Post Office Gets Growing Present

The Post Office took on a new look Friday, Jan. 20, when a blue spruce tree was planted on the west lawn.

Members of the Olton Garden Club, with the help of James Cowart, grower of the tree, and Raymon Carson and his hired man, planted the spruce in observance of "Arbor Day", a day set aside for the planting of trees.

Committee members include Mrs. A. D. Melton and Mrs. H. B. Carson, with the project committee made up of Mrs. C. E. Bley, Mrs. Jack Estes and Mrs. Athol Light. President of the Club is Mrs. Jack Snider.

The first Arbor Day proclamation was issued by J. Sterling Morton, member of the state board of agriculture, and later Governor of the state of Nebraska, on Jan. 4, 1872. More than a million trees were planted on Morton's birthday, April 10, 1872.

Texas state Legislature adopted a resolution in 1949 and designated the third Friday in January as Arbor Day.

Although the Greeks and Romans were among the first to have the idea of a tree planting festival, Arbor Day, as we know it now has become a national and international movement. Most of the state have enacted laws for the observance.

The importance of trees are reflected in Theodore Roosevelt's words, "To exist as a nation, to prosper as a state, and to live as a people, we must have trees", and the last lines of Joyce Kilmer's poem "Trees" which reads, "Poems are made by fools like you and me but only God can make a tree".

JUST ONE OF THOSE DAYS

Trouble Double For Smith

Trouble came in double proportion for Lonnie Smith recently.

Receiving word that one of his tractors was burning at the Roy McAfee farm, about two miles west and one north of town, Smith jumped in his pickup and rushed toward the scene of the fire, hoping to arrive in time to save his tractor.

Instead, about one-half mile before reaching the tractor, he lost control of his pickup. The pickup turned over and Smith suffered numerous bruises and a laceration on his chin, which required several stitches.

He was pinned in the truck for a few minutes and said he could hear the butane spewing through the motor and he couldn't get out fast enough. After breaking a window and getting out, he walked to the home of Walter Gardner, who brought him to the Olton hospital for treatment.

Both the pickup and tractor were a complete loss.

Three New Governors Just Might Fool Outside World

Outsiders have a tendency to judge American politics by the more exotic or unusual facets of the vast whole. Within the Republic, there are, of course, 50 state governors. Of these, the 47 most typical are not making the news pages of the press around the world. The three about whom people overseas are reading and hearing most are in some ways the three least typical. They are Ronald Reagan of California, Lester Maddox of Georgia, and Lurleen Wallace of Alabama.

What makes these three holders of high office news to the outside world is the film-star past of the first, the ax-handle and pistol-weilding against Negroes of the second, and the wife-and-husband relationship that apparently secured election of the third. There is, in other words, something unusual about each of them. But the outside world will almost certainly cite each as being typical of American politics.

Each, of course, has yet to prove himself - or, in Mrs. Wallace's case, herself. Each, we can be sure, will be watched from outside with unusually critical eyes. And each may well yet confound present critics. Each could bequeath to his (or her) successor an administration with a solid record of constructive and imaginative achievement. Each has the opportunity to accomplish more in office than might the new state governors whose inaugurations at this time are not making the headlines.

And to those who might think such speculation funny or cynical, we would say that the responsibility of office can bring wisdom and courage in unexpected measure to those whose qualifications for office were initially much questioned. Already Lester Maddox has made an inaugural address which it is hard to reconcile with his earlier chasing of Negroes away from his restaurant. Already Ronald Reagan is having second thoughts about his suggestion that economies should begin with measures likely to involve tuition-fees for California's public institutions of higher learning. And Mrs. Wallace's oath, on assuming office, opened with a pledge to abide by the Constitution of the United States. If that is the guideline for state government in Alabama in the years ahead, who can complain?

OBSERVATIONS OF A NEWCOMER

By MIKE WALL

Remarkable Child

Well, we can't go back to my parents home anymore.

While my wife and I went to San Antonio over the weekend for the Texas Press Association convention, we left our son David at his grandmother's.

When we got back, horror of horrors, David had a haircut--his first.

David was quite pleased, but Karen wasn't quite as happy. She wanted to be the one to hold him squirming in the barber's chair for his first trim.

Speaking of David, I think it should be mentioned that he's developed a new talent. I don't know how he does it and maybe other parents have noticed the same sort of phenomena.

