Candidates focus on economy, cooperation

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Squeezing the most out of tight budgets, cooperation between the local taxing entities and citizens and diversifying the economy were identified by candidates for school board, city council and hospital board as the issues that will be heard most often this month before the April 6 municipal elections.

Candidates for Midland City Council, County Hospital District and Midland Independent School District voiced their campaign platforms in two-minute speeches Wednesday during a luncheon meeting of the Midland County Republican Women's Club. This marked the first meeting with all the candidates since filing ended March 6.

Candidates for City Council concentrated on protection of citizens' rights, scrutiny of the budget and working with other council members to get something accomplished for the east and south sides of the city.

CAMPAIGNING FOR the two at-large council seats are Katie Heck, A.A. Thomas Jr., Gordon Marcum II, Manuel Carrasco and Terry Lowry.

Mrs. Heck, chairman of the city's Planning and Zoning Commission, said, "The function of any level of government is protection of lives and property of its citizens." Residents expect clean water, the sewers to work, streets to be smooth and building codes to be enforced.

Protection of the business environment and integrity of the neighborhoods also rate high on citizens' list of what government should do for them, she noted.

Thomas, who served on the council about 10 years ago, said it takes 12-18 months for a new council member to be familiar with the city budget and its operations. "My past experience would be a credit to my running again," he said.

Thomas said he was concerned that the budget in 1972-73 was $11.5 million for a population of 65,000 while today it is $61 million for 93,000 people. He promised to "see what we can do about keeping the budget under control."

Marcum, who is completing his fourth two-year term, said his attitude and enthusiasm are the reasons he's running again. "Most of you know I have a strong, positive Christian attitude about what is best for the community."

CITY GOVERNMENT, in the form of city services, "is one of the most important things that happen to affect your daily life," he said. Marcum also cited general welfare and protection of a citizen's property as important for a council to consider.

Carrasco, formerly an MISD official before starting his own business, said his father spent 30 years working in the city's sanitation department. "I have a deep commitment to Midland," he said.

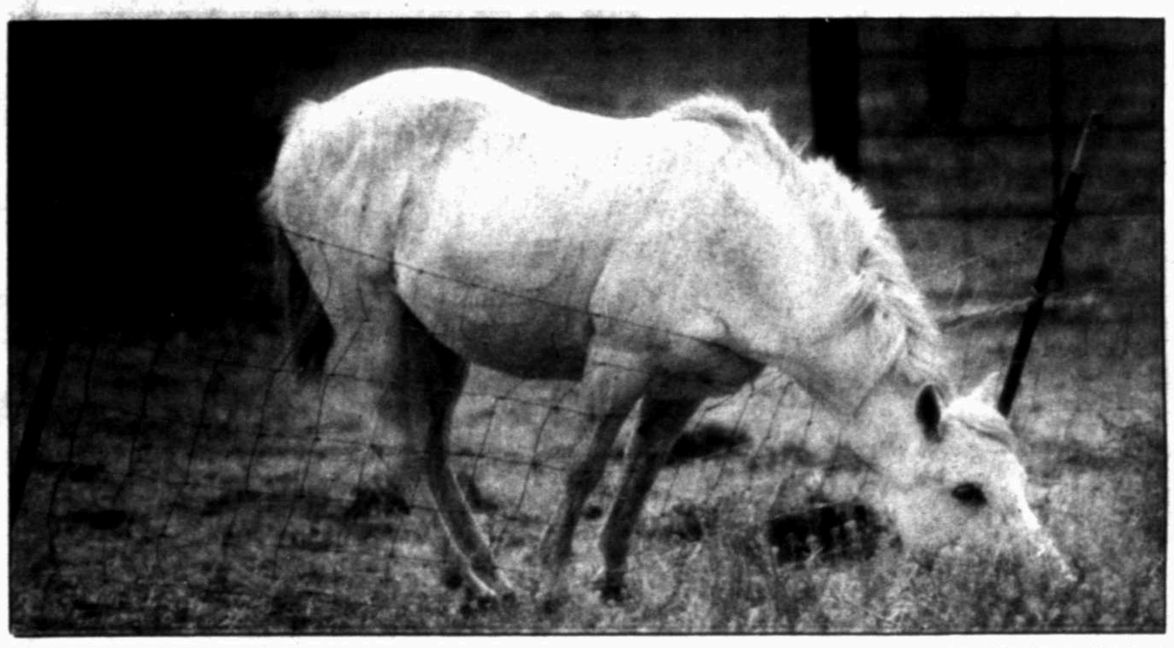

"My primary concern is the economic situation in Midland. Oil and gas is a vital part of our community but it's not going to last forever. We need to look for other industry. A great deal of planning needs to be done for Midland," Carrasco said.

Lowry, an independent landman for the past 3½ years, also cited the need for Midland to diversify its economy. "There's a lot of pessimism here in Midland on the direction of the city. We cannot rely on oil and gas as we have before. The theme of my campaign will be attracting new industry to Midland," he said.

The council's District 2 seat also drew five candidates, but two didn't appear at the luncheon — Tony Carrillo and Jimenez Salazar.

Clarence Meekins said he had considered running for a council seat several years ago but felt he needed to get some experience in city matters first, and he took an appointment to the Planning and Zoning Commission. Looking at District 2, which takes in south and east Midland, Meekins said, "I want to promote unity and cooperation of the people in District 2."

U.S., Soviet negotiators present opening positions

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — American and Soviet negotiators presented their opening positions today on cutting back nuclear weapons and agreed to split into separate work groups to tackle the key issues standing in the way of an arms control treaty.

"It was a businesslike session and done in an atmosphere of mutual respect," U.S. spokesman Joseph Lehman said at the end of the nearly two-hour session.

At the same time, though, Lehman said the two superpowers were keeping to their schedule of deploying new nuclear missiles in Europe. Quoting Harold Brown, the former U.S. defense secretary, he said of the Soviets: "When we build, they build. And when we don't build, they build."

The talks formally opened Tuesday after a 15-month stalemate over the basing of new U.S. nuclear weapons in Western Europe.

On the Soviet side, little was said. "It's only the second meeting," Victor P. Karpov, head of the Soviet delegation, told reporters with a smile and a wave of his hand as he left the offices of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

The next session will be held March 19. By then, the two delegations are expected to nail down an agreement to negotiate until April 23, when they are expected to recess.

Asked how long the current round would run, Lehman said "that subject has not been agreed to. It has been raised and will be decided in administrative channels."

The U.S. spokesman, bound by a "confidentiality" rule the two sides had agreed upon, refused to discuss the opening statements presented by Karpov for the Soviets and chief U.S. negotiator Max M. Kampelman.

He indicated, however, that the two sides remain far apart on how to reduce their offensive missiles and what to do about space-based defense systems.

"I think it's going to take quite a few more negotiating sessions for us to make an assessment of whether or not we are near an agreement or not," Lehman said. "At this point, I will say both sides are behaving in a way that indicates seriousness of purpose."

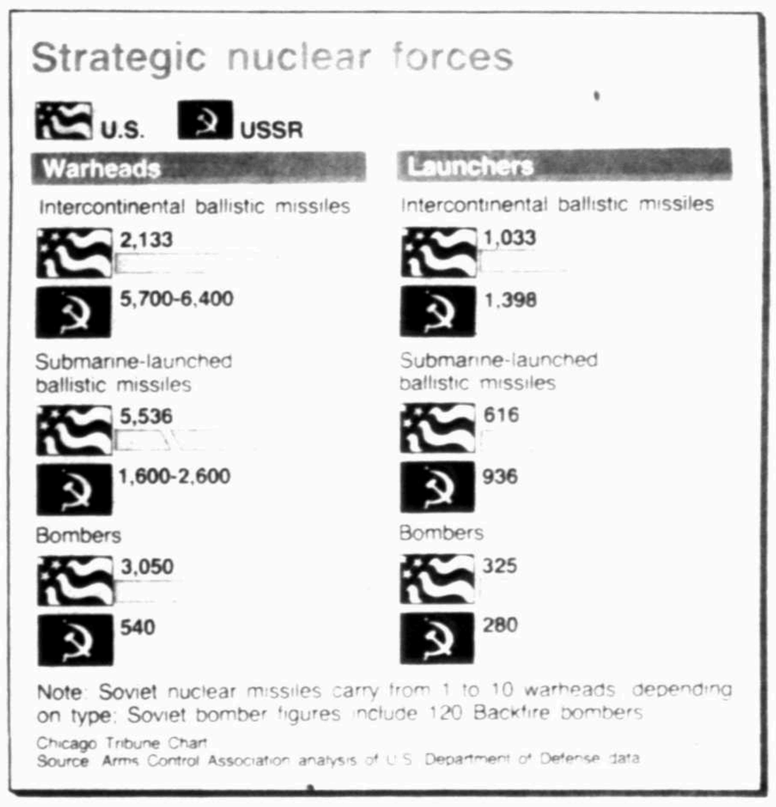

Only Karpov participated in Tuesday's session. All three U.S. negotiators, Kampelman, John Tower and Maynard Glitman, attended.

Today, the other two Soviet negotiators joined in, so all six delegates were present.

As he and his two fellow negotiators arrived, Karpov was asked by reporters if he had received any new instructions from the new Kremlin chief Mikhail S. Gorbachev. Karpov replied "Not yet."

The presence of three Soviet negotiators, Karpov, Yuli Kvitsinsky and Alexei Obukhov, is in line with the formula adopted in January to have the two types of offensive missiles as well as defensive systems considered separately.

Baskin speaks to Hospice on 'death determination' laws

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

"We all have sympathy for a 75-year-old man who took a pistol and shot his 70-year-old brother in the head to take him out of his pain, knowing that what he did was morally right," said Judge Pat Baskin to a group of 50 to 60 physicians and medical staff at Midland Memorial Hospital Wednesday.

Baskin was the guest speaker at an annual presentation by Hospice of Midland Inc., a non-profit organization that helps terminally ill patients — those with six months or less to live — in their wish to die at home, rather than in a hospital.

"The man was later convicted of murder and placed on probation," said Baskin. "The idea of placing him on probation when there was no doubt that he did it is a reminder that we have a place of compassion for people in that kind of situation.

"And yet," he said, "when we contemplate policies of that sort in advance, we are horrified."

Baskin spoke to the group on state statutes that pertain to "death determination" and the legal and ethical implications for caring for the terminally ill.

The presentation is an annual event for Hospice.

"We do something like this each year," said Gail Wilson, patient care coordinator. "Last year, we had Dr. David Rose, a cancer specialist from Amarillo and the year before we had a pharmacist from Salt Lake City."

Advances in medical technology have made the "death determination" decision difficult for physicians who have terminally ill patients, according to Baskin.

"Forty or 50 years ago, there was not much question of what to do if you stood the chance of saving a person's life," he said. "You set about doing it because you were not able to artificially prolong a life by any substantial degree."

Text controversial with ECISD, but not MISD

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

What may appear controversial to one may not appear controversial to another.

So seems to be the case concerning the Midland and Ector County Independent School district's adoption of a textbook for advanced biology classes during the 1985-86 school year.

The biology book — among the texts the ECISD Board of Trustees will consider for approval tonight — has received criticism for its illustrations of genitals and descriptive photographs of a woman in childbirth.

"Biology, Second Edition," written by Karen Arms and Pamela S. Camp and published by Holt, Rinehart and Winston, also was criticized for a paragraph on abortion, but the section was altered by publishiers following state hearings last year.

MISD trustees Tuesday approved the book without controversy.

But ECISD trustee Mickey Jones has said the text, which is among 32 books recommended by teachers for approval, "just might not be approved" for use by ECISD students although the adoption of all textbooks historically has been routine.

MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi said "To my knowledge, there has been no expression negatively or positively concerning the adoption of the textbook, neither from the public nor from the biology teachers."

Baressi noted that the district made the biology book as well as 28 other texts available for public viewing in January. However, only three persons attended the viewing sessions.

House approves bill creating second county court-at-law

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — Midland County's proposed second county court-at-law gained approval today in the Texas House of Representative in a bill sponsored by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland.

The bill, passed without debate, was forwarded to the Texas Senate and provides for the court to be operative by Jan. 1, 1986, or sooner.

Last year, the Midland County Commissioners' Court passed a resolution for creation of the court, put the court in its 1985 budget, and County Court-at-law Judge Willie DuBose and State District Judges Pat Baskin, Vann Culp and Barbara Culver helped prepare the bill.

"It'll sure be welcomed to help alleviate some of the pressure on the other courts," Commissioner Win Brown said today. "This is a local bill," he said. "The people here wanted it, and the funding will be by local funds and not by state funds."

Brown said he was "glad" of the bill's passage in the House, and said passage in the Senate, where it will be sponsored by Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, should be a formality. "The bill was written with our (commissioners') blessing and direction," Brown said.

Iran claims missile hit Baghdad

Associated Press

Iran said it hit the Iraqi capital of Baghdad with a missile early today, and witnesses in the center of Baghdad said a huge explosion demolished most of the 12-story main branch of the government-owned Rafidan Bank.

Iraq denied that Baghdad had been hit by a missile, and said the bank was damaged by a bomb planted by Iranian agents. An Interior Ministry source, speaking on Baghdad Radio, said some bank guards were injured slightly.

The two Moslem nations, at war since September 1980, also exchanged air raids today — the latest in a 10-day exchange of attacks on civilian targets.

After Iran's reported missile attack, the official Islamic Republic News Agency of Iran said Iraqi warplanes fired missiles into Iran's capital of Tehran and the northeastern city of Tabriz, killing 17 people.

An Iraqi spokesman confirmed the air raids on the two cities, and said a ship headed for Iranian ports had been attacked in the Persian Gulf.

White satisfied with no-pass, no-play rule

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he is suggesting no alternative to the present no-pass, no-play eligibility rule for high school students involved in athletics or other extracurricular activities.

"I'm completely satisfied with what we have today," White told a news conference Wednesday.

Under the no-pass, no-play policy, a student must make a grade of 70 in every course to take part in sports or other extracurriculars. One failing grade for a six-week period means a six-week suspension from play or practice.

The provision was adopted by the special legislative session last summer and put into permanent rules for public schools last Saturday by the State Board of Education.

Last week, the Senate on a 24-5 vote directed the Board of Education to change the rule to base suspensions on week-to-week grades. The board replied it would take no action unless it had a similar directive from the House.

On Monday, the Senate delayed confirming White's 14 appointments to the board for at least a week because questions about them hadn't been answered.

"Obviously the Senate wants to have a very close scrutiny of these board members and I support their authority to do that," White said. "But I feel very confident each of these board members will be confirmed, next week hopefully."

White also told reporters he planned to continue a series of statewide radio commercials to rally Texans behind public school reforms that were financed by a $4.6 billion tax increase.

In the advertisements, entitled "Our Kids Come First," White urges no retreat on the eligibility rule and that "we in Texas don't tell our students it's OK to flunk one course."

Shannon Ratliff, White's political-account treasurer and a new appointee to the University of Texas board of regents, said the $200,000 radio spots were financed by political contributions.

"There is no time limit on the campaign," White told reporters Wednesday.

Defense rests its case in Mattox trial

Mattox

AUSTIN (AP) — Prosecution and defense lawyers readied their final arguments as Attorney General Jim Mattox's commercial bribery trial neared an end today.

After the defense rested Wednesday, both Mattox and Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle said they were looking forward to giving the case to the eight-woman, four-man jury.

"I'm very confident in what's going to happen. I suspect that the jury's got a pretty good understanding of what has taken place," Mattox said.

"We're ready to go — ready for it to go to the jury," Earle said.

Mattox is accused of threatening the lucrative bond business of the powerful Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski.

Prosecutors allege that Mattox told Wiley Caldwell, Fulbright & Jaworski's bond boss, he would withhold his required approval of the firm's municipal bonds unless another of its lawyers stopped trying to question his sister in an oil rights case.

Commercial bribery is a felony, punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

The defense concluded its case by presenting nine character witnesses who said Mattox enjoys a reputation for integrity.

"He is the epitome of everything fine and genuine and good," said Juanita Dance, 73, who was a Sunday school teacher at the East Grand Baptist Church in Dallas when Mattox was a teen-ager.

"To me, Jim Mattox is all I'd ever want out of a young fellow," she added.

"He's totally honest. His enemies and his friends alike agree he's totally honest," said U.S. Rep. John Bryant, D-Texas, who served with Mattox in the Texas Legislature during the 1970s.

Bryant said he first got to know Mattox from political work in Dallas in the 1960s.

Warrant issued in murder case

FAIRFIELD (AP) — Officials today were searching for a man suspected in the murder of a woman whose body was found wrapped "mummy-style" behind a closet wall in a Freestone County home.

An arrest warrant was issued Wednesday for the man, who was believed to be the last person seen with Bernadette Bailey, 55, of Giddings, authorities said.

Chief Sheriff's Deputy Charles Nicholson said a capital murder charge was filed Wednesday against the man. He told the Associated Press Wednesday night that he couldn't remember the man's name.

Nicholson had declined to identify the man for the Waco Herald-Tribune Wednesday afternoon.

The man was described by other investigators as a boyfriend of the victim and told the newspaper they believe he may have fled the state.

A San Antonio police detective said the man was seen at the San Antonio International Airport at 6:30 a.m. Feb. 12, the day Ms. Bailey was reported missing.

Investigators said Ms. Bailey's body was found Sunday at her weekend home in Donie, about 50 miles east of Waco. She owned the Down Hole tavern in Giddings.

County investigators said she had been shot in the head, wrapped in plastic and hidden in a closet behind paneling that apparently was intended to appear like the original closet wall.

Her son, Brian Bailey of San Antonio, went to his mother's Donie home after he couldn't contact her elsewhere. The newspaper said he noticed an odor that was stronger in the hallway and called police.

Freestone County investigators knocked a hole in the paneling and saw the woman's clothes and some plastic. She had been shot once in the left side of the face and was wrapped in a sheet, heavy-duty plastic and a blanket. Her hands and legs were bound with silver duct tape.

Nicholson said an autopsy has been completed, but the sheriff's department has not received a report yet. Investigators estimated the woman had been dead at least three or four weeks.

School bus drivers may face drug screening

HOUSTON (AP) — All 850 city school bus drivers must submit to drug screening tests annually and whenever drugs are believed to be a factor in an accident under a plan Houston school officials are designing.

The plan also calls for unannounced searches of district-owned or leased vehicles, or of employees and their personnel effects while they are on district-owned property, school officials say.

Abuse of alcohol and drugs "is becoming a more difficult problem," although there have been only a few proven instances of drug use by school drivers, Kelton said Tuesday.

One driver has been arrested for smoking marijuana while waiting for students to return from a field trip, Houston Independent School District deputy superintendent Clifford Kelton said, and there have been instances where students report smelling marijuana smoke on a school bus.

The testing program, he said, also will be extended to the other 2,000 HISD employees who use district-owned vehicles.

Sandy Rabinowitz, an American Civil Liberties Union spokeswoman in Houston, said the only problem she sees with the proposed policy would be its wording "in what might constitute reasonable suspicion" to justify a search.

Reagan trying to win support for MX missile

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who lost his first fight with Congress over emergency aid to farmers, is pulling out all the stops to win continued support of his MX missile program and — his aides hope — set a steady course through the stormy legislative session ahead.

With a dose of Reagan's legendary luck and the return of veteran lobbyist Max Friedersdorf to the White House staff, administration strategists have set up a carefully orchestrated test of the second-term president's strength on Capitol Hill.

And they don't deny the president could be staking his future on the outcome.

The 10-warhead, intercontinental MX is the most controversial of the new generation of nuclear weapons in the U.S. arsenal, but Reagan has been determined to deploy 100 of the missiles in existing silos in Nebraska and Wyoming beginning late next year.

In a narrow victory two years ago, he won funds from Congress for production of the first 21 missiles, but last year lawmakers stopped payment on a check for $1.5 billion to fund the second batch of 21 pending another test of strength this year.

In putting off a final decision, however, the House and Senate locked themselves into taking two separate votes on the issue within 15 days after Reagan reports the missiles are still necessary. He was not permitted to make that report before March 1.

As events unfolded, the dates coincided almost perfectly with the opening of a new round of U.S.-Soviet arms control talks next week, giving Reagan a powerful club in his fight with MX opponents.

"It did serendipitously give us the rarity of a fixed calendar," said one White House aide, who discussed the administration's legislative strategy on condition he not be named.

About two weeks ago, he said, when strategists at the White House, State Department and Pentagon focused their attention on how to handle the brewing fight, they considered waiting until after the opening round of procedural talks in order to use the U.S. negotiating team to help lobby for the MX. They decided instead to move immediately in order "to use the talks as a lever," the official said.

"To put it off would have been a signal of a lack of resolve and confidence on our part," he added.

Friedersdorf, who organized the lobbying campaign for the sweeping budget cuts and tax cuts in the first, triumphant legislative session of Reagan's presidency, came back just in time to orchestrate the MX campaign.

Reagan first called in all the members of the House and Senate Armed Services and Appropriations committees to make his case quietly, laying out his fundamental argument that Congress shouldn't disarm the U.S. negotiators on the eve of the resumption of arms controls talks with the Soviets.

"The Senate was not that warm," one of those present reported. "You could feel it in the room."

The assessment was that the vote would be close in the Republican-controlled Senate, which is to vote first on the issue.

With the formal issuance of Reagan's report on Monday and the beginning of the countdown toward the House and Senate votes, Friedersdorf and his staff carefully selected more than 100 House members to have breakfast at the White House and hear the president make his own case.

The groups were kept fairly small to convey the importance attached to each person invited, and Reagan set aside a few minutes each morning this week to drop in on the breakfasts in the State Dining Room on his way to the Oval Office.

Some of those invited were known opponents of the MX, others were uncommitted, and a few certain supporters of the administration were included to ensure that the president would have some friends in the audience.

Meanwhile, as part of the coordinated effort, Reagan reserved some time at the end of each day to see a couple of key senators in the intimate surroundings of his own residential quarters of the executive mansion to discuss the issue with them and let them know the importance he attached to the upcoming votes.

Outside groups, including evangelists and corporate supporters of other Reagan programs, also were invited to the White House for Reagan to try to enlist their support for the MX.

The idea was to stress the importance of the MX vote to everyone, not just as a weapons system but as a test of Reagan's strength.

"The message is, 'If you want me to win on these other issues you're particularly interested in, you've got to help me on this one,'" the White House official said.

Asked if the president intended to stake so much of his personal prestige on one controversial missile system, the source said, "This vote will set the tone for the (legislative) session. We're going to do everything we can to win it."

Nixon: America wrong to get involved

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON – Did America win the war in Vietnam and lose the victory in Washington?

Was American involvement in the Vietnam conflict not immoral but one of the most noble causes for which this country has ever fought?

Will future historians record as the most shameful chapter in American history congressional betrayal of presidential commitments to give the South Vietnamese people military supplies with which to defend themselves after withdrawal of U.S. forces?

That the answer to these questions is definitely "yes" is contended by former President Richard Nixon in his latest book, No More Vietnams (Arbor House).

Many books have been written about how wrong it was for America to become involved in the Vietnam war. Nixon argues we were morally right in trying to help South Vietnam defend itself against Soviet-backed North Vietnamese communist aggression, but he thinks the Kennedy and Johnson administrations made "crucial errors in how we went about it."

"Our policy makers based their decisions on what was needed to prevent defeat rather than what it would take to reach victory," Nixon wrote.

However, his most scathing criticism is directed against the then Democratically-controlled congress whose presidents, Kennedy and Johnson, he charges with having escalated American military involvement.

He maintains that when Henry Kissinger concluded the 1973 peace agreement with the North Vietnamese in Paris, a balance of military power existed in Indo-China which was "decisively in South Vietnam's favor." Not sufficient to enable the South Vietnamese to conquer the communist north, but enough to enable them to defend the south providing they continued to receive the military supplies Nixon promised in return for the Saigon government's reluctant acquiesence to the peace terms.

The key to preventing Hanoi from ignoring the peace treaty after American forces left was, according to Nixon, his warning that if it did, the U.S. would resume bombing North Vietnam.

Congress, he charged, first destroyed America's ability to enforce the peace agreement by voting against the use of any American military power in Indo-China. Then it slashed and eventually cut off all military aid to South Vietnam so that when Hanoi launched a major offensive in 1975, the South Vietnamese army ran out of ammunition.

"Congress," Nixon declared, "snatched defeat from the jaws of victory. Once our troops were out of Vietnam, it initiated a total retreat from our commitments to the South Vietnamese people."

Nixon attributed congressional abandonment of South Vietnam to two major factors. The "profound backlash" against American involvement in the war and Washington's "obsession" with the Watergate scandal which caused him to resign as president.

Meanwhile in Washington, the Reagan administration on Wednesday accused the Soviets of continuing a "vigorous" buildup of triple-warhead SS-20 missiles — one of the key weapons U.S. negotiators are trying to limit at the talks.

There are now 414 SS-20s in the Soviet Union, an 18-rocket increase since Jan. 9 and a hike of 36 since Oct. 16, the State Department said.

During a 15-month hiatus in U.S.-Soviet arms control talks, "they embarked on a vigorous construction program of SS-20 bases, which continues today," the department said. "They have had more new bases under simultaneous construction than we have ever witnessed. We have seen a steady growth of Soviet deployments over the last year."

Soviet strategy is to stress the "inter-relationship" among the three issues, enabling them to block progress on reduction of offensive weapons, the primary U.S. goal, if they are unable to stop President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, a space-based defense plan also called "Star Wars."

U.S. Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tennessee, a non-participating observer of the talks, told The Associated Press that "both sides are proceeding in good faith."

He said that with rare exceptions at least one senator will be in Geneva as long as the negotiations go on, even if they take years.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, remained in Geneva with Gore.

The Senate has the power to ratify or veto any treaty that emerges. However, the United States is following the terms of agreements with the Soviets on limiting underground nuclear tests as well as some offensive weapons, even though they have never been approved.

Nitze: Anti-MX vote would have little impact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief U.S. adviser on the arms control talks with the Soviet Union disagrees with claims by the Reagan administration that a Congressional vote against additional MX missiles would have an immediate impact on the Geneva negotiations.

Paul Nitze said Wednesday that if the House or Senate deny the administration $1.5 billion for 21 of the intercontinental missiles over the next few weeks, "I am not sure it would make an immediate and dramatic difference."

Testifying before a House Armed Services subcommittee, he said, "It is not correct to say we would see an immediate, direct correlation."

Seated next to Nitze was Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who, along with Reagan and other top administration officials, has been saying for weeks that a congressional vote at this time against the MX would weaken the U.S. bargaining position in Geneva, Switzerland.

On Wednesday, Weinberger said if Congress refuses to fund the controversial missile, the Soviet Union "will have won the negotiation before it starts."

Nitze supports the MX and has said that it is needed to offset huge increases in the Soviet intercontinental missile arsenal.

Approval of the MX "will send a strong signal of national resolve and will greatly strengthen our hand in Geneva," Nitze said.

But he also predicted that if the votes in the House and Senate go against the MX, the Soviet Union still will assume that it will be built and installed eventually.

The Soviets would likely use the congressional vote to intensify their own propaganda, Nitze said.

Nitze described Soviet leaders as being "very conservative," so there would be no immediate reaction threatening progress of the Geneva negotiations, set to begin in earnest today.

In a lively exchange with Weinberger, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said he is worried that if the United States goes ahead with Reagan's proposed "Star Wars" defense against Soviet intercontinental missiles, that will only drive the Kremlin to find other ways to threaten U.S. forces.

"The offense never lays down and says we quit," said Aspin, who chairs both the subcommittee and the full Armed Services Committee.

He predicted that the United States might have to find expensive ways to block attacks by cruise missiles, which fly too low to be hit by the proposed Star Wars system, or against the possibility of delivery of nuclear weapons by terrorists or ships near U.S. shores.

In reply, Weinberger said the United States must do whatever is necessary to counter any big Soviet military buildup, and if Moscow comes up with new threats to U.S. security, then the United States must discover new means to check those threats.

Bush leaves U.S.S.R., arrives in Grenada

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — Vice President George Bush followed his Wednesday talks with the Soviet Union's new leader with an 8-hour trip today to Grenada.

After a brief welcoming ceremony at Point Saline International Airport — largely built by Cuba and completed by the United States after the 1983 invasion — Bush flew by helicopter to a beachfront hotel to rest.

He planned to meet later with members of Grenada's recently elected government and to address about 250 U.S. military personnel remaining on the island. The United States sent troops to Grenada in October 1983 after the Marxist leader was killed in a coup by a more radical group in his government. There were 1,000 U.S. citizens on the eastern Caribbean island.

The Air Force II jet arrived in Grenada at 7:33 a.m. EST, more than 16 hours after its departure from Moscow.

Bush talked with Mikhail S. Gorbachev for nearly 90 minutes Wednesday, afterward declaring that "this is a good time" to work for better U.S.-Soviet relations.

Bush, accompanied by Secretary of State George P. Shultz, met with Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko after the Red Square funeral of Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko.

Asked about reports that he was carrying an invitation from Reagan to Gorbachev to hold a summit meeting in Washington, Bush told reporters:

"I brought a letter. I will not discuss the contents of it, but I believe the president does feel a meeting would be useful."

CANDIDATES

HE CITED further development of housing and new businesses, institution of pride in the area by cleaning up vacant lots and establishment of neighborhood meetings.

Patrick Aleman, with experience as a master electrician and real estate broker, said he wants to "flood District 2 with information. We lack information on what we can do and what we can't. District 2 can't afford to be left behind in the success of Midland. We have to inform ourselves. It's a team effort and this election will make it even more important."

Oralia Corrales said of her decision to enter the race, "We raised 13 children and so we've always liked challenges. As a mother and a concerned citizen from East Midland, it's the motivation within me. I do not have an ax to grind. It's the burning desire within me to do something for Midland."

She is concerned about crime and violence. As an insurance agent, she said, her company has to "pay insurance claims. What can we do to better protect the citizens of Midland?"

David Godfrey, unopposed for his District 1 seat, said his platform is service to the people.

SCHOOL BOARD candidates looked at the problems of operating the school district with less state funding. Place 7 on the MISD board has drawn three candidates: Betsy Robinson, Mike Butler and Geoffrey Barnett.

Mrs. Robinson said the intent of House Bill 72 was "excellence in education" but a loss has come in local control. As a former teacher, she pledged to represent the educators and said, "Keeping competent teachers is necessary for education."

Butler, assistant public works director for the city, said the school district needs to look to East Midland for development and suggested a school system may have to be established east of Fairgrounds Road when that area develops. He contended teacher morale "is the lowest it's ever been" and criticized the administration for going outside the district to hire persons for staff positions.

Barnett said the educational system needs to advance and keep up with technology while local boards retain their control rather than giving it over to state and federal government. "Midland has a good school system. I have no axes to grind with the school board. I'm open-minded," he said.

K. Michael Conoway, running unopposed for Place 5, said the MISD board needs to make challenges become opportunities when working with the tight budget. He said parents had expressed their concern about drugs and alcohol on campuses and Conoway suggested a drug rehabilitation program.

JOE GOLDING, unopposed for Place 3, said the last time he ran he had other opponents and learned from them. The problem in the next term will be how to manage the limited funds. Midland lost $1.5 million this year and will lose $2 million next year under the revised state funding formula.

Of the four persons running for two at-large seats on the Midland County Hospital board, Jackie Allen was the only candidate at the luncheon. She called for an open-door policy at Midland Memorial Hospital, input from the public on major decisions and continuous updates on the changing medical field.

Not appearing were Frank Cahoon, Dr. Walter Parks and Gene Abbott.

BASKIN

Baskin recalled the case of Karen Ann Quinlan, a woman who was taken off her life-support system following a court order by her parents.

"Everyone assumed immediate death in her case, but she is alive today after nine years."

Making a death determination of a terminally ill patient at a hospital can be difficult, according to Baskin.

"It's not always black and white," he said. "Usually most physicians are over-solicitous with the families before making the decision, and some leave the decision entirely up to the family.

"Rarely do doctors get sued over that sort of thing," he added.

Recent state statutes have added to the family's and patient's control over the last weeks of his life, said Baskin.

"It's awful helpful if some of the decision about terminal patients can be made in the cool of an absence of pressure," he said.

Current Texas law mandates that "a competent, non-pregnant adult may authorize either the holding of or the withdrawal of life-sustaining procedures when two persons and a physician have determined death is imminent for a person who has a terminal condition," according to Baskin.

Although the death determination decision is a difficult one for physicians, it is seldom made in the case of terminally ill patients, according to Alan Williams, MMH chaplain.

"Rarely do people who are terminally ill wind up in the intensive care unit on a ventilator where a decision must be made," he said.

"Some people want to die at home and some want to go to the hospital. Since I've been here, I have seen 14 terminal patients that were released to die at home.

"In most cases it was a positive experience," said Williams.

TEXTBOOKS

The district also canceled a scheduled public hearing prior to the adoption of the books "due to lack of interest," he said.

Both districts plan to use the book in the teaching of an advanced biology course taken by "a handful of students" most of whom plan to pursue careers in medicine, Baressi said.

Jones, who has expressed concern that the chapter of the book on reproduction might violate the ECISD's policy on sex education, has said that although the chapter is not expected to be taught, students will have access to the information and some parents might find it offensive.

According to Baressi, MISD will use the textbook "mainly as reference material. There is no certainty, however, that the chapter on reproduction will be used in that (a sexual) context," he said.

The only other book approved by state educators for teaching advanced biology does not have a laboratory manual. By law, students are required to spend at least 40 percent of their time in a laboratory setting, it was reported.

COURT

"We'll appoint the judge," Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig said today. He said the names of several Midland lawyers have been suggested to individual commissioners as candidates for the post. "We have not officially considered anybody," he said.

DuBose, who in 1978 was appointed to Midland's first county court-at-law, said the additional court would "help move some of the civil cases" in state district courts, which are burdened by criminal cases. The proposed legislation will provide for the county courts-at-law to handle civil cases ranging up to $50,000 in litigation. Currently, the maximum is $5,000.

Commissioners last year budgeted $30,850, including $25,000 in salary, for a half year's operation of the court. The judge's salary would be about $50,000 a year.

Craddick's bill, HB 710, calls for the judge's salary to be at least 90 percent of the amount — $54,500 — the state pays each state district judge in Midland County. The county supplements district judges' salaries by bringing the pay each judge gets to the $60,000s.

The bill details provisions on the court's jurisdiction and requirements for the judge. In addition, the bill amends the legislation which created Midland's first court-at-law in the late 1970s and provides that the two courts will have identical jurisdiction and would allow for the transfer of cases.

IRAN

Iraq said the Iranian claim that it had struck Baghdad with a missile was an "obvious lie" aimed at covering up Iranian military failures. The Interior Ministry attributed the explosion to an "explosive charge that went off before dawn in the (bank's) ninth floor."

The Iraqi Interior Ministry source, who was not identified, blamed "agents of the Iranian regime and those who sold themselves to the foreigners" for the blast. He spoke on state-controlled radio.

Witnesses reported the explosion on Al-Rashid Street could be heard 12 miles away. A resident of the neighborhood, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said he saw a "huge fire" immediately after the blast, and ambulances and fire engines racing to the scene. No casualty estimate was available.

Armed security officials blocked all approaches to the street and barred reporters from the blast site. Associated Press correspondent Mohammed Salam reported the usually busy shopping area was totally deserted at midmorning, except for police cars and military personnel.

Iran did not say whether the missile attack on Baghdad was launched from land or an airplane.

But the Iranian news agency, quoting foreign diplomats in a report from the Syrian capital of Damascus, said the weapon was a ground-to-ground missile. The report said the missile hit the Rafidan Bank, which it said was near Iraq's defense and information ministries.

Iran's border is about 100 miles from Baghdad.

