Blanton said he will show in his speeches that Judge Clyde L. Garrett, of Eastland, who is opposing him for congressman of the 17th district, "is the candidate of subsidiary organizations of Hopson's Electric Bond and Share Company."

"These utility subsidiaries are trying to ruin me and stop my work for the people in congress because I supported President Roosevelt's measure to control monopolies," Blanton said.

After a long day in his office here yesterday, working out an accumulation of official mail, Blanton was to leave at 6 o'clock this morning for Dallas, to attend the luncheon for Vice-President Garner today. He was to be accompanied by Mrs. Blanton, who will be a guest at a luncheon for Mrs. Garner.

Many of the boys will want to sleep in the open air, but those who prefer may sleep under the shelter of the dam. Being his first year here, Mr. Caudle would not venture a guess as to how many might attend, but said he had sent out invitations to schools all over this section.

All recreation and events will be under the supervision of men trained in this work. Swimming will form a large part of the entertainment. Food will be another important part of the program. This has been arranged for and will be plentifully supplied.

Perfect Nazi-ette

HICKOK CORED WELL TO DRILL IN RANGER PAY

All fear of salt water damage to the Hickok well was passed when the running of 5-inch pipe shut out all salt water seepage which was proven to have been from the lake sand passed at around 3,400 feet, and two feet of coring showed a good sand below the bit.

The plug was drilled out Tuesday after the cementing of the pipe-run had set properly. From 500 to 1,000 feet of fresh water had been run in the hole to set the cement and hold down the gas pressure, which coring was done. Some two feet of coring this morning produced a good sand and drilling will be resumed unless the removal of water pressure in the hole should allow the well to blow itself in for the good well which has been constantly expected every since the Ranger sand was struck.

Drilling will be resumed this afternoon, unless unforeseen developments should decide otherwise.

There were a number of oil men watching the coring proceedings this morning and all are hopeful that this well will not be a disappointment, but will bring into the Ranger pay all of the surrounding territory that has not been proven.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon the Hickok well was being swabbed with the expectation that it would begin making heads of oil when the immense water pressure was removed allowing the gas to resume its normal force.

GARRETT SAYS BLANTON KNEW TALK ABSURD

Representative Thomas L. Blanton's promise printed in an Abilene paper today to show the Clyde L. Garrett "is the candidate of subsidiary organizations of Hopson's Electric Bond & Share company," was ridiculed by the Eastland county judge.

Judge Garrett, who opposes Blanton in the 17th district congressional runoff, said: "That is so absurd and ridiculous that no one will consider it seriously."

"The same kind of propaganda was presented by Mr. Blanton to the voters in the first primary in the vote on July 25, and clearly indicates his inability to convince the people it was true. Any affidavits, photographs and statements which he will use at this late hour in the campaign will not mislead the intelligent voters of this district."

"Furthermore," declared Judge Garrett, "in the congressional records of June 24 wherein an anonymous letter (which I charge was written by himself to him self) appeared, in which Blanton made this statement: 'I believe none of the utility companies in your district are unfriendly towards you, and I don't think they are going to fight you.' 'He well knows that was true then and is true now.'"

"I believe none of the utility companies in your district are unfriendly towards you, and I don't think they are going to fight you."

WELL SPACING CAUSES CLASH AT HEARINGS

JEFFERSON, Aug. 5. (U.P.) — Large and small landowners clashed angrily today as the Texas Railroad Commission opened a hearing to consider production rule for the Texas side of Rodessa oil field.

The petition requested a spacing rule of one well to each 20 acres.

DOGS AND MEN COMPANIONSHIP

Are there any transports known to man so great as those of a well-trained dog greeting his master in the morning? Some of those transports may be, as a cynical person suggests, aroused by the lively expectation of food. But most of the dog's emotion is doubtless due to the sheer joy of companionship. A curious thing, too, is that the dog seems to find more pleasure, and feel a closer bond, with his human friend than with his own kind. It seems hardly right, when you think it over, to take an animal and, as an individual and a species, win him little by little away from association with his kin until his nature is remade, and his loyalties are diverted from those to whom they naturally belong. Yet this is justified if, as some insist, association with mankind helps along the evolution of animal souls toward the human. Is it mere imagination that you sometimes fancy you see more of a human than the beast in the expression of a dog's eyes? If such association raises the dog, does it lower the man? Certainly not if the man is a good master. Kindly care, and training with a large mixture of unselfishness in it, can lower nothing that lives. There is, too, in the friendship of a man for a dog or horse, this remarkable virtue: While keeping the man human, it bridges the gap between man and animal, and enables him to see a little into the vast levels of life ordinarily shut from his understanding. To understand any life better is to understand all life better. A humble dog may lead us a little way into the universal life.