He can't be more than a couple of feet tall, so his hands shouldn't be able to reach much higher. Yet, by some means or other, he can scatter papers and books from a four-foot high bookshelf.

Maybe his arms are rubber.

While we were in San Antonio, it came a slight rain.

Everyone in that area said it was the first moisture, other than a little sleet in December, that the normally wet area of Texas has had in quite some time.

We're not the only ones in the state hoping for moisture.

While we were in San Antonio, we heard an interesting interview with Ace Reid, who draws the Cowpokes cartoon on this same page.

Ace was a little miffed at Jackie Kennedy for some remarks she supposedly made calling Gov. John Connally a snob.

Ace said he'd met the governor several times and he'd always seemed very friendly. Ace said that at one party both attended, the governor introduced himself as, "An East Texas peanut farmer."

Ace also had some observations on the cowboy characters he draws.

He said he felt the cowboy would be a thing of the past in another 50 years and was a little saddened by the thought.

"The cowboy is something uniquely American," said Ace. "He arose about 80 years ago to fill a need for a type of work different than in any other country, and he'll be gone in another 50."

While in San Antonio, the TPA honored television announcer Allen Ludden of Password fame, as its man of the year.

The award is supposed to be a secret, but this year it was known about a month in advance.

Ludden's wife, Betty White, was announcing the Rose Bowl parade and when the San Antonio float came by, she casually remarked that she would be in that city in about a month because of the award Allen was getting.

TPA president Jim Barnhill said it was just as well, because he hadn't telephoned all the TPA board members to let them know who was selected and it saved him a lot on phone bills.

Car Inspection Deadline Nears

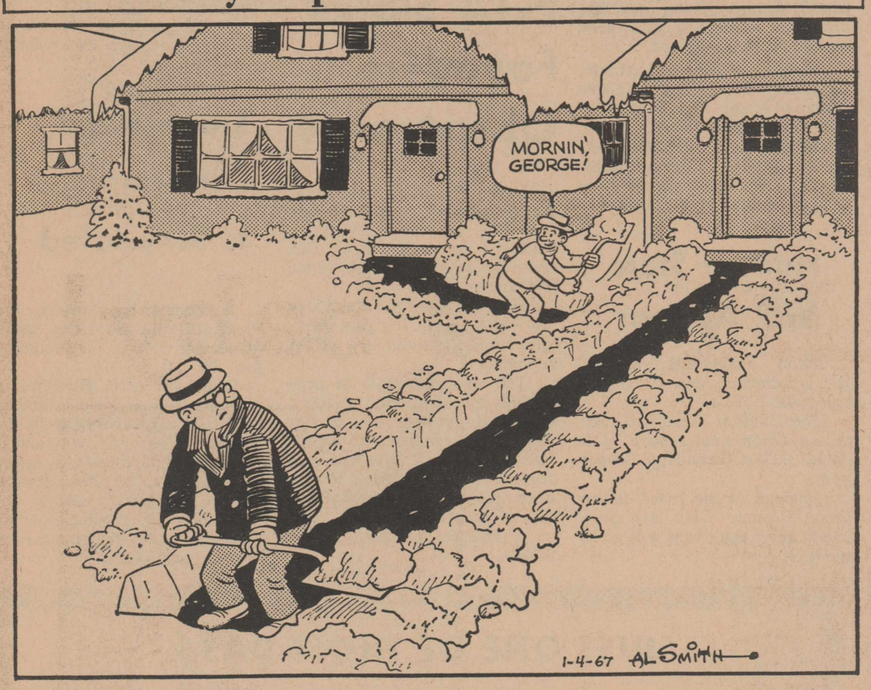

Col. Homer Garrison Jr., director of the Department of Public Safety, has warned Texas motorists that the 1967 vehicle inspection period is two-thirds over and only about one-third of the vehicles have been inspected.

"This means that during the 12 weeks remaining before the April 15 deadline for inspections, more than twice as many persons each week must have their car inspected to avoid long lines forming at the end of the period," Garrison said.

Garrison also got in a recruiting plug for the department, pointing out that accepted applicants for the Highway Patrol may enter employment immediately without waiting until the next patrol-training school begins, as has been the practice.

There are jobs available immediately for men 20 to 25 years old. Applicants may sign up for written exams at any of the regional, district or sub-district DPS offices.

BY AMY ADAMS

WHERE DO YOU BURY A DOG?

