Bullock: Broaden base, lower rate of taxes

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Further complicating the special session conflict over budget cuts and taxes, Comptroller Bob Bullock Tuesday unveiled his "broaden the base, lower the rate" state tax reform plan.

Although the plan, which Bullock calls "the alternative to an income tax," offers a substantial reduction in the sales tax rate and a half-billion-dollar windfall to cities' treasuries, most Capitol observers give it little chance of passing during the special legislative session called to deal with the state's $3.5 billion deficit.

House Speaker Gib Lewis and Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter remain adamant in their opposition to any tax bills during the special session. Gov. Mark White, who advocates a temporary sales tax increase, says Bullock's plan is too complicated to pass in a 30-day special session. All three like the concept, but they maintain it should wait until the regular session begins in January.

"That would create a more difficult situation for this Legislature to deal with," White said last week when asked why he didn't propose such a plan. "This (the temporary tax increase) is a very simple approach, everybody knows the impact of it, and for them to go out and start just opening the door to exemptions that are there, sometimes unforeseen impacts occur."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who has offered a similar proposal, refused to comment on Bullock's plan until he had studied it. Sens. Carl Parker of Port Arthur and Grant Jones of Temple said they agree with the basic concept.

"If he can make it fairer by lowering it and broadening it, I'd be for it so long as he doesn't pick on food or medicine," Parker said.

The comptroller offered a variety of examples that show his plan could raise as much as $1.6 billion toward the current deficit, assuming it would take effect Jan. 1. Bullock said he believes the plan is simple enough to earn approval during the special session.

"We pitched it out there hopefully to stimulate the thinking on the part of legislators in the event they see the need for additional revenue," he said in a telephone interview. "I personally cannot help but believe that, whether it be now or in January, they're going to see the likes of this surface before them."

In a report to the Legislature entitled "Tax Equity and the Texas Economy," Bullock says the patchwork state tax structure is unfair to many taxpayers and out-of-synch with the state's changing economy.

"To put it bluntly, Texas is going broke with a tax system that relies too heavily on the oil and gas industry and too heavily on a sales tax that doesn't cover vast sectors of the economy," he writes.

The key points of the comptroller's plan include:

— For the sales tax: decreasing the current 4.125-percent rate to 3 or 3.5 percent; maintaining the current exemptions for food, medicine, child care, agriculture supplies, sale for resale and most charitable activities; taxing all other services such as lawyers, accountants and repairmen; exempting businesses with less than $5,000 in annual sales; moving miscellaneous taxes such as hotel/motel and telephone into the sales tax base.

'Where's secret plan, Bill?' ask Democratic lawmakers

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A group of Democratic legislators Tuesday challenged Republican former Gov. Bill Clements to "put up or shut up" on his "secret" plan to balance the state's budget.

At a Capitol press conference that a Clements spokesman dismissed as "political theater," 10 legislators said they would try to defray the estimated $3.5 billion shortfall by selling buttons asking "Where's the secret plan, Bill?" for $5 each.

The group presented State Treasurer Ann Richards with the first $100 in receipts.

Rep. Paul Colbert of Houston said the Appropriations Committee has made "a bunch of hard choices" in arriving at $600 million in cuts and still found itself $2.3 billion short of revenue for the rest of the biennium. The cuts included large reductions in education and human services, he said.

"We tried tightening our belts as best we could and we got $600 million," he said. Of poor people, he said, "We're putting the belts around their necks and drawing them tight."

Unless Clements suggests other areas to cut, Colbert said, "We'll have no choice but to live with the $600 million in cuts we've come up with."

Sen. Carl Parker of Port Arthur said Clements has done the state a disservice by suggesting budget cuts will take care of the problem. "People would like to believe in easy solutions to complicated problems," he said.

The state has improved educational opportunities to allow it to move from dependence on the oil and gas industry. "Either we're going to pay now with the cost of a little political pain for some of us in office, or future generations of this state are going to pay a great price in lost opportunity and diminished quality of life."

Rep. Al Luna of Houston said Texas is at a crossroads. "Are we going to be one of the premier states of the union...or are we going to become akin to a Third World country?"

Sen. Chet Edwards of Duncanville noted that Clements was quoted several times as saying he had a plan to resolve the state's budget crisis if Gov. Mark White called a special session. Later, Clements said he never had a "secret plan," but instead had a blueprint for budget cuts.

South African party considering nationwide elections for blacks

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — The government is considering holding South Africa's first nationwide elections for blacks, a Cabinet minister announced today at the National Party congress. The voting would be for members of an advisory council to work on constitutional changes.

Under the present system, South Africa's 24 million blacks vote only for local councils for black townships and in the 10 tribal homelands the government has designated as national states. Blacks have never participated in a national election.

The government, which has been exercised by the National Party since 1948, administers apartheid, a system that by law and custom establishes a racially segregated society. The 5-million white minority controls the economy and maintains separate districts, schools and health services.

Whites, Asians and people of mixed-race elect representatives to separate chambers of parliament.

"If the need exists in black communities to elect their representatives to a national council, we will assist with the division of the country on a regional basis for the election of such leaders," said Chris Heunis, minister of constitutional development and planning.

Midlanders give public schools high marks, survey reveals

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midlanders would support a tax hike to foot the bill for salary increases for teachers, a bond election to build additional facilities, closed campuses and equal schools.

However, many Midlanders believe discipline is a problem in public schools and that the school district is doing a poor job dealing with student drug abuse.

The Midland Independent School District released those findings Tuesday from a July public opinion survey prepared and conducted by the University of Texas at Austin Foundations in Educational Administration.

Dr. Ben Harris, who directed the group of 16 students in assessing the attitudes and opinions of more than 500 Midlanders, said the results "should prove valuable" in providing the MISD and the school board in considering program modifications or change.

But he cautioned that the ultimate value of the report will be determined by those who use it.

"This report claims only to represent the stated views of a representative sample of the population in regard to certain aspects of the operation of the Midland Independent School District," he said.

"New information, or time, may modify these opinions."

Harris said the attitudes and opinions expressed in regard to a question may not be permanent, may not determine the action that would result in an actual situation and may depend on qualifications which the respondents have not expressed.

Harris said Midlanders were asked to answer several questions by using the traditional grading system of A, B, C, D and F. The grades were then compared with a national sample survey by the Gallup organization.

The first question rates the public schools generally and revealed Midland respondents were substantially more favorable toward the public schools than were those in the national sample. MISD received an A or B from 48 percent of those survey, compared with 27 percent of the national sample. Hispanics and blacks were more favorable toward the public schools than were Caucasians.

Midlanders also were more positive toward their local schools than were respondents from the national sample. Only 9 percent of the national sample rated their local schools an A; 22 percent of the Midlanders surveyed rated their schools an A.

When Midlanders were asked to grade the board of education, 41 percent responded A or B. About a quarter of those surveyed had no opinion about the board.

In general, residents of east Midland and the rural area graded the board higher than those from the western section of the city. Hispanics and blacks rated the board higher than did Caucasians.

Principals and other administrators in Midland schools received above average grades from 59 percent of the those surveyed. Parents rated administrators higher than did nonparents and Hispanics rated them higher than other ethnic groups.

Midland administrators and principals also fared better than their counterparts nationally.

The public school teachers in Midland were graded dramatically higher by Midlanders than were teachers in local public schools nationally.

Almost 70 percent of the Midland teachers were graded A or B compared with 45 percent of the Gallup Poll sample. Only 2 percent of rated teachers below average and no one gave teachers a failing grade.

In the 1985 Gallup Poll, 64 percent of the respondents answered that a college education was "very important." Eighty percent of the respondents to the Midland survey said they believe a college education is "very important."

MISD trustees postpone decision on AIDS policy

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The father of two Midland school children said Tuesday he hopes the board of education would notify the public if a child with AIDS were attending classes with healthy students.

Douglas Swift, 2823 Moss, said it is "absolutely critical" that the public know if a Midland school student has Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome — at least until the medical community proves there is no risk of transmitting the disease to other children.

But Midland Independent School District trustees said they were unclear on the issue and voted to postpone any action until further investigation.

A proposed policy would have allowed children with AIDS to attend school with their healthy classmates.

"I do not feel that if there is a child with AIDS in school that I can take the risk of having my children exposed to them," Swift told trustees.

"As a parent, I need to know," he said.

The proposed policy — created under the guidance of the Texas Education Agency and the Texas Department of Health — was not designed to alarm the public, but rather prepare students, parents and staff for an "inevitable" situation, said MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi.

"We need to approach and have a well thought-out policy before we're confronted with the situation," he said.

Volunteers quit after city fires paid firefighters

STAMFORD (AP) — Ten Stamford volunteer firefighters, with uniforms and boots in hand, announced their resignation after City Council members stood firm on their decision to fire the town's paid firefighters.

The council called Tuesday night's meeting to discuss dissolving the paid fire department and firing of its four employees due to the city's budget crunch.

During the meeting, the volunteers told the mayor and City Council that 14 of the 15 members of the department decided months ago they would resign if the council decided to make the fire department entirely volunteer.

But as of Tuesday night, the council said the four paid employees would be out of a job as of Jan.

City may strike deal with senior citizen's agency

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

The city and a non-profit senior citizens agency may strike a deal involving services for the elderly, officials said Tuesday.

The deal would call for the city to upkeep a 2.7 acre tract of land for the agency — which could cost as much as $17,000 annually, officials said.

In exchange, the agency, Community & Senior Service Inc., would help oversee — and perhaps one day take over — the city's Senior Citizen Center.

"It is a good idea," said District 4 Councilman Robert Rendall. "They (the agency officials) can do a better job serving the senior citizens than the city can.

"I hope the proposal can be worked out."

The two sides outlined the proposal Tuesday in a City Council briefing session and are scheduled to meet today for further discussion.

No action will be taken this week, but the item was slated to be scheduled on the August 26 City Council agenda, officials said.

The deal apparently hinges on whether the agency obtains a house from the Fred Furman estate. The house is located on the corner of Sinclair Avenue and Midkiff Road.

If the agency obtains the house, it could serve as a home for several senior citizens' agencies, officials said.

If that happens, it is possible the city and the service agency would strike the deal.

Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor told council members Tuesday the move could help the city.

Dallas cocaine arrests rising more than 11 times national average

DALLAS (AP) — Cocaine arrests by Dallas police are occurring 20 times more often than in 1980, a rate of increase more than 11 times the national average, according to an analysis of 1985 drug arrests by the Dallas Times Herald.

Moreover, only a handful of the 1985 arrests occurred in the predominantly white, affluent northern sections of the city, despite national demographic studies and police estimates indicating a higher rate of cocaine consumption in such areas.

In its Sunday editions, the Times Herald also reported that while arrests for other drug offenses were stable or even diminished over the last five years, cocaine arrests surged 1,900 percent during that period.

In 1980, there were 53 cocaine arrests in Dallas — one in every 128 narcotics busts made by Dallas police. Last year, with 1,059 arrests on cocaine-related charges, that ratio increased to 1-in-7.

The increase in the number of arrests far exceeds the national trend, in which cocaine and heroin arrests by local law enforcement authorities increased 167 percent during the last five years, the FBI said.

Although law enforcement officials generally attribute the increase to the glut of cocaine cultivated in Latin America and smuggled into the United States, many also cite a large population of fast-track, newly rich professionals that makes Dallas a lucrative market for traffickers.

"You mix ambition, drive and competition into such a melting pot for young executive types, and the end result is enormous potential for the use of cocaine," said Larry Hahn, an agent in the intelligence section of the Drug Enforcement Administration's Dallas office.

"You look at who's using cocaine nationally. He's 25 years of age, college educated, making at least $25,000. You look at Dallas and what do you see? A large pool of potential users," said Bobby Gillham, special agent-in-charge of the Dallas FBI office.

But the up-scale demographic characteristics are not reflected in the recent arrest statistics. Of the 1,059 cocaine arrests last year, only 164, or 15.5 percent, were in the more affluent areas of north Dallas.

The bulk of the Dallas arrests occurred in the southern and eastern sections of Dallas, in neighborhoods where black and Hispanic residents constitute a majority, according to the Times Herald analysis.

Cocaine-related arrests of blacks and Hispanics generally were proportionately higher in most sections of the city, even in some areas where those ethnic groups constitute a racial minority.

The divergence exists because police patrols are more concentrated in those areas because of higher crime rates, police find it easier to cultivate paid informants who have low incomes, and drug dealing in poor areas tends to be less discrete and more of a street business, law enforcement and legal specialists say.

Of the 1,059 arrests — the combination of those by vice squad investigators and regular uniformed patrol officers — 610, or more than 57 percent, were black or Hispanic. Whites accounted for 449 arrests.

Vision quest sites of Athabaskans still exist

By MARGARET BRADFORD

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — A young boy pushes his way through the woods, crosses a fern-filled meadow and begins climbing the mountain behind his home near the Rogue River.

His long black hair falls in his eyes as he scrambles up the hillside, grasping at small shrubs for handholds. The sun is warm on his bare back as he climbs.

About 400 feet above the valley, on a small flat area overlooking the river and its canyons, the youth halts and turns to look southward at the scene below. The tree-covered hillside falls away to a grassy meadow and he can see the river slashing its way between the canyon walls.

Mountains rising 2,300 feet above the river surround the large flat terrace of land on which his village rests.

Turning his back on the view, the Indian boy begins collecting large rocks and aligning them into a ring. Atop those he piles more stones, making a waist-high circular wall.

He settles down in the enclosure and looks out at the river, a green ribbon glinting among the canyon shadows. There the boy will keep a vigil of several days and nights on the lonely mountain top, dreaming, dancing, praying, fasting and awaiting communication from the spirit world.

He has begun his vision quest.

Thus did the southern Oregon Athabaskan Indians begin their journey into adulthood.

The vision quest, a search for one's guardian spirit, was a rite of passage for adolescent boys and girls of this Rogue River tribe. Once the spirit quest was fulfilled, the young person was considered an adult member of the band with adult responsibilities and status.

The Athabaskan Indians, a tribe that no longer exists, lived in the mountains and canyons of the Siskiyou Mountains and the Coast Range, including the lower reaches of the Rogue River.

The guardian spirit quest was a central feature in their life; the process involved praying and fasting until a spirit — often in the form of a bird or animal — visited the candidate in a dream or hallucination.

When the candidate returned to the village, the village elders would interpret the dream. Thereafter, the spirit animal became the young person's guardian — a protector and source of strength and power throughout his or her life.

Alone on a mountaintop, without food, water, weapons or the company of family, "the quest must have been a fairly frightening experience," says Tish Steinfeld, forest archaeologist with the Siskiyou National Forest.

Remnants of those spiritual journeys — rock rings and sometimes stone cairns and stacks — still exist in the hills of southwestern Oregon where 102 vision quest sites have been documented.

Eight have been identified in the Siskiyou Mountains, mostly through Ms. Steinfeld's efforts.

"Our mission is to learn about human behavior and local history," she says. "We're trying to learn so much from so little."

The ravages of time, of climate and of human greed or ignorance have created a scarcity of archaeological evidence. The Pacific Northwest's moist climate decomposes tools and other artifacts of shell, wood, bone or fiber, while looting and vandalism have destroyed many other remnants of the Rogue Indians.

But the prehistoric rock rings — the vision quest sites — are hard physical evidence among the paucity of archaeological artifacts.

Ms. Steinfeld, 30, has worked for the Forest Service since 1978. She has been with the Siskiyou National Forest since 1980 and initiated its cultural resource management program.

"You find Indians doing vision quests in the plains states and other parts of the country," she says, sitting in her Grants Pass office at Siskiyou National Forest headquarters, surrounded by books.

What grade would you give the Midland public schools?

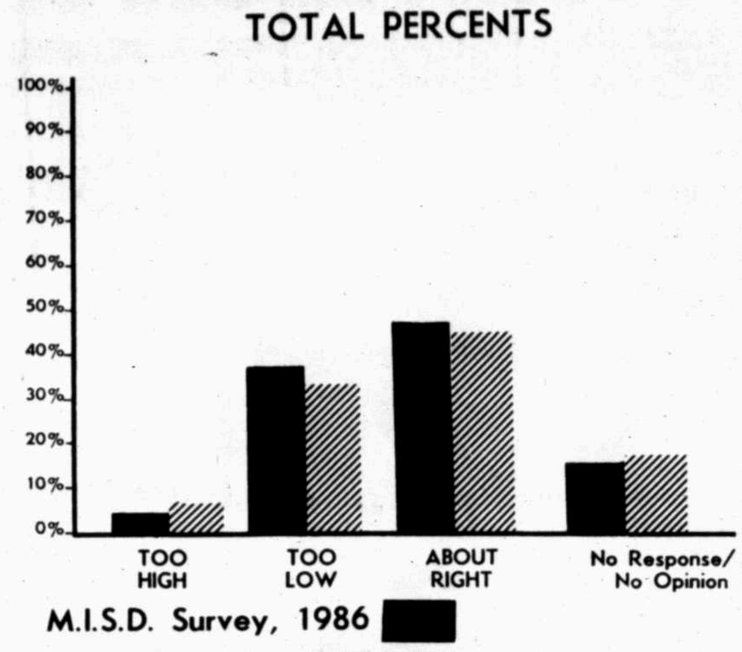

Source: Survey of the Midland Independent School District; Summer, 1986

What grade would you give the teachers in the Midland public schools?

Do you think salaries in this community for teachers are too high, too low or about right?

Suzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

Midlanders gave high marks to public schools in a recent survey of public opinion. The graph above shows 67 percent of those surveyed gave Midland schools a grade of A or B, compared with about 47 percent of those who responded to a 1985 national Gallup survey. Seventy percent gave Midland teachers an A or B, compared with about 45 percent of the Gallup poll sample. In the Gallup poll, respondents from across the country were asked to rate their local school district and teachers. The majority of Midlanders (47 percent) said Midland teacher salaries are adequate. About 36 percent said salaries are too low and 4 percent said salaries are too high.

SURVEY

Harris said the response to this question "suggests that the Midland population values a college education more than does the national sample."

While Midlanders said they value a college education, one-third said the public schools were doing "very well" in preparing students for success in higher education. Only 8 percent said the schools were doing a poor job.

Asked how well their opinions were represented by the Midland school board, 45 percent of the Midlanders surveyed responded "very well" or "satisfactory." About 24 percent said their opinions were "poorly" represented and almost one-third had no response.

Hispanics, residents who have lived in Midland more than three years and those in the 45 to 60 age group said they were better represented than those in other categories.

Response of the Midland residents to the adequacy of teachers' salaries was similar to that of the Gallup Poll sample. Nearly half of those interviewed said salaries were "about right," about one-third said they were "too low" and about 4 percent said "too high."

Midlanders who responded that teachers' salaries were too low were asked whether they would reallocate currently available funds or raise taxes to increase salaries.

Eighty percent of the parents indicated they would favor spending other funds and 69 percent of the parents also favored increasing taxes. Nonparents were less favorable toward either option.

The majority (79 percent) of Midlanders surveyed indicated they would support a bond issue if additional classrooms were needed. More parents than nonparents showed support for a bond issue and newcomers to Midland were slightly more supportive than those who have lived here more than eight years.

Discipline was seen as a problem by 78 percent of the respondents and 28 percent said it is a "serious problem."

Asked to identify the causes of discipline problems in the schools, over 50 percent indicated a lack of parental guidance.

Parents tended to be more satisfied with the efforts of the public schools to deal with student abuse of drugs and alcohol than were nonparents. Thirteen percent of all respondents said the schools were dealing "very well" with the substance abuse issue, 23 percent said it was doing a "satisfactorily" and 36 percent said it was doing "poorly." Over one-fourth of those surveyed had "no opinion" regarding the matter.

There was strong support among all segments of the population for the concept that school programs should be similar in both Midland high schools.

Opinion was split between favoring the open or closed campuses and there were few nonresponses to the question. People residing in rural areas and black respondents had a tendency to favor the open campuses.

Respondents who preferred a closed campus were asked if they would support a tax increase to defray the $600,000 implementation cost.

Harris said many respondents did not understand the basis of the figure, making it difficult to interpret the answers.

However, he said the response was equally split between those who would and those who would not support taxes for this purposes.

Harris said interviews were completed with 530 Midland residents from 40 geographical areas — 38 urban and two rural.

Each geographic area contained about 600 households and interviews were conducted at every 50th house, apartment and mobile home, he said.

Harris said the percentage of Caucasian (71 percent), Hispanic (18 percent) and black (10 percent) respondents closely matched Midland's total population of 75 percent Caucasian, 15 percent Hispanic and 10 percent black.

Women constituted 63 percent of the respondents and 60 percent were parents, he added.

Harris estimate the margin of error in the survey at 5 percent.

East Germans celebrate wall with military parade, rally

BERLIN (AP) — East Germans celebrated the Berlin Wall's 25th anniversary today with a massive rally and military parade, sparking an immediate U.S. protest that the marching troops violated postwar agreements.

The U.S. mission in West Berlin said the parade was a "clear-cut violation" of postwar agreements barring the presence of East German troops in East Berlin and West German troops in West Berlin.

"This parade is all the more deplorable in that it is meant as commemoration of the 25th anniversary of the building of the Berlin Wall in the defiance of the most fundamental human rights," the mission said.

The statement was telexed to major news media even as gun-wielding troops continued to march down the Karl Marx Allee in East Berlin and military vehicles rumbled along the broad boulevard.

For Communist East Germans, the 28-mile-long gray, concrete barrier is an "anti-fascist protection wall" aimed at repelling potential attacks from the West.

"Our efforts of Aug. 13 served peace," East German leader Erich Honecker told thousands of countrymen who jammed into the Karl Marx Allee.

But for West Germans, the wall represents a cruel barrier separating family and friends and hindering Bonn's goal of reuniting the two German states divided after World War II.

"We will never and can never get used to this monument of inhumanity," West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl told about 1,500 gathered for a somber ceremony at the Reichstag, the former Parliament building.

"The leadership of the GDR (East Germany) is celebrating this day with pomp and military pageantry. That is filled with cynicism," the Christian Democratic leader added.

East German soldiers began building the wall Aug. 13, 1961, to divide the former German capital 110 miles inside East German territory into eastern and western sectors and staunch the flow of East Germans westward.

Since then 74 people have been killed trying to escape over the wall to the West, while more than 4,900 people have succeeded.

Senate refuses to bar Contra advisers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Senate, pressing toward final approval of President Reagan's $100 million aid package for Nicaraguan rebels, today refused to bar U.S. military advisers from training the Contras in Honduras and Costa Rica.

By a 67-32 margin, the Senate defeated an amendment by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, who argued that the current aid package amounts to a "blank check — no limits on numbers, no limits on how (U.S. advisers) can be used."

But Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman, said the proposal would "deny flexibility to the president."

The Senate then refused, 82-17, to earmark $10 million for the treatment of civilian victims of Contra attacks, an amendment sponsored by Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., who repeatedly called the Contras "our terrorists."

Having defeated a series of Democratic weakening amendments, Republican Senate leaders hoped to choke off debate and force a final vote on the package. That cloture motion needs the support of 60 out of the Senate's 100 members.

Winnie Mandela unable to speak to black journalists

DALLAS (AP) — Winnie Mandela did not apply to leave South Africa despite an invitation to speak at the National Association of Black Journalists convention in Dallas because she has been turned down several times in the past, a member of the group said.

Mrs. Mandela, wife of jailed apartheid opponent Nelson Mandela, had accepted an invitation to speak at Thursday's keynote luncheon, said convention chairwoman Alexis Yancey.

The conference will be held in Dallas today through Sunday and focuses on freedom of the press domestically and in South Africa, Ms. Yancey said.

Dallas journalist Mark August, who is originally from South Africa, said he talked to Mrs. Mandela by telephone and she indicated she was interested in giving the speech.

"She really would have liked to be here," August said.

However, she decided not to apply for permission to leave her home in Soweto, South Africa, because of past refusals, August said.

Between 1,200 and 1,500 people are expected to attend the convention, the group's 11th.

The Rev. Allan Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and founder of the United Democratic Front, will speak at the Thursday luncheon. Boesak probably will bring a message from Mrs. Mandela, August said.

POLICY

MISD board president Bill Jackson has said there have been no reported cases of AIDS or AIDS-related diseases among Midland school children.

