Feds Move To Support Dollar

WASHINGTON (AP) - In another action to help support the dollar, the Federal Reserve Board took steps today to encourage borrowing of foreign-held dollars by American banks.

About $500 billion in U.S. dollars are held overseas. They are called "Eurodollars" because they are outside the control of U.S. banking authorities.

The amount of foreign-held dollars has grown sharply in recent years, in part because of the U.S. trade deficit that sends dollars abroad, and they have frequently been used by speculators to drive down the overall value of the dollar.

To encourage use of the so-called Eurodollars by American banks, the Federal Reserve Board today removed the requirement that U.S. banks must maintain reserves equal to 4 percent of what they borrow abroad.

"The effect of the reserve reduction is intended to encourage member banks to substitute Eurodollar borrowings for domestic borrowings as a source of funds," the board said in a statement.

If the action has the intended effect, it would mean some of the foreign-held dollars would be returned to this country for use in domestic lending. This would reduce the amount of dollars held abroad, contributing to overall strength of the American currency.

The action is the third taken in recent weeks by U.S. financial authorities to help strengthen the dollar on world money markets. The Fed previously increased its interest rate on loans to banks to make holding dollars more attractive, and the Treasury Department has increased the amount of gold it will sell at its monthly auctions.

Monday update

Storm No Threat

MIAMI (AP)-A sprawling, loosely organized tropical depression drifted across the Gulf of Mexico today and forecasters said it would bring high tides and heavy rain to Texas and Louisiana coastal areas tonight.

The storm system was centered about 100 miles south of Brownsville, Texas at mid-morning and drifting north northwest about 10 mph with sustained winds of 35 mph, said the National Hurricane Center.

Forecaster Gil Clark said the depression showed no signs of growing into a tropical storm.

"It's sprawled over a big area, so it's not likely to gain strength," he said. "But over water like this it's always dangerous. It can gain strength quickly."

He said the heaviest storm activity was north and east of the storm center. "This is what's going to spread into Louisiana and Texas."

Forecasters said tides along the upper Texas and southwest Lousiana coasts would run two to four feet above normal. The center said heavy rains might produce flash flooding.

Robert Shaw Dies

NEW YORK (AP)-Robert Shaw, the actor known for his portrayals of rugged adventurers in such movies as "Jaws" and "The Deep," has died of an apparent heart attack near his home in Tourmakeady Island near Dublin, his New York press agent reported today.

The 51-year-old actor, who also wrote several books and plays, was driving with his wife Virginia and 1½-year-old son Thomas at about 5 p.m. Sunday when he suffered the attack, said publicist Mirna Post. He died at home, she said.

Born in Lancashire, England, Shaw started his acting career as a member of the Old Vic drama company in the 1950s and performed in numerous productions in England.

Deposits Unaffected

WASHINGTON (AP)-The 7.7 million recipients of Social Security and other federal benefit plans whose monthly checks normally go directly to their banks will not be affected by a strike of postal workers, but more than 26 million other beneficiaries could face delays, the government said today.

But sources said privately there are plans to continue delivering all first-class mail, including benefit checks using supervisory personnel or the military and that benefit recipients can expect to be able to get their checks either at their usual addresses or possibly from the general delivery window at their local post office.

Nixon Hosts GOPs

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP)-Former President Richard M. Nixon, sponsoring his first political event since resigning the presidency four years ago, entertained more than 400 Republicans at a fund-raising reception at his seaside estate.

State Rep. Robert Badham said Nixon limited in his brief speech Sunday to reminiscences about his Orange County past, including the early years when he practiced law in La Habra.

Badham, representing the United Republican Finance Committee of Orange County, said Nixon gave no indication of plans for his own political future. Nixon resigned as president in August 1974 because of the Watergate scandal.

Revolt Discussed

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP)-Nicaraguans seeking the ouster of President Anastasio Somoza clashed with national guardsmen in major towns across the country as a general strike gathered momentum and reports circulated of rebellious talk in the army.

National guard sources said there have been open discussions of revolt broadcast over guard radio stations. But foreign diplomats said they believe Somoza will be able to retain control of the guard, Nicaragua's 7,500-man army.

Officers of the guard are reported upset over Somoza's capitulation to the 25 Sandinista Liberation Front guerrillas who seized the National Palace and more than 1,000 hostages last week and forced the president to let them and 59 imprisoned Sandinistas go to Panama.

Phony Bomb Threat

SEATTLE (AP)-A phony bomb threat diverted a United Airlines DC-8 to Canada with 152 passengers and a crew of 7 aboard, authorities said.

In Vancouver, British Columbia, a spokesman for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said an unidentified woman was being held in connection with the incident and charges would be filed.

"They said something about her being upset about her husband," said Naomi Potach, a passenger from Boston.

Governors Differ On HealthPlan

BOSTON (AP) - The country's governors are vowing to work together on a 50-state approach to the economic distress now sparking the taxpayers' revolt but admit they cannot agree on a national health policy.

The quest for a national health policy was at the top of the program today for the National Governors' Association annual meeting, with Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., as the featured speaker.

Kennedy is one of the chief congressional advocates of a strong national health program and has attacked a plan proposed by President Carter as inadequate.

In an opening news conference Sunday, Gov. William Milliken of Michigan, chairman of the group, and host Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts agreed there was no agreement among the governors either.

Dukakis said there is "clearly a division of opinion within the association" on health care and that is why a major portion of the agenda was given to the issue.

"It is very true that we have not been able to reach general agreement across the whole association," Milliken said, "and I strongly suspect that we will not reach that at least until after the elections, until there are a number of new governors and we have had an updating on the problem across the country."

Pope Renames Chief Officials

VATICAN CITY (AP)-Pope John Paul I demonstrated his dedication to the policies of Pope Paul VI today by continuing in office the chief officials of the Roman Catholic Church's central administration appointed by his predecessor.

The new pontiff reappointed French Cardinal Jean Villot as Secretary of State, the equivalent of the Vatican's prime minister, and the heads of the nine Sacred Congregations, the main departments of the Vatican Curia.

Among the latter is Cardinal John Wright of Boston, who heads the Congregation for the Clergy and did not participate in the election of Pope John Paul Saturday because he was hospitalized for eye surgery. He was released from hospital Saturday and is recuperating.

In another affirmation of Pope Paul's policy, the new pope reconfirmed Archbishop Agostino Casaroli as Secretary of the Council for Public Affairs, the Vatican's foreign minister.

The Vatican announcement said all the heads of congregations would serve the remainder of the five-year terms to which they were appointed by Pope Paul. However, this five-year period does not apply to Villot, Casaroli, or Archbishop Giuseppe Caprio, the substitute secretary of state, who are the pope's personal choices.

In addition to Cardinal Wright, the congregation heads are Cardinal Franjo Seper of Yugoslavia, the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the former Holy Office; Cardinal Sebastiano Baggio,

McCrory Gives Son Money

FORT WORTH (AP)-David McCrory, the state's key witness in the Cullen Davis bond hearing, testified today he gave to his son $9,500 which he said was part of the money given him by the millionaire industrialist.

McCrory also testified under orders from the court that Pat Burleson, his former partner in a karate school, was the one who put him in contact with the FBI. That contact eventually led to the FBI tape recording and videotaping meetings an alleged murder-for-hire scheme.

McCrory said he gave to his son, whom he did not identify, $4,500 of the first $5,000 Davis gave him for investigative work. He also gave him $5,000 of the $50,000 he claims Davis gave him to launder in Las Vegas.

McCrory said he gave the money to his son because "if anything ever happens to me I wanted him to have money to attend college."

McCrory has already admitted that he gambled heavily in Las Vegas and that he stole some of the money from Davis.

Strike Set At Midnight...

Postal Talks Continue

WASHINGTON (AP)-With a strike deadline of midnight tonight, federal mediators met today with representatives of the Postal Service and its unions in an effort to avert the threatened walkout.

However, no progress was reported while the meetings were under way and Postmaster General William F. Bolger restated his hard-line position that what union leaders have said leaves them no alternative to a strike. Bolger said he believes a walkout will not materialize.

