Final efforts to kill amnesty plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents are staging a last-ditch effort in the House to kill a plan to grant legal status to millions of illegal aliens living in the United States.

That vote is the final major decision the House has to make before completing work on a mammoth immigration control bill, the nation's first major revision of immigration law in 30 years.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. D-Mass., says that the bill will not survive if the amnesty provisions are stripped from the bill. President Reagan has said the measure is vital to a nation that wants to regain control of its borders.

Amnesty foe Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., has put forward an amendment to do away with any type of amnesty, charging that it amounts to a "slap in the face" for those who have waited years to enter the country legally and "rewards lawbreakers."

Advocates insist it is the only way to deal with much of the "shadow population" within our borders — estimated between 3 million to 6 million — and that large-scale roundups and deportations would not only be repugnant to today's society, but unfeasable.

After approval, the House bill goes to a conference committee where differences will be worked out with a similar measure passed by the Senate last summer.

The House bill allows illegal aliens who can prove they have been living and working in the United States since Jan. 1, 1982, to be given legal resident status. Those who cannot prove this could be deported.

The Senate's version is stricter, and sets up a two-tiered system. Under that approach only aliens who have continuously resided here since 1977 would be eligible for permanent resident status, and those who entered before 1980 would be granted temporary status.

An attempt to make the House bill comply with the Senate's was defeated by a 245-181 vote on Tuesday.

Business office for Snyder ISD adds computer

An IBM 36 computer was purchased by the Snyder school board Tuesday night to handle business and administrative office functions previously contracted to a local computer service firm.

The system was the low bid of four submitted using a combined total of equipment purchase plus a one-year maintenance contract.

The IBM 36 — which is compatible to systems used by the City of Snyder, Scurry County Appraisal District and Scurry County offices to include Cogdell Memorial Hospital — was purchased for $58,348.

The IBM submitted Tuesday was from the company's Lubbock office.

Other bids were offered by NCR of Abilene, $59,353; Data Creations of Abilene, $68,730; and Custom Computations of Lubbock, $92,817.

In addition Tuesday, the board voted to request that Superintendent Bill J. Hood remain at his current post through July 15. Hood's retirement was to go into effect June 30, the end of his contract year.

A two-week delay in the relocation of newly named Superintendent Bob Hawes prompted the extension.

Tuesday's school board session was a specially called meeting which included a budget study session for local trustees.

No board votes related to the budget were taken Tuesday. Hood speculated the board will likely not schedule any further budget study meetings until the adjournment of the special session of the state legislature.

One of the items expected to be decided during the session relates to pay raises for state teachers — an item which comprises some 70 percent of the total school budget.

45 students attend cheerleader camp

Forty-five cheerleaders representing nine West Texas schools are on campus at Western Texas College this week for the Annual All-Star Cheerleader Conference Camp.

The visiting cheerleaders represent Ira, Northside, Dawson Junior High, Runnels and Goliad Junior Highs of Big Spring, Borden County and Westbrook High School and Junior High.

They are spending the week studying basic yells, dance routines and partner stunts.

Activities at the four-day camp, which will end Thursday, are aimed at giving the students new ideas to incorporate in their routines in the fall. WTC Student Activities Director Mickey Baird is serving as director.

Two of the instructors for the WTC camp will go on to conduct cheerleading seminars in eight other camps this summer. They are Tracy Taylor of Findlay, Ohio and Kelly Sherman of Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Taylor willl be attending Miami University of Ohio in the fall while Sherman will return to the University of Wisconsin-Madison at the conclusion of the summer program.

Also instructing at the camp is Loretta Morris of Colorado City, who will be a sophomore cheerleader for WTC next year.

Two girls begin AFS foreign visit

Two Snyder girls will be participating in the American Field Service (AFS) scholarship program this summer.

Penny Noble, daughter of SHS athletic director David Noble and his wife, Jo Ann, left June 12 for Sri Lanka. She will return home August 29.

Shana Hart, daughter of Bob and Janice Hart, will be spending the summer in Brazil as an AFS exchange student. She will depart from Snyder on Saturday and will return home August 27.

Both Noble and Hart will be seniors at Snyder High School next fall.

Noble flew from Lubbock to Los Angeles for a one day orientation session before departing for Hawaii, Singapore and Sri Lanka, her final destination.

She will be attending classes in Sri Lanka this summer.

Noble will be staying with a family with the surname of Gunasekera. They are Sinhalese and Buddhists. They have two small boys, ages 7 and 9.

They live in Kaduwela, a small town approximately 15 miles from Colombo--the capital.

Noble's address in Sri Lanka will be: Asokarama Mawatha; Ihala

The feller on Deep Creek says, "You can't finish anything unless you start it."

Now we know why Terry Bowden owns a sporting goods store. Bowden is so versatile that he can fish and play golf at the same time.

Bowden, owner of Snyder Athletic Center, was playing in the WTC's mens golf association last Tuesday when he eyed a prize six-pound bass in the golf course lake.

Bowden pulled the bass in, but it was already dead. It seems that the pond at the golf course is so low, there's not sufficient oxygen to support the fish population.

Even Bowden would settle for one good round, one good catch and one good rain.

We sure wanted to attend, but it's our turn to mow the lawn.

We received one of those RSVP invitations in the mail last week. The invitation was for a seminar entitled "The Conservative Movement and the Media."

The conference is put on by the National Conservative Foundation and will discuss the need for fair and accurate reporting by the news media.

Cost for the one-day conference was anything but conservative--$400 per couple.

Now that summer has come, local churches are getting their traditional calls for financial assistance from travelers.

Miller Robinson recently got a call from a fellow checked in at a local motel. "I have a problem and need some of your members to come over and pray for me," he told Robinson.

The minister assured him that such help could be secured, but that most of the men of the congregation were probably on their way home from work.

"Could you come over here to the church office and talk to me. It's located in the west part of town at 37th and El Paso."

Then came the surprise response. "Man, that's way on the other side of town. I'll just call some other church," and he hung up.

Chamber rewards members for successful drive

Chamber members responsible for the success of the March 23-April 13 membership drive were given plaques Tuesday during the June meeting for the Snyder Chamber of Commerce.

Jack Denman, drive chairman, presented the plaques. He also received one for his efforts as chairman. Even though Roy Baze did not serve on a team during the membership drive, he received a plaque for his individual efforts in re-evaluating investments.

