Passage of King commemoration expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate bristling with tension is ready to bestow one of the nation's supreme honors on the late Martin Luther King Jr. — a national holiday to be celebrated the third Monday each January starting in 1986.

Supporters predicted the historic legislation would pass overwhelmingly today and one of the chief opponents, Sen. John East, R-N.C., said, "I'd be surprised if there are 15 votes against this bill."

King's widow, Coretta, was expected to be watching from the Senate gallery as the House-passed bill clears its last hurdle and heads toward the White House, where President Reagan is committed to signing it.

She had struggled toward the day ever since April 4, 1968, when an assassin's bullet ended the civil rights leader's life on the balcony of a motel in Memphis, Tenn.

For 15 years, supporters watched similar bills die annually in Congress and even in the final hours before passage, they endured bitter charges by Sen. Jesse Helms that the civil

One Democratic senator, Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, demonstrated the electric atmosphere of Tuesday's debate when he picked up a thick binder about King distributed by Helms and slammed it to the floor.

Recalling that King once told him, "The Congress is sick," Moynihan told his colleagues, "It never has been as sick as it has been today if we pay attention to this filth."

But Moynihan's anger only was a sequel to an acrimonious and intensely personal exchange between Helms, R-N.C., and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

It began with an angry Helms noting that Kennedy criticized his Oct. 3 accusation that King preached a Marxist philosophy.

Helms said former President John F. Kennedy and the late Robert Kennedy as attorney general warned King he was associating with communists.

Glaring at Kennedy, whose face turned increasingly red as he sat in his back row seat, Helms said, "Sen. Kennedy's argument is with his dead brother who was president and his dead brother who was attorney general, and not with the senator from North Carolina."

Before Helms even finished, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker R-Tenn. and Sen. Charles McC Mathias, R-Md., went over to Kennedy and appeared to offer consoling remarks.

"We were trying to diffuse the situation," Mathias told reporters later.

But the moment Helms took off his lapel microphone, Kennedy got up to answer. After an angry exchange with Helms over Senate procedure, Kennedy responded to the North Carolian's remarks about his brother Robert.

Salvadoran town besieged by leftist rebels

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Salvadoran leftist guerrillas kept the strategic town of Suchitoto under siege today, while a Marxist rebel group in Guatemala said it is holding the kidnapped sister of the country's military leader.

The assault on Suchitoto was the latest of many staged by the rebels during El Salvador's four-year-old civil war because the town is near two hydroelectric plants which supply half the nation's electricity.

The guerrillas have blocked all roads to Suchitoto since Monday, apparently preparing to seize the town on Lake Suchitlan, 26 miles north of San Salvador, the capital.

Suchitoto's population of 20,000 has shrunk to 7,500 because of guerrilla activity.

In Guatemala, a leftist rebel faction Tuesday claimed responsibility for the abduction of the sister of Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores last month. The group earlier said it kidnapped the sister of Mejia Victores' predecessor as military ruler, Gen. Efrain Rios Montt.

The Revolutionary Armed Forces, in a statement in the newspaper Diario Impacto, gave its conditions for freeing the two sisters. It demanded the release of three women considered political prisoners and the publication of an anti-government manifesto.

The sister of the current leader — Maria Celeste Aida Mejia de Velasco, 54 — was seized Sept. 10 outside the hospital where she worked as a nurse's aide.

Maria Rios de Rivas, 37, was kidnapped in June 29 a few blocks from the Guatemala City grammar school where she taught. She was then five months pregnant.

Mejia Victores has said he will not negotiate with the guerrillas.

The rebels demanded the release of Yolanda Urizar Aguilar, a lawyer who "disappeared" in March upon returning from three years of self-imposed exile in Mexico; and Lucrecia Orella Stormont and Angela Ayala, both detained in June.

Meanwhile, both Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista leaders and a Salvadoran rebel spokesman, in separate statements, expressed fears the Reagan administration may be planning to send U.S. troops to their respective homelands.

Sandinista junta coordinator Daniel Ortega reiterated accusations that Honduran troops, backed by American soldiers, were planning to invade Nicaragua and that the CIA was helping rebel-exile groups based in Honduras and Costa Rica fight to overthrow the Sandinistas. He said 54 rebels were killed this week in fighting in northern Nicaragua.

Nicaragua has threatened to invade Honduras and Costa Rica if the rebels do not quit their attacks.

On Tuesday, Salvadoran rebel leader Ruben Zamora told a meeting of American magazine publishers in Hamilton, Bermuda, that any solution to the Salvadoran conflict must come from "Salvadorans alone."

But Zamora said of the Reagan administration, "I think the risk that they are going to send in the Marines is very, very great."

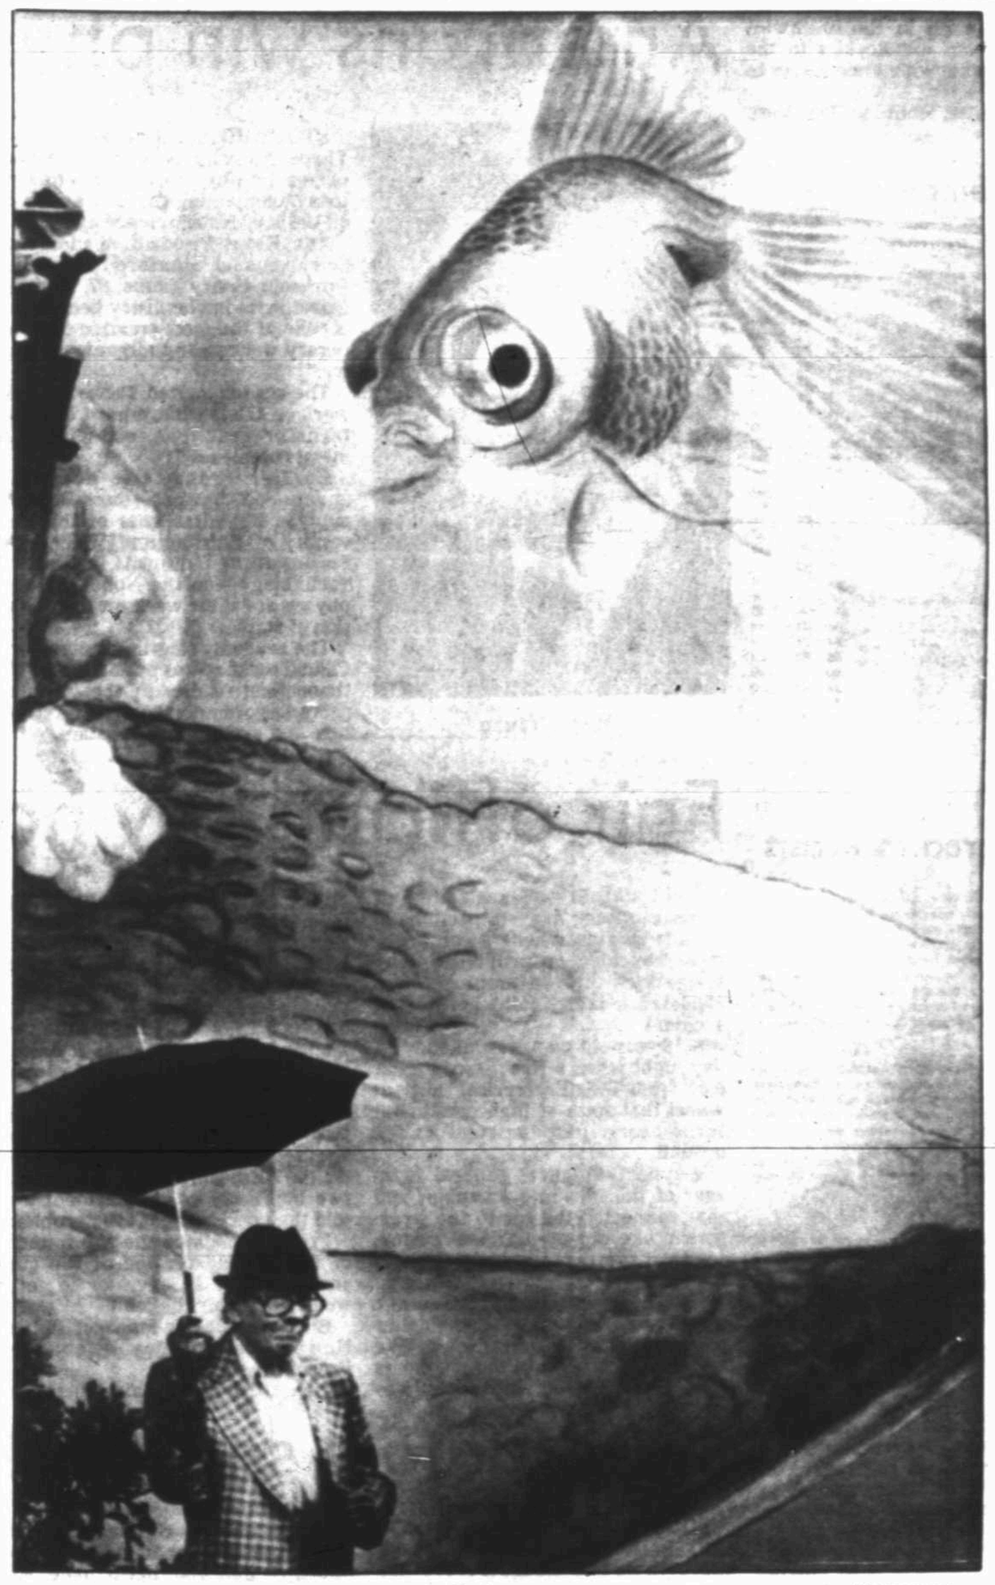

An estimated 47,000 people have been killed in the war. The El Salvador Human Rights Commission claims 39,000 of the victims were civilians slain by paramilitary groups or rightist death-squads.

In San Salvador, a source who attended meetings last week of the U.S. fact-finding commission on Central America said commission members were "aghast" at the Salvadoran government's lack of control over its security forces and court system, The New York Times reported today.

The source was quoted as saying that Roberto d'Aubuisson, the right-wing president of the Constituent Assembly, told the commission that government soldiers serve in the death squads. D'Aubuisson has denied making such a statement.

Four Latin American nations announced Tuedsay their foreign ministers would meet to try to avert war between Nicaragua and its neighbors, who accuse it of threatening regional security with close military ties to Cuba and the Soviet Union and by smuggling weapons to the Salvadoran guerrillas.

Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama announced their foreign ministers will meet Friday and Saturday in Panama City.

Somthing looks a little fishy as Simon Garza, 89, strolls through the rain in San Antonio. Texas' weather didn't dampen his morale or a neighborhood mural.

More rain expected

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The glorious gush of rain may have brought the monthly rainfall to above average for October, but the yearly rainfall still is down 8 inches from the average.

Following heavy downpours of rain Tuesday night, intermittent light showers were expected this morning, according to Roger Mallory, weather forecaster at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

However, the dry land of the parched Permian Basin won't soak up much of the rain, Mallory said.

"The heavy rain will continue to run off," Mallory said this morning, "but we're expecting only intermittent, relatively light thundershowers this morning. So maybe we'll get more of a soaking rain."

With an 80 percent chance of more rain and thunderstorms tonight, Mallory said heavy downpours again are expected this afternoon and evening.

"But the heavier showers, no matter when you get them, are going to run off," he said.

Only .34 of an inch of rain was recorded at the NWS as of 7 a.m. today. Other sections of the city received more with residents in far west Midland reporting 2.5 inches of rain recorded overnight.

Some areas under flood warnings

By The Associated Press

A variety of weather conditions on a collision course over Texas today put 47 North Texas counties under a flash flood watch and was expected to produce up to 5 inches of rain in some areas of West Texas.

The National Weather Service said low-level moisture from the Gulf of Mexico continued to pump into the state, while an upper-level trough of low pressure moved eastward from the southwestern U.S., overlapping high-level moisture on the eastern side of the system.

Moisture from Hurricane Tico, off the west coast of Mexico also was expected to move into the state today.

Rain was also predicted for South Central Texas into the hill country and Edwards Plateau region, where some heavy rains — up to 3 inches — were possible today and Thursday, the weather service said.

The flash flood watch covered North Central Texas, generally west of a Denison-Corsicana-Groesbeck line, and the weather service said additional warnings could be issued later for parts of West and South Texas.

Karate experts 'chop' community's problem

Young black belts restore order in Florida townhouse complex

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

MARGATE, Fla. — The menacing teen-age crowd that used to hang out at a townhouse complex has cleaned up its act and older people no longer feel frightened, after a handful of low-key karate experts replaced regular security guards.

Eighteen months ago, local police were often called to the Townhomes of Oriole, a 300-plus family community, and guards from a security agency lasted only three hours because "the kids ran them off."

The area around the recreation area was littered with refuse and vandalism ran high, residents say.

They credit the change to Scott Manganiello, a 26-year-old black belt karate expert.

"He's a very impressive young man," says Steven Tiger, president of the Townhomes of Oriole Homeowners Association. "He's the best thing to ever happen here."

It was Tiger who called Manganiello in February 1982 at his U.S.K. Karate Studio in nearby Pompano Beach with the community problem: restore discipline so adults wouldn't be frightened. Tiger admits the dozens of teen-agers who "hung out" at the recreation hall area were not delinquents.

But, "There was a good deal of vandalism," Tiger recalls. "People were afraid. There were so many of the teen-agers, older people felt intimidated."

Manganiello recalls his immediate reaction: "I knew I could handle it." He was given a 30-day trial.

Choosing two other black belts from his karate school, the 6-foot Manganiello went to the 38-building complex where 30 to 40 youngsters were waiting.

"I told them we wanted to be friends with them, but I told them what had to stop. We're not much older than they are so we relate. No one challenged us," he says.

Manganiello admits, at the beginning, "We took a lot of beer and pot from them and warned them the next time we'd have the police take them away."

There never has been a serious confrontation with young people since Manganiello took over security. There have been isolated incidents, of course.

When one husky youngster refused to throw away a marijuana cigarette, a karate guard kicked it from the boy's mouth without touching him, Manganiello recalls.

He formed Black Belt Security Specialists, Inc. and he usually has three hand-picked experts who individually patrol the housing project from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m. His karate guards are paid well above what regular security officers earn.

Manganiello and his guards have no police powers, but this apparently works in their favor.

"Policemen can't touch the kids, but these karate men don't have to take a lot of abuse," explains Tiger.

"I or any of my karate experts can take any of the teen-agers down without hurting them and then hold them. We're trained for that. The last thing I would want to do would be to hurt one of them. My idea is to deal with the public and personality is the key," says Manganiello.

He refuses to hire karate guards who act tough or cocky. "I want people the kids will respect."

His philosophy appears to be working.

"These people don't throw their weight around," explains 20-year-old John Gormley, a resident here for five years. "The cops hassled us. These guys are cool, but maybe we've grown up a little, too."

Suzanne Levine is 18 and has lived here three years.

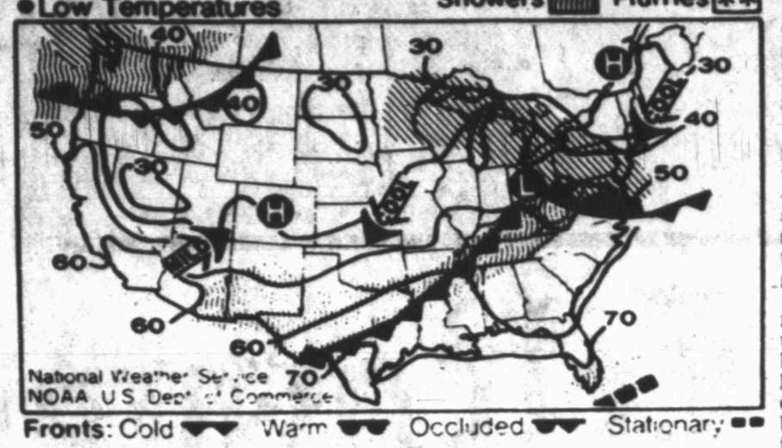

"The police were just trying to bust chops," she says. "These are easier to talk to. Besides, they're better looking."

Showers and thunderstorms are forecast for much of the country through Thursday, according to the National Weather Service. Areas likely to be affected include the Northwest; the Southeast, from central Texas to Arizona; the Ohio River valley to the Virginias; and from the Great Lakes, west to Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Thunderstorm activity widespread

By The Associated Press

Showers and thunderstorms stretched from Texas to the Dakotas across the nation's central regions early today while other storms dotted the Pacific Northwest.

The National Weather Service said rain was most likely from southwest Texas through the mid-Mississippi Valley to Minnesota.

Tuesday's storm system stretched from southeastern New Mexico and southwest Texas to Oklahoma and over much of Kansas, and from Missouri to Minnesota, western Wisconsin and across the northern half of the Great Plains. A few showers also dampened areas from West Virginia to southern New England.

The heaviest rain during the six hours before 2 a.m. EDT was 1.2 inches ib Lubbock, Texas.

Hurricane Tico, south of Baja, Calif., Tuesday evening packed 130 mph winds and was drifting northeast toward the west central coast of Mexico. The weather service said Tico was responsible for generating the moist air over the Southern Plains.

Snow mixed with rain glazed eastern Wyoming and thunderstorms produced sleet in western Nebraska Tuesday evening.

Temperatures today were expected to reach the 70s in the southwest deserts, the 60s from Texas to Florida, the 50s from the Rockies to the mid-Mississippi and Ohio valleys and into New England, with some places in the 30s across the northern tier of states.

Temperatures at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 27 at Butte, Mont., to 79 at Vero Beach Fla.

FCC delays hike in phone bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission is giving consumers an unexpected, three-month reprieve from new telephone fees that had been scheduled to take effect Jan. 1.

The reprieve from paying a $2-a-month "access charge," however, was accompanied by some bad news — the FCC is also delaying an average 10.5 percent reduction in interstate long-distance rates proposed by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The commission voted unanimously Tuesday to delay from Jan. 1 until April 3 the implementation of both the new access fees and the long-distance rate cuts. Agency officials said the delay was necessary because they needed more time to investigate the long-distance rate reductions and other changes that were scheduled to accompany the payment of the $2 monthly fee by consumers.

Jack D. Smith, chief of the FCC's common carrier bureau, said, for example, the agency might want to order AT&T to make an even larger long-distance rate reduction.

Smith also cited the need to investigate a proposed AT&T rate increase for private business lines; the imposition of a 75-cent charge for long-distance information calls, and a series of other fees to be charged long-distance telephone companies for access to local switches.

Smith and Jerald N. Fritz, the chief of the FCC's tariff division, both stressed the delay would not affect the scheduled Jan. 1 breakup of AT&T. The company is required by an antitrust settlement to give up its 22 Bell System operating companies and that process is being overseen by a federal judge.

Both also stressed the FCC is not considering any changes to the order it adopted earlier this summer establishing the principle that consumers should begin paying the new monthly fees.

"Our access rules aren't being changed," Fritz said. "The question is the way the telephone industry proposed to apply our rules ..."

The imposition of the new access fees and the proposed reduction in long-distance rates are bound together because the FCC is trying to eliminate a subsidy system that has existed for decades. Under that system, AT&T's long-distance rates have been kept artificially high to produce money to hold down local telephone rates; currently, an estimated $10.7 billion.

The FCC maintains the subsidy should be gradually removed from long-distance rates and shifted to all local telephone customers in the form of monthly access fees. In effect, all customers would be expected to help make the payments instead of just those who place long-distance calls.

The fees would start at $2 a month for residential customers and a maximum $6 a month for business customers, but would gradually rise over the next six years to a projected $6-to-$8 a month. The commission maintains the change is needed to spur competition and to lower long-distance rates as a means of discouraging large corporations from building private phone systems.

According to Smith and Fritz, the new rate schedules that AT&T and the nation's 1,500 local phone companies filed on Oct. 3 to implement the new system raised unexpected problems. The commission is not sure it can accept all the long-distance rate changes proposed by AT&T, nor is it satisfied that local telephone companies have properly set the fees they intend to charge AT&T's competitors for local connections.

"This extension will provide us adequate time for a review by the commission as well as by the public," Fritz said.

"I'm astounded that the commission is now taking this action ...," countered AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner. "These tariffs were filed to conform with the commission's own order, so it's unbelieveable at this stage of the game that they would do this."

PUC to consider stalling Bell rate request hearing

AUSTIN (AP) — A motion pending before the Public Utility Commission asks hearing examiners to postpone hearings on Southwestern Bell's record rate hike request for at least a month.

The hearings are scheduled to begin Monday.

But Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle filed a motion Tuesday saying, in effect, he was simply not ready yet.

"The office of public utility counsel only has one lawyer on staff," Boyle's motion complained. "There is no way for the public counsel to review the PUC testimony, Bell's testimony — which has been supplemented on numerous occasions — and the testimony of the intervenors which was filed last week."

Bell's request would double the cost of basic home telephone service, and Boyle argued that such a request, if granted, could put telephone service out of the reach of as many as 300,000 Texans.

"The stakes are too high to rush into this rate case," Boyle argued in his four-page motion. "In the interest of justice and fair play, the office of public utility counsel requests that the rate case be postponed...."

The hearings set to begin Monday are the first to be considered since a U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C. ordered the parent American Telephone and Telegraph to split up into regional companies.

Bell said it was asking for the record rate increase because after Jan. 1 it must "stand alone," without benefit of its share of long distance revenues from AT&T.

Boyle complained that the hearing set to begin Monday conflicted with a separate hearing that has been under way at the commission for the past five weeks involving access charges Southwestern Bell says it needs from other long distance companies to help offset the anticipated revenue loss after divestiture from AT&T.

Boyle said Southwestern Bell and several independent companies reached a settlement among themselves in that case on Monday, and "there is no way the public counsel can begin to understand the impact of this agreement should the Bell rate case being on Monday, Oct. 24."

He predicted the access charge hearing would end by Nov. 7, and asked that the rate case hearing be postponed until two weeks after that, to give parties time to file briefs.

Americans win physics, chemistry prizes

Henry Taube

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Three Americans won the Nobel prizes in physics and chemistry today, completing the U.S. sweep of all the 1983 Nobel science awards.

The Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences said Stanford University Professor Henry Taube, 67, won the Nobel Prize in chemistry because he is "one of the most creative contemporary workers in inorganic chemistry."

The academy cited Taube for "his work on the mechanisms of electron transfer reactions, especially in metal complexes."

Earlier today, the academy announced that professors Subrahmanyan Chandrasekhar of the University of Chicago and William A. Fowler of the California Institute of Technology won the Nobel Prize in physics for their work on the evolution of stars.

The academy said the Indian-born Chandrasekhar was honored for "his theoretical studies of the physical processes of importance to the structure and evolution of the stars."

It said Fowler won because of "his theoretical and experimental studies of the nuclear reactions of importance in the formation of the chemical elements in the universe."

Chandrasekhar, who won the award on his 73rd birthday, has been one of the world's top authorities on stellar evolution for more than four decades.

The academy said his best-known work was in the 1930s, when he was in his 20s. It dealt with the structures of so-called white dwarfs, the stellar body left after the collapse of a star.

"My work is usually appreciated only after some length of time," Chandrasekhar said in a statement issued by the University of Chicago. University spokesman Larry Arbeiter said the laureate is "extremely shy" and reluctant to give interviews.

Fowler, 72, has studied the nuclear reactions that occur on stars during their evolution.

"Fowler has done extensive work on the experimental study of nuclear reactions of astrophysical interest, as well as carried out theoretical calculations," the academy said.

It said he and several colleagues developed during the 1950s "a complete theory of the formation of the chemical elements in our universe."

In Pasadena, Caltech spokesman Dennis Meredith said Fowler would hold a news conference later. Meredith said "Caltech has long valued Dr. Fowler and his research, and we are especially delighted that he should be so honored."

The award to Americans continued dominance by U.S. researchers in the three science prizes.

Chandrasekhar, Fowler and Taube are the third, fourth and fifth Americans to win science prizes this year, completing the U.S. sweep in the science field. Barbara McClintock of the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory in New York was chosen for the prize in medicine last week. French-born American Gerard Debreu won the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics on Monday.

Fair officials say no problems reported

DALLAS (AP) — Texas State Fair officials, saying daily inspections of a midway ride where a car broke loose revealed no problems, deny allegations that an employee had reported a faulty joint before the accident.

A 19-year-old man was killed Monday night when a five-passenger car tore from the "Enterprise," a giant wheel that spins at high speed as it turns nearly perpendicular to the ground.

Wayne Gallagher, general manager of the fair, said a support rod that connected the car to the structure broke out of its metal casing, sending the car plummeting onto the midway.

"It (the rod) actually broke out metal when it came off," Gallagher told the Dallas Morning News. "We won't know why until the engineers study it. We don't know if it was undue stress, pressure put on the metal or if we had fatigued metal."

Investigators from the fair's insurance carrier, Continental National American of Kansas City, Mo., and a private engineering firm hired to inspect all fair rides before the Oct. 7 opening, Kratzert, Jones & Associates of Milldale, Conn., began investigations Tuesday, officials said.

Glenn Freeman, who had worked two days as a ticket-taker for another attraction, said he saw a car on the "Enterprise" shaking about two hours before the accident and told the operator about the problem.

Freeman claimed the two found a damaged weld on one of the cars and asked for an operator to get a welder to repair the joint.

But assistant fair manager Robert Halford on Tuesday discounted Freeman's story.

"He did not, as claimed, report any problems with the "Enterprise" to fair officials," Halford said. "In addition, ride operators of the "Enterprise" disclaim any knowledge of the man or his claim of having personally inspected the ride prior to Monday night's accident."

Police said they had not been able to verify Freeman's story. Police spokesman Bob Shaw said authorities had not interviewed Freeman at the scene, and had been thus far unsuccessful at contacting him and verifying his story.

Inspection documents filed with the State Board of Insurance before the fair opened Oct. 7 said the ride was structurally sound, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

But State Fair officials declined to release records of required daily inspections, although one fair official said "no problems" had been found.

