Indigency Standards Presented To County Commissioners

By Sarah Durdin

Indigency standards, how they are applied, and who decides who is indigent was the topic presented by Frances Iles when she appeared before the Aransas County Commissioners at their regular August 8 meeting.

Mrs. Iles spoke at length on the ambiguity of standards of indigency. She gave commissioners a brief history of a group of concerned citizens who were concerned about ways to handle indigents and their needs in Aransas County. She said the group was formed by private citizens, covering a wide range of ages and professions, and added that the members received no compensation for their participation.

A social worker for the Department of Human Resources, Mrs. Iles emphasized that she was acting as a private citizen, who was asking commissioners to consider her request that the county set up a board to determine indigency standards.

She also stated that the group felt it would be in the best interest of all concerned if the person investigating an indigency case not be an elected official. Sheriff Robert Hewes concurred with that statement, saying that when his officers investigated cases of indigency, the people they were questioning were more intimidated by the uniform than by the questions.

Commissioners asked for more time to study the proposal in detail before making a final decision.

Dr. C.M. Patterson also appeared before the commissioner requesting a lease of an airport building. Patterson told commissioners he had a manufacturing plant in east Texas, but added that the unemployment level there was so low that he had difficulties in finding workers. He said he was familiar with Aransas County, and stated that he actually preferred to train someone from the start rather than hire someone who had been trained by another plant to work their way.

Patterson offered the county 20 cents per square foot of the building, supposing there are no improvements made to the building before he opened it for his business.

Commissioners requested time to inspect the building in question before making a decision. County Judge John Wendell read a letter regarding engineering work for the airport runways, which stated that only routine maintenance work would be necessary. Commissioner Owens made a motion to appeal to state and federal agencies for funds to pave the runways. The motion was approved by the commissioners.

Commissioners also approved a resolution for subdivision requirements concerning dedicated county roads and streets bound by existing county roads or streets, or passing through a proposed subdivision.

District Judge Ronald Yeager requested the approval of Wanda Gregory as a court reporter, saying she was a competent court reporter and was qualified for the job. Commissioners approved the request.

Commissioners approved payment of bills totalling $20,534.56 which included a bill totalling $732 for foster child care, $3115 for electricity, $1055.25 to the San Patricio disposal plant, and $2283 for road work.

Before adjourning, Commissioner Sprigell reminded commissioners that the north end of the old Fulton Beach Road was officially closed as of August 8.

TRACY HATFIELD — EXCITED WINNER

First Winner Claims Bike In Pilot Subscription Contest

Tracy Hatfield, 8, was the first winner in the Rockport Pilot's New Subscription Contest—less than 48 hours after the contest was announced.

Tracy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hatfield of 1205 Tern, Rockport, sold 15 new subscriptions to the Pilot to become the first winner of a girls' 10-speed bicycle.

She started selling subscriptions to the newspaper Wednesday morning, August 8, and sold the 15th subscription shortly before 5 p.m. Thursday, July 9.

The contest was announced in the Wednesday, July 8, issue of the Rockport Pilot. A 10-speed bicycle, valued at $87.50, is being given away to boys and girls—of any age—who sell 15 new subscriptions to the Pilot between now and September 15.

The only requirement is that the subscriptions be new and paid for in advance.

Registration in the contest is still open, and anyone may come by the Pilot office at 1002 Wharf Street to pick up instructions and order forms.

Tracy said most of her sales were made going door-to-door, but she did make some phone sales—including one long distance call to her grandmother in Anthony, Kansas.

Mrs. Hatfield explained that her mother-in-law spends winters here in Rockport.

She added that Tracy "did this all on her own," with only a little help from Mom in dialing the phone.

Tracy will be in the third grade when school starts in the fall.

Cove Harbor Discussed At Navigation District Meeting

By Sarah Durdin

Representatives of the Goldston Engineering Company appeared before the Aransas County Navigation District Commissioners at their regular meeting August 7, for the purpose of discussing the cost estimates for Cove Harbor North.

Doug Hearn and John Edison Jr. appeared before the board saying that the dredging, pipelines, paving and bulkheading were included in the project, and were expected to be discussed during a public hearing on the subject, to be held at a later date.

Hearn and Edison stated that there had been some opposition to the project from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Audubon Society.

They also reminded commissioners that the deadline for the project was coming up in August, and added that commissioners would need to reapply for a permit.

Two separate requests to maintain navigation district land were both tabled for further consideration.

Mike Maurer followed up a previous request, to maintain a strip of land on Key Allegro, with a letter requesting consideration to maintain the property when his neighbor, who is currently maintaining the property, vacates the area.

Because commissioners had since learned the navigation district owns more land in the area they tabled the matter for further study.

Howard Gilliam also appeared before the commissioners requesting permission to maintain the Harbor Island Proposal. Commissioner Robert Landrum made a motion to table the matter, saying it was too similar to the recent lease between the Rockport Sailing Club and the navigation district, and added that he wanted more time to study Gilliam's request. Commissioners approved the motion to table the matter.

A request from Elva Mullinax to include his wife's name on the lease they have for Cove Harbor was approved.

Commissioners also approved a request from the Rockport Art Association to use navigation district land June 28-July 13, 1980, for the Rockport Art Festival.

Public Official liability insurance from the Glass, Sorenson, and McDavid Insurance Company was considered. The cost for $1 million is figured at $1582. Commissioners approved a motion by commissioner McKnight to purchase the insurance.

Harbormaster Bernie DeForest presented his report to commissioners, noting that there had been some recent problems with swimmers in the Rockport Harbor. He requested that commissioners authorize him to make or purchase about a dozen "No Swimming" and "Keep Off the Boats" signs which would be placed at various places in the harbor.

DeForest also told commissioners that Jeff Messenger, Aransas County Marine Extension Agent, had requested warning signs be placed at the entrance of Little Bay.

Bills totalling $20,076.54 were approved for payment, with the lowest bill being $5.58 from Aransas Natural Gas, and the highest being $3772.40 from the Vermillion Construction Company for levee work. Also included in the bills was one for $1500 from [See HARBOR page 5]

Texas Champions To Compete In Key Allegro Fishing Tourney

A "powerhouse group" of billfishermen are due in Rockport August 18 and 19 to participate in the third annual Key Allegro Texas Tournament of Champions.

Some 18 to 20 boats are expected to show at this tournament sponsored by Key Allegro Marina.

Participation is by invitation only, and the entrants are teams who have already won division or grand championships in other Texas billfishing tournaments during the 1977, 1978 or 1979 seasons.

"These are the heaviest fishing teams in Texas," says Russell Wilhour, tournament director. "Each (team) has already identified its stature and strength by winning another tournament. They're a powerhouse group of fishermen."

Competition is open in four divisions: Blue Marlin, White Marlin, Sailfish and Broadbill (Swordfish), Wilhour said. Trophies will be awarded to winners in each division in addition to the prizes for the Grand Champion and the Runner-up.

Awards are based on a point system. Points are determined by the weight of the fish caught, Wilhour said.