The policy implies that the medical community has yet to prove that persons with AIDS, AIDS-related conditions or Human T-Lymphotropic Virus Type III infection pose a health risk to others.

And, as a general rule, children diagnosed as having AIDS would be allowed to attend school in a regular classroom with the approval of the superintendent and a committee comprised of the child's physician, the MISD medical advisor, director of elementary and secondary education and coordinator of health.

The policy also specifies the school district would confine knowledge of the child's identity to the school principal, nurse and child's teacher.

Baressi said court judges generally have ruled in favor of children with AIDS in their fight to remain in school.

To automatically exclude a child with AIDS would be a "no-win situation," he said.

However, Baressi said the policy would offer him the latitude to remove a child with AIDS if officials determine he or she "might pose a risk of transmission to others."

Trustee Ronald A. Britton said he expects the AIDS policy to be controversial and recommended the board study the matter closely before making a final decision.

ELECTIONS

The government has so far failed to induce black leaders to take part in the national council it has proposed as a first step toward involving the black majority in national affairs. According to government officials, the council would serve as a forum for negotiations on a new constitution between President P.W. Botha and black representatives.

"The perception that the government is not negotiating with the real leaders of black communities relates to the proposed composition of such a council," Heunis said, adding that elections for black representatives could counter criticism of the proposed body.

Since the government issued its proposal last year for a national council of leaders from all races to advise the government on constitutional changes, most black anti-apartheid leaders have rejected participation in a body having only advisory status.

Others, including Zulu chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, have set the release of jailed African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela as a condition for taking part.

Elaborating on the elections proposal, National Party information director Chris Rencken said any black could run who was a registered voter and did not represent a banned organization. That would bar any candidacy on behalf of the outlawed ANC guerrilla organization, but would enable blacks to run as candidates of the United Democratic Front.

AGENCY

The issue was brought up Tuesday morning when Steve Edwards, director of the service agency, made a presentation to City Council members at the briefing session.

He said he would like the city to take care of the grounds if his group obtained the house.

"I don't think we would be able to do the maintenance," he told the council. "It would be a trade-off."

McGregor said he could see advantages of the deal.

The city has $108,000 budgeted for the Senior Citizens Center, a place where the elderly go for recreation and crafts.

McGregor said the director of the center makes some $30,000 annually.

"In the long term, I think it would be an advantage," he said. "It is possible the city could get out of the senior citizen business."

McGregor said he thinks the service agency has more expertise in the area.

"They could do a better job than we do," he added.

Rendall, whose district would include the Furman house, agreed.

"They (the agency) have better training in that area (elderly care), and may be able to provide the service at a little less expense."

McGregor and Rendall said the city has been successful in past trade-offs.

Last summer, the city allowed several agencies, including the YMCA, to oversee the recreation programs. That has been a success, Rendall said.

"We also turned the running of the pools over to the city of Midland swim team," Rendall said. "They have the expertise the city doesn't have."

McGregor said he would meet with Edwards today to discuss the issue.

Officials said they consider the talks preliminary because the agency must discuss the project with several other groups before reaching a decision on taking the house.

Said McGregor: "We are just going to sit down and talk tommorrow (Wednesday) and go from there."

PLAN

Edwards invited Clements to come to Austin. "Bill, if you have a secret plan, show us. If you have any plan, call us. But if you have no plan, tell us now."

Reggie Bashur, spokesman for Clements' campaign, called the Democratic press conference as "more political theater." He said Clements' blueprint "incorporates a lot of reforms he instituted during his first term."

He said the White administration has abandoned many of those reforms, such as keeping a count of state employees, setting up priorities for state spending for each agency and using volunteers from business to study state agencies and recommend improvements.

"What Bill Clements will do is reflected in what he has done," Bashur said. "He'll talk in terms of his blueprint, and specifically his plans to revive the state's economy and how jobs will create tax revenue, but the responsibility and accountability is in the Legislature and the governor and I think the public fully expects them to do their duty."

BULLOCK

"It's been 25 years since the sales tax was enacted," Bullock said. "We've got businesses and sectors of our economy that didn't even exist 25 years ago, which virtually get by scot-free."

— For minerals taxes: decreasing the oil and natural gas production taxes to 4.4 percent, down from the current 4.6-percent oil tax and 7.5-percent gas tax; taxing other mineral production.

"It certainly gives some relief to the oil and gas industry, which is welcome and needed," said Bill Abington, president of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association. "It's a good effort to try to equalize the tax burden."

— For the corporate franchise tax: basing the tax on gross receipts, not capital assets; decreasing the current 0.525-percent rate to 0.3 percent to 0.5 percent; including banks and savings and loans; exempting the first $50,000 in annual receipts.

"The same old reliance that we've had in the past by taxing consumers, by getting it through retailers, by taxing oil and gas, in my opinion has got to change," Bullock said. "This brings about an equitable solution."

Gib Lewis: Shorten suspension for first-time no pass, no play offenders

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — Saying the controversial no pass, no play rule is too tough, House Speaker Gib Lewis is calling on lawmakers to shorten the suspension period for first-time offenders.

Lewis said he asked Gov. Mark White on Tuesday to open the special legislative session to consider such a change.

If White won't, and the governor's spokeswoman said that looks doubtful, Lewis said the plan would be introduced when lawmakers convene in January for their regular session.

"I'll be honest with you. I've even flaked off and I'm supporting some revisions in no pass, no play," Lewis told a meeting of teachers and school administrators. "Nothing's perfect. And we will be making some changes."

The no pass, no play rule prohibits a student from participating in any extracurricular activities for six weeks if he's failing any course.

As House leader, Lewis was instrumental in steering the school reform bill that included the no pass rule through the 1984 special session. But Tuesday, he said he never strongly favored the six-week suspension.

"I have never been real hard on the six weeks' suspension. I've always felt that was a little severe," Lewis said.

He said students should be suspended for only three weeks the first time they receive a failing grade. If they fail a second time, the suspension then should be for six weeks, Lewis said.

"I talked to the governor this morning about the possibility of looking at that a little bit. We'll possibly be making some changes. Maybe not now, but possibly when the Legislature convenes in January," he said.

In an interview, Lewis said White didn't rule out such a change. In public, the governor has said he would consider a no pass, no play rollback a retreat from education reforms.

"He was very open to it," Lewis said of his meeting with White.

"He said, 'I don't want the perception to be that we're going to back off the seriousness we have committed to education.' I assured him I didn't think this would back off," Lewis said.

White's press secretary, Ann Arnold, said the governor had no intention of opening the special session to the no pass, no play revisions.

"It would be counterproductive to submit such a divisive issue," Ms. Arnold said.

Saralee Tiede, press secretary to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, said Hobby wasn't opposed to the change. "He'd like to have a look at it or hear more about it," she said.

The speaker's proposal received quick support from the Texas High School Coaches Association. The group's executive vice president, Eddie Joseph, said the six-week suspension discourages many students.

"In football, if a youngster goes out at the six-week period, there's no chance of him improving his grades and coming back. Three weeks, at least he could come back for the last game. There's some incentive there," Joseph said.

Cleburne residents need to hear whistle blowing again despite Santa Fe strike

CLEBURNE (AP) — The now silent Santa Fe steam whistle may sound off again if residents are successful in restoring what was once the city's most popular timepiece.

The whistle blew four times a day for more than 50 years, helping to keep Cleburne residents in step. The last blast was heard at 3:30 p.m. May 2, the day before railroad workers went on strike, said Santa Fe shop superintendent Louie F. Sanchez.

Railroad officials decided to retire the whistle after the strike ended a few days later, he said.

But some residents disagree with the railroad's decision, and about 1,000 signatures have been collected in an effort to persuade the company to start tooting the whistle again.

"It's a tradition," said Bobbie Baze, who started the petition. "Everybody grew up hearing it in Cleburne."

Sanchez says sentiment won't bring back the whistle, which blew at 7 a.m., 11 a.m., 11:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

"It would have to serve a purpose," Sanchez said. "My responsibility is to mind the store, and regardless how small the fee; if it's not necessary to spend a dollar of the company's money, then I shouldn't do it."

Including workers' pay and steam production costs, the railroad company paid about $75 a day to blow the whistle four times, he said.

The whistle had blown since 1907, and Baze said that's reason enough to keep it.

"When they take a tradition away, you don't ever get something back like that again," Baze said. "That's why we'd like to save it."

Resident Edna Skiles said Cleburne had became accustomed to "Santa Fe time."

"I think everybody set their clocks to it," Ms. Skiles said.

She said the whistle "kept me on my toes" when she had to be at work at 8 a.m.

If the company brings back the whistle, Sanchez said it will be put on an automatic timer that would cost about $9,000.

"We'll definitely never go back to a man blowing the whistle," he said.

Witness says torture described 'excitedly'

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman testifying in the trial of an 18-year-old youth accused of torturing a friend to death says the five people charged in the slaying excitedly told her how the man died.

Bridgette Stowe took the stand Tuesday during the second day of testimony in the trial of Harold Glenn Smith, who is charged in the Aug. 6, 1985, death of Dennis Keith Medler.

Medler, 19, died by suffocating on his own blood and teeth, prosecutor Jim Peacock said. His body was found eight days later near a north Harris County cemetery by a man tending cattle.

Ms. Stowe testified she had been expected to accompany Medler and the five youths to the field where the killing occurred. But she said she pretended to be asleep and they left without her.

When they returned, she testified, they happily, excitedly re-enacted how Medler died.

Peacock told jurors that five members of a gang planned for three weeks to torture Medler to death just to watch him suffer.

Problems in Soviet Union bolster chances for summit, Reagan says

Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says problems gripping the Soviet Union bolster chances that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev will be interested in making progress at the next superpower summit.

Reagan, who flew home from Chicago late Tuesday after a rare, out-of-town news conference, also expressed interest in South African President P.W. Botha's offer for limited talks with Western allies and neighboring countries.

He said such a meeting might determine "if we couldn't bring about some coming together of these responsible leaders of the black community" in South Africa.

Fielding a wide array of questions from White House and Chicago reporters, Reagan defended his call for voluntary drug tests as a step that poses no threat of punishment or job loss for drug users.

And, he said the United States has believed many times that the release of the American hostages in Lebanon was imminent, only to have hopes dashed. "We've had some broken hearts," the president added.

The news conference came as a top-level team of American negotiators flew home from two days of talks in the Soviet Union on key arms control issues.

While saying he had not received any report from his negotiators, Reagan said he was hopeful about a summit.

"Yes, I am optimistic," Reagan said. "And I'm optimistic that we're going to make more progress than probably has been made in a number of years because of some of the problems that are concerning the general secretary at this time."

He did not elaborate. Gorbachev has been struggling with a faltering economy and the political and environmental damage from the world's worst nuclear accident, at Chernobyl.

Discussing South Africa, Reagan said "some of the most prominent of the black leaders" are "all solidly opposed to sanctions" designed to punish the white-minority government for its system of racial segregation, known as apartheid.

He said the one group in South Africa that supports imposition of sanctions — the outlawed African National Congress — was "the most radical" and had been infiltrated by the Communist Party.

At the same time, Reagan said he did not mean to suggest that only radical groups want sanctions to be imposed. In particular, he exempted Bishop Desmond Tutu, the black South African cleric who won the Nobel Peace Prize and has been outspoken in his criticism of Reagan's policy toward South Africa.

While expressing continued opposition to sanctions, Reagan noted Botha's suggestion for meetings involving the United States, West Germany, Britain and France, along with countries bordering South Africa.

But in his speech Tuesday in Durban, South Africa, Botha said the Pretoria government would not be forced into negotiations with radical elements, a reference to calls from the Commonwealth and the European Community to lift the ban on the African National Congress, the main guerrilla group fighting to overthrow the government.

"You can't go in and dictate to them (South Africa) and tell them how they must run their country," Reagan said. "But if we could be of help in bringing together various groupings there to discuss and — with the government as to how something could be planned to bring along an end to apartheid earlier, this we would be pleased to do."

On other subjects at the news conference, Reagan:

— Said Secretary of State George Shultz "has mellowed considerably" since being outspoken in his criticism of the president's decision on Aug. 1 to subsidize wheat sales to the Soviet Union. Shultz had said the Soviets must be "chortling" and "scratching their heads' about being able to buy American grain at prices less than U.S. housewives would pay.

"We didn't do it for the Soviet Union. We did it for our farmers," Reagan said of the subsidized wheat sales.

— Declared he would "have no hesitation whatsoever" in holding a summit meeting with Gorbachev to discuss tearing down the Berlin Wall.

Robertson disputes Bush's claims of Michigan victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Pat Robertson on Tuesday disputed Vice President George Bush's claims of victory in precinct delegate elections in Michigan.

The television evangelist, who is considering running for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination, said his supporters won a majority of delegate slots in nine of Michigan's 18 congressional districts.

The votes still are being counted from the Aug. 5 primary in which Republican voters selected thousands of precinct delegates, a first step toward determining the make-up of the state's delegation to the 1988 Republican National Convention.

Because delegate candidates were not identified with any presidential aspirant and were not required to commit themselves until January of 1988, it was impossible to evaluate varying claims of victory.

"Our people in Michigan tell me we did very, very well," said Bush two days after the primary. Bush supporters in Michigan claimed the vice president had the support of about 53 percent of the delegates.

'Indigent' elderly man found with $80,000 in his jacket

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A man in smelly, tattered clothing but carrying $80,000 and 28 bankbooks when he collapsed on the street is typical of elderly people who live in fear of losing their money, social workers say.

Chester Louie's cash and bankbooks were found by workers at San Francisco General Hospital after he collapsed outside a police station, said hospital spokeswoman Ruth Rankin. The money took hours to count and was placed in a hospital safe.

Paramedic Tom Shafer said Tuesday that Louie, 88, was filthy and asked to be left alone on Saturday. Louie wore a big, lumpy jacket over his torn and tattered clothes, Shafer said, adding, "Now I know what the lumps were."

"He seemed real nice," he said. "He said he didn't have pain anywhere. I don't think he knew how sick he was."

Louie was in satisfactory condition Tuesday after undergoing surgery. The hospital refused to release any other information and a police spokesman said no report was filed on the incident.

A hospital source had said Louie underwent surgery for an accumulation of blood inside the skull, a condition that can be caused by a stroke or a blow to the head.

Officials said hospital staff found the well-worn bills and bank passbooks stuffed in the lining of Louie's clothes and in a backpack. The passbooks were made out to different names, hospital workers said.

"This is very common," said Anni Chung, executive director of Self Help for the Elderly, a nonprofit agency near the Chinatown alley where she said Louie lives.

She said one elderly man was discovered after his death to have stashed $25,000 in one-dollar coins in cigar boxes in his hotel room.

Many senior citizens keep their money with them because they feel isolated, distrust banks or fear being cut off from aid benefits, Ms. Chung said.

A single person found to have more than $1,700 in bank accounts and other personal assets is ineligible for state medical benefits and state supplements to monthly Social Security payments under state law.

Student goes on shooting rampage

NEW YORK (AP) — A trade school work-study student angered over money went on a shooting rampage, killing his boss and wounding four other people in a half-hour of terror, police said.

Authorities said Van Anthony Hull, a 29-year-old civil technology student at New York Technical College in Brooklyn, kept police and rescue workers at bay for 30 minutes Tuesday while his victims lay bleeding.

When finally captured, he was carrying an empty .38-caliber handgun and a 9mm automatic when he was arrested, police said.

Hull was charged early today with four counts each of attempted murder and first-degree assault and two counts each of felony and misdemeanor criminal possession of a weapon, said Sgt. John Venetucci, a police spokesman.

A murder charge remained under investigation, Venetucci said.

The conditions of the four others shot and one person injured in the affray ranged from guarded to critical early today.

In a news conference Tuesday night, police Capt. Michael Julian said the episode stemmed from a dispute with the school concerning finances. Hull apparently thought he was due a $700 check, Julian said.

The gunman first shot a man in the head in the Ophthalmology Department in the college's Allied Health Building where Hull had been employed, Julian said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Chairmen take on talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators, reaching a dead end in efforts to draft a tax-overhaul compromise, are turning the chore over to the chairmen of the two congressional tax-writing committees.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, will try to accomplish what the 22 congressional tax writers were unable to do in 19 days of bargaining.

Rostenkowski and Packwood began meeting privately Tuesday afternoon and continued their talks late into the night before taking a break to resume the effort today.

Neither man would discuss the details of their talks, which are aimed at salvaging the unofficial goal of reaching a compromise on tax-overhaul legislation by the end of the week, when Congress begins a three-week recess.

Backers want cuts revived

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law, saying delay would be ruinous, plan a new push to revive the law's automatic spending cuts before Congress leaves for its Labor Day recess.

The Senate already has approved a new cutback scheme, but the proposal is part of a bill raising the Treasury's borrowing authority by $244 billion that could be tied up for weeks in talks with the House.

So Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and other sponsors of the deficit law plan to offer their amendment again this week on a stop-gap debt bill, due out of the House Ways and Means Committee today, that will likely be dealt with before the three-week recess, scheduled to start Friday. Without at least a temporary borrowing increase, the Treasury says it will be in risk of default by Sept. 2.

Federal retirements up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals to end a tax windfall for retiring federal employees are prompting many workers to end their careers this year to avoid being affected by any changes enacted by Congress, officials say.

The General Accounting Office found that retirements at the FBI jumped 211 percent in June from the same month in 1985.

The study released this week also found that retirements in June increased 120 percent at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, 80 percent at the Federal Aviation Administration and 47 percent at the Social Security Administration.

Rescued Sri Lankans greeted with skepticism

WORLD

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) — Canada has granted entry to 152 Sri Lankans rescued from two open lifeboats off Newfoundland, but one police official expressed skepticism at accounts given by the refugees of their odyssey.

Groggy but well-dressed, the Sri Lankans, including 144 men, three women and five children, arrived in St. John's Tuesday aboard a Canadian fisheries patrol vessel after being rescued by fishing boats 6 miles from Newfoundland's southeastern coast.

They said they had paid the equivalent of $3,000 to $5,000 in cash and jewels to an Indian agency that promised to smuggle them into Canada, and had been put into lifeboats after voyaging halfway around the world in a freighter to waters off eastern Canada.

"We thought we'd missed the place and would die," said Kandasamy Lingaratnam, self-appointed spokesman for the Sri Lankans, who have asked Canadian authorities for refugee status.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police inspector Jack Lavers said the Sri Lankans were members of the Tamil minority who claimed to be fleeing persecution by the ethnic Sinhalese majority in the troubled island nation off southern India.

The refugees described a 35-day odyssey they said began by cover of night off India. They said they boarded an unidentified freighter crewed by Chinese or Koreans, and were kept below decks and given meager provisions until they arrived off Canada.

Lingaratnam said the Tamils were crowded into the lifeboats at dusk last week, and said, "We were all very scared."

When land didn't appear, he said, those on board "cried and shouted, all the time praying to God. Some people vomited."

Lingaratnam said each of the lifeboats carried three, three-gallon barrels of fresh water that was sipped carefully. Some of the Sri Lankans had brought biscuits with them, he said, but said there was no food left when the rescuers arrived five days later.

But Lavers was skeptical about whether the Tamils spent five days at sea with little food.

"There is some consistency in their story, but some inconsistencies in the facts," Lavers told a news conference Tuesday after questioning the Sri Lankans.

Officials were also trying to determine the name and whereabouts of the delivery vessel, and the refugees' point of origin.

"The captain and crew of the vessel probably put them off at the first view of Canadian land and then beat it back to international waters," Lavers said.

Agents seize 1,058 pounds of pure Columbian cocaine

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Federal agents seized 1,058 pounds of pure Colombian cocaine in northwestern Mexico and captured eight men who were preparing to ship it to the United States, Mexican authorities said Tuesday.

The cocaine was the third largest amount ever seized in Mexico, said Felipe Flores, deputy spokesman for the federal Attorney General's Office.

Seven Mexican men and a Venezuelan man were arrested Sunday when agents of the Federal Judicial Police found them with the cocaine in a building in a small village in the border state of Sonora, the Attorney General's Office said in a statement.

The cocaine had been flown July 22 from Colombia to a clandestine airstrip outside the state capital of Hermosillo, about 930 miles northwest of Mexico City. It was stored at a nearby ranch until Aug. 7, when it was taken 125 miles south to the home of one of the suspects in Ciudad Obregon.

Narcotics agents moved in on the suspects as the cocaine was being transported again to a village outside Ciudad Obregon, the statement said. They exchanged gunfire with the suspects before arresting them and seizing the cocaine.

The suspects were brought before reporters Tuesday at the Attorney General's Office here. They wore dirty blue jeans and T-shirts and stood silently behind a table loaded with 12 large duffel bags and 34 small plastic bags containing what spokesmen said was the cocaine.

The Venezuelan was identified as Jesus Cardenas Ruiz, an international trafficker who came to Mexico to supervise the shipment to the United States, the statement said.

The largest cocaine seizure to date occurred in early April when agents confiscated 2,597 pounds of the drug in Tijuana, just across the border from San Diego, Calif. That operation culminated an eight-month investigation in Tijuana and Sinaloa state and resulted in eight arrests. Another seizure last year in Tijuana netted about 1,500 pounds, Flores said.

The Attorney General's Office this year has been concentrating much of its effort on finding clandestine airstrips in northwestern Mexico, a new route from Colombia to the United States.

In addition, the Attorney General's Office this week began its seventh annual six-month eradication campaign in western Mexico. Operation Pacific VII involves about 100 federal policemen and more than 25,000 soldiers and sailors in finding and wiping out marijuana and heroin poppy plantations along the west coast.

Doctors Say:
New Grapefruit Super Pill 'II' Gives Faster Weight Loss

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.
No Dieting — Eat Normally

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special) — Good news for people who want to lose weight. According to the results of a recent medical study, you can easily lose up to "14 pounds in 14 days" with an amazing, vastly improved "new version" of the world famous grapefruit 'super pill' diet called Super Pill II.

Best of all, the pills allow you to "continue to eat all of your favorite foods without changing your normal eating or exercising habits and still lose weight, starting immediately, until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire. "It's guaranteed!"

The new diet pills have been successfully clinically tested on groups of overweight people by a panel of doctors in Beverly Hills.

All Lost up to 14 lbs. in 14 Days

"Remarkably, ALL people in the Super Pill II test group showed dramatic weight loss over 14 days," stated Dr. Steve Sachs, who compiled and analyzed the data in the study. It also proved conclusively that the powerful new ingredients combined with the placebo effect will enable you to lose weight "over 3 times faster" with this new version compared to the previously popular and successful original version.

"Pills Do All the Work"

According to the clinical study, "Super Pill II itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO special exercise, NO hunger pangs, and NO messy fresh half grapefruit to eat at every meal." You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

Pills Contain ALL Daily Vitamins

No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy because Super Pill II is fortified with all (100%) of the U.S. Government USRDA recommended daily vitamin requirements.

Super Pill II is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Cultural benefit

It might be called constructive engagement — had the phrase not been previously utilized. But whatever it's called the agreement announced the other day between the Soviet Union and the United States on educational, cultural and scientific exchanges is welcome news.

Engagement, making an effort to know and understand — and appreciate — another culture is, almost without exception, constructive. Forget the South African situation where the U.S. policy of the same name has failed miserably. Engagement typically dispels fear and ignorance, which are often precursors to engagement of the destructive sort.

One of the accords signed — all of them grew out of the Reagan-Gorbachev talks held last November in Geneva — provides for the first exchange of high school students between the two countries. In another educational program, American teachers of Russian and Soviet teachers of English will switch places for up to 10 months. Another program calls for lecturers in history, economics and culture to change places.

In medicine, the University of Alaska at Anchorage and the Soviet Ministry of Health will study the health problems of adaptation common to Alaska and Siberia.

Cultural exchanges include 62 Russian pre-revolutionary paintings from galleries in Moscow and Leningrad coming to several museums in this country and 65 American paintings from the Smithsonian Institution and other collections going to the Hermitage in Leningrad and the Pushkin Museum in Moscow. A Metropolitan Opera-Bolshoi Opera exchange is also being mentioned as a possibility.

J. William Fulbright, the former senator from Arkansas whose Fulbright Exchange Program celebrated its 40th anniversary last week, once noted that exchange programs "can help shift U.S.-Soviet rivalry from nuclear weapons to education" and "thus minimize chances of nuclear war." That's a worthwhile derivative of any endeavor.