Dear Amy:

If you or your readers find my letter humorous, I'm sorry for you. I am an adult male and my problem concerns my dog who has been my friend and "confidant" for many years. No human being could mean as much to me as my "Sparky." Now he is old and probably will not live for too many more years.

Where to bury my friend has been bothering me for some time as I own no property where a grave would be suitable.

I am quite serious and hope you have a suggestion for me which I will find satisfying.

Mr. J. Rainey

Dear Mr. Rainey:

The one best place to bury a pet is in the heart of its master. But since you feel its final resting place must be more tangible, please write to: Pegeen Fitzgerald, President, Anti-Vivisection Society of New York, 220 East 57th Street, New York, New York, 10022.

* * *

Dear Amy:

There is no other way than through your column that I can thank the kind and thoughtful people who had heart enough to contribute to the thousands of packages and Christmas cards that were air-lifted to Viet Nam. My son was the recipient of many cards and a fine "care" package from a family he doesn't even know who had compassion enough to share their Christmas with him.

I am sincerely grateful . . . and may God Bless them all.

Mrs. J. R. Stone

* * *

Dear Amy:

My problem is my Mom. I am 12 years old and she hasn't ever once mentioned anything to me about menstruation. All of my girlfriends have told me that their moms have told them about it.

Why doesn't my mom?

Is it up to me to ask her or should she tell me herself? I've read some about it, but my curiosity still isn't satisfied. What can I do? I've gotten into terrible fights with her because I get so mad all of a sudden that she hasn't mentioned it to me and I sass her back. I am still hoping that sometime my Mom will tell me, but actually I've given up all nope. When I say something to her about it, she just shuts me up.

Am I abnormal?

Untold

Dear Untold:

Abnormal? No! It's time you were told what every young girl should know. Some mothers put off or need help in explaining the "facts of life" to their children.

There are booklets designed for this purpose that are inexpensive and easily obtained from the American Medical Assn. Ask mother to drop me a note and I'll be happy to supply her with the name and address of same.

* * *

Dear Amy:

I am almost 19 years of age and I have a problem which has been bothering me for some time. The problem is: I'm just plain scared of the feminine sex. I have had no dates — the last one being approximately eight months ago. A friend of mine in another town introduced me around to several girls and tried to get me to date them. My excuse was that I was too tired from the trip.

What's up?

It seems as though I should be more interested than I was at twelve or so, but I'm not.

Do you think I should see a psychiatrist, or a psychologist, or see the family doctor and get his advice? I don't usually ask for anything, but I feel that it's about time I found out what's wrong.

R. C.

Dear R.C.:

Yes, it is about time that you found out what's wrong. Your family doctor would be the best place to seek advice.

Good luck, son!

Housewives Arise

BY KAREN WALL

HINTS ON RANDOM HOUSEWIFERY

I've a letter!

I nearly danced out of the office Monday morning when I discovered a shining white envelope on my desk addressed to "Housewives Arise". In my excitement I bounced over to my husband forgetting for a moment who HE was.

Jubilently, I began to read the letter to him. At first HE forgot himself and was openly as pleased as I. Then I saw a mask of pure stoicism cover his face, and HE posed an air of complete noninterest.(I think he was actually jealous.)

But HIS supposed lack of interest could not dampen my exhuberent spirits. I have written proof that at least one person reads my column and claims to like it. She even passed along two wonderful hints for the busy Random housewife.

Now before I type any more of the trials and tribulations of being the bosses wife, I shall print the wonderful first letter ever written to Housewives Arise.

Olton, Texas
January 21, 1967

Dear Karen,

Just read your "Housewives Arise" column and as I am also among the ranks of "Random Housewives" I would like to pass on a couple well worn shortcuts of my own.

Since I was one of the "spotless, never-tiring homemakers" before I became the mother of twin boys about three and a half years ago, (in addition to a girl who is now six), I've had a look on both sides of this fence.

Believe me, my vote goes to the random way. I find that no amount of cleaning is going to last very long anyway, so why turn old before your time worrying over it. There will be lots of time for housecleaning when the kids are grown and gone.

First of all, for any home with "lived on carpeting" I have found that an old fashioned carpet sweeper is a MUST for quick cleanups. (If you see company turn in the drive you can grab it and give the living room the once over on the way to answer the door.) The cheapest ones do fine. About $5.00.

A hint in the cooking line to all those girls like myself who spoiled their husbands to homemade pies and pastries during the early days B. C., (before children.)

Make up a big batch of pastry with all the ingredients except water and store in a tightly sealed container in your refrigerator. (I use a large coffee can.)