Director Murray Anne Ray received two plaques. One was for bringing in the most new members--16--and the other was for serving as captain of the team which brought in the most new member--22. Team members were Karen Carmichael, Phil Fortune, Faye Sims, Myra Martin, Frances Wiman and Max von Roeder.

John Greene received a plaque for bringing in the most money during the drive--$1,885. He was not present to accept the plaque.

Rod Waller accepted on behalf of his team which brought in the most money--$3,447.50. Team members were Cecil Boren, John Greene, Harvey Johnson, Carolyn House, Larry Lane, Guy Sullivan, Wedge Turner.

Other team captains were Gene Thomas and Troy Williamson.

The members of Thomas's team were Camille Hurt, Jackie Greene and Shannon Shane.

Williamson's team members were Don Cheek, Ronnie Hines, Wayne Hoskins, Jim Palmer, Roy Rosson, Gloria Shaw, Diana Allen.

Sixty-eight new members were signed up in all.

Two chamber sponsored projects on tap for later this summer include the combined July Fourth/-Centennial celebration slated June 28-July 4 and the national AJRA rodeo finals planned here for the week of August 13.

The upcoming July Fourth/Centennial celebration is being jointly sponsored with the Scurry County Historical Commission.

According to Ray, special projects chairman, "all plans for the celebration are going well."

The chamber also voted to sponsor a float in the July 3rd parade. The theme of the float will be "From Buffalo Hides to Community Pride."

According to Sammie York, chamber secretary, preparations for the 1984 AJRA finals are well underway. All contracts are back and 40 ads have been sold for the rodeo program thus far.

The AJRA committee--headed by Ralph Miller--has hit a major snag, York said. In the past, the com-

In Brief

Court affirms conviction

AUSTIN (AP) — An appeals court today affirmed the conviction of former Texas Supreme Court Justice Donald Yarbrough for escaping to a Caribbean island while still appealing a 1978 sentence of five years for lying to a grand jury.

One of three judges on a panel of the 3rd Court of Appeals, which upheld the conviction, dissented and said the trial court's judgment should be reformed to reflect acquittal.

Yarbrough was convicted of aggravated perjury in March 1978. He appealed the conviction and, free on $5,000 personal bond, moved with his wife, Julie, and three children to Grenada where he began studying medicine.

In August 1981, after the Court of Criminal Appeals had upheld his conviction, Yarbrough failed to appear for formal sentencing and officially became a fugitive.

Union contract canceled

HOUSTON (AP) — A bankruptcy judge today canceled a union contract between striking pilots and Continental Airlines, saying the carrier would be unable to recover from financial woes otherwise.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge R.F. Wheless, in a one-page opinion, said the decision was made after "reasonable efforts to negotiate a voluntary modification have been made and are not likely to produce a prompt and satisfactory solution ... and the parties' inability to reach agreement threatens to impede the success of the debtor's reorganization."

The airline filed for protection from its creditors Sept. 24 under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law. But the Air Line Pilots Association claimed that the carrier, formerly the nation's eighth largest, was abusing the law in order to abrogate the union contracts.

Carl Shriner is executed

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Carl Shriner, a boyish-faced drifter convicted of killing a convenience store clerk during a robbery in 1976, was executed today in the electric chair at Florida State Prison.

Shriner, 30, was put to death shortly after 7 a.m. for the Oct. 22, 1976, shooting of Judith Ann Carter in nearby Gainesville.

He became the 20th person in the nation and the sixth in Florida to be executed since the U.S. Supreme Court lifted its ban on the death penalty in 1976. Shriner's last-ditch bid for a reprieve was denied Tuesday by the high court.

About 35 opponents of the death penalty held a candlelight vigil in a pasture across from the prison, while about 10 supporters of capital punishment gathered in an adjoining field.

Tries to postpone term

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Attorneys for Texas millionaire Rex Cauble have asked the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to delay the start of Cauble's prison sentence until the court rules on a request for a new trial.

Cauble, 70, is scheduled to report to prison Friday in Big Spring for his 1982 conviction on charges of drug racketeering.

The 5th Circuit on Tuesday denied a motion by Cauble that sought to retain his nearly one-third interest in Cauble Enterprises, a business partnership that jurors determined was linked to the massive narcotics smuggling operation dubbed the "Cowboy Mafia."

"Essentially, he has to give (the company) up or at least his part of it," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Wes Rivers of Beaumont. "Basically, that will mean that our manager will be running things."

Reagan reverses position

ORADELL, N.J. (AP) — President Reagan said today he reversed his position against punishing states that fail to adopt a minimum drinking age of 21 because "the carnage must end, and now."

In a speech prepared for students, faculty and parents at River Dell High School here, Reagan said his decision may appear to be "at odds with my philosophical viewpoint that state problems should involve state solutions — and it isn't up to a big and overwhelming government in Washington to tell the states what to do."

But teenage drunken driving is "more than just a state problem," Reagan said. "It's a national tragedy involving transit across state borders. We just can't tolerate this anymore."

Stepmother finishes search

HOUSTON (AP) — Buren Melton spent nearly 37 years searching for his son, but died in October with his quest incomplete.

His wife, Shawnee, finished it Monday in a reunion with her 42-year-old stepson, Michael.

Michael Melton said he was sorry to learn his father was dead but happy to know he loved him.

"It was a bittersweet moment for me," Melton said of the reunion. "Sweet because I'd heard something, but disappointing" especially because he died so recently.

Mrs. Melton said her husband was separated from his son when the boy's mother went to California without letting the elder Melton know where she and their son were.

Buren Melton dedicated more time to the search for his son after he underwent heart bypass surgery three years ago, Mrs. Melton said. After his death, she said, she continued the search.

"A person has the right to know about his family," she said. "The only thing I wish is that we had found him before his father died."

Mrs. Melton said she found Michael through the Social Security Administration. The agency would not give her his address, but wrote his employer asking him to contact his stepmother.

Michael Melton received the letter last week and called his stepmother.

"I got the call, and when he said who he was, I just about had a stroke," Mrs. Melton said. "He called me five times in one day and asked me a bunch of questions. He wants to know all about his daddy. He wants his kids to know all about his people."

Michael Melton said he was overjoyed at meeting his stepmother, even though she had news of his father's death.

