Protests held in U.S.

By GENEVA COLLINS
Associated Press Writer

Ringing bells in remembrance or pausing in silence, thousands of Americans observed today's 40th anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima with vigils and rallies across the nation. At least 45 people were arrested in demonstrations.

Children folded paper cranes of peace; painters traced shadows of the human form on asphalt as grim reminders of the atomic explosion that vaporized victims.

Many of the ceremonies nationwide commemorating the 140,000 Japanese who died in the explosion began Monday evening, with New York City churches tolling bells for 10 minutes at 7:15 p.m. EDT, or 8:15 a.m. Tuesday in Japan, the hour the bomb was dropped on Aug. 6, 1945.

In Boston, Concord, Waltham and Cambridge, Mass., and in Portland and Eugene, Ore., 8:15 a.m. today, local time, was the moment for church bells to ring. Fifty churches in Rhode Island and many elsewhere joined the observance.

"I don't think that the abhorrence and fear we have for the bomb would be there if the bomb hadn't been dropped," said Alvin Weinberg, a scientist who helped develop the bomb.

"It's enormously important that every year or so we relive the tragedy of Hiroshima," the 70-year-old retired director of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory said in an interview.

In Chicago, Greenpeace turned a ship into a floating art gallery displaying peace posters by American graphic artists. The ship was illuminated with candles in an all-night vigil.

City mourns old losses

By JAMES TYSON
Associated Press Writer

HIROSHIMA, Japan — The city where mankind discovered the terror and peril of the nuclear age today marked the 40th anniversary of its destruction with a minute of silence, appeals for peace and mourning for the thousands who died in the first atomic bomb attack.

Some 50,000 people at Hiroshima's Peace Memorial Park listened to the toll of a lone bell, watched doves flutter into the sky, and fell silent for one minute at 8:15 a.m. — exactly 40 years after the United States exploded an atomic bomb over the city, killing up to 140,000 people.

Some 600 youths fell to the ground in a symbolic "die-in" near the Atomic Bomb Dome, the former Hiroshima Industrial Promotion Hall whose fire-ravaged skeletal remains have become a sympol of the nuclear age.

Bereaved relatives of bomb victims tolled a Buddhist bell to summon the spirits.

At the nearby Ground Zero cenotaph that is the focal point of the park, black-clad mourners deposited the names of 4,200 people who died this year from long-range aftereffects of the bomb. The mourners left an offering of water, the final request of many people who perished in the days immediately following the inferno.

The new names bring to 138,700 the number of identified Hiroshima atomic bomb victims, whose names are inscribed at the cenotaph.

More than 90 percent of the people within a half mile of ground zero died Aug. 6, 1945, in the blast and heat of the four-ton bomb named "Little Boy."

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone told a news conference he may invite world leaders attending next year's Tokyo summit conference of industrialized nations to visit Hiroshima.

Asner takes role in Pantex gathering

AMARILLO (AP) — Every 12 seconds in the United States, a person drops below the poverty level, and in those same 12 seconds, $47,000 more is spent on defense, actor Ed Asner told a crowd of anti-nuclear protesters at a rally at the Pantex Nuclear Weapons Plant.

"You just can't ignore statistics like that," Asner said Monday before an estimated 75 to 100 people gathered outside the gates of the final assembly plant for the nation's nuclear warheads.

Asner, who has evolved in recent years as a political activist, shared the billing with Daniel Ellsberg at a peace encampment that was established here Saturday. Workshops and more speeches are scheduled today, the 40th anniversary of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Protesters have said they would form a human blockade today on railroad tracks leading into the Pantex plant.

Asner told the protesters that they have not only the right but the responsibility to speak out against the government "when they're going against our wishes."

Ellsberg spoke on Sunday.

Asner said he was taught that being patriotic meant being proud to be an American and "that if you spoke against the government you were some kind of an ingrate."

"But my experience has taught me different. I've learned that we not only have a right, but a responsibility to tell our government ... when they're going against our wishes," Asner said.

Asner said his first step toward speaking out was in 1980, during an actors' strike.

"By that time, my discovery about patriotism had jelled," Asner said.

"The world is coming to us instantly with satellite coverage, and it's become impossible to ignore injustice or, in the case of nuclear war, the danger we face," he said.

Once Asner became involved with world issues, he said he discovered that a lot of the frustration people feel from watching world events comes from not helping.

"Once you explore the ways to act, find the means to educate people and change conditions, you discover that you can make a difference," he said.

GOP livens up governor's race

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

It was supposed to be a quiet summer for politics, sandwiched between last year's presidential race and next year's gubernatorial-congressional contests. But the Republicans have turned up the heat and instead of some getting out of the kitchen, more are piling in.

It started with Rep. Tom Loeffler, who represents Midland, announcing last spring he was considering leaving his congressional seat and seeking one in the governor's mansion. Then senatorial-hopeful Kent Hance, who lost the race in a Democratic party runoff, switched to the GOP and said he was eyeing the governor's race.

Through it all former Gov. Bill Clements remained quiet. The only Republican Texas governor in 100 years, he had lost to Mark White in 1982 and had indicated he didn't want a rematch. But as the summer heated up, apparently so did his interest, and he announced recently he was entering the race.

And if that wasn't enough to keep Texans interested in politics, an Evans and Novak column in Monday's Reporter-Telegram reported that Midlander Ernest Angelo Jr. had joined Vice President George Bush's steering committee that could lead to a presidential run in 1988.

"IT'S BEEN as busy a summer as I've ever seen it," said Angelo, a member of the National Republican Executive Committee. "I've been surprised by what's happened. It's got to be having a political boost for the party."

Clements' announcement that he was entering the gubernatorial race again surprised Loeffler and Hance, but the former governor won't be picking up some of the same organizational support he had four and eight years ago.

Win Brown, who served as regional coordinator for 47 counties for Clements in 1978 and 1982, already had signed on with Loeffler when the announcement came. "I'm very close to both Clements and Loeffler," said.

He, too, thought Clements was going to stay out of 1986 campaign. "A month ago when I was in Houston I called Clements and he said he wasn't planning on running. Loeffler had been in weekly contact with Clements and Clements told him to go out and prove himself, and he raised $1.1 million."

Despite his early ties to Clements, Brown said, "I will be supporting Loeffler. Loeffler had said he might not run if Clements gets into the race. But Clements let him go all the way with the fund-raising and then announced. Loeffler is committed and he will make an announcement after the 20th of August."

Even after Clements entered the race, some of his former supporters who had offered to help Loeffler stayed with the congressman. Late last week, Loeffler announced the chairmen of his statewide steering committee: Tobin Armstrong, a former key aide to Gov. Clements, and Holly Decherd, secretary of the state GOP.

LAST WEEKEND at a meeting of the State Republican Executive Committee in Amarillo, one man introduced a resolution asking Clements to withdraw from the race. But the man got no support for his action, according to David Godfrey, a member of the SREC.

Wind shear detection system in plans

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Although Federal Aviation Administration officials are not commenting on their plans, a local official stated that a sophisticated wind shear detection system will be installed at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

"We were told it would be operational within the year," said Director of Aviation, Victor White. "We have signed the leases and the sites were made available in the spring."

An FAA spokesman, however, declined to comment on the installation of the equipment, designed to detect powerful surges of wind often found in thunderstorms. Friday's Delta Airlines Flight 191 crash at Dallas/Fort Worth Airport was thought to have been caused by the phenonmena, say officials.

"What we are getting is called the Low Level Wind Shear Alert System.... We were told it would be operational within the year."

— Victor White, Director of Aviation

"In light of the Dallas crash, we're not giving any comment or allowing any visits to our facilities," said Mitch Barker, public affairs spokesman.

The National Weather Service, located at Midland Regional Air Terminal, confirmed White's information.

"Right now, we are a network radar station, which means that we go out and take readings every hour," said a spokesman. "The radar systems is being replaced with a new Doppler system. The FAA is putting in wind shear measuring equipment."

The Doppler system, so-named for a 19th century Austrian astronomer, Christian Doppler, uses radio waves to detect sudden winds shifts. It's considered by some to be experimental, and according to an article in the Dallas Morning News, can cost "from $4 million to $6 million."

White, however, denied that Midland's airport would receive the Doppler system.

"What we are getting is called the Low Level Wind Shear Alert System," he said.

According to the article, the sensor-based detections which are currently being installed at 110 U.S. airports by the FAA, cost "between $68,000 and $100,000 each." The systems are already considered obsolete by some critics, it said.

Delta recorder caught sounds of break-up

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The crew of Delta Air Lines Flight 191 gave no indication anything was wrong, and by the time a cockpit voice recorder picked up the tower's order to go around, it also took in the "crackling, grinding" sound of a jumbo jet disintegrating, an investigator said.

Patrick Bursley, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board, said the sounds of destruction followed the electronic voice of an automatic ground proximity warning device that told the pilot three times to "Pull up!"

But he said Monday that the sound of the L-1011 Tristar coming apart were on the voice recorder before a frantic radio signal "Delta, go around!" from an aircraft controller in the tower at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The controller's order was fruitless, Bursley said Monday, because the plane already had bounced twice, hitting a hillside and a highway. The plane crashed Friday, killing 132 people on board and a man on the ground.

Until the crash, the cockpit voice recorder tape contained a routine conversation between the pilot and copilot, Bursley said. "They were talking about the fact they were in rain and what they were having to do to deal with the flight — but there is no indication of apprehension."

The tape then picked up the voice of the ground proximity warning, which Bursley likened to buzzers on cars that tell when a door is ajar.

Investigators also confirmed that a substantial increase in power just before the crash was the result of crew initiative, rather than a response to the tower's go-around order.

"At that point, the controlability of the airplane was beyond recovery," Bursley said.

Suicide bomber rode donkey

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A suicide bomber riding a donkey blew himself up near a building which houses an Israeli-backed militia in the southern Lebanon town of Hasbaya, Israel Army Radio reported today.

The bomber and the donkey were killed and one Lebanese civilian was wounded, radio reports said.

The report, confirmed by Israeli military sources who demanded anonymity, said the explosion occurred about 9 a.m. near a fence surrounding the offices of the South Lebanon Army, a militia supplied and trained by Israel.

Israel's state radio said the explosives were carried in saddle baskets and the blast killed the rider, identified as a Shiite Moslem.

Military sources said a Lebanese man, a civilian, was injured in the blast, which shattered windows of the militia offices.

Hasbaya, a predominantly Druse town in eastern Lebanon's lower Bekaa Valley, is a crossing point for Lebanese civilians entering and leaving the Israeli-controlled buffer zone in south Lebanon.

Reagan 'interested' in testing ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he is interested in a permanent ban on U.S.-Soviet nuclear weapons testing, but not until agreements are reached to ensure Soviet compliance and until the Pentagon completes work on a new generation of American weapons.

And Reagan, despite a high-level swap of arms control proposals between the White House and the Kremlin last week, still believes that long-running talks between negotiators in Geneva are the pathways to meaningful disarmament.

"Let's get back down to real facts," Reagan told a news conference on Monday. "In Geneva is where the decisions should be made and not with moratoriums of that kind. Let's get down to the business once and for all of reducing the numbers of nuclear weapons, hopefully leading toward a total elimination of them. Then there wouldn't be any need for testing."

It was Reagan's first direct response to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's July 29 announcement that the Soviets would impose a five-month moratorium on nuclear weapons tests beginning today and would continue beyond Jan. 1 if the United States would impose a similar moratorium in the meantime.

On other issues, Reagan:

—Said that while he opposed economic sanctions, he found some "helpful" aspects in a congressional move to tighten U.S. pressure on South Africa to end its policy of apartheid.

—Praised Congress for repealing an amendment that prohibited U.S. aid to rebels fighting the Marxist government in Angola.

—Said he looked forward to his summit meeting with Gorbachev in Geneva in November and repeated an invitation to the Soviets to send observers to an underground nuclear test at a site in Nevada.

—Said the $967.6 billion budget compromise approved by Congress last week "was not as much as we had hoped" for in the way of savings. He promised to examine future spending bills from Congress "with my veto pen hovering over every line."

—Said he intended to "pull out all the stops" for passage of a tax-overhaul plan after Labor Day, and also will call on Congress for a constitutional balanced-budget amendment and for authorization to veto individual items in spending legislation.

In his remarks, Reagan initially echoed Secretary of State George Shultz' views last week that the weapons-testing moratorium proposed by Gorbachev was not in the U.S. interest.

"The Soviet Union is ahead of us in the development and modernization of nuclear weapons," Reagan said. "They have just finished their tests, or they even have a couple left they might try to sneak in before the 6th.

"And we have not yet begun the testing and certainly haven't completed it in some of our weapons of that same type to keep pace with them," he continued, making reference to the Midgetman missile now being designed. "They don't have any more to do. Asking us to make it mutual meant that we would then not be able to catch up with them."

In a more positive vein, he added, however, "When we've completed ours and they're not doing any more, yes, that would be fine."

"After that limited moratorium which was supposed to end around December, if they want to make that permament moratorium or if they want to agree with us and have a bilateral inspection of each other's testing, we're willing to do that," Reagan said.

Asked when the U.S. testing would end, he said, "I don't know."

Reagan made no mention of the additional stumbling block of verification, but White House spokesman Edward Djerejian told reporters it was still a major bar to any test ban, along with the missile upgrading effort referred to by the president.

"These are the twin pillars; modernization and verification," Djerejian said.

The president reiterated the long-standing administration view that the best path for arms control is not high-level proposals from both sides, but bargaining at the three sets of nuclear weapons negotiations under way in Geneva.

On the issue of South Africa, though Reagan did not spell out which provisions he favored in a sanctions package passed by the House and widely supported in the Senate, he said, "I know some of the things that we are talking about in that legislation were things that could be helpful in the very way that I have been talking."

He added: "I know also, however, that the sanctions would not only be harmful to the black citizens there, they would be harmful to the surrounding black countries whose economies greatly depend on their trade and economic relations with South Africa."

He also suggested the South African government was justified in its current steps to curb the violence that prompted declaration of a state of emergency by the government in Pretoria.

President acknowledges skin growth cancerous

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time in three weeks, the nation has heard the jarring news that President Reagan has cancer — this time a common and easily curable form of skin cancer that is far less worrisome than the colon cancer discovered earlier.

Reagan himself disclosed Monday that a bump removed from his nose last week turned out to be a form of skin cancer, known as a basal cell carcinoma, and he quickly tried to reassure Americans about his health.

"They come from exposure to the sun," he told reporters. "Nancy had one removed from her upper lip sometime ago. They've very commonplace. They do not betoken in any way that you are cancer-prone."

Indeed, medical experts said there was no relation between Reagan's skin cancer and his colon cancer, the second most deadly form of the disease.

"This is a little one compared to the other one," said Dr. Thomas Nigra, chief of the Dermatology Department at Washington Hospital Center and a recognized expert in his field.

While describing skin cancer as the most common and easily curable form of the disease, Nigra said its existence "puts you at risk" in the future.

Statistically speaking, one in seven people who have had skin cancer will have another appearance of the disease within 18 months, Nigra said.

"The president needs to be watched, probably on a semi-annual basis, for newly appearing lesions," said Nigra, who is not involved in Reagan's care.

Doctors also have prescribed regular checkups to make sure there is no recurrence of Reagan's colon cancer.

Physicians who operated on the president July 13 and removed two feet of his colon reported finding no sign that the malignancy had spread through his body and said chances were better than 50-50 that Reagan will not have a recurrence.

Three weeks to the day after the diagnosis of his colon cancer, Reagan made the disclosure about his skin cancer during an extraordinary, 25-minute news conference with six reporters in the Oval Office.

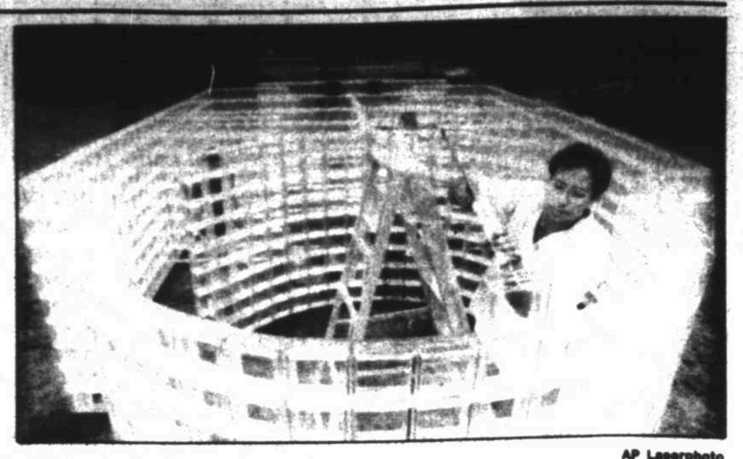

While all photographers and cameramen were allowed to record the scene, most of the White House press had to view the question-and-answer session on television.

Saying he was caught by surprise by the latest cancer discovery, Reagan said, "It is a little heartbreaking for me to find out, though, because all my life, I've lived with a coat of tan, dating back to my lifeguard days. That's why I didn't have to wear makeup when I was in movies.

"But now," he added, "I'm told that I must not expose myself to the sun anymore."

Even so, Reagan said he hoped to be riding a horse soon after arriving at his California ranch Sunday for a three-week vacation.

The president's announcement ended four days of confusion in the White House over the bump removed from Reagan's nose. White House officials waited two days after the procedure was performed last Tuesday to disclose that a spot had been removed from his nose by a dermatologist in the White House.

Tutu pleads with forces not to block funeral

DAVEYTON, South Africa (AP) — Bishop Desmond Tutu, the Nobel Peace Prize winner, pleaded with security forces in armored vehicles today not to interfere with the funeral of a black girl after police used loudspeakers to order mourners to disperse.

Tutu had finished his eulogy for Elizabeth Kumalo, a 16-year-old shot by police in a clash last week, and another clergyman was addressing about 150 mourners when the armored vehicles drove up.

Police announced in English and Afrikaans that the gathering was illegal under a 17-day-old state of emergency decree.

"You must disperse, you are acting against the law," a policeman said. The officer also said the procession to the cemetery must be in vehicles, and not on foot as is customary.

Tutu spoke with police for about 20 minutes as armed officers marched past the booing crowd. He returned to the gathering and said police were adamant that no march to the grave would be allowed.

For the next 90 minutes Tutu tried to arrange for buses to transport mourners to the grave site. Finally two buses arrived, but by then the crowd had swelled to about 600.

In his eulogy, Tutu declared he would not bow to the white-minority government's emergency restrictions, imposed July 31, on what he and other clergymen could preach at funerals.

"I have told them if you were to sit down with our leaders, you would be able to work out a plan for a new South Africa, where black and white would be able to live together in peace," he said. "There is nothing that anybody can do which will stop our freedom."

Tutu also pleaded with youths not to provoke a clash with police. "You are young. I would urge you, don't do anything which will give the system a chance to hurt you," he said.

Speaking to reporters, Tutu said the young people "have a recklessness which is quite incredible. Most of them believe they are going to die, not because they want to die, but because they believe it is the only way they are going to get their freedom."

Another funeral in the township for a second black killed last week, 18-year-old Delisiwe Mbongani, apparently proceeded peacefully.

Residents said the funerals for the two girls were being held separately, in keeping with the new restrictions.

White indicated that he did not know why Midland was selected to receive the equipment.

"We don't qualify technically speaking," he said. "The FAA selected more than 100 large hub and medium hub airports for the equipment. We border on a medium hub."

A large hub airport, according to Places Rated Almanac (Rand McNally 1985), is "any airport where the number of passengers leaving the airport constitute one percent or more of all U.S. airline passengers in a year." A medium hub is classified as " less than .99 percent but more than .25 percent" and a small hub is "less than .25 percent but more than .05 percent."

Another category, the non hub airport is "any airport rating less than .05 percent."

To date, the FAA has installed the sensor systems at 59 of the 110 designated airports.

White stated that the equipment, to be installed at six sites around the airport, is being financed by the FAA out of their Facilities and Equipment Fund.

"It's the same fund that the snow removal equipment came out of," he said. "The money was collected through airline ticket surcharges."

"We gave the FAA a lease for property to put the equipment on. There will be three detectors directly on the airport grounds and then three more on the perimeters of the airport."

The locations include the middle of the airport between the two runways, at the north end of the approach runway, at the far south end of the airport between Highway 80 and I-20, west of FM 1788, at the northwest end of the Instrument Landing Sytems (ILS) runway and on the east side of the airport, said White.

White also said that although there has never been an accident at Midland's airport attributed to wind shear, its presence has been noted.

"If you listen to the control tower radio frequency like I do, you'll occasionally hear a pilot experiencing a sudden surge of wind in take-off and landing situations," he said. "What we have heard and what has been reported by pilots is that we have some pretty violent winds."

One local pilot agreed.

"We tell the students to stay away from thunderstorms," said Harold Beaty, of Basin Aviation Inc. "Those are the 'biggies' as far as wind shear. We also tell them to watch for changes in temperature, keep up the airspeed and don't fly low through hilly country. That's where the winds can really get you."

Another instructor, Fred Michna, teaches his student pilots how to compensate for gusty winds.

"We don't fly in the kind of weather conditions that were in Dallas when the Delta plane crashed," he said.

Beaty echoed Michna.

"Thunderstorms are pretty easy to spot," he said. "In 40 years of flying, I've never got into severe wind shear."

Still, Beaty admitted that pilots haven't always known about the situation.

"It's a subject that everyone is still learning about," he said.

Although White acknowledged that the airport has no wind shear equipment at the present time, plans announced by the FAA in October 1983, called for the installation by this month. The equipment was to have been ordered within nine months and installation completed within 22 months.

According to a Reporter-Telegram article at the time, wind shear alert systems had been ordered by the FAA for 51 airports including Midland.

"I'm sure that we were picked because of the type of winds we have year round," said White at the time.

Plans to install the equipment was spurred by the crash of an Eastern Airlines jet which crashed at Kennedy Airport in New York City in the early 1970s said White, adding that a New Orleans crash in 1982, was also attributed to wind shear.

Wind shears usually occur within 500 feet of the ground and often reach speeds of more than 50 mph, said the article. The detection equipment uses a mini-computer to monitor wind speed and direction from sensors located around the airport. The computer compares the readings with data from another sensor located near the center of the airport operational area.

When a significant change is noted, audible and visual alarms are triggered in the control tower, said White, and operators can then alert pilots.

The original plans stated that Climatronics Corp. of Bohemia, N.Y. would supply the equipment under a $3.1 million FAA contract. Deliveries were to have begun within nine months and was to have been completed in 22 months.

Other Texas airports scheduled to receive the equipment at the time were Austin, Dallas Love Field, El Paso and Lubbock.

"When I come to Hiroshima, I feel a great responsibility to see that no more atomic bombs are used," Nakasone said. "My responsibility is different from other premiers. I have a special responsibility to the human race."

He said his government planned a detailed study of some 360,000 survivors of nuclear attacks. They are eligible to receive free medical treatment for diseases that may be related to the bombings.

Earlier, addressing the crowd which included mayors from 23 countries, Nakasone called on the United States and the Soviet Union to speed "realistic development" in nuclear disarmament talks this fall.

"It is an important responsibility for each and every one of us to protect our precious earth from the tragedy of war, particularly from the horrors of nuclear weapons, and hand it down to the next generation," Nakasone said.

"The devastation of Hiroshima fills us with sadness, fills us with a desire to set the clock back to that morning of Aug. 6, 1945, and fills us with a desire to grab that hand that released the deadly cargo and say 'no,'" said Elaine Scott Banks, president of the Greenpeace Great Lakes Chapter.

San Francisco schoolchildren readied hundreds of paper cranes, Japanese symbols of peace, for display today. Participants in a non-denominational evening service in Salt Lake City were to release 50 helium-filled balloons, each carrying a paper crane and addressed to a state. West Virginians were to float lighted paper lanterns in the Kanawha River.

The cranes recall the story of a Japanese girl who tried unsuccessfully to fold 1,000 paper birds before her death from radiation sickness 10 years after the bombing, said Rita Inoway of the Japanese Church of Christ in Salt Lake City.

Along with bells, silence was to mark the occasion.

Quakers scheduled an hour of silence at a Sioux Falls, S.D., park this evening, and in Boston, a silent vigil was planned in Boston Common, followed by a march along historic Beacon Street.

In Maryland, about 1,000 civic and religious groups urged residents to wear white ribbons — white is the Japanese color for death — and halt their normal activities for a few minutes today while reflecting on paths to peace.

Gov. Harry Hughes and Archbishop William D. Borders of Baltimore endorsed the "pause for peace."

On the West Coast, a two-hour vigil was planned today along Wilshire Boulevard from the ocean in Santa Monica to downtown Los Angeles, with a block-long "peace ribbon" in reprise of a weekend demonstration in Washington, D.C.

Louisiana residents readied a giant ribbon of flags and pictures to be tied around the governor's mansion.

Members of the Performing Artists for Nuclear Disarmament used whitewash to paint shadows on the streets and sidewalks of Boston and Cambridge, recalling the intensity of the blast that left no trace of some of its victims except for the outline of their bodies burned into the pavement.

Boston police arrested at least 20 demonstrators on charges of disorderly conduct and malicious destruction of property, said police Lt. John McLean. Some of those arrested had spray paint, he said.

Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority police reportedly arrested two people for vandalism in mass transit stations.

RACE

"Everyone feels like it's an open race," said Godfrey. "Really diverse elements of the party spoke together against it (resolution). It was totally annihilated in the executive session." Angelo called it a "bonehead move with no support at all."

Godfrey said members of the SREC had mixed reactions to Clements' entrance into the race. "But he has some people very loyal to him. I was surprised from the standpoint I felt he would wait until fall to make a decision. He's a tough, hard campaigner and I'm not surprised he'd go for a rematch."