Among those invited to participate in this year's tournament are (boat, owner, tournament won):

The "Makaria," Frank Shumate of Key Allegro, 1979 grand champion of the 1979 Poco Bueno tourney.

"Joint Venture," Mark and Ozzie Barrett of San Antonio, grand champions 1978 Key Allegro tournament.

"Skywave," Hugh Half of San Antonio, winner of Sailfish Division, Port Aransas Roundup.

"Sukeba," Kiplinger, Houston, grand champion, 1978 Poco Bueno tournament.

"Little Sister," Phillip Harrison of Angleton, grand champion of Eagle Claw Tournament in Freeport.

"Puddin'," Fred Rhodes of George West, winner White Marlin division, Port Aransas Roundup.

"Charbedis," William Cochran of Houston, grand champion 1978 Tift in Port Isabel; Broadbill division winner 1979 Eagle Claw Tourney; holder of the state record for swordfish (316 pounds).

"Wildcat," Niel Hansen of Houston, 1977 Poco Bueno grand champion and divisional winner in the Port Aransas Masters.

A 48-foot Pacemaker, James Barrett of Pearland, grand champion of 1979 Freeport Open.

"Utopia II," Martin Harrison of Houston, grand champion, 1979 Texas Champion Billfish Tournament, Port Aransas.

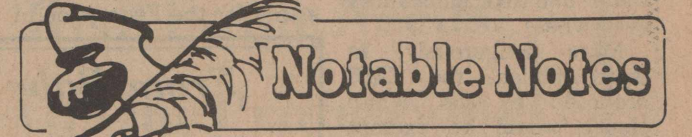

"Top Tackle," Gary Hill of Houston, winner sailfish division, 1978 Texas Billfish Championship, Port Aransas.

Wilhour said boats will be out in the Gulf fishing beginning at midnight Friday, August 17. Some of these will probably remain out until the end of the tournament at 5 p.m. Sunday, "weather permitting," he said. Some boats will come in at the first landing time, 5 p.m. Saturday, August 18, and all boats must come in at 5 p.m. Sunday, Wilhour added.

He said the public is [See FISHING page 5]

Rafts To Doll Houses, Turner Builds 'Em

By Pat Blair

One of Jane Turner's "earlier disappointments" came when her parents wouldn't let her float down the river from Arkansas to New Orleans on the raft she and her nephews built.

"I was 12 or 13," she recalled during an interview at her home out on Copano Ridge Road. "My nephews and I read 'Huckleberry Finn' and we got this idea...we'd build a raft and float down the White River to the Mississippi and on to New Orleans—just like Huck Finn."

"So," she continued, "we pooled our resources, this was in the '30s, and we had about $10. We bought two sheets of marine plywood and we built a boat, a pretty nice little skiff."

"I still remember my astonishment when my family didn't go along with the idea."

Jane Turner has been building things "ever since I was a child. I had a brother in the building business, and my daddy was all thumbs but he was willing to try. When I was a little tiny kid there were tools available, and I learned to use them."

A native of Fayetteville, Arkansas ("I grew up in a little town just south of there," she added), she and her friend Mary Coleman came to Rockport on a permanent basis in 1972, after nearly 30 years service with the Air Force.

Her last position, before she retired in 1970, was at Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma City, working in the KC135 aircraft section. Her duties included "a lot of classified projects" as well as maintenance of the President's Air Force One, Two and Three.

Ms. Turner started painting in 1970, while she was still a winter visitor to Rockport. "I managed to get in on some art classes - it was real fun," she said. She bought the house on Copano Ridge in November, 1972, and one of her early projects was to build a garage. "My brother and nephews helped with the framing for the garage," she said. "Mary (Coleman) and I did everything else except put the roof on; we got help from a neighbor with that."

After the garage - which houses her workshop - she got busy and built a greenhouse.

Another addition to the house was the solar heater she built on the roof of the house to heat water. And, she added, "I have the materials on hand to build a solar heater for the house. In sunny weather, in the winter, the major portion of heat for the house will come from solar heating."

She also found time to take up fishing - "I fished as if I was in the business when I first moved down here" - and became a sailing enthusiast.

In the past several months, she's found a new activity to occupy her time - doll houses.

It started before Christmas last year, she said, when she built a farm-style doll house for a great great niece who was then five years old.

"Mary suggested it would be nice if I made one for the medical folks (the Aransas County Medical Services, Inc. Women's Committee) to help them raise money. Then she said, well why not do one for the Art Festival too."

Since Rockport's Art Show fell on the weekend before July 4, that house had to be finished first. It's done in what Ms. Turner calls "Sea Island Gothic."

Environmentalists Have Misgivings About Carter's Energy Program

Does President Carter's $142 billion energy plan pose a needless threat to our environmental gains it has made in the past decade?

Eleven national environmental groups think the answer to both of those questions is "yes." They think the nation can meet its energy needs without adding two new, powerful and expensive agencies -- an Energy Mobilization Board (EMB) and an Energy Security Corporation (ESC) -- to the array of government bureaus already working on the problem.

The environmentalists also feel the Carter Administration has not put enough emphasis on what they see as the quickest and cheapest solution to the present fuel shortage -- the conservation of energy.

They joined forces to protect environmental laws they see threatened by the proposed EMB and ESC and to force the Carter Administration and Congress to pay more attention to "conservation energy."

Their argument against the quick creation of two new super-powered agencies is an impressive one -- the more so because it comes from broadly-based citizen conservation groups that have consistently supported the President on energy and environmental issues.

The largest of the groups, the National Wildlife Federation, in fact, gave Carter the "Conservationist of the Year" award only last March. These are not no-growth, stop-the-world, obstructionist organizations.

They are particularly fearful of the proposed EMB. The concept of three Presidential appointees sitting as a board to ensure "fast track licensing" of critical energy facilities is an alluring one. Everyone likes to cut red tape.

But environmentalists see the EMB as an authoritarian vehicle that could ride roughshod over fundamental laws and regulations now protecting us from poisoned air, polluted water, and toxic substances everywhere.

More dangerously, in their opinion, the EMB proposed by the White House would be exempt from many federal laws that protect us from arbitrary government: the Administrative Procedures Act, which requires fair hearings on disputed issues; the Freedom of Information Act, which prevents the government from acting secretly; and the Ethics in Government Act, which requires disclosure of conflicts of interest.

The environmentalists' fear that EMB might use its powers arbitrarily was not allayed by a Carter Administration official who told them at a White House briefing: "We'll simply have to be a government of men and women, not laws."

For these and other reasons, the 11 environmental groups are equally wary of the proposed Energy Security Corporation, the $88 billion federally-funded corporation designed to develop the energy equivalent of 2.5 million barrels of oil per day from coal, oil shale, and biomass by 1990.

ESC's seven-member board would also have extraordinary powers to push for the production of synthetic combustibles.

The conservationists favor a "crash" effort to develop alternate sources of energy, but feel that the Administration's emphasis on "synfuels" is misplaced.

