Rosy view won't color message

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, facing strengthened opposition in Congress and the longest recession since World War II, unveils priorities for the second half of his term tonight, and a White House official says there will be "no rosy economic forecasts."

Delivering his State of the Union address to a joint session of the House and Senate and a nationwide television and radio audience, Reagan will make a "strong bipartisan appeal to attack the economic problems," said the official, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified by name.

Reagan invited Republican congressional leaders to the White House this morning for a briefing on the speech and budget.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes predicted that once Reagan's congressional allies have had a look at his proposals, they are less likely to object to some of them.

The president's reported plan to ask for a contingency tax increase by 1986 if his program fails to bring down the federal budget deficit has met with skepticism on the part of Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn.

As late as Monday afternoon, that plan was still under discussion at the White House, a senior White House official said.

The president is scheduled to begin the State of the Union speech, marking the start of the 98th Congress, at 9 p.m. EST.

The new Congress presents the president with a new political situation.

The Republican congressional leadership is showing less willingness than it did two years ago to go along with Reagan's plans, and the Democrats have boosted their majority by 26 seats in the House.

The new scenario, and continued economic problems, has brought pressure on Reagan to propose jobs programs, reduce the planned increase in defense spending, and scale back his planned reductions in spending for domestic programs.

In addition, his political standing appears weaker among the voters.

At his deck in the Oval Office of the White House, President Reagan works on his State of the Union speech, to be delivered tonight to a joint session of Congress. The annual message, expected to center on the nation's economic conditions, also will be broadcast by radio and television.

Democrats tackle new tax issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Within hours after Congress had passed history's largest tax cut in 1981, Democrats set their sights on repealing the most sweeping provision in the package — automatic protection against "bracket creep."

Sen. Russell B. Long, who had been chairman of the tax-writing Finance Committee for 15 years before Republicans took control of the Senate in 1981, said the provision, known as indexing, would disrupt government.

"Repeal of indexing should be the No. 1 priority when Democrats regain control," said Long.

Now, 18 months later, it appears the Louisiana Democrat might not have to wait that long.

Several other influential lawmakers, including Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, share Long's concerns. Despite support for indexing from President Reagan and Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, chairman of the Finance Committee, the provision may fall victim to the soaring federal deficit.

Repeal of indexing would cut the deficit by about $50 billion in 1985 through 1987.

Indexing aims to keep taxpayers from being nudged into higher tax brackets when they get a cost-of-living pay raise. On the average, a 10-percent pay raise will result in a 16-percent increase in income taxes. That is bracket creep.

For example, a four-member family with $20,000 income and average deductions would have a taxable income of $11,400 and tax liability of $1,158. If that family wins a 7 percent, $1,400 pay raise to offset inflation, taxable income will rise to $12,478 and tax liability to $1,343.

That is an increase in taxes of $185 or 16 percent.

Indexing is scheduled to take effect in 1985. Here's how it would work:

Assuming the Consumer Price Index rises 7 percent during the 12 months that end Sept. 30, 1984, the $1,000-per-person exemption would increase to $1,070 in 1985. At the same time, tax brackets would be widened, increasing by 7 percent the amount of income a person could earn before facing a higher tax rate.

Bond election proposed on construction of jail

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners, who have been wont to just thinking wishfully of building a courthouse annex without cost, on Monday opted to let the voters decide if they want to underwrite a $10.76 million general revenue bond program to build a new jail and courthouse adjoining the 1930-built courthouse and renovate the existing building.

"I feel that we've vacillated long enough," said County Judge Bill Ahders.

Commissioners decided to set the election for April 23, a Saturday.

Since the late 1970s, the Commissioners' Court has been talking about building a new annex to relieve the overcrowded courthouse. One plan was to go into a joint venture with a developer who would build a hotel on prime downtown county land and who, in turn, would build an annex for the county for gratis. That idea fizzled. And, for the past year in particular, commissioners have discussed financing a new jail and, effectively, building a second courthouse on the courthouse square.

Monday's proposal is about $2 million more expensive than a similar project the court had discussed with architect Walter Pate late last year.

"As it stands now," said Commissioner Win Brown, "we should go, first, with the bond issue. That would give us the jail and offices."

Should the electorate reject the general obligation bond route, which could entail an increase of the tax rate, Brown said he was "not going to be embarrassed" to seek certificates of obligation. The county, without voter approval, could sell certificates of obligation but probably at a higher interest rate than revenue bonds. But the commissioners want to get the voters' input on the jail-courthouse addition proposal.

"We're stuck with the (need for a new) jail" regardless of the outcome of the election, noted Commissioner Wally Craig.

Brown made the motion for the bond election; Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis seconded it.

The bond issue will be the county's second one in slightly more than 12 years.

On Dec. 8, 1970, Midland voters approved by a count of 4,409 to 3,272 a $1.95 million bond issue to expand and renovate the courthouse, the county's third, by adding a fifth floor for a jail, supported by columns.

The existing courthouse was built in 1930 under a $150,000 bond issue, which the electorate approved 418 to 258 votes. It consisted of four stories with a basement. Final cost was $319,000 for building construction and furnishings.

The county's first courthouse, a $2,934.65 wooden building which was constructed in 1886, was replaced in 1905 by a two-story sandstone building, which was built under a $30,000 bond issue.

The county's 1970 bond issue did meet with some flak, as a group called the "Overburdened Taxpayers Committee" questioned the means — the upward expansion — of the courthouse but had no quarrel with the need for a new jail and courthouse renovation. Spokesmen for the committee contended that a more practical and less expensive means would have been to build a new jail from the ground up rather than adding another story onto the courthouse.

The architect's 1983 scheme effectively calls for doubling courthouse space by building a second courthouse just north of and adjoining the existing courthouse. The seven-tier concept calls for a 225-prisoner jail, which almost triples the present jail's legal capacity, and expanded law enforcement offices and more courtroom space for the district and county courts and related offices. A prisoner exercise area would be designed atop the proposed project.

Should the bond issue pass, the county could raise an additional $200,000 a year to pay off the indebtedness by increasing the tax rate by a penny. The current rate is 18.03 cents per $100 valuation based on 100 percent of fair market values.

For more than an hour Monday afternoon, the court was in executive session with the architect and its legal counsel, County Attorney J. Scott Henderson and Assistant County Attorney Mark Dettman.

Television cameramen filmed footage through the vertical glass slits of the Commissioners' Courtroom's swinging doors. And once the court returned to open session, a reporter asked the commissioners if they really were talking just about litigation, possible land acquisition and other closed-door-type matters and weren't talking about the courthouse project. Pate's schematic model of the proposed courthouse was in the Commissioners' Courtroom.

"Believe me," Craig told the reporter, "the things we talked about were legal."

"We talked about legal things," Brown insisted even as he took the accusation in a light-hearted vein. "They weren't illegal yet."

Policeman feels 'betrayed' by Barefoot's stay

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A last-minute stay spared Thomas Andy Barefoot from execution today, but a former partner of the policeman Barefoot was convicted of killing says he felt "betrayed" by the Supreme Court's action.

Barefoot, a former oilfield rougneck, had been scheduled to die by lethal execution before dawn, but the justices stayed his execution Monday, saying they wanted to use his case to decide how federal courts should handle emergency death penalty appeals.

Arguments are scheduled in the case for April 26, but it could be July before a decision is made public.

The high court's order came less than 12 hours before Barefoot was to become the seventh U.S. prison inmate executed in the last 16 years — and the second in two months to die in Texas of lethal injection.

The most recent execution was Dec. 7, when Charlie Brooks Jr. of Fort Worth, Texas, became the first U.S. inmate to be put to death by injection.

Barefoot already had been asked what he wanted for his last meal and was in a cell a few feet from the death chamber Monday when a prison chaplain told him a stay had been granted.

"He told me he was extremely happy that the Lord had answered his prayers," prison spokesman Rick Hartley said.

"Other than that, he said he was basically speechless," Hartley said. "He was not crying but he was on the verge."

Barefoot's death sentence was for the Aug. 7, 1978, shooting death of 31-year-old police officer Carl Levin in Harker Heights, a small central Texas city near Killeen.

Prosecutors said Barefoot was being questioned about a nightclub fire and shot Levin once in the head because he feared the officer would learn he was wanted in New Mexico on charges of raping a 3-year-old girl.

Allen McKenzie, an ex-partner of Levin's, said he felt the Supreme Court's action was "a slap in the face."

"I heard about the stay on TV and I actually felt sick at my stomach," he said. "Maybe the court had a reason for doing this but it doesn't seem right."

McKenzie, 36, said the stay strains the confidence people have in their judicial system.

"We bust our buns every day. We put our lives on the line to protect people," he said. "We capture the guy and put him in jail ... and then the judiciary comes along and lets him wiggle out."

In interviews, Barefoot had continued to claim his innocence and his family said he remained optimistic because of his religious faith.

"He said no one can be killed when you're innocent. God's going to come through," said a half-brother, 22-year-old Darin Biano of New Iberia, La., who met with Barefoot shortly before the stay was anounced.

The inmate's mother and stepfather, Ray and Rachel Biano, also met with him Monday morning in a small cell near the death chamber.

"We're all pleased with this news," said Biano, who sees the stay as an indication the conviction eventually will be overturned. "We're on the right track now."

Executions work against death penalty

AUSTIN (AP) — If Texas keeps executing criminals, sooner or later its citizens will rise up against the death penalty, says the Texas representative of Amnesty International.

"Slowly but surely the horror will come through," Michael Skadden told a Capitol news conference Monday.

The group had called the news conference to protest the scheduled execution of Thomas Barefoot. Two hours after the news conference, Barefoot won a stay of execution from the U.S. Supreme Court. He was to have been put to death just after midnight today.

"I think in the long run, if the executions keep coming at the rate they seem to be coming this year and the more repulsive it is from this happening every two weeks, it's going to, in the end, work in our favor," Skadden said. "People, in the end, won't stand for it."

The Supreme Court stayed the execution to use Barefoot's case to determine how emergency requests for stays should be handled by federal courts.

Barefoot would have been the second Texas inmate executed under the state's "new" death penalty law, enacted in 1972, and the second man put to death by lethal injection. Texas' previous capital punishment law was thrown out as unconstitutionally vague.

Charlie Brooks Jr. was executed with a fatal dose of intravenous drugs on Dec. 7, becoming the first person put to death in Texas since 1964. Texas previously executed condemned men by electrocuting them.

"The death penalty really wasn't too much of an issue in this state before the Brooks execution," Skadden said.

Skadden said state officials, including Gov. Mark White, could expect letters from Amnesty International members around the world, especially Germany. He said members in one country always "watchdog" a different country, and that Germany had watch over the Texas death penalty.

He said the group has turned its focus toward a "long-range plan of education, of bringing people the facts of what an execution is until, finally, the law is changed."

Skadden said the group recognizes public opinion is against it on the issue of the death penalty.

"You're just as aware as I am that an overwhelming majority of people are in favor of capital punishment," Skadden said. "It's just a question of time and education and turning public opinion around to another way of looking at things."

Currie Burris of Atlanta, southern regional director of the group, said people who are against the death penalty are afraid to come forward for fear of being labeled "soft on crime."

"We believe there is a large section of the populace out there that really doesn't want to see the state killing people," said Burris. "What we're after is to create the climate where it's simply possible for decent human beings to say we don't want this to happen."

Skadden said he did not believe use of lethal injection rather than more violent methods of execution would water down the public impact of state-sanctioned killings.

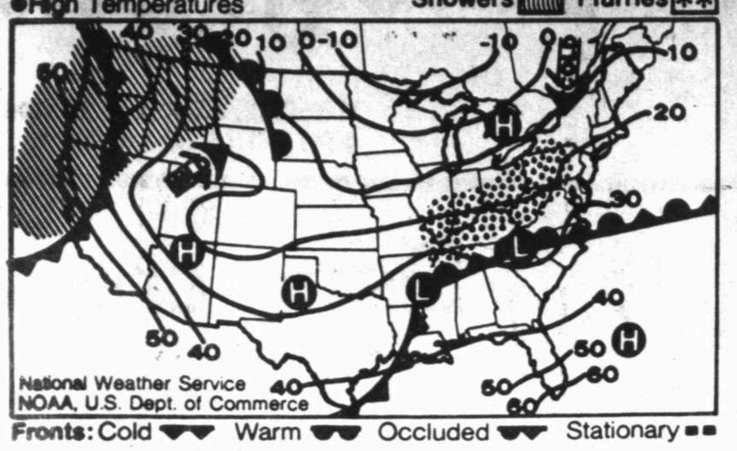
WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 7 a.m. EST Wednesday, January 26
●High Temperatures

Rain Snow
Showers Flurries



AP Laserphoto Map

Rainfall is forecast for the Northwest and snow is expected from the Midwest to Pennsylvania, according to the National Weather Service. Mild weather is precdicted for the Northwest with cold temperatures likely to continue in the Northeast.

Spring-like wind, warmth forecast

With today's blustering winds and warmer temperatures, Midlanders may have been reminded of the typical West Texas March. But those winds should die down, making the warm, springtime temperatures more pleasant, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Skies should clear tonight and remain fair through Wednesday. Temperatures are expected to drop into the upper 20s tonight, climbing near 60 Wednesday.

Tonight's winds should breeze from the north at 10-15 mph, decreasing to 5-10 mph late tonight through Wednesday.

Monday's high of 54 was 28 degrees cooler than the record high of 82, set for that date in 1950. The overnight low of 26 was twice as warm as 1940's record low of 13.

Coast cleans up, prepares for more rain

By DEAN FOSDICK
Associated Press Writer

California residents were digging out and drying off today after rains from a Pacific cold front drenched mudslide-prone areas, sending rocks across roads and at least one home down a hillside.

The Pacific storm, the second of three expected to hit California before Wednesday, moved into the Rockies today where forecasters said it would drop as much as a foot of snow in the higher elevations before blowing itself out on the Great Plains.

Hugh Crowther, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Kansas City, said California should experience mostly fair skies and warmer weather today before a third round of soggy weather crosses the coast.

"Yesterday's storm dropped 2½ inches of rain in the San Francisco area before moving into the mountains and turning to snow," he said. "There's another approaching California from the west but we don't expect to see it arrive at least until Wednesday."

After a day's reprieve from a storm that dropped 1.53 inches of rain Saturday on downtown Los Angeles, another 1.2 inches fell Monday. That brought the season's rainfall totals to 9.64 inches. Normal at this time of the year is 6.96 inches, forecasters said.

Mud began sliding down California hillsides Monday morning.

Highway crews worked to keep the Pacific Coast Highway open between Malibu and Santa Monica, just up the coast from Los Angeles, but the slides temporarily closed the Malibu Canyon-Los Virgenes Road which connects the Ventura Freeway. Authorities said all major roads were open again today.

"When we get a rain following a saturation ... the mountains start tumbling down," said Sgt. Charles Putnam of the Los Angeles County sheriff's department.

More than 80 people evacuated their homes in northern California, including 50 from an apartment complex near San Jose. One vacant house tumbled down a hillside at Oakland and 5,000 commuters were without a train ride Monday because of washouts on the Southern Pacific Railroad between San Jose and San Francisco.

The storm prompted coroner's investigators to say they would wait until today before trying to retrieve the bodies of two men who died Sunday when their single-engine Cessna crashed into a mountainside after the pilot reported navigational problems because of stormy weather.

The wreckage was spotted Monday afternoon by an Air Force C-130 transport flying low through fog-shrouded passes in the Sawtooth Mountains about 80 miles north of Los Angeles, authorities said.

Along the southern California coast, waves crested at 6 to 10 feet Monday, with swells to 12 feet at Hermosa Beach, 15 miles southwest of Los Angeles. Surfers apparently had trouble resisting the breakers, said senior lifeguard Brian Turnbull.

"A few of them have been hit by waves and knocked over as they try to jump off the rocks," Turnbull said. "A lot of people have dismissed our warnings and tried to get out (into the swells), but we haven't seen anyone make it yet."

Elsewhere, motorists in New England and upper New York fought icy roads Monday, the result of a wet weekend storm that finally moved into the Atlantic.

Al Arey, a spokesman for the Vermont highway department, said Monday the state's maintenance trucks were sliding off the roads even with chains on the tires.

"It's been a real merry-go-round," Arey said. "We get a route done and we have to start all over again."

Will OPEC stalemate lead to price slide?

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

The stalemate among OPEC nations over how to eliminate a world oil glut may lead to lower gasoline prices by spring, but some industry analysts believe the cartel will resolve its differences before a price war erupts.

OPEC's problems threaten the unity of the price-fixing cartel that quadrupled the cost of gasoline in a few years and left millions of Americans waiting on line in cars for hours.

"But I wouldn't go out and buy a gas guzzler based on that," William Randol, an oil industry analyst at First Boston Corp., a New York investment firm, said Monday. "We don't see prices collapsing."

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries talks, which took place in Geneva, Switzerland, ended Monday when Nigeria and other African nations refused to raise their petroleum prices to make Saudi Arabia's oil more attractive. No date was set for new talks.

The stalemate triggered alarm on the New York Stock Exchange, where the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks tumbled 22.81 points Monday to close at 1,030.17, its biggest dip since Oct. 25.

Analysts attributed the slide to worries about the effect of price declines on heavily indebted oil exporters such as Mexico and on the international banking system.

The discord among oil producers also disrupted trading in volatile commodity exchanges, where prices plunged Monday on contracts for future delivery of heating oil and gasoline.

After the talks broke up, the price of heating oil fell 4.82 cents to 78.54 cents a gallon in contracts for February delivery on the New York Mercantile Exchange, while gasoline for February delivery dropped 3.24 cents to 80.51 cents a gallon.

Chances are now better than 50-50 that Saudi Arabia will reduce its $34 benchmark price for a 42-gallon barrel of crude oil, Randol predicted. Price cuts by oil producers could come within a week, with each $2 drop resulting in about a 5-cent-a-gallon drop in the retail price of petroleum products, he said.

He said he did not expect oil prices to go below the "high $20s," or slightly below the current international average of $32 a barrel.

The oil glut has been pushing down prices for most of the last two years, eroding OPEC's influence as a price fixer. The oversupply of oil has been attributed to conservation in response to earlier sharp price increases and to slowed demand stemming from worldwide recession.

OPEC, which controls about 35 percent of world oil production, summoned ministers to the two-day emergency meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, but adjourned Monday without agreement on a plan for stabilizing prices.

"It was a complete failure," said Ahmed Zaki Yamani, oil minister of Saudi Arabia.

Yamani predicted Great Britain, which is not an OPEC member, would cut its oil price by two or three dollars a barrel "in a few days." Britain's current price is $33.50 a barrel.

That could start a chain reaction of price cutting, Yamani said, which would mean bankruptcy of some oil companies and financial peril for some countries that rely on oil sales for national income.

The state-owned British National Oil Co. said in London it was "digesting the results of the inconclusive OPEC meeting" and had reached no decision on pricing North Sea oil.

The value of the British pound plunged Monday to $1.54, its lowest level ever against the U.S. dollar. Oil exports have supported the British economy through a recession, and the drop steps up pressure on Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to call an early election.

OPEC could avert a price war and its consequences if its 13 oil ministers can agree soon to a plan for holding down production, Yamani said.

Stephen Smith, director of energy services at Data Resources Inc., a private consulting firm at Lexington, Mass., said he believed that after several more weeks of "posturing," OPEC members would do just that.

"I don't expect an agreement until the eleventh hour. Perhaps it's only the tenth hour," Smith said.

West Texas utilities start fund for poor, elderly

From Staff and Wire Reports

ODESSA — Two West Texas utilities have heeded the suggestion of Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace and started a fund to help the poor and elderly pay their natural gas and electricity bills.

The Salvation Army on Monday began administering the fund to which customers and employees of Energas Co. and Texas Electric Service Co. will be asked to donate.

Wallace has called on Texas utilities to start the funds.

Energas and TESCO employees in Midland are also participating in the fund.

Energas President Charles Vaughn said his company has reached agreements with seven non-profit organizations in the area to direct its "Heat Help" program.

Energas will be contributing an initial "working fund" based on the number of meters in each community, Vaughn said.

Texas Electric Service Co. has a similar program.

About $500 has been donated to the West Texas fund so far, Major William Swyers of the Odessa Salvation Army said Monday.

Swyers said the number of people needing help with heating bills has increased this year because of the recent economic decline and bad weather.

"All of a sudden it hit, and a lot of folks had problems with utilities. We have tried to respond to that and it hasn't subsided," he said.

The Salvation Army will check the background of everyone who applies for the funding in order "to substantiate that there is a need," Swyers said.

Families with children will be given priority.

Children "have no way of accommodating their needs," he said. "They must depend on their parents."

Pope signs revised set of church laws

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II today signed a revised set of church laws that recognize new rights for women, complicates the marriage annulment process and relaxes the religious obligations of the world's Roman Catholics.

During the 10-minute ceremony in the Consistory Hall of the Apostolic Palace, John Paul said the new code of 1,752 canons will go into effect on Nov. 27, the first day of Advent.

John Paul, dressed in a white robe and skullcap, signed three copies of documents announcing the Laws of Sacred Discipline.

Sitting in a high-backed chair at a thick wooden desk, John Paul then signed three thick paperbound volumes of the revised code.

After the signing, the pontiff congratulated Monsignor Edward M. Egan of Chicago and five other members of his private papal commission who helped him review each canon.

Today is the 24th anniversary of the announcement by Pope John XXIII ordering the revision, which was made by a papal commission of 74 cardinals, bishops and experts working since the Second Vatical Council in 1962-65. John Paul personally has reviewed every canon.

The Rev. Raymond L. Burke, a U.S. canon law expert, said the revised code "draws together practical reflections of the life of the church." He said the code is not an entirely new set of regulations but rather a compilation of innovations and changes already put into practice in recent years.

"The emphasis is on what you can do and should do rather than the negative laws of don't do this or don't do that," said a Vatican lawyer, who asked not to be identified by name.

However, the document ends an experimental marriage annulment program in the United States and Australia, a move that is likely to lengthen a process now taking about a year, church experts said.

The new code repeals the system that had been used in the United States and Australia since 1970 to make annulments swifter and more simple to obtain. In its place, the code reinstates the requirement that all annulments by a marriage court must be reviewed by the church's appeals panel.

For the first time, the code spells out a kind of bill of rights both for clergy and laity, including rights of free assembly and speech in the church community, rights of due process and the right to choose one's spiritual lifestyle.

The commission's final document, which is shorter than the 1917 code of 2,414 canons, gives more significant roles to lay people in church liturgy. They are permitted to preach in church, though they cannot deliver the homily.

The revised code also:

—Recognizes new rights for lay women. Under the new laws, laymen and women are equal, and references to "laymen" have been replaced with "lay people." Women may serve as judges in marriage tribunals and may act as the chancellor or chief financial officer of a diocese. Women can read Scripture lessons and help in distributing the communion wafers.

However, there in no change in the church's ban on women priests and women still will be excluded from such positions as deacons, acolytes who light the altar candles and prepare wine and water for Mass, and lectors who sing the epistle during Mass.

—Gives more autonomy to individual bishops. A controversial canon requires that everyone who teaches about Catholic faith or theology in an institution of higher education have permission to do so from the local bishop. Some critics said this might compromise academic freedom.

—Allows Catholics to choose cremation as an alternate to burial.