Brown agreed Clements is a hard campaigner, while pointing out the differences in the style of the Clements and Loeffler. The congressman, he said, "is a very persuasive man and is able to negotiate and get things done. That's his strong suit. Bill handles it like a drilling contractor. That's his personality. He calls a spade a spade."

Angelo, who had worked in previous years on Clements' campaign, is staying neutral this time. "I feel a strong attachment to all three men. I consider Tom as one of my closest personal friends, both in and out of politics."

AS A NATIONAL committeeman, Angelo will monitor the primary to make sure the candidates campaign on issues and not personalities. And that, he contended, is a positive point of the Republican Party. With three candidates in the governor's race, two or three going for attorney general, three in the 21st congressional race to replace Loeffler, and at least two for agriculture commissioner, Angelo said it points to a boost of interest in the Republican Party.

"Normally in January party officials go into a state of panic trying to find candidates," he said. The number of Republican candidates is larger than usual "and we haven't done anything. This is indicative of the party's strength in Texas."

The increased interest this early in the campaign — almost a year before the June 1986 primary — should result in the "largest primary turnout" for Republicans, said Godfrey. "You'll have people involved, doing things for the first time. All that's to the good. I think it's very healthy to hafe a contested primary."

When the Democrats have several candidates for offices, Republicans have said it brings on fighting and dilutes the party. The same isn't true for Republicans, according to Angelo. "When the Democrats have five to six candidates for one office we wish they'd go out and beat each other up and not win," he said, emphasizing the "wish."

"I'm confident our own guys won't beat up on each other," he said, explaining that his position as a national committeeman is to monitor the races and keep the candidates from stepping on personalities.

As for the Evans and Novak report on the 1988 presidential race, Angelo said it was misleading. The political action committee which he is helping to set up for Bush is not for 1988 but for 1986. "It's a 1986 effort to help Republican candidates and to help the Republican Party. No campaign beyond 1986 is being considered."

Although he is helping to set up the committee, Angelo said he hasn't been asked to serve on it nor has he made a decision.

Man moved to Dallas area to find work, but became victim of crash

DALLAS (AP) — It looked like life had finally dealt Bill Mayberry a fair deal.

He had left Vicksburg, Miss., the previous week, landed a better job on Tuesday and planned to move his wife and two children to his better life in Texas the following week.

But on Friday, his 28th birthday, William H. Mayberry ended up among the victims of Delta Air Lines Flight 191. He wasn't even on the jumbo jet.

His only mistake was driving home.

Flight 191 bounced across Texas Highway 114 as it crashed short of a Dallas-Fort-Worth International Airport runway in a violent thunderstorm. In a flash, Mayberry's Toyota was flattened into a compacted waist-high heap of steel, and he became one of the 133 victims.

Relatives said Mayberry was feeling good on Friday, anxious to get to his uncle's house in Grapevine near the airport and wait for a birthday telephone call from his wife of 11 years, Terri.

"He got off work at 5:30 and I called at 6:30 to wish him happy birthday. I couldn't get him," Terri Mayberry said Monday. "He wasn't a drinker or a partier and he always went straight home so I knew something was wrong."

After recovering from kidney stone surgery, Mayberry decided in July to try his luck in Dallas, she said. He drove in Sunday, found work Tuesday and started on the job Wednesday.

"He was extremely excited," Mrs. Mayberry said. "He said 'It looks like it's all going to work,' that we were finally going to have a good life and live comfortably."

Fred Barton hired Mayberry as a mechanic at Toyota of Irving. He had good credentials as a Toyota mechanic, five certificates for technical achievement and a lot of enthusiasm, Barton recalled Monday.

"He had come to this area to find better employment than what he had in Mississippi. He had just come to town and I put him to work. He seemed excited," Barton said.

"What happened is hard to understand," he said. "It came as a shock to everybody here."

Mrs. Mayberry said her 8-year-old son, William Jr., has refused to believe that his father is dead.

"Today he wanted to know when Daddy was coming back. He thinks he's still in Dallas at work. I've told him and told him and told him, but he doesn't want to believe it."

To help herself cope, she plans to fly to Dallas Wednesday, after a Tuesday funeral.

"I'm coming to Dallas to see my car and see where it happened and try to understand," Mrs. Mayberry said.

"Anytime you put your money on the table and get an airplane ticket, you are taking a risk that plane may fall out of sky. Anytime you get in a car, you take a risk that you'll get hit by another car. Who on earth would get in a car and think they'd get run over by an airplane."

Mayberry's uncle, Derryl Price, said he was watching television coverage of the disaster when a camera zoomed in on the demolished car. Little was recognizable, except for the license plate from Warren County, Miss.

Price knew the car belonged to his nephew.

"It makes you wonder when it happens to someone like him," Price said Saturday. "He was a good boy and lived right. He loved his family to death."

NTSB expert: No evidence exists that rear of plane safer in crash

By IRVIN MOLOTSKY
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A federal aviation safety agency said on Monday that there was no evidence to support or contradict the common belief that passengers in the rear of commercial aircraft were more likely to survive a crash than those seated forward might be.

All 31 survivors in the crash Friday of a Delta Air Lines passenger jet in Dallas were seated in the rear. The death toll in the crash was 133, including one person killed on the ground.

Even before Friday's crash it was a perception among many travelers that sitting in the rear was safer, but Bob Buckhorn, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, said on Monday, "I don't have any statistics that would suggest that."

With the crash fresh in people's minds, he said that his agency had received many inquiries on Monday about the relative safety of various seating positions.

Most of the survivors of the Air Florida crash here in January 1982 were seated in the rear of the plane when it went down in the Potomac River, but Buckhorn cited other crashes in which those in front survived while those in the rear died. Among them was the Air Canada crash near Cincinnati in June 1983. In that crash, smoke from a fire in a restroom hindered the escape of passengers in the rear, he said.

Tom Lindemann, former head of the Accident Survivability Committee of the Airline Pilots Association, also cited the lack of statistics. "For almost each accident you can cite where the people survive in the rear, there is one to contradict it," he said. "I don't think there's enough hard statistics to say whether you should sit up front or sit in back."

An international authority on aviation, who spoke on condition that his name not be used, said, "I don't think that anyone has ever made a statistical study on this."

But he added, "You could apply a common-sense answer that perhaps it does help to sit in the rear because a plane usually hits with its nose and wings first in a crash, and they absorb the force."

Responses from the major manufacturers of passenger aircraft were similar.

David Crowther, a spokesman for Lockheed, the manufacturer of the L-1011 jetliner that crashed, said in Burbank, Calif., "I think that the tail section is, by some small fraction, the safest place."

The Lockheed plane that crashed is widely regarded as one of the safest aircraft ever built, and the preliminary investigation has not linked the Dallas crash to any problem with the plane, but rather with weather or airport conditions.

Lockheed's L-1011 is one of the three large passenger jets that are in wide use. The others are the DC-10 by McDonnell-Douglas and the Boeing 747.

In Long Beach, Calif., Don Hanson, a spokesman for McDonnell-Douglas, when asked if rear seats might be safer, said: "I have never heard that that is a factor in accident survivability. I think it's just a matter of random selection, and every accident is going to be different."

Hanson said a search of the company's files by Thomas Elser, the assistant head of safety engineering at McDonnell-Douglas, turned up no study comparing the safety of one part of an airplane to another.

In Seattle, Thomas Cole, a spokesman for Boeing, said : "Nobody has really made that kind of a study. Airplanes are designed as safely as we can."

John Enders, chairman of the Flight Safety Foundation in Arlington, Va., said: "It would be very difficult to say where the safest place is to sit on an airplane. We don't perceive the seat location to be of statistical significance in survival. When I get on a plane, I don't care where I sit. I just look for the nearest exit."

Final decision on whether to land, take off rests with plane's pilot

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the Delta Air Lines crash in Texas focuses attention on the hazards of severe weather, the final decision on whether to land or take off under bad conditions rests with the pilot.

The Federal Aviation Administration limits takeoffs and landings when there is poor visibility, but it has no strict rules for dealing with other types of severe weather.

Instead, it monitors the weather and keeps pilots informed of conditions, with the final decision made by the pilot and air traffic controller.

"We can't take the pilot's prerogatives away from them," said FAA spokeswoman Joanne Sloane, who pointed out that weather conditions can be very localized and no one knows what a plane's pilot is seeing or hearing.

In the case of the Delta crash Friday night, which killed 133 people, investigators have suggested that the cause may be traced to wind shear, a weather phenomenon that occurs suddenly and can be hard or impossible to detect with existing equipment.

In addition, the Delta L-1011 jet had been directed to slow down shortly before the accident, to keep it from getting to close to another plane landing in front of it at the Dallas-Fort Worth airport. A lower speed would have made a sudden wind shear even more dangerous.

The airport controller reportedly directed Delta Flight 191 to increase speed and not try to land, but it apparently was too late at that point.

Patrick Bursley, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board, said Sunday that officials are investigating the role of wind shear — an abrupt change of wind direction and speed — in the crash. Instruments at the airport showed low-level wind shear in the area minutes after the crash but might have missed wind shear farther away.

Clint G. Swazea, a Delta assistant vice president in Atlanta, said Saturday he was almost certain wind shear had caused the crash.

Wind shear has been blamed in 16 airliner accidents in the past 20 years, most recently the crash of a Pan American World Airways plane on July 9, 1982, that killed 154 people in Kenner, La.

Airport radar operated by the National Weather Service to monitor weather conditions is not fast enough to detect microbursts of wind, according to weather service officials. In addition, this radar is designed to scan a wide area, while such wind conditions are very localized.

Man who died in Delta crash only survivor of previous one

MIAMI (AP) — A man who died in the crash of Delta Air Lines Flight 191 was the only survivor of a private plane crash eight years ago that killed six members of his family.

"We spent the first hour after hearing the news figuring what the odds of something like this could be," said Bob Guterma, 33, brother of Marc Guterma, who was among 132 Delta passengers who died in Friday's crash.

"We came to the conclusion that it was impossible," he said.

Only Bob Guterma stayed behind when seven members of his family flew to New York City aboard a Mitsubishi turbo-prop in 1977 to see a circus. The plane crashed four miles from LaGuardia Airport in light rain and heavy fog.

Marc Guterma was the sole survivor of the crash, which killed his father, mother, and four brothers and sisters.

In both crashes, only the tail of the plane remained intact.

In the 1977 crash, Guterma suffered a broken arm, leg, neck and shoulder. Doctors didn't tell him he had lost most of his family for two days.

Then 14, Guterma healed, went on to finish high school and moved to Colorado and then Utah, pursuing interests in music and computers.

Zebras draw double takes on East Texas spread

By KELLI CASTLEBERRY

LUFKIN (AP) — The Winston 8 Ranch on Highway 59 north of Lufkin sits overlooking a panorama of fenced pastures dotted with stands of shade trees, under which livestock lay dozing, switching flies with their tails.

A short distance away, a faded green Bronco kicks up whirls of dust as it pulls onto a side road, a bale of hay in tow. Blinking sleepily, a grazing burro looks up for a moment and then loses interest.

All in all, a scene typical of many ranches in a small southeast Texas town on a summer afternoon.

Except for the zebras.

"It costs just as much to handle a horse or cow," said Simon Winston, "and zebras are a novelty. Besides, you get more money for their offspring than horses or cows." He isn't saying how much he paid for his.

Winston has three of them — a male, Zeb Earl, and two females, Mary Lou Lockette and Daisy Mae, who is expecting in October. Winston said he plans to continue breeding them and sell the colts, all the while depreciating the herd.

"You have to have meshed instead of barbed wire. Otherwise, if you spook them, they could go through the fence and cut themselves and then I'd have to call Marlin Perkins."

— Rancher Simon Winston

But how about feeding a zebra? No problem said Winston. They enjoy "a Diablo sandwich and a Dr. Pepper."

Most of the time, however, they eat the same horse and mule feed given to the other horses, plus nibbling at the grass covering their three- to four-acre pen. The pen is fenced with meshed instead of barbed wire to keep the exotic animals from injuring themselves.

"You have to have meshed instead of barbed wire," said Winston. "Otherwise, if you spook them, they could go through the fence and cut themselves and then I'd have to call Marlin Perkins."

Aside from this quirk in zebra health care, they are treated just like horses, mules and burros. Heat doesn't bother them and they need no special provisions in the winter — just "enough to eat," according to Winston.

But zebras cannot live by bread alone and the man who sold them to Winston recommended putting a jenny (burro) into the pen also to "gentle them down." Winston did and it didn't work, he said, because "she's wilder than they are."

In their native Africa, zebras live in small groups of a stallion and several mares. Only one species, the mountain zebra, is on the endangered species list but the entire population has been declining over the years.

These three, however, appeared healthy and happy as they raced around their new home, black tails flying. None of the three uttered a sound, though, which raised the question — what noise do they make?

"They sound like a dog barking," Winston said.

John "Grandpa" Winston Sr. takes school children on tours of the ranch in the back of his truck and the zebras have been a big hit.

"I sit at the front desk and when people come in and see them through the window behind me, you should see the look on their faces," said Linda Ashford. "They look quite surprised."

Zebras are all well and good in Lufkin, Texas, but are folks ready for their hybrid cousins?

"When you cross a horse with a zebra you get a zorse and when you cross one with a donkey, you get a zonkey," Winston said, with a twinkle in his eye. "Zorses have stripes on their legs and are mean animals. Zonkeys have stripes on their legs too, but they have longer ears."

Rancher Simon Winston rounds up one of the three zebras he has on his ranch north of Lufkin. He says he finds the animals well adapted to East Texas.

Taxpayers may bear burden of lawsuit

BORGER (AP) — Taxpayers in this oil city may have to bear the burden of a case of mistaken identity by municipal police.

The Panhandle city of 16,000 is under court order to pay $1.3 million because police accidentaly shot James C. Grandstaff thinking he was a fugitive they had been chasing.

That amount is more than a city that operates on a $7 million annual budget can afford, said Mayor Frank W. Selfridge.

"We weren't expecting anything like this," said Selfridge, who became mayor after the incident occurred. "The only recourse we have is from the taxpayers."

Grandstaff, a 31-year-old ranch foreman, was shot to death Aug. 11, 1981, after a fugitive had fled onto the ranch.

A federal appeals court Monday upheld a finding that the city police are liable for the death.

After Grandstaff was shot, the city and its police "denied their failures and concerned themselves only with unworthy, if not despicable, means to avoid legal liability," the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said in a 15-page opinion.

But the city does not have to pay Grandstaff's widow, Sharon, and stepsons Randy and Robert Gatlin $150,000 for emotional damage inflicted on them when they saw him shot to death, the court ruled.

The policemen who shot Grandstaff had argued that there was no proof that any particular officer fired the shot that killed Grandstaff.

"They may as well argue that no one on a firing squad is responsible for the victim's death unless we know whose bullet first struck the heart," said the opinion written by Judge Thomas Reavley for a three-judge panel.

Selfridge said the city has hired a new police chief since Grandstaff's shooting and disagreed with the court's opinion that the Borger police force was ill-trained and incompetent.

The judges agreed with the federal jury's finding that the policemen were reckless, that the city had failed to train them properly, and that serious incompetence and misbehavior were widespread throughout the city police force.

Groups preparing suit over water quality

AUSTIN (AP) — Two environmentalists' and sportsmen's groups say they are "sick and tired" of the fish kills in Texas streams and rivers resulting from nonenforcement of water pollution laws.

A lawsuit being prepared by the Sierra Club and Sportsmen's Clubs of Texas says the federal Environmental Protection Agency should be made responsible for Texas following federal and state water pollution laws.

If the federal court suit is successful the EPA would be ordered to enforce all water quality stanadards in Texas.

"Unless major steps are taken soon to come to grips with our state's major water pollution problems, Texans will awake one day to find water made stagnant by our lack of action and an economy made stagnany by our degradation of that water," Ken Kramer, Sierra spokesman, told a news conference on Monday.

"We're sick and tired of all these fish kills," said Alan Allen, executive director of SCOT. "We've tried to work within the system but we have finally just had too much and want to do something about it.

Allen said SCOT officials were particularly incensed by last month's kill of about 286,000 fish "due to sewage in the Trinity River alone."

Austin attorney Rick Lowerre said EPA was given the required 60-day notice Monday that the lawsuit was being prepared.

"Of course if they correct all these things in the next 60 days, there would be no reason to file suit," Lowerre said. "However, since they have known about them for years we don't expect to see that happen and expect to file our suit in early October."

Lowerre said the suit claims that EPA approved Texas Water Quality Standards knowing that they did not comply with the federal Clean Water Act. He said the suit alleges that EPA has even failed to require Texas to assure that the discharge of pollutants in Texas lakes and rivers comply with the state's own laws

"SCOT and the Sierra Club will sue to force EPA to take over the review and certification process (of water quality guidelines) since Texas has failed to establish an adequate process," Lowerre said.

Kramer displayed a chart which he said showed more than 1,600 miles of rivers and streams that are officially classified by the Texas Department of Water Resources as "non-fishable and non-swimmable." He said this classification includes portions of 50 different rivers and streams throughout the state.

Death-row inmate gets second execution stay

AMARILLO (AP) — A Texas death row inmate scheduled to die by lethal injection Wednesday was granted his second stay while four other inmates await the fate of their executions set for next week.

U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson said Monday in a two-page order that the execution of Murriel Crawford Jr. should be blocked until she can decide on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus filed by Crawford's attorneys.

The judge did not comment on specific arguments Crawford's lawyers made in their petition requesting the execution be stayed.

Crawford, 28, was convicted of capital murder for the Oct. 25, 1975, shooting of Edith Whitfield, 43, a cashier at a north Amarillo convenience store. He was scheduled to die early Wednesday.

Betty Wheeler, an Amarillo lawyer representing Crawford, said the stay was not a surprise because Crawford had not previously received an opportunity to have the merits of his case considered by a federal judge.

"I think it's important that they be reviewed," she said.

Ms. Wheeler said the judge had not yet specified when or if she would conduct a hearing on Crawford's case.

Wednesday's execution date was Crawford's second. He was to die Oct. 22, 1981, but the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals blocked the execution. The state appeals court on Friday refused to block Crawford's latest date with the executioner.

Mrs. Whitfield, a mother of five, was shot once with a double-barrel shotgun in a robbery that netted only $30.

The four Texas death row inmates scheduled to die by injection next week are:

— Larry Smith, convicted in a 1978 Dallas convenience store robbery-slaying, is scheduled to be executed Aug. 13.

— Leon Rutherford King, convicted in the 1978 slaying of a Houston man who was abducted with a woman companion, and Jay Kelly Pinkerton, convicted in the 1979 slaying of an Amarillo woman, both scheduled to die Aug. 15.

— Leonel Torres Herrera is scheduled to die Aug. 16 for the 1981 slaying of a Los Fresnos policeman and a Department of Public Safety officer.

White House downplays results of special congressional election

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is downplaying the results of a special congressional election that was touted as a bellwether of the GOP's inroads into strongly Democratic Texas.

Though he outspent Democrat Jim Chapman by a 3-1 margin, Republican Edd Hargett lost the special election runoff Saturday by 1.87 percent, or about 2,000 votes.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes was asked about the election outcome at a press briefing on Monday.

"Some accounts try to picture it as a watershed-type election," Speakes said. "We don't specifically regard it that way, putting it in the context of a heavily Democratic district. Edd Hargett came within 2,000 votes of winning. He came within one percentage point of matching the president's 1980 total in that district.

"So it is simply an election where the Democrats who historically have gotten out 18 to 20 percent of their voters in that area got out 32 percent of them with a massive get-out-the-vote effort," Speakes said.

Democrats have held the 1st Congressional District seat in northeast Texas for 114 years.

The seat came open after freshman Republican Sen. Phil Gramm nominated incumbent Democratic Rep. Sam B. Hall Jr. to be a federal judge.

Republicans characterized the close outcome as historic in the heavily Democratic district. But Democrats argued that Hargett, who quarterbacked Texas A&M University's 1968 Cotton Bowl win, downplayed his party affiliation.

Hargett, 38, is an engineer from Linden. Chapman, 40, is a former district attorney from Sulphur Springs.

The election remained under something of a cloud this week, due to a Justice Department demand — upheld by a federal court — that the state belatedly offer the election date for clearance under the Voting Rights Act. The state has until Aug. 15 to submit the election date for approval. If it does not, the election results could be declared void.

FEC asks judge to order Gramm campaign to comply with subpoena

DALLAS (AP) — The Federal Election Commission Monday asked a federal judge to order U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm's campaign fund-raising committee to comply with a subpoena to turn over its financial records.

The request, filed in Dallas federal court, is the latest in a five-month-long effort by the FEC to audit the records of the Friends of Phil Gramm, the fund-raising committee that helped propel Gramm into the U.S. Senate last November.

The FEC since March said it had "reason to believe" the Dallas-based committee failed to correctly report contributors and expenditures and failed to "continuously report outstanding debts" while accepting contributions that exceed the legal limits per contributor.

Gramm, a recent Republican convert, is "ready to do everything the law requires" but will continue to fight the subpoena and the FEC's efforts to audit the financial records of his fund-raising committee, James Schoener, Gramm's Washington attorney, told The Dallas Morning News.

"We admit we didn't disclose the debts, but we didn't know what they were," Schoener said Monday. He said Gramm recently spent almost $100,000 on a "complete and total...amended campaign filing" that should satisfy the FEC.

An audit by the FEC would be "like tearing up a planted field and replanting it," Schoener said.

The FEC subpoenaed the Friends of Phil Gramm records on June 20, a day after the committee asked U.S. District Judge Robert Porter of Dallas to halt the FEC's audit plans on the grounds that the plans violated a six-month federal time limit to conduct audits of election records.

Communities' attitudes back segregation

CORRIGAN (AP) — Annie Mae Reagan, 75, left her home in an all-black public housing project in the Polk County community of Corrigan to live in an integrated project in Houston.

But after eight months, she returned to Corrigan to live in her old apartment.

"I asked for my old unit back," she said. "In the black section — that's where I wanted to live. Yes, sir."

But Ms. Reagan and other public housing residents — whether they like it or not — will soon live in integrated public housing projects because of a ruling issued last week by a federal judge.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler found the Housing and Urban Development agency's policies discriminate against minorities. He ordered HUD to respond to a desegregation plan that is part of a lawsuit filed in 1980 by hundreds of black East Texas public housing residents.

The judge also listed 36 East Texas counties — including Liberty County in which Cleveland is located — that are not in compliance with federal laws barring segregated public housing.

While public housing officials are scrambling to comply with Justice's ruling, they say community attitudes have forced them to house blacks and whites separately in the past and will make it difficult to integrate them in the future.

"I hope that judge sleeps well. Everybody's got a right to live where they want to live," said Alice Dougherty, manager of public housing for the Liberty County town of Cleveland, located about 30 miles northeast of Houston.

"We are moving blacks into white sections and whites into blacks," she said. "We've had some refusals, but those people are being told they have to move out of public housing. We're not playing around anymore."

Ms. Dougherty said the Cleveland public housing authority for the past 20 years has put black and white residents in separate projects because that is the way both races wanted it.

"We only put blacks where they wanted to be. Is that wrong?" she asked. "Their argument is legitimate as hell if you ask me," she said. "They just wanted to live with their own."

Housing authorities in Livingston and Corrigan agreed that they only segregated blacks and whites because that is the way residents wanted it.

DeOrville Evans, manager of Corrigan's housing authority, said public residents "flat told us" they preferred segregation. Evans said he was angry because Justice "has never been to Corrigan or anywhere near this place."

"I just don't know about what it (the order) would do here," he said. "But I think it would tear the town right up."

Mattie Terry, 88, a resident of an all-white project in Corrigan, agreed with Evans.

"The best way to do it is let it stay as it's always been," she said. "Everytime you cross up the races you have a mess. It's all silly talk, that dope. You can put blacks with whites, but you're not going to change feelings around here."

Walker spied for 'happy hour' money

NATION

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Arthur J. Walker told the FBI he made $12,000 by funneling U.S. secrets to the Soviet Union and used the "happy hour money" to buy a hairpiece, a gas grill and new brakes for his car, according to documents unsealed at his espionage trial.

After first denying any knowledge of his brother John A. Walker Jr.'s alleged espionage, Arthur Walker told the FBI he was lured into spying because he was financially strapped by a business failure, FBI Agent Barry D. Colvert testified Monday at the start of the trial.

Arthur Walker said his brother urged him to provide classified documents from his employer, VSE Corp., a Chesapeake defense contractor, Colvert testified.

John Walker showed his brother an envelope stuffed with money and said "if you can get your hands on some good information...this is the kind of money you can make," Arthur Walker told agents, according to Colvert.

Arthur Walker, 50, a retired Navy officer from Virginia Beach, is accused of seven counts of espionage for allegedly passing classified documents to his brother for delivery to the Soviet Union in 1981 and 1982. U.S. District Judge J. Calvitt Clarke Jr. is hearing the non-jury trial.

According to Colvert and the unsealed documents, Arthur Walker denied any involvement in espionage when he was interviewed by the FBI after his brother's arrest in Maryland May 20.

After failing a lie detector test, Arthur Walker admitted that he gave his brother classified documents on Navy ship repair and was paid $12,000, the documents said.

Colvert testified that Arthur Walker was having financial difficulties because a car radio and air conditioning distributing business started by the brothers had failed.

Arthur Walker told the FBI that after he received the first of two $6,000 cash payments from his brother, he gave $2,000 back to John to pay off business debts, according to the documents. The remaining $4,000 went in a briefcase in his closet.

"It was my happy hour money. I bought some stuff...a gas grill, a new hairpiece, brakes for the car," Arthur Walker was quoted as telling the FBI in the documents.