Chief federal mediator Wayne Horvitz met with the two sides both separately and together, spokesman John Rogers said. But Rogers stated there was no breakthrough to report.

While the meetings were being held at the mediation service, Bolger made a speech elsewhere in Washington repeating his determination not to sweeten a tentative contract that the unions consider inadequate.

"Having turned down that contract, the unions now want us to return to the bargaining table. But, as far as I'm concerned, we did our bargaining. We gave in on some things we wanted, and the unions gave in on some they wanted," Bolger told the convention of the National League of Postmasters.

The postmasters, who generally are at lower-level management ranks, gave him several standing ovations.

Questioned after his speech about the strike possibility, Bolger again predicted one would not materialize. "I mailed my telephone bill today," he said.

Bolger, as he has frequently in the past, pressed for pursuing the legal steps when a contract is rejected. These steps include binding arbitration if the two sides cannot find an agreement.

CRMWD Recovers Maximum...

Both Quality, Quantity Affected By Lake Level

In 1970-71 when the Colorado City River Municipal District was "wringing out" its two lakes, no one thought the process would have to be repeated. But here it is seven years later and the "stretchers" have again been applied to Lake J.B. Thomas.

This time, however, there is a substantial difference.

The pump-back at Lake Thomas and Lake E.V. Spence in 1970-71 was to keep from running out of water. Today, with a reserve of 125,000 acre feet in Lake Spence, quality of water is the main consideration.

By the end of August, the District will have recovered 17,300 acre feet of water from Lake Thomas which would have been written off by most reservoir operators. Another 3,000 to 5,000 acre feet may be recovered, assuming no inflow, before the lake is functionally exhausted.

At the beginning of the decade, CRMWD recovered 21,000 acre feet of Lake Thomas water after it was considered "dry." Then, just as the last lift on the pump-back was completed, rains poured 70,000 acre feet of water into the reservoir. District officials are hoping that will happen again this autumn.

If it doesn't, there is no foreseeable danger of running out of water. For one thing, the Lake Spence reserve is available; for another, the District did not have the Ward County well field in 1970-71, but today it can deliver up to 24 million gallons a day to the west end of the system. These, with a greater reliance on city wells, should see the District through until the Stacy reservoir becomes a reality.

Should Lake Thomas be depleted in the next several months, the District plans to pump water from Lake Spence via the Moss Creek intermediate storage to the upper end of

Meeting To Explain Crop Spraying Plan

The Scurry County Producers Association directors met this morning and decided to hold a barbecue and meeting in the coliseum Sept. 5 at 7 p.m. to discuss and explain this year's boll weevil spraying program to area farmers.

Milton Stephens, association president, said that with so many crops lost or damaged due to the drought, this year's program will be serving mostly to maintain what has been accomplished since it began two years ago.

"A boll weevil is capable of producing as many as a million more in a season so it is vital that we spray again this year," he said.

The cost of spraying this year will be $2 an acre compared with the $6 of the years before.

George Richardson pointed out that at the current market price it takes only 4 pounds of cotton per ground acre to pay for the spraying.

Concern was expressed at this morning's meeting that many farmers are now plowing up their cotton or may plow it up soon. Stephens said that those who plow up their cotton before the first spraying, scheduled for October, would get their $2 an acre refunded.

It was also brought out at the meeting that many areas are not infested with weevils and will not have to be sprayed but the cost of spraying must be shared by the majority. Many of the farmers with the infested crops could not afford to pay for spraying and the majority will benefit by controlling the pest that could threaten the crop in the future.

Old Jail Use Discussed

Scurry County Commissioners this morning were discussing the possibility of turning the old county jail building over to the county historical commission when the new jail is put into use.

A request for consideration of this proposal had been made by Mrs. Edith McKanna and Mrs. C.C. Miller. Commissioners expressed interest in the proposal in informal discussion, but indicated that they probably would not reach a decision until further study. The new jail is not expected to be ready for occupancy for a few more weeks.

Also up for consideration was a plat of the Head and Ashley Addition, a proposed residential development west of Snyder. They were discussing the plat with Bob Head, one of the developers, this morning.

unpopular as $2 bill

Disposing of $1.294 billion is ordinarily no problem for your average federal agency.

But it's currently a big one for the U.S. Treasury, with that much sunk into $2 bills which, as far as most Americans are concerned, it can keep.

It all dates back to 1976 when the two, withdrawn from circulation 38 years earlier, was reintroduced. It then looked like a denomination whose inflationary time had come. The old reliable one was losing the battle to escalating prices on small items. A $2 alternative, so the thinking went, would be more convenient for consumers and business alike. And, since fewer bills would have to be issued, the Treasury would save itself several millions in printing costs.

As it has turned out, the two had everything going for it except public acceptance. The Treasury has printed 647 million in two years, but the denomination is still virtually uncirculated. Some have disappeared into collections. But the bulk remains in reserve or with banks where, according to tellers' reports, customers are as likely as not to refuse to accept twos when offered.

The Treasury still isn't sure precisely what went wrong, but has a number of theories.

The established heavy traffic in $20 bills could be a factor, with the public preferring not to take the chance of confusing the smaller denomination with the familiar big bill.

Superstition may also be at work. The old $2 bill was widely considered to be unlucky, possibly through its association with betting. The taint, supposedly removed by tearing a corner, may have been carried over to the new issue by a long-memoried public which nowadays prefers its currency unmutilated.

Or it may be that it's simply a question of time, with a new denomination requiring a few more years' exposure than the two has yet had before the public feels comfortable with it.

Whatever the case, Treasury is not giving up. Expectations now are that the new $1 coin will benefit the $2 bill. Once the public accepts the convenience of the dollar coin as pocket and purse change, so the thinking goes, it will be more inclined to give wallet space to $2 bills.

That is, unless it works the other way around and the public transfers its lack of enthusiasm for the bill to the coin.

That would appear unlikely, however, providing there are no changes in present plans for the new dollar to bear the likeness Susan B. Anthony.

Considering the size and economic power of the female population and the considerable lobbying investment the feminist movement has in the Anthony selection, it is unlikely that the famed women's rights crusader would be allowed to languish uncirculated.

Which suggests a possible solution for the problem of the two. The folks at Treasury might consider replacing Thomas Jefferson's likeness on it with that of social work pioneer Jane Adams, say, or Victoria Woodhull, first woman to run for president. Who knows? They just might come up with a real winner.

I'm a pushover for those magazine articles that tell me I can put out a six-course dinner for eight in less than half an hour. (I can't shave my legs in less than half an hour.)

You know the ones I'm talking about. Those timetables that give you a minute-by-minute game plan of how you proceed with your meal. At 5:30, clean and chill the greens. At 5:40 put the water on to boil for the rice. At 6:00 slice the French bread and put in the warmer. At 6:15, toss the rice, etc., etc.

I tried one of those timetables a week ago that looked and sounded fantastic. The menu was: beef stroganoff over noodles, green salad, buttered fresh asparagus, dinner rolls and baked Alaska. The company was due at 7:30, I started dinner at 6:30. It went something like this.

6:30: Washed greens for salad.

6:32: Lined kids up to smell their breath to see which one had ripped off the cherry tomatoes for the salad. Sent son with cherry seeds in front tooth to store for new supply.

6:35: Put ice cream out to soften for the baked Alaska and cut pound cake in half.

6:40: Sliced beef and put in skillet to brown.

6:40: Toilet stopped up in hallway. Ran to garage for plunger.

6:42: Found cookie sheet for the rolls under hanging basket in bedroom to catch water from Boston fern.

6:45: Put water on for noodles.

6:47: Smacked dog for licking ice cream that melted down side of cupboard.

6:50: Put on water for frozen asparagus.

6:53: Water for noodles went dry and burnt pan.

6:54: Discovered you had to put baked Alaska on board in very hot oven. Sent kids to find a board.

6:56: Water for asparagus boiled dry and burnt pan.

6:57: Husband announced ice cube trays were empty.