However, Arab and Western diplomatic sources in Kuwait and Abu Dhabi, reached by telephone from Bahrain, said it was unlikely that the Iranians had hit downtown Baghdad with a missile.

Atlanta zoo makes comeback

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Zoo, slapped with federal sanctions over the death of an elephant and long a victim of local politics, is finally gaining the commitments necessary to repair the damage caused by two decades of neglect.

The zoo's plight got national attention in May, when Twinkies, a 15-year-old elephant, died after becoming so ill that she could hardly stand.

A lion and a tiger, found to have advanced cancer, had to be put to death.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture cited the zoo for poor animal care and record-keeping. The zoo was ranked one of the nation's 10 worst by a national magazine.

Ten months later, a rebuilding plan is in the works.

A new management team is being assembled. Repairs are being made, and construction could begin this year on a compact, $25 million zoo featuring naturalistic habitats.

"We may kill ourselves doing it, but we ought to turn some dirt in 1985," said Bob Petty, president of the Atlanta Zoological Society, which has applied pressure for nearly a decade to do something about the zoo.

Improvements at the 27-acre zoo, located in Grant Park on the predominantly black south side, have not come easily.

Most buildings in the 96-year-old zoo were built in the 1950s, when small, easy-to-clean cages were state of the art.

While zoos elsewhere were remodeled by removing bars and building large, outdoor habitats, declining budgets for repair and improvements led to slow decay at the Atlanta facility.

At one time, only $10,000 a year was budgeted for maintenance, according to Steve Dobbs, who was suspended as zoo director and resigned several months before Twinkies' death.

The zoological society pressed for construction of a major new zoo, with outdoor habitats, which meant building it outside the city. But Atlanta's black city leaders did not want the zoo moved to the white suburbs.

Once so popular that Atlanta's newspapers raced to see which one could buy an elephant and get it to Grant Park first, the zoo was in chaos.

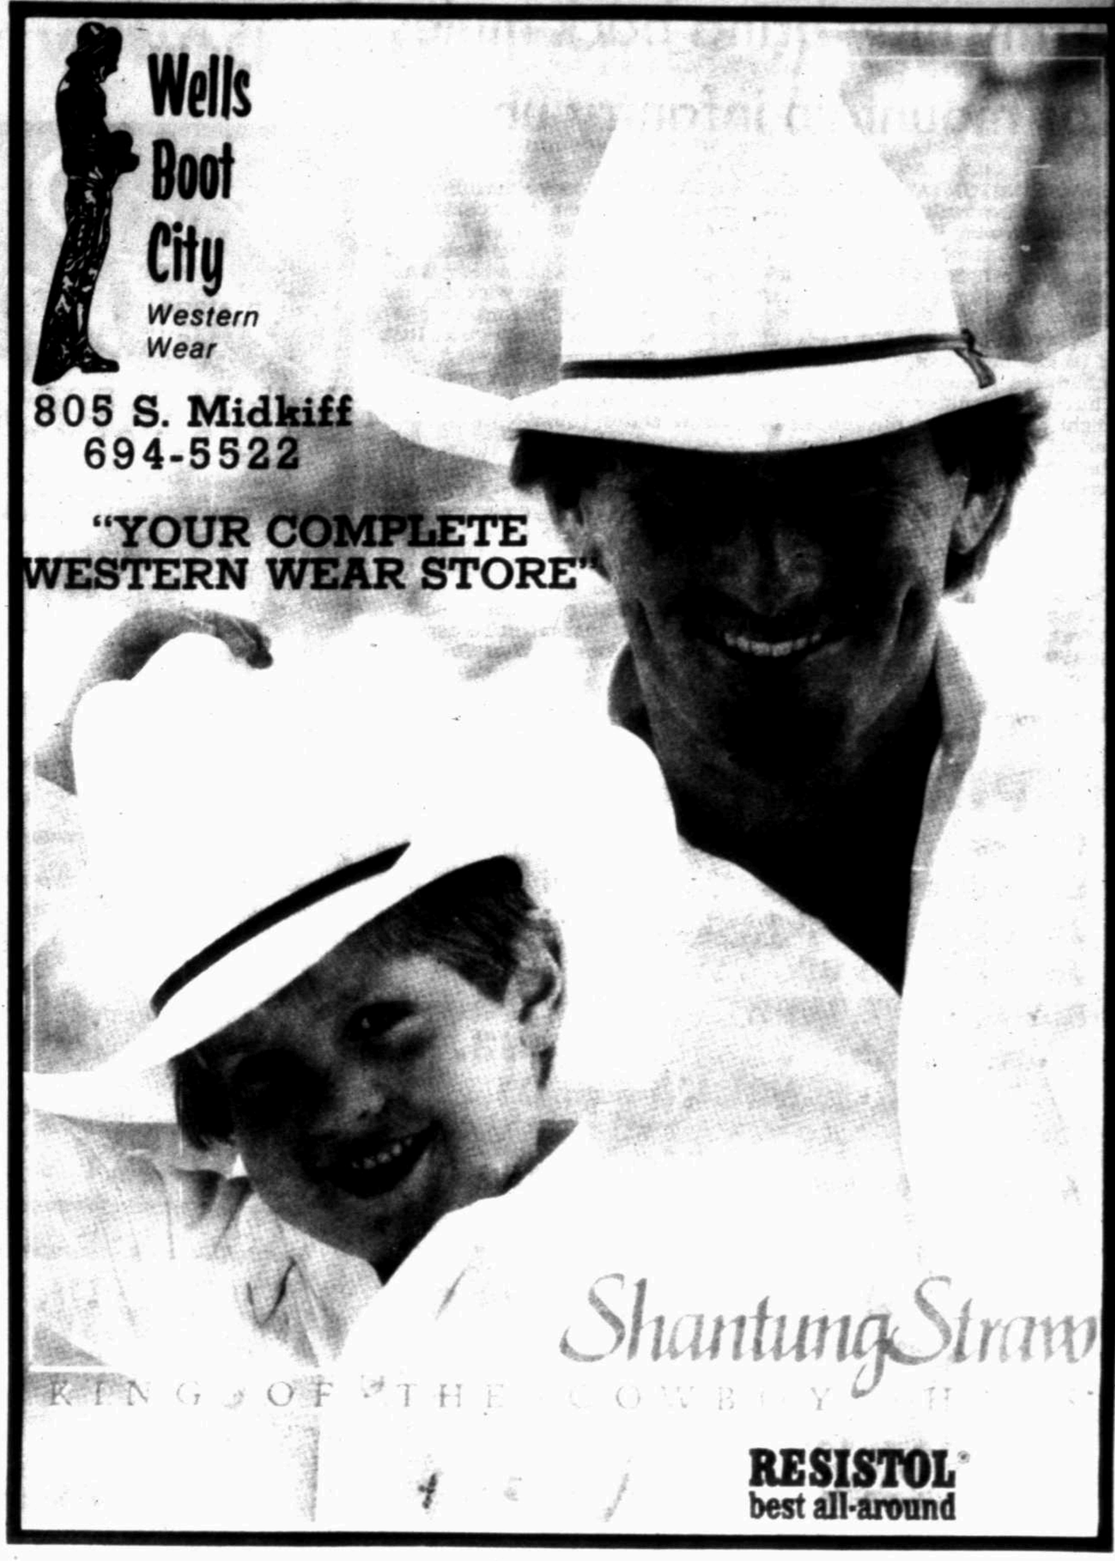

A blue-ribbon citizens' committee said the city should lease the zoo to an independent, non-profit authority, which would issue bonds underwritten by the city and county to finance the $25 million renovation.

Army may bring back mules for mountain infantry units

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sure-footed Army mule, which lost its stripes following World War II, may be making a comeback, according to Pentagon officials who are considering reviving a "mule skinner unit."

More than 30 years after it got rid of its last mule unit, the Army has scheduled a meeting of officers Thursday to determine if there might be a need for the animals in certain circumstances and whether they should be re-introduced to the force.

"I know some people are going to laugh and make fun of this, but we are serious," Army spokesman, Lt. Col. Craig MacNab, said Wednesday. "Some of our European allies have mule units and we're simply debating whether we could use the same capability."

According to a memo written by Col. Raoul H. Alcala scheduling the meeting, Gen. John A. Wickham Jr., the Army's chief of staff, "has directed that the 10th Mountain (Light Infantry Division) have training in mule handling." Wickham has also asked his staff to consider placing a small group of mules with that division "for testing purposes."

The 10th division was just activated last month and is now being formed at Fort Drum, N.Y.

The memo further states that Army Secretary John O. Marsh Jr. has decided to request the Vermont National Guard's mountain battalion "to consider establishing a mule skinner unit."

Asked about Wickham's decision to order training in mule handling, MacNab said that might be done by sending soldiers to West Germany and Italy.

Sanctuary proposed on Boulder campus

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Student leaders are set to vote Thursday night on a proposal that would provide sanctuary for illegal Central American refugees on the University of Colorado campus.

Students behind the measure see it as a way to draw attention to deportation policies of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. Administrators at the state's largest public campus say they don't know what they'll do if the protest is successful and the student bill is passed.

"By trying to designate the university as a sanctuary, in effect the law would be broken, and we just can't do that," said Kaye Howe, vice chancellor for academic services.

"If we were a small, private or religious school, like a Quaker institution, that would be different," she added.

"But this is a secular state university, and all of these buildings are buildings that belong to the state of Colorado. The fact that they are supported by student fees makes no difference whatsoever."

Student backers say the bill before the CU Student Union Executive Council would apply only to the University Memorial Center, which is supported by annual student fees. Passing the proposal will require at least 11 of 20 votes on the executive council.

Some students claim that the INS is improperly deporting all aliens from El Salvador and Guatemala as economic refugees when, in fact, they should be considered political refugees and therefore be allowed to stay in the United States.

"We feel the U. S. government is the one that's breaking the law because of the 1980 United Nations Refugee Act, which the U.S. signed," said Jill Hanauer, one of three chief executives for the CU Student Union.

"That act says that any person fleeing their country because of fear of political persecution should be allowed to seek refuge."

At-large voting issue comes under fire

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Residents of this state capital can register at the Kent County Board of Elections to vote in county, state and federal elections. But to vote in city elections they must register at City Hall.

In addition, although the capital has a total non-white population of 32 percent of its 22,000 residents, members of the City Council are elected on an at-large basis, diluting the voting impact of minority groups.

One City Council member, the local chapter of the League of Women Voters and local civil rights organizations have criticized Dover's dual registration system and its at-large voting as unfair.

Cecil C. Wilson, president of the Central Delaware chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said he has asked NAACP headquarters in New York for assistance in bringing a lawsuit challenging the city's registration and voting systems.

Research conducted by students at Delaware State College showed that the political system in Dover violates the federal Voting Rights Act, according to a professor who directed the project.

"My deadline is before April 15," the date of the city elections, Wilson said.

"I think the data is there. The case in Cambridge (Md.) is in place. We just need to compile this and move with it," he said.

The U.S. Justice Department has already filed suit against Dorchester County and the county seat of Cambridge on Maryland's Eastern Shore for holding at-large elections for county commissioners and city officials.

Cambridge has been the scene of sporadic racial tension for more than a decade; blacks on the Delmarva Peninsula, which includes parts of Delaware, Maryland and Virginia, generally have had little access to the political process.

The first black elected to a county office in Kent County, which includes Dover, was elected in 1980.The only black to serve on the Dover City Council was first appointed to a vacant seat by the mayor.

The councilman, James Hardcastle, won his first election in 1972, but was defeated for re-election last April, leaving the state capital with no black representation in city government.

Dover is divided into four election districts, with two council members per district. The districts' populations range from 3,868 in the first district to 8,514 in the fourth district, for a total population of 21,925, according to figures compiled by the students at Delaware State College.

The research was conducted under the direction of Margaret McKay, a political science professor at the college.

The study showed Dover is 29 percent black and 3 percent "other" for a total non-white population of 32 percent.

Dover's first district has only a 13 percent minority population, while minorities make up 45 percent of the population in the city's fourth district.

"When you look at Dover's City Council and there's no non-white representation and only one ever, then it becomes blatantly obvious blacks are left out of the political structure of the city," she said. "It's just obvious to me the at-large election dilutes non-white participation."

City Council candidates must file petitions signed by residents in the district in which they reside and, if elected, must live in their districts.

But although they run for office from a particular district, they are voted for by all residents.

"We feel at-large voting does not afford representation for the minority population in Dover," saidMary Lou Beatman, president of the League of Women Voters of Greater Dover.

The league also contends the city needs to be reapportioned because the election districts are not equal in population and "fair represent is not possible" with a dual reg tion system, she said.

"Studies show dual registr discourages registration, in par lar for those less likely to v mainly the elderly and minori Mrs. Beatman said.

Councilman Robin Christe said he wants to see changes i city charter, which has been i since 1929.

"Right now, I feel like I migh by myself," he said of his effor get the eight-man City Counc address the issue.

Christensen and Mrs. Beatma they feel they have been thwa in their efforts to address the before the council's Legislative Finance Committee, chaired Councilman Gregory Boaman.

Boaman, however, said he w concrete information, and not s one's opinion on the issue, befor brings it before the committee.

Boaman blamed Christensen the lawsuit planned by the NAA

Army can't destroy stock of nerve gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army says it will be years before it can destroy its aging and leaking stock of deadly nerve gas stored around the country, and whatever solution is finally approved will anger some people.

"We have a national problem," Amoretta Hoeber, deputy Army secretary for research, told Congress on Wednesday. And, she added, "there is no solution that will make everybody happy,".

Although the leaking weapons are dangerous now, the problem can be controlled "but it won't go away," she told the House Armed Services investigation subcommittee.

In October 1986, the Army will decide the best way to dispose of its obsolete weapons, she said. The actual destruction will follow later if Congress approves the plan and votes to pay for it.

The two basic options being considered are on-site destruction by burning the weapons, or moving them to several incineration plants that would be built around the country at current storage sites.

The Reagan administration wants Congress to approve new chemical weapons for the first time since U.S. production was halted in 1969. It says that 90 percent of the thousands of tons of nerve gas built before then are obsolete and unusable for military purposes.

The most serious problem is the 476,895 M-55 rockets, some of which are leaking their deadly gases, although no serious problems have been caused yet, she said.

The M-55s in the United States are stored at Anniston Army Depot in Alabama; Lexington-Blue Grass Depot, Ky.; Pine Bluff Arsenal, Ark.; Tooele Army Depot, Utah; and Umatilla Army Depot in Oregon.

Much of the controversy about the rockets' safety centers around the Kentucky site, with residents telling the committee Wednesday that the Army hadn't been truthful about its plans for the 70,000 M-55s there.

Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., whose district includes the depot, said the service had "messed up and covered up" problems with the nerve gas at the site.

"We should not be producing new chemical weapons unless the mess from the old one is cleaned up," Hopkins said, warning that he will oppose the Pentagon's request for new weapons.

Rep. Beryl Anthony, D-Ark., whose district includes Pine Bluff, said he was willing to have the weapons stored there to be destroyed there, but opposed shipping nerve gas from any other sites to Arkansas for destruction.

Anthony said he had introduced a bill mandating on-site destruction and warning against moving them, saying "every time one is moved, it increases the chance of an accident. The greater the movement, the greater the risk."

But transportation away from Kentucky was backed by Clifford Kerby, mayor of the city of Berea bordering the depot, and Charles Flood, representing the "Concerned Citizens of Madison County, Ky."

Paratroopers killed in helicopter crash

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Heat from the wreckage of a $4.8 million Blackhawk helicopter that crashed during an exercise prevented crews from removing the bodies of all 12 paratroopers killed aboard the aircraft, an Army spokesman said.

The UH-60 Blackhawk, designed to ferry weapons and soldiers to combat zones, crashed in a cluster of trees about 12:40 p.m. Wednesday while flying with two other Blackhawks in a 100-mph training formation, officials said.

"The main body of the helicopter was in one heap and ... still smoldering" and the rest was in "dozens of pieces," said Capt. Pete Eschbach of Fort Bragg Joint Public Affairs. "We've been unable to remove them (the passengers and crew) because it's too hot."

They likely would be removed today, Eschbach said late Wednesday.Military investigators from Fort Rucker, Ala., also were expected to arrive today.

"There is nothing identifiable at the crash scene as a helicopter," said Col. James D. Strachan, a Fort Bragg spokesman at the wreckage site.

The crash occurred "in a rolling, sand hills area with brush and scrub pine," said Fort Bragg spokesman Maj. Douglas Frey. "It's one of several training areas on the post."

Frey said the crash occurred about 20 miles west of the main post, near the Nijmegen Drop Zone on the 200-square-mile Army base.

Four of the victims were crew members and the other eight were passengers, officials said. The identities of eight were released late Wednesday.

Fort Bragg firefighters and a group of about 40 military policemen training in the area converged on the scene. One firefighter was hosing down the rubble near the wreckage, but Eschbach said the helicopter couldn't be sprayed. The machined was made of large amounts of magnesium and magnesium alloy, which has a melting point of 6,000 degrees and wouldn't be affected by water, he said.

Eschbach said there was no indication of what caused the accident.

The Army said the last crash of such a helicopter occurred Feb. 26 at Fort Campbell, Ky. No one was killed in that accident.

Maj. Thomas Hogan, an Army spokesman at Fort Bragg, said the helicopter was flying out of Simmons Army Air Field at the base.

The Blackhawk is a twin-engine, single-rotor helicopter designed as a highly maneuverable, heavy-lift aircraft. The helicopter's prime contractor is Sikorsky Aircraft of Connecticut.

Farm bureau to advocate program for farm prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling President Reagan's farm bill proposals "too drastic," the American Farm Bureau Federation is advocating a program that would soften the blow of farm price declines with continued federal support payments.

That stance is a departure for the 3.3 million-member farm organization, the nation's largest. In the past, it has been an outspoken opponent of the target price program that offers direct payments to farmers when market prices are depressed.

But Robert Delano, a Virginia farmer and the group's president, said at a news conference Wednesday that times are too tough in farming for the relatively abrupt end to price supports that Reagan wants.

Referring to the Farm Bureau convention in Honolulu in January, Delano said: "I'm not sure our delegates said they want government out" of farming. "I don't see anywhere in our statements where we say, 'Let's get the government out of agriculture.'"

He described the administration bill, designed to usher in a more "market-oriented" agriculture and wean farmers from subsidies, as "too drastic," and added, "We think ours is a more moderate approach."

The bill Delano outlined would retain, at slightly lower levels, the current system of "target prices," which are fixed commodity prices that farmers are guaranteed for their wheat, corn, cotton and rice. It would allow the target price to drop beginning in 1987, but by no more than 5 percent annually.

That differs from the administration plan, which would reduce target prices to far lower levels over the next five years.

The Farm Bureau in the past has opposed target price protection for farmers, but a proposal to entirely phase out the program was defeated by delegates at this year's convention.

"It is obvious that time will be required for farmers and ranchers to work their way back to solid ground," Delano said, and target price continuation will "buy some of that time."

Under target prices, when market prices fall below the pre-set target, the government pays farmers the difference. The administration bill sets a cap of $20,000 per farmer, gradually decreasing to $10,000; the Farm Bureau would keep the current $50,000 cap in place.

Despite the differences on the income-support issue, the group did agree with the administration that crop loan rates should be dropped to nearer market levels to make U.S. goods more competitive in world markets. The loan rates essentially set a floor for commodity markets and have driven prices up to the point where they easily can be undercut by foreign competitors.

Under the Farm Bureau proposal, loan levels for wheat, feed grains and rice would be set at 75 percent of an average of the past five years' market prices for each commodity, with the high and low years disregarded. Loan rate adjustments would be limited to 10 percent each year. Similar approaches would be taken for cotton and milk.

Also differing with the administration, the Farm Bureau would continue land-idling programs as a way of keeping down surplus production when commodity stockpiles reach certain levels.

And its bill would not touch the current price support programs for sugar, peanuts and wool.

Study says lump removal effective for breast cancer

BOSTON (AP) — As many as 60,000 women who develop breast cancer in the United States each year could be spared the loss of their breasts by surgery that removes only the malignant lumps, experts say in a study published today.

A major review of this technique, published in the New England Journal of Medicine, shows that women who have lump removal live just as long as those who have mastectomies.

The study, the National Adjuvant Breast Project, concludes that lump removal, or lumpectomy, is "appropriate therapy" in many cases.

"The message is that women who have the kind of situations that we studied in this trial are eligible candidates for lumpectomies," said the study's director, Dr. Bernard Fisher of the University of Pittsburgh.

"Every physician can now apprise the patient of her risks — that a small percentage of patients may get a recurrence in their breast at some later time, but there is no evidence that such a situation results in worse survival than if they had had their breast off immediately," Fisher said.

Although treatment is often successful, breast cancer is the most lethal form of cancer among American women. About 1 out of 11 develop it at some time during their lives.

This year, breast cancer will strike an estimated 119,000 women. Dr. Vincent DeVita, director of the National Cancer Institute, said about 60,000 of them might be eligible for lumpectomies.

Once doctors routinely performed an operation called radical mastectomy in which the breast is removed along with the underlying muscles. Over the past decade or so, this operation has been largely replaced by the modified radical, or total, mastectomy, which spares the muscle and is less scarring.

The new study randomly assigned 1,843 volunteers with breast cancer to have modified radical mastectomies, lumpectomies or lumpectomies and radiation. Doctors followed their progress for 39 months and then used actuarial tables to predict their outcome after five years.

The researchers cautioned th the results apply only to wom like those who were studied.

Some women were exclud from having lumpectomi because of the size or placeme of their tumors. In general, do tors performed the operatio only if the growth was less th 1½ inches in diameter and cou be removed without greatly dis guring the breast.

The doctors took out the lum plus a rim of healthy, normal ti sue. If microscopic examinatio revealed that cancer cells wer growing in this surrounding ti sue, a mastectomy was pe formed.

The researchers found that gi ing the women a series of X-ra treatments after their lumpecto mies greatly reduced the odd that cancer would recur in th same breast. After five year they projected that the cance would return in 8 percent o those who got radiation and 2 percent of those who did not.

The work suggested tha women with lumpectomies wer more likely than those with mas tectomies to survive for fiv years.

Lure of the city

While the lure of the city tapered off for Americans in the 1970s and continues to decline in the '80s, urbanization has found its wings on the worldwide scale and, according to the United Nations, will continue to expand in developing nations.

During the 1970s, the growth of areas defined as "urban" — 2,500 residents or more — in the United States stagnated after 80 years of ambitious growth. In the 1970s, while urban growth in the United States came to a virtual standstill and residents began to move back to more rural settings, the trend toward urbanization overtook the developing nations of Africa, Asia and Latin America. In fact, United Nations figures reveal a steady growth of urban areas as people flock to the cities in search of jobs and a better way of life.

Roughly 25 percent of the inhabitants of developing nations lived in urban areas in 1970 and that percentage had climbed to 29 by 1980. Furthermore, projections indicate the figure will reach 50 percent between 2010 and 2025.

Overall, the U.N. estimates indicate 1.6 billion people will be added to the world's urban population by the year 2000, 80 percent of whom will live in developing nations. As a result, the world's biggest cities will mostly be found there by the year 2000.

According to the projections, the New York metropolitan area will fall from first place to third with 22.8 million residents, behind Mexico City with 31 million and Sao Paulo, Brazil with 25.8 million. Only one other city in the top 10 will be in a developed nation — the Tokyo/Yokohama metropolitan area. China will have two of the top 10 cities — Shanghai and Peking; India two — Greater Bombay and Calcutta; and Brazil a second — Rio de Janeiro. Jakarta, Indonesia, will rank 10th with 16.6 million people.

This trend toward world urbanization is not without its problems, of course. As the world becomes more urban — more crowded — social problems necessarily will increase.

Perhaps it's at that moment that people in the developing nations will learn what many in the United States, Northern and Western Europe already have recognized: That the lure of the city holds promise, but not without a cost.

Another View:

Dominici's budget

For tenacity and stamina, Sen. Pete Domenici's performance is remarkable.

The president wouldn't make the hard choices on the budget. The Republican senators couldn't agree on a version of their own.

Once again, it has been left to Domenici, R-N.M., as chairman of the Budget Committee, and once again he has produced a budget that is both fairer and sounder than Reagan's.

It's not a mere paper exercise. By the time Congress adjourned last fall, the final budget looked more like the Domenici revision than the original Reagan proposal.

This year's Domenici budget would allow defense spending to rise, but not at the excessive rate that the president wants.

The revision drops the invidious idea of a pay cut for federal employees. Most important, it makes a serious effort — as the president's budget does not — to get the budget deficits down.

It's instructive to recall what happened last year.

In February, after the president's budget appeared, Domenici and Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, offered their own version.

In March it became the basis of the famous Rose Garden compromise in which, to avoid splitting his party over the huge deficit, the president accepted the congressional plan to pull it down.

As it was enacted, with cuts in both defense and domestic spending, and a tax increase, it should have reduced the deficit for the fiscal year 1985 from Reagan's original estimate of $195 billion to about $175 billion.

The fiscal year 1985 is nearly half over. How is the struggle against the deficit going? Not very well, unfortunately.

Instead of dropping to $175 billion, the deficit seems to have risen to $215 billion. In spite of some $20 billion in deficit reductions by Congress, it's now $20 billion larger than ever. How did that happen?

It was, as always, a series of mishaps and miscalculations. An error in legislation last year forced the government to spend an unbudgeted $14 billion to retire a certain category of public-housing debt.

The administration had also underestimated interest costs and farm subsidies, while overestimating revenue collections.

What should you make of it — all the work in Congress to bring the deficit down a little, followed by the news that the deficit is larger than ever?

First, the effort in Congress is crucial. It's still the only real hope of getting the deficits under control.

Second, Congress will always have great difficulty accomplishing much as long as the administration has little interest in the subject.

Domenici's budget deserves support as the best and most realistic prospect for getting the deficit on a downward path this year.

But Congress will have to push much harder than it did last year if it really wants to see smaller deficits ahead.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, March 14, the 73rd day of 1985. There are 292 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 14, 1794, Eli Whitney received a patent for his cotton gin, an invention that revolutionized America's cotton industry.

On this date:

In 1743, the first town meeting in America was held, at Faneuil Hall in Boston.

In 1879, physicist Albert Einstein was born in Ulm, Germany.

In 1883, German political philosopher Karl Marx died.

In 1923, President Warren G. Harding became the first chief executive to file an income tax report.

In 1951, during the Korean War, United Nations forces recaptured Seoul.

In 1964, a jury in Dallas found Jack Ruby guilty of murdering Lee Harvey Oswald.

Today's birthdays: Bandleader Les Brown is 73. Cartoonist Hank Ketcham is 65. TV producer Dwight Hemion is 59. Eastern Airlines President Frank Borman is 57. U.S. says radar violates treaty

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has accused the Soviet Union of violating key provisions of the anti-ballistic-missile treaty by building a large radar facility near Krasnoyarsk in central Siberia. The treaty, calculated to keep either superpower from achieving invulnerability to missile attack, allows such radars only on the periphery of national territory, aiming outward.

Jack Anderson

The Soviets insist the radar facility doesn't violate the treaty, and some experts in the State Department have suggested there is a domestic political reason for the Soviets' stubbornness over the Krasnoyarsk radar. The facility, they say, may be a manifestation of that great American tradition: the pork barrel.

Proponents of this novel view point out that the late Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko was born and grew up in Siberia, and started up the bureaucratic ladder as a border guard there. Like any powerful American politician, he may have influenced the decision to build the radar at Krasnoyarsk as a way of throwing a little pork to the home folks.

The CIA, while not necessarily convinced by the pork-barrel theory, does reported that Chernenko showed unusual reluctance to dismantle the radar.

On the other hand, veteran Kremlinologists pooh-pooh such a "Western" explanation for construction of the Krasnoyarsk radar. They point out that Chernenko left Siberia 50 years ago, and add that he was merely an aide to Leonid Brezhnev when the radar was first proposed.

Pragmatists have concluded that the Krasnoyarsk site was probably chosen simply for reasons of convenience and feasibility, without regard for the treaty. The Soviets' only other option would have required two facilities farther east in Siberia — and in terrain that was technically too difficult for Soviet engineers.

Once the United States began complaining about the Krasnoyarsk radar, too much had been spent on it. "They probably didn't want to admit that they made a mistake," a source explained.

The National Security Council has weighed the matter and concluded bluntly: "The Krasnoyarsk radar is almost certainly a violation of legal obligations of the ABM Treaty."

The NSC explains why in a secret report obtained by my associates Dale Van Atta and Donald Goldberg.

"The location, orientation and type of this radar raise significant questions ... (treaty provisions) prohibit deployment of such radars except at locations along the periphery of national territory and oriented outward for early warning of ballistic missile attack and elsewhere for space tracking," the document explains.

The Krasnoyarsk radar seems "suited for closing the last remaining gap in Soviet ballistic-missile early warning coverage," the report adds, noting that it will give warning of U.S. land-based missiles targeted on Siberia and on submarine-launched missile attacks from the Pacific. As the report concedes, though, "warning time provided by such a radar would be increased if it were located on the periphery rather than the interior."

And that, of course, raises the original mystery: Why did the Soviets build the radar at Krasnoyarsk in the first place? It has no bearing on the legality or illegality of the radar facility under the ABM treaty, but it's still an intriguing question.

FUTURE FILE — India and the United States still have many differences, but here are two areas where I predict relations between the world's two largest democracies will vastly improve:

— Commercial ties will be strengthened. The United States is already India's biggest single trading partner, with more than $4 billion worth of goods and services exchanged each year. American corporations, encouraged by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's recent moves to eliminate needless economic controls and stimulate private sector competition, are eager to do business in India. Sixty U.S. companies displayed their wares at a recent high-tech fair in Bombay.

— Technology transfer. Under a secret memorandum of understanding signed recently, the United States will permit the sale to India of previously classified high-tech items, under strict security safeguards. India is the world's 10th largest industrial nation, so is in a good position to absorb vast amounts of computer and managerial technology — which the United States would be delighted to provide. U.S. officials are awaiting signals from India, such as the lifting of protectionist bureaucratic procedures.

Two other issues on which India and the United States will probably agree to disagree: arms purchases and international loans.

India will persist in her recent practice of buying arms from various sources, rather than relying on the Soviets as in the past. But she balks at U.S. weapons, not only because they're so costly, but because of the political concessions the United States usually demands as a condition of arms supply.

As for India's concessional loans, they will soon dwindle to a trickle, largely because of diminishing American support in such lending institutions as the World Bank. U.S. officials are trying to persuade India that it would be wiser in the long run to seek foreign capital through investment incentives than to continue borrowing.

GEORGE F. WILL

Gorbachev: 'Long time' begins

WASHINGTON — Vice presidents are virtuosos at the art of funeral-attending and at Brezhnev's funeral George Bush, the former CIA director, had a 40-minute chat with the successor, Andropov, former head of the KGB. They talked, Bush said, "as spook to spook." That was an interesting thought: The CIA director and the head of the Soviet secret-police psychiatric-hospital slave-labor empire are in essentially the same craft.

George F. Will

Anyway, Bush brought back a hopeful surmise. Andropov, he said, had spent 15 years reading all Soviet intelligence reports and "anyone who has had access to all the data must objectively know that if a country goes in peace, it has absolutely nothing whatsoever to fear from the U.S.A."

Swimming beneath the surface of that surmise, like a school of sluggish pike in brackish water, are some interesting implications. The Cold War is to a significant extent a misunderstanding to be cured by better "data." Soviet policy is defensive and reactive, driven by neurotic fear of U.S. motives. Therefore, U.S. foreign policy must be psychotherapy to get the Soviet Union thinking "objectively." As Bush's boss says, we must convince the Soviets that we mean them no "harm."

George Orwell said it requires not just intellect but imagination to comprehend Soviet behavior. American leaders are most imaginative when concocting reasons for misapprehending Soviet motives. Comprehension is the enemy of cheerfulness, and cheerfulness is mandatory for leaders of democracy, especially when it is irrational.

American leaders will believe uncountable things to avoid believing the depressing truth, which is: The Soviet regime is intellectually deranged, morally bankrupt, politically corrupt and economically lunatic, and therefore is utterly dependent for whatever legitimacy it can claim, and whatever elan it can muster, on its role as liberator of everyone from everything but communism.

When Stalin died, Western leaders said, cheerfully: Fundamental change will soon be afoot because Stalin was the last old Bolshevik and, besides, his successor has given a speech praising "peaceful coexistence." Georgi Malenkov did that, in a speech saying war is bad. But he was not really the successor. He succumbed to a Stalinist attack from Khrushchev, who then became an anti-Stalinist regarding everything except government and culture.

Khrushchev, said Westerners cheerfully, is an earthy peasant, in touch with Soviet Everyman. Surely, therefore, he is more interested in raising living standards than in missiles. Two years after the Cuban missile crisis he was replaced by what Westerners thought was to be a troika — Podgorny, Brezhnev and Kosygin. Kosygin was cheerfully regarded as dominant, and as a worldly moderate, partly because he had an intellectual son-in-law.

The moderation of the new regime did not pan out, as Czechs, Poles, Ethiopians, Afghans, Yemenis, Vietnamese, Cambodians, Laotians, Nicaraguans, Angolans and others can attest. But when Brezhnev fell, well there was Andropov who — be of good cheer — had been reading the data and therefore knew that the United States meant no harm.

Today think tanks are hard at the task of pondering What It All Means — the fact that Gorbachev is the first leader too young to have fought in the war with and then against the Nazis; the fact that he is a lawyer; the fact that he has failed upwards through agriculture. All — all! — that is known for sure is that he rocketed to the top of the Soviet elite during the slightly more than a decade (from the invasion of Czechoslovkia to the invasion of Afghanistan) when Soviet behavior was even more brutal than before.

After Stalin, the last Bolshevik, came Khrushchev the last leader to have profited mightily from Stalin's purges. Then came Brezhnev and Andropov and Chernenko, the last leaders who were — what? — brutalized or sensitized or something by the war. Now comes Gorbachev, and from Western leaders comes the "new generation" theory: Be of good cheer, because the new generation is, well, younger, and, therefore.... Besides, his wife has a well-turned ankle — a matched set, in fact.

I am not being sexist. I respect her for her mind, but ankles are geopolitical facts. They occasioned favorable comment during a tour of Britain. The tour was like a Broadway show previewing in New Haven to rave reviews. He and she cut graceful figures, she by having one, he by talking of contracts for British industry. He smiled a lot, at least until a Member of Parliament, perhaps remembering Lady Astor's question to Stalin (When are you going to stop killing people?) asked about persecutions.

Gorbachev's charm slipped. He said: So's your old man. Actually, he said: What about Ireland and unemployment. This guy is apt to be around for a long time, and it is apt to seem like a long time.

Making Dan Rather cry 'uncle'

Three well-dressed gentlemen came in to see me the other day.

One of them said, "We're from the 'Jesse Helms Committee to Fire Dan Rather' and we're interviewing people to replace Rather on the 'CBS Evening News.'"

Art Buchwald

"Has Dan been fired already?" I asked.

"It's just a matter of time until we have enough stock to get control of the company. Your name was given to us as a staunch conservative who believes in the American way of life, and someone who won't sell out his country."

I blushed, "That's a fair description of myself."

"How do you feel about Dan Rather?"

"I'd like to tear the sweater off his back."

One of the gentlemen smiled. "We were hoping you would say that. The anchorman we're looking for is someone who will report the news without prejudice, while at the same time highlight the conservative side of the story."

"That's no problem," I said. "If you can't give the conservative point of view on the evening news, you don't have the right to call yourself a journalist."

"How do you feel about secular humanism?" one of the gentlemen asked me.

"I don't think people should engage in it until they're married," I said. "I wouldn't put a secular humanist story on the air because I know a lot of kids are watching."

This seemed to please all three.