TRAVEL-PROOF TRAVELERS

An eastern family that recently "saw the west" in three weeks failed to find the Grand Canyon's grandeur or California's climate or anything else much to their satisfaction. The Rocky Mountains were "too big" and therefore "depressing." The deserts were "grotesque and repelling," the Pacific Ocean "looked just like the Atlantic," and so on. All of which proves no case against the West. It simply shows, once more, that travelers very often see only what they want to see and that travel, so frequently said to be "broadening," sometimes meets its Waterloo in a mind that refuses to be broadened. If these tourists had taken three months for their trip they might perhaps have "got the feel" of the wonders they beheld. If they had taken three years, they might have become actual boosters for the regions they now scorn. But we doubt their susceptibility to cultural travel. The pity of it is that there are people with wealth enough for extended travel who set out upon what might be glorious adventure with little, narrow, preconceived prejudices which prevent their truly seeing and learning anything new.

WOMAN'S FEET GROWING

The average American woman's feet are said to be fully half an inch longer than they were a decade ago, and a size wider. You'd never think it, though, to look at the

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—It is still too early to tell whether Governor Landon's acceptance speech had any markedly favorable or adverse effect on his election prospects.

Neither group of politicians is able to sense any ground swell resulting from it and it is quite possible that the effect either way was nil. The polls will tend to show that, at least more accurately than anyone can now guess.

But that speech was vitally important, if only for two things:

1—It emphasized the fact that chief Republican politicians—leaders in both parties, for that matter—believe this is a campaign in which people will vote not for Landon, but against Roosevelt. This is a basic tenet in their campaign strategy and the buildup for Landon is that of an average, "common sense" man, rather than a brilliant, breath-taking superman.

2—It showed that the Landon appeal will be to the conservative middle class and farmer vote, with few compromises to progressives or labor and no conspicuous gestures of the type that might alienate the forces of industry and wealth which are largely behind the Landon candidacy.

There is no reason to believe that to be a political error, because there is plenty of evidence that this is a conservative country.

LISTENING to the speech in Washington, one was often reminded of the many eastern writers who have returned from Topeka to report privately, in effect, "Landon insists everything in the New Deal can be had much more cheaply, with less waste and partisan politics, under a hard-boiled business man."

On the labor question, however, Landon diverged sharply from the Roosevelt tactics. As the New York Times said, he made what amounted to a declaration in favor of the "open shop." His statements as to labor sound reasonable and fair to the average citizen, but to most labor union men they were very far from that. The suggestions that workers needn't join any union if they didn't want to, that they had a perfect right to join company unions, and should be free from intimidation or coercion by fellow employees or outside organizations, were the exact opposite of a bid for labor support.

THIS may have meant an acceptance by Manager John Hamilton and Landon of the common impression among political observers that the bulk of labor is going to vote for Roosevelt this year.

It probably is easy to overestimate labor voting strength, but the old idea that labor's vote can't be "delivered" may also be a dangerous one to depend upon. On one hand it can be said that fewer than 4,000,000 workers are organized in labor unions. On the other, that there's also a strong trend to Roosevelt among the unorganized.

It probably is fair to say that if Roosevelt has really caused the campaign to take on certain aspects of class struggle, Landon hasn't been slow to recognize that, and to stake his fortunes on the other, right-wing side.