6:59: Put cake on board, filled with ice cream, topped with meringue in preparation for final minutes in over.

6:59½: Kids informed me they got the board from bottom of bird feeder.

7:00: Doorbell rang. Poured two tablespoons of sherry into the stroganoff.

7:00: Poured remainder of sherry into the cook.

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Despite the increasing sophistication and skill of organized groups promoting women in politics, 1978 is shaping up as a mixed year at best for women seeking election to Congress.

The bright spot is the likelihood that Maryon Allen, the widow of Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., will become the first woman elected to the Senate in her own right since Margaret Chase Smith of Maine left office six years ago.

Mrs. Allen, who was appointed to the Senate upon her husband's death earlier this year, is heavily favored to win the special election to fill out the remaining two years of his term.

In Kansas, 45-year-old Nancy Landon Kassebaum, daughter of 1936 GOP presidential candidate Alf Landon, has at least a fighting chance to defeat Democrat Bill Roy in the November Senate election even though he has a sizeable headstart in campaigning and fundraising.

She defeated eight other candidates to win the GOP Senate nomination, and is regarded as a serious contender by political experts of both parties.

A third woman Senate nominee, Democrat Jane Eskind of Tennessee, has little hope of beating Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. Kathleen Sullivan Alioto, a Boston school board member, could have a shot if she should win the crowded Democratic primary for the Senate seat now held by Republican Edward Brooke.

In the House, however, three of the 18 women now serving are either retiring or running for other office and two others, Reps. Helen Meyner, K-N.J., and Martha Keys, D-Kans., have tough races.

A half dozen other women - three Democrats and three Republicans - have already won House nominations in California, Maine, Indiana, Rhode Island and New York but none is a shoo-in for November.

Women could easily wind up with fewer House seats than they now hold, and have little chance of making more than a one or two-seat gain.

One of the hottest Senate races of the year, the Maine contest between incumbent Democrat William Hathaway and GOP Rep. William Cohen, could be muddied by the presence of three "independent" candidates on the ballot.

At first it looked as though Hathaway would benefit from the confusion, since conservative Hayes Gahagan was considered likely to draw right-wing votes away from liberal Republican Cohen. But now an erstwhile Democratic perennial candidate Plato Truman, has joined the fray and may pull an equivalent number of Democratic votes from Hathaway.

The third independent is a former GOP fundraiser with a grudge against Cohen, and is not likely to be a factor.

Education - not income level or occupational status - is now the "key factor in defining today's class divisions" in America, according to an intriguing political analysis by Everette C. Ladd Jr. in the new issue of "Public Opinion," a monthly published by the American Enterprise Institute.

Examining a wealth of polling data, Ladd concludes that the chief social and ideological schisms of the 1970s no longer occur between the "haves" and "have-nots" as in the New Deal era, but between Americans who have some college education and those who do not.

On everything from life style questions (abortion, homosexuality, women's liberation, pornography, etc.) to domestic programs and foreign policy issues, the college-educated hold consistently more "liberal" views than their high school and grade school compatriots, Ladd found.

In only one area do the old New Deal alignments still hold - trade unionism. "While high school and grade school graduates are notably inclined to more conservative views, they are also notably supportive of unions," Ladd writes. "College trained professionals, with some notable exceptions among public employees, are not a trade union class..."

spending trouble

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Economists manning the lookout posts for signs of a business slowdown have sighted evidence of possible trouble in the area of consumer spending.

Their accounts differ considerably, however, on whether this dark speck on the horizon is likely to become any kind of serious naviagation hazard.

After a strong early spring showing, retail sales have flattened out recently, rising by just 0.2 percent in May, 0.1 percent in June and 0.2 percent in July.

"Consumer spending has undergone a discernible change over the past few months," New York's Bankers Trust Co. noted.

"But whether the consumer will continue marking time for a while, as has happened on several previous occasions since the current business expansion began, or whether a real retrenchment in buying lies in the offing is far from certain."

The available data aren't much help in making the picture clearer. On the plus side, government figures showed personal income - naturally a central factor in spending plans - rising faster than inflation in July, following slight declines in the inflation-adjusted figures for the two previous months.

Less favorable indications come from the survey of consumers sponsored by the Conference Board, an independent business research organization. Its index of buying plans, calculated from a survey of 5,000 households nationwide, dropped last month to its lowest level in more than three years.

Merrill Lynch Economics Inc. bases its generally negative forecast on the tendency of both consumers and businesses lately to accelerate their spending in anticipation of continuing inflation - buying to beat expected future price increases.

The firm foresees a sharp slowing of consumer spending, leaving businessmen with excess inventories by the end of the year. The likely result, it says, is a recession in 1979 "of about average duration and magnitude for the post-World War II period."

Bankers Trust economists, though they use softer language, agree that retail sales are likely to be "less than exuberant" in the coming months.

These kinds of warnings, of course, does not sit well with many businessmen who feel that gloomy forecasts can be self-fulfilling.

An executive of one consumer-goods company, when asked recently if he was worried about a possible recession, replied: "No. And if everybody would shut up, there won't be one."

New Students Face Homesickness This Fall

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP; - If "home is where the heart is," then some students beginning their college careers this fall will feel out of place on campus, says a Purdue University administrator.

"Our experience with students shows that homesickness involves a lot of factors," says Barbara Cook, associate dean of students. The Office of the Dean of Students counsels students on virtually every type of problem which may arise during the college years - including homesickness.

"Sometimes a student has never lived away from home before," says Ms. Cook. "Occasionally we get students who haven't been away from home for even a night, or those who don't want to come to college, anyway. And sometimes the student must leave a boyfriend or girlfriend at home."

The majority of students who withdraw from Purdue do so during the first month of the semester, says Ms. Cook. And she believes a lot of the withdrawals can be attributed to adjustment difficulties.

"I think it's a natural feeling," she says of being homesick. "Knowing it's all right to feel that way can help."

However, she remarks, sometimes parents can aggravate the situation by calling frequently or telling the student how much he or she is missed at home.

"Parents have to let go, too," she advises. "It's important the way parents handle this."

John Sautter, manager of Harrison Hall, a Purdue residence hall, says there are ways for parents to help students make the transition from home to college. "Parents should always listen and communicate very closely with their son or daughter," he says. "Write those letters, send those 'care' packages."

Parents should talk positively about the campus and become familiar and comfortable with it themselves. Also, emphasize Ms. Cook and Sautter, parents should be especially attentive during the first few weeks of college, as they may be used as a "pressure valve" until their sons or daughters can make some close friends.

"Listen when the student calls home and says the bedspreads don't match," advises Sautter. "Those are very real concerns at the time."

The hall manager says it is usually easy to spot the homesick student. The person tends to be a loner, may eat by himself or mope around and perhaps cry a little. Sautter says he and his staff make a special effort to make the student feel more at home by eating meals with the person occasionally or by writing a cheery note.

Keeping busy is the best way for students to overcome their longings for home, says Ms. Cook. "Throw yourself into activities. We try to give suggestions. Keep busy, jog, exercise - and try not to think about it."

She recalls a student from Vermont who was homesick but who never admitted it. She and the student even talked about his transferring to a school closer to home. However, the student stuck it out and didn't go home during the first semester till Christman. "Then he was all right the second semester," she adds.

Ms. Cook notes that students who live in residence halls, fraternities and other forms of organized living may have an easier time adjusting to college life than do students who live off-campus.

Students who have been raised in an environment different from that of the particular school they attend may suffer more difficult problems in adjusting, she says.

Parents and students can prepare themselves ahead of time for the college experience, "if they can sit down and talk about it - to get clear expectations beforehand.

New Hairstyles Herald New Season

FACE FRAMERS-Dry, unruly locks curl up into soft and shimmering waves in hairstyle, left, by Michael Swiger of The Hair Handlier, Phoenix, Ariz., who created permed-in body and movement for finished, well-defined look; soft but definite curls have lots of body, bounce and lift for fullness at crown and sides, center, a wash-n-wear style that keeps its shape in autumn breezes, by Rosalie Cantrell; limp, straggly strands get light and airy lift from Victor Figueroa of Configerom, New York, right, as ever-so-soft waves and shorter lengths create smooth style that mirrors fall's sophisticated fashions. (Hairstyles created by members of Helene Curtis Hairstylists Advisory Board.)