"This is a pretty close second to meeting my father," Melton said during the reunion. "At least now I know he did care for me."

Moms May Opt for Abortion If Adoption Records Opened

DEAR ABBY: On "Hour Magazine," you told Gary Collins that you were not certain of the number of states that permit sealed adoption records to be opened.

Abby, there are several states that permit the violation of confidentiality promised the birth mother at the time she signed the adoption papers. Can you imagine the terror of thousands of birth mothers who see this national push to open the records in the remaining states? Provisions can always be made for medical information to be made available to the adoptee, but to tell a young woman now that her name will be revealed in 18 years could drive many straight to the abortion clinics.

Efforts are being made in our state legislature to try to get a bill through to close the loophole inadvertently created in order to protect the privacy of Pennsylvania birth mothers.

CONCERNED IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR CONCERNED: Other states where birth records are opened without the mutual consent of birth parents and adoptees are Alabama and Kansas. In Pennsylvania (and eventually in the remaining 47 states), at issue is whether or not adoptees have the right to know the identity of their natural parents, even if the parents do not wish to be identified.

I personally feel that only if all concerned parties want to meet should a meeting take place.

As it stands today—and I am not condoning it—the only way a prospective unwed mother can be absolutely certain that her unplanned pregnancy will never be disclosed is to opt for an abortion.

DEAR ABBY: I've never written before, but after reading the letter from "Needs Your Help"—the mother who returned her adopted baby because she wasn't meant to be a mom—I had to thank you for telling that woman that she wasn't a failure, she should be applauded for her courage and integrity.

How many kids do we see on the streets today who were unwanted and neglected by uncaring parents? None of us asked to be born; who needs resentful, hostile parents to boot?

Please tell "Needs Your Help" that if she had kept her baby, she would have been a failure. Her uncomfortable, angry feelings would have been transferred to her child and her husband in the years to come, warping her marriage and any sense of family.

Unfortunately, I speak from experience. I was an adopted child who wishes I had been left in the orphanage. After many years of counseling, group therapy and psychotherapy, plus thousands of dollars for same, I learned that the confusion and bad feelings I had came from a mother who did not want to be a mother. My adoption was not a "blessing," and the only tie I have to my adoptive family is a legal document.

I wish there were more people like "Needs Your Help." After my experience, I have no intentions of becoming a parent. I had a vasectomy at age 35 just to make sure.

Brileys caught

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Twenty heavily armed FBI agents took two death row inmates from Virginia by surprise thanks to "patience and intensive surveillance" around the home of the convicted murderers' uncle, authorities said.

James Dyrel Briley and Linwood Earl Briley were arrested without a struggle Tuesday night outside a car repair shop in a poor residential neighborhood of north Philadelphia.

The arrests ended a manhunt from North Carolina to Canada that began May 31 when the Brileys escaped from the Mecklenburg Correctional Center near Boydton, Va., with four other convicted murderers.

The Brileys were to be arraigned today before a U.S. magistrate on charges of unlawful flight to avoid confinement, said FBI agent John L. Hogan. He said they probably would waive extradition to face the charges in Virginia.

The Brileys' uncle, Johnnie Council, 45, of Philadelphia, was also to be arraigned on a charge of unlawful harboring of a fugitive, said Hogan.

The FBI agents moved cautiously in the final hours of their quest to capture the Brileys, who were convicted of nine murders between them, fearing one slip-up would doom their efforts at rounding up the last of the six escapees, Hogan said.

Paul Harvey

Government money is much like a narcotic.

When government money was cut off for certain social programs the "withdrawal" was painful.

When there was less "money from Washington" you heard the outcries:

"Reagan ignores the poor...."

"Homeless will perish...."

"Cities will burn...."

None of which happened.

Now in city after city, citizens, corporations and foundations have mobilized their resources. Neighborhood volunteers are doing for themselves things government used to have to hire done.

In my home-base city of Chicago 750 voluntary organizations are solving neighborhood problems more effectively than when they were leaning on allocatons of tax money.

Philanthropic support is supplanting government support.

A local Initiatives Support Corporation, financed mostly by private grants and staffed mostly with volunteers, is helping fund low-income housing.

The Latino Institute and the Community Renewal Society are training staff and otherwise assisting neighborhood organizations which have good intentions but lack expertise.

Lawndale residents are mobilizing their own response to the local area's gang violence — and with demonstrable effectiveness.

It's been reassuring, exciting, to watch what homefolks can do when they have to.

In Chicago's diverse neighborhoods no "outsider" can comprehend the complexity of ethnic, emotional, economic and social problems.

But American Enterprise Institute, researching "the Reagan years," concludes that indigenous organizations are revitalizing distressed communities "dynamically."

Whole neighborhoods are being face-lifted with an infusion of private funds.

There is an acknowledged "ego involvement" in philanthropy. None would argue that it's mostly one man's ego which gave the organization PUSH its push.

This "ego involvement" is convertible to community pride when any neighborhood responds to its own problems.

De Tocqueville marveled at this phenomenon. I still do.

I'm watching Chicago — a neighborhood at a time — attack problems of drugs, pollution, housing deterioration, unemployment, domestic violence, inadequate municipal services.

No — all these problems will not be resolved neatly and promptly and completely. Maintaining a country, a city, a neighborhood — or a homestead — requires ceaseless fence-mending, renovation and repair.

But Americans are relearning to do for themselves.

May defy banks

CARTAGENA, Colombia (AP) — Eleven Latin American countries faced with more than $300 billion in foreign debts appeared to be divided today on whether or not to defy banks pressing them for payments on loans.

"There has been some pretty strong talk about refusing to pay those loans," one delegate said after financial experts of the 11 nations met privately for six hours Tuesday.

The source asked to remain anonymous because many of the delegates feel that an appearance of close ranks is the most important accomplishment they can achieve at the meeting, which was called to decide what, if anything, can be done about high interest rates. The meeting is to continue through Friday.

Latin America has a foreign debt of about $350 billion. The 11 countries which sent delegations to the Cartagena meeting owe about 90 percent of that to foreign banks, many of them U.S. banks.

Countries such as Mexico, Brazil and Colombia are prepared to keep trying to work with banks to get out of the debt crisis that is causing economic recession in Latin America, the source said.