"We have the fair running until Sunday, and we don't want to release anything at this point," said Russell B. Smith, an attorney for the fair.

The Kratzert, Jones and Associates firm inspected all the rides before the fair opened, according to the State Insurance Board records.

"They all passed 100 percent," Smith told the News. "And none of their reports were qualified."

But State Sen. Bill Ceverha, R-Richardson, said State Fair officials told him Tuesday that "it appears a structural defect," rather than negligence or improper maintenance, caused the accident. Ceverha sponsored a state law passed by the Legislature earlier this year that requires ride owners to carry at least $1 million in liability insurance.

While the monthly rainfall total rose to 1.53, according to the NWS, the yearly total swam up to only 4.97 inches.

Average rainfall for this month is 1.41 inches but the amount of rain recorded for the year by October averages 12.65 inches.

Area towns reported varying amounts of rain with Lamesa receiving 1.75 inches and Andrews receiving 1.25. Stanton, Crane and Garden City reported good rains but only light mist was reported in Big Lake. Rankin received light rain, however, it was only "enough to wet the ground," according to a sheriff's department spokesman.

"The heaviest rainfall we have right now on the radar is moving toward Big Spring, Snyder — that area," Mallory said. "We don't have any radar west of here so the further out we get on the radar, the harder it is to tell what's coming in. We're kind of guessing when we get out towards the Rio Grande."

The area forecast calls for continued cloudy skies and a 50 percent chance of rain and thunderstorms Thursday.

Temperatures will dip into the middle 50s tonight and are expected to climb back into the lower 70s Thursday.

Winds will come from the northeast at 5-10 mph through Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 84 missed the record high of 90, set in 1936. The overnight low of 67 was 32 degrees warmer than 1966's frosty low of 32 degrees.

Investigators say gas line believed 'unused'

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Utility crews on the scene more than two hours before gas exploded at a grocery couldn't figure out how to turn off the vapor and apparently didn't realize the store was in danger, officials said.

Seventeen people were hurt, seven seriously, when natural gas leaking from a ruptured pipe exploded and demolished the Foodland supermarket. The Columbia Gas of West Virginia pipe had been ruptured by workers from the Holloway Construction Co., officials said.

A federal investigator said Tuesday that Columbia Gas had provided inaccurate maps that indicated the pipeline had not been used for years. The maps indicated the line had not been used "for several years" when in reality it contained 45 pounds per square inch of natural gas, considered medium pressure, said Patricia Goldman, vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

"When we excavated the three-inch line, it was hot — full of gas," she said.

Ms. Goldman also said Columbia crews were on the scene 2½ hours before the explosion Monday but apparently were unable to find the proper valve to turn off the gas. Utility workers also did not attempt to evacuate the store, which was filling with gas, she said.

"You have a number of things that need to be questioned," Ms. Goldman said. "Should the construction company just have relied on maps? Was there another location where the gas company could have cut off the gas? Should people in the store have been evacuated?"

Gene Willaman, Columbia's district manager, said the utility is investigating why maps given to the construction crew were incorrect.

Willaman also acknowledged that utility crews were aware of the gas leak well before the explosion, but he said they apparently did not realize the gravity of the situation.

Willaman said he was unable to determine whether Columbia crews took measurements of gas levels in the store prior to the blast.

Columbia Gas headquarters referred questions to public relations officer Don Rooks, who said company policy would be to evacuate any area threatened by a serious gas leak. He declined, however, to comment specifically on the South Charleston explosion.

Helms: Fighting King holiday gets him little but animosity

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd Jr., who once described Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. as a "self-seeking rabble-rouser," supports creation of a federal holiday in honor of the late civil rights leader.

So does Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, formerly a towering symbol of Southern opposition to civil rights legislation, who said in 1965 that King was a "notorious troublemaker and intermeddler."

Byrd of West Virginia, Thurmond and other Southern senators who once found mention of King's name anathema have come full circle, and now support of a holiday honoring the Nobel Prize winner.

But not North Carolina's Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, who was leading a small knot of hardline New Right colleagues in a tenacious losing fight against a national annual celebration of King's birthday.

On his own 62nd birthday Tuesday, Helms not only declared that King was influenced, if not controlled, by advisers known to be communists, he suggested that the late President John F. Kennedy and the late Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, thought so, too.

In a bitter reply, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said, "I am appalled by the attempts of some to misappropriate the name of my brother Robert Kennedy and misuse it as part of this smear campaign."

And Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., was moved at one point Tuesday call material about King distributed by Helms "filth" and throw it to the floor.

To be sure, Helms has waged other, often lonely losing battles which have turned the mildest-mannered of senators against him for his tactics, most recently a filibuster last winter against a nickel-a-gallon tax on gasoline supported by both parties and President Reagan.

Other fights have included opposition to legalized abortion, extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act and busing to desegregate public schools.

But this time, seasoned political observers of both parties express some bafflement about the wily Helms' reasons for opposing legislation approved 338 to 90 in the House and backed by nearly all Democratic and Republican leaders in the Senate.

"We frankly don't have any idea why he is doing this," said one senior aide to the Senate Republican leadership. "It would seem to be self-defeating."

There is, of course, Helms' pending tough re-election fight next year against popular Democratic North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt. The race is likely to one of the most expensive in U.S. political history.

"This is a sure-fire direct mail fund-raiser," said one Senate Republican official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

By leading a highly-visible battle with echoes of his early political campaigns in North Carolina, Helms probably guarantees a strong turnout next November among his hard core conservative constituents in the state.

One GOP moderate, Charles McC Mathias Jr. of Maryland, described Helms' battle as "his personal enterprise."

Rowlett Elementary School in Garland Independent School District, with an enrollment of 946 students, has 15 sets of twins.

Elementary school has 15 sets of twins

ROWLETT (AP) — Rowlett Elementary School principal Bill Kirk has gotten used to seeing double.

His school, with an enrollment of 946 students, has 15 sets of twins — eight of them identical twins — from kindergarten through fifth grade.

The unusually high number of twins has set a record for the elementary school as well as the Garland Independent School District, school officials said.

Statistics indicate that nine or 10 sets of twins could be expected at the school based on its enrollment, said Dr. Jack Pritchard, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School.

And while adults find it unusual, 10-year-old Katherine Smith finds the matching sets "wonderful."

"It's wonderful because twins are an unusual thing," said Katherine, who attends fifth grade along with her identical twin, Karen.

And, she said, "when you get in trouble, you can play a joke on people (by switching places)."

Although Kirk said he hasn't caught any of the children trading places in classes, they do play practical jokes in the hallway by identifying themselves as their siblings.

The only problem caused by twins, he said, is that some parents want them to attend the same class. But he defended the school's policy of splitting up the twins, placing them with different teachers in different classrooms.

Hightower: No excuse not to give corn to cattle

AUSTIN (AP) — Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says the U.S. Department of Agriculture has run out of excuses for not providing feed to starving cattle in 27 drought stricken West Texas counties.

Hightower told a news conference Tuesday that the rapidly deteriorating corn in one Panhandle warehouse was enough to feed all the hungry cattle, sheep and goats in the West Texas area all this winter, if the USDA would just release it.

"Anyone with an IQ higher than room temperature knows that the sensible thing to do is to give the deteriorating corn to the ranchers," Hightower said.

Hightower said he ordered a Texas Department of Agriculture inspection of corn stored in PLB Grain Storage Corp. in Plainview, after the USDA said the corn was of good quality and too valuable to release as livestock food. He said Panhandle farmers said the grain was low quality.

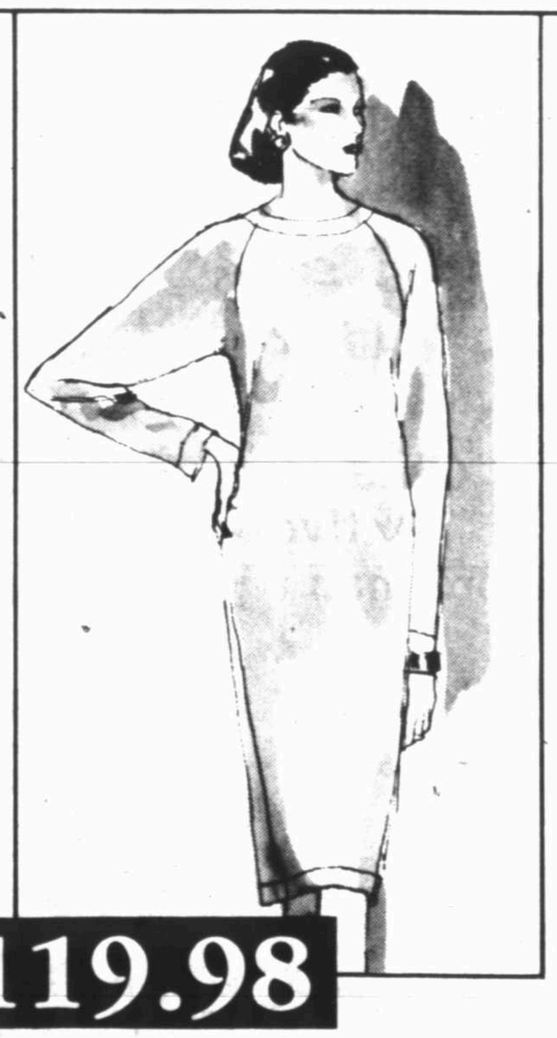

Tests by a Lubbock laboratory showed that "77 percent of the grain was seriously deteriorated and more than 53 percent is now below the quality allowable for human consumption," Hightower said.

"U.S. taxpayers are paying $55,000 a month to this one warehouse to hold on to corn that is turning to worthless powder at the same time that our ranchers are having to liquidate their herds because they can't afford corn to feed their livestock this winter.

He said that based on the analysis of the independent, federally certified laboratory in Lubbock "there really can be no more argument about whether the Reagan administration should turn loose of the corn," he said. "They're fresh out of excuses now.

"If the Reagan administration would release only the 17 million bushels of bad corn that we found in that one elevator, taxpayers would save $40,000 a month and ranchers would get enough volume to feed every remaining cow, sheep and goat in the 27-county drought area for the entire winter," Hightower said.

Wrecker driver saves children

HOUSTON (AP) — A wrecker driver who feared a car fleeing police would run down a group of school children wheeled his truck in front of the crowd, causing a wreck which halted a 14-year-old in a stolen car, police said.

Police said the youth, whom they had chased about two miles, pulled into the parking lot of a Houston elementary school Tuesday afternoon.

"A bunch of little kids came out in the grass," the unidentified truck driver said. "They all started running when they seen the car coming but I pulled up. He hit the side of my truck."

Patient with new heart 'doing fine'

HOUSTON (AP) — A 46-year-old man who suffered two heart attacks which caused severe cardiac muscle damage was able to speak and drink three days after a new organ began beating in his chest, a hospital official says.

Gordon Kay Tomplait, who received a new heart Saturday, was "doing fine" Tuesday, said Linda Chandler, coordinator of the transplant unit at St. Luke's Hospital.

Tomplait received the heart of a donor from San Antonio on Saturday in a two-hour operation by Dr. Denton Cooley's transplant team.

Coalition to kick off campaign

DALLAS (AP) — A coalition of students, educators, professional football players and liquor manufacturers will kick off an anti-drunk driving campaign during Sunday's Dallas Cowboys-Los Angeles Raiders game.

The campaign will feature the "Contract for Life" developed by Students Against Driving Drunk, a Massachusetts-based group. The contract calls for parents and teen-agers to agree that either may call home for help any time they or their driver has had too much to drink to drive safely.

The contract is offered in a series of television, radio and magazine ads, featuring Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Drew Pearson, that were developed by the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States, Inc.

"Communities where the contract has been widely used have seen a noticeable reduction in teen-age highway deaths," said SADD founder Robert Anascas.

Horse trader faces extradition

PHOENIX (AP) — A San Antonio equipment dealer working as a horse-trader was held here on a federal warrant for Texas authorities in the wake of losses by the Texas Commerce Bank totalling $500,000, authorities said.

Billie Lee Evans, also known Jack York Evans, was arrested without incident at his home here Tuesday and charged with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for theft of services above $10,000, FBI spokesman Art Schultz said. He was ordered held at the Maricopa County jail in lieu of $30,000 bond, pending extradition, according to Schultz.

The bank reported losing some $500,000 in unsecured loans to Evans when Evans was doing business as Paydirt Equipment in San Antonio, Schultz said.

Alicia cleanup almost complete

HOUSTON (AP) — All but a handful of the debris dumped on Houston by Hurricane Alicia two months ago has been cleared away, a federal official says.

Lonnie Chant, regional public assistance officer with the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said the cleanup was completed four months quicker than had been originally predicted.

Chant said the rubble amounted to between 2.5 million and 4 million cubic yards, but that an estimated 100,000 cubic yards of debris still remain in residents' back yards and along city rights of way.

White names head of council

AUSTIN (AP) — Charles G. Shandera of Huntsville has been appointed the first executive director of the governor's Criminal Justice Policy Council. The council, created by the Legislature earlier this year, will decide how federal crime-fighting funds are distributed within the state.

Shandera, 55, runs a halfway house in Huntsville and is a member of the Texas Corrections Association.

Gov. Mark White, who announced the appointment Tuesday, said available funds should be used to increase security in the state's cities. He said one way to reduce crime was to increase neighborhood patrols. "You also increase security in the minds of the people in those communities, and I think that tends to give them some hope that by working together they can provide additional barriers to criminal activity," White said.

Hearing to be held for redistricting plan

MARSHALL (AP) — A federal judge says he expects to grant the request of the NAACP and the state Republican party early next month, when he said he will hold hearings on arguments against Texas' congressional redistricting plan.

"You can operate on the assumption that there will probably be an evidentiary hearing around Dec. 1," U.S. District Judge Robert Parker told lawyers in the case Tuesday.

The Justice Department recently approved the plan, which was drawn up in the last session of the Legislature.

Parents charge racism involved in search of school children

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Outraged parents, charging racism was involved, threatened to keep children out of classes after the school board refused to oust a white principal who ordered third-graders at a mostly black school searched for a missing $10.

"There's going to be a lot of action, legal and otherwise," shouted parent Elouise Brown, one of about 25 parents who stormed out of the school board meeting Tuesday night after board members refused to remove principal Carol Carlson. "My little girl doesn't have to steal to make a living."

In the parking lot outside the Richland County District I headquarters, parents said they planned to protest by withdrawing their children from school and teaching the students themselves.

"No school tomorrow," said one mother as she left the meeting. "We've tried the white man's methodology. Now we'll try our own."

Some parents have charged it was a strip-search, an accusation denied by school Superintendent Gordon McAndrew, who said, however, that the principal showed poor judgment.

Ms. Carlson, principal of Crane Creek Elementary School, ordered 40 pupils searched Sept. 19 to find $10 stolen from a teacher's purse.

The pupils were separated by gender, herded into bathrooms and searched by staffers of the same sex. The missing $10 later was found under a rug in a classroom and a student admitted taking it.

Lee Catoe, a member of the Greater Columbia Community Relations Council, said the issue was not racial but administrative. But the district's inability to appease the parents was making it racial, said Catoe, whose organization works to improve black-white relations.

The board heard from parents, then went into a closed-door session. When the board reconvened publicly, it issued a statement saying it would not fire Ms. Carlson, although it admitted the way the search was handled was "unfortunate" and pledged to avoid such incidents in the future.

Turbulence forces airplane to land

DENVER (AP) — A United Airlines passenger jet carrying 62 people ran into severe turbulence just after takeoff, injuring five people and prompting the pilot to land, an airline spokesmen said Tuesday night.

The turbulence over southern Colorado "threw four attendants around the cabin" besides leaving one passenger hurt, airline spokesman Chuck Nowak in Chicago said.

The injuries were not believed to be serious, he said.

The plane carried 55 passengers and seven crew members, Nowak said.

"Apparently it was just pure and simple turbulence shortly after takeoff. It was only in the air a matter of minutes" before landing again at Stapleton International Airport, United spokesman Jack Ekey said.

Ekey said Flight 738, a three-engine 727, took off for Wichita, Kansas, at 7:42 p.m. Tuesday and was "only in the air about 10 minutes."

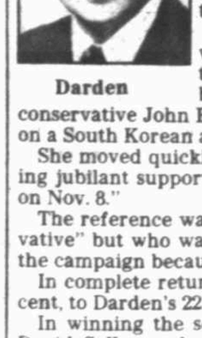

After those hurt were taken to Denver hospitals, the plane resumed its trip at 8:51 p.m.

Those injured were identified as passenger Julia Moralez, who was being treated for neck pains at the Colorado Health Services Center, and flight attendants Jeanne Engle, Emily Henderson and Suzanne Severs, who were being admitted to University Hospital.

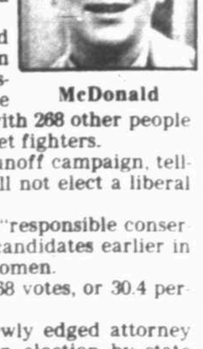

A fourth attendant, whose name was not released, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Congressman's widow garners most votes

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — The widow of Rep. Larry McDonald, facing a runoff next month for his vacant seat, says her first-place finish in a crowded special election is an endorsement of "conservative, responsible leadership" in Congress.

Darden

McDonald

Kathryn McDonald won just over 30 percent of the vote in a 19-candidate field Tuesday and will meet state legislator George "Buddy" Darden in a Nov. 8 runoff for the 7th District seat.

Darden, who garnered 27.5 percent, said he expected to win "a tough three-week race."

Mrs. McDonald, 34, had urged voters to send her to Washington to continue the work of her husband, who was chairman of the conservative John Birch Society and who perished with 268 other people on a South Korean airliner shot down Sept. 1 by Soviet fighters.

She moved quickly Tuesday night to launch the runoff campaign, telling jubilant supporters, "I am certain the people will not elect a liberal on Nov. 8."

The reference was to Darden, who calls himself a "responsible conservative" but who was depicted as a liberal by other candidates earlier in the campaign because he supports equal rights for women.

In complete returns, Mrs. McDonald received 25,468 votes, or 30.4 percent, to Darden's 22,894, or 27.5 percent.

In winning the second runoff slot, Darden narrowly edged attorney David Sellers, who was backed in the non-partisan election by state Republican leaders.

Decision reinflates air bag controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although supporters of automobile air bags and automatic seat belts say the subject has been studied exhaustively, the Reagan administration wants more information before deciding whether to order them installed in new cars.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, unveiling a range of proposals aimed at protecting occupants in cars, acknowledged Tuesday that eliminating all federal requirements for "passive" restraints — a move tried two years ago but rebuffed by the courts — has not been ruled out.

Mrs. Dole said she expects a decision by next April on whether to implement the current passive restraint rule or try again to scrap it, hoping a stronger case this time will withstand judicial scrutiny.

Although Mrs. Dole insisted none of the options have been ruled out, supporters of air bags and automatic belts accused the department of delay tactics and setting the groundwork for eventually wiping the rule off the books.

"The administration has dug in on this issue," Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., said in an interview. "It has become an ideological thing (that)...will cost people's lives."

Danforth, a staunch supporter of air bags, said the department's decision to reopen lengthy rulemaking procedures with a wide range of options "is their way of saying no (to a passive restraint regulation) without appearing to say no."

The insurance industry, which claims 10,000 traffic deaths could be prevented annually if all cars were equipped with passive restraints — so called because the driver does not have to do anything to engage them — attacked the call for further studies as a disguise for delay.

Hi-tech spy demanded high price for secrets

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A high-tech spy who sold classified data to Soviet-bloc nations demanded and may have received $1 million from his customers, said federal officials who were still hunting cash and secret documents and promising more arrests soon.

The identities of those being sought were not revealed Tuesday by Justice Department sources in Washington.

A bail hearing meanwhile was set today for James Durward Harper Jr., 49, of Mountain View, arrested and charged with espionage Saturday.

Harper's lawyer, William Dougherty, said that beginning in 1975 his client led a spy's life — colored with code names like "The Source," "The Big Man" and "The Minister" — for the money and the thrill, but wanted to give it up.

"I hate to use the cliche, but he wanted to come in out of the cold," Dougherty said. "He said he wanted to work for them (the U.S. intelligence community)."

U.S. officials refused to grant immunity from prosecution to Harper, who first made the overture anonymously through the lawyer in 1981 after spying for Polish agents for several years.

Even as U.S. officials tried to identify Harper he operated so freely and effectively that his collaborators were able to present him with "shopping lists" of defense secrets coveted by Soviet bloc countries, including information vital to the United States' survival in a nuclear war, according to Justice Department and FBI officials.

The officials who asked not to be identified said Harper met contacts in Geneva, Poland, Mexico and elsewhere. He mentioned having hidden 200 pounds of defense documents, according to FBI investigators.

Four face fines, prison terms for harboring tax protester

HARRISON, Ark. (AP) — Three men and a woman face fines and prison terms for harboring fugitive tax protester Gordon Kahl, who was killed in a shootout with officers seeking him for the killing of two U.S. marshals.

No sentencing date was set after a federal jury Tuesday found Leonard and Norma Ginter, Arthur Russell and Ed Udey guilty. Each could receive up to 10 years in prison and a $15,000 fine.

Kahl, 63, of Heaton, N.D., a member of Posse Comitatus, which denies the federal government's right to levy taxes, was charged with killing the marshals in North Dakota in February as they tried to arrest him for a probation violation. Kahl died in May during a gun battle with officers at the Ginters' farmhouse in Smithville.

Governor may live in mansion

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The new owner of a never-occupied 10-bedroom residence built eight years ago as the governor's mansion would still like chief executives living there.

Matt Franich offered $1.53 million for the suburban mansion, which originally had been intended to replace a Victorian official residence.

But former Gov. Jerry Brown shunned the mansion as a "Taj Mahal," refusing to move in and signing a bill authorizing the sale.

His successor, Gov. George Deukmejian, said he would like to live in the house — and aides say they "would be interested" in Franich's suggestion of a possible lease arrangement.

Did crime boss get 'cold feet?'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Facing a 75-year prison term, reputed organized crime boss Carl Civella may have had "cold feet" when he delayed surrendering for one day, a judge said. A prosecutor wanted Civella held in contempt.

"We take the court's orders seriously. When they're violated it's our standard practice to initiate the appropriate legal action," said U.S. Attorney Robert Ulrich. Civella, 74, turned himself in to federal marshals Tuesday, 22 hours late.

U.S. District Judge Joseph E. Stevens Jr. said perhaps he "just got cold feet at the last minute."

Men indicted for car-care fraud

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Accused of offering bogus distributorships for "worthless" car-care products, two men have been indicted on charges of defrauding investors out of at least $1 million.

According to the federal grand jury indictments returned Tuesday, the products supposedly prevented tires from ever going flat and reactivated dead batteries. Indicted were Heinz Enrico Ebenstein, 50, of Ridgewood, and Ralph Franco, 46, of New York City.

BBC says Soviet crew stranded in space

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Salyut 7 space station is crippled by a leak of propellant and the two cosmonauts aboard are stranded in orbit, the British Broadcasting Corp. says.

The two space travelers were due to return a month ago, BBC said in its report Tuesday night, but that the rocket carrying the replacement crew exploded as it was taking off.

A Soviet Foreign Ministry official in Moscow told The Associated Press today, "there is no information available on the cosmonauts" — who have been in space more than three months.

Western press reports at the time said the replacement crew survived the explosion.

BBC science correspondent James Wilkinson said Tuesday that a leak of propellant last month had left Salyut 7 virtually unable to be maneuvered. "The cosmonauts are in effect drifting in orbit," he said, without indicating the sources of his information.

Wilkinson said the cosmonauts were expected to return to Earth soon but that it is not known how their mission control plans to get them back.

"The Soyuz space ship they arrived in is still attached to the space station and they could use that. But it has been there for over three months and by their own rules has only two days of life left in it before it becomes potentially unsafe," he reported.

Artillery duels jeopardize cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Heavy artillery duels flared around Beirut today, jeopardizing the civil war cease-fire, and three opposition leaders rejected the government's invitation to attend a peace conference at the international airport.

Police said two Lebanese soldiers and six civilians were killed and 27 others wounded before the shelling tapered off in Beirut's southern neighborhoods and the mountains above the airport. The 1,600 U.S. Marines deployed at the airport were not affected.

In the southern city of Sidon, two Israeli border policemen died and a third was wounded in an ambush Tuesday night.

Former Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Sunni Moslem, told reporters in the northern city of Tripoli that leaders of the Syrian-backed, anti-government National Salvation Front would not attend the reconciliation conference scheduled at the airport Thursday.

"The site is unacceptable for us. We in the Salvation Front call upon the president to choose another site for the dialogue," Karami said after a meeting with Marwan Hamadeh, an aide to leftist Druse leader Walid Jumblatt.

The Salvation Front's leadership includes Karami, Jumblatt and former Maronite President Suleiman Franjieh.

The airport, Karami said, "lacks and will continue to lack the basic security conditions necessary for holding the national dialogue there...that's why we shall not go there tomorrow."

Police said government troops shelled militia strongholds in Shiite Moslem neighborhoods with field artillery and tank cannons to stop nightlong sniping and bazooka attacks on army positions on Beirut's southern outskirts.

Druse insurgents in the central mountains also mounted shelling attacks through the night on the Lebanese army garrison in the strategic hilltop town of Souk el-Gharb, which overlooks the airport, police said.

Maj. Robert Jordan, a Marine spokesman, said the U.S. encampment was not affected by the fighting.

However, the Israeli military command said today two Israeli border policemen were killed and one wounded in an ambush by unidentified attackers Tuesday night in the city of Sidon.

The shooting around Beirut broke out Tuesday night, a few hours after President Amin Gemayel's government said it selected the airport as the site for the reconciliation conference.

Shells fell around Gemayel's presidential palace and the neighboring Defense Ministry as the clashes continued this morning.

Snipers killed two Lebanese soldiers Tuesday and wounded an Italian member of the multinational force.

Syria balks at planned conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — Syria, a key element in efforts to end the violence in Lebanon, is balking at taking part in the first planned meeting of the warring factions on Thursday, according to a Reagan administration official.