CHICAGO (AP) - Fall's figure-flattering "V" silhouette is fashion's biggest change in recent years, with wide padded shoulders in the '30s styles of Joan Crawford, or like Lauren Bacall in the '50s.

The "new waist" looks small in wide leather belts or double-wrap sashes, pants are pared down to a straight "cigarette" style, and skirts hug hips and thighs - often with a slit up the front or side.

Hairstyles adapt to the "executive suite" look, too, with subtler, more controlled styling, according to the Helene Curtis Hairstylists Advisory Board.

The overall effect of fall '78 hairstyles, according to Don Hill of Los Angeles, is that "novelty is out. People want a refreshing look, hair that's attractive, prettier and more natural. The frizz and 'mechanical' looks are changing into softer, more classical styles."

To set the stage for attractive hair, advisory board members agree that Leslie Caron-length short layers and pixie-look curls play a leading role this fall.

Brenda Longhofer, of Louisville, Ky., explains, "Hair's going to be shorter, cut closer to the head to reflect the slimmer fashion shape."

As an example, Carrie White, Los Angeles-based hairstylist whose clients include movie stars, describes one of her fall styles as "early Gwen Verdon." The effect of loose curls and an irregular rather than geometric shape is "hair that's framed so the head has a halo."

A more finished, dressier, molded look in hairstyles mirrors the elegant contrasts in fabric textures such as nubby wools worn with smooth silks.

Instead of tight, all-over curls and "unfinished" styles, Michael Swiger of Phoenix, Ariz., sees "lots of waves, curl and movement that's looser and a little more controlled," with an assortment of hair textures in contrasting straight and wavy sections.

Waves range from a Veronica Lake "dip" style for longer hair to John Dellaria's "rippled" effect of delicate, smooth curls molded close to the face. The trend-setting Boston hair-dresser's "Quasar" collection for fall features short, curly looks, banged and multiple-layered for softness. His light, easy-wear, closer-to-the-head hair fashions reflect the sophisticated '50s look.

Whether or not gentlemen prefer blondes, apparently many women prefer to be blondes, since the Hairstylists Advisory Board said there was a heavy demand for blonding.

Victor Figueroa, New York based stylist, comments, "Designer showings have a look reminiscent of Monroe, and this ties into the current popularity of blonding, which was so popular in the '50s."

Brenda Longhofer agrees that today's blonde bombshells will benefit from warm, soft shades that complement skin and eye tones, rather than the bleached-out "white blonde" look of earlier years.

Red shades are popular, too, Carrie White reports. She uses "at least three colors" on made-over redheads "for a natural, loose, piece-y look."

For latter-day Monroes and Lucys alike, hairstyles will be shorter and less "sauvage" this fall as fashion is influenced by the more conservative, sophisticated look of earlier years.

But while the look may be based on the rollered, teased and consuming coifs of 1950 glamour queens, today's hair is easy to care for and more natural-looking.

"American women have become accustomed to natural-looking hair and uncontrived styles," Figueroa notes. "They're not going to give up wash-and-wear hair."

Eggs, Melons, Fryers On Best Value List

COLLEGE STATION--Best values at Texas grocery markets this week include eggs, melons, fryer chickens and several fresh vetetable items, according to Mrs. Gwendolyne Clyatt.

Also, there are a number of "specials" at dairy and frozen food counters and along grocery market aisles, she says.

Mrs. Clyatt is a consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

This week's price-quality trends are the following:

POULTRY--Eggs are a good value, with small and medium sizes the most plentiful. Fryer chickens, also a good value, when bought whole will save 8-10 cents more per pound.

Turkey prices, however, are moderate to relatively high due to limited supplies and more demand.

FRESH FRUITS--Honeydew melons, cantaloupes and watermelons are economical choices. Varying price levels appear on peaches, nectarines, plums, prunes, grapes, bananas, and pears--so select according to budget limits.

FRESH VEGETABLES--Economical items include corn, carrots, cabbage, cucumbers, okra, dry yellow onions, yellow and zucchini squash and potatoes.

DAIRY--Features include milk (buttermilk and homogenized milk), yogurt and a variety of cheeses.

FROZEN FOOD--Items "on special" are fried chicken, orange juice and a variety of vegetables.

GROCERY MARKET AISLES--Features are tuna fish, canned applesauce, tomatoes, peaches, cooking oil and peanut butter.

BEEF--Prices are steady in general. Most markets offer best values on chuck roasts and steaks, round and sirloin steaks and beef liver, along with ground beef.

Oswald: "South's two-spade bid was one of those weak jump overcalls, but North decided to go to four spades anyway."

Alan: "A heart lead would have cooked South's goose immediately, but West opened his partner's suit and East was on lead. Most players would simply return a trump and wait hopefully for three more tricks, but East belonged to that group who plan their play early. He led back his five of hearts."

Oswald: "This play might well have given South the contract. Suppose he held only five spades, but with the jack of hearts as a side card. South would win that heart lead, draw trumps, knock out the ace of clubs and eventually discard down to one heart."

Alan: "The point to East's thinking was that South surely held six trumps for his weak jump overcall. Therefore, it left in control of the hand he would be able to knock out the club ace and collect six trumps and four clubs and a game. Thus East saw that his only chance was to find his partner with the jack of hearts and South with at least three hearts."

Everyone is vulnerable. Your partner opens three hearts. An Oregon reader wants to know what action we take.

We don't have a categorical answer since it all depends on how weak our partner's preempts are.

However, if playing with a strange partner, we raise to four hearts and hope for the best.

Gov. Brown Campaigns In East

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP)-California Gov. Jerry Brown came East to campaign at an elegant Long Island estate, explaining he was acting "in self defense" because candidates from all over the country come to California.

The $100-a-couple fundraiser Sunday was attended by about 200 people, including singer-composer Paul Simon, actress Gilda Radner of "Saturday Night Live," television commentator and author Shana Alexander and local resident Lee Radziwill, sister of Jacqueline Onassis.

The event, arranged by Manhattan Borough President Andrew Stein, was held on the lawn at the home of Stein's father, Jerry Finkelstein, a local Democratic figure and publisher of the New York Law Journal.

Brown, who was en route to the National Governors Conference in Boston, insisted, "I'm not running for president. No, no."

Menu And Liz Drawing Cards

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP)-Fried chicken, baked beans and actress Elizabeth Taylor were the drawing cards at a "Sizzling '70's Picnic" to raise money for the U.S. Senate campaign of Miss Taylor's husband, John Warner.

Warner was nominated two weeks ago to replace Richard Obenshain, killed in an airplane crash Aug. 8, and his wife filled in for him at the Sunday event while he campaigned in Dinwiddie County.

Nearly 700 people showed up and Miss Taylor spent about an hour shaking hands and chatting with the crowd in Fort Ward Park.

Breaking up
By Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

Precious little advice is available to teenagers who must negotiate the complex social ritual of dating.

Can a girl really ask a boy out without appearing too assertive? Is kissing (or sex) on the first (or second, or third) date a prerequisite to being asked out again? Can a boy ask a girl out "dutch treat" without losing her respect?

Where do our teenagers get the answers to these and other questions? If the young woman in this hot-line conversation is typical, they look to their friends.

This excerpt from a call seeking help in breaking up with a boyfriend illustrates some of the negative ramifications of relying heavily on peers for advice. (Personal information in all hot-line excerpts has been changed to protect the caller's confidentiality.)

HOT LINE

CLAIRE: I guess I just can't handle the ordeal of dating. I never thought I was insecure socially, but I must be.

COUNSELOR: Why do you say that?

CLAIRE: Well, last night I went to a sleep-over at my girlfriend's house. I was telling everyone there how much I want to get rid of John. He's my new boyfriend. They all seemed surprised that I wanted to end the relationship because we just started going out. Then I had to admit I never really liked him. I knew that even during our first date, but I couldn't think of a way to get out of it.