These fuels are the hardest and most expensive to extract and refine. Mining them would lay waste thousands of square miles -- an area the size of Delaware, by one estimate. It would devastate much valuable cropland and require millions of gallons of water in places where it is scarce.

And since the synfuel technology has not been proved, the conservationists see the ESC program as a fantastically expensive, environmentally damaging "shot in the dark."

Since voicing their objections to the Carter plan, the environmentalists have received support from research groups at two of the nation's top universities -- Harvard and Princeton -- and from one of its preeminent "think tanks," the Rand Corporation.

A six-year study by the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration has reached the conclusion that a stepped-up program to encourage conservation would prove far more rewarding than any other energy path.

The Harvard scholars, in a report called "Energy Future," also plumped for an accelerated solar energy program -- a favorite of the environmentalists -- but conceded that they are less certain of gains to be made with solar than those achievable by conservation.

Two physicists working at Princeton's Center for Energy and Environmental Studies, in a report prepared for the Federation of American "produce" the energy equivalent of 2.5 million barrels of oil per day by the late 1980s if the government aggressively supported a conservation program, mostly by insulating and heating homes more efficiently.

That would be more than one quarter of the eight million barrels a day we are now importing and equal to the amount of energy the Carter Administration hopes the ESC will produce by 1990.

In its report, prepared for the federal government's own Department of Energy, the Rand Corporation scientists were more concerned with the excessive cost of synfuels than with savings by conservation.

They warned that any attempt to create by 1990 a synthetic fuel production capacity in excess of one million barrels a day might not be successful. Any crash effort to build synfuel plants would cost billions more than estimated, they predicted, and would probably contribute to inflation.

Conclusion: The rush into admittedly "dirty" synfuels might prove to be a classic case of haste making waste.

Obviously, there is no easy road to energy security. Most of the options facing the President and Congress have drawbacks and so, after all the arguments have been heard, they must choose between undesirable alternatives.

What is to be hoped is that before adopting an energy course for the next decade they will listen to the arguments now being advanced by the environmentalists.

Ten years ago a different President and Congress listened impatiently to environmentalists' suggestions concerning the Alaska pipeline.

They adopted those suggestions only grudgingly and after a court fight. Now Aleyeska admits that those suggestions made it a better and safer pipeline.

Much time could have been saved if the environmentalists' views had been considered in the first place.

'Low Down' FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

(A Column for Readers Who Haven't Time to Review the Congressional Record Daily)

WANT A ALCOHOL STILL PERMIT?

SENATOR Birch Bayh (Ind.) "...President Carter indicated in his energy speech of July 15 that his administration plans to make significant strides toward the goal of alleviating our Nation's dependence on foreign oil imports by encouraging the use of alternative fuels, including alcohol fuels. I was encouraged by the President's mention of gasohol in his speech, as it is the only alternative petroleum substitute immediately available to the Nation."

"As Chairman of the newly established National Alcohol Fuels Commission, and in my capacity as Senator from Indiana, I have received numerous requests for information about Government procedures for granting permits for the production of alcohol fuels.

"Many of these requests are from individuals who would like to produce enough alcohol to run their own vehicles. However, the instructions issued by the Government to date have been discouraging in their complexity. I have been working with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) to insure that the Government assists citizens interested in this new alternative energy source."

"On April 22, along with 20 of my colleagues, I introduced S. 1200, the Alcohol Fuels Regulatory Simplification Act of 1979, which will grant the Secretary of Treasury the authority to waive needless regulations for alcohol fuel production as well as to streamline those that are necessary."

"Until the time that S. 1200 passes the Congress (They are on vacation), and needless red tape can be cut, the best option available to individuals who want to establish a still is to obtain an 'experimental' permit. This can be done by writing a letter to the appropriate regional regulatory administrator of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms describing in detail, where the still will be located, what use will be made of the alcohol, and the process that will be used to produce it."

CRUMPS GRASS ROOTS COMMENT

Before there is a rush to request an "Experimental" permit, consider some of the red tape. You must describe all land and equipment, stills, vats, tanks, your use of the alcohol for heating, fuel, lawnmower or other engine fuel; complete plant drawings; feedstocks, yeast, enzymes, and distillation method; type of security; amount you intend to produce in a 15 day period; file a distiller's bond to cover liability for Federal taxes; provide environmental and quality water information. Also none can be sold or given away.

A trip to the nearest gas station appears to be the best bet.

State Of The Region

Progress that has been made in planning for a dependable water supply for parts of two counties is demonstrating how a concentrated public participation program can avoid the divisiveness that so often slows or prevents accomplishments.

The story begins less than two years ago. Clyde Allen, Jr., chairman, and other members of the Kleberg County Water Control and Improvement District - Kingsville, were looking ahead toward the time when the wells which provide their water now will no longer be adequate for industrial or municipal growth and to meet water quality standards. Nueces County Commissioner Carl Bluntzer and his assistant, Buster Shely, were taking the same sort of long range look at western Nueces County.

Determining their common interests, they came to the Council of Governments for technical assistance. A $23,300 grant was obtained for a feasibility study to determine the most practical and economical way to provide a water supply to this area, covering parts of two counties.

There was early recognition of potential problems of getting a meeting of minds when agreement had to be reached by officials of two counties and of five cities, with the support of their constituents.

The way that was chosen to avoid problems was to keep the public fully informed of every detail as possibilities were discussed and decisions made.

The first step was to form a steering committee with representatives from all segments of communities and the economy in Nueces and Kleberg Counties, in Corpus Christi, Kingsville, Bishop, Driscoll, Banquete, and Agua Dulce, of the Council of Governments, the Lower Nueces River Water Supply District, the Kleberg County District, the Kingsville Naval Air Station, and such industries as Celanese, Exxon and King Ranch.

Consultants were hired, studies began, and interim reports were made. Each time information was received or an issue was discussed, a public meeting was held.

There have been 18 such public meetings or hearings, and they are still going on. The representatives of the different interests were present and anyone else from the public who wanted to be there. Most of the meetings were held in Bishop because of its central location.

Allen, Bluntzer, and their associates, making sure that everyone knew what was going to be talked about worked closely with the news media. They saw to it reporters and editors had all their questions answered and there were no misunderstandings. Anywhere from 20 to 50 people attended each meeting.

The fact that representatives of a cross-section of the community knew details early enough to influence the outcome with their opinions meant letters of support to government agencies as decisions were reached and moves were made further down the road.

Consultants recommended a pipeline be constructed to carry treated water from a Corpus Christi plant to the communities in both counties along the way to Kingsville. This plan was accepted.

After the legislature was already in session, it was determined that a new water district would have to be created to direct and finance the project.

Because there was so much support and no opposition, it was possible for legislators of the Coastal Bend to move the necessary bill through the legislature in the short time that they had to do so.

The Celanese plant near Bishop is not within the boundaries of the Authority because it is in the Lower Nueces River Water Supply District. But having been a part of the community effort, Celanese contributed $50,000 as interim financing. With this money, preliminary engineering plans are being prepared to use in applying for federal loans and grants, which are expected to pay most of the construction costs.