The first national reconciliation conference was scheduled to take place more than three weeks after such a conference became a factor in the fragile cease-fire in Lebanon.

An administration official said Tuesday evening, however, that the White House had learned that the Syrians were citing the dangerous situation at the Beirut airport, the designated site for the talks, as their reason for backing out.

The problem was a topic of discussion among senior administration officials as they began an overall review of the delicate situation in the Middle East. That review came as President Reagan's special Middle East envoy, Robert C. McFarlane, returned from the region and was taking over as national security adviser.

While the administration official, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said he had seen news reports later in the day saying the meeting would go on as scheduled, he said the government had received reports from the Middle East to the contrary before the National Security Council began a late morning meeting on the Middle East.

"We have good, solid reports the Syrians are refusing to go," he said.

Will encyclopedias follow dinosaurs into extinction?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some things never change, which simplifies life for encyclopedia publishers. Most things do, however, which keeps hundreds of encyclopedia writers, editors, researchers and analysts employed.

But for how long?

Some library scientists predict that multi-volume reference books will go the way of clay tablets and papyrus as computers take over in the Age of Information.

"Many libraries already are geared to the electronic age," said F.W. Lancaster, professor of library science at the University of Illinois.

"There will certainly be a day, I believe, when publishers will no longer publish encyclopedias and libraries will be museums of what was published in the past," Lancaster said, admitting, "That's not a popular thesis."

Based on a study for the National Science Foundation on how soon electronic data systems might replace the printed word, Lancaster concluded the shift would occur in Western societies by the year 2000, mainly because "in printed form, encyclopedias can't keep up."

But publishers of the nation's six major multi-volume encyclopedias still try.

Entries in Academic American, Colliers, Encyclopedia Americana, Funk & Wagnalls, New Encyclopaedia Britannica and World Book are constantly updated on in-house computer files. Revisions are published at least every 10 years — a cycle deliberately coinciding with the U.S. census.

Funk & Wagnalls, for example, has undergone 20 complete revisions since it first appeared in 1912. Company president Jim Stoltzfus said entries were completely rewritten every decade "because we must accommodate all the new census information, which hits about 80 percent of the (27) volumes."

Blacks weigh pros, cons of candidacy

By MIKE FEINSILBER

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Run, Jesse, run," the crowds chant, but behind the scenes some prominent black politicians and civil rights leaders hope that Jesse Jackson won't.

Merely by threatening to become a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, Jackson has excited the politics of 1984 in a way seven buttoned-down white men cannot.

But even Jackson may share the dilemma among black leaders about whether he should quit while ahead. He has twice postponed an announcement; it is now scheduled for late this month.

Black leaders do not have a common viewpoint and some concede that they can't even decide whether the gains outweigh the risks of alienating a generation of new black voters, of nominating a conservative Democrat or even of helping re-elect Ronald Reagan.

Joseph Lowery of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference says the charismatic Jackson "has escalated the level of political enthusiasm in the black community," but adds: "I am planning to support the candidate...who I feel has the best chance of empowering my vote to purchase a one-way ticket west for that fellow who happens to be living in the White House. And that candidate I will support regardless of race, creed or color."

Privately, some blacks say that they feel uncomfortable about discouraging any black.

Rep. Parren Mitchell of Baltimore says he plans to endorse Walter Mondale "in the very near future" but offers extravagant praise for Jesse Jackson: "Anything that focuses on the plight of blacks, minorities and the poor is completely justifiable."

Jackson knows that a candidacy would subject him to intense press scrutiny and raise new pressures: position papers to prepare, a staff to recruit, money to raise, schedules to conform to, debates to take part in — and the unveiling of concealed enmities within the black community to confront.

Among black leaders, he is not the most admired black. Coretta Scott King, no fan of Jackson, has confided that if a black is to make the run, someone like Andrew M. Young, big city mayor, former congressman and U.N. ambassador, is more likely to make a respectable race.

And Young says of a possible Jackson bid: "While it's psychologically very powerful and significant, I'm not sure what we can get from it politically."

Nonetheless, some black leaders feel Jackson has gone too far to pull back. For months, he's been saying, "If you run, you might lose. If you don't run, you're guaranteed to lose."

"We can move from the slave ship to the championship!" he chants. "From the guttermost to the uppermost! From the outhouse to the courthouse; from the statehouse to the White House!"

Among those urging him to make the race are Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., Rep. Ron Dellums of California, New York's Percy Sutton. They insist a candidacy would raise issues white politicians would otherwise avoid.

And they think a Jackson candidacy on the primary ballots of the South would continue a surge in black registration that may yet be his greatest contribution to blacks and to the Democratic party.

Hatcher, chairman of Jackson's Presidential Advisory Committee, has said, "If a black candidate runs a serious campaign and has charisma and can articulate the issues, not just about blacks but issues that cut across racial lines, then a large number of unregistered voters — blacks, women, the poor — would register."

But the dissenters include such prominent black leaders as Mrs. King, Young, Lowery and Benjamin Hooks of the NAACP.

Hooks argues, "We should not let a candidacy, no matter how symbolically attractive, help us defeat a candidate most likely to beat the Reagan system of government...The Democrats don't really need to engage in a 12-month bloodletting."

Don Rose, a Chicago political consultant in touch with Chicago, sums up what he hears are the three reasons favoring a Jackson run: "One is just getting the country used to the fact that a black can run; two is the feeling that it would give blacks some brokerage; and three, it would push the entire Democratic debate to the left. Add to that the large benefit of a big increase in black voter registration."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, October 20, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Psychologist-advice columnist Dr. Joyce Brothers, Washington humorist Art Buchwald, baseball greats Mickey Mantle and Juan Marichal and New York Mets pitcher Rick Ownbey share your birthday. Also born on this date: the late, great Bela Lugosi, star of horror films. New technology helps you win a major victory in the months ahead. You find ways to raise your prestige at place of employment. Travel is lucky for both business and romance. Yet you might also find love in your own neighborhood! Be alert to unusual opportunities. Some come only once and are then lost forever. An influential older person wants to succeed. Welcome suggestions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Loved one is in a cooperative mood. Ask a favor you have wanted for a long time. You are able to take an important business trip. Do not let a co-worker take advantage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are able to reach out and get the person or assistance you require. Enormous changes lie just ahead. Discuss your plans with a long-time associate. Romance is in the air.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You finally receive recognition for something you did long ago. What you say may be more important than what you do today. Retirees find new ways to be useful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An authority figure tests your willpower. Be on guard. A financial question should be answered honestly. You have a good chance of getting aid. Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be suspicious when you receive a sudden invitation. Someone may have an ulterior motive. Romance has you in a dither. You are used to having your cake and eating it too.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It may be time to end one career and begin another. Promises will be kept. A neighbor is vulnerable to your charms. Travel helps you make up your mind on an important question.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Write or visit potential customers overseas. Your dreams could come true! Keep new investments within reason. You cannot afford to undermine a valuable association by acting impatient. Make your weekend plans now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A superb day for making deals. Contest a decision that is not in your best interest. Avoid accepting anything that leaves you indebted to the giver. Member of opposite sex is shy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be wary about giving information to someone you know only slightly. You need to consider a job offer very carefully before making your decision. Weigh the advantages of staying put.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Invest money in people as well as things. Others want to reveal secrets to you, but you may not want to hear them. You are smart to protect yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Those in communications and computer science enjoy good times now. Tension lessens between teachers and students. Your imagination helps you solve a sticky money problem. You enter a contest and win!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You cannot afford to put romance ahead of business now. Recommendations from the right people are worth their weight in gold. Do not postpone talking with a family member.

PBS series to help save dollars

BRUNSWICK, Maine (AP) — A nationally known energy expert is using his home in Brunswick as a "guinea pig" to demonstrate to a national television audience how to save hundreds of dollars in heating costs.

Charlie Wing is host for "HouseWarming," a Saturday-afternoon series on public TV introduced early in October. The series continues through December.

"The investments paying the highest rates of return are not to be found at the bank or on Wall Street," Wing says, "but in our own homes.

"After I started teaching classes on energy efficiency, it became obvious that I wouldn't reach a lot of people that way," he says. "My books were still a drop in the bucket. Television will reach 2- to 3-million people."

The house featured in the series is Wing's eighth — he says he does the best he can with each home, then moves on.

"I bought this house three years ago. It was the classic New England farmhouse that I've wanted, so I picked it up knowing ultimately that I wanted to retrofit it," he says.

Wing has taken the three-bedroom home and transformed it into "a comfortable, energy-efficient home" while filming the renovations for his series.

"I already have a second show in mind for October 1984 — a compact, modern energy-efficient house," he says. "I'll probably move into that house too."

This season's series stars Wing and his neighbor, author John Cole.

"It's a comedy — John portrays the 'Archie Bunker' nosy neighbor, telling me that my house is a dump," Wing explains. "I always like to introduce humor into everything I do."

He says his $9,000 investment in energy-conserving materials and measures will cut his annual energy bill from $3,029 to $776, a 25 percent return on investment the first year.

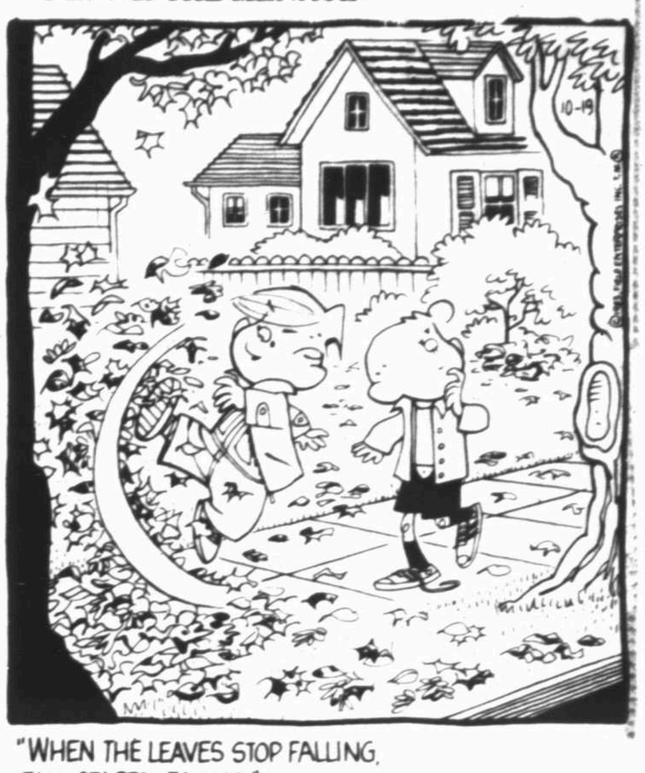

Kathleen Caron, a spokeswoman for Wing's Cornerstones Energy Group Inc., says the savings will be the result of greater conservation measures.

"He's taken advantage of everything — solar heating, new insulation, new heat-flow patterns and night insulation on windows," Ms. Caron says.

Night insulation for windows, she says, is in the form of shades or shutters that are lined with a reflective material called Mylar. The insulation holds heat in during the winter; during the summer, it repels heat and keeps a home cool.

In the series, Wing will discuss, step-by-step, the various options available to homeowners, using his own home as a demonstration model and using computer graphics and analyses to chart energy effectiveness.

Opening lead: Four of ♡.

The basic principles of play and defense hold true for most situations. But each hand is a case onto itself, and must be handled accordingly.

The auction was a matter of simple arithmetic. North added his 12 points to partner's announced 16-18, saw that the values for slam were not there and bid what he expected to make.

West led his fourth-best heart, East won the ace and returned the suit. West allowed declarer's queen to win the second trick, "to maintain communications, partner."

Declarer could count eight tricks, and he could develop a ninth if either minor suit broke evenly. He tried three rounds of clubs, to no avail. Three rounds of diamonds did not help any, either. It would seem that declarer would have to fall back on the spade finesse, but he found a better way. He exited with dummy's remaining heart. West could cash his heart tricks, but then he had to lead away from the king of spades into declarer's tenace. Making three-odd.

In the excitement of the moment, no one noticed that West should have defeated the contract. From his own hand and dummy, and the fact that South had opened one no trump, West could see that he could not expect more than a jack from East beside the ace of hearts. Therefore, there was no point in keeping open a line of communication between the defenders.

West should simply have won the second trick with the king of hearts and set up the suit by continuing a third round. Now there is no throw-in, and declarer will have to try the spade finesse for his contract. Down one.

Perot's fumble?

Dallas computer magnate H. Ross Perot had the courage to do what no one else would: Look Texas' high school football coaches squarely in the eyes and tell them they are one of the main reasons education is in poor shape. There's just too much emphasis in high school on athletics and other extracurricular activities.

Well, coaches — at least those in Midland — took exception with Perot's assessment, apparently feeling he had wandered onto a playing field and was out of his league. Maybe that's the case, but if Perot's approach was mismanaged, at least his intent is laudable. More than a few people looking for the bug-bear in the current education dilemma would point a finger at athletics and other extracurricular activities.

In West Texas, to attack football is to attack the area's very heritage. You don't live that down easily. But there still may be some validity in Perot's claim. Surely not every school district in the state is as truly concerned about the education of its students as is the Midland Independent School District. The University Interscholastic League legislative council, in the wake of Perot's recommendations to upgrade the educational process, has proposed stricter rules for UIL member schools.

A lot of schools probably will benefit from stricter UIL policies. MISD, on the other hand, already has requirements on the policy books stricter than those now in force for UIL schools and, in most cases, stricter than the new rules the legislative council is proposing.

So, a sweeping statement like that uttered by Perot splashes both the good school districts and the bad. The meaning should not be lost, though. Athletics and any of the other various extracurricular activities can be meaningful to a high school student's educational career. In fact, athletics can be extremely educational, teaching teamwork, good sportsmanship, fair play, courage and the like. Athletics also can be harmful, when, for example, they are elevated beyond their proper role.

Perot's recommendations and comments should be taken in the correct light. And athletics should be taken in their correct light.

Education's role is education — a TOTAL education. Athletics, band and other extracurricular activities are just that: A part of the educational process, but still extracurricular.

Necessary leap

On a visit to El Salvador last week, Henry A. Kissinger bluntly told the government of interim President Alvaro Magana that it risks losing U.S. support for its war against leftist guerrillas unless it makes a greater effort to protect human rights. It was the clearest warning that the Salvadorans have received in some time from a U.S. official about their abysmal human-rights record.

When Kissinger was named chairman of President Reagan's special commission on Central America, the former secretary of state said that he would simply oversee the panel's study and not conduct diplomacy in the volatile region. His warning on human rights jumped that self-imposed barrier, but it was necessary. El Salvador also should take note that veteran diplomats like Kissinger seldom speak without Washington's approval.

The Reagan administration has cause to be concerned, because the last few months have seen an upsurge in violence perpetrated by right-wing death squads in El Salvador, some of which are believed to have links to government security forces. Angered by the possibility of peace talks between the Magana government and leftist rebels, frustrated at the failure of right-wing deputies in the Constituent Assembly to dismantle a controversial land-reform program and frightened by an upsurge in grass-roots organizing activity among Salvadoran peasants and workers, these terrorist organizations have resurfaced with new ferocity after two years of relative quiet.

Right-wing groups have taken responsibility for several bombings and threats directed against newspapers and radio stations that did nothing more radical than accept advertisements from moderate politicians and labor unions. Several prominent union leaders have been assassinated and others kidnaped.

Also kidnaped, in the most shocking incident of all, was a high Foreign Ministry official, Amilcar Martinez Arguera. He was seized by rightist thugs who hinted that he has ties to the Communist Party. The incident was condemned by the U.S. State Department, which deplored the fact that "political violence in El Salvador has been directed against those moderate groups who have accepted the risks of supporting democratic reforms."

The upsurge in the death squads' activity may mean that the rigid right in El Salvador believes that the Reagan administration will support it against the left regardless of the brutal tactics. So it was important for them to be disabused with stern words from someone as prominent as Kissinger. It is a warning that bears repeating by Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Sudanese trained as 'protectors'

WASHINGTON — In the subterranean world of spies and terrorists, the Reagan administration has embarked on yet another secret mission. This one is centered in the Sudan, geographically the largest nation in Africa.

Jack Anderson

Not only is the Sudan considered strategically important by administration geopoliticians, it is the site of a major pipeline project and heavy investment by Chevron Oil.

This giant country has few population centers, isolated from one another by vast stretches of desert and primitive transportation facilities. So vast a space with so few people is difficult enough to maintain centralized rule over; but the tribal rulers of the south have grown disenchanted with their Moslem leaders in northern Sudan.

Adding to the aggravations, the Sudan has two unruly neighbors — Marxist Ethiopia on the east and radical Libya on west — which are stirring up rebellion. According to a highly sensitive State Department cable seen by my associate Lucette Lagnado, there is "evidence of a growing externally sponsored insurgent threat to southern and western Sudan."

To President Reagan's global planners, this translated into the "need for an effective Sudanese counterinsurgency capability." So the Pentagon has sent a Security Evaluation and Assistance team to the Sudan.

The project has "high political sensitivity," according to the cable, so the American counterinsurgency experts have been traveling incognito, their presence known only to the Pentagon, the U.S. Embassy and top officials of the Sudanese government. "Civilian attire is directed for travel in and to Sudan," the cable cautions.

The American public was not trusted to know about the Sudanese involvement. Nor, for that matter, was Congress. Sources at the House subcommittee on Africa, for example, said they had heard nothing about it from the Pentagon.

The team is no more than the camel's nose under the tent — three individuals with "specific skills and expertise in counterinsurgency problems" and one who is knowledgeable in "Sudanese politico-military sensitivities."

The classified cable makes clear that Chevron's oil investment is the chief concern. The oil fields have been threatened by rebels who oppose the Khartoum government of President Gaafar Mohammed Nimeiri, and the American team is supposed to develop specific plans for protecting "proposed oil facilities in southern Sudan against an insurgent threat."

The team will also evaluate the Sudanese ability to deal with the insurgents, "through observation of training in progress, employment of tactics, equipment organization and leadership, and operational planning skills."

While Congress and the public are being kept in the dark, Chevron isn't. The cable notes that "an appropriate Chevron representative" will brief the Pentagon team and accompany it on its Sudanese rounds whenever possible.

A possible operational option would be the dispatch of U.S. Special Forces to train the Sudanese in counterinsurgency.

BOONDOGGLE OF THE WEEK: An antique bridge and an even more antique law are costing Amtrak more than $5,000 a weekend and causing countless behind-schedule trains on the heavily traveled rail corridor between Washington and Boston.

The bridge over the Bush River just north of Baltimore was built in 1913. It clears the water by only 12 feet. The law, which is even older, says that navigable rivers must be kept open for any boat that shows up.

This means that 15 train crew members must spend 40 minutes unbolting the little bridge, raising it, lowering it and bolting it back into place before the train can proceed. Each ritual costs the government-owned railroad $1,300.

Fortunately for Amtrak, the bridge is hard by the Army's Aberdeen Proving Grounds, so the river is closed to boaters during the week, to keep them from getting caught in the cross fire of some new weapons. But on weekends, when Aberdeen is quiet, the raising and lowering of the bridge occurs about twice a day.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: The public was given a fast shuffle when the House Rules Committee — cut from 15 to 12 members — decided to rearrange its hearing room to do away with the double-deck dais. Somehow, the single platform, with more space for witnesses, left less room for standing-room-only visitors.

— "Humanitarian" terrorism has now appeared in Britain. The "Animal Rights Militia" has been sending letter bombs to prominent British furriers to protest the slaughter of fur-bearing animals.

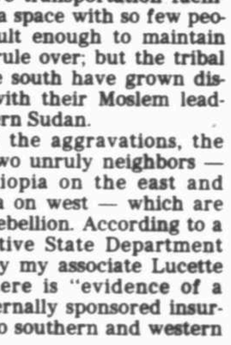

— After walking onstage at the National Organization for Women convention, former Vice President Walter Mondale asked whether he had been introduced. Told that he had, Mondale expressed thanks "for that kind introduction."

ART BUCHWALD

Without Watt it's a wilderness!

We all saw James Watt ride off into the sunset last week. Unfortunately we didn't hear what he said to his horse.

Art Buchwald

As he rode up the winding trail he said, "Well, old Paint, our work is over. I knew it would only be a matter of time before the Nazis, the Commies and the environmentalists got my job. I'm not saying it doesn't hurt. I had great plans for this country from sea to shining sea. But I knew the Beach Boys would finish me off sooner or later."

Watt reached the top of the trail and looked out over the massive mountain range.

"I had great visions for this land, Paint. I wanted every American to have a strip mine he could call his own. I wanted to sell off the wilderness areas and make them into thriving real estate developments which produced jobs and taxes.

"I dreamed someday we could cut down all the forests to provide wood for the lumber people who love this country as much as I do. I wanted to drill into the deep brown earth and offshore blue waters for gas and oil, to supply our fuel needs for the next 50 years.

"I longed to take America's most valuable heritage and protect it from the bird lovers and the Indians and the Democrats who don't believe in progress and economic growth. I needed time to sell off the outer continental shelf.

"Just think, Paint. If I'd had a few more years we would have had bulldozers down there in the valley, oil rigs in the hills, and all of that snow on the mountain could have been turned into acid rain.

"I dreamed that everyone who entered a national park would be charged a fee for setting up a tent, and fishing in a trout stream.

"I was going to build motels and souvenir shops so the park service would pay for itself. No more would the wilderness become a free lunch for every black, woman, Jew and cripple."

Watt and his horse started down the trail. He was singing, "I'm an old cow hand who wanted to give away this land."

He stopped by a mountain spring. "Look at that spring there, Paint. Nobody uses it. Nobody even knows it's there. If I were still secretary of the interior I would dump hazardous chemical wastes in it, where it wouldn't do any harm to anyone. You see those deer over there? They're eating federal foliage. Even they think they're entitled to a free lunch."

Old Paint neighed. Watt rubbed his nose. "But don't worry, fellow. We lost the battle but we didn't lose the war. I'll go back to private life as a lobbyist and a fund raiser fighting for what I believe in. There are thousands of patriotic Americans out there willing to pay $1,000 a plate to fight for their oil and gas leases. Now that I'm a private citizen I can say what's on my mind. We'll beat the reds, the pinkos and secular humanists yet."

Suddenly a man on another horse came riding over the hill.

"Why it's Bill Clark, the president's national security adviser. What are you doing out here, Bill?"

"The president has appointed me the new secretary of interior."

"I'll be darned. You don't look like a secretary of the interior."

"I've been searching for you everywhere, Jim. I'm trying to find out what land you sold off and what land still belongs to us."

"I'll draw a map for you here in the dirt. Now you don't have to worry about California any more, but the government is still stuck with Montana. We've got two coal bids on the Grand Tetons and we're still waiting to hear from the oil companies about the Chesapeake Bay ... Down here in the wetlands of Florida the real estate developers have an option and ...."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 19, the 292nd day of 1983. There are 73 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 19, 1973, former White House counsel John Dean admitted he had plotted to cover up the truth about Watergate, and he agreed to be a prosecution witness in the case.

On this date:

In 1781, British troops under Cornwallis were defeated at Yorktown, Va., as the American Revolution neared its end.

In 1944, American troops landed in the Philippines during World War II.

In 1960, the United States placed an embargo on shipments to Cuba.

And also in 1960, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and 52 other blacks were arrested in a sit-down demonstration at an Atlanta department store.

Ten years ago: Libya halted oil shipments to the United States in a dispute over U.S. Middle East policies.

Five years ago: Veteran actor Gig Young and his wife were found shot to death in their New York apartment.

One year ago: John De Lorean, chairman of the De Lorean Motor Co., was arrested in Los Angeles and charged with possession of more than 59 pounds of cocaine.

Today's birthdays: Actress LaWanda Page is 63. Investigative reporter Jack Anderson is 61.

Thought for today: "A wise man changes his mind, a fool never." — Spanish proverb.

Bank made difference

To the Editor:

Since I write better than I speak, I will use this media to express my appreciation for the First National Bank and, in particular, John P. Butler. This appreciation and loyalty can best be understood by sharing a personal anecdote.

I was a bride in 1952, having married W.C. "Bus" Hubbard — an oil man. With typical distrust of a daughter's choice of a husband, and in particular, an oil man, my daddy decided to secure my future by giving and selling my sister and me a ranch. Not only did I need money to consummate the deal, I also wanted to establish credit in my own name in Midland. So I put on my hat and gloves and marched myself down to the old First National to see my friend, Mr. Butler. I sat out in the lobby until he motioned from "his space" to step in.

I told Mr. Butler how much money I needed and for what and asked him how much interest he would charge me. He quoted me a term and I replied that my daddy would beat that by half a percentage point. Mr. Butler said, "I'll match it!" And he got my business. Those of you who were around in 1952 remember that a drouthy ranch and a few poor cows were not much collateral. But John P. was willing to do business with me.

By the way, even my daddy has come to realize that without the oil business in this area, a lot of us would still be sod busters.

Who pays?

To the Editor:

I wish to compliment Jim Howard from Odessa for the letter of Oct. 9, 1983, he wrote to the editor for Midland Reporter-Telegram; it was so infnrmative.

He seems to think the people of Midland do not know we need a new stadium. We do not need anyone from Odessa to remind us, nor do we need any one from over there meddling in our school system. We have very competent trustees here in Midland. They were elected by the people who live in Midland.

Mr. Howard has more than he can say grace over there in Odessa. So run your school in Odessa and our trustees will run our schools in Midland. I am sure when the times come our trustees and the voters will build a new stadium. At the moment they are looking at the tax rate and the economy of our city. They have decided we need more schools.

Now Mr. Howard the next time you come over, bring a pillow and a flashlight and you are welcome to stand up if you are too crowded. Be smart and buy season tickets like the rest of us do and you won't have to stand in line, and if this don't suit you, stay in Odessa and go sit on your splinterless perch in your new stadium; sit there and think of a few things.

Some of the people that pay taxes cannot afford for their children to go to a ball game, or they can't afford to themselves. Another thing Mr. Howard, are you going to help us with our taxes in Midland for the stadium so you won't get splinters? Do you have any land to donate for the stadium?