Inconsistency

NEW YORK (AP) — "Inconsistency is the best way to describe mail delivery," concluded a society of businessmen who decided to test the U.S. Postal Service.

Last July, members of the New York Society of Association Executives mailed 363 letters to each other, all in Manhattan. Of those letters, 152 reached their destination the following business day. Another 77 letters arrived on the second day, while 30 more showed up on the third day.

But 27 of them didn't arrive until the fourth day or later, while 77 letters disappeared altogether.

Bermudians have an easy-going attitude about time. They keep the clock at the ferry terminal in Hamilton five minutes slow, so passengers won't miss the boat.

Retirement communities differ in age and lifestyle

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

There are lawsuits going on all over the country as to whether the owners of so-called retirement communities can set limits on the ages of its residents.

It's easy enough to regulate that you cannot live in this or that condominium or cooperative complex unless you are over 55 or 60 or 65. It's what occurs later that is causing the problems. What happens, for instance, if circumstances force an elderly couple to bring up their grandchildren? And even if it is only for a temporary period, what is a temporary period — a month, a year, five years?

Is a couple in their late 60s who chooses a retirement community so that they can live in peace and quiet for their remaining years entitled to do so? How is this state achieved if the couple next door are faced with the necessity of raising two or three small grandchildren who cannot possibly or compassionately be silenced 24 hours a day every day in the week? What happens when a couple's child, someone between 35 and 45, for example, gets into a family or financial tangle that forces him or her to live with the parents in a retirement area where the minimum age limit is 60?

These are not isolated cases. They are happening all the time, which is why the courts are filled with legal battles among owners, mortgage holders, homeowners' associations and assorted other individuals and groups. Decisions do not come easily, because there is so much to be said for either side. And courts in different states have issued what appear to be contradictory decisions, which in many cases actually are not, because the circumstances are seldom the same.

The retirement community idea really got rolling in 1960 when Del Webb started Sun City in Arizona. After a slow start, it took off like a rocket and in a matter of years became a sizable city, so much so that a second Sun City, called Sun City West, was started nearby and has grown steadily.

There are even bigger developments than the original Webb project. Many builders are using various methods of getting around the possible legal squabbles over age limits by lowering them considerably and making all kinds of exceptions.

Several communities have no strict age requirement except that no children under 18 are permitted, which solves some but not all of the problems. Some have lowered the age limit to 40 and there is at least one that uses 35 as the cutoff age. From the builders' standpoint, of course, the more buyers the better, but they always have to consider the possibility that some purchasers will be scared off if the age limit isn't high enough.

Another angle to be considered is that some elderly people don't want to live in a community where everybody is as old as or older than they are. I recall reading some years ago about a retirement village where some residents were disturbed because an ambulance was always parked in a highly visible space. They didn't want to be reminded constantly that someday they might have to ride in it. Yet, when a poll was taken, it showed the majority of the residents liked the presence of the ambulance as a reminder that help was close at hand if it were needed.

Today, probably because the elderly have more money than they had when retirement housing started 25 years ago, the higher-priced retirement houses sell at least as quickly as — or more often that not, more quickly than — medium-priced homes, condos or coops. In one new development in Tampa, Fla., boasting such amenities as a spa, piped-in music, an underwater stereo system in the swimming pool and a total solar system, the houses cost $250,000. And, so far, the elderly are snapping them up.

If you are 50 years of age or older, what's your opinion on whether you prefer to live in a retirement community where there is an age limit? So that we can categorize the replies by age groups, please give your age. Write to Andy Lang, AP Newsfeatures, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, NY 10020.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

One of the most interesting features of the American Bridge Teachers' Association Quarterly is a hand described in poetry by Arthur Weinstein. The hand is unusually good; the poetry is below the Shakespeare level. In today's hand, all the players are lifers in a high-security prison. In addition, South is a card mechanic. So it is not surprising that South bid seven with his 34-point hand. North's two-diamond response showed anything from no points up to a lot more.

The play at seven hearts was simple. South won the spade lead with his ace, drew trumps with three leads, and cashed the top diamonds and the spade king. Then came the key play. He ruffed the spade queen in dummy, discarded the deuce of clubs on the jack of diamonds, took the club finesse and was home.

Most of the rest of the field were in six no-trump, down one. In no-trump there was no way to get to dummy.

The last two lines of the Joker's poem are worth repeating:

"An appeals committee was destined to fail.

What could they do, throw him in jail?"

BOOK REVIEW

AFTERMATH. A Soldier's Return from Vietnam. By Frederick Downs Jr. Norton. 222 Pages. $12.95.

"Aftermath" is a war story that begins where most end. For author Frederick Downs Jr., the big fight started after he was felled by a land mine in Vietnam. The turf at stake was his own body.

In the tense opening scene, he watches a nurse drop his severed left arm into a plastic bag, "gone forever," as he puts it simply and without melodrama.

It is typical of the way Downs is able to examine himself and his feelings with precision. The book appears 16 years after its author was wounded and his long wait to set intimate feelings down on paper serves the reader well.

Downs tells the story of his recovery from death's door with a combination of detachment and a self-knowledge earned the hard way.

The story takes us through Downs' struggle with his own will to live; with his pain and problem with drug dependence; with isolation and anger and fear of returning to society. It does all this in a concrete way, telling in detail about what it is like to have an artificial arm, for example.

The book's compelling tone weakens only on the few and probably understandable occasions when Downs lapses into a bitterness he has for the most part overcome. He cannot resist a few jabs in print at a doctor he felt treated him poorly, for example.

"Aftermath" is a book for anyone concerned with the healing process; it gives the patient's point of view. It also is a good addition to the expanding literature on Vietnam.

Slave's descendants file suit

WACO, Texas (AP) — A Dallas attorney says that the descendants of a Texas slave who are staking claim to 3,000 acres of land in Central Texas have a chance of owning the land "if we could get a jury that's willing to listen."

Donald Hicks, who filed suit in federal court Tuesday in an effort to reclaim the land for 70 descendants of Alexander Willis, said that his own skepticism over the Willis family's claims to the land vanished after he researched and studied historical documents.

"The more I dug into it, and the more information I received, I realized that what these plain old lay people were saying was true," said Hicks. "If we could get a jury that's willing to listen, we stand a really good chance."

The suit filed Tuesday in federal court coincided with Juneteenth — the anniversary of the day Texas blacks first learned about the Emancipation Proclamation.