Nueces and Kleberg Counties have both appointed members to the first board of the Water Authority. That board will take charge as soon as a validation election has been held August 25. In that election, the people living in the portion of western Nueces and northern Kleberg Counties which are in the district, will be asked to validate the legislative action.

If the momentum can be maintained, the water line will be a reality in much fewer years than are usually required for a project of this magnitude. Civic leaders who have been a part of the process credit much of the success to this point to a planned and coordinated public participation program.

Senate Report

This is the third in a series of columns on our area energy problem and gasoline shortage.

The Senate Natural Resources Committee, of which I am chairman, met Saturday in Austin. We produced evidence on the shortage of gasoline in certain areas and the reasons for it. We discussed some positive plans on how we are going to get more gasoline to the area of our state that are in need.

I'm asking my constituents to check their newspapers for specific reports on our meeting and the results which will follow.

This column deals with the single best substitute for gasoline which can be made available in Texas under new laws which we heard in the Natural Resources Committee and passed in the last legislative session. Primarily, alcohol can be combined with gasoline to make a mixture called gasohol. From the standpoint of the federal government, Sen. Bentsen reports that congress has passed the Alcohol Fuels Regulatory Simplification Act of 1979. This act maintains strict controls on production of alcohol for beverages, but gives the Secretary of the Treasury authority to change regulations which present obstacles to production of alcohol for use as a source of energy.

The federal Act cuts through the red tape that ensnarls small producers of alcohol who were forced to comply with regulations which were intended to apply only to the large companies which produce massive quantities of alcohol for beverage use.

The United States uses 100 billion gallons of gasoline a year. We can, in effect, save 10 billion gallons - or have 10 billion gallons more - by through combining 10 percent alcohol with 90 percent gasoline to make gasohol.

It is possible to use as much as 20 percent alcohol in gasohol. It is also possible to burn pure alcohol in automobile engines if the carburetor is modified. This modification, as I understand it, can be made simply by enlarging two vents by 40 percent simply by drilling the holes larger.

The present cost of alcohol in the wholesale market is around $3 per gallon. It is estimated that we can produce large quantities of alcohol in Texas from agricultural products not otherwise used in the market place, or we can produce wood alcohol, for a little as 50 cents a gallon, or at least not exceeding $1.50 per gallon. We would then have a source of fuel without being dependent on any foreign country, and it would not require expensive exploration drilling and production. All we would have to do is grow the necessary raw materials on the land. This source of energy would not require construction of new refineries, which generally take seven years from start of construction to start of production.

Alcohol can be produced much more easily than gasoline. It is foreseeable in the not-too-distant future that for an investment of from $50 to $100, people could have backyard stills to produce alcohol and mix it with their gasoline for their own use.

The two bills passed in the last legislative session are House Bill 1986, which amends the alcoholic beverage code to allow production of alcohol for use as a fuel, and House Bill 1803, which gives the Texas Industrial Commission the authority to make loans for construction of facilities to manufacture alcohol from agricultural products.

These new regulations require a permit for this production of alcohol.

There are-and must be adequate safeguards to keep the fuel alcohol from finding its way into the beverage market, or being consumed by the individual.

First Load Of African Coal Arrives At CC Port

A ship loaded with 40,000 tons of South African coal for Central Power and Light Company's Coletto Creek Power Station arrived at the Port of Corpus Christi at 4 p.m. Sunday, July 29.

The coal will be used for testing operations at the company's first coal-fired generating station under construction between Goliad and Victoria.

It will be moved by truck from the port to the plant site where preliminary tests are scheduled to begin later this year. The plant will begin generating power in early 1980.

CPL has contracted for a

25-year supply of Colorado coal for the first unit at Coletto Creek, but company officials are studying the possibility that lower transportation costs may make imported coal a cheaper alternative for future units.

The South African shipment is a part of that study.

In testimony before a meeting of a House subcommittee in Houston last April, CPL Executive Vice President M.L. Borchelt said the South African coal would be about 20 cents per million BTUs cheaper than domestic coal.

Borchelt noted that the imported coal would be cheaper despite the fact that the South African shipment would travel by rail 300 miles from the mines in Africa to the coast, then by ship 7,000 miles to Corpus Christi and then by truck 80 miles to the plant site, as opposed to a 1,400 mile journey by rail for the Colorado coal.

Municipal Finance Subject Of Charter Article VII

By Pat Blair
The fiscal year of the City of Rockport will be from October 1 through September 30.

The city manager will submit to the city council a proposed budget for the next fiscal year on or before August 5.

If the city council does not adopt the budget by September 27, "the amounts appropriated for operation during the current fiscal year shall be deemed adopted for the ensuing fiscal year on a month-to-month basis" until the council adopts a budget.

These are some of the dates and deadlines set by proposed Article VII of Rockport's new city charter.

Dealing with municipal finance, this article establishes the contents of the budget, provides for public notice and hearing and provides for a five-year capital improvement program that is to be submitted annually with the budget.

The budget is to consist of three parts: a budget message and general budget summary; detailed estimates of proposed expenditures, anticipated revenues, delinquent taxes and statements of the city's indebtedness; and a complete draft of the budget ordinance.

A general summary of the proposed budget is to be posted in City Hall and published in the official newspaper, and a public hearing on the budget is to be set "not less than two weeks" after publication.

The City Council "may adopt the budget with or without amendment" at a regular or special meeting at least seven days after the public hearing.

The budget ordinance will be adopted on first reading. This makes it one of the few ordinances to require less than three readings for passage.

"No amendment to the budget shall increase the authorized expenditures to an amount greater than the total of estimated income plus funds available from prior years." This statement in Article VII prohibits deficit spending.

The property tax rate for the coming fiscal year is part of the budget and is adopted with it.

Article VII also requires that the City manager submit a five-year capital program "as an attachment to the annual budget." The capital program must include:

--A list of all capital improvements proposed "for the five fiscal years succeeding the budget year, with appropriate supporting information" on why these improvements are needed.

--Cost estimates, method of financing and recommended time schedule for each proposed improvement.

--The estimated annual cost of operating and maintaining the facilities to be constructed or acquired.

All unspent or unencumbered budget appropriations except those for capital expenditures will lapse at the end of the fiscal year. Appropriations for capital expenditures "shall continue in force until the purpose for which it was made has been accomplished or abandoned."

A capital project will be considered abandoned if three years pass "without any disbursement from or encumbrance of the appropriation." Funds not spent, disbursed or encumbered are considered excess funds.

JUDGING DISTANCE

Dear Dr. Pettey: I have to drive a mail route of nearly 100 miles a day. My optometrist has told me I don't have real good depth perception. He says a high fever I had in my late twenties may have helped cause the problem. He said he could give me vision training that might help, except that I live 70 miles from him, and couldn't come in. He offered to let me take home a stereoscope and cards to give myself home training, which I didn't take. Any suggestions?