If you don't like our stadium, then be sure and stay in Odessa. I believe we can afford one loss on tickets. Write your comments to the newspaper in Odessa; I'm sure the paper might appreciate it.

Couple seizes power in Grenada

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — Bernard Coard, a Marxist with close ties to Cuba, and his wife have seized power in Grenada, according to the former foreign minister who says he and three colleagues have quit the Cabinet in disgust.

Ex-minister Unison Whiteman said the couple was "running the show single-handedly" after replacing Prime Minister Maurice Bishop, who is reportedly under house arrest. Whitemen, in a radio interview Tuesday, said the Coards had taken over the Caribbean island despite lacking support of other government leaders or the public.

Phyllis Coard, considered a political radical like her husband, is vice minister for women's affairs and president of the National Women's Organization.

Shortly before Whiteman's comments were broadcast by Radio Antilles, a Montserrat-based station monitored in Barbados, several hundred pro-Bishop students demonstrated at Grenada's international airport.

A spokesman for the Leeward Islands Air Transport, Grenada's only commercial airline, said "over 500" students rushed through the airport building and onto the airstrip, delaying the departure of one plane.

The spokesman said the students chanted, "No Bishop, No School!" and "C for Coard, C for communism!"

Coard resigned Friday as deputy prime minister and minister of finance, trade and planning after reports circulated that he and his wife were plotting to assassinate Bishop.

Gen. Hudson Austin, the army commander, said Bishop had been voted out of the governing leftist New Jewel Movement for refusing to share power with Coard. He said final action against Bishop awaited completion of an army investigation of the allegation that Bishop spread a rumor of the assassination plot.

Bishop, a socialist who seized power in a 1979 coup, was "at home and quite safe," Austin said Monday, apparently referring to house arrest.

Whiteman, who returned from U.N. headquarters in New York on Friday, said the others who resigned from the Cabinet were George Louison, minister of agriculture and rural development; Lyden Ramdhanny, minister of tourism and civil aviation, and Norris Bain, minister of housing.

Fisheries and Industrialization Minister Kendrick Radix resigned last week and was arrested Saturday for leading a rally in St. George's, the capital of Grenada, demanding that Bishop be released from arrest at his official residence.

Whiteman said the ministers had resigned because Coard and his wife had ignored their suggestions for resolving "the deep crisis in our country."

"The issue, as you know, in Grenada is that the people are demanding their leader, Mr. Maurice Bishop," he said. "They want no other leader. Mr. Coard wants to impose himself and his will on the people and they are rejecting it."

Bishop ousted Prime Minister Eric Gairy in 1979. Gairy had held the post since Britain granted Grenada independence in 1974.

Shamir survives no-confidence motion

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's 10-day-old government today defeated its first parliamentary no-confidence motion by 61 votes to 54 after coming under bitter attack for its economic policy.

The opposition Labor Party presented the motion in Parliament, accusing the government of leading the country to "economic ruin" and dependence on U.S. aid.

The motion was presented by Gad Yaacobi, Labor's economic spokesman. He charged that during the six years of government by the Likud bloc, which Shamir now heads, prices rose four times faster than during the previous 29 years of labor Party government.

"We are on the way to becoming a vassal of the U.S. government in every field," Yaacobi said.

The no-confidence motion, also sponsored by two small parties, the two-member Shinui faction and the four Communist legislators, was prompted by one of the worst economic crises Israel has experienced.

A widening trade deficit and foreign debt triggered a run on foreign currency three weeks ago and a mass dumping of shekels which threatened bank stocks with collapse.

Inflation is at an annual rate of 131 percent and foreign debt is $21.5 billion.

Yaacobi claimed the government's "megalomania" has ruined Israel's agriculture and industry and encouraged Israelis "to consume more than we can produce."

Korea suffers through recent tragedies

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Through much of its 5,000-year history, Korea has suffered. Dynasties collapsed, clans fought, powerful neighbors ravaged the peninsula, and the land and people were divided.

South Koreans are suffering again today — deeply pained by the loss of unsuspecting countrymen in two separate brutal attacks that were blamed on communist enemies.

On Sept. 1, Soviet interceptors shot down a Korean Air Lines jumbo jet flying from New York to Seoul. Whether the Soviets knew it was a commercial airliner still is subject to debate, but all 269 people on board died. Eighty-one of them were South Koreans.

Barely five weeks later — on Oct. 9 — an explosion ripped through Martyr's Mausoleum in Rangoon, Burma, minutes before South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan was to have arrived for a wreath-laying ceremony. Seventeen South Koreans died in the blast, four of them members of Chun's Cabinet and others key aides and advisers.

Repeated images of grief-stricken families and friends, black ribbons of mourning, flags at half staff, incense burning at flower-covered altars, portraits of the dead — all contributed to a somber national mood.

In a memorial address at the funeral for the bombing victims, then-Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyup said, "We were at a loss as to what to do. What a tragedy this is when the wound from the nightmarish barbarity of the Soviet downing of the Korean Air Lines plane has not yet healed."

Kim, replaced as prime minister Friday when Chun reorganized his Cabinet, called the Koreans who died in Burma "the proud pillars of this country, men of great character, outstanding ability and burning patriotism."

Dr. Chung Il-sook, president of Seoul's Ewha Women's University, said in a speech, "We cannot help but ask ourselves why we should repeatedly suffer such national tragedies. Have we sinned so much? Are we so evil? Are we being punished for the distrust among ourselves?"

One American, a close follower of Korean affairs, observed:"Geography has been unkind, unfair to Korea. Just take a look at the map.

Owner of Hitler's birthplace doesn't want marble plaque

BRAUNAU, Austria (AP) — The owner of the house where Adolf Hitler was born is trying to block a government plan to place a plaque on the house denouncing fascism. The owner fears the plaque will provoke extremist groups.

A court hearing was scheduled for Nov. 30 on a trespass action brought against the government — sole tenant of the building — by Gerlinde Pommer, who owns the house, a court official said Tuesday.

The Nazi dictator was born in the house in 1889 and spent his childhood in Braunau before moving to Vienna and later to Germany.

The city council passed a resolution Sept. 15 calling for placement of a marble plaque reading: "Never Again Fascism. Millions of Dead Warn. For Peace, Freedom and Democracy."

Argentina releases prisoners

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The military regime says it has ordered the release of the last 66 of more than 5,000 people jailed under emergency powers in the 1970s.

A decree published Tuesday freed the 66 and lifted restrictions on the activities of 113 political prisoners released earlier this year.

The military regime, which seized power in 1976, has been releasing political prisoners gradually over the last five years.General elections are scheduled for Oct. 30 and the military is expected to yield to a civilian government Jan. 30, 1984.

In addition to those jailed under emergency powers, official reports said 63 people convicted of subversive activity by the federal judiciary remain jailed, as do 188 people convicted by military tribunals during guerrilla violence in the mid-1970s.

'Telephone sex' disconnected

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — The phone company has disconnected the number for Denmark's first "telephone sex" service, saying 40,000 calls in less than a day had overloaded the circuits.

KTAS, Copenhagen's telephone monopoly, announced its move over national radio Tuesday and did not say whether the number would be restored.

The men's magazine Ugens Rapport pays for the phone service, which started last Thursday.

Beachcomber finds human skull

NAIROBI, KENYA (AP) — An Austrian beachcomber found a well-preserved human skull between 150,000 and 300,000 years old along the shore of Lake Turkana in northern Kenya, a top paleontologist says.

Richard E. Leakey, director of the National Museums of Kenya and an expert on human origins, said Tuesday the skull is one of the few fossils of man's ancestors found from the period.

Leakey said Till Dornhoffer, a climatologist working in Nairobi, and his wife were "just beachcombing" on a weekend trip in August when they found the skull half buried in sand and mud.

Texas killing sprees leave small communities devastated

EDITOR'S NOTE: Texas has been stunned in the past month by three multiple slayings which claimed the lives of 14 people. The killings occurred in or near small towns, which at one time were felt to be immune from such violence.

By PHILIP BRASHER
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — David Maxwell and Monty Landers went to a fried chicken restaurant to pick up a Kilgore College fraternity brother for a Friday night out on the town.

In Sherman, 150 miles to the northwest, Ronald Mayes went to a hangar near his house to check on three friends who had gathered to sell a plane.

A retired Southeast Texas farmer, 62-year-old James Bennatte of Hempstead, went to a nearby house to check on a relative and a friend and watch the evening news.

Those fateful trips took them to their deaths.

They, along with 10 others, died violently within a span of 3½ weeks in three unrelated Texas killing sprees that have shocked their communities.

Texas had the fourth highest murder rate in the nation in 1979, the last year for which statistics are available, and Odessa, in West Texas, had the highest murder rate of any U.S. city last year. But a pall of disbelief and horror has still settled over Kilgore, Sherman and Hempstead.

A series of mass slayings was reported in Texas in August of last year but they occurred in urban areas.

Coral Eugene Watts, a Houston bus driver, confessed to 13 unsolved murders of women, 12 of them in Texas.

Five people were murdered at a lake house near Fort Worth. Larry Keith Robison was later convicted of murder in one of the slayings and is on Texas' Death Row.

John F. Parish distraught over a pay dispute killed six people and wounded four others in Grand Prairie, a Dallas suburb. He was killed in a fusilade of police gunfire.

A month earlier, in July 1982, four illegal immigrants from El Salvador were found slain in Fort Bend County.

Small towns like Kilgore, Sherman and Hempstead generally have been unaccustomed to crime, but from one end of the state to the other, communities like them have been rocked in recent months by violence.

Residents of tiny Montague reeled in June after a drifter, Henry Lee Lucas, admitted to the murder of an elderly woman and began telling investigators about 150 other murders he claims to have committed.

The three fraternity members and two women were executed outside Kilgore by one or more gunmen who police say robbed a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant of $2,000. There were few clues and no arrests have been made.

Two weeks later the bodies of the three ultralight aircraft enthusiasts and Mayes were discovered in a blood-spattered hangar five miles northeast of Sherman.

Three days later, at Hempstead, a man murdered Bennatte and his 78-year-old friend, Allie Wilkins, and critically wounded Bennatte's sister-in-law, Ann Bennatt, 70. The deaths were part of a 5½-hour crime spree that covered 160 miles and included the killing of a couple in College Station, the shooting death of a state trooper, and the abduction of six people.

Eliseo Henandez Moreno, a 24-year-old lawn mower repairman, was arrested later Tuesday night at a roadblock.

Maxwell, president of Phi Theta Omega fraternity, had everything to look forward to. He was in his next-to-last semester at Kilgore College, a small two-year school, and his wife was expecting their first child in March.

Maxwell wasn't on duty the night of Sept. 23. He and 19-year-old Landers, a new recruit to the fraternity, had gone there to wait for fraternity brother Joey Johnson, another cook, to close up.

Mary Tyler, a 37-year-old mother of four, and Opie Ann Hughes, 39, were also inside.

Mrs. Tyler's teen-age daughter dropped by the restaurant less than an hour later and found it empty and stained with human blood. The bodies were found the next morning by an oilfield worker in woods south of town. About $2,000 was missing from the restaurant.

Mrs. Tyler and the three men were lying side by the side on the ground, bullet wounds in their heads.

Mrs. Hughes tried to flee while the others were executed, investigators believe. Her body lay sprawled 50 feet away.

Investigators say, they have no suspects.

Mayes and Philip Good normally spent Sunday mornings in Jerry Brown's Sunday-school class at the West Sherman Baptist Church. Brown frequently invited his friends to church and got Good and Mayes to join earlier this year.

But the afternoon of Oct. 8 — a Saturday — Good, Brown and a friend from nearby Denison, Bob Tate, gathered at the hangar Tate had built for their ultralight planes.

Mayes lived a few hundred yards away. The small ranch on which the hangar and a small airstrip were built had once belonged to his grandfather.

Like Good, a licensed pilot, Brown was an aviation buff.

As for Tate, he bought the 20-acre ranch two years ago to pursue the hobby, said his son-in-law, David Watkins.

Tate had followed his usual routine that Saturday, spending the day working on a house he was building at the ranch. But by 7:30 p.m. he hadn't returned home and his wife was worried.

She drove out to the ranch and happened across her son, Bobby. They walked into the hangar and discovered a body sprawled in a pool of blood near a door.

Mayes, his family would later say, had known that his friends were going to the hangar about 4 p.m. to sell one of the motorized gliders, became curious when they never opened its doors and had gone over to investigate.

AP Laserphoto Map

The bodies of his friends were found lying side by side under a pile of carpet 36 feet away in the hangar. All three had been shot in the head.

Robbery isn't considered a motive, because the men still had their wallets when their bodies were found, but investigators later were searching telephone logs to find the identity of the man the men were to meet at the hangar.

James Bennatte made a practice of stopping by his sister-in-law's house each night to check on her and a friend, Allie M. Wilkins, 78, who slept there.

He usually stayed to watch the evening news before returning home, but Tuesday night he "was in the wrong place at the wrong time," said a relative.

First to die in this killing spree were Juan Garza Jr., 30, Moreno's brother-in-law, and Garza's wife, Esther, 31, of College Station. Neighbors told officers that Moreno "went in there fast and left fast," said police Sgt. Art Wiltse. The Garza's two young children, ages 6 and 2, watched as their parents died.

Trooper Russell Lynn Boyd, 25, a recent recruit whose first assignment was Hempstead, later pulled a car over on State Highway 6 between Bryan and Hempstead and was shot to death before he had even started to write his ticket, Texas Department of Public Safety officials said.

Moreno then drove into Hempstead, probably to change cars, and stopped at the Bennatt home, law enforcement officials said.

Moreno then went to the Bill Shirley home in Hempstead, officials said. Shirley, his wife and three young children were taken along as hostages and released unharmed shortly before Moreno abandoned their vehicle in Pasadena, a Houston suburb.

Their car was abandoned near where Ronald Gangle, 29, was abducted and his truck stolen, David Gaitan of the Waller sheriff's office said. About 50 miles southwest of Houston on U.S. Highway 59, state police stopped and arrested Moreno at a roadblock.

The motive for the Garza slayings was unclear, police say, although relatives told investigators that Moreno's wife, who was Garza's sister, had left him a week earlier. He was accused of having told her that he might try to harm her family.

School children being warned about 'dipping' snuff

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Elementary school children seem to be "dipping" snuff more frequently, educators and health officials say, and instructors are adding warnings about smokeless tobacco to oral hygiene programs.

"It's a big thing around here to have a snuff can ring in your back pocket," said Sue Cousatte, Ottawa-Delaware County dental health educator.

Use of smokeless tobacco among children has become a "peer pressure thing," she said.

Landry crackdown

Get tough policy pays off in 7-0

By JIM DENT
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — In the Brave New World of the Dallas Cowboys, life has been grand. Tom Landry's get-tough policy has been more than a symbol. It is a major reason Dallas is 7-0 and one victory away from tying a 1977 club record for the most consecutive victories from the beginning of a season.

"We've done everything as a group," Randy White said. "When you think about it, we watch films together, we eat together and we sleep together (in the same hotel before games). Something is there that has made us more cohesive. We needed the discipline. But it's hard to put your finger on the exact reason we're doing so well."

If Landry had written a program on his office computer, the results could not have been better. Dallas is undefeated and five days away from playing a game that players have been thinking about all season.

Dallas vs. the Los Angeles Raiders will be the Super Bowl in October. Players and coaches have been talking about playing the Raiders since the beginning of training camp. When the Raiders lost to the Redskins three weeks ago, Cowboys players were actually disappointed because it wiped out the possibility of both teams being undefeated for prime-time national television.

Los Angeles lost again Sunday in Seattle. But the idea of playing a mini-Super Bowl so soon is a reason to be motivated.

"It's prime time ... it's national TV ... it's the Los Angeles Raiders," cornerback Dennis Thurman said. "What more could you ask for. Everybody was picking the Raiders to win the AFC — either them or the Jets. The Raiders feel like they should be considered in the same category with the Cowboys. They want to be in the top echelon just like us."

Through careful planning and some luck, Landry has steered the Cowboys into the fast lane at the proper time. All the regimentation of training camp combined with tougher curfews and the no-spike rule have had an impact.

Some of the effects might be subliminal.

"It's like a business course we took in college," Bob Breunig said. "We studied what is called the Hawthorne Effect. A factory out in California changed the colors on the wall and the music they played. And production went up 15 percent."

Landry is not yet ready to credit the get-tough policy for the 7-0 record. Or predict a Super Bowl appearance.

"Oh, the concentration has been much better because of the things we've done," Landry said. "The players have done everything we've asked them to do. And you take away some distractions and the concentration will always be better. But school's still out. It's a little early to be speculating."

Landry has discussed what he calls the "Super Bowl level" during team meetings. He has placed more emphasis on reaching the Super Bowl this year.

Although he told his players last Friday that they are capable of winning every game this season, he still stands by the prediction the Cowboys will finish 12-4.

"I can't say we'll go undefeated because there's still the chance that we'll lose players to injuries. And we still haven't established a pattern — I'm talking about a week in and week out pattern. We might have started a little one Sunday.

"It's going to be hard to win them all because teams are so equal now in the NFL. There is so much scoring. It's not like we're playing solid football every week. You still have to account for the bounce of the ball. This trend could reverse itself pretty quickly."

Without the get-tough policy, Thurman said the Cowboys would be 5-2. In that case, the Cowboys would be one game behind the Washington Redskins.

"Last year we weren't mentally tough at the end of games," Thurman said. "That's the difference this year. I think we are just tougher mentally. It's a lot of little intangibles that we've got this year that didn't exist last season."

Broncho back ranks No. 1 on honor roll

By Associated Press

It didn't take Odessa High running back Charles Hunter long to get the attention of last week's opponent, Midland High.

He went 80 yards for a touchdown on a sweep on the first play of the game. Then, just to keep the memory fresh, Hunter went on to gain 259 yards on 27 carries and score another touchdown on a one-yard run in a 34-13 victory.

Hunter, who earns notice in this week's Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll, has been leaving similar impressions most of this season. A week earlier, he dented Big Spring's defene for 264 yards and has missed the 100-yard mark only once in seven games this season.

"He can run over you or out run you," Odessa Coach Jerry Millsapps said. "He's had some pretty phenomenal runs. If you need one yard he can get it or if you need 60, that's what he'll do."

Hunter has 1,170 yards on 149 carries this season and has scored 15 touchdowns.

Goldthwaite's pass-catch duo of quarterback Chip Head and receiver Ricky Roberts also left sad memories for Blanket. Head hit 15 of 24 passes for 381 yards and five touchdowns, including the first four to Roberts.

Roberts snared TD catches of 45, one, 76 snd 35 yards to run his total to 35 receptions for the year. Fellow receiver Eric Dennis has 28 catches.

"They can usually out-muscle or out-rebound anybody they are playing against," Coach Chan Priest said. "Chip is good throwing to us or else he throws it over everybody. He doesn't have many interceptions."

Vidor tailback Darrell Minon meanwhile, bludgeoned West Orange Stark with 275 yards rushing on 40 carries, which represented all but five of his team's rushing plays. Minon scored twice en route to a 28-7 victory. At one point in the first half he carried 12 consecutive times. He had a 16-carry string in the second had and hasn't been stopped yet.

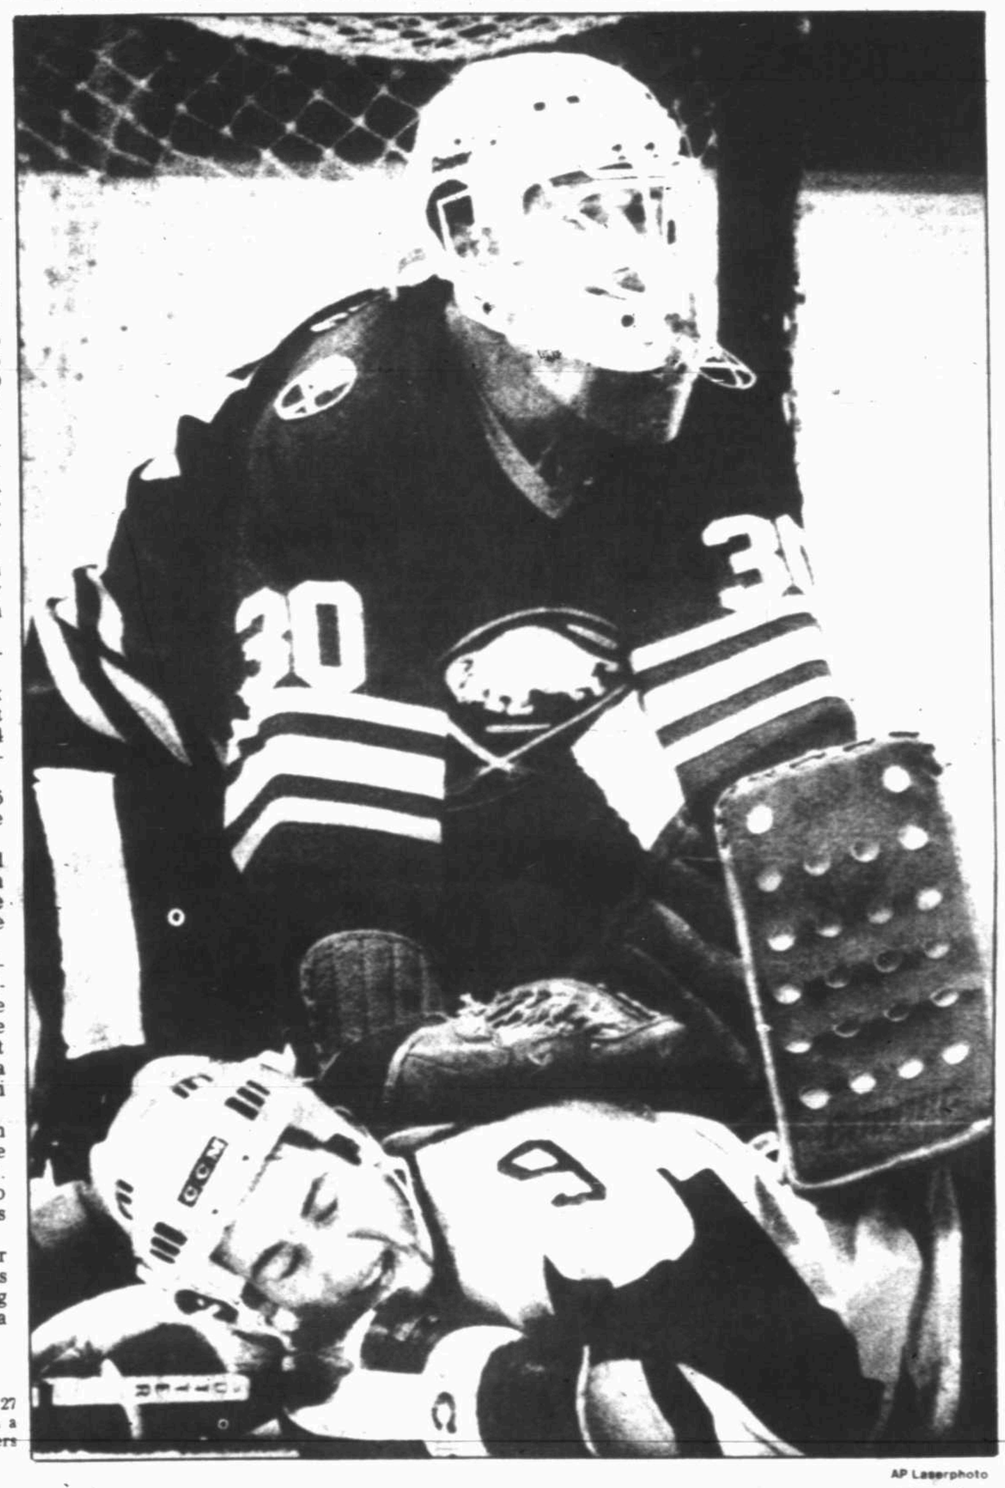

Coach Phillip Brown sees nothing unusual in the fact that one player is the majority of the team's offense. "That's his job," Brown said. "There are people all over the world that want to run with the football. So does Darrell and he gets to do it."

Austin LBJ free safety Pat James had better timing with Austin Travis passers than Travis receivers. James had five interceptions in helping LBJ to a 14-9 victory. James' first theft set up a first quarter touchdown.

In other outstanding individual performances:

— Senior fullback Isaac Garnett bulled 127 yards on 27 carries and scored all three Midland Lee touchdowns in a 20-7 victory over Odessa Permian, knocking the Panthers from their No. 2 state ranking.

— Sophomore tailback Ernie Williams had 143 yards rushing at halftime and finished with 190 yards on 18 carries including a 35-yard touchdown run to lead Amarillo Palo Duro to a 41-16 victory over Lubbock Coronado.

Top-seeded Tarr stunned

USTA upsets begin

BY BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The Texas American Bank Masters Classic, the United States Tennis Association's final stop in Texas, has already produced a major upset and some heated duels on the first day of the Tournament at Midland College.

Unseeded Jai DiLouie, a former All-American from SMU, blasted top-seeded Derek Tarr of South Africa 6-1, 6-1, to send the early favorite packing. DiLouie blistered Tarr with a relentless effort in a steady wind, passing Tarr often and generally out-smarting the former Auburn University All-American.

In other first round action, second seeded John Sadri of Charlotte, N.C. eliminated David Schneider 6-1, 6-4; P3 Leif Shiras of Milwaukee defeated Brian Joelson, Portland, 6-4, 6-3; P4 Phil Lehnhoff of Novaga, Ca. beat John Hayes of CosCob, Conn. 6-2, 7-5; P5 Ben Testerman, Knoxville, struggled past Juan Farrow of St. Louis, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Sixth-seeded Bruce Foxworth of LA overcame Bruce Brescia, LaGrange, Il., 6-4, 4-6, 6-2; P7 Howard Sands, LA, crunched Doug Boswell, Tulsa, 6-0, 6-2; eighth-seeded Randy Nixon of Coronado, Ca., stopped Richard Akel, N. Little Rock, 6-4, 6-3. P9 Andis Luters, Trabaco Canyon, Ca. beat New Zealander Mark Lewis 6-3, 6-0; Chilean Alvaro Fillol, P10, edged Mexico's Gerardo Varela 2-6, 7-6, 6-2; P11 John Sevely of Los Altos, Ca., disposed of Tom Lucci, Winter Park, Fla., 6-2, 6-1.