Texas' Juneteenth celebration, or June 19, commemorates the freeing of the state's black slaves in 1865, said Hicks.

President Abraham Lincoln freed the slaves in 1863, but Texas blacks did not learn about the Emancipation Proclamation for 2½ years.

Tuesday's lawsuit contends the land, near Oakwood in Freestone County, was illegally taken from slave Anderson Willis more than 85 years ago.

"We were easy pickings," said Hicks, a black. "Every black person in the state of Texas can relate to this lawsuit."

About 300 people gathered for a picnic later Tuesday, Hicks included, to celebrate both Juneteenth and the filing of the suit.

Just as blacks are celebrating their emancipation from slavery, Willis' descendents are hoping to celebrate their emancipation from "an inability to hold property because of their race and conditions of slavery," he said.

Hicks said Willis could not read or write, but that his purported signature was found by several of his descendants on Freestone County records concerning a land transaction. Willis' heirs contend the signature was a forgery.

Willis' granddaughter, Jeannette Adkins, 61, of Carrollton, said Tuesday that she had lived on the land until she was 16.

"We know that the land belongs to us," she said. "We feel if justice is ever going to be evident, it will be at this time. We were told as children that the land was taken away from us. We were told the reason we didn't get it back was because we were black. If a white man said something, that was the law."

The lawsuit named 23 people who have claimed ownership of the land since the original transfer arpund 1899, Hicks said. It was brought against the estate of John Riley, who was the first owner of Willis' former land, and "people who are current record owners of certain portions of the land," he said.

Hicks said Willis was cheated out of his 2,986 acres of land because of his race.

The attorney said he plans to show evidence of violations of the 13th and 14th amendments, and the Civil Rights Act.

Cheerleader camps...

Morris picked as instructor

Loretta Morris, a freshman cheerleader at Western Texas College for the 1983-84 season, will be teaching at cheerleading schools this summer as a member of the All-Star Cheerleader Conference in Kansas City, Mo.

Her first assignment as an instructor was to WTC for the annual camp there. Also working with the students at WTC are Tracy Taylor of Finlay, Ohio, and Kelly Sherman of Sheboygan, Wis.

The All-Star Cheerleader conference holds about a hundred camps nationwide each summer. They have a total of 17 instructors divided into six groups this year. Morris's group will go next to Durango, Colo., for a camp at Fort Lewis College and then to a camp at the University of Southern Colorado at Pueblo.

"Our schedule can be changed," Miss Morris says, "but at this time we are due to visit in eight states outside Texas." She attended a week-long training period in Kansas City before beginning the camp tour.

The ASCC selects its instructors from applicants from colleges and universities throughout the United States. Another WTC student, Kathy Brzozowski of Wylie, was selected to beome an ASCC instructor some years ago.

LORETTA MORRIS

If the present schedule holds, Morris will go from Colorado to Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Ohio. The instructors travel by car and are responsible for packing and unpacking all their supplies at the various locations as well as conducting the training sessions.

Morris was a cheerleader at Colorado High School and has wanted to teach cheerleading as well as practice it.

"I know this summer is going to involve a lot of hard work, but I'm really looking forward to it," she said.

At WTC, Morris is a member of the Psi Zeta chapter of Phi Theta Kappa, a national honor fraternity for students in junior colleges, and of Psi Beta, a national psychology group. She is a pre-nursing major and plans to continue her studies at West Texas State University after graduation from WTC. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Morris of Colorado City.

Boy who donated organs "young hero"

CHICAGO (AP) — When John Brennan buries his son today, he'll remember him as a "young hero" — not just for what he did in his 15 years of life but for a legacy of hope he leaves to six strangers.

Terry Brennan, who died Sunday, has given two critically ill people a second chance at life through donations of his heart and liver. Four others received the youth's kidneys and eyes.

Montessori teaches discipline

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Maria Montessori did not believe in failure, especially for children. "Never let a child risk failure," she wrote, "until he has a reasonable chance of success."

To give children chances for success, Montessori developed a system of education that is worldwide today. Sarah Matheny, Lamar University assistant professor of elementary education, calls it "an alternate way to educate young children."

A basic philosophy that no human being is educated by another, but each individual educates himself, and unique materials designed to create a "prepared environment" mark the method.

"A child needs an opportunitiy to learn on his own and know that it's his responsibility," Ms. Matheny says. "Learning comes from within." The Montessori method and materials give children that opportunity.

"Because it's self-motivating and self-correcting" is the reason Janice Blackwell of Port Arthur, a former teacher, chose Montessori training for her son Zachary.

Each child works on his own and learns self-discipline through absorption in meaningful tasks. He may investigate the "smelling jars," bells or fabric swatches or work with sandpaper letters used to introduce the alphabet.

Or he could work with the spindle boxes, gold beads or some of many concrete materials that prepare him to deal with abstract number concepts.

"I knew it developed wanting to learn in a structured situation," says Denise Schuchardt, who found a significant change in the attitude of Ashley, 4, under Montessori training.

"She keeps me busy. When I pick her up, she's more relaxed, because she has been stimulated and kept busy."

"I'd rather be working," Ashley says, explaining why she enjoys school.

Chances for boredom are pretty slim when a child can go from practical life, sensorial and basic academic areas to geography, science, grammar, history or creative art areas with materials designed to satisfy his natural curiousity.

"I like the aspect that the children are shown the proper way to use materials and must put them away," says Carolann Gerhard, who did not want her daughter Christina, 4, pressured into schoolwork but believed she would benefit from choosing activities at her own interest level.

Montessori, born in Italy in 1870, began developing the materials that keep Ashley so busy when she was working with retarded children after her graduation from the University of Rome medical school.

"Working with deficient children, Montessori saw that the children were lacking not mental capacity but correct pedagogy and teaching material," Ms. Matheny says. The materials and methods proved effective for normal and gifted children also.

Lecturing, writing, training teachers and founding schools, Montessori came to this country in 1913, but an early burst of enthusiasm for her methods faded until after her death in 1952. Since then, the renewed movement has grown tremendously, especially in the last 10 years, Ms. Matheny says.

"The key to the method is learning activity for its own sake," Ms. Mathany says. She points out its main premises: respect for children as individuals who differ from each other and from adults, recognition of children's unusual power to absorb through the senses and learn from the environment.