It's not necessary to approve of the Soviet system or to condone its foreign policy to believe that the senator is right. Engagement of a cultural, educational and scientific nature will be mutually constructive.

Another View:
Mexico's 'chance'

Mexico's President Miguel de la Madrid arrived Tuesday for the most important of his meetings with President Reagan.

Its chief purpose is to perform a public ceremony of ratification by the two governments of the financial agreements arduously worked out over the past two months. These financial agreements are designed to avert a default by Mexico on its foreign debts — a default that would have deeply damaging effects not only in Mexico but in this country as well.

The bargain between the United States and Mexico provides that the United States will help Mexico powerfully as long as Mexico helps itself. Reagan's job this week is to make clear, to a large and attentive audience in both countries, that his government understands and accepts this commitment.

As for de la Madrid, he is upholding his end of the bargain with vigor and courage. He has been doing it for good Mexican reasons, but his policies are entirely consistent with the plan that Secretary of the Treasury James A. Baker offered last autumn to the Third World debtors.

Two months ago, de la Madrid closed a money-losing steel mill in Monterrey with a loss of 6,000 steelworkers' jobs. He has taken Mexico into the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, promising an end to the unlimited protection of inefficient Mexican industries.

He has raised the price of gasoline. He has let the exchange rate of the peso fall with the market. That, in conjunction with fiercely high interest rates, has stopped capital flight out of the country and even seems, in the first half of this year, to have drawn a hesitant flow back in. These are measures that no government accomplishes without serious political risks.

Whether to take them has been vehemently debated within the Mexican government. At one point, last June, it appeared to come perilously close to default.

For the old-liners of the ruling party, default was by far the more congenial solution. It meant a reversion to the familiar territory of left-wing nationalism and economic isolation.

If it also meant continued poverty for most of Mexico's people, they had always been poor. But de la Madrid is leading the other side of the internal argument-the one that is determined to open the economy wider, at a real cost in certain comfortable traditions, and to go for growth.

Raising Mexican standards of living is the essential thing. There are other subjects on Reagan's agenda this week. The drug traffic is one, immigration another. But controlling both would get harder if the disparity between American and Mexican incomes widened. Both will get more manageable if the disparity narrows.

By supporting his visitor's choice, Reagan has an unusual opportunity this week to advance his foreign policy and simultaneously defend this country's financial stability. To do that convincingly, he will have to go beyond the conventional pleasantries when he meets de la Madrid.

— The Washington Post

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty-five years ago — on Aug. 13, 1961 — Berlin was a city completely divided as East Germany sealed off the border between the eastern and western sectors. East German police and troops used barbed wire and barricades to block crossing points to halt the flight of refugees. Two days later, work began on the Berlin Wall.

On this date:

In 1521, Spanish conqueror Hernando Cortez captured present-day Mexico City from the Aztec Indians.

In 1624, French King Louis XIII named Cardinal Richelieu his first minister.

In 1792, French revolutionaries imprisoned the royal family.

In 1818, suffragist Lucy Stone was born in West Brookfield, Mass.

In 1846, the American flag was raised for the first time in Los Angeles.

In 1889, William Gray of Hartford, Conn., received a patent for a coin-operated telephone.

In 1899, director Alfred Hitchcock was born in London.

In 1960, the first two-way telephone conversation by satellite took place with the help of Echo I.

Ten years ago: President Gerald Ford's campaign managers claimed to have enough delegate votes for a first-ballot victory over former California Gov. Ronald Reagan at the Republican Convention in Kansas City.

Five years ago: President Reagan signed a package of tax and budget reductions, but warned that changes Congress had made in his original plan could lead to higher federal deficits.

One year ago: The home of South African anti-apartheid leader Winnie Mandela and an adjacent clinic she ran in a black township outside Brandfort, South Africa, were badly damaged by fire. She charged that the fire was the work of the government's security branch.

Today's birthdays: Television evangelist Rex Humbard is 67. Cuban President Fidel Castro is 60. Actor Pat Harrington is 57. Singer Don Ho is 56. Singer Dan Fogelberg is 35. Actress Quinn Cummings is 19.

Thought for today: "You grow up the day you have the first real laugh — at yourself." — Ethel Barrymore, American actress (1879-1959.)

Reagan, de la Madrid rely on trust

WASHINGTON — Few relationships between two countries are of greater mutual concern — and more potentially rancorous — than that between the United States and Mexico. That's what makes today's discussion between President Reagan and President Miguel de la Madrid at the White House so important to both countries.

Jack Anderson

De la Madrid, who studied at Harvard and speaks admirable English, called Dale Van Atta from Mexico City the other day to talk about today's meeting with Reagan.

"As you know," he said, "Mexico has been in a very difficult situation from the economic point of view because of decreased prices in oil." This was putting it mildly: In the first six weeks of this year, oil prices dropped by 50 percent, devastating Mexico's oil-dependent economy.

"This has been the principal and paramount economic problem for Mexico," de la Madrid said. "We have lost one-third of our total export revenues. We have also lost 15 percent of public income.

"Really, we are facing a very big challenge from the economic standpoint. And we need collaboration from the United States on the financial side and in commercial matters."

De la Madrid expressed high hopes for today's summit. "I have always found in President Reagan a very constructive and a very positive attitude toward Mexican problems," he said.

The two men first met in 1982, when de la Madrid was president-elect, and have met three times since. "We have an excellent personal relationship," de la Madrid told us. "He calls me 'Miguel' and I call him 'Ron.' He's very gentle with me. And he has shown, always, a very positive attitude toward strengthening the relationship between Mexico and the United States."

De la Madrid recently convinced Reagan that none of Mexico's foreign creditors would benefit if they forced such strict austerity on the country that its economic growth was stifled. Today he will reiterate this position.

"I prepared very carefully for this meeting," de la Madrid told us. "(In) talks with my principal aides (we) reviewed the whole panorama of our relationship with the United States — the progress we have made, the problems that are unsolved and new initiatives."

This time de la Madrid is without the counsel of his longtime friend and former finance minister, Jesus Silva Herzog, who was unceremoniously fired before the latest $5 billion bailout was negotiated with the International Monetary Fund. Asked about Silva Herzog, the president replied diplomatically: "From time to time it is good to have a breath of fresh air on the team."

Reagan has prepared for the meeting, too. He has received intelligence briefings on Mexico, and advice from the two members of his administration who are now the most influential in shaping policy toward Mexico: Treasury Secretary James Baker and National Security Council staffer William Perry.

Reagan remarked on the need for good relations with Mexico in a recent conversation. "Here we are with a 2,000-mile border, and for 100 years or so, no conflicts between us," he told us with a tone of wonderment.

Reagan then recalled the remarks last year of a top Canadian official, who noted the even longer undefended U.S.-Canadian border and said, according to the president, that "if we were imperialistic we could have had it (Canada) a long time ago." The president added: "Well, I think the same ... thing with Mexico. They are a neighbor and we have too much in common for us not to be concerned about their situation."

Along with economic problems, the two presidents will discuss illegal immigrants, drug trafficking and the allegations of election fraud in the border state of Chihuahua last month. Early drafts of Reagan's welcoming speech to de la Madrid contained a delicate reference to "a country" that needs to have fair elections.

Jack Anderson is a syndicated columnist who along with Joseph Spear and Dale Van Atta writes this column for United Feature Syndicate.

EVANS & NOVAK

Conquering tax reform 'stagger' isn't easy

WASHINGTON — While Senate and House conferees play political ping-pong with tax reform, President Reagan's policymakers fear the maneuvering will preserve the "stagger" — meaning a 1987 tax increase and the threat of recession.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The games-playing on Capitol Hill does not truly endanger the preeminent domestic achievement of Reagan's second term, still expected out of conference before the Aug. 15 recess. But it is now more likely than not that the final version will trim deductions before trimming tax rates, a spread in effective dates known as the stagger.

For the most part, congressional tax reformers treat this with nonchalance, compared with rising panic inside the administration. "Of course, it's going to hurt the economy," one senior official told us. "The only question is how much." Thus, the veiled goal of the president's men is to eliminate, or at least reduce, the stagger.

The stagger derives from both Senate and House bills. Each would close down tax shelters on Jan. 1 (a revenue raiser) but wait until July 1 to reduce rates. The only purpose is extra revenue — an estimated $29 billion windfall to insure the bill is revenue-neutral as required by the president.

But with Senate passage of its much-improved bill June 24, the stagger was getting second looks. It amounted to an unannounced one-time tax increase that would disillusion taxpayers and hold down a surprisingly sluggish economy. The administration's private decision was to eliminate the stagger by triggering rate cuts Jan. 1, making that the effective date for the whole bill.

That would have happened had the Senate-House conference been an orderly affair that adopted the obviously superior Senate bill with a few changes. Instead, it devolved into what Deputy Treasury Secretary Richard G. Darman in administration meetings calls a ping-pong game, with Senate and House sides batting proposals back and forth.

The main player has been Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, the House Ways and Means chairman whose performance has evoked contradictory reviews. To Capitol Hill aficionados, it has been a virtuoso performance regaining high ground for Democrats by embracing the middle class and forcing Senate Republicans to champion business. To the president's men, it has been a time-consuming waste reminiscent of ward politics in Rostenkowski's Chicago.

Nobody can dispute that, however unwittingly, he has made it more difficult to erase the stagger. If it boils down to a choice of taking the money out of either the middle class, business or both, most conferees would run for cover and take the stagger with them.

Thus, at recent caucuses, only two Senate conferees — Senate Republican Leader Robert J. Dole and Democrat Bill Bradley — insisted on eliminating the stagger. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the most conservative Democratic conferee, agrees but flinches at $29 billion squeezed from the hide of business. The chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, Dr. Beryl Sprinkel, entertains similar misgivings about either raising rates or stiffening depreciation rules.

Although Rostenkowski's conferees fear the stagger more than their Senate counterparts, their first proposal last week would perpetuate it. While eliminating the six-month gap, they finance it by raising the first-year top marginal rate to 40 percent — a clear continuation of the stagger. Upper-income professionals and entrepreneurs with control over their income flow would postpone tax liability to 1988 when the rate would drop to 27 percent — just as they would under the six-month delay.

The immediate solution is to find enough revenue, partly by accounting legerdemain, to cut rates Jan. 1. But that must be done with stealth and late in the conference, lest the added revenue be dedicated to goodies. The task is so difficult the White House is talking about an April 1 effective date — a three-month stagger still risking dire economic consequences.

The best solution came July 16 in letters to conferees and administration officials by Dr. Richard W. Rahn, vice president and chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. If the stagger is not corrected, he warned, "economic growth will continue to be depressed" through 1987. The answer: Abandon "static" revenue estimates and go to "dynamic" forecasts that would base calculations on increased economic growth over the next five years.

"Policymakers should not nail the American people to the cross of static revenue neutrality," Rahn said, preferring "approximately correct" estimates to "numbers that are precise — but clearly wrong." The letters went unanswered. Having come to the brink of demolishing steeply graduated rates and tax shelters, Congress and the administration flinch at overturning one more monument to conventional wisdom even though it could transform tax reform into economic depressant.

U.S., Mexico seek improved relationship

MEXICO CITY — Top Mexican officials don't hide their doubts about the motives behind recent harsh accusations from Washington. With a thin, embarrassed smile, they say they wonder why the attacks linked to drugs, corruption, emigration, election hanky-panky have poured out all at once.

Flora Lewis

They don't deny the problems exist — they have for a long time — so the question is, why the finger-pointing now? Whatever the answer, and it seems to have something to do with the festering fight between Sen. Jesse Helms and the State Department, the word here is that good signals have come from the White House about President Miguel de la Madrid's visit that began Tuesday.

The leaders show evident relief at being assured that the Reagan-de la Madrid talks will be on bilateral issues, all tough but at least without the abrasive undertones of U.S.-Mexican differences on Nicaragua and Central America.

Mexicans resent Washington's efforts to import the domino theory from Southeast Asia, where it was disproved anyway, to their region, and to use their security as an argument for aid to the Nicaraguan "contras."

If there is a security threat to Mexico, and via Mexico to the United States, it is the country's dreadful economic situation and the social consequences. Real wages have fallen sharply, not only because of inflation but also because of huge cuts in standard-of-living subsidies mandated by foreign creditors.

The country has already gone a long way on its austerity cure. It joined GATT, which means a start on opening markets and abandoning historic protectionism, and sold off or shut down nearly half the state-owned companies. It still has far to go.

Carlos Salinas de Gortari, secretary of planning and budget, talking about budget-cutting, says "We've already done twice what Gramm-Rudman is trying to do in the United States, and we did it in four years." The feeling here is that the huge efforts being made are ignored in Washington, while the troubles are highlighted.

This is a doughnut country; you can stare at the doughnut or the hole. It is easy to criticize the serious flaws and errors, some stemming from a history of instability and some from mismanagement and lax, dishonest administration. And it is easy to sympathize given the way demography has overwhelmed huge development efforts and the world market has slashed the price of exports.

Runaway population growth is at last slowing down. The projection is that it will stabilize at 105 million in the next century, a horrendous burden in the meantime that requires 1 million new jobs every year. How many of those people will wade across the border seeking work in the United States depends above all on renewing steady economic growth.

That means a continued need to import despite the astronomical debt of $100 billion, and a need for better export earnings. Some of Mexico's traditional money-winners, especially metals, may never regain their value as world industrial techniques change. Oil is back up a bit, a great relief, but it won't work any miracle cure.

These are all reasons that Mexico wants what one minister, who spoke on background, called "harmonious and respectful relations with the U.S." He said, "This is a serious country with a serious government and a serious society." He didn't add, but obviously meant, that it wants to be taken seriously by the U.S. because it is undergoing a painful change in hopes of emerging as a modern, self-confident state.

The closed political system, which evolved after a long period of violence and upheaval, is showing signs of archaic strain. It brought stability after too much disorder, and it still manages to keep the peace in a time of adversity. But there are rending regional differences. What works in undeveloped Campeche in the south no longer is adequate for Chihuahua on the U.S. border.

There is renewed restiveness among youth, especially in the capital. One young man said: "The earthquake was an illumination for us. We all pitched in to help, and we discovered there's a lot we can do together. We don't have just to accept things as they are. We can do something about it, so we're talking politics now."

The hope for the U.S., as well as for Mexico, must be that the new talk will bring healthy, constructive development, not explosive frustration. Mexican nationalism is deeply entrenched and won't go away in any case. The two countries will always affect each other, for good or for bad. The choice is obvious, but not inevitable.

Congressional attention turning to tractor-trailer safety

Associated Press

Near Eufala, Ala., a tractor-semitrailer jackknifes and strikes an automobile head-on. Five of the six car occupants are killed. The truck driver is unhurt.

In Lemore, Calif., a heavy truck strikes a church van and kills all but one of the 11 people in the van.

In Frostburg, Md., the driver of a tractor-trailer rig ignores a brake check near the top of a mountain and fails to slow down or downshift. Running out of control down the hill, it sideswipes a pickup truck and forces a car off the road. The truck hurtles into the business district of town, striking eight vehicles and jamming them into six others before the detached tractor runs another car into a building where it catches fire and explodes. Three dead, 10 hurt including the truck driver. Damages $675,000.

In citing such examples, the National Transportation Safety Board notes that "when trucks are involved in accidents, it is the people outside those trucks who are at greatest risk — due to the relatively large mass of the truck, as well as other factors."

Less than 19 percent of the 4,831 truck-generated fatalities in 1984 were truck occupants, says the NTSB.

In 1985, 4,835 heavy and medium truck accidents killed 5,728 people out of a total of 43,795 motor vehicle deaths. In 1984, 4,831 fatal truck accidents killed 5,640 out of a total of 44,257 motor vehicle deaths.

All of which has turned congressional attention to truck safety. On Thursday, a U.S. Senate committee approved legislation that would, among other things, establish a national licensing system for truck drivers with uniform training and eligibility, and stiff federal penalties for driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs. More action is expected in September.

Admittedly variable Department of Transportation samplings indicate that there were more than 380,000 accidents involving medium and heavy trucks in both 1983 and 1984.

Some federal and trucking experts say that these reflect only a blip on an otherwise fair safety record. Others say they expose a potentially dangerous situation on the nation's roads and highways.

Most of the concern has surfaced since the economic deregulation of the industry by the Carter Administration in 1980, which opened trucking to all comers and struck down restrictive tariffs.

In the competitive surge since then, the highways have exploded with trucks of every description. The Census Bureau counted 26.2 million trucks and pickups in 1977, 33.8 million in 1982.

Safety experts are mainly concerned about the nine million heavy and medium trucks — the big rigs — sharing the road today with some 165 million other vehicles, including 130 million passenger cars.

Almost 2½ million people were working as truck drivers in 1984, and 4½ million more in other jobs in the $190 billion trucking industry. The Department of Labor says trucking is one of the 37 fastest growing occupations, with over 434,000 more drivers expected by 1995.

"Given these figures and the destructive potential of a mishandled truck," says the National Transportation Safety Board, "the need becomes apparent for an effective, uniformly applied system of matching skill to task in the truck driving field."

In July on I-40 in Arkansas, the driver of a semi made a U-turn across a median and struck a bus, injuring 29 people, four badly. State police say they found marijuana seeds and a pipe in the truck. The uninjured truck driver, driving without a proper license, was charged with reckless driving and possession of drug paraphernalia. He was driving for a firm called the Rising Fast Trucking Co.

One point that critics make is that since deregulation the trucking industry as a whole is rising too fast for its own good.

Trucks regularly account for about 13 percent of all road deaths, although they are less than 6 percent of all vehicles in the United States. Federal and industry officials point to these problem areas:

— Untrained drivers. In 19 states and the District of Columbia, if you can drive a car, you can drive a truck.

— Hazardous materials. They greatly enlarge the danger surrounding an accident.

— Overpressed vehicles, pushed beyond the limit of brakes and rubber by highly competitive drivers. There is a need for more frequent road inspections of trucks, many experts say.

Buried rock wall simply mysterious

ROCKWALL (AP) — About the only things that anybody really knows about the buried rock wall that once ran through this community are:

It exists.

And the city and county were named after it.

After that, it gets pretty murky. For example, nobody really knows how extensive it is, how tall it is, how deep it's buried, how old it is, or what it forms.

Earlier this summer, city workers started digging on a half-acre spot in a field north of State Highway 66 about 900 feet east of Lake Ray Hubbard. Dr. Sherman Sparks donated the property to the city for a park beause a portion of the wall is known to be buried there.

Unfortunately, the city diggers hit water before the wall, apparently because of the heavy spring rains.

Exactly when the city will continue digging and what will happen once the wall is found remains to be seen. Funds have not yet been set aside for the project, says Rick Crowley, an administrative assistant to the city manager.

"I thought it was awful odd and unfair for this town and county to be named Rockwall and not have a place to see the rock wall," Sparks said. "And, since I had a little land there (near the lake) and I was wanting to sell it, I said, 'Well, shucks, I'll just give some of it to the city so they can demonstrate and show the rock wall.'"

It's an idea that has been advanced on several occasions since it was first discovered by three settlers in 1851. It's an idea that has failed every time.

Jane Gilbert, president of the Rockwall County Historical Foundation, says no one has been able to figure out where the wall comes from.

"The geologists go out and look at it and say it's natural (a natural formation). But the one archaelogist who looked at it thought it looked like something he excavated in Carthage," she said.

"As a child, I was told the Indians had built it."

Although portions of the wall have been exposed from time to time, today no portion is above ground. In the field near the land Sparks gave the city is an arch made to mark the area where the wall was uncovered earlier in this century.

The arch was built by Tom Canup, who found a portion of the wall on his property and decided to make it a commercial sightseeing venture. He dug a hole down along the face of the wall and began charging visitors 25 cents to see it.

"The wall was dug up, I don't know how many years ago — over 50, about 20 to 30 feet from the site I gave them (the city)," Sparks said.

"The funny thing is, people would come and see it and they'd chisel away everything on that rock wall," Sparks says. "They even chiseled some of the arch, which is imported stone from Arizona, petrified wood that they thought was real pretty to make an arch out of."

A flock of sheep finally ended the attraction.

"It was in the pasture there by his house where he (the property owner) put sheep," Sparks said. "Well, they'd fall in it and drown in the hole. So he got disgusted and covered it up."

Historical foundation member Gene Crawford says there are several theories about what the wall is and where it goes. One is that there are actually two parallel walls that were built by Indians to form a viaduct from the East Fork of the Trinity River to their village.

Geologist Robert T. Hill said in 1901 that the walls are classic sand dikes, possibly formed by the Balcones Fault, which crosses the county.

After studying a portion of the wall in 1925, archaeologist Count Byron de Prorok said he thought they were constructed by a pre-historic race.

The late Dr. James L. Glenn, the former pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Rockwall, spent a considerable amount of time in the late 1940s and early 1950s digging up the findings of everyone who had written or said anything about the wall.

He got to be such an expert that he prepared a pamphlet containing a series of pictures of wall excavations. The booklet is now published and sold by the historical foundation.

For all his work, however, Glenn does not shed much factual light on the origins of the wall. Today the wall is as much a mystery as ever.

Since it has been found at depths ranging from 3 to 42 feet and neither the end nor bottom has ever been found, nobody really knows what it is.

TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH
(Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form.)

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

In North Texas, a slight chance of thunderstorms northwest, otherwise mostly fair tonight and Thursday. Lows in the 70s. Highs in the 90s.

In West Texas, generally partly cloudy through Thursday. Scattered thunderstorms, more numerous northern region. Lows tonight 60s north and mountains and low to mid-70s south. Highs Thursday 90s except mid-80s mountains to near 100 Big Bend.

In South Texas, widely scattered mostly afternoon and early evening showers or thundershowers mainly south central Texas and along the Rio Grande. Continued hot days, afternoon highs in the 80s immediate coast, 100 to 105 Rio Grande plains, 90s elsewhere. Mild at night, lows near 80 immediate coast, 70s inland.

Midland area faces chance of thunderstorms

From Staff and Wire Reports

Partly cloudy skies and a chance of thunderstorms are in the National Weather Service's forecast for tonight and Thursday. There is a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms through Thursday evening for the Midland-Odessa area.

The NWS at Midland Regional Airport is calling for low tonight near 70 with southeasterly winds at five to 15 mph. Winds will shift to the south at five to 15 mph on Thursday, accompanying a high in the lower 90s.

Tuesday's high was 17 degrees below the scorching record high of 107 set for that date in 1936. This morning's low of 68 was seven degrees above the record high set for this date in 1931.

STATE

A few showers and thunderstorms were reported today in the Panhandle and coastal areas of Texas.

Cloudy skies covered far West Texas and the northern half of the High Plains. Elsewhere, clear to partly cloudy skies prevailed.

Winds were southerly at 5 to 10 miles an hour over the greater part of the state. Light easterly winds were over East Texas and the Trans-Pecos region.

Temperatures overnight were generally in the 70s. Extremes ranged from 62 degrees at Mmarfa in the Davis Mountains to 80 degrees at the Naval Air Station at Corpus Christi.

NATION

Heavy thunderstorms prompted flash flood watches in the nation's midsection today while large areas of the East were fair and mild.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered from the mid-Atlantic states and the Southeast across Florida and the lower Gulf Coast region; and from northeastern New Mexico and western Kansas across central Nebraska and South Dakota into Wyoming and Montana.

Thunderstorms were heavy in northeast Kansas, southeast Nebraska, northwest Missouri and western Iowa.

Flash flood watches were issued in southeast Nebraska and extreme northwest Missouri because of slow-moving thunderstorms across areas that had been drenched by heavy rain.

Fair skies prevailed from northern New England and New York across western Pennsylvania, the Great Lakes region, the Ohio and Tennessee valleys through the lower Mississippi Valley into eastern Texas.

Skies were clear to partly cloudy from the Pacific Northwest across Idaho, Nevada, Arizona and California.

Tech's McWilliams taking aim on SWC title

LUBBOCK (AP) — Can David McWilliams make the change from Texas defensive coordinator to Texas Tech head football coach, mold a mixed staff into his own machine and give the Red Raiders their first winning season in years?

The soft-spoken McWilliams, who replaced Jerry Moore last December, sounds as if he's taken the Tech football helm quietly but firmly and is holding a steady course toward a Southwest Conference championship.