COUNSELOR: I guess that is a pretty common problem for girls.

CLAIRE: You bet! Boys are lucky. When they don't like a girl after the first date they just don't call her again. But we have to make excuses, lie or — even worse — tell the truth.

COUNSELOR: So, what happened at the sleep-over?

CLAIRE: The girls all started talking about how to break up with boys you don't like. My best friend said I should have told my boyfriend at the end of our first date that I didn't want to see him again. She said honesty is good because no one is misled. That sounds very mature but I could never do it.

COUNSELOR: And your friend's advice made you feel socially inadequate?

CLAIRE: Yes. I guess I must be scared to confront people.

COUNSELOR: Is that really true?

CLAIRE: Actually, no. I am considered very straightforward. Maybe I am just frightened in social situations.

COUNSELOR: Or maybe your friend's advice is unrealistic.

CLAIRE: What do you mean? I'm sure she is right.

COUNSELOR: Do you respect her as an expert on these matters?

CLAIRE: I guess so. She certainly sounds confident. Come to think of it, though, her advice really might be unrealistic. John and I are in several of the same classes and committees at school. I wouldn't want to hurt his feelings and make him real angry. Besides, I like him. Maybe I was too quick to agree with my friend's advice.

COUNSELOR: But that still leaves you with the problem of how to break up with John.

CLAIRE: Yes, I know. But I think he might get the hint if I don't accept a date every time he calls and begin going out with a few other guys. That will probably do the trick. I should have done that right from the beginning. It would have been so much easier.

With the counselor's help, Claire began to understand that she was letting her friend's advice undermine her self-esteem. She was then free to decide how she wanted to solve her problem. When the call ended, she seemed satisfied with the solution.

Carter Cutting Vacation Short

GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) - President Carter, determined to win the congressional fight over his embattled energy legislation, is ending his vacation two days early and returning to Washington on Wednesday.

White House press secretary Jody Powell announced Sunday that Carter would shave two days from his two-week western holiday to work on "some very crucial domestic matters that are before Congress."

Heading the list is delicate natural gas compromise legislation that is the centerpiece of Carter's energy plan.

Powell called the fight over the measure - in serious trouble on Capitol Hill - "as difficult as any that we have faced in Congress." He vowed, "We don't intend to lose."

But he said the administration also is concerned about a Sept. 7 House vote on overriding Carter's Aug. 17 veto of a $37 billion defense appropriation bill.

Powell said the administration expects to sustain the veto and then help rewrite the bill "to reflect the president's views more completely than before."

Carter objects to the bill's provision of $2 billion for a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier. He maintains that Congress cut too much money from other defense areas to authorize the carrier.

As Carter was fishing for trout, Powell told reporters there was no point in continuing the vacation if the president had to spend "all day and a good portion of the night working on these domestic concerns."

But, when asked if Carter has spent most of his time since he arrived here Thursday working, Powell replied: "No. He hasn't been doing that. That is the whole point. We have decided - or the president decided - he wants to go back."

Although the president will find Congress out of town when he returns, Powell said Carter will be busy all next week with a Mideast summit at Camp David, Md., and needed Thursday and Friday to work on domestic legislation that Congress will consider shortly after it returns from a Labor Day recess Sept. 6.

The three-way summit among Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat begins Sept. 5 and will last indefinitely in an effort to find a formula for peace in that region.

"The president will be talking by telephone and perhaps meeting personally with members of the Congress on these domestic matters, particulary energy," Powell said.

Carter's natural gas legislation became endangered when a group of Democrats and Republicans, led by Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., withdrew support for the compromise measure.

The president said Friday he expects a showdown vote on the bill soon after Sept. 11.

The measure to lift federal price controls from newly discovered natural gas by 1985 is opposed by some liberals who claim it would drive up gas bills and by conservatives from natural gas-producing states who want immediate deregulation.

Wants To Ban Most Teachers

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Since statistics show that 98.3 percent of all child molesters are heterosexual, I'm organizing a crusade to prohibit heterosexual teachers from instructing children of the opposite sex.

I don't want my daughter molested by a heterosexual male teacher, or my son seduced by a heterosexual female teacher. I'd appreciate your comments.

CONCERNED PARENT

DEAR PARENT: Your statistics are correct, but banning all heterosexual teachers on the chance that one might molest a child is unfair. However, if you proceed with your crusade, be sure to enlist the help of Anita Bryant—since she wants so desperately to "save" our children.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 38 years and my problem is my mother-in-law. Mums has been a widow for 10 years. She lives 400 miles from here, and spends most of her time and money just traveling around visiting relatives.

We have a guest room, but Mums prefers to sleep on the living room sofa where she can see and hear everything. And she snores so loud we can't hear the TV.

She complains about my coffee, my cooking, our children and our grandchildren. She soaks her false teeth in one of my best china cups, and when she leaves I have to throw the cup out.

We never know when she's coming. She just calls us from the bus depot and tells us to come and get her. If we had plans to go out of town ourselves, it's too bad. We can't leave her in our home alone because she never locks a door. She's not forgetful—just trusting.

I have a strange feeling she's headed this way and I don't think I can stand another one of her visits. When she comes she stays anywhere from three days to three months. Help!

HAD IT WITH MUMS

DEAR HAD IT: A telephone call to Mums would put you at ease. Call her and find out what her plans are.

Next time she comes, tell her where you want her to sleep and where to soak her false teeth, and also set a time limit on her visit. And while she's in your home, be firm with the crusty old girl. She sounds like she'd rather enjoy going a few rounds with her family.

DEAR ABBY: Timmy and I have been married for six years and have two cute kids. We've had our fights, but nothing serious.

Timmy's mom has never really liked me because before I met Timmy he was serious about a girl named Doris, and his mother wanted him to marry HER.

Well, last week Doris came to town. She's divorced (no kids), and I heard (from one of Timmy's sisters) that his mom arranged for him to meet Doris at her house twice! I don't know the purpose of those meetings, but if Timmy had told me he wanted to see Doris, I'd have been happy to invite her over here.

I am boiling mad at Timmy's mother for that sneaky trick. When I told Timmy what I thought of the whole business, he said I was making a mountain out of a molehill. Am I?

FUMING IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR FUMING: No. If you think Timmy's mother is deliberately trying to undermine your marriage, you have a right to complain. But Timmy's not entirely blameless. He cooperated (twice), if what you heard was true. Take it up with Timmy.

Amusement Parks On Building Boom...

Coastermania Is Sweeping Country

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Oldtimers at New York's Coney Island like to tell the story about the West Virginia coal miner suffering from aphonia - a psychological inability to speak - whose doctor told him to ride the amusement park's Cyclone roller coaster.

After a 90-second, gut-twisting ride, the story goes, the man stumbled off the car and said: "I feel sick."

The Cyclone, built in 1928 in the first "Golden Age" of amusement parks, was certainly one of the biggest coasters of its day and still looms menacingly over its now somewhat rundown surroundings.

But the miner - perhaps an apocryphal character - wouldn't have to go to New York for a cure now. After a hiatus of almost 50 years, amusement parks across the country are on a roller coaster building boom in what seems to be a race to claim the fastest, highest, longest, steepest and generally most hair-raising ride.

Bearing such fanciful names as "Rebel Yell," "Great American Scream Machine" and "Montezuma's Revenge," these new coasters - many built of steel instead of the traditional wood - often feature such extras as one or two 360-degree loops or multiple corkscrew configurations. The scarier-looking the ride, the longer the line.

The "roller coaster arms race" is what self-described amusement park expert Gary Kyriazi calls it. He is the author of a pictorial history titled "The Great American Amusement Parks," and has ridden nearly 200 coasters all over the country.

Earlier this summer, Kyriazi spoke at the first national roller coaster conference at Ohio's Cedar Point amusement park. The "Coastermania" meeting drew hundreds of coaster fans for seminars and rides on the brand-new "Gemini" coaster - the park's sixth.