One of them said, "Suppose a woman was raped and wanted an abortion. How would you treat that story?"

"I'd interview Sen. Helms and let him tell me why she was wrong."

"How do you stand on the church and state issue?"

"I don't believe in the separation of church and state. If I got Dan Rather's job I would start off my show with a prayer every night. No one has the right to keep God off the evening news."

I could tell they were getting very interested in me.

"Are you for an arms agreement with the Soviets?"

"I am certainly not. And I wouldn't hesitate to read from the Bible where it says you can't make a deal with the Russians."

"How would you treat the apartheid problem in South Africa?"

"I believe an anchorman must present both sides of the story. If I had a film showing the South African police killing blacks, I would also make sure I put on President Botha to explain why he had to do it."

"Suppose an official of the Reagan administration admits to beating his wife? Would you report it?"

"I don't consider that news. That's the typical kind of character assassination that the American people are fed up with. A responsible journalist should only report the good things about the government and not the bad."

"You're certainly a breath of fresh air," one of the men said. "A final question. How do you feel about cigarette smoking causing cancer?"

"Why do you ask?"

"Jesse Helms represents the tobacco interests, and I don't think he'd appreciate it if you ran any stories that would show cigarette smoking in a bad light."

"Tell the senator he won't ever see the Surgeon General of the United States on his network."

"That's good enough for us. As soon as we get control of CBS we'll be in touch with you."

"You won't be sorry," I assured them. "I can't wait to see the look on Dan Rather's face when I walk into the studio and make him yell 'uncle.'"

Clinic set up for chronic worriers

By MARIO FOX

LISLE, Ill. (AP) — People worry about lots of things, including things they can do nothing about and others that never will happen. But for those who worry about worrying too much, there was help: a Worry Clinic.

About 300 people trekked to a motel in this Chicago suburb to hear psychiatrists, psychologists, therapists and others discuss such topics as "The Joy of Life," "Newly Single," "Assert Yourself! Fomenting Won't Help,' and "Why Is Growing Up So Hard To Do?."

"The Worry Clinic offers you a chance to look at problems which may be troubling you and a way to find solutions before they become major crises," said Roseann Tronvig, a spokesman for the Family Service Association, the private social services organization that has sponsored the clinic for each of the past nine years.

Some people can work out their problems, Ms. Tronvig said, "but sometimes the person is too close to a situation. You block out reality, start worrying more."

The clinic was designed for that type of worrier — and plenty of them brought in their cares for an airing out Saturday, after paying fees of $14 per person or $19 per couple.

Two workshops — one, "How To Make Life Work" and the other, "Addressing Stress and Conquering Consternation" — were full by 10:30 a.m., an hour after the clinic began, Ms. Tronvig said.

Glory Gayton, a clinical social worker who conducted a workshop called Living-Growing with Other People's Children, said the clinic helped people get information pertinent to modern-day living "without having to take long courses."

Ms. Gayton said her workshop addressed the problems faced by "remarried or reconstituted families," which she said are becoming more and more common.

"How do you form a new complex system when two broken-up families are coming together for a health step-family?" said Ms. Gayton, whose former husband is remarried. "It takes creative reworking."

She used a cartoon to illustrate the problem. In the cartoon, a little boy asks his teacher, "What parent do you want to sign this: my natural father, my stepfather, my mother's third husband, my real mother or my natural father's fourth wife who lives with us?"

Another workshop, Shape Up Your Eating Patterns, focused on compulsive eating.

"People will eat to gratify emotional needs," said Raymond J. Redelman, a therapist who studied nutrition for 10 years.

"I'm trying to create an awareness of the problem and have people discover why they are eating more," Redelman said. "It's OK if it's done in moderation and doesn't become compulsive. It could lead to eating disorders."

Farmers withold refugees' water

By ABNER KATZMAN

ETHIOPIA (AP) —Water gushes from the ground nearby but Ethiopian refugees line up by the tens of thousands each day for water trucked into this dust-dry refugee camp.

The water nearby is pumped from a well in an oasis for the area's farmers, struggling in Sudan's own drought.

The water from the trucks is paid for by the U.S. Embassy in Khartoum, Sudan's capital 430 miles away.

The arrangement keeps things from getting out of hand at Wad Sheriffe, which has been taking in refugees from civil war in Ethiopia's Eritrea Province.

Until last fall, Wad Sheriffe sheltered only a few thousand refugees, but now the camp about 20 miles west of the Ethiopian border has 62,000, a population that has far outpaced the limited water supplies.

At first, the refugees took water from the oasis, which has a motorized well-pump. But the oasis' farmers, who grow vegetables for sale in Kassala, the provincial capital, demanded payment from the penniless Eritreans, according to a Western water consultant with Sudan's Office of the Commissioner of Refugees (COR).

Water is scarce, but even more precious in this economically troubled nation is the fuel to run the water pumps.

Martine Toussaint, a Swiss physician at the camp medical clinic, said she notified COR officials but the government refused to intervene and the farmers stuck by their refusal to make room at the well for the refugees.

"The well works with an engine, so the fuel the farmers do get is (to pump water) for their own gardens," Dr. Toussaint said.

She added that the refugees were hiring themselves out to the farmers in exchange for water.

The Sudanese authorities say they cannot force the farmers to share their water with the refugees.

"Of course these are private gardens," said Sayed Mohammed Habib, COR's government representative in Kassala Province. "It is up to the farmer. No one can force him to give up the water.

"We have asked them," he said, but added that the farmers have a right to keep their water for themselves.

The Western consultant with COR, speaking on condition of anonymity out of fear of repercussions in a sensitive situation, said: "The farmers grow their crops for money, and there's a food shortage. Sudanese also are dying because of the drought."

As it is, the site of the refugee camp is prime agricultural land, requisitioned by the government. The consultant said "there's a point beyond which the government can't impose" itself for the sake of the refugees.

In December, students rioted in the town of Showak, about 60 miles south of here over the lack of white bread, a diet staple, according to the COR consultant.

"The refugees had white flour, and the Sudanese didn't," he said. "The Sudanese have accepted the refugees, but there comes a point when the Sudanese say 'No more.'

"It's a very delicate balance, and where do you draw the line?"

In the meantime, well-drilling operations financed by Dutch foreign aid have resulted in discovery of three wells in the 1,000-acre camp, according to the COR official. They have not yet gone into operation because of a shortage of pump parts.

Even when the wells come on line, the consultant said, the water trucks will continue to bring supplies for the 13,000-gallon inflatable pods that hold the camp's water.

Man wants to change name from Koch to Coke-Is-I

ATLANTA (AP) — A man who changed his last name to Coke-Is-It because his old one was frequently mispronounced has reached an agreement with the Coca-Cola Co., which holds a trademark on the advertising slogan, the company said.

Frederick Koch, 54, of West Brattleboro, Vt., changed his name legally to Coke-Is-It in November, saying he was tired of hearing people pronounce his name as "Kotch" or "Cook."

"Coke is it" was the answer he always gave for the correct pronunciation, he said.

Coca-Cola filed an appeal in Windham (Vt.) County Court to block Koch's name change "primarily to protect the Coke campaign," sa spokesman Tom Gray after the co pany announced Wednesday that agreement had been reached.

But John Burgess, Coke-Is-I attorney, said the agreement, signed, would allow his client keep his name but that "you c speculate there will be restrictio on commercial use."

Students test weightlessness

VALENCIA, Calif. (AP) — About 3,000 high school physics students left their books in the classroom and used a roller coaster and other amusement park attractions to test theories on gravity, centrifugal force and weightlessness.

The students, participating last weekend in a High School Physics Day at Magic Mountain, used homemade instruments and their own ingenuity to study problems like how much force is required to keep a body from being ejected from the Revolution, a roller coaster that features a loop.

Rain possible in Midland through Friday

From Staff and Wire Reports

Rain is expected in the Midland area through Friday, along with a drop in temperatures, as forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport are calling for considerable cloudiness and a 40 percent chance of showers with possible thunderstorms. Lows are expected to be in the lower 40s tonight, warming to highs in the mid-50s Friday. Easterly winds will be at five to 15 mph.

Thursday's high of 63 was 25 degrees below the record set in 1971. This morning's low was 20 degrees above the 1954 record of 24.

STATE

Heavy rains drenched the upper Gulf coast and Southeast Texas today, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a flash flood watch which included the Houston metropolitan area, and forecasters predicted more precipitation.

A cold front's collision with a warm air mass triggered the showers and thunderstorms, some very heavy, over the eastern half of the state. Rain was also falling in parts of the Trans Pecos, extending northward into the south plains and just offshore along the coastal plains.

Skies were mostly cloudy across the state, except for fair conditions isn the Panhandle and northern south plains.

Winds were from the north behind the front and south to southeast ahead of the front at speeds of 5 to 15 mph, gusting over 30 mph in the Guadalupe Mountains of West Texas.

A chance of showers and thunderstorms was expected over Southeast and West Texas and along the coast through Friday, with heavy rain and flash flooding possible over southeastern sections.

NATION

Rainshowers were scattered from southeast Oklahoma and Arkansas across Tennessee to Ohio. There were a few snow showers over the eastern Great Lakes, with some rainshowers falling across Delaware into New England as well as Pennsylvania.

Elsewhere around the nation, skies were mostly clear from the middle Mississippi Valley across the northern Plains, much of the Southeast and the West.

Record high temperatures were set Wednesday in Lake Charles, La., where a balmy high of 82 was recorded, eclipsing a mark set last year by one degree.

BC looking for Tech hole

BOSTON (AP) — Boston College coach Gary Williams says he would have been watching the Southwest Conference Post-Season Classic championship more closely if he had known the winning Texas Tech Red Raiders would be his squad's first-round opponent in the NCAA playoffs.

"It's funny," Williams told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal in a telephone interview Tuesday. "They were on TV up here Sunday and I watched some of it, but I didn't stop to think that we might be playing them.

"It just happened to be a basketball game that was on television and I watched ... but not very closely. We're trying to find out all we can about Tech," he said.

WILLIAMS' EAGLES, the No. 11 seed, and the Raiders, seeded sixth, meet at 7:07 p.m. Friday in Hohfeinz Pavilion in one of four first-round games on tap in the Midwest sub-regional.

Other contests feature Memphis State (27-3) against Penn (13-13) at 12:07 p.m., Alabama-Birmingham (24-8) against Michigan State (19-9) at 2:37 p.m. and Duke (22-7) against Pepperdine (23-8) at 9:37 p.m.

The victor of the Tech-BC match meets the winner of the Duke-Pepperdine contest at 4:30 p.m. Sunday in Hofheinz.

Williams says the televised game Sunday has shown him two things about Tech: its 5-10 guard Bubba Jennings, the Player of the Year in the SWC, is a great shooter and the Raiders play very good defense.

"The little guy (Jennings) is amazing the way he shoots the ball. Guys up here don't shoot the ball from that far out," Williams told the Avalanche-Journal.

"They work at it. Just the fact that Tech has beaten Houston and Arkansas three times tells you something about them. That's no easy task."

Tech, representing the SWC, is making its first NCAA Tournament appearance since 1976. But Williams said the Raiders are not total strangers to his players or other college mentors in his corner of the country.

"That might be the case with the media, but not with coaches," he explained.

"They know about Arkansas and Eddie Sutton and they know about SMU. Our players watched SMU beat North Carolina on TV and they know Tech defeated SMU twice this season. They respect Tech," said Williams.

"We know we're playing a good club. It's no problem to get ready when you're playing a Top 20 team. That has a way of getting your attention."

Texas Tech, 23-7 and winners of 11 straight games, was named the nation's 17th-ranked club on Monday. It was the Red Raiders' first appearance in the Associated Press Top 20 in nine years.

BC is making is fourth trip to the NCAAs in the past five years. Williams' team brings an 18-10 record into Friday's game.

The Eagles won all nine of their non-conference games and split their 18 Big East regular-season games before losing to Syracuse by a 70-69 count in the opening round of the Big East tourney last week.

An 82-80 overtime loss to No. 1-ranked Georgetown and a 71-69 defeat at the hands of No. 3 St. John's were among the Eagles' setbacks. Williams said Tech reminds him somewhat of St. John's.

"I see a little bit of St. John's in them with their size and the way they play. St. John's is pretty deliberate and Tech likes the same offensive tempo. St. John's looks for Mullin (Chris) like Tech looks for Jennings."

BC'S STARTING five is a little smaller than Tech's, but the Eagles probably have an edge in quickness.

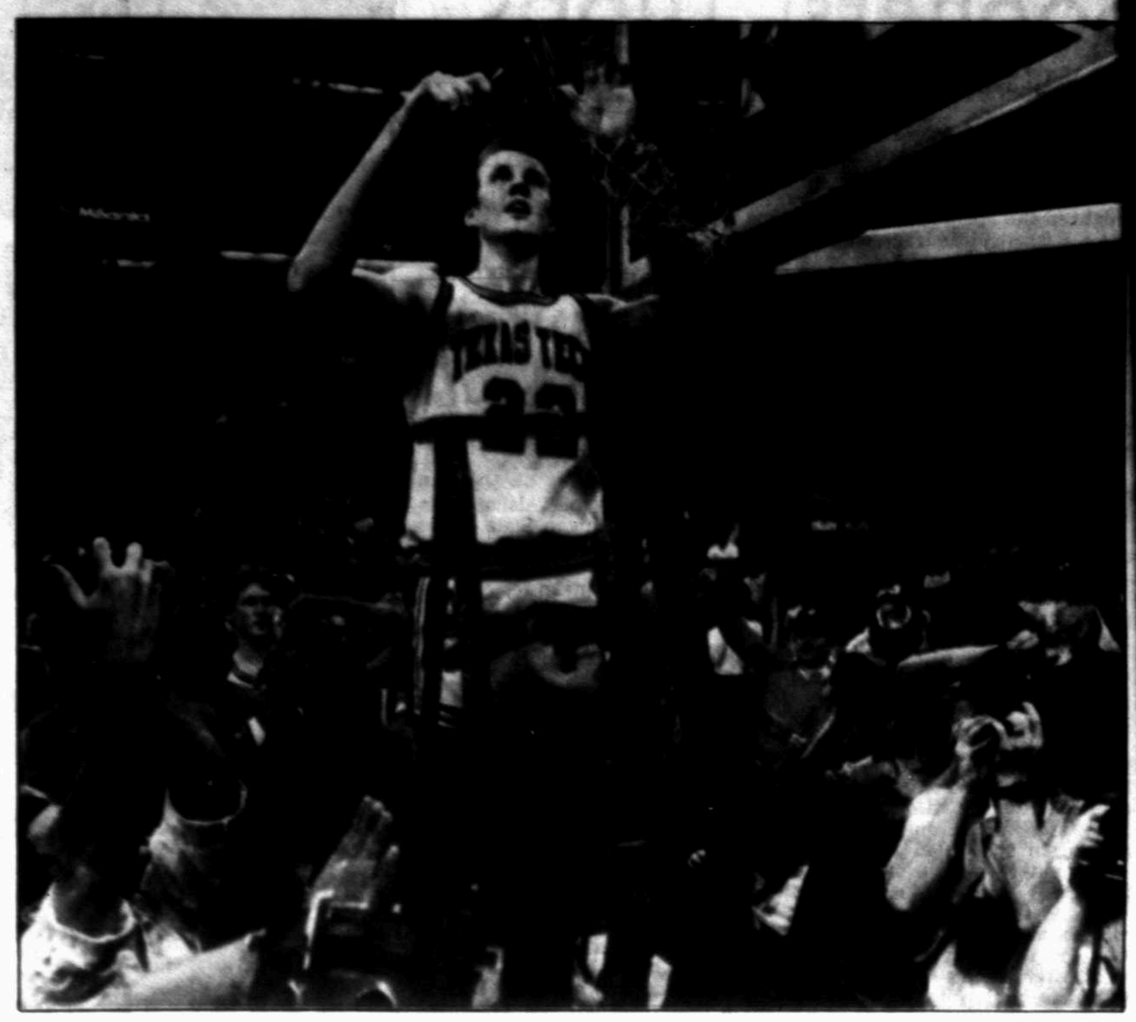

"We're smaller than Tech. We're smaller than everybody, but we don't worry about that," said Williams. "We'll try to take advantage of our quickness. We pressed most of the year. We'll use different presses and try to get up the floor as quick as possible and be as aggressive as possible."

Williams will start 6-9 Trevor Gorden at center, 6-5 Roger McCready and 6-4 Terrance Tally at forwards and 6-3 Dominic Pressley and 5-11 Michael Adams at guards. Adams leads the Eagles in scoring with a 15.3 points-per-game average. He is extremely quick (63 steals) and likes to get BC off and running.

"I think he's one of the best point guards in the East," said Williams. "He's more of a penetrator than Jennings is. He can't shoot like that from the outside."

The Raiders lost a 48-47 decision to the Frogs in their first meeting and then took a 61-53 verdict two weeks ago. The Eagles mangled TCU, 92-75.

Tech scored an 84-78 victory over BC in the teams' only previous meeting, the triumph coming in the 1981 Gator Bowl Classic.

Laredo in way of Chaps' Hutchinson trip

By TED BATTLES

Midland College has won three of the last four Region V titles, but, as the Chaparrals found out two years ago, that's no free ticket to the National Junior College Athletic Association championships in Hutchinson, Kan.

Two years ago defending national champion Midland College lost the play-in round to San Jacinto, which went on to win the national title.

In order to get back to Hutchinson, MC, 28-4, must beat Laredo Junior College, 24-7, in the play-in, which the Region V winner is forced to play every other year, at Angelo State University 7:30 p.m. Friday. The game will be in the ASU fieldhouse.

MC qualified by winning Region V. Laredo qualified by beating Lon Morris, nationally ranked through most of the year, in a best-of-three game playoff.

Coach Jerry Stone and assistant coach Reggie Franklin got their first look at Laredo Tuesday in San Marcos when Laredo won the decider 93-82.

FOR MOST of the night, Stone's view and that of Lon Morris was blocked by an imposing 6-9, 280-pounder, who just happened to be playing the post for Laredo.

Stone observed, "I'd have to say that they are about like the better teams in our league," which is another way of saying anything can happen Friday. Three of MC's four losses were at the hands of Western Junior Athletic Conference foes.

"They don't impress you at first glance, but they are a big, smart, sound, methodical team," Stone added. "They play a slower tempo game than we are used to seeing, a half-court offense. Defensively, they are a plain vanilla team, but they execute what they do well."

Most significantly, Laredo is the survivor of a league in which it had not only Lon Morris but San Jacinto of Pasadena as competition.

THIS IS the win the Chaps need to get that eagerly anticipated return trip to Hutchinson, where three years ago MC was the hit of the tournament with 5-7 Spud Webb, Chester Smith and Puntus Wilson, all of whom have gone on to successful careers at four-year colleges.

Webb is a national TV star over in the ACC. Smith is the Player of the Year for Eau-Claire in the Wisconsin college conference in which he plays and Wilson has been a catalyst for Lamar.

If MC should get by Laredo Friday, and that's something Stone is reluctant to discuss, the Chaps will play a first-round game against the Westark-Seward County winner at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday. The Arkansas and Kansas champions are meeting in a playoff game Friday night.

That means MC would have to play four days in a row to regain the national title. In the previous visit, MC played a Tuesday game, got Wednesday off and then played three straight games.

CHAPSTYQUES—Tony Wright missed practice Tuesday with a sore foot, but the only Chap who will miss the Laredo game is sophomore starter Lawrence Chumbley, who came up with a knee injury in a late season game. Chumbley underwent orthoscopic surgery Monday. Six-nine Teviin Binns, the WJCAC's co-MVP, finished the regular season with a 21.0 point average. Zeak Williams broke the century mark in steals with 102 while Vernon Coleman, the Region V MVP, led the Chaps in free throw shooting accuracy with 75 per cent.

Shockers shock Tech, 13-3

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Texas Tech coach Gary Ashby would understand if some of the Tech-Exers in attendance at Angel Stadium Wednesday night were a little embarrassed by his teams' 13-3 loss to Wichita State.

Make no mistake. The Red Raiders were awful. Nevertheless, Ashby, the second-year head man at Tech, enjoyed the short stay in the Tall City, except of course, for the outcome of the game.

THE SHOCKERS' hard-throwing Greg LaFever (3-2) held Tech to three runs while striking out seven, before yielding to Tom Julian for mop-up duty in the eighth.

Ashby, whose already thin pitching staff just completed a seven-game in five-day stretch before Friday's Southwest Conference season-opener at Baylor, was satisfied picking out the few good points of the one-sided ballgame and turning them into positives.

"They threw one of the better pitchers around at us and we went with a little ol' freshman who hasn't thrown much so we knew what to expect," Ashby said. "We start our conference season Friday and the people we need for the weekend threw well. They sat on our younger kids, which we understand. If they'd sat on our front-liners, then we'd be worried."

RESTING HIS aces for the all-important conference season, Ashby threw a lot of pitchers, seven to be exact, most ineffectively. Freshman Jeff Kreuger (0-2) started the parade yielding 10 hits and seven runs in 3⅔ innings. Sophomore Clay Hollock and junior Darryl Decker, a pair of Ashby's regulars, then shut down the Shockers until John Waite sauntered out of the Red Raider dugout to open the eighth inning.

Ashby watched as Waite, his successor Nathan Swindle of Lubbock Monterey, then Johnny Vidales combined to surrender four hits, seven walks and six more runs to Wichita State before Mike Shull came in to put out the fire.

It was a hot fire, too. The Shockers, ranked 17th in the country in the latest poll, totaled 17 hits off the tired Tech arms. Leftfielder Tim Raley led the charge with a pair of home runs, his third and fourth on the year, over the fence in right for five RBI. Designated hitter Kevin Penner drove in a pair of runs to go with four hits.

Pleased at seeing his record move to 20-4, Wichita State coach Gene Stephenson shrugged off the pressure of maintaining that lofty ranking.

"I DON'T feel pressure to win every game, and our players don't either," Stephenson said. "Every game is meaningful, but we don't feel pressure. I'm not sure we deserve to be in the Top 20. But there is no dominant team in college baseball today. There are a lot of good teams and I think we're one of them, that's all."

Texas Tech fell to 14-11 on the year, but Ashby looked like he was actually enjoying himself.

The second-year head coach was pleased with the playing field, he was pleased with the umpiring, he was pleased with the way his front-line pitchers threw the ball and he was more than pleased with the support the 300 or so Tech fans showed for his club.

HE LOOKED a little more worried when the conversation drifted to Baylor, Friday's opening SWC opponent.

"They're a team a lot like us, a solid team, not a great team," Ashby said. "If we compete with them that might get us going, that'll tell us something."

MHS swimmers head for state

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

For Midland High sophomores Sam Perry and Becky Simpson it is a chance to make a splash as the new kid on the block. For seniors like Andrew Jordan and John Brenner, it is one last chance for a medal or the satisfaction of a personal best in high school.

The event is the state swim meet in Austin that begins with diving preliminaries 10 a.m. Friday and continues with swimming preliminaries that evening and the finals on Saturday.

The Bulldogs send a strong boys contingent qualifying both relay teams, and Jordan, Perry and diver Doc White individually. And hopes are high for a top 10 team finish. White was added Monday to the team after a mistake was found in the calculation of another diver's scores.

The girls lone entry is Simpson, a qualifier in both the 200 and 500 freestyle events.

Jordan, a two-time visitor to the state championships, nearly didn't make this year's event. He narrowly missed automically qualifying in the Region V meet in Lubbock two weeks ago in both the 50 and 100 free by finishing third. But his time of 22.26 in the 50 qualified him as a "wild card" entry and gives him a final chance for the state title that has eluded him.

Jordan will also anchor the 400 free relay and swim in the 400 medley relay — either as a breaststroker or the freestyle anchor, according to Bulldog coach Jesse Marsh.

In his first year as a varsity swimmer, Perry qualified in two individual events, the 100 backstroke and the 200 individual medley, and is excited just about going to Austin.

"I'm nervous, but I'm ready," Perry said. "I'd just like to get in the top six in the backstroke, his bettter event — as a sophomore. I think that's all right. I think maybe I can drop a whole second off my time. I've been feeling real good in the water the last few days, so I hope so."

Marsh is also optimistic about MHS' chances for a strong meet this weekend. Because of a technique called "tapering," his top swimmers, Jordan and Perry, are poised to slice seconds off their best times. Tapering is the reduction of the length and difficulty of workouts prior to a competition, like the state meet.

A&T impresses Sooners' Tubbs

Associated Press

North Carolina A&T is seeded 16th and last in the Midwest regional but Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs, whose top-seeded Sooners meet the Aggies tonight in the opening round of the NCAA Basketball Tournament, isn't taking them lightly.

Early in the season, the Aggies played mighty Georgetown to within 61-56 and held Patrick Ewing to 11 points.

"I was impressed with the way they played Georgetown so close. Anybody that plays Georgetown to a five-point game gets my attention really quickly," Tubbs said.

Oklahoma-North Carolina A&T will be the third of four games today in Tulsa and it pairs the high-scoring Sooners, ranked fourth nationally, who lead the nation in scoring at better than 91 points a game against a team that grudgingly surrenders an average of 66 points.

"I'm sure they would like to slow things down a bit," Tubbs said. "But we're going to do our best not to let them."

IN AFTERNOON games, Ohio State meets Iowa State while eighth-ranked Louisiana Tech faces Pittsburgh. Southern California-Illinois State winds up the four-game slate, one of four scheduled around the country today with four more on tap Friday.

With no shot clock in the NCAA tournament, the Aggies will be able to exploit their experience with a spread offense and a tight zone in an attempt to bottle up Oklahoma All-American Wayman Tisdale, who averages 27 points. North Carolina A&T features a lineup whose tallest player is 6-foot-6 center Claude Williams.

Illinois State Coach Bob Donewald said he is unfamiliar with Southern Cal, which tied for the Pacific-10 Conference title, and posted an overall 19-9 record.

The rest of today's schedule looks like this:

East, at Hartford, Conn. — Georgetown vs. Lehigh, Temple vs. Virginia Tech, Loyola of Chicago vs. Iona, Southern Methodist vs. Old Dominion.

Southeast, at South Bend, Ind. — Kansas vs. Ohio University, Purdue vs. Auburn, North Carolina vs. Middle Tennessee State, Notre Dame vs. Oregon State.

West, at Salt Lake Citv — St. John's vs. Southern University, Iowa vs. Arkansas, Nevada-Las Vegas vs. San Diego State, Washington vs. Kentucky.

On Friday, the scene shifts to four different locations:

East, at Atlanta — Illinois vs. Northeastern, Georgia vs. Wichita State, Syracuse vs. DePaul, Georgia Tech vs. Mercer.

Southeast, at Dayton, Ohio — LSU vs. Navy, Maryland vs. Miami of Ohio, Michigan vs. Fairleigh Dickinson, Villanova vs. Dayton.

Midwest, at Houston — Memphis State vs. Pennsylvania, Alabama-Birmingham vs. Michigan State, Texas Tech vs. Boston College, Duke vs. Pepperdine.

West, at Albuquerque, N.M. — North Carolina State vs. Nevada-Reno, Tulsa vs. Texas-El Paso, Virginia Commonwealth vs. Marshall, Alabama vs. Arizona.

With the No. 1 seed meeting No. 16, No. 2 facing No. 15, etc. in each region, this is the time for major upsets. San Diego State, virtually unnoticed despite a 23-7 record, hopes to pull one of them against UNLV.

"I hope we have a few more surprises left in us," says Coach Smokey Gaines. "I feel we have a surprise or two left, and wouldn't it be something, though — beating the ninth-ranked team after most people said we wouldn't even be here."

Gaines was one of them. With a team that returned few veterans, the coach picked his own team to finish last in the Western Athletic Conference. Instead, the Aztecs knocked off Texas-El Paso in the championship game last week, gaining an automatic bid to the NCAA's 64-team field.

UNLV has won 26 of 27 games since losing by 36 points to Georgetown on national television, but the Runnin' Rebels barely escaped lowly San Jose State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association tournament.

North Carolina, in the NCAA tournament play for the 11th consecutive season, had better be wary of Middle Tennessee, according to Coach Dean Smith. The Blue Raiders, 17-13, finished fifth in the Ohio Valley Conference but defeated Youngstown State to win the conference tournament.

Nebraska's Dave Hoppen is fouled by Canisius' Derrick Russell during NIT action Thursday, but Nebraska won, 79-66.

Cornhuskers survive first round NIT play

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska's offense was balanced and its defense had Canisius off balance in the first round of the National Invitation Tournament.

All five Nebraska starters hit double figures in a 79-66 victory Wednesday night, while at the other end of the floor guard Harvey Marshall contained Canisius standout Ray Hall.

"It was one of the best defensive games we've played all year," Nebraska Coach Moe Iba said. "Harvey really did a great job on Hall, chasing him around."

Hall, Canisius' career scoring leader, was held to 16 points and missed eight of 13 field goal attempts.

"That was our game plan . . . to put as much pressure on him as I could," Marshall said.

Marshall also scored 14 points for the Huskers, who broke a four-game losing streak and improved their record to 16-13.

The contest was they only NIT game scheduled Wednesday night. Ten games are on tap tonight with four on Friday night concluding first-round play in the 32-team tournament.

A crowd of 7,443 at the Bob Devaney Sports Center watched center Dave Hoppen celebrate his 21st birthday by scoring 21 points to move into second place on Nebraska's career scoring list. Forward Bill Jackman added 15 points and a career-high 10 rebounds.

Forward Curtis Moore scored 11 points and guard Brian Carr 10.

"It's about time we got a win again," the 6-11 Hoppen said. "We've been playing well. We played that good or better the last three games and couldn't pull off a win."

Perry, who tapered slightly for the regional meet, cut his workout load from 5,000 yards in midseason form, to around the 2,000 mark in hopes of cutting his backstroke time. Jordan, who did not slow down at all for the regional meet, reduced his load from around 4,000 yards to less than 1,500. Combined with shaving, Marsh expects Jordan to cut his 50 free time at least a second and give him a strong shot at challenging Texas' best.

"Andrew has been doing nothing but resting," Marsh said of Jordan. "The other kids, who rested a little before the regional meet, went up to about 5,000 yards — enough to get them sore and tear them up a bit — then they dropped down to next-to-nothing.

"That's the only way I know to get kids to keep going fast. It's possible to hold that speed, it just depends on the kid."

The medley relay team consists of senior John Brenner in the butterfly, Perry in the backstroke and either Jordan or Paul Harris in the breaststroke or Jordan or Ricky Perkins in the freestyle anchor. Whether Harris or Perkins takes the final spot will be determined in a mini-time trial tonight at the pool in Austin.

The 400 free relay will be Perkins, Jay Green, Brenner and Jordan. Marsh thinks if the relays perform exceptionally well, the Bulldogs' chances of a high finish are greatly increased.

"If we score well in the relays, we could be in the top 10," Marsh said. "Team-wise, the third through 10th places are going to be really close, so if we have a big meet we could be there."

Simpson, who has breezed through district and regional competition without a loss in either the 200 or 500, is stepping up to a new level of competition this weekend.

Although winning most of her races to this point by wide margins, Simpson is seeded no higher than 15th in her events. With tapering, Marsh feels she can cut some time off her bests, but isn't sure where that will place her in the field.

"Becky may have the toughest time of all of them," Marsh says bluntly.

Simpson's best chance to place will probably come in the 200 where her sprinting skills will keep her close to the leaders.

New Jersey starts thinking playoffs

Associated Press

With a month left in the NBA season, teams in the middle of the standings, such as the Washington Bullets and New Jersey Nets, are starting to put their games into a playoff context.

Since the team that finishes in sixth place in the Eastern Conference will have to play powerful Boston or Philadelphia in the first round, fifth place is a desirable spot to be.

So when New Jersey defeated the Bullets 114-109 Wednesday night to tie them for fifth, each with 33-33 records, the Nets knew precisely what it meant to them. "It was an important game for us because of where we are in the standings," Coach Stan Albeck said. "Any time you can beat a team that's just ahead of you, it's got to be a big plus."

NBA

"It was a big win because it got us off a slide and put us even with Washington," said Micheal Ray Richardson, who helped the Nets snap a three-game losing streak with 27 points. "We all knew this was a big game, so we came out and played a little harder."

Richardson's backcourt mate, Otis Birdsong, added 24 points, while Net forward Buck Williams had 16 points and a career-high 22 rebounds.

Washington forward Tom McMillen was assessed two technical fouls by referee Hue Hollins with 2:45 remaining after protesting his sixth personal foul. It was the first ejection in McMillen's 10-year NBA career.

"I'm tired of being elbowed in the face, thrown to the floor and knocked around," said the Rhodes scholar, who is considering running for Congress when he retires from basketball. "I've played 10 years and taken the blows, but at some point it becomes too much."

Mavericks 118, Kings 100

Dallas got 32 points from Mark Aguirre and pulled away from Kansas City in the fourth period for its fifth triumph in six games.

The Mavericks, who also got 21 points from Rolando Blackman, outscored the Kings 28-18 in the final 12 minutes to win comfortably.

Reggie Theus led the Kings with 25 points.

Celtics 123, Suns 106

Larry Bird, who scored 60 points on Tuesday against Atlanta, came back with 31 more to lead Boston over Phoenix.

The Celtics, winners of 52 games in 66 outings, got 25 points from Kevin McHale, while the Suns were led by Charles Jones with 19 points.

Lakers 120, Jazz 105

Los Angeles, which leads the Pacific Division by 16½ games, won its fifth straight decision as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 27 points against Utah.

Fred Roberts led Utah with 24 points.

76ers 121, Clippers 103

Philadelphia stayed 2½ games behind the Celtics while handing Los Angeles its 11th straight loss, including five under new Coach Don Chaney.

George Johnson, averaging just 3.1 points per game, scored a season-high 18 points as 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham substituted liberally en route to their 15th consecutive victory over the Clippers in Philadelphia.

Moses Malone led the 76ers with 22 points, while Derek Smith paced Los Angeles with 23.

Bucks 128, Cavaliers 93

Milwaukee won its fifth straight game and routed Cleveland behind 26 points from Terry Cummings.

The Bucks extended their Central Division lead to 10 games. Cleveland, winners of 10 of its previous 12 games to pull into strong playoff contention, got 20 points each from Phil Hubbard and World B. Free.

MHS netters take win

From Staff Reports

The Midland High tennis team came away victorious Tuesday in a duel meet against Fort Stockton at the MHS courts. The combined boys-girls score for the meet was 9-5.

The MHS girls carried most of the load in the victory, winning 5-of-6 of their matches while the MHS and Fort Stockton boys split, 4-4.

Following are the results of the meet with MHS players listed first:

TCU's Wacker wins landslide

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas Christian's Jim Wacker was a landslide winner of Senior College Coach of the Year honors as voted by the Texas Sports Writers Association, it was announced Wednesday.

Wacker drew 62 first-place votes out of a possible 70 and 310 points in the preferential balloting. Bill Yeoman, who guided Houston to a Southwest Conference championship and a spot in the Cotton Bowl, had 229 points.

Other nominees were Chuck Curtis of Texas-Arlington, Jerry Vandergriff of San Angelo State and Ron Randleman of Sam Houston State.

White would welcome trade

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White, still upset over his demotion to being Gary Hogeboom's backup last year, says he would welcome a trade to two other National Football League teams.

"Los Angeles (Rams) or Atlanta would be my choice," White said. "I'm not going to sit on the bench the last three years of my career. I told them that."

The 33-year-old White said the big rap against him remains the fact that he hasn't led the Cowboys to a Super Bowl berth.

Dallas came close in 1981 only to see San Francisco 49ers wide receiver Dwight Clark make a leaping touchdown catch in the final minute to win the NFC championship game that year.

"You know, if Dwight Clark hadn't made that catch, none of this (controversy) would have happened," said White, here visiting relatives while the NFL winter meetings take place.