Before Getting Overheated About the Candidates—tracks that same average woman makes in walking. Toe and heel are about as closely together as they would be if made by a child, though a child's toes and heels would never dig into the ground in that manner. To get at the length of a foot encased in the fashionable narrow-toed and high-heeled shoe, you have to measure up and down more than horizontally. Is it this walking on stilts that lengthens and broadens the feminine foot? Probably not. The natural tendency of stilt-walking in French-heeled shoes, a naturalist says is to eliminate all of the toes except the big toe, and grow a strong nail on that, with the heel, like the minor toes, disappearing from lack of use. That would make women eventually clump around like horses, whose hoofs are said to be developed from their original big-toe nails. Perhaps it is swimming and tennis-playing and golfing in low-heeled broad-toed shoes that save women's feet from such a fate. Praise be to sport, which tends to keep feet as nature made 'em.

TABERNACLE ATTRACTS
SALT LAKE CITY — (UP) — Tourist trade is counted a major industry in Salt Lake City, with 1,785 cut-of-state cars and 5,335 tourists visiting the city each day, according to a recent estimate. More than 1,800 persons registered at the Mormon tabernacle on an average day and officials say that only about half the visitors register.

PATIENCE EXHAUSTED
EUREKA, Cal. — (UP) — Barbers in Eureka have reached the point where even the worm turns. They were silent while the citizens grew competitive beards for the celebration of the "Days of General Grant" festival. Now the festival is ended the barbers insist the beards should come off. But men have discovered that it is more economical not to shave.

TWINS WEIGH 11 LBS. EACH
SYDNEY — (UP) — Twin girls, each weighing 11 pounds, were born in a maternity hospital here. Medical authorities say the weight probably is a world's record.

OUT OUR WAY

THE SHORT, DARK MAN

azine usually has to hoe its own row.

Nearly always, it can count on articles written to bear the name of some departmental official, sometimes actually written by the official himself, describing and outlining the work, the aims and objectives of the department, and telling its efforts to get federal aid for whatever kind of activity it sponsors.

In the first administration of Gov. M. A. Ferguson, the Ferguson Forum, published by her husband, stepped into a role of "administrative spokesman," and published an issue chock-full of advertising.

Some of the magazines have sections for the official utterances of several different state departments. These "official organs" are entirely distinct from another development in the field of information and public opinion, the clip-sheet in the form of a newspaper, frankly a department or branch government. Such publicity broadsides are prepared by several departments now. They are not concerned with advertising.

Recent departures have connected with public movements of citizens organizations sponsoring taxes or public policy affecting the department.

BIG FOOTBALL GAMES PLAYED AT CENTENNIAL

DALLAS, Aug. 5.—Stars in every walk of football life, from the battle-scarred, crafty professional to the eager high school lad just donning molehills, will be presented to a waiting world of sports fans at the Texas Centennial Exposition this fall.

The World's Fair gridiron season is short, action-packed, sensational. In its brief span of 29 playing days and nights, 41 football games will be played in the Cotton Bowl. They range from intercollegiate battles between professionals and All American stars to inter-city high school contests.

The Cotton Bowl's lead-off game is scheduled for the night of Sept.

7, Labor Day and will send the Chicago Bears of the National Professional league runners-up in the 1935 championship race, against one of the most brilliant aggregations of All American players ever to gather on an American gridiron. The lineups will read like a who's who of football greats.

Of the 41 grid encounters scheduled for the Cotton Bowl, Sept. 7 through November 27, eight will be college clashes.

Major games in addition to the Chicago Bears-All Americans are:

Oct. 10, Oklahoma University vs. University of Texas.

Oct. 17, Vanderbilt vs. Southern Methodist.

Oct. 24, Mississippi State vs. Texas Christian.

Oct. 31, Hardin-Simmons vs. College of Mines.

Nov. 7, Texas A. & M. vs. Southern Methodist.

Nov. 27, Trinity University vs. Austin College. Other college games are tentatively booked.

Texas high schools which will play games in the Cotton Bowl are: Greenville, Beaumont, Sherman, McKinney, Gainesville, Thomas Jefferson of San Antonio, Waco, Denison, St. Joseph, John H. Reagan of Houston and Corsicana. All Dallas High schools will play games in the Bowl as will Negro colleges and high schools.