—Reduces holy days of obligation, when Catholics are required to attend Mass, from 10 to two — Christmas and a Marian holiday to be decided by national bishops' conferences. But local bishops may also designate other holy days.

—Limits automatic excommunicaton — the Church's most serious penalty, excluding violators from the sacraments. Only six of the 37 grounds for excommunications are retained — desecration of the Eucharist; physical violence against the pope; violation by a priest of the secrecy of the confessional; consecration of a bishop without papal mandate; abuse by a priest of the power of absolution; and moral or physical involvement with an abortion.

One of the old grounds for excommunications — membership in a Masonic lodge — has disappeared.

Panhandle roads still hazardous due to snow

By The Associated Press

Snow-packed roads remained a hazard in the Panhandle and South Plains today, but skies were clear to partly cloudy over most of Texas.

Some fog formed over portions of North Central and Northeast Texas before dawn and cloudy skies were noted near the Louisiana border.

Pre-dawn temperatures were in the 20s and 30s over the northwestern two-thirds of the state and in the 40s and 50s over the rest of Texas. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 24 at Marfa to 51 at McAllen.

Sickly Chaps still beat WTC, 66-51

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

If the Midland College Chaparrals appeared to be coughing offensively in defeating Western Texas College 66-51 at the Langford Chaparral Center Monday night, that's about the way they felt.

WTC played the under-the-weather Chaps a lot closer than the final score indicates, at least, until Midland widened a four-point breach in the final six minutes to something more comfortable. And if the Westerners had been hitting from outside with any consistency, they might have had another upset comparable to last week's 50-48 win over Amarillo College.

DESPITE the uncertainty for a time, by winning, Midland moved back into sole possession of first place. Howard College, which lost to Clarendon Saturday, bounced back to defeat New Mexico Junior College, 98-87. MC and NMJC had been tied with one league loss each going into Monday's games.

In other action, South Plains beat Frank Phillips, 80-73, and Clarendon made it two straight with a 75-70 win over Odessa College.

Clarendon plays MC in the Chap Center Thursday night.

"I COULDN'T do anything tonight," complained Jerome Crowe, "I feel weak, like I'm coming down with something."

Chester Smith admitted to "stomach cramps" and "a knee that was acting up on me" after it was over, although he did a pretty good job of disguising his aches and pains with a 20-point performance.

Even Spud Webb, the 5-6 catalyst of the Chaps' offense, flashing spurts of brilliance, expressed the fear that "something seems to be going around."

As far as Coach Jerry Stone was concerned that wasn't the only reason his Chaps, now 8-1 in the Western Junior College Conference race, had trouble.

"Western has a good team. No one knows it yet. They are going to get better, too."

The Westerners are 2-7 in conference and 5-16 for the year, but didn't act like it.

MOST OF the 4,000 fans settled back envisioning a blow out as MC jumped in front 8-0. After WTC cut it to 8-6, the Chaps ran off 10 straight points capped by Webb's bold backcourt theft, streaking solo with a rafter shaking dunk for an exclamation point. The crowd, although it has seen Spud dunk before, went wild.

MC led by 14, 22-8, and 32-18 with 2:48 left in the half, but the Westerners narrowed it to 33-25 at halftime, thanks to five free throws.

The Chaps struck early off its transition game and when the Westerners adjusted, Nat Bufford, who shared scoring honors with Smith at 20, riddled WTC from outside, sinking his last four shots of the half from 15 to 22 feet away, after sinking only one of five shots to open the game.

A 13-point performance by 6-5 Larry Banks was all that kept WTC in the game in the first 20 minutes.

Midland led 41-31 three minutes into the second half when the Westerners decided the defending national champions weren't invincible and made a run at them.

WORKING INSIDE, as Banks and 6-8 Thomas Peete hit eight of their first nine shots in the second half, WTC trimmed MC's lead to 41-37. The Chaps responded when Bufford drove the base line, of all things, to score on a layup and Webb and Irvin Williams hit from 15-feet out for a 47-37 lead with 10:14 left in the game.

The Westerners refused to fold, however, as Banks and Peete fueled a 10-4 surge that again whittled that Midland margin to four, 51-47. However, the Chaps rallied on a pair of Webb free throws, a jumper from the lane by Smith and a 10-foot one-hander, off a Crowe feed, by Bufford to lead 57-47 before Banks scored for WTC with 4:45 left.

The Westerners weren't to get another point until Shawn Gaskin converted from the line with 20 seconds left and by this time the game was safely tucked away, 64-50.

"SOMETIMES we seem to struggle at home, for some reason," said Stone of his 18-3 Chaps. "I don't know what it is. I know several of the players weren't feeling too good tonight. Still, we didn't go completely dead tonight. We hung in there and worked our way out of it."

Smith was 6-for-11 in a 12 point first half and finished with a 4-for-6 second half. Bufford was 8-for-16 from the field and hit an 0-for-4 slump early in the second half that enabled WTC to gang up inside. That's when the Westerners made their move.

Still, inability to score from oustide really hurt Western. Richie Fells missed his last six shots of the game, all from 12 to 20 feet.

District fight now for second place

With Midland Lee defeating Midland High 61-57, San Angelo fighting back to down Big Spring 55-52 and Odessa Permian rolling Odessa High 48-35 Monday night in District 4-5A girl's basketball action, thoughts of winning the league crown should be set aside for four teams and all efforts should be aimed at claiming the second and final conference berth in the bye-district playoffs.

Midland Lee's victory gives the Rebels a comfortable 8-1 record and a two-game lead going into the final five games of the regular season while Midland High, Big Spring, Permian and San Angelo are all tied for second place at 6-3.

San Angelo had to fight hard to gain a share of second place Monday night as the Bobcats rallied from a 17-10 first quarter defecit to claim the 55-52 victory over Big Spring.

The Bobcats cut the lead to five points at the half, 29-24 and went ahead going into the final period of play, 38-37.

Bonnie Smith led the San Angelo attack with 20 points while teammate Val Schlaudt added 14. Big Spring was paced by Shell Rutledge with 15 points followed by Sylvia Randle with 12 and Debra Rubio with 11.

In the only 4-5A game that held absolutely no bearing on the conference standings, Cooper, 3-6, posted its 30-point victory over winless Abilene High on the strength of a strong second half performance.

The Cougars led the Eagles by a 22-15 count at halftime but posted a 14-2 score in the third quarter on their way to the easy victory.

Rebels' revenge beats Bulldogs

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Since losing the District 4-5A girl's basketball opener on Dec. 30 to cross-town rival Midland High, the Midland Lee Rebels have reeled off eight straight victories, including Monday night's 61-57 rematch victory over the Bulldogs.

In the first district meeting between the two teams, MHS overcame a 12-point Lee first half advantage to post a 64-52 victory. In the more recent encounter, the Rebels again took the lead into intermmssion, 35-34, only this time they wouldn't relinquish it.

Lee's Stacy Harmon led the Rebel first half scoring attack with 12 points, mostly from the 15-foot range, and looked to be on her way to a hot second half when she hit the first bucket of the third quarter to give the Rebels a three-point lead at 37-34.

O.J. Johnson brought the Bulldogs back to the halftime margin with a close-in shot, but it was as close as her team would come for the rest of the night as Lee ran to a 49-42 third quarter lead after increasing the gap to 11, 49-38 with 1:30 left in the frame.

What slowed Harmon, a 5-foot-7 junior, in the second half was three quick personal fouls in the third quarter to go with the one she picked up in the first half. Coach Shirley Stephenson put her on the bench to save her for the final quarter but the attempt to keep her in the game lasted only 42 seconds in the final period when she was whistled for No. 5.

WHILE HARMON was working the outside shot in the first two quarters, teammate Yshun King was busy working the middle, using her skill to pick up 11 points by halftime, three from the free throw line, and gain control of the boards.

She finished the game with 19 points and 17 rebounds in what Lee coach Shirley Stephenson called an "excellent performance. She was really a leader out there tonight. She played great defense and did everything she was supposed to do. I thought everybody out there played well."

Felicia Farias was a third Rebel with a strong performance as she came away with 10 points end led the team in steals with two and trailed Harmon in assists, 3-2.

FOR MIDLAND High, Rebecca Caton and Johnson were the two big offensive spark plugs that kept the Bulldogs within striking distance most of the way. Caton had a perfect 8-for-8 performance at the free throw line and added seven field goals for a game-high 22 points while Johnson added another 15. They also had to help overcome the loss of senior starter Penny Griffin and the below-average performance of Sheila Christian, a 14.6 per game scorer who was held to a mere four points.

"We didn't do a good job defensively on Rebecca Caton but Rebecca Caton can shoot the ball," said Stephenson about the two quarters when the senior Bulldog did the most damage, the second and fourth (12 and eight points respectively). "I think we left her open a lot. They (the Rebel defenders) might have been concentrating on Sheila. I'm not real sure, but Rebecca Caton did a heck of a job."

Coach Stephenson has a lot of respect for the Midland High team, coached by her sister Jane Young and she admired the way they never gave up. "I thought they played very, very well," she said. "I thought they played an exceptional game without Penny."

The victory over Midland High gives the Rebels an 8-1 4-5A record and a two-game lead over four teams tied for second. MHS, San Angelo, Big Spring and Odessa Permian all have 6-3 records and of the four Coach Stephenson would like to see a one-two finish for Midland schools in the conference race.

"We're all rooting for Lee and Midland High to represent the district in the playoffs," she said.

IN JUNIOR varsity action, Midland High broke up a 20-20 deadlock at halftime to gain a 48-36 victory over Lee. The Bulldogs outscore Lee 9-5 in the third quarter and won the fourth, 19-11.

Charlotte Hines led the MHS attack with 13 points while Diane White scored 11 for Lee.

On Thursday, the Lee varsity and junior varsity squads will play an early schedule as they preceed the Midland College-Clarendon game at Chaparral Center. The J.V. will tipoff against Odessa High at 4 p.m. followed by the varsity at 6:15. The Chaps are scheduled to play at 8 p.m.

At least one team will fall out of the four-way tie for second place on Thursday when Midland High travels to Odessa to take on the Permian Panthers at 4, 6:15 and 8 p.m.

Bulldogs may face slowed-down Rebel attack

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The "Domino Attack" meets the "Wave Attack" at 8 p.m. today at Chaparral Center as the victory starved Midland Lee Rebels shoot for an upset of District 4-5A co-leader Midland High.

The records say that MHS' wave will roll over the hard pressed Rebels since the Bulldogs own a 12-10 season mark and Lee has a 3-19 record. Lee is on the verge of having a 20 losses season. The 20-win mark is usually considered the goal of a winning team.

The victories just haven't been coming for the Rebels, even though they have been close in several outings, like the 50-49 loss suffered Friday to Abilene Cooper.

But now the Rebels face Midland High and the Bulldogs are in no position to be taking Lee lightly. No one in this crazy league is in the position to take any game lightly. Upsets abound at every nook and cranny, if there is such a thing as an upset in this league.

The Bulldogs owned sole possession of first place in the 4-5A race last Tuesday by winning its fourth straight district encounter, but a loss to Abilene High Friday has placed AHS, MHS and Odessa High fighting for the league lead with 4-2 marks.

It's jammed enough at the top with three teams in slugging position, but San Angelo, Big Spring and Abilene Cooper are all at 3-3, just one step back of the leaders. Odessa Permian is at 2-4 and Lee stands at 1-5, it's lone victory over Permian.

Tonight's action ends the first half of the 4-5A schedule, so after tonight's games, they will all go at each other one more time. If the first half ends up as tight as the first, it may take a mejor tournament to decide which two teams will be sent packing to the state playoffs.

Midland High would like to put this contest with Lee in their hip pocket. Memory doesn't have to flash back too far to remember what happened last year when these two teams met to finish the first half District 4-5A race. Lee pulled an upset by overcoming a nine-point deficit in the last 1:30 of play. The loss kept Midland High from winning the first half title and possibly out of the playoffs.

Last year, the district was played in halves. This year all 14 games on the schedule count for the title, but two teams, instead of one as in the past, get to go to the playoffs.

Some thought that dropping the halves concept would hurt the district race from a fan's point of view, but with the league as balanced as it is this year, each passing game brings a greater interest. It's a six-team race right now and the first half ends tonight.

Midland High's Johnny Pannell is coming off a 22-point performance in the loss to Abilene High. It was his biggest point production of the year. He has had 20-point outings on two other occassions this year, but not in district play. Pannell becomes the first Midland male to crack the 300-point barrier. His 304 points gives him a 13.8 per game scoring average.

Doug Hixon is averaging 11.7 points per game and David McFarland 11.2. Blake Liberty is hitting at an 8.6 clip, but he has been in double figures in four district games. Tony Carrasco has raised his average to 4.1.

The Rebels have no one in averaging in double figures, but Alvin Henry, who is coming off a 13-point game, owns a 9.4 average while Tod Brown is averaging 9.1. Both have two district games in double figures. Sylvester Johnson is averaging 8.1, but has three district outings in double figures. Derek Westbrook averages 7.0 for the season, and has not been in double figures in district play. Pint-sized Tyrone Thurman averages 6.2, but he started district play with 41 points in his first three games. He has cooled somewhat since then, but Lee's patient attack does not emphasize big scoring efforts.

Lee is hoping that the Bulldogs do not hit a big percentage of their shots tonight as they have in the last three district games. Lee needs to keep the score close to run the "Domino Attack." MHS is hoping for a fast start to force the game they like to play, which is a hard pressing, full court charge offensively and defensively.

Odessa High is expected to keep up the league pace against Permian, but that game could be a troublesome one for the Bronchos. Abilene High is also expected to stave off a challenge by Abilene Cooper tonight, but again, that could be a an upredictable game since Cooper has played everyone close.

Big Spring and San Angelo also meet tonight and since both are 3-3 in the race, the loser will have to battle back to stay in the league chase.

Killer B's, Hogs to fight for Lombardi Trophy

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It ought to be a whale of a Super Bowl — this pro football showdown between Miami's anonymous "Killer B's" and all those cleated anonymities from D. C. who keep saying, "We get no respect."

Outside of Joe Theismann and big John Riggins it's a 2-1 bet that the first person you meet on the street can't name another player on the Washington Redskins roster.

Yet they'll be in the big one at Pasadena next Sunday with the best record in the National Football League — 11-1 overall, counting playoffs, almost perfect.

The Miami Dolphins, who had a perfect 17-0 record in 1972, are a developing team after a decade of frustration and, as the Redskins, are a surprise guest at the big party.

Everybody was looking for Dallas' computerized robots, Los Angeles' rambunctious, transplanted Raiders or possibly San Diego's high-scoring Chargers on Dan Fouts' iron wing.

But, no, it's Miami and Washington, and fans could not have asked for a more intriguing matchup.

Take the Redskins. Stripped of draft choices by George Allen, whose philosophy was "the future is now," they have been put together with bailing wire and adhesive tape.

Twenty-nine members of the roster have been assembled in the last two seasons under Coach Joe Gibbs, 15 of them free agents, others players scrounged from near the bottom of the college draft list, largely ignored.

No big stars. No Heisman Trophy winners. No prima donnas. Just a bunch of guys who have found their destiny amid the memorials and politicos of the nation's capital.

Two men have been largely responsible for this sudden resurgence — Bobby Beathard, the general manager who was director of player personnel for the Dolphins in Miami's halcyon 70s, and Gmbbs, a pleasant, deeply religious guy whom national TV caught on his knees leading his team in reciting the Lord's Prayer after last Saturday's startling upset victory over Dallas.

Beathard is the architect. He got the pieces and put them together. Gibbs is the master mechanic. He gets the wheels spinning and does the motivating.

Gibbs wasn't surprised to find his Redskins a three-point underdog on the gamblers' books. That's the way it's been all year. The smart guys keep saying the Redskins are a freak or are lucky. No way they should be doing what they're doing.

"People look at Miami differently than they look at us," Gibbs says with mixed hurt and resignation.

Don't discount the Redskins. There is a mystical quality about them as if they've latched their destiny to a star and a lot of little gremlins are working invisibly in their behalf.

Tangibly, it's a well-balanced team, with a feisty, deceptive quarterback in Theismann, who lost out in Heisman Trophy voting to Jim Plunkett, and a bull of a runner in the 235-pound Riggins, a New York Jet castoff.

Just as Gibbs is offense-minded, a purveyor of attacking, wide open football, his Sunday opponent, concrete-jawed Don Shula, is more a traditionalist.

The forte of the new Dolphins — successors to the "No Name Defense" Super Bowl champions of a decade ago — lies in strangling foes instead of trying to outrun and out-throw them in a flying ball circus.

This was never more clearly reflected than in their playoff games. After throttling New England, they collared the league's most prolific passer, Fouts, with five interceptions and then last Sunday stunned the Jets 14-0, completely neutralizing Freeman McNeil, the NFL's top runner, and quarterback Richard Todd.

It was textbook stuff. Led by the "Killer Bs," Kim Bokamper, Bob Baumhower and Doug Betters, the Dolphins intercepted Todd five times, sacked him four times and made him miss on 22 of the 37 passes he threw.

Wonder if A. J. has got an antidote for the Redskins' gremlins?

Walsh will return as 49ers' coach

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — The irony in Bill Walsh's decision to remain as head coach of the San Francisco 49ers after a terrible season is that he would have quit if the team had won the Super Bowl again.

"If we'd won it all again, I know I would have stepped out," Walsh said Monday, exactly one year after the 49ers beat the Cincinnati Bengals 26-21 in the National Football League's championship game.

Walsh ruminated for nearly a month about holding onto the responsibilities of general manager, coach and offensive coordinator. He went to Youngstown, Ohio to meet with club owner Edward J. DeBartolo Jr., and flew around the country interviewing some of the men he considered good enough for the coaching job.

Reportedly turning down the job were Illinois' Mike White, UCLA's Terry Donahue and former coaches John Robinson of Southern California and Dick Vermeil of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Walsh said he finally came up with at least one viable prospect, reportedly Monte Clark of the Detroit Lions. Clark coached the 49ers to an 8-6 record in 1976.

"We had a tentative agreement with a replacement, but it was understood that it might go either way," he said. "This all would have developed much, much sooner had I not been traveling and scouting."

But when DeBartolo told Walsh he really didn't want anybody else, Walsh announced his decision to stay on in all capacities.

"This is the best alternative," Walsh said. "Ownership wasn't inclined to make a change. If I'd pressed, they might have, but I have to say Eddie would rather have me as opposed to anyone else who's available ... I think it is basically a matter of continuity."

The need to rebuild the 49ers, aging on defense and lacking a consistent running back on offense, is the real reason for DeBartolo's insistence on keeping Walsh following a 3-6 season.

"I felt all along that I wanted Bill to coach the team, but I also felt he needed time away from this season to decide for himself," DeBartolo said in a statement issued by the club.

Marino headed for USFL

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pitt quarterback Dan Marino, sounding like he already has made up his mind to play in the new United States Football League, opened negotiations Monday with the Los Angeles Express.

"There's no al college draft earlier this month.

A second team All-America quarterback in 1981, Marino had a somewhat disappointing senior season as the once top-ranked Panthers ended 9-3. And Marino doesn't think he can increase his bargaining power by waiting to see how high he is selected in the National Football League draft this spring.

"I don't think I can get better money than what I think I can get in the USFL," Marino said. "I think the USFL is credible, with the type of coaches they have from the NFL and from Canada."

Marino is impressed with Express Coach Hugh Campbell, who coached the Edmonton Eskimos to five Grey Cup championships in Canada.

"His quarterback, Warren Moon, threw for over 5,000 yards in one year," Marino said. "So I know they'll be throwing the football."

Marino's agent, former Miami Dolphins' linebacker Nick Buoniconti, was scheduled to meet Monday with the Express' owners.

Marino was named the most valuable player in the Hula Bowl in Honolulu and was the most valuable offensive player in last Saturday's Senior Bowl in Mobile, Ala.

If Marino signs with the USFL, he would begin preseason training on Feb. 1. The USFL season begins on March 6 and runs through July. Television contracts have been signed with ABC and ESPN.

"They have gotten some good players in the USFL already," Marino said. "But I could give them even more credibility. ABC has invested some money in the league and they want to make sure it succeeds."

The two principal owners of the Express are Alan Arman and Bill Daniels. Daniels is a cable TV system owner who donated $50,000 to the University of Pittsburgh two years ago to establish a memorial fund in the name of a Pitt alumnus who helped him get his business started.

"They (the owners) said it was an opportunity for me to play in Los Angeles, where there would be opportunities for me outside of football and to help start something big," Marino said. "They made me feel like I could be a pioneer and have something to contribute to the success of the new league."

Marino said he has "always dreamed of playing in the NFL."

But he said that even if he decides to play for the Express, "if it doesn't work out, I can bounce over to the NFL."

Bullet free throws sink Boston, 93-91

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — For 47 minutes and 32 seconds, the Washington Bullets upheld their reputation as the poorest foul-shooting team in the National Basketball Association, missing 12 of 26 attempts.

But with the game literally on the line — the foul line — two of their worst free throw shooters sank four in a row to nail down a 93-91 victory over the Boston Celtics Monday night, snapping a nine-game losing streak.

In the only other NBA action, the Detroit Pistons defeated the Atlanta Hawks, 112-108.

Jeff Ruland, who scored his entire 16 points in the second half of the Washington game and was shooting .664 from the line, dropped in a pair with 28 seconds left to cap a 10-point streak and give the Bullets a 91-89 lead.

Ruland fouled Robert Parish and the Boston center's two foul shots, Boston's only points of the final 4:15, tied it at 91-91 with 11 seconds remaining.

Larry Bird, who led Boston with 22 points, knocked a Washington pass out of bounds with seven seconds left. When Greg Ballard tossed an inbounds pass to Ricky Mahorn under the basket, Kevin McHale was charged with a foul for reaching over Mahorn's shoulder.

St. John's Redmen gun down Villanova from charity stripe

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Villanova found out the hard way that it doesn't pay to give free throws to the St. John's Redmen.

St. John's, ranked seventh in The Associated Press college basketball poll released today, hit 36 of 39 free throw tries to defeat the 11th-rated Wildcats 80-71 Monday night. The loss snapped a 10-game winning streak for Villanova and boosted St. John's, 17-1 overall, into the Big East Conference lead with a 7-1 record, while the Wildcats dropped to 5-1.

"Unless you go to the foul line, you're not going to win," said St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca. "Not only does it put points on the board, it puts their fellas on the bench."

Villanova's star center, John Pinone, was benched for four minutes after picking up his fourth personal foul with 13:19 to go and St. John's trailing 47-39. The Redmen, who hit 27 of 29 free throws in the second half, cut the margin to 49-47 before Pinone returned.

David Russell led St. John's with 21 points, while Kevin Williams, the Redmen's sixth man, added 16 points and hit all eight of his free throws.

In previous seasons, Williams complained about his lack of playing time and being relegated to a reserve role. But now he's content with his role in relief of point guard Bob Kelly.

"The coach is a genius at seeing what's wrong with the offense and telling the point guard what plays to call," Williams said. "My job is to settle the guys down and the right people the ball."

"Kevin Williams put points on the board and got the ball to the right guys," Carnesecca said. "It doesn't matter who starts the game, but who finishes it."

St. John's also got a big boost from Bill Wennington, a 7-foot reserve center, who delivered a clutch three-point play giving the Redmen a 56-53 lead with 4:54 remaining.