Now all you have to do is measure a cup or two at a time, as you need it, and your pie or cobbler will be on the way to the oven before you could wash the flour and shortening off your hands in the old mix as you go method. This is a short cut handed down by my mother, who is the mother of seven.

Good luck with your column. I'm looking forward to it each week, in the hope of finding an invaluable source of timesaving and work-saving ideas.

Sincerely,
Lucy Dickson

Besides giving us all two good points on the art of Random Housewifery, Mrs. Dickson is quite a writer. If I'm not careful I may find myself out of ajob and Mrs. Dickson the new author of the column.

Nevertheless I do want to thank you most sincerely Mrs. Dickson for your lovely letter and work saving tips. Keep up the good work, I'll be looking forward to hearing from you again.

Here's a little tip I'd like to let you in on. I have found this one to be quite sensible and it even works.

If you find on these cold nights that your feet get cold because the blanket is too short, and always coming untucked there is a solution.

Sew a strip of flannel the desired width to the bottom of the blanket. (this also works with electric blankets. The strip can be sewn so that it won't interfere with the plug.) The added piece of material won't show because it will be tucked under the mattress.

I leave you on the foot-warming note and am looking forward to hearing from some of you soon.

Jan Rowe Is Honored

Miss Jan Rowe, bride-elect of Rusty Sherman, was honored with a shower in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Lynn Fite, Friday, Jan. 20.

Refreshments of punch, coffee and cake were served.

Hostesses gifts included an electric coffee pot, electric skillet, ironing board and cover, bed pillows, sheets, towels, assortment of kitchen gadgets and a bride's book.

Hostesses were Mmes. Charles Polk, Joe Turner, Lynn Fite, Percy Parsons, David Maxey, H. B. Maxey Jr., Owen Norfleet, Fred Thompson, Owen Jones, Leslie Ross, Lauis Hair, Jack Straw, Roye Aikman, Major James, Doug Jones, Frank Cornelius, Travis Bundick, Elvin Berry, Bob Allford, Ray Schultz, W. If Insurance Doesn't Cover

Suppose a windstorm uproots your shade trees.

Or a flood ruins your basement.

Or a fire burns your house down.

If insurance doesn't cover the loss, you may still get a helping hand from the federal government. The government will not reimburse you in cash, the way insurance does. But it may soften your fiscal pain by letting you deduct the loss—over a $100 minimum—on your next income tax return.

What kind of losses may you deduct? Any that are caused by "fire, storm, shipwreck, or other casualty." Fire, storm, and shipwreck are plain enough. But what does "other casualty" include? There are several tests.

For one thing, to qualify as a tax deduction, the loss must be relatively sudden. Thus, damage to a valuable elm tree, inflicted gradually by disease, was held not a casualty—hence not a deductible loss.

Also, the loss must be due to some external force. When a duck hunter's ring slipped off his finger and vanished in muddy waters, the loss was held not deductible —because it could not be blamed on any external force.

Furthermore, there must be a cause-and-effect relationship between the original mishap and the ultimate damage. For example:

A horse died after eating the silk lining of a hat, and his owner claimed a deduction for the loss. But the claim was not allowed, because there was good reason to think that the horse died not from his extraordinary diet but from ordinary influenza.

Of course, this tax deduction applies clearly in the case of a natural disaster. But man-made devastation is by no means ruled out.

For instance, one home owner was permitted to deduct the damage to his house from sonic booms, caused by a nearby aviation show. This was held to be closely akin to the damage done by a windstorm.

In another case, a new house was invaded by vandals, who did damage to the stove, washing machine, dryer, and freezer. The owner, claiming the loss as a tax deduction, pointed out that it was 1) sudden; 2) caused by an external force; and 3) destructive.

That made sense to the court, and the deduction was upheld.

Employers Of FarmWorkers Must File SS Tax Form

Employers of farm workers are required to file Form 943, Employer's Annual Tax Return for Agricultural Employees -- 1966, and pay over their share of Social Security taxes plus amounts withheld from employees wages, on or before Jan. 31, 1967, Ellis Campbell Jr., District Director of Internal Revenue for northern Texas announced this week.

These taxes applied to cash wages of $150 or more paid to each employee in 1966 or on cash wages in any amount even though under $150 in 1966, if the employee performed agricultural labor on 20 or more days during the year, Mr. Campbell said.