NUMBER 12 Corey Wittenberg of Ogden Dunes, In., was upset by unseeded John Benson of Inglewood, Ca., 4-6, 7-6, 6-3; P13 Tom Csipkay of Wycoff, N.J., beat Paul Kronk of Australia 6-1, 6-2; Chilean Juan Nunez, P 14, knocked off Karl Richter of California, 6-4, 6-0; P15 Renald Etienne of Haiti beat Walter redondo of National City, Ca., 6-4, 6-1, and Gary Donnelly of Scottsdale, P16, was eliminated by Juan Farrow of St. Louis, 7-6, 6-1.

The tournament, organized by the Midland tennis Club, features 32 young professionals working on compiling points. In pro tennis, a complex rating system is used to determine player rankings. From these ratings, players are seeded and higher seeds are eligible for more tournaments or get qualification exemptions.

The USTA sponsors national tournaments that help younger pros make the jump into the big time. Through the series of segments, players can boost their point totals and climb the competitive tennis ladder.

MIDLAND is the final stop of the Texas segment. The last stop of the USTA segments is the Masters, meaning only the top players in the segments compete. The top 32 point-getters from the Texas segments' stops in Corpus Christi, Dallas, Houston and Tyler are assembled in Midland for this event.

Naturally, the competition is very good at the Masters level. The players often go on to bigger and better, and well-paying, spots on the Grand Prix circuit (Wimbledon, U.S. Open, etc.).

Last year, such players as Jimmy Arias, Drew Gitlin, Tim Mayotte, Mel Purcell, Eliot Teltscher and Chip Hooper played in at least one of the USTA segments. Several other pros have also competed on this level and consequently their is a good chance that some of the talent at Midland College this week will make their presence felt in the future.

Midland is serving as the site of the Texas Masters for the second straight year, largely due to the efforts of the Midland Tennis Club.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

It wasn't all a dream

The pure horror of defeating Odessa Permian is the fear of waking up one morning and finding out that it was all a dream.

Well, five mornings have passed and Midland Lee's 20-7 "King is Dead" victory is still on the books. There is hope that it was never really a dream after all. No mo' Mojo still intact.

Tyranny has ended. Joy is back in the land of District 4-5A. The monster has been slain. No weekly sacrifices now have to be offered to the "unbeatable" legend. Maybe all that is history.

THE HURDLE has been cleared. Maybe it won't take seven years to turn the trick again. Maybe there won't be 39 stanzas to another Mojo streak.

And maybe Odessa will forgive us lowly Midlanders for a week of celebration. It was a long time in coming and there is no hope for stifling this grin that stretches from Holiday Hill Road to Fairgrounds Road.

Joy just simply erupts when tyranny ends. And, yes, it was tyranny. Mojo has been unmerciful to the 4-5A peasants. It was time for a pitchfork rebellion.

Victory brings out character, but so do losses. And that's one lesson Old Mojo will learn in 1983. The perfect 10-0 regular season is down the tubes. Now we all get a taste of adversity. It's good for the soul.

And it's good for another 4-5A team to experience the mountain top. Lee's Rebels are in the clouds for a change. And it feels good. It feels good in Abilene, San Angelo and Big Spring. And in parts of Odessa where Black Magic isn't supreme.

But a word of warning must go out to Spike Dykes' Rebels. To make it all real will take a playoff berth and there are still three games remaining. What good is climbing the mountian only to fall off? The feeling could disappear as fast as it has come.

IT IS going to be hard for the Rebels to come down to earth. It's simply a case of human nature. But to lose sight of the ultimate goal would be a disaster at this point in time.

Not only will the Lee players want to revel in last week's victory, which is well deserved, but Homecoming activities come this week. Those are enough distractions for one wheel to come rolling off at race speed.

The first thought following Lee's victory over Permian and Abilene High's stunning upset of highly ranked San Angelo was that Lee will be the No. 1 team from the district in the upcoming playoffs if they defeat Big Spring, Abilene Cooper and Midland High.

One slip in any of those games, however, and the dream may turn into a nightmare. What difference would a victory over Permian mean in November when you are sitting at home with two other teams in the playoffs?

Both Lee and Midland High got a belly full of that feeling last year when a playoff berth went to San Angelo on a flip of the coin. It wasn't fun.

RIGHT NOW, Lee is a very dangerous team. They are ripe for a whipping. Now is where character has real meaning.

Lee has given new meaning to the 4-5A race by beating Odessa Permian. Lee went into that game thinking it was the last realistic hope for a playoff berth. Now the battle has been won and the war rages on.

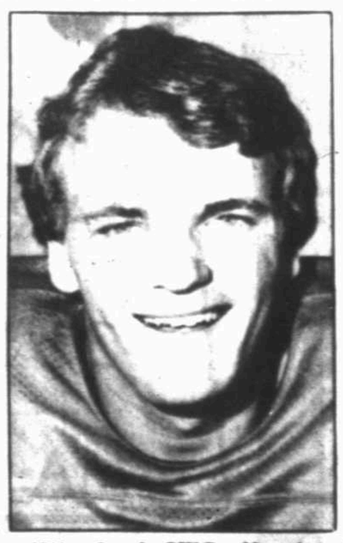

You just have to love this team that has given us a moment to raise our heads, but at the same time, you want to give them a well-placed kick that will keep minds pointed in the right direction.

But if you don't mind, this one lowly brain can't forget last week and never will. The King is Dead and the Rebels better not blow that feeling. It feels too good.

Volleyballers keep hopes alive

Midland Lee and Midland High came through with volleyball victories Tuesday night, to keep alive their slim hopes for a postseason playoff berth.

Midland Lee defeated Odessa Permian 9-15, 15-7 and 15-10 as Coach Jane Baulch's Rebels raised their District 4-5A record to 7-4.

The Lee JV's lost to Permian, 9-15 and 5-15.

Lee faces Big Spring Thursday in its next league action.

San Angelo and Abilene Cooper, with one loss each, are the teams to catch in district play.

Midland High defeated Odessa High, 15-1 and 15-6, to raise its District 4-5A volleyball record to 6-5.

Seitz, the man who changed baseball, dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter Seitz, the labor aribtrator whose decision in 1975 paved the way for free agency in baseball and other sports, is dead at 78.

Seitz died Monday after spinal surgery.

An arbitrator in a wide variety of labor rulings, Seitz is best known for his rulings in 1975 in the cases of Andy Messersmith and Dave McNally, who had requested that they be granted free agent status.

Seitz held that the reserve clause — which bound players to their teams until the teams traded or released them — was valid for only one year. Thus, McNally, who played for the Montreal Expos and Messersmith, of the Los Angeles Dodgers, were free after they had finished the length of their contracts, plus one year.

Seitz, a lawyer, also served as a member of the National Wage Stabilization Board, was counsel and assistant to the director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. He also served as a director of industrial relations for the Defense Department.

Switzer too demanding

Dupree flees slave-driver

By SKIP BAYLESS
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — Time out. Check signals. Say what, Marcus Dupree?

By now, most of you poor working stiffs have been force-fed headlines about how Dupree did flee from that slave-driver Barry Switzer. Dupree disappeared and dozens of mature jounalists, this one included, fretted over the whereabouts of the 19-year-old.

Turns out he was near Philadelphia, which had a dark week. The Phils and Eagles were humiliated and Dupree will be when he wakes or grows up. Actually, Dupree's native Philly is in Mississippi, where he is recovering beneath Mama's skirts. Dupree indicates he will not return to Oklahoma, which he discovered is a school and not merely a Triple-A team or country club for future Heisman winners.

Barry Switzer

DUPREE SAYS Coach Switzer was "too demanding." Come again? The same Barry Switzer we all know and occasionally loathe? Disco Barry, king of rock and poll?

About all Switzer demands of his entertainers is that they show up by kickoff and promise not to try any moves Michael Jackson wouldn't. BYU has its passing, USC its sweeping and OU its fumbling, an art form. If this were diving, OU backs would get nines and 10s for creativity.

Which is to say, Sooner backs run the way Switzer does his program — fast and loose.

And this isn't all bad. I'm exaggerating about players just showing up for kickoff, though that's all Switzer "demanded" of Dupree. Switzer works his thoroughbreds a little harder than you've probably heard. It's just that he doesn't run them up mountains or break their noses if they miss a sidestraddle hop.

No Woody or Kush is Switzer, one of the few college coaches who keeps this Saturday insanity in perspective. Switzer may occasionally turn into a frat rat after hours, but there are a lot of 19-year-olds coaching college football. Switzer was one who, when hired, accepted that he'd be fired. While other coaches are burning midnight projector lamps, he has been working second and third jobs in oil and investments that probably have secured him for life.

Switzer demanding?

THIS IS the man who has made a sensational career out of relating to the black athlete while many of his foes still called them boy. Switzer, son of a bootlegger, grew up with blacks in rural Arkansas. Switzer is one who actually enjoys rapping with a black recruit while others figure they only speak money. Switzer wants them to have a good time off and on the field — to realize their spinning, juking potential, fumbles be damned.

Which is why Saturday's OU-Without-Marcus 21, Oklahoma State 20 was the darndest thing I've seen (via playback) since, well, Cowboys 21, New Orleans 20. OU lost six fumbles in six tries. OU had a school record 15 penalties. OSU intercepted once and returned a blocked punt for a touchdown. OU trailed, 20-7, in quarter four.

OU cut it to 20-18. Switzer called off the onside kick, though no one told the kicker, freshman walk-on Tim Lashar. As the Sooners barreled headlong to cover the deep boot, Lashar's botched onside turned into a low hook that ricocheted off the helmet of an OSU defensive back into the hands of stunned Sooner Scott Case. Naturally, Lashar's 46-yard field goal then saved the game, if not Switzer's part-time job.

BY THEN, Kush might have forfeited and run this bunch all the way back to Norman. Barry let's 'em play — and usually win.

But the punchline is, even Barry has a few rules. He made pretty good backs — and people — out of Greg Pruitt and Joe Washington.

"And Marcus was the only one I couldn't reach," Switzer said.

So Dupree ran home — to eventual "good riddance" from teammates and alums. He may wind up at Southern Miss or in the USFL, but he'll never find another Barry Switzer.

Wadkins, Sutton head Disney golf

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Lanny Wadkins, a key figure in the United States' Ryder Cup victory last Sunday, and defending champion Hal Sutton head the invitational field for the Walt Disney World Golf Classic.

The 72-hole event — the next-to-last official tournament on the 10-month PGA Tour schedule — begins Thursday on three courses at this sprawling resort and amusement complex with 132 pros chasing $400,000 in prize money.

The format calls for the pros to play one round on each of the three courses, each day with a different set of amateur partners, before the field is cut for the final round Sunday at the 7,170-yard, par 72 Magnolia course.

Sutton, who scored his first career victory and wrapped up Rookie of the Year honors in this tournament last season, will be seeking more important seasonal honors in this, his last start of the season in events counting toward the money-winning title.

As the holder of two important 1983 titles, the Tournament Players Championship and the PGA, he's virtually assured of being named Player of the Year.

He leads runnerup Fuzzy Zoeller, who is not competing here, by more than $10,000 in the money-winning race. A high finish in this tournament, which offers $72,000 to the winner, could wrap it up.

His opposition is led by Wadkins and six other members of the American team that held off the best from Europe for a one-point victory in the biennial Ryder Cup

Chaparrals present new 1983-84 look

Basketball season isn't that far away.

Midland College already has engaged in three scrimmages and this weekend goes to Abilene for a six-team jamboree that will give Coach Jerry Stone an idea of what the opposition has. Junior college teams from the WJCC and other areas of the state will be competing.

The Chaparrals open their season Nov. 7 against Cisco and then host the Chaparral Tournament Nov. 10-11-12.

Notice, this year it is a tournament, not a classic. That means the eight teams will play to a championship. In the past, three WJCC teams have played three outside opponents while avoiding one another like the plague.

THIS YEAR'S field shapes up as the best ever with Garden City and Barton County, Kan., coming south to join a Texas field that will include Ranger, St. Phillips of San Antonio, Howard College, Odessa College and McLennan.

McLennan and Midland met in last year's Region V tournament finals.

Mike Mitchell, architect of a national champion back in his days at Western Texas College, is at Howard College and Stone expects the Hawks to be formidable. Jerry also looks for big improvement at OC, "where they have 26 candidates out."

"What really worries me," adds Stone, "is that a friend of mine has coached against several WJCC teams in scrimmages and he rates us as no better than fifth in the conference."

With Spud Webb at North Carolina State and Chester Smith at Eau Claire, Wis., the Chaps will be a different type club this year despite the return of Ervin Williams, Brian Essary, Preston Robertson and Jackie Phinnessee.

"Without Spud and Chester, we will have to play more like a team," says Stone. "No more of this dawdling down to the final minutes and then turning on a spurt to pull it out. We aren't that good this year."...

According to Stone, word from Raleigh is that Spud will start for the defending NCAA champions. "In talking with them (NC State coaches), they seem amazed that Spud can play, no matter where he is on the court. We tried to tell them that, but they had to find out for themselves."...

NOW THAT the National League has lost the World Series, perhaps I'll have to reevaluate the contention that the NL is superior to the American League.

The reassessment is demanded not so much because the Orioles beat the Phillies in yawn-provoking straight sets, but because the Phils were even in the World Series.

The Phillies are a team whose players were in their prime 10 years ago. What's disturbing is that it was still capable of winning the NL pennant from the rocking chair.

Where is the new, young talent of today and the future? Did the well run dry or are today's teams still in the minor leagues, waiting for those guaranteed, long term contracts to run out?

At least the Phillies won't have to worry about their talent well running dry. The team that batted less than .200 in the Series probably will respond to defeat with wholesale changes. Undoubtedly, talent that has been maturing elsewhere will be called up to revive the roster.

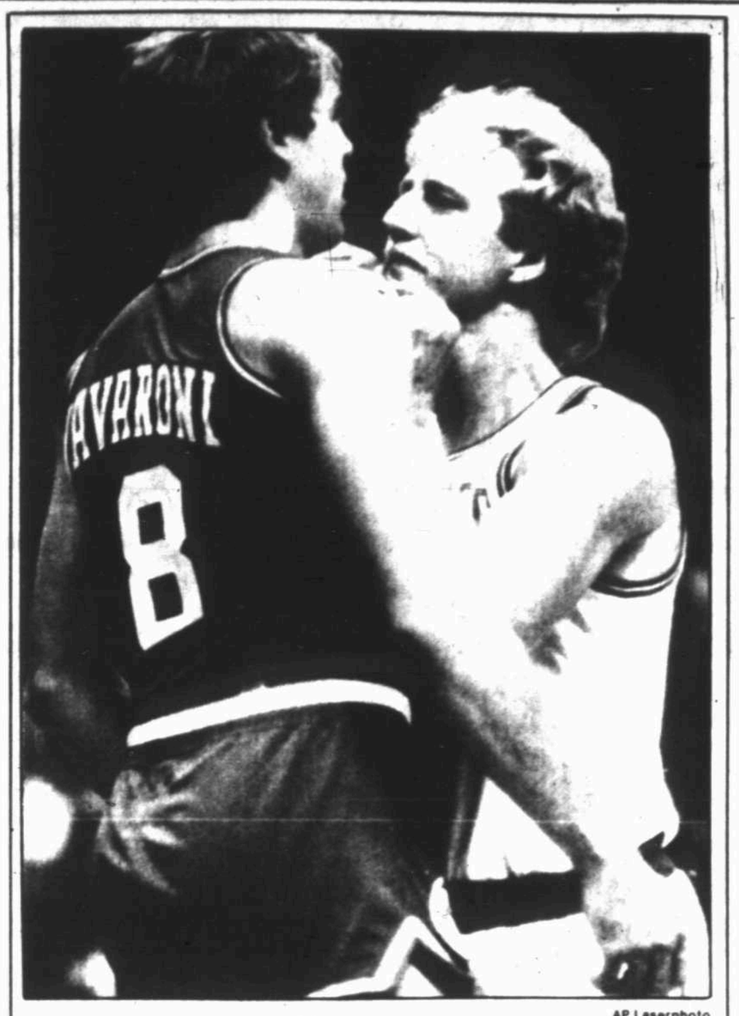

You can look for the Phils spring training camp in Florida to abound with fresh talent...Yaz, Joe Niekro, Gaylord Perry, Jim Koosman all seem to be ripe and available. Larry Bowa may be judged ready by now and be recalled from Chicago, along with Fergie. Jenkins should be ready to pay dividends. The Phils have been waiting a long time. They farmed him out to Chicago in the 1960s. Johnny Bench? Sorry, he's just a kid in his late 30s...

ALTHOUGH SOME of the Dallas Cowboys grumble over Coach Tom Landry's decree that players spend the night before a home game in a motel, Too Tall Jones has no complaint. "Actually, he's doing me a favor. This way I get a nice dinner and breakfast on the house."

Wide receiver Mike Renfro claims that not bunking out together and eating the pregame meal together is one of the Houston Oilers' problems.

"In the locker room before a game, you see empty McDonald's bags all over the place. Some of these rookies just don't know how to eat properly."

Bird, Auerbach fined for exhibition brawl

NEW YORK (AP) — One day after Boston General Manager Red Auerbach and three players were fined for yet another fight in a National Basketball Association exhibition game, the Celtics and Philadelphia 76ers will meet again.

Auerbach was fined $2,500 by the NBA Tuesday for leaving his seat in the stands and running onto the court to verbally abuse referees and Philadelphia players during a first-quarter fight between Boston's All-Star forward Larry Bird and the 76ers' Marc Iavaroni.

Bird was fined $2,000 and Iavaroni was fined $1,000.

In addition, Boston's Gerald Henderson was fined $500 for punching Philadelphia rookie Sedale Threatt in the third quarter of the game, played in Boston. The three players' fines included the $250 they were automatically assessed for being ejected.

"A general manager has no place on the court at any time during an NBA game," said Scotty Stirling, the league's vice president for operations. "Auerbach's actions were embarrassing and intolerable."

All the emotion won't be on field

DALLAS (AP) — All the intensity won't be on the field when the Dallas Cowboys and Los Angeles Raiders collide Sunday night. There will some in the front offices, too.

Dallas Club President Tex Schramm, and Raider General Partner Al Davis are less than bosom buddies.

Schramm was openly critical of Davis trying to take the Raiders out of Oakland.

In fact, Schramm still refers to the Raiders as "Oakland" even though the courts, for the time being, have ruled they have a right to be in the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Ironically, Dallas Coach Tom Landry and Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores speak to each other.

"Flores and I get along well to offset Davis and Schramm," Landry quipped.

Asked about the Schramm-Davis feud, Flores joked, "I didn't know they didn't get along."

Both teams claim to be the winningest in the National Football League.

"With a record of 194-78-11 the Los Angeles Raiders stand as the only NFL team with a winning percentage of better than .700 for the 1963-1982 period," reads the Raider press guide.

COLLEGE FOCUS

Hold the relish, onions

An AP Sports Analysis
By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

From the scare Nebraska received against Oklahoma State two weeks ago, it is much too early to continue this propaganda about the Cornhuskers being the greatest college football team of all time.

The best team ever? Let's wait until the end of the season. But one of the greatest football programs? No question about it.

Oklahoma State was almost Nebraska's equal on the field before the Huskers salvaged a 14-10 victory. But that's where the equality stops between Nebraska and most other teams.

"They have a freshman team and they redshirt them the next year. Then, they have an opportunity to play on the varsity their third year," says OSU Coach Jimmy Johnson. "They get everybody even close to being a player from Nebraska, plus they're able to do it with numbers. They actively recruit walk-ons. Every little town in the state encourages players to walk on at Nebraska.

"You take 300 players and develop them and take the best 15-to-20 walk-ons and add them to the 95 scholarship players — that's a pretty good load of talent."

Nebraska's numbers are staggering since the state's population of 1.57 million ranked 35th in the 1980 census. "A lot of cities are bigger than our whole state," says assistant athletic director Don Bryant. But in most places, allegiance is divided and one team can't control the entire state.

Johnson doesn't buy the theory that Nebraska, which outscored its first five opponents 289-56, intentionally runs up the score.

"They play a lot of players," he says. "It's just that their second and third units are good enough to play against most major-college teams. (Tailback) Jeff Smith was one of the most sought-after players in this part of the country four years ago. He averaged 10 yards a carry last year and he's playing second-team. Nate Mason is one of the fastest — if not the fastest — quarterbacks they've ever had. He's been there five years. So when they put their second team in, you're not exactly going against non-athletes. Their fresh second and third teams are liable to score points. The first team may get tired if they leave them in.

"UCLA ALMOST beat Georgia and tied Arizona State and it wasn't even a contest against Nebraska (42-10). Nebraska committed four turnovers in the first half and had the quarterback fall on the ball at the 2-yard line at the end of the game or they could have beaten them worse than they did.

"Their second team plays in the first quarter and they have more experience than anyone in the country on their third unit. They can only take 60 players on the road. In Lincoln, you might get lucky and they'll put in the sixth team. When they dress 100 players, it's not even half their squad. When we dress 100, it's our entire squad. Nebraska's athletic budget is $9 million; that's double ours.

"They have six weight rooms and their main one has more than 13,000 square feet. We have one weight room of 1,900 square feet for all our male athletes. No one comes close to their weight rooms.

"Nebraska lost six of last year's seven starters on the offensive line, but a lot of their linemen are fourth-year juniors. In any other program, they might have played their first or second years. Now, they're playing after four years of lifting weights and developing. Some teams might beat them with talent, but no one has their experience. They're the oldest team you'll play."

Bryant concedes that "it takes an exceptional player to move in as a sophomore. When we could give 45 football scholarships a year, half of them went to Nebraska kids. Now that the limit is 30, that number is cut in half and the rest come here as walk-ons."

EVEN NEBRASKA can't do it without the horses and among those who never redshirted are the Cornhuskers' three main offensive guns — quarterback Turner Gill, tailback Mike Rozier, wingback Irving Fryar. The Cornhuskers are averaging 535.9 yards and 48.1 points a game.

"They remind me of no other offensive team that I've ever seen," says Homer Smith, offensive coordinator at UCLA and one of the best offensive minds in the profession. "No one has ever put the weaponry together quite that way. They're just the greatest. It's more than just talent; it's a great coaching job and a great combination of weapons. It just wears you out.

"First, they bloody your nose with power when they just slug it out with you. Next, they run reverses from different designs almost every week. Third, they throw accurately short and periodically they launch a deep one. Fourth, and most important, they option several different ways — they fake a trap option, they fake a man running off-tackle and option, they don't fake anyone and option. Fifth, they've made you worry about a bizarre play the last few years (like the guard-around for a touchdown against Oklahoma a few years back). Everyone who plays them worries about a crazy play."

Cougars rank 6th nationally

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Cougars are once again statistical marvels, a common occurance since Bill Yeoman became the proud father of the veer option offense.

The Cougars rank sixth in the country in rushing offense with a 283-yard per game average and 12th in total offense with a 418-yard average. Running back Donald Jordan is running at a 104-yard per game clip, 12th in the nation in rushing.

But there is a down side. Houston has a 2-4 record, has lost 18 of 31 fumbles and thrown eight interceptions. They've had a penchant for getting inside the opponent's 10-yard line without scoring. They've accomplished that feat three times in the last two games.

"Every team at some point has to click inside and learn to play over their mistakes," Yeoman said Tuesday. "You just have to blot them (mistakes) out and get it done. When that happens, you'll see a significant difference in us.

"We've got to get that click this year. So when we walk out there next year ... ."

Of the 26 turnovers, 10 have set up scoring drives for the opposition and 11 others killed potential UH scoring drives.

"It's not a physical thing anymore," Yeoman said of the drive-killing miscues. "It's the mental thing of just getting over the hump. We haven't stopped anybody and we haven't taken the ball and driven 99 yards to score."

It has been suggested that the best strategy against Houston is to force the offense into a long drive because they are certain to fumble somewhere along the way.

But Yeoman is far from ready to admit that it's time to junk the veer.

"That's like saying if San Francisco gets to the one-yard line and doesn't score, they should junk their offense," Yeoman said. "At least, if we're moving the football, we've got a chance to score."

Houston has been inside the opponent's 10-yard line three times in the last two games against Baylor and Texas A&M and came away without any points each time. All three drives ended in lost fumbles.

Houston gained 485 yards against Baylor and lost 42-21 and ran up 472 yards against the Aggies and lost 30-7.

Irish-USC loses glitter

CHICAGO (AP) — The Southern Cal-Notre Dame game Saturday has lost much of its glitter this year, but to coaches Ted Tollner and Gerry Faust it remains as important as ever.

For a change, the game carries no weight in determining the national championship. It won't be on national television and for the first time in recent memory neither of the perennial powers is ranked.

Blame the two teams' records. Southern Cal is coming off a 34-14 defeat at the hands of Arizona State and is saddled with a 2-3-1 record. Notre Dame got off to a rousing start with a 52-6 triumph over Purdue. But the Irish suffered successive losses to Michigan State and Miami, Fla., before rebounding with road victories against Colorado, South Carolina and Army.

"It is one of college football's better games," said Tollner on Tuesday in a hookup on Faust's weekly telephone interview out of South Bend. "I only wish we were playing better."

Tollner, in his first year as head coach at Southern Cal, didn't expect his Trojans to be world beaters. But he didn't forsee such a big letdown, either.

"We're trying to get the organization back in order," he said. "We're frustrated. It's a shock but we hope to rebound and we're anxious to get back. Regardless of the record, we can see a lot of positive things ahead."

Things are beginning to look up for the Irish, who earlier this season were considered national championship contenders before their unexpected setbacks.

"We're getting better but this is a big test Saturday," said Faust. "When you get to this game, you can take the records and throw them out the window. This is one of the big rivalries if not the biggest in college football."