Arthur Walker told agents his brother met him in the VSE parking lot and photographed documents that Arthur Walker had taken from his employer, and that John Walker said the papers were for "the people in Europe, the Russians," Colvert testified.

Arthur Walker said he tried to dissuade his brother from spying by telling him, "What you're doing is very dangerous. Be careful," Colvert said.

In cross-examination by defense attorney Samuel W. Meekins, Colvert said Arthur Walker never told the FBI he knew he was hurting the United States and said he turned over documents so his brother would leave him alone.

Arthur Walker is the first of four defendants in the alleged espionage ring to stand trial. John Walker and his son, Navy seaman Michael L. Walker, will face trial in Baltimore. The fourth defendant, Jerry A. Whitworth, is awaiting trial in San Francisco.

The documents unsealed Monday, which included the FBI's notes on Arthur Walker's statements to agents after his brother's arrest were filed July 9.

Miller confident of innocence in FBI spy trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ten months after the first arrest ever of an FBI agent on spy charges shook the bureau and spurred internal investigations, Richard W. Miller is ready to face judgment by a jury.

The 48-year-old Miller, who had his best suit cleaned and pressed for the opening statement portion of his trial today, is said to be confident he can convince a jury of his innocence.

But first he must listen to weeks of government testimony designed to portray him as a willing spy, a man led to espionage by a seductive Russian woman.

His lawyers will cross-examine the government witnesses, but Miller will not have the opportunity to testify until the defense portion of his trial.

He has already told large portions of his story in a virtual dress rehearsal of the case during the trial of his two co-defendants, Soviet emigres Svetlana and Nikolay Ogorodnikov.

They abruptly pleaded guilty June 26 at the end of the prosecution case and were sentenced to prison. Mrs. Ogorodnikov, Miller's former lover, has been mentioned as a potential witness aganst him.

On the witness stand at the earlier trial, Miller said he was a counterintelligence agent with "a James Bond fantasy," when he became involved with the Soviet woman.

He insisted that he never planned to take her up on an offer to pass classified documents to the Soviets in exchange for $65,000 in cash and gold.

Instead, Miller said, he was trying to convince his lover that he was ripe for recruitment in order to infiltrate the Soviet spy network.

"I thought maybe I could accomplish something that hadn't been accomplished before, to infiltrate a Soviet intelligence service," he said.

The government has offered a different version of the motivations behind his love affair with Mrs. Ogorodnikov.

In a lengthy trial memorandum filed with U.S. District Judge David Kenyon last week, the prosecution outlined its plan to show jurors that Miller was a hard-luck agent whose obesity, financial setbacks and excommunication from his church for adultery made him ripe for recruitment by the Soviets.

"In the spring of 1984, Miller had severe financial, marital and career problems," said the memorandum by U.S. Attorney Robert Bonner and Assistant U.S. Attorney Russell Hayman.

"Thus, at the time Svetlana Ogorodnikov first contacted Miller, he was a 'classic' target for recruitment by the Soviets," the memorandum said.

The prosecutors said they would call experts on Soviet intelligence to tell jurors about KGB methods of penetrating U.S. intelligence services and would seek to prove that a document Miller allegedly gave Mrs. Ogorodnikov related to U.S. national security.

Mrs. Ogorodnikov, who made a plea bargain with the government, indicated through her lawyer that Miller was a willing spy.

"Miller told her he wanted to work for the Soviet government and told her he would sell them whatever they wanted," attorney Brad Brian said at the plea hearing.

Space shuttle to return today with weighty load of research

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's astronauts fired an electron beam into the atmosphere as their final test today and headed back to Earth from a research journey acclaimed by scientists as a sensational success after a rocky start.

They were bringing home a wealth of knowledge collected about the solar system after the mission recovered dramatically from a launch abort, a lost engine and failed experiments.

Commander Gordon Fullerton and pilot Roy Bridges guided the 100-ton space plane toward an afternoon landing on a desert runway at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. Touchdown was set for 3:45 p.m. EDT at the end of an eight-day, 3.3-million-mile trip acclaimed as the most ambitious space science effort ever.

A team of specialists waited at Edwards to inspect Challenger's No. 1 engine in an effort to pinpoint why it shut down early during liftoff. They suspect faulty sensors sent a false fuel pump overheating signal but want to be sure before the next shuttle flight, that of Discovery, on Aug. 24.

NASA is so confident bad sensors are to blame that it moved Discovery to the launch pad today to be groomed for a mission in which the crew will deploy three communications satellites and try to repair a disabled one already in orbit.

In their final experiment, the astronauts triggered an electron generator over the Pacific Ocean, shooting a bright beam toward the Earth from 175 miles up. An observatory on Hawaii recorded disturbances created in the ionosphere's field of gases and particles. It was one of several studies of the ionosphere, the atmospheric layer that relays radio signals.

All 13 of the experiments in the $76 million package were shut down by 4:30 a.m., and astronauts and scientists on the ground congratulated themselves on what Mission Control termed "a highly successful flight."

"Happy landings," one control team member radioed.

The seven-man crew was returning with miles of data tape, thousands of photographs and 45 hours of video tape that could give researchers a better understanding of the sun, stars, galaxies and the gases and particles that swirl in the Earth's atmosphere. Officials said that during the mission, ground controllers received 1.25 trillion bits of data.

Of thousands radioing Challenger crew, Illinois 'ham' succeeds

HOMER, Ill. (AP) — Ham radio operator Bill Butler had nearly given up when he finally made contact with space shuttle Challenger.

"It was definitely the high point of my vacation," said Butler, after a brief exchange of messages with astronaut Tony England on Sunday afternoon.

Butler said it was "more or less luck" that he was able to get through while about 10,000 ham radio operators tried to contact the shuttle.

"It was a contest type of atmosphere trying to reach him," said Butler, who uses a computer tracking device to point his antenna. "All those operators sounded like a beehive."

Butler, a maintenance supervisor at the Champaign-Urbana Mass Transit District, was on the last day of his vacation and had just about given up hope of contacting Challenger, which makes five or six passes a day around the Earth. He had about eight minutes to get his signal to the astronauts.

The brief conversation was tape-recorded but it is difficult to understand what is being said because of the radio code.

However, Butler's last words were: "QSL, lots of luck." The QSL means "greetings and salutations," he said.

VOTE FOR WATER

Saturday, August 10,

Vote FOR X Water FOR Midland.

Midland Depends on Water, Lots of It!

Since 1970, water used in Midland has grown to over 21 million gallons of water each day. Peak demand skyrockets to over 38 million gallons per day! In fifteen years, if we assume less than predicted growth, peak demand for water could exceed the capacity of our existing water supplies — even when they are fully developed!

The Proposition.

On Saturday, August 10, you will have the opportunity to insure the uninterrupted water future of Midland for generations — by voting FOR the last renewable water source ever to be constructed in West Texas! By voting FOR Proposition One, you will authorize the Midland City Council to contract with the Colorado River Municipal Water District to:

1. Share in the engineering and construction costs to build the Stacy Reservoir on the Colorado River near San Angelo. Our share of the cost will be 16.54% or approximately $11,125,000. We would also share the same percentage of the administrative and operating costs of the reservoir.

2. Share in the project by receiving 16.54%, or 15,000 acre feet of water from the reservoir each year. That means that by 1991, the anticipated date of water delivery from Stacy, Midland could be assured of 4.8 BILLION gallons of water each year — well into the next century.

The Costs.

How much will this water independence cost? About fifteen cents per thousand gallons. That means for an average water bill (not including sewer and trash collection) of $37.70 per month, the proposed water contract would add $2.70.

Please Vote.

The Water For Midland Committee encourages all registered Midland voters to "Vote FOR Water FOR Midland" on Saturday, August 10. Participation in this last renewable surface water resource is vital to the future of Midland.

Pd. Pol. by Water for Midland Committee, W.H. (Bill) Collyns, Treasurer, P.O. Box 1890, Midland, Texas 79702.

Vote FOR Water FOR Midland Saturday, August 10.

Man's challenge

Forty years ago today, an aircraft dubbed the "Enola Gay" released an atomic bomb over Hiroshima, Japan, and warfare was inextricably altered. In a very real sense, the repercussions of that act are still being felt today in the United States, Europe, the Soviet Union and other nations around the world.

The immediate impact of the two bombs dropped, on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, was to bring the War in the Pacific to an abrupt end. The death and the destruction wrought by those bombs caused a hush over the world as mankind contemplated what it had done. It was an awesome sight, no doubt, and even today — four decades later — a sobering thought. What an unthinkable power to turn against an enemy.

Yet the most startling realization today as man grapples with the complexities of international relationships in the 1980s is: How little we have learned. How quickly we forget.

The mushroom clouds over the two Japanese cities long ago dissipated. The fires were extinguished; the rubble cleared away. The bodies of the thousands of dead were removed; the thousands more who were injured were attended to. In the years that followed, Japan was rebuilt and stands today as a financial power. Scars still linger, true, but new structures and the quest for financial success have quelched much of the pain for that nation.

Yet the proof abounds that man's flirtation with atomic power as a weapon of war has only begun. Nations have continued to acquire the technology for atomic weaponry and the world's nuclear arsenal has proliferated. The devastation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki weren't enough to discourage man from that course. And so, today, the challenge before mankind is greater than ever before.

Today the "names" have changed, but the "game" remains the same. Today it is the United States versus the Soviet Union, Red China, India and countless other world powers and Third World players. Today the odds are greater that this nuclear horror will be unleashed again and again the world will see the horror of what man has created.

How can it be avoided? Only by the wisdom of man to learn from the past — to remember the death, destruction and misery in Japan 40 years ago and to vow never to let that type of warfare occur again.

That is the challenge. May man never fail to meet the challenge.

Another View:

Superfund swamp

After five years, Superfund is still a daunting swamp of disappointment and discord. The federal program to clean up abandoned toxic-waste dumps is due to expire, but Congress and the administration cannot agree on how to renew it. James Florio, one of Superfund's authors, says a new House bill "isn't worth passing." Sen. Dole has refused to bring a Senate committee's bill to floor vote. EPA Administrator Lee Thomas fears the program's disruption if Congress cannot agree.

Why has progress been so slow? So many hazardous-waste sites pock the land that just cataloguing them is a major task. The Environmental Protection Agency has found 19,000 so far, and is still counting. Of the 800 designated for priority attention, only 10 have been completely cleaned up. When Superfund I expires in September, after $1.6 billion and five years' work, it'll have done a pygmy's job on a Superman's labor.

To make Superfund II do better, the Senate Environment Committee would increase its five-year budget to $7.5 billion, the House Energy and Commerce Committee to $10 billion. More money is surely needed, but some of the provisions environmentalists are pressing on Congress militate against efficiency.

Letting citizens sue polluters or the EPA would only inspissate the logjam of litigation. Writing strict deadlines of the sort that stimulated action by EPA on other issues might mire it only further in the wastes of Superfund. The House should follow its committee in voting down these complexifying provisions.

There are problems enough in deciding the basic issues of Superfund II, like where the money's coming from. Superfund I was funded by a tax on oil and raw chemicals, with the argument that these were the source of most toxic chemicals in the dumps. The oil and chemical industries assert, probably with reason, that they cannot afford an increase in this tax. Since a broad range of manufacturers and municipalities are among the dumpers, a general excise tax on manufactures might be a fairer source of revenue.

Fine, but the administration has threatened to veto any Superfund bill based on a such a new tax. That leaves a waste-end tax, which has the theoretical advantage of discouraging toxic-waste generation. But the more it succeeds in that goal, the less money this tax will raise. Also, it penalizes those who now go to the expense of disposing of waste properly, to pay for the sins of those who recklessly created the abandoned dumps.

Another problem is posed by the standards of cleanup. Leaving a site pristinely clean of toxics would be ideal, but that costs a lot more than just reducing the immediate health hazard. Which raises another question: just what is the health hazard? Dumps that ooze carcinogenic chemicals into the air and ground water pose a clear risk to the millions of people who live around them. But no one yet knows how great a risk.

All these unknowns suggest that breakneck speed and maximum budgets should not be the only criteria in restructuring Superfund. Efficiency and consistency also matter. Reducing the seepage of funds into lawyers' pockets would help: at present EPA spends as much on litigation as in cleaning up a site. It would also help to stop transferring waste from one site to another with no ultimate benefit.

Dumping too much money and complexity into Superfund II before the basic issues are resolved may only set fiscal waste in pursuit of toxic waste.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 6, the 218th day of 1985. There are 147 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Forty years ago — at 8:15 a.m. local time, Aug. 6, 1945 — an American B-29 Superfortress, the "Enola Gay," dropped an atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan. The resulting fireball killed an estimated 80,000 people outright, not including those who died later from radiation poisoning.

On this date:

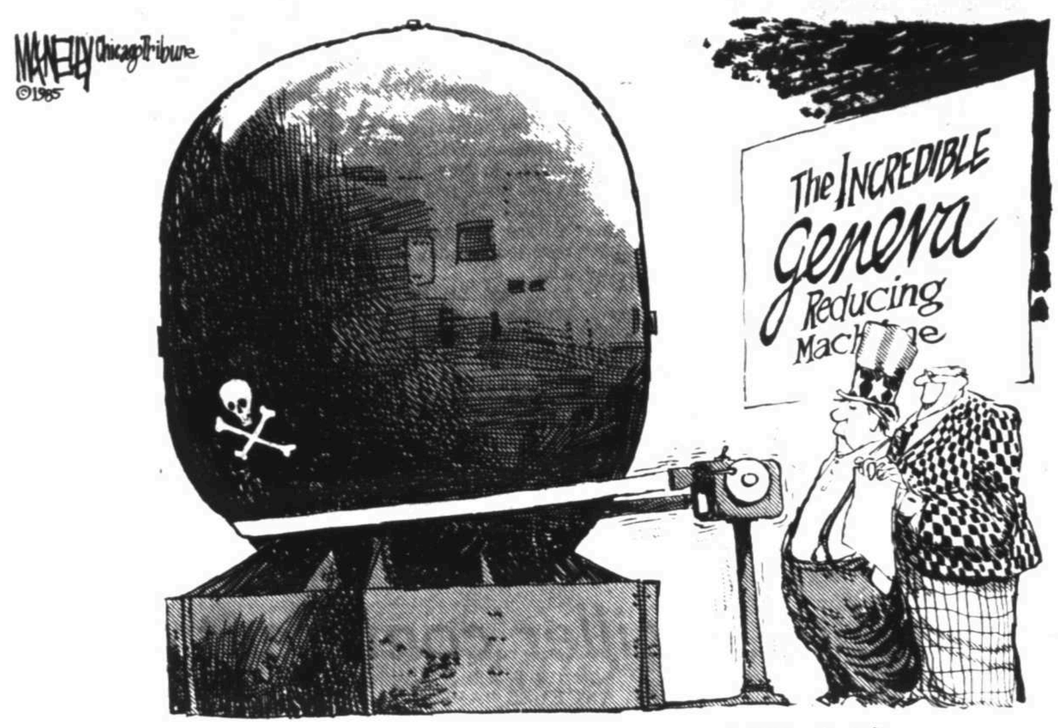

In 1806, the Holy Roman Empire went out of existence as Emperor Francis II abdicated.

In 1825, Bolivia declared its independence from Peru.

In 1890, the electric chair was first used, at a prison in Auburn, N.Y. The execution of convicted murderer William Kemmler raised a storm of controversy over whether use of the chair was humane.

In 1914, Austria-Hungary declared war against Russia, and Serbia declared war against Germany.

In 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed into law the Voting Rights Act.

"HOW LONG WAS IT YOU SAID UNTIL WE SEE SOME RESULTS?"

Irrigation project won't go away

WASHINGTON — A problem with federal budgets is that they often include modest items for preliminary research or "feasibility studies" that are destined to grow into billion-dollar boondoggles in succeeding budgets.

Jack Anderson

Even this year, when Congress and the White House are desperately looking for ways to trim unnecessary items from the budget, one unpublicized but egregiously unworthy project appears likely to make it into the final list of necessities. That's because its initial demands are so piddling — a mere $8 million for a feasibility study.

The Cendak irrigation project would crisscross six counties in South Dakota with canals, bringing Missouri River water to 474,000 acres of farmland and nearby towns. The ultimate cost is estimated at $1.3 billion.

Even Cendak's backers concede that it is a reincarnation of the earlier Oahe water project, which was killed by the united opposition of South Dakota farmers — whom the project was supposed to help. They realized it would cost them both money and land.

Now a coalition of 2,000 farmers is battling Cendak for the same reason — and pointing out that for the cost of this dubious irrigation project, the debts of all the state's farmers could be wiped out.

The project has even aroused the derision of federal engineers from the Bureau of Reclamation, assigned to make it look good. After contemplating the staggering drainage problems that Cendak would entail, the engineers began circulating humorous memos when their objections were ignored.

One memo, which gave rules for playing the "Cendak Drainage Game," suggested that bureau officials were glossing over the serious problems.

A second memo, taking off from the movie "Star Wars," is entitled "Drain Wars" and has bureau officials playing such roles as Luke Pipewalker, Princess Leakie and Han Manholo. The villain's role, Darth Vadosezone, is assigned to Herb Greydanus, a consultant hired by the state to promote the project. Greydanus told us he was not offended, because he hadn't seen "Star Wars."

Between the two needling memos, bureau officials reassigned engineers working on the Cendak project, explaining that the engineers had been unable to come to an agreement. But bureau sources told our associates Corky Johnson and Donald Goldberg that the engineers were pulled off the job because they questioned the practicality of the project.

Here are some of the serious problems raised by Cendak critics:

— A Reclamation Bureau draft report estimates benefits of $1.02 to $1.29 for every dollar spent. "The creative genius necessary to come up with that benefit-cost ratio will boggle your mind," states the Drain Wars memo. In fact, the official draft acknowledges that it used unapproved methods to arrive at the figures.

— The supposed benefits include $9.5 million for South Dakota's ailing railroads for hauling the extra crops farmers will grow. Opponents criticize this back-door method of subsidizing railroads.

— In a preliminary study, the Army Corps of Engineers estimates that a less ambitious Missouri River pipeline could provide water to towns in the same area for about 30 cents less per 1,000 gallons.

— More than 100,000 acres of woodlands, wetlands and grasslands essential to the area's wildlife would be destroyed by the Cendak project, and critics estimate some 600 wells will be contaminated by pesticide runoff.

Congress has tentatively agreed to fund $1.7 million toward the feasibility study, which was supposed to cost $6.2 million, but which the bureau admitted a year ago would eventually cost more than $8 million.

WATCH ON WASTE: On the golden anniversary of its creation, the National Labor Relations Board staged a nifty five-day excursion for 157 Washington and regional officials at a resort in Clearwater Beach, Fla. An agency spokesman said it was the first time in nine years that top regional and headquarters brass had gotten together. The bill for the affair, including lodging, meals and travel, came to $110,000. Those attending were given free T-shirts and caps commemorating the board's 50 years; lesser employees pay $5 for the T-shirts and $6 for the caps.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: The ghost of Dr. Josef Mengele, the Auschwitz "Angel of Death," continues to thumb his nose at West German Nazi hunters. The magazine Bunte, which obtained thousands of pages of Mengele documents from his son, called in experts to examine the material — but didn't invite anyone from the West German prosecutor's office. In fact, when the prosecutor's expert showed up, he was locked out and banged on the door in vain.

MINI-EDITORIAL: As citizens of a nation whose fight for independence from King George III was regarded at the time as a rash undertaking, we don't like to criticize anyone's revolutionary fervor out of hand. But the dumbest effort along these lines is surely being conducted by a handful of "liberationists" on the Caribbean island of Guadeloupe. The islanders are heavily subsidized by France, and by every measure — income, health care, housing, transportation — they enjoy a relatively high standard of living. Left to its own devices, Guadeloupe would be an economic basket case. This is one pro-independence movement we would like to see suffer an early demise.

Nuclear war wouldn't deter IRS!

NEW YORK — Have I mentioned Mr. Deauville in this space? He is the IRS man auditing our tax returns, and you couldn't have a sweeter guy searching your house. Since the kids grew up and left home — well, you know how it can be after the kids go. You get in the habit of staring at the TV late into the night, and sometimes forget how to talk.

Russell Baker

I'm not exactly saying that had been happening at our house until the IRS sent Mr. Deauville along, but there were nights when my wife and I found ourselves still watching the TV at daybreak because neither of us was alert enough to remember that you're supposed to go to bed before David Hartman shows up with "Good Morning America."

In any case, after Mr. Deauville settled in with our bank books and old laundry lists, it brought life back into the house. Coming home after a day at the office, I always felt happy as soon as I heard him riffling through a stack of our canceled checks or up in our bedroom investigating the bedsprings for unreported income.

Afterward he would come down with lint all over his suit and my wife and I would brush him off just as we used to pick the worst of the dirt off the children before they got big enough to do it for themselves.

It seemed like a nasty way for a nice young man to spend his life, and my wife and I discussed the possibility of putting him through flying school so he could become a glamorous airline pilot and see the world.

That's how much we appreciated having him in our life just when we needed somebody to keep our minds off television, but of course we never went ahead with the flying school offer. It might've looked like an effort to bribe him not to report all the unreported lint under our mattress. Then he would probably feel he just had to turn us in, and they'd probably promote him to Washington, so he could no longer come to our house.

Then one day my wife had a terrible thought. "Do you realize that if nuclear war broke out Mr. Deauville might quit coming to our house?" she said.

"He wouldn't do that."

"They might make him," she said. "They might need all the IRS auditors to dig the president out of his hideaway or to rebuild the Capitol so Congress could write nuclear depreciation allowances into the tax code."

By George, she had a point! I worried about it for months, then finally interrupted Mr. Deauville one day while he was under the attic floorboards looking for unreported income.

"Come down and have some chicken soup, and let's have a little talk," I said.

"So," he said. "You have finally decided to tell the truth about the 1947 check you made out to Nate's and Leon's Delicatessen of Baltimore for $3.79?"

No, no, no. Poor young Deauville. So much promise being turned into so much dullness. I told him we feared the IRS would take him from us if there was a nuclear attack.

"It will do you no good to foment a nuclear war with the Red enemy," he said, "because bouncing rubble won't save your suits from having the linings razored out of them."

He was referring to his request that I remove the linings from my suits so he could search for what he suspected was $27 in unreported cash income for the year 1983.

"You mean ... "

"Read it," he said, opening his manual, titled "Policies of the Internal Revenue Service," to Page 1218-36.1, where it said, plain as the light from a smoothly functioning H-bomb:

"During a state of national emergency (especially resulting from nuclear attack) ... the following essential functions will be resumed when directed or 30 days after termination of the immediate post-attack period: (1) Assessing, collecting and recording taxes; (2) Normal peacetime enforcement and appeals operations."

What a load it took off me. Off my wife, too. To be frank, much as the kids love us, I'm not sure we can rely on their showing up to provide company after the thermonuclear holocaust. Mr. Deauville we can count on.

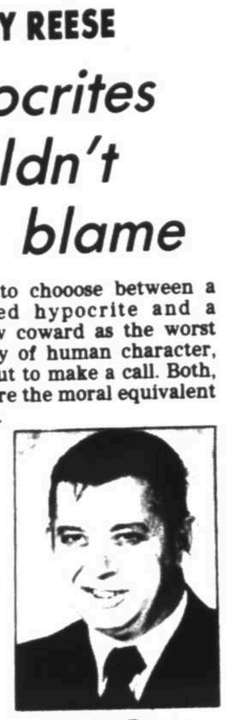

It made us feel so good that my wife said we should come clean with him about that celluloid doll she won at the carnival three years ago, value 29 cents, and never reported as income. "Wait until after the atom bomb drops," I said, "when he'll want something to cheer him up."

CHARLEY REESE

Hypocrites shouldn't limit blame

If I had to chooose between a two-faced hypocrite and a snake-low coward as the worst deformity of human character, I'd be hard put to make a call. Both, in my book, are the moral equivalent of cow chips.

Charley Reese

In modern America, however, they bloom like algae in August waters.

Did you know, for example, that so far no protester at the South African Embassy in Washington has been prosecuted while several young people who demonstrated in front of the Soviet Embassy have been prosecuted? The reason for this double standard of justice is that the district bureaucrats approve of the demonstrations against South Africa but not of those against the Soviet Union.

Last time I heard, old lady Justice was supposed to be blind-folded. Guess she slipped her bandana off her left eye in Washington.

I would bet 50 pounds of lobster against one shrimp that if the situation were reversed — the prosecuting of the South African Embassy demonstrators and the letting off of the Soviet Embassy demonstrators — that a lot of people who are ignoring the present injustice would be squalling like a scalded dog.

This spittle on the concept of justice is not unusual, however. On the very day that some folks were thundering denunciations of South Africa, the President okayed an agreement with China to sell that totalitarian government nuclear technology.

Now the South African government violates the civil rights of a majority of its people by restricting their movement somewhat, their right to own property in some areas, and their right to vote. But never has the South African government ever attempted to exterminate anybody. The fact of the matter is black Africans are still trying to get into South Africa, not out of it.

China, on the other hand, has murdered millions of its opponents. It is an ardent supporter of the Cambodian monster, Pol Pot, and why not, because the Chinese have committed genocide in Tibet, eliminating 80 percent of the Tibetan population.

Now I don't have any problem at all with Americans demonstrating against South Africa, but it strikes me mighty strange that at the same time Americans do that, they hail an alleged friendship with a government that is the second worst butcher of modern times. Hail it and agree to sell it nuclear technology which no doubt sometime in the future will be returned in the form of exploding warheads.

At the same time some folks are hollering to force the disinvestment of American business in South Africa, they are silent as stones about American investments and trade with the first worst butcher of modern times, the Soviet Union.