Tickets will go on sale for all major games August 15 and may be purchased through the ticket department, Centennial Exposition. Reserve seats will sell for $2.20.

instruments, ordinarily used for recording earthquakes, are being tried throughout California, Texas and other western states for the detection of new oil fields, the California School of Technology reveals.

The perfection of the old-time seismograph, the invention of new instruments, that permit of a practical use in delving into geological formations far beneath the earth's surface constitute the latest contribution to this branch of science by California research workers. The men most responsible for the discoveries and inventions are Dr. Joshua L. Soske and Dr. Raymond A. Peterson, research workers at the Institute of Technology as well as Dr. Russell Raitt, formerly in the physics department of the institution.

Equipped with a complete set of their newest instruments, they are exploring the underoil over various parts of California in search of oil. Results are said to be satisfying.

Equal success has been achieved in Texas and other states.

Two Sciences Combined

The newer instruments for the search of oil are modification of Dr. Hugo Benioff's earthquake recording seismograph, perfected and adapted to record higher frequency vibrations below the earth's surface, usually artificially generated by dynamite.

Other principles, notably those used in Oceanography, also were utilized in developing and perfecting the new instruments. The basis on which the oceanographers work is to send sound to the bed of the ocean, and record its echo when it returns to the surface. By knowing the velocity of the sound waves and the time consumed in the trip, it is possible for the scientists to determine the exact depth.

Proceeding with the same principle, Dr. Soske and his associates decided to apply it to vibrations in the earth. Vibrations in the earth were set up by explosions of dynamite at various depths and in various geological formations until it was possible to create positive data not only to ascertain the depth from which the vibrations were reflected upward but also the nature of the geological formations through which the vibrations passed.

It was utilizing this data that it eventually became possible to sound out with the seismometers underlying strata and to ascertain whether there was the presence of oil, oil bearing shale or similar deposits.

Photographic Record Produced
The new instruments have been perfected so that only two stages of electrical amplification are necessary to produce a complete photographic record of the vibrations coming up from the earth, while at the same time they have been sensitized in such a manner that they are not influenced by high power electrical lines that may be in the neighborhood and do not respond to disturbances of the latter.

The outfit being used by the inventors comprises five complete trucks. The first is a drill truck for making deep holes for dynamite. The vibrations that later are to be recorded and "read." The second truck is equipped entirely with machinery for placing the dynamite charges at whatever depth may be desired.

Instruments on One Truck

Then comes a water truck, forthly a pick-up truck and finally the truck containing the oscillograph, amplifier, and all the delicate instruments necessary for photographic records of results to be obtained from the explosions and resultant vibrations.

The data first is collected by 12 seismometers placed at different distances from the point where the explosion is to take place. Their "data" is conducted by electrical energy along cables to the recording truck where the valves are transcribed on paper, and from which the modern scientists can detect the presence of oil, the depth at which it lies and other valuable geological information.

The finding of new oil fields throughout the entire world is expected to be made scientifically certain by use of the new apparatus and at an immense saving over the old system of drilling haphazardly.

No 10-Gallon Hat for Ted

Ted Lewis, "high-hatted tragedian of songs," is shown making a spirited—well, at least a sort of spirited—resistance as Rangerette Ruby Rangan seeks to replace his battered silk with a western sombrero upon his arrival in Dallas to open a two-weeks engagement at the Texas Centennial Exposition. The scantily-robed reception committee are girls from the Streets of Paris, Midway attraction.

CAVALCADE BRINGS TEXAS HISTORY TO LIFE

DALLAS, Texas, August—Cavalcade of Texas, one of the "must see" things at the Texas Centennial Exposition, recreates the hilarious spirit of the Big Bend country in the above scene in the Jersey saloon when Judge Roy Bean was all the law there was West of the Pecos. Just below are the famous son Cydadales, valued at $100,000, drawing one of the covered wagons across the largest stage on a lower left, a tragic moment during the Comanche attack on Fort Parker in 1836: Loraine Meeks, a member of the cast, dressed as a lovely Spanish senorita, wears a comb brought from Spain by her ancestors a century ago. And below, still the crowds come, jamming the entrance at every performance waiting to see one of the greatest shows on earth at the Texas Centennial Exposition—Cavalcade of Texas.