The rate of tax is 4.2 per cent for the employer and 4.2 per cent for the employee or a total of 8.4 per cent on the taxable cash wages paid.

A "Crew Leader" is treated as an employer under the law for the purpose of these taxes the director said.

Publication No. 225, "Farmer's Tax Guide," which gives more details on this subject may be obtained without cost by dropping a post card to District Director, Internal Revenue Service, 1600 Patterson Street, Dallas, Texas 75201.

A Crippler and Killer

Measles Are Not Funny

It's time to stop thinking of measles as a slightly humorous childhood disease, says the American Medical Association.

Many people don't realize two important things about measles:

First, it's a crippler and killer. Measles strikes millions of children, but the ones left with deafness or mental defects or encephalitis-- or even the ones who die--seem to be forgotten by the public. Measles isn't at all a funny disease; it's one whose tragedy isn't fully realized.

Second, measles could be eliminated as a major health threat. Some medical officials believe it could be eradicated in this country within a year. There's no doubt that it should be. Several types of anti-measles vaccine are available. They are easily administered by your physician and have been proven safe and effective.

Measles-susceptible children can be immunized by their family's physician. The best time is when they are approximately one year old. Older susceptible children--those who have neither had measles nor been given measles vaccine--should be immunized as soon as possible, particularly if they are of school age.

In some communities, and in the states of Rhode Island and Delaware, measles has been practically eliminated by concerted, areawide immunization campaigns.

Such campaigns have been endorsed by the AMA's Council on Environmental and Public Health, but their organization requires the counsel of the local medical society and close cooperation by the community's civic, education, and health organizations. Local physicians are in a position to determine the best way to conduct an immunization campaign in this community.

The most important step is to ensure that your own children are protected from measles. If they have not been immunized, have it done now.

Farmers Seek Information On Usage Of Fertilizers

More and more farmers are asking about fertilizer usage in 1967 says County agent, Buddy C. Logsdon.

In arriving at an answer to this question, the fertility level of the soil and the expected yield must be considered.

An expression of the fertility level is not a simple single index since any combination of nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium levels can exist. Soil tests should be made to determine the level of major plant nutrients, and fertilization practices for the soil and crop should be adjusted according to the soil levels the agent advises.

The chances of making a high and profitable yield are poor without a fertilization program adapted to the soil level and production requirement. In arriving at an expected yield, many production management and climatic factors should be evaluated. Past yields and the influence of management practices should receive due consideration in arriving at a realistic production goal, Logsdon points out.

Moisture may be the major limitation in many areas. Available moisture already in the soil, that to be supplied by irrigation, and the estimated rainfall will need careful attention.

However, where moisture and fertility are limiting, fertilization is still profitable. Adequate fertilization aids in the development of a better root system which helps the plant make more efficient use of the available moisture Logsdon says.

Adequate fertilization should not be overlooked as a means of reducing per unit production costs and increasing profit. With a realistic yield goal and sufficient information on management, soil tests are a reliable guide for fertilization practices, Logsdon says.

Two victories were the results of two hard played games last Friday night against the Lockney Longhorns.

Our Fillies continued their hard playing efforts and skipped past Lockney by 24 points. Lynn McGill was the high pointer and Pam Foster was ahead in the rebound department.

The Mustangs also dropped Lockney with a six point lead at the end of the game. Their combined hard work kept the Mustangs ahead almost all of the time, but the last few minutes turned out to be quite a tension tester, though.

Top rebounder was MacArthur Thomas and Mac also netted the most points.

Water Freeze Up Can Be Controlled

Water freeze-up problems around the farm and home can often be prevented by using an inexpensive electric heating cable, says County Agent, Buddy C. Logsdon.

Some places are especially vulnerable to winter freeze-up, such as a short section of exposed pipe in an unheated part of the barn or an outside faucet that must operate, he says. All that is needed to wrap the heating cable around the pipe in spiral fashion and plug it into a convenient electrical outlet. The cable can be bought in a wide range of lengths to suit the job.

It is best to wrap some kind of insulating material around the cable to conserve more economy and freedom from supervision, a thermostat with a bulb sensing element can be used. This will automatically control the on-off operation of the cable.

Miss Emma Porio Speaks To CTA

The Classroom Teacher Association met Tuesday, Jan. 10 in the Home Economics Cottage at 4 p. m., with Mrs. Linnie Campbell, president, opening the meeting.