No, not really. I imagine your vision specialist gave advice about like this: "Slow your driving speed, especially when the light is not good, as in fog, or dark days, at night, or just at dusk...the most dangerous time of day. Less illumination decreases even normal depth perception. Also, be sure not to drive when you are quite tired. Here, take this hand stereoscope and these stereo pictures home with you and look at them for about ten minutes at a time twice a day. You show to have about 60% depth perception now. Using this scope will very likely sharpen that to maybe as much as 90%. Three or four weeks of this will tell the tale. Report back to me then and we'll see. A 50% improvement would be good."

city's sewage treatment facilities when needed.

Application is being made under an Environmental Protection Agency Wastewater Facilities Construction Grant Program in which EPA pays 75 per cent of the cost and the city pays 25 per cent.

The Step I study would cost a little over $55,000 of which the city's share would be about $14,000, city officials have said.

During the Step I study, which will take approximately one year to complete, the future needs of the City of Rockport will be considered and recommendations made as to how to meet these needs.

If the study indicates new facilities are needed, the city would proceed to Step 2, the design phase, then to Step 3, construction of the facilities. Officials estimate it will take four to five years to complete all three phases.

Preliminary indications are that the present treatment plant will need to be doubled from a capacity of one million gallons per day to two million gallons per day. Officials also foresee need for a new underground line to discharge effluent into Aransas Bay.

Effluent is presently being discharged into Little Bay.

A recent study by the Coastal Bend council of Governments projects a growth for the Rockport area to a population of 9,100 by 1985. At that growth rate, the city's present sewage treatment plant will be overloaded by about 1982 or 1983, officials say.

Council To Hold Hearing On Treatment Grant

Rockport's City Council will convene a public hearing at 7 p.m. Monday, August 13, on the city's application for a Step I grant to study the city's sewage collection and treatment system.

The hearing will precede the regular City Council session.

The Step I study is the first part of a three step program aims at improving and/or enlarging the

THE SMITH HOUSE ACCORDING TO TOM

Tom Notestine displays his painting of the Smith house on the corner of Broadway and Highway 35 as he sees it. The painting was done on a recent trip to Rockport while he was here to conduct a workshop for Paint-Spree Tours. [Photo by Sarah L. Durdin]

Bootlegging Was More Acceptable Architect Chose Watercolors, Oils

By Sarah Durdin

He didn't say just how long he had been an artist, but Tom Notestine did mention that when he got started common opinion held bootleggers in higher esteem than artists.

It may have been a carry-over from that attitude that caused him to choose architecture as a profession. He was registered as Architect #1003 in 1958, in his home state of Kansas. Since then he has worked for the governments of Nicaragua, Honduras, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, and Jamaica, as well as the United States.

During all that time he never gave up his art. His impressions and memories of the places he has lived are reflected in his paintings...crowded market scenes, drowsy fishing villages, and turbulent seas.

Tom and his wife Dorothy, also an artist, are familiar with the Rockport area through workshops they have conducted here for Paint-Spree Tours. Although their permanent home is in San Antonio, they keep a trailer here for relaxing and as a second home for painting.

If marriage is supposed to make couples begin to look alike, Tom and Dorothy are the exception. Tom is tall and rangy, with dark brown eyes, a multitude of smile lines and a Gary Cooper voice. Dorothy is petite, smiley, and...well, um, twinkly. She beams when she talks, frequently smiling and grinning. She can tell you almost as much about Tom's work as he can.

"I like painting with watercolors best. They're sort of like a temperamental woman, oils are more like a man. Watercolors are harder to handle, and they need more control, but if you master them, they are a wonder," was how Tom explained his preference in paints.

Even so, he will occasionally paint with oils and also teaches others. The point he emphasizes most to his students is the need to create the design of the painting.

"I never paint what I see. I design the painting so that it's balanced, with the right elements included for the mood I want. I may put a tree where there wasn't one before, or I may not put one in at all. There are sketches I've collected over the years, that I'll use in a painting, if it's what I want to see."

One example of his designing is in a recent watercolor Tom made with the yellow Smith house (at the corner of Broadway and Hwy 35) as the focal point. Rather than facing the miniature golf course, the house is shown on the edge of a shore drive, standing strong in the face of a seastorm complete with pounding waves and gray- ing skies. There are also a few Tin Lizzies down in one corner, puttering their way home before the storm hits.

Perhaps the most notable aspect of Tom's work is the way he uses dark and light shades. No painting is half light and half dark, sometimes one will dominate sometimes the other is in force.

"You don't see everything as being all sunlight or all moonlight," said Tom, "and so I don't paint that way."

Like all artists, Tom is critical of his own work, causing him to get what Dorothy calls "the three day hates."

"He'll work on a painting until he gets it just the way he wants it, and then for the next three days he doesn't like it," she said.

"He just has to put it away for a few days until he can look at it objectively, when he's not so involved with it."

Tom agrees with Dorothy's diagnosis, adding that he once offered to sell a painting at a very low price, only to have it bought later at a price several times higher than the one he originally quoted. You guessed it, he made the offer during the three-day hates.

While there are people in abundance in Tom's paintings, he quite frankly admits he doesn't like to do portraits.

"People don't see themselves as other people see them, so they have a different image of what they look like. I painted one old man, and sort of left out a few wrinkles, flattering him a bit, you know, and he didn't like it. He kept saying I'd make him look so old, but when his wife saw it, she said the painting made him look younger than he was," said Tom.

"If you ever paint someone's portrait, don't paint their profile. No one realizes how long it is from their nose to the end of their jaw, and they'll think you didn't paint them very well."

But even Tom ignores his own advice at times, having painted portraits of presidents, generals, and a congressman.

Between painting workshops, one-man shows, and his own painting, Tom has also found time to participate in several different art organizations, including a vice-presidency of the prestigious Coppini Academy.

Tom was the 1977 winner of the World-Wide Air Force Art Show held in San Francisco, and he also won the Best of Show and First in the Watercolors at the International Art Show held in Brownsville that same year.

Commission To Look At Entire Charter Tuesday

Rockport's Charter Commission is scheduled to look at the proposed city charter in its entirety at a meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, August 14.

Earlier, a rewrite committee composed of Ed Armstrong, Larry Boone and Richard McMakin was charged with reviewing all of the charter articles -- considered individually by the Charter Commission in past sessions -- and putting them together for the commission to look at Tuesday.

It has been the rewrite committee's responsibility to ensure that the wording of articles is consistent, that they are numbered properly, that there are no conflicts or unintended duplications.

If the commission accepts the charter as presented by the rewrite committee Tuesday, the next step will be to present a copy of the rough draft to the Texas Municipal League, the Justice Department and City Secretary Herman Johnson for their review.

A three-member information committee, composed of Delmar Hiller, Dana Taggart and Jimmy Little will then summarize the charter and coordinate the public education and information phase of charter works.

conglomerate of pictures, not too fancy," she said. For the ACMSI Women's Committee, she decided to make a copy of the old T.N. Smith House, the old yellow house that sits on the corner where Highway 35 joins Broadway.