"Someone asked me about a week after I'd been here how things were going. I said, well, the jury is still out," he said. The verdict will come in when the Raiders meet Kansas State in Lubbock for the season opener Sept. 6.

This is shaping up as McWilliams' year of living dangerously but he's equipped to survive.

First, he's got the background. With McWilliams as defensive coordinator since 1982 and a 15-year veteran of the Texas coaching staff, Texas defense produced two All-America defensive players and six consensus All-SWC choices.

When his name was announced Dec. 2 to replace Moore, comments by SWC coaches about McWilliams abounded with words such as respect, integrity, confidence and pride.

MOORE, FIRED before the Raiders finished the season 4-7 overall and 1-7 in the SWC, had accumulated a 16-37-2 record in his five years at Tech. The Raiders' last SWC title was in 1976, when they shared it with Houston.

McWilliams wasted no time cleaning the cupboard.

"Before I even moved in, I started talking to the staff," he said. "Even before it was announced, at 10:30 that morning I had a couple of the assistant coaches talk to me. Nearly everyone on the staff I had known in the last 21, 22 years."

He kept five of Moore's coaches and quickly filled the empty positions with others he knew, including John Mize, a fellow assistant coach at Texas for the previous eight years and Steve Brickey, an offensive coordinator and quarterback coach at Indiana State.

"We've worked with each other. We've worked against each other. I've seen them recruiting. That made it an easier transition," said McWilliams, 43. "Within three days, we had seven coaches on the road recruiting."

WITH HIS staff in place, he set out to get his team in gear. That was the same team he'd watched on film so many times and whose weaknesses he had gotten to know through the years.

Last season, McWilliams watched the Raiders win their first three games, lose four in a row, beat Texas Christian 63-7, then lose their last two, including the one against Houston which the team had dedicated to Moore.

"I had a pretty good idea" of the kind of team he was taking over, he said. "The one thing I didn't know yet was the mental part of our team. After spring training I was really pleased that it was even better than I thought it would be."

The mental part McWilliams talks about is the one that has seen the Raiders lose four SWC games by a total of six points. Most games were lost in the last 1½ minutes. McWilliams has been working on that.

"They don't see themselves as a losing team," he said. "(But) after a while, it eats at you."

He set up a time during spring training to work on that nagging, lose-by-a-hair's-breadth point.

"We called it a turnover period. Kind of a fourth-quarter drill," he said. "It wasn't the same thing every time. Maybe the only recurring thing is that it always seemed to be later in the game.

"It's concentration. You have to play every play in every game."

THE KEY, he said, is going through all the possibilities for last-quarter surprise plays and having plans that can be plugged in quickly.

"We're not going to 'what-if' ourselves to death," he said. "But we can make sure that as a staff we don't leave any stone unturned.

"At least if you have a plan and are prepared, you've got something that your team can sink their teeth into. It gives them encouragement in that they see we were ready and were prepared and we gave them a chance."

Angels one short in windy rally

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Angels

With a strong wind blowing to left field Tuesday night, Angel Stadium became a Rambo-like shooting gallery with balls taking Lamesa bound trajectories with great regularity. However, it was one shot to left that didn't get out of the park that was the bad news for the Midland Angels.

El Paso left fielder Alan Cartwright backed to the warning track in the bottom of the ninth to snare a shot hit by Midland's James Randall to end the game and save a 13-12 win for the Texas League's Western Division leading Diablos.

This was a game that had El Paso laughing early with a 13-3 lead and gasping for air before it was over. When the wind is blowing hard to left, anything is possible in Angel Stadium.

Eight homers, five by Midland, sailed over the Angel Stadium fences while beleaguered pitchers watched in utter and helpless horror.

Trailing 13-6 going into the eighth, Midland struck for four runs on two-run homers by Randall and David Heath. Randall's shot was into the teeth of the wind to right.

Then in the ninth, pinch hitter Brian Brady connected with a two-run homer over Cartwright in left to pull the Angels to within one more homer-dome shot needed to tie. But Randall's blast to the opposite field came up short and Cartwright was there.

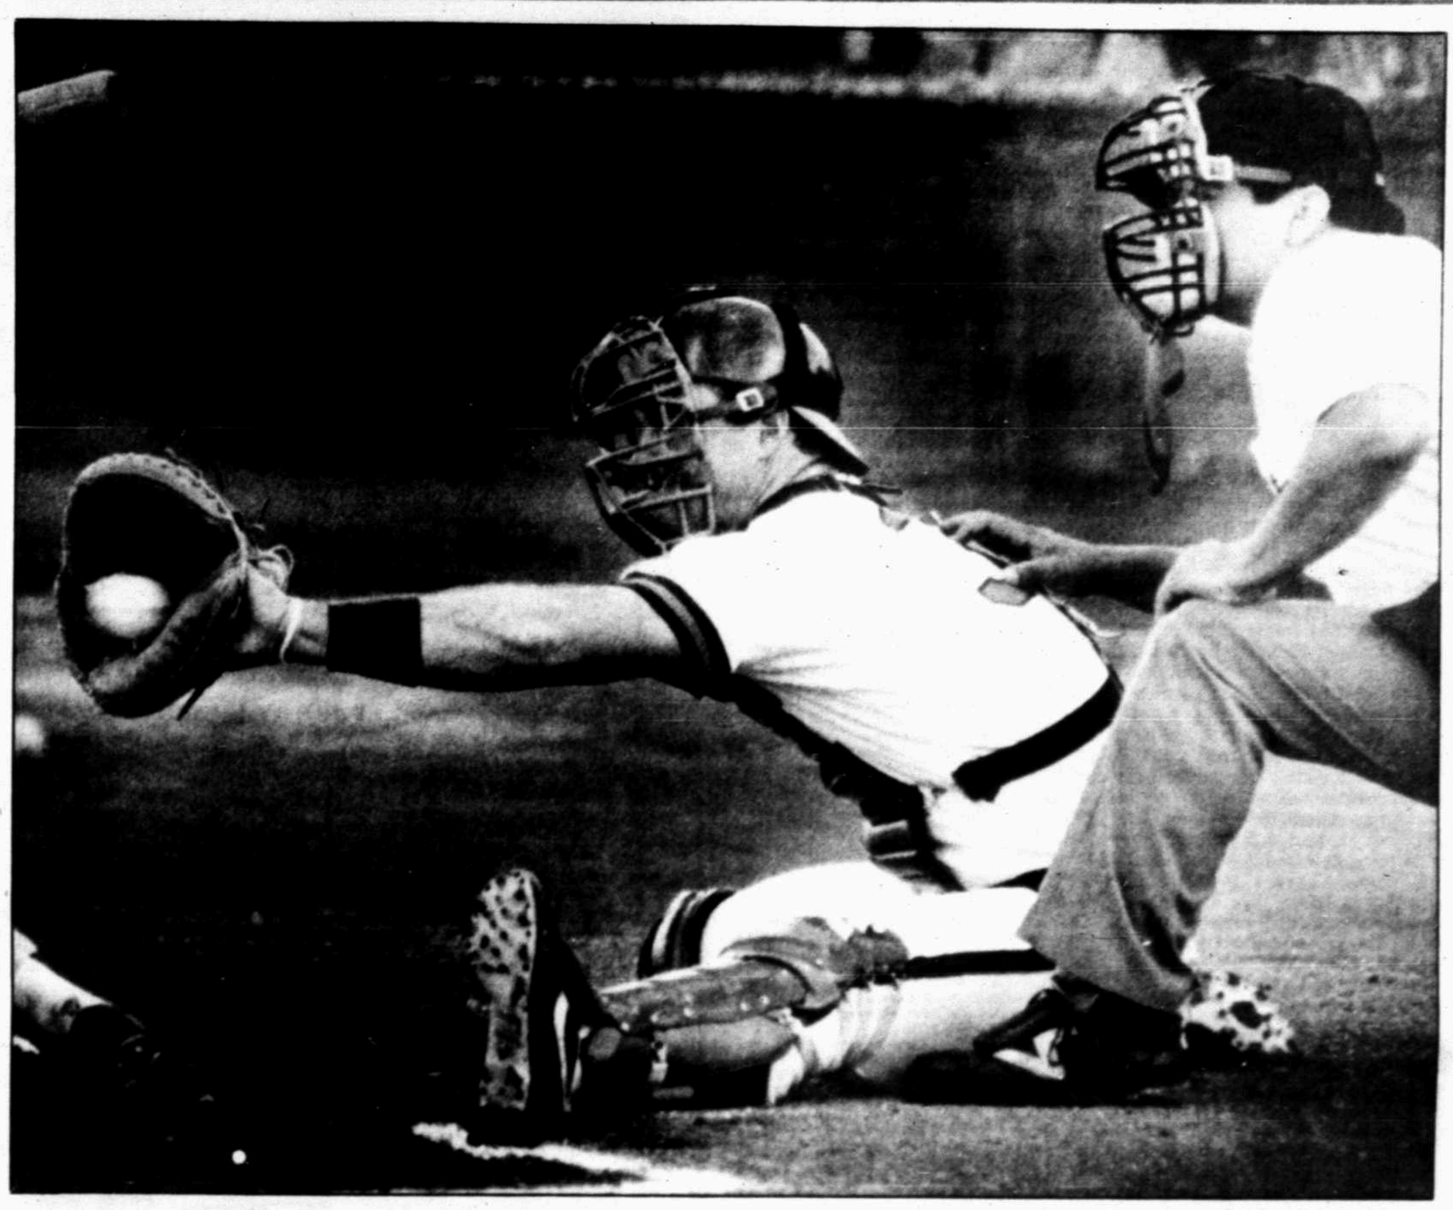

"I was hoping that the wind would help it get out," said Randall after the game. "I really didn't hit it that good, but with the wind blowing, I was hoping for the best. The ball got in on me a little bit and I didn't get it good enough. He (El Paso reliever Jay Aldrich) was throwing harder than I thought."

KEVIN KING blasted his 24th homer of the season in the third for two runs and Pat Keedy connected in the seventh, another two-run blast.

But El Paso had done its damage early, scoring 13 runs in the first five innings, including six in the second. LaVell Freeman and Billy Joe Robidoux, a Milwaukee major leaguer here on rehabilitation, both hit homers in the fourth and Todd Brown, who has seven RBI in two nights against the Angels, hit one in the fifth.

The Diablos didn't score again, but by then they were probably worn out from running around the bases early.

Ryan strong after stint on DL; Astros blank Dodgers

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Nolan Ryan was not programmed to pitch a complete-game no-hitter against Los Angeles on Tuesday night, but he came close enough to scare the Dodgers.

It was predetermined that Ryan would throw no more than 100 pitches in his first start since emerging from the disabled list.

And Ryan made the most of it, pitching 5⅓ no-hit innings and finishing six innings with a two-hitter, en route to a 3-0 victory.

He also emerged with renewed faith in his sore right elbow.

"I was as surprised as anyone that my control was as good as it was," said Ryan, 8-7, who walked two batters. "It was definitely a mental uplift because of the duress I've been under.

"I had apprehensions going into the game. When things are going well, you don't want to come in and be a down note."

The Astros defeated the Dodgers for the second game in the four-game series.

Astros Manager Hal Lanier could have been faced with the possibility of lifting Ryan with a no-hitter intact.

"He was coming out regarldless, I need him in September," Lanier said. "I would not have left him in. One game or a no-hitter is not that important."

New York Met Gary Carter starts a head first slide into third base against Philadelphia Tuesday.

Dodger second baseman Steve Sax got the first hit off Ryan.

"I don't ever doubt anything that he does," Sax said. "He's one of the best ever. It's like he never left. He was in top form.

"It was just a fast ball. I knew he was going to come at me with something hard. I didn't hit it very hard, it got in on me a little bit."

Ryan, 8-7, also gave up a hit to Bill Madlock in the sixth, but struck out Len Matuszek to end the inning. He was replaced at the start of the seventh by Charlie Kerfeld, who got his fifth save.

Ryan struck out six in six innings, and did not allow a baserunner until he walked Mike Scioscia in the fourth. Ryan had been on Houston's 15-day disabled list with recurring elbow problems.

He first went on the disabled list in June with a sprained colateral ligament in his right elbow. After returning on June 24, he compiled a 4-1 record being disabled again.

Phillies 3, Mets 1

PHILADELPHIA — A two-run third-inning triple by Von Hayes and the six-hit pitching of Kevin Gross led the Philadelphia Phillies to a victory over the New York Mets.

Gross, 8-9, struck out a career-high 10 and walked three in pitching his sixth complete game. The Phillies ended the six-game winning streak of Rick Aguilera, 6-4, who allowed only two hits in six innings. The Phillies got only three hits on the night.

Trailing 1-0, Philadelphia went ahead in the third with the help of an error by third baseman Howard Johnson. Gary Redus opened with a walk and reached second when Johnson booted Juan Samuel's slow roller. Hayes then tripled to right and came home on Mike Schmidt's sacrifice fly.

Cubs 3, Pirates 1

CHICAGO — Leon Durham hit his 12th homer to break a fifth-inning tie and drove in the insurance run an inning later, and Lee Smith picked up his 22nd save with two innings of shutout relief as the Chicago Cubs beat the Pittsburgh Pirates.

National League

Scott Sanderson, 6-9, went seven innings, allowed six hits, walked none and struck out six in recording his first victory since July 18, breaking a personal three-game losing streak.

Pittsburgh's Larry McWilliams, 2-8, gave up eight hits and three runs in 5⅓ innings. Barry Bonds led off the game with his 12th home run of the year for Pittsburgh.

Expos 10, Cardinals 3

MONTREAL — Expos rookie Bob Sebra pitched his first career complete game, and Andre Dawson and Tim Raines drove in four runs each as Montreal routed the St. Louis Cardinals.

Sebra, 2-2, backed by a 16-hit Montreal attack, allowed eight hits and struck out six while walking one.

The Expos scored three runs in the first inning against John Tudor, 11-6, who lost for the first time since July 10. Luis Rivera drew a lead-off walk and Mitch Webster doubled him to third. Raines singled home two runs and scored on a double by Dawson.

Pressure is replacing a legend

BROWNWOOD (AP) — Brownwood football coach Randy Allen asked superintendent James Lancaster how he'd feel if the Lions didn't win in 1986.

"He told me, 'Sure I'll love you, and I'll miss you, too,'" Allen said.

Lancaster was kidding, of course, but there will be few football coaches in Texas feeling the pressure as much as Allen.

He's succeeding the legendary Gordon Wood.

At Brownwoood, Wood won seven state championships and retired with 405 victories — the most of any football coach in America.

Allen coached at Ballinger, where he won four district championships in five years and had a record of 44-15-2.

"The pressure following Coach Wood is there," said Allen, whose team began fall workouts Monday. "There's no doubt about it, everybody is talking about it. Brownwood supports and understands the value of football, but they do have high standards.

"My main concern is what God wanted from me. I don't think I'd be here if God didn't want me here. If I was looking at the circumstances and not the Lord, then I would be scared," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

ALLEN, A Southern Methodist graduate, played at Abilene Cooper under Merill Green. When Green moved to Bryan, Allen was as an assistant there.

Green said he has no doubts Allen will be able to handle any pressure he feels at Brownwood.

"I felt Randy had a tougher job at Ballinger," Green said. "That was once one of the top programs in the state, but it had been down for a while, and the people there were living in the past."

Allen's first priority is the players. They grew up dreaming about playing for Wood, anxiously awaiting the day they could put on the maroon jersey. Now Wood is retired and those players are coached by a man they probably had never heard of before Christmas.

"The players are the ones it was important that I develop a real solid relationship with, and they've been very receptive," Allen said. "Our primary concern is getting the players to play up to their potential and have fun. As long as you can keep your players' confidence and keep them playing hard, that's what counts."

WHEN ALLEN applied for the job at Brownwood, one of the things that impressed him was the players.

"Our players are high-achievers; they're very confident in their ability," Allen said. "The youngsters in this town are excited to be Brownwood Lions. Anywhere football is important, that's where a coach likes to be."

1906 — Jack Taylor of the Chicago Cubs was knocked out of the box by the Brooklyn Dodgers in the third inning. This ended a string of 187 complete games and 15 relief games that Taylor had finished without relief help.

1910 — In a unique statistical game, the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Pittsburgh Pirates played to an 8-8 tie. Each team had 38 at bats, 13 hits, 12 assists, two errors, five strikeouts, three walks, one hit batsman and one passed ball.

1948 — Satchel Paige, at the age of 42, tossed his first major league complete game against the Chicago White Sox. Paige gave up only five hits en route to 5-0 victory.

Proposition 48 sidelines two Tech freshman

LUBBOCK (AP) — Proposition 48 has sidelined two Texas Tech freshmen football players and the eligibility of a third is pending, university officials said.

Running back Charles Lott of Electra and wide receiver Richard Ross of Lubbock Estacado did not meet Proposition 48 requirements and will miss this season, officials said in a statement released Tuesday.

Defensive back Donald Harris of Waco Jefferson-Moore is awaiting an NCAA ruling, expected this week, on his eligibility under the new academic requirements for college athletes.

Proposition 48 is a new NCAA rule requiring minimum college entrance test scores and high school grade-points for freshman eligibility.

Meanwhile, Baylor football coach Grant Teaff announced Tuesday that he expects several of his incoming freshmen to be declared ineligible.

Brewers' Braggs a power hitter against Rangers

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Milwaukee Brewers rookie outfielder Glenn Braggs calls himself a power hitter, and while he has yet to prove it to other teams in the league, he has convinced the Texas Rangers of that fact.

Braggs, called up from the minor leagues after the mid-July All-Star break, homered twice Tuesday night in leading the Brewers to a 7-2 victory over the Rangers.

The homers were Nos. 2 and 3 for Braggs, and all three have been at the expense of Ranger hurlers.

"They've just thrown me good pitches to hit, and I've hit them hard," said Braggs, who also singled during Milwaukee's five-run second that made it easy for right-hander Tim Leary to win his ninth game of the season against 11 losses.

"I consider myself a power hitter, but I hit a lot of line drives," said Braggs, who spent the first half of the season at Vancouver in the Pacific Coast League. "I hit a lot of balls that hit the wall. Tonight they went over."

Both his home runs came off left-hander Mike Mason, who replaced starter Charlie Hough, 9-7, during the Brewers' five-run second.

Robin Yount had three hits and two RBI for the Brewers, including a two-run single in the second.

A three-base error by right fielder Ruben Sierra opened the door to the big inning and the Brewers followed with singles by Rob Deer and Braggs, walks to Charlie Moore and Paul Molitor that forced in a run, Yount's two-run single and an RBI single by Cecil Cooper.

That finished Hough, who failed for the sixth straight time to win his 10th game.

Cooper's hit extended his hitting streak to nine straight games.

Braggs touched Mason for home runs in the third and sixth, making it 7-0.

"I didn't expect to be up here this season," said Braggs, who was hitting .360 with 15 homers and 75 RBIs in 90 games at Vancouver before getting the call. "And after the success I had in triple-A, a lot of people expect me to hit one out every time I come to the plate.

"Once I've been around the league for a while, the numbers will come."

Tigers 7, White Sox 3

DETROIT — Mike Heath and Chet Lemon homered as the Detroit Tigers spoiled four-time Cy Young winner Steve Carlton's AL debut with a victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Carlton's start overshadowed the work of Mark Thurmond, 3-1, who checked the White Sox on five hits over eight innings.

Carlton, 41, was signed off waivers about three hours before the game. But the Tigers hammered him, scoring six runs on seven hits in his three innings.

Carlton, who came into the game with 4,000 career strikeouts, fanned four, making Darnell Coles his first AL victim. Carlton walked two and had one wild pitch.

Heath hit his first home run with Detroit in the first inning. In the third, Lemon hit a three-run homer, making it 6-0.

A's 3, Mariners 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mike Davis homered on the first pitch in the bottom of the 10th inning to give the Oakland A's the victory over the Seattle Mariners, who turned a triple play in the ninth inning.

Seattle's Mickey Brantley tied the game with his first major-league homer leading off the ninth. Brantley had gone hitless in 13 at-bats since tripling in his first at-bat last Saturday.

Davis' 12th homer of the season was off Pete Ladd, 7-4. It made a winner of Jay Howell, 2-4.

Seattle turned their second triple play of the season in the ninth after Bruce Bochte walked and Dave Kingman bunted for single.

Both Bochte and Kingman were running when third baseman Domingo Ramos caught a line drive by Carney Lansford. Ramos threw to second baseman Harold Reynolds, who fired to first.

Blue Jays 3, Orioles 0

BALTIMORE — Jesse Barfield took the American League lead with his 29th homer while driving in three runs and Jim Clancy pitched a four-hitter as Toronto defeated Baltimore.

Clancy, 13-6, allowed only singles, did not walk a batter and struck out five as the Orioles lost for the sixth time in seven games.

Barfield hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning off Scott McGregor, 8-11, breaking a tie with Oakland's Dave Kingman for the home run leadership.

Barfield's grounder drove in the first Toronto run in the fourth. Barfield was thrown out on a fine play by shortstop Cal Ripken; Lloyd Moseby scored from third.

Royals 5, Red Sox 1
Royals 6, Red Sox 5

KANSAS CITY — Jorge Orta hit a two-run homer in a three-run sixth inning that lifted Kansas City to victory over Boston and a sweep of a twi-night doubleheader.

Frank White doubled in three runs and Darryl Motley doubled in two as the Royals took the opener. The start of the doubleheader was delayed one hour and 12 minutes by rain.

Boston's lead in the AL East was cut to 3½ games.

Mark Gubicza, 6-5, allowed seven hits in 7⅔ innings, as Kansas City won three straight for the first time since mid-June. Dan Quisenberry finished for his 10th save.

Yankees 6, Indians 4

NEW YORK — Rickey Henderson, Don Mattingly and Mike Easler hit solo home runs, powering the New York Yankees past the Cleveland Indians.

Henderson led off the Yankees' first inning with his 21st homer of the season, the sixth time he has started a game with a home run. One out later, Mattingly homered, also his 21st.

Easler, whose RBI double capped a three-run first against Ken Schrom, hit his 11th homer in the fifth against Rich Yett, giving the Yankees a 6-4 lead.

Angels 5, Twins 4

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Doug DeCinces singled over a five-man infield with the bases loaded in the 12th inning, lifting California to a victory over Minnesota.

Minnesota reliever Ron Davis, 2-6, started the 12th by yielding consecutive singles by Wally Joyner and Brian Downing, which put runners at first and third. Davis intentionally walked Reggie Jackson, then was relieved by Roy Lee Jackson.

ANGELS

El Paso scored 11 runs off Angel starter Sherman Corbett in the first three-plus innings of work, cranking out 12 hits in the process. Corbett lost for the 10th time this year.

Randall says the Angels never thought about giving up, even when they were down 13-3.

"We had a club house meeting before the game and decided we would keep swinging no matter what the score was," said Randall. "El Paso is the best hitting team in the league and they have the figures to prove it. You just have to outscore them and we kept plugging away. It just wasn't enough this time, so we have to come out Wednesday and try again."

Heath had a four hit night and is six for nine in two games against El Paso. Coachman had three hits and needed only a homer in his last two at-bats to hit for the cycle. Coachman hit his first homer of the year Monday against El Paso, but wasn't thinking of a repeat performance.

"To tell the truth, I didn't know I had a chance at the cycle. I sure wasn't going to the plate with a homer in mind. I would have taken a double, but I didn't get anything," said Coachman.

Coachman flied to right in the eighth and grounded to short in the ninth where El Paso shortstop Keith Smith made a great play to nip Coachman at first.

Pete Kendrick (12-6) picked up the victory, and has won his last five decisions. He gave up six runs, but had the big lead. Jay Aldrich got his 16th save, despite giving up two runs.

It might be a better promotion to pile a few pitchers on top of Dynomite's exploding coffin...For what it's worth, Dan Murphy (6-2) and Cam Walker (5-1) will pitch for the Diablos today while Midland will counter with Bryan Price (0-1) and Doug Banning (4-5). The way this series is going, none of the above are expected to be around when its over...As if the Angels didn't have enough pitching woes, top reliever Dewayne Buice has been called up to Triple A Edmonton, carrying his 14 saves with him. Buice will be replaced by Rich Carter from Palm Springs today...Midland's John Hotchkiss played right field for the second night in a row. He has now played six positions this year, including third base, shortstop, second base, first base and pitcher. He is also the bulipen catcher...El Paso has won six games in a row and now own a 3½-game lead over San Antonio, who lost to Beaumont Tuesday...Midland has lost six in a row...The Diablos have now hit homers in 10 consecutive games and Steve Stanicek increased his batting streak to 14 games...Heath is hitting over .370 this year against El Paso...