St. John's leading scorer, Chris Mullin, was held to two points in the first half, when Villanova led 37-35. The sophomore guard hit all of his 10 free throws in the second half and finished with 14 points.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Stewart Granger scored 18 points for Villanova, which got 16 from Pinone and 15 from Ed Pinckney as the Wildcats outshot St. John's 55 percent to 45.

Top Ten

North Carolina won its 12th straight game after a 3-3 start as Michael Jordan scored 16 points and freshman Brad Daugherty 15 against Georgia State.

The Panthers tried to counter the Tar Heels' height advantage with a zone defense, but North Carolina blistered the nets with 73.7 percent field goal shooting in the first half to take a 61-35 lead. North Carolina eventually led by as much as 95-54 late in the game.

Chavelo Holmes led all scorers with 20 points for Georgia State.

Second Ten

Darrell Walker had 28 points and five steals as Arkansas rebounded from a 15-point loss to Houston by beating Texas.

Walker hit 11 of 14 shots from the field, while backcourt partner Alvin Robertson added 14 points on 6-of-9 shooting. Robertson had six steals.

The Longhorns, who got 23 points from Bill Wendlandt, shot 66 percent from the field, but turned the ball over 27 times and shot 31 percent from the free throw line.

Hank Cornley had 13 points and 10 rebounds to pace Illinois State to its eighth straight victory, including six in a row in the Missouri Valley Conference.

The Redbirds spotted Tulsa a 19-8 lead, but roared back with 10 straight points to cut the deficit to one. Illinois State managed a 28-27 halftime lead despite shooting only 41 percent from the field in the first 20 minutes and its 8-2 streak in the first six minutes of the second half allowed the Redbirds to cruise to victory.

Other Games

Virginia Tech, ranked 17th at the time of Monday night's game, outscored Southern Mississippi 13-0 in the last five minutes to claim a 77-74 victory. Dell Curry scored 22 points to lead the Hokies, who fell from the poll released today after losing two games last week.

Auburn, ranked 20th Monday night but an absentee from today's poll, lost 80-77 to Tennessee as Dale Ellis scored 26 points for the Volunteers.

Raiders get second opportunity, down Owls 54-50

By ALAN SAYRE
Associated Press Writer

Bubba Jennings missed his first chance to nail down a Texas Tech victory, but he was right on the mark with his second opportunity as the Red Raiders downed Rice.

Jennings hit a five-foot jump shot with four seconds remaining in overtime to give the Red Raiders a come-from-behind 54-50 win over the Owls in Lubbock on Mondy night. Jennings had missed a shot with four seconds left in regulation play that would have won the game for Tech.

Tech Coach Gerald Myers said the Owls controlled the game's tempo "and had good solid patience.

"We finally had a little patience at the end of the game," Myers said. "The press and trapping got us back in the game at the end."

Myers said the game turned around when he inserted a walk-on player, Tobin Doda, who scored a basket and hit two free throws.

"He only scored four points, but ... he set picks for people and got them open," Myers said.

Rice led at halftime, 21-20, and built up a nine-point edge, 38-29, before the Raiders chipped away. Tech freshman Tony Benford, the game's leading scorer with 16 points, tied the score at 46-46 with a 10-foot jump shot with 2:10 left.

The Owls tried to stall for the final shot, but Reynolds blocked a pass, Jennings retrieved the ball, and missed a 15-foot shot to send the game into overtime.

Rice, who fell to 0-6 in conference paly and 6-10 for the year, jumped to a 50-46 lead early in the overtime period, but Vince Taylor scored on a layup with 2:59 left and Benford sank two free throws with 1:07 remaining.

Jennings hit the winning shot and then sank two free throws to ice the game.

Rice Coach Tommy Suitts said he thought both teams played well.

"But they made the big plays at the end of the game," Suitts said. "I thought we played good defense. This was not the best game Rice has played, by far, but we did play good defense and both teams played well."

The Owls, who were led by Tony Barnett's 14 points, fell to 0-6 in conference play and 6-10 for the year. Tech stands at 2-3 and 5-13.

La. Tech upsets USC

Louisiana Tech, which avenged its sole loss by upsetting previously unbeaten Southern California 58-56 Saturday, claimed the No. 1 spot for the first time this season in the weekly women's major college basketball poll announced Monday.

The NCAA defending national champions, now 16-1, received 37 first-place votes and 1,005 points from the nationwide panel of 51 women's coaches. Southern Cal, 13-1, which held the top spot since the preseason poll, fell to second with 11 first-place votes and 969 points.

Third-place Maryland, 15-0, the only unbeaten team left in the women's top 20, took the remaining three first-place votes.

"We're pleased to have the position back," said Louisiana Tech's co-coach, Sonja Hogg, after her team moved up from No. 2. "It puts added pressure on us, but pressure that we're used to."

Maryland and the remainder of the top 10 stayed the same as last week with Texas, Cheyney State, Old Dominion, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and Kansas State, in order.

AP TOP 20

UCLA, Indiana and North Carolina kept the top three spots today in The Associated Press college basketball poll, while a loss to previously unbeaten Arkansas allowed five members of last week's Top Ten to move up one notch.

In a nationwide poll of 60 sports writers and broadcasters, UCLA grabbed 28 first-place votes and 1,146 points, and Indiana had 25 first-place votes and 11 fewer points than the Bruins. Last week, the Hoosiers trailed UCLA by only eight points.

North Carolina stayed in third with 1,024 points and five first-place ballots.

Nevada-Las Vegas, the only NCAA Division I school with no losses, and Memphis State got one first-place vote each.

Media may hold key to boxing reform

An AP Sports Analysis
By ED SCHUYLER JR.

Physicians' explanations often are difficult for the layman to understand, but Dr. Ronald Michels was crystal clear in a report to the Maryland Athletic Commission on heavyweight Earnie Shavers.

It was Michels who performed retinal surgery on the now-retired Sugar Ray Leonard and, a few years ago, on Shavers, who at 37 continues to fight.

Asked his opinion by the commission before it gave final approval to Shavers' license application, Michels said, "It is my opinion that there is no unusual risk of recurring retinal damage to the eye because of returning to his boxing career."

"I would not restrict Shavers as long as he recognizes that there is always an element of danger in his particular business."

The risks could be the attraction of boxing to some, but it more likely is a challenge to young men too small or lacking in ability to compete well in other sports. It is a chance to bring a dream alive, although the dream for most is never fulfilled.

Most fighters we have talked to are aware of the risks of their profession. But it is necessary to make sure all of those who compete and who conduct and who govern boxing are acutely aware of the risks, and that efforts are made to reduce that chance of injury to the minimal.

There have been some encouraging signs that efforts are being made to eliminate negligence in the area of safety.

Last Thursday, boxing commissioners from four northeastern states, the District of Columbia and Canada met in New York to launch a cooperative effort in licensing and examining fighters.

On Feb. 18 at Las Vegas, Nev., a one-day conference on "Medical Aspects of Boxing" will be held by the American Medicial Association and the Association of Ringside Physicians.

It was at Las Vegas that Duk Koo Kim was injured fatally in a nationally televised fight against Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, the World Boxing Association lightweight champion, Nov. 13. That bout and Larry Holmes' one-sided beating of Randy "Tex" Cobb in defense of the World Boxing Council heavyweight title in a nationally televised fight at Houston Nov. 26 sparked cries in some quarters for the abolishment of boxing.

It also caused people who truly like boxing to look inward, and ponder the many unpleasant aspects of the profession, and what can be done to improve it.

An AMA journal editorial called for the abolishment of the sport, but the AMA's official stance is that while boxing is dangerous and can result in death or long-term brain injury, banning it is an unrealistic approach.

Banning it also would be difficult because boxing is an international sport, and there are, and always will be, men who choose to accept the challenge and risks of an imperfect profession in an imperfect world.

Several commissions have instituted rules changes such as standing eight-counts for fighters in trouble, and the WBC has reduced its championship fight limit from 15 rounds to 12.

Some rules changes undoubtedly will prove to be cosmetic, but several seem sound, such as a New York rule that if a doctor needs more time to examine a fighter between rounds he can tell the timekeeper to extend the one-minute rest period for up to an additional 30 seconds.

But the key to improved safety is cooperation between commissions, and not just commissions in four or five states.

There have been calls for a national boxing commission.

However, it seems here that it would be better to outlaw boxing in states that do not have state commissions, and then, in this computer age, establish a national clearing house for boxing information. This would enable state commissions to cooperate on matters of licensing — a passport carrying a fighter's picture, dates and results of his fights and medical comment — suspensions and physical examinations.

As for ensuring cooperation among commissions and conscientious conduct of commissioners, well, those of us who write about the sport have an obligation to write about more than the actual fights.

Theismann receives NFL's Man of the Year award

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Quarterback Joe Theismann, who hasled the Washington Redskins into the Super Bowl, was named Monday as the Man of the Year for 1982 in the National Football League.

The award, administered by the Pro Football Hall of Fame, is determined on the basis of a player's contributions to the community as well as for his playing excellence.

Theismann, in his ninth NFL season, guided the Redskins to an 8-1 record in the strike-shortened 1982 season. Washington's record was the best in the National Football Conference. The Redskins will play the Miami Dolphins in Super Bowl XVII Sunday at Pasadena, Calif.

During the season, Theismann won the NFC passing title with a 91.3 rating. He completed 161 of 252 passes for 2,033 yards and 13 touchdowns.

Off the field, Theismann was a member of the Corporate Board of Childrens Hospital National Medical Center, where his daughter once underwent open-heart surgery. Along with Nancy Reagan and former White House press secretary James Brady, he was co-host of a program for orphaned children. He also served as a club spokesman for a promotion that helps Special Olympics and Childrens Hospital.

UAW woos Democrats

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Auto Workers, flexing its lobbying muscle to win federal help for the battered auto industry, is wooing prospective 1984 Democratic Party presidential aspirants.

The union, which has seen some 275,000 members laid off because of the slump in the auto industry, is pushing for congressional enactment of legislation aimed at forcing foreign car makers to use American-made parts for autos sold in the United States.

The UAW political action conference, which has attracted some 2,000 delegates to the nation's capital, gave a warm reception Monday to former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who denounced President Reagan's handling of the economy.

The auto workers were to hear a speech today by Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, another Democrat who is weighing the possibility of a run for the White House a year from now.

California Sen. Alan Cranston, who emerged victorious in a straw poll of his home state Democrats earlier this month, appeared before the conference on Sunday night. And Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who has said he will not be a presidential candidate in 1984, will appear here Wednesday.

Mondale reminded the UAW that Reagan, in his 1980 presidential campaign, garnered approximately 45 percent of the blue-collar vote.

"Let's stand shoulder to shoulder to make sure we correct this mistake," he said.

Mondale chided Reagan for talking "about 'a season of hope', while 12 million (unemployed) Americans have made this a winter of discontent."

He said Reagan has failed to show leadership in leading the nation out of the recession, adding that a business turnaround can be achieved.

"Every time this country has led, it has been under a president who has spoken out about our power and what we can do," said Mondale, citing joint business, labor and government efforts in 1978 to help the Chrysler Corp. avert bankruptcy.

Natural gas – Kansas has it all

By JOHN ELLEMENT
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — When it comes to natural gas, Kansas has it all.

It has one of the largest gas fields in the country, the Hugoton field in the southwest Kansas. It has thousands of wells producing gas that owners have no place to sell. It has residential and industrial consumers wondering if the price spiral will ever flatten out.

And it has a congressional delegation that is active in the search for a remedy to a market that contradicts the basic economic law of supply and demand: Fewer people are using natural gas, but prices continue to rise, perhaps as much as 25 percent this year alone, according to the Department of Energy.

The role each member will play in what is expected to be a vigorous debate in the 98th Congress varies according to their interests and their committee assignments.

But the delegation will be following the issue closely, having learned through thousands of letters and phone calls in the lame-duck session of the 97th Congress, that Kansans want changes made.

What remains unknown among the delegation, and in Congress as a whole, is how to alter the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978, the law that governs the industry.

There is no shortage of suggestions, however.

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., for example, will reintroduce the same legislation that opponents threatened to filibuster and the full Senate later repudiated in two separate votes last month.

Kassebaum's bill would freeze wellhead prices at Oct. 1, 1982 levels for two years and expand federal authority to limit the costs pipeline companies can pass on to consumers through a "purchase gas adjustment."

It would also call for a rate schedule that would induce pipeline companies to buy cheaper gas.

After introduction next week, the bill will be referred to the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, the members of which were instrumental in defeating Kassebaum in the lame-duck session.

"They were very strong in their opposition, and it's likely to continue," Kassebaum said this week. "There's just not that support on the committee. I still believe my legislation provides a fairly good framework" to begin deliberations.

But Senate committee staff people do not share her opinion. "Devastating" is the way one person described the effects the bill would have on gas producers.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., is planning to introduce later this year a "comprehensive package" that probably will target pipeline companies. Glickman, who may try to unseat Kassebaum in 1984, has been her closest competitor within the delegation in introducing natural gas legislation.

"The sleepers in all this are the pipelines," Glickman said last week. "The producer of course drills the well, but they're naturally going to ask for the highest price they can get — that's human nature."

But, because pipelines are guaranteed a return on their investment, "they have no compelling incentive to hold down the price of their purchased gas."

Glickman's political power base is Wichita, which is also the home of many independent gas and oil producers.

He has dropped his plan, pushed during the lame-duck session, to abrogate "take or pay" contracts, often blamed for escalating prices. The contracts require pipelines to buy the gas, whether they need it or not, and are strongly supported by producers.

Although the state's most powerful official, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., has met with aides twice recently to discuss options on natural gas, no one will say what his plans are. -30-

RepublicBank to acquire Midland's Texas National

By JIM PRESNELL
Energy-Business Writer

Sometime in February, Dallas' $8.9 billion, 35-subsidiary RepublicBank Corporation will acquire — subject to stockholders' approval — Texas National Bank, Midland.

The Dallas Federal Reserve Bank gave the green light to the proposed merger Jan. 19. The merger plan resulted from initial moves made by RepublicBank to get representation here. The Dallas bank predicts good long-term economic growth in Midland.

Texas National is an independent bank, opened for business in mid-1979, with $38.8 million in deposits. Stockholders will decide in a few days whether to merge the bank and change its name to "RepublicBank, Midland." RepublicBank is offering them 1.2 shares for each share of Texas National, for a total of more than $7.5 million in RepublicBank common stock to be issued.

An interim corporation, RepublicBank Midland, has been formed by the Dallas bank holding firm to facilitate the proposed merger and name change. A temporary president, Thomas G. Barksdale, has been named to handle the merger from the Dallas end.

An official of the Dallas conglomerate said, "Having a presence in Midland is going to be of great importance for us."

Dr. William E. Gibson, senior vice president and economist for RepublicBank Corporation, said Monday, "We're acquiring another affiliate bank under the Bank Holding Company Act, as we did just recently in Lubbock. The reason we're excited about it being: we haven't had an affiliate in the Midland area yet."

RepublicBank went through a major reorganization last July in order to provide more services at its 35 affiliate banks, members of what Gibson called the RepublicBank "family."

He said the reason for the giant's buying the small Midland institution was more than just getting another outlet in its statewide bank network — more than a chain-store expansion. "Midland's a key center for the oil and gas industry. It's an important market for us."

RepublicBank is one of the state's largest oil and gas lending resources, Gibson said, and "We will bring the resources of the corporation with us. Customers in Midland can now be served by our energy banking division, headquartered in Houston and Dallas, providing money for oil and gas operations around Texas and overseas."

The Dallas Federal Reserve's board of governors has acted to approve the purchase of the small Midland institution: "Having considered ... this application ... it is the Reserve Bank's judgement that consummation of this transaction would be in the public interest."

Corporate and individual accountholders at Texas National will probably be interested in taking advantage of their new membership in RepublicBank of Midland, Dr. Gibson said, by using the full-line consumer banking package the Dallas conglomerate will market here.

"We intend to bring to Midland the full range of services our affiliates offer. Customers will have the advantage of ATM (automatic teller) cards, credit cards, a full range of IRA products, complete trust services, our Flexfund Money Market Account and our new, high money-market rate Flexcheck, a Super NOW checking account," he said.

John L. Cox, chairman of the Midland bank, said when the merger was announced, "We are very enthusiastic about the benefits this merger will provide the customers and shareholders of both organizations." The bank planned at that time to retain all staff and board members under the merger.

On February 3 a late-afternoon stockholders meeting at Texas National will convene "...for the purpose of considering and determining by vote whether to ratify," the proposed merger.

A legal notice filed by bank president William J. Mewhorter also said incidentals to the merger will be decided at this meeting.

Final approval of the ratification will have to be given by the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency.

Stockholders of the other merging partner, newly-created RepublicBank Midland, will meet to consider the merger the morning of February 3 at RepublicBank headquarters in Dallas.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market tried to rebound today from its sharp drop in the previous session, but prices were losing some of their gains as trading moved into the afternoon.

Oil issues again were numerous among the declines.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 10 points in the first 30 minutes of trading, was up only 4.87 points at 1,035.04 after two hours of activity.

The measure slumped 22.81 points on Monday for its worst setback since last October.

Big Board volume slowed to 39.16 million shares at noon EST today from 44.55 million at that hour Monday.

Gainers held an 8-5 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stocks, particularly the oils, were hit hard Monday after the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries failed to agree on pricing and production at their emergency meeting in Geneva, Switzerland.

Analysts saw the discord as leading to lower oil prices, which could further hamper the ability of several oil-producing nations to pay their lofty debts. That in turn could put strains on the international financial system, they said.

NYSE-listed oil stocks again turning lower today included Standard of Indiana 2 to 38¾, Exxon ⅜ to 29⅛, Atlantic Richfield 1½ to 41⅝ and Union Oil of California 1½ to 29¾.

Digital Equipment rose 5 to 110. Analysts said that despite the company's 38.5 percent drop in fiscal second-quarter profit, its earnings were well above expectations.

The NYSE's composite index rose 0.11 to 81.03.

At the American Stock Exchange; the market value index was off 2.36 to 350.07.

Gun may not help in Dorfman case

CHICAGO (AP) — The discovery of the possible murder weapon in the gangland-style shooting of former Teamsters consultant Allen M. Dorfman may be of little help in solving the slaying, an official says.

A school custodian rummaging through a garbage can Monday found a .22-caliber semi-automatic pistol like the one used to kill Dorfman. Also found were a silencer, two unspent shotgun shells and two stolen license plates that were on the getaway car, police said.

Dorfman, 60, a millionaire insurance executive convicted with Teamsters union President Roy Williams of trying to bribe a U.S. senator, was shot eight times in the head Thursday in the parking lot of the Hyatt Hotel in suburban Lincolnwood. Police are searching for a gunman, an accomplice and the driver of the getaway car.

Patrick Healy, head of the Chicago Crime Commission, said he doubts finding the pistol will uncover Dorfman's killers because it is likely to be a "cold (stolen) gun...It's not going to lead you anywhere."

Dorfman's was the 1,081st mob-style slaying in Chicago since 1919, when the commission started keeping such records. Healy said there have been only 13 convictions in those cases.

Dorfman also had been indicted in Chicago on an extortion charge and was accused in San Francisco of taking part in an alleged kickback scheme involving two local unions.

His company, Amalgamated Insurance Agency Services Inc., has processed claims for the Teamsters' Central States Health and Welfare Fund since 1950.

The custodian found the items in a garbage can at St. Cornelius School here, police said. The evidence was turned over to Chicago police, who sent it to the Lincolnwood Police Department.

It appears that the pistol was the murder weapon, and ballistics tests were scheduled today, Lincolnwood police Sgt. Dennis Brooks said.

The license plates, bearing the number GOM 74, "definitely" were on the getaway car used by Dorfman's killers, based on statements from two witnesses to the killing, Brooks said.

The license plates had been stolen in August from a car in Chicago's Chinatown area, Brooks said, and the owner "checked out clean."

Meanwhile, the Chicago Tribune reported Monday that a reputed syndicate leader was angry that Dorfman failed to get prior approval for the attempt to bribe Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., with a lucrative land deal.

Cannon was not charged in the case, but lost a bid for re-election last year.

In a telephone conversation taped by the FBI on Jan. 30, 1979, Dorfman was warned by reputed mobster Joseph Lombardo, who was convicted with Dorfman and Williams, that Joey Aiuppa was angered over his actions, the Tribune said. In 1979, Aiuppa was considered the No. 2 man in the Chicago crime syndicate.

A .22 caliber pistol and silencer, believed by the Chicago police to have been used in the fatal shooting of Allen Dorfman, were recovered in Chicago on Monday. The gun, along with the alleged getaway car's license plates and two shotgun shells and a clip, were found by a janitor in the garbage can of a Chicago high school.

Convictions deal severe blow to Mafia family, FBI agent says

CLEVELAND (AP) — Convictions of reputed mob underboss Angelo "Big Ange" Lonardo and four other men accused of running a multimillion-dollar drug ring have struck "the most severe blow against the Mafia family ever," an FBI agent says.

Jurors deliberated six days before delivering guilty verdicts Monday against Lonardo; reputed Mafia captain Joseph "Joey" Gallo, 44; Kevin McTaggart, 26; Hartmut "The Surgeon" Graewe, 38, and his brother, Frederick Graewe, 29.

Each was charged with as many as 55 counts, although none was convicted of all counts.

Joseph Griffin, agent in charge of the FBI in northern Ohio, said the verdicts Monday, along with recent convictions against organized crime figures in Cleveland, have been "the most severe blow against the Mafia family ever in the United States."

All except Frederick Graewe face maximum sentences of life imprisonment. Frederick Graewe could be imprisoned for up to 40 years, said Donna Congeni, chief of the prosecution team. U.S. District Judge John M. Manos has yet to set a sentencing date.

Hartmut Graewe, McTaggart and Gallo were convicted of a racketeering conspiracy charge that included alleged murders, gambling and death threats against FBI investigators.

"I think the verdict goes a long way to achieving the Organized Crime Strike Force goal of putting the Cleveland organized crime family out of business," said Greg English, a Washington-based Justice Department lawyer who helped prosecute the case.

The Justice Department and the FBI said Lonardo, who turned 72 on Friday, was the No. 2 man in the Cleveland organized crime family.

James T. Licavoli, the reputed boss of the family, is in prison after being convicted last summer on racketeering charges in another case.

"When you consider this and the Licavoli case, you can see the Strike Force has gotten to the top layers of the organized crime management," English said. "You can hang a 'going out of business' sign on it."

"We're going to appeal," Leonard Yelsky, a lawyer for Lonardo, said as he left the federal court building. "On what grounds, I don't know. I have to collect my thoughts."

The verdicts ended a nearly 10-week trial that included testimony from almost 100 witnesses. Most were called either to support or challenge the testimony of the government's star witness, Carmen Zagaria.

In 12 days of testimony, Zagaria, the admitted manager of the drug network, described how his West Side criminal faction made peace with the reputed Mafia family in 1978 and began a joint gambling business.

That business developed into a drug trade that flourished quickly, Zagaria said. "Mules," or messengers, made automobile trips to Florida with cash and brought back as much as $15 million a year worth of illegal drugs, prosecutors said.

Zagaria said Hartmut Graewe earned the nickname of "The Surgeon" after dismembering the body of one of the ring's victims, a gambler who refused to share his profits.

Zagaria pleaded guilty to charges against him in exchange for a lenient sentence.

Seige 'spur of the moment thing,' fleeing man says

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A 30-hour siege that ended with the deaths of a police officer and his seven captors "was just a spur of the moment thing," according to four men who fled the house before the hostage was taken.