It's kind of a landmark around here," she said. "I knew it would be tough to build, but it would be nice -- it would be fun."

The interior of the house of course could not be copied, but Ms. Turner has tried as much authenticity as possible on the exterior. She has a stack of color photos she took of the outside of the house trying to capture the details.

And what will she do after she finishes the doll house? "I plan to customize a van -- for me," she said.

She already has the van, which she described as "a tin box, nothing inside at all." But she has plans that show "plush, high-backed seats," a divan that can convert to a single bed, a sink and cabinet area, two burner hot plate, an ice box...

And after that? She'll find other projects. She's never shrimped -- "I want to go shrimping some day," she adds.

For Jane Turner, there's always some project waiting...

The summary of the charter is to be finished by August 21, according to the timetable the commission adopted at its July 31 meeting.

A public hearing, to give the people of Rockport an opportunity to express their views and ask questions about the charter, is scheduled for September 21.

The commission is aiming for an election on the proposed charter on November 6.

Saturday
James
2:1-26

She looks like a seaworthy little craft and soon Tim and his father will put her to the test. They will discover whether she is properly balanced, whether her sails are straight, whether she will take to the water proudly, or flounder and capsize.

A boat has to be right, and she has to be ready. So do we, as individuals. We need good guidelines, a right sense of direction, and the church of our choice can help us toward finding both.

The Church, remember, has been "ready" for a long, long time.

New Church On Omohondro Completed

Construction is completed on the new Rockport Church of Christ building, 1520 Omohondro Street.

The brick and steel structure, containing approximately three and one-half acres of land.

It includes a fellowship area with seating room for about 200, and the auditorium will seat 504 persons.

Construction on the new building was begun on April 8, Live Oak State Bank financed the building, and members of the building committee included A.L. McCraw, Jim Allen, Jim Hutt, David Blankenship, Bill Tucker, Floyd Brown, Arthur Clinton, Bob Evers and Sam Sanders.

The Rockport Church of Christ was established in the area some 66 years ago. According to Court House records, W.D.L. Dye, Dr. O.F. Bonham and G.W. Manship, trustees for the Congregation of the Church of Christ, bought two lots in block 26 of the Smith and Woods Division, City of Rockport.

The church building at 801 Mimosa Street was constructed in 1954, financed by the Commercial State Bank of Sinton. The first pastor was Brother Barry. He was succeeded by Leo H. Owens, C.B. Thomas, Truman Springs and Harrison Matthews.

Owens was again preacher following Matthews, and he was succeeded by Jim Killian, Billy Thompson, M.E. Hicks, Ed Sisson, Don Griffin and Dan Proffett. John Goodwin is current preacher of the church.

In 1965, a home for the preacher was constructed in Fulton on land donated by Emory Spencer. The home was financed by the First National Bank of Rockport.

In 1970, the church structure on Mimosa was remodeled and enlarged to its existing size.

The new building has been designed to permit enlargement of the structure to keep pace with future growth needs and is energy-efficient.

Elders of the church are Neal Gage, John Hesselstine, Blankenship and Allen. Deacons are Douglas Elliott, Howard Gilliam, Hutt and Richard Sharp.

Among its activities, the church contributes to the support of the Sunny Glen Childrens Home, the Albuquerque Christian Childrens Home and the Lubbock Christian Home, and maintains an evangelist, Jerry Gardner, in North Bay, Ontario.

Cone Gets Present On Bank's Birthday

When employees of Live Oak State Bank totalled up the bank's assets after closing on Monday, July 30, they discovered the assets had reached an all-time high of $20,015,574.02.

Since Tuesday, July 31, was the bank's fifth anniversary in Rockport, the "daily sheets" showing the assets were presented to Bank President George Cone in proper style Tuesday morning—tied up with a bright red ribbon.

"We hadn't really expected to hit that," Cone said. "Our preliminary forecast was that in five years the bank would have assets of $6 million."

"It was the best anniversary present I could've gotten."

Rockport Church Of Christ

—A Historical Report Early In It's History...

EARLY BUILDING

The History Of The Rockport Church Of Christ

The Rockport Church of Christ has a long and interesting history, for over sixty-six years it has had a part in the influence and growth and progress of this area. According to Court House records, on the 13th day of December, 1913, one James M. Percival, Executor, of the estate of Jane Stearns, deceased, did at a private sale sell to W. D. L. Dye, Dr. O. F. Bonham and G.W. Manship, trustees for the Congregation of the Church of Christ lots 11 and 12, in block 26 of the Smith and Woods Division of the city of Rockport, Texas.

The executors' Warranty Deed, dated January 8, 1914 noted the following: "It is expressly provided that should any innovations or practices, not clearly taught in the New Testament get into the Worship of the congregation of the Church of Christ of Rockport, or if the present congregation at Rockport should disband or become defunct, the title to said property shall at once vest in the nearest congregation to Rockport, worshipping strictly according to the New Testament doctrine by precept and example; and further provided that should another congregation of the same, order and practice, spring up in Rockport after the demise of the present one [should same demise] the title of said property shall immediately vest in same.

Witness my hand this 8th day of January, A.D. 1914.

Fred M. Percival, Executor of the estate of Jane Stearns, deceased...

We are happy to report that neither of the expressed provisos occurred, the church continued to prosper and held fast to the Apostles Doctrine...

On the 17th day of June, 1940 the church building belonging to the First Christian Church was purchased by the Church of Christ to be moved with in a reasonable time. The Bill of Sale was signed by Mrs. James Lathrop and by Mr. and Mrs. James G. Hooper, the last Board of Directors of the First Christian Church.

The year 1952 was another milestone in the progress of the Church of Christ in Rockport. Floyd Brown, Lowell Stacy, Bill Tucker, Arthur Clinton, and H. J. Gurley were the elders of the church. On the 4th day of February at 1:30 o'clock p.m. at the Court House steps of Aransas County, Texas a sale conducted by County Judge John D. Wendell, lots thirteen [13] and Fourteen [14] in Block Twenty-six [26] in the Smith and Woods division was sold to the Church of Christ, Rockport Texas for thirty dollars [$30.00] it being the highest bidder of the same.

A public notice published in the Rockport Pilot for three weeks in November 1953 of the sale of lots Fifteen [15] and Sixteen [16] in the Smith and Woods Division, City of Rockport. Once more on the Court House steps Judge John D. Wendell, November 20, 1953 sold the above property to the Congregation of the Church of Christ with Floyd Brown, Bill Tucker and Harry Gurley acting as trustees.

The building at 801 Mimosa was built in 1954 financed by the Commercial State Bank of Sinton. A preachers' home was built in Fulton in 1965 on land donated to the church by Mr. Emory Spencer. The home was financed by the First National Bank here in Rockport. The church structure was remodeled and enlarged to its present state in 1970.