The communists in Moscow taught Adolf Hitler all he knew which is why the Nazis have to rank third as modern butchers. The communists were the first to use concentration camps on a massive scale for political opponents. The communists were the first to use genocide (7 million Ukrainians) and the communists were the first to use mass murder to eliminate political opponents (42 to 54 million, depending on how you count).

Of course the communists in Moscow and Beijing don't have to declare a state of emergency as the South African government just did. They have total power over their citizens all the time. Their people, too, are required to carry internal passports. Their people, too, must obtain permission to move from one place to another in their own country. Their people, too, are forbidden to own property. Their people, too, are denied self-determination and the right to vote in anything but a charade. They, too, censor every word printed or broadcast. They, too, are racist.

So why the hypocrisy? I'm not saying don't pour hot coals on South Africa if that makes you feel self-righteous, but why take the opposite position on China and the Soviet Union? Why be a hypocrite? The only reason I can think of is pure cowardice. Belly-crawling wimps are afraid of the Soviet Union and China so they slobber on the toes of those tyrants. By heaven, that's moral degeneracy of a vomit-producing magnitude.

Angolan family discovers U.S. prejudice

TUCKERTON, N.J. (AP) — A refugee family from the African nation of Angola who thought they had found a haven in this southern New Jersey town were met by racial prejudice when they were resettled here by a church agency.

"I maybe stay in the area because some people are very good to my family, but maybe this is wrong for us here. I don't know...I never imagined it like this in America," Nunes Bukula said Monday.

Bukula, 43, his wife, Bibi, and their seven children, came to this almost all-white community of 3,000 in May. They had spent years on the run from the civil war and strife that has torn Angola since before its independence from Portugal in 1975.

"I only know it is no good to move so much from place to place," Bukula said. "We have suffered so much....We are so tired of living like the refugee."

Within days of their arrival, there was a wave of racial incidents.

Vandals smeared "Niggers Get Out" across the front door, and two women knocked and told them to move, Bukula said. A church worker overheard a conversation in a restaurant in which people discussed burning the family's rented home.

"In general, people have accepted us, but there are a few locals who don't want to be friends," Bukula said through interpreters. "The world over, there are good people and bad people."

Mayor Michael Mathis said Tuckerton is not a prejudiced community but the fault lay with a few individuals and the hasty resettlement of the Bukulas with no warning to residents.

The initial hostility stirred the consciences of many neighbors and members of a local church, who now stream through the house with clothes, donated toys and other goods, and help for the family.

"Anybody that meets them, loves them," said Kathy Ley, a member of the Tuckerton Presbyterian Church. "Once you get past the color barrier, these are great, well-educated people."

Bukula says he was a member of the National Front for the Liberation of Angola, known as the FNLA for its initials in Portuguese, which fought for 14 years with other groups to wrest the country's independence from Lisbon. Since independence, the FNLA and other groups have been battling Angola's Marxist government.

His family — the children range in age from 3 to 23, lived for about seven years in Zaire after the civil war began in Angola, Bukula said. But he was hounded and jailed there five times because of his politics, he said.

After obtaining special refugee status from the United Nations, Bukula and his family were given permission to immigrate to this country.

Under the auspices of the Philadelphia Lutheran Children and Family Services agency and with the help of seminary student Jim McKay, the family moved into a tidy, two-bedroom bungalow in a modest section of Tuckerton.

McKay and Cindy Coleman, director of migration and refugee services for the Lutheran agency, said they never expected what followed.

Since the racial hostility, Bukula has lost his job with a nursery due to a back injury and the family has received an eviction notice. They have until Sept. 30 to move.

McKay, who has helped several Southeast Asian refugee families resettle in the area, said it didn't occur to him that a black family would be unwelcome in Tuckerton, a community on Little Egg Harbor. According to the 1980 census, the town has only 20 black residents.

'The Boss' rocks with antiwar message

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bruce Springsteen turned a sold-out football stadium into a 55,000-voice chorus as he brought his "Born in the U.S.A." tour back to the states with 3½-hours of hard rock interspersed with a pointed antiwar pitch.

"It's nice to be back home," the rock star told the crowd inside Robert F. Kennedy Stadium Monday night as he launched the final stretch of a year-long worldwide tour that has cemented Springsteen's reputation as "the Boss" of rock 'n' roll.

Springsteen recently returned from a string of concert dates across Europe after touring in Australia and Japan earlier.

He began the concert 40 minutes late with his pulsating, arm-pumping anthem, "Born in the U.S.A.," a riveting ballad about a jobless Vietnam veteran with "nowhere to run...nowhere to go."

Before intermission, he recalled a friend from his New Jersey youth who died in Vietnam, and exhorted fans to "take a walk from that Lincoln Memorial on to the Vietnam veterans' memorial," in the nation's capital. "Read the names of the dead and get an idea of the stakes you're playing for," he added.

"Next time there's a war, whether it's in Central America or wherever it might be, you're going to be the ones they want to go," said Springsteen. "You need a lot more information than you get on the six o'clock news to decide what to do....Where we're going is pretty scary."

Near the close, he made a pitch for local food banks, saying, "You've heard a lot about the hunger that we have in Africa lately, and while the hunger that we have here in the states is certainly not as drastic as that, it is very bad....In the United States each year 20 percent of the food that gets produced gets wasted."

The ebullient crowd cheered what Springsteen called his "public service announcement," but saved its loudest voice to sing harmony and the chorus to a string of his hits, from "Born in the U.S.A." to "Glory Days" to "Hungry Heart" to "Born to Run," the song that brought him to prominence a decade ago.

Springsteen once eschewed stadiums, but he will be playing a string of them during his 25-city tour over the next nine weeks.

His next stop is Wednesday in Cleveland, where a union of stadium workers reached a tentative agreement Monday to avert a threatened strike — and picket line — that would have posed a dilemma for the pro-labor Springsteen.

The concert was a ticket scalpers' delight, with unabashed opportunists running classified ads demanding $100 to more than $200 for tickets that all sold originally for $18.50, and dozens of fans still looking to buy tickets outside the stadium from concert goers.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., brought his 8-year-daughter to the concert. "It's great. He really brings the crowd up and down," said Bradley, who softened the sound with cotton in his ears.

Some fans in the upper decks grumbled about the sound system, but Sandy Coleman, 31, an advertising executive who had seats in the lower tier for her eighth Springsteen concert, said, "He seems to be energized. It's one of the best shows I've ever seen."

Springsteen did his usual crowd-pleasing jumps and duets with "the Big Man," saxophonist Clarence Clemons; pulled a blonde up from the first row to step out during "Dancing in the Dark"; and mixed a few plaintive, Bob Dylanesque harmonica numbers among his hard-driving rock rhythms.

The "Born in the U.S.A." album has been on the best-seller list for more than a year, selling 7.5 million copies here and more than 11 million worldwide.

Police reported 19 arrests, mostly for ticket scalping, but some for attempted gate-crashing.

The city subway system, which stayed open past its usual midnight closing hour to accommodate concert goers, was jammed with thousands of goodnatured Springsteen fans. The volume was so heavy in the last 45 minutes before the scheduled 7 p.m. start of the concert that some trains arriving at Metro Center, a principle transfer station, left with only a few people able to squeeze into the cars, while hundreds of others waited for subsequent trains.

Protesters' entry by Capitol unnerves security officers

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Police officials at the U.S. Capitol are launching a new review of security procedures in light of the apparent ease with which two nuclear protesters scaled a towering construction crane and unfurled a slogan-filled banner close to the Capitol Dome.

But they admit short of sealing off the building and its grounds to the public, there may be a limit to what can be accomplished.

"We'll look at what needs to be done," said Senate Sergeant-at-Arms Ernest Garcia. "But this is a free and democratic society and this is a public building. We want to keep it a public building."

Police spokesmen and representatives of the international anti-nuclear organization Greenpeace said the climb began at about 4:30 p.m. EDT Monday when two other Greenpeace members dressed as joggers approached a policeman on duty outside the Capitol.

Police said that after one of the joggers attracted the policeman's attention by pretending to be ill, the two climbers ran for the barricades surerounding the site where the original sandstone West Front of the Capitol is being renovated.

"It was over the fence and up the crane," said Brian Fitzgerald, a Greenpeace spokesman. "It was very fast."

Once at the top they unfurled the banner and unlashed it to the crane. It read: "A Journey of a Thousand Miles Begins With Just One Step: Stop Nuclear Testing."

After hanging the banner, posing for each other's photographs, sipping orange juice and talking to colleagues on the ground by radio, the two eventually packed their banner, the flags and other gear and headed back down.

They reached the ground at 7:55 p.m., were arrested and led away to be charged with unlawful entry, a misdemeanor.

Police tenatively identified the climbers as Steve Loper, 30, of Chicago and Kenn Hollis, 26, of Toronto, Canada.

Since Nov. 7, 1983, when a bomb caused extensive damage in a corridor near the Senate chamber, security in the Capitol has been considerably tightened.

Parents, teachers fear three-year-old's AIDS

REDONDO BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Parents who fear their children could catch AIDS are fighting to bar a 3-year-old boy who has the disease from a preschool class.

A special meeting of parents and staff at Alta Vista School in this community 30 miles south of Los Angeles was called to explain the situation after word leaked out about the boy.

But several parents said they remained unconvinced that the child's presence did not pose a danger to their children, and one teacher sought a transfer.

The boy lives with five other children in a foster home in nearby Torrance. He contracted AIDS from a tainted blood transfusion and is one of six children in Los Angeles County known to have the deadly disease.

School nurse Marilyn Ryan told the meeting Friday that other children would be safe because acquired immune deficiency syndrome is transmitted only through sexual contact, pregnancy, blood transfusions and dirty needles.

But concerned parent Michael Escalante, said, "The jury is still out. Why are we considering rolling the dice?

"Less than two-tenths of 1 percent of the AIDS victims are children. You can't generalize how children in the future are going to contract the disease," he said.

School officials are expected to decide in September whether to allow the boy to attend the county-run preschool program.

The usually fatal AIDS weakens and eventually destroys the body's infection-fighting system. There is no known cure.

Several students in other states recently have been excluded from school because they had the disease.

Sheffield recall starts

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A move to impeach Gov. Bill Sheffield for allegedly misusing his office and lying under oath is dead, but a drive to recall him is just getting started.

The state Senate adjourned Monday after laying to rest a move to impeach the freshman Democrat and gutting a resolution saying he did something wrong.

The Senate said 11 days of hearings failed to produce enough evidence to impeach Sheffield and the 14 votes needed to impeach were not there.

Later Monday, a group calling itself "Alaskans for Responsible Government" announced it was initiating a recall petition drive.

Recall was suggested as an alternative by a state grand jury that recommended last month that lawmakers consider impeaching Sheffield for allegedly steering a state office lease in Fairbanks to a political supporter.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Temperatures near 100 to continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

Staying out of the heat may be an objective of many Midlanders Wednesday as temperatures near 100 are expected to continue in the Permian Basin area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The outlook for tonight calls for fair and mild conditions with a low near 70. Wednesday will be sunny and hot with a high near 100. Winds will be from the southeast at five to 10 mph tonight, continuing through Wednesday.

Monday's high of 101 was two degrees below the record set in 1964. This morning's low was 12 degrees above the record of 61 set in 1975.

STATE

A sea breeze kept Galveston under spring-like conditions while most of the rest of the state simmered at near 100 degrees Monday, the National Weather Service said.

Cotulla, in South Texas, had the high for the day at 102 as summertime heat and partly cloudy skies persisted across Texas. By 4 p.m., the mercury had soared well into the 90s in most areas of the state.

Only Galveston and the northern Panhandle reported temperatures in the 80s. A breeze coming from the Gulf of Mexico along with heavy thunderstorms affected the coastal reading.

Northwestern Texas reached the upper 80s, and showers and thunderstorms were widely scattered along a weak cold front in the Red River Valley of North Texas. Other showers and some very heavy thunderstorms dotted southeastern and southwestern Texas and were moving northwesterly, the weather service said.

Temperatures surpassed the 100-degree mark at various locations along the Rio Grande Valley.

The forecast called for partly cloudy skies and isolated thunderstorms through Tuesday. Overnight lows will dip into the 60s in the mountains of West Texas.

Summertime highs are expected to persist through mid-week, with temperatures again ranging from the 80s to above 100.

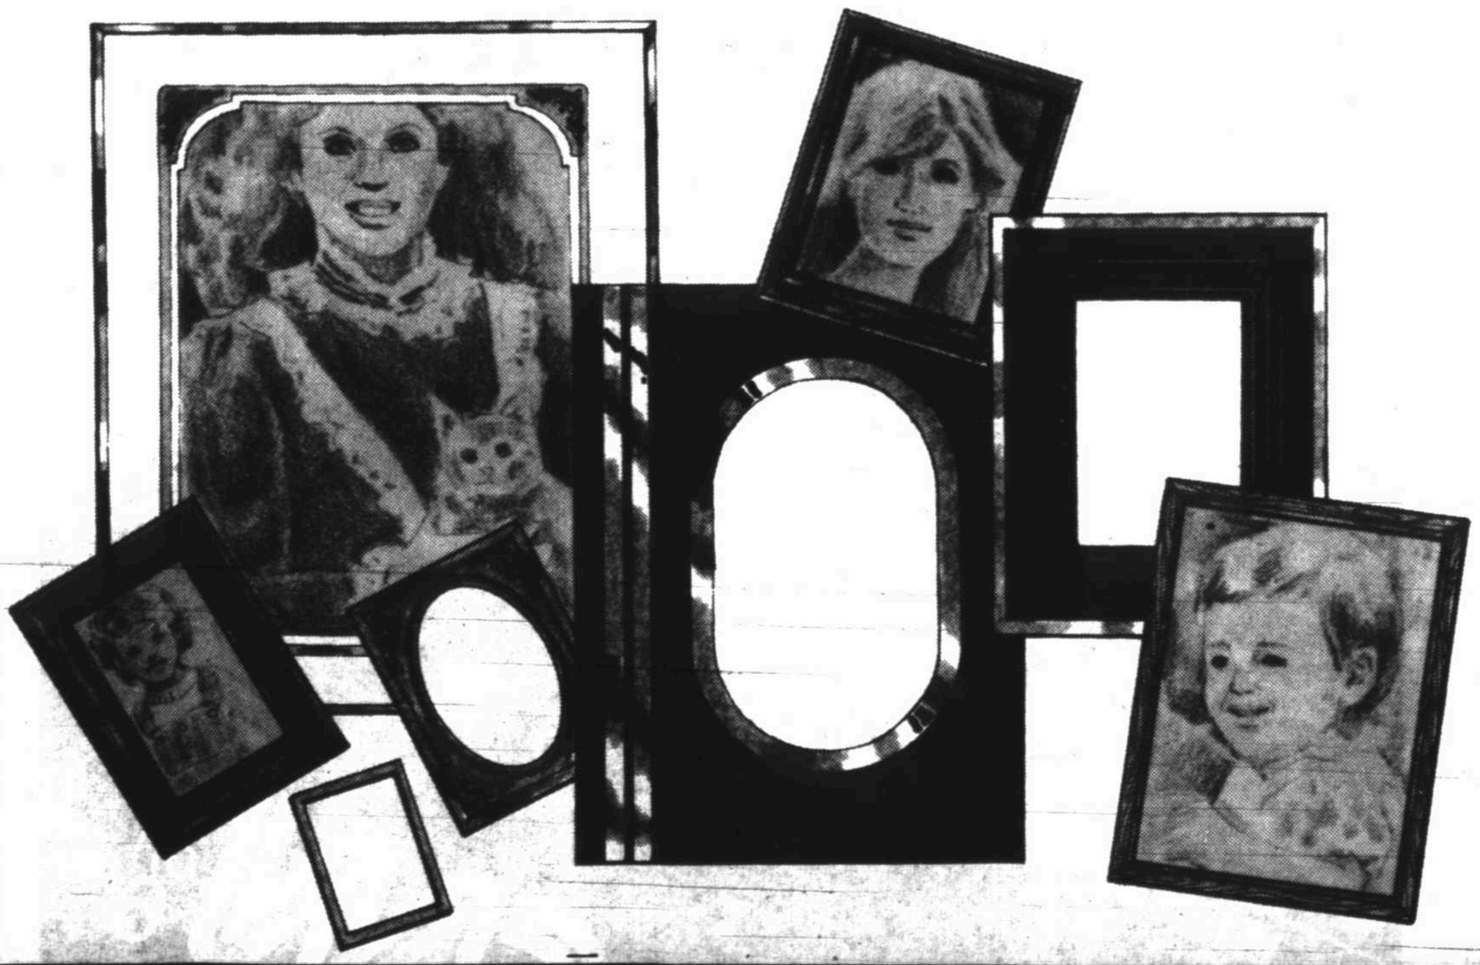

NATION

Rain pushed from the Plains into the Great Lakes region today, prompting a flash flood warning for sections of Chicago, while showers extended from the Deep South into the Appalachians.

Showers and thunderstorms ranged from southeast Nebraska and northeast Kansas across southern Iowa, northern Illinois and southern Michigan.

Don Fehr gives out bad news, 'There's a strike'

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball went to the very last hours today in an attempt to avoid a strike that both sides said seemed certain.

At the urging of Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, negotiators for players and owners agreed to one last meeting this morning. Both sides said the session was to be "informal" and neither was expected to present any new proposals to break the deadlock involving salary structure.

But Don Fehr, head of the players association, said late Monday night —"There's a strike."

"The strike is on as of the end of games tonight (Monday)," he said.

Despite today's strike deadline, no formal bargaining took place Monday. And neither side appeared to move with a sense of urgency, both remaining inside their respective offices that are just a five-minute walk apart.

FEHR DID get together with Lee MacPhail, chief representative of the owners, for 1½ hours in the morning and presented specifics of a plan suggested Sunday. MacPhail called Fehr's proposal "alarmingly destructive."

"I can't say that I'm optimistic at this point," MacPhail said.

"In this situation, there's not much more we can do," said Fehr. He said he had "become more pessimistic."

Fehr said players had been calling his office Monday evening, asking what they should do regarding tonight's games. "I've got to tell them to go home," Fehr said.

All 26 teams are scheduled to play tonight, with the first games starting at 6:35 p.m. CDT.

On Monday night, Ueberroth asked the owners' Player Relations Committee to contact the union to set up one last session. Ueberroth called upon the sides to use "the last ounce of everyone's energy to resolve the current impasse."

The two sides agreed to get together. The meeting was supposed to start at 7:45 a.m. CDT, said Oakland player representative Don Sutton.

But nearly nine months of negotiating have resulted in virtually no progress on the major issues. Instead, the two sides have become more entrenched in their stands.

The key issue remained salary structure, particularly the rules regarding salary arbitration. The owners want to increase from two years to three the amount of time before a player can file for arbitration, and want to restrict an arbitrator's award to no more than double a player's current salary. The players do not want any changes.

Another major issue involves how much money the owners will contribute to the players' pension fund, but Fehr said the chasm between the sides was "not centrally money — it never has been."

"It appears to be a rerun of 1981" when a single issue, free-agent compensation, triggered a seven-week walkout.

"By that, I don't necessarily mean that we're going to have a 50-day strike, but now more than ever the issues that we thought had been over money are actually about denying players their rights," Fehr said.

MacPhail has said projections show baseball will lose $86 million by 1988, and says the changes are necessary to get the industry back to a break-even point.

Fehr offered Monday to take less than a one-third share of network television revenue — which would amount to $60 million annually for six years — and instead accept about $40 million each year for the pension fund. The resulting difference, about $125 million from a total TV package of $1.1 billion, would be redirected to the teams that most need it.

The players made the proposal, however, provided the owners agreed not to change salary arbitration rules.

"This was not a constructive proposal," MacPhail said. "Instead, it is an alarmingly destructive one and one that obviously cannot be accepted by the clubs."

Ueberroth, who has said he "can't really allow a strike," met with several owners on Monday. During the afternoon, Fehr had said Ueberroth "does not appear to be centrally involved at this point."

STILL, EVEN though Ueberroth's action prompted today's meeting, there appeared little the first-year commissioner could do to actually stop a strike.

In some cities, not all of the players have arrived for tonight's games.

Only a handful of Baltimore Orioles, who played in Cleveland on Sunday and had an off-day Monday, made the trip to Toronto for a series scheduled to begin tonight. Most of the Orioles went back to Baltimore to see what developed.

In Chicago, what developed was Darryl Strawberry of the New York Mets hit three home runs in a 7-2 victory over the Cubs. That, coupled with St. Louis' 9-1 loss to Philadelphia, moved the Mets one-half game past St. Louis in the National League East standings.

Toronto began today with a comfortable lead in the American League East, with California on top in the AL West and Los Angeles leading the NL West.

Frustration grips baseball

Both fans, players feel strike hurt

Associated Press

It was a close race in the last hours before a threatened major-league baseball strike over who was more frustrated — the players or the fans.

The reasons for the frustration, however, differed. The fans couldn't understand why the players were going to walk away from the game for the second time in four years, and the players expressed disbelief that their disagreements with owners were again going that far.

"I continue to be amazed why this thing isn't settled," Kansas City second baseman Frank White said Monday night. "I would be embarrassed if it doesn't get settled."

"This is ridiculous," New York Mets pitcher Ed Lynch said. "I'm disgusted. They never made any progress and now it's too late. There was poor judgment on all parties involved. It'll be tough not to play."

BARRING A last-minute settlement, players threatened to walk away from scheduled games today and tonight.

"After 1981 we thought we could overcome the hostilities," Don Baylor, the players' representative for the New York Yankees, said. "All owners don't think alike. Free agency was won in the Supreme Court and we can't give it back."

"I'm getting pretty tired of all this, honestly," Cincinnati player representative Joe Price said. "If you had asked me two days ago whether we were close to a strike, I'd have to say no. But here we are and it doesn't look good."

It wasn't difficult to find evidence of fan frustration over the lack of progress in the negotiations.

"This is the last time I'll ever come to a game," said Alan Adams, 25, of Kansas City. "Both sides have little regard for the fans. There's enough money for everybody. There are some people who'll come back, but I don't bend in the breeze as easily as some people."

"I work 12 months a year and I only make $30,000," said Dave Steele, 26, of Platte Woods, Mo. "How many times does Frank White drive to Liberal, Kan.? That's my job — I drive a Plymouth and Frank White drives a Mercedes."

A young man marched through the aisles during the seventh inning of the Dodgers-Braves game in Atlanta with a sign that read: "Fans Strike Now. Follow me."

About 15 to 20 fans did.

In Chicago, one banner in the right field bleachers said, "Three Strikes and the Fans Are Out."

But a fan in Pittsburgh expressed a sentiment that players and owners might agree is the most threatening to the game's future.

"If they don't settle soon, I won't care because college football season will be starting in three weeks," Tim Baker, 18, of Parkersburg, W.Va., said.

Chicago Cubs shortstop Larry Bowa's frustration turned to anger when he said: "The owners are batting 0-for-3 (in strikes). You'd think they'd learn their lesson. Obviously, they're trying to break the union and this will not happen."

PLAYERS' PLANS during the strike varied as widely as their ages and economic status.

California's Reggie Jackson, 39, with numerous outside business interests, said: "I've got some cars that need some work. I'll do some work for ABC, Panasonic and TRW. I'll go to Colorado and see Mr. Coors. I'll go to Nebraska and look at a new airplane and remodel the house in Carmel. I'll also work out a bit."

"If there's a strike, I'll go home and bail hay," Pittsburgh pitcher Jim Winn, 25, said. "I'd rather be playing baseball."

Rookie Cincinnati reliever Rob Buchanan, who worked at a rental car office and a department store last winter to supplement his income, said: "Some people are going to make a vacation out of it. I'm not."

Buchanan's teammate, John Franco, found some black humor in the situation when he donned dark glasses, grabbed a cane and a cup of pencils and asked: "If there's a strike, what do you think?"

A number of players thought of their families when asked of their plans during the strike.

"I'll fly back to Seattle, load up my truck, drive to Milwaukee, go fishing and be a father again," Gorman Thomas of the Mariners said.

Houston pitcher Joe Niekro said he would caddy for his daughter at a golf tournament today, and Kansas City's George Brett said he would like to visit his brother Ken, a former big league pitcher, who is managing for the Class A rookie team in Utica, N.Y.

SA halts Midland's win streak

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Dodgers finally found an answer to the nine-game winning streak of the Midland Angels. His name was Scott May.

May halted Midland's longest winning streak of the year with a route-going 12-0 decision over the Angels here Monday night.

May scattered five singles to five different Angels over nine innings of work to pick up his seventh victory in 11 decisions this year. May KOed seven Angels on strikes and walked only two batters. Billie Merrifield's sixth inning double was the only extra base hit allowed by May.

Meanwhile, the Dodger offense finally solved the Midland pitching staff, touching starter Ken Angulo (7-4) for eight runs in 6⅓ innings of work. The game was so out of hand that Midland manager Joe Maddon used designated pitcher Greg Key, an outfielder, for the last inning of work. Key gave up three earned runs, including a two-run homer to Reggie Williams, his fifth of the year.

Jose Gonzalez hit a three-run homer in the Dodgers' six-run seventh inning. Gonzalez now has 12 homers on the year.

Nine of the Dodgers' 12 runs came in the seventh and eighth innings, but they also scored single runs in the first three frames off Angulo, which was more than enough for May, who silenced Midland's smoking bats.

Midland had won five straight games over San Antonio on this road trip prior to the loss and will end the seven-game series tonight with the Dodgers.

Season tickets bring nip of fall to Midland

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Despite your current thermometer reading, there is a nip of fall in the Midland air.

Local football teams don't even put on the helmets until Aug. 19, but Midland football fans are already doing their pre-season workout — apparently in record numbers.