"It wasn't nothing planned," James Murphy Jr., one of the four, said Monday. "There wasn't nothing told us. It was just a spur of the moment thing. Boom. Everything just went crazy."

Patrolman Robert S. Hester was taken captive and his partner, Officer Ray Schwill, was shot in the jaw two weeks ago today when they went to the north Memphis home of Lindberg Sanders, a former mental patient, to arrest a purse snatching suspect.

The ensuing siege ended when a six-man police assault team, armed with four M-16 rifles and two shotguns, stormed the house in a vain attempt to save Hester.

The officer was found dead, and Sanders and six of his followers in a Bible-reading group were killed by police gunfire after they shot at the assault team, according to the police report.

"The main thing that we want to get out is that we are not cultists. We weren't out to kill the police or nothing like that," Murphy said. "It wasn't a setup, because if it had been, we wouldn't have been there."

The four men, Murphy, Jackie Robinson Young, Reginald McCray and Freddie L. Davis, talked with a reporter for The Commercial Appeal at an attorney's office Monday night.

Police said a total of seven men fled the house at the onset of the incident. All were questioned by police but only one was charged.

Tyrone Henley, 27, a son of Sanders, is accused of assault with intent to murder in the shooting of Schwill. Henley is being held in the Shelby County Jail in lieu of $250,000 bond.

The four said they had been at Sanders' house reading the Bible, dancing and listening to music. They also said that marijuana had been smoked and two fifths of wine consumed before Hester and Schwill arrived, but that no one was intoxicated.

"The only reason we was there was we grew up in the neighborhood and we knew him (Sanders)," McCray said.

The officers were investigating a complaint that Michael Colemen, one of the of the six to die along with Sanders, had stolen a purse at a grocery on Jan. 11, he said.

"The police came and started talking. ...They were very loud," McCray said.

Young said Schwill grabbed Coleman and pulled him outside the house and when several men in the house tried to follow, Hester blocked the door with his arm.

Young said Schwill came back into the house and reached for Sanders, cursing him.

"He reached past the other officer and grabbed Mr. Sanders. The other officer moved out of the way, and he took Mr. Sanders on outside," Young said. "The fight broke out then."

Recent regulation hits lobbyists in pocketbook

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's assault against government spending has hit even the most elusive of creatures: lobbyists for defense contracts. And they're fighting back.

The American Electronics Association, a Washington trade association for high-technology companies, has urged the Defense Department to rescind a recent regulation prohibiting the companies from adding lobbying expenses to contract costs.

The high-tech industry says that lobbying is a public service.

"We supply public officials with vital information about technological developments having important military applications and...help make them better able to reach crucial decisions," argued Richard B. Lewis, a government program manager for the Hewlett-Packard Company.

The Defense Department maintains that the government cannot afford to subsidize lobbyists. The old rule, which permitted lobbyists to add their expenses to the final bill, was a major reason for cost overruns, say Pentagon officials.

The Pentagon adds that the new regulation, which was approved last October, will save millions of dollars.

"They (the high-tech companies) are talking about something past," said Pentagon spokesman Jack Powers. "This is to prevent any infraction of the cost principle. The savings are inestimable."

But the AEA, which represents 2,000 high-tech companies, complains that the regulation will discourage contractors from giving government officials crucial information on defense operations.

"Though you would concede lobbying is still a constitutionally protected activity, with this regulation you are treating it at best as a necessary evil," AEA President E.E. Ferrey wrote in a letter to Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

Ferrey added: "We concede that private sector lobbying is untidy...(but) we believe it is the essence of what this country is about."

Powers countered: "Down the line, they'll see (the regulation) saves money," adding that that's what the Reagan administration is about.

Gun may not help in Dorfman case

CHICAGO (AP) — The discovery of the possible murder weapon in the gangland-style shooting of former Teamsters consultant Allen M. Dorfman may be of little help in solving the slaying, an official says.

A school custodian rummaging through a garbage can Monday found a .22-caliber semi-automatic pistol like the one used to kill Dorfman. Also found were a silencer, two unspent shotgun shells and two stolen license plates that were on the getaway car, police said.

Dorfman, 60, a millionaire insurance executive convicted with Teamsters union President Roy Williams of trying to bribe a U.S. senator, was shot eight times in the head Thursday in the parking lot of the Hyatt Hotel in suburban Lincolnwood. Police are searching for a gunman, an accomplice and the driver of the getaway car.

Patrick Healy, head of the Chicago Crime Commission, said he doubts finding the pistol will uncover Dorfman's killers because it is likely to be a "cold (stolen) gun...It's not going to lead you anywhere."

Dorfman's was the 1,081st mob-style slaying in Chicago since 1919, when the commission started keeping such records. Healy said there have been only 13 convictions in those cases.

Dorfman also had been indicted in Chicago on an extortion charge and was accused in San Francisco of taking part in an alleged kickback scheme involving two local unions.

His company, Amalgamated Insurance Agency Services Inc., has processed claims for the Teamsters' Central States Health and Welfare Fund since 1950.

The custodian found the items in a garbage can at St. Cornelius School here, police said. The evidence was turned over to Chicago police, who sent it to the Lincolnwood Police Department.

It appears that the pistol was the murder weapon, and ballistics tests were scheduled today, Lincolnwood police Sgt. Dennis Brooks said.

The license plates, bearing the number GOM 74, "definitely" were on the getaway car used by Dorfman's killers, based on statements from two witnesses to the killing, Brooks said.

The license plates had been stolen in August from a car in Chicago's Chinatown area, Brooks said, and the owner "checked out clean."

Meanwhile, the Chicago Tribune reported Monday that a reputed syndicate leader was angry that Dorfman failed to get prior approval for the attempt to bribe Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., with a lucrative land deal.

Cannon was not charged in the case, but lost a bid for re-election last year.

In a telephone conversation taped by the FBI on Jan. 30, 1979, Dorfman was warned by reputed mobster Joseph Lombardo, who was convicted with Dorfman and Williams, that Joey Aiuppa was angered over his actions, the Tribune said. In 1979, Aiuppa was considered the No. 2 man in the Chicago crime syndicate.

A .22 caliber pistol and silencer, believed by the Chicago police to have been used in the fatal shooting of Allen Dorfman, were recovered in Chicago on Monday. The gun, along with the alleged getaway car's license plates and two shotgun shells and a clip, were found by a janitor in the garbage can of a Chicago high school.

Convictions deal severe blow to Mafia family, FBI agent says

CLEVELAND (AP) — Convictions of reputed mob underboss Angelo "Big Ange" Lonardo and four other men accused of running a multimillion-dollar drug ring have struck "the most severe blow against the Mafia family ever," an FBI agent says.

Jurors deliberated six days before delivering guilty verdicts Monday against Lonardo; reputed Mafia captain Joseph "Joey" Gallo, 44; Kevin McTaggart, 26; Hartmut "The Surgeon" Graewe, 38, and his brother, Frederick Graewe, 29.

Each was charged with as many as 55 counts, although none was convicted of all counts.

Joseph Griffin, agent in charge of the FBI in northern Ohio, said the verdicts Monday, along with recent convictions against organized crime figures in Cleveland, have been "the most severe blow against the Mafia family ever in the United States."

All except Frederick Graewe face maximum sentences of life imprisonment. Frederick Graewe could be imprisoned for up to 40 years, said Donna Congeni, chief of the prosecution team. U.S. District Judge John M. Manos has yet to set a sentencing date.

Hartmut Graewe, McTaggart and Gallo were convicted of a racketeering conspiracy charge that included alleged murders, gambling and death threats against FBI investigators.

"I think the verdict goes a long way to achieving the Organized Crime Strike Force goal of putting the Cleveland organized crime family out of business," said Greg English, a Washington-based Justice Department lawyer who helped prosecute the case.

The Justice Department and the FBI said Lonardo, who turned 72 on Friday, was the No. 2 man in the Cleveland organized crime family.

James T. Licavoli, the reputed boss of the family, is in prison after being convicted last summer on racketeering charges in another case.

"When you consider this and the Licavoli case, you can see the Strike Force has gotten to the top layers of the organized crime management," English said. "You can hang a 'going out of business' sign on it."

"We're going to appeal," Leonard Yelsky, a lawyer for Lonardo, said as he left the federal court building. "On what grounds, I don't know. I have to collect my thoughts."

The verdicts ended a nearly 10-week trial that included testimony from almost 100 witnesses. Most were called either to support or challenge the testimony of the government's star witness, Carmen Zagaria.

In 12 days of testimony, Zagaria, the admitted manager of the drug network, described how his West Side criminal faction made peace with the reputed Mafia family in 1978 and began a joint gambling business.

That business developed into a drug trade that flourished quickly, Zagaria said. "Mules," or messengers, made automobile trips to Florida with cash and brought back as much as $15 million a year worth of illegal drugs, prosecutors said.

Zagaria said Hartmut Graewe earned the nickname of "The Surgeon" after dismembering the body of one of the ring's victims, a gambler who refused to share his profits.

Zagaria pleaded guilty to charges against him in exchange for a lenient sentence.

Seige 'spur of the moment thing,' fleeing man says

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A 30-hour siege that ended with the deaths of a police officer and his seven captors "was just a spur of the moment thing," according to four men who fled the house before the hostage was taken.

"It wasn't nothing planned," James Murphy Jr., one of the four, said Monday. "There wasn't nothing told us. It was just a spur of the moment thing. Boom. Everything just went crazy."

Patrolman Robert S. Hester was taken captive and his partner, Officer Ray Schwill, was shot in the jaw two weeks ago today when they went to the north Memphis home of Lindberg Sanders, a former mental patient, to arrest a purse snatching suspect.

The ensuing siege ended when a six-man police assault team, armed with four M-16 rifles and two shotguns, stormed the house in a vain attempt to save Hester.

The officer was found dead, and Sanders and six of his followers in a Bible-reading group were killed by police gunfire after they shot at the assault team, according to the police report.

"The main thing that we want to get out is that we are not cultists. We weren't out to kill the police or nothing like that," Murphy said. "It wasn't a setup, because if it had been, we wouldn't have been there."

The four men, Murphy, Jackie Robinson Young, Reginald McCray and Freddie L. Davis, talked with a reporter for The Commercial Appeal at an attorney's office Monday night.

Police said a total of seven men fled the house at the onset of the incident. All were questioned by police but only one was charged.

Tyrone Henley, 27, a son of Sanders, is accused of assault with intent to murder in the shooting of Schwill. Henley is being held in the Shelby County Jail in lieu of $250,000 bond.

The four said they had been at Sanders' house reading the Bible, dancing and listening to music. They also said that marijuana had been smoked and two fifths of wine consumed before Hester and Schwill arrived, but that no one was intoxicated.

"The only reason we was there was we grew up in the neighborhood and we knew him (Sanders)," McCray said.

The officers were investigating a complaint that Michael Colemen, one of the of the six to die along with Sanders, had stolen a purse at a grocery on Jan. 11, he said.

"The police came and started talking. ...They were very loud," McCray said.

Young said Schwill grabbed Coleman and pulled him outside the house and when several men in the house tried to follow, Hester blocked the door with his arm.

Young said Schwill came back into the house and reached for Sanders, cursing him.

"He reached past the other officer and grabbed Mr. Sanders. The other officer moved out of the way, and he took Mr. Sanders on outside," Young said. "The fight broke out then."

Recent regulation hits lobbyists in pocketbook

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's assault against government spending has hit even the most elusive of creatures: lobbyists for defense contracts. And they're fighting back.

The American Electronics Association, a Washington trade association for high-technology companies, has urged the Defense Department to rescind a recent regulation prohibiting the companies from adding lobbying expenses to contract costs.

The high-tech industry says that lobbying is a public service.

"We supply public officials with vital information about technological developments having important military applications and...help make them better able to reach crucial decisions," argued Richard B. Lewis, a government program manager for the Hewlett-Packard Company.

The Defense Department maintains that the government cannot afford to subsidize lobbyists. The old rule, which permitted lobbyists to add their expenses to the final bill, was a major reason for cost overruns, say Pentagon officials.

The Pentagon adds that the new regulation, which was approved last October, will save millions of dollars.

"They (the high-tech companies) are talking about something past," said Pentagon spokesman Jack Powers. "This is to prevent any infraction of the cost principle. The savings are inestimable."

But the AEA, which represents 2,000 high-tech companies, complains that the regulation will discourage contractors from giving government officials crucial information on defense operations.

"Though you would concede lobbying is still a constitutionally protected activity, with this regulation you are treating it at best as a necessary evil," AEA President E.E. Ferrey wrote in a letter to Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

Ferrey added: "We concede that private sector lobbying is untidy...(but) we believe it is the essence of what this country is about."

Powers countered: "Down the line, they'll see (the regulation) saves money," adding that that's what the Reagan administration is about.

Walker expresses concern for children he'll never meet

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Unlike the ill-fated bikers in "Easy Rider" who went looking for America and couldn't find it anywhere, Lou Franceschini's search has been realized.

America, to him, bespeaks of charity, humility, love, a nation in which people care enough to do their part in helping children whom life has left downtrodden.

He has come to realize what degree of concern exists in the hearts of his fellow Americans in a 1,850-mile hike that has brought him from Sacramento, Calif., to Midland and will carry him the remainder of his 4,000-mile journey to New York City. It's been a long trek already, but its importance to children he will likely never meet is paramount.

He's tramping all right, left shoe, right shoe down the highways of America, but going with him every step of the way are the children of Saint Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., where youngsters worldwide are treated for catastrophic diseases. At every stop along his route he and his support partner Mark Bell are soliciting pledges to the institution: a penny a mile, a nickel, a dime, a quarter.

"PEOPLE HEAR SO much about hospitals being cold, unfeeling places — but not Saint Jude," said Franceschini, who reached Midland city limits Sunday night. "They make a special attempt to make it comfortable. That's why I like 'em; that's why I'm for 'em."

Saint Jude, explained Franceschini, was founded in 1962 by Danny Thomas. In the early years, he noted, the success rate for curing cancer-stricken children was only 5 percent. Today, it's 50 percent.

"Because of that you know your money is going for something besides somebody's drinks," he said. "(The hospital) is the only one of its kind in the world. If the family can't pay, the child will be treated free of charge, no matter who he is, what his financial status is or his religious affiliation. They'll also put up the family if they need a place."

Franceschini, 31, found his special place in the scheme of events last summer when he decided to come out of the closet and really do something to help the children of Saint Jude. An assistant professor of theatre at Christian Brothers College in Memphis, Franceschini watched the Danny Thomas telethon in June and felt called to reach deep into his own soul and summon forth more than just a few dollars for the children of the world.

"Being able to see the United States, meet people from all over the country, I've learned a lot about charity — where it comes from. I've learned what humility means."

— Lou Franceschini

ON SEPT. 13 he did. He donned his hiking boots at the steps of the California State Capitol Building and headed east, bound for the Atlantic Ocean and a multitude of pledges across the nation.

Though he had run and walked nine miles a day and exercised in anticipation of his marathon journey, it was a challenge from the first step. His original partner had to drop out before they even exited California due to a damaged nerve in his leg. His hiking boots, though suited to rugged mountain trails, proved too stiff and heavy for highway walking. Blisters carved into his heels and feet, and the first of a succession of running shoes were donned. But gradually, his realization that others would be helped by his effort transcended the problems.

"The first couple of weeks we were really really in pain, but after that the feet got hard enough to handle anything," he said.

From California to the Van Horn Mountains east of El Paso Franceschini trod alone. He stayed in Holiday Inns at the chain's behest, but in the barren areas of the remote Southwest he often was forced to seek other accommodations. Two out of every three nights he camped out. At various other times he curled up inside a J.C. Penney delivery van, a volunteer fire department hall, and even a cow pasture as he discovered a "lesson in flexibility." It has only been since the Van Horn Mountains east of El Paso that he has been supported by Bell, who is himself donating seven months of his life to the cause.

AND GRADUALLY, the pledges have mounted, just as has Franceschini's awareness of America.

"Being able to see the United States, meet people from all over the country, I've learned a lot about charity — where it comes from," he explained. "I've learned what humility means. It's been a growth experience...it's also an opportunity for us to do something positive for the city of Memphis, to serve as its goodwill ambassadors."

Bell, who became convinced that the cross-country journey was worthwhile when he realized his annual $5 donation to Saint Jude paled by comparison to that which was needed by suffering children, also has learned and grown during the experience.

"One thing I've learned about on this trip is people do care about Saint Jude," noted the 24-year-old television technician from Memphis. "I was pessimistic about charity, but now I'm a believer in people who do this."

While dangers are ever-present in hiking cross-country — the proximity of traffic, dogs, questionable travelers — Franceschini and Bell have had opportunity to do more than just gain pledges for Saint Jude.

"FROM TUCSON to El Paso, I kept seeing the same faces day after day — transients," he said. "I told them, if you can make it to the truck, I'll get you something to eat. We fed more than our share of dehydrated camp food to strangers. We feel like we owe that; people have been kind to us. What goes around, comes around."

Within a few days, Franceschini and Bell will have reached Cisco — the halfway point in their tramp for the children of America, and by next July, New York City and the end of the road.

By then, 4,000 miles will have receded into the distance, but the journey for Franceschini's and Bell's children at Saint Jude will have only begun.

They just hope the generosity of Americans and the resulting medical research will allow those youngsters a chance to trod a road as long.

Pledges per mile or direct donations to Saint Jude may be made to Walkathon, P.O. Box 17274, Memphis, Tennessee 38117.

Marathon concern

Lou Franceschini continues his trek along America's highways. He's walking 4,000 miles from Sacramento, Calif., to New York for Saint Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis.

Court ruling may end at-large city elections

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A major court ruling last week has found that Lubbock's system of at-large municipal elections is unconstitutional and the decision may be used as the basis for getting other cities in the state to change their practice of at-large elections, an Odessa lawyer said Monday.

"People have inquired if we would file (suits similar to the one filed in Lubbock)," said Jerry Lopez, managing attorney for West Texas Legal Services. "We have been awaiting the outcome of the Lubbock suit — and others — before proceeding.

"Once we study and discuss the decision, we'll decide whether to file against other cities, including Midland and Odessa."

Federal Judge Halbert Woodward ruled Jan. 20 that Lubbock's at-large election system violates the 15th Amendment to the Constitution, as well as the federal Voting Rights Act, according to Rolando Rios, litigation director for the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project of San Antonio.

Said Rios: "The decision is very important because it is the first successful lawsuit filed in Texas under the newly amended Voting Rights Act.

"It should serve as notice to other jurisdictions that the courts will not tolerate election devices which discriminate against minority groups — puposefully or otherwise."

The case has been an on-going one that was first filed in 1978, according to SVREP Communications Director Mariana Scuros, and the ruling represents a "significant victory for minority groups. The point is, minority groups want equal participation in the electoral process. The at-large system has been a great obstacle to that."

The Voting Rights Act was amended in 1982 to include effect as a criterion in establishing electoral discrimination, according to Ms. Scuros, who said intent alone no longer has to be proven.

In addition to ruling against Lubbock's at-large election system, Judge Woodward recommended two possible single-member district reapportionment plans that would enhance the chances of minority representation on the city council, according to SVREP.

The first would divide the city into four districts, one of which would be 47 percent Mexican-American and 25 percent black.

The second plan cuts the city into six districts. Under that proposal, it would be possible for minority groups to gain two city council seats. Mexican-Americans would make up 50.6 percent of one district; blacks and Mexican-Americans would comprise 72 percent of another district.

Minorities have never been elected to the Lubbock city council in city history, according to SVREP.

Woodward's decision also affects "school boards for sure," said Ms. Scuros. Other governmental bodies — such as hospital boards — that employ at-large elections may also have to change their election procedures.

While minorities have been elected to Midland school and college boards in the past, City Attorney Joe Nuessle said Monday that to his knowledge no minority has ever served on the city council.

Nuessle also said he hadn't seen Woodward's ruling and declined comment.

Dr. Henrie Mast, president of Midland Memorial Hospital's board of directors, said the board is elected at-large and that in light of the decision he would place the matter on Thursday's agenda as a discussion item.

Lopez, meanwhile, said it would be "two or three weeks" before Legal Services decides whether or not to file suit against Midland and Odessa.

Allison Center at forefront of research

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

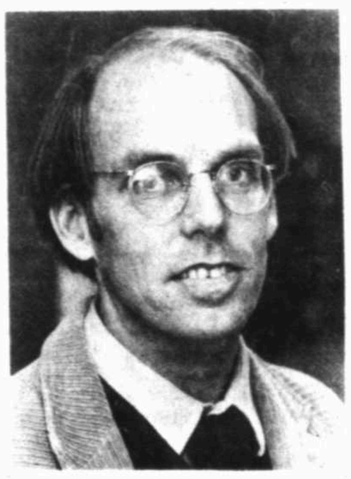
The Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center is at the forefront of new cancer treatment, according to Dr. David Snyder, the center's medical oncologist.

With the center's patient load increasing steadily, and physicians expecting more patients this year, the Allison Center will step further into the medical future, embarking upon investigational studies of cancer drugs.

"Our priority at the cancer center is to provide the best available therapy, offering it in a way that we can learn something," Snyder said. "Our plans in the future — with some involvement now — will be the involvement with investigational drugs."

According to the Food and Drug Administration office in Dallas, investigational new drugs (INDs) are those drugs which are in the process of being tested.

"They (drugs) are proven to work in certain situations and are at the point where the number of people using the drug is expanded," Don Aird, FDA consumer specialist, said.



Dr. David Snyder

"They (drugs) are experimental in the strictest sense of the word, but they are not a brand new entity — we think they're effective," he added.

Dr. Frank Newman, regional medical officer at the Dallas FDA, said after animal testing there are three phases a drug must go through before it is FDA approved.

"The first phase in human testing is to look for what chemical actions the drug has," Newman said. "This is the phase where about 10 healthy subjects are given the drug to determine how it should be administered — orally or by injection."

The Allison Center will participate in the second phase, testing therapeutic response to the INDs. The INDs in the second phase of testing are proven effective for a particular disease and are administered to a limited number of patients who have the same disease.

"Usually 25 to 30 subjects who acutally have a particular disease are given the new drug," Newman said.

According to Snyder, the Allison Center patients who are not responding to standard treatment could be candidates for the INDs in the second phase of testing.

In phase three there is extensive testing on a large number of subjects, assessing the safety and effectiveness of the IND," Newman said.

Snyder said the Allison Center will have limited involvement with the INDs in the third phase.

Before INDs can be introduced, there must be a clinical investigator, a medical professional who is responsible for full disclosure to the patient about the drug and who throroughly documents the results.

"Usually an IND has a sponsor," Newman said. "Most drugs come from commercial firms, some from the National Institute of Health."

Snyder's application for clinical investigator is being processed and the the National Cancer Institute, which is part of the National Institute of Health,

Former Midland couple files negligence lawsuit

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A former Midland couple who claim they were literally burned out of their apartment last Oct. 19 when a fire destroyed two buildings of the Polo Park Apartments have filed a $30,000 lawsuit on negligence in Midland's 142nd State District Court against the apartment owners and a building contractor.

The couple, Jon H. Strickland and his wife, Suzanne, allege that John Pass, who owned and operated Polo Park Apartments under John Pass Investments, had employed Post Tensioned Systems to finish construction on the northside project at 4700 Polo Parkway.