Also, awareness of the enormous importance of the first six years of growth when absorbed learning moves to the conscious level. And finally, realization that a child loves and needs purposeful work.

Chamber reports at meeting

mittee has rented temporary stalls for use during the rodeo but since that company is now out of business some other arrangements must be made.

York characterized the problem as "major" because without the stalls Snyder might lose the AJRA finals in the future.

Mort Ewing, chamber manager, said that they are in the process of exploring several ways to solve this problem and that they are currently looking at some type of permanent stalls. More should be known sometime this week, he said.

Ewing also indicated that Scurry County Commissioners are very agreeable to working with the chamber regarding a solution to the problem and all directors present for the meeting expressed a willingness to help in any way they could.

Another project already in the works is a big "Shop at Home" promotion slated for the Christmas buying season. Director David Thompson said one idea currently being finalized is having a drawing for a car to be purchased from a local dealership and to be given away during this promotion.

Participating merchants will be charged an amount still to be determined for the remainder of the year to help defray the costs.

Bumper stickers are also being considered Director Phil Fortune reported.

Director Troy Williamson reported that the Cultural Affairs Committee is currently working up a calendar of events. It was also noted that since Western Texas College has already budgeted for separate air-conditioning units for the museum and the fine arts theatre that those facilities will also be able to be used for weekend events during the summer.

Director Roy Baze, who is also a WTC trustee, reported that the college trustees have already taken bids for the project.

The chamber will also be sponsoring a "Sparkle II" clean-up, fix-up and paint-up campaign to commence after the July Fourth/Centennial celebration and to encompass the months of July through September.

Williamson also reported that the Leadership Committee is in the process of planning events for the coming year. New officers will also be elected.

Directors attending were Jarrell, Thomas, Fortune, von Roeder, Williamson, Thompson, Baze, Ray, Denman, and Jerry Vestal.

Chamber personnel attending were Ewing and York.

Police work bicycle theft

Snyder police are investigating a bicycle theft reported Tuesday night.

Jim Sturdivant of 2403 31st St. reported at 8:51 p.m. that a boy's 10-speed bicycle had been stolen from the residence sometime between 5 and 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Value of the missing bike was estimated at $125.

In other action, city police arrested one subject for public intoxication Tuesday evening.

Two wrecks here Tuesday

Two minor traffic mishaps were reported in Snyder Tuesday afternoon.

The first occurred in the 900 Block of 26th St. at 2:11 p.m.

Involved in it were a 1984 Toyota van driven by Barbara Kyle Harr of the WTC Dormitory and a 1974 Pontiac driven by Jack Gene Maddox of Rt. 3, Snyder.

Harr was taken from the scene to a private physician's office by private vehicle for treatment of minor injuries sustained in the accident.

Tuesday's second accident was reported at 2:54 p.m. in the 1000 Block of 25th St.

According to reports, a 1976 Chevrolet driven by Michael Robert Kirby of 100 37th St. was in collision with a 1976 Harley Davidson motorcycle driven by James Rober Parmer of 2805 Ave. F.

No injuries were reported.

Car fire is doused

Snyder firemen extinguished a car fire in the 3900 Block of College Ave. shortly before 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Western bounces back; competing well at rodeo

BOZEMAN, Mont. -- After a dismal start here Monday, Western Texas College is beginning to warm up to the competition in the College National Finals Rodeo.

For some, however, it was too late.

Kellie Kyle led the WTC troops Tuesday, flashing a 14.25 to take an early lead in the second-go round of the barrel race. Combined with her previous run of 14.91, she is winning second in the average. There were 30 barrel racers still to compete in the second round, including WTC's Judy Cox, who timed a 14.83 in the first-go.

Shane Smith turned in back-to-back 66s in the saddle bronc competition for a total 132 which stands third in the average heading into Wednesday night's performance. He also scored 57 in bareback competition.

"I think Kellie has a real good chance to make the finals. Shane may make the top 10 (and thus qualify for Saturday's finals). It's going to be close. We'll just have to wait and see," said Western Texas College Coach Bob Doty.

While Western did considerably better Tuesday, Monday's series of no-times and no-scores took its affect. Snyder's Van Hale scored a 69 in saddle bronc Tuesday, but he had bucked off on his first-round and thus appears to have no chance of making the finals. The same was true of Kyle in breakaway roping, who timed in an 4.5 here Tuesday. Added to her 12.8 of the first-go, her average time will not qualify for the finals. Canita Cass turned a 6.0 in the second-go of the breakaway and will also be out of the finals in that event.

The trend continued as C.J. Urbanek was timed at 5.8 and Gary Rowe at 7.7 in steer wrestling. Both missed their steers in the first-go, however.

In the only other WTC-involved outcome Tuesday, Smith chalked a 64 on his first bull, ranking 21st of of the 29 that rode.

"He has a pretty fair bull in the second-go. It's hard to ride, but he can get some points off of it if he can stay on," said Doty.

WTC entries tonight will be Cox in the breakaway roping (missed in first-go) and the goat tying (10.5 first-go), Smith in the bull riding and Cass in the barrels (15.77 first-go).

Cox's second-go in the barrel race will be held Thursday.

"I was pretty disappointed after the first day because I felt like we hadn't done as well as we could have, but everybody seemed to try real hard yesterday and last night. It makes a difference," said Doty. "I was a lot happier with the way we performed Tuesday."

The University of Wyoming and Southwest Texas State University are tied at 180 points apiece to lead the men's standings. Sam Houston State leads the women's with 160, followed by McNeese State with 120. Western did not poll any points in the first-go.

SAFE SLIDES -- In the two photos above, the Little League Braves stole a base when Kevin Holt came sliding into third. Defending on the play was Cubs' third-sacker Fletcher Davis. Davis was in position, but the throw was late. A closer play saw the Cubs' Tracy Braziel edge out Braves' third baseman Brad Sullivan (photo at left) later in the game. The action came from last weekend. Both teams won yesterday (Tuesday), incidentally, with Holt providing two homers, including a grand slammer; Sullivan hitting two singles; Davis rapping a double and Braziel picking up winning pitcher honors. Lewis grabs 3rd spot; even gets drafted again

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials are proving no tribulation for the amazing Carl Lewis.