Padres 4, Braves 3

ATLANTA — Bruce Bochy hit a two-run double in a three-run seventh inning to break up a scoreless pitching duel between LaMarr Hoyt and Zane Smith, and the San Diego Padres held on to defeat the Atlanta Braves.

Hoyt, 6-8, had lost four straight decisions and had not won since July 13. He allowed five hits in six innings as the Padres won for only the second time in their last eight games and for just the third time in 12 against Atlanta. Hoyt walked three and struck out two. Rich Gossage worked the last two innings for his 20th save.

Smith, 7-11, had given up just three singles before Tony Gywnn opened the seventh with a double. After an out, Kevin McReynolds walked and Steve Garvey, who had three hits, scored Gwynn with an RBI double. Bochy followed with a double to right that scored McReynolds and Garvey.

Giants 2, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — An error by rookie shortstop Kurt Stillwell on Dan Gladden's bases-loaded grounder let in the go-ahead run in the sixth inning, and the San Francisco Giants made it stand up for a victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Vida Blue, 9-6, pitched the first five innings, giving up four hits while striking out two and walking three. Scott Garrelts worked the final 2⅓ for his fourth save.

Bill Gullickson, 8-8, blanked the Giants on five hits until the sixth, when Bob Brenly and Bob Melvin singled with two outs. Mike Aldrete, riding a 7-for-15 hitting streak, came off the bench to double home Brenly with the tying run. Luis Quinones was intentionally walked to load the bases before Stillwell failed to glove Gladden's grounder up the middle.

ALLEN

Off the field, Allen is quiet and low key, hardly ever raising his voice. On the practice field, he becomes active and intense, constantly shouting encouragement to his players, jumping in where needed, even going so far as to play defensive back covering his receivers.

"I like the tempo of our practices to be pretty high-pitched," Allen said. "I like to be organized, and I like to get a lot done in a short period of time."

Walker unsigned, but ready to play

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Running back Herschel Walker made his first appearance at the Dallas Cowboys' training camp on Tuesday with his agent in tow, and said he will be back to play soon.

"I'd like to get everything under way right away. I'm ready to play," Walker said during a press conference on the California Lutheran University campus. "I can't use my ability sitting at home. I'd like to be here as soon as possible.

"Dallas has a very complicated offense, so I think the sooner the better. It's urgent in the sense that you want to get prepared, so I am able to give 110 percent when I get on the field."

Despite all of the indications, Walker wouldn't say he definitely will play for the Cowboys this season.

DALLAS — Kevin Brooks, who was competing for the starting defensive tackle job againt John Dutton, underwent arthroscopic surgery for a dislocated knee cap on Tuesday.

Brooks will miss six to eight weeks, including the regular season opener against the New York Giants Sept. 8, said Dr. Pat Evans, who performed the operation.

Brooks was injured in the first quarter of a 20-0 exhibition loss to San Diego Saturday. Brooks was the Cowboys No. 1 draft pick in 1985 out of the University of Michigan.

In other news from the Dallas training camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif., the Cowboys signed three USFL players, Jerry Parrish, a wide receiver and kick returner who played with Orlando; Perry Kemp, a wide receiver who played with Jacksonville; and Jeff Spek, a tight end who played with New Jersey...

SAN ANGELO — Offensive tackle Don Maggs reported to the Houston Oilers training camp Tuesday to undergo a physical examination as contract negotations to sign the player continued.

Maggs, who played with the USFL's New Jersey Generals, cannot participate with the team because he has not signed a contract, but he can work out for personnel director Mike Holovak and the coaches.

The Generals gave the Oilers permission to negotiate with Maggs, but they said the team cannot sign him unless they buy out his contract. The Oilers need an offensive lineman because Harvey Salem has refused to report to training camp and said he wants to be traded. The 6-foot-5, 275-pound offensive tackle was the Oilers second pick in the 1984 supplemental draft of USFL and CFL players...

CARLISLE, Pa. — The Washington Redskins have come to terms with quarterback Doug Williams, who played two seasons in the USFL after a five-year stint with Tampa Bay.

Redskins GM Pete Beathard said Williams would sign a contract as soon as he passes his physical.

Wide receiver Clarence Verdin, who caught 84 passes for the USFL's Houston Gamblers in 1985, is also expected to sign.

Baseball

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bret Saberhagen, the AL Cy Young award winner last year, had his disappointing 1986 season continue Tuesday as Kansas City placed the right-hander on the 15-day disabled list.

Although the Royals did not release any information about the nature of Saberhagen's injury, he has complained recently of a sore shoulder. In his most recent outing, Saberhagen lasted 1⅔ innings against New York, allowing two runs on two hits, while walking two.

Saberhagen was 20-6 last season with a 2.87 ERA and was named MVP of the World Series, which the Royals won in seven games over St. Louis. This year the 22-year-old is 6-10 with a 4.30 ERA...

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The California Angels honored Rod Carew Tuesday night at Anaheim Stadium by retiring his No. 29 jersey...

Yeoman's name good for quick credit?

HOUSTON (AP) — Former University of Houston football player Lonell Phea said Tuesday he handed a credit card he obtained by using Coach Bill Yeoman as a reference over to NCAA investigators probing the school's athletic program.

Phea, a wide receiver for the Cougars from 1979-81, told KRIV-TV, Houston, he obtained a jewelry store credit card in 1979 by using Yeoman, the school's head football coach, as a reference.

"We applied for a credit card and the guy asked who we were using for reference," Phea said. "We said 'Bill Yeoman.' I went to the mail four days later and it (credit card) was there. I was stunned."

Phea said he used the card only once to purchase a pair of earrings for about $180. Phea said he never received a bill for the purchase.

"I wondered about it (not receiving a bill) but I guess I used a man's name for reference and I figured everything was okay," Phea said. "I never got a bill for it."

Phea was one of four former players who said in March they had received payments from Cougar coaches, including Yeoman.

School officials recently completed an in-house investigation into the school's football program, but have declined to reveal its results.

Houston Chancellor Richard Van Horn labeled Phea's latest accusations as "ancient history."

"Obviously, that's outside the time I've been here," said Van Horn, chancellor since Sept. 1, 1983. "Whatever happened back then we can't do anything about it now.

"I'm very comfortable that there has been no pattern that extends to the present," he said.

Van Horn said the next step in the probe would be to await the arrival of NCAA investigators.

"We've said we will cooperate fully with the NCAA," Van Horn said.

SOME PEOPLE BUY AIR CONDITIONERS LIKE THERE'S NO TOMORROW.
When it's time to replace your old air conditioner, it'll probably only take you a little while to find a new one that looks pretty good and doesn't cost much. But it'll take a lot longer to realize a quick bargain is likely to cause a slow burn on your wallet every month.
A high-efficiency air conditioner could make a difference in your cooling costs this summer and every summer. A high-efficiency choice means steady savings because you're getting the same amount of cooling using less electricity than with a low-efficiency unit. On top of this, you'll get a valuable rebate from your electric company if your central air conditioner or window unit meets our Energy Action standards.
See your recognized Energy Action air conditioning contractor or dealer for help in choosing a high-efficiency air conditioner or heat pump. Tomorrow, you'll be way ahead of the game.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your personal and professional relationships become much more fulfilling. An economic turnaround helps both business and personal finances. Invest in the future. Implement plans you recently proposed. They will bring both glamour and extra cash your way. You will be able to take advantage of a golden opportunity.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Jackee Harry of "227" and "Another World," New York Times humorist Russell Baker, Kansas City pitcher Mark Gubicza, circus owner John Ringling North, "Kate & Allie's" Susan St. James, former Baltimore Orioles manager Earl Weaver, author John Galsworthy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Artistic projects make this a wonderful week. Get off to a fast start this morning. There is still time to tuck in a relaxing summer vacation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your ingenuity causes old bosses to wake up and ask you back. Be sure deal is one you can live with. You will be intimately involved in what child begins. Travel for information.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make the most of a challenge. A job opportunity comes to someone searching for a second chance. Large corporations may hold more appeal than family businesses. Romance could have you a bit confused.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A loving gesture from a partner at a distance has you walking on air. A savings campaign will eventually produce big dividends. You feel good about your efforts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not offend someone who can help you by acting haughty. Study money management techniques that will help you stretch your funds. Be true to your high ideals. Avoid compromising your principles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Today's events improve your chances for forming a successful partnership. Get out and socialize more. Retirement does not mean you no longer set goals and pursue them aggressively.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make your own decisions and your money will begin to work for you. Broaden your horizons by socializing this evening. Nit-picking could land you in hot water with loved one. Avoid nagging.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Improve your personal appearance and your self-confidence will grow. Extra effort on your part will bring new monetary gains. You may have to bend over backwards to win the financial support you need.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There is no profit in crying over split milk. Settle on a positive solution to a problem and take whatever action is necessary. Staying financially solvent is the key to domestic harmony.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Although first impressions are important, they could be misleading today. Be on your guard if someone suggests changes in money mangement. Tried-and-true approaches still work best.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not give up! Business losses are purely temporary. Mate will turn to you for encouragement. Offer your wholehearted support. Follow through on any promises you make.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Teamwork is essential to get a faltering program back on track. Take steps to insure that you will have positive people around you when the chips are down. Determination makes you a winner!

N IS FOR NEGATIVE INFERENCE

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠A 10 8 2 ♡8 4 ◇A Q 10 4 ♣J 6 4
WEST ♠K Q J 6 4 ♡A J 3 ◇K 7 6 5 ♣K		EAST ♠9 7 3 ♡K 10 6 5 2 ◇9 8 3 ♣9 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	Pass
2 ♣	2 ◇	3 ♣	3 ♠
4 ♣	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

Just as declarer can infer the location of a key card from the bidding and play, he can draw a negative inference from the failure of the defenders to take certain actions. This hand was played by Philadelphian Arthur Robinson, who with Robert Jordan formed one of the great American pairs of the 1960s.

When one spade was passed round to him, Robinson naturally balanced with two clubs. When he later competed with four clubs, his partner judged that his diamond honors were well placed and improved the value of his hand, so he went on to five clubs.

West led the king of spades and, since declarer had no way to prevent losing two hearts even if he could get one discard on dummy's diamonds, it was obvious that the fate of the contract hinged on bringing in the trump suit without loss—the diamond finesse was almost sure to succeed because of West's bidding.

Robinson took the ace of spades and led the jack of clubs. The percentages favor a finesse in the suit, but when East played low declarer shot up with the ace to fell the singleton king. As expected, the king of diamonds was onside and 11 tricks were soon reeled in.

What made Robinson apparently go against the odds? He did not peek and needed no magic. Since West did not lead the king of hearts to take a look at dummy before deciding how to conduct the defense, Robinson concluded that he did not hold both high honors. Therefore, East could not have the king of clubs! He had passed his partner's one spade opening bid and he was "known" to hold either the ace or king of hearts. The only hope for the contract, therefore, was that West's king was unguarded.

Father of tax-cutting Proposition 13 dies in California from blood disorder

Jarvis

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Howard Jarvis, the acerbic conservative whose Proposition 13 slashed billions of dollars in California property taxes and sparked similar revolts around the country, has died at age 82.

Jarvis died Tuesday night at Midway Hospital, where he had been admitted Aug. 5 for a blood disorder, said Joel Fox, executive director of the California Tax Reduction Movement.

Born Sept. 22, 1903, the son of a Utah Supreme Court justice, Jarvis was an unsuccessful political candidate and tax-cut advocate until 1978, when Proposition 13 won by a landslide in California, cutting $7 billion in property taxes.

Although Proposition 13's success sparked revolts by middle-class taxpayers in many other states, the national tax rebellion he had envisioned never materialized.

Paul Gann, who co-sponsored the initiative, recalled Jarvis as being ferocious in debate.

"We had the entire bureaucracy to fight," Gann said from his Sacramento-area home. "In trying to pass Proposition 13, they turned all the big guns on us.

"When we were together in a debate, it was a thrill. The man was tremendous under pressure. I always felt comfortable debating any two people with him at my side."

Jarvis, a retired businessman, often shocked his critics with his acid tongue, often sprinkling his language with four-letter words and labeling politicians "popcorn-ball legislators" and "marinated bureaucrats."

"I would increase the fire and police budgets and cut the hell out of everything else," he said in 1977.

After the 1978 landslide, Jarvis became a folk hero of sorts, even getting a bit part in the 1980 hit comedy movie "Airplane."

"When I walk into a restaurant everyone gets up and cheers," he said shortly after Proposition 13's victory.

Until he was hospitalized last week, Jarvis was campaigning for a new tax-cutting initiative on the Nov. 3 ballot and against a new term on the state Supreme Court for Chief Justice Rose Bird, Fox said.

Proposition 62 seeks to restore elements of Proposition 13 that were overturned by the state's high court. Under the new proposal, a local special tax would need approval from two-thirds of voters or two-thirds of the governing body and a simple majority of voters.

Jarvis' successes also included a 1982 initiative that fully indexed state income tax brackets to make up for inflation.

But in 1980, voters rejected his Proposition 9, which would have cut state income taxes in half. Another rejection came in 1984, when voters turned down another Jarvis initiative described as an attempt to close court-created loopholes in Proposition 13.

Proposition 13 rolled back property tax assessments to 1975 values and imposed a maximum 2 percent annual increase. It also required a two-thirds majority vote for any new or increased local tax.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Actor Louis Gossett Jr. says he is "seriously looking" for a play that he could perform in Mexico someday.

Here filming "Firewalker" with action-adventure star Chuck Norris, Gossett said Tuesday he has kept in touch with Mexican performers and producers since filming the television miniseries "Sadat" in Mexico three years ago.

"I've been invited," he said in an interview with The Associated Press. "I'm seriously looking."

Gossett, who won an Academy Award for best supporting actor for his performance in an "An Officer and a Gentleman," said he has been working on his Spanish.

"I still have that dream to know enough Spanish to do theater here," he said.

Gossett said he would like someday to be an "international" actor like the legendary Paul Robeson, able to perform anywhere.

Eastwood

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Clint Eastwood's decision to alter the film "Heartbreak Ridge" was praised by Korean War veterans and others who had protested its portrayal of a Marine as a hero in a battle fought by the Army.

A line in the Warner Bros. film has been dubbed to show Eastwood's character, a Marine gunnery sergeant, was in the Army when he won a medal for a bloody 1951 battle.

"I certainly am satisfied," Bill Temple, coordinator of the Veterans for a National Korean War Memorial, said Tuesday.

Some veterans of the 23rd Infantry Regiment of the 2nd Army Division had protested that the original script rewrote history. They said no Marine units fought in the bloody 1951 battle for Heartbreak Ridge.

Eastwood, who produced, directed and stars in the film, declined to change its title or plot. Joe Hyams, a Warner Bros. vice president, said the battle of Heartbreak Ridge was only remotely connected to the film story, which is about a Marine sergeant and his marital problems.

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles, who has been vacationing in the Mediterranean with Princess Diana and their two sons, went to Scotland to join his mother Queen Elizabeth II on a cruise through the Western Isles.

Diana, Prince William, 4, and Prince Harry, nearly 2, stayed on in Majorca, Spain, where they have been guests of the Spanish royal family since Thursday.

Charles had a longstanding arrangement to return to Britain before his wife and children, Buckingham Palace said Tuesday.

Among those on board the royal yacht Britannia were Charles' brother Andrew and his wife, the newlywed Duke and Duchess of York, as well as Prince Edward, youngest of the queen's children.

Greene

CHICAGO (AP) — Although it took two months, columnist Bob Greene didn't have to search too far to find the woman most resembling General Mills' newest Betty Crocker.

The Chicago Tribune columnist wrote Tuesday he was just about to give up the quest he began in June when he found Randi Morgan, a 39-year-old assistant director of a downtown art gallery.

"There was no doubt about it," Greene wrote. "All of those would-be Betty Crockers, sending their photographs from all those distant places, and it turns out that Betty Crocker — Randi Morgan — works less than a mile from my office."

Gold takes off again

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices jumped in volatile midmorning trading on European markets today. The U.S. dollar fell slightly in what dealers described as listless trading.

Following Monday's surge in gold prices and Tuesday's decline on a wave of profit-taking, gold prices took off again at midmorning.

In London, gold opened at a bid price of $385 a troy ounce, up from Tuesday's closing bid of $383.75.

The city's five major bullion dealers held lengthy deliberations before fixing a recommended gold price of $391.25 about three hours later.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, gold was selling at a bid $389 at noon, up from $384.50 late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold finished at a bid $382.80, down from Tuesday's $384.89.

Silver bullion prices were fractionally higher in London where the metal was selling at a bid $5.38 a troy ounce compared with $5.37 the previous day.

Dollar slips

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar gained slightly against the Japanese yen, closing at 154.25 yen compared with 154.05 yen late Tuesday.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

—2.0690 West German marks, down from 2.0715

—1.6680 Swiss francs, down from 1.6762

—6.7275 French francs, down from 6.7425

—2.3295 Dutch guilders, down from 2.3395

—1,424.50 Italian lire, down from 1,425.75

—1.3898 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3907

In London, the British pound gained against the dollar. It cost $1.4855 to buy one pound, more expensive than Tuesday's late price of $1.4835.

T-BILLS

Yields fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction to the lowest levels since 1977.

The Treasury Department sold $5.5 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.60 percent, down from 5.70 percent last week. Another $5.5 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.60 percent, down from 5.73 percent last week.

The rates for three-month bills were the lowest since Sept. 2, 1977, when they averaged 5.55 percent. Rates for six-month bills were the lowest since they sold for 5.36 percent on July 25, 1977.

The weekly auction had been scheduled to raise $13 billion, but this was reduced to $11 billion at the last minute in order to avoid exceeding the current $2.079 trillion debt limit.

Rising crude futures prices reflect bullish outlook

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil futures prices rose again, bolstered by technical factors, a bullish attitude in the market and indications that some OPEC nations are working to make the cartel's recent production cut agreement hold, analysts said.

Also affecting Tuesday's activity were reports that Iraq had bombed Iranian oil installations on Sirri Island, 350 miles south of Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal in the Persian Gulf, they said.

Since supplies of some Iranian oil would be removed from the market by the attack, some traders could have viewed it as a factor indicating higher future prices. More important, however, was the psychological impact of the attack on the market, said Peter Beutel, an analyst with Elder Futures Inc.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed at $15.35 per 42-gallon barrel, up 44 cents from Monday's $14.91 last price. September contracts for refined products were sharply higher.

Unleaded gasoline closed at 43.40 cents a gallon, up from 41.46 cents Monday, while heating oil closed at 42.25 cents a gallon, up from 40.94 cents.

Some analysts said Tuesday's trading was dominated by technical factors.

They noted that prices had stayed well above $14 during recent spells of selling, apparently leading many traders to believe that the near-term direction was upward on Tuesday.

As a result, much buying took place, only to ease in the afternoon, as traders sold contracts to profit from having bought them earlier at lower prices, analysts said.

William Byers, an analyst at Bear, Stearns & Co. also said there was a lot of short-covering in both contracts for September and later months. In a short sale, a trader sells borrowed oil, hoping to buy it back later at a lower price.

He also cited other factors behind the market's behavior.

"No matter what you think about the viability about the OPEC meeting, the news continues to be positive," he said. "Yesterday we saw Kuwait and Saudi Arabia taking steps to come into line with the accord, and seeing this, some people, who were skeptical a while ago, began coming into line now."

Many industry observers have questioned whether the agreement will hold, given the OPEC's long record of failures in that respect.

On Monday, however, the Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, a respected industry newsletter, reported that Saudi Arabia was indicating that it would not extend existing discounts for large purchases from September 1, when the OPEC agreement takes effect.

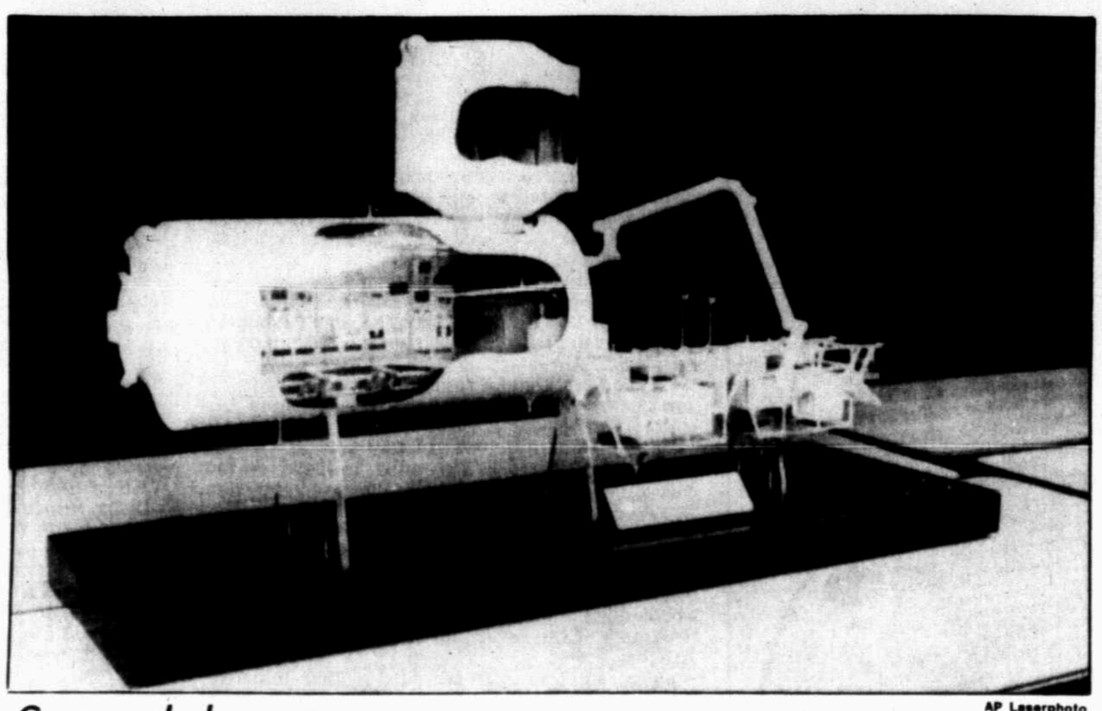

Quoting industry officials, PIW said that if this approach did not work, the kingdom would consider imposing a flat percentage reduction on the volumes of contracts.

Saudi Arabia is estimated to be producing about 6 million barrels a day now, and faces a new quota of 4.4 million barrels daily.

The newsletter also said Kuwait plans to cancel about 100,000 barrels daily of previously planned sales, while Qatar was planning a new pricing formula that would also discourage sales.

Kuwait, which had been producing an estimated 1.7 million barrels daily, now has a 900,000-barrel quota, while Qatar, which had been producing about 450,000 barrels daily, is limited to 280,000 barrels under the new agreement.

In another report, industry sources in Tokyo were quoted Tuesday as saying that Abu Dhabi had ordered at least some of the companies operating its oil fields to cut production by 40 percent in September from the levels maintained in August.

OPEC willing to abide by rules, minister says

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — OPEC's plan to cut oil output and bolster prices hinges on whether member countries comply with production quotas, but members now seem willing to abide by the rules, Venezuelan Energy Minister Arturo Hernandez Grisanti said Tuesday.

Flagrant violation of production quotas coupled with high non-OPEC oil production led Saudi Arabia and other cartel members to abandon their national output quotaslast December.

The resulting overproduction drove prices down by more than 50 percent, triggering a decision last week by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to reduce production to about 16.8 million barrels a day and reimpose output quotas during September and October.

"It is essential that OPEC countries abide by the decision," Hernandez Grisanti said as he outlined the action taken at a ministerial meeting in Geneva Aug. 4. "I perceived a willingness on the part of the members to comply."

He said it was significant that the measure received unanimous backing from OPEC's 13 member in contrast to other recent actions that received a majority vote but not the full support of the group.

A united front not only strengthens OPEC policies outside the cartel but "lightens the atmosphere within the organization," he said.

Hernandez Grisanti said Venezuela's compliance with its production quota of 1,555,000 barrels a day for the next two months means that the nation's average daily output for the year will decrease from an estimated 1,592,000 barrels to 1,586,000 barrels.