The petition, filed in behalf of the Stricklands by Midland lawyer Al Schorre Jr., maintains that the carelessness of PTS employees ignited the fire on the evening of Oct. 19.

The PTS employees "used a cutting torch to trim reinforcing steel from the foundation of a unit under construction," says the petition.

"As a result of the carelessness and negligence of said employees, said unit was engulfed in flames," the petition says. Among other dwellings, the fire spread to the Strickland apartment.

The Stricklands, who now live in Ector County, lost "all of their clothing, appliances, jewelry and personal effects," the petition says.

PTS's negligence, the petition claims, was in:

—Using a blow torch in the immediate vicinity of flammable building materials during high wind conditions.

—Failing to have in use fire extinguishing or prevention devices during the blow-torch operations.

—Failing to inspect and supervise the work area after completion of the blow-torch operations.

In addition, the suit says that John Pass Investments further was negligent in that Pass "knew or should have known with the exercise of reasonable diligence that Post Tensioned Systems had engaged in other negligent conduct in the past which had resulted in similar instance."

Richard Nunez chosen to succeed Betty Sheeler

Richard Nunez, 21, a counselor for the Office of Housing and Community Development in Big Spring, has been appointed by the Midland County Commissioners' Court to succeed Betty Sheeler, who operates two federal housing programs in Midland.

Ms. Sheeler has resigned her $16,200 a year post as executive director of the the federal rent subsidy program and as coordinator of the $1.6 million federal Community Development rehabilitation program in south central Midland.

"It's a great opportunity for me," Nunez said of the $13,200 a year post, which he will take over Feb. 1, when Ms. Sheeler's resignation takes effect.

In Big Spring, Nunez works with a 299-unit rent subsidy program. In Midland, the alloted number of rent-subsidy units is 64.

Prosecutors continue to outline events leading to judge's death

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A plot including high-stakes gambling, narcotics and murder-for-hire continues to unravel before jurors hearing the murder trial of Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, accused of ordering the assassination of a federal judge in Texas in 1979.

The government's case entered its eighth day today as prosecutors continue outlining events leading to the murder of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. The trial was moved to Jacksonville because of pretrial publicity in Texas.

Wood, known as "Maximum John" because of his reputation for giving stiff penalties in drug cases, was shot once in the back outside his San Antonio townhouse on May 29, 1979, the day he had been scheduled to begin presiding at Chagra's narcotics trial.

That trial was postponed after a racketeering charge was added to Chagra's indictment. Chagra was convicted after Wood's death and is serving 30 years in federal prison for operating a continuing criminal enterprise.

In this case, Chagra, 39, is accused of paying convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson $250,000 to kill Wood. The government contends that Chagra, who played with hundreds of thousands of dollars at Las Vegas gaming tables, wanted Wood removed because he feared the judge would give him a harsh sentence.

Chagra and Harrelson were named last April in an indictment by a federal grand jury investigating Wood's murder.

Five jailed for unrelated charges

ODESSA — Five men were in jail here this morning on unrelated burglary and armed robbery charges.

Arturo Patino, 19, of Odessa, was jailed under $200,000 bond in connection with the Dec. 3, 1982, holdup of the Bill Sears Super Market, 707 S. Grant, and the robbery of the Exxon Service Station at 1701 S. Grant on Dec. 30, 1982.

Police said Patino was arrested Sunday in Dallas on warrants issued by Ector County authorities. He was brought back to Odessa Monday and is the second suspect arrested for the Bill Sears roberry, according to police, who said a third suspect is still at large.

Also in jail today was Royce Bob McCullums, 31, of Odessa. He was arrested after a citizen allegedly caught him and another man breaking into the citizen's pickup truck on the parking lot of the Holiday Inn, 3001 E. Highway 80, about 11:15 p.m. Monday.

The citizen held McCullums at gunpoint until officers arrived, according to police. The second man escaped on foot. Bond was set at $1,500.

Two other burglary suspects also remained in jail this morning after they were allegedly caught breaking into a house at 1604 Petroleum St. shortly before 9 p.m. Monday.

Under $10,000 bond each were Bruce Edward Digby, 18, of Odessa, and 18-year-old George Thomas Masters Jr. of Andrews.

Police said they received a burglary call about 8:40 p.m. Monday and found Masters in the back yard of the residence with two small jewelry boxes stuck in his belt. An hour or so later, according to police, Digby was arrested after he emerged from a hiding place between two nearby houses.

will be the sponsor for the INDs used at the Allison Center.

Synder said once the results are recorded, they will be reviewed by an institutional review board.

Newman explained it takes from five to seven years of human testing before a drug is FDA approved.

"All three phases of testing go through a risk-benefit analysis," he said. "If a drug is tried on a fatal disease, we may put up with toxic factors. With cancer, of course, you have to use toxic substance to kill the cancer cell. This is a risk analysis.

"In any event, everything has to be documented, then the sponsor can apply for a NDA (New Drug Approval). It takes time to do good studies. After the drug is (FDA) approved, there is an extensive follow-up through a monitoring system."

MMH trustees, MCHD board meet Thursday

The Midland Memorial Hospital board of trustees and the Midland County Hospital District board of directors will meet in their regular monthly meeting Thursday in the MMH medical conference room.

The agenda for the 12:30 p.m. trustees' meeting includes the results of the annual trustee evaluations, an update on the chemical dependency plans, an update on the master site plan and a report on the activities of the Joint Commission Accreditation of Hospitals.

In financial matters, the agenda includes a report on the second quarter capital equipment list, a presentation by Arthur Andersen & Co. on the quarterly financial review, the 1982 fiscal year audit presentation and a review of the November financial statements. The board is expected to take action on an utilization review plan.

The agenda for the 2 p.m. board of directors meeting includes action to be taken on the selection of an investment banker and on a letter from Midland Independent School District. The directors will discuss the joint election agreement with Midland County elections administrator, MISD and County of Midland. The financial statements will be considered along with transfer of funds.

DEATHS

Viola Longabaugh

Graveside services for Viola W. Longabaugh, 91, of Midland will be at 11 a.m. Thursday at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel.

She died Monday in a Midland hospital.

Mrs. Longabaugh was born Jan. 19, 1892, in Bartlesville, Okla., where she grew up. She married James Longabaugh in Tulsa, Okla. They moved to Midland in 1939 where her husband was a pioneer in the oil industry. Mrs. Longabaugh was active in bridge clubs in Midland. She was a member of the Christian Church.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Pat (Betty) McMullan of Midland; two sisters, Mrs. J.H. Mobley of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. Henry Daughtery of Portland, Ore.; two grandchildren, five great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren.

Mary B. Grubaugh

Rosary for Mary B. Grubaugh, 94, of 700 W. Scharbauer Drive, will be recited at 7:30 p.m. today in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Cliff Blackburn, pastor of St. Ann's Catholic Church, officiating. Burial will be in All Saints Cemetery in Des Plaines, Ill.

Mrs. Grubaugh died Monday in a Midland hospital.

She was born Sept. 15, 1888, in Hubbardston, Mich., grew up there and moved to Lansing, Mich., in the 1940s. Later, she lived in Chicago for 15 years and then in Midland for 15 years. She was a member of the Catholic Church.

Survivors include a daughter, Gladys L. Pickett of Flint, Mich., two grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Ralph S. Dunn

ODESSA — Ralph S. Dunn, 79, died Monday at his ranch home in Brown County after a three-year illness.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the Davis Morris Funeral Home in Brownwood with the Rev. Ruben Packer officiating. Graveside services will be at 4 p.m. Wednesday in Sunset Memorial Gardens in Odessa, directed by Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home. Officiating will be the Rev. Mike Jeffreys.

Dunn was born Jan. 18, 1904, in Bell County. Dunn was a rancher. He was married to Lucille Jackson Nov. 27, 1937, in Houston. He was a member of Victory Baptist Church in Brownwood. He moved to Odessa in 1925 and lived here almost 50 years. He retired in 1970 and moved to Brownwood where he began ranching, farming and oil investments.

Dunn began one of the first oil field trucking companies in West Texas by utilizing a fleet of Model T Ford trucks. And he also started Dunn's Van Lines, the first household moving van company in Odessa.

Survivors include his wife of Brownwood; a son, John A. Dunn of Brownwood; two daughters, Joyce Averitt of Brownwood and Mary Frances Malone of Duncanville; a brother, Billy Dunn of Midland; a sister, Annie Ford of Midland; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Lillie Reeves

Services for Lillie Reeves, 89, of 402 Hart St., will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday at the Bellview Baptist Church with the Rev. G.A. Magee officiating. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Reeves died early Tuesday morning in a Midland hospital.

She was born Jan. 26, 1893, in Georgia. She grew up in Atlanta, Ga., where she lived until she was in her teens. She then moved to Marysville where she lived for many years before moving to the Greenwood area. In 1943, she moved to Midland. Her husband, Arbin M. Reeves, died July 11, 1945. She was a charter member of the Bellview Baptist Church.

Survivors include three sons, A.C. Reeves of Midland, Leon Reeves of San Marcos, and C.L. Reeves of Brownwood; six daughters, Viola Pond of Glencove, Willa Dean McGee of Midland, S.E. Powell of Glencove, Sue Stewart of Midland, Pearl Hardin of Levelland and Jessie Cole of Fort Worth; 33 grandchildren, 63 great-grandchildren, 22 great-great-grandchildren, six step-great-grandchildren and three step-great-great-grandchildren.

Otto Letterman

ODESSA — Otto Letterman, 80, of Odessa died Sunday in Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home chapel with Loy Mitchell of Eisenhower Church of Christ officiating. Burial will be in Odessa Cemetery.

He was born Nov. 21, 1902, in Northview, Mo., and was an oilfield pumper for GMK Oil Company of Midland. He began work in June 1927 for Sinclair Oil Company and was a member of Eisenhower Church of Christ. He was married to Corinne Moore Aug. 15, 1936, in Hobbs, N.M.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Jean Ross of Odessa; his mother, Mrs. Georgia Cass of Marshfield, Mo.; a brother, Winfred Letterman of Marshfield, Mo.; four sisters, Marie Horner of Neodasha, Kan., Bulah Brashears and Corinne Meyers, both of Straford, Mo., and Lorinda Jump of Marshfield, Mo.; two grandchildren and three great-gradchildren.

Jerry Falwell to speak at Kelview Heights Baptist

Jerry Falwell, founder of the Moral Majority, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Kelview Heights Baptist Church, 407 W. Alta Ave.

Falwell was named by U.S. News and World Report as one of the 20 most influential people of 1982. Expressing his opinions and commenting publicly on issues, Falwell seeks to buttress what he perceives as an eroding of the nation's moral fiber.

"If the leaders of Christendom in the nation don't stand up against immorality, we can't expect anyone else to lead," Falwell said. "I believe it is the duty of gospel preachers to set the pace. When sin moves to the front, preachers and Christians everywhere must speak out. I will as long as I have breath."

More recently, Falwell has attacked the spread of communism and has turned his guns on the immorality of television shows emphasizing and glamorizing illicit sex, featuring homosexuality, divorce, moral depravity and unrestrained violence.

Falwell, nationally known pastor of the Thomas Road Baptist Church in Lynchburg, Va., speaks weekly on "The Old Time Gospel Hour," a radio and television program. He has been honored by the National Religious Broadcasters and other religious organizations and magazines. The Religious Heritage of America selected him as the 1979 Clergyman of the Year in America.

Two suspects in jail on burglary charges

Two burglary suspects were in jail this morning after a police officer said he saw one of them walking down the street with a blanket full of what turned out to be stolen office equipment.

Officer Scott Howard said he was patrolling in the 200 block of Missouri Avenue shortly after 11 p.m. Monday when he saw a man stagger toward a parked station wagon and lay a blanket on the ground beside the vehicle.

Howard said he approached the man and placed him under arrest for public intoxication after smelling a strong odor of alcohol on his breath.

The blanket contained an assortment of office machines, including several calculators, later determined to have been taken in a break-in of HCB Contractors, 201 W. Missouri, according to police.

A second man found inside the station wagon also was arrested. Both men said they were living in the car. Formal burglary charges were to be filed against them sometime today.

In a theft complaint, Judy Folia of 4331 W. Dengar told officers she was at a car wash in the 2600 block of North Midland Drive about 1 p.m. Sunday and was vacuuming her car after placing several items, including her purse, on the ground beside the vehicle.

A young boy about 10 years old approached and made some remarks about her having "a nice car." The boy then left in a white pickup truck driven by an adult and containing three other juveniles and a large, Mastiff-type dog. After they had gone, she discovered her wallet containing $500 was missing.

Midland will get funds to improve airport ramp

WASHINGTON — Midland will be receiving $516,993 from an airport development fund known as ADAP that will go to expanding the air carrier parking ramp at Midland Regional Airport.

The announcement came from the office of U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, who represents Midland in the 19th Congressional District.

Col. Wilson Banks, aviation director for the city, said this will be added to previous ADAP grants to give a total of slightly more than $1.8 million for the project.

The air carrier parking ramp is one phase of a $17 million construction program planned for the regional airport. Banks said he hopes the city can receive at least another $8-9 million from ADAP to assist with the cost. ADAP is funded by users' fees, which means it is paid by persons who utilize the airports.

MARC cancels meeting scheduled for tonight

Midland Association for Retarded Citizens has canceled its meeting today, which was scheduled for 7:30 p.m., because of ice and snow in Lubbock.

According to a spokesman for the organization, guest speaker Jack Kirkpatrick with the Kiwanis Club could not make it out of Lubbock. The 16-inch snowfall last Friday hasn't left the city, despite the warmer temperatures and sunny days.

"He said it was like a solid sheet of ice up there," said the spokesman, explaining that a few inches of snow and ice melt during the day and refreeze at night.

The meeting will be rescheduled.

No injuries reported in fire

There were no injuries reported in a fire which destroyed a mobile home in northwest Midland County late this morning.

Details were sketchy at press time, but the mobile home, which reportedly was owned by Loise Bale of Odessa, is located one mile north of County Road 60 near the intersection with CR 1278.

There were three people in the home at the time of the fire but all apparently escaped injury.

Genetic counseling charting new paths

By SANDY ROVNER
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of two articles on problem pregnancies.

WASHINGTON — A young woman in a laboratory coat sits at a desk cutting out what appear to be photographs of striped sausages.

Meticulously she matches them up on a chart, numbered from 1 to 23. Two of the striped sausages, with matching bands, line up under each number.

Under the number "21" there are three.

The young woman sighs. She is a cytogeneticist, analyzing photographs (magnified hundreds of times) of the sausage-shaped chromosomes taken from a single cell of a developing embryo. The cell itself was isolated from a small amount of amniotic fluid drawn earlier from the mother.

The extra 21st chromosome is a dead giveaway that the embryo has Down's syndrome and will develop with varying degrees of mental retardation and other abnormalities.

At this point there is just the chart with the extra chromosome. The anguish will come later. (Extra or missing chromosomes always portend serious problems. Normal humans have 46.)

Down's is one of a growing number of genetic defects that can be detected prenatally through chromosomal analysis. Others, like neural tube defects — anencephaly and spina bifida, for example — are detected biochemically. Some potential abnormalities are limited to certain ethnic groups: Tay Sachs disease among Jews, sickle cell anemia among blacks. (Still others, like cystic fibrosis, a major killer of children and young adults, cannot yet be detected prenatally.)

THESE FINDINGS ARE all part of a relatively new medical speciality: genetic counseling. And genetic counseling goes hand in hand with another burgeoning field: the treatment of infertility.

Today, the ultimate treatment for infertility is the implantation in the mother of her own egg, fertilized outside of her body with her husband's sperm — the so-called in vitro fertilization (IVF). But that process is still considered a last resort, performed in only a few specialized centers, after all other techniques have failed.

Indeed, the triad of genetic counseling, infertility treatment and IVF has been almost exclusively the domain of research centers, usually connected to universities or teaching hospitals.

Dr. John Young, obstetrics-gynecology, and Dr. Mark Geier, M.D. and Ph.D. (in genetics) are breaking the mold. Their practice — they call themselves "Genetic Consultants" — is basically clinical, which means they are concerned principally with the patient, rather than in furthering research. Their specialties are twofold: genetic counseling and the treatment of infertility, up to and including IVF. As far as they know, they have the only IVF program in the Washington area.

"We regard them (their specialties) as our two children," says Young, "and we have no favorites."

The men met nearly five years ago when both were training at John Hopkins Medical School, a major center for genetics, infertility and IVF. Drs. Georgeanna and Howard Jones, the Norfolk endocrinologist and obstetrician-gynecologist team behind this country's first IVF baby, had spent 35 years at Hopkins working on infertility and were — and continue to be — a major influence on Young and Geier.

SAYS YOUNG, "SOON after I opened my practice, one of the local obstetricians suggested to me that since my recent training at Hopkins allowed me some areas of expertise not commonly found, I ought to think about a genetic counseling service ..." Young contacted Geier and the two quickly found that they were meeting a major community need.

As their practice burgeoned they felt the need for their own laboratory and became part owners of Molecular Medicine, possibly the most sophisticated privately owned facility of its kind.

Except for the laparoscopy, and any needed microsurgery that is performed under a general anesthetic in a hospital, all testing, analyses, sonography, amniocentesis and even the delicate in vitro fertilization procedures are performed either in the office or in the lab, a few steps away. In their Bethesda, Md., practice, they perform, for example, more amniocentesis procedures than Hopkins itself; in fact, say the doctors, they have become, in the three years of their existence, twice as big as the Hopkins facility.

For the most part, patients referred to them are sent back to the referring physician after consultation, treatment and, often, pregnancy thanks to the latest techniques in treating infertility.

The Genetic Consultants IVF program has only just gotten underway. So far the physicians have implanted eggs in two patients, but have not yet produced a pregnancy through IVF.

The major portion of their practice involves genetic counseling in the four major categories of inherited disorders:

— CHROMOSOMAL ABNORMALITIES of which Down's syndrome is the most common, occurring more frequently in pregnancies after age 35. A 24-year-old woman has a less than 1-per-1,000 chance of having a Downs baby whereas a woman at 40 has one chance per 100 births.

— "Single gene" disorders caused by a mutation in a single gene. Although usually too small to be seen directly, scientists now can detect some of the abnormalities by biochemical tests, in some cases even before conception. Examples are Tay Sachs disease and sickle cell anemia.

— Sex-linked disorders like hemophilia or Duchenne muscular dystrophy. Most are disorders linked to the X chromosome and generally are carried by the female and afflict the male. Females have two X chromosomes; males have one X and one Y.

— So-called "developmental abnormalities" of which a common one is the neural tube defect, a condition where the central nervous system develops incompletely. One neural tube defect is spina bifida, in which there are openings along the spinal column and often results in varying degrees of paralysis and mental retardation. In its most severe form the defect is called anencephaly, a condition, almost always fatal, in which the brain develops incompletely, or not at all.

Genetic Consultants is the first private service licensed to perform the alpha-fetoprotein test, a series of steps that can pinpoint developmental abnormalities in the two out of 1,000 cases where they occur. Because most occur in women with no previous family history of the disorder, Young and Geier believe all pregnant women should be screened with a blood test at the proper time in the pregnancy between the 15th and 21st weeks.

THE AFP KIT HAS not yet been fully approved for use in this country. The Food and Drug administraiton, hawever, has permitted experimental use, and now is beginning to allow the test where there is appropriate follow-up.

Both physicians emphasize that, no panic, no conclusions (and certainly no decision on abortions) be drawn from any of the screening tests until after an amniocentesis.

Valentino brings Hollywood to Rome

By DANIELA PETROFF
AP Fashion Writer

ROME (AP) — Italian designer Valentino's glamourous high fashion collection for this year's spring-summer season brings the fondest film screen memories into 1980's focus.

From daytime into the wee hours of the night, the woman Valentino presented during his show in Rome Thursday night is a Hollywood saga of Easter Parade polka dots and wide brimmed hats, of Audrey Hepburn in "Roman Holiday" city suits, of Joan Crawford sheaths and dazzling ball gowns.

Under Valentino's direction, old favorites come to new life. He gives the neat city suit jacket a revamping with a stitched-in cowl back. A flaming red sheath blazes new trails with its futuristic folds. Abstract butterflies dance on classic debutante strapless gowns.

To go with the times, Valentino steals the laden look of Hollywood jewelry and fashions it into over-sized costume baubles of plastic and strass, pendant earrings and circular bracelets.

Another old favorite stiched to fit modern needs is the crinoline, which Valentino incorporates in daytime and nightime outfits alike.

Narrower and softer than their ancestors, these crinolines peek in pert polka dots from the hems of loosely pleated tweed suits, or add an extra layer to bouffant cocktail dresses.

For evening, Valentino prefers a slinkier look than the Scarlet O'Hara gowns seen in some of his most recent collections. To dance into the warmer nights of 1983, he proposes a gown with stiff flat bodice and loosely wrapped skirt, usually in a pale pastel floral or butterfly print.

Last fall, Gene Ewing of Bis captured the elegance of Fred Astaire in an anglo wool pinstripe spencer jacket with circular moving skirt and satise scarf. The trend toward suits has continued into spring and summer, judging by the collections being shown in Paris Monday.

Fashion showing in Paris emphasizes spring suits

By PAT MCCOLL
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

PARIS — The French couture is suiting up for spring.

When the spring-summer collections opened here Monday, the suit was the star of the season — from Emanuel Ungaro's new lean, linear ones to Hubert deGivenchy's two-piece beauties with dramatic corolla sleeves.

The fate of the Chanel suit will be at stake as everyone awaits the results of the first collaboration of Karl Lagerfeld and the House of Chanel. Lagerfeld, who also designs the Chloe and Fendi ready-to-wear lines, was named artistic counselor for Chanel couture in October and has had 2 1-2 months to tinker with a look that has endured for more than 50 years.

The words that seem to crop up in every designer conversation this week are "trompe l'oeil" and "sexy."

Trompe l'oeil is the element of surprise at Dior, where those sharply notched suit lapels turn out to be stitched on; and at Givenchy, where the dramatic waist-cinching belts and elaborate bows turn out to be eye-fooling fakes accomplished through embroidery and beading.

Sexy are the shapes that emphasize every curve. Sexy, too, are those above-the-knee lengths at Ungaro and Givenchy and the mid-thigh slips on Dior's slightly longer day length.

Whichever length they choose, most designers stick with it throughout the collection. Ungaro, however, balances short with a few longer, slim looks, which he describes as "supple but structured."

He still loves black and white in positive-negative stripes but has thrown in elements of bright colors to liven things up.

Among his own favorites in his new collection are the slightly retro late-day silk dresses with floating midriff panels or draping.

Givenchy describes his collection, especially for evening, as "not only luxurious but absolutely sumptuous," with sequined chiffon, faille and tulle worked into fantasies inspired by the colors and paintings of Matisse, Miro and Dufy.

At Dior, Marc Bohan is also in a colorful mood, with strong doses of red, orange, royal blue and yellow added to his basic black, white and navy palette.

He, too, is going all out for evening with sexy satin sheaths.

Cupid vanishing from cards

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Valentine's Day is still an affair of the heart for most romantic greeting senders, but another long-familiar symbol of sentimentality is fading from the scene, according to an expert on holiday salutations.

Cupid, that miniature messenger with the bow and arrows whose relationship to romance dates back to the Roman Empire, no longer hits the target with our sophisticated younger generation, declares Hallmark's John Dinardo.