A New Building

On Sunday morning, April 2nd, 1978 it was announced by Matt Sparkman for the Elders that a new House of Worship would begin construction on Monday morning April 3rd. Four acres of land purchased from Carl Krueger just back of the Live Oak State Bank at 1520 Omohondro Street was to be the site of the new new edifice. It was to be of brick and steel construction with the entire edifice under one roof with demenations of 120 feet by 110 feet. The new building was financed by the Live Oak State Bank, Rockport.

The "Building Committee" for this undertaking was A. M. McCraw, Jim Allen, Jim Hutt, David Blankenship, Bill Tucker, Floyd Brown, Arthur Clinton, Bob Evers, and Sam Sanders.

Neal Gage, John Hesselstine, David Blankenship and Jim Allen serve as elders of the church. Douglas Elliott, Howard Gilliam, Jim Hutt and Richard Sharp serve the church as deacons. John W. Goodwin is the local preacher and Jerry Gardner is the evangelist in North Bay, Ontario. The church also contributes to the support of the Sunny Glen Childrens Home, The Albuquerque Christian Childrens Home and the Lubbock Christian Home. The Herald of Truth, a T.V. and Radio Program overseen by the Fifth and Highlands Church of Christ in Abilene, Texas is also supported. The church has a budget [which it exceeds] of $1,423.00 per week.

...Until The Present Time

New Facility Completed

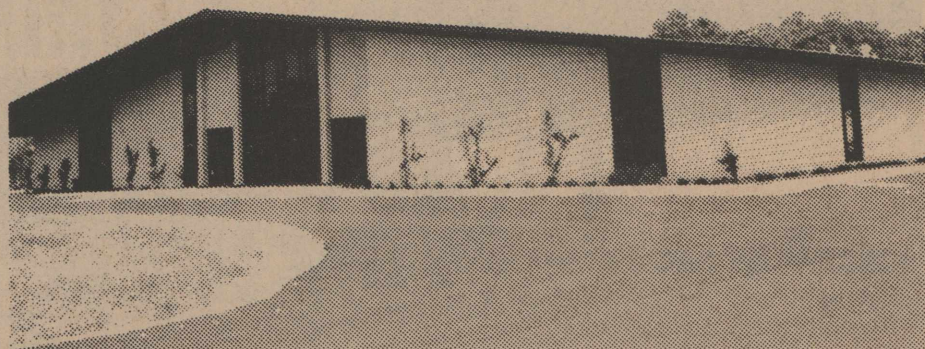

The 14,000 square foot structure is located on approximately three and one-half acres and is nestled among oak and pine trees which add to the attractiveness of the building.

This energy efficient facility is constructed primarily of buff colored brick and structural steel. Within the edifice are minister's study, secretarial office, conference for elders, deacons and various committees, ten class rooms, including nursery and cradle roll ages, a teachers' workroom and fellowship area with a seating area for about 200.

The fellowship area can easily convert into four additional classrooms. The Auditorium will seat 504 worshippers.

The building has been designed to permit enlargement of the structure as future growth warrants such. The black-top parking lot has ample space for the car.

NEW BUILDING

The Rockport Church of Christ is difficult to describe because of the unique situation and blessings our location affords in this work. Our numbers are made up of brethren from all over this land. Some [especially the Winter Visitors] spend four to six months a year in Rockport and make the Congregation their home while here. In the summer time the visits are of shorter duration, but just as important and just as much a part of this work as any other. These fine Christians have a tremendous influence on the work at this place and continue to do so, not only by their presence and influence but in a monetary way as well. There is seldom a week that passes that some good soul sends a contribution for the work or for the new building.

Someone has said, "It is a tremendous thing to know God and do His will; to accept gratefully what He sends us, to do faithfully what He bids us; to pray as we would talk with a friend; to trust where we do not understand, and to believe Him in kind even when things that hurt; to keep unspotted from the worlds' sins and unselfish toward the worlds' needs; to love those we cannot like and to hate no one; to be true when others are false, brave in the midst of cowardice, enjoy our friends, and to serve our Heavenly Father by helping His children on earth, in fact to be like Christ on love and life; in service and sacrifice—that is salvation—that is Christianity, and that is the ideal toward which this Book of Books, The Bible ever leads us."

The congregation of the Rockport Church of Christ, 1520 Omohondro Street is dedicated to serving God and man, strictly according to the New Testament Doctrine by precept and example. Our plea, to have scriptural authority for everything we do or teach. Our desire is simple, to restore the New Testament Church on earth today exactly as it was in the first century.

You and your loved ones are always welcome at the Services of the Rockport Church of Christ...

The Rockport Church And Its Preachers

The Rockport Church of Christ had its beginning early in 1939. C. T. McLain and others from Freer did the first preaching. Norman Beeman held the first Gospel Meeting and some time later meetings were held by Foy Wallace and Foy Wallace, Jr. while visiting in this area.

The storm of 1942 destroyed the first building and the remains of that building were removed and that rebuilding program was completed, according to Harry Gurley, in time for the 1948 storm...

The building at 801 Mimosa Street was built in 1954 with a Brother Berry as the first preacher. He was followed by Leo H. Owens, C. B. Thomas, Truman Springs, Harrison Matthews, Leo H. Owen, Jim Killian, Billy Thompson, N. E. Hicks, Ed. Sisson, Don Griffin and Dan Proffett.

A number of preachers have been developed in the Rockport Church. Roy Mullinax, George Wulff, Richard Horn, Benny Horton, Mike Dennis, James Ballou and Buddy Clinton. Bill Tucker and John Goodwin are the present preachers.

Speaking Of Sports

By JACK MURPHY
Copley News Service

Great numbers of people become nervous and irritable when they learn that professional athletes want to be rich and travel in a private railroad car and wear mink earmuffs when they slide down mountains at Vail and Sun Valley.

Some feel cheated or betrayed because Pete Rose shopped around baseball before signing a $3.2 million contract with the Philadelphia Phillies. Others are annoyed because Rod Carew cleverly engaged George Steinbrenner and Gene Autry in a bidding contest before accepting a $4 million deal with the California Angels.

They tell us they are losing money despite record attendance, but they don't open their books to the press or public. I don't believe them, or disbelieve them. I just know they aren't speaking under oath.

With luck and careful budgeting, most of us make from payday to payday. Most of the sentiment in professional sports resides with the public. The athletes are mercenaries who, for the most part, aren't burdened by a civic conscience. They are takers, not givers.

The owners aren't all robber barons, but I have other heroes. Even now Robert Irsay threatens to relocate the Baltimore Colts in Los Angeles unless they give him a new building in Maryland. Al Davis is my friend but I won't be shocked if he uses the Los Angeles Coliseum as a club in his negotiations with the Oakland Coliseum. Never mind that all Raider games have been sold out for a decade their contract with the Oakland Coliseum expires this year.

It doesn't surprise me that somebody tried to frame a Sacramento sports writer when he went to Alabama to interview Kenny Stabler. But it's interesting the deed was so botched even an Alabama sheriff was embarrassed to make an arrest. That's fun and games, folks.

