weeks before you are strong enough to resume your regular schedule, so it is important to cut back on some of your activities and get plenty of rest.

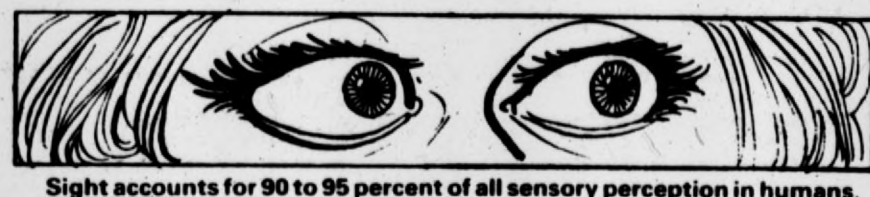

It is a normal reaction to feel anxious if you need an operation, but learning all you can about your surgery can help to conquer some of that fear of the unknown. It can also help you through a smooth recovery.

Limit fat, cholesterol

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine
Food Editor

You've heard, maybe from your doctor, that lowering the amount of fat you eat can cut your risk of heart disease and some cancers and can help keep you slim. The American Heart Association, American Cancer Society and other health organizations suggest a maximum of 30 percent of daily calories from fat and no more than 300 milligrams cholesterol. Here's how to translate these guidelines into good food choices.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS
- Eat five vegetables and fruits each day. These foods are packed with vitamins and minerals and most contain no fat. Because they're filling, you're less likely to eat high-fat foods.
- Some fruits (grapefruit, strawberries and apples) also are high in soluble fiber, shown to lower blood cholesterol levels. Vegetables, such as carrots, potatoes and broccoli, are great fiber providers, too.

LEGUMES AND GRAINS
- Eat legumes and grains often. Whole-grain breads and cereals, oat bran, brown rice, barley, dried peas, beans and lentils are underused by many Americans. They are excellent low-fat sources of complex carbohydrates and fiber.

LOW-FAT DAIRY PRODUCTS
- Dairy products are rich in protein and calcium, but low-fat versions, such as skim milk, low-fat cheeses and low-fat yogurt, are smarter choices for older children and adults. They contain far less saturated fat and cholesterol. One cup whole milk has nearly 50 percent of its calories from fat; skim, about 5 percent.

MEAT, FISH AND CHICKEN
- Choose lean meat, skinless chicken and fish - and be reasonable about portion size. A 3-ounce serving - a slice about the size of the palm of your hand - provides good amounts of protein, vitamins and minerals, but is low in fat and cholesterol.

TWO-THIRDS, ONE-THIRD
Dr. Paul LaChance, Rutgers University nutritionist, summarizes these recommendations with an easy-to-remember ratio for a healthy diet: Eat meals with two-thirds plant foods to one-third animal foods.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Crown Prince Frederik of Denmark, who has been studying winemaking from Robert Mondavi, apparently was allowed no wine before his time.

The prince was not permitted to drink wine during his five-month stay at the Mondavi's home until last month, when he turned 21, said the winery's Tim Mondavi. The legal drinking age in California is 21.

He was not allowed to have wine "even with his meals," said Tim Mondavi.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a male in my mid-30s and have been halfheartedly trying to stay healthy and keep my blood pressure down by exercising, lowering my saturated fat intake, lowering my salt intake and lowering my stress level.

When I exercise and sweat a lot, it seems to be very salty. Would this loss of body salt be equivalent to a decreased intake of salt? Or does the body realize that it has lost a certain amount of salt and strive to regain this salt through diet or salt retention mechanisms?

Men's fellowship to meet

The Full Gospel Business Mens Fellowship will meet Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Community Center.

Former Holly Sugar employee Leo Harper will be the featured speaker.

Caisson House Restaurant will cater the event.

DEAR READER: If you don't get enough salt, the body will develop a strong craving for salt intake and salty foods. People do lose a lot of salt with heavy sweating. And if the salt is not replaced, a healthy person can develop salt depletion. That is not likely to happen except in people who do a lot of physical work and sweat a lot. The condition is called heat exhaustion and causes such things as muscle cramps and even more serious complications.

Your body does indeed use mechanisms to balance its sodium, potassium, chloride and water content, but you can upset the balance with too much salt restriction in some situations. Even patients who take diuretics to lower their sodium content and avoid fluid accumulation can get into trouble if there is too much sodium loss.

If you eat normal foods without adding salt, your salt intake is not likely to be excessive. Your regular diet usually provides all the sodium you need unless you have excessive loss from sweating or some medical condition.

In the United States the average adult consumes between 1.5 to 6.5 teaspoons of salt a day. Adults actually need only about 200 mg of sodium or 513 mg of sodium chloride salt. That is about one-twelfth of a teaspoon of table salt.

Some foods naturally contain more sodium than others. I have provided some sodium and potassium values in common foods in Special Report 82, About Your Sodium and Potassium Balance, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/82, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

The National Research Council, part of the National Academy of Sciences, has just recently recommended that adults should limit their salt intake to no more than 6 grams a day, a little more than 1 teaspoon of table salt.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Would you please tell me what causes eyebrows to flake? My eyebrows suddenly became flaky after a summer holiday and I simply cannot seem to clear them. It is such a nuisance and I have never had this problem before.

DEAR READER: The skin always sheds, but in such small scales that you don't notice them. Larger scales from eyebrows are often indications of seborrheic dermatitis. It can result in reddening of the skin area involved. I don't think the cause is really known, but oily skin from an overproduction of sebum from the oil glands in the skin seems to be a factor, almost as if the skin were allergic to the sebum. Itching also occurs. Some dermatologists think a high fat intake contributes to it.

Keeping the hair and the eyebrows clean with frequent washing may help in some cases. In other cases a small amount of a non-oil base corticosteroid cream applied to the involved areas and the eyebrows seems to stop the inflammation and the flaking. You may need to see your doctor for some help in clearing the condition.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

NEW YORK (AP) - People who wish they were skinny might want to talk to actress Sandra Bernhard.

"Emaciation isn't all that it's cracked up to be," said the lanky comedian in the July issue of Mademoiselle magazine.

Over the years, she says, people have called her "spaghetti-legs," "bony maroney," "anorexic freak" and "will o' the wisp."

"I've been skinny for so long now, sometimes I'm known simply as 'the bone woman,'" she says. "Hordes of compulsive dieters constantly mill about me."

Many ask how she does it. "It's just the way I am; I eat and my metabolism knocks it out," Bernhard said.