Several committees made reports. Mr. Bob Allford, chairman of the scholarship committee, reported that they had several projects in mind to raise funds for the scholarship that the association gives each year to Future Teacher student.

Mrs. Jewell Campbell, chairman of the program committee, introduced Emma Porio, exchange student, from Panlipan Catmen Cebu, Philippines, who gave a talk on her country.

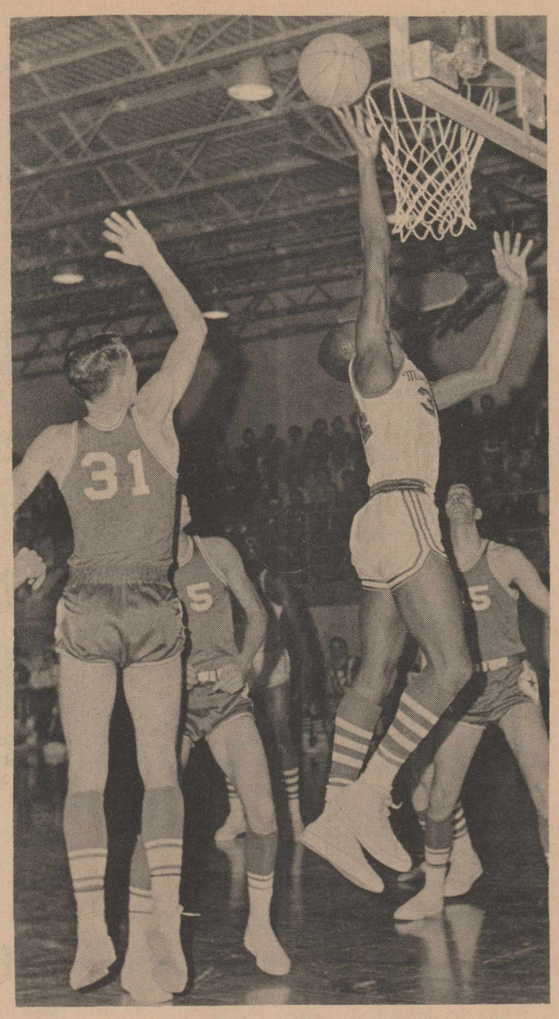

Miss Porio was assisted in showing slides of her country, by Mrs. Merrill Brigance, her foster mother, while in the USA.

The inspirational thought was given by Bob Allford, who chose "Prayer" as his subject.

Refreshments were served by the fifth and sixth grades.

Early Dental Habits Affect Permanent Teeth

It is well and good to encourage your children to emulate George Washington, but not where dental health is concerned. Our first president had a long history of troubles with his teeth, and later with his dentures.

Your children's teeth should last their entire lifetime. Of course, this is true provided today's youngsters have been started on the way to good dental health at a young age.

National Children's Dental Health Week, which begins Feb. 5, is an annual reminder to parents that dental health habits must be learned in childhood. In fact, youngsters should have their first dental examination at the age of two and one-half to three years -- when all their primary teeth have erupted.

Those first teeth are important to future dental health. One basic function of primary teeth is to preserve proper space for permanent teeth, and if they are lost too soon -- through decay, for example-- the permanent development of teeth is often crooked. Poorly aligned teeth can affect appearance, eating haibts and speech. Frequently, misshapen dentition can only be corrected by orthodontic treatment, which may be lengthy and costly. And, if a child's appearance is seriously affected by unsightly teeth, emotional problems may result.

On the initial dental visit, the dentist will check for any signs of beginning decay and other dental problems. He will also give your child--and you--instructions for proper home care. Usually the first appointment is a "get acquainted" period and is designed to make the child receptive to treatment at regular intervals.

Parents sometimes make the mistake of threatening or bribing a child when preparing him for the first visit. As a result, the child becomes apprehensive and might develop fear of dental treatment. Modern dental treatment is nearly painless, and, if the child has regular dental care, it is unlikely that he will develop a seriously painful dental problem.

On the other hand, parents should not avoid discussing the child's first dental examination. In simple terms, let him know what to expect in the dental office, and you may be pleasantly surprised to find that he will enjoy his new experience.

One more suggestion: Make that first dental appointment for early in the day. Your child will be well-rested then and more cooperative.

To start your child on a lifetime of good dental health at home, make certain he always brushes his teeth properly after meals and after snacks.