Yet they are useful to society because they entertain us. They add a dash of color to our lives, they give us something to discuss besides taxes, inflation, crime and the mischief of politicians.

There is something to be said for football when its premiere game, the Super Bowl, gets traffic off the street for three hours on a Sunday afternoon, quiets the nation, and even distracts hubcap thieves from their work.

I cling to the old-fashioned idea that an athlete is entitled to market his talent for whatever it will bring. The club owners leave me dry-eyed when they complain of the athletes' greed. Club owners warn of doom and disaster but they live in mansions and buy lettuce as though it were still selling at 29 cents a pound.

Texas Coastal Council To Hold Meeting August 17

The meeting of the Texas Coastal and Marine Council scheduled for Friday, August 17, will have several agenda items of interest to coastal residents.

Slated to begin at 9 a.m., the meeting will be held at the Brazosport Hilton in Lake Jackson.

Senator A.R. Schwartz, Chairman of the Council said, "We have a full schedule of items of general interest to all coastal citizens, and we will try to finish up by early afternoon. Some of the same witnesses also will appear at a Galveston meeting on the following day."

"At that meeting in Galveston," Schwartz said, "We will be talking about lightering regulations proposed by the U.S. Coast Guard. That practice can pose some very real threats of massive oil spills."

"We have the massive Mexican well oil spill to contend with now on the lower Texas Coast and the public needs to be aware of super tanker lightering activities in the Gulf in order to be able to properly comment on the proposed Federal regulations."

The meeting in Galveston will provide that opportunity," he said.

Leading off the morning session of the Marine Council meeting in Lake Jackson will be Dr. Joe McGowan of the Bureau of Economic Geology, University of Texas at Austin.

The University of Texas Bureau has been involved for a number of years in the study and mapping of shoreline processes of the Bay and Gulf beaches. Erosion and accretion are problems common to most waterfront landowners.

Problems relating to highway elevations and deficiencies related to evacuation will be discussed with a representative of the Texas Department of Highway and Public Transportation. Mr. B.L. DeBerry, Engineer-Director of that Department and Commission member Ray Barnhart of Pasadena have both been invited to attend.

Gary Graham, Marine Fisheries Specialist with

Texas A&M stationed at Angleton will report recent findings relative to Gulf fishery stocks. Graham has been carrying out exploratory fishing studies for some time and has applied new fishing techniques to help area fishermen who want to diversify.

A representative of the Region VI office of the Environmental Protection Agency of Dallas will brief the Marine Council members on the current status and plans relative to Hazardous Solid Waste Disposal.

The Council had proposed and Senator Schwartz authored a state system for creating a fund and system for managing such wastes, but failure of the House to consider the legislation leaves the regulation in the hands of the Federal agency.

Another item on the Council agenda will be a report by Neil Packard, Department of Energy, Bryan Mound Strategic Petroleum Reserve manager on the status and plans for that facility.

Located just a short distance from the meeting site, the installation is being developed to store oil in cavities within large salt domes. One aspect of that project that has aroused some interests is the disposal of brine resulting from creation of the storage cavity.

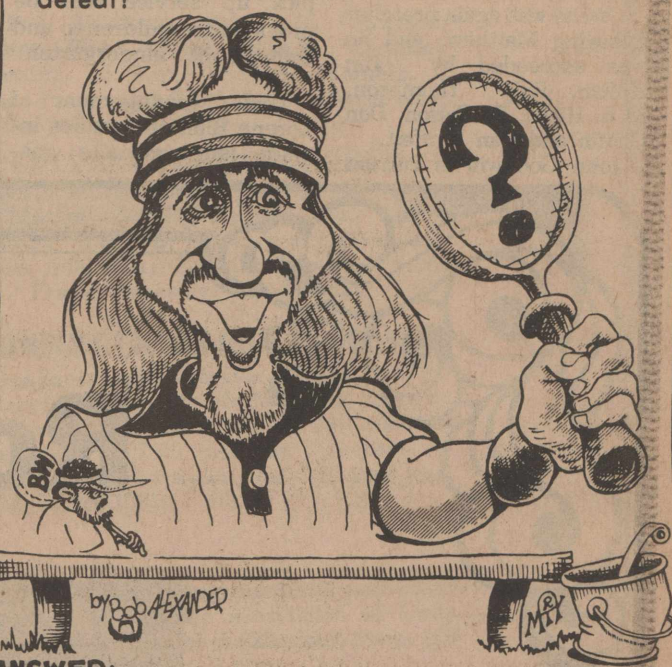

The public will be given an opportunity to comment on any of the agenda items or presentations.

The lightering meeting will be held at the Holiday Inn in Galveston beginning at 10 a.m.

For further information, please contact the Texas Coastal and Marine Council at 512/475-5849.

Burglaries claim $billion

The Federal Bureau of Investigation claims that over $1.4 billion is taken from businessmen and home owners each year as a result of burglaries.

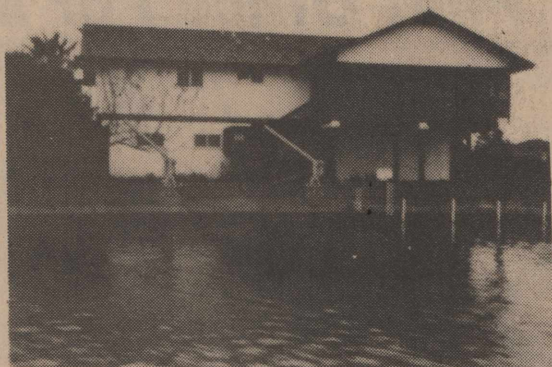

However, as a national average, police clear only 17 percent of reported burglaries -- thus a less than one out of five chance of recovering anything which was stolen. -- CNS

'Alias' May Mean Bank Account Is Lost

By JUDITH RHOADES
Copley News Service

Q. When I was younger, my mother used to tell me about a relative that put money in a bank account under a different name, but no one knew what the name was. The relative subsequently died, and the money went unclaimed.

I am now the only living relative in our family, and I think I found in our family Bible the name that was used. How can I find out if I can claim the money, or if there is money there? — L.S., Eureka, Calif.

A. Unless you know which bank, you will probably be out of luck. If an account has no deposits or withdrawals for seven years, then the bank or banks try to find the owner at their last known address. The bank will carry on an active search throughout the area to find the depositor.

Q. I am planning to get a job once I graduate from college. I am not sophisticated, I'm from a small farming town in the Midwest.

There are two areas of opportunity which I am looking at. How can I tell what job will be the best one for me financially? — A.W., Cedar Rapids, Iowa

A. When the time comes for selecting which job, other than the fact that one may sound more interesting than the others, fringe benefits are the easiest way to add tax-free dollars to your income.

Fringe benefits include medical, dental and life insurance, pension and-or profit-sharing plans, bonuses and vacation pay. If you are planning to work for a large company, find out what benefits would stay with you, should you change jobs or be terminated.

Because this will be your first job, it is more important for you to look at future opportunity rather than financial reward.