"If the OPEC decision results in a price increase of only 8 cents a barrel, that will make up for our lower export volume," Hernandez Grisanti said. He pointed out that price of some grades of crude oil already had climbed $3 a barrel since the OPEC meeting.

He said Venezuela had earned an average of $14 a barrel for its exports between January and July but that prices in the past week were some $2 higher.

Hernandez Grisanti said OPEC was forced to come up with an agreement on production quotas — which he termed a "temporary emergency measure" — because otherwise prices would have plunged to $5 a barrel or less.

Adherence to the quotas will be gauged by weekly reports members will be required to file, which will detail production, exports, shipping orders and quantities used in refineries, Hernandez Grisanti said.

A panel composed of delegates from each member country will remain in Vienna during September and October to continually review the reports, he said.

Hernandez Grisanti stressed that OPEC is not abandoning its effort to recapture a "fair share" of the world petroleum market and is continuing to work with non-OPEC members on regulating production.

Gasoline stocks show steep decline

NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's gasoline stocks declined by more than 5 million barrels last week even though production held steady and fuel imports more than tripled, the American Petroleum Institute reported Tuesday.

Supplies of distillate, used for home-heating oil and diesel fuel, built up in preparation for the winter heating season, the oil industry trade group said.

But crude oil inventories plummeted by almost 7 million barrels last week.

In the week ended Aug. 8, gasoline stocks dropped to 217.3 million barrels from 222.6 million barrels the week before and 226.7 million barrels in the same week last year.

Gasoline stocks usually decrease during the peak summer driving period, but last week's decline was one of the largest so far this season even though lower pump prices had been expected to trigger a sharp rise in U.S. gasoline demand.

Unleaded fuel, which accounts for more than 65 percent of the domestic gasoline market, slipped to 114.1 million barrels from 116.4 million barrels a week earlier but remained above the 111.3 million barrels in storage a year ago.

Gasoline production averaged 6.9 million barrels a day, unchanged from the previous week and up slightly from the 6.8 million barrel-a-day rate in the comparable 1985 week.

Gasoline imports shot up to 367,000 barrels a day from 169,000 barrels daily in the preceding week but trailed the 417,000 barrels a day reaching U.S. shores a year earlier.

Distillate stocks rose in keeping with normal seasonal trends to 118.9 million barrels from 116.6 million barrels the prior week and 117.3 million barrels in the same 1985 week.

Distillate production amounted to 2.9 million barrels day, the same rate as the week before but up from 2.6 million barrels a day in the year-earlier week.

Distillate imports increased to 305,000 barrels a day from 233,000 barrels daily in the previous week and only 75,000 barrels a day in the corresponding week last year.

Japan looking to import Alaskan oil

TOKYO (UPI) — Major Japanese oil companies are interested in importing oil from Alaska's Cook Inlet even though it will be more expensive than crude bought on international markets, state officials said Tuesday.

Loren H. Lounsbury, visiting commissioner for Alaska's Department of Commerce and Economic Development, sounded out executives from 19 Japanese oil refiners and trading companies this week on buying the oil, which was first made available for export in June.

Kazunaga Hayashi, a spokesman for the Alaska state office in Tokyo, said the companies, which include Mitsui and Co. and Mitsubishi Corp., expressed interest in buying Cook Inlet oil.

"It will be more expensive than oil bought elsewhere, but they didn't seem to mind," Hayashi said.

Japan, which has almost no natural resources, is wholly dependent on imported oil and has long sought to diversify its energy sources to ease an unhealthy dependence on Middle East crude. The collapse in oil prices and the rise of the Japanese yen have made some formerly cost-prohibitive sources more attractive.

Under Alaska state law, the price of Cook Inlet oil is to be set at the producer price offered in the oil market, plus platform-to-shore hauling charges, clearing and dehydration allowances and a premium to the state of around 3 percent of the producer price, Hayashi said.

"It's the premium that will make it more expensive than elsewhere," the spokesman for the Alaska state office said.

No export contracts have yet been signed between Alaska and the Japanese firms, however.

Cook Inlet, just off the coast of the southern Alaskan city of Anchorage, produces about 60,000 barrels of crude a day.

But the U.S. government restricts export volume of the Cook Inlet crude to only around 3,600 barrels a day, or about 1.31 million barrels a year, Hayashi said.

By contrast, Alaska's other major crude producing area, the rich Prudhoe Bay oil field to the north, produces about 1.7 million barrels a day.

Wickes makes hostile bid for Owens-Corning

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Retailing conglomerate Wickes Cos., rebuffed in a friendly takeover overture for Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., said it will begin a $2.1 billion hostile tender offer today for the 91.5 percent of the company it doesn't already own.

The $74-per-share tender offer is up from a $70 per share initial bid that Wickes made to Owens-Corning management last week.

Owens-Corning is the world's largest manufacturer of glass fiber materials and is a major producer of polyester resins. Wickes is primarily involved in lumber, building supplies, home-improvement centers and furniture.

Union Carbide workers reject sabotage claim

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A spokesman for Union Carbide employees in Bhopal disputed the company's claim that a disgruntled worker caused the 1984 gas leak that killed more than 2,000 people, the United News of India reported.

Madanlal Ranji, president of the Carbide Employees Union, said Monday the claim was an attempt by the Danbury, Conn., company to avoid responsibility for the tragedy, the news agency said.

More than 2,000 people were killed and 200,000 affected when lethal gas escaped from a Carbide pesticide plant in Bhopal on Dec. 3, 1984.

Steel production falls because of USX strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Steel production fell 2 percent in early August because of a work stoppage by the United Steelworkers union against USX Corp., the nation's largest steel producer, a trade group says.

The stoppage began last month when the steelmaker's 40-month labor contract expired.

Production fell to 1.212 million tons in the week ended Aug. 9 from the previous week's 1.237 million tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported Monday.

Chamber schedules Chinese art exhibit

By MELLA McEWEN

Midland is invited to an exhibit of art and artifacts brought back from Midland's sister city in China, Dongying.

The "MARCO POLOS OF MIDLAND" EXHIBIT will be held Aug. 19 from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building at Midland College. The showing is sponsored by the Midland-Dongying Sister City Association, and Chamber of Commerce president Joan Baskin promises it will be an opportunity to participate in the Sister City Association. "This relationship will open doors for cultural, educational and economic exchange and will benefit both communities," according to Baskin.

COMMERCIAL PLANT LEASING, 1300 W. Dakota Ave., is leasing more than plants.

According to owner Chris Dikmen, the company now leases commercial pay phones to individual businesses.

The Midland firm leases the phones, and contracts for installation and repair for leasees.

Dikmen also has begun leasing an air treatment system which was designed as a joint venture between the company that designed the air treatment system for the nuclear submarines and the Amway research and development division.

The system is the same as that used in hospital surgical suites and industrial clean rooms, removing dust and other particulate matters from the air. The portable unit has four and five fan speeds and cleans up to 150 cubic square feet of air a minute.

REFLECTIONS Hair Salon has moved from La Villita shopping center to Midland Plaza near Service Merchandise.

The new store has 1,400 square feet, and now has space for six operators, although only three are now working, according to co-owner John Jenni, who says the added space will allow the store to double its selection of jewelry and bags.

Local plumbers, contractors, electricians and builders no longer have to travel to Lubbock to shop at W.W. GRAINGER. The electrical wholesale company has just opened a office/warehouse at 4100 Allison Drive, southeast of the Midland Regional Airport, between Highway 80 and Interstate 20.

Terry Langford, manager, said the new store's territory stretches from San Angelo and Sweetwater back to Andrews, down through Pecos, and south to the Texas-Mexico border. He stressed that the company cannot sell to consumers, according to federal law. The store buys direct from the factory and sells the merchandise wholesale to contractors, electrical companies, builders, retailers, manufacturers, shops, and the like.

The Midland store employs Langford, and four others. "We feel confident in about the future of the Midland economy and we're here to stay," Langford said. W.W. Grainger, he noted, has $1 billion in sales annually.

Two Midland restaurants are adding new locations.

THE RIB JOINT is opening a second location at 4313 Illinois, across the street from Safeway. It will be sharing a building with Ray's Hardware. The new store will offer, besides its regular barbecue, such fare as hamburgers, chili dogs, and fajitas. The location should be open by the end of August.

EL JALISCO, 414 W. Texas, has opened a second El Jalisco on south Big Spring St., in the former Taco Plaza location. It has the same offerings as the El Jalisco location downtown.

COOPERS & LYBRAND's Business Reorganization Services Group has added a Midland office to its list of offices, which include New York, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Houston, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, San Francisco, San Jose and Seattle.

Harold Eldridge, managing partner of the Midland office said the services include assisting companies in creditor negotiations and implementing business plans in an effort to avoid bankruptcy.

Other services include working with companies to obtain settlements with creditors; providing consultation for companies who are in bankruptcy; functioning as an examiner if appointed by the court or selected by creditors, to investage a debtor's financial condition; providing Trustee assistance to help analyze a company's financial affairs; acting as an expert witness at hearings and trials; and other services such as appraisals, petroleum engineering reports and tax matters.

According to Eldridge, the reorganization group will be comprised of Bill Newkirk, a native Midlanders, and Ron Manney.

Mella McEwen is a business-oil writer for the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Marathon announces salary cuts

FINDLAY, Ohio (UPI) — Salaries at the Marathon Oil Co. will be cut by as much as 12 percent beginning Sept. 10, a company spokesman said.

Base salary for senior management employees will be reduced 12 percent and 6 percent for all other workers, spokesman William Ryder said Monday.

The cutbacks follow a series of layoffs and early retirements that cut the workforce by 1,420 workers in July.

Ryder said the latest cuts, attributed to falling oil prices, will be reinstated when business conditions permit.

The Findlay oil company said it will suspend its contributions to a profit sharing plan for hourly workers.

In addition, a merit pay program will be suspended and all merit raises previously granted this year will be rescinded, he said.

The move follows similar reductions announced earlier by Marathon's parent company, USX Corp. of Pittsburgh, Ryder said.

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Budget Rent a Car, the nation's fourth biggest car rental company, will be sold by Transamerica to an investment banking concern for $205 million as the first step in the insurance giant's planned divestiture of non-financial holdings, it was announced Monday.

The purchaser is Gibbons, Green, vanAmerongen Ltd. of New York and Los Angeles, a specialist in leveraged buyouts. No details were available on financing, which has not been completed, but top Budget executives are expected to become investors and to remain in their jobs.

Budget, which has been profitable every year since it was founded in Los Angeles in 1958, was considered the most attractive of the subsidiaries that San Francisco-based Transamerica had declared that it intends to sell.

Analysts welcomed the transaction, which was struck amid an improving rental-car market and fetched what E.F. Hutton analyst Michael Lewis called an "excellent" price. "We thought Budget would be the easiest sale, and this gets them off to a good start."

That leaves the company's airline, Transamerica Airlines, and its manufacturing arm, Transamerica Delaval, still up for sale. A spokesman said possible buyers have surfaced for both units, but analysts said neither would be easy to unload.

Transamerica, mirroring strategic changes at other conglomerates, announced in January that it intended to sell the three operations so that it could pay more attention to its main businesses of insurance and financial services. The three units contributed 19 percent of Transamerica's operating income last year.

Chairman and Chief Executive James R. Harvey said the sale of Budget "strengthens Transamerica's financial position for the planned expansion of its core insurance and financial services businesses."

While that suggests plans to use the proceeds for acquisitions, insurance analyst Gloria Vogel of Legg Mason Wood Walker said Transamerica needs to "clean up some balance sheets" and will probably use the money for that first.

"Then if they see a hot acquisition prospect, they'll grab it," the New York-based analyst said.

Transamerica spokesman Richard J. Olsen said the New York firm of Meridian Partners has voiced interest in acquiring the airlines unit, which consists of about 25 planes providing passenger and cargo charter flights and other specialized services. It has sold a dozen planes since 1983, and will sell the rest if no buyer is found for the ongoing business, Johnson said.

Johnson said the outcome of the talks with Meridian Partners could hinge on negotiations with the unions which represent the airline's employes. The potential buyer wants to slash labor costs to compete in the newly deregulated industry.

The sale of Budget Rent a Car will bring $205 million in cash and the assumption of the subsidiary's debt, while Transamerica receives warrants to buy back up to 10 percent of Budget for up to $500,000 any time in the next five years.

Transamerica said it would report an after-tax gain of about $50 million at the time of the closing, which is scheduled for Sept. 30. The deal is subject to completion of financing for the leveraged buyout, a form of purchase in which money is borrowed against the assets of the property being bought.

Gibbons, Green would not elaborate on the deal except to say it would retain Budget's current management and would fund expansion of the company, now based in Chicago.

Drivers can expect to see higher gasoline prices

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Wholesale gasoline prices have jumped in the week since OPEC agreed to curb production, and retail prices should quickly follow, probably with rises of a few cents a gallon, gasoline industry consultants and analysts said Tuesday.

Motorists "should definitely see a pass-through of the higher prices; it should be happening right now," said Jan C. Lundberg, president of Lundberg Survey Inc. of North Hollywood, Calif., which studies gasoline prices.

Lundberg said that prices from refiners to gasoline stations increased on average as much as 7 cents a gallon in the seven-day period that ended last Friday. But in some regions, prices have gone up by as much as 14 cents a gallon, he added.

A single national average wholesale price is not yet available, Lundberg said. Retail prices, which include federal, state and local taxes and dealer profit margins, are typically 25 to 30 cents higher than wholesale prices. For example, Lundberg said the average national retail price of all grades of gasoline last week was 86 cents a gallon.

None of the analysts would predict whether the increases would last more than a few weeks, when it should become clear whether the agreement by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will take root, which many of them doubt.

Currently gasoline is not in oversupply, as it has sometimes been this summer. The trend toward higher prices is likely to be bolstered by an industry report that came out Tuesday showing greater declines than expected in American inventories of crude oil and gasoline. The survey, conducted weekly by the American Petroleum Institute, found that crude oil inventories dropped by seven million barrels, to 334 million, from the week before. Gasoline stocks fell five million barrels, to 217 million.

Lundberg said that some of the increase in prices resulted from gasoline distributors restocking their inventories, which had been drawn down by a greater-than-expected demand in July. However, he and others said that the main cause of the price rises was the OPEC agreement, which caused "a perception of tightening supplies that has produced an extra incentive to replenish holdings."

Those interviewed said that the increase would quickly be passed through every stage in the distribution network that brings gasoline from refineries to service stations.

"Allowing for varying competitive situations on the street, these increases will be evident in two or three days," said Vic Rasheed, executive director of the Service Station Dealers of America. Refiners and middlemen can more easily pass along rises while service stations are likely to have to absorb some of the increases because of the intensely competitive nature of the business.

Rasheed estimated that major oil companies had increased the prices they charge gasoline suppliers and dealers by about 3 cents a gallon, while smaller oil companies were charging as much as 9 cents a gallon more. He said the gap between the two stemmed from the fact that smaller oil companies tend to buy not by contract, as their larger counterparts do, but from the spot market, where oil not under contract is traded and where any rise in crude oil prices is quickly reflected.

"It's being done on pure speculation," he added, referring to the belief of the companies that crude oil prices will continue to rise as the Sept. 1 effective date for the OPEC production accord nears.

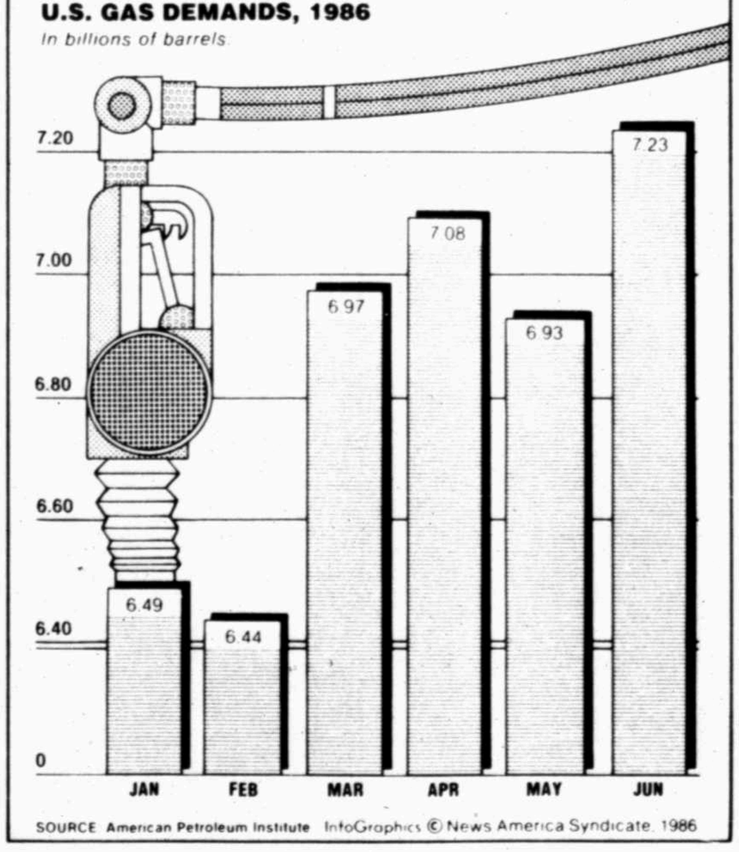

Tom Osborne, executive director of the Southeastern Independent Oil Marketers Association, whose members supply gasoline to 5,000 service stations in 12 states from Virginia to Texas, agreed. "It's not reacting to a real supply and demand situation, but to some people's perception of a future one," he said. "With a strong spot and futures market, speculation has a lot more to do with this than any real factors."

U.S. gasoline demand

Low prices at the gas pumps may have influenced U.S. gasoline demand in June, traditionally a month when vacation travel increases consumption. Motorists used 7.23 billion barrels in June, exceeding 1986's previous high, 7.08 billion barrels in April.

Competition forces IBM to cut computer prices

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

International Business Machines' most recent personal computer price cuts pass along to its direct corporate buyers the price advantages that consumers have been enjoying since low-priced compatible machines have been forcing a more competitive market.

The price cuts, which range from 16 percent to 22 percent, affect only IBM's low-end personal computer models and will produce savings averaging about $400 per machine for customers who buy from IBM's direct-sales force.

These reductions, which took effect Aug. 1, bring IBM's prices in line with the prices its franchised retail dealers have been charging in recent months, and most dealers say they are not worried.

"We've had five price cuts in the past six months" on the various models of the IBM Personal Computer, said a salesman at a ComputerLand store. "They can't hurt us."

IBM's sales force, which deals primarily with large business customers, will be able to sell the basic model PC with 256 kilobytes of memory and two floppy disk drives at $1,595, down from $1,995. Other machines, with different features that add to the price, were similarly discounted.

The price cuts do not apply to the more powerful PC-XT and PC-AT models, said an IBM spokeswoman. In recent months, IBM has cut its prices to dealers on those models as well.

"All we've done is make our own sales force competitive with the dealers," said Marilyn Mobley of IBM's Personal Computer division.

On the other hand, analysts said, dropping the list price on the PC will force some dealers who typically offer a 10 percent discount to cut further into their profit margins in order to compete for sales. Although such discounts are typically aimed at large corporate customers, the savings sometimes filter down to consumers.

Currently, prices for the basic PC model at IBM retailers, such as ComputerLand and Businessland, start at $1,595 but range as low as $1,400.

The dealers, by substituting non-IBM parts, such as different monitors, can cut the prices even further while continuing to make a profit. The same PC model sells for $1,295 at 47 St. Photo, a New York-based discount electronics store and mail-order chain that typically is among the lowest-price computer retailers.

The on-going price cuts are a reflection of the increasingly competitive market for personal computers. Numerous PC-compatible machines are on store shelves or are sold through the mail, many at lower prices or at comparable prices but with higher performance and memory levels than IBM's models. The XT and its compatibles are beginning to replace the PC as the best-selling microcomputers, dealers say.

Additionally, analysts believe that the company is attempting to reduce its inventory of the PC and may even make further price cuts in time for the pre-Christmas selling period. It is widely speculated that IBM will introduce a new version of the 5-year-old PC later this year or early next year, which would make the current PC model obsolete.

WHAT'S NEW IN BUSINESS

Suzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

A fish tale

Wanna' listen to a fish tale? It's a whopper! And its commercial aspects are of interstate proportions.

The world's biggest bait minnow farm grows 300 million minnows a year. They are raised in 6,000 surface acres of water in Arkansas and Louisiana. And every single minnow is fed nothing but Oklahoma-manufactured fish food.

The interstate aspects reach even farther. When the minnows reach bait size, they are shipped to anglers in everything from tank trucks to airplanes, via wholesalers in 33 states across the nation.

Grower of the minnows is the Anderson Minnow Farm, with 4,400 acres of minnows 17 miles east of Little Rock, Ark., and 1,600 acres near Mangham, La.

Manufacturer of the feed is the Shawnee Milling Co. of Shawnee, Okla., whose feed division provides specialty feeds for fish, gerbils, rabbits and exotic birds.

The daily feeding volume is determined by computer, based on about 3 percent of body weight. According to operations manager Bill Tenison, "The minnows at Anderson Fish Farm will consume up to 25 tons of feed a day, distributed by trucks equipped to blow it out over the water."

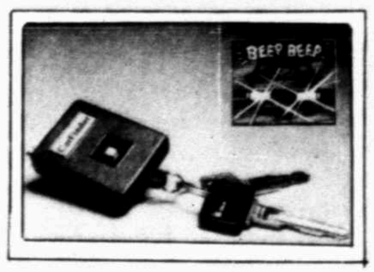

Boss, de axe! de axe!

Chrysler Corp. has given Ricardo Montalban the axe as spokesman for the company's 1987 line of automobiles.

The 65-year-old actor, who weathered 13 years with Chrysler, has been known mainly as spokesman for the Cordoba, a luxury model Chrysler recently discontinued. He also did television spots for the company's New Yorker, LeBaron and Fifth Avenue models.

Chrysler's decision to drop him was apparently based on his image. The company's 1987 advertising campaign will emphasize sportiness and economy, rather than the continental elegance the star represents.

Real attention-getter

According to the Criminal Justice Department's "National Crime Survey" nearly 500,000 crimes were committed in parking lots in 1985. But a new product by DesignTech International could eliminate some of the apprehension of walking through a deserted parking lot after dark.

CarFinder, which works up to 750 feet away, signals your car to "come alive" by honking its horn and flashing its lights.

At the push of your key-chain button the CarFinder will alert your car only, by virtue of a coded signal.

Attention grabbing assistance is only a button-push away with CarFinder.

Stores on wheels

A half-dozen candy red mobile "storefronts" daily zip around San Francisco's steep hills and crowded neighborhoods — delivering everything from bags of groceries to steaming gourmet dinners.

Dispatching the mobile fleet of mini-vans from an 1,800-square-foot warehouse in San Francisco's produce district is Mary Garvey, a 29-year-old entrepreneur who last year took the helm of a failing enterprise, turning it into what she terms the nation's first successful teleshopping venture.

Called Grocery Express, Garvey sends fresh selected food to 2,500 households and offices, with customers choosing from a 3,000-item catalog and placing orders either by telephone or computer terminal.

"We're inventing a whole new business based on changing people's shopping habits," said Garvey. "That's a very challenging thing to do."

Brown-bagging doesn't boost output

Many office workers brown bag it at lunchtime and eat at their desks to cut costs, yet one-third have more than an hour break, and the time saved on not going out does not necessarily translate into more work being done, a survey on employees' eating habits discovered.

The study by Jacques Borel Enterprises, covered over 200 employees — from secretaries to upper managers — and found that cost, not convenience or saving time, was the reason for brown bagging.

Other survey findings include: only 20.3 percent of surveyed workers normally eat a nutritious lunch; and, employees who eat lunch at restaurants do so simply because they work better after a brief change of scenery.

In a new pilot program, employers sell employees coupons from participating restaurants for half their face value.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Basis of inherited assets is value on settled estate

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My husband bought some property 37 years ago, before he emigrated to the United States. The property was in his name until his recent death, when I inherited it. I sold the property for $130,000 and would like to share this with my three adult children, giving each $30,000.

What is the best way to handle this? Are there any special taxes I or the children would have to pay?