In the hands of the Alexandrian poets and artists, Cupid, the Latin name for Eros, god of love, became a mischievous, winged lad with essentially human characteristics, Dinardo explains. As such he became a popular part of the Valentine picture and a fixture on its cards from the time of their origin in the early 1800s.

But in the past five or six years, says Dinardo, modern young romantics apparently have come to regard the cherubic archer as a "corny" clutch at the past. So Cupid gradually has been displaced in greeting card designs by butterflies, kittens, puppies, birds, rainbows, floral arrangements and contemporary photographic displays.

With over 800 million cards expected to be exchanged this Feb. 14, traditionalists need not fear any change of hearts on the majority of the Valentine greetings available, Dinardo promises. But, he adds, they will be enhanced by brighter colors, new symbols and different designs.

Sweetly rhymed messages of love as usual will dominate most of the current crop, he says, but frank declarations of affection and funny irreverent sayings are catching up, particularly with the younger element that buys some three-quarters of the Valentines sent each year.

DEAR ABBY

'Pass' on drinking test may indicate a failing

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 66. He drinks no less than eight to 10 beers every day, plus four or five shots of whiskey. He insists that he is not an alcoholic. I think he is. What do you think? — NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: I can best answer your question by repeating the following letter.

DEAR ABBY: You probably won't remember me, but I am a fairly successful, middle-aged family man who wrote to you about a year ago telling you I thought I had a problem with alcohol. I was drunk when I wrote that letter and couldn't remember mailing it, but I must have, because I received an answer from you!

You sent a list of 12 questions to be answered yes or no, and told me if there were four or more "yesses" I was in deep trouble. You also urged me to go to just one Alcoholics Anonymous meeting.

To make a long story short, I went, feeling slightly embarrassed, but my embarrassment soon turned to courage when I found doctors, lawyers, musicians, schoolteachers, bellhops, policemen and construction workers there. I was relieved to learn that I was not alone — that others suffered from the same feelings of fear, inadequacy and guilt that I felt.

On this, my first anniversary of sobriety, I just had to say thank you for sending me to A.A. You saved my life. — RAY

DEAR RAY: No thanks due me. I merely pointed to the road. You took it.

To celebrate your sobriety, I am printing the 12 questions so that others who wonder if they have a drinking problem can test themselves. The test was written by those who know firsthand what alcoholism is all about — members of Alcoholics Anonymous.

1. Have you ever decided to stop drinking for a week or so, but only lasted for a couple of days? Yes ( ); No ( ).
2. Do you wish people would stop nagging you about your drinking? Yes ( ); No ( ).
3. Have you ever switched from one kind of drink to another in the hope that this would keep you from getting drunk? Yes ( ); No ( ).
4. Have you had a drink in the morning during the past year? Yes ( ); No ( ).
5. Do you envy people who can drink without getting into trouble? Yes ( ); No ( ).
6. Have you had problems connected with drinking during the past year? Yes ( ); No ( ).
7. Has your drinking caused trouble at home? Yes ( ); No ( ).
8. Do you ever try to get "extra" drinks at a party because you do not get enough? Yes ( ); No ( ).
9. Do you tell yourself you can stop drinking anytime you want to, even though you keep getting drunk when you don't mean to? Yes ( ); No ( ).
10. Have you missed days at work because of drinking? Yes ( ); No ( ).
11. Do you have "blackouts"? Yes ( ); No ( ). (A blackout is when there are drinking hours or days you cannot remember.)
12. Have you ever felt that your life would be better if you did not drink? Yes ( ); No ( ).

Alcoholics Anonymous is a fellowship of men and women who share their experience, strength and hope with one another so that they may solve a common problem and help others to recover from alcoholism.

The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop drinking. There are no dues or fees for membership. It is self-supporting through voluntary contributions.

Look for A.A. in your phone book, or write to Box 459, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017 for information.

Are men casting off 'macho' image?

By FRANK GREEN
Copley News Service

John Wayne's celluloid image — that of the aggressive, pragmatic, rational, tough and strong hero — is out.

Dustin Hoffman's anti-hero image is in.

At least that's the tack American men should be taking in their search of a role model, asserts author-psychologist Mark Gerzon. He believes that the traditional definition of masculinity — epitomized by Wayne's typically one-dimensional film characters — has inflicted irreparable damage over the years to the male psyche.

"I've talked to dozens of Vietnam veterans, for instance, who tell me, almost to a man, that they went to war with John Wayne in their eyes. He was their hero and they wanted to be just like him. But they discovered that it wasn't a John Wayne war. And when they came back home, they didn't get a John Wayne welcome," says the thin, mustachioed Massachusetts resident, who proclaims the emergence of a new male ideal.

"John Wayne, at least in his film persona, was a lie."

TODAY'S MAN is much more comfortable emulating the Dustin Hoffmans of the screen, who tend to be family oriented, gentle, moral and emotional beings, says Gerzon, 32.

Married and the father of two young sons, Gerzon arrived at his conclusions about the changing male spirit while researching a book on historic male role models. After interviewing scores of men from various walks of life and from all age groups and social strata — including Dr. Benjamin Spock, Daniel Ellsberg, Stewart Brand, and the dozens of men he sees in his practice, among others — the project evolved into an examination of the radical changes that have swept American manhood over the last decade.

His findings are presented in "A Choice of Heroes," recently published by Houghton Mifflin Co.

Like the men he heralds in his book, Gerzon has a mild, reticent demeanor about him. He is soft-spoken at times to the point of being inaudible and he is never quick with an answer.

"I am much like that Dustin Hoffman image that I write about," he admits.

American manhood, until recently, based its collective self-image on such inherited archetypes as the frontiersman, the soldier, the breadwinner and the expert, he says.

And although these myths may still partly control the attitudes, perceptions and actions of many American men, Gerzon believes that they are gradually being replaced by new models — the healer, the mediator, the companion, the colleague and the nurturer — that are more true to the modern age.

Mark Gerzon: Macho is out.

"MEN, AT LEAST in my experience, are taking part in the births of their children, are devoting less time to their jobs and more time to their families and are interested in less violent pursuits than football," he says, adding that he was heartened, following the football strike, by newspaper reports that many former fans were swearing off the sport. (Nielsen ratings show that ABC's "Monday Night Football" is drawing fewer viewers than last season.)

"Many men are no longer willing to suppress the side of themselves that they perceive to be unmanly."

Gerzon additionally sees an influx of films — "Kramer Vs. Kramer," "Coming Home," among others — that are casting as the hero "the man whose challenge is not to prove how strong and tough he is, but to prove how nurturant he is, how caring he is and how he can grow as a human being."

This potentially radical departure from human history can be traced to the advent of two unlikely trends: feminism and nuclear weapons, he says.

"Women still want a man who is strong, has self-confidence and can earn a living, but they don't want a John Wayne who tries to dominate them, controls them or tries to make them support him without feeling that he has to support them just as well. They want emotional companions who are sensitive, vulnerable, tender, loving and nurturant," continues Gerzon.

THE CHANGING FACE of weaponry has also contributed to the undermining of primal male traits.

"For most of human history, the male was useful for the survival of society only if he was aggressive, if he was tough, if he was strong, if he didn't cry, if he was willing to kill and good at killing," he says. "Males were raised by their parents with the idea that if he's going to have to fight a war, he'd better have a certain amount of toughness if he's going to make it.

"Nuclear weapons have made those beliefs obsolete. It's no longer heroic to be aggressive and no longer heroic to have bigger weapons."

Gerzon referred to an October Gallup Poll in which 74 percent of Americans surveyed expressed the need for a nuclear weapons freeze.

"What they're really saying is that the ball game has changed; that power, domination and aggressiveness is not going to save us, it's going to kill us," he says.

Despite his assertions, Gerzon admits that there are still many men who live lives patterned after Clint Eastwood or Charles Bronson.

There may even be a "macho backlash" developing in response to the recent softening of the male emotional makeup, he warns.

"Walk into bookstores and you're assailed by books that exploit men's uncertainty and preach that if you don't do certain things, you aren't a real man. There's 'Everything You Need to Know About What's Truly Masculine' and 'Real Men Don't Eat Quiche.' Well, my motto is that men should eat whatever they want to eat," he says.

THE "MACHO MAN" stereotypes, Gerzon predicts, will nevertheless become increasingly obsolete. Those that continue to deny change will be doomed to failure.

"The majority of men, though, have already realized the necessity of establishing with women symbiotic, complementary, mutual images of masculinity and femininity," he says.

"They don't want to be just a success object or just a paycheck any longer. They want to face the challenges of life in triumph together with women — not alone."

The 10 gallon hat actually holds three-fourths of a gallon.

Fresh artichokes will squeak when rubbed against another one.

AT WIT'S END

Our real ambassadors

By ERMA BOMBECK

They never make the Most Admired List.

No one throws a tribute dinner on their behalf.

And I can't remember when one of them ever got an award for what they do.

They're wives of military and diplomatic personnel who serve in countries throughout the world. Women who amended the marriage vows to read, "I do and I'm packed!"

I hear from them a lot, thanks to the papers that carry this column and from friends who are kind enough to send it on to them.

Mostly I hear from them twice a year: the Fourth of July and the holidays. That's when the women suffer an attack of "home." It gets through to them. From one of our bases in the Philippines: "How much we Americans take for granted. There's no place like the good ole U.S. of A. Our children would give anything for a Big Mac and a trip to a local shopping mall. We'd love to be able to enjoy the spirit of fall football games and burning leaves."

From Guam: "Tell us what is going on in our country. Not the big political stuff which we hear about, but has slang changed? Are there any mothers who still stay home? Has the family really changed drastically?"

The letters come from Germany, Belgium and Saudi Arabia, all wanting reassurance that their country is still here and is as they remember it.

These women are probably the closest most of the world gets to our country. Each and every member of their family is, in their own unique way, an ambassador of the United States. And what do they talk about when they get new orders? Are the schools great? Can I speak the language? Are there live-in snakes and creepy crawlers? Is the government friendly? Nope. The No. 1 priority is, "Will the curtains and draperies fit?"

Military people never keep diaries, just curtains.

I read every word of the letters and always experience a feeling of sadness. I wish I had the resources to take my own troupe of women to these countries, not to entertain the servicemen, but their wives and children. Somehow it might comfort them to know that supermarkets still have the carts with the wheels designed to go in four directions, that every woman in America would eat rice the rest of her life to have a live husband on the weekends from September to March, and that one-size-fits-all is still a question.

And I could look them directly in the eyes and say, "Thank you."

TIPS ON TRIPS

There are three important steps you should follow to ensure that you are getting value from your tour:

The first step is to look for the name of the company responsible for the tour. The name is sometimes located on the front cover, but more often is found in the back of the brochure under the heading, "Responsibility Clause." Make sure the company is reliable.

The second step is to check the brochure for clarity and details. A good brochure states clearly what you are getting for your money. It will explain the class of the hotel, what meals are included, what sightseeing is included and whether the tour is fully escorted or merely hosted. Be careful of camouflages such as adding 15 percent for service charges and taxes.

The third step is to check the brochure for general information. For resort areas, the brochure should identify the weather conditions for different seasons. It should also note the amount of physical exertion required for specific tours.

A free brochure on sensible trip planning is available by writing to: Grand Circle Travel, Inc., 555 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022, or by calling toll-free 1-800-847-4240.

Garner receives Purple Heart after 32 years

AP Laserphoto

Actor James Garner, left, smiles as Maj. General Llyle Barker of the U.S. Army pins on the Purple Heart which Garner earned during the Korean War.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was a long time coming, but former Pvt. James S. Bumgarner is still delighted with the Purple Heart he just got from the Army for his service in Korea.

"After 32 years it's better to receive this now than posthumously," joked the 54-year-old, who has since become famous as as actor James Garner, as Maj. Gen. Llyle Barker pinned the medal to his sports jacket on Monday in the offices of Lorimar Productions.

Garner was wounded April 23, 1951, while serving with the 5th Regimental Combat Team of the 24th Division.

"As a matter of fact, I got it in the backside," said Garner. "I went into a foxhole head-first and I was a little late. There's a lot of room for error with a wound in the rear. It's a wide target."

The presentation included an oak leaf cluster because Garner, who changed his name from Bumgarner when he became an actor, had been wounded twice. Garner did not receive the Purple Heart until now because of a military mixup.

Coincidentally, Garner is about to start work on a military movie called "Tank."

Nancy Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan got a private tour of Vatican art at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, escorted by Cardinal Terrance Cooke and says the exhibit is "truly, truly spectacular."

Mrs. Reagan and Cooke, the archbishop of New York, on Monday night viewed the collection of 237 sculptures, paintings, tapestries and other art works on loan from the Vatican museum in the first major exhibition of Vatican art ever sent abroad.

The first lady spent several minutes gazing at "The Deposition," a huge painting by Caravaggio depicting the body of Jesus just removed from the cross.

After the tour, Mrs. Reagan and Cooke joined guests for a dinner attended by 350 museum patrons and other dignitaries.

"I'll have to come back at least three or four times to see everything," she said.

The exhibit, now on view for museum members only, will be open to the public beginning Feb. 26.

Steve Reeves

ESCONDIDO, Calif. (AP) — Steve Reeves, a former Mr. Universe and muscular star of Hercules movies, isn't slowing down much at age 57, and wants other people to hurry up.

He's developed a new technique for people to flex their muscles, particularly in their legs, by what he calls "PowerWalking."

Reeves, who wrote a book on the technique, says PowerWalking "looks like a brisk walk, like you have somewhere to go and you're getting there in a hurry. But it's much more than that."

Reeves, whose pictures included "Duel of the Titans," "Morgan the Pirate," "Hercules Unchained," "Goliath and the Barbarians" and "Athena," says the walking technique coordinates rhythmic breathing and arm movements with long strides to improve fitness.

He discovered PowerWalking through working with his horse. By "lengthening my stride and picking up my pace while swinging my arms in rhythm with my stride and taking deep breaths," he was able to keep up with his horse when both were walking.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Former Black Panther Party activist Eldridge Cleaver, who once urged blacks to kill police, says he is past "the excitement of the '60s," and wants to be mayor of Oakland.

The ex-Marxist, convicted felon and onetime Panther "minister of information" says his bid for city hall will rest on formation of a national land reform convention. He wants federal land opened up for settlement by people who cannot afford homes.

In an interview published Sunday, the 47-year-old Cleaver said: "Land is a powerful force in the black psyche. But we need to address this without a call for separation."

Movie director George Cukor dies of heart failure at 83

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Director George Cukor, who made stylish high-society films with some of Hollywood's greatest leading ladies, then capped his career with an Oscar for "My Fair Lady," is dead at age 83.

Cukor, born in New York City and the son of Hungarian immigrants died late Monday in the emergency room of Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said hospital spokeswoman Tess Griffin.

"He came in in heart failure and died of it" about 15 minutes later, Ms. Griffin said.

Cukor never married and his gardener of 30 years, who asked that his name not be used, said only the household staff was present when Cukor was stricken at his Beverly Hills home.

The gardener said Cukor had been in good health. "He was strong," he said.

Although Cukor won his only Oscar for "My Fair Lady," the musical about a London linguist based on George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," his career was filled with memorable films since 1930, when four Cukor-directed movies were released.

His hits included "Dinner at Eight" in 1933, "Little Women" also in 1933, "David Copperfield" (1934), "Camille" (1936), "The Philadelphia Story" in 1940, "Keeper of the Flame" (1943), "Gaslight" (1944), "Adam's Rib" (1949), "Born Yesterday" (1950), "Pat and Mike" (1952), "A Star Is Born" (1954) and "Rich and Famous" in 1981, his last movie.

Three of those, "Keeper of the Flame," "Adam's Rib" and "Pat and Mike," starred Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn.

He was especially noted for his work with great female leads like Marilyn Monroe ("Let's Make Love"), Greta Garbo ("Camille" and "Two-Faced Woman"), Joan Crawford, Judy Garland, Judy Holliday, Audrey Hepburn, Elizabeth Taylor, Jean Harlow, Sophia Loren ("Heller in Pink Tights") and Ingrid Bergman ("Gaslight").

"I believe in working through actors. The better I succeed, the less obvious is my function," Cukor once said.

He was over 80 when he directed Candice Bergen and Jacqueline Bisset in "Rich and Famous," and film historians could not recall anyone his age ever directing a major film, particularly working as hard as he did.

George Cukor

"I was very tempted by the scripts," Cukor said at the time. "But I questioned whether I should undertake such a big project at my age. I'm not 'ga-ga' as yet, but it is a big job."

Miss Bergen said at the time Cukor was "very human — acerbic, witty, highly opinionated, with specific tastes, likes and dislikes. It's a privilege to have the benefit of 60 years of accumulated instincts."

"You have to be pretty gutsy to do a woman's picture or a good light comedy," Cukor once said. "Too many people equate the woman's picture with soap opera. I haven't made any sloppy, sentimental sob stories."

Cukor's Hungarian-born father, Victor Cukor, was an assistant district attorney in New York when Cukor was born in 1899. As a boy, Cukor attended Public School No. 88 and graduated from De Witt Clinton High School.

During World War I, Cukor put aside his theatrical ambitions and served in the Student Army Training Corps.

His first theater job was in Chicago as assistant stage manager of a play called "The Better Ole."

In 1926, he began directing plays for producer Gilbert Miller. Among them: "The Constant Wife," "The Cardboard Lover," "The Furies," and "The Great Gatsby." He went to Hollywood in 1929, working as dialogue director on "River of Romance" and "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Cukor almost directed "Gone with the Wind," but David O. Selznick fired him after a few weeks of shooting. There were reports that Clark Gable feared his role would be overshadowed by Vivien Leigh. Cukor himself said years later: "I don't really know why I was fired."

National Archives has new look

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Archives has a new look inside.

The Constitution, Declaration of Independence and Bill of Rights still stand in the middle, but the 26 display cases arching in a semi-circle around those centerpieces of democracy have been redone ffor the first time since 1952.

A few tourists have already visited the new display, which was finished ahead of schedule. The formal opening is slated to follow a reception Thursday night.

Lights in the display cases have been moved to the edges to reduce glare and make it easier to read documents. And explanations are now printed on a white background to make them more legible.

The 26 cases tell a coordinated story entitled "The Formation of the Union, 1774-1789."

Opening the exhibit is the Articles of Association of 1774, in which representatives of the colonies brought their grievances to the attention of the King, but stressed their loyalty at the same time. The document begins "We, his Majesty's most loyal subjects."

The battles of Lexington and Concord followed within six months, however, changing the colonists attitude and the course of history.

One exhibit includes a signed statement by a witness at Lexington, asserting that the British opened fire after the Minutemen began to disperse. Another features George Washington's account book.

Washington agreed to serve as head of the Revolutionary Army without pay, but he wanted to be reimbursed for expenses, and kept track of them carefully.

Another case contains Continental money, and another a table of postage rates under Benjamin Franklin, the first postmaster general.

Other exhibits detail the treachery of Benedict Arnold, the efforts of the Continental Congress to get the states to pay for running the federal government, scale models of Revolutionary War soldiers and a report from Alexander Hamilton on the need for a national bank.

Former cook testifies Fleming beat Marx

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — An ailing, elderly Groucho Marx was once beaten by his companion, Erin Fleming, and intimidated into performing at concerts against his doctors' wishes, the comedian's former cook has testified.

Martha Brooks was the first witness called by lawyers for the Bank of America, seeking to force Miss Fleming to return more than $400,000 that Marx gave her before he died in 1977.

Ms. Brooks testified Monday that soon after Miss Fleming moved into Marx's house in 1971, she persuaded the comic to perform a series of concerts, including one at New York's Carnegie Hall. She said his doctors had warned that Marx was too weak for the performances.

"He had to go because he was afraid of her (Miss Fleming)," said Ms. Brooks.

POSITIVE THINKING

People can program minds to be winners

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

In Hong Kong strolling through the crowded narrow streets of Kowloon I passed a tatoo studio. In the window were pictures and slogans one could have tatooed on arms or chest. Among them were flags, pretty girls and of all things one that read, "Born to lose."

I was so astounded that I actually entered the shop run by a Chinese man whose English was hardly better than my Chinese which meant it wasn't much. But as it turned out he was somewhat of a philosopher. Pointing to the sign, "Born to lose," I tried to ask if people actually had that tatooed on themselves. At first he thought I wanted it for myself but when I made it clear that I just wished to know if any human being would really have that imbedded in his flesh, he said he had done it a few times. But then he added in broken English, "Before tatoo on chest, he tatoo on mind." If one thinks long enough that he was born to lose that negative concept will assuredly be tatooed inexorably on the personality.

A big fact in human existence is that if things are tough one has to get tougher than the things. If circumstances are pushing one around the individual must stand up to them and start pushing circumstances. Life may be described in various ways but one thing is sure, it is a battle and one has got to get in there battling against adversity, against incipient failure and against the tendency to give in to negative attitudes.

A friend of mine, an automobile dealer, had been having a rough time. Just about everyone was talking down the automobile sales business until he had come to expect the inevitability of failure. But one day he went to a meeting of a Rotary Club and heard a speech on positive thinking which motivated him.

Later in a letter he said, "That talk had a solid message for me. I have made up my mind to rid myself of a whole mess of negative thinking that prevails in our troubled industry these past four years. "Enough is enough. They have been beating on me too long. I'm going to get myself off the canvas, brush myself off, change my fighting style and come out fighting a new battle."

When I read that fighting letter I thought of the famous heavy weight champion of years ago, James J. Corbett. He was once asked what was necessary to become a champion. The great battler said, "the ability to fight one more round." It is all as simple as the fact that people give up and don't go out there and fight that one round more. All of us as children became acquainted with an old saying, "If first you don't succeed, try, try, again." That principle is rudimentary to the achievement of success.

Winston Churchill was invited to an English school and the headmaster said to the students, "Our speaker is the greatest Englishman of our time, indeed one of the greatest in history. Listen carefully to him for what he says will be wise, very wise."

Churchill looked over the top of his glasses at the big crowd of youngsters then said, "Never, never, never, give up." That was all. But perhaps it was enough. The person who never gives up, who hangs in there tenaciously, who keeps on fighting, struggling, and trying will win ultimately for that person has programmed the mind to be a winner. And that which is planted deeply in the mind as a greatly sought goal will reproduce itself as fact. If that goal is to be a winner in some field of endeavor, a winner you will become. Every one of us needs to fight the good fight, to keep it going, to carry on, and never give up. All those time honored and basic phrases are still valid and always will be. And they are bound to work for the person who programs the mind to be a winner.

The One Place Where Freedom and Super Prices Meet

Lebanese spokesman looks to U.S. to salvage ailing talks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.S.-sponsored negotiations between Israel and Lebanon are reaching "a dead end," a government spokesman declared today, calling on the United States to save the talks.

The spokesman repeated his government's rejection of two key Israeli demands in the negotiations, which began in late December but did not get down to substantive issues for three weeks because of a deadlock over the agenda.

"Israel is insisting on maintaining early-warning stations and on establishing normal relations, and Lebanon cannot accept either condition," he said. "The talks are nearing a dead end."

Lebanon is pinning its hopes on U.S. troubleshooter Philip C. Habib's consultations in Washington this week, according to the spokesman, who requested anonymity in conformity with government regulations.

Habib returned to the United States after failing to make progress in Jerusalem in his effort to find a compromise over Israel's demand for spy stations in Lebanon.