"All he's done is win 75 percent of his games," Brandt said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, March 15, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Suddenly you meet the right partner for a special business venture. Travel and romance play a larger role in the decisions you make. Changes in the economy help your personal finances. Be more open with those who really count. An old friend is on your side when the chips are down. You will soon be given greater authority at work. Play a waiting game. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: "Days of Our Lives" patriarch MacDonald Carey, actor Judd Hirsch, the Chicago White Sox' Harold Baines, baseball's Bobby Bonds, the Minnesota Twins' Mickey Hatcher, music's Sly Stone, trumpeter Harry James, financier-philanthropist Marjorie Merriweather Post, President Andrew Johnson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A great day for organizing and experimenting. Give your all to your work! Consolidate your resources. Mate is very supportive. Romance shows new promise. Do what you can to strengthen family ties.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be extra cautious where your finances are concerned. Do-it-yourself types save money only if they know what they are doing!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not let a tender ego get in the way of progress at work. A candid chat with an older person mends some fences. You enjoy going out this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Creative efforts and romantic love enjoy favorable influences. Writers and musicians make new gains. Loved one caters to your wishes. Keep a promise to a young child. Family ties grow stronger.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Postpone dealing with a confidential matter. You need more information before making a final decision. A "lost" possession mysteriously reappears. Romance could have its ups and downs. Be tolerant.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Ask questions if uncertain what is expected of you. Mate or partner's "I don't care" attitude could be a coverup. A small gift or surprise will mean a lot.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Although some travel plans may not jell, work done at home goes great. Unconventional behavior could get you into hot water with romantic partner. Watch your step around someone who flirts!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make the best possible use of your talents and you could land an exciting new work assignment. A shopping expedition is successful. Your sense of humor rescues you from an embarrassing situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A Capricorn asks leading questions. You may not have all the answers. Do some quick research! A visitor could interfere with some weekend plans. Keep your cool and act good-natured.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good news raises your hopes regarding a financial matter. Stick to your budget when shopping. Marital harmony returns following a rocky period. Forget past grievances and focus on the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Impractical ideas are your worst enemy now! An older person offers excellent advice regarding a family matter. A teenager could cause tension this evening. Become a better listener.

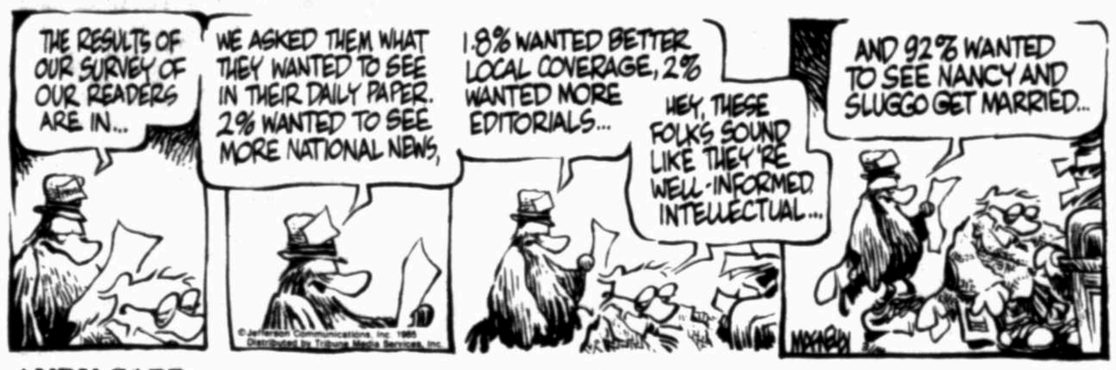

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Tend to routine tasks during early morning. This is no time to take chances with your health or money. Showcasing your talents properly will lead to handsome profits. A platonic relationship intensifies.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	4 ♠	4 NT	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ◇.

As a defender, your main object is to defeat the contract. If you can see that, with normal play, declarer must make his contract, try to present him with a losing alternative.

Note the effect of West's four spade preempt. After a heart lead and a right view in trumps, declarer can come to nine tricks with the opponents cold for four hearts. The icing on the cake was that he made life very difficult for North. Since the North-South hands could easily produce slam, North asked for aces. He settled at the uncomfortable five-level when he learned an ace was missing, because he feared there might be a trump loser as well.

Against five hearts West attacked with his singleton diamond. Declarer won in dummy and led a trump to the eight. West could see that, if he won the queen and shifted to a spade, declarer would have to run that to the queen, a card he almost surely had for his opening bid. Instead, he painted a false picture of the hand by winning the first trump with the ace. Then he shifted to the jack of spades.

Now let's look at the position from declarer's point of view. It seemed certain that East held the queen of trumps. Therefore, to run the spade to the queen was an unnecessary risk. The "sure trick" line appeared to be to win the ace of spades, pick up the queen of trumps via a finesse, and then claim the rest of the tricks since the table's diamonds would take care of declarer's two black-suit losers.

We have a great deal of sympathy for South, who chose to adopt this plan. Since this is a family column, we cannot repeat what he said when West won the queen and cashed the king of spades for down one.

Engineers working to stop recording of movies

By BILL McCLOSKEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Engineers, encouraged by movie and cable companies, are working to stop video cassette recorders from doing what they're designed to do.

Every time a person tapes a pay cable program or copies a pre-recorded videocassette, the copyright owner loses money. Video Week, a trade publication, estimates, for example, that there are three or four bootleg copies of the popular Jane Fonda Workout for every legitimate copy sold.

In an attempt to prevent unauthorized taping, Macrovision of San Jose, Calif., has developed a system that its chairman says would make the tape recording so "unwatchable" that it has no value.

The chairman, Victor Farrow, said he will know in two or three months if the system works well enough to put on the market.

Vince Roberts, director of engineering for the Disney Channel, said he has not yet seen a copy blocking system that works, but the Walt Disney studios are anxious to find one to protect "the gold of the Disney library" — classic cartoons and family-oriented movies, some of which have never been shown on cable or released on videocassette.

Making copies of pre-recorded videocassettes or pay cable programs without permission is a crime, but most cases go undetected because the recording is made in private homes. "Time-shifting," in which viewers record regular TV programs for later viewing, has been declared legal by the Supreme Court.

The Electronic Industries Association reports more than 1.4 million VCRs have been sold this year. About 16.4 million VCRs were in use at the end of 1984, according to the Motion Picture Export Association of America. In addition, manufacturers now sell, mostly overseas, a single machine that can copy from tape to tape without a second recorder.

Producers, actors, writers and others involved in movie making have long argued they should be paid whenever one of their films is played, but have never established a way to collect fees from home viewers except from cassette sales and licensing fees paid by cable operators.

Allen Cooper, vice president for technology evaluation and planning for the Motion Picture Association of America, said his group would prefer a moderate royalty fee on blank tapes and recorders, but failing that would find a way of preventing illegal copying "an absolute necessity."

Farrow conceded a determined copyright infringer could beat even the most sophisticated scrambling device. "If something can invented, it can be defeated."

Researchers at the Massachuse Institute of Technology plan to de onstrate today their own system preventing home taping. Pr Andrew Lippman of MIT's me laboratory says the system alters t video signal so all TV sets c receive it but most VCRs can't.

The Federal Communicatio Commission would have to appro altering an over-the-air broadc signal, but no approval would needed for changing a cassette cable signal.

Folk singer walking at Mass. General Hospital

BOSTON (AP) — Folk singer Arlo Guthrie was able to walk when he was admitted to Massachusetts General Hospital after he was transferred from a Ware hospital where doctors believed he had a gall bladder problem, officials say.

Guthrie, 37, was admitted to Mary Lane Hospital in Ware early Saturday after complaining of stomach pains as he finished work on an album. Hospital spokesman Joseph J. Klimavich declined comment on his illness or transfer.

Massachusetts General spokesman Martin S. Bander said he did not know Guthrie's condition, diagnosis or the reason for the transfer.

Guthrie, whose best-known hit was "Alice's Restaurant" in 1967, was hospitalized in 1981 for an inflamed pancreas after suffering an attack during a concert in Vancouver, British Columbia.

•••

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Practically the entire 18,500-seat Spectrum was sold out for tonight's performance by tenor Luciano Pavarotti, who has dedicated the concert to Eugene Ormandy, who died this week.

"When a colossal conductor like Maestro Ormandy dies, it is a loss for us all," said the singer, who announced the dedication on Wednesay. "It is in his memory that I will dedicate this concert."

Pavarotti

Ormandy, who retired in 1980 after 44 years as conductor-music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, died Tuesday.

•••

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Albert B. "Happy" Chandler, former governor and major league baseball commissioner who credited "long-lived parents and clean living" for his health, has left a hospital after spinal surgery.

Chandler, 86, of Versailles, was found to have spinal stenosis, causing pain and numbness in his legs, spokeswoman Marilyn Sarow said Wednesday. The problem, a narrowing of the spinal canal, was caused by a bone overgrowth that traps the nerves of the spinal cord, she said.

Chandler

Doctors removed the bone overgrowth March 6. Chandler's recovery was much faster than anticipated, she said.

•••

LONDON (AP) — Swiss baron Heini Thyssen, considered one of Europe's wealthiest men, wants his former wife to return jewelry he says is worth $77 million but she claims is worth one-third of that, her attorney says.

Thyssen was divorced from Denise in a British court in November 1984 after 17 years of marriage. He claims the Brazilian-born baroness, who was his fourth wife, has $82 million in jewelry, but she claims the collection is only worth $25 million, the lawyer, Thomas Scott Baker, said Wednesday during a court bid to force Thyssen to reveal just how wealthy he is.

Thyssen, 63, a leading art collector, also seeks ownership of a $4.5 million apartment in New York and wants the baroness to return paintings, silverware and other art objects, Baker said.

Thyssen's lawyer, Robert Johnson, said the baron has admitted being worth $440 million and that his client was eager to bring the case to an end.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer-songwriter David Allan Coe, who wrote the 1977 Johnny Paycheck million-selling hit "Take This Job and Shove It," has filed for bankruptcy.

Coe, 45, who has spent 20 years behind bars for possessing burglary tools and obscene literature, on Wednesday filed the petition to liquidate his assets to pay debts. A breakdown of his assets wasn't available.

Coe said in a statement that his financial problems stem from the loss of a tour bus in a 1984 traffic accident, recent flood damage at his home-office compound west of Nashville and his divorce last year.

Coe has recorded such hits as "The Ride," "Mona Lisa Lost Her Smile," "You Never Even Called Me by My Name" and his current "She Used to Love Me a Lot."

•••

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Christopher Brown Robinson, a star of the soap opera "General Hospital" sentenced to prison for tax evasion, will spend nights in jail and work days so he can pay off back taxes.

Robinson, 46, was sentenced March 5 to four months in a minimum-security facility and ordered to perform 200 hours of community service work and pay the taxes on $490,440 in earnings he was convicted of failing to report.

•••

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — The reputation of Big Jack, a coonhound whose former owner once said was so skilled he could "blow the leaves off a tree" to expose a raccoon, remains intact after two court challenges.

Blue Earth County Court Judge James Mason dismissed a 2-year-old lawsuit filed by William R. Osborne of St. Peter, Big Jack's new owner, against former owner Martin P. Winter of Janesville.

Dollar increases

LONDON (AP) — The dollar moved higher against all key currencies in quiet European trading early today in response to strengthening American interest rates. Gold prices fell.

Currency dealers said they were expecting the dollar to stabilize near its current levels, possibly rising late in the day when U.S. trading opens.

"The expectation is for a quiet day here," said one Frankfurt dealer.

Higher U.S. interest rates were providing most of the dollar's support. The U.S. federal funds rate rose to 9¼ percent Wednesday from 8 1/2 percent.

Dealers said they expected interest rates to stay firm in the near term. Rising interest rates make returns attractive on dollar-denominated investments.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar closed at 260.30 yen, up from 259.70 yen Wednesday. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 260.70 yen.

The British pound moved lower in London at $1.08075, down from $1.0860 late Wednesday.

Other dollar rates compared with Wednesday's late levels:

3.3732 German marks, up from 3.3590.

2.8710 Swiss francs, up from 2.8500.

10.3125 French francs, up from 10.2550.

3.8180 Dutch guilders, up from 3.7975.

2,114.00 Italian lire, up from 2,099.00.

1.3895 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3890.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $291.30 an ounce, compared with $293.40 late Wednesday.

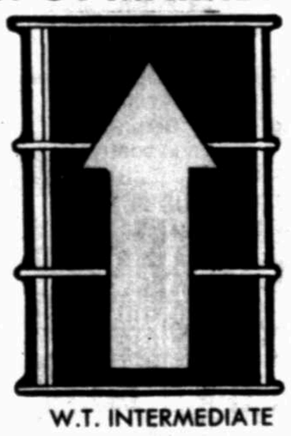

London's five major bullion dealers later fixed a recommended price of $290.25.

In Zurich, the metal opened at $291 bid, down from $292.50 late Wednesday. By mid-morning, it had slipped further to a bid price of $290.20.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid price of $292.27, up $1.26 from Wednesday.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.675 an ounce, up from $5.655 bid late Wednesday.

February retail sales jump 1.4 percent

Automakers report modest gain

Associated Press

Stock and bond prices tumbled and interest rates moved higher after the Commerce Department reported that retail sales jumped 1.4 percent in February for their best advance since November.

Major U.S. automakers, meanwhile, said Wednesday their combined early March sales rose a modest 3.3 percent from a year earlier.

And the nation's 1,000 largest manufacturers boosted their capital appropriations 32 percent in 1984 to $116 billion, despite heavy cutbacks in the petroleum industry, the Conference Board said.

The retail sales report raised concerns on Wall Street that economic growth, combined with recent growth in the money supply, might be so brisk as to prompt the Federal Reserve to tighten credit, pushing up interest rates.

As a result, losers overwhelmed gainers 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange and the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 10.05 to 1,261.70, its lowest level since closing at 1,259.50 on Jan. 22.

Prices of long-term Treasury bonds tumbled more than a point, or $10 for each $1,000 in face value, and short-term interest rates rose sharply in the money markets. The rate on six-month Treasury bills climbed to 9.02 percent from 8.85 percent late Tuesday.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the February retail sales, whose gain was more than double that expected by economists, reflected "growing consumer confidence. People are emerging from the winter season with an economic strength that is showing up at the cash register."

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the increase would help retailers reduce swollen inventories and pave the way for further gains in domestic production and employment.

Economists ascribed much of the February retail sales gain to its comparison with January sales that were weakened by poor weather in much of the nation. January sales had risen only 0.5 percent.

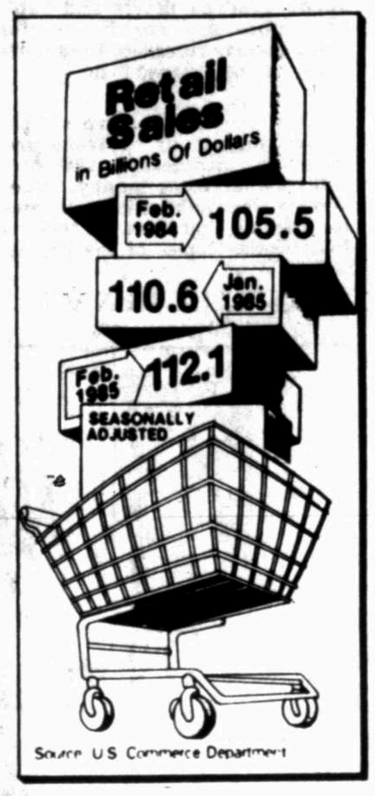

They also said retail sales, excluding autos, have been essentially flat since October.

The early March auto sales were limited by an 8.1 percent sales decline by industry leader General Motors Corp.Chrysler Corp. said its sales rose a brisk 28.8 percent and Ford Motor Co. sales climbed 17.9 percent. Both companies have been offering special sales incentives and cut-rate financing.

Fourth-quarter capital appropriations rose 5 percent from the previous quarter to $29 billion, the Conference Board, a business-sponsored research organization, said. Excluding the petroleum industry cutbacks, fourth quarter appropriations rose 17 percent from the third quarter, it said.

Capital appropriations, authorizations for future spending on new plants and equipment, are considered an indication of future capital spending rates. Actual spending rose 19 percent from 1983 to $90.4 billion last year.

The Conference Board said it expects the nation's 1,000 largest companies to boost their capital spending by 34 percent in 1985, with capital appropriations up by 7 percent.

Davis brothers agree to reorganize empire

DALLAS (AP) — Millionaire brothers Cullen Davis and Ken Davis have averted an effort by creditors to immediately force payment of millions of dollars in loans in agreeing to voluntary reorganization of a chunk of their business empire.

Attorneys for the Fort Worth brothers, in documents filed Tuesday in U.S. bankruptcy court, agreed to reorganization of Kendavis Holding Co. under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

A bankruptcy court trustee said Wednesday the brothers are also expected to agree to reorganization of Kendavis Industries International, a management subsidiary of Kendavis Holding.

Creditors claim the two companies owe them more than $300 million. Eight banks tried to force the companies into involuntary bankruptcy in a petition filed Feb. 21.

Bank officials said they failed to reach a refinancing agreement with the Davis companies after 18 months of intensive negotiations.

Assistant U.S. trustee George McElreath said Wednesday he had received the Davis' consent order to reorganize the second company as well. McElreath oversees such proceedings for the court.

But officials said by late Wednesday, the paperwork had not shown up at the bankruptcy clerk's office in Dallas.

"The filings give them 120 days to propose a plan of reorganization," said McElreath.

He said although most creditors permit a company that amount of time to come up with a plan, they can try to speed up the process by appealing to the court. Any reorganization would have to be approved by all parties and a federal bankruptcy judge, McElreath said.

Forbes magazine lists Cullen and Ken Davis among the 400 wealthiest Americans. Kendavis Holding Co. is an umbrella for at least 52 other corporate entities.

The business empire includes energy exploration, equipment and services, rubber products, lighting fixtures, air conditioning and heavy equipment, often sold in international markets.

In 1976, a shooting at Cullen Davis' hilltop mansion left his 12-year-old stepdaughter dead and his estranged wife, Priscilla, and another guest wounded.

Charged with capital murder in his stepdaughter's death, Davis' first 1977 trial ended in a mistrial. He was acquitted of the charge later in the same year.

He was accused in August 1978 of paying a man $25,000 to kill the judge who presided over his divorce from Priscilla and again went to court. After a mistrial in early 1979, he was acquitted later that year on the capital murder solicitation charge.

Ken Davis said after banks filed the involuntary bankruptcy petition in February that the proceeding was "imprudent and unnecessary," adding the companies had a positive cash flow.

But creditors said the Davis brothers had failed to meet their financial obligations.

The banks, in court documents on file in Dallas, say the Davis business empire has lost $132 million over the last two years and is headed for "substantial losses" in 1985.

Bank officials want U.S. bankruptcy court permission to monitor the business activities and examine financial records of Kendavis Holding and Kendavis Industries International.

"There is a significant probability that the (companies) will have to take extraordinary measures in order to provide cash in the foreseeable future," bank officials said in the filings.

Kendavis spokesman David Sturgiss on Wednesday afternoon declined comment on the company's financial condition and on bankruptcy proceedings because he said he has not been briefed by company attorneys.

The attorneys could not be reached by telephone for comment by The Associated Press.

No bankruptcy petitions have so far been filed against any of the other corporate entities under the Kendavis umbrella. Business at various Kendavis companies has continued.

The banks do cite several Kendavis companies in their filings, all of which borrowed from one or more of the creditors.

ANR, Coastal continue takeover talks

DETROIT (AP) — American Natural Resources Co. officers were seeking assurances that Houston-based Coastal Corp. would keep ANR in Michigan should the Detroit company accept a $2.4 billion takeover, a corporate source says.

No final deal had been struck in negotiations over Coastal's $65 per share offer to take control of ANR, whose management "wants to be assured that Detroit and Michigan commitments will not be disrupted," said the source, who requested anonymity because of legal limitations on public statements by companies involved in potential takeovers.

An announcement today on the outcome of negotiations was possible, although not certain, according to ANR.

The heretofore acrimonious exchanges between the two companies took on a more cautious tone Wednesday with a joint announcement that Coastal had sweetened the pot by $5 per share of common stock.

Coastal Chairman Oscar S. Wyatt Jr. last week opened the takeover bid with a $60 per share offer, which ANR Chairman Arthur R. Seder Jr. immediately termed inadequate.

Wyatt in his letter to Seder said Coastal officials "would expect to maintain ANR's headquarters in Detroit and have no plans to close any other facilities of ANR."

The two companies filed lawsuits against each other in Detroit's U.S. District Court following Coastal's takeover bid.

ANR in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission had outlined a wide range of strategies to combat the takeover, including using the company's assets as collateral to raise the money to buy its own stock, thereby keeping it out of Coastal's grasp, and seeking a friendly merger with a third company.

Study says overvalued dollar costs nation 2 million jobs

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States has lost about 2 million potential jobs since 1980 because of the overvalued dollar's impact, according to a study unveiled Tuesday.

Of the 2 million jobs aborted by the strong dollar, about 1.5 million were in manufacturing industries, Data Resources Inc. said.

The report also suggested that the sharp appreciation in the dollar was responsible for almost half of the record $123.3 billion trade deficit set last year.

"U.S. trade and U.S. trade policy are in deep trouble," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who released the report. He said that currently, "International trade is like a 100-yard dash to the marketplace, where you've given your competitors a 40-yard head start."

DRI, a consulting and forecasting company, detailed its report at a hearing held by the Joint Economic Committee's subcommittee on economic goals and intergovernmental policy, of which Bentsen is vice chairman.

When the dollar's value rises, the price of foreign imports declines and that of U.S. exports increases. Since mid-1980, the dollar's value has soared 50 percent against a basket of 15 main currencies, devastating U.S. exporters. And the costs of U.S. labor and capital have climbed compared with those of other countries, prompting manufacturers to shift production and purchasing abroad, sacrificing U.S. jobs.

Edward G. Jefferson, chairman of E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., testified, "No area of U.S. industry is immune to the overwhelming currency advantage of foreign countries." He said that the overvalued dollar had caused Du Pont to close efficient U.S. facilities, resulting in loss of jobs. He noted that the company is under increasing pressure to invest overseas instead of in the United States.

Roger E. Brinner, DRI's chief economist, told the subcommittee that he did not believe U.S. policies have "caught up with the problems of American industry competing in a world economy." He attributed the dollar's climb to continuing high interest rates that have lured foreign investors.

Brinner said that cutting federal spending, not raising taxes, to reduce the budget deficit is the best way to make the country more competitive internationally.

When the budget deficit is large, so are the federal government's demands for funds to finance it. That, in turn, places pressure on interest rates. And as interest rates increase, so does the demand for dollar investments, strengthening the currency.

If the dollar had remained stable instead of jumping as high as it has, DRI estimated that 2 million obs would have been created nationwide. "Manufacturing would have been 1.5 million higher," Brinner said. "Those are jobs lost."

SPE to hear talk on acquisition funds

Vernon A. "Bud" Isaacs, Jr. will speak to the Permian Basin Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers (SPE) on Tuesday at the Ranchland Hills Country Club.

"Acquisition Fund Company Trends: History, Rationale, Organization, Administration and Future," is the title of his talk.

The number of companies offering oil income programs grew rapidly during the late 1970s with the peak in 1983. The companies raised more than $4.5 billion from the public. Isaac's talk will review the history of the rise in funds and the growth in the acquisition business, why so many jumped on the bandwagon and what it takes to administer them on a partnership level. With the recent decline in oil prices, he will discuss the future of this business and acquisitions of producing properties in general.

He is senior vice president of property acquisitions with Petro-Lewis Corp. in Denver.

In his present position, Isaacs has been involved in more than 290 petroleum property transactions valued at $3.4 billion.

Previously, he held reservoir, production and drilling engineering positions with Coquina Oil Corp., Union Oil of California and Standard Oil Co. of California. He earned a BS degree in petroleum engineering from the Colorado School of Mines.

A social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. Isaac's speech will follow.

Isaacs is an SPE Distinguished Lecturer for 1984-1985. The speakers will travelto local sections and student chapters throughout the world.

Vernon Isaacs

Desk & Derrick meeting today

James L. Salners, vice president of acquisition for HCW Exploration Inc., will speak at the Midland Desk and Derrick's meeting at 6:30 p.m. today at the Petroleum Club.

Salners will speak on the subject of macro-economics of the oil and gas industry.

He is a graduate of Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh with a degree in chemical engineering. He has 13 years experience in the petroleum industry and was previously associated with Gulf Oil Corp., American Trading and Production Co. and GMW Corp.

Salners is marketing expert for HCW and travels extensively to make industry presentations to brokers.

PBS-SEPM sets Tuesday luncheon

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists (PBS-SEPM) will hold their monthly luncheon meeting at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Midland Center.

The speaker will be Peter A. Scholle of Gulf Oil Research, Houston.

Scholle will present a talk entitled: "The Permian of East Greenland."

Those wishing to attend may callthe SEPM office at 683-1573.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Eddy discovery pumps 60 barrels

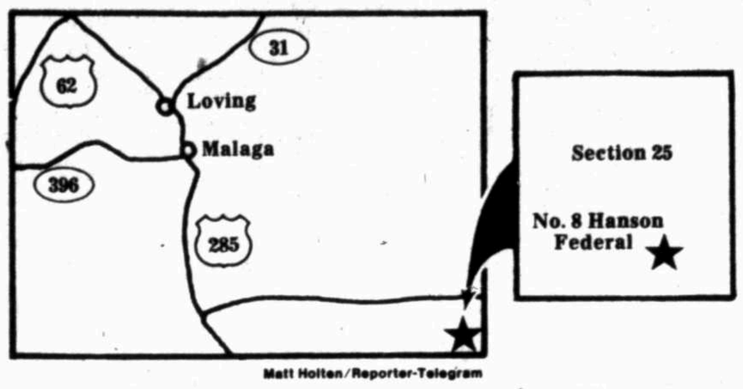

From Staff Reports

HANSON OPERATING CO. tested the No. 8 Hanson Federal, a Cherry Canyon discovery in Eddy County, to pump 60 barrels of oil, 45 Mcfd and 312 barrels of water. Gas-oil ratio is 750:1. Hanson perforated the Cherry Canyon from 6,300 to 6,338 ft., acidized with 2,000 gallons of 15 percent acid and fractured with 43,000 gallons gel and 72,900 lbs. sand.

Drilled to 8,410 ft., the well is plugged back to 6,420 ft. Final casing set was 5 1/2 inches at 8,410 ft.

On a ground elevation of 3,145 ft., formation tops include the Delaware at 4,130 ft., Ramsey at 4,150; Ford at 4,190; Rader at 4,390; Penery at 4,590; Hegler at 4,675; Cherry Canyon at 5,040; Brushy Canyon at 7,015; and the Bone Springs zone at 8,180 ft.

The discovery is 330 ft. from south and 2,310 ft. from east lines of Section 25, T-26-S, R-31-E.

Lea discovery tested to pump 14 barrels

An undesignated Abo discovery was recently completed in Lea County.

CONOCO, INC. tested the No. 1 State "35" to pump 14 barrels of 39.3 gravity oil, 42 Mcfd and 15 barrels of water. Gas-oil ratio is 3,000:1. Conoco perforated the Abo interval 6,959 to 7,570 ft. and acidized with 256 barrels of NeFeHCL acid.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 8,000 ft. and plugged back to 7,953 ft. A seven inch liner was hung from 3,690 to 8,000 ft.

On a ground elevation of 3,958 ft., formation tops include Anhydrite ate 1,260 ft., Yates at 2,672; Seven Rivers at 2,936; Queen at 3,458; Grayburg at 3,732; San Andres at 4,002; Glorieta at 5,199; Blinebry at 5,761; Tubb at 6,318; Drinkard at 6,656; Abo at 6,918; and Strawn at 7,613 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and east lines of Section 35, T-20-S, R-37-E.

Morrow discovery flows 5.5 Mmcf daily

TEXACO, INC. opened Morrow gas production in Cheves County with recompletion of the No. 2 Peery Federal. The Peery was plugged back from the Little Lucky Lake (Devonian) formation.

The well was tested for an absolute open flow of 5.75 Mmcf on various chokes with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,752 psi. The well is flowing from the Morrow interval 9,932 to 9,940 ft.

Original depth was 12,313 ft. A cast-iron bridge plug was set at 10,100 ft. with 30 ft. of cement on top. Seven inch casing was set at 12,206 ft.

On an elevation of 3,972 ft., formation tops include Anhydrite at 440 ft., Yates at 1,464; San Andres at 2,897; Glorieta at 4,350; Tubb at 5,650; Abo at 6,424; Wolfcamp at 7,740; Mississippian at 10,215; Devonian at 10,992; Montoya at 11,700; Simpson at 11,897; and the Ellenburger at 11,970 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and e,980 ft. from east lines of Section 29, T-15-S, R-30-E.

King County gains Strawn discovery

Strawn production was discovered in King County with the completion of BURNETT OIL CO., Fort Worth, No. 1 Sowell "A". The well was tested to pump 120 barrels of 36 gravity crude and one barrel of water. Gas-oil ratio is 170:1. Burnett perforated the Strawn interval 5,080 to 5,096 ft.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 5,750 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at TD.

The well topped the Lower Strawn at 5,010 ft., Twin Peaks at 5,034; and Conglomerate at 5,640 ft. on a ground elevation of 1,513 ft.

The discovery is located 2,173 ft. from south and 2,256 ft. from east lines of Section 6, Block F, H&TC survey, 18 miles southeast of Guthrie.

The operator has requested a field designated of Big A.

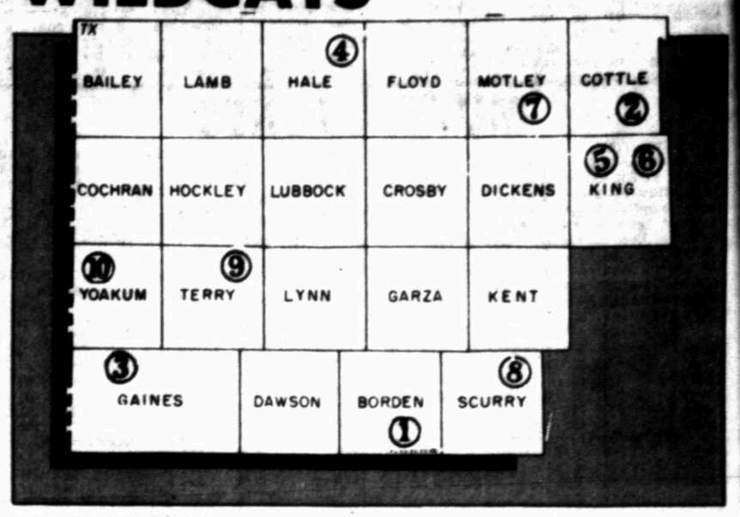

Bright & Co drills two dry wildcats

Two Sterling County wildcats were drilled dry and abandoned.

BRIGHT & CO. drilled the No. 1 Horwood "4" to a total depth of 8,150 ft. and abandoned on Jan. 15, 1985. Location is 660 ft. from north and from east lines of Section 4, Block 12, SPRR survey, one mile northeast of Sterling City.

Bright also drilled the No. 1 Horwood "257", drilled to 8,269 ft. and abandoned Feb. 4, 1985. Location is 2,600 ft. from east and 2,585 ft. from south lines of Section 257, Block 2, H&TC survey, three miles north-northest of Sterling City.

Professor calls Reagan, Smith ultimate leaders

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — What leadership skills separate Ronald Reagan and Roger Smith from Franklin Roosevelt and Lee Iacocca?

Stumped? You are not alone.

Only 2 of 21 newspeople who were asked the question could provide the answer. Several professors failed to spot the distinction. Asked by a newsman last year, six presidential candidates failed to deliver a reasonable answer.

Almost all the preachers of business excellence fail to deal with the distinction, as do many professors in graduate business schools, says Professor Eugene Jennings. And yet the answer once was widely recognized.

The distinction, he says, is that Reagan, and Smith, the chairman of General Motors, are maximum or ultimate leaders, whereas Roosevelt and Iacocca displayed their skills as minimum or crisis leaders.

If you think that distinction is minor, then read on.

To appreciate the distinction you must first recognize that there is a big difference between managers and leaders, a distinction that Jennings feels has been fogged over in recent years.

"Managers make things happen that are expected to happen," he says, while "leaders move countries and companies."

There are minimum managers and maximum managers.

A minimum or basic manager is one who brings in timely and proper results within expectations and policies. A maximum or ultimate manager is one who, through innovation, finds unique and unusual ways of getting the job done.

The term "mini," says Jennings, author, adviser to corporate and political leaders, and a professor at Michigan State's graduate business school, is meant to differentiate rather than disparage. Both mini and maxi have their roles.

The same two terms apply to leaders also. A mini leader is often called a crisis executive — one who saves from disaster a company, such as Lee Iacocca's Chrysler Corp., or Franklin Roosevelt's United States of America.

"The ultimate in leadership is not just in saying something but rather in building something, and the ultimate leader is one who builds a future that is free from mortal risk," the professor explains.

In doing so, the ultimate leader produces irreversible change — change of such magnitude that all his or her successors must deal with it.

Mini, or crisis leaders, he points out, are carried forward by the need to avoid disaster. Maxi, or ultimate leaders, must be even more tenacious, because they are challenged by opposing viewpoints of what the future should be.

By Jenning's analysis, Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale ran a crisis campaign and, unfortunately for him, allowed Ronald Reagan to monopolize the maxi form of leadership.

Mondale and some others tried to fabricate a crisis to justify their camdidacies, Jennings contends, "when there clearly was not a crisis in Ronald Reagan's America any more than there was in Roger Smith's General Motors."

Builders of futures must, of course, have vision — and something more: They must also have an acute sense of the possible in their vision.

Vision, says Jennings, doens't come from imagination, creativity or inward dwelling. "There's always a possibility out there in the future. One merely has to unfog his eyes and become disrespectful of the present to see it."

Crisis leaders need tools — whatever tools are available. Ultimate leaders use principles and hold to them. Ultimate leaders are not usually strategic thinkers, nor are they skilled in tactical management.

"What ultimate leaders are well-equipped to do is speak philosophically about broad issues and purposes," says Jennings. And in doing so, he adds, they exasperate their adversaries and members of the news media.

The latter, he contends, usually have a managerial orientation, and expect leaders to be specific, and well-versed in facts and procedures. He maintains that ultimate leaders fail "when they bend to the demands of opponents and journalists to be more strategic, tactical or specific."

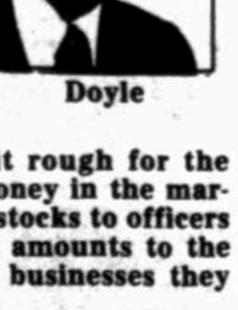

It is a principle of leadership, says Jennings, always to stay as broadly and philosophically defined as possible, whether you're running General Motors or the United States of America.

Corporate officers obtain stocks legally, don't skim profits

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q — Reading a story about "insider trades," I was astounded to see how many officers of various corporations are millionaires many times over through their ownership of company stock. The story reported that certain officers are buying and selling their corporations' stocks now. But did they buy their original shares or were those shares given to them?

If the stocks were given to the officers, it really mkes it rough for the small stockholder to make money in the market. Gifts of large amounts of stocks to officers dilute a company's profits. It amounts to the "skimming" racketeers do at businesses they control.

A — Calm down. Corporate officers obtain stocks in a number of different ways, but never by illegally skimming profits off the top.

Many companies have stock purchase, stock option, stock bonus and-or other plans through which officers and other employees acquire shares.

The vast majority of those plans are very good deals for participants. It's no surprise that top corporate officers make out much better on those plans than lower level employees. But it's a rare plan that just gives shares away. Plan participants usually buy their companies' stocks, albeit at bargain prices.