Season tickets went on sale at the Memorial Stadium on Monday, July 29. Since that time, Midland Lee tickets are nearing the endangered list for cramped Memorial Stadium.

THE REBELS sold a record 2,101 season tickets in 1984. Through early Monday morning, Lee had sold over 1,700 season tickets with only a little over 200 left from the available list.

Lee option holders, fans who had season tickets last year, have until 5 p.m. Friday to renew their options for 1985. Indications are that most, if not all, of those options will be renewed by Friday.

That leaves only the available list to consider and there were only 229 of those tickets left Monday morning and going fast. Season tickets from the available list are open to the general public. Option holders have only until Friday to renew options before losing them.

In all, the Midland Independent School District has only 2,812 tickets available for season purchase for each Lee and Midland High. It looks like Lee will reach that mark.

"I don't think we will have many, if any, season tickets to sell for Lee after Friday's deadline," said Midland athletic director Gil Bartosh. "Of course, this is a great situation to be in, but there could be some unhappy people during the season."

Bartosh cited two major reasons for the upsurge in Lee season tickets this year.

"Lee is coming off back-to-back playoff seasons and the interest is certianly there," noted Bartosh. "However, we have both San Angelo and Odessa Permian at home in 1985. The Permian game will certianly be a sellout and it looks like the San Angelo game could be a sellout since it is the first district game and San Angelo is picked to be one of the strong teams in the district. Lee and San Angelo have developed a strong rivalry over the past few seasons."

THE LEE-MIDLAND High game is another potential sellout as always, but MHS season ticket holders will be protected in that game since they are being given the option of buying tickets for that contest with the purchase of a season ticket.

The MISD sells season tickets only on the West side of Memorial Stadium where there are 2,812 available reserved seats. The other 3,145 are for elementary, junior high, freshman and high school students, including bands and pep squads.

"By UIL rules we have to save half the stadium for the visiting team," noted Bartosh. "We can sell those seats during the week of the game if the other team doesn't request all those tickets. We will have 3,144 reserved and 1,722 student tickets for a team like Permian who always take their whole allottment. We don't know what San Angelo will request, but we think they will ask for a large share of that total."

The bottom line is if you expect to see Lee play San Angelo, Permian and Midland High, you better own a season ticket. There may not be plentiful tickets to sell for those games as far as the general public is concerned.

As always, tickets will be sold (when available) during the week of each game to the general public. The warning Bartosh and his staff would like to impart is that there may not be tickets available to the general public on certian dates for Lee home games.

IT'S EASY to see that no tickets will available for the Permian game since Mojo has over 4,500 season ticket holders. Not even all of Permian's season ticket holders will be able to get into the game.

Memorial Stadium seats only 10,823 since the elimination of the old endzone bleachers, which could hold an additional 1,500 or so.

"We've never seen anything like this," noted athletic secretary Janelle Dozier. "People want to make sure they have a ticket this year. I don't think we will have anything left to sell at Lee after the 200 or so we have left on the available list is gone. There are some people waiting for next Monday to see if any options are not renewed in order to get better seats, but I wouldn't bet on that."

The tickets left are between the 20 and 25-yard lines by the junior high section. Lee season tickets are priced at $20 for five home games. The same price is charged for five Midland High home games, but does not include the Lee-MHS game. MHS fans may purchase the optional sixth ticket for the Lee game for an additional $5. MHS will be the visiting team against Lee this year.

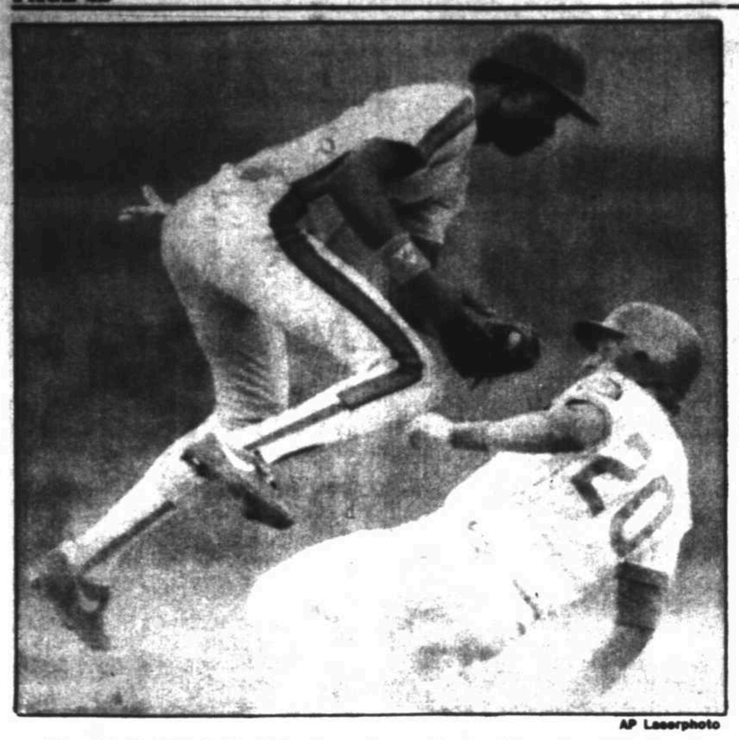

As of early Monday, Midland High had sold only 477 season tickets, way off the pace of 912 sold for the school last year. However, little concern was being shown in that area.

"The Midland High people were beginning to pick up on Monday," said Dozier. "I don't think they wanted to fight the crowds we had here the first week. Ticket sales for Midland High are down, but we still have until 5 p.m. Friday for those options to be renewed. And we will be selling Midland High season tickets to the general public through Aug. 30.

"Midland High fans who didn't have season tickets last year may also purchase from the available list now. That policy is not restricted to Lee fans."

Midland High will also host Permian in 1985 and that is another game that could potentially near the sellout column, especially if MHS makes a hard playoff run.

Come September, it looks like Midlanders owning a season football ticket will have entered the ranks of "High Society" — despite income bracket.

Scott Verplank isn't over night success story

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Scott Verplank, the first amateur in 29 years to win a professional golf tournament, may seem an overnight hero to many who follow the tour, but he is far from an instant success, according to the player's coach at Oklahoma State University.

"Others' perceptions may have changed, but I hope people realize that he didn't just turn into a great player overnight," Oklahoma State golf Coach Mike Holder said Monday following Verplank's sudden-death victory at the Western Open.

Verplank rolled in a six-foot, par-saving putt on the second hole of sudden death to defeat Jim Thorpe for the Western Open title in Oak Brook, Ill.

Verplank, 21, from Dallas, is the current national amateur champion. He is the first amateur winner in professional golf since Doug Sanders won the 1956 Canadian Open. The last amateur to win a Professional Golfers' Association tour event was Gene Littler in the 1954 San Diego Open.

Holder said in his 11-year career at Oklahoma State, he has "seen a lot of great golfers, but there's never been another one like" Verplank. He said Verplank has the "dedication and discipline" to be a champion.

"Nothing he does anymore surprises me," Holder said. "It's nice to see the confidence I had in him was justified."

"He's gotten better every year and hasn't stayed the same," Holder said. "He's a tough competitor, and his touch and technique have improved year-by-year."

Holder also said the previous experience Holder has had on the tour has helped him.

"The more you play, the more you improve experience-wise," he said. "Those gave him the confidence to win."

Baseball loses sense of perspective

By ART SPANDER

Sports Analysis

SAN FRANCISCO – So they're going to interrupt the season again, ruin the flow and pattern of what we once believed was a game and now too well understand is a business.

They're going to take an intentional walk without a pitch being thrown, going to stick it in our ear, going to try to prove baseball, the National Pastime, is simply past its time.

The problem is, they don't understand the issues. They believe baseball is reserve clauses and and multimillion-dollar television contracts. But they're wrong. That's not what baseball is.

Baseball is Tom Lasorda arguing with Doug Harvey over a close play at first, not Lee MacPhail arguing with Donald Fehr over a comma in the pension plan.

Baseball is Pete Rose going for 4,192 hits, not everybody else going for 20 million dollars.

Baseball is a kid on a bike with a mitt draped over the handlebars, not greedy adults in a smoke-filled room pouring over a document full of legal phrases.

These men, these players and owners, have lost a sense of perspective. They think the public is concerned about red ink when it's really concerned about the Red Sox. They want to take a stand when we're only looking forward to taking our seats.

Lee Trevino, the golfer, tells an appropriate tale of a another pro who sagged into the clubhouse and began to complain about his day's round, a 77.

"I told him that 90 percent of the guys were glad he shot 77," said Trevino, "and the other 10 percent wish he had shot 87."

Altruism is lacking. Self-interest pervades. Tell us not about your troubles, George Brett or George Steinbrenner. We have troubles of our own. And without baseball, we have one less way of escaping those troubles.

We're talking baseball, as the song goes, talking about the Barber and Newk ... about Willie, Mickey and the Duke. About Babe Ruth pointing to center field. About Willie McCovey saying hello with a bang and Lou Gehrig saying goodbye with a tear.

This game of baseball is more myth than reality. We don't, don't want to know about Ruth's sexual pleasures or Ty Cobb's viciousness or Grover Cleveland Alexander's drunkenness. We don't care how much the players make or how much the owners lose.

Baseball is a dream that begins in the mind's eye when we're young enough to believe and remains inviolate even when we're old enough to know better. Baseball is a kid spitting into a new glove and finding a new love.

We know the innocence is gone now, but we don't want the real world spoiling our pleasure. Don't bother us with the cynical details of adult life, just let the guys play the game.

"I wish we in management and you in the press had not forgotten the game itself," said former baseball impresario Bill Veeck. "The game is virtually unchanged, but that's not what you hear about. You hear about the extraneous stuff more than ever."

Society now is overwhelmed with extraneous stuff. We have magazines and newspapers full of trivia, of Joan Collins' love life, of Luciano Pavarotti's diet, of Dave Winfield's salary.

Put it this way, to paraphrase Lee Trevino: Nobody cares what Dave Winfield makes except Dave Winfield. And every other player in baseball, which is where the trouble starts.

Bill Bradley, the U.S. Senator who played pro basketball, said the question should not be whether anyone is worth $13 million or $22 million. The question is what effect the money has.

"What is the quality of play?" Bradley asked. "If life is more mobile today, if it is not an oak tree rooted in the backyard, if we are looking for a quality resolution, we want to see how an athlete performs under pressure. The quality of work is all that counts."

Now they want to stop working, want to stop playing. Now they're going to interrupt the flow of baseball.

Will these people ever learn? Will we ever learn? You know the answer. Unfortunately, so do the players and owners.

Cardinals' timing couldn't be worse

Associated Press

Baseball's Finale

The St. Louis Cardinals tumbled out of first place at what may turn out to be a most inopportune time, dropping a 9-3 decision to the Philadelphia Phillies Monday night.

Two home runs by Ozzie Virgil, one by John Russell and a five-hitter by Shane Rawley left the Cardinals a half-game behind the New York Mets in St. Louis' last game before the threatened players' strike Tuesday.

The Cardinals had held first place in the National League East since June 29, but lost their third straight game and fifth of six. The Mets set the stage for their first-place takeover Monday afternoon, as Darryl Strawberry's three home runs beat the Chicago Cubs 7-2.

New York's record is 62-42; St. Louis' is 61-42. The Mets became the last team to nail down a lead as the players' Aug. 6 strike deadline was reached.

The California Angels, who beat Seattle 3-1 Monday, lead the American League West by 5 games. The Toronto Blue Jays, idle Monday, lead the AL East by 9 games.

The Los Angeles Dodgers beat Atlanta 6-1 Monday, stretching their lead in the NL West to five games.

In the wake of his team's fall, St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said he hoped Tuesday would represent only business as usual. "I just don't think they're going to have a strike, but if the owners are adamant about getting that arbitration rule changed, that could cause conflict," Herzog said.

"You'd think that after all this time they could have a decision by noon tomorrow."

Juan Samuel's leadoff double, Rick Schu's single, a groundout by Von Hayes and Mike Schmidt's single sent the Phillies to a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Rawley made it 3-0 an inning later with a run-scoring sacrifice fly.

Singles by Tom Nieto, Danny Cox and Vince Coleman made it 3-1 in the second.

Virgil's first homer was a two-run blow and was followed by Russell's fifth homer of the year. Russell's home run established a 6-1 lead.

The suddenly streaking Virgil also hoped to be playing Tuesday.

"It's terrible. I hope it will be settled soon," Virgil said of the possible strike. "We'll just have to wait and see what happens. I think there's no ballplayer in this room that wants to go home tomorrow."

In the fifth inning, a double by Hayes, a single by Schmidt and a double-play grounder scored the seventh Phillies run. Schu's RBI single in the ninth made the score 9-1.

Mets 7, Cubs 2

Strawberry drove in five runs and scored four times as New York won for the third straight game and ninth in 11. He hit a three-run homer in the first inning off Derek Botelho, 0-1, and added solo shots in the fifth and seventh innings.

"But the strike takes the edge off it," Strawberry said. "It's going to hurt the fans and the players, especially our club since we're playing so well."

Ed Lynch, 9-5, won his fifth straight game, allowing seven hits with no walks or strikeouts in 7 2-3 innings.

Expos 5, Pirates 2

Andre Dawson, who had hit a two-run home run in the first inning, doubled to break a ninth-inning tie and Hubie Brooks followed with a two-run single. Dawson's homer was his 11th this season. Tim Burke, 6-0, worked three scoreless innings for the victory, with Jeff Reardon finishing in the ninth for his major league-high 28th save.

Reds 8, Padres 7

Dave Parker hit a three-run homer and Dave Van Gorder broke a 7-7 tie in the fifth inning with a sacrifice fly, handing the Padres their fourth straight loss. Parker's 21st homer, one of his four hits in the game, helped the Reds turn an early 4-0 deficit into a 7-4 lead.

Pete Rose went 1-for-4 with a single in possibly his last game before the strike, leaving him 24 hits short of breaking Ty Cobb's all-time mark.

Dodgers 6, Braves 1

Steve Sax drove in three runs with a pair of run-scoring singles and Ken Landreaux hit his ninth home run of the year. Jerry Reuss, 9-7, scattered five hits over 7 2-3 innings. Tom Niedenfuer finished and earned his 10th save.

Astros 7, Giants 5

Bob Knepper, 9-9, snapped a personal five-game losing streak and Glenn Davis drove in three runs with two singles as the Astros won their fourth straight. Knepper had not won since June 29, when he defeated the Giants 8-1.

Davis has 31 RBI in only 44 games this year. The Giants got solo homers from Chris Brown and Bob Brenly, and a three-run homer from Joel Youngblood.

Yankees 7, White Sox 3

Home runs on consecutive pitches by Rickey Henderson and Don Mattingly helped Ron Guidry become the first 14-game winner in the AL.

Guidry, 14-4, who had a 12-game winning streak snapped in his previous outing, shut Chicago out until the ninth inning when Carlton Fisk slammed a three-run homer, his 29th of the season, tops in the major leagues.

Tigers 8, Royals 4

Chet Lemon's two-run double keyed a three-run, seventh-inning rally from a 2-1 deficit. Kirk Gibson and Lance Parrish blasted consecutive home runs in the eighth and Lou Whitaker added a two-run homer in the ninth as the Tigers defeated the Royals in their home park for the 12th consecutive time.

Kansas City's Danny Jackson, 10-7, carried a 2-1 lead and a one-hitter into the seventh inning before the Tigers scored three runs after two were out. Steve Balboni hit two homers for Kansas City giving him 23 for the season and eight in his last 12 games.

Angels 3, Mariners 1

Mike Witt hurled a five-hitter and California used a throwing error by Seattle pitcher Bill Swift to score the go-ahead run in the sixth inning. Phil Bradley hit his 14th home run of the season for Seattle.

A's 5, Twins 1

Bruce Bochte had three hits and drove in two runs in what could have been the final major league baseball game of the year. The game ended at 10:15 (PDT) when pinch-hitter Randy Bush popped out to second.

The Twins lost their fifth straight and ended a personal six-game winning streak by pitcher Mike Smithson, 11-8. Dave Engle homered for Minnesota.

Childress asks for trade

HOUSTON (AP) — Ray Childress, the Houston Oilers' No. 1 draft choice, has reached a stalemate in contract negotiations with the National Football League team and wants to be traded, his agent said Monday.

Childress, a defensive lineman from Texas A&M, also may sit out the upcoming season and work at the family construction business in the Dallas area if the Oilers continue to offer unacceptable proposals, agent Joe Courrege told Houston radio station KTRH.

"He doesn't want to sit out the season, but he doesn't want to be paid less than his fair value," Courrege said.

Childress told Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzeg that he did not want to play under the contracts currently offered by the team.

"Ray said, 'please, trade me if things can't be worked out,'" Courrege said. "Ray wants no problems with the team and he wants them to get some value for him if necessary. He wants to get with somebody who will give him what he wants."

Terms of the Oilers' proposals and Childress' demands have never been disclosed.

"There's nothing more I can do. I've submitted eight or 10 proposals and compromised down $250,000," the agent said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, August 7, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Be careful not to surround yourself with people who tell you only what you want to hear. Constructive criticism and helpful suggestions make a good product or performance even better. A love for fine food and drink could be your downfall unless you set limits. Make your own decisions where finance and romance are concerned. An advisor may not know as much as he/she thinks. Make your wishes clear. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Pittsburgh Pirates slugger Steve Kemp, pitcher Steve Senteney, the Chicago Bears' Alan Page, singer B.J. Thomas, diplomat Ralph Bunche, comedienne-actress Billie Burke, glamorous dancer-spy Mata Hari.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put some money where your heart lies. Your love for the finer things in life has not diminished. Make every effort to bring a project in on time and under budget.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Have faith. A natural resiliency helps you recover quickly from a draining experience. Family members rally in support, even those living away from home. A wish will be fulfilled.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You care deeply about someone special. Go ahead and show your feelings. Romance begins to blossom. Keep your business plans under cover. The element of surprise helps you win an important competition.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An elegantly-fashioned presentation wins you high marks at school or work. Complete negotiations and get a legal question answered to your satisfaction. A financial situation shows improvement.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Changing times mean good times for you. Go with the flow. All of your planning was worth it. New career and financial gains are featured. A record-breaking effort means higher profits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Indulge mate's whim. The results will please both of you. Paying closer attention to billing matters and bank statements will save you dollars. Set aside time for a hobby or sport.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be careful not to put too many purchases on your credit cards. Hard work helps you make up for a mistake. Romance becomes more rewarding. Surround yourself with people who think positive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A customized, more flexible approach wins plaudits from your clients or friends. Guarantee a quick decision by following all the rules and meeting a deadline. Call home when traveling.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be careful not to make commitments you cannot keep. Working with your hands gives you a feeling of accomplishment. Call an expert if you need more information. Pay attention to details.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Rely on experts' advice when making a career or financial decision today. Trust those who have worked with you for the longest amount of time. A newcomer offers money but has no track record.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A smooth approach wins points at work. Let others take the chances for now. You listen and learn. Profits rise when you anticipate your customers' needs. Romance reflects your upbeat mood.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Financial services tailored to your special needs help you build savings. Conduct a careful investigation before making a financial commitment. Postpone a career decision. Romance needs time to mature.

The bidding:

Opening lead: King of ◇.

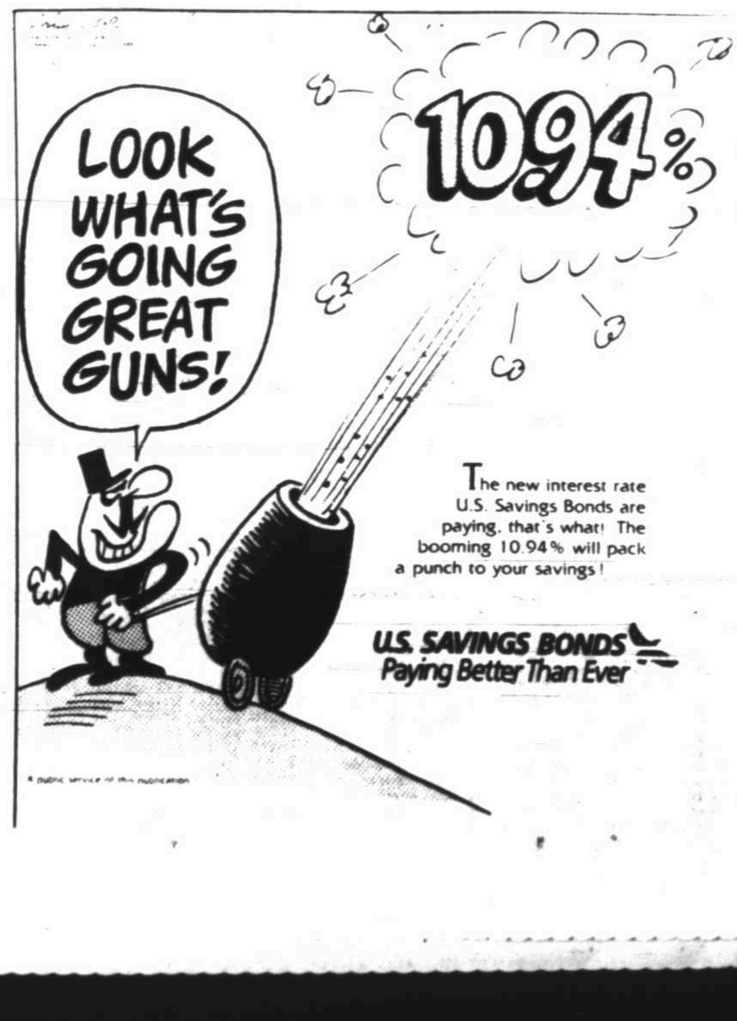

This hand from a multiple team event provided an interesting contrast in defensive styles. Let's follow the board for a few tables and see what happened.

North-South reached four spades at every table. Invariably, the opening lead was the king of diamonds, which held. Partner contributed the eight. Some devious defenders elected to shift to a low club, and some gullible declarers chose to run it to their ten. Apparently, they gave no thought to why West would dare shift to a club when that could be suicidal. East's jack forced the ace, and those declarers found they could not avoid losing three diamond tricks and a club for down one. The alert declarers, who rose with the queen of clubs in dummy, had an easy path to 10 tricks.

Unimaginative defenders continued with the queen of diamonds and another. East won the ace and shifted to a club, but it was too late. Declarer rose with the ace, drew trumps in three rounds ending in hand, and discarded a club from the table on his 13th diamond. He could then ruff a club on the board and discard his last club on the ace of hearts.

The expert defenders continued with the nine of diamonds at trick two. East won the ace and, had he woodenly continued with a diamond, the contract was safe. However, East decided that he would put the one entry to his hand to good use by shifting to a club. Declarer was left without recourse. Whether he chose to rise with the ace or play low, he could not avoid losing three diamonds and a club.

'Miami Vice,' comedies help NBC top Emmy nominations

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — With NBC dominating this year's Emmy nominations on the strengh of its flamingo-bright "Miami Vice" and several hit comedies, the network must be feeling as proud as the peacock that is its symbol.

NBC garnered 125 of the 297 total nominations Monday, more than CBS and ABC combined.

The MTV-influenced "Miami Vice" chalked up 15 nominations to dethrone perennial winner "Hill Street Blues," which got 11.

"The Cosby Show," which has consistently placed No. 1 in weekly Nielsen ratings, got eight nominations, although comedian Bill Cosby removed himself from consideration, saying in a letter to the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences that he does not believe in competition among performers.

CBS was second after NBC with 75 Emmy nominations while ABC had 41, PBS 39, syndicated shows got 12 and Operation Prime Time had five.

The Emmys will be awarded Sunday, Sept. 22, in an ABC telecast of the ceremonies at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

Other shows with multiple nominations are: NBC's "Cheers," 12; NBC's "Motown Returns to the Apollo," 11; CBS' "Cagney & Lacey," 10; NBC's "St. Elsewhere" and the miniseries "Wallenberg: A Hero's Story," 9 each; NBC's "The Burning Bed," 8; CBS' "Murder, She Wrote" and NBC's "Night Court," 7 each.

"Miami Vice" is this year's champion in the nominations after four years of domination by the gritty "Hill Street Blues." The nominations included best drama series, Don Johnson as best lead actor in a drama series, Edward James Olmos as best supporting actor, two each for directing and cinematography, and one for writing, as well as several craft awards.

"I'm extremely delighted for everyone connected with the show because this truly is a group effort," Johnson said through a spokesman.

"We're absolutely delighted with the nominations and recognition," said executive producer Michael Mann. "We're celebrating real hard."

Three nominations went to performers who died within the last year: Richard Burton as supporting actor in a limited series or special for CBS' "Ellis Island," Selma Diamond as supporting actress in a comedy series for NBC's "Night Court" and Nicholas Colasanto as supporting actor in a comedy series for "Cheers."

"Hill Street Blues," winner of 25 Emmys in past years, was nominated for best drama series, with other nominations going to Daniel J. Travanti as best lead actor in a drama series, Veronica Hamel as best actress, Bruce Weitz as best supporting actor, and Barbara Bosson and Betty Thomas as best supporting actresses, two for directing, writing and other craft categories.

CBS' "Cagney & Lacey," which became a hit after the network brought it back from cancellation, won a nomination as best drama series. Among other nominations: Tyne Daly and Sharon Gless as best actresses in a drama series, John Karlen as best supporting actor, one for directing and two for writing.

Thatchers buying high-security home

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and her husband, Denis, have signed a contract to buy a house for at least $520,000 in a high-security housing development in south London.

David Pretty, managing director of Barratt Central London Ltd., made the announcement Monday after the Thatchers visited the Dulwich Gate development.

The development is bounded by a high brick wall and equipped with electrically operated entrance gates and closed-circuit television cameras.

The 23 houses have as many as seven bedrooms, and each home boasts a garden with a lily pond, streams and wooden bridges.