In the pressure-packed tests during which the slightest error can cost an athlete an Olympic berth, sprinter-long jumper Lewis has confidently - and spectacularly - nailed down spots in three events on the U.S. team.

"Three down and one to go," a smiling Lewis said Tuesday night after he'd long jumped 28 feet, 7 inches, fourth best ever outdoors, to win the trials final.

Earlier in the day, he blazed to a 19.84-second clocking in a qualifying heat of the 200 meters. That was the second fastest ever in a 200 not run at high altitude, topped only by his 19.75 of last year. The world record of 19.72 was set by Italy's Pietro Mennea in the high altitude of Mexico City.

Lewis had won the 100 meters Sunday in 10.06 to earn berths in the sprint and on the 400-meter relay team. Now, only the 200 semifinals and final on Thursday, following a day's break in the trials today, stand between him and the chance to realize his dream of duplicating Jesse Owens' four gold medal performance in the 1936 Olympics.

Lewis' talent and versatility also received a tribute from another quarter while he was competing Tuesday. The Chicago Bulls selected Lewis, who earlier had been picked by the Dallas Cowboys in the pro football draft, on the 10th round of the National Basketball Association draft.

"Soccer's next," he quipped.

Lewis' rather remarkable peformances Tuesday were only part of an impressive show enjoyed by the Los Angeles Coliseum crowd of 21,081. Two American records, including one that had stood for a decade, also fell.

Winner Earl Jones and runner-up Johnny Gray each were timed in 1 minute, 43.74 seconds in the men's 800-meter final, shattering the record of 1:43.91 set by by Rick Wohlhuter in 1974.

Chandra Cheeseborough won the women's 800 meters in a national record of 49.28, bettering the standard of 49.83 set by Valerie Brisco-Hooks just 10 days earlier. Brisco-Hooks also ran faster than her old mark, finishing second in the final in 49.79.

In other highlights, Kim Gallagher took the women's 800 meters in 1:58.50; gold medal favorite Greg Foster won the men's 110-meter hurdles in 13.21; Karin Smith won the women's javelin with a throw of 200-9; and Paul Cummings ran a 27:59.08 to win the men's 10,000 meters.

Murray slams Orioles past Boston Sox, 9-7

by The Associated Press

For seven innings, it was a game that Eddie Murray would like to forget . . . then he made it one to remember.

A strikeout victim his first three times at bat, the Baltimore first baseman suddenly turned things around with a grand slam home run in the eighth inning, then punched a two-run single in the ninth to help the Orioles pound out a 9-7 victory over the Boston Red Sox on Tuesday night.

"I hadn't looked that bad in a long time," Murray said of his three strikeouts. "We were really flat early in the game, but then everybody contributed in the last couple of innings."

Murray's homer came on a pitch from reliever Bob Stanley and sailed about 450 feet, over the Boston bullpen and about 15 rows into the bleachers in right-center in Fenway Park. It was his 14th homer of the season and the eighth grand slam of his career.

In other AL action, it was Detroit 7, New York 6; Milwaukee 6, Toronto 5; Cleveland 7, Minnesota 4; Texas 4, California 2; Kansas City 6, Oakland 2, and Seattle 8, Chicago 2.

The Baltimore victory went to Bill Swaggerty, 2-1, who pitched a perfect eighth as the third Orioles hurler. Tippy Martinez protected the lead in the ninth for his ninth save. Stanley, 1-6, took the loss.

Murray's heroics overshadowed the performance of Boston's Jim Rice, who drove in four runs with his 13th homer and a single.

Tigers 7, Yankees 6

Rusty Kuntz's two-run single highlighted a four-run eighth inning to boost Detroit over New York.

A one-out single by Larry Herndon with the bases loaded had tied the game at 4-4, and Kuntz followed with his single off Yankee left-hander Ron Guidry, 5-5, to score the winning run.

The loss went to Aurelio Lopez, 6-0.

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 5

Jim Sundberg singled in the winning run with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to lead Milwaukee over Toronto and end the Blue Jays' winning streak at five games.

Cecil Cooper, Ben Oglivie and Ted Simmons hit consecutive two-out, run-scoring singles in the fifth inning to pad the Brewers' lead to 5-1.

Rangers 4, Angels 2

Gary Ward slugged a two-run homer and Dave Stewart and Odell Jones combined on a five-hitter as Texas downed California.

Ward, continuing to fight off a season-long slump, followed a fourth-inning walk to Larry Parrish with his sixth homer of the season and second in two games to give Texas a 3-0 lead and the Rangers' eventual winning run.

Snyder's Jenkins vaults to Olympic trial finals

LOS ANGELES -- Snyder native Dale Jenkins, a two-time NCAA Division II champion from Abilene Christian, has advanced to the finals of the U.S. Olympic Trials pole vault competition.

Jenkins, who cleared the opening height of 17-4½ on his second attempt and the finals qualifying mean of 17-8½ (5.0 meters) on his first try, will compete in the finals here Thursday. The top three vaulters will qualify for the upcoming Olympic Games.

Also qualifying from the Big Country were former ACU competitors Brad Pursley and Billy Olson. Olson and Pursley, both former American outdoor record holders, qualified on their third and final attempts.

Jenkins qualified despite using borrowed poles. His were apparently still at the airport in Abilene, but were expected to arrive in Los Angeles by Thursday's finals.

The competition featured 40 vaulters.

Other finalists are Earl Bell, Dan Ripley, Mike Tully, Doug Lytle, Jeff Buckingham, Steve Stubblefield, Joe Dial, Dave Kenworthy and Greg Woepse.

Jenkins won the Class 4A state pole vault in 1980 while a junior at Snyder High School. He later transfered to Abilene Christian High School when a conflict in courses caused him to be named ineligible for the 1981 track season.

White, youth tell different versions

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) - There has been one agreement in the misdemeanor assault trial of Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White: both White and the 17-year-old high school student he is accused of punching said in court the star football player hit the teenager.

White said Tuesday he delivered a slap to Jon Michael Clark after the youth nearly forced the quarterback's van into a head-on collision at 80 mph. White testified he was driving with his three children and feared for their lives.

Clark, a Plano High School football player, testified that White for no apparent reason tried to force his Camaro off the road, then, at a stop sign, punched his squarely in the nose and threatened to kill him.

"Obviously we have very differing stories about what happened," White said after his testimony Tuesday.