NASA employee says solar cells to provide energy

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A representative of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration came to the capital of the West Texas oil industry Wednesday and talked about what might happen when the oil runs out.

By early in the next century, satellites with solar cells three miles long could be beaming the sun's energy down to huge antenna farms near major cities, Louis Leopold of NASA told the Leadership Midland Alumni Association at their quarterly luncheon at the Master's Club.

"We could generate enough power to power Houston or Dallas or Los Angeles with one of these satellites," said Leopold.

Talk about running out of oil is not usually considered polite table conversation in Midland, but Leopold predicted that petroleum will eventually become too scarce to be relied on as a major energy source. Such oil-less countries as France and Japan are already planning to have the satellites in place by the end of the century, though the U.S. program "is on hold because of the cost:" $100 billion for the first satellite.

That's about half the size of the current federal deficit. But though Congress may balk at funding exorbitantly priced orbiting power plants, the continuing budget crunch hasn't affected appropriations for such other big-ticket NASA programs as the space shuttle and the permanent manned space station, Leopold said.

"This year we got more than we asked for" from Congress. "We're spending $1 billion per year on the space station. I think we've got the dollars we need."

The station, which NASA hopes to launch by 1992, will not merely serve as a platform for scientific experiments, he added. Along with the space shuttle, it will be a boon to manufacturers of various products such as pharmaceuticals which benefit from being produced at zero-gravity.

Satellites with solar cells three miles long... "could generate enough power to power Houston or Dallas or Los Angeles..."

— Louis Leopold
Communications expert from NASA

"The medicines we make here will be in our opinion more effective, more quick and with fewer side effects," Leopold said.

The NASA communications expert, whose involvement with the space program "extends almost to the beginning — back in the Mercury days," also talked about a 1986 NASA project which will send a 94-inch-diameter telescope into orbit.

"It will enable us to see about 10 times farther than the telescopes we have on earth," he said.

Leopold narrated a slide show for the Leadership Midland alumni which traced the development of the space program. Many of the slides showed woman astronauts in training, and Leopold said the current number of female flight-crew members reflects a late '70s NASA decision to recruit women for the space program:

"They came on board in 1978, and now they're flying in '84 and '85."

Hispanic chamber to honor leaders

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

When the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce gathers for its first banquet at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Midland Hilton, it will mark another step in the group's efforts to join the minority businesses with the rest of the community while recognizing Hispanic leaders.

Invitations have been sent to about 250 businesses and corporations, according to Celia Morales, a board member. District Judge Pat Baskin will be installing the officers and board of directors.

Special guests will be members of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, including James Alsup, president; and Joan Baskin, president-elect. Master of ceremonies will be Grant Billingsley, executive vice president.

Speakers will be Ray Lopez, regional director of the Small Business Administration, and Rudy Flores, president of the Texas Mexican-American Chamber of Commerce.

Officers to be installed are Roger Robles, president; Maria Antonieta Soto, vice president; Tony Fraga, second vice president; Ruben Vargas, secretary; Tony Hernandez, treasurer; and Richard Alvarado, legal adviser.

Board members are Manuel Carrascio, Cecilia Wollschlager, Ciro Sanchez, Celia Morales, Enrique Farias, Sam Flores, Manuel Sanchez and Oralia Corrales.

The chamber was founded in October 1984 by a group of local business professionals who felt there was a need to form an organization that would cater to the Hispanic businesses in this community.

Judge denies retrial to man convicted of sexual assault

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The motion for a new trial of a 22-year-old Midland man sentenced to three 99-year sentences for the aggravated sexual assault of three girls was denied Thursday despite defense arguments.

Barry Wion, 22, a former delivery man, was transported to the Texas Department of Corrections at 6 a.m. today by two members of the Midland County Sheriff's Office. The defendant, who feared physical harm from other county inmates, had requested he not be taken to Huntsville this morning on the regular "chain gang."

County jail officials said Wion, who has been in jail since his arrest June 6 in Hobbs, N.M., has made several threats to take his life if he were to be sent to the TDC.

Jail Operations Lt. Bennie Cureton asked 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin to order that Wion be placed in a padded cell Thursday night if the motion for a new trial was denied. The county cannot legally make an inmate stay in a padded cell unless the inmate has been declared legally insane or has attempted suicide, Cureton said.

"Because the county is liable (for the safety of prisoners), we'll have to post a deputy outside the jail to watch him all night," Cureton told the Reporter-Telegram Thursday.

"I've been informally requested by your counsel to let you remain in a single cell tonight," Baskin told Wion. "The state has requested, once again informally, that you be placed in what is sometimes referred to as the padded cell. I'm going to resolve that problem this way, with your attorney's approval: You will be taken to the TDC tonight — I don't know if it's by yourself but not with the regular chain. While the court fully realizes you don't want to go, not going is not an option.

"I understand you want to be transported alone and as quickly as possible?" Baskin asked Wion.

"Separately, yes; as soon as possible, no," Wion responded.

Baskin informed him that also was not an option.

Wion was found guilty in 23 minutes of deliberation Jan. 25 by a jury which included a former Lee High School principal and the wife of a former Texas Rangers captain. He had been charged with the aggravated sexual assault in May of the three daughters of a couple with whom he was friends and neighbors.

Attorney Carol Kirk, who was appointed by Baskin to represent Wion in his appeal and new trial motions, requested a new trial be granted because a lesser included offense was not included in the charge given the jury.

Baskin, however, said penetration and not intent to arouse or gratify must be proven to justify aggravated sexual assault. Because the lesser offense of sexual contact pertains only to contact for the gratification of desire and does not specify the element of penetration, it is not an included offense, he said in his denial.

Ms. Kirk also made a motion for a new trial on the grounds that the oldest of the three alleged victims was not questioned for competency outside the presence of the jury, as were the younger ones.

During the trial, the younger sisters, ages 7 and 9, were voir dired by attorneys before they were allowed to testify before the jury. Baskin said that despite the special education classes in which the 11-year-old is enrolled, he felt she was qualified for questioning.

Woman to be retried on theft charges

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A 32-year-old mother of three faces a new trial for charges of theft over $750 after a nine-man, three-woman jury failed to reach a unanimous verdict Thursday after almost four hours of deliberation and five votes.

Brenda Allen, 2928 W. Louisiana Ave., was accused of stealing $908.60 in August from The Sunglass store in Midland Park Mall. While she was manager of the store, she also is alleged to have written $296 in "bad" checks to the store for cash, according to prosecutors.

The jury hung on a 9-3 vote of guilty, according to jurors. They first informed 238th State District Judge Vann Culp they could not reach a decision at 5:30 p.m., after 1½ hours of deliberation and three votes.

Culp declared a mistrial at 7:40 p.m. after an individual poll of jurors indicated they felt they could not reach a unanimous decision.

Ms. Allen, represented by attorney James Eubank, testified that she quit her job of two months as manager of the store after she had an argument with Pam Garrett, regional director of Sun Mark, Inc. in Carrollton, about missing daily business reports.

"It was just a feeling I got that she didn't believe me," Ms. Allen said. According to the defendant, the DBRs, which were to be sent to the home company in Carrollton on a daily basis, must have gotten lost in the mail.

Ms. Allen, now employed as a cashier at Toys Plus in Midland, said she decided to quit her job at The Sunglass after the phone conversation with Ms. Garrett Aug. 22. She said she tried to contact Ms. Garrett by phone to inform her of her decision, but could not reach her. Ms. Allen also testified that she did not return to the store to pick up her $540 paycheck because she didn't want "to have to hassle" with it.

According to testimony during the two-day trial, witnesses said the Midland store made deposits at Home Savings in the mall on a daily basis. But the prosecution, led by Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors, contended no deposits were made between Aug. 3 and Aug. 24.

Ms. Garrett, who transfers the Midland deposits to a Carrollton bank, said when two checks bounced in late August she began to investigate the Midland store. After she discovered she was missing about two weeks worth of the daily business reports, which include deposit slips, she called Ms. Allen.

Because Ms. Allen had failed to place the correct amount of postage on the envelopes in the past, several of the DBRs had been returned, Ms. Garrett said. She testified she thought the missing business reports could be a result of "recurring problems with the post office."

"The bounced checks bothered me but as far as the daily business reports not being received, if we hadn't had the problem (with the post office) earlier in the month, I would've been more concerned," she testified.

Although Ms. Allen said she had given the responsibility of making the deposits to store employee Lisa Mackey, she never saw Ms. Mackey mail the envelopes.

Connors, referring to the small quarters of the store, asked the defendant how she could not have monitored Ms. Mackey when she was standing next to her.

Jury selection begins in Lopez murder trial

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Jury selection got under way this morning for the new murder trial of 18-year-old Christopher Phillip Lopez.

The first trial for Lopez, accused of the fatal shooting Aug. 4, 1984 of 15-year-old Irineo Bersosa Duran, Jr., ended in a mistrial when the 12-member jury deadlocked 8-to-4 after deliberating about 10 hours.

After 70th District Judge Gene Ater declared a mistrial, jurors said they felt more evidence should have been presented to help them in deciding Lopez's guilt or innocence.

Defense attorney John W. Smith attempted to convince jurors Lopez had acted in self defense in the shooting of young Duran, that he had actually fired at 16-year-old John Vargas, whom he believed had been responsible for the shooting of his mother in May 1984 and was threatening him at the time of the incident.

Assistant District attorney Dennis Cadra, in his final argument, warned jurors acquitting Lopez on self defense would trigger more violence.

The issue of self defense, reportedly, was one of the issues that caused the jury to deadlock.

Depending on how long attorneys take to select a jury, prosecutor Cadra could begin presenting the state's case sometime early this afternoon.

Testimony doesn't sway judge to grant retrial

Despite testimony Thursday from a police officer that the one footprint found in a backyard matched that of his alleged accomplice in two residential burglaries, Manuel Lujan, 33, of Odessa, was denied a new trial by 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin.

Lujan, sentenced Dec. 10 to life in prison for the burglaries Sept. 25 of two Midland houses, and Paul Curtis Gipson, 29, also of Odessa, were transported to the Texas Department of Corrections this morning.

At the request of Lujan's attorney Edward Shelby, Gipson testified Feb. 14 during the hearing for a new trial, that he acted alone and that Lujan, with whom he got a ride to Midland, was unaware Gipson had committed the burglaries.

About $13,000 in jewelry, most of which was recovered, was stolen, according to police.

The two were arrested Sept. 25 after Midland police obtained a description of a car believed to be involved in a burglary of the Patsy Hochman residence, 3602 Trinity.

A chase with speeds exceeding 70 mph ensued through northwest Midland and shots were fired before the arrests were made, according to police testimony.

Gipson, who jumped from Lujan's car during the chase, was apprehended by two police officers who jumped fences and ran through backyards in pursuit of the suspect. Jewelry identified by Ms. Hochman and Virginia Earhart, 2409 Goddard Court, whose home was burglarized earlier that day, was found on the ground near Gipson after a struggle with officers when he was apprehended.

Gipson, who resumed the stand Thursday, testified Feb. 14 that he did not come forth as a witness in Lujan's trial in December because prosecutors had intimidated him with threats of revoking a plea bargain agreement.

It's unfortunate we fund Uncle Sam

I just mailed the government a check. I didn't really want to, but I don't want to suffer the consequences of disobedience and defiance.

I'm a rebel at heart but not so much by my action. I wonder how I would have fared in the Revolutionary War. I'd like to imagine I'd be a rebel with a cause, a discontent, though today I'm quite fond of the British and the heritage they imparted.

Being a modern-day loyalist who shuns jails and prisons, mental torment and confiscated checking and savings accounts, I mailed the Internal Revenue Service folks a check for the money I figured I owed them according to their formulas.

Now, I felt a tinge of relief, particularly since the money was overdue and subject to penalty and interest. I'm fairly certain they won't be coming after me this year and I hope never. I think they, more than I, would regret auditing me; like I, they would be hard-pressed in putting my records together. This, by the way, is not an invitation for investigation by IRS agents. They'd be wasting their time and the taxpayers' money in checking into my anemic income and wayward spending. When the time comes when I have loads of pocket and investment money, the IRS agents may at their option move in and talk to my hired tax accountant and storm troopers. I'd like to be unavailable. However, those are wishful Neverland Days, so I should have little fear of encroachment.

But I do. My brother was audited, and others have been subjected to fearsome audits over big bucks and even over piddling bits. My patriotism may be questioned because of unrelenting surveillance.

I supposed we logically shouldn't object to funding the government revenue. Some entity has to be paid to assure the common folks and Big Business that there is order and justice throughout the land. It's just unfortunate we pay via taxes. I would much prefer freewill offerings. I even might consider tithing; it would be a cheaper out than the current complicated and expensive system of tax collecting.

I suppose my resentment in paying more greenbacks to the government is the fear, not without justification, that the funds will be squandered. Unfortunately, the government's bureaucrats, like many of this nation's people, probably including some tax protesters, are spendthrifts. Certainly, the government has no monopoly on running through money more quickly than gal sort in the genre of Ben Franklin. But I don't buy outlandishly expensive toilet seats, coffee pots, nuts and bolts, and nuclear weapons and warring machinery. I just spend to enjoy today's life and hope my credit is still good.

Of course; I've found out that the government is quite reluctant to give credit, though it welcomes it in building up the national debt.

The comparative piddling amount I mailed in wasn't exactly a handout, and I hope the funds won't be treated as such. But I fear the money, in large measure, will be squandered. But that possibly could be averted if the government would do what it preaches: save here and there and get on the payroll savings plan.

Students head for Mexico

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — College students on spring break in South Texas are leaving the beaches for the bargains across the border and Mexican merchants, needing the tourist dollar, say the students are a welcome sight.

"In five years we haven't seen so many people here," said Guillermo Perez, the owner of a curio shop in the market. "We're so happy to see lots of young, beautiful people that have visited us. Hopefully they will come back."

Several thousand students have been lured to South Padre Island during spring break this week. Many of them and other tourists staying in Brownsville have walked across the international bridge for bargains.

The students come from area colleges and state univerities and from out-of-state colleges.

Business people say visitors to the area this month are expected to add some $4 million to the economy and some of that will be in Mexico.

Many walk across the border with cameras strapped around their neck or shoulders and are photographed by friends in front of several popular places before heading into the heart of the city, the market.

There, vendors yell out, "Come over here. I'll make you a good deal."

Souvenirs range from the typical "sombrero" to dresses, hats, jewelry, handbags, shoes and numerous leather goods.

Although some of the students are visiting Mexico for the first time many have learned quickly how to bargain.

A young woman, wanting to say only that she was from Nebraska, proved she could barter for a necklace.

"For you, $6," a vendor said.

"How about $4?"

"No. $6 is a good price."

"No."

She began to walk out of the shop and the vendor said, "OK, How about $5."

"No, $4," she said.

"OK, $4.50."

She took it.

Extension service in new offices

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The agricultural people who focus more on education than on tilling the soil today are in new headquarters on the eastern outskirts of the city.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) for Midland County today opened its new offices just northwest of the Midland County Exhibit Building off U.S. Highway 80 East.

"We are looking forward to a lot of great things out of it," said Earnest Kiker, Midland County agent for agriculture.

TAEX had been on the second floor of the downtown Courthouse Annex at 218 W. Illinois Ave. In the move, the TAEX telephone number was changed to 687-1351 from the courthouse exchange of 682-9481.

The relocation of TAEX offices opened up additional room for expansion of the Midland County Adult Probation Department, which now is on the first floor of the Courthouse Annex.

"I'm doubled up over here," said Chief Probation Officer E.H. "Kirk" Kirksey. "They're going to give us more space up there."

TAEX now is in an 11,000-square-foot metal building constructed by authority of the Midland County Commissioners' Court. It was built for $171,397 by Abbott Building Co., which was the project's lowest bidder by $34,000.

The 275-by-40-foot building will afford offices for the four county agents and office staff; a "working barn" for 4-H Club activities, agricultural projects, farm-and-ranch meetings, home economics, banquets and seminars; a more formal educational meeting room, a library, and storage for county records.

The agents officing in the new building are Kiker and Alan McWilliams, agents for agriculture; and Marian Farr and Denise Albracht, agents for home economics.

Midland County Commissioner Scott Welch noted that new facility affords "good inexpensive office space."

"It frees up space for adult probation...It's a good deal," Welch said.

County Judge Bill Ahders today said he was "real pleased" with the appearance of the building and its potential for serving the community and its youth. "It's marvelous," he said. "It's going to be great."

"And this is the greatest thing that could happen to the extension educational program," Kiker said.

Kiker noted that the new TAEX-Midland County Extension Offices and Education Center will be more convenient to those who use TAEX services.

"We're becoming more accessible to the people here," said Kiker, who noted the spacious parking area. The downtown annex is strapped for parking space.

"We're at the edge of town where the agricultural people can get to us," he said. "We're looking forward to having more people come into our offices to use our educational material."

Man sentenced for indecency with child requests appeal be withdrawn

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Wrriter

Stating that "if I'm going to go down, I want to go and get it over with," a man sentenced to six years in prison for indecency with a child by exposure requested Thursday night that his appeal motion be withdrawn.

Larry Gann, 42, the single father of a 5-year-old girl, asked 238th State District Court Judge Vann Culp to withdraw his motion for appeal.

Found guilty Jan. 22 of exposing himself to two neighborhood children in a mobile home park at 2200 S. Lamesa Road in August, Gann was on a five-year probation for an aggravated assault conviction in 1980. Prosecuting Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors requested that Gann's probation be revoked because he violated his probation by committing an offense against the state.

The construction worker took the stand at 8 p.m. Thursday, shaking his head although he pleaded true to the allegations.

"Is it true that the offense (committed in violation of the terms of probation) was for indecency with a child?" Connors asked.

"The jury said it was," Gann said.

"Excuse me?" Connors asked.

"Yes," Gann said.

Culp ordered Gann to serve his six-year sentence on the indecency charge concurrent with the five-year sentence received after his probation for the aggravated assault conviction was revoked.

Gann's 5-year-old child, who has been in the custody of a friend while Gann was in county jail, will remain there while he serves his prison sentence, he said.

"I just talked to my little girl," he said. "She's doing just fine. She told me to hurry up and get home or she's going to come down there and make them let me go."

Gann was transported this morning with 13 other Midland County inmates under heavy guard to the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville. Another Midland County inmate was transported by county vehicle.

The bus carrying prisoners bound to the TDC comes through Midland about once every three months, said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter.

About 60 prisoners were on the bus this morning, which left the Midland County Jail shortly after 6 a.m. The bus, which arrived from El Paso Thursday, was staffed by three prison guards.

CHAMBER

Its goals are to:

— Promote, service and assist Hispanic businesses and professionals and to help them become more productive and successful.

— Expand Hispanic entrepreneurship in Midland.

— Provide a business source information center.

— Provide minorities procurement opportunities.

— Expand membership to include all segments of the community.

— Expand development of Midland by encouraging the location of industry and retail trade in underdeveloped areas, such as the East Side, by establishing non-polluting factories and a shopping center, or mercado, with Hispanic cultural emphasis.

— Recognize outstanding achievement by Hispanic individuals and businesses in community and civic affairs.

"We want the chamber to grow to be part of the community, not to be an isolated group," said Mrs. Wollschlager, a board member. Nor is the membership restricted to Hispanics.

"We realize a lot of businesses have Hispanic employees," said Mrs. Morales, citing fast food restaurants as an example.

Robles, president of the Hispanic chamber, has been invited to sit on the Midland Chamber executive board "to have input. We'll work alongside them," Mrs. Morales added.

In the next 10 years, she said, "Hispanic businesses will double. People will be coming from out of town to open businesses here."

Many are small businesses, such as record stores, barber shops, restaurants. And a lot of these business people "are shy" when it comes to dealing with the larger Midland Chamber, according to Mrs. Wollschlager. "This is a way of breaking the ice. The Hispanic chamber will help not only those businesses that are already successful, but others such as in making contacts for business."

These small businesses, added Mrs. Morales, will never become the large chain stores. "But they are just as important to the community."

"The Hispanic people have just come alive in the past few years," she said. "There's no limit to what we can do."

Mrs. Wollschlager added: "We want to get involved to do good things for our community; the community has been good to us. We're Americans of Hispanic descent, but we have a responsibility to the community and to show young Hispanics there is a business that can make it, to lend them a hand if they need it and to show them how to work with the bigger chamber."

"Well, it (the envelope) was laid up there (on the counter for the postal carrier to pick up) but sometimes I'd go to lunch or something and figured he (the postman) had already picked it up. I wasn't always there."

"You never checked to see if the deposits were made?" Connors asked.

"No, sir."

"You just figured they had?"

"Yes, sir."

According to testimony from Ms. Garrett, the store manager was responsible for making all deposits. Ms. Mackey and other employees said Ms. Allen, as manager, handled all money matters.

"Brenda (Allen) made the deposits," Ms. Mackey testified. "She did it most of the time. I might've done it twice to show her where the account was or something. But she worked on everything" related to money.

Ms. Mackey testified that after Ms. Allen quit, $1,000 in cash, deposit slips and daily business reports were found lying loose in a drawer.

The defense attempted to cast suspicion on Ms. Mackey, whom the defendant said was lying.

Midland police investigating three vehicle thefts

From Staff Reports

Midland police were investigating the thefts of three vehicles Wednesday.

Raymond Brickey, 3905 Nasworthy, told police his 1980 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme was stolen between 7:15 a.m. and 12:45 p.m. from his parking space in a lot in the 100 block of West Kentucky. The maroon-over-white two door was valued at $5,500, according to reports.

Jack Morris, 710 S. Big Spring, told police a 1973 Chevrolet Laguna was stolen between 9 p.m. and 10 p.m. while parked at the Gaslite Lounge, 1804 Rankin Highway. According to reports, the keys were left in the ignition of the white and green two-door, valued not listed.

Josie Covarrubiaz, 3329 W. Wadley No. 13, reported she saw her brown and white 1974 Chevrolet El Camino being driven off from her residence at 11:30 p.m. According to reports, the vehicle was locked and did not have keys in it. Value of the car was placed at $1,500 and $1,000 worth of tools were reportedly in it.

In other police activity Wednesday, an officer on patrol at 10:30 p.m. spotted the front glass door of the Western Auto store, 301 E. Illinois, was broken. Police K-9 units were called to the scene and dogs were sent in. Key carrier David Dias said he couldn't determine if anything had been taken from the store. Employees were to take inventory this morning, according to reports.

Both Gipson and Lujan were offered 40-year prison sentences in exchange for guilty pleas. Gipson, a self-proclaimed "three-time loser," chose to accept the prison sentence; Lujan opted to go to trial before Baskin, who gave him a life sentence.

The defendant had prior convictions and was sentenced to two years for theft in 1973, five years for forgery in 1974 and 20 years for burglary in 1978, according to prosecutors.

Midland Police Department Sgt. Terry Cowin's testimony Thursday about the one boot print found in the yard of the Hochman residence did not sway Baskin. The judge said that while he appreciated the testimony, "that was the only place in the yard that had dirt."

Construction workers next door to the Hochman residence testified in December they saw two men, one matching Lujan's description, in the back yard prior to the burglary.

No jewelry was found on Lujan or in his car, which was stopped after police shot out a rear tire and the car plowed into a row of mailboxes.

Ms. Kirk also asked Baskin to grant a new trial because the state did not prove the alleged offense occurred in Midland County. According to Baskin, testimony that the incidents took place in Wion's apartment at the Permian Motel, 3411 W. Wall Ave., was sufficient.

Although Wion did not have a constant guard in his single cell Thursday night, "we secured him real well" and any items he could have used to cause harm to himself were removed, Cureton said this morning.

Cable service makes promotions

Holmes

Two promotions have been announced at Dimension Cable Services.

Gregg Holmes has been moved from general manager to Southwest Region vice president. While he will retain the position of general manager, the daily activities will be addressed by Doug Smith, who has been named director of operations for Dimension Cable Services.

Smith has been serving as Southwest Region marketing manager and has lived in Midland the past three years. He has a broad spectrum of operations experience and is aware of the cable needs for Midland. "I am excited to get back into the mainstream of cable operations. Midland is such a dynamic community," Smith said. "I personally and professionally look forward to serving my fellow Midlanders through Dimension Cable Services."

Holmes said he still will have an office at 2530 S. Midkiff Road. Although he now has responsibilities for other Times Mirror systems, he plans to stay close to the progress of the Midland operation.

Court upholds conviction

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday reversed itself and upheld the Ector County conviction of William Tisdale, sentenced in Ector County to 15 years for the robbery of a convenience store cashier.

The court earlier had held there was insufficient evidence to show that the knife used in the robbery was a deadly weapon.

However, on the state's motion for rehearing, the court noted that the cashier testified that she had felt "in fear of death" from the knife, which had a blade of some 2¾ inches.

The court concluded that the evidence would support a finding that the knife was a deadly weapon, and affirmed the conviction.

Company ordered to give up planes

From Staff Reports

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton has ordered Fort Worth Aviation to surrender to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. four aircraft which the aviation company had mortgaged in securing loans from The First National Bank of Midland.

FDIC, which became receiver for and liquidator of FNB after the bank failed on Oct. 14, 1983, is seeking either the aircraft or $3.33 million to cover the loans. FDIC says John F. Cary, president of Fort Worth Aviation, had defaulted on four promissory notes.

However, Bunton ruled Cary may "replevy" — recover — the aircraft if he posts a $1.5 million bond payable to FDIC. Otherwise, FDIC may take the aircraft at Fort Worth's Meacham Field.

The aircraft are a 1977 Gates Lear Jet 24F, Beech Super King Air 200, Piper Cheyenne PA 31T, and 1977 Bell 212 helicopter.

A formal peace announcement in Indochina Aug. 11, 1954, ended the seven-year war with France.

DEATHS

Stanley Piel

BIG SPRING — Stanley Piel, 87, of Big Spring died Monday at a Big Spring hospital.

Services were to be at 9 a.m. today in Carl Street Church of Christ. Burial was to be at 3 p.m. in Olney Cemetery under the direction of Nalley-Pickle and Welch Funeral Home.

Piel was a retired machinist.

F.A. Douglass Jr.

Memorial services for F.A. "Bill" Douglass Jr., 76, of Midland will be in Fort Worth. He died Wednesday morning in a Midland hospital.

He was born March 26, 1908, in Pasadena, Calif., and moved to Fort Worth when he was 1 year old. Douglass attended New Mexico Military School in Roswell. After graduation he attended the School of Mines in Colorado, University of Oklahoma and University of Southern California. He was later employed with Humble Oil Co. in East Texas in the oil fields. In 1933, he married Merle Griffith of Fort Worth. They lived in Tyler and Talco before moving to Midland in 1942. Douglass became associated with Argo Oil Co. and later he was with the Railroad Commission here in Midland. He retired following his tenure with the Railroad Commission.

Survivors include his wife; a son, John Patrick Douglass of Fort Worth; and two grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be made to a favorite charity.

Mrs. James Baskin

Services for Mrs. James (Ruth) Dollar Baskin of Midland, mother of a local judge, will be at 11 a.m. Friday in the First Baptist Church with Dr. Daniel Vestal officiating. Burial will be Saturday in Cameron, with Ellis Funeral Home handling local arrangements.

She died Wednesday evening at her home.

Survivors include a son, Judge Pat Baskin of Midland.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

New school's PTA to hold organizational meeting

An organizational meeting of the Ruth Cowden Scharbauer Centennial Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association will be at 7 p.m. March 28 at the Santa Rita Elementary School cafetorium, 5306 Whitman Drive.

PTA members from Bonham, Henderson, Quanah Parker and Santa Rita Elementary schools will join the City Council PTA in planning and hosting the meeting.

The purpose of the meeting will be to adopt by-laws, receive reports from the Nominating Committee, elect and install officers, offer charter memberships and answer questions.

PTA meetings planned

The following Midland Independent School District Parent-Teacher Associations will meet next week:

— Quanah Parker Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association will meet at 7 p.m. Monday in the school cafeteria, 3800 Norwood St. Fourth grades students will present a program entitled, "The GiGo Effect."

— Santa Rita Elementary School PTA will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the school cafetorium, 5306 Whitman Drive. First grade students will be present.

Baylor Spring Rally slated

The Baylor University Spring Rally, sponsored by the Midland-Odessa Baylor Parents League, will be at 7:30 p.m. March 18 in the First Baptist Church Fellowship Hall.

University faculty and staff will discuss admission, preparation for university study, financial costs and assistance, athletics, student life, academics and housing. Area high school youth and parents, Baylor alumni, and parents of current Baylor students are welcome.

Computer courses planned

ODESSA — The Association for Computer Machinery at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin will host two workshops beginning Monday.

"The Realities of Defining Programming Languages" will meet at 1:30 p.m. Monday in the Student Lounge. The workshop will focus on the motivation for developing and defining the standard PL/1 program language, where it went wrong and suggest how computer programmers can design clearer and less ambiguous languages in the future.

"The Complete Computer Scientist" will meet at 7 p.m. March 21 in the Student Lounge. The workshop will address the issue that computer science students ignore "real world" skills in the development of their curriculum and personalities as reported in a recent article by "U.S. News and World Report."

For information, call Nina Cooper at 563-2400, extension 2315.

UTPB to host contest

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin chapter of the Association for Computing Machinery will host the "Permian Basin Programming Contest" April 13 in the Permian Basin Computer Center. The contest will include teams from Midland College, Odessa College and UTPB.

Competition in BASIC will be from 8:30-11 a.m. while competition in Pascal will be from 1-4 p.m.

Each school may enter two teams in each language but the teams are limited to no more than three members. Team members must be enrolled in the school he/she is representing and must not have been employed in full-time professional programming for any one continuous period exceeding three months.

For information, OC students should call Rusty Ball at 335-6400; MC students should call Bill Brooks at 684-7851; and UTPB students should call Nina Cooper at 367-2011.

Tech offers computer camp

LUBBOCK — Junior and senior high school students may gain programming experience at the "Shake Hands With Your Future Computer Camp" June 2-7 at Texas Tech University.

Participants will spend more than six hours per day developing their programming and applications skills on mainframe and microcomputers.

To participate, students must be nominated by a teacher, counselor or their parents. Nominees must provide documentation of one of the following: Standardized test scores in the 90th percentile or better in mathematics; an IQ of 120 or above; or a 3.0 grade average for the 1984-85 academic year.

Cost for resident participants is $350 including room and board. Cost for non-residents is $275 plus an additional $15.20 for lunch for the week.

For information, call Ken Rust or Teri Green at (806) 742-2404.

Engineering course slated

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin in cooperation with the Trans-Pecos section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will offer a video tape short course, "Fundamentals of Reservoir Engineering from 1-5 p.m. March 25, 27 and 29 in room 392.

The course is part of a continuing education program of SPE. It is designed to provide a basic understanding of reservoir engineering principles to professionals working in other petroleum disciplines.

Cost of the course is $35 for members and $40 for non-members. Deadline for registration is Thursday. To register, send registration fee to Kyle Pfeiffer, C/O Dowell-Schlumberger, 4222 Wendover, Odessa, Texas, 79762.

Business seminar planned

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin Women's Center in conjunction with the Service Core of Retired Executives will present a day-long seminar "Women in Small Business" March 28.

The seminar will draw upon the expertise of university faculty as well as business professionals in the Permian Basin. Each speaker will provide theoretical and practical insights into insuring a successful business venture.

To register, send a $20 registration fee payable to UTPB University Women's Center, 4901 E. University Blvd, Odessa, Texas 79762. For information, call Elizabeth Mallone at 563-2400, extension 2330.

Senator: Class-sizes law causing hardships

AUSTIN (AP) — Class sizes outlined in a 1984 education reform law are causing hardships for some public school districts and should be more flexible, a state senator says.

The law requires schools to have one teacher for every 22 students, but Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, proposed Wednesday that the ratio instead stem from a district-wide average.

The law requires the 1-to-22 ratio for kindergarten through second grade in 1985-86. In 1988-89, that ratio would apply to third and fourth grades.

"This part of the reform has caused hardships for school districts," Glasgow told the Senate Education Committee during its hearing on the issue. "What do you do when you have 23 students?"

Glasgow said school districts are having to pay for extra personnel as well as classroom facilities.

Under his proposal, a district would be prohibited from having more than 25 students in classes such as math and English, unless a certified educational aide is assigned to the classroom.

With Glasgow's proposal, the ratio would go into effect for second grade in 1987-88 and third grade in 1987-88.

Eli Douglas, superintendent of the Garland Independent School District, said if the current rati remains in effect, he foresees hirin an additional 52 teachers for 1 children.

He added that research doesn show that smaller classes make fo better students.

But Virginia Lester, an elemen tary principal in Fredericksburg said classroom size does make a di ference.

"If you don't want to put out th brush fires in junior and senio high, then you need to address th small class sizes in the lowe grades," Ms. Lester told the commit tee.

Panel to work on revised water plan

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A House-Senate conference committee on water is expected to begin meeting next week to iron out a compromise statewide water plan, which has passed the House and the Senate in different versions.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, sponsor of the House measure, and Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, sponsor of the Senate measure, have met this week to discuss differences in the bills, and both report making progress.

Craddick said part of the delay in setting up a committee meeting has been due to the process of preparing an analysis of the two bills, which are both lengthy.

Both versions of the water plank provide $600 million in state bonds for reservoir construction and sewage treatment plants, and $200 million in bonds for flood control projects. The Senate version provides additional funding for agricultural water programs, and environmentalists say it is more sympathetic to the protection of coastal bays and estuaries.

The agricultural loan program in the Senate version is expected to be debated in the conference committee, as are provisions for bay and estuary protection.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, who will serve on the conference committee, has also expressed concern about the eminent domain power of river authorities. At a February meeting of the Senate Nautural Resources Committee, when the Montford water plan was being considered before reaching the Senate floor, Truan offered an amendment to the bill to divest river authorities of power to condemn land. It was withdrawn after some discussion and Montford has since filed a bill addressing the issue.

Truan indicated Wednesday the Senate should also be serious about requiring attention to water conservation measures by both state and local governments. He asked the Legislative Council to take the language on water conservation contained in the Senate version of the bill, and adapt it so that it may be inserted by the staff of the Natural Resources Committee in every local or regional water authority bill.

Slain drug agent's friends want billboards to warn travelers

EL PASO (AP) — Friends of slain drug agent Enrique Camarena Salazar say they want billboards along the Texas-Mexico border to warn tourists not to travel to Guadalajara, where Camarena was abducted last month.

About 25 people, who have formed the Friends of Enrique S. Camarena committee, plan to solicit financial support in El Paso, Tijuana, Calif., Nogales, Ariz., and McAllen, Texas, to erect billboards in those cities, a spokesman said.

Fernando Sanga, a retired farmer who lives in Brawley, Calif., said as a group member, he hopes to convince El Pasoans to contribute money for a billboard in the West Texas city.

He said the billboards are intended to send a message to authorities in Washington, D.C., and Mexico to hasten the investigation of Camarena's killers.

Officials said about $300 has been raised to pay for the first billboard, put up this week in Camarena's hometown of Calexico, Calif.

A funeral Mass was held Saturday in Calexico for Camarena. Authorities said the bodies of Camarena and a Mexican pilot were discovered in western Mexico March 6.

Both men, who worked for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency, were abducted from Guadalajara Feb. 7.

Sanga said his group hopes that a decrease in tourism will force Guadalajara merchants to pressure Mexican authorities in the case.

He added the billboards will send a message to the U.S. State Department to warn tourists against travel in Guadalajara, where at least four other U.S. citizens have disappeared recently.

Sanga's group also wants the United States to impose economic sanctions on Guadalajara, Mexico's second-largest city.