The U.S. envoy suggested that electronic monitoring stations be established, but with American staff. This solution apparently was unacceptable to the Israelis, and Lebanon is balking at allowing any spy stations at all in its territory.

The An-Nahar newspaper, whose publisher, Ghassan Tueni, is Lebanon's chief coordinator of the withdrawal talks, quoted chief Lebanese delegate Antoine Fattal as charging that Israel is trying to "impose an agreement by coercion through insisting on such unacceptable demands as electronic surveillance stations and normalization" of relations.

"These demands are totally unacceptable either within the context of security arrangements or within the framework of future relations," Fattal was quoted as saying.

The agenda for the talks calls for simultaneous discussion of future Israeli-Lebanese relations, security arrangements near the Israeli border in southern Lebanon, and a phased withdrawal of about 60,000 Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian troops from Lebanese territory.

The ninth round of the talks was held in the Beirut suburb of Khalde on Monday. When it ended, the delegates did not say whether they would hold the usual Thursday meeting in the Israeli town of Kiryat Shmona, the alternate site.

The negotiators set up four more subcomittees to deal with specific agenda items, but Lebanon's government news agency reported "mutual hardening of positions" during Monday's session.

A joint communique said the groups started work on negotiations on a timetable for troop withdrawals, security arrangements, post-war relations between Israel and Lebanon, and guarantees for an overall agreement. Another subcommittee was formed last week to draft a declaration ending the 34-year-old state of war between Lebanon and Israel.

Lebanese spokesman Daoud Sayegh said Fattal again rejected Israel's demand to maintain three early-warning stations in Lebanon and normalize relations as a precondition for the Israeli troop withdrawal.

Chief Israeli delegate David Kimche replied by insisting on the establishment of "good neighborly relations" without which "no security arrangements can hold," said Israeli spokesman Avi Pazner.

Lebanon fears that if Israel establishes electronic surveillance stations in southern Lebanon, Syria will do the same thing in eastern and northern Lebanon, which are occupied by an estimated 30,000 Syrian troops.

The Lebanese government also refuses any official normal relations with Israel because it fears other Arab nations would boycott it as they did Egypt after the Camp David peace treaty.

Israel has had an estimated 25,000 troops in Lebanon since the June 6 invasion to drive out the Palestine Liberation Organization. There are believed to be about 5,000 PLO guerrillas in Lebanon.

Peacekeepers not entirely sure they can keep the peace

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The long months of drills, field exercises and practice have ended. The guns and artillery are real. Although the 1,200 U.S. Marines in the multinational peacekeeping force here are not in combat, they see and hear it every day and could become involved.

"They know it's for real this time," said Cpl. Jonathan Heussi, a 22-year-old squad leader from Essex, Md., after a foot patrol through the village of Hay El-Sellom, south of Beirut.

Like the Italian and French paratroopers in the multinational force, the Marines are here to lend their authority and backing to the Lebanese government and its army, to help reassert government control over the country after eight years of civil strife.

But the Marines are unsure who represents a danger among the many armed factions and occupation armies in Lebanon. One soldier was killed when he stepped on a cluster bomb, and another slightly wounded by a car bomb.

"It's the biggest puzzle I've ever been faced with," said one officer who asked not to be named. "At first, I thought it was terrorists and unexploded bombs.

"I'm not really sure any more."

SHWEIFAT, WHERE rightist Christian and leftist Druse Moslems battle almost daily just a few miles from the Marines, "is a tenuous situation," the officer said. "On Christmas Eve, 150 to 200 artillery rounds were fired. With all that artillery, suppose a Druse or Christian is wrong in his deflection (the angle of fire)?"

The Marines are also concerned about the Israeli soldiers who occupy the territory immediately east and south of the American area. Stray rounds from

> "It's the biggest puzzle I've ever been faced with. At first, I thought it was terrorists and unexploded bombs. "I'm not really sure any more."

Israeli patrols, who fire random bursts from automatic weapons to discourage ambushers, have landed near Marine positions.

The Israelis also have probed Marine lines at least four times in two weeks, provoking confrontations with the Americans who have orders to keep them out. "We have told them, 'This is our turf, get off,' and they have," a senior Marine officer said.

The Israelf actions have been protested by U.S. officials and the Israelis have promised to stop, but so far have not.

Some Marines consider it minor harassment — annoying, but not serious. "One fear is that someone will get between the Israelis and us and fire at them," the senior officer said.

STILL, THE MARINES are proud of their role as peacekeepers. A Christmas card made by one Marine and adopted by their commander shows several Marines planting a Lebanese cedar tree, with the slogan "Helping make things right" above it.

"We help just by being here," said Cpl. Glyndale McLaughlin, 21, of Fairview, N.C. "There's no factional fighting in our area."

Heussi and McLaughlin spent several hours planning the recent patrol through Hay El-Sellom. They wrote out and read to their 15-man squad instructions on what to do if fired upon from the front, the rear or either side, what radio frequencies to use, how to react to any provocation.

The two young men, each with three years experience in the Marines, then walked the patrol through a practice drill.

"Smile and nod or a small wave to show we're friendly. That's all, no conversations," McLaughlin cautioned. "Don't encourage the 'hey-Joe's' " — the children who often trot along beside the Marines.

U.S. Marine Cpl. Glenn Sheehan of Brooklyn, N.Y., is part of the 1,200-member Marine peacekeeping force in Lebanon. Although the Marines aren't involved in combat, they are combat-ready and have found reason to wonder if they may not have to use that training before they leave the country.

through the mud-filled streets of the village. Residents waved and smiled, calling "ahlan, ahlan (welcome)."

"We get a few smart guys who make cracks, but not many," Heussi said.

The people of Hay El-Sellom are Shiite Moslems, and many support Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Once fervent backers of the Lebanese leftists and Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas who occupied this suburb before the Israeli invasion, most seem happy to see the Marines.

"Nobody is shooting at us," shrugged Sgt. Talmadge Murphy of Atlanta. "Nobody wants to attack us. I like these people and they like me."

The Marines are also training several companies of Lebanese soldiers in air assault tactics, basic combat techniques and other things. Officially, according to Col. Thomas Stokes of Raleigh, N.C., the marine commander, the Lebanese show promise. "They have the beginning of a capability of a quick reaction force," he said.

But privately, Marine officers and NCOs have little confidence in the Lebanese soldiers' abilities or willingness to fight.

"They haven't shown us much," one said about the Lebanese who man joint checkpoints with the Marines.

Pentagon denies report of close call with Israeli

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department is denying a published report that a U.S. Marine rifleman had an Israeli soldier in the sights of his rifle during a recent incident in Lebanon.

Pentagon officials issued a statement Monday in response to a report in The Washington Post that quoted unnamed Pentagon sources as reporting a Marine rifleman "had to be ordered not to fire" on an Israeli soldier.

The statement said Pentagon officials had checked with the Marine command in Beirut and that "they report...that no such incident occurred."

"We thus deny the published accounts," the Pentagon said.

The Post said the incident was believed to have occurred Friday near the Beirut airport and called it the "closest call yet in the recent series of U.S.-Israeli military confrontations in Lebanon."

Before the Pentagon statement was issued, officers at Marine headquarters and on the joint military staff in the Pentagon said they had no knowledge of any such happening.

Last Friday, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said in an interview taped for Saturday broadcast over Cable News Network that "I'm very worried about these incidents and they are continuing."

Weinberger said there had been additional incidents, beyond two confrontations confirmed by the Pentagon on Thursday as having happened last Monday, Jan. 17.

The Jan. 17 incidents occurred when an Israeli patrol twice tried to cross a Marine checkpoint to gain access to a village near the Beirut airport, according to Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto. In one of those Jan. 17 confrontations, Catto reported that a Marine was "nudged" by an Israeli jeep but was not injured.

Weinberger and senior military officials have never been happy about maintaining 1,200 U.S. Marines in Lebanon because of the risk they might become involved in firefights while carrying out their peacetime duties.

The U.S. government has had under study a suggestion by Lebanese President Amin Gemayel that the U.S. Marine contingent be expanded in Lebanon.

Guerrillas said to be using U.S. troops

Not Americans' fault, Israeli says

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The commander of Israeli forces in Lebanon has charged that Palestinian guerrillas are using the U.S. Marines in Beirut as a buffer against retaliation by Israeli troops.

Maj. Gen. Amir Drory also claimed American authorities had refused Israeli requests to meet and try to work out ways of avoiding potentially dangerous situations.

Drory said Monday that several guerrilla attacks on Israeli targets in south Beirut in recent weeks originated inside territory under supervision of the Marine contingent in the American-Italian-French peacekeeping force.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Drory did not suggest that the Marines were in any way abetting guerrilla activity, and said Israeli troops were under orders not to pursue guerrillas across Marine lines without permission from their superiors. Such permission had never been given, he said.

Drory was interviewed a few hours after the latest attack, when a 107mm Katyusha rocket landed near the site of Lebanese-Israeli peace talks in Khalde, Lebanon.

He said the rocket, which wounded an Israeli soldier, was fired from Marine-controlled territory. The Marines denied it came from their area.

IN SOME OF the recent incidents, he said, "The Americans constitute a wedge between us and the terrorists."

He claimed the reports of friction between Israeli troops and Marines were "a storm in a teacup" which could have been avoided if U.S. authorities had agreed to Israeli requests for a meeting between commanders of the two sides to coordinate their moves.

"If anyone in the United States is worried that we are going to fire on U.S. Marines, he can relax. It's not going to happen," he said.

The interview was initiated by Israeli military authorities in an effort to dispel the notion that American GIs are in physical danger from Israeli forces. Israeli officials have expressed puzzlement over such reports, saying it is inconceivable that Israel would do anything that might jeopardize troops of its major ally and arms supplier.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said Friday he was "very worried" that the confrontations could "grow into something much more serious."

THE AMERICANS HAVE reported a series of minor incidents in recent days. They say an Israeli armored car backed into barbed wire at an American position, and in a separate incident, Marines took up battle positions to stop an Israeli patrol from passing their checkpoint.

The Israelis, for their part, issued a list of nine guerrilla attacks in the past month in which one Israeli died and 25 were wounded.

Drory said some of these attacks originated from behind American lines. "In the wake of all this we were forced to reinforce our activities to prevent terrorist action. But even now, the border is the railway tracks and we haven't gone beyond it."

He said "we haven't deviated" from the rules.

He was referring to the north-south railway which he said had been agreed upon in U.S.-Lebanese-Israeli talks as the eastern perimeter of the Marine zone when the multi-national force moved into Beirut last September. It runs more or less parallel to a highway a few hundred yards east, which is heavily traveled by Israeli vehicles and has been the scene of several guerrilla attacks.

TO PREVENT ACCIDENTAL clashes with the Marines, he said, "we initiated contacts with the Lebanese and American forces. A meeting was arranged between our senior officer in the area and the commander of the Marines two weeks ago. The (Marine) commander didn't turn up, because he received instructions not to meet with Israeli representatives."

Drory said the Israelis subsequently met unofficially with Marine field commanders to try to sort out the problems. He said the Israelis explained their moves clearly, but later found out that the information was never passed down to the American soldiers.

The Israeli general said he had no objection to Marines moving beyond Israeli lines. He said they had already set up checkpoints at the science faculty campus of the Lebanese University in the Rihan Quarter, even though the campus is east of the railway.

Israeli stock prices plunge in fourth day

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Stock prices on the Tel Aviv exchange have plunged an average of more than 30 percent in the last four days, bringing an abrupt halt to the billion-dollar boom of 1982.

Some newspapers have been bemoaning "The Collapse" in banner headlines, while others have been admonishing, "No Need for Panic."

Economists and other experts also are divided over whether the sudden reversal means the market is heading for a collapse, or is just settling down to more realistic prices.

The market has seen short-term reverses before, like all centers of financial speculation, and this slide had been predicted for some time.

Last year, the Tel Aviv market raised 21 billion shekels, or nearly $1 billion, four times as much as in the previous year. Stocks soared an average of 297 percent, a real growth rate of 165.5 percent after inflation is subtracted, and some quadrupled in price.

At the same time, the rest of Israel experienced zero annual economic growth for the first time since 1953.

But in the past four days, there has been a sharp about-face. On Monday, for example, some shares dropped as much as 50 percent and others had no buyers at all for the third consecutive day.

The reversal might have been even greater but for the market's rule that sales are stopped temporarily if there are two consecutive days of one-sided selling.

The market publishes overall average changes, but no shares index, and average stock price figures therefore are not available.

Economists and some government ministers have welcomed the drop, arguing that the boom had left shares far over-valued. They say the market needed to settle down and find a new level at more realistic prices.

But others fear the slide may turn into a rout if investors panic and pull their money out of the market, popularly dubbed the 'national casino.'

Yosef Nitzani, general manager of the stock exchange, noted that bank shares still register moderate increases and that many other types of stock still attract buyers.

He said such a situation does not indicate a panic, and blamed the drop in prices on three factors: previous high prices, statements from the Treasury welcoming the slide, and media hyperbole.

Bank shares are considered an anomaly on the Tel Aviv exchange because the banks themselves and their affiliated companies buy up their own unsold shares to maintain investor confidence.

Tel Aviv university professor Simcha Sadan also suggested that other buyers were picking up stocks that suddenly have become a bargain.

Some critics say actions by the stock exchange directors encouraged the slide.

Two weeks ago, exchange chairman Dr. Meir Heth demanded a thorough reform of the market in an effort to make investors more responsible — and threatened to resign unless the directors agreed.

His suggestions included tighter control over new companies seeking entry to the market, and a 5 percent limit on holdings by mutual funds in any one company.

Heth said that the mutuals, by manipulating large chunks of company shares, were largely responsible for the meteoric price increases of 1982.

Israeli troops search for PLO sympathizers

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops launched a house-to-house search today for suspected PLO collaborators in a Druse village, Beirut radio stations said. The Israeli army said soldiers entered the village to quell sectarian fighting and were harrassed by residents.

Police in Beirut were unable to give an independent account of events in Baissour, 10 miles south of Beirut.

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv said the Israeli army sent reinforcements to Baissour after a patrol was surrounded by villagers and harrassed.

He did not specify what the villagers did. Israel Radio said they screamed invectives at the soldiers.

The spokesman said the patrol had entered Baissour on Monday to quell fighting between rival militias of Christians and Druse, an ancient offshoot of Islam. The reinforcements moved in overnight and restored order in the village, the spokesman said without providing further details.

In Beirut, the Christian-owned "Voice of Lebanon" radio station said Israeli armored forces surrounded Baissour and sent soldiers in to arrest leftist Druse militiamen suspected of collaborating with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The leftist "Voice of Arab Lebanon" radio said Israeli forces were searching house-to-house for arms and "combing the village to arrest nationalist fighters."

Gloria Yerkovich, 40, who last saw her daughter Joanna Harriet Pierce in 1974 holds the register listing abducted children. Parental abduction to be treated like felony under Missing Children Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI was unleashed this month to go after parents who kidnap their children. Six states are fingerprinting their young people. Children's names are being punched into computer databanks.

In the three months since President Reagan signed the Missing Children Act, a new awareness of a vast, heart-wrenching problem, that tens of thousands of children vanish each year from their parents' sides, has spread across the country.

The FBI has been listing missing children in its computer since 1975, but the Missing Children Act made it possible for parents to ask the FBI directly whether the names of their children are in the computer and to request that the police enter the names if they are not there.

The act itself does not require the FBI to put the children's names into the computer. But FBI director William Webster assured Congress in a letter accompanying the measure that the agency would enter names in the event that state and local officials refused to do so.

Kristin Cole Brown of Child Find, a private upstate New York group established to try to locate missing children, said in a telephone interview last week that some parents had complained the police were refusing to send names to the FBI. The police reportedly told some parents they wanted to spend their money on "real crime," not parental abductions, Ms. Brown said.

Jay Howell, chief counsel to the Senate Labor and Human Resources investigations subcommittee, said, "It's too early to make a judgment call on how the law is working."

The Missing Children Act also requires the FBI to set up a computer system to keep track of the 2,000 to 5,000 unidentified bodies found each year in the United States. Officials say the list of dead could provide links with children reported missing. Howell said up to half of the unidentified bodies are children.

The FBI is still programming its computers to take statistics on the unidentified bodies, Howell said.

"We never expected this problem to be solved overnight," he said.

No reliable national statistics exist on the number of missing children in the United States, but Child Find has estimated that 150,000 children are reported missing each year, including 100,000 who are abducted by parents.

Howell has said that, based on studies of 40 major U.S. cities, the 150,000 figure is probably far too low.

FBI special agent Lane Bonner said that as of Jan. 6, the FBI's computer listed 23,503 missing persons. Of those, 16,851 were juveniles, although the definition of juvenile varies from state to state.

As of Oct. 1, when the Missing Children Act became law, the FBI listed 24,354 missing persons, about 18,000 of whom were juveniles. Bonner said he did not know why the statistics had declined. He said the number of missing persons always varies from month to month.

This month, the Justice Department began a one-year experiment and relaxed restrictions on FBI involvement in parental abduction cases.

In the past, the FBI had refused to get involved in such cases without proof the child was in physical danger or had been abused or neglected, and without authorization from the Justice Department's Criminal Division.

In a letter to Sen. Paula Hawkins, D-Fla., Robert A. McConnell, assistant attorney general for the Justice Department's Office of Legislative Affairs, said those two requirements would be suspended in 1983.

"For a one-year trial period," McConnell said, "parental kidnapping cases will be handled on the same basis as other fugitive felon cases."

Mrs. Hawkins, who sponsored the Missing Children Act along with Democratic Rep. Paul Simon of Illinois, said she was elated.

"This policy...will provide a dramatic breakthrough in the FBI's ability to find and return missing children to their homes," she said.

Programs to fingerprint children are being started in several states, including California, Florida, Virginia, Utah, Wyoming and New Jersey.

At St. Elizabeth's Grammar School in Linden, N.J., 380 of the 417 students will be fingerprinted, starting today, in a program begun by Union County Undersheriff John Troiano and Sgt. Charles Harris.

Harris said that no child would be fingerprinted without written permission from parents or guardian. Parents may leave the prints at the school or take them home, but Harris said officers preferred that parents keep them at home.

"We refuse to keep the fingerprints because we don't want them," Harris said. "We will make no copies. We're doing this only as a service for the parents in case their child is missing someday."

Harris described the program as "an insurance policy which you hope you never have to use."

The police would see the fingerprints again only if that child is reported missing. Then, the fingerprints can be used to help determine the child's identity, along with photographs and dental records, Harris explained.

New York woman organizes group to search for abducted children

NEW PALTZ, N.Y. (AP) — Gloria Yerkovich has spent $40,000, appeared on network television and argued with officials from rural Ulster County to Washington, D.C., in her search for a daughter she last saw eight years ago.

Today, she leads a private organization that has tracked down 260 missing children since 1981, but her daughter, Joanna, was not among them.

Joanna Harriet Pierce, then 5 years old, vanished the weekend before Christmas 1974 on the first court-ordered overnight visit with her father, Franklin Pierce. The girl, crying, did not want to go and had to be physically removed by a man accompanying her father, Mrs. Yerkovich said.

The police list Joanna as a victim of parental abduction, a crime that has increased along with the divorce rate in the United States.

Child Find, a non-profit group based in this Hudson Valley college town, was founded by Mrs. Yerkovich as a last resort when she could not break through legal roadblocks, and when her loans dried up.

A slim woman who looks a decade younger than her 40 years, Mrs. Yerkovich learned her plight was far from unique. The group estimates that 150,000 children are reported abducted each year. Congressional aides say studies conducted in 40 large cities indicate that figure is too low.

Determined to find her daughter, Mrs. Yerkovich borrowed and spent $40,000 on private investigators. She was horrified, she said, at a system that had a national computer for stolen cars but not missing children.

Embittered and broke, Mrs. Yerkovich began laying the groundwork for Child Find. With two donated rooms from the police department and a few volunteers, the agency began operation in August 1980.

The group assembled pictures of missing children to distribute to schools, got a toll-free number for people who spotted missing children and organized a network of detectives and support groups in every state.

Their work and the cries of Congress paid off. Last October President Reagan signed the Missing Children Act, which requires police to enter names and descriptions of missing children into an FBI computer and gives parents access to that list.

Child Find has become well known, and every time reporters write about the organization, the bill for the toll-free number leaps. But none of the calls have returned Joanna, who would have turned 14 on Dec. 29.

Finding Joanna is difficult because Pierce, a former Dow Chemical Co. chemist who later started his own business, is wealthy and able to move himself and his daughter around easily, Mrs. Yerkovich said.

Mrs. Yerkovich will speak about one close call. About two years after she last saw her daughter, Mrs. Yerkovich was sent a photo by a friend in Florida, an investigator who knew of Joanna's case and had come across the photo by accident. The brown-haired girl was on a merry-go-round, smiling.

"I was able to get at least a window into her life," Mrs. Yerkovich said.

There have also been moments of despair.

Child Find worker Linda Mattsen told of an incident several months ago in which a caller on the toll-free line, who sounded like a child, identified herself as "Joanna" and asked for her mother. Ms. Mattsen asked what her mother's name was. "Gloria."

Ms. Mattsen ran to Mrs. Yerkovich's office and frantically told her to pick up the phone.

It was a crank call.

"Gloria just broke down and sobbed for about an hour," Ms. Mattsen recalled. "Then she just got up and just kept going."

Two polls show Reagn's popularity dropped

By The Associated Press

Two major polls released Monday night show President Reagan's popularity rating has dropped significantly on the eve of his third State of the Union address.

A Washington Post-ABC News poll published in today's editions of the Post indicate that 42 percent of Americans favor Reagan's performance after two years on the job, his lowest rating ever in that survey. Fifty-four percent of those polled disapproved of his performance.

Walker expresses concern for children he'll never meet

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Unlike the ill-fated bikers in "Easy Rider" who went looking for America and couldn't find it anywhere, Lou Franceschini's search has been realized.

America, to him, bespeaks of charity, humility, love, a nation in which people care enough to do their part in helping children whom life has left downtrodden.

He has come to realize what degree of concern exists in the hearts of his fellow Americans in a 1,850-mile hike that has brought him from Sacramento, Calif., to Midland and will carry him the remainder of his 4,000-mile journey to New York City. It's been a long trek already, but its importance to children he will likely never meet is paramount.

He's tramping all right, left shoe, right shoe down the highways of America, but going with him every step of the way are the children of Saint Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., where youngsters worldwide are treated for catastrophic diseases. At every stop along his route he and his support partner Mark Bell are soliciting pledges to the institution: a penny a mile, a nickel, a dime, a quarter.

"Being able to see the United States, meet people from all over the country, I've learned a lot about charity — where it comes from. I've learned what humility means."

— Lou Franceschini

"PEOPLE HEAR SO much about hospitals being cold, unfeeling places — but not Saint Jude," said Franceschini, who reached Midland city limits Sunday night. "They make a special attempt to make it comfortable. That's why I like 'em; that's why I'm for 'em."

Saint Jude, explained Franceschini, was founded in 1962 by Danny Thomas. In the early years, he noted, the success rate for curing cancer-stricken children was only 5 percent. Today, it's 50 percent.

"Because of that you know your money is going for something besides somebody's drinks," he said. "(The hospital) is the only one of its kind in the world. If the family can't pay, the child will be treated free of charge, no matter who he is, what his financial status is or his religious affiliation. They'll also put up the family if they need a place."