The trial was scheduled to resume today with White facing cross-examination by prosecutors.

If convicted of the Class A misdemeanor, the 32-year-old Cowboys quarterback could be sentenced to a year in jail and fined $2,000.

White said he tried to pass Clark's Camaro on a rural Collin County road north of Dallas, but the youth's car accelerated and prevented him from moving back to the right lane.

White said that as another car approached him head-on, he floored his accelerator and, at speeds in excess of 80 mph, moved back into the right lane without knowing if his rear bumper could clear the front of the Camaro.

Parents warned they may face jail

HOUSTON (AP) — The parents of a 17-year-old accused of slaying a female mail carrier have one week to prove why they can't testify against their son before a grand jury, a state judge has said.

State District Judge William Hatten on Tuesday warned Bernard and Odette Port they could be fined and jailed if they failed to show by June 27 why they should not be held in contempt of court.

The Ports have refused to answer some questions of grand jurors investigating the June 7 shooting death of Debora Sue Schatz, 23, who disappeared while helping a co-worker deliver mail. Her body was found two days later in a secluded, wooded area northwest of Houston.

Charged with murder in the slaying is the Ports' son, David, who is free on $20,000 bond.

The Ports claim answering some of the grand jury's questions would violate the parent-child privilege as well as their religious beliefs and their Fifth Amendment protection against self incrimination.

Texas law does not provide a parent-child privilege.

The judge ruled Monday the Ports had no right to refuse to testify. The Ports, who are Jewish, had argued their religion forbids them to bear witness against their offspring.

Attorneys for the defense and prosecutors have agreed the parents' testimony could help the state prepare for an insanity defense.

Defense attorney Randy Schaffer declined to say Tuesday specifically what his clients told the panel investigating Miss Schatz's death. But he said the questions the Ports refused to answer were not "within the permissible scope of a grand jury investigation."

"There is no need to do this," Schaffer said of attempts to force the couple to testify. He said the case "can stand on its own merit without his parents' testimony."

Teenager leaves with new heart

HOUSTON (AP) — A 15-year-old girl who received a heart transplant four weeks ago has left Methodist Hospital with a doctor's approval to "dance, ride her horse and maybe even roller skate."

"It feels wonderful," said Kimberly Coonrod an 11th grader from Carrollton, Texas as she left the hospital Tuesday. "I want to ride my horse the very first thing."

Dr. James B. Young, a member of the heart transplant team that cared for Kimberly, said Tuesday the teenager "has done very well. She is as normal as any other 15-year-old."

"She can certainly dance, ride her horse and maybe even roller skate," said the physician. Then he joked: "In terms of what she'll be able to do with her boy friends, I told her to call me first."

The young patient and her mother plan to stay in Houston until August, visiting the hospital two to three times a week.

Bank robbers are arraigned

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Texas couple dubbed the modern day "Bonnie and Clyde" — whose alleged 14-year bank robbery spree netted them more than $500,000 — has been indicted in federal court, a Dallas FBI agent said.

Thomas C. Kelly, special agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Dallas, said that a five-count federal indictment was returned Tuesday in Fort Worth against 55-year-old Lawrence Edward Byrom and his 36-year-old wife, Alice Elizabeth Marie Byrom.

The indictment accuses the pair of robbing 15 banks in small North Central Texas towns between 1970 and 1984.

Federal authorities said that the couple's arrest May 25 during a raid on their home in Haltom City, culminated a lengthy investigation by the FBI, the Department of Public Safety, Texas Rangers and three other state law enforcement agencies.

At the time of the arrest, law enforcement officials said they found vehicles that had been reported stolen and confiscated guns and clothing believed used in the robberies.

Heart that flutters

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I've had "flutters" occasionally most of my life and have read that occasional irregular heart beats are harmless. Lately they've been happening more often, several times in succession almost daily. A friend told me they can be very dangerous for someone with my lifestyle.

I'm a 38-year-old woman, 5 feet 4 inches tall and weigh 125 pounds. I smoke about two packs of cigarettes a day and drink one to two pots of coffee. I don't exercise and have been known to take as much as 150 milligrams of phenylpropanolamine a day to control my weight. I quit that a couple of months ago because it didn't seem to work any more. Also, I have two drinks before dinner each day.

Just how dangerous are these "flutters?" Will drinking decaffeinated coffee help? What about low-nicotine cigarettes? Will exercise help?

DEAR READER — Skipped beats, flip-flops and extra beats as well as other irregularities of the heart can occur in perfectly healthy people. They may make you uncomfortable, but they are seldom dangerous. But they can also signal underlying heart disease. Serious irregularities of the heart can even be life-threatening. They may be an indicator of more serious and life-threatening irregularities to come if they aren't controlled.

Certainly irregularities that occur with severe dieting should be a warning. I'm very concerned about your former use of phenylpropanolamine as it can cause serious irregularities.

You should see a doctor. But you should also stop smoking. Low-nicotine cigarettes usually mean people inhale deeper and smoke more to get the same bad effect. You shouldn't use caffeine and your alcohol is not helpful. I would suggest that you control your weight by stopping the alcohol rather than by using diet pills.

Yes, exercise does help some people to decrease or prevent irregularities of the heart. I'm sending you the Health Letter 6-12, Heart Irregularities, Skipped Beats, Tachycardias, to give you some guidelines on controlling your problem. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — About four months ago I suffered heart failure with water on the lungs. Tests show I have a damaged mitral valve that leaks. Open heart surgery with mitral valve replacement was recommended. No bypass is needed.

I'm 62, weigh 160 pounds and enjoyed an active life until this attack occurred. I can't do any exercise now and must limit myself to walking around the block twice daily. My sex life is down the drain.

The doctors can give me medicine to control the problem, but I will continue to be limited. They say after the surgery I will be able to resume normal activity. I'm frightened and would like your opinion.

DEAR READER — You have a classic story of mitral valve disease. The leak causes no problem until it gets large enough to suddenly precipitate heart failure. It's strictly a mechanical problem caused by a leaky valve. People are often very active until the critical point is reached.

Replacement of such a leaky valve in these circumstances is very beneficial. After all, the leak is stopped. Then after recovery from surgery, if there are no other heart disease problems, you should expect to be able to be active again. This operation has been done a long time so listen to your doctor's advice.