Friends of Enrique Camarena Salazar, the slain Drug Enforcement Administration agent, erected this billboard on a highway outside the border city of Calexico, Calif., to warn travelers not to venture into Guadalajara, the site of Camarena's abduction.

Officers held in agent's death

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Five policemen, including a state police commander, have been arrested in connection with an investigation of drug dealing in Guadalajara and the killing of a U.S. narcotics agent, according to Mexican news reports.

Televisa, Mexico's most prominent television network, and the news service of the leading Mexico City newspaper Excelsior both said Wednesday that the police commander and four homicide agents were under arrest in Guadalajara.

The television quoted the Jalisco State Attorney General's office, and the the newspaper gave no sources. There was no official confirmation of the reports.

Enrique Camarena Salazar, an agent of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, was abducted in Guadalajara, 322 miles west of Mexico City, on Feb. 7. His badly beaten body was found in a plastic bag on a ranch east of Guadalajara last week.

The body of Alfredo Zavala Avelar, a Mexican pilot who worked with Camarena, was found in another bag.

A reporter for the Guadalajara newspaper El Jalisciense, Joel Huacuja, said in a telephone interview that Guadalajara police sources had said more than 20 people, many of them police agents, were detained Wednesday for questioning in the investigation.

A joint statement issued Wednesday night in Guadalajara by the Jalisco state government and the federal Attorney General's office indicated an investigation had pinpointed police agents as suspects.

"Within this sequence of investigations...the Federal Judicial Police have proceeded to present diverse persons linked or not to federal or local police forces who have been indicated by reasonable and convincing elements as participants in illegal acts," the statement said.

There were news reports Tuesday that the five policemen were missing, and that the Attorney General's office of Jalisco state asked the Federal Judicial Police to help find them.

Wednesday's reports identified the five men as Jose Manuel Lopez Razon, a commander of the Jalisco state Judicial Police force, and agents Juan Rufo Solorio, Victor Lopez Malo, Raul Lopez Alvarez and Gerardo Lepe.

U.S. officials have criticized Mexican authorities for not acting more quickly to find Camarena after he was abducted by four armed men within sight of the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara.

The acting DEA administrator, John C. Lawn, said last week he continues to believe Camarena's captors might have been caught if Mexican authorities had "acted more quickly."

Mexican officials say they are doing all they can to stem drug traffic, and Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez had insisted that police were using "all the resources at their disposal" to find Camarena.

U.S. Ambassador John Gavin said last week that the United States has "good cooperation with Mexican authorities at this time."

Appearing Wednesday before the Senate Subcommittee on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, Lawn was asked if he thought corruption in the Mexican government had stalled the investigation into Camarena's kidnapping.

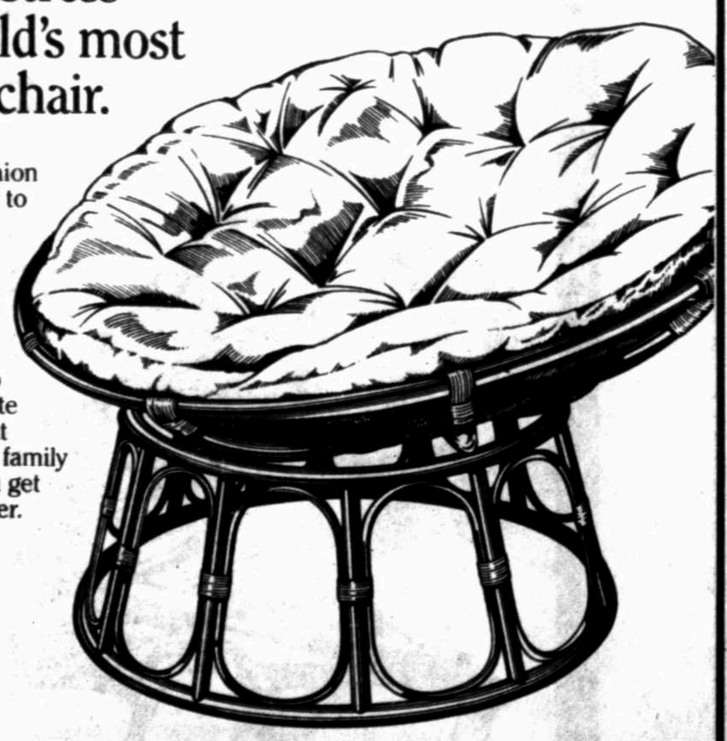

"There was an initial inertia that cannot be explained short of the fact that there must have been a corrupting influence," he replied.

House plan layouts expected to change

Computer advances contribute to change

By HERMAN H. YORK
Associated Press

Although there are several areas of house design which will see changes in years ahead, the floor plan layout and room designation are those which will probably be the most noticeable.

American home buyers have the ability to recognize a workable floor plan, knowing very quickly whether it will suit their family's changing lifestyle. It is in room use and their relationship to one another, therefore, that architects and home builders must focus design attention.

Startling advances in computer science are producing differences in individual activity when at home, especially among young members of the family. Floor plan room arrangements and their designations are being affected and will continue to be during the 1990s, because of the expected sales boom of individual home computers.

It is conceivable that the word "bedroom" will disappear, be renamed "individual activity room" and made larger and more attractive for multi-use functions. Each such room will become a self-contained individual living unit, used for most everything with the exception of formal dining and food preparation.

Each member of the family will have his own personal computer, with software appropriate to his needs, with the capacity of worldwide communication, computer programming, and entertainment by television, radio and stereo laser, all designed into a studio alcove within the privacy of his own room.

FURNITURE FOR sleeping may be a decoratively concealed area, used at night, but playing a secondary role to that of the computer and other equipment needed for a variety of entertainment and hobby possibilities.

Because more space will be needed in rooms so designated, it will become necessary to reduce or eliminate other spaces, assuming that the overall size of the house must be held to its present area. In any case, the family room will remain, but the formal living room and formal dining room may disappear.

Kitchens and bathrooms will continue to be important in the selling of a house, for it is the homemaker who must be "sold."

The bathrooms of the 1990s will receive the most attention from designers. They will contain more luxurious bathtubs and lavatories, with voice-activated exotic lighting, skylights for passive solar benefits, sculptured walls and picture windows overlooking privately fenced-in flower gardens.

Kitchens will probably continue to remain large, with open planning designed as an extension of the family room. The combined kitchen and family room will remain as the center for informal entertaining of groups and for other family activity, but the use will be reduced somewhat because members of the family will enjoy individual pursuits in their own rooms.

The family room will remain as a family lounging area, with television becoming less a factor, also because of a greater use of the individual activity room.

SINCE THE cost of energy will probably remain a factor, passive solar design will be incorporated in all houses because of its ability to reduce with minimum original construction cost the expense of heating and air cooling.

Despite higher energy expense, elegance and "glamour" in the form of high ceilings and large glass areas will become even more potent sales tools. The home builder is well aware of this, and the consumer should also keep it in mind as an asset when the time arrives to resell the house.

The status symbol of a "cathedral ceiling" outweighs the problem of added fuel cost, especially in larger, custom-built houses designed for the affluent home owner.

Although from time to time many innovative contemporary forms of exterior design have been introduced, they appear to have had no significant long-term impact upon the overall volume of housing production.

Such design is frequently used in large homes on generous plots of land, but on a national scale a vast majority of consumers apparently prefer homes that reflect the style and character of more traditional domestic architecture.

Another area of change which may affect house design of the future is the rapidly-growing "senior citizen" market.

ARCHITECTS AND home builders have been criticized for their indifference in house design and construction to the needs of the elderly and the physically handicapped as well. Although the number of elderly people is increasing, that fact probably will not influence single family house design to a noticeable degree.

For the aging, an apartment or some form of multi-unit arrangement is more desirable than the single family house because of the obvious need to deal with maintenance and security problems.

There is a moderate demand for one-story, two-bedroom houses of modest size in desirable communities, but because it is not a significant portion of the volume of housing sold the demand may never be met.

However, when such houses are produced, the changes will avoid the appearance of being living units for the physically disabled. Included, however, will be doors wide enough to enter the bathroom in a wheelchair, light switches at convenient heights, grab rails in bathtubs.

There have been predictions in recent years that the single family house in time will no longer be built for a variety of reasons, an important one being the cost of land.

But owning a house, separated from others, even if only by a few feet, on an individual private bit of landscaped land, is still the American preference in home ownership, and probably will remain so well past the 1990s.

AMERICANS APPARENTLY still regard their homes as symbols of status, and whether the unit is large or small, they want areas of elegance. The "no frills" house has been as unacceptable as the "no frills" motor car.

By 1990, lifestyles may have changed, family size may change, single parenting may become the norm, more women may be away from the home in the workplace and men may take over more of the homemaking duties.

Basic relationships between individuals living under the same roof, however, will still require the essentials of livability resembling those we demand today.

While floor plans are expected to be different from what we are used to, kitchens will remain. Ceramic tile used as a floor covering for this airy kitchen, above, matches the tile used over the sink. The matching use of the tile is both decorative and practical. A den or family room, left, can be enhanced with the addition of a three-tiered bookcase-type shelf arrangement, which spotlights books, floral pieces or collectibles.

Plant breeder Burbank had improving talent

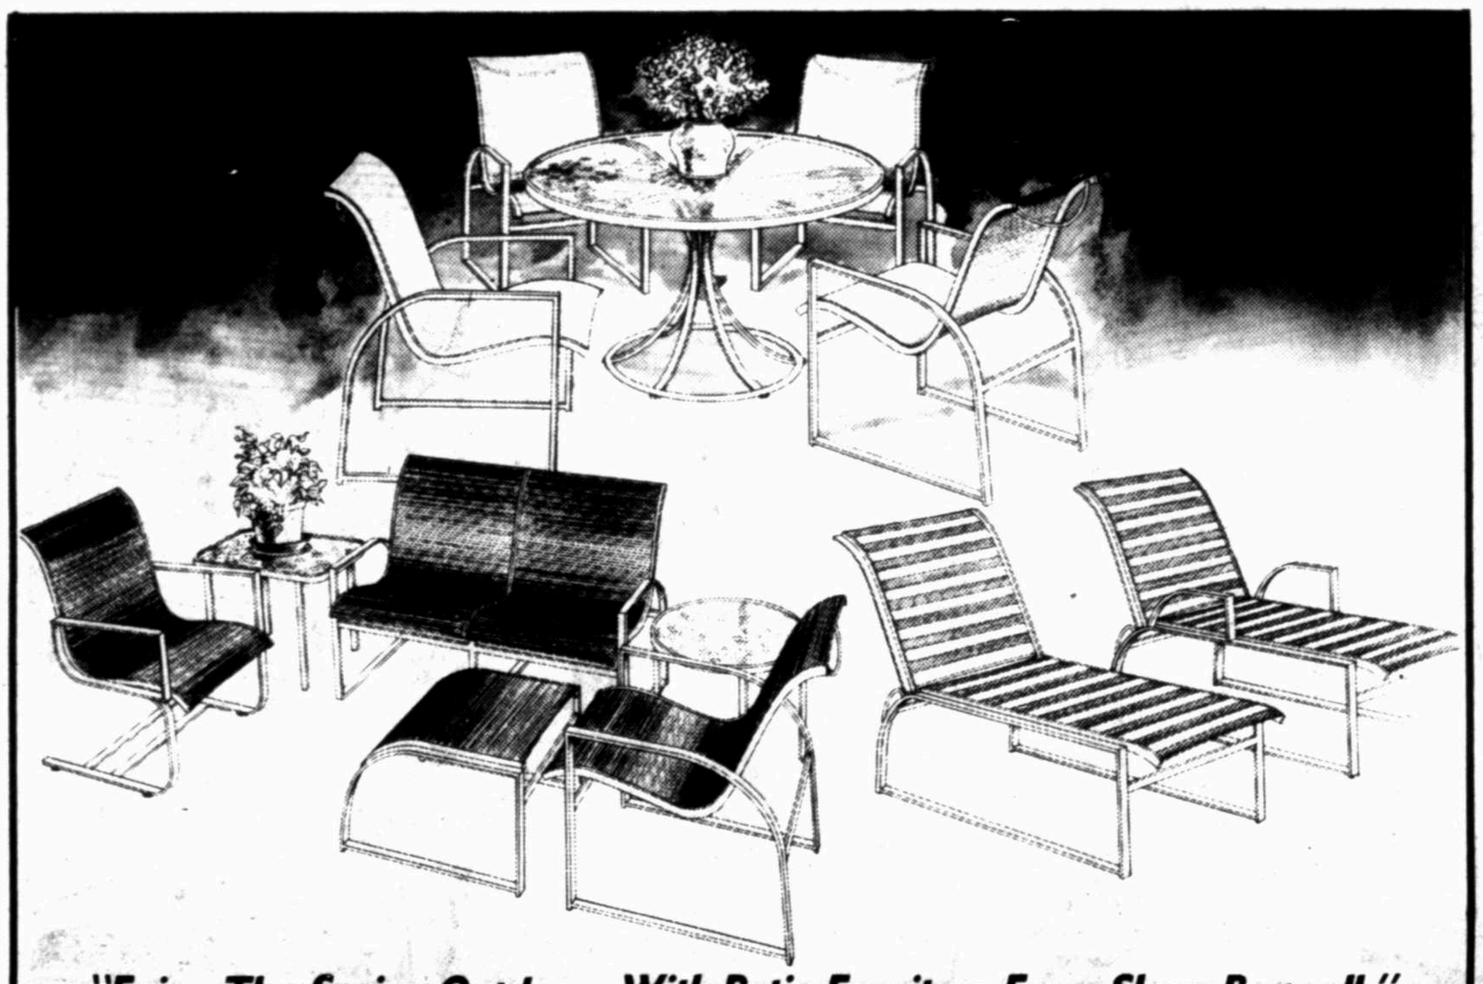

American plant breeder Luther Burbank (1849-1926) had a talent for improvising. For example, he made as many as 500 grafts on a single plum tree and speeded growth by inserting wedge-ended cuttings into the tops of the host tree's branches.

Other growers grafted branches to a limb sawed off near the trunk — and waited twice as long for results. — CNS

Old-time appliance

Museum guide Lauren Poese demonstrates an original dishwasher which is on display in the Home Arts section of the Greenfield Village and Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, Mich. Marketed as a new improvement in 1910 and called "The Family Fearless," the housewife had to continuously turn the front-mounted agitation crank during the time needed to clean the dishes.

Some home improvement projects require contractors

By ERIC JUDE
Copley News Service

Many home improvements, such as painting and wallpapering, are of the do-it-yourself variety. Others, like roofing and insulating, require more skill and time and should be turned over to a contractor.

The home owner who hires a contractor, however, should be very thorough in the hiring process. If he's not, he could be left with little satisfaction and a lot of bills.

To help in the hiring process, Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., a building materials manufacturer, offers suggestions for dealing with a contractor:

— Don't rely exclusively on cost to select a contractor. To find a contractor who is reliable and reputable, ask friends and neighbors for recommendations. It also is a good idea to call the local Better Business Bureau. Check out a contractor's references, too, and go to a house the contractor worked on to see the job for yourself.

— Look for professional recognition. Some manufacturers have certification programs for contractors who demonstrate commitment to quality and professionalism. Many of these programs require contractors to participate in regular training seminars to keep them up-to-date on the latest materials and techniques.

— Get all price quotes in writing, and never advance money for labor costs. Draw up a schedule of payments allowing for a grace period after the job is done to give you a chance to check the job before final payment.

— Include within the price quote an exact description of the work to be done. If you're reroofing, for example, specify what needs to be done about gutters, flashing, cleaning up, hauling away old shingles, etc.

— If you're re-insulating, specify your insulation needs in R-values, not inches. R-value is the measure of a product's insulating power. Since 10 inches of one manufacturer's product may not have the same R-value of another manufacturer's product, contractors are required by law to inform you of the R-value of the material installed.

— Obtain a certificate from the contractor identifying the manufacturer of the materials being used, the type of materials installed and the warranties.

— When reroofing, investigate the nature of the materials themselves. Glass-fiber shingles, for example, increasingly are popular because they're more durable than the organic-based asphalt types and have at least a 20-year warranty. Organic asphalt products typically have a 15-year warranty.

— Be sure the contractor complies with local building codes and ordinances and the agreed-upon method of payment.

— Be sure the contractor is fully insured. Most carry ample liability and workmen's compensation and gladly will show proof of coverage.

Finally, take your time in making your decision.

Shovels essential tools

Associated Press

Nobody owns a house who doesn't also own at least one shovel and, more likely, three or four.

A shovel may not sound like an exciting or complicated tool, but it is a highly essential one and, when properly designed, can make a tough job at least manageable. The difference in shovels can best be understood by comparing each shovel's handle, blade configuration and construction.

Shovels can have long handles to provide better leverage or they can have shorter handles for easier maneuverability. The long handles do not have any grip and generally range from 47 to 49 inches long. Short handles are about 29 inches long and have a comfort-fitted grip so the shovel can be held and easily turned in any direction.

The grip on a short-handled shovel should be comfortable, yet strong and durable. Older and more traditional shovels will have grips made of steel with a wood cob, but recent technological advances have resulted in a one-piece polypropelene grip that is stronger, lighter and will not rust, corrode or splinter like metal and wood grips.

Most shovel handles are made of wood, often from selected Northern Ash. When fire-hardened, they seal the wood against moisture and decay. They are sanded and polished to produce an extra-hard and smooth surface. Tubular steel handles also are available. They are made from heat-treated alloy steel that combines lightness with a strength that is not possible with wood.

The shape of the shovel's blade varies according to its use, but there are two basic shapes: round point for cutting into soil more easily; and square point for more difficult transporting chores.

If the shovel will be used to dig into hard ground, then a round point blade with a sharper point is the answer. If the shovel is to be more frequently used for carrying materials from one point to another, then the square point blade is the best bet.

The durability of a shovel depends on its method of construction. As George Algire, marketing vice president of True Temper tools, points out: "There are three methods of construction: solid shank, closed back and hollowback."

In solid shank construction, the blade and shank are formed and rolled from a bar of steel so that the portion of the shank nearest the blade is solid. The handle is then driven into the open part of the shank. This type of construction is for industrial shovels that are made for hard everyday use. The solid shank shovel is heavy but more durable than other types of shovels.

Shovels made of closed back construction are primarily designed for industrial use when strength is needed, but are not as heavy or durable as those with solid shank. The blade and socket are stamped out of a sheet of steel, forming a crimp in the blade for added strength and creating a hollow socket. A steel plate is then welded on the blade back to cover the hollow made by the crimp and to prevent dirt from accumulating in the shovel back.

The blade and socket of a hollowback shovel also are stamped out of a sheet of steel, forming a crimp in the blade for added strength and creating a hollow socket. However, there is no plate to prevent dirt from accumulating in the shovel back. This type of shovel is most popular with consumers, since it is strong enough for gardening work and does not have excess weight.

Depending on the thickness of steel and added features, such as turned or rolled step for a more comfortable foothold, hollowback shovels sell for various prices.

A blade is heat-treated to give it the proper hardness so that it will neither be too soft and bend, or too brittle and break. It is an exacting science where skilled craftsmen control a process of heating, cooling and drawing, or tempering.

Kitchens becoming homes' rising 'star'

By DEBRA COOPER
Copley News Service

What do we want in our homes these days? Individual preferences may differ, but the majority of home owners seem to want functionality in every home aspect from floor plans to appliances.

The kitchen is an emerging star in the home, according to building industry veterans Jim Saivar and Robert F. Buie, who study buyers' wants and check on buyer satisfaction after purchase.

Some architects of custom homes say they are altering kitchen designs because people socialize there more and therefore want more room.

But tasks are being performed more efficiently, thanks to microprocessor controls.

"A relative of the chip that powers a personal computer is doing tasks better and in less time in the form of microwave ovens and more recently some new model dishwashers with delay-start controls and diagnostic features," said Franklin D. Lindsay of Maytag, which now produces such high-tech appliances.

The kitchen is not the only area of the home that is being redesigned for functionality.

People are living in smaller spaces — in condominiums, town houses and more modestly sized single-family homes. This has led to the development of compact furnishings and appliances like stacked washers and dryers. Stacked washers and dryers are available in small- or full-size capacity units. They fit in half the space needed for traditional side-by-side washers and dryers.

Because of the space savings, laundry equipment can be moved out of the basement to create an accessible laundry center in a bedroom or bathroom.

Vinyl flooring replacing linoleum

By DEAN CARROLL
Copley News Service

If you ask for linoleum when you want to buy new flooring, you probably won't get what you ask for.

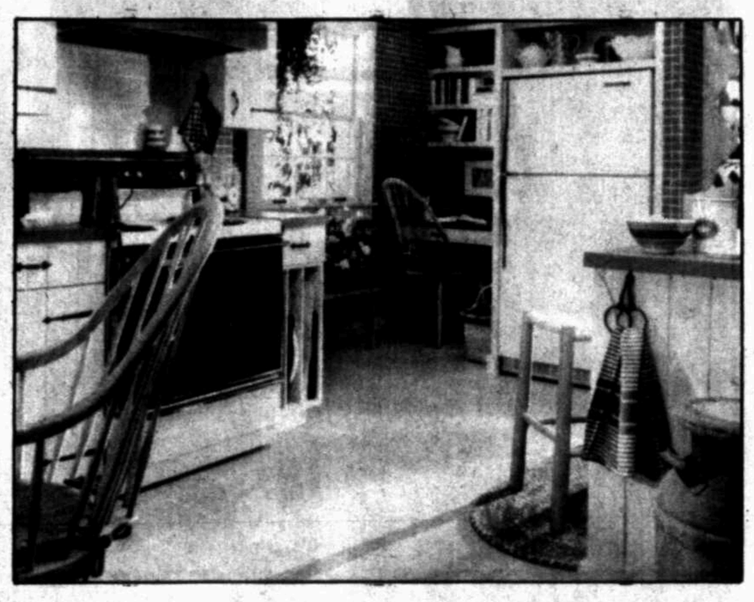

What your parents, and you, commonly called linoleum actually is resilient flooring. Linoleum is only one type of resilient flooring — a type that hasn't even been made in the United States since the 1970s.

Resilient floors these days primarily are vinyls of one type or another, so the term vinyl flooring gradually is becoming the accepted generic description.

Vinyls replaced the old-fashioned linoleum, a good floor in its day, for several reasons. The vinyls are easier to clean and they can be installed anywhere in the house from attic to basement. And vinyl designs and colors are better and brighter.

Basically, there are only two types of vinyl floors — sheet materials or tiles. Sheet vinyl comes in continuous rolls, usually 6- or 12-feet wide. Tiles are individual squares, usually 12-by-12 inches or 9-by-9 inches.

Each type has its good points. Sheet vinyl has fewer or no seams to match when the flooring is installed. However, tiles have been preferred by do-it-yourselfers for their ease of installation.

Easy-care vinyl flooring patterns, which is replacing linoleum, are looking more and more like wood, brick and tile floors.

Tiles also used to be much less expensive, however the price differential between sheet vinyl and tiles is narrowing.

Most tiles sold today for residential use are self-sticking with adhesive on the back. Dry back tiles (without adhesive) are of interest mainly to builders.

Self-sticking tiles still are probably the easiest of all floors for the do-it-yourselfer to install. All you do is remove a paper from the back of the tile to expose the adhesive. Then position the tile on the floor and press down.

Another installation method is known as interflex, according to spokesmen for Armstrong World Industries Inc. The advantage of this method is that it doesn't require spreading adhesive all over the surface to be re-floored. Instead, you merely fasten down the new floor at the sides of the room and at seams.

Also, interflex-installed floors can go down over old problem floors that otherwise would have to be covered with plywood underlayment — an expensive and tedious extra step.

Other recent advances in vinyl floors: improved no-wax tiles and tiles with improved designs to faithfully simulate the appearance of natural or handcrafted materials like brick, ceramics and wood.

Warm-up suggested for weekend gardeners

By CAROL ROBERTS
Copley News Service

When you're a weekend activist, whether your activity is playing baseball, jogging or gardening, you're likely to suffer some pain — and possibly injury.

It's hard not to put too many hours into such activities when a beautiful day comes along. It may be especially hard for gardeners, who can be tempted to put in six hours of gardening because tomorrow it may rain.

But that's not the way to do it unless you're in the linament business, according to Gardens For All newsmagazine columnist Isabel Bearman Bucher. She said you should start with much shorter hours and prepare with warm-up exercises just as other athletes do.

Some suggestions:

— Head and shoulder rolls. Very slowly and gently roll shoulders five times forward and five times backward. Drop head forward and gently roll from side to side going all around the clock.

— Skier squat. Place back against a wall and assume a sitting position, as if you were on an imaginary chair. Count to 10. Relax. Repeat five times.

— Lower back and thigh. Lie flat with back pressed to floor or bed, legs extended. Draw one leg into a knee-up position, toward the chest, for five repetitions. Repeat with the other leg. Work up to 10 for each leg. With back still flat on the floor and knees bent, tighten buttocks and hold for a count of 10. Relax. Repeat five times.

— Victory stretch. Place feet apart, gently reach up with one arm, squeezing fist over the head. Drop other hand to your side. Count to five. Reverse arms. Do three repetitions for each side.

— Deep knee bends. Place one hand on some support, like a fence or chair. Slowly squat all the way down, then slowly slide up. Legs should be angled to the sides for more stretch in the groin area. Start with five repetitions, then work up to 15 over time. The slower the better.

Aside from possible injury from pulled or strained muscles, a gardener can injure himself with gardening equipment. The best safeguard against this is to read instructions carefully on any equipment, fertilizer or insecticide used.

Every year nearly 3,400 people suffer eye injuries from lawn mowers and home gardening equipment. Most of these injuries can be prevented, according to the American Optometric Association.

The human eye has a certain degree of natural protection, but it is no match for power equipment and other hazards such as snapping bush or tree branches or sprayed chemicals.

Nor will regular prescription glasses or contact lenses provide sufficient protection. Prescription eyewear are impact resistant, but they are not safety glasses. Contact lenses are made for seeing, not protection.

Inspect home before signing on dotted line

By GREGG HOWARD
Copley News Service

Most home buyers, especially first-timers, probably are a little apprehensive when purchasing a dwelling, whether it be a condominium or an older house.

They wonder, quite naturally, whether they are getting a house in good condition. And a first-timer probably is at a loss to determine whether he's getting his money's worth.

A walk-through can tell a person a lot. This procedure is your last chance to see that everything in the home you're buying is up to standard before letting the builder or seller off the hook. What you find wrong during the walk-through is supposed to be taken care of by the builder or seller before you move in.

One builder's representative said most people breeze through a walk-through in 10 minutes. But a thorough walk-through could take hours depending on the size of the house.

One reporter took an hour to check out an 800-square-foot one bedroom condo. He considered the time well spent, because he found 33 things for the builder to take care of before he took possession.

Following are some of the things that he found wrong:

— Baseboards pulling away from walls. Broken or cracked door frames. Rough interior doors that had been improperly finished. Improperly cut or loose tiles and linoleum.

— Paint splatters on windows and cabinets.

— Electrical outlets and switches that did not work. A broken heater.

— Nails that were not pounded in completely. Cracked or chipped walls. Loose carpeting edges.

Other suggestions for a walk-through:

Open and close all doors, windows, cabinets and drawers.

— Check all bathroom and kitchen fixtures for cracks or leaks. Test bathroom and kitchen fans. Turn on all appliances.

— On the exterior, check paint, windows, doors, weather stripping, garage door and opener, driveways, sidewalks, patio and fences.

But don't depend on the walk-through alone, especially for an older home. Many flaws may be hidden within the structure itself. So what do you do, as a prospective buyer?

Ask the owner of the property if he knows of any needed repairs and if he has had any troubles in the recent or distant past.

As a seller, the owner is obligated to make full disclosure. If he doesn't and resorts to a cover-up, he is guilty of violating the law and becomes subject to a lawsuit by the buyer.

Also ask the real estate broker, if one is involved, about the condition of a house. As an agent, it is part of his duty to find out about such deficiencies and make full disclosure.

What do you as a buyer ask? Inquire about the electrical system. Had any troubles lately? How is the heating system working? What about the plumbing? Working OK? When is the last time you called a plumber and to fix what?

Deck adds space, value to home

By HERB LAWRENCE
Copley News Service

With the high cost of housing and huge mortgage rates, many people are remodeling their houses instead of moving into new homes.

That's why adding a deck has become a favorite remodeling project.

A deck adds good-looking, valuable living space to any home. And most people like as much living space as they can afford.

In addition, decks increase real estate values and provide outdoor areas that can help keep cooling and energy costs down.

Decks provide high-style outdoor living while adding a touch of individuality to any house or yard.

The California Redwood Association, headquartered in San Francisco, points out that redwood is a time-tested and proven wood for outdoor structures.

The wood naturally resists weathering, insect attack and decay. Redwood, a spokesman said, has no chemical additives and resists cracking, warping, checking and splitting better than other woods.

If you are thinking about doing the work yourself, you'll be surprised to learn that deck building probably is easier than you'd think.

The first thing to do is to survey your yard and decide what problem building a deck can solve.

Easy-to-assemble decks can maximize living space of any house and add to the real estate value of your house.

Can it level off a sloping or uneven area? Can it make a useless side yard into a comfortable outdoor living area? Can it create an attractive, dramatic entry for the front of your house?

Checking building codes in your area is another important preliminary step.

Here's a description of the elements that make a deck from the ground up:

Footings — Footing anchors the entire structure to the ground and supports the weight of the deck. Generally, footings are poured concrete or precast concrete pier blocks with metal post anchors or wood nailing blocks imbedded in the concrete.

Posts — The posts are the vertical members, usually 4-by-4 inches. The wood posts sit on top of the footings and support horizontal beams.

Beams — Beams span the distance between concrete footings. Their dimensions should be large enough to minimize the number of footings. Usually of 4-by-4-inch thickness or greater, beams can be "built up" using thinner lumber fastened together with bolts or lag screws.

Joists — Joists are attached resting on the beams and supporting the decking. They can be 2-by-6, 2-by-8 or 2-by-20-inch wood.

Decking — Decking should be 2-by-4-inch or 2-by-6-inch wood with a span no greater than 24 inches. This will make for a solid flooring without a "springy" feeling.

The association said that the type of nails you use can affect the appearance of your project.

Inferior nails can cause ugly black stains and streaks and are unlikely to last as long as the wood.

The association spokesman said it's worth the extra cost to use top-quality, hot-dipped galvanized nails, stainless steel or aluminum nails.

When you've finished your wood deck, remodelers advise that you apply a water repellent containing a mildewcide. They say this will slow weathering chances, stabilize wood color and help retain the natural look.

After the deck is finished, other amenities complete the job of making an outdoor living center.

Placing benches, tables and other kinds of furniture on the deck can turn that area into an outdoor room. If you live in high-density housing, you may want to add a privacy screen.

In some areas an overhead shade trellis is a must.

However you prop it, a wood deck can change the way you live in your home.

Knowing how to replace washer saves money

Associated Press

Washerless faucets are all over the place these days, but the large majority of houses still have faucets with washers. By the very nature of things, that means the washers periodically need replacing.

People who can handle most do-it-yourself problems often steer clear of anything to do with plumbing. While their attitude may be justifiable in most respects, it is a false fear when it comes to the replacement of washers, a chore that requires knowledge more than skill. Put a new washer in a stem or compression faucet, the usual type, and you not only stop a leak, you save a bundle.

The most important step in this procedure comes right at the start: Shut off the water.

You can do it by closing the shut-off valve right at the sink or other fixture or by closing the main water valve to the house. When you locate it (every homeowner should know where it is), the water is shut off by turning the valve clockwise.

The handle is held in place with a screw under a cap, which has been snapped on or screwed on. Jiggle the handle a bit to get it off, since it may be stuck in place.

Use a wrench to unloosen the packing nut, which is just under the place where the handle was — but before you do that, put a piece of adhesive tape around the nut to keep it from being marred. Try to lift out the faucet stem. If it doesn't come out, replace the loose handle on the stem and turn it counterclockwise, which will unscrew the stem.

When the stem is in your hand, you will see a washer at the end of it, held in place by a brass screw. Unscrew it and take off the washer, which probably will be worn or chewed up.

Again, we have to go backwards in time to the day when you should have gone to a hardware store and bought a box of assorted washers. If you failed to do it (before the need arose), do it now, making certain nobody in the house turns on the water while you are out. Take the old washer with you so you can get one of the same size, but don't neglect to buy a box of the assorted washers for the future. Have the hardware dealer select a new screw, although you will get several of them in the new box of washers.

All you have to do now is to put in a new washer and screw, replace the stem in the same way you took it off and turn on the water. Nine times out of 10, the leak disappear.

If there is still a leak, observe carefully exactly where it is coming from. If it is from the packing nut under the handle, remove the nut the same way you did after you shut off the water. Under the nut will be a large washer or some packing material that looks like thick thread or thin cord.

Whatever it is, replace it and you will have stopped the leak when the faucet is reassembled. If the leak came from the original source, the spout of the faucet, it means water is still coming past the washer, even though it is new. That's because the valve seat, on which the washer rests, is damaged. Buy a valve seat refacing tool and smooth the valve seat with it.

Caring for a lawn requires diligence and the proper equipment.

Lawn care important

Copley News Service

Spending a few hours outdoors can make your lawn green and your shrubs and flowers more beautiful for the whole family to enjoy.

Here is a basic plan from Scotts, a maker of lawn-care products, to give you the most enjoyment from your lawn and garden.

— Rake up debris which can smother new growth.

— Fertilize your lawn in the early spring because there is not enough natural nitrogen and other nutrients in soil to meet the needs of your lawn. Use a controlled-release fertilizer that will give the lawn a steady, controlled feeding for six to eight weeks. Make a second application in late spring.

— Seed if needed in the early springbefore weeds have a chance to fill in the gaps and bare patches. Slice or scratch up the ground first so the grass seeds have a place to lodge. Fertilize the same day you seed. Once the seed germinates, keep the ground continuously moist.

— Fertilize shrubs and trees. Early spring also is a good time to surface feed with a dry, granular fertilizer so your plants can take full advantage of the coming growing season. No need to dig up, just spread the material on the soil surface as directed.

— For your existing lawn, mow as soon as the grass starts to grow again and the weather is nice. Cut off a half inch or so. This will let more sunlight into the crown of the grass plants to stimulate growth.

If you have seeded a new lawn or reseeded bare spots, mow as soon as there is anything to cut. Mowing height should be 1½ to 2 inches.

— Coping with dandelions and other weeds by going after them when they are in bloom. The best way to do this is with weed control absorbed through the leaves. This coincides with the time that lawns are in need of late spring feeding, so home owners can do both jobs at once by using a combination product that feeds as it weeds.

Once weeds are removed from a lawn, one of the most effective methods for keeping them out is to maintain a thick, vigorous stand of grass.

Well-fed grass plants fare very well against weeds in the competition for sunlight and growing room. Consequently, one of the best recommendations for lasting weed control is simply to fertilize the lawn three or four times throughout the year.

'Country' look hot trend in decorating

Copley News Service

Americans have fallen in love with America. The interest in the country's heritage is found all around us — in foods, fashion and home furnishing design.

One of the hottest trends in home furnishing design today is the American country look. But country is more than just a trend — it is a lifestyle, according to a spokesperson for Waverly Fabrics.

Waverly participates in historical restoration and preservation, creating designs by selecting an era or geographical region and absorbing its flavor to re-create a style appropriate for contemporary consumer tastes. It recently released a "Country Charm" collection.

The country look is a very American look, a simple design approach that draws upon comfort and historic tradition. The look is characterized by stenciled fabric patterns, small prints, wallpaper borders, valances, pillow shams, billowing bedspreads with dust ruffles and window treatments.

Staying true to the traditional color palette of the era, blues, greens, reds and parchments dominate. Good, old-fashioned integrity can be seen in the materials, such as all-cotton, washable wall coverings, durable and waterproof fabrics.