Arrow Development Co. of Mountain View, Calif., which built the "Gemini," also can testify to the coaster's renewed popularity. Since 1974, when it built the pioneer "corkscrew" roller coaster for Knott's Berry Farm in Anaheim, Calif., Arrow has sold some 30 large roller coasters at an average cost of $3 million.

Before then, said Arrow vice president Terry Brown, sales of a much less spectacular coaster averaged about one or two a year.

"The roller coaster is the biggest thrill ride and it always has been," Brown said. He said he thinks the current coaster building boom results from greater competition following an amusement park building boom set off the Disneyland's success in the mid-1950s.

"Some of these parks, several years ago, kind of had the market to themselves," Brown said. "Now they need to compete with their neighbors and so they look for things they can advertise or promote . . . And if someone can advertise the biggest, the scariest, the most colossal ride, then so much the better."

What's behind the coaster craze? Why do millions of Americans ride open cars down incredibly steep inclines at speeds up to 60 mph?

"It's the excitement, the danger that's involved," said Robert Montgomery of San Deigo, who recently drove some 150 miles to ride the new "Colossus" at Magic Mountain park near Los Angeles. The "Colossus," billed as "the world's greatest roller coaster," has two consecutive drops of more than 100 feet and guarantees riders the sensation of weightlessness 11 times.

"Of course, if I really thought the ride was dangerous I wouldn't ride it," Montgomery said.

His comments meshed nicely with Kyriazi's view of coastermaniacs.

"They're kind of flirting with an imagined danger," said Kyriazi. He added that some psychologists believe coasters and other thrill rides fill people's need for adventure without the expense or expertise needed for such things as mountain climbing or flying.

The dangers are not totally imaginary. This summer, several amusement park rides were scenes of fatal accidents.

Three people died when a steel car plunged 70 feet from the Sky Way ride at Six Flags over Mid-America in Eureka, Mo., and a man died in a similar accident on the Eagle's Flight at Magic Mountain. An 11-year-old boy fell out of a coaster in Wildwood, N.J., and died of brain injuries and a 13-year-old boy fell to his death when a door opened in a cage on the Skydiver ride at Peony Park in Omaha, Neb.

But industry spokesmen say amusement park rides are generally safer than automobiles. A study by the University of Pennsylavania's Wharton Applied Research Center showed that in February-November 1977 there were 63 accidents requiring hospitalization on rides at 400 parks surveyed - one accident for every 6 million rides taken.

Safety standards vary by state. In some states, like California, rides must be inspected by state officials. Other states have no regulations, leaving safety to the park and its insurance company.

On the federal level, a November 1977 court decision stemming from a fatality on a type of ride known as the Zipper gave the Consumer Product Safety Commission authority to regulate amusement park rides.

The commission is now trying to have the Zipper declared unsafe as the result of several fatalities.

Four Mishaps Are Reported

Four minor traffic accidents were investigated during the weekend by city police.

The first was reported at 3:40 p.m. Saturday, but records show it occurred Aug. 25 at the Scurry County Coliseum.

It involved, records show, a parked 1974 Pontiac owned by Bill Luna Jr. and a vehicle which allegedly fled the scene of the collision.

The second was reported shortly after 4 p.m. at the Lota Burger. It involved a 1975 Chevrolet driven by Melvin Brandom of Coleman and a 1975 Pontiac driven by Catherine Jordan.

The third took place about 5 p.m. at the intersection of 37th St. and College Ave. A 1977 AMC driven by Joann Tovar, records show, was in collision with a 1977 Ford driven by John Hatfield.

The final mishap of the weekend took place at the traffic circle about 8 p.m. Saturday.

Involved in it were a 1969 Buick driven by Filimon Navejas of Abilene and a 1978 Mercury driven by Boyce Jones of Hermleigh.

the CRMWD's Sun pipeline and on to the Snyder pump station at Lake Thomas. There the Spence water will be mixed with Thomas water and delivered to Snyder and other essential on-line customers. Snyder wells will be available for peaking.

At certain times of the year, pumping Spence water to Thomas could result in lowered levels in Moss Creek Lake, which is maintained with water from Lake Spence. Other parts of the system will operate essentially the same, except that more reliance will be put on well supplies in lieu of the amount of Spence water diverted to Snyder, said O.H. Ivie, CRMWD general manager.

When the level at Lake Thomas dropped below the Big Spring-Odessa intake, the District plugged the river channel below the pump station and set a barge in the lake 2½ miles downstream. A pump on the barge boosted water into a canal, which flowed back and around the river plug to maintain a pumping pool at safe level. On Feb. 14, however, the lake had dropped to a point that the barge pump was about to "suck air," so a second lift was installed on the north side of the lake and connected by a three-mile canal to the Big Spring-Odessa intake. With the level about to recede from the second lift, a third barge pump was installed downstream Aug. 22, delivering its output via a two-mile canal to the No. 2 station, which boosted it to the No. 2 canal. Thus, by literally stair-stepping water up hill, the lake was being wrung out. But another operational inconvenience looms ahead with the necessity of putting a cofer dam around the Snyder intake and boosting water over it to maintain an adequate pumping pool.

The 40 feet total lift in the three-stage pump-back calls for that much extra electric energy. If it becomes necessary to pump Spence water to Snyder, this will call for an additional 250-ft. lift. This additional cost will be piled on top of energy costs which already are up 38.5 per cent this year.

The financial condition is aggravated further because oil companies were cut off from Lake Thomas as a conservation measure early this year, having been curtailed prior to that, at a cost of three-quarters of a million dollars in revenues to the District.

So long as practical, Lake Thomas water--which is perhaps the best quality of all in West Texas--was mixed at Big Spring with Lake Spence water to improve quality of the total volume. In recent months, however, the only delivery into Big Spring has been to the industrial complex.

Water quality in West Texas, Ivie pointed out, almost parallels lake levels. Far more than pumping, evaporation is the factor which pulls lakes down, and every foot lost by evaporation simply concentrates minerals in the remaining water. Lacking that "super" rain, Lake Spence had never attained its target quality before the present drought, and now a prolonged period of meager runoff has compounded the quality problem.

Why has Lake Thomas been flirting with exhaustion? The amount and type of rains have resulted in runoff being far below normal; it has amounted to only 9,000 acre feet in the past 24 months. This means that while four gallons have been pumped out, only one flowed in--and that doesn't include evaporation loss. This condition, said Ivie hopefully, has to change--and when it does, water taste and quality will change too--for the better.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) - Coach Bear Bryant and members of his Alabama football team agree that it's flattering to be picked No. 1, but it would be more important in January when the final poll is taken.

Alabama was picked in The Associated Press poll during the weekend as the team most likely to win the college championship this season.

Bryant said, "It's very flattering, but it doesn't mean a thing right now. When it matters is in January, and sometimes it doesn't matter then."

The coach noted that the Crimson Tide started the season at the top of the poll in 1966, won all its games and bombed Nebraska 34-7 in the Sugar Bowl - and wound up third in the final ranking.

The Tide was No. 2 behind Notre Dame last January. The Fighting Irish were picked fifth in the AP's preseason poll.

Alabama opens the season against Nebraska in Birmingham in a Sept. 2 nationally televised game.

Alabama had 31 of 63 first-place votes and 1,215 of a possible 1,260 points in the nationwide poll of sports writers and broadcasters.

"I'd like to think that starting out No. 1 if we win all our games, we'll be No. 1 when it's all over," Bryant said.

Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine said that sometime during the season someone would have to take the title from the Irish on the field.

"It's not impossible, but it's going to be very hard to do," Devine said. "Although we may not be preseason favorites to repeat as national champions, I can assure you that we won't give up the title easily."

Porter Pounds Texas; Royals Bounce Back

ARLINGTON, (AP) - Maybe the baseball fans at Arlington Stadium will quit bothering Kansas City catcher Darrell Porter, who was at the center of melee they emptied both benches in a game here last year.

"One fan kept telling me tonight I was only a Double A league player," he said. "That made me mad. All the fans here really get me mad. I can hear them."