If he's in the habit of eating a lot of sweets, cut down on them; sweets are a major cause of decay. And, he should be drinking fluoridated water to help prevent decay. If your community's water is not fluoridated, the dentist can suggest alternate methods for your child to receive fluoride's benefits.

Dental decay is the most prevalent disease of childhood. About 50 per cent of all two-year-olds, have one or more decayed teeth and by the time they begin school, they have three or more decayed teeth.

A recent report from the federal Project Headstart program revealed that dental care was the preschool child's most needed health service. If you can't afford dental care for your child, contact your local dental society. They can give you information on programs in your area that assist parents in obtaining this important health service for their children.

Teach your child how to care for his dental health at home and, if he's already three or older, make his first dental appointment now. His dental health is too important to be neglected.

SCOUT NEWS

Boy Scouts met Monday night at the Boy Scout house for a regular meeting, in which they nominated officers for the coming year.

Officers nominated were Thomas Jenkins, Gary Gregory as senior patrol leader; assistant senior patrol leader, Guy Cannon and Nicky Green; Librarian, Kurt Gregory and Nicky Green; scribe, Monte Wynne, Guy Cannon,; bugler, Gary Gregory and Robert Cooper; quartermaster, Monte Wynne and Robert Cooper.

Leaders present were Tom Hankins, Jimmie Jenkins, and Russell Tubbs.

Gary Gregory received an award of second class Scout.

Those present included Tommy Hankins, Monte Wynne, Kurt Gregory, Gary Gregory, Nicky Green, Steve Holt, Robert Cooper, Willie Sanders, Guy Cannon, Otto Vera and Thomas Jenkins.

"Taps" was the closing song.

Skating Party Is Given

A skating party honoring Diana Smith and Cindy Moore was given Tuesday, Jan. 17 by their mothers, Mrs. Lonnie Smith and Mrs. Benny Moore.

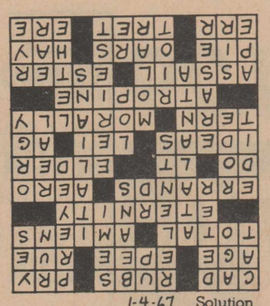

Cupcakes and punch were served to approximately 25 guests.

PROTECT SMALL TREES

Protect small trees and shrubs from rodent damage this winter. Rabbits and other rodents will frequently damage young trees and shrubs when their normal food supplies are cut off by a blanket of snow or sheet of ice.

The tender bark on trees and roses provide rodents with a convenient source of food.

It is often a good practice to place a wire collar around prized plants or even construct a rodent proof fence around favorite shrub and flower beds. Such a fence can be temporary, and once the rodent danger is passed, can be easily removed.

Proper Feeding of Cattle Important In Colder Weather

With the arrival of colder weather, proper feeding of cows and calves takes on important significance, points out County Agent, Buddy C. Logsdon.

The production efficiency and comfort of a mature cow is not reduced by cold weather, provided she is full of forage, has a dry coat and is exposed to dry still air.

The temperature at a given level of feed intake where no additional feed is necessary to maintain body temperature is called the crical temperature. It is slightly above the temperature at which cattle begin to shiver.

A cow on a fasting diet or without any feed will reach the critical temperature at about 55 degrees Fahrenheit. A maintenance ration will lower the critical temperature to about 23 degrees F.

Cattle can keep warm and survive cold weather if they consume sufficient forage. Low-quality roughages high in fiber serve as effective feeds during storms because of the high heat production that results from digesting the fiber in the roughage.

Further information concerning the proper feeding of cattle are available at the county agent's office.

SELECTING PLANTS

Impulse buying is not a good practice to follow when selecting ornamental plants. Too often a small attractive plant in the nursery becomes a large forest tree in the center of the shrub border. It is always a good idea to find out what the mature size and shape of a given plant will be.

DYNAMITE, a one-month-old colt, belonging to Monette and Doniece Ross, daughters of Mrs. Wanda Ross, gets the feel of a halter for the first time. The girls had quite a time getting him to pose for a picture.

Even the ash tray rides smoother in Chevrolets

When you're down at your dealer's trying out a new Chevrolet, be sure you pull out the ash tray. Notice how nice and easy it glides, never hanging up or even scraping. The reason is, it rides on ball bearings. Four shiny little ball bearings. (Take the tray all the way out and you'll see them.) You say you don't even smoke? Then look at it this way. That ash tray is a symbol of the way we make cars: Paying extra attention to the little things as well as the big ones, as a way of making extra sure your '67 Chevrolet gives you