The Thatchers have lived at 10 Downing St., the official residence of British prime ministers, since Mrs. Thatcher took office in 1979. Their new home is to be ready by the end of 1986.

NEW YORK (AP) — Former budget czar David Stockman, who left the Reagan administration to pursue a career on Wall Street, has sold book rights to Harper & Row for more than $2 million, the publisher says.

The former director of the Office of Management and Budget will write a "personal memoir and a revealing study of the process of politics and government in our country," Edward L. Burlingame, vice president and publisher of Harper's Trade Book Division, said Monday.

But "by a count of the genes, the Swedes are in majority," the Republican governor told a news conference Monday in the Swedish capital.

Also Monday, Thompson lunched with Sweden's Minister of Culture Bengt Goransson and visited Prime Minister Olof Palme. He was scheduled to meet with Minister of Justice Sten Wickbom today.

Over the weekend, the 49-year-old governor toured the fishing port of Varberg, where his maternal grandparents lived before emigrating to America.

Thompson, a Chicagoan, was proclaimed the 26th Swedish-American of the Year Sunday by the district chapters of the Swedish-American Vasa Order of America.

TREASURY BILLS

Yields climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auctions to their highest levels since May.

The Treasury Department sold $7.2 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.3 percent, up from last week's 7.23 percent.

Another $7.2 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.52 percent, up from 7.4 percent last week.

The rates were the highest since May 13 when three-month bills averaged 7.69 percent and six-month bills sold for 7.9 percent.

The new Treasury bill discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 7.54 percent for three-month bills and 7.93 percent for six-month bills.

Fannie Mae toughens mortgage standards

Buyers may find qualifying for a loan more difficult

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industry leaders say the only potential home buyers who will be priced out of the mortgage market by new income guidelines are those who probably should be having second thoughts anyway about the house they want to buy.

Revised standards announced Monday by the Federal National Morgtgage Association, the nation's major wholesale supplier of home mortgage money, will make it more difficult for buyers to qualify for a conventional loan — whether with fixed- or adjustable-rate interest — if they have less than 10 percent to pay down.

The Fannie Mae, as the mortgage association is known, buys individual home loans from lenders and packages them for resale in the nation's money markets.

Fannie Mae Chairman David O. Maxwell said the private firm is making the change because it is suffering extensive losses from foreclosures on low down payment loans made to borrowers with just barely enough income to qualify.

David Maxwell

Under the new standard, which takes effect Oct. 1, a borrower's monthly housing expenses will not be allowed to exceed 25 percent of their gross monthly income, and housing expenses plus installment debt cannot exceed 33 percent.

The old standard was 28 percent and 36 percent, respectively, with provisions for exceptions in certain cases. There will be no exceptions under the new rules.

For a $76,500 home with a 5 percent down payment, a borrower would have to earn $41,232 to qualify for a 12.2 percent fixed-rate conventional mortgage compared to $36,814 under the old standard.

The alternative under the new guidelines, which are not binding on individual lenders, is for the buyer to find a cheaper house or come up with a larger down payment.

"Sure there could be some people caught in this, but if all you can put down is 5 percent, maybe somebody ought to tell you you need a little better margin than that," said James Christian, economist for the U.S. League of Savings Institutions.

"If you get red hot about buying a house and the lender agrees to let you pay 33 percent of your income ... and you lose your job, he hasn't done you any favor," Christian said.

The change does not apply to loans in which the down payment is 10 percent or more. Nor does it affect FHA and VA loans guaranteed by the federal government.

While not binding on lending institutions, the new guidelines mean lenders will have a hard time selling into the secondary money market any mortgages that do not meet Fannie Mae standards.

Maxwell said the stricter qualifying standards were needed because inflation is not the factor it was in the go-go real estate market of the late 1970s and early 1980s.

In that era, a lender might not think twice about making a loan to a buyer with marginal financial standing because the home was almost certain to appreciate enough in value within a year or so to enable even a strapped owner to sell out at a profit.

Warren Lasko, executive vice president of the Mortage Bankers Association of America, said: "Most of the measures they have taken are reasonable. New guidelines for tighter underwriting standards are in step with lenders' own concerns that today's environment of lower house value appreciation makes further study a necessity."

But Lasko also acknowledged the changes "will make it more difficult for home buyers, especially first-time home buyers without much cash equity, to qualify for a low down payment loan."

Maxwell said he had no figures on how many people might be unable to buy under the new standards. Lasko and Christian, likewise, said they would not estimate a number, but suggested it would not be large because most lenders have been tightening standards on their own in recent months.

Fannie Mae also said it will discontinue purchase of any adjustable-rate mortgages that do not include a cap on how the interest rate can rise. As a practical matter, few mortgages with open-ended interest rates have been written in the past couple of years because of consumer resistance.

Lawyer testifies Getty proposed merger terms

HOUSTON (AP) — Gordon P. Getty set the principal terms for an agreement that called for Pennzoil Co. and the Sarah C. Getty Trust to acquire Getty Oil Co., an attorney who worked on the proposed acquisition testified Monday.

Arthur Liman of New York said the terms were proposed to him and another Pennzoil representative by Martin Siegel, an investment banker who was representing Gordon Getty, the trustee for the Getty trust.

Getty stipulated that the trust would own four-sevenths of Getty Oil and Pennzoil would own three-sevenths, Liman said. There was also a provision for splitting the assets of Getty Oil if the Pennzoil-trust partnership did not work, he said.

Liman and James Glanville, Pennzoil's investment banking adviser, met with Siegel and two attorneys for the Getty trust on Dec. 30, 1983, two days after Pennzoil began a $100-a-share tender offer for 16 million shares of Getty Oil stock.

Siegel had requested the meeting with the Pennzoil representatives, Liman testified Monday at the trial of Pennzoil's $15 billion lawsuit against Texaco Inc.

Pennzoil claims that when Texaco acquired Getty Oil last year, it forced Getty to breach an earlier agreement with Pennzoil. Texaco denies the charge, saying that Pennzoil and Getty never had a valid agreement for a proposed merger.

According to Liman, Siegel said Gordon Getty was prepared to join Pennzoil in acquiring Getty Oil and the percentage of ownership was a non-negotiable point. Siegel told Limon that Gordon Getty did not ever want to be in a minority ownership position with Getty Oil again.

Japanese brake firm to set up joint venture with GM

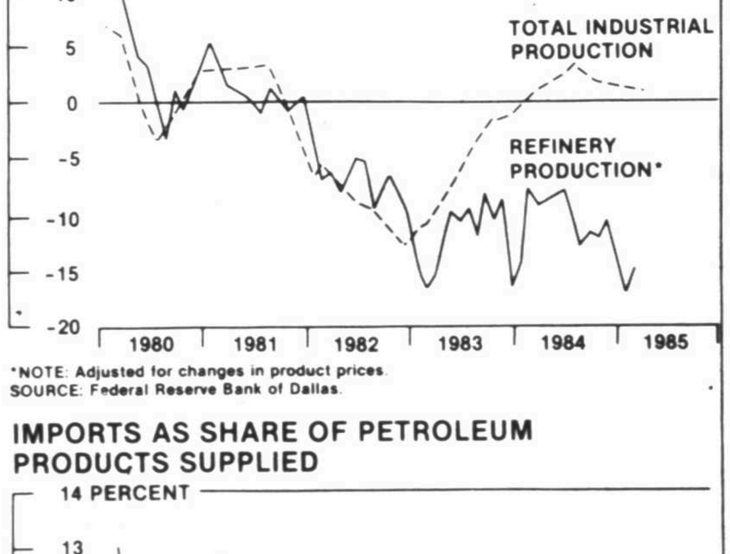

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's largest brake manufacturer, Akebono Brake Industry Co., will establish a joint venture with the United States' General Motors Corp. for the development and production of brakes in the United States, Akebono officials announced today.

The new company, to be formally established early next year, will begin operation in July, 1987, said an official from Akebono's General Affairs Division who declined to be named.

The capital, name and site of the company have not yet been finalized, though negotiations with GM are in the final stages, he said.

The official confirmed a newspaper report that the two companies are planning initially to spend more than $33.3 million to establish production facilities. He also said it was likely that the company would be located in the midwestern United States.

Basin, Texas feel effects of soft oil prices

From Staff Reports

The Permian Basin and Texas continue to feel the effects of depressed oil prices, as indicated by several energy indicators released by the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas.

One indicator shows world oil demand remains weak, resulting in downward pressure on prices. After firming in recent months, product prices have shown renewed weakness lately, leading to lower spot crude prices.

OPEC continues to be plagued by problems differentiating between heavy and light crude pricing. Demand for residual fuel oil was reduced by settlement of the year-long British coal miners' strike. Also, Mexico deviated from OPEC's pricing structure in June by lowering the price of its heavy crude.

Another indicator shows that the Environmental Protection Agency's "lead phasedown" program lowering the maximum lead content in gasoline is likely to squeeze refiners' profits further. Attaining comparable octane levels without lead is more expensive, but refiners may not be able to pass the entire cost on to consumers.

Declines in both the Texas and U.S. rig counts are being accelerated by depressed oil prices. The Texas rig count in June was 25 percent lower than 1984, and the U.S. count was more than 20 percent lower.

Leading indicators predict a further decline in drilling activity, which is equaled by the decline in the seismic crew count. Well permit applications are sliding in Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma.

Dr Pepper sells headquarters to investor

DALLAS (AP) — Dr Pepper Co. sold its 37-year-old Dallas-based headquarters and plant Monday to a real estate investor who plans to convert it into a shopping center, officials said.

Harbord Enterprises Inc. bought the 27-acre property after two months of negotiations, said Ross Love, president of Harbord Properties Inc., an affiliated firm.

"It's a sale-lease back," Love said.

The soft-drink company will remain on the North Dallas site for an indefinite period, Love said, "... up to five years."

Harbord, however, plans to begin construction on the site within six to eight months.

A spokesman for Dr Pepper said the soft-drink firm, which reportedly made between $15million and $20 million on the sale, is making no plans to construct a new headquarters.

"We will look at the end of the five years," said company spokesman Jim Ball. "We intend to run our business as usual.

"We're not making any plans beyond tomorrow," he said.

Aggressive independent operator is looking for well re-entries, well recompletions and development stepouts. Cash and/or overriding royalty consideration paid for the right prospects.

Taste test declares Classic Coke can't be old formula

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO – Has Coca-Cola betrayed America ... again?

Complaints are mounting that Coke Classic is not the same as original formula Coke. The company swears Coke Classic is identical to the old, pre-April 23 Coca-Cola. Who are we going to believe, Coke or our own taste buds?

Ever since Coke Classic hit the stores earlier this week, disappointed readers have been writing and calling to protest. They're angry — this new stuff, they say, just isn't the old-time ambrosia they were expecting. It's not the vicious, gut-eating old Coke they grew up on.

"Even if Coke Classic is identical in formula to the old Coke — and I believe it is — it may not taste the same to some consumers because old Coke has developed a mystique that Coke Classic just doesn't measure up to," said Manny Goldman, beverage-industry analyst for Montgomery Securities here. "Any taste gap between old Coke and Coke Classic might very well be psychological."

Nevertheless, mindful of numerous reader complaints, the San Francisco Examiner Thursday undertook its own blind taste test of old Coke and Coke Classic. Granted, we used seven testers where Coca-Cola reportedly used 190,000 to prove people would love new Coke. Perhaps our seven are right. Lord knows Coke's 190,000 were wrong.

Members of the tasting group split on which potion they preferred and why, but the main verdict was unanimous: All seven testers agreed that old Coke and Coke Classic do not taste the same.

"I have a simple reaction to that," responded Coca-Cola spokesman Ron Coleman, speaking from Atlanta. "Coke Classic is exactly the same formula as Coke before April 23."

Until April, such pronouncements by Coca-Cola spokesmen were received and automatically believed, as though uttered 'ex cathedra." All of that changed on April 23, when Coca-Cola violated the Prime Law of Existence: If it's not broken, don't fix it.

In an attempt to stay abreast of America's changing tastes — which are supposedly trending toward the lite and the sweet — Coca-Cola scrapped its crusty, trusty, corrosive 99-year-old formula and introduced new Coke, a Pepsi-like concoction that tastes like liquefied bubble gum.

The nation took to it like vampires invited to a garlic feed. Cells of guerrilla resistance sprang up around the country.

Faced with near-revolution in the marketplace, on July 9 Coca-Cola retreated to convenient and profitable high ground: New Coke would remain the company's flagship product while old Coke would be reintroduced under the label Coke Classic.

Analysts saw this as a brilliant marketing stroke. Not only had Coca-Cola managed to create the biggest national buzz since naughty Vanessa Williams resigned as Miss America, but the company would henceforth command more supermarket shelf space by having two main products, Pepsi-like new Coke and Coke-like Coke Classic.

Precinct changes proposed

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Proposed changes in Midland County's voting precincts met with no opposition Monday during an unveiling in Midland County Commissioner's Court.

The proposal, which followed a series of four public meetings to determine the necessity to refine Midland County voting boxes and precinct boundary lines, is not required by Texas law. Rather, changes are proposed for the convenience of Midland County voters, Commissioner Win Brown said.

Under the proposal, County Commissioner Precinct 1, would remain unchanged. Precinct 1, represented by Commissioner Durward Wright, includes voting boxes 101, 102, 103, 104, 105 and 106.

County Commissioner Precinct 2, represented by Commissioner Wallace Craig, would be redivided to include territory north of Loop 25, south to Holmsley Avenue, west to Garfield Street and east to the county line.

County Commissioner Precinct 3, represented by Commissioner Scott Welch, would be redivided to include the addition of territory south of Loop 250, east to Golf Course Road, east to Fairgrounds Road and west to State Highway 349.

County Commissioner Precinct 4, represented by Brown, would be redivided to extend west to the county line, south to Cuthbert Avenue, north to the county line and east to Garfield Street.

"Most of the group that met at those four meetings feel comfortable with it," Brown said in unveiling the proposal to fellow commissioners.

Brown, who spearheaded the series of meetings in June, added that only county races would be affected by the change. The City of Midland and the Midland Independent School District operate under individual precinct boundaries.

Proposed changes in county voting areas surfaced after the city agreed in December 1984 to switch from at-large voting to a compromise version of single-member districts, thereby ending its struggle with the Black Advisory Council and the League of United Latin American citizens.

The two organizations sued the city to force a change from the old at-large system to single-member districts, where the city is divided into separate district which elect their own representatives. A compromise plan followed an out-of-court settlement.

According to Brown, "these changes meet all of the requirements of the school board and most of the requirements of the city." Midland county, school and city officials all must concur with the changes in order to comply with the settlement, he added.

Representatives of both the Black Advisory Council and LULAC said their organizations "feel good" about the proposed precinct changes.

"It's hard to come up with a proposal to satisfy everyone, but we feel that this is the best way we could work it out to get the best minority representation," LULAC president Edia Hernandez said.

Charlie Jackson, president of the Black Advisory Council, added his support saying, "I feel good about it."

According to Brown, Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman will study the proposed changes, make any necessary refinements and present further suggestions during a regularly scheduled meeting of the County Commissioners Court next Monday. Commissioners will vote for or against the proposal at that time.

If approved, the scheduled changes would go into effect in March of 1986, Brown added.

Darnell example of 'good sheriff'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Ed "Big Ed" Darnell says he knows what it takes to be a "good sheriff."

He has the experience to know how, since Darnell gave 36 years of his 80 years to law enforcement.

His good-sheriff formula:

- Be honest.
- Work hard.
- Use common sense.

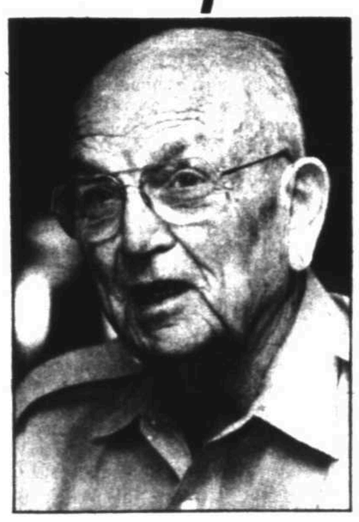

"And don't forget to use the word 'no,'" he once advised present-day Sheriff Gary Painter. "You can always learn to say 'no.'"

Darnell, who will celebrate his 80th birthday Wednesday, was the Midland County sheriff from 1941 through 1976. And last week in Corpus Christi, he was presented the Tom Tellepsen Award by the Sheriffs' Association of Texas. The award cited his unwavering dedication to law enforcement, the "love of his profession," and the respect his peers have for him.

"I'm proud of that (award), and I'm proud of the Liberty Bell Award," which the Midland County Young Lawyers Association presented him in 1982 for his "outstanding contribution" to law enforcement and to the respect he helped kindle and maintain within those ranks.

Darnell also is proud of a birthday card mailed to him from The White House by President Ronald Reagan and First Lady Nancy Reagan. They offered him "congratulations on your birthday. We wish you the very best..."

"I have always been a dedicated officer at heart," Darnell said. "That was my life's ambition: to be sheriff." He was president of the Sheriffs' Association for the 1949-50 term.

Ed 'Big Ed' Darnell

Along with the plaque, the Sheriffs' Association of Texas presented Darnell with $1,000. In turn, Darnell is giving that money prize to two of his favorite organizations: The High Sky Girls Ranch and the Midland Downtown Lions Club.

"Now, they're my kids," Darnell said of the youths at the Girls Ranch. "Every since Pat (Estes) and those others started it, I've been working for those kids." Pat Estes was on the founding board of the Girls Ranch, which was established in 1963. She and her husband, Midland rancher Button Estes, are long-time friends of Darnell and his family. Darnell gave the Girls Ranch its first "bill of groceries" and its first refrigerator.

"Nobody thinks any more of those kids than I do," Darnell said.

He presented the $500 check for the Girls Ranch to Jackie Carter, executive director of the Girls Ranch, on Monday. "I'm really touched," Ms. Carter said.

Darnell, who will present a $500 check to the Lions Club on Wednesday, said the Lions Club "means a lot to me."

"We have a lot of projects," he said. "We help a lot of people" through the Lions' various projects, which include sight conservation, work with the blind and the crippled and other community services. He has been a member of the international service organization for 44 years.

Before he was elected sheriff at age 35 in 1940, Darnell drove a bread wagon and operated a hamburger stand in Midland.

"I didn't have one day's experience when I went into office," he said. "All of those (childhood dreams) came true."

Ever since he was a tot, Darnell had dreamed of becoming sheriff, often had visited with the Van Zandt County Sheriff in his native East Texas and drove the sheriff's horsepowered buggy, and "played sheriff" as a youngster.

"We'd play in the woods," he recalled. "I played sheriff, and the other children would hide in the woods, and I'd go find them."

"I was chief cook and bottle washer," recalled his wife, Juanita.

"She was my turnkey," Darnell said.

In his years as sheriff, Darnell said his department carried out its crime investigation "the good old-fashioned way — with common sense," instead of with scientific methods and computers, which today are used widely in law enforcement. He got results.

Among laurels presented the former sheriff was a recent letter of tribute to Darnell from Midland lawyer Jack D. Ladd, past president of the Midland County Young Lawyers Association.

"All of us natives here in Midland know that Sheriff Ed Darnell is one of the finest, if not the finest (sheriff) to come from Texas," Ladd wrote. "We appreciate so much the great contribution that you have made to Midland and Midland County...We certainly always appreciate your 'kind word and helping hand' which has benefitted so many people and continues to benefit so many here in Midland."

And Pat Estes recalled Darnell's kindness as sheriff.

"I know a lot of people who would have been in really big trouble if it weren't for Big Ed's counseling service and love," she said.

And Darnell recounted selected highlights from his life.

What's more?

He had an idea.

"We can all rise," the ex-sheriff said, "and sing a third stanza."

Odessan's robbery trial set for Aug. 27

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The trial of a 17-year-old Odessan, indicted on three charges of aaggravated robbery, has been set for Aug. 27 in 161st District Court.

District Judge Tryon Lewis during a July 24 pretrial hearing rejected a motion filed by Larry M. Dutchover's attorney, Steve Brannan, seeking a change of venue because too much publicity concerning the cases and the Dutchover name would make it impossible for Dutchover to have a fair and impartial trial.

Dutchover is charged with the Feb. 5 and Feb. 21 armed robberies of the Whataburger restaurant, 1900 E. 8th Street, and the Feb. 23 armed robbery of Harrigan's. Three other young men also were charged in connection with those robberies.

Three armed men reportedly entered the Whataburger restaurant Feb. 5 and fled with slightly more than $200. Police reports indicate two armed men again robbed the restaurant Feb. 21, escaping with an undetermined amount of money.

Dutchover is also alleged to have been one of three men who held up Harrigan's Feb. 23.

Minorities have not 'achieved parity'

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The American education system continues to fail in its efforts to provide equal educational opportunities for minorities, the first black president of the National Science Teachers Association (NSTA) said Monday.

"Minority students have not yet achieved parity and are underrepresented in the quality and quantity of the education they receive," said Alice Moses, who served as NSTA president last year.

Ms. Moses, speaking at a Texas A&M University workshop, told representatives of several colleges and industries that blacks and Hispanics have a long way to go in achieving equal educational opportunities.

The former teacher and principal said many areas of education have not improved for minorities in the last 15 years and that graduate enrollment in some areas has declined over the last five years.

Science is one area where blacks and Hispanics are noticeably absent, she said, but getting more of those students interested in studying science requires attracting their attention at an early age.

"Youngsters are turning off science at the early fourth grade. High school is often too late," she said.

Moses said she was against current school reforms that require more science and more time in school without improving the quality of the science teachers.

"Most students learn traditional math and science courses by rote," she said. "Science classes must not and cannot be 'turn to Page 10 and read.'"

Dean Corrigan, dean of Texas A&M's College of Education, said one of the problems with increasing science requirements is that more uncertified science teachers will be trying to teach the subject.

"I think we're in a crisis situation in Texas. The number of minority teachers coming into the schools is just a disaster," he said.

Odessan's trial date for sexual assault set

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The trial of a 17-year-old Odessa youth, accused of the Sept. 30 aggravated sexual assault of a 21-year-old Medical Center Hospital patient, is scheduled to begin in 119th District Court in San Angelo Aug. 19, with 244th District Court Judge Joe Connally presiding.

The trial of Reginal Timothy McNeil, who was a part time MCH employee at the time the young Midland woman was allegedly raped, was moved to Tom Green County when his attorney, G. David Smith, argued McNeil was entitled to a change of venue because the state had failed to successfully challenge the credibility of defense witnesses who stated McNeil could not receive a fair and impartial trial in Ector County because of excessive publicity.

During a March 27 pretrial hearing in 70th District Court, Judge Gene Ater rejected a motion by Smith to suppress statements McNeil gave investigating officers following his arrest. Smith contended the statements were not made voluntarily and, therefore, should not be admitted as evidence in the trial.

McNeil, who has been free on a personal recognizance bond pending trial, is alleged to have sexually assaulted the young woman after she had been partially sedated.

We don't like to believe in possiblity of nuclear war

Imagine yourself at work, sitting at your desk. It's 8:15 a.m. and you're preparing for the day's work ahead of you. You turn to talk to a co-worker. At that same instant your office fills with a blinding light and the ceiling and walls fall in on you.

Many of us do not like to believe such a scene could occur. But according to John Hersey's book "Hiroshima," it happened to Toshiko Sasaki and over 100,000 other people on Aug. 6, 1945, when the U.S. dropped a mass of atomic energy equal to that of 12,500 tons of TNT on Hiroshima.

In "The Fate of the Earth" Jonathan Schell quotes Yoko Ota, a survivor of the Hiroshima bombing as saying, "I just could not understand why our surroundings had changed so greatly in one instant...I thought it might have been something which had nothing to do with the war — the collapse of the earth, which it was said would take place at the end of the world, and which I had read about as a child."

Since the bombing, controversy has surrounded the use of nuclear energy. Even since seven years after Hiroshima, when the American government established as policy the peaceful use of atomic energy to produce nuclear electricity, anti-nuclear activists have protested its use.

Dr. Helen Caldicott reported in "Nuclear Madness" of three nuclear engineers for General Electric who resigned from their jobs in February 1976 because they could no longer support an industry they believed would eventually destroy the world.

Dale Bridenbaugh, Richard Hubbard and Gregory Minor, in their report to the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, included in their reasons for leaving, "We resigned because we could no longer justify devoting our life energies to the continued development and expansion of nuclear fission power — a system we believe to be so dangerous that it now threatens the very existence of life on this planet.

"We could no longer resolve our continued participation in an industry which will depend upon the production of vast amounts of plutonium, a material known to cause cancer and produce genetic effects, and which facilitates the continued proliferation of atomic weapons throughout the world."

Despite all the known dangers of nuclear energy, our government continues to build nuclear weapons in the name of world peace, assuring us they will be used if they feel it necessary. Many U.S. citizens support the arms race. I can't help but wonder if these people are aware of the consequences nuclear weapons would bring.

A nuclear war would end civilization as we now know it. According to Dr. Caldicott, even those who survive the blast will still be confronted with radiation sickness, a sickness that kills all of the body's actively dividing cells. It causes hair loss, the sloughing off of skin in big ulcers, and finally, as white blood cells die, the victims die from infection or massive hemorrhage. Thousands of Japanese A-bomb "survivors" died from radiation sickness within two weeks of the bombing.

Those who live past that point are still threatened by cancer and genetic mutations for generations to come. Studies have shown that Hiroshima survivors have developed many different kinds of cancers. In her book, Dr. Caldicott explained that humans are the most susceptible creatures to the carcinogenic effects of radiation because their cells are growing and rapidly dividing. And the insidious material won't just go away. Plutonium, deemed by science as one of the deadliest known substances, will emit radiation for at least 500,000 years after its release.