All of these qualities offer a timeless feeling of warmth, comfort and hospitality — a hushed country charm that creates a warm welcome feeling in any home.

It's losing battle against Mother Nature

By JOHN SINOR
Copley News Service

We are losing our war with Mother Nature. (Of course, we are losing. Did anyone ever win a fight with their mother?)

I figure whoever first said "Isn't nature wonderful?" was somebody who lived in a high-rise apartment and drove to the country one summer day to look at a waterfall.

On the other hand, I kind of like the writer who said: "I hate the country. The air is so full of uncooked birds."

On our little plot of this Earth, the grass grows so-so. The weeds — well, if there were a weed display at the county fair, we would have a drawer full of blue ribbons.

This is due to Mother Nature. She pumps a dozen different kinds of vitamins into the weeds. The grass gets the leftovers.

I watered the lawn. The water water made the ants come marching right into the house. Single file and right up the steps into the kitchen. Hup, hup!

Thank you, Mother.

Couldn't find any ant spray so I gave them a couple of blasts from a can of deodorant. It slowed them down only a few seconds.

Then they started marching again, only this time they were marching closer to each other.

Found some window cleaner, but I figured it probably would only make them see better.

I finally gave up. Said: "Come on in, ants. Make yourself at home. Can I pour you a cup of sugar or anything?"

I walked into the den and found three ivy vines growing through the window. They were headed for the TV set. Probably planning to heist it.

This is not my idea of nature being wonderful.

If you would like my candid opinion, I think nature is not as wonderful as it is touted. Nature is confused, mixed up and hardly knows where it is going.

Nature comes at you from all directions. It sneaks in through the weather stripping, leaks through the roof and creeps through the windows. It boils your blood and soaks you to the skin.

Nature has tried to reach me through roots in the plumbing, birds in the fireplace and bats in the belfry.

At one time or another I have hurled all of this in nature's face.

It just keeps coming back.

Auditor can inspect home to help make it energy efficient

By GREGG HOWARD
Copley News Service

If you want to make your home energy efficient but don't know where to begin, consider using the services of a professional energy auditor.

For little or no cost to you, an expert visits your home and determines where heat loss is occurring, what conservation measures are needed, how much they'll cost to install and what your potential savings will be.

Under a federal program that began during the 1980-81 heating season, home energy audits are available free or at nominal cost through local utilities. In addition, audits often are offered through manufacturers of heating and cooling equipment.

An energy specialist begins the audit with a complete inspection of your building from attic to cellar. He'll note the construction of windows, doors, exterior walls, ceilings, roof, floor surfaces and the building foundations. He'll also check the quantity and quality of existing insulation. Next he'll check for energy leaks in windows, doors, foundations, etc., and inspect caulking and weather stripping.

Based on this data, the inspector calculates heat loss and develops a plan of attack for your home. A detailed report, often in the form of a computer printout, suggests where and in what quantities insulation, storm windows, caulking and weather stripping are needed.

Most auditors also will recommend additional improvements such as restricted-flow shower heads, insulation for your water heater, adjustments to your heating system or new heating equipment.

You'll then receive a cost estimate for the suggested conservation measures.

Before turning you loose, the utility will provide a list of contractors who can perform the suggested work. Some will go a step further and collect bids and arrange for contractors to do the work. Some even help to arrange financing through local banks.

In some cases, the utility itself will make the loan, allowing you to repay it with your monthly gas or electric bills. The loan may require that you work with contractors participating in the program.

Some utilities also offer a free follow-up inspection to check the quality of the work done. If it's poor, the contractor may have to return and correct it. Some experts advocate an annual reappraisal to see if your fuel costs can be trimmed further with new products or techniques.

Many home heating dealers offer a free analysis of heating and cooling systems in your present home or a home you are considering for purchase. Through an analysis of local weather patterns, utility rates, house dimensions and conservation measures taken, the dealer will make suggestions for improving the present equipment or choosing new equipment tailored more closely to the consumer's heating and cooling loads.

For example, dealers for Trane Dealer Products Group, a manufacturer of heating and air-conditioning products, will conduct an audit with portable computer terminals that link up to a larger computer through a customer's telephone. A dealer enters relevant data into the terminal, and the information is analyzed with individualized improvements suggested on printout.

There is no cost or obligation to a consumer using this service. To arrange for a visit, call 800-322-1616.

Test seeds to determine if they can still be planted

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

If there's one thing that causes the average gardener's horticultural juices to run in excited anticipation, it's the ordering of garden seeds for the coming season.

The first steps in this pleasurable annual ritual are to haul out the seeds left from last year and list the ones that will be kept for this year. This inventory eliminates duplicating purchases.

How do you decide which seeds to keep? In my own case, I can anticipate optimum life for each variety because I keep them well closed and refrigerated with packets of silica gel to facilitate dryness. The two main enemies of seed life are heat and moisture.

But even then there are a few kinds of seeds that are poor keepers. Onion, parsnip and flower seeds like larkspur, geranium and verbena are notoriously short-lived.

Most other seeds will keep one or two years. I have found a few, such as tomato, cucumber, beet, zinnia, nasturtium and morning glory, that retain good germination rates over several years of storage.

There still remain many variables, however, in the decision whether to keep and count on a package of seeds for a crop. If in doubt, run a germination test.

Place a few layers of dampened paper towel in the bottom of a shallow dish and press 10 of the seeds onto the damp surface.

Place the dish in a fairly warm spot and do not allow the surface of the towels or the seeds to dry out. Spray-mist them or cover them lightly with plastic wrap.

If the seeds still are good, they should sprout in 10 to 12 days. Watch this germination process for two things. How many sprout? If eight seeds of the 10 germinate, then you can calculate 80 percent viability, which guides you in deciding how thickly or sparingly to sow the seeds.

The second observation to be made is an assessment of how strong the seedlings are. Do they look sturdy? Are the root sprouts strong looking, with several side shoots off the main central root? If they look weak and puny, then the plants probably will not thrive or produce good crops.

Weak or old seeds do not have to be tossed in the garbage, however. I save them for a quick cover crop when a patch of garden becomes free in late summer or in the fall.

Scattered on the ground to be turned under while they are just sprouted, they at least contribute something to the garden in a fertility boost, if not in garden crops.

Multi-paneled institutional window marring your living picture? Shape a new circular view with mini-blinds and a plywood wall. Window dressing, given attention by name designers and department stores, can make the window the focal point of a room.

Dressing window can turn it into room's focal point

By JANET GORDON
Copley News Service

Decorating windows now is high style thanks to the proliferation of new looks in window fashions. Once labeled window treatments, the change in name signifies the new high status of windows in today's well-dressed home.

Yet another sign of the times is the new attention being shown to window dressing by name designers and department stores. Curtain and drapery departments are coming alive with a new fashion image.

Blinds may well be today's most favored way of doing windows thanks to their functional advantages and fashionable alternatives. Country. Oriental. Contemporary. Even Early American and Victorian. Blinds are making every style scene dressed up with valances, cut into unusual shapes or patterned to become works of art.

No matter what the window, it can and should become a focal point in the opinion of today's designers. Window without a view? Window in an awkward location? Window out of scale? No matter what the problem, today's window dressing not only offers an attractive solution but often turns an eyesore into a focal point in the room.

Take an unattractive multi-paned typical apartment window, the bane of many stuffed-in-a-modern-box city dwellers. With a little imagination, it can become a work of art. Cover a solid blind with strips of contact paper. Or, create a contemporary canvas with different colored slats creating a fantasy in stripes.

Think shapes for drama and as a counterpoint to a boxy room. Circles, triangles, hexagons — blinds can be shaped to almost any configuration. Create the new window shape with an inexpensive plywood wall.

Valances and frames can work wonders in finishing off your window dressing and creating a special mood. Anything can become a valance — an old headboard, a piece of wicker, a swag of fabric. Go Oriental with a pagoda-shaped frame; postmodern with columns and frieze. Today, with all the options in window dressing, the view really is up to you.

Tips offered for do-it-yourself wallpaper hangers

Copley News Service

Nearly 80 percent of all wallpaper sold is hung by do-it-yourselfers. If you're planning to hang some, here are a few tips:

— Walls should be smooth and clean. Coverings won't stick to soap or grease. Always use a primer or sizing that will help the paper to adhere better to the wall.

— When hanging paper on drywall, first apply a layer of oil-based primer. This will enable you to remove the wallpaper later without ripping apart the drywall.

— For clean trimming, use a sharp razor-knife, changing the blade often. Other necessary tools for hanging paper are a stepladder, yardstick, string, chalk, pencil, screwdriver, smoothing brush, seam roller and water tray.

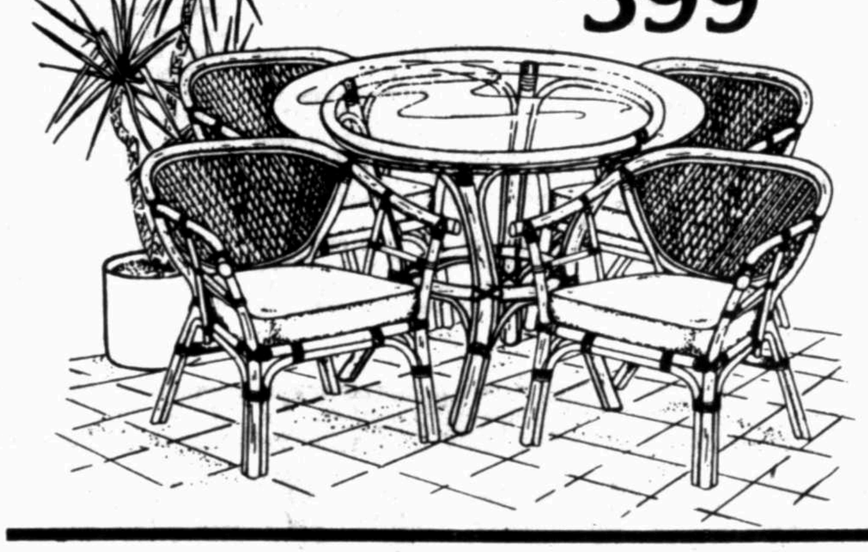

— Remove dried paste on the paper's surface with a sponge dipped in clean water. For prepared wall covers, change the water frequently.

Workers take care when using power tool

AP Laserphoto

A new 10-inch table saw being introduced this year for home handymen supposedly provides more power to the blade with a flexible drive shaft.

Associated Press

When it comes to workshop tools, familiarity breeds carelessness.

Statistics, which often can be made to show anything, in this case show that veteran do-it-yourselfers suffer more accidents in home projects than those who have been doing serious handymen jobs for less than a year and are less skilful.

Why this seeming contradiction? Because of that familiarity-contempt concept, especially in the case of power tools.

The first time you use a power saw of any kind and for a considerable time after, you are awed by the noise it produces. The rapid speed of the blade and its whirring sound really get your attention. You work slowly and carefully. You keep your eyes on what you are doing and never let them stray, even if somebody comes into the shop or room. You turn off the saw if you want to talk to someone.

As you become experienced in the use of the saw, you get more and more confident and, as you do, just a little careless. Here are some things to remember no matter how long you have been running a power saw:

— Never work without the saw guard (professionals especially take note).

— Don't put a hand across the table to pick up or move a piece of cut wood.

— Use the miter gauge when cross-cutting, the fence when ripping.

— Use a push stick on a table saw when cutting material less than 3 inches wide. Always stand where any wood that is thrown back will fly past you and not into you.

— If anybody walks into the workshop while you are cutting wood, turn off the power, conduct your conversation and then resume where you left off.

— When the motor is on, never make any adjustments, no matter how slight. When making a major adjustment, such as changing a blade, also pull out the electric plug.

— Never wear dangling sleeves and ties or any kind of loose clothing when power sawing or doing any other kind of workshop tasks.

— If you feel tired or bored, turn off the saw and rest or do something else.

— Get rid of all floor hazards before you start. These include pieces of scrap wood, nails, screws and even a piece of paper, which can cause you to slip.

And here's some advice that applies to any place in the house, not only the workshop:

If you spill any liquid, even a single drop, stop what you are doing and wipe it up immediately.

It is not enough to say to yourself that you will wipe it up as soon as you finish the job you are on. You may be distracted or forget and you or somebody else may take a fall that could have been avoided.

Sharpened saws 'feed' chains into wood

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — As more and more homeowners use chain saws to cut firewood, repair storm damage or remove unwanted trees and limbs, there come the inevitable questions about resharpening or replacing chains.

Knowing when to file the chain, and how to do it properly and safely, are important to any woodcutting operation, according to Townsend Saw Chain Co., manufacturer of saw chain and accessories.

Properly filed chains will "feed themselves into the wood," says a company representative.

"As a test, rev up the saw and place it on top of the wood, allowing the chain to feed down into the wood by itself. You will also know that the chain needs sharpening if it requires excessive pressure in order to make a cut, or if the wood chips become very fine, like sawdust."

A chain may cut in wood for 20 minutes or two hours before it needs to be filed, the company advises. It offers these tips for operating a chain saw:

— Check the chain tension. You should feel a slight resistance when pulling the chain around the guidebar between your thumb and forefinger.

— Don't leave any slack at the bottom of the guidebar.

— Place the chain in the correct direction. Make sure cutting edges on top of the guidebar are facing away from the engine.

— Keep the chain well oiled.

— Run a new chain for about three minutes at not more than half throttle before cutting anything to let the new chain "break in" to the bar and sprocket.

Wallboards easier than wallpaper

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Do-it-yourselfers can avoid the mess associated with wallpapering by installing a new type of gypsum wallboard with the wallpaper already pasted on it.

"You can buy them, take them home and put them up in a one-step operation" with a few nails or adhesive glue, says Lee Poole, a spokesman for Charlotte-based Gold Bond Building Products.

Gold Bond sold similar paneling about five years ago, but the new product, sent out to distributors this summer, incorporates improvements in manufacturing and design, he says.

The old patterns were traditional, but the new patterns reflect more contemporary design. Eight designs are available, including floral patterns, floral stripes, fabric, bamboo and bamboo with willow patterns.

"They're designed sort of with the female audience in mind," he says. "Women, in our opinion, make most of the decisions when it comes to decorating."

The wallboard, five-sixteenths of an inch thick, is nailed or glued directly to the wood wall studs or even over cracked plaster and other existing surfaces. The edges are slightly beveled and can be left butted up against each other for a seamless appearance or joined with molding, says Poole.

Select plants according to conditions

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

Over the years, most of us learn by trial and error which plants do best in our homes. Choosing plants depends on the kind of lighting available, house temperatures and how much one is willing to fuss.

If your lifestyle leaves little time to play with plants and yet you enjoy having living greenery in the house, then you would be wise to choose types that survive in good display condition with minimum care.

One of the least demanding plants is the snake plant, or mother-in-law tongue (Sansevieria). It grows in a clump with tall, elegant blade-shaped leaves that come in interesting stripes and variegations.

There also is a low, bird's nest form of this easy plant. The tall one makes an attractive accent in combination with other foliage plants of contrasting form, while the low-growing type is a charming desk or table plant.

The snake plant endures a wide range of light conditions, neglect and dry soil. It would be my first choice for a nearly un-killable houseplant — provided you don't put it outdoors in the open during summer. It can go out, but only onto a covered balcony, porch or patio.

Other pleasing houseplants I've found difficult to destroy, even under conditions of some neglect, are grape ivy, trailing philodendrons and pothos, jade plant, aloes, poinsettia, Christmas cactus, Chinese evergreen and various succulents.

Durable kinds of decorator plants are cast-iron plant (Aspidistra), corn plant (Dracaena fragrans massangeana), Dieffenbachia, rubber tree and split-leaf philodendron.

Grape ivy is a bushy climbing or trailing plant with three-part diamond-shaped leaves. It has tendrils and will cling to any nearby support.

It will scale a pole lamp or cascade nicely from a hanging basket. It is not fussy about light except that it becomes pale and wan in direct sunlight.

To keep a grape ivy within bounds or to create a busy shape, cut off or pinch out new growth. But keep those tips and root them in water for new plants.

Start off with a small plant that will adjust to your home conditions easily and grow quickly to provide you with many cuttings.

Though it is supposed to require direct sun for most of the day, I've found the jade plant (Crassula argentea) tolerant of rather low light conditions over the winter, provided it's not overwatered and is given a summer holiday in bright light.

They are very easy to propagate, too. When a leaf pad falls, stick it into a small pot of soil and wait for a pretty rosette of pads to emerge. Like most succulent plants, the jade plant is nearly everlasting, provided it is not overwatered in winter.

Even the poinsettia will yield a faithfully evergreen bush if it is given a summer holiday outdoors in filtered light. It can be cut or pinched back to many shapes, including a trailing effect.

The colored bracts usually will appear only with a bit of fussing to give the plant 13 hours of total darkness each night during October and November.

Combine styles for eclectic blend

By CAROL ROBERTS
Copley News Service

The "great room" may be inspired by Early American decor, but the concept need not be limited to any one type of furnishing. Contemporary and eclectic styles also can turn an open kitchen-family room into a sophisticated leisure and work area.

A sleek, modern look offers the no-nonsense efficiency many favor in the kitchen. Space-saving storage pieces, easy maintenance and the openness of minimal furnishings are some of the major benefits of this style. But more adventurous home decorators may prefer the unique, individual look created by combining old and new pieces.

Contemporary neutrals and sleek wood furnishings set off primitive artifacts in an eclectic blend. The exotic mood is reinforced with an Oriental rug.

"When you don't limit yourself to a particular period," said interior designer Peggy Walker, "you're free to use a variety of pieces you really love."

For instance, in a home she recently designed, Ms. Walker chose contemporary furnishings to set off the owner's treasured collection of primitive artifacts.

"The two styles work well together," said the designer. "The hand-hewn woods lend a warm, textural feeling while the functional practicality of a contemporary decor is maintained."

The key to combining different styles is finding one unifying element to tie it all together. It can be a color, a texture, a shape or a piece of furniture.

The varying styles of Ms. Walker's room were tied together by a Persian rug. Its updated color scheme teamed with a traditional tree-of-life pattern combined the contemporary and exotic design theme in one major furnishing.

The antique and modern pieces also were linked by similar natural wood tones. Painted walls and ceramic tiles provided a timeless background while the predominance of square shapes and straight lines established another thread of continuity.

With careful planning, an eclectic room is a certain decorating success. And the chance to create a distinctive decor with thoughtfully chosen treasures may prove an irresistible temptation well worth the extra effort.

Shop sells Americana for the home

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Lewis Irving just wanted to save a bit of Americana when he beat the wreckers to an uncle's home in Missouri. But now he has a store full of the colored glass and carved wood that Americans surrounded themselves with in years gone by.

"I really believe the purpose of my business is to save the art and architecture of America," says Irving, a 42-year-old professor of sociology and criminal justice.

"You can take a piece of yesteryear and put it into a period home," he says. "And, just as easily, you can take that same piece and put it into a modern home. It just takes a little imagination."

The result is Structural Antiques Inc., a company designed to find and save those bits and pieces of an earlier life. The treasures are on display at his store, waiting for buyers who have an understanding of the hard work and care that went into their creation in days when mass production wasn't heard of.

"All our door hardware is original! No reproductions!" proclaims a sign stuck onto one display case.

"It used to be that I didn't have any competition," Irving says. "Now we have companies everywhere making reproductions.

"And the sad thing is that people are going out and buying reproduction doors and paying $600 or more, and what's supposed to be beveled glass is nothing but plastic. They could buy the original piece here, with real glass, and for a lot less money."

Dozens of doors lean against walls and pillars while others are propped open so intricate glass working and designs can be seen.

He points out one door, explaining it is paneled with sweet gum on one side and oak on the other.

"Doors used to be made like that, with different types of wood on each side. That way, they matched the wood in each room," he says.

Doors with beveled glass sparkle in the light. Prices range from around $350 to $750, depending on how intricate the glasswork is.

Pieces of patterned tin take up one section of the main room, works that have been gently removed from old ceilings. A sign proclaims, "We install tin ceilings."

In another area of the store, a massive wall and fireplace glow from generations of buffing and polishing. A sign reads: "Barclay's Bank Conference Room, London. Quarter sawn oak room with hand-carved fireplace and entry, approximately 24-by-28 feet. $70,000."

Irving says he got into the antique architectural business when he saved woodwork and other pieces from an uncle's home that was scheduled to be demolished to make way for an interstate highway.

He put the rescued woodwork into his home, and found that other people were anxious for the same type of work.

At the same time, he says, Oklahoma City was in the throes of urban renewal.

"I saw these old buildings just being destroyed, and I decided to try to save some of their fixtures."

From these beginnings he opened his business in 1978.

Irving says he concentrates on works "dating from 1930 back" and estimates the average date of his stock is about 1870.

Irving has one bit of advice for anyone who buys some of the architectural antiques.

Lewis Irving

"Don't make them permanent," he says. "Leave them so you can take them with you when you move. They're just like any other antique and increase in value as time goes by."

Potted plants help beautify condomimium patios

By DARLA WELLES
Copley News Service

When Tom Champlin and his wife, Marian, moved into a condominium a few years ago, they left behind a home with a lushly planted yard.

So it was understandable that he would not long tolerate the bleakness of the condominium's small patio, which consisted of a patch of concrete bordered by dirt.

"I didn't like to sit out here with the sun glaring on the concrete and nothing green or pretty," Champlin said.

He covered the concrete with green outdoor carpeting, filled the dirt border with hearty creeping charlie and filled containers with green and blooming plants.

Champlin selected plants that are easy to grow and take little care. He chose shade-loving Boston ferns for hanging planters in the sheltered area of the patio, and sun-loving annuals and perennials for planter boxes that he put on the open ledge of the patio wall. He added night-blooming jasmine for fragrance and easy-care flowering cactus plants for winter bloom.

Champlin's easy-care approach is but one way to beautify the small patio and deck areas found in condominium and apartment complexes.

This patio incorporates several methods for growing plants in small areas.

Gardening in these small spaces can be as simple or as elaborate as the individual gardener's patience allows. The finished product can vary as widely as the gardeners themselves.

Patio plantings can be inexpensive, relying on common flowers that can be grown from seed or from small plants that can be bought in pony packs of six each, usually for no more than a dollar a pack.

The least expensive containers are simple clay pots, said Bruce Asakawa, owner of a garden center. The most durable, but more costly, are redwood tubs or boxes.

Also good for larger plantings are oak barrels split in half to form tubs.

"You can really do a lot in a small patio area," Asakawa said. "You can successfully plant almost anything except really large or fast-growing plants in containers. So the appearance of a patio garden is really only limited by the imagination and patience of the person doing it.

"Some people don't have the patience to start plants from seed. For them the pony packs of plants or small plants in 4- or 6-inch pots are perfect. Colorful annual flowers will bloom all through summer and into the autumn if you keep pinching off the dead blooms.

"Perennial plants like marguerite daisies usually need to be pruned back during the cool season to keep them from getting leggy and woody, but they're very good container plants for plentiful bloom and color."

Geraniums are available in many varieties. Some varieties grow upright and are good for planter boxes; others trail and are good for hanging baskets. Their blooms and leaves take many forms and they are tolerant plants that thrive even when occasionally neglected, Asakawa said.

For shaded areas and hanging baskets, Asakawa recommends impatiens, begonias and ferns.

Attractive patios, walks can enhance landscaping

Copley News Service

When people think about gardens and landscaping, they think of greenery and colorful blossoms. They carefully consider what plants will be most hardy or aesthetically pleasing.

That same consideration should be given to selecting the proper materials for paving patios, walks and steps, according to Home magazine.

Attractively paved patios, walks and steps can greatly enhance a landscaped yard if the proper masonry materials are selected with great care, taking into consideration durability, cost and appearance, the magazine said.

Popular for centuries as outdoor flooring, bricks are available in many colors, sizes and textures. Easy to work with, they make an ideal material for do-it-yourselfers. In harsh climates, only hard-burned, severe-weather bricks that resist cracking should be used.

Equally durable, concrete is adequate for walks and patios. It probably should be installed professionally to ensure a proper base, edging and crack-control joints. Pea gravel or pebbles can add color and texture to concrete.

Gravel, crushed granite and brick, wood chips and bark make fine surfaces for paths not subject to heavy traffic. A ton of gravel can be bought very inexpensively, but a ton of wood chips can cost 10 times as much.

Creek stones, river rocks and pebbles can be applied in loose-aggregate fashion or set into mortar.

Flagstone has no rival for durability as a patio surface. It can be placed right on the earth or set into mortar over a concrete slab.

Fired and unglazed ceramic tiles in browns and reds blend well with garden colors. They must be laid on an absolutely level surface, however, and installation costs make them two to three times costlier than bricks.

Before making a final selection on paving materials, seek professional advice from a landscape designer, mason or building supply store owner to make certain that the materials are compatible with the house and the grounds.

Carpets come in four styles

By MONICA PEREZ
Copley News Service

Understanding the differences between carpeting styles and their appropriate uses can help a consumer make a wise purchase and, consequently, the best carpet investment.

"A smart shopper should learn as much as possible about carpeting before making a purchase," said Marti Hill, creative director for Galaxy Carpet Mills Inc., a carpet manufacturer.

One of the basic decisions to be made before buying carpet is the style of carpet you want. There are four major styles from which to choose, each with a distinctive look. They are cut pile, cut and loop, frieze and level loop.

The most popular style of carpeting is cut pile, where all the tufts or ends of the carpet yarn are cut to the same height. Within the cut pile category are saxonies and velvets. Ms. Hill suggests saxonies for casual settings, but this versatile style can be used in almost any room.

Velvets have a tighter, denser construction with a smooth, velvet finish. Each tuft is indistinguishable. Because they offer a broad sweep of color that shows off furniture dramatically, velvets are recommended for formal, elegant environments.

The key to making a good carpet investment is to select a style appropriate for the intended room's use. Here a velvet-like carpet gives a broad sweep of color to dramatically show off the furniture.

CUT AND loop has both cut and uncut looped tufts of varying heights. This carpeting often is multicolored, which hides dirt and traffic patterns. This style therefore is easy to maintain and appropriate for casual living, Ms. Hill said.

Frieze often has a nubby texture with tightly twisted tufts of yarn. Friezes come in a variety of pile heights and are very rugged, blending well in contemporary settings.

Level loop is a tight, looped construction that's perfect for hallways, kitchens, basements and other heavy-traffic areas that require extreme durability.

"Level loops are the easiest style of all to maintain," she said. "But there is a disadvantage. They don't offer the warmth or comfort of a saxony, velvet or cut and loop."

There is a vast selection available within each style to suit your taste and your family's lifestyle. Shop intelligently for the best carpet investment.

Once you've made that investment, care for it properly.

Regular cleaning and maintenance are required to protect your investment. A clean carpet not only keeps a good appearance, it adds years to its life.

THERE ARE three important factors to consider in carpet care — regular vacuuming, spill and stain removal and periodic shampooing.

A carpet wears out from a combination of foot traffic and dirt particles that get trampled deep within the pile. These particles scrape and cut away at the carpet fibers, wearing them away and dulling the color of the carpet.

Regular vacuuming is the best way to protect your carpet, according to The Complete Book of Carpeting, a booklet published by the Du Pont Carpet Fibers Division. A light vacuuming twice a week and a more thorough job once weekly will keep a carpet in tip-top shape. A light vacuum is three passes of the machine. A thorough job requires seven passes.

The vacuum used should have a strong motor to remove not only surface dirt but also the penetrating particles that slowly wear out a carpet. A vacuum with a beater bar particularly is effective for dirt that settles against the pile.

A spill or stain left unattended can ruin a carpet. However, it is important to remember that most spills can be taken care of easily with prompt attention.

The first step to take when a spill occurs is to blot it up gently. Do not rub or brush the spot, but use a blotting or dabbing motion. Use a spoon or the back of a knife for spills of semisolids or greasy substances. If a stain remains after these procedures, some special attention is required.

MOST CARPETS need shampooing every one to three years. When your carpet starts to look dull, it's time for a shampoo. Thorough carpet shampooing is best handled by professionals, but there are a number of methods for do-it-yourselfers.

For lightly soiled carpets, consumers can use a foam spray or a dry powder. Homemakers looking for a more professional-type job can rent a wet shampoo or a steam carpet machine. Care must be taken with this equipment to prevent possible mildew.

If you're looking for the services of a professional carpet cleaner, first check with friends and neighbors who have had a good job done. Get a few estimates to be sure the price is fair.

Wall-to-wall carpeting has to be cleaned at home. However, if your carpeting can be moved, it is best to send it out to be cleaned. In a carpet cleaning facility, your carpet will dry faster and there is no chance of damage to the backing.

For more information on carpet care, send for a free copy of The Complete Book of Carpeting by writing to: Du Pont Co., Room G-40284, Wilmington, Del. 19898.

Passive solar energy can be functional

Associated Press

Don't feel frustrated if you get a little confused sometimes by the words "passive" and "active" solar energy. Especially when they are used in connection with houses, the terms are tossed around rather loosely, occasionally by the advertisements of builders.

Passive solar energy has been around since caves were heated and cooled by their placement in relation to the rays of the sun. Combine that with the kinds of materials used for building houses and the harnessing of the sun's energy and you have a simple explanation of passive solar energy. Mention such things as roof collectors, fans, pumps, heat-exchange units, thermal products, controls and sophisticated technological equipment and you are talking about active solar energy.

Passive solar energy in a house may not be quite as effective as active solar energy in most cases, but it can be surprisingly functional and less expensive, especially if the passive ideas are incorporated into the house in the planning and construction stages.

In an active system, the reliance is on technology that is somewhat independent of the building and even can be added on later, although at a higher cost than if it had been done at the time of the original construction.

Proper landscaping adds to look of home, condominium

By HERB LAWRENCE
Copley News Service

Some people love to tinker in the yard, while others would just as soon let the grass die as water it. Fighting those ever-present weeds and making sure the garden looks good can be frustrating chores.

But a house or condominium would look much poorer without landscaping. Having adequate landscaping is a vital necessity, and one has to learn to deal with the problems of taking care of plants and ground covers.

One landscaping expert says a garden doesn't have to be a problem if the job is handled logically and in a simple fashion.

Joe Taylor, a vice president of a major home builder, oversees the installation of lawns, shrubs and trees at model complexes and at homes where landscaping is included.

Nurseries are a big help in landscaping, Taylor said. "They can give you some good specific advice. Don't hesitate to ask nurserymen what to do.

"That's their business, and they can solve a lot of problems for you," he said.

The best period of the year to start something new in a garden is normally spring or the time just before spring blows in.

"That's the key growth period and it's best to begin then," he said.

Proper landscaping and the upkeep of that landscaping makes good sense, Taylor said.

"It makes the dwelling look better to other people, should make it more pleasant for you while living there and make the property more valuable in a resale," he said.

Adequate landscaping necessity for home or condominium.

Lawns in front and back are still in, he said. But they may not be in the future.

Using ground covers such as ice plants also is a good idea in a landscaping plan. Many ground covers need little maintenance and care.

Taylor also likes to include trees in his landscaping, but cautions that the roots of a tree can cause problems to a driveway or sidewalk. Trees have to be planted far enough away from concrete covers so they won't expand and crack a driveway or sidewalk.

Such roots also could play havoc on home foundations, "So you can't plant that closely," he said.

The location of the trees must be planned properly, he said. "You should consult a nursery on the locations when you buy the baby trees," he said.

Before any landscaping is put in, Taylor said, the homeowner should have the soil tested.

"I think this is essential," he said. "The test will tell you what nutrients the soil needs."

The cost of such a test is nominal, and it can be performed by most nurseries.

Synthetic fabrics increasingly used for upholstery

MISHAWAKA, Ind. (AP) — More and more people are choosing synthetic upholstery fabrics in their homes, says Lee Mills, director of design at Uniroyal, Inc., because it is more economical.

"Leather is an important look for the '80s," says Mills, "but diminishing availability and escalating price can dampen its appeal."

Mills says many people are using upholstery fabrics like Naugahyde because it has all the richness and styling of leather, but is more economical.

"Stable pricing, versatile patterns, colors and textures make it a natural substitute for real leather," he says.

Anti-theft devices recommended

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Home improvements can include more than paint and wallpaper these days. Anti-theft devices often are installed as well.

The simplest approach is to beef up exterior locks on doors and add bolt or keyed locks on windows, according to Better Homes and Gardens, which also recommends padlocks or burglar bars on basement windows.

The best break-in protection is the electronic alarm, which can serve to ward off burglars by sounding a loud noise that catches the attention of neighbors, the magazine says. Some systems sound a loud noise and also send a signal to a central dispatcher who can alert police.

Former Odessan follows 'subtle progression' to art

ENTERTAINMENT

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Former Odessa resident Dee Toscano is among the artists whose works are featured in the seventh annual Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library Western Art Show Saturday at ClayDesta National Bank atrium. The show and sale begins with a 6 p.m. preview.

With the exception of a year when her family moved away from Odessa, Ms. Toscano, who was then known as Dee Dee Burgess, attended elementary and high school in Odessa. A 1949 graduate of Odessa High School, she was a member of the "ole Brochettes drill team." Today she has warm memories of that time.

"I've often throught of that since I've been in bigger cities, and I've thought about smaller cities and how really uninhibited we were," says Ms. Toscano, who now calls Denver, Colo., home. "It was a beautiful time compared to how children are growing up today with all the pressures. It was very simple, and it was probably the best times of my whole life."

Ms. Toscano has fond memories of walking to school, which was about 12 blocks from her home.

"I walked every day. For some reason, I remember that, the walking back and forth and the activity that went on at school, more than I can remember many other things. I always picked up friends along the way, so it was the highlight of the day."

Dee Toscano

MS. TOSCANO, who has not had formal art training, wasn't aware of any art classes being offered when she went to school.

She remembers only one class which included "numerous odd things" which she didn't "feel were art related, like tooling belts and crafty things. All I can remember is tooling a belt one year. And I still have that belt."

Four years ago Ms. Toscano returned to a school reunion.

"I was amazed. In your mind you keep thinking, 'Oh, it will be just like it always was, and everyone will look the same.' Wrong. It was quite an experience. There weren't many friends there, most of them had moved away and they didn't come for the reunion."

The reunion reminded Ms. Toscano that the days she had grown up in Odessa represented "a special time in my life and many changes have occurred since then."

Besides getting married and raising a family, Ms. Toscano has won numerous awards for her pastels and a major award for her work in bronze in the years since she left West Texas.

SHE IS a member of the Pastel Society of America, Allied Artists, Catherine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club and the Society of American Impressionists. A listing of the awards she has received since 1975 includes:

— 1976, the Pastel Society's Honorable Mention, New York;

— 1977, the Pastel Society's "Flora Guffuni Award," New York; Allied Artists' "Mary Lou Fitzgerald Award," New York; Catherine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club's "Bronze Medal Award," New York; and two Mainstream awards of distinction, Ohio;

— 1978, 1979 and 1981, Catherine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club's "Gold Medal Award, New York;

— 1980, Catherine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club's Council of American Artists, New York;

— 1983, Salmagundi's "Second Place," New York;

— 1984, Pastel Society of the Southwest's "Holiday Award," Wichita, Kan., and Tulsa Art and Humanities' "First Place Bronze Governor's Award," Tulsa.

The constant factor in Ms. Toscano's life has been art. She has drawn and painted for as long as she can remember, however, she never planned to become a professional artist.

"IT WAS JUST a subtle progression all my life. It kept blossoming and growing and people were starting to become aware and commissioned me to do little things. Before I knew it, I was an artist, and it was without plan whatsoever in that direction."

Pausing, she adds, her voice very faint over the phone, "I guess it was just meant to be because I never stopped, but I don't know when I started, also."