Doyle

A. There are three federal tax situations of which you should be aware. However, by handling things properly, no tax will be due.

First, there's the estate tax, which you don't have to pay. Since Jan. 1, 1982, one spouse can leave to the other everything he or she owns, free of federal estate tax.

Then, there's the capital gains tax. If the $130,000 you received from the sale was higher than the property's "basis," you had a profit. Because the profit from the sale of inherited real estate, stocks or any other capital asset is always counted as a long-term capital gain, only 40 percent of the profit is taxable.

The basis of an inherited capital asset is the value put on it when the estate is settled. That's the value on the date of death, unless an alternative valuation date is used.

You are required to report the sale of that property and list the capital gain or capital loss on Schedule D of your federal income tax return.

Finally, there's the gift tax. But you can get around that. You're allowed to give $10,000 a year to each of as many people as you please, without even filing federal gift tax returns. For a married couple making joint gifts, the number is $20,000.

So, you can make gifts of $10,000 to each of your three children for three years in a row. You'll duck all gift tax return filing requirements and won't have to pay any gift tax.

Q. My son needs about $5,000 to buy a vehicle and I plan to make him a loan of that amount. He will pay me interest, which I will report as income on my income tax return and which he will take as an interest deduction on his return.

Judge Wapner says, "Do it in writing." My son and I agree we should draw up a loan agreement. Other than the amount of the loan, the interest rate and the length of time of the loan, can you advise how the agreement should be written?

A. Besides the items you mention, the agreement should list the date the loan is made, the date it is due and the terms under which the interest and principal are to be paid.

There's a very easy way to do this. Get a promissory note form and fill it out. You can buy that form at a stationery store. Or, go to your public library and make a photocopy from a book containing various documents. Your librarian will know the book to use.

• • •

Q. Back in 1950, I bought 25 shares of stock at $12.50 a share. As the result of additional purchases, I now own 1,000 shares, presently worth $39 per share. If I were to sell, it would be a monumental task to determine the stock's basis for tax purposes.

If I give this stock in equal amounts to my son and daughter, will their basis be the market value of the stock on the date of transfer?

A. Nope. You're stuck with that "monumental task," whether you sell the stock or give it to your children. They will have to know your basis.

When stock is sold at a profit, the recipient's basis is the donor's basis. When gift stock is sold at a loss, the recipient's basis is either the donor's basis or the market value on the date of the gift — whichever is lower.

You're learning, the hard way, that it's mighty important to keep accurate records on the basis of stocks and other capital assets.

If you keep that stock until you die, the basis will "step up" to its value when your estate is settled. But that step-up applies to inherited stock, not gift stock.

• • •

Q. I would like to retire in seven years, when I will be 53 and will have about $300,000 in my company's profit-sharing plan. Will I be able to deposit that money in some type of account and immediately live off the interest, without paying taxes off the top?

A. Not unless there are some major — and very unlikely — changes in this nation's income tax code. The tax reform bill now before Congress calls for an end of the 10-year averaging of lump-sum retirement plan distributions.

Most likely, you'll be able to put that bundle in a roll-over IRA and defer taxes until you make withdrawals. But IRA withdrawals before 59 1/2 now are — and are expected to continue to be — subject to regular income tax, plus a 10 percent penalty tax.

PICNIC PRESERVING-
Canning For Elegant & Simple Pleasures

Outdoor feasting is a popular American pastime. Whether it be a formal setting or casual, 'tis the season for alfresco dining. Open-air entertaining is most appropriate during the warm summer months when we share good, well-prepared food with family and friends.

Advance preparation assures the cook of time to savor the portable feast with guests and family. Ball Corporation's home economists combine two time-honored American traditions — preserving and picnicking — in these recipe offerings. "Put up" this array of home canned goodies for a picnic this summer or anytime you are in the mood.

Grilled meat or fowl entreats a lively, dense sauce. Spicy Barbecue Sauce fills the bill with a boldly seasoned tomato base. Pickled Beans and Onions is a crunchy combination well-suited for picnic fare. Another crispy combo is Pickled Calico Vegetables. A patchwork of cauliflower, onions, peppers and carrots glistening in zesty vinegar.

If elegance is the theme, try crimson Very Berry Cooler. Raspberries, strawberries and lemons are transformed into a rosy beverage. Tropical Barbecue Sauce blends orange marmalade, crushed pineapple and rum in an exotic complement for pork or poultry. The grand finale for a fancy feast is Spiced Pears in Rum Raisin Syrup. A delicately spiced brown sugar syrup envelopes fresh pineapple and succulent pears. A glorious dessert to serve chilled in a crystal goblet.

Be it simple or elegant, a picnic showcasing your own preserves is certain to bring pleasure to you and those you love.

Pickled Beans And Onions

3 pounds green beans
1 pound pickling onions
2 cups vinegar
2 cups sugar
1-1/2 cups water
1 tablespoon mixed pickling spice
1 tablespoon mustard seed

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions.

Wash beans, trim ends. Par boil in salted water about 5 or 6 minutes. Drain well. Peel onions; set aside. Combine vinegar, sugar, water and spices in a large saucepot. Simmer about 15 minutes. Pack beans and onions into hot jars; leaving 1/4 inch head space. Carefully ladle brine over beans and onions, leaving 1/4 inch head space. Remove air bubbles with a non-metallic spatula. Adjust caps.

Process 10 minutes in a boiling water bath canner.
Yield: about four pint jars.

Tropical Barbecue Sauce

1 cup brown sugar
4 teaspoons prepared mustard
2 teaspoons soy sauce
2/3 cup light corn syrup
1-1/3 cups orange marmalade
2 cups crushed pineapple
1-1/3 cups pineapple juice
1 cup rum

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions.

Combine brown sugar, mustard, and soy sauce in a medium saucepot. Add light corn syrup. Stir in orange marmalade and pineapple. Heat mixture over medium heat about 10 minutes. Stir in pineapple juice. Simmer gently about 30 minutes or until thickened. Remove from heat; stir in rum. Carefully ladle into hot jars, leaving 1/4 inch head space. Adjust caps.

Process 10 minutes in a boiling water bath canner.
Yield: about four 8 ounce jars.

Spicy Barbecue Sauce

2 14-1/2 ounce cans tomato sauce
1 6 ounce can tomato paste
1/2 to 1 cup honey, according to taste
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup water
1/3 cup white wine vinegar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 tablespoon worcestershire sauce
2 teaspoons hot pepper sauce
1 small onion, finely chopped
1 garlic clove, minced
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
1/2 teaspoon allspice
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions.

Combine all ingredients in a large saucepot. Cook over medium heat for about 30 minutes; stirring frequently to prevent sticking. Carefully ladle into hot jars leaving 1/4 inch head space. Adjust caps.

Process 15 minutes in a boiling water bath canner.
Yield: about five pint jars

Very Berry Cooler

3 quarts strawberries, washed and stemmed
1 quart raspberries, washed
5 cups water
6 cups sugar
3 cups lemon juice

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions.

Puree berries in a blender or food processor.

Place puree, water, sugar and lemon juice in a large saucepot over medium heat. Bring mixture to 165°F, stirring occasionally; do not boil. Remove from heat; strain juice through cheesecloth or jelly bag. Return juice to heat and simmer 5 minutes. Carefully ladle into hot jars, leaving 1/4 inch head space. Adjust caps.

Process 15 minutes in a boiling water bath canner.
Yield: about six quart jars.

Pickled Calico Vegetables

6 cups cauliflower flowerets (1 large head)
1 cup peeled pickling onions
2 sweet green peppers, chopped into 1/2 inch pieces
2 cups sliced carrots (about 4 large)
1/4 cup pickling salt
1 quart white vinegar
1-1/2 cups sugar
2 teaspoons mustard seed
2 teaspoons celery seed
2 teaspoons hot pepper sauce

Combine vegetables and salt in large mixing bowl. Cover with ice; let stand 3 hours.

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions.

Drain vegetables; rinse well. Combine vinegar, sugar, mustard seed, celery seed, and hot pepper sauce in a large saucepot. Bring to boil; add vegetables and simmer 5 to 7 minutes. Carefully pack into hot jars, leaving 1/4 inch head space. Remove air bubbles with a non-metallic spatula. Adjust caps.

Process 10 minutes in a boiling water bath canner.
Yield: about five pint jars.

Spiced Pears In Rum Raisin Syrup

7 to 8 pounds pears
1 fresh pineapple
2 cups brown sugar
2 cups water
1 cup apricot preserves
1/2 cup golden raisins
4 cinnamon sticks
2 teaspoons whole cloves
2 teaspoons whole allspice
1/2 cup rum

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions.

Peel, halve, and core pears. Place in soaking solution to prevent darkening. Peel pineapple; remove eyes from pineapple and cut into tidbits. Measure 2 cups pineapple tidbits and set aside. Combine remaining ingredients in a large saucepot, except rum; simmer about 15 minutes. Drain and rinse pears. Poach pears in water about 5 minutes, cooking one layer at a time. Pack pears into hot jars, leaving 1/4 inch head space. Remove from heat. Stir reserved pineapple tidbits and rum into syrup. Carefully ladle syrup over pears, leaving 1/4 inch head space. Add a cinnamon stick to each jar. Remove air bubbles with a non-metallic spatula. Adjust caps.

Process 25 minutes in a boiling water bath canner.
Yield: about four quart jars.

New ideas for picnicking

By JIM WOOD
Hearst News Service

Eating outdoors is fun, refreshing and healthy, if you follow a few simple rules. If you don't, you, your family and friends could end up with food poisoning.

For more than 2 million Americans a year, food poisoning is a very uncomfortable ailment, but not one that has a serious, long-term effect. Ordinary food poisoning can be serious for youngsters, the elderly and those in poor health. Botulism poisoning, though rare, is serious for everyone.

Probably the hardest kitchen implement to keep clean is your hands. Germs can lurk under fingernails, in wrinkles and creases — even in your pores. Wash your hands thoroughly and regularly with hot water and soap each time you're going to touch food. Remember that uncooked meat can contain harmful bacteria, so wash your hands after touching it if you'll be handling other foods.

If you make a lunch for the office the evening before, refrigerate it, except for items like chips and cookies, which may go limp in the refrigerator. When you arrive at work, refrigerate your lunch, if possible. Some employers provide refrigerators, the catch being that they expect those who use them to keep them clean.

Many food safety precautions begin in the market. Buy perishable items last and never accept a bag that's become wet; you may be taking a germ farm home. To thaw frozen foods, don't simply leave them on the counter. Instead, take them out of the freezer and put them in the refrigerator. That way they'll be safe while the outside is thawed and the inside is still frozen.

When you go to the stove, the absolutely safe way is to really cook food thoroughly. The rule is no red or pink in the meats, no red in the joints of the chicken. Fish should be cooked until it can be flaked off. For those who like their meat rare and their fish undercooked, this can be difficult.

Here are a few picnic recipes from "Cucina Fresca" by Viana LaPlace and Evan Kleiman, one of the best picnic books I've ever seen. The recipes are tasty, easy to make and a welcome switch from rubbery deviled eggs.

ROSEMARY CHICKEN

4 garlic cloves, peeled and crushed
1 large roasting chicken, about 4 to 5 pounds, washed and dried completely inside and out
4 to 5 fresh rosemary sprigs, or 1 tablespoon dried rosemary leaves, crumbled
1 lemon, halved
Coarse salt
Fresh rosemary sprigs and lemon wedges for garnish

Rub the garlic cloves over the outside of the bird and in the cavity. Slip one garlic clove between the flesh and skin of each breast and leave the remaining two cloves inside the cavity. Rub the rosemary all over the bird. If using fresh rosemary, slip one sprig between the flesh and skin of each breast near the garlic. Place the remaining rosemary inside the cavity.

Squeeze half the lemon into the cavity, the other over the outside of the bird. Discard one lemon half and place the other inside the cavity. Rub salt over the bird and in the cavity. Truss the chicken, if you desire. Roast the chicken on a shallow rack, breast up, in a preheated 400 degree oven for 1 to 1-½ hours, basting it once or twice or until the juices run clear when the thigh is pierced with a fork.

Cool the chicken to room temperature. Carve it into serving pieces and place them on a platter. Garnish with rosemary sprigs and lemon wedges. Serves 4 to 6.

RIGATONI SALAD

Pesto dressing:
1 cup fresh basil leaves
3 garlic cloves, peeled and minced
4 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 teaspoons pine nuts
½ cup olive oil
Coarse salt to taste
Pasta salad:
2 pounds broccoli
2 long strips lemon peel
Coarse salt to taste
1 pound rigatoni
1 pound mushrooms, rinsed and wiped clean with paper towels
3 tablespoons olive oil
Freshly ground pepper to taste
6 medium tomatoes, cored and cut into sections
2 bunches scallions, trimmed and cut into thin rounds

Dressing: Combine the basil, garlic, Parmesan, pine nuts and oil in a blender or food processor. Process until blended, but with a somewhat coarse texture. Add salt to taste, and set the dressing aside.

Salad: Separate the broccoli flowerets from the stalks; break the flowerets into large bite-sized pieces. Peel the stalks with a paring knife and cut the stalks into a rough julienne.

Place the lemon peel in a large pot containing an abundant amount of water. Bring the water to a boil, add salt and the broccoli and cook until the broccoli is tender-crisp, about 5 minutes. Remove the broccoli with a slotted spoon and place it in a colander. Run cold water over the broccoli to set the color and stop further cooking.

Ad the rigatoni to the boiling water. Cook until al dente. Drain the pasta in a colander, run cold water over the pasta and drain again. Reserve the lemon peel. While the rigatoni is cooking, trim the mushroom stems. Cut the mushrooms in half or, if very large, in quarters. Saute the mushrooms in 3 tablespoons olive oil over very high heat for 2 to 3 minutes. Season with salt and pepper.

Gently toss the rigatoni with the lemon peel, pesto, broccoli, mushrooms, tomatoes and scallions in a large bowl. Add salt and pepper. Remove the lemon peel. Adjust the seasonings and serve. Serves 6.

GRILLED GREEN OR GOLDEN ZUCCHINI

6 medium zucchini
Coarse salt
¼ cup olive oil
5 large fresh basil leaves
3 garlic cloves, peeled and slivered
Freshly ground pepper to taste

Trim the ends of the zucchini; slice the zucchini lengthwise, about 3/8-inch thick. Salt the slices and let them drain on paper towels for 30 minutes. Wipe them dry and arrange the slices on a baking sheet. Brush them lightly with olive oil.

Grill the zucchini under a preheated broiler, with the pan close to the source of heat. Grill on both sides until the zucchini are golden brown, basting with olive oil as they cook. The zucchini also can be cooked on an outdoor grill by placing them directly on the grill. Layer the cooked zucchini in a wide, shallow serving dish. Tear the basil leaves and scatter them with the slivered garlic over each layer. Season with salt and pepper and moisten with olive oil.

Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate overnight. Bring to room temperature before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Cherry season preserved in port sauce

Associated Press

When summer comes around and sweet red cherries are ripe, many cooks use them in some extremely successful ways.

One way is to add sugar and brandy to cherries and let them stand, stirring lightly each day, until the sugar has dissolved.

Stored at room temperature or in a cool place, the brandied cherries make an elegant topping for ice cream to serve at fall and winter dinner parties.

Cherries are, of course, perfect for fruit compotes. They enhance fresh pineapple, bananas, pears. And a little liqueur — orange or cherry flavored — always makes such compotes especially delicious.

Cherry Port Sauce is a great accompaniment to roast loin of pork (served tepid) or quartered roast duck.

If you follow this recipe, you'll find you can process the sauce in ½-pint jars and store them to use for entertaining or gifts.

CHERRY PORT SAUCE

3 cups pitted and chopped fresh sweet cherries
1 cup sugar
1 cup port wine
½ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 teaspoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon ground cloves

Combine all ingredients in saucepan; bring to boil, simmer 30 minutes. Remove from heat and skim.

Ladle into hot canning jars to within ⅛-inch of tops. Seal according to jar manufacturer's directions. Process 10 minutes in a boiling water bath with boiling water two inches above jar tops.

Remove jars. Place on thick cloth or wire rack; cool away from drafts. Before storing, test lids for proper seal.

Makes three ½ pint jars.

Sol Kaplan, 75, makes what fans call the "Greatest pickles on earth."

Pickle maker preserves tradition

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — The firefighters leaped from the fire truck as it stopped in the middle of the block in the busy Manhattan neighborhood shopping area.

They hadn't come to fight a fire. They stopped to buy pickles.

It happens all the time. Fire trucks, police cars and ambulances double park in front of Guss Pickles Products.

Firefighters, cops and paramedics come to buy homemade pickles scooped from a dozen huge barrels lining the sidewalk under a green awning at 35 Essex St. on Manhattan's Lower East Side.

They join the throngs patronizing the last of New York City's sidewalk pickle markets.

"Greatest pickles on earth," insisted firefighter Gary Bulger, 26, of Ladder Co. 18 as he munched on one of the crispy green goodies. "Where else could you find a place that sells nothing but pickles? You should be here on Sunday when the line is often nearly a block long."

Scooping the pickles from the barrels was Sol Kaplan, 75, a Manhattan pickle maker since 1921, when he was 10. "We're the last of a kind," sighed the old-timer who always wears a derby when working.

"Years ago, New York City had hundreds of pickle places like this where pickles are made and sold on the spot," he explained.

The pickles sell for $2.25 a quart, $4 a half gallon or $6.75 a gallon. Guss Pickles also sell sauerkraut, pickled tomatoes and pickled sweet peppers. Pickles come new, half sour, three-quarters sour and full sour. It takes three months to a year to age a full-sour pickle.

The owners of the pickle business do not disclose gross sales. When asked if he made good money during his 65 years of making pickles, Kaplan replied: "I didn't lose any."

He blamed the disappearance of the quaint New York sidewalk pickle markets on "the lack of interest by children of traditional pickle makers. It was a skill handed down father to sons. But nowadays the kids go to college. They become doctors, lawyers, teachers.

"It's hard work. It's a different day. This type of business is dead already. It was dying 25 years ago."

Those who buy the pickles swear they are much tastier than pickles made by pickle factories. "I have been buying pickles here 50 years," said salesman Benny Harris, 65. "The average person has no idea how much better these pickles are than the ones you buy in a supermarket."

Customers come from as far away as upstate New York, New Jersey and Connecticut to buy the old-fashioned pickles at Guss Pickle Produce.

French oak trees shaped into barrels for aging cognac

COGNAC, France (AP) — The trees in the forests of Limousin and Troncais here have a common destiny — they end up as cognac barrels.

The oak from these forests, with its straight grain, minimal knots and faults plus the right amount of tanin, helps make the brandy age properly, according to the blenders in this town of 23,000.

The trees are cut when they are between 70 and 150 years old and some 90 feet tall. The staves are seasoned outdoors for four to six years before being fashioned into barrels.

Seven men take about five days to build a 300-gallon blending vat, but it will be used for many generations.

Summer fruits saved without sugar

Associated Press

How sweet it is — or isn't — has nothing to do with the way home-canned or -frozen food keeps. It's not sugar but heat-processing or freezing that prevents spoilage. The high-sugar syrups Grandma used gave flavor and kept the appearance and texture of the fruit. Fruits preserved with little or no sugar will not spoil, but, after about 3 months, the appearance and texture will change.

To can without sugar: Cook the prepared fruit until boiling and pack it into clean hot jars. Cover with boiling unsweetened fruit juice or add boiling water. Process in a water-bath canner the same time as you normally do.

To freeze fruit without sugar: Wash, drain and remove stems, pits or peels. To prevent discoloration, place apples, apricots, cherries, peaches and pears in a solution of water and ascorbic acid, following manufacturer's instructions. Drain and pack in moisture- and vapor-proof containers.

Saccharin-based artificial sweeteners are heat stable and can be used in home canning and freezing. Aspartame (Equal) loses its sweetness when heated a long time and should not be used in canning, but it can be used in freezing or to sweeten unsugared canned fruits at serving time.

For basic canning or freezing how-to or more information on preserving with little or no sugar:

- Contact your local chapter of the American Diabetes Association.

Chef's Salad sealed into jar

Associated Press

CHEF'S SALAD IN A JAR

½ cup shredded cabbage
½ of a small tomato, seeded and chopped
1 slice turkey breast luncheon meat, cut into bite-size strips
¼ cup cream-style cottage cheese, drained
One 1-ounce slice cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese, cut into bite-size strips ½ of a small cucumber, seeded and chopped (¼ cup)
1 to 2 tablespoons desired salad dressing

In a bowl combine cabbage, tomato, turkey, cottage cheese, cheese and cucumber. Chill. Spoon into a 1¼-cup insulated container. Cover; seal.

To serve, add the salad dressing and toss. Makes 1 serving.

Note: Package the dressing in a separate small container to keep the greens crisp until lunch time.

WHAT'S COOKING

Pool manager's plans mushroom

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Joe Sisneros has made some definite plans for his future.

Swimming pool manager at Ulmer Pool — "under the City of Midland Swim Team, but I worked with Parks and Recreation" — he will finish out the summer working at Doug Russell Pool, now that Ulmer has closed for the season.

When summer is officially over, "I'm going back to graduate school at Western State College in Gunnison, Colo.," Sisneros said. "I have also been sent a contract to be graduate assistant for the wrestling team — they are in the top 10 in the nation."

His goal is to finish his master's degree in physical education and his bachelor's degree in business.

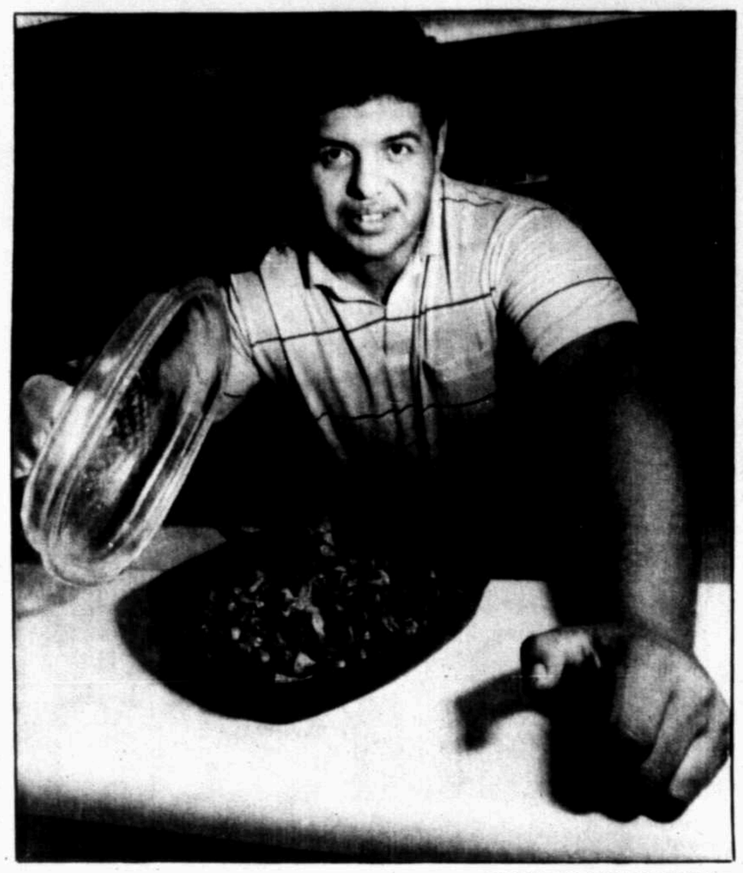

"Then I'm going to apply to a major university to get a degree in exercise physiology, then go into corporate fitness," he said. "I think whoever has the best education is going to get the jobs."

A graduate of Western State College with degrees in physical education and industrial arts, Sisneros is also a swimmer and wrestler — "collegiate-style, Olympic-style, not professional," he stressed — and taught at St. Ann's Catholic School for two years.

While at college, "I'm not going to be just a graduate assistant, I'll also be a residential assistant" and participant in the Mentor Program to help incoming freshmen — "somebody who's there if they need somebody."

With all this activity in his life, Sisneros still likes to cook "when I get a chance. I almost had to learn to cook — I'm from a large family of just boys." He, in fact, had seven brothers.

The following recipe is one that he developed himself:

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Joe Sisneros

SAUTEED MUSHROOMS

8 tablespoons real butter
¾ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ cup chablis wine (red or pink)
8 to 12 ounces fresh mushrooms

Melt butter in covered skillet (medium to large) at medium temperature. While butter is melting, cut mushrooms into quarters.