Many of us do not like to think about the effects of a nuclear war. We try to put it out of our minds. Our fears inhibit us from educating ourselves on what may be the destruction of the world. The more I research the subject, the more I am convinced the all nations should halt the production of nuclear weapons — before the end of civilization.

Assemblies of God meet this week

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The biennial conference of the Assemblies of God convenes in San Antonio this week, with more than 16,000 delegates expected to attend.

Assemblies of God superintendent Thomas Zimmerman likes to call his church a movement, rather than a denomination.

And he says its rapid growth in recent years is due to the church's clearly defined purpose.

The largest of the Pentecostal denominations, the Assemblies of God boasts 15 million adherents worldwide. Two million of them are in the United States.

"We have endeavored to conserve our personnel and our material resources so that we have focused on our objective," Zimmerman said Monday.

That objective, he said, grows out of the "New Testament mandate to go into all the world and preach the gospel to all nations."

With the focus on evangelism, members have given more than $210 million for world missions in the past two years.

That emphasis has resulted in a church membership of 8 million in Brazil. The Assemblies of God also are strong in South Korea, Argentina and several African nations.

In the United States, there are 10,582 Assemblies of God churches, up from 10,173 two years ago.

The 73-year-old Zimmerman, elected superintendent when the denomination last met in San Antonio 25 years ago, said membership in the United States is strongest in the Southwest.

The church, he said, is "planting" or starting 440 new churches each year in the United States.

The Assemblies of God are similar to the Southern Baptist Convention in many ways, including the church's commitment to autonomy for local congregations.

The church also stands for Biblical inerrancy, Zimmerman said, a controversial issue among Southern Baptists, who met in Dallas in June.

The Assemblies of God has held steadfastly to its belief in the "baptism of the Holy Spirit," characterized by speaking in tongues and claims of miracle healings.

The church has shied away from political involvement, Zimmerman said.

Nevertheless, the church has taken an anti-abortion stance.

Despite its conservative bent, the church boasts of more than 3,500 ordained and licensed women ministers. There are more than 13,000 male ministers.

No women serve on the General Presbytery, comprised of members elected by each of the church's 57 districts.

A highlight of the six-day conference will be a live, two-hour nationwide broadcast of the Sunday afternoon vesper service to Assemblies of God churches nationwide.

Beamed via satellite and cable television systems, the broadcast will be available on the Christian Broadcasting, PTL and Trinity Broadcasting networks. In Midland, CBN is cable channel 31 and TBN is cable channel 4.

Registration for fall YMCA programs begin

From Staff Reports

The Midland YMCA Youth Sports Department opened registration Aug. 1 for its fall Flag Football Program. The program is open to both boys and girls, grades kindergarten through sixth. The season starts Sept. 10 and ends Oct. 31. Each child plays half of every game and there are no tryouts, cuts, etc., just a league where any youngster can play for the fun of it.

The center is open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday and children from birth to 12 years of age are accepted. Breakfast, lunch and an afternoon snack is served in a caring and fun atmosphere. During the summer months, special activities have been planned for the children such as field trips, swimming lessons and other activities.

The center began accepting registration in August for the coming school year. Children ages four and five are offered a pre-readiness program for kindergarten. Other age children will be in a structured learning program. Transportation from some schools will be offered.

For more information, call Marian Allen at 684-8392.

The preschool and advanced preschool classes (ages three to five) are taught without parent participation as the child can begin to develop social skills as well as gymnastic skills. Activities presented are designed to acquaint the preschooler with a wide variety of movement concepts on the equipment and on the floor. The progressive program for boys and girls, ages six and up, is designed as a graded progression from beginner to advanced gymnastics. Each child is awarded a certificate of completion for passing the beginner, intermediate and advanced levels.

Competitive teams from the beginner to advanced are also a large part of the YMCA program upon completion of the advanced level. Tryouts are required for both the boys' and girls' competitive programs. For more information, call 694-2528 or come by 901 N. Midland Drive.

Also Alamo YMCA announces a new shape class designed to fit into busy schedules. The class meets Tuesday and Thursdays mornings. For more information, call Judy Reuter at 682-2551. YMCA membership is not required.

The Central YMCA is holding a free meeting each Wednesday at 6 p.m. for starting individual weight management programs. Call Doug at 682-2551 for more information.

Lawyer says teacher tests discriminatory

TYLER, Texas (AP) — An attorney representing several minority groups and students argued argued in federal court that competency tests for potential teachers are discriminatory.

Albert Kauffman, an attorney from the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, asked U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice on Monday to issue an injunction to prevent state officials from testing sophomore teacher education students this fall.

The Pre-Professional Skills Test checks would-be teachers in reading, writing and mathematics. Students must pass the test to begin taking upper level professional education courses.

"We are asking that college students be able to go on and take courses, not that the test be stopped or outlawed (at this point)," said Albert Kauffman, a San Antonio attorney for MALDEF.

Kauffman said because the state uses the PPST as the sole admission policy to teacher education institutions, it is not acceptable and promotes discrimination against minorities.

"What the state is saying is that these students are not even competent enough to go into class to learn more," Kauffman said in his opening statement. "We want students that are already in college to take these courses and we want to see the test for expert analysis."

If the injunction is issued, students would be able to take upper-level courses and receive a bachelor's degree in education.

Teacher certification would be determined after the suit is settled.

Kaufman is representing the GI Forum, a group of Hispanic veterans, the League of United Latin American Citizens, the Texas chapter of National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and 14 students.

He claims the testing program will result in fewer minority teachers in the state's classrooms.

"Students will be hurt by this," Kauffman said. "They won't have enough minority teachers because of standards and levels set by the state. Minority children need these role models."

But state attorneys feel the test serves other purposes.

"This case comes down to whether the state can require students to know reading, math and writing before they are allowed to teach," said Kevin O'Hanlon, an attorney for the state.

"We may be impeding the flow of (minority) teachers into the classroom," he said, "but with the purpose of providing better teachers."

Remedial programs are offered at junior colleges for students who do not pass the test or want tutoring before taking the test, O'Hanlon told the court. Students must pay for the courses, but some finacial aid is offered, he said.

Jazz artist's sister dies in crash

HALF MOON BAY, Calif. (AP) — Jean Hancock, who wrote lyrics for her brother, jazz keyboard artist Herbie Hancock, was among those killed in last week's crash of a Delta Air Lines jet in Dallas.

Her brother was informed Sunday of his sister's death as he vacationed in Greece, a publicist for the artist said Monday. Bobbi Marcus said Hancock left Greece to return to Los Angeles to be with his family.

In addition to contributing to her brother's works, Ms. Hancock also wrote lyrics for the group "Earth, Wind and Fire," said Marcus.

Ms. Hancock, 41, moved to Half Moon Bay from Los Angeles about 18 months ago and was attempting to establish an independent computer consulting firm.

Mishap releases hydrochloric acid

From Staff Reports

An accident at Permian Chemical Co., in east Odessa shortly after 8 p.m. Monday released an undetermined quantity of hydrochloric acid that produced noxious fumes in the area.

According to the Odessa Fire Department, a valve broke off of a 20,000-gallon tank, allowing the corrosive acid to flow into a lined dike where it began to foam and overflowed the dike. Workers managed to divert the acid into a pit where it was neutralized, a spokeswoman in the fire marshal's office said.

Ector County Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss said deputies at the scene reported some employees suffered minor burns on their faces and around their eyes.

The Odessa fire marshal's office said the release of the acid produced no damage but did blanket the area for awhile with bad fumes.

Texas congressmen 'on the road' during recess

WASHINGTON (AP) — An era of taxpayer-financed "junkets" to faraway places seems have come to an end — at least among Texans on Capitol Hill.

The annual August recess, a prime time for committee "fact-finding trips" to attractive foreign lands, finds more of Texas' representatives heading to places like Kermit and Monahans than Kashmir and Moscow.

But the overseas trip is not dead.

Freshman Republican Sen. Phil Gramm will travel to Hawaii, Japan and South Korea as a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The panel will meet with military leaders about organization of U.S. military forces overseas, an issue expected to come up before the committee later, said Gramm's press secretary, Larry Neal.

"He's flying commercial, tourist-class," Neal said. The trip will last 10 days. Gramm's wife, Wendy, will join him for part of the trip, paying her own way. Her parents live in Hawaii.

Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, hitched onto a trip with House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, and others who are going to Italy and Yugoslavia to discuss defense, said an aide.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, was taking members of his committee to the Soviet Union, the first time the committee has been invited to visit Russia, said de la Garza's administrative assistant, Celia Hare Martin.

Rep. Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi, planned to travel with other House Armed Services Committee members to Great Britain, Spain, Portugal, Tunisia, Morocco, Yugoslavia and Algeria, said his press secretary, Gary Caruso. The trip will last 14 days, he said.

Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, and Mike Andrews, D-Houston, planned overseas trips financed by private organizations.

Andrews was going to Copenhagen for an economics seminar sponsored by an organization of former members of Congress.

Ex-husband arrested in wife's death

HOBBS (AP) — The former husband of a Hobbs woman who was shot to death was arrested in Andrews and he will be transported to Hobbs to face charges stemming from the slaying, authorities said Monday.

Magistrate Ralph Wrinkle of Hobbs issued a warrant Sunday for the arrest of Markos Sanchez, 27, of Hobbs, on an open charge of murder.

Texas authorities said Monday Sanchez waived extradition proceedings and will be returned to Hobbs to face murder charges there.

Wayne Farmer, Andrews County sheriff, said Sanchez was arrested Sunday by deputies as he was walking along a road into Andrews. Farmer said a bulletin for his arrest had been sent by Hobbs police. He was charged in Texas with public intoxication and resisting arrest, authorities said.

Sylvia Garcia Sanchez, 27, was pronounced dead at 6:08 a.m. Sunday at Lea Regional Hospital in Hobbs after suffering bullet wounds to the face, chest and hands.

Police said the woman was shot in a dispute that broke out at her home at 5:19 a.m.

Bill Lane, Hobbs police chief, said at least one of the couple's children witnessed the shooting. He also said Hobbs detectives left for Texas Monday to recover a pickup truck driven by Sanchez and a rifle found inside the vehicle.

Fire demolishes truck pulling mobile home

From Staff Reports

A fire caused by engine backfire destroyed a truck pulling a mobile home on State Highway 349 Monday in Martin County, according to fire reports.

The fire in the truck belonging to Oasis Mobile Homes, 4608 W. Wall, was reported at 11:38 a.m. It was extinguished with 2,000 gallons of water, reports said. The front of the mobile home also received some damage.

In other reports from law-enforcement agencies, five spare tires worth a total of about $1,950 were reported stolen from the yard at Weaver Trucking, 2815 W. Interstate 20. The tires were taken from five different trucks sometime between July 30 and July 31 by someone who cut a hole in the chain-link fence, reports said.

Tools worth a total of about $1,100 were reported taken from a tool box on the bed of a 1982 Jeep pickup belonging to Curtis Thomas Perkins of Airline Mobile Home Park. The theft occurred sometime between July 30 and Aug. 1, reports said.

Juan Ochoa, Route 11, Box 11222, reported the theft of a $550 flatbed trailer and a $700 air compressor. The trailer, carrying the compressor, was parked in the 300 block of West Cuthbert Avenue when it was taken sometime between Saturday and Monday, reports said.

Mary Herrera, Route 9, Box 9674, reported the loss of a $350 stereo and $60 worth of cassette tapes in a Monday burglary of her home. Two suspects were seen leaving the area, and the investigation continues, reports said.

Man dies in grain silo

LUBBOCK (AP) — A man working inside a silo died after the grain gave way and buried him, authorities said.

Tommy Lee Dixon, 21, of Lubbock, was in a body harness with a rope leading out of the Continental Grain Co. silo to co-workers, but the rope was too slack to hold Dixon up when the grain let go, said Fire Chief Tom Foster.

"It's sort of like quicksand," Foster said Monday after Dixon's body was recovered. Authorities said an autopsy was planned.

'Sale' price tag makes fashion hot

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The hottest thing in the fashion business today, the clincher in every purchase, has nothing to do with color and silhouette, and no designer can take credit for dreaming it up. It is seasonless and suits every figure and every budget.

The most irresistible thing on the racks today? A price tag marked "sale."

It is the clearest sign that things are not going well in the fashion business, that buying fashion when it is fresh in the stores at full price is, well, out of fashion. Stores are offering clothes by manufacturers and designers that many customers have rejected as overpriced, unattractive, poorly made, untimely, boring or just unnecessary additions to their wardrobes. At the first markdown price they are more appealing though a second slash in price boosts the chances of a sale still more.

In fact, things are now on sale so frequently that many men and women now simply refuse to pay full price for anything. Stores have taught us that every fashion has its markdown day. And they have conditioned the potential customer to wait for the sale that happens just about the time the weather catches up with the retail fashion cycle. Bathing suits are on sale right now — in fact about the only thing not on sale are some winter coats. (In a few stores those have arrived with special promotional price tags, too.)

CONSUMERS HAVE BEGUN to react angrily to price tags that they consider out of touch with the worthiness of the clothes. They find it hard to understand why a silk blouse is worth $240, or why it is difficult to find quality leather shoes under $100.

The cotton blouse with a price tag of $120 looks like it is worth about $40. It is simply cut, it is unadorned, undistinguished in quality, the fabric is plain and it doesn't seem to have any special design in it, at least on the hanger. As a matter of fact, it probably is worth about $40 in fabric and labor. But then tag on a profit for the manufacturer, and a bit more for the designer, double the price and a bit more for the store to pay its cost of doing business plus a small profit, and the total is easily $120. It still looks worth about $40.

With clothes marked down by one-third or one-half (and now an additional 20 percent discount added on top of that in some stores), customers have started to ask questions: If an item can be put on sale for so much less than the original price, wasn't the original price way too high? (And one has to worry that stores may decide to price things higher still knowing that they have to put things on sale to get customers to buy them.)

Buying things at lower than list price in off-price and discount stores has been going on for years. But now, rather than being embarrassed to admit that an item was purchased from a discounter or from a sale rack, customers brag about the money saved, quoting specific prices gleefully, as though they have retaliated against a conspiracy for high prices.

CONSTANT SALES have become a way of doing business as stores have been stuck with huge inventories in the past two years. Some prestige specialty chains that used to dump much of their sale merchandise through discounters have started selling the markdowns themselves as a way of luring customers into their stores. Other stores have set up special sections of the store as sale areas where sale merchandise can always be found.

Designers and manufacturers have responded to the change in buying patterns by making their offerings more conservative, more "safe." Rather than gambling on fresh looks and innovative styling, in many instances the new line of the season is now a slight variation of the best sellers of the season before. For example, jackets shown for fall were often just fractionally shorter than those offered last season, the shoulders just a bit wider — or narrower.

But to customers who were finding the price tags gargantuan, such slim differences didn't seem worth buying something new. Why replace a perfectly good blazer for one a tad more fitted and just a tiny bit shorter with a price tag of $280, or more? The one in the closet will do just fine, thank you.

THE FASHION BUSINESS is feeling the impact of the 1970s attitude that anything goes and one should wear what suits best. Designer edicts are passe. As a result, many women go into stores, select a jacket from one rack, a sweater and skirt from other racks and try them on.

Standing in front of a a mirror, the customer asks herself, "Well I've chosen my own look but do I like it?" The conclusion is often, "I don't really know." And with little skilled help around to assist in such a choice, the sale is often forfeited since she can't decide if she likes the new items so much better than what she already owns.

Many of the new clothes are so limp and formless on the rack that it takes a lot of wooing to show a customer how the style should be worn and why it is worth the price tag. Stores with many branches find it increasingly difficult to find, train and maintain skilled personnel in each store for the long hours that stores are open. (Some mall stores are open seven days and several nights each week.)

SOMETIMES IT IS nearly impossible to find any sales person at all to ring up a sale. With so few salespeople, stores have found it essential to wire and lock expensive garments such as suede jackets to curb shoplifting. The shoplifter can't get at those choice items, but neither can the customer who might want to try them on.

Over the last year stores have increasingly banked on private label programs as an attempt to keep down prices and vary the merchandise in the stores. Usually manufactured offshore, often in the Far East, stores bypass designers and become the manufacturers themselves, having things created to their specification. Theoretically it should make these clothes, usually marked "made expressly for (and the store name)," sell for less since the store is both the manufacturer and the seller and the item has one less mark-up.

But often it's quite the opposite. Many stores have found private labels a way to make extra-large profits. Since these items do not have manufacturers' names in them enabling the customer to make price comparisons between stores, stores are using these items to make an extra profit, rather than pass the price advantage along to the consumer.

THERE'S A CERTAIN IRONY in the big price tag's teaching us to be more careful shoppers, to appreciate well-made clothing that endures in both style and workmanship. And it has revived some of the old values, often considered European, in taking care of clothes — hanging them up properly, spot cleaning, hand washing, brushing and dry cleaning less frequently.

THE BEST NEWS is that designers and retailers know they have a serious problem and are talking about it. They are hurting where it hurts the most — at the cash register — and they know they must make some changes. The stores have asked designers to "stop prostituting themselves, putting their names on everything," and get back to the business of designing clothes. The designers have asked stores to get out of the promotional-price business, "to get back to the basics of being good retailers, offering lots of fresh items to customers at the time they want them."

Coca-Cola fashions the real thing

Copley News Service

Where the fizz is: Could be in Coca-Cola's new line of clothing that will debut by mid-August. "With Coca-Cola, you're looking at one of the best-known brand names in the world," says a spokeswoman for Murjani International, the company that bought the license to design, manufacture and distribute clothing under the Coca-Cola label.

"It automatically stands for quality, value and fun to most of the people in the world. There's a lifestyle attached to it, and a positive image behind it."

About 200 items decorated with a bright primary-colored Coca-Cola label on the front or on a small logo (or even an inside label) will make up the "leisure attitude and activities weekend wear line" as the spokeswoman described it. The target age for wearers is 18 to mid-30s, she added, and the retail price range will be from $30 to $40.

DEAR ABBY

Teens cuddle too close for mom's comfort

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My mother and I have a difference of opinion over the following matter: I am a 16-year-old boy and I am well respected by my relatives, teachers and friends. I do not have the problems that many teen-agers have (alcohol, drugs, sex, etc.). My girlfriend is also 16 and she is a respectable young lady.

Most of our dates consist of staying home and watching movies or TV. On occasion my girlfriend and I "snuggle up" under a blanket on the couch. Between my little brother and my mother, we are usually never alone for more than 30 minutes.

My mother feels that it is improper for us to lie on the couch together because it creates temptations. I understand what she means, but I think she's being a little old-fashioned. What could possibly happen in my house that couldn't happen in a car?

My mother and I have decided that what you say goes. — THE SNUGGLER

DEAR SNUGGLER: Snuggling under a blanket while lying on a couch is Step One, which usually leads to Step Two and so on in the case of two normal, healthy people of the opposite sex. I am sure you and your girlfriend are both "respectable," but you would be wise to minimize the temptation.

I vote with your mother. You asked: "What could happen in my house that couldn't happen in a car?" Nothing. That's what worries your mother.

DEAR ABBY: This is for Peggy, who wanted to know how she came to be called Peggy when her name is really Margaret:

The British are great ones for rhyming names, as in Georgie Porgy. Thus William became Will or Willy, or Bill or Billy. Robert is called Robby, or the rhyming Bobby or Bob. Edward became Ed or Eddie or Ted or Teddy. Richard became Rich or Rick and finally Dick. (Are you getting the hang of it?)

Margaret became Maggie, Meggy, and then the rhyming Peggy.

How do I know all this? Because when I was born, my parents named me Peggy after the Irish song, "Peg O' My Heart." Two weeks later I was baptized Margaret because according to the Catholic Church, all children have to be named for saints. There was no Saint Peggy, but there was a Saint Margaret, so everybody calls me Peggy, but I am ... LEGALLY MARGARET

DEAR MARGARET: Sounds logical to me. But many readers wrote to tell me that the Gaelic name for Margaret is "Mairghread" or "Peigi," whence came "Peggy."

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the woman juror whose husband was angry because she refused to discuss the details of the trial while it was going on: The wife said she was sworn to secrecy and the husband said, "If you really love me you would trust me enough to tell me everything."

Abby, it's not a matter of the juror "telling secrets." Except for some juvenile cases, and some cases involving criminal sexual conduct, nearly all trials are open to the public, so the husband could attend the trial himself if he wanted to.

A juror is instructed not to discuss the case — even with fellow jurors — during the course of the trial for the following reason: First, one side presents its entire case, then the other side does likewise. If a juror were to discuss the case before hearing all the evidence from both sides, he or she might reach a premature and unfair conclusion.

After the verdict has been reached, a juror may discuss the case with anyone he or she chooses. But not until. — CIRCUIT JUDGE RICHARD I. COOPER, LUDINGTON, MICH.

(Is your social life in a slump? Lonely? Get Abby's updated, revised and expanded booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (39 cents) envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Mickey Mouse clothes fashionable

Copley News Service

M-I-C-K-E-Y: "He's whimsical, fun-loving, moral, doesn't smoke, drink or take dope. He offends no one. He's nice to Minnie. He's not a chauvinist and he's just downright huggable," said Max Rabb, chairman of the board of J.G. Hook, explaining why his company decided to produce "Mickey and Co.," sportswear and sleepwear, even "underwear geared to the upscale market" under license from Walt Disney.

Look for sweaters, shirts, sweats, jackets, accessories and underwear with "the pure, antique Mickey" on the front, Rabb said. "We like the original Mickey from the 1930s."

The company also is working on adapting other Disney characters to clothing because, as Rabb said, should the demand for Mickey ever cool off, "there's always Goofy and even Snow White." And he is not even mentioning the Seven Dwarfs.

Ramie fabric similar to flax

Copley News Service

You see it on the fiber content labels of sweaters, jackets, dresses and pants — the unfamiliar word "ramie." Ramie, also known as China grass, is a plant that grows in most tropical and subtropical countries and produces a fiber similar to flax, according to the International Fabricare Institute.

Ramie traditionally has been used to make fishing nets and fire hoses, but new technology has made it more economical to use in textiles. Because it is a natural fiber with texture, designers have been including it among their fabric choices. To care for ramie, either wash or clean it as you would linen (another natural fiber made of flax) and iron at a high temperature.

Ramie is difficult to iron and should be ironed while still damp or else misted thoroughly with a water spray and ironed with a steam iron, the same process used for pure linen. For linen blends, use a lower temperature on a steam iron. Don't rub spills on linen or ramie as that could chafe the fibers; instead, blot dry and have the garment cleaned as soon as possible to avoid a permanent stain.

All Seasons Chimney Service offers good pre-fall discount

Is your fireplace ready for those cold winter months ahead? If not those "seasoned professionals" at All Seasons Chimney Service are here to help.

All Seasons Chimney Service offers the same service which originated in the middle ages. Throughout Europe, sweeps were respected members of the business community. They banded together in trade guilds, joining other Renaissance craftsmen. Chimney fires became so common that some European Countries established laws which required chimneys to be swept once a year.

And there are several reasons why you should make it a law in your home to have a maintenance call made on your chimney at least once a year (preferably after every two cords of wood are used).

A dirty chimney with a build-up of creosote and soot can make the chance of you having a house fire a reality. Creosote and soot is formed by unburned gases and a tar-like liquid that is cooked out of the burning wood. When a fire cools down, this matter condenses on the surface of the chimney. It can cause a fire that can burn hotter than 3000 degrees fahrenheit.

Moreover, the West Texas environment will take its toll on chimneys. Rain is a chimney's most destructive enemy. Although our rain is limited, an uncapped chimney for five years suffers some kind of rain damage. An uncapped chimney allows water on the smoke shelf, and when mixed with creosote, turns into a highly corrosive acid. The acid then seeps down and attacks the mortar joints in the firewall of the fireplace. The results are cracked bricks, which eventually become loose and may cause structural damage to your fireplace.

Chimney caps also keep unwanted animals out, such as birds. Birds will form nests inside the chimney and when left behind, these become flammable debris. Caps will also minimize back-drafts into your home, caused by strong West Texas winds.

Right now, All Seasons Chimney Service is offering a personalized discount designed especially for the West Texas homeowner, apartment or condo dweller. This special includes cleaning your chimney by removing ashes, deodorizing the chimney and patching minor firebox cracks for only $45.00.

With the purchase of a chimney cap, All Seasons' competent sweeps will remove those unwanted and unsafe birds' nests.

And for only $37.50, you can have a protective screen installed over the flue to keep birds out of your clean chimney.

Other services offered are gas log installations and fireplace inspections.

And of course, these professionals guarantee their work. And they maintain the traditional attire of the chimney sweeps. (See photo for details.) But don't wait until the fall season to call. Make appointments early for quicker service.

So, for a clean sweep, call your complete fireplace and chimney professionals for an appointment any day of the week between the hours of 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. at 697-7585.

Yes, the staff at All Seasons Chimney Service believes in "dressi ng for success." Take advantage of the pre-fall special, along wit h the $5 discount on all our services. Call 697-7585 for an app ointment.

Experience finest scuba diving lessons at Stovall's Diving School

Many people believe that only swimming fans of open-water areas are qualified to scuba dive.

Not so, says 31-year scuba diving veteran and owner of Stovall's Dive Shop, Richard Stovall, located at 1308 South Midkiff.

"Many of my students who normally enjoy more shallow depths of water find scuba diving fun and rewarding," said Stovall.

Stovall's Diving School is billed as the finest training school between the Gulf and Pacific Coasts. Though a reputation of that caliber is difficult to attain, Stovall's has stayed at the top of the class by maintaining strict PADI regulations and offering the most carefully-planned instructions to their students.

Stovall's offers a pure air program and is the only dive shop in the area that has its air certified by the state once every three months.