For Ms. Toscano art is as much a part of her life as is breathing. It is hard for her to say what it takes to be an artist because, in her case, "There was something so embedded, it was such a part of me, it's not separate at all. I never quite understood it, but I knew it was there, and I knew I had to do it.

"I was really doing it for myself, not so much to please anyone else. It was just so natural. I guess because it was so natural, I couldn't separate it."

For many years, Ms. Toscano didn't show her work publically. Instead, she did "small commissions."

The first time she showed at a gallery was a major one in Denver. Today, the art shows in which Ms. Toscano's work appears come about as a natural extension of the growth of her reputation through others buying her paintings.

"I didn't have to go out and peddle my work. It was just a natural process. My whole career has been a phenomenon to me in many areas."

THE MEDIUM she works in and which has brought her such recognition, is the result of her experimenting with other paints when she thought she might have developed an allergy to oils. Although she found she didn't have such an allergy, pastels became her primary form of expression. This medium still allows her to express her love for color.

After painting for so many years, Ms. Toscano says, "It's not the subject matter so much as it used to be that catches my eye, it's the interpretation of it. Subjects become harder and harder to find because you've done so many. So it's new interpretation of subject matter that's the new challenge."

A frequent traveler, Ms. Toscano stores ideas in her mind for future paintings. However, the length of time required to move a painting from idea to completion varies because no two paintings are the same.

"I think there's a little shelf back in my mind that I've stored many, many little ideas, and maybe I will see something that will trigger that idea, and I'll want to explore that area or that subject that way.

"But every piece is unique and every idea is unique, whether I'm traveling and I see something, or whether it's just an image of someone. So many aspects contribute to an idea, it's never that's it, that's what I want to do. But once I do get a feeling for what I want to do, it's the new interpretation that really keeps me going."

Midland College faculty members presenting duet art song recital

Two Midland College music faculty members are presenting a duet art song recital at 8 p.m. today in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium on the Midland College campus.

Dr. Michael Jordan, MC's vocal music coordinator, and Janice Archer, adjunct vocal instructor, will perform in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. Admission is free and the public is invited. A reception will follow.

Jordan and Ms. Archer have planned a program of classical duets. They will be singing in several languages.

Jordan, a baritone, attended the universities of New Mexico, Colorado and Michigan. He debuted professionally at the Kennedy Center, Washington, D.C., and has appeared with the Detroit Symphony and the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale.

Ms. Archer is a soprano who attended Hastings College, Nebraska, and the University of Missouri. She studied in Austria, France and Germany in master's classes. In Midland College's first opera production, "Die Fledermaus," she sang the role of Rosalinda. She also appeared as a vocalist in the motion picture "You Never Gave Me Roses."

Accompanist for Ms. Archer will be pianist Shari Weiner. Ms. Weiner, who has recently moved to Midland, has a bachelor of music degree in applied piano from the Eastman School of Music, where she graduated cum laude in 1973, and a 1976 master of music in performance from the University of Louisville. She attended Eastman under a four-year scholarship and, in 1975, she received a full tuition scholarship to Austria with the American Institute of American Studies.

Ms. Weiner began studying piano when she was 6. She was a recital winner of the Pittsburgh Concert Society Youth Auditions in 1967 and a soloist with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orhcestra in its Concert for Young People in 1968.

A member of the Midland Music Teachers Association, Ms. Weiner teaches private lessons. She will be performing this spring at Midland College and Odessa College. Her husband, Michael Santorelli, is a trumpeter with the Midland-Odessa Symphony and a member of the Lone Star Brass Quintet.

Jordan and Ms. Archer will have feature roles in Midland Opera Theatre's production of Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" in April. As a tribute to Midland's Centennial, the opera will be reset in West Texas as "Johnny Murphy."

Makeup artist strives for reality

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — By Michael Westmore's way of thinking, if you praise one of his makeup marvels, he's done a lousy job.

"What I'm trying to create is reality," the makeup artist said. "What I don't want to hear from the audience is: 'Gee, that's a great makeup.'"

At 46, Westmore is a 24-year veteran of dabbing pancake and latex onto the faces of movie actors. He came into his profession by birth, being a third-generation member of the famed family of Westmore, who at one time headed the makeup departments of four major studios.

Michael Westmore still hires out as a "movie-set makeup man," doing the day-to-day work of prettying up leading men and women. But his recent fame has come from the remarkable faces he created for all three "Rocky" films, "First Blood," "Blade Runner" and "Iceman." He has been nominated this year for an Academy Award for aging Keir Dullea in "2010."

"In fact, I may be responsible for establishing the makeup Oscar three years ago," said Westmore at his home in the hills overlooking the San Fernando Valley.

He said in 1980 he had been proposed for a special achievement award because of his job of tranforming Robert DeNiro into the aging, battered Jake LaMotta in "Raging Bull." There was an uproar when the Board of Governors declined the bid, and in the following year, makeup was added to the list of categories.

"Until then, only three makeup awards had been given: to William Tuttle for 'The Seven Faces of Dr. Lao' and to John Chambers for 'The Planet of the Apes,'" Westmore said. "In 1930 my uncle Ern was awarded a citation for 'Cimarron.'"

Westmore seems to have developed a specialty in aging actors, as he has demonstrated with Tommy Lee Jones in the TV miniseries "The Amazing Howard Hughes," Jane Alexander and Edward Herrmann in "Eleanor and Franklin" and Robert Duvall and Robert De Niro in "True Confessions." In "2010" he created two makeups for the amazingly youthful Dullea, first as an old man, then as an ancient.

"First I read the script, then I talked with (writer-producer-director) Peter Hyams to get his ideas," said Westmore. He spent a month in visualizing and sculpting the makeups in his garage workshop, which is filled with busts and masks of his past creations. It took six hours to apply the makeup to Dullea.

Max Morath Quintet presents 'Pop!! Goes the Music' Friday

The Max Morath Quintet will present "Pop!! Goes the Music" at 8 p.m. Friday at Midland High School Auditorium. The concert is open to Midland Community Concert season ticket holders.

Pianist Max Morath has toured extensively with his one-man shows, "The Ragtime Years" and "Living a Ragtime Life."

With this new show, he moves forward in time to perform classics from the Golden Age of popular music, drawing on the works of, among others, Irving Berlin, George and Ira Gershwin, Harry Warren, Hoagy Carmichael and Eubie Blake. Piano compositions by James P. Johnson, Scott Joplin and Zez Confrey will highlight the program.

As a pianist and singer, Morath has recorded for Vanguard, Epic and RCA, including the recent "Ragtime Stompers," "Jazz Country" and "Ragtime" for Vanguard and "More Rodgers and Hart" with William Bolcom and Joan Morris for RCA Red Seal.

A native of Colorado Springs, Colo., Morath compiled an award-winning series for PBS in the early 1960s, "The Ragtime Era" and "Turn of the Century." This year he was featured in the PBS special "Sentimental Journeys."

Max Morath

His first live performance was at New York's Blue Angel. In 1969, he opened off-Broadway in his one-man show "Max Morath at the Turn of the Century." The New York Times critic Walter Kerr described the show as "sheer delight" and said, "You'll find Max Morath a delectable companion."

A new edition of the show dubbed "The Ragtime Years" began nationwide tours in 1973, including an extended run at the historic Ford's Theatre in Washington, D.C. This show led to his still active one-man concert piece "Living a Ragtime Life."

In 1982 and 1983, Morath expanded his concert scope to include a half-century of American popular music, from about 1900 to 1950. The result is the new show, "Pop!! Goes the Music," subtitled "American Popular Music...and How it Got That Way," which features four other musicians with Morath.

Morath says of the show, "Here was a chance to combine the musical America of my research with the musical America of my own past."

His new show was praised in its New York premiere for its "wit and deft musicality" and Morath for his "beautifully-honed sense of showmanship" by the New York Times.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Library to host annual Western art show, sale

The Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library is hosting its seventh annual Western Art Show and Sale Saturday at ClayDesta National Bank atrium.

Proceeds from the show and sale go to the library. The purpose of the library is the preservation and promotion of the heritage of the American Southwest. Themes treated by the artists are predominately southwestern in character.

Works by well known Western artists such as Clark Hulings, Fritz White and Midlander Tom Ryan, as well as those by American Impressionists, such as former Odessan Dee Toscano, will be featured in the show, which includes over 200 works by 65 artists.

Tickets are $75 per person and cover a brunch at the library, attendance at the sale and a cocktail/hors d'oeuvres reception beginning at 6 p.m. at ClayDesta.

For more information call Robin Williams at the library, 682-5785.

Kite contest to be Saturday

The second annual Windlands Park Kite Contest is scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday.

The contest is limited to two events per person. Pre-registration deadline is 1 p.m. Friday. Awards will be given.

The events, by age groups, are 6 and under, most unusual; 7 to 10, prettiest; and 11 to 12, ugliest. Open, no age requirement competition will be held in the following categories: most colorful, longest tail, best handmade kite, best store-bought kite, highest kite and 50 yard dash with kite.

The contest is sponsored by the Midland Parks and Recreation Department. For more information call 683-4281, ext. 317.

Woman heard, but not seen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marni Nixon is a red-haired optimist who is more often heard than seen.

Miss Nixon was the ghost-voice who sang off-camera for such movies as "The King and I," "West Side Story" and "My Fair Lady."

But Miss Nixon, who is now 55 and a grandmother, still makes concert appearances around the country.

Miss Nixon said she never stops working on her voice, because "singing is definitely an athletic activity.

"I never stop reworking the voice," she said. "And my voice changes — has changed — all the time. I no longer have the high F's and the high E's. On the other hand, what I've gained is more meat and more warmth. Though I remain a lyric soprano, I guess I will never be a bird-girl again."

Astaire dances in film clips

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although he hasn't worked in films for three years, Fred Astaire's name appears in the credits for two current movies.

Astaire, who will be 86 in May, appears in several numbers of the MGM compilation film "That's Dancing" and producers Jack Haley Jr. and David Niven Jr. dedicated the film to him.

Woody Allen's new movie, "The Purple Rose of Cairo," begins with a recording of Astaire singing "Cheek to Cheek" and ends with the Astaire-Ginger Rogers dance from the 1935 "Top Hat." At the end of the credits is a notation thanking the legendary dancer.

Murphy concert sold out

NEW YORK (AP) — Hot comedian Eddie Murphy, who grabs crowds wherever he goes, had no problem filling up Radio City Music Hall for his upcoming appearance there.

"He sold out in eight hours for six shows," a Music Hall spokeswoman said. "It's the quickest sell-out we've ever had."

She said the art deco concert hall wanted to give Murphy 10 shows, but he couldn't accommodate because of his tour schedule.

Murphy opens at Radio City Music Hall March 22.

Schmenge Brothers leave world of polka at height of mediocrity

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — You just can't find enough good polka music today, and now that the Schmenge Brothers have played their last beerhall and bowling alley, the void may never be filled.

The Schmenges (John Candy and Eugene Levy) have jolted the entertainment world by leaving at the peak of their mediocrity. Who would have believed it?

But it's all there in gloriously clashing plaid and checks tonight when Home Box Office presents "The Last Polka," which chronicles the never-told story of how Yosh and Stan Schmenge picked themselves up from their muddy bootstraps and became the toast of the accordion set.

This award-deserving documentary, complete with blackouts and a voice-of-doom narration (by comedian Dave Thomas) that would be the envy of NFL Films, also includes some electrifying concert performances by the fab two, the Schmenges.

As you've probably guessed by now, "The Last Polka" is a rousing, rocking spoof of those somber-toned, somber-intoned documentaries — with apologies to The Band's farewell concert tour immortalized in the film "The Last Waltz."

Candy and Levy, who co-starred in "Splash" as the older brother and the crazed oceanographer, wrote the special, starred in it and served as its executive producers. "The Last Polka" is delightfully inventive humor on the edge, a one-joke theme that is non-stop hilarious.

After 88 albums and five hit singles, the Schmenges (pronounced like GEEZers, not sauGES) are retiring from the music wars, devastating news for their legion of fans — none of whom seems to have been born in this century.

"They're the kings," says one devotee, waiting in a slow-moving line for tickets to the Schmenges' final concert.

The burning issue is why, after a 20-year, scandal-filled, wart-filled career, are the Schmenges retiring? "No comment," says Yosh, or was that Stan?

(An equally burning question is why they didn't retire earlier, but that's the subject of a sequel documentary, perhaps after the Schmenges return for another farewell tour).

"There's probably some money to be made from retiring," acknowledged Yosh (Candy) in an interview with The Associated Press. He and Stan were having a little trouble in the dressing room with their lederhosen. "You just can't get good lederhosen anymore," said Stan.

The Schmenges (creations of Candy and Levy from their "SCTV" days on NBC) hail from Leutonia, the hotbed of polka and cabbage. Leutonians are easily identifiable by the wart-like beauty marks dotting their faces.

"The more you have on your face, the more prestige you have in your neighborhood," said Stan.

The musical tradition of Leutonia is playing glass jars, and Stan got his start playing a mean — but usually gentle — bottle. He graduated to the clarinet, while brother Yosh mastered the accordion, which may be the most offensive instrument this side of bagpipes.

The Schmenges were introduced to American audiences on the popular radio show, "Foreigners on Parade," and then some savvy TV producer gave them their own program: "Strikes, Spares and Schmenges."

Throughout their career, the Schmenges have had their share of scandal. They were linked romantically to the semifamous, semiattractive Lemon Twins (three singing sisters played by Catherine O'Hara, Robin Duke and Mary Margaret O'Hara).

This infidelity was devastating to the Schmenges' bag-lady wives — who stood up in the audience and took bows at the farewell concert — but show business is a dirty business, isn't it?

Actually, Stan couldn't understand all the fuss the tabloids made over the dalliances. "It was only sex," he said. "There was no relationship or nothing."

Evidently, the perils of superstardom are everywhere. On their final "victory" tour, the Schmenges alienated some fans when they tried to cash in on another pop-music craze. Looking to broaden their appeal beyond pensioners, the polka-playing brothers offered a tribute to Michael Jackson in Kansas City.

So what if "Beat It" with a Bavarian beat didn't stir the masses? You're nowhere musically if you don't take chances. Even in failure, the Schmenges broke the sound barrier, as the vanguard of heavy-metal polka.

And who else in the polka world would have dared salute the music of Jim Morrison and the Doors? "Touch Me Babe" was just another oldie until Stan made it sing on his accordion.

Let's hope the Schmenges don't leave the fast track forever. Heaven knows there aren't enough tuba solos in rock 'n' roll anymore.

Now songs made after movies shot

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When movie musicals were made years ago, the songs were recorded before the film was shot. Then the actors stepped before the camera to mouth or lip-sync the lyrics to the playback.

Now the system is topsy-turvy, reports lyricist Dean Pitchford.

"We wrote the title song of 'Fame' two or three months after the picture finished production," he said. The methodology obviously worked, since the song won Academy Awards for Pitchford and composer Michael Gore.

Pitchford, 33, now is competing against himself for another best-song Oscar. He and Kenny Loggins are nominated for the title song of "Footloose," and he also is nominated with Tom Snow for "Let's Hear It for the Boy" from the same Paramount film.

Whether or not he wins the gold on March 25, Pitchford has already collected platinum. The "Footloose" album has been CBS's biggest soundtrack with more than 5 million units sold. An amazing six singles hit the Top 40.

Pitchford also wrote the script of "Footloose," but the movie itself hasn't provided excess gold. "So far it has grossed $82 million," he said. "It cost $8 million, but Paramount tells me it's still in the red."

Dean Pitchford is part of a new generation of movie songwriters who wouldn't think of rhyming June and moon. He started acting in his native Hawaii, studied drama at Yale University, performed onstage in "Godspell" and "Pippin" and turned to songwriting for Peter Allen's Broadway show, "Up in One."

He came to films with no preconceived notion about how things should be done. Thus, he had no problem writing "Fame" after filming had been completed. He used the same technique with "Footloose."

"It is so rare to have standard musicals on the screen anymore," he said.

If a bottle of bourbon were 86 proof, what would be its percentage of alcohol?

Gallery 1114 to host benefit for battered women

To mark Saturday's opening of "TRIPTYCH," Gallery 1114, 1114 Big Spring St., will host a benefit art show and sale Saturday on behalf of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children. Co-sponsor for the evening is the Midland Junior League.

Gallery 1114 is Midland's only contemporary co-operative art gallery. "TRIPTYCH" is an exhibition of ceramics by Sharon Seay, drawings and weavings by Deborah Hamilton and mixed media pieces by Ruth Hill Radcliffe. All are members of Gallery 1114. Their works will be featured in the central exhibition area of Gallery 1114, while works by other members will be on display throughout the Gallery.

From 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday silent bids will be accepted for each of the works donated by members of the gallery. Works range from watercolors by Warren Taylor, ceramics by John Harmon, photographs by Mike Banschbach and mixed media pieces by Cristi Branum, as well as selections from the "TRIPTYCH" exhibition.

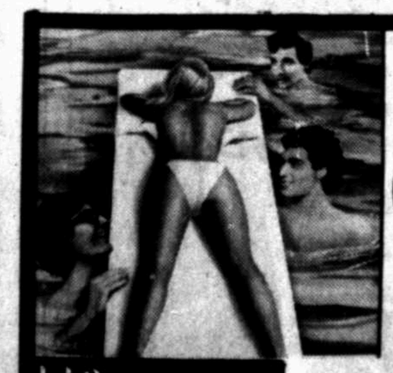

At the conclusion of the reception, a bid will be selected at random for each of the donated works. All proceeds will go the the Center for Battered Women.

The reception is free and the public is invited to attend.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Maybe 'ultimate' existed before 'improvement'

By LINDA ANDERSON

Snacking has become a way of life at our house. With three of us employed — all on different schedules — and two small children who are always hungry (the 4-year-old has been known to ask for lunch at 9:30 a.m.), it is necessary that we always have some form of quick snack food on hand at all times.

But too many sweets and too many salty snacks are unhealthy. And the kids will tolerate only so many bananas, apples and oranges before rebelling, though they like fruit. In the words of a famous commercial, "What's a mother to do?"

Well, how about cheese? Kraft has recently marketed what is described as "the ultimate in cheese snack foods" for those of us who love cheese. Those were words for us.

The product, Cheese Twists, and is available (so far) in American, Cheddar and Bacon and Nacho flavors.

Because cheese is so popular at our house, we tested all three varieties for taste, price and advertising accuracy. The usual taste-testers — adults, teen and children — all appreciate the flavor and versatility of cheese.

All three varieties cost $1.79 for a 6.35-ounce bag. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Each one-ounce serving of Cheese Twists contains 100 calories, 10 percent of the protein and vitamin A and 15 percent (Nacho) or 20 percent (American and Cheddar with Bacon) of the calcium in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance.

Sound pretty nourishing for a snack food? That's because Cheese Twists is just cheese — pasteurized process cheese food, to be exact. No crunchy pieces, no fried anything. Just snack cheese food, very similar to the kind sold in slices for sandwiches. And like other cheese foods, the product is stocked in the refrigerator section with the bulk cheeses, cream cheeses and lunch meats.

It's obvious why it is called "cheese" but the reason behind the "twists" was a little more difficult to figure out. My guess is that each individual piece of cheese is wrapped in plastic wrap which is twisted at both ends, like a piece of salt water taffy or bubble gum. The cheese itself is not the twisted part.

The taste-testers liked Cheese Twists but no one could agree on which one was best. Each had his own favorite. The bacon-lovers chose Cheddar with Bacon, the spicy-food-lovers chose Nacho (although this flavor wasn't really all that hot) and the cheese purists and younger testers chose American.

In fact, the only complaint we had about the product was that $1.79 seemed too much to pay for only 6.35-ounces of cheese food. (Each bag contained 36 pieces, according to its label.)

But is it really the ultimate in cheese snack food, as its commercials claim? How does one improve on cheese?

BETTER BUSINESS

Complaints hit the fan; FTC files charges

By LINDA TRUITT

Linda Truitt

Remember the $29.95 ceiling fan? In 1981 and 1983 Sheldon Friedlich Marketing Inc., located in New York, advertised "a stunning reproduction of the $360 top-of-the-line American classic" for only $29.95 plus freight, handling and insurance.

But as the Better Business Bureau reported to the public through the media, the fan's flimsy blades were barely turned by a noisy motor in a plastic case. Customer complaints alleged misrepresentation, delays in delivery and non-delivery.

The Federal Trade Commission has charged nine companies and four individuals, including Sheldon Friedlich Marketing, with misrepresenting the nationally advertised mail-order products they sell and violating the FTC's mail-order rule calling for timely delivery of mail-ordered goods.

Earlier this year a temporary restraining order was issued freezing the assets of all the defendants except Sheldon Friedlich Marketing which has filed for bankruptcy. The freeze will help ensure that money is available for consumer refunds, if ordered.

Other companies charged are Rite Sales Inc., C.M. Electronics Inc., Philippe LaFrance/USA Ltd., Ashley Overseas Ltd., Conceptual Trends Inc., Frank E. Bush Inc., Direct Marketing Industries Inc. and Perth Packaging Inc.

Some of the products allegedly misrepresented are:

— Ceiling fans, advertised as being high-quality, very quiet, with solid brass hardware;

— Philippe LaFrance copper cookware, represented as a "top-of-the-line" 32-piece "gourmet" set for $19.95, $29.95 or $39.95;

— Ashley China, represented as a 45-piece set for $29.95;

— Binoculars, which ads claimed gave a crisp, clear image from 50 miles away and enabled users to distinguish markings on high-flying airplanes;

— Air conditioners, represented as capable of significantly lowering the temperature in a typical room;

— Kerosene lamps, which ads claimed were suitable for normal use; were 14-inches high and had glass shades and brass-plated bases; and — Sex nutrient pills, represented as improving the sexual performance of otherwise healthy average men low in "the sex nutrient."

The FTC states the representations are "false or misleading ... all to injury of the public and constitute unfair or deceptive acts and practices."

The commission also alleges the companies failed to deliver merchandise within the times specified in the ad, or within 30 days when no time was stated, without properly notifying or offering customers the right to cancel the order. The FTC charges "in numerous instances" the companies did not cancel orders or make prompt refunds to consumers who requested these options.

The FTC is asking the court to order the defendants to pay civil penalties for violating the mail-order rule and to order them not to violate the rule in the future. The commission also wants permanent injunctions issued against the companies and individuals to prevent them from misrepresenting their mail-order products in the future.

Nutrition information available in community

By MARIAN FARR

Marian Farr

"How can I cut down on salt?" "Is it really cheaper to buy the larger size eggs?" "Exactly how does cholesterol function in the body?" The answers to these questions are right here in our own community.

Many people doubt what they read or hear about nutrition — especially when it seems designed to sell health products, vitamins, foods or fad diet programs.

Others have specific questions, such as how food interacts with a medication or whether a certain food is appropriate for a diabetic diet, that aren't answered by nutrition articles in popular magazines.

Whatever type of nutrition information consumers seek, it should be available from reliable community resources such as the County Extension office. The Extension office will have free or low-cost publications and offer programs on nutrition, food preparation, purchasing, storage, handling and home canning. The county Extension home economist can answer specific questions about food and nutrition.

Dietetic associations are another source of nutrition information. The American Dietetic Association operates a Dial-a-Dietitian service in many larger communities. It's staffed by volunteer certified nutritionists and dietitians to answer consumers' food related questions. The American Dietetic Association and its local affiliates are observing National Nutrition month during March. Check with the local Texas Dietetic Association for information on special activities.

The health department, another good source for information, offers classes and health fairs on nutrition and other topics. It also handles food poisoning cases and monitors the sanitation of restaurants and food stores.

Food Stamp offices offer free nutrition and food cost publications in English and Spanish. or food stamp recipients. Designed for food stamp recipients, the publications give information for low-income consumers in buying and preparing more nutritious, less expensive food.

The library is another source for books and other materials written by authoritative sources on nutrition and food.

The resources are available for consumers to have their questions about nutrition answered quickly and easily by professionals in their own community.

DEAR ABBY

Writing advice is child's play for youngsters

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am doing my student teaching in a fifth-grade advanced program at Eisenhower Elementary School in Louisville, Ky. All the students keep a journal of their creative writing to sharpen their creative writing skills. On Jan. 9, the class decided to celebrate the 29th anniversary of your first newspaper column, so each student made up a "Dear Abby" letter and answered it. The project turned out so well, we thought you might like to see their letters. Some were serious, but most were spoofs. — MRS. SUSAN GRACE

DEAR MRS. GRACE: Due to space limitations I am unable to publish all the letters, but the fifth-graders who wrote the following may qualify for the "Guinness Book of World Records" as the world's youngest published authors:

DEAR ABBY: There's this sexy guy I know. How do I tell him that? — MISS X

DEAR MISS X: Don't!

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. My teacher gives me too much homework. What should I do? — OVERWORKED

DEAR OVERWORKED: Homework is just a part of school preparing you for the adult life ahead. Accept it as something you have to do and do it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. At my school they serve totally barfy lunches. I mean it. They don't even clean the trays or the silverware. Oh, they do run them under water. Help! — SICK OF IT IN LOUISVILLE

DEAR SICK: Take your lunch.

DEAR ABBY: I hate bombs, but I hate school more. What should I do? CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: If you feel that way about school, blow it up.

DEAR ABBY: My brother was jumping up and down on his bed, and the bed broke down, and the floor fell through. Now every time I vacuum, I fall through the floor. What should I do? — WENDY

DEAR WENDY: Don't vacuum in your brother's room.

DEAR ABBY: I know somebody who is stupid, mean and very ugly. What should I tell him to do? — W.W.

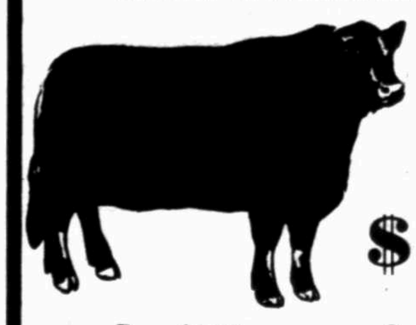

DEAR W.W.: Tell him to study, be nicer and wear a ski mask.

DEAR ABBY: What's green, has bad breath and stands 5 feet tall? — ADAM R.

DEAR ADAM: I hate riddles, but here's one for you. What's white, all crumpled up and is now in the bottom of my wastepaper basket?

Pro-Israeli militia chief refuses mediation offer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A pro-Israeli militia chief, leading a rebellion against the Syrian-oriented policies of President Amin Gemayel, has refused a mediation effort by the Maronite Catholic patriarch, aides said today.

Both the militia leader, Samir Geagea, and Gemayel are Maronite Catholics. Meanwhile, two senior Shiite Moslem religious leaders said in statements published by Beirut newspapers today that all Arab and Islamic nations should break off diplomatic relations with the United States. On Tuesday the United States vetoed a U.N. Security Council resolution condemning Israeli practices in occupied southern Lebanon.

A seven-man committee tried without success Wednesday night to set up a meeting with militia commander Samir Geagea, said an aide to Geagea who spoke on condition he not be identified.

The mediation committee is headed by Patriarch Mar Antonios Butros Khreish, spiritual head of the Maronite Catholic community. Khreish's emissaries said they would renew efforts to see Geagea tonight.

Geagea commands the central units of the Lebanese Forces, the largest Christian militia. He sent his men on a dusk-to-dawn sweep overnight Tuesday that brought major areas of Lebanon's Christian heartland under his control.

He said he wants an end to Syrian influence over the government, the ouster of the Syrian-oriented leadership of Gemayel's Phalange Party; and the end of Phalange political, financial and administrative control over his militia.

Several Beirut newspapers said Syrian President Hafez Assad had urged Gemayel to be "prudent and careful" in handling Geagea's revolt.

Assad's government has been trying to mediate changes in the Lebanese political system that would give Moslems an equal share of power with Christians in a bid to end almost 10 years of civil war.

Moslem leaders withheld comment on the dispute among the Christians.

The radical Hezbollah, or Party of God, threatened the United States on Wednesday because of the veto.

Sudan tries to aid famine victims

Physician at Wad Sheriffe says 'This is survival'

KASSALA, Sudan (AP) — The children lie on cots in the makeshift straw-roofed hospital, or sit on the sun-baked ground outside.

One scrawny infant, 10 days old, is fed milk every three hours from a spoon. Its mother is dead.

"We are trying very hard to find a mother, maybe a mother who has lost her baby, who could breast-feed this child," says Canadian Red Cross nurse Diane Mackie. "That's the best we can do."

"This is survival," says Dr. Jean-Marie Tromme, a Swiss Red Cross physician.

The scene is Wad Sheriffe, a camp established six years ago near this Eastern Sudan oasis to shelter famine refugees from Ethiopia.

Although an estimated 4.5 million of its own people are afflicted by the drought, Sudan, Africa's largest country, has opened its borders to care for refugees from Ethiopia to the east, Chad to the west and Uganda to the south.

Wad Sheriffe, with a population of about 70,000 — and more streaming over the border daily — is the scene of some of the worst crowding, disease and starvation.

Vice President George Bush visited the camp during a three-nation tour of African famine areas last week and appealed to Ethiopia to allow free passage of relief shipments to drought victims in the rebel-held provinces of Eritrea and Tigray, just over the Sudanese border.

The refugees at Wad Sheriffe are fed a mixture of dry skim milk with oil and sugar, designed for therapeutic feeding, to keep them alive.

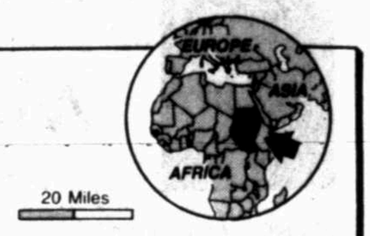

"When you see a little child a year old weighing five pounds and you see one seven years old weighing 20 pounds, we had better start as a world trying to figure out and impress upon leaders who are unwilling to have maximum relief pour into their borders what we do about it," Bush said.

The refugees at Wad Sheriffe are fed a mixture of dry skim milk with oil and sugar, designed for therapeutic feeding, to keep them alive.

Since Christmas, seven Air Force C-141 transports have been flown into Kassala with relief supplies, mostly direct U.S. government aid, but some donated by private sources.

The first shipment consisted of storage tanks for the storing of scarce water. Other shipments have brought sorghum, a basic grain of the Sudanese, and other foodstuffs.

Sudan

Official name: Democratic Republic of the Sudan
Capital: Khartoum
Population: 19.6 million [1981 estimate]
Ethnic groups: Arabs and Nubians in north; Nilotic, Sudanic, and Negro tribes in south

History: Northern Sudan was settled by Egyptians after about 3000 B.C. The inhabitants were converted to Coptic Christianity in the 6th Century. Arab conquests brought Islam in the 15th Century. Egypt controlled the Sudan during most of the 19th Century. In 1881, Mohammed Ahmed, a Moslem leader, led a successful revolt against the Egyptians. In 1898, an Anglo-Egyptian force reconquered the Sudan. In 1951, Egypt provided a separate constitution for the Sudan; and, independence was granted in 1956.

Squatters take over housing in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — When Solange Vignocchi returned from a vacation more than a year ago, she found strangers living in her apartment.

They are still there and refuse to let her in to collect personal items.

Mrs. Vignocchi, a widow, says she still pays the annual rent of 6,000 Lebanese pounds ($400) on the three-bedroom apartment for fear of losing it altogether. Meantime she stays with relatives.

The squatters are Lutfi Abdel Khalek, his wife and two children, a Druse family that fled from the central mountains of Lebanon in the fall of 1983 when their own home was destroyed by shelling.

"I can't afford to rent a house in Beirut," said Khalek. "I like this house. It is adequate. So I took it."

Such situations have become common in west Beirut, the Moslem sector of the capital, as thousands of homeless families try to "make do" in the absence of a lasting peace that would allow them to return to their own villages.

The government, still splintered by sectarian rivalry, has been powerless to help the families whose apartments have been taken over or to resettle the refugees.

Firm statistics are not available on how widespread the problem is. But government sources and religious foundations say thousands of families have been displaced in the recent rounds of Lebanon's nearly 10-year-long civil war.

By some estimates, as many as 1.2 million people, mainly Shiite Moslems, fled from southern Lebanon to the Beirut area when the Israeli army invaded in June 1982. As many as 250,000 of these still live in and around the capital, many jammed into apartment buildings they took over despite the owners' objections.

An additional 35,000 Shiites were displaced in the spring of 1984, when the southern suburb houses they inhabited were leveled in heavy bombardment by the Lebanese army and Christian forces.

Nicaraguan opposition leader ready to talk with Sandinista junta

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Nicaraguan democratic opposition leader says the recent formation of a unified anti-Sandinista front represents a last chance effort to achieve national reconciliation through dialogue in that country.

Alfonso Robelo, who was a member of the original junta set up after the 1979 revolution, said in an interview Wednesday that he and his colleagues are prepared to make a "very serious effort" to open a dialogue with the ruling Sandinista government because "we see how Nicaraguans are dying on both sides of the civil war."

Robelo, who fought the regime of deposed President Anastasio Somoza, said he believes the chances for a dialogue are better because of the declaration of principles signed by several opposition groups March 2 in San Jose, Costa Rica.

The Sandinistas are Marxist-Leninists, he said, and "the only way we can get them to talk is if we apply pressure.

"For the first time, a large, representative group of Nicaraguans is saying what we are fighting for, what our principles are. This is going to be a serious effort on our part, but it's going to be the last one," Robelo said.

"If this fails, we will have come to the same conclusion we came to with Somoza. We will say there is no (political) solution with the Sandinistas."

Robelo would not say if that means closer links would be established between the democratic opposition and Nicaraguan resistance fighters, but he said he believes "armed struggle" is one of the elements of pressure that should be brought to bear against the Sandinistas.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Restaurant blast kills mother

POINTE-A-PITRE, Guadeloupe (AP) — A bomb explosion in a restaurant killed a mother as she ate lunch with her family, authorities said. Police said four Americans from a cruise ship were among 11 people injured in the blast.

The restaurant that was bombed on Wednesday is owned by an official of the rightist National Front of Guadeloupe, which has blamed recent violence on separatist terrorists seeking independence from France.

Wednesday's bombing was the third one in five days on the Caribbean island, which is in the midst of elections.

Hours after the noon blast at L'Escale restaurant in central Point-a-Pitre, there were no claims of responsibility.

Journalist arrested in Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A Swedish journalist who was at a rebel leader's news conference when a bomb exploded last May has been arrested as part of security for Vice President George Bush's visit to Honduras, according to the military.

The head of a Honduran human rights commission said on Wednesday that he objected to the jailing of Peter Torbiornsson.

The journalist was arrested Sunday when he arrived at Tegucigalpa's international airport, said a military intelligence spokesman on condition of anonymity. A woman identified as his 20-year-old daughter, Elen Tove Torbiornsson, and a Spanish cameraman with him, Alfonso Aparicio, were arrested Tuesday, the military official said.

The military spokesman said the three were being held under "preventative" arrest as part of the Bush visit on Saturday but would not say just why they were detained. He did add that they "apparently are not tied to terrorist activities either outside or in our country."

China apologizes for 'holy' shoes

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The Chinese government has apologized for exporting shoes labeled "God" to Egypt and Saudi Arabia after they caused an uproar.

China's ambassador to Egypt relayed his government's apologies for the "mistake" to the grand sheikh of Al Azhar, Gad el-Hak Gad el-Hak on Wednesday. Al Azhar is the most well-known theological institution in the Islamic world.

The rubber soles of the shoes were engraved with designs, one of which was the word "God" in Arabic. Posters went up in Middle Eastern cities protesting the shoes. The Saudi and Egyptian governments confiscated the shoes and the Saudis protested to the Chinese government.

"China respects all religions and the Chinese Moslems are allowed to worship freely," the agency quoted the ambassador as saying. "The designer (of the shoes) does not know Arabic and did not know what his designs represented."