Porter responded Sunday night by belting two solo home runs and a double off Texas starter Doc Medich that keyed Kansas City to a 4-2 victory over the Rangers and boosted the Royals back into first place in the American League West.

The victory snapped a four-game Kansas City losing streak and they ended a four-game winning streak for Texas, which had crawled to within 4½ games of first place in the AL West.

Kansas City also avoided a three-game sweep by the Rangers, who won the first two games.

Porter went six for 10 against Texas pitchers in the series, had three home runs and drove in six runs.

Porter's first homer Sunday led off the Royals' seventh inning and tied the score 1-1. Medich, 7-8, got the next batter out, but then Amos Otis put the Royals ahead to stay, 2-1, with his 16th homer of the season.

Porter ripped another Medich pitch over the fence with one out in the ninth for his 13th of the season. The Royals got their final run when Al Cowens singled with two out, stole second and scored on a single by Otis that chased Medich from the mound.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead when Bobby Bonds led off the second with a triple and scored on Dennis Leonard's wild pitch. Al Oliver added a solo homer in the ninth when Leonard, 15-15, needed relief help from Al Hrabosky to get the final out.

Against Steelers Saturday...

Landry Cites Cowboy Hustle

IRVING, (AP) - Tom Landry says there was no comparison between the Dallas Cowboys in their 16-13 victory over Pittsburgh Saturday and their 27-13 loss a week earlier to Houston.

"The guys hustled and worked tonight. We played football tonight and we did not last Saturday," Landry said after the victory over Pittsburgh, which finished exhibition play for both teams.

Not that the Cowboy-Steeler game in Texas Stadium didn't have its disappointments for Landry. The Cowboys threatened twice in the first half and again in the third quarter, but got only one field goal out of it.

But Roger Staubach wiped most of the painful memories away, taking the Cowboys 71 yards in 11 plays and 48 yards in six plays in the last three minutes to turn defeat into victory.

Staubach, who connected on 25 of 46 passes for 334 yards, his second-best passing performance in the pros, hit Drew Pearson with a 17-yard-touchdown pass with 2:46 left and Tony Hill with a 15-yard scoring strike with 31 seconds remaining.

"Dallas has a big-play offense and it played well at the end, that's all," said Pittsburgh linebacker Jack Lambert. "There were a couple of big plays, and they deserved to win."

Terry Bradshaw completed 5 of 10 passes for 98 yards the first half, but only 2 of 9 the last half for 38 yards and was sacked three times for 32 yards in loss.

Bradshaw hit Lynn Swann on passes of 20 and 35 yards to set up Rocky Bleier's two-yard plunge for a 6-0 lead in the first quarter, but Roy Gerela missed his third try for the extra point after offsides calls voided his first two kicks.

Staubach was intercepted once, when linebacker Jack Ham deflected his pass into the arms of defensive back Tony Dungy. Dungy took the interception and dashed 16 yards into the end zone for Pittsburgh's other touchdown and a 13-3 lead.

Bradshaw, playing with a mask to protect a broken nose, went all the way for Pittsburgh. Staubach sat out only the last half of the second quarter. Danny White completed 4 of 6 passes for 23 yards, giving up an interception to Mike Wagner that gave Pittsburgh the ball on the Dallas 46 in the final minute of the first half.

Bradshaw threw a bomb to John Stallworth, who outleaped Cliff Harris and Aaron Kyle in the end zone for the apparent touchdown reception, but an illegal motion call wiped it out.

Staubach brought the Cowboys from their 35 to the Pittsburgh 25 late in the third quarter, but three straight penalties nullified completions of 2, 22 and 45 yards, and a long field goal try failed.

Kite's Honesty Allows Watson 'Fame' Win

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) - Tom Watson is the year's leading money-winner again, holder of four 1978 tournament titles, in position to gain another Player of the Year title and closing in on some other ambitions such as the Vardon Trophy and Ryder Cup.

At least some of those good things can be attributed to the instant, ironclad and unhesitating adherence to the rules of golf by Tom Kite, who called a self-imposed penalty for an infraction no one else saw, a pentalty that eventually knocked him out of a playoff role and let Watson escape with the title in the Hall of Fame Classic.

Kite had missed a 15-foot birdie putt. He had a tap-in of less than a foot for a par. As he set the club down, the ball rolled, "about this much," he said and held thumb and forefinger less than one-quarter inch apart.

Under the rules, it was a one-shot penalty. Kite immediately stepped back from the ball and told Hale Irwin, one of his playing partners, "I'm calling a penalty. My ball moved."

"It has to be very disheartening," Watson said. "It's something you have not control over."

He won this one with a 277 total, 7 under par, after a closing 71. He had a commanding five-shot lead at the turn, then had to hang on against the trio who finished a single shot back. Irwin had a closing 73, including a birdie on the last hole, Kite a 71 and Twitty 67. Danny Edwards came out of the pack with a 65 and took fifth at 279.

The victory was worth $50,000 and pushed Watson's earnings to a leading $303,429. He also moved ahead of Lee Trevino in the Vardon Trophy standings for the leading stroke average on the tour, 70.18 to 70.31.

Hamlin Garners 1st LPGA Title

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) - The celebrity attention Shelley Hamlin received for winning her first LPGA tournament was just as surprising to her as the victory itself.

"Do you always have champagne after every tournament," she asked, spying the winner's libation on the tables. "I haven't ever done this before, you know. In fact, I've never gone into a press tent."

Hamlin's personality reflected the champagne she drank - bubbly. The 29-year old former national collegiate champion from Stanford had just sunk a six-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to claim a 1-stroke victory over Kathy Whitworth in the $75,000 Patty Berg Golf Classic at Keller Golf Course.

"I love to talk, too," she warned reporters. "You probably won't be able to shut me up now."

Hamlin fired a 4-under-par 69 for a 10-under, 54-hole total of 208. Whitworth, who started the day 1 shot behind second-round leader Marlene Floyd, birdied the first four holes, but suffered through two double bogeys on the back nine to finish with a 72.

"I folded like a wet noodle," said Whitworth, the LPGA all-time leading money winner and a member of the ladies' Hall of Fame. "I don't know how else to put it. For 52 holes I held it together. Maybe next time I can hold it together for 54 holes."

Whitworth was 13-under-par at one point and held as much as a 3-stroke lead through most of the final round. But her first double bogey came at the 14th hole and she missed a five-foot bogey putt on 17 for the other.

Hamlin, meanwhile, was 11-under through 16 holes.

Caulkins Nabs Five Golds

BERLIN - Tracy Caulkins raised her total of gold medals to five and world records to four as U.S. swimmers raised their gold medal total to 20 at the World Swimming Championships.

Caulkins, of Nashville, Tenn., tied the world mark of 2 minutes, 9.87 seconds in winning the women's 200-meter butterfly, then helped the American women establish a world mark of 3:43.43 in the 400-meter freestyle.

Christensen Injures Foot

DALLAS (AP)-The Dallas Cowboys placed rookie running back Todd Christensen on the injured reserve list Sunday.

Christensen, a second-round draft choice out of Brigham Young University, broke a bone in his right foot during the Cowboys' last exhibition game against the Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday night.

Cowboy officials say placing Christensen on the injured reserve list makes him ineligible to play this season.

Shifflett Cops First Place At Dragway

LUBBOCK-Snyder's Kenneth Shifflett, mastering a 1966 Chevy II he calls Mighty Mouse, qualified for the upcoming National Southeast ET Championships by winning here Sunday.

Shifflett, who set a 13.0 second-108 mph pace with his 327 automatic, had already taken third place in his Pro ET class here Aug. 12.

He will now go to the championships in Green Valley as a part of the Lubbock Dragway team.

"I won the whole thing," commented an obviously happy Shifflett, who beat out 45 other cars in his class to win Sunday. "You have to qualify in the top 32 that race at Lubbock Dragway for the whole year to go to Green Valley," he explained.

The upcoming championships will include quarter-mile racers from Texas, Louisianna, Oklahoma and New Mexico, and is sponsored by the National Hot Rod Association (NHRA). The meet will be held near the end of September.