Richard Stovall is the only master diving instructor in West Texas. The school also has two master diver trainers, Bob and Sara Porter. These PADI instructors are ready to provide instruction on all levels, including advanced courses in 12 specialized areas such as underwater photography, deep diving and night diving at any time of the year.

Classes begin daily with courses offered on an individual basis designed to fit your schedule. The self-paced classroom portion is offered at the store Monday-Friday 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The audio/visual portion is designed to be fun and exciting for each participant.

Stovall's Scuba School also has its own training pool built specifically for scuba instruction.

Stovall's Dive Shop continues to provide divers with the equipment to enjoy the sport and education of the proper use of each equipment piece. Through those 31 years of experience, Richard Stovall has the knowledge needed to assure his customers of providing them with the best in scuba diving equipment by offering such brands as Dacor diving equipment, Nikonos underwater cameras and a complete line of Ikelite underwater video equipment.

Interested parties from such cities as Dallas and Houston enroll in Stovall's Scuba School because they know they will be trained by the best - and at the completion of the course will be issued for the PADI Gold Card, insuring these divers of an unrestricted lifetime card.

And as an added incentive, Stovall's arranges diving trips for groups of 1-100. Divers can actually save money by allowing Stovall's to book these vacations because this competent staff knows where the best diving spots are located in the area their customers would like to see.

As an accident-free school, Stovall maintains that he wants to remain THE leader and THE originator in offering complete sales, training and travel for customers throughout Texas by instructing safe, fun classes.

Winn and Richard Stovall prepare their underwater camera eq uipment for an approaching diving trip to Aruba, Venezuela. For more information about reservations for this trip and others , come by Stovall's Dive Shop at 1308 South Midkiff.

The Billy Gilbert family of Midland has entrusted Midland Exterior Designs with the job of installing siding, soffit, fascia, replacement windows and doors on this home in Paducah, Texas which holds great sentimental value for them. The home was owned at one time by Mr. and Mrs Hart, Mr. Gilbert's mother and step father. As a child, Mr. Hart was a chore boy for Quannah Parker. Later, Mr. Hart became foreman of the Triangle Ranch.

MED Midland Exterior Designs welcomes Johnny Barrow

Owner Steve Tillman welcomes Johnny Barrow as new part owner of Midland Exterior Designs. Johnny grew up in Midland and worked during his college years as a construction supervisor for Gilbert Bates Construction. He is well versed in all phases of construction and excited about joining Midland Exterior Design's tradition of quality work.

"I think it's good that Midland finally gets to do business with local owners. We're gonna build this company on our reputation and satisfied clients," Johnny said.

"Midland is a fast-paced town. People don't have time to paint every two years. Our product solves that problem. In fact, this is not low maintenance - it's NO maintenance," Johnny continued. "We're geared up to satisfy every need of Midland, even sescond homes on the lake or at Ruidoso. We can go anywhere to take care of the need."

Midland Exterior Designs is a company of local people that Midlanders know they can trust for quality work. That's why the Billy Gilbert family of Midland has called on Midland Exterior Designs to install siding, soffit, fascia, replacement windows and doors on a home in Paducah, Texas which holds great sentimental value for them. The home was owned at one time by Mr. and Mrs. Hart, Mr. Gilbert's mother and step father. As a child, Mr. Hart was a chore boy for Quannah Parker. Later, Mr. Hart became foreman of the Triangle Ranch.

As on all of their jobs, Midland Exterior Designs will use only quality products on this special house.

Steve said, "This product looks good on any house, whether it is a half million dollar home or a $10,000 home." Not only does it increase the resale valued, Steve said, but if you paint every two years now, you can recoup your invest in just four years.

Steved said that now is the time to invest in a maintenance free exterior. As the industry grows, he believes the price will increase. Already, he said, "More siding was sold last year than new homes in the United States." Besides, Midland Exterior Designs is now offering 30 percent off the normal selling price of siding jobs.

Whether you are considering maintenance-free siding, soffit and fascie, windows, or remodeiling, the Midalnd Exterior Design professionals are commited to giving you the information you want and the quality products you need.

Steve and remodeling expert Gary Mitchell want to thank Midlanders for their overwhelming response. Along with Johnny, they are looking forward to serving other Midlanders for many years to come. If you want to do business with a local company that you can count on for years to come, call 684-7456 or go by Midland Exterior Designs at 1111-A W. Wall 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday-Friday. Midland Exterior Designs is a participant in the customer concern program of the Better Business Bureau and a member of the Midland Home Builder's Association.

WORLD

CHTAURA, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem foes of President Amin Gemayel met today to proclaim a Syrian-backed alliance aimed at winning an equal share of power for Lebanon's Moslems as a precondition to ending a 10-year-old civil war with the Christians.

A declaration by the new coalition, named the National Alliance Front, also called for increased resistance against Israel to "liquidate the enemy's direct and indirect presence" in south Lebanon.

The reference to "indirect presence" evidently meant the South Lebanon Army, the predominantly Christian militia that serves as an Israeli surrogate army in a security belt established by Israel along the border.

Today's meeting was held at the heavily guarded Park Hotel in Chtaura in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

Some Sunni Moslems, long the dominant Moslem sect in Lebanon but who are being now eclipsed by Shiites, voiced opposition to the new coalition.

Elsewhere in Lebanon:

—Israel Army Radio reported today that a suicide bomber riding a donkey blew himself up near the office of the South Lebanon Army in the southern Lebanon town of Hasbaya. It said the bomber and the donkey were killed, and one Lebanese civilian was wounded.

—Sources in the Shiite Moslem Amal militia said three Amal fighters died in a firefight with South Lebanon Army militiamen near the market town of Nabatiyeh. One of the dead was a senior Amal commander, the sources said.

—In Tel Aviv, Israel, the military command on Monday confirmed the first Israeli combat deaths in Lebanon in 3½ months. Two soldiers and three Lebanese guerrillas were killed in a pre-dawn clash, it said.

Representatives of 15 predominantly Moslem politicial parties and militias attended the closed-door meeting along with 30 independent politicians, including a few Christians.

Foremost among the delegates were Druse chieftain Walid Jumblatt, Lebanon's transport and tourism minister; Nabih Berri, the Shiite Moslem Amal militia leader and justice minister, and the deputy Parliament speaker, Munir Abu Fadhel, a Greek Orthodox Christian.

Jumblatt drove to the meeting in a 1963 white Cadillac escorted by a jeepload of bodyguards. Berri was flanked by 40 Amal security men when he arrived.

The main aim of the coalition, which brings together the most powerful Moslem militias, is to end the Christians' traditional dominance of government and rewrite Lebanon's constitution to give Moslems an equal share of political power. Moslems make up 55 percent of Lebanon's 4 million population.

Jumblatt was quoted Monday as proposing that the presidency be rotated among Lebanon's six major religious sects — Maronite Christians, Greek Orthrodox, Greek Catholics, Sunni Moslems, Shiites and Druse.

Sources close to Berri and Jumblatt said they might press for a constitutional amendment to shorten the president's term of office from six years to three years.

Gemayel reaches the midpoint of his term Sept. 23, and the sources said the amendment could provide a way to ease Gemayel out of office while allowing him to save face.

Gemayel's Christian opponents also stepped up their campaign Monday to force him to quit.

Last week, two of Gemayel's Christian opponents — former President Suleiman Franjieh and the Lebanese Forces militia under Elie Hobeika — patched up years of differences.

Franjieh, 75, said he would increase pressure on Gemayel to leave office. Since the Franjieh-Hobeika alliance, Phalange offices have been hit by rockets and bombs, but no casualties have been reported.

Chtaura is in the Syrian-dominated Bekaa Valley. Last Friday on the outskirts of Chtaura, Israeli warplanes attacked the headquarters of the Syrian Social Nationalist Party, a pro-Syrian group that claims to have exploded a series of suicide car bombs in the Israeli security zone in southern Lebanon.

The clash between Israeli soldiers and Lebanese guerrillas occurred Monday near Majd al Salim, about 2½ miles from the Israeli border, the Israeli military command said. Two Israelis were killed and two were wounded, it said.

Kalashnikov assault rifles, rocket-propelled grenades, hand grenades and radio sets were found near the bodies of the three guerrillas, the command said.

One source who spoke on condition he not be identified said the Lebanese were intercepted as they headed toward the Israeli border. Spokesman of the Syrian Social Nationalist Party threatened to carry their attacks into Israel after Friday's Israeli air raid in Chtaura.

Israel withdrew most of its soldiers from Lebanon on June 10, ending the occupation that began with a June 1982 invasion. Israeli military sources have said that "up to 100" Israelis are assisting the South Lebanon Army, but reports from Lebanon have said several hundred Israelis remain there.

Mexico's federal workers fired under new economic reforms

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Businesses began coping Monday with a series of reforms intended to stabilize the peso and hinder fraudulent money-making schemes, while thousands of federal workers mapped plans to save their jobs.

The economic measures were announced two weeks ago by President Miguel de la Madrid to cut spending and stem the flow of money out of the country.

Other steps included a 20 percent devaluation in the government-regulated peso — the steepest in more than two years — and the elimination of 51,000 federal jobs through reductions in the size of 11 departments.

Layoffs of non-union bureaucrats began Friday.

On Monday the fixed daily devaluation of the peso was abandoned for a "controlled float" that takes into account the supply and demand for dollars, but avoid the swings of the free market through purchases by the Banco de Mexico, the central bank.

Federal economists followed European examples in reshaping the government-controlled currency exchange, in which business transactions and payments on Mexico's $94 billion foreign debt take place.

Until now the government has devalued the controlled-rate peso every day by 21 centavos — 100 centavos to the peso. The new system calls for daily meetings at which bankers will review supply and demand for dollars and decide the next day's fixing, regulated by central bank intervention if necessary.

The peso was fixed Monday at 282.30 to the dollar. Mexico City tourists, meanwhile, were getting 342 pesos per dollar in the so-called "superfree" market, which the government adopted in early July for tourism and border business transactions.

In another step intended to protect Mexico's foreign cash reserves, the Treasury Department on Sunday instituted new rules making it harder for importers to hide the dollar value of their transactions.

The government says it has fined 2,000 importers who reported inflated prices for goods purchased abroad, then pocketed the difference between what they actually owed and what the Banco de Mexico allotted them to make payments.

Importers will now need letters of credit or payment orders to exchange pesos for foreign currency, and all payments abroad will be made by the importers' banks, the department said.

In addition, importers will be limited to one paper form for each purchase order, to keep them from making multiple currency exchanges on the same transaction.

Agca queried about kidnap letter implicating U.S.

New York Times News Service

ROME — The trial of eight men accused of conspiring to assassinate Pope John Paul II reconvened Monday in a special session at which Mehmet Ali Agca was questioned about a letter he wrote that appeared intended to implicate the United States in a kidnapping.

Court officials said they had intercepted a letter Agca wrote to an Italian admirer designed to connect the American government with a kidnapping and force it to obtain Agca's release from prison.

The letter, evidently mailed by Agca late last month, seeks to implicate the CIA in the 1983 abduction of Emanuela Orlandi, the daughter of a Vatican employee. The kidnappers, claiming to be Turkish Gray Wolves, a right-wing extremist group, have said she would be freed in exchange for Agca's release.

The disclosure of the letter coincided with anonymous phone calls over the weekend by a man saying he spoke for the Gray Wolves. The man threatened to kidnap someone else connected with the Vatican in an effort to force Agca's release from prison. Monday, the police announced the arrest of a 20-year-old student, Giovanni Carenzo, who they said had made the calls to Italian news agencies and the police. The police said Carenzo had a history of mental illness.

Agca, wearing a sky blue suit, was questioned about the letter and its relation to the Orlandi kidnapping at the special session of the trial here of three Bulgarians and five Turks, including Agca, who are accused of conspiring to kill the pope.

The trial, which began May 27, adjourned last month until September for summer recess, but it reconvened to discuss plans to question several Turkish witnesses. On Tuesday, the court will confront Agca with Sedat Sirri Kadem, a Turk whom Agca has accused of being with him in St. Peter's square the day of the shooting. Kadem, who has denied any involvement, volunteered to come to Rome from Turkey to testify.

Later this month, two judges and a prosecutor will travel to the Netherlands and West Germany to question two other Turks. Officials say they hope the two may be able to supply information about the purported conspiracy.

Agca's erratic testimony, including numerous reversals and bizarre statements, such as his claims to be Jesus, have forced the court to seek outside confirmation of information implicating the three Bulgarians and the four other Turkish defendants.

Agca, under intense questioning by Chief Judge Severino Santiapichi, acknowledged that the CIA had nothing to do with the kidnapping or the plot to kill the pope. The letter, he said, was designed to "obtain help from the CIA, because in the CIA there are men who believe in God."

The technique was typical of Agca's efforts to obtain early release from prison. In 1981, a court in Rome sentenced him to life imprisonment for shooting the pope.

In June, Agca admitted that letters he wrote to officials at the U.S. Embassy in Rome involved "simple blackmail" to force the United States to obtain his release from prison through a pardon or some other means.

Such statements have played into the hands of the trial's critics, some of whom say Agca was coached by Western intelligence agencies to implicate the Soviet bloc.

Agca denied having any contacts with American officials. "As in my earlier letters to the embassy," he said, "I wanted to involve them, even though I had no contact."

Waving the letter, to a woman identified only as Enrica, Santiapichi, who presides over the panel of an assistant judge and six jurors, said it contained news clippings, including one from a weekly magazine Famiglia Cristiana. The clippings say intelligence services played a "determinig role" in Miss Orlandi's abduction.

"Everything points to people with a professional interest in creating tensions," one clipping said.

In the margin, Agca had penciled, "CIA!"

In an accompanying letter, addressed to "Dearest Friends," Agca wrote that he hoped "with my friends in the CIA" to be transferred "from Rome to some other destination."

"Ali Agca," Santiapichi said, "do you believe the Italian state, we judges, can release you from prison?"

"Not immediately," Agca replied, "but after the conclusion of the case, after the unconditional release of the girl."

Santiapichi said the letter was discovered among Agca's correspondence with people who have taken an interest in his case and write to him regularly. Agca said he expected the letter would be discovered and would find its way into the press.

Asked about the reference to friends, Agca replied: "Friends in the sense of no one in particular. I was hoping for some legal help."

"From whom?" the judge asked.

"I hoped from the Americans," Agca replied.

WORLD IN BRIEF

British home robbed of art worth $4 million

FULMER, England (AP) — Thieves robbed a home near London of an estimated $4 million in art treasures, including French Impressionist paintings, silverware and antiques, the British news agency Press Association reported.

Police said they launched a major dragnet after the Monday night robbery of the home in the Buckinghamshire village of Fulmer, 20 miles west of London.

Thames Valley police refused to give details of the robbery at the house which Press Association said was used by Arab families on vacation in Britain. The house is protected by sophisticated alarm systems.

A police spokesman who in accordance with British practice declined to be named said only that detectives hunting the thieves have set up their headquarters at nearby Gerrard's Cross police station.

Tass: Reagan defies facts

MOSCOW (AP) — The official Soviet news agency Tass today accused President Reagan of defying "logic and facts" in refusing to join in a Soviet moratorium on nuclear test explosions.

Speaking to reporters in Washington on Monday, Reagan rejected the Soviet proposal for an immediate five-month ban on nuclear tests, but said he will consider a permanent ban once the United States completes trials designed to "keep pace" with the Soviets.

Tass said Reagan had refused to join the Soviet moratorium, announced last week by the Soviet Communist Party leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who said the test ban imposed until Jan. 1, 1986, would last as long as there were no U.S. nuclear tests.

"When asked the reasons for this refusal, Reagan stated, contrary to logic and facts, that a bilateral moratorium would be allegedly beneficial only to the Soviet Union," Tass said.

It noted that Reagan held out the possibility of a future moratorium but said he "did not find a concrete answer" when asked about when such a move could take effect.

With the approach of today's 40th anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima, Soviet media have repeatedly argued that the bombing was not justified and constituted a barbaric act designed to underline American nuclear superiority over the Soviet Union.

Romanian priest in Rome

ROME (AP) — A dissident Greek Orthodox priest from communist Romania, released last year from five years in prison, has arrived in Rome with his family, officials said.

The Romanian government two weeks ago granted George Calciu Dumitreasa, 60, and his family permission to leave the country, said Dumitreasa's 20-year-old son, Andrei.

"Up until two weeks ago, everybody said we would never have this possibility," he said at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci airport after arriving Monday night with his father and mother, Adriana, 59.

The elder Dumitreasa was imprisoned in January 1978 after saying Romania did not permit freedom of religion, the son added.

The younger Dumitreasa said the trio was allowed to leave only after "strong international pressure," particularly from the Americans.

Statue reportedly moves

BALLINSPITTLE, Ireland (AP) — An estimated 30,000 people have flocked to a grotto to see a statue of the Virgin Mary that reputedly moves.

"I saw her sway from side to side," said one witness, Mary McCarthy.

Over a three-day bank holiday weekend, the state bus company sent extra coaches to the site 25 miles from the southern city of Cork. Telephone booths and public toilets were installed near the hillside where the granite statue stands.

Dr. Jurek Kirakowski, a psychologist at Cork University, said it was an optical illusion caused by the grotto's gray background.

Bishop Michael Murphy, the Roman Catholic Bishop of Cork and Ross, called for "prudence and caution," warning that it will take a long time to determine whether a supernatural occurrence is involved.

Purges not documented

New York Times News Service

President Reagan's use of a figure of 20 million people to describe the victims of Stalin's purges cannot be readily documented from available published sources. The 20 million figure is usually associated with the losses the Soviet Union suffered during World War II, not as a result of Stalin's rule of terror.

In contrast to the figure of war losses, which is used officially by the Soviet Union and is generally not contested by Western historians, no official Soviet count has ever been issued for the number of people who died as a result of Stalin's repressions.

They include people executed during purges and those who died of deprivation in the vast system of prisons and labor camps that has become known as the Gulag, after Alexander Solzhenitsyn's documentary account.

According to the Cambridge Encyclopedia of Russia and the Soviet Union, published in 1982, "careful estimates indicate that about 15 to 16 million people died of exhaustion and starvation between 1930 and 1953." In addition, according to this source, 1 million were executed. The encyclopedia estimates that at the time of Stalin's death, about 10 million people were in labor camps. Most of the camp system was then dismantled and most of the political prisoners were released.

U.S. craft help Egyptians land in 'Bright Star'

EL-HAMMAM, Egypt (AP) — In the first landing ever staged jointly by U.S. and Egyptian forces, U.S. Navy boats and Marine helicopters landed hundreds of Egyptian troops on this deserted Mediterranean beach west of Alexandria.

The landing was part of "Bright Star 85," the code name for the largest American military maneuvers ever held in the Middle East.

Gen. Robert Kingston, commanding general of the U.S. Central Command, and Gen. Ibrahim Orabi, the Egyptian army chief of staff, watched Monday from a rocky hilltop that had been overrun by U.S. Marines in the exercise's first landing on Sunday.

Egyptian commandos and infantry came ashore in landing craft from the U.S. aircraft carrier, Nimitz, and its support vessels, while Egyptian Mirage 3C and MiG-21 jet fighters as well as American F-18s and Cobra helicopter gunships went streaking through the sky or staged mock attacks on "enemy positions." Pentagon sources in Washington said about 9,000 U.S. troops were taking part in the Egyptian maneuvers, although Egyptian army spokesman Col. Hussein Manish put the figure at closer to 10,000.

Manish said about 1,000 Egyptian and 1,000 American troops participated in the landings Sunday and Monday. Other Americans are to take part in a mock parachute assault and other maneuvers before the exercise ends Saturday.

Somalia, Oman and Jordan are also participating in the maneuvers.

The U.S. Central Command, formerly known as the Rapid Deployment Force, consists of 300,000 troops from all four services. It was organized two years ago to defend Western interests in the Middle East.

The Pentagon said about 520 U.S. troops were on maneuvers in Jordan and a smaller number were in Oman. No figure was given for the number of Americans training in Somalia.

Official news media in Jordan and Oman have not reported U.S. participation in the exercises on their soil, apparently for fear of criticism from hardline Arab states opposed to U.S. military involvement in the region.

Egyptian officials had said the Marines would take part in Monday's landing. When reporters arrived at the maneuver site, however, they were told the Marines had come ashore the day before, without press coverage or prior announcement.

World marks anniversary of Hiroshima

By MARK PORUBCANSKY
Associated Press Writer

People and nations around the world today marked the 40th anniversary of the atomic bomb attack on Hiroshima with prayer, protests and accusations, united only in the view that the world should never again should see such horror.

Pope John Paul II celebrated a special Mass at a parish church next to his summer residence outside Rome, and urged young people to reflect on what happened at Hiroshima.

"The celebration of an anniversary such as this would make no sense if it is not transformed for today's generation into an opportunity for reflection on the errors of yesterday, with the aim of avoiding even worse errors for tomorrow," John Paul said.

About 200 people jammed into the tiny church, including the Japanese ambassador to the Holy See, Teruhiko Nakamura, and a small group of Japanese pilgrims.

Police in western Australia arrested six protesters and threatened to arrest about 50 others who tried to paint outlines on sidewalks symbolizing victims "vaporized" by the Hiroshima blast. Activists planned a candlelight procession through the streets of Brisbane.

In Moscow, a Soviet commentator accused the United States of a "barbaric crime" — testing the bomb unnecessarily on Japanese civilians in order to prove its superiority over the Soviet Union.

Vsevolod Ovchinnikov, a commentator for the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda, wrote: "No matter what mountains of lies the falsifiers of history pile up, no one will ever succeed in concealing the most important thing: exactly imperialist quarters of the United States were the first to use a weapon which now threatens the very existence of life on earth."

"Those who ordered that barbaric crime bear double responsibility, for they not only doomed more than 300,000 people to a senseless death, but also gave an impetus to a nuclear arms race which was immeasurably easier to begin than to stop," he wrote.

"The destruction of Hiroshima and Nagasaki was not the final military act of the Second World War, but the first operation of the cold war against the Soviet Union," he wrote.

Most Soviet bloc newspapers used the anniversary to attack U.S. research into a space-based anti-missile system dubbed Star Wars, and to praise a Soviet moratorium on nuclear tests.

In Bangkok, the English-language Bangkok Post said: "In one horrific flash, the world entered the nuclear age, or perhaps more accurately, a nuclear nightmare. It is impossible to describe adequately the horror that followed."

"The only solace is that for the past 40 years, the agony of Hiroshima and Nagasaki has not be repeated," it said.

The Stavanger Aftenblad newspaper in Norway said: "There is only one road to go in order to liberate the human race from the danger of nuclear holocaust: balanced disarmament followed by lasting political reduction of tension."

China's Communist Party newspaper People's Daily reported on a protest in Washington on Aug. 4 in which participants carried a 13½-mile "peace ribbon," and carried a dispatch from a correspondent in Nagasaki, the second Japanese city hit by an atomic bomb.

"What is deeply moving about the people is that they cannot forget the disaster of Hiroshima and Nagasaki 40 years ago," the report said. "They see the two nuclear powers in an arms race, especially the nuclear arms race, and naturally they are anxious."

The Indian Parliament observed a minute of silence, and House Speaker Balram Jakhar called for complete disarmament.

In Hiroshima, the city where as many as 140,000 people died from the bomb blast, about 50,000 people listened to the toll of a single bell, watched doves flutter into the sky, and observed a moment of silence.

A second bomb was dropped on Nagasaki on Aug. 9, 1945, killing up to 70,000 people. Japan surrender, ending World War II, on Aug. 15, 1945.

Studies indicate higher cancer risks from radiation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cancer risks from exposure to certain kinds of radiation are probably higher than generally thought, say scientists relying on new studies of the effects of the atomic blast at Hiroshima 40 years ago.

Their studies, using new technology and old bomb parts, suggest greater risks associated with gamma rays in particular, Seymour Jablon, a staff member of the National Academy of Sciences' National Research Council, said Monday.

Gamma rays, similar to X-rays, are emitted in connection with nuclear fission and are considered "very penetrating" by the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission. Allowable exposure is closely regulated at power plants and other places atomic reactions take place.

The Hiroshima studies, a joint effort by U.S. and Japanese scientists, have found indications that the 1945 blast emitted much less neutron radiation than previously estimated. And that finding leaves gamma radiation as the likely culprit for more of the unusually high cancer rate among the thousands of bomb survivors.

Eventually, risk estimates for gamma rays "are going to go up; I would guess about double," Jablon said in a telephone interview. But he noted that other scientists might have other figures, and he added, "we're just guessing" when trying to be very specific.

Formal results of the new research will be presented next March. Then, after further examination by federal and academic experts, regulatory agencies will decide possible changes in current U.S. safety standards for exposure.

Present-day worries about cancer risks are a big part of the push for continuing studies of a 40-year-old bomb blast and its survivors — research that has included assembly of a replica of the historic weapon by scientists at Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico.

The Hiroshima studies...have found indications that the 1945 blast emitted much less neutron radiation than previously estimated. And that finding leaves gamma radiation as the likely culprit for more of the unusually high cancer rate among the thousands of bomb survivors.

The problem has been a lack of good measurements of the radiation survivors actually were exposed to, a problem partly due to the fact that the Hiroshima bomb was the only one of its design ever exploded.

One way Los Alamos researchers are battling that problem is to measure the passage of neutrons from the bomb replica, which includes a nuclear core that is brought to the point of beginning fission. The reaction is stopped before explosion but not before emission of radiation designed to be similar to the Hiroshima bomb.

The actual explosion won't be duplicated. but the researchers did find a 40-year-old, three-ton bomb casing designed for a later uranium bomb, and they've duplicated the core inside that antique casing to see what can pass through it.