Faust is glad the Irish, who have played only one home game, are returning to Notre Dame Stadium.

"We were pleased with the road trip except for Miami, where we played poorly," said Faust. "But we'll be glad to be back home. We haven't played there in a long time. We don't even know where the locker room is."

Anytime Notre Dame puts together a string of three victories, the temptation is to project the rest of the season. But Faust will have none of that.

NFL ratings lagging

NEW YORK (AP) — Prime time television ratings are lagging, but attendance is strong one year after a players strike that crippled the National Football League and left bitter feelings among some fans of professional football.

Figures were not yet available for Monday night's game, a wild 48-47 victory by Green Bay over Washington, but the five previous nationally televised Monday night games failed to with come within four Nielsen ratings points of the Dallas-Washington opener.

That game pulled a 21.9 rating and a 39 percent share of the audience, while last week's Pittsburgh-Cincinnati game drew only a 17.2 rating and a 28 share.

Those figures, combined with weak ratings for the first three games of the World Series, prompted Jim Spence, senior vice president for ABC Sports, to say, "We've asked our research people to look at it."

However, NFL figures show attendance continues to run ahead of the record-setting pace of 1981, the year before the strike, which wiped out nearly half the regular-season schedule.

In 1981, through the first seven weeks and 98 games, total attendance was 5,778,837 and the per game average was 58,968. This season, through the same period, the NFL has drawn 5,781,211 and is averaging 58,992 a game.

Television officials say that the factors influencing the dropoff in prime-time television ratings include more effective counter-programming by networks in the form of movies and specials, programming alternatives on cable and the proliferation of Sunday pro football that sometimes runs from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m.

"Of course, we're concerned," Spence said. "We have a major involvement in the NFL and major league baseball through 1989. We think, despite some of the disappointing audience levels, that when you talk about something as solid as the National Football League or postseasons baseball, on a long-range basis, the audience levels are going to be there."

USFL expands playoffs

HOUSTON (AP) — Owners of United States Football League teams have expanded their playoffs from three to seven games, partly in an attempt to attract more attention from fans, a league spokesman says.

The owners voted at their annual meeting Tuesday to add a division, double the number of playoff games and add a referee to the crew officiating each game, spokesman Doug Kelly said.

Each conference will send two division champions and two wild-card teams to the playoffs, Kelly said. Last season, the USFL had three division champions and a wild-card team.

The league, entering its second year, will begin an 18-game regular season Feb. 26, Kelly said.

Drug charges danger signal

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Guilty pleas to drug charges by four members of the 1983 Kansas City Royals should be a danger signal to those who run professional sports, says the federal official whose investigation resulted in the pleas and indictments against 12 other people.

None of the 12 people indicted by a federal grand Tuesday has any apparent connection with professional sports. But U.S. Attorney Jim Marquez said information supplied by Vida Blue, Willie Wilson, Willie Aikens and Jerry Martin "shed light on the case."

"I certainly hope that these pleas of guilty by these players, and the attention this case has received ... will bring to the public's attention even more the fact there apparently is a drug problem in professional sports," Marquez said at a news conference following the indictments.

"The problem has to be addressed, hopefully by the respective leagues, rather than be addressed by the courts, or rather than get to the courts."

Marquez said he did not expect any other members of the Royals to be charged in the case.

Asked if evidence or testimony provided by the Royals players, who earlier had pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges, had indicated cocaine use among other major league baseball teams or among other professional athletes, Marquez said, "I cannot answer that. I'm sorry."

When asked if testimony in the upcoming trials in the case would indicate whether cocaine use is widespread among other major league baseball teams, Marquez paused a moment before saying: "You're asking me a question that may relate back to grand jury testimony, and I would just as soon not comment."

Blue, a former Cy Young Award-winning pitcher, pleaded guilty Monday to possessing three grams of cocaine. Wilson, the 1982 American League batting champion, Aikens and Martin pleaded guilty three days earlier to a charge of attempting to possess cocaine. All were released on unsecured bond and ordered to report to the courtroom of U.S. Magistrate J. Milton Sullivant on Nov. 17 for sentencing.

The charges, all misdemeanors, carry maximum penalties of a $5,000 fine and one year in prison.

All four plea-bargained with government prosecutors, and Blue's agreement was kept secret. Blue, 34, who was released by the Royals on Aug. 5, was the only one of the four to appear before the grand jury. The former member of the Oakland A's three World Series championship teams spent almost two hours in the grand jury room on Monday.

Asked about the evidence or testimony supplied in the case by the four players, Marquez said, "I think I can say they shed some light on the case. I would not say their information helped to make or break the case."

He declined to say whether the four players would testify in the trials, which are expected to start within 90 days.

"Since the trials are pending in this case, you'll have to understand I cannot comment publicly as to what the participation of any of these players will be in the course of the trial," he said. "You'll just have to wait and see if they will be witnesses or not."

The 12 defendants named Tuesday were charged in two indictments with conspiring to distribute cocaine, distributing cocaine and using a communications facility in furtherance of the commission of a felony. The indictments covered the period from January 1982 to March 1, 1983 and June 1983.

Marquez said Mark Liebl, 33, a former Johnson County, Kan., liquor store owner, was "a major target of this investigation."

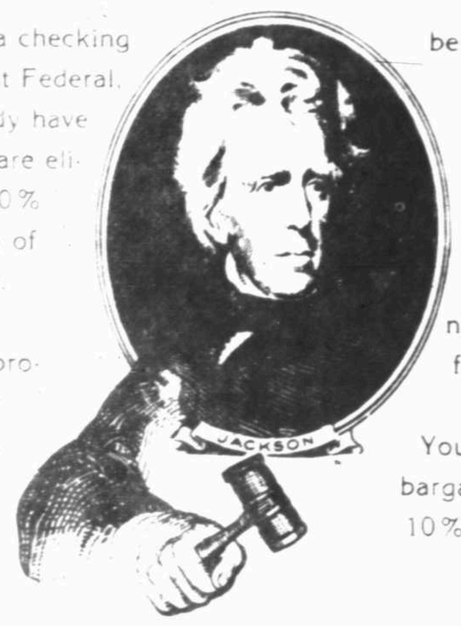

Liebl was named in both indictments returned by the grand jury and was listed as the owner of the suburban house where phone calls from some Royals players ordering cocaine were intercepted by FBI wiretaps in June.

The indictments said Liebl and other defendants traveled to and from Dallas, Texas; Wichita, Kan.; Overland Park, Kan.; Kansas City, Mo.; and Lawrence, Kan., to acquire and distribute cocaine. The indictments also said the defendants engaged in numerous telephone calls "regarding the distribution of cocaine."

JIM MURRAY

Score it Dempsey by a KO in fifth round

Washington Post News Service

PHILADELPHIA — The World Series, such as it was, came to an end at 7:23 Philadelphia time Sunday to the great relief of almost everybody, including probably the Philadelphia Phillies. The end came quietly. The Phillies died in their sleep, so to speak. They looked as out of place in this as a hobo in Buckingham Palace or a tart in church.

The Phils took the field with the oldest lineup this side of Forest Lawn cemetery. So the Orioles buried them. The average age of the starting players exclusive of the battery was 36 years 3 months. They must have thought this was shuffleboard.

If you missed it, just go get some pictures of the second Louis-Schmeling fight or any train wreck and you got the idea.

THE PROBLEM was, when you got right down to it, that Baltimore had two of everything and what they didn't have two of batted both ways. They had pitchers that were about as easy to hit as a mosquito in a dark room. The Phillies countered in the last game with a guy who had one of the best gopher balls ever seen in a World Series. Or anywhere else. Charles Hudson threw a four-hitter when he was in there. Three home runs and a double. That's four pitches for 14 bases. That's major league gophering. That's major league batting practice.

You had in this Series a guy who got more hits than anyone who ever played in the National League. You had a guy who's hit almost 400 home runs. You had pitchers whose Cy Young awards laid end to end would look like lawn chess.

But the most valuable player in it by certifiable vote of us giants of journalism was a pesky clubhouse type of guy who is ordinarily as unnoticeable as the butler. If he wasn't in it, we might be playing yet.

JOHN RIKARD Dempsey is the kind of guy who, in another era, would be called "Scrap Iron" or "Muggsy." He's about as much fun as a bee on your nose. He's as aggressive as an encyclopedia salesman. His stock-in-trade is making a nuisance of himself.

He ran this World Series like Toscanini at the Philharmonic. He called for the right notes by the right instruments because Baltimore is less a team than an orchestra.

In baseball, catching is not a career, it's a sentence. Hard time. Stoop labor. You're the charlady of sport, 190 squats a game, heat rashes under the mask on 90-degree days, foul balls that come off the bat 190 miles an hour and smash your finger. Or your Adam's apple.

Only the kind of guys who volunteer to defuse unexploded bombs or fight oil well fires or go down dark cellars to check growling noises put in for catching.

Rick Dempsey is the kind of guy who would break up a fight between two lions. He really thinks he's Jack. In a way, he was. He did to the Phils what the old Manassa Mauler did to Willard. He hit four doubles and a home run in this Series, drove in two runs and scored three.

BUT WHAT Rick was almost proudest of was the fact the Phillies walked him intentionally twice. Now, an intentional walk is the highest form of flattery. You walk Babe Ruth, not .230 hitters. Rick had gotten to the point in this World Series where the Phils figured they had a ringer wearing No. 24. With a slugging average of .923, which is about what the real Dempsey had, the opposition figured Baltimore had slipped a Mickey in on them. Mickey Mantle.

The Orioles don't really care whether this Dempsey can hit or not. Or dance, either. He can call a Series in which a guy with 389 lifetime home runs can get one broken-bat single as Mike Schmidt of the Phils did. He can throw out the only guy on the Phils who can go down to second base and make it between pitches – Joe Morgan. He's death on pop flies. He pounced on bunts.

In the last game, Eddie Murray hit two home runs. But that's dog-bites-dog stuff. Those were the 200th of Eddie's short career. Rick Dempsey's home run was "Say-That-Again?!" stuff. The 43rd of his long but short-ball career. Some years, Rick hits as many as three or five all year. This year he hit four besides the one Sunday.

HE ONCE started a riot in Venezuela in which his rival catcher in this Series, Bo Diaz, ended up with his throat cut by flying glass.

When someone dubbed him "Mr. Intensity," a radio interviewer asked him what that meant. "That," answered Rick Dempsey sunnily, "is a guy who plays as hard as he can at all times and still ends up batting .231."

The son of a show business couple who made their home in the San Fernando Valley, Rick Dempsey knows your notices last only one edition.

For that one edition, at least, they will be raves. "Dempsey KOs Phillies" will seem like old times. In the town where the other Dempsey lost his title, this Dempsey stopped the Phils in five.

He got five hits for 12 bases, a slugging average of .923. That's what Dempsey did to Firpo. Or Fred Fulton. The Phillies had a glass jaw, too, and this Dempsey found it. It wasn't even close. The Phils were as overmatched as Georges Carpentier. They had to be. They got beaten to death by a banjo. Of course, they can have an excuse. They can say Dempsey's glove was loaded. In this case, they'd be right.

Gas boom hits Pennsylvania

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — A backyard boom in natural gas wells has hit Erie County, where homeowners, pizza shops, funeral homes, churches, florists, and schools are drilling to tap into a potential bonanza.

"People are finding out that there's gas just about everywhere you drill," said driller Ron Oberlander, who is backlogged with 19 orders for wells and has a six-week waiting list.

"Drilling for gas isn't a gamble anymore. It's cheaper than a new car, and you can get your investment back in six to eight years. How can you go wrong?" he added as a rotary drill bore through a yard.

But some utilities and gas producers warn of trouble.

"It's a backyard Trojan horse that could cause havoc in the future," said Tim Merrill, executive director of the Pennsylvania Natural Gas Associates, a trade group. "Gas is an explosive commodity. I know how dangerous gas can be."

The gas rush, fueled by a desire to reduce or eliminate soaring utility bills, really hit last year when Pennsylvania issued 789 drilling permits for Erie County and 382 wells were drilled, triple the number in 1979.

Those numbers should be eclipsed this year, state officials say, and most of the action involves shallow wells drawing gas from a shale formation 300 feet to 1,100 feet beneath the surface.

Geologists say the shale formations, which date to glacial times and extend into New York and Ohio, have been producing natural gas in Erie County for 120 years.

Near Lake Erie, the shales are closer to the surface than anywhere else. They have no commercial value because the wells produce small amounts of gas, but people are sinking $7,000 to $15,000 into the ground in hopes of finding a gas supply to heat their homes or run their businesses for 20 to 30 years.

"They are low-volume but long-life wells. The gas bleeds from the shale. There are no guarantees, but a well can last for the life of a home," said John Harper, a geologist with the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources.

"Nobody's going to become a millionaire. But for domestic needs, for small businesses and municipalities, I think they're ideal. As long as you have a reputable driller and plumber, I heartily recommend it," he added.

Nevin Wintrod of Girard spent $8,800 for a 1,000-foot shale well because his yearly gas bill, now $1,600, has doubled in the past five years.

"It's an investment, a hedge against inflation," said Wintrod, a teacher of traffic and industrial safety at Edinboro University. "If it produces enough for us to heat our home, we can recoup the expenses in five years."

In Wesleyville, John Barbato manages a pizza shop that houses two apartments and will soon have a shale well, which can be dug within a week.

"We think it will save us a lot of money," he said. "If gas prices were reasonable, I don't think we'd be drilling."

Natural Fuel Gas Corp., the utility that serves 85,000 customers in Erie County and pipes most of its gas from the South, was granted a 28 percent rate increase 13 months ago. Its rate of $4.80 per million cubic feet is the second cheapest among the six largest gas companies in Pennsylvania, but because Erie winters can be harsh, its average monthly residential bill is $58.66, the second highest.

"Our major concern is safety. When you start punching holes in the ground all over the place with no regulations, there is cause for concern," said NFG vice president William Hill.

Last May in Millcreek Township, a discharge pipe from a drilling operation was placed between two houses but a spark turned the pipe into a blowtorch. The fire caused $65,000 damage to one house and scorched the other home.

At short time later, the township passed a law requiring discharge pipes to be located at least 30 feet from any building and requiring fire hose connections for gas wells.

Legislation is also pending in the Pennsylvania Senate that would regulate drilling, but its chances of passage are uncertain. No current state laws apply to shale wells.

Meanwhile, wells drilled into deeper formations called the Medina sands cost more but are producing even greater savings.

For $450,000, the Harborcreek School District dug three deep wells since 1979 and converted all of its buses, trucks and driver education cars to run on natural gas. It is saving $130,000 a year.

"By the end of the year, all the projects will be paid for. Our success has stimulated interest in other areas," said Superintendent Robert Mulvin, who is partners with his neighbor on a domestic shallow well.

At Mount St. Benedict, a Benedictine convent housing 145 nuns, a deep well went into product in January 1980. It supplies 60 percent of the energy needs for administrative offices, sleeping quarters, the infirmary, the kitchen and the hot water boilers.

The nuns expect their $100,000 investment to be paid off by 1989.

"It was in the spirit of stewardship — Benedictines believe in the wise use of the Earth's resources," said Sister Patricia Lupo.

Administration pushes for synfuel subsidies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is endorsing $2 billion in price subsidies for five private energy companies building a huge commercial synthetic fuels plant in North Dakota.

The five companies last month threatened to pull out of the $2.1 billion Great Plains Gasification project unless they get new subsidies guaranteeing them a price reportedly equivalent to $45 a barrel for oil.

The Great Plains project, now 85 percent complete, is scheduled to begin producing natural gas from coal at a rate equivalent to 20,000 barrels of oil daily beginning in late 1984.

Citing their threat, Assistant Energy Secretary Jan Mares told a House subcommittee Tuesday that the goverment's Synthetic Fuels Corporation should begin negotiations immediately with the five companies on their requested price guarantees.

"If they withdraw, we'll have a very big problem on our hands," said Mares, whose department has put up $1.6 billion in guaranteed loans for the project.

The five private companies are Tenneco Inc., American Natural Resources Co., Transco Energy Co., MicCon Corp. and Pacific Lighting Corp.

Plant closes after 110 years

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — The city's Owens-Illinois glass plant has closed its doors for the final time, ending 110 years of manufacturing and putting about 100 workers out of jobs.

"I quit high school to come here when I was 16 years old, and I gave them my life," said John Grant, who had worked in the plant for more than 32 years until it closed Tuesday. "And the only thing I can do now is look for a job. And where ... do you find a job when you're 49 years old?"

Pioneer spins-off Energas division

AMARILLO — Pioneer Corporation announced Tuesday its Energas Company division has been separated from Pioneer and established as an independent corporation, chartered by the State of Texas. Energas Co. is the gas utility serving Midland.

Pioneer Corpoation is an energy resources corporation, with operatons or interests in 18 states and in offshsore areas. Energas Company is a natural gas distribution company, serving about 280,000 customers in a 30,000-square-mile area of West Texas. Both companies have their headquarters in Amarillo.

To make the separation, Pioneer Corporation transferred all of its gas distribution properties and the assets of the Energas division to the newly-formed corporation, in exchange for shares of Energas Company common stock.

Pioneer then declared a distribution of the Energas common stock to Pioneer shareholders, on the basis of one share of Energas stock for each 20 shares of Pioneer owned as of October 28.

In a letter to Pioneer stockholders announcing the separation, C.D. Culver, president and chief executive officer of Pioneer, said: "The separation of Energas from Pioneer will give the gas utility busisness of Energas and the diversified energy operations of Pioneer the financial, operational, managerial and regulatory flexibility necessary for their dissimilar activities to achieve greater efficiency and growth."

Culver also told stockholders that Pioneer directors believe the distribution of Energas stock is "in the best interest of Pioneer and Energas and their shareholders. The distribution, he said, is expected "to permit both Energas and Pioneer to comply more appropriately with objectives of the investing public and thereby to provide a better market for their securities."

The new Energas Company will have assets of approximately $97 million and is expected to have revenues of more than $275 million in 1983. Before the separation, Pioneer's assets were more than $1 billion, and the corporation reported total revenues of $1.1 billion for 1982.

Charles K. Vaughan, who served for the past two yars as president of the Energas division, will be chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer of the new Energas Company. Energas will employ about 900 people, substantially all of whom were previously employed by the division.

The Energas stock received by Pioneer in the separation has been delivered to Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York, which wil be the agent for distributing shares to Pioneer stockholders. Pioneer stockholders will be funished an information statement regarding the stock distribution, and stock certificates will be mailed about November 2.

The distribution of Energas stock wil not affect the regular quarterly cash dividend paid by Pioneer, Culver said in his letter to stockholders.

Pioneer Corporation's operations include exploration for and production of natural gas in West Texas; extraction and sales of natural gas liquids; contract petroleum drilling; sales of oil field supplies; exploration for uranium and precious metals; and sales and servicing of heavy equipment for construction and surface mining.

Olympic gold medalist: Winning is developing talents

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

"Success," Olympic gold medalist Doug Russell said, "is a journey, not a destination."

He told gifted and talented students at Carver Cultural Center that winning doesn't have anything to do with beating someone, but rather with developing their talents to the fullest.

Russell, a former Midlander, addressed the GEM students Monday and Tuesday as part of a Junior League-sponsored project. Now a swimming coach in San Diego, he won a gold medal in the 1968 Olympics.

Russell kept the roomful of third- through sixth-graders laughing and interested as he talked 1½ hours about his experiences and what he learned from them.

"How many of you have a dream?" he asked the youngsters. "I used to have a dream when I was your age. I wanted to be good at swimming. In summer I used to swim all day every day at Hogan Park. That was the beginning of my dream. Let me tell you how you can build your dream."

Russell explained how he trained for the Olympics every morning and evening, and while driving to work he would visualize the stadium and winning the gold. "When I got to Mexico City and walked in the first time, I'd already been there," he said.

Through stories and examples he told the students that concentrating on something hard enough and long enough can be essential to making it happen. Before the Olympic competition he swam against Mark Spitz nine times and lost nine times, but beat him in Mexico City.

After the race, "I started thinking about what this represented," he said, pulling the gold medal out of his pocket. "There was a point there I would have given it back. This thing is the best thing that ever happened to me, and it's the worst thing that ever happened to me."

Making a point

Olympic champion swimmer Doug Russell, formerly of Midland, entertains the GEM (gifted and talented) students with stories about his experiences. He tells them success is a journey, not a destination and gives them pointers on how to build on their dreams.

He explained how, as a junior in college, he still had a year of competitions ahead and a tremendous reputation to sustain. "Every place I went to race I'd run into some snotty-nosed, egotistical, cocky kid that wanted to race and beat the Olympic champion. I couldn't let that guy beat me."

Even returning to his hometown presented problems. "I swam in a meet in Midland after that. I did OK. I didn't swim a nationally-ranked time, but I won my race. But these people came to watch an Olympic champion. They worked me over good."

Russell mentioned others who thought he acted conceited when he didn't have time to sign autographs or talk to them between events. "People would call me and say 'My kid's another Mark Spitz,' and I said 'Take him into the back yard and bury him!' That night after the race my intuition told me what that year would be like, and I was right.

"But it's better to be gifted than not gifted," he continued. "It means you have a talent. The majority of the world is average because they don't have what you have."

He tried to impress on the students that despite difficulties which can accompany a gift, it is important to develop it to its full potential.

"Your ability has a conscience and you can't get away from it. It won't let you alone for a second. There'll be times when you feel like that's unfair because the average people have this level of expectation for themselves, and they've got your level of expectation way up here. There are going to come some times when you're going to feel you have had enough."

He described problems he had just before qualifying for the Olympics, and how he got as far as the airport before deciding to go through with it.

"It seemed they only gave one medal at Mexico City — the gold one. Second place would mean failure of 14 years of work. You feel your whole life is in the balance. I didn't want to go out there and embarrass myself and let all those people down. I wanted to quit.

"The biggest obstacle we have to get over is fear of failure," he told them. "You have to dream that you can win."

He finished by explaining what it is to be a winner.

"Success is an evaluation of what is important to you and your abilities. Sometimes we get sidetracked by wanting to beat people. That's not what success is. Winning doesn't have anything to do with either (winners or losers). Winning has to do with what you are capable of doing. Success is a journey, not a destination.

"He who is content with what he has done in the past seems to make the most comfortable doormat for those on the way to the top for the first time," he concluded.

'Joking' robbers sentenced to five years

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Pridemore brothers who insisted they were just playing a "joke" when they robbed Midland American Bank last June 29 were sentenced Tuesday to five years in federal prison by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

Joke or not, the robbery was not "clever" or amusing, Bunton told the brothers, Ralph Harold "Skip" Pridemore Jr., 34, of Midland and Randy George Pridemore, 30, of Euless and formerly of Andrews.

"Whether or not this was a joke, I don't think it's up to me to decide," Bunton told the brothers. "I don't know what was in your hearts."

Each brother could have been sentenced up to 20 years in prison for pulling the "joke."

The Pridemores claimed they were playing a practical joke on Russ Richardson, then the bank's president. He had been at Green Tree Country Club on the afternoon of the robbery to play golf with the older Pridemore. The brothers indicated they had intended to return the money.

"I wonder what you were going to say to the bank president when he came off the golf course — 'ha, ha?'" an unsmiling Bunton asked the brothers.

DURING THE ROBBERY, Randy Pridemore, outfitted in a reddish wig, sunglasses, red jumpsuit and red cap, had demanded money from tellers Lowry Eugene Hershey and Mary Gerend. He had grabbed Ms. Gerend at the back of the neck and jammed a BB gun in her back.

Meanwhile, Ralph Pridemore was playing with the bank's telephones, telling personnel to be calm, that everything would be OK and not to push any alarm buttons while the money — about $19,000 — was being stuffed in Federal Reserve Bank plastic bags.

Ms. Gerend sat in the courtroom sobbing during the sentencing. A Federal Bureau of Investigation special agent later said the woman still was having traumas over the holdup. In tears, too, were some members of the Pridemore families.

Bunton told the brothers they should "thank God you're alive." He said a security guard or policeman who might have happened onto the robbery "would have the absolute right under the law to shoot you as dead as they wanted to. You ought to thank God that somebody didn't walk up and shoot you.

"WHAT YOU DID," the judge said, "...could very well have caused your deaths...or anybody working at the bank could have died of a heart attack."

While the robbery was taking place about 3 p.m., a woman banker did trigger an alarm button and alerted police, who happened to be nearby.

The disguised brother ran from the bank with the bags of cash and headed for his motorcycle. He dropped some money, which went flying into the air, hopped on the motorcycle, which wouldn't start immediately, and dropped the gun. As police were approaching, he finally got the motorcycle started, lunged forward, hit gravel on the parking lot and spilled the motorcycle and the money.

"'It's all a joke,'" Ralph Pridemore explained as he was arrested inside the bank, FBI Special Agent Tom Farris said after the sentencing.

Both brothers were handcuffed, jailed and later released under $25,000 bonds.

"There's no provision in the bank-robbery statutes for robbery by joke," said Farris, who has worked other bank robberies, including those involving a shoot-out and a robber pushing a baby carriage. "I can truthfully say I've never encountered one that was a joke.

"To be a joke, it was a very rough robbery," the agent said.

Prior to his sentencing, Ralph Pridemore told the judge the FBI had given him "nothing more than the third-degree" during a polygraph test. "'I can tell you this joke business will not go off,'" he said the agent told him, "and things will go better for you if you get off this joke business."

BOTH BROTHERS had pleaded guilty to the robbery, though they reportedly had wanted to plead nolo contendere — no contest — which the judge would not accept.

In pleading for leniency prior to the sentencing, Ralph Pridemore told Bunton "I do wish for probation, because I feel that I have gone through quite a bit."

He said he has experienced some "good changes and changes that have been very hard. I don't ever intend to do anything...that's bad or wrong." The older Pridemore said he wanted to "raise my three boys, love my wife and serve my God with all my heart."