Predictions: A Tricky Business

by BILL McCLELLAN

AH, THE somewhat celebrated Associated Press preseason collegiate football poll has finally come out. Have you checked it for Southwest Conference teams?

WELL, IF you had, you'd discover that Arkansas, Texas and A&M are all listed in the top 20. Baylor and Houston were earmarked as "others receiving votes."

ALL OF which probably has something to do with the fact that it's almost impossible to choose a SWC favorite early in the season. In fact, I'm not sure it is possible, except for a few isolated cases. There are a couple of reasons for this. Coaches and writers (or other media people), which most pollsters get their votes from, tend to go with the flow. If Arkansas looks the strongest on paper, let's go with Arkansas, and at least no one will call us idiots when everyone else is doing it too...that's the theory. Then if Rice up and wins it, well golly gee, we ALL got it wrong, didn't we? Almost, anyway. There are always a few who stick some oddball team out there. They earn the chance at becoming legends if they happen to be right, but they are the obvious idiots if that particular team happens to not do so well.

ACTUALLY, MY feeling is that Arkansas, Texas, A&M, Baylor or Houston would be a good choice for top honors in the SWC this year. All have capabilities of winning the crown. So what if a couple, Baylor and Texas for example, are having trouble finding a quarterback. The Longhorns did pretty well with three of 'em last year. Then look at the other side of the thing for a second. Who was picked so well in 1977? Texas Tech, remember? Well, Allison got injured, and Houston's Danny Davis got hurt, and there you go...just shows you can't trust a football team.

I READ some NFL predictions the other day by a well-known forecaster who raved about certain teams. Since that time, Miami's Bob Griese has been injured, Bert Jones of the Colts has taken a tumble, George Allen has been fired as the Rams coach...honestly, I'll bet that guy is sitting at a bar in New York right now, crying in his whatever.

JUST GOES to show 'ya, you can't trust 'em. Which is one reason that in my picks (football edition, Aug. 27 Sunday paper), I chose Arkansas and Houston on top. Why? Because the Razorbacks DO look like the team to beat, on paper at least. Second reason? Hold your breath a minute I use the word DESIRE. It's the most over-used word in a coaches' vocabulary. Half of the time it means "we ain't got much else." But on the bottom line, it's one of the most important things a team can have going for it. Few of us can do things really well without having some sort of desire. Remember back in high school or college? You took some courses you really liked, and others you didn't. Chances are that the desire you had for woodwork, English, art or whatever, was what made you do better in the subject you really liked. You desired to learn more about it. The other course, the one you didn't do quite as well in, you studied - maybe worked harder at it - but the desire just wasn't there.

WELL, BACK to the point. I think Houston has the most desire. And fighting through a schedule which includes three of the top 20 teams, plus two "mentions," is something that will take a lot of consistant desire. I picked Baylor third, largely on desire, but they've got the talent to back it up.

DESIRE IS only one of the intangibles - seemingly small or unseen things that happen in a game or season. There are a lot of others, such as: Can the new coach build a team quickly; can the Bears find a quarterback soon enough; will a home game help Arkansas defeat whoever; and will A&M stay healthy enough to be competitive all season?

IF YOU look at the whole situation, it's easy to see why most predictions are based largely on paper statistics alone. The only other thing a prognosticator can look at early in the season is field advantages, toughness of schedule, new personnel (all of which are included in statistics) and tradition. So why go with Arkansas? They fit all of the above. Pick them number one in the SWC. Which leads to another reason I picked a tie for the title this year. It acomes to mind that with five teams capable of winning the thing, that no one will come out without a loss. It makes for lousy ratings in the polls, but great football.

AND GREAT football is what it's all about.

SPEAKING of great things, I've overlooked something that shouldn't have been missed. Sharon Halford and Eva Rich, playing catcher and centerfielder, respectively, for the Bad News Babes, were named to the United Girl's Softball Associaton Championship all-tournament team during the Division IV platoffs in Midland recently. Sorry I missed them earlier.

THANKS.

Rectal bleeding needs check

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please write something about hemmorhoids. I never knew when I got pregnant that I was going to have a life of pain. After 26 years of pain, all the doctor says is, "How are the hemmorhoids today?" And when I would ask what I can do for them he says, "Oh, hot sitz baths, watch your diet and use this ointment."

For years doctors would say, "Oh, they aren't too bad. Wait until they get worse and you can have this operation." It just feels like glass. Then I would talk to other people and their doctor just made an injection and they no longer had any trouble.

Now my obstetrician is deceased and I will not go to a hospital. I have a phobia of heights after having four babies, two almost 11 pounds. Why didn't someone do something while they could? Please can you help me. After all these years why isn't there something that can be done that's simple and why aren't more girls warned of this before pregnancy?

DEAR READER — You may have to go to the hospital if you are going to get any satisfactory treatment of your hemmorhoid condition. Remember that hemmorhoids are nothing more than varicose veins of the rectum no matter how irritating and uncomfortable they may be.

These large dilated veins in this area can be either external where all the little sensitive nerves are or they can be internal and not cause any pain at all. The internal type are the ones that are apt to cause bleeding.

The hemmorhoid veins pop out because of excessive pressure that prevents the veins from draining. Women do develop hemmorhoids in association with pregnancy. The pregnant uterus presses against the veins that drain that area.

The treatment depends a lot on the kind of hemmorhoids a person has. The internal type can sometimes be injected, but injection does not work for external hemmorhoids that cause symptoms. Some hemmorhoids involve both internal and external areas. These variations explain why treatment for one patient may be entirely different from the best treatment for still another patient.

In general, hemmorhoids aren't cured unless they are either injected or surgically removed. It is also true that good bowel habits tend to prevent hemmorhoids because that, in turn, prevents excessive straining at the stool.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-1, Spastic or Irritable Colon and Constipation to give you some information on proper bowel habits. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

It's important for my readers to realize that bleeding often comes from hemmorhoids, but there is no way you can be certain of this on your own. Anyone who has rectal bleeding must see a physician because it may be an early sign of rectal cancer which can be cured if detected early enough. Moreover, a tumor in the lower bowel area can cause pressure to create hemmorhoids.

No one, regardless of how young he is or how old he may be, should neglect the symptom of rectal bleeding and simply conclude that it's "just my hemmorhoids causing a little trouble." To do so is to court disaster and possibly to miss the chance to cure a serious or fatal disease.

Feeder Steer Profits Small

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some farmers and feedlot operators who bought high-priced feeder steers this summer may see part of their prospective profits dwindle by the time they're ready for market next winter, according to some analysts.

A breakdown by the Agriculture Department shows that if a feeder steer bought in July is fed through the remainder of this year it will have to bring the owner almost $600 to break even.

That means, according to the latest livestock and meat situation report, that a choice-grade steer will have to bring about $57 per 100 pounds when sold next January to cover all the costs of raising it for market.

Currently, department livestock economists say that steer prices - recently around $50 or so per hundredweight - may average in the range of $53 to $55 in the final quarter of this year.

The longer-range outlook for cattle producers remains bright, simply because they have drastically reduced inventories so much that it will be several years before the supply is restored enough to have much effect on market prices.

But in the meantime a smaller supply of lighter weight feeder cattle - a major cost in the business of producing finished beef animals for slaughter - has helped temper any notion that fat profits are a sure thing.

The analysis showed that if a 600-pound steer was bought last January, fed for six months and sold in July as a 1,050-pounder ready for slaughter, its owner would have invested about $487 in it.

That included a purchase price of about $264 for the original feeder steer, the feed and other expenses it took to raise the steer for market.

A similar steer bought in the Corn Belt in July would have cost more than $363 at the beginning of the six-month feeding period. All told, the owner will have $598.77 invested in the steer by the time it is ready for sale next January, the report said.

The figures include allowances for all expenses, from transportation, feed and veterinary services to labor expenses and charges for management.

If only the costs of the feeder steer and its feed are considered, the report said that the owner will have to get $49.92 per hundredweight for the steer next January. In July, it took only about $40 to cover these expenses.