Franceschini, 31, found his special place in the scheme of events last summer when he decided to come out of the closet and really do something to help the children of Saint Jude. An assistant professor of theatre at Christian Brothers College in Memphis, Franceschini watched the Danny Thomas telethon in June and felt called to reach deep into his own soul and summon forth more than just a few dollars for the children of the world.

ON SEPT. 13 he did. He donned his hiking boots at the steps of the California State Capitol Building and headed east, bound for the Atlantic Ocean and a multitude of pledges across the nation.

Though he had run and walked nine miles a day and exercised in anticipation of his marathon journey, it was a challenge from the first step. His original partner had to drop out before they even exited California due to a damaged nerve in his leg. His hiking boots, though suited to rugged mountain trails, proved too stiff and heavy for highway walking. Blisters carved into his heels and feet, and the first of a succession of running shoes were donned. But gradually, his realization that others would be helped by his effort transcended the problems.

"The first couple of weeks we were really really in pain, but after that the feet got hard enough to handle anything," he said.

From California to the Van Horn Mountains east of El Paso Franceschini trod alone. He stayed in Holiday Inns at the chain's behest, but in the barren areas of the remote Southwest he often was forced to seek other accommodations. Two out of every three nights he camped out. At various other times he curled up inside a J.C. Penney delivery van, a volunteer fire department hall, and even a cow pasture as he discovered a "lesson in flexibility." It has only been since the Van Horn Mountains east of El Paso that he has been supported by Bell, who is himself donating seven months of his life to the cause.

AND GRADUALLY, the pledges have mounted, just as has Franceschini's awareness of America.

"Being able to see the United States, meet people from all over the country, I've learned a lot about charity — where it comes from," he explained. "I've learned what humility means. It's been a growth experience...it's also an opportunity for us to do something positive for the city of Memphis, to serve as its goodwill ambassadors."

Bell, who became convinced that the cross-country journey was worthwhile when he realized his annual $5 donation to Saint Jude paled by comparison to that which was needed by suffering children, also has learned and grown during the experience.

"One thing I've learned about on this trip is people do care about Saint Jude," noted the 24-year-old television technician from Memphis. "I was pessimistic about charity, but now I'm a believer in people who do this."

While dangers are ever-present in hiking cross-country — the proximity of traffic, dogs, questionable travelers — Franceschini and Bell have had opportunity to do more than just gain pledges for Saint Jude.

"FROM TUCSON to El Paso, I kept seeing the same faces day after day — transients," he said. "I told them, if you can make it to the truck, I'll get you something to eat. We fed more than our share of dehydrated camp food to strangers. We feel like we owe that; people have been kind to us. What goes around, comes around."

Within a few days, Franceschini and Bell will have reached Cisco — the halfway point in their tramp for the children of America, and by next July, New York City and the end of the road.

By then, 4,000 miles will have receded into the distance, but the journey for Franceschini's and Bell's children at Saint Jude will have only begun.

They just hope the generosity of Americans and the resulting medical research will allow those youngsters a chance to trod a road as long.

Pledges per mile or direct donations to Saint Jude may be made to Walkathon, P.O. Box 17274, Memphis, Tennessee 38117.

Marathon concern

Lou Franceschini continues his trek along America's highways. He's walking 4,000 miles from Sacramento, Calif., to New York for Saint Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis.

Court ruling may end at-large city elections

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A major court ruling last week has found that Lubbock's system of at-large municipal elections is unconstitutional and the decision may be used as the basis for getting other cities in the state to change their practice of at-large elections, an Odessa lawyer said Monday.

"People have inquired if we would file (suits similar to the one filed in Lubbock)," said Jerry Lopez, managing attorney for West Texas Legal Services. "We have been awaiting the outcome of the Lubbock suit — and others — before proceeding.

"Once we study and discuss the decision, we'll decide whether to file against other cities, including Midland and Odessa."

Federal Judge Halbert Woodward ruled Jan. 20 that Lubbock's at-large election system violates the 15th Amendment to the Constitution, as well as the federal Voting Rights Act, according to Rolando Rios, litigation director for the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project of San Antonio.

Said Rios: "The decision is very important because it is the first successful lawsuit filed in Texas under the newly amended Voting Rights Act.

"It should serve as notice to other jurisdictions that the courts will not tolerate election devices which discriminate against minority groups — puposefully or otherwise."

The case has been an on-going one that was first filed in 1978, according to SVREP Communications Director Mariana Scuros, and the ruling represents a "significant victory for minority groups. The point is, minority groups want equal participation in the electoral process. The at-large system has been a great obstacle to that."

The Voting Rights Act was amended in 1982 to include effect as a criterion in establishing electoral discrimination, according to Ms. Scuros, who said intent alone no longer has to be proven.

In addition to ruling against Lubbock's at-large election system, Judge Woodward recommended two possible single-member district reapportionment plans that would enhance the chances of minority representation on the city council, according to SVREP.

The first would divide the city into four districts, one of which would be 47 percent Mexican-American and 25 percent black.

The second plan cuts the city into six districts. Under that proposal, it would be possible for minority groups to gain two city council seats. Mexican-Americans would make up 50.6 percent of one district; blacks and Mexican-Americans would comprise 72 percent of another district.

Minorities have never been elected to the Lubbock city council in city history, according to SVREP.

Woodward's decision also affects "school boards for sure," said Ms. Scuros. Other governmental bodies — such as hospital boards — that employ at-large elections may also have to change their election procedures.

While minorities have been elected to Midland school and college boards in the past, City Attorney Joe Nuessle said Monday that to his knowledge no minority has ever served on the city council.

Nuessle also said he hadn't seen Woodward's ruling and declined comment.

Dr. Henrie Mast, president of Midland Memorial Hospital's board of directors, said the board is elected at-large and that in light of the decision he would place the matter on Thursday's agenda as a discussion item.

Lopez, meanwhile, said it would be "two or three weeks" before Legal Services decides whether or not to file suit against Midland and Odessa.

Allison center at forefront of research

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

The Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center is at the forefront of new cancer treatment, according to Dr. David Snyder, the center's medical oncologist.

With the center's patient load increasing steadily, and physicians expecting more patients this year, the Allison Center will step further into the medical future, embarking upon investigational studies of cancer drugs.

"Our priority at the cancer center is to provide the best available therapy, offering it in a way that we can learn something," Snyder said. "Our plans in the future — with some involvement now — will be the involvement with investigational drugs."

According to the Food and Drug Administration office in Dallas, investigational new drugs (INDs) are those drugs which are in the process of being tested.

"They (drugs) are proven to work in certain situations and are at the point where the number of people using the drug is expanded," Don Aird, FDA consumer specialist, said.

Dr. David Snyder

"They (drugs) are experimental in the strictest sense of the word, but they are not a brand new entity — we think they're effective," he added.

Dr. Frank Newman, regional medical officer at the Dallas FDA, said after animal testing there are three phases a drug must go through before it is FDA approved.

"The first phase in human testing is to look for what chemical actions the drug has," Newman said. "This is the phase where about 10 healthy subjects are given the drug to determine how it should be administered — orally or by injection."

The Allison Center will participate in the second phase, testing therapeutic response to the INDs. The INDs in the second phase of testing are proven effective for a particular disease and are administered to a limited number of patients who have the same disease.

"Usually 25 to 30 subjects who acutally have a particular disease are given the new drug," Newman said.

According to Snyder, the Allison Center patients who are not responding to standard treatment could be candidates for the INDs in the second phase of testing.

In phase three there is extensive testing on a large number of subjects, assessing the safety and effectiveness of the IND," Newman said.

Snyder said the Allison Center will have limited involvement with the INDs in the third phase.

Before INDs can be introduced, there must be a clinical investigator, a medical professional who is responsible for full disclosure to the patient about the drug and who throroughly documents the results.

"Usually an IND has a sponsor," Newman said. "Most drugs come from commercial firms, some from the National Institute of Health."

Snyder's application for clinical investigator is being processed and the the National Cancer Institute, which is part of the National Institute of Health,

Former Midland couple files suit against complex

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A former Midland couple who claim they were literally burned out of their apartment last Oct. 19 when a fire destroyed two buildings of the Polo Park Apartments have filed a $30,000 lawsuit on negligence in Midland's 142nd State District Court against the apartment owners and a building contractor.

The couple, Jon H. Strickland and his wife, Suzanne, allege that John Pass, who owned and operated Polo Park Apartments under John Pass Investments, had employed Post Tensioned Systems to finish construction on the northside project at 4700 Polo Parkway.

The petition, filed in behalf of the Stricklands by Midland lawyer Al Schorre Jr., maintains that the carelessness of PTS employees ignited the fire on the evening of Oct. 19.

The PTS employees "used a cutting torch to trim reinforcing steel from the foundation of a unit under construction," says the petition.

"As a result of the carelessness and negligence of said employees, said unit was engulfed in flames," the petition says. Among other dwellings, the fire spread to the Strickland apartment.

The Stricklands, who now live in Ector County, lost "all of their clothing, appliances, jewelry and personal effects," the petition says.

PTS's negligence, the petition claims, was in:

—Using a blow torch in the immediate vicinity of flammable building materials during high wind conditions.

—Failing to have in use fire extinguishing or prevention devices during the blow-torch operations.

—Failing to inspect and supervise the work area after completion of the blow-torch operations.

In addition, the suit says that John Pass Investments further was negligent in that Pass "knew or should have known with the exercise of reasonable diligence that Post Tensioned Systems had engaged in other negligent conduct in the past which had resulted in similar instance."

Richard Nunez chosen to succeed Betty Sheeler

Richard Nunez, 21, a counselor for the Office of Housing and Community Development in Big Spring, has been appointed by the Midland County Commissioners' Court to succeed Betty Sheeler, who operates two federal housing programs in Midland.

Ms. Sheeler has resigned her $16,200 a year post as executive director of the the federal rent subsidy program and as coordinator of the $1.6 million federal Community Development rehabilitation program in south central Midland.

"It's a great opportunity for me," Nunez said of the $13,200 a year post, which he will take over Feb. 1, when Ms. Sheeler's resignation takes effect.

In Big Spring, Nunez works with a 299-unit rent subsidy program. In Midland, the alloted number of rent-subsidy units is 64.

Immigrants don't take high paying jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A six-year study of hundreds of Mexicans who immigrated across the Texas border indicates that Mexican immigrants neither take high paying jobs from Americans nor flock to welfare, says a researcher involved in the study.

"It is a population of modest training, and for whom coming to the United States and finding stable modest employment meets a good part of their aspirations," said Dr. Alejandro Portes, a professor of social relations at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

Portes said the study, results of which were released Monday, tends to counter arguments made by some opponents of granting amnesty to illegal aliens.

Those opponents have argued that illegal aliens, if their presence were legalized, would either quit their low-income jobs for welfare or compete with American citizens for higher paying jobs, he said.

Portes said the study, of hundreds of Mexicans who immigrated in 1973, indicates "Mexican immigrants remain in the low-wage category of jobs" and that "definitely they do not go on welfare."

The study showed that in 1976, three years after they immigrated, only 5.1 percent of the immigrants interviewed were out of work. By 1979, the figure dropped to 4 percent, it said.

The median income of immigrants interviewed in 1979 was $818 per month, far below the $1,205 median income of the U.S. labor force that year, according to the study.

Their median income increased just 25 percent between 1973 and 1979, discounting inflation, the study found. It said the immigrants typically held skilled or semi-skilled positions in small factories or service firms.

A provision for amnesty for many illegal aliens was contained in immigration reform legislation that failed to pass Congress in the waning days of the fall lame-duck session. Similar legislation is expected to be introduced again.

Portes said in an interview that the study could be useful in future consideration of the amnesty issue because "it provides some reliable information on a group that was formerly undocumented for the most part."

The study was launched in 1973 with interviews of 822 Mexicans legally immigrating to the United States through Texas border points. All were males of working age, and 70 percent of them had been in the United States previously as illegal aliens.

Interviews were conducted again 1976 and 1979 with immigrants who could be located, about 425 in 1976 and 455 in 1979.

The immigrants persistently sought to find work, moving on to another job if they lost the one they had, the study indicated. Between 1976 and 1979, 40 percent of them were unemployed at least once. And in 1979, a quarter of them had held their jobs less than a year.

According to the study, the immigrants generally were employed where most of the other workers also were Mexican or Mexican American. But 80 percent of the employers were Anglo-Americans, it said.

Group asks Legislature for diabetes council

AUSTIN (AP) — A special committee has asked the Legislature to create an 11-member council to help Texans who suffer from diabetes, an incurable disease that often escapes early detection and can lead to blindness, heart problems and kidney failure.

The Special Committee on Diabetes Services said diabetes, with its complications, is the third leading cause of death in the United States.

In Texas, the committee said, more than 700,000 people, or 5 percent of the population, are believed to have diabetes, and Mexican-Americans "are at a much greater risk of developing diabetes than the population at large."

Sen. Carl Parker, committee chairman, described diabetes as an "epidemic in Texas." He submitted the committee's report, which concluded a year-long study, to the Senate on Monday.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, said that in 20 years in the Legislature he had "never had a study get to me like this one did."

The committee heard testimony in Austin, Houston, Galveston, Dallas and Laredo, and as Parker spoke Monday, 150 people supporting diabetes legislation stood in the Senate gallery. Some wore blue buttons saying "Let's Beat Diabetes for Good."

The committee's report said the state spends $36 million a year on diabetes-related programs, and the cost to Texans hospitalized for diabetes surpassed $72.5 million in 1979. Indirect costs, such as loss of pay, insurance and the cost of child care, run much higher, the report said.

A bill proposed by Parker would create a Texas Diabetes Council to develop a state plan for diabetes treatment, education and training, and set up four pilot programs for people with diabetes. The council of private citizens and state employees could establish an advisory committee that would include people with diabetes.

Prosecutors continue to outline events leading to judge's death

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A plot including high-stakes gambling, narcotics and murder-for-hire continues to unravel before jurors hearing the murder trial of Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, accused of ordering the assassination of a federal judge in Texas in 1979.

The government's case entered its eighth day today as prosecutors continue outlining events leading to the murder of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. The trial was moved to Jacksonville because of pretrial publicity in Texas.

Wood, known as "Maximum John" because of his reputation for giving stiff penalties in drug cases, was shot once in the back outside his San Antonio townhouse on May 29, 1979, the day he had been scheduled to begin presiding at Chagra's narcotics trial.

That trial was postponed after a racketeering charge was added to Chagra's indictment. Chagra was convicted after Wood's death and is serving 30 years in federal prison for operating a continuing criminal enterprise.

In this case, Chagra, 39, is accused of paying convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson $250,000 to kill Wood. The government contends that Chagra, who played with hundreds of thousands of dollars at Las Vegas gaming tables, wanted Wood removed because he feared the judge would give him a harsh sentence.

Chagra and Harrelson were named last April in an indictment by a federal grand jury investigating Wood's murder.

After a 12-week trial in San Antonio, Harrelson was convicted Dec. 14 of murder, conspiracy to commit murder and conspiracy to obstruct justice, the same charges facing Chagra.

Also indicted were Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, who was convicted of murder conspiracy and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

Senators approve safety seat bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators have quickly approved a bill making it mandatory to keep a child under 4 years restrained in a safety seat while a car or light truck is moving.

The 9-0 approval of the Senate State Affairs Committee sent the bill to the full Senate, one of the first proposals approved for debate this session.

Laura Begnaud of Port Neches testified Monday that the death of her small son in an automobile accident probably could have been prevented if he had been strapped in a car safety seat.

'My son's death could have been avoided," she said.

With her was a small daughter, April, who wore an artificial hand as a result of the crash.

Gay Poland of Austin said her small son was saved from death or injury in a car crash, probably because he was in a child's safety seat.

Mrs. Poland said there was "not a scratch" on her son, Parker, when their car was hit broadside.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said his bill provided for fines of $25 to $50, but that the fines could be waived if the parents prove within 10 days they have purchased or obtained a car safety seat.

He said the program had been successful in Tennessee since 1978. State partol cars carry a child's seat with them to loan to violators until they can get their own.

Mary Darby, head of the Texas Medical Association Auxilliary in Austin, said three out of four Austin hospitals cooperate with the group.

will be the sponsor for the INDs used at the Allison Center.

Synder said once the results are recorded, they will be reviewed by an institutional review board.

Newman explained it takes from five to seven years of human testing before a drug is FDA approved.

"All three phases of testing go through a risk-benefit analysis," he said. "If a drug is tried on a fatal disease, we may put up with toxic factors. With cancer, of course, you have to use toxic substance to kill the cancer cell. This is a risk analysis.

"In any event, everything has to be documented, then the sponsor can apply for a NDA (New Drug Approval). It takes time to do good studies. After the drug is (FDA) approved, there is an extensive follow-up through a monitoring system."

DEATHS

Ralph S. Dunn

ODESSA — Ralph S. Dunn, 79, died Monday at his ranch home in Brown County after a three-year illness.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the Davis Morris Funeral Home in Brownwood with the Rev. Ruben Packer officiating. Graveside services will be at 4 p.m. Wednesday in Sunset Memorial Gardens in Odessa, directed by Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home. Officiating will be the Rev. Mike Jeffreys.

Dunn was born Jan. 18, 1904, in Bell County. Dunn was a rancher. He was married to Lucille Jackson Nov. 27, 1937, in Houston. He was a member of Victory Baptist Church in Brownwood. He moved to Odessa in 1925 and lived here almost 50 years. He retired in 1970 and moved to Brownwood where he began ranching, farming and oil investments.

Dunn began one of the first oil field trucking companies in West Texas by utilizing a fleet of Model T Ford trucks. And he also started Dunn's Van Lines, the first household moving van company in Odessa.

Survivors include his wife of Brownwood; a son, John A. Dunn of Brownwood; two daughters, Joyce Averitt of Brownwood and Mary Frances Malone of Duncanville; a brother, Billy Dunn of Midland; a sister, Annie Ford of Midland; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Otto Letterman

ODESSA — Otto Letterman, 80, of Odessa died Sunday in Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home chapel with Loy Mitchell of Eisenhower Church of Christ officiating. Burial will be in Odessa Cemetery.

He was born Nov. 21, 1902, in Northview, Mo., and was an oilfield pumper for GMK Oil Company of Midland. He began work in June 1927 for Sinclair Oil Company and was a member of Eisenhower Church of Christ. He was married to Corinne Moore Aug. 15, 1936, in Hobbs, N.M.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Jean Ross of Odessa; his mother, Mrs. Georgia Cass of Marshfield, Mo.; a brother, Winfred Letterman of Marshfield, Mo.; four sisters, Marie Horner of Neodasha, Kan., Bulah Brashears and Corinne Meyers, both of Straford, Mo., and Lorinda Jump of Marshfield, Mo.; two grandchildren and three great-gradchildren.

MMH trustees, MCHD board meet Thursday

The Midland Memorial Hospital board of trustees and the Midland County Hospital District board of directors will meet in their regular monthly meeting Thursday in the MMH medical conference room.

The agenda for the 12:30 p.m. trustees' meeting includes the results of the annual trustee evaluations, an update on the chemical dependency plans, an update on the master site plan and a report on the activities of the Joint Commission Accreditation of Hospitals.

In financial matters, the agenda includes a report on the second quarter capital equipment list, a presentation by Arthur Andersen & Co. on the quarterly financial review, the 1982 fiscal year audit presentation and a review of the November financial statements. The board is expected to take action on an utilization review plan.

The agenda for the 2 p.m. board of directors meeting includes action to be taken on the selection of an investment banker and on a letter from Midland Independent School District. The directors will discuss the joint election agreement with Midland County elections administrator, MISD and County of Midland. The financial statements will be considered along with transfer of funds.

Jerry Falwell to speak at Kelview Heights Baptist

Jerry Falwell, founder of the Moral Majority, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Kelview Heights Baptist Church, 407 W. Alta Ave.

Falwell was named by U.S. News and World Report as one of the 20 most influential people of 1982. Expressing his opinions and commenting publicly on issues, Falwell seeks to buttress what he perceives as an eroding of the nation's moral fiber.

"If the leaders of Christendom in the nation don't stand up against immorality, we can't expect anyone else to lead," Falwell said. "I believe it is the duty of gospel preachers to set the pace. When sin moves to the front, preachers and Christians everywhere must speak out. I will as long as I have breath."

More recently, Falwell has attacked the spread of communism and has turned his guns on the immorality of television shows emphasizing and glamorizing illicit sex, featuring homosexuality, divorce, moral depravity and unrestrained violence.

Falwell, nationally known pastor of the Thomas Road Baptist Church in Lynchburg, Va., speaks weekly on "The Old Time Gospel Hour," a radio and television program. He has been honored by the National Religious Broadcasters and other religious organizations and magazines. The Religious Heritage of America selected him as the 1979 Clergyman of the Year in America.

Andrews Chamber banquet Thursday

ANDREWS — The annual banquet of the Andrews County Chamber of Commerce will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Civic Center.

Featured speaker will be James "Doc" Blakely, Ph.D., a full-time professional speaker from Wharton.

New directors will be recognized during the affair.

Out-of-town guests are welcome and should register at the front desk.

Tickets will be $9 per person.

Midland will get funds to improve airport ramp

WASHINGTON — Midland will be receiving $516,993 from an airport development fund known as ADAP that will go to expanding the air carrier parking ramp at Midland Regional Airport.

The announcement came from the office of U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, who represents Midland in the 19th Congressional District.

Col. Wilson Banks, aviation director for the city, said this will be added to previous ADAP grants to give a total of slightly more than $1.8 million for the project.

The air carrier parking ramp is one phase of a $17 million construction program planned for the regional airport. Banks said he hopes the city can receive at least another $8.9 million from ADAP to assist with the cost. ADAP is funded by users' fees, which means it is paid by persons who utilize the airports.

MARC cancels meeting scheduled for tonight

Midland Association for Retarded Citizens has canceled its meeting today, which was scheduled for 7:30 p.m., because of ice and snow in Lubbock.

According to a spokesman for the organization, guest speaker Jack Kirkpatrick with the Kiwanis Club could not make it out of Lubbock. The 16-inch snowfall last Friday hasn't left the city, despite the warmer temperatures and sunny days.

"He said it was like a solid sheet of ice up there," said the spokesman, explaining that a few inches of snow and ice melt during the day and refreeze at night.

The meeting will be rescheduled.

Saddle Club Introduces Polo Park

Polo Park and Saddle Club amenities include: total electric kitchens with ice-makers and self-cleaning ovens, fully carpeted and draped units, individual private storage, fireplaces, microwave ovens, ceiling fans. In addition to your generous interior features the only indoor racquet ball court in an apartment community, combined with lighted tennis court, exercise room and hot tub, complete your recreational needs.

Enjoy this community atmosphere in their luxurious and warm fireplace clubroom.

These one and two bedroom luxury apartments offer the largest square footage in the Midland area. Sloan Bagwell has designed the models in furnishings and accessories.

To reach Polo Park:
Travel west on Loop 250, right on Polo Parkway, or take Garfield north past 250 and follow Polo Park signs. 4700 Polo Park.
For further information, please contact Liz Obliger, 687-0511.

To reach Saddle Club:
Take Big Spring Street to Loop 250; travel west and turn right on "A" Avenue and turn into the exclusive Saddle Club. 5101 North Avenue A.
For further information, please contact Lynnette Lasater, 682-8678.

Saddle Club's and Polo Park's landscaping is more beautiful than a park itself.