His brother told the judge the bank robbery was a "joke that turned into a big ordeal." Since the day of the "joke," Randy Pridemore said he has been in the "twilight zone...It's tough, very tough."

"We tried to work with the law every inch of the way," he said in asking for mercy. "We can work with the law. I can walk the line for 100 years."

The Pridemores' attorney, William Earl Stallings of Waco, told the judge that "no good" would be served in sentencing the brothers to prison.

"It (the robbery) was intended to be a joke — a bizarre joke," Stallings said. "Justice can be served in this case by showing mercy."

Information need keeps cancer center staff on its toes

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

They didn't want it to end.

It was the last session, such as the one Tuesday night, that spurned the idea two years ago for an ongoing group to continue the meetings of fellowship.

The I CAN COPE cancer education series came to a close until the next session in the spring. But these seriously ill patients, their families and friends can continue to meet, ask questions and share feelings each month through Make Today Count, a group which developed from mutual needs.

The stages a cancer patient goes through — denial, anger and depression — are difficult on his or her family and friends. It can be a long road before the patient reaches the final stage of acceptance.

"How are you feeling?" is a question that can grate on one's nerves, some cancer patients agreed Tuesday night at the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center.

One man admitted he got so tired of hearing the habitual and insincere question about his well-being that he finally changed his answer one day at church.

When a woman and her daughter walked by him and asked how he was feeling, he muttered, "Like a runover dog."

"They got about as far as from here to there," he giggled, pointing, "and the lady turned around with a, 'What'd he say?'

"At the same time, the little girl asked, 'What happened to his dog?'"

Besides methods of proper communication and openness with those cancer patients who want it, friends, family and the general public want access to more information about the disease.

"I think with more information available, people are demanding to know more," said Barbara Rae, medical oncology staff nurse. "It really keeps us staff members on our toes."

Ms. Rae and other members of the oncology staff at the cancer center answered questions and described some of the misconceptions new patients have when they first come in contact with nurses and staff members.

Joining Ms. Rae on the panel for the final session were Mary Piette, director of physical/occupational therapy; Sherry Page, radiation oncology staff nurse; Debra Georgas, supervisor of radiation oncology; and Ann Parsons, supervisor of medical oncology.

Hair loss and nausea are some fears expressed by many patients that often are unfounded, the panel agreed. Others are worried about burned skin from treatments or that they will be radioactive.

"That's where the teaching comes in," Ms. Rae said. "We can sit down and explain it's not always true."

"Another very grave misconception is that cancer is something that's contagious," Ms. Parsons said. "We know that breast cancer does run in families, but it's not contagious."

Sales tax rebate down $100,000 from last year

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland's sales tax rebate this month scraped along the bottom of the economic barrel at $383,867.37, according to figures released by the State Comptroller's Office. This is about $100,000 less than last year.

Odessa's figures, however, turned upward with the rebate crawling to $409,931.43 over last year's payment of $400,558.16.

The sales tax rebate is the one cent levied in 974 Texas cities along with the state sales tax and given back by the state. They reflect sales from two months prior to when they are rebated. For example, the October payments reflect sales from August.

For the year to date, however, both Permian Basin cities are seeing fewer sales tax dollars while payments to other cities averaged 7.2 percent higher than last year's rebates, according to State Comptroller Bob Bullock. "We're looking at areas that still have economic problems and other areas that show some economic growth."

Midland's payment for October 1982 was $488,599.10. For the year to date, Midland's rebates total $5,662,597.66. This is 25.90 percent below last year's $7,641,327.36.

Odessa still is running 30.98 percent behind last year's payments to date. This year, that city has received $5,788,040.33 as compared to last year's total of $8,386,205.39.

Troy Gifford, finance director for the city of Midland, noted the $383,000 was about what he had estimated.

"I don't know if it's the bottom of the slide and if it's a narrow bottom or a wide bottom," he said, referring to the string of months in which the rebates fell below that of the previous year.

The city has budgeted $6.5 million for fiscal year 1984, which started Oct. 1. Looking at this month's rebate combined with the previous two months, Gifford said an unofficial prediction could give the city about $7 million this year.

"I wish it were better. I wish our economy would get better quicker," Gifford said.

The drop began in November 1982 when the city received $1,072,204, down from the previous year's $1,313,884. December saw another slide downward with the rebate being $118,000 less than the previous year's figure.

The March payment was $405,458, a major drop from the previous year's $729,458. And July's payment was $241,487, a 59 percent reduction from 1982's $596,955.

August checks had city officials hoping the worst was over with Midland getting $977,000, a slight decline from last year's $1,004,414. But September was back on the skids with the city getting $406,457, more than 50 percent below last year's $646,457.

GISD board votes to buy wood-shop equipment

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

During a Greenwood school board meeting that will be continued next Tuesday, trustees approved substantial completion of the $6.3 million high school building.

In other action at Tuesday night's session the board voted to spend $43,000 on equipment for the new wood shop, allow high school and elementary school yearbooks to be published, purchase two used school buses, bond its employees and consider sending fan buses to all out-of-town games.

Trustees approved substantial completion of the high school, which has been under construction for more than a year. Although most of the building was approved before classes began in August, the final areas toured included the 600-seat auditorium, both gymnasiums, the welding and wood shops and the cafeteria.

The board also voted to bond its employees against embezzlement and theft. They purchased a three-year policy for $1,056. It will cover each employee up to $100,000.

Trustees also bought two 1966 school buses from Ector County Independent School District for $1,500. The vehicles seat 60 passengers.

The school's Booster Club approached the board with a request to provide a student fan bus for out-of-town games. The club said it would provide volunteer drivers and chaperones. Trustees approved a bus for Friday's football game to determine student response.

It was also decided to publish a separate yearbook for high school and elementary school students. Greenwood's journalism instructor told trustees it would make each product cheaper and would probably increase sales, especially in the elementary school.

"Eighty to 90 percent of the yearbook is high school," Kellie West said. "I don't think it's fair for elementary school parents to pay the price of high school activities, especially now with the schools being split the way they are."

But the board delayed until November a request to reimburse the yearbook fund for more than $800 which was stolen in a break-in last year. Ms. West said the students have not been able to make up the loss in advertising sales.

Trustees concluded the meeting by approving the appointment of a special education teacher.

Need for information keeps staff on its toes

Ms. Parsons pointed out that burned skin from treatments can be avoided in some cases. "We don't make people nearly as sick as we did 10 years ago. The new drugs that have come out in the market and what we've learned about the new drugs have changed that.

"Some people associate nausea with the drugs and sometimes we can work through it," she said. "A lot of it is mind over matter."

At the Allison Cancer Center, nurses sit with patients while they are receiving their drugs. In other centers, the patients may not receive the same amount of attention.

"We know the patient's dog's name and we know the names of their aunts and uncles," Ms. Parsons said. "Sitting with them helps us get to know our patients.

"But we don't teach you everything," she added. "We learn a lot from you, too."

The panel urged patients, friends and families to ask any questions they have about treatments, nutrition, diet, exercise, side effects, medical costs or bills.

"We try to encourage patients to ask questions, no matter how stupid it may seem to you. We're going to answer the easy questions as well as the hard ones," Ms. Parsons said, adding with a grin, "Of course, the hard ones we might not be able to answer."

"This is the age of openness," a cancer patient agreed. "At least you don't have to wonder if your doctor is telling you everything. That's a peace of mind in itself."

Professor: New navigation system could have saved jet

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A highly precise navigation system which will monitor aircraft from satellites could have saved the Korean airliner shot down after it wandered into Soviet airspace, a Texas A&M professor says.

NAVSTAR-GPS (for Global Positioning System) can eliminate pilot error, says Dr. Philip S. Noe, a former Air Force navigator now teaching at Texas A&M.

The position of planes, ships and possibly even cars will be noted when they bounce signals off the satellites. Microprocessors will measure the distance between the object and the satellite based on the signals' return time.

"Political waypoints of the flight plan can be put into memory modules or digital cassettes by personnel on the ground before the flight," Noe said, effectively eliminating pilot error.

It is believed that such a mistake sent Korean Airlines Flight 7 over Soviet territory, where it was shot down by a fighter plane.

Eventually, Noe said, the NAVSTAR system will provide a navigational accuracy of 50 meters for civilian users and 5 meters for the military.

ODESSA — A 22-year-old Odessa man was charged Tuesday with the murder of a 65-year-old woman.

Johnny Ray Foote was brought before Judge R.G. Hungerford, who set a $40,000 bond in connection with the April 19, 1982, death of Velma Nesset. Ms. Nesset's body, with several stab wounds, was found in a ditch by Permian Mall in the spring of 1982, according to police.

Odessa police said today that Detective Greg Traviand received information leading to the arrest of Foote.

TDC board considers proposal

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas prison guards accused of beating prison inmates could be fired if they refuse to take lie detector tests under a proposal being reviewed by the Texas Department of Corrections' board of directors.

William Bennett Turner, an attorney representing inmates in a prison reform suit, says the polygraph tests will be given first to inmates who accuse guards of brutality.

If the inmate passes the test, the accused guard will be given the option of taking a similar test or face dismissal, Turner said.

The proposed agreement follows allegations of widespread brutality contained in a report sent last month to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, who has ordered prison reforms.

Apple tart 'glamorous'

When the occasion calls for a lavish dessert serve this Glazed Apple Tart. It is easy to prepare yet very glamorous.

The secret of its success is the crust, a delectable combination of vanilla wafer crumbs and cream cheese. It goes well with the natural flavor of sliced fresh apples and a glaze of apricot preserves. Just before serving garnish with swirls f whipped cream.

This Glazed Apple Tart can be made the day before or early in the day and refrigerated until serving. Good tasting whether warm or cold, it can be served with whipped cream or ice cream.

GLAZED APPLE TART

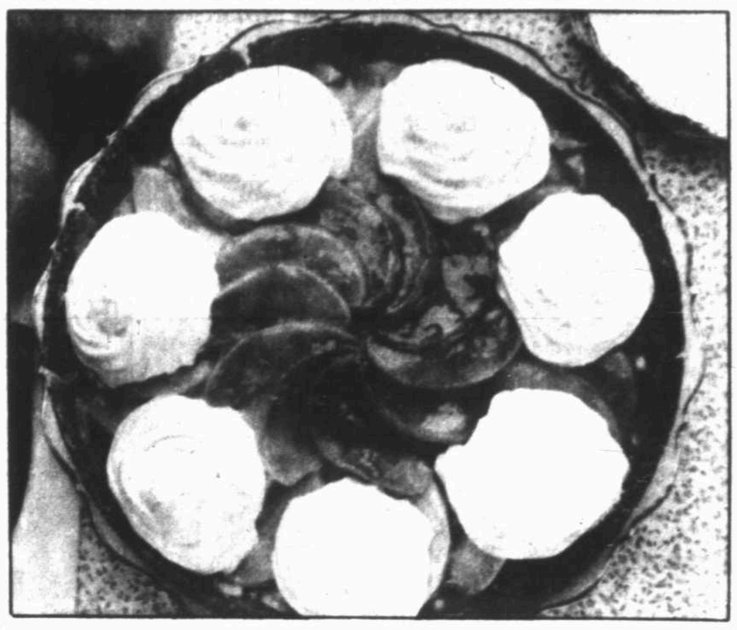

28 vanilla wafers, finely rolled (about one cup crumbs)
½ cup flour
1 (3-ounce) package cream cheese, softened
3 tablespoons margarine, softened
2 tablespoons sugar
3 Rome or Winesap apples, thinly sliced (about 1-1/4 pounds)
¼ cup apricot preserves
Whipping cream, whipped

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. In medium bowl combine wafer crumbs and all but one tablespoon flour. Using pastry blender or two knives held scissors fashion, blend in cream cheese and margarine until thoroughly combined. Spoon into 9-inch springform pan; using back of spoon press evenly onto bottom and one inch up sides of pan.

In small bowl combine reserved one tablespoon flour and sugar; sprinkle 1/3 over surface of crust. Arrange apple slices on crust in circular design; sprinkle with remaining sugar mixture. Bake 40 minutes or until apples are tender. Cool on wire rack 10 minutes; remove sides of pan.

In small saucepan over medium heat stir apricot preserves until melted; brush or spoon over warm apples to glaze. Cool completely or refrigerate until serving time.

To serve: Using decorating bag and tip decorate top with whipped cream. Makes eight servings.

Vintage Cabernet released

By NATHAN CHROMAN
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

It would be nice if there were a fine Cabernet Sauvignon currently available in 20,000 case quantity from California's fabled 1978 vintage at a price of nine dollars. Well, now this dream of Cab fans everywhere has come true.

The brothers Gallo, Ernest and Julio, are now releasing their first vintage-dated wine in 50 years of high volume (nonvintage-dated) production. It is an exceptional beginning. Incredible to believe, but one out of every three labels sold in the United States is likely to be a Gallo.

It is unusual to release a '78 at this juncture, some five years after harvest. Most, if not all '78 Cabs found their way into the market place several years ago, with the most recent release being the well-known Private Reserve of Beaulieu Vineyards. Most wine shops have been out of '78s for some time, while the few remaining are selling in the $15 to $25 range.

What is special about this wine is that it has a full measure of flavor and generous drinkability. Most other '78s are still far from maturity, and, therefore, offer a considerable contrast to the current Gallo offering. The wine has an attractive suppleness and a soft in-depth finish. Because of its softness and delicacy (and when compared to many big, high tannin-styled Cabernets), it should be a marvelous addition to restaurant wine lists that need red wine for today's drinking.

Do not confuse this wine with an earlier release from Gallo, the Non-Vintage Cabernet Sauvignon, as this is labeled 1978 Vintage, Limited Release, Cabernet Sauvignon from the Wine Cellars of Ernest and Julio Gallo. It has been aged for 36 months in Yugoslavian oak casks nnd represents a special lot kept separate and apart from the others. It is made from 100 percent, 1978 Cabernet grapes selected from vineyards in Northern Sonoma County with special emphasis on Alexander Valley and Dry Creek. It was bottled in March 1982.

Is there a problem with the wine? No, especially if you do not allow prior Gallo label prejudice to get in the way of objective evaluation. Whenever wine buffs get together, they seem to talk of the Gallos in hushed tones, and more from the standpoint that their wines represent good value in relation to price, rather than making a definite qualitative statement. Many a slick boutique winery would be grateful to put their label on this bottle.

Many different types of pies popular

By The Associated Press

Crisp-crusted pie, once described as "the American synonym of prosperity," is a treat handed down by our English forebears.

As far back as the 14th century, the cookhouses of England did a flourishing trade in deep-dish meat pastries, a dish that has survived to this day. In fact, a few years ago I enjoyed a succulent meat pie in a London pub.

The popularity of these meat pies inspired the English to develop a dessert that has become a classic. Now, every Christmas in England and the United States, bakeries do a booming business in mince pies. This heady mixture consists of dried fruit, spices and sugar. Many of them also include the freshly chopped meat and suet our forefathers enjoyed.

Pies are still featured as the main course. For seafood buffs, there are oyster and clam pies redolent with the tang of the sea. And Pennsylvania Dutch cooks still make rich pies filled with green tomatoes, green currants, black walnuts, raisins and onions.

Farther south, pies made from sweet potatoes are featured, and in the Deep South shrimp pie and pecan pastries are popular.

The Middle West is noted for lemon meringue pie and the best pumpkin pies are said to come from New England.

Perhaps the most popular pie in this country today is apple, which has come a long way since Colonial days. In early times before refrigeration, the apples were picked, peeled and quartered, then hung on cords in the kitchen. These dried quarters supplied pie all winter. New Englanders even ate them for breakfast.

Tomato chicken simple

TOMATO CHICKEN

It's a simple oven dish.

4-pound roasting chicken, cut up
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons paprika
1 large (6 ounces) onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings
16-ounce can whole tomatoes, undrained but broken up
Two 3-ounce cans peeled whole green chilies, drained and halved lengthwise

Wash and dry chicken pieces. Mix salt and paprika and rub over skin sides of chicken. Into a 3-quart oblong baking dish (13½ by 8¾ by 1¾ inches) turn the onion and tomatoes. Place the chilis at intervals over the tomatoes. Add the chicken, skin side up, in a single layer. Bake uncovered in a preheated 450-degree oven for 15 minutes; continue baking at 350 degrees until chicken is tender and very brown — 30 minutes longer. Remove chicken and chilies and keep warm. Skim fat from juices in baking dish. If you like, thicken juices with arrowroot, flour or cornstarch and season to taste; serve with chicken. Makes 6 servings. —(AP)

Texas, Minnesota towns have turkey rivalry

By MERLE ELLIS

Most of you think "Turkey Day" is sometime near the end of November. That's because most of you suppose it is synonymous with Thanksgiving. Everytime I hear somebody refer to Thanksgiving as "Turkey Day" I've wanted for years to say that's wrong!

Any kid who grew up in Worthington, Minnesota — I spent four formative years there when I was very young — knows that Turkey Day has nothing whatsoever to do with Thanksgiving. Turkey Day is the day — this year it was September 10 — they parade a flock of turkeys down Main street and feed you all the free pancakes you can eat.

In the late '30s and early '40s, my father was market manager/meat cutter for a store in Worthington. In those days, Worthington, like every other town and city, was climbing out of the Depression as best it could. Worthington chose to depend, in large part, on turkey to show it the way.

Turkey hatching, turkey raising and turkey processing offered farmers a chance for reasonable profits when things went well, and they did often enough to make it worth the gamble.

E.O. Olsen is the man credited with inaugurating "Turkey Day" in Worthington. At about the same time my family was settling there in 1938, E.O. was traveling in south Texas where he came across an unusual festival in progress in the town of Cuero, also a turkey raising center. Cuero capitalized on that fact by staging a festival called a "Turkey Trot," in which huge flocks of turkeys were marched down Esplanada Avenue ahead of the festival parade.

Olsen was intrigued by the promotional aspects of the festival and brought the idea back to Worthington.

With the exception of the war years, "King Turkey Day" has been celebrated annually since 1940. I haven't been there since those first few years, but it has become, over the years, a must for any person aspiring to high political office. The list of featured speakers has included Lyndon Johnson, Robert Kennedy, Hubert Humphrey, Richard Nixon, Adlai Stevenson, Charles Percy, Estes Kefauver, John Sparkman, Nelson Rockefeller and on and on and on.

As the years went by the tie between Cuero, Texas, and Worthington's "King Turkey Day" was forgotten. But ten years ago the old rivalry over which city was indeed "turkey capital of the world" was rekindled with the first annual "Great Gobbler Gallop." Since then, Cuero and Worthington select a turkey each year to meet on the field of honor for a race to determine which city could properly claim poultry supremacy.

More than 300 good things to do with today's versatile turkey can be found in Barbara Gibbon's book "The Year-Round Turkey Cookbook," published by McGraw Hill. Look for it. It can help you eat better for less by making any day turkey day. Here is an example:

TURKEY DRUMETTES BAKED IN SPANISH SAUCE

4 turkey drumettes (first portion of wing), about 2 ½ pounds
½ cup water
¼ cup dry white wine or water
1 peeled, quartered onion
1 16-ounce can undrained tomatoes
1 clove garlic (optional)
3 or 4 sprigs fresh parsley
1 teaspoon dried basil (optional)
1 bay leaf (optional)
Salt, pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 450-degrees. Bake drumettes 20 minutes, until skin is crisp. Drain and discard any fat. Combine remaining ingredients in a blender or food processor. With quick on-off turns, process ingredients until tomatoes are coarsley chopped. Lower heat to 350-degrees. Bake, uncovered, basting occasionally with sauce, until turkey is tender, about 50 to 60 minutes. (Add water to sauce if necessary.) Serves 6.

Suit over DAR cookbook

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Over at the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, there's a tempest in a cookpot.

Faith K. Tiberio, editor of the cookbook "A DAR Sampler: Dining With the Decorative Arts" and former curator general of the DAR, recently filed a $4.05 million suit against Sarah M. King, new president general of the society.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court, charges defamation, intentional infliction of emotional distress and copyright infringement.

The complaint charges that King, a month after she was elected in April, ordered six pages torn out of the cookbook. Among the six pages (both sides of three sheets) are:

—An introduction about the history of the DAR Museum by Patricia Walton Shelby, then president general, and her photograph.

—An introduction about the cookbook by Tiberio and her photograph.

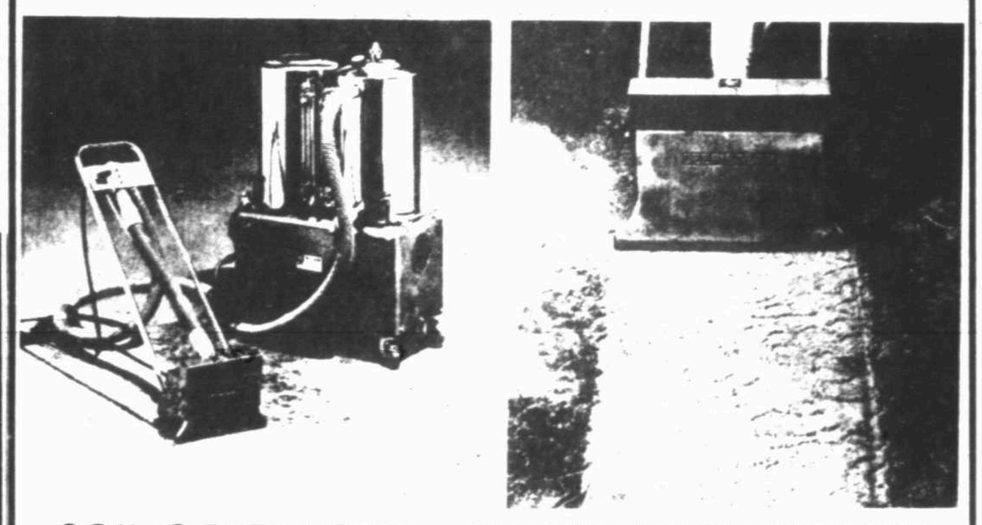

—Two recipes, one for a pecan pie and for an accompanying strawberry or peach sauce, along with another picture of Tiberio, whose recipes these are.

—A page of acknowledgements that names the then-NSDAR officers, the photographer, the printer, the project director and Tiberio as editor.

As a result of the pages' removal, the complaint states, "the mutilated cookbook omits all references to Plaintiff (Tiberio), which previously indicated her authorship and editorial capacity in the compilation of the book."

King, in a written statement, said that there is a policy "that no out-of-date materials be printed or distributed by the NSDAR. A publication is dated if the information it contains is no longer accurate. This usually occurs when a publication identifies a national officer but fails to specify the dates of that officer's term of office."

Diabetes often misunderstood

By SHARON A. HILLIS

Diabetes is one disease we are likely to see more of in our lifetime. According to the American Diabetes Association, the incidence of diabetes is increasing by about six percent a year. At this rate, infants born today have a better than one in five chance of developing diabetes by the time they reach 70.

One common image of a diabetic is a person who takes daily insulin shots, eats special foods and never tastes sugar. This image of diabetics and the diabetic diet is not entirely accurate.

Diabetes is characterized by the inability to process sugars and other carbohydrates normally. It occurs in all age groups from infants to the elderly, but the greatest incidence is among middle-aged or older adults.

About 80 to 85 percent of all diabetics are 45 years of age or older. During the past decade, medical research has led to the discovery of new characteristics of the disease. It's now thought that diabetes is not one, but several diseases, possibly with differing causes and means of transmission.

Most people don't realize that diet is the key to controlling diabetes. The majority of diabetics do not need insulin. Older diabetics usually control their disease through oral medication and diet or diet alone.

A diabetic diet is not particularly restrictive either. In fact, it is the kind of good, basic, healthful diet that nutritionists say we should all eat.

The American Diabetic Association currently recommends a balanced diet with food from the four major food groups and 50 to 60 percent of the total calories from carbohydrates.

The diabetic's carbohydrates should be mostly from starches such as potatoes, pasta and bread, and the intake of sugars and desserts should be limited. But diabetic diets often do not require the use of the special no-sugar products you see in the grocery stores.

Diabetics must also regularly space their meals. The total calories for each day must be divided into at least three meals and often one or two regular snacks. The meals and snacks need to be balanced to contain some protein and fat as well as carbohydrates.

Along with diet, diabetics must be concerned about maintaining a desirable weight. Losing weight may help the overweight diabetic reduce his need for drug therapy, and improve his ability to tolerate sugars.

BETTER BUSINESS

Refund policies can vary

By LINDA TRUITT

The Christmas season is approaching and soon local stores will start advertising to encourage consumers to start buying Christmas gifts. Since it is difficult to purchase for others, many people buy a gift with the thought that it can always be returned. The fact is returning a product for exchange, credit or a refund is more of a privilege than a right, so be careful when making those holiday purchases.

Most stores are not legally required to refund money, exchange merchandise or accept returned goods for store credit unless the item has been misrepresented or is defective. To promote good will and to encourage repeat business, most stores will establish policies that allow customers to return merchandise. It is completely legal, though, for a store to have a "no return" or "all sales final" policy.

According to state law a store is required to make an adjustment only if the product is defective or misrepresented. If after opening the box the consumer discovers the lid to the slow cooker just purchased is missing, he or she has the right to return it for an adjustment. Likewise the consumer has the right to return the slow cooker if it was advertised to be "immersible in water" but the instructions warn against it. In either case the store must supply what was advertised or allow the consumer to return the cooker for cash or exchange it for another.

Placing an incorrect order, such as sending a green blender when the order specified a white one, is another case in which the store would be required to make an adjustment.

Lay-away plans, in which the store holds the merchandise while the consumer pays for it, are governed exclusively by store policies. The store is not required to refund any money if the consumer later decides the product is no longer wanted.

During this holiday season inquire about the store's policies concerning returned merchandise and lay-away plans before buying gifts. If the store will make an adjustment on a returned gift, the following should be done:

— Save all tags, price labels and all sales or charge receipts. Don't expect a store to exchange anything if no proof of purchase is provided.

— Return the merchandise in the original container, including all packing materials and instruction sheets.

— Keep the product from being used. A store usually will not accept merchandise that shows wear or has been damaged or altered. It is always wise to check the merchandise for damage before leaving the store.

— Make the exchange soon after the holidays.

Contact the Better Business Bureau at 563-1881 for any problems getting a store to make an adjustment for a legitimate return of merchadise. For the pamphlet "Tips on Refunds and Exchanges," write BBB/Permian Basin, P.O. Box 6006, Midland 79711. Send $1 postage and handling for each pamphlet.

California festival honors brussels sprouts

Hearst Feature Service

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. — Brussels sprouts aren't all that popular with many folks, but for the third year the homely little vegetable was honored with a festival here.

The matter was handled very tactfully. For example, the festival handed out a free brussels sprout to the first 5,000 visitors. But festival officials warned people of the gift in advance, implying they might want to come late.

The biggest athletic event, the sprout toss — for those who don't want to get too close — seems a bit sadistic. Last year, a sprout hater set a record by throwing his veggie 94 feet into a moderately stiff wind.

Now, there is a guy who prefers broccoli.

The festival, held at the Santa Cruz Beach Boardwalk, was sponsored by the boardwalk and the Northern California Sprouts Growers Association.

The reason for holding the festival here is that 90 percent of the brussels sprouts grown in the United States come from farms along the Santa Cruz coast.

At the festival, you could pick up free booklets with brussels sprouts recipes. Boardwalk promoters were somewhat mystified that people actually lined up for the recipe books.

Food plays a big part in a brussels sprouts festival. Visitors could dine on sprouts pizza and deep-fried sprouts.

Marini's Candy Kitchen offered sprouts water taffy. And there was the opportunity to munch sprout chip cookies — yukko! — or try sprout kabob or guaca sprout dip.

Peanut Butter Apple Crisp is a quick-to-fix dessert and Peanut Butter and Banana Pudding can be made a day in advance and refrigerated for convenient serving.

Peanut desserts use fruit

Some of America's most beloved desserts are homey and simple. They are the kind of desserts that evoke pleasant memories of cozy kitchens and happy hours with family and friends. Fruit desserts certainly fall into this category, and they are as easy on the cook as the pocketbook.

Peanut Butter Apple Crisp is quickly prepared once the apples are sliced. Bake it along with your roast, potatoes or casserole and you've saved heat energy. Although this dessert is rich enough on its own, it becomes divine when served with whipped cream.

Peanut Butter and Banana Pudding Dessert can be made a day in advance and refrigerated. Shortly before serving time you can quickly assemble a delectable dessert that is cool, creamy and pretty enough for company.

PEANUT BUTTER APPLE CRISP

4 cups sliced apples
3/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/2 cup flour
1/2 cup quick-cooking oats
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/3 cup margarine, softened
1 cup peanut butter chips

Place apple slices in greased 9-inch square pan. Combine brown sugar, flour, oats, cinnamon and nutmeg; cut in margarine. Stir in peanut butter chips; sprinkle mixture over apples.

Bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes (if using glass pan reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees), or until topping is golden brown and apples are tender. Garnish pudding with a few slices of fresh apples. serve warm, with sweetened whipped cream. Makes six servings.

PEANUT BUTTER AND BANANA PUDDING DESSERT

1/3 cup sugar
2 tablespoon cornstarch
2 cups milk
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons margarine
1-1/2 cups peanut butter chips
2 tablespoons banana-flavored liqueur, optional
2 or 3 medium-size bananas, sliced 1/4-inch thick
1/2 cup peanut butter chips

Combine sugar and cornstarch in two quart saucepan; gradually add milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture begins to thicken and boil. Boil and stir one minute. Stir about 1/2 cup of hot mixture into beaten egg yolks; add to hot mixture in saucepan; boil and stir one minute.

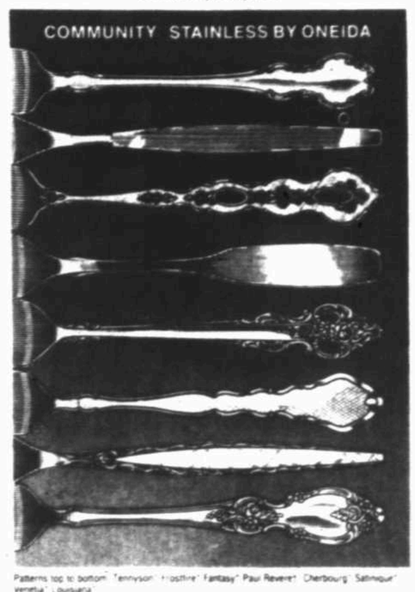

Remove from heat; stir in margarine and 1-1/2 cups peanut butter chips until melted and smooth. Stir in banana liqueur. Pour into bowl; press plastic wrap down onto pudding surface. Cool slightly; chill. Place 1/4 cup pudding in each of four individual dishes; place layer of banana slices and one tablespoon peanut butter chips over top. Repeat. Makes four servings.

Energy conserved

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans, who were faced with an energy crisis until recently, are continuing to conserve energy.

Honeywell's Energy Management Information Center says total national energy consumption is down 3 percent and 44 states have decreased their use of energy since 1980. Delaware led the U.S. in energy savings with a 20 percent decrease.

DEAR ABBY

Negligee burial improper

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Well, I've lived 40 years, and so far I've managed to handle everything without having to write to you, but the time has come when I need some help.

Three years ago, my mother, a hard-working, God-fearing, 70-year-old country woman, died. For some reason, my older sister and stepfather, both religious and practical, selected a fancy pink negligee for her to be buried in!

This weekend we attended the funeral of a friend's mother. Same type situation, different funeral home, and she was laid out in a pink nylon nightgown! Is this a new trend? They don't bury men in pajamas — they are buried in business suits — so why sleepwear for women?

I told my husband that if I go first and I'm sent off to meet my maker in something I wouldn't answer the door in, I will come back and haunt him. I think some of those funeral directors have been sniffing the formaldehyde too long, Abby. Do something! — C.C. IN MISSISSIPPI

DEAR C.C.: Don't blame the funeral directors. The "family" decides how the loved one shall be dressed to meet his/her maker.

Leave instructions with your nearest of kin concerning this matter, and ask that your wishes be carried out when you are.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I moved away from our hometown three years ago because we wanted our children to grow up in a smaller, slower-paced city. We love it here. My husband has family here, but we are 2,000 miles away from my family.

My mother resents my husband for having moved so far from her, but she frequently and willingly comes to visit. When she's here she ignores my husband and acts very bored. Normally she is fun, energetic and likable, so her attitude here is an obvious demonstration of resentment toward my husband. I have asked my husband to overlook it because we see her only a few times a year.

The problem: My husband has had it with her behavior and says if I don't have a talk with her, he will. I doubt that he will be very diplomatic because she really upsets him.

I love them both. How can I solve this problem? — IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: Tell your mother in a loving way that when she sulks, ignores your husband and acts bored while she's a guest in your home, she is hurting you. Explain that he is upset with her and you don't blame him, so if she loves you as much as you love her, she will lighten up and conduct herself as an adult, because her pouting is putting a strain on your marriage.

P.S. And it might help to remind her that your husband did not kidnap you. It was a joint decision to move.

DEAR ABBY: Reading your letter from "Bully's Wife," whose son was being reprimanded for being "lazy and stupid," hit a nerve with me. "Bully's Wife" said the lad was neither lazy nor stupid; he was a good kid who works with his father putting in 9-10 hours a day to earn his college fees.

As a boy, I was forever being clouted for my "stupidity" and pushed with a firm shove by a father who complained about my "laziness." Consequently I grew up with an inferiority complex, which took me years to overcome. Worse yet, it was accompanied by a terrible feeling of guilt for despising him.

I felt little remorse for this unfeeling person when he died, but I still feel pangs of guilt for not loving him the way I was supposed to.

Please tell "Bully's Wife" to show this letter to her husband. My father's hard hand did not make a man of me, it made me a wimp.

I made a man of myself, no thanks to him. Sign me ... SELF-MADE IN ONTARIO

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Lung cancer deaths surpass breast cancer

Hearst Feature Service

Lung cancer will surpass breast cancer this year as the No. 1 cause of cancer deaths among California women, says the state Department of Health Services — and smoking is the main reason, even though the percentage of women smokers has gradually decreased for several years.

An estimated 4,100 women in California will die of lung cancer this year, 100 more than the number of women expected to die of breast cancer, according to predictions based on a study released Thursday by the department, which studied 1982 death certificates.

Although lung cancer has long been the leading cause of cancer death in men (with cancer of the colon and rectum a distant second), this year will be the first time the same is true for women.

Stroke deaths reduced by attention

Hearst Feature Service

Fifteen years ago, more than 350,000 Americans annually suffered fatal strokes. Today, prevention campaigns have reduced that number of deaths to 164,300 a year. "Attention to risk factors could cut it another 50 percent," predicted Dr. Colman Ryan, president of the San Francisco chapter of the American Heart Association.

The cardiologist is heading October Stroke Awareness Month efforts to identify the warning signs of strokes, which still total 500,000 a year. If the victim lives, damage to the brain can affect the senses, speech, behavioral patterns, thought patterns and memory and can cause paralysis on one side of the body.

However, Ryan said, many persons experience one or more of the warning signs of stroke days, weeks or months ahead. "Recognition of these symptoms and prompt medical or surgical attention may prevent a fatal or disabling stroke," he said.

Three major warning signs identified by Ryan are:

—Temporary weakness in an arm or leg that comes suddenly and is gone in 15 to 20 minutes.

—Temporary difficulty or loss of speech, slurring or trouble with words.

—Double vision or a temporary visual disturbance that lasts a few minutes.

Other warning signs can be unexplained dizziness or unsteadiness, unexplained headaches or a change in the pattern of headaches and change in personality or mental ability.

"A stroke is caused by an interruption of blood flow to the brain," Ryan explained. "If an obstruction of the blood vessel can be discovered — and there are very sophisticated machines today to detect this — surgery is often possible, with excellent results.

"If a blood vessel has been blocked by a clot, then anti-clotting drugs such as asprin and dipyridamole are commonly used.

"It is very important to prevent clogging of the arteries, and this requires watching the blood pressure. When blood cannot easily pass through the arteries, the heart must pump harder, and this increases the blood pressure. Normal blood pressure should be tested every six months to one year, and abnormal, every six weeks to three months.

"There is good evidence that controlling the cholesterol levels, watching the diet and not smoking can lower blood pressure."

Only one word explains why the new Light n' Lively® flavors taste so rich.

Micheaux awards honor black film maker

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

OAKLAND, Calif. — Oscars are presented to film makers in this city each year, but they are plaques, not gold statuettes, and to receive one, you must be black.

The annual presentation to the brightest and most accomplished blacks in the film industry is the Oscar Micheaux Awards of the Black Filmmakers Hall of Fame.

Micheaux is a name virtually unknown to white America, but it is a household word to older blacks, because he produced 25 films with all-black casts from 1918 to 1948. (He died in 1951.)

The Micheaux films were shown exclusively in the nation's 430 black theaters that existed in black neighborhoods before integration.

To black actors, actresses, composers, singers, writers, directors, producers and cameramen, the annual Oscar Micheaux Awards are most prestigious.

In the 10 years the Black Filmmakers Hall of Fame in Oakland has been in existence, 91 men and women have received the awards presented each February as the culmination of Black History Week at the historic Art Deco Paramount Theater.

The award recognizes black contributions to cinema and to the artistic portrayal of black culture. It salutes an individual for his or her long years of striving for the dignified depiction of blacks in America.

When Harry Belafonte was inducted to the hall of fame in 1976, he called it "the most significant honor in my life."

LAST YEAR, TEARS welled from the eyes of Jester Hairston when he was presented his plaque. "This dwarfs everything that has happened to me, except my marriage to an Oakland girl 42 years ago," the 80-year-old actor said.

When Cab Calloway was honored in 1982, he sang his famous rendition of "Minnie the Moocher" and brought down the house, with all 3,000 in the audience joining him on all the song's "hi-de-ho's."

Honorees have included Eddie ("Rochester") Anderson, Josephine Baker, Count Basie, Eubie Blake, Nat King Cole, Sammy Davis Jr., Duke Ellington, Ella Fitzgerald, Lena Horne, Hattie McDaniel, Paul Robeson, Cicely Tyson, Ethel Waters and numerous other well-known personalities, as well as several little-known black film pioneers.

Mary Perry Smith is president of the board of the Black Filmmakers Hall of Fame in Oakland, Calif., a group that presents yearly awards to the brightest and most accomplished blacks in the film industry.

ENTERTAINMENT

Shirley Temple Black appeared at the awards ceremony in 1978 to praise the late Bill "Bojangles" Robinson at his induction. Bojangles was the child actress' singing and dancing partner in four films.

The Black Filmmakers Hall of Fame came into existence in 1974 when the Oakland Museum Association's Cultural and Ethnic Affairs Guild decided to stage a black film makers tribute as a fund-raiser.

"We were inspired by the 'Blacks in Film' course given by University of California, Berkeley, Prof. Roy Thomas," explained Mary Perry Smith, 57, a retired math and science teacher who is president of the hall of fame's board.

Smith, Thomas, Don Therence of the guild and producer Sonny Buxton did the initial planning for the tribute. Buxton suggested that instead of a one-shot event, the guild launch a permanent hall of fame for black film makers, which is what happened.

THE HALL REMAINED under the aegis of the Oakland Museum until 1977, when it became an independent entity under the leadership of Margot Smith Hicks, who served as president until 1980.

At present the hall is housed in a small office in Oakland.

"We have ambitious plans," said Smith. "Our goal is to establish a permanent home for the hall of fame.

"It would be a national center for memorabilia, artifacts, printed material, oral history tapes and films, and a place where black films and films featuring black performers can be shown and lectures presented about the black contribution to cinema."

In addition to the awards event, the hall of fame sponsors a black film lecture series, a symposium of black writers, directors, producers, composers, cameramen and film technicians, actors, critics and theater owners.

"Most Americans, including blacks, know very little about the history of blacks in films," Smith noted. "Prior to World War I there were no black actors in films — whites in blackface impersonated blacks.

"A black actor named Sam Lucas in 1914 was given a title role in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' the first movie to feature a black in the role of a black person."

Before integration in the South and other sections of the country, blacks were forced to watch movies from balconies, in roped-off sections. Some theaters had a wall down the middle — one side for whites, the other for blacks.

"BECAUSE THERE was little in films that related to black America, 20 or more independent black film companies came into existence about the time of World War I. They produced films for, by and about blacks," Smith explained.

"The movies were typical of Hollywood films of the time — boy meets girl, they fall in love — but all the characters were black. There were titles like 'The Girl From Chicago' and 'Paradise in Harlem.' There were black Westerns like 'Bronze Buckeroo.'"

Finally in the '30s and '40s blacks began to be accepted in films — Lena Horne, Bill Robinson — just a few at first. Then came World War II with its impetus for integration, and the all-black films for the black movie houses became an all-but-lost chapter in the history of American cinema.

Will 'Dynasty's' Alexis be J.R.'s new flame?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A romance between J.R. and Alexis? Not likely. But actor Larry Hagman has revealed he once dated actress Joan Collins.

It was 32 years ago in London, when Hagman had a small role in "South Pacific," which starred his mother, Mary Martin. Miss Collins was a student at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts at the time.

"She was the most beautiful women," said Hagman, who stars as the notorious J.R. Ewing on CBS' "Dallas."

Atlanta museum milestone for city

ATLANTA (AP) — Gudmund Vigtel stood on a stairway overlooking Atlanta's new $20 million High Museum of Art and thought back 15 years to the opening of the Atlanta Memorial Arts Center next door.

"If anyone had told me then that we would be opening a $20 million museum building this month, I simply would not have believed it," said Vigtel, the museum's director since 1963. "We've come a long way."

The new museum, which opened to the public Saturday, represents an important milestone in Atlanta's effort to develop its international image as the South's cultural, as well as financial, capital.

More than $20 million was raised from private sources in 3½ years for the new museum and no tax money was needed to finance it.

"Our colleagues in the field couldn't believe it," Vigtel said of the fund-raising drive. "But the time was absolutely ripe for it. There had been some sales of major companies that put people in tax brackets that made large gifts possible."

The largest gift was a $7.5 million challenge grant from Robert W. Woodruff, a major stockholder of the Coca-Cola Co. More than $9.8 million in matching funds was contributed following Woodruff's gift, and the remainder of the money came in a $900,000 grant from the Callaway Foundation and $1.8 million in matching contributions.

Noted author listens to recorded 'voices'

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Author William Peter Blatty, who gave the literary world the gut-twisting terror of "The Exorcist," is dealing with equally formidable forces these days: mystery "voices" that talk into his tape recorder.

Listening to these ethereal voices is a 12-year obsession that spawned his current thriller, "Legion." He read about the phenomenon and later began turning on his machine, recording silence and then playing back the tape at various speeds.

"I don't know what these are," Blatty said.

Texas is Conoco Country.

When Anthony Lucas discovered the great Spindletop Field near Beaumont in 1901, America overtook Russia as the world's leading oil producer. And a new era began in the development of the Lone Star state.

Soon wildcatters multiplied like jackrabbits, exploring for likely drilling sites. Some oil companies came and went. But others, like Conoco, found a home in Texas. And today, we continue to play an important role in one of the state's most important industries.

Texas is headquarters for Conoco's worldwide petroleum operations. The many parts of our worldwide petroleum business are all coordinated here. Operations and facilities span the state from Port Arthur to Pecos and from Corpus Christi to Amarillo. And next year, we're moving our petroleum headquarters in Houston to a new office complex on the west side of the city.

Texas ranks as Conoco's number one state for petroleum production. We operate more than 3,800 oil and gas wells here. And more than one-third of our domestic oil and one-quarter of our natural gas production comes from the state. Because we intend to continue producing in Texas for a long time, we are using new technologies to extend the life of old fields here and to develop alternative resources such as tar sands.

Throughout the state, our production facilities maintain the highest environmental standards. For example, we've been producing petroleum in the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge on the Gulf coast for almost 35 years in harmony with the ecology and wildlife.

Texas is a major market for our petroleum products—more than one billion gallons last year. There are almost 800 Conoco service stations here, owned and operated by independent business people who have helped make our gasoline and automotive products the Hottest Brand Going. We also market directly through about 50 stations, primarily under the JET brand.

Because Texas is the hub of Conoco's petroleum operations, our contributions to the state's economy are substantial. We employ about 4,300 people here with an annual payroll of $165 million. And in 1983, we are investing more than $300 million in Texas in new operations, facilities, and equipment.

We also support the state with taxes and royalty payments. Last year, Conoco provided Texas with more than $71 million in direct taxes and almost $5 million in royalty payments. And we collected more than $6 million in motor fuel taxes for the state.

To help make the place where we work a better place to live, Conoco is giving more than $1 million this year alone to philanthropic, educational, and cultural programs in Texas. Our contributions are helping to build the Wortham Theater Center in Houston, provide crisis housing at the Women's Shelter of Bexar County in San Antonio, fund the Children's Heart Institute of South Texas in Corpus Christi, and do much more.

From petroleum production to performing arts, we are an integral part of the Lone Star state. That's why we say with pride: Texas is Conoco Country.

Chrysler of Mexico to sell turbo cars

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Chrysler of Mexico said earlier this week it will begin selling the first domestically manufactured cars with turbo-charged engines.

The engines will be installed as options in the 1984 Magnum and LeBaron models that will be on sale starting Oct. 31, said Jorge Baranda, a spokesman for the company.

Buyers of those cars also will be able to request fuel injection, Baranda said.

A turbo-charged engine reuses a car's emissions, meaning the car uses less fuel and emits less exhaust.

The reinjection of fuel into the Chrysler cars will give them 40 percent more power, Baranda said.

Both turbo-charged cars will have four cylinders, but Baranda said they will have the equivalent power of an eight-cylinder car.

'Venice of the East' sinking into sunset

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Monsoon rainwater that once flowed quickly into lovely canals is now surging down streets, lapping at homes and forcing motorists to abandon cars and rent boats in this city of 6 million people.

Experts say the Thai capital, known as the "Venice of the East" in guidebooks, is sinking into its foundation of mushy clay.

Almost daily during the five-month-long monsoon season the sky darkens, rains buffet streets, and traffic — heavy even in the driest times — stops. Fashionably dressed women hike soaked skirts to dash through knee-high rainwater, fouled by the stench of undrained sewage.

Officials say more than a fifth of the city has suffered flooding in the current monsoon season, with water rising more than two feet in some areas. They have not calculated damage yet but expect it to be staggering.

When King Rama I founded the Thai capital 201 years ago, he built it to co-exist with the monsoons. The monarch ordered his planners to criss-cross the city with canals — hence the Venice description — to allow floodwater to drain off fast.

In recent decades, this co-existence has been shattered by the forces of urbanization. Experts predict that by the mid-1990s, large sections of the city will be permanently under water if Bangkok does not eliminate the root cause of the flooding: the pumping of large underwater wells.

The pumping began in the mid-1950s, deep wells were drilled and 10,500 cubic yards of water were brought up daily for drinking and industrial use. As Bangkok industrialized and failed to exercise controls, the pumping soared to a current rate of nearly 2 million cubic yards a day, the National Environment Board says.

Since nature cannot replenish the wells fast enough, the soft clay foundation of the city has lost its watery cushion and is sinking four to six inches a year. As the city sinks, water from rain and from the Chao Phaya River invades the metropolis.

Tammy Wynette having surgery

Wynette

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Tammy Wynette's speaking voice won't be affected, but she won't be able to sing for two months after her surgery today in West Palm Beach, Fla., a spokeswoman says.

Miss Wynette, whose hits have included "D-I-V-O-R-C-E" and "Stand By Your Man," developed a hernia at the base of her esophagus, according to publicist Kathy Gangwisch.

The singer has canceled 15 concerts from Oct. 21 to Dec. 4.

The publicist said Miss Wynette will be able to appear in her first movie, "Stick," with Burt Reynolds in November despite the operation because the role requires no singing.

The movie, to be filmed in southern Florida, co-stars George Segal and Candice Bergen. Miss Wynette plans to get back on the concert circuit Jan. 17 in Dallas.

Hampton

NEW YORK (AP) — A 19-year-old man who police said "lives by his wits" has been charged with grand larceny for allegedly bilking prominent New Yorkers of food, cash and a bed for the night after impersonating the stranded son of actor Sidney Poitier.

David Hampton of Buffalo was arrested Tuesday evening, police said, after he called one of the six victims, Columbia School of Journalism Dean Osborn Elliott, and asked to meet him in Greenwich Village.

Police spokesman Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell said he did not know why Hampton called Elliott but said the young man "knew we were looking for him."

Lt. Edward Shea of the police fraud unit said Hampton operated the con by showing up on doorsteps and claiming to be a friend of the victims' daughters from Harvard University.

He allegedly identified himself as the son of Poitier and claimed he was going to meet his father but had no place to stay for the night, police said. Poitier, who won an Academy Award for his performance in the 1963 film, "Lilies of the Field," has no son.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vanessa Williams, Miss America, says the press tends to "create something that was not there or said."

Addressing the National Press Club, Miss Williams, 20, a junior at Syracuse University, said "Many a time I have seen newspaper articles and said, 'I never said that.' "

She also said Tuesday that since she was crowned last month she has found that the hardest part of her new role is adjusting to an invasion of privacy.

As for being the first black Miss America, Miss Williams said, "It feels great. But I don't feel any different than the other Miss Americas. Why should I feel different because of my appearance?"

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The estranged wife of "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson is asking $2.6 million a year in temporary support while her divorce suit is pending, saying she needs $37,000 just to pay for jewelry and furs each month, according to court documents.

Joanna Carson says she needs a total of $220,000 a month to pay for clothing, jewelry, security, servants, gardeners and other household expenses, gifts for friends and taxes.

"That's the figure, right from the books of Johnny Carson, who makes a million and a half (dollars) a month," Arthur J. Crowley, Mrs. Carson's attorney, said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

In the documents Mrs. Carson claims she had a personal allowance of $88,000 in 1982.

MAPLE SHADE, N.J. (AP) — Comedian Joey Bishop and two teen idols of the late '50s and early '60s, Bobby Rydell and Fabian, not only have had their names up in lights, but their handprints and signatures down in concrete — outside Pat's, a steak house in Maple Shade, N.J. The 65-year-old Bishop, Rydell, 41, and Fabian Forte, 40, put their autographs in the sidewalk as part of a promotion for expansion of Pat's Steaks — known for serving up a steak and cheese sandwich on a roll — into New Jersey from the South Philadelphia neighborhood where the three entertainers grew up.

CLINTON, Utah (AP) — One of two Siamese twins, Elisa Hansen — born joined at the head with her sister Lisa and successfully separated in May 1979 — is learning how to read, she announced at her birthday party.

Elisa spoke with reporters as school classmates, family and friends gathered in her family's living room in this community 25 miles north of Salt Lake City, but declined to reveal her favorite book.

It was the twins' sixth birthday Tuesday.

O'Brien mourned by about 1,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As many as 1,000 mourners, including Bob Hope and Irene Dunne, heard the late Pat O'Brien eulogized as "a man whose acting ability touched the heart of America."

St. Martin of Tours Catholic Church in Brentwood, where O'Brien worshipped during most of his career, was nearly filled during Tuesday night's funeral Mass.

Burial was scheduled for today at Holy Cross Cemetery in Inglewood.

"We know Pat is something special, not only to the people here but to all who know him to be a great actor," said Msgr. Lawrence Leary. "He could give you a feeling of great nobility, as in his portrayal of Knute Rockne. He could be a tough man or a gentle person, like a priest. Behind it all was a great sense of humor."

Among the stars attending the service were Ralph Bellamy, Ray Bolger, Gene Raymond, Cesar Romero, Jim "Fibber Magee" Jordan, Richard Egan, Lloyd Nolan, Alan Hale Jr., Dennis Day, Penny Singleton, Don DeFore, Bennie Barnes and Ernest Borgnine.

O'Brien, who costarred with Ronald Reagan in "Knute Rockne, All American" and scores of other films, died Saturday at 83 of a heart attack.