Add mushrooms to skillet when butter has melted; add chablis and garlic salt.

Turn heat to medium-high and let cook, covered, for about 5-10 minutes or until mushrooms have browned.

Remove from burner; let cool slightly.

Note: Skillet should remain covered throughout preparation.

Zucchini Relish canned for use with chicken, burgers

Associated Press

This crisp relish is especially good with grilled chicken and burgers.

ZUCCHINI RELISH

4 to 4½ pounds zucchini
2 medium onions
1 sweet red pepper
2 tablespoons salt
2 cups sugar
1 cup vinegar
1 cup water
2 teaspoons celery seed
1 teaspoon ground turmeric
1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cut up vegetables; grind in food chopper using coarse blade. Add salt. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Rinse in cold water; drain well. In 4- to 5-quart kettle combine vegetable mixture, sugar, vinegar, water, celery seed, turmeric, nutmeg and pepper. Bring to boiling. Cover; boil gently for 10 minutes, stirring often. Ladle hot mixture into hot, clean pint jars, leaving ½-inch headspace. Adjust lids. Process in boiling water bath 15 minutes (start timing when water returns to boiling). Makes 4 pints.

Biochemist seeks potato packed with protein

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — If plants can be pushed into making better use of a new gene, says its creator, a "meat-and-potatoes" potato could nourish people who now must starve.

"We're still a ways from having a potato like a steak. But it's certainly within the realm of possibility," says Dr. Jesse Jaynes, a Louisiana State University biochemist who dreams of ending world hunger.

"This could have a profound impact on developing nations," he said in an interview.

Jaynes said potatoes are about 2 percent protein. If the protein produced by his gene made up one-quarter of that 2 percent, he said, potatoes could provide all the protein a normal person needs.

Genes direct the growth of every cell in every living thing. Over the last 15 years, scientists have learned how to put their molecular building blocks together in new ways and to use viruses and bacteria as microscopic shot needles to carry the new genes into cells to become permanent residents.

Jaynes said he recently got the results of tests showing that his gene has become a permanent part of more than a dozen potato plants at LSU. And although it's not making enough protein to matter, he said he thinks it can be made to do so by the early 1990s.

"In five years we'll know whether or not it's attainable. I personally think it will be," he said.

It would be invaluable to poor countries where most people can't afford meat, eggs, milk or cheese, said Jaynes.

He is working with scientists at the International Potato Center in Lima, Peru, under a grant from the Agency for International Development.

"We'd like to say, 'Now it's a matter of fine-tuning,' but it isn't," said Jaynes. "But I think we're more than halfway there to having a plant that's worth something — not necessarily monetarily, but valuable to the people."

He said it will be several months before scientists even know how much additional protein the new potatoes contain.

What is important, he said, is that they have successfully made the gene part of the potato.

Jaynes said the gene he put together — he doesn't know if it's been named — is extremely high in the five amino acids which are most needed by the human body and least common in vegetables.

"Proteins are made of 20 amino acids, just stuck one after the other like a train," he said. "We can make 10 of the amino acids ourselves. Ten we can't, so we have to get those 10 from the foods we eat."

WHAT'S COOKING

Pool manager's plans mushroom

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Joe Sisneros has made some definite plans for his future.

Swimming pool manager at Ulmer Pool — "under the City of Midland Swim Team, but I worked with Parks and Recreation" — he will finish out the summer working at Doug Russell Pool, now that Ulmer has closed for the season.

When summer is officially over, "I'm going back to graduate school at Western State College in Gunnison, Colo.," Sisneros said. "I have also been sent a contract to be graduate assistant for the wrestling team — they are in the top 10 in the nation."

His goal is to finish his master's degree in physical education and his bachelor's degree in business.

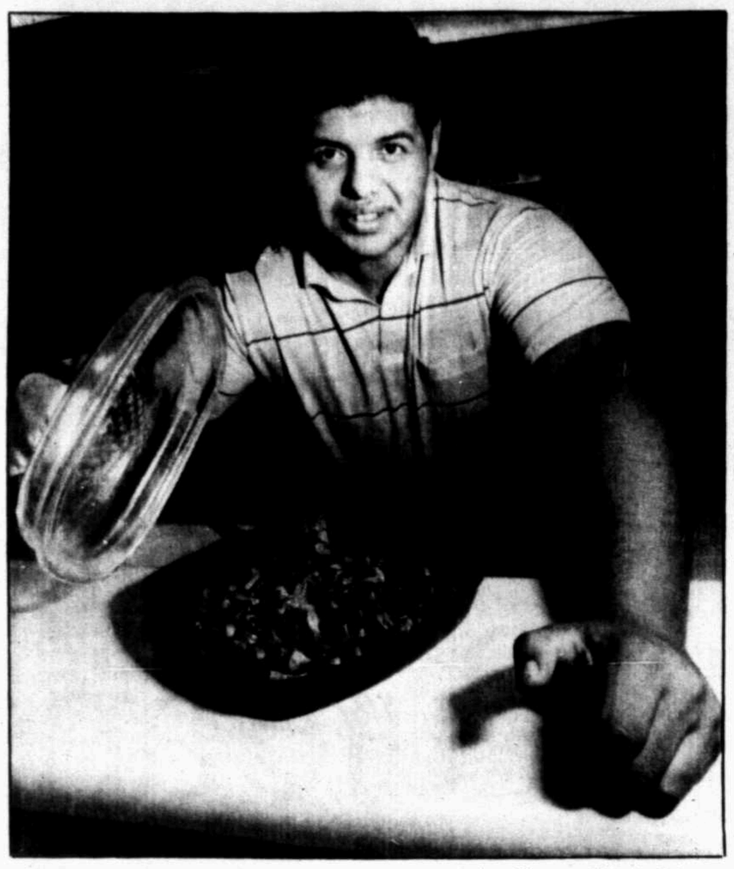

"Then I'm going to apply to a major university to get a degree in exercise physiology, then go into corporate fitness," he said. "I think whoever has the best education is going to get the jobs."

A graduate of Western State College with degrees in physical education and industrial arts, Sisneros is also a swimmer and wrestler — "collegiate-style, Olympic-style, not professional," he stressed — and taught at St. Ann's Catholic School for two years.

While at college, "I'm not going to be just a graduate assistant, I'll also be a residential assistant" and participant in the Mentor Program to help incoming freshmen — "somebody who's there if they need somebody."

With all this activity in his life, Sisneros still likes to cook "when I get a chance. I almost had to learn to cook — I'm from a large family of just boys." He, in fact, had seven brothers.

The following recipe is one that he developed himself:

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Joe Sisneros

SAUTEED MUSHROOMS

8 tablespoons real butter
¾ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ cup chablis wine (red or pink)
8 to 12 ounces fresh mushrooms

Melt butter in covered skillet (medium to large) at medium temperature. While butter is melting, cut mushrooms into quarters.

Add mushrooms to skillet when butter has melted; add chablis and garlic salt.

Turn heat to medium-high and let cook, covered, for about 5-10 minutes or until mushrooms have browned.

Remove from burner; let cool slightly.

Note: Skillet should remain covered throughout preparation.

Zucchini Relish canned for use with chicken, burgers

Associated Press

This crisp relish is especially good with grilled chicken and burgers.

ZUCCHINI RELISH

4 to 4½ pounds zucchini
2 medium onions
1 sweet red pepper
2 tablespoons salt
2 cups sugar
1 cup vinegar
1 cup water
2 teaspoons celery seed
1 teaspoon ground turmeric
1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cut up vegetables; grind in food chopper using coarse blade. Add salt. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Rinse in cold water; drain well. In 4- to 5-quart kettle combine vegetable mixture, sugar, vinegar, water, celery seed, turmeric, nutmeg and pepper. Bring to boiling. Cover; boil gently for 10 minutes, stirring often. Ladle hot mixture into hot, clean pint jars, leaving ½-inch headspace. Adjust lids. Process in boiling water bath 15 minutes (start timing when water returns to boiling). Makes 4 pints.

Biochemist seeks potato packed with protein

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — If plants can be pushed into making better use of a new gene, says its creator, a "meat-and-potatoes" potato could nourish people who now must starve.

"We're still a ways from having a potato like a steak. But it's certainly within the realm of possibility," says Dr. Jesse Jaynes, a Louisiana State University biochemist who dreams of ending world hunger.

"This could have a profound impact on developing nations," he said in an interview.

Jaynes said potatoes are about 2 percent protein. If the protein produced by his gene made up one-quarter of that 2 percent, he said, potatoes could provide all the protein a normal person needs.

Genes direct the growth of every cell in every living thing. Over the last 15 years, scientists have learned how to put their molecular building blocks together in new ways and to use viruses and bacteria as microscopic shot needles to carry the new genes into cells to become permanent residents.

Salads perk up hot-day appetites

By NINA KILLHAM
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

An adult appetite in the heat of the summer reverts to a child's on an average day.

"I'm not hungry — it's too hot, too sweaty, too sticky to eat," come deep-voiced whines. Seconds pass. ... "Well, ice cream sounds good. ... So does maybe a soda pop or a chocolate shake. ... Oh, you're going to McDonald's? I'll have a cheeseburger, a large fry. With extra ketchup."

Eating, on occasion, has less to do with our appetites than with our energy. Across this city, men and women in sweat-stained business suits are gasping. Kitchens turn to wastelands; dust gathers on stoves; even microwaves are ignored.

Yet success and corporate takeovers are not of milk shakes and frozen candy bars made. Summer is not a license to destroy your insides. The four food groups still have to be ingested, no matter how tedious that sounds.

Enter salads. Not a stove to warm up, not a grill to fire up, not even a blender to excite. Just crisp salad greens, cold vegetables, creamy cheeses, maybe a marinated fish or pre-cooked meat and a potent dressing. It's enough to satiate the appetite with nutritional value, but not overtax heat-frazzled nerves.

Below are some cool ideas for a hot, slimy, summer day.

■ Serve tuna salad in red, yellow and green bell peppers, halved lengthwise, and garnish with black olives and capers.

■ Whip up a chunky gazpacho with plenty of tomatoes and crunchy fresh vegetables and throw in cooked, peeled shrimp, which you can pick up at the market.

■ Try cooked, shelled shrimp mixed with mayonnaise, sour cream, curry powder, lemon juice, chives and pepper for a quick curried shrimp salad.

■ Open a can of salmon and add a can of boiled potatoes, chopped cucumbers, chopped celery, chopped onions and a mixture of half sour cream and mayonnaise with a bit of lemon juice and salt and pepper to taste. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves and garnish with capers.

■ Make a turkey or chicken waldorf salad, mixing apples, celery, walnuts, mayonnaise and store-bought cooked poultry. Serve in hollowed-out tomatoes or papaya halves.

■ Combine cold sliced roast beef with chopped onion, canned anchovy fillets capers, hard-cooked egg quarters with an oil and vinegar dressing to make a cold but cooked tartare salad.

■ Make a caesar salad with tuna in addition to the anchovies.

■ For tofu lovers, add peanuts, chopped celery, diced green pepper and a dressing of one part sugar, one part sesame oil and six parts light soy sauce to fresh bean curd cakes, cut into ½-inch cubes and serve at room temperature.

■ Don't forget tabbouleh, a salad of bulgur, chopped tomatoes, scallions, herbs and dressed with lemon juice and olive oil.

So, if you're in the mood, give the recipe below a shot. If you're not in the mood, do yourself a favor. Go out to eat.

Express Lane: crab meat, tarragon vinegar, mayonnaise, onion, capers, chives, parsley, tarragon, pimentos (optional).

CRAB RAVIGOTE

1½ pounds fresh lump or backfin crab meat, picked over well
¼ cup tarragon vinegar
¾ cup mayonnaise
½ medium-sized yellow onion, minced
2 tablespoons capers, minced
1 tablespoon minced chives
1 teaspoon minced parsley
1 teaspoon minced tarragon
1 tablespoon slivered pimento (optional)

Mix crab meat and vinegar, cover and marinate in refrigerator 2 hours, turning now and then. Drain off vinegar and mix it with all but optional pimento, pour over crab, toss well, and arrange on lettuce or in avocado halves. Garnish with pimento and serve.

Makes 6 servings.

Camping: Meal preparation on trail education in itself

By SYLVIA CARTER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

My family never camped.

When I went camping, I understood why; our daily life on the farm was only marginally better than camping. We read by the light of kerosene lanterns and carried in buckets of water for baths in galvanized tin tubs — when there was enough water. When there wasn't, we eked out sponge baths.

On trips, we were well satisfied eating bologna and white bread, sheltered by our car. This, to us, was progress. The deprivations of camping would not, to my parents, have seemed like a joy.

But recently I found myself, laden with backpack, trudging along the Green Mountains in Vermont. There is but one explanation: "I did it all for love."

The week before our five-day backpacking expedition, I made exhaustive lists for marketing and menus. We limited heavy cans and planned to pack dry ingredients in plastic bags arranged by meal. I made mixes for macaroni and cheese and cocoa.

Sensibly, I vetoed suggestions for suppers composed of wild greens; it was best not to count on any food that wasn't a sure thing. A few days before the trip, my camping companion and I went to a sporting-goods store, where we bought a backpack, a sleeping bag and an egg carrier.

I WAS ENCHANTED by the egg carrier, a little yellow plastic container that would hold six eggs. All along, I had wanted to take eggs, but I wasn't sure how they would hold up. The acquisition of the new item expanded our breakfast plans.

But when I tried to close the top of the egg carrier, the eggs were too big. My companion tried, breaking several. My disappointment was profound. This egg carrier was intended for small eggs, of which we had none. With misgivings, I packed a few eggs in a grocery store Styrofoam container.

The first night, behind schedule, we struggled to build a cooking fire out of damp wood just a few feet from the car. The whole thing seemed more like tailgating than camping.

My attempts to turn the potatoes and carrots caused holes in the foil they were wrapped in, and only in a whimsical mood was it possible to think of the vegetables as roasted; they were charred.

In the morning, as I washed the breakfast things at the stream, I mused on what my mother would think if she could see me now. Finally, we set off.

I made it a few hundred feet uphill with my never-worn pack. We stopped and repacked. After many stops for rest and water, we reached a three-sided lakeside shelter, where we had a late lunch of salami sandwiches garnished with tangy wild sorrel leaves.

By now my careful organization of the food had gone awry, partly because the contents of the backpacks had been shifted about. That evening I found and cooked red beans with onion, garlic, crushed red pepper and some chunks of ham. With rice (cooked ahead of time), this was a wonderfully tasty supper, but cooking it used a dangerously high ration of our propane.

THE NEXT DAY there was a grueling hike in humid weather. But in the evening, we dined by the campfire on delicious spring water, fried potatoes and onions (the pack was getting a lot lighter now) and salmon patties. We shared a log cabin — deluxe by trail standards — with scampering mice.

Along about the third morning I began to think about the possibility of making ice cream in the woods. I concluded that the chances were nil and decided to have some just as soon as I returned to civilization. My companion voted for beer, much too heavy for mountainous terrain.

THE SAME NIGHT brought an onslaught of slugs, a memorable sunset and sweet harmonica tunes. We ate macaroni and cheese and Vienna sausages, the only recipe I adapted from a book ("Simple Foods for the Pack: The Sierra Club Guide to Delicious Natural Foods for the Trail," by Claudia Axcell Diana Cooke and Vikki Kinmont; Sierra Club Books, $8.95). Measuring cups are irrelevant in the woods.

My approach was scarcely that of a purist. Not for me the dandelion root coffee advocated by avid foragers; I'll take my dandelions as greens, deliciously wilted with bacon, thanks, and my coffee brewed from coffee beans.

Incidentally, to avoid packing a coffee pot, we took a nearlyweightless, reusable cloth filter like those available in Latin markets. We packed our peanut butter in plastic instead of glass, and substituted reusable paper-fiber towels for disposable ones.

We took things that could appear in different ways at more than one meal; cornmeal made a hearty mush with plump raisins and maple syrup one morning, and the next morning we fried crisp, primitive johnnycakes.

But I learned the hard way that when catering for camping, the rule about having a little too much food is turned around: Take a bit less than you think you need.

My camping recipes relied heavily on a product I would never use at home: margarine. Because it comes in a squeeze bottle, it is tidy to pack.

SALMON PATTIES

1 cup saltine cracker crumbs
Salt, to taste
Freshly ground black pepper, to taste
1 (15½-ounce) can salmon
1 egg
Margarine in squeeze bottle

Mix cracker crumbs, salt and pepper in airtight plastic bag. Pack plastic bag, salmon, can opener, eggs and margarine. At campsite, mix salmon with crumb mixture and eggs. Forget such things as beating the eggs, just mix everything well. Heat margarine in skillet and spoon out patties. Brown on one side, turn and brown on other side. Makes about 12 patties.

MACARONI AND CHEESE

1 cup elbow macaroni
¼ pound cheddar cheese, grated
¼ cup dried milk powder
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
2 cloves garlic, to be minced in camp
Salt
Margarine in squeeze bottle

Pack macaroni in airtight plastic bag. In a second bag, pack cheese, milk powder, ground black pepper and whole garlic cloves. At camp, fill largest pot with water. Add a little salt, a staple you should have along. Heat until boiling. Add macaroni and cook until done. Drain. Remove garlic from cheese mixture and mince. Add garlic, milk and cheese mixture and about 2 tablespoons margarine to macaroni. Stir everything until the cheese melts. Makes 2 servings.

New "Custom Roast"™ Coffee.

Now better coffee flavor costs less. "Custom Roasting" is a new coffee roasting process that gives you more coffee flavor at a lower coffee price.

How?

Two ways. First, custom roasting involves the carefully controlled movement of coffee beans through the roaster under exacting conditions of heat, air velocity and time. This intensifies the natural coffee flavor.

Second, this special process expands coffee beans significantly more than ordinary roasting. The result is more coffee surface area to interact with the water in your coffee maker. And this gives you more flavor from the coffee.

The result is that you need less coffee to get more flavor. Which means you save money.

And to help you save even more, here's a special introductory offer. Just use the coupon below and you'll get 70¢ off your next purchase of new Maryland Club Custom Roast Coffee.

Try it. You'll enjoy the change.

As part of our involvement with the Texas Sesquicentennial celebration, we will contribute 10¢ toward restoration of the Texas Goddess of Liberty atop our State's capitol when you redeem this coupon.

THE BUTCHER

Groups seek name change for 'Good' beef

By MERLE ELLIS

The beef industry has succeeded in convincing itself that "consumers have developed a taste for lean beef."

No longer, it seems, do they want flavor, taste, mouth-watering, finger lickin' goodness in their steaks like they used to a few years or months — or was it only weeks? — ago. Back in those days, people like Julia Child, James Beard and almost anyone else who knew anything about good food was telling us to "look for a little 'marbling' when you're looking for a good steak."

"Marbling" is the term used to describe those little flecks of fat interspersed throughout the lean muscle in top quality beef. Since the beginning of the USDA beef grading program, marbling has been one of the principle indicators of quality. The top grade, "Prime," has somewhat more marbling than the second grade, "Choice." The "Good" grade, next in line, has a bit less marbling than "Choice." This grading system has worked well over the years.

So the recent trend among consumers, say the studies, is a preference for lean beef. The most recent development in this trend is a movement among lobbies in Washington to change the name of the USDA "Good" grade to something that sounds nicer. Who's doing the lobbying? Not the likes of Julia or Jim!

It's the American Cancer Society and the American Heart Association who have joined the Public Voice for Food and Health Policy in petitioning USDA to change the name of the leanest grade from "Good" to "Select." The idea is that a more appealing name would give consumers a "positive signal" about lean beef.

"Select" does have a nice positive sound to it, doesn't it? But if what we care about is how it sounds rather than how it tastes, how about "USDA Nice" or "USDA Marvelous"? That's it! "Abso-USDA-ly Marbless." In short, changing the name won't do a bit of good. "Good" by any other name still won't have the taste of "Choice"!

The grading system in this country is a voluntary program provided by the United States Department of Agriculture but paid for by the packer. Not all beef is graded. Usually only those carcasses of beef that a packer feels will qualify for the "Choice" grade are offered for grading.

Very few carcasses that would grade "Good" are ever graded. Instead, they go to market as what is called in the industry "No-Rolls," meaning that the USDA Good grade stamp was not applied.

Most of the beef on the market today falls into this category and it is called by a hundred different names. Every supermarket chain that handles "No-Rolls," and many of the largest national chains do, calls it by a different name. Safeway calls it "Safeway Quality Beef." Lucky calls it "Five Star." Albertsons calls it "Butcher's Pride."

No matter what it's called, it is in fact "Good," or would be if it had been graded. Calling it "Select" wouldn't change a thing; none of those supermarket chains is apt to jump on the USDA grading bandwagon simply because they change the name.

Breed-branded beef, sophisticated marketing schemes and all of the new "Lite," "Lean," "Low-Cal" labeling will soon have the marketplace for beef so flooded with nonsensical, meaningless nomenclature that nobody will know what's what. Then, perhaps, the USDA will say, "Wait a minute. This is ridiculous" and go back to a meaningful and mandatory set of grading standards and labeling.

Only when every piece of beef that comes through the system is graded by the same standards and labeled with a very limited number of standard terms, whatever those may be, only then will the grading system really mean anything to today's confused consumer.

Soybean considered sacred grain in China

Copley News Service

In ancient China, the soybean was counted as one of the five sacred grains — and it's easy to see why. This nutritious bean is rich in protein, lecithin, calcium, phosphorous and iron. And in the Oriental diet, it's the indispensable source of tofu, tempeh, miso and soy sauce.

Tuna dip tasty

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The tuna dip served at Carlos 'N' Charlie's on Sunset Boulevard in Los Angeles is delicious and economical.

CARLOS 'N' CHARLIE'S TUNA DIP

1 (14-ounce) can tuna
1 (6-ounce) jar or can jalapeno chiles
1 onion, minced
½ cup mayonnaise
Chopped cilantro

Mix tuna with chopped jalapeno chiles in jalapeno liquid. Add onion to tuna mixture. Stir in mayonnaise until consistency is mushy. Sprinkle cilantro on top and serve with tortilla chips as dip. Makes 6 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Shopper complains

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Can you please help an immigrant understand the Americans?

In South America, I was offended by the disdain of rich shoppers who picked through the baskets of produce offered by poor peasants.

In England, I saw a sign over a bin of fruit placed there by the greengrocer lady: "Please don't pinch me until I'm yours!" (That seemed fair enough.)

I am grossed out by people in the produce department pulling back the husks on corn, looking for I don't know what. Why can't Americans handle ears of corn without disfiguring them? Who wants to buy another person's rejects? It is easy to tell by just hefting it whether an ear is well-formed and substantial. If, after I buy it, I find a worm residing in the tip of the ear, I rejoice that the corn had not been sprayed with poison. I simply cut off the part with the worm, and eat the rest.

So what do they expect to find when ripping nature's package? It's the same as peeling a banana in the supermarket to see whether it's fit to buy.

I don't want to ascribe thoughtless manners to people who are otherwise polite and kindly. Tell me, Abby, why do they do it, and what are they looking for? — PUZZLED IN CARMICHAEL, CALIF.

DEAR PUZZLED: Next time you see "them," bend their ear and inquire. And please let me know how "they" respond, as I am not one of "them."

DEAR ABBY: I thought you should know what one of your columns inspired last Valentine's Day. On the morning of Feb. 14, my phone rang. It was a classmate named Bob. (Imagine, still going to school at 78!) He said, "Betty, I just read Dear Abby's column, and she said, 'Be a sweetheart and call someone you love and say, "I love you." Make two or three calls. Who says you can't love more than one person — in different ways, of course,' so I'm calling you to say I love you, and I'm glad you are my friend."

That really touched me. I thanked him and told him how much I loved both him and his lovely wife.

After hanging up, I called another classmate, and told her how much I valued her many years of friendship. She thanked me and said it made her feel so good she was going to call a friend or two. She even called the teacher.

At school the following morning, the teacher asked how many had received a Valentine's Day call. Thirty hands went up! And it all began with an idea Bob got from you. — BETTY BARNETT, PERENNIAL STUDENT

DEAR BETTY: An idea is only an idea until somebody puts it into action. Your classmates started the ball rolling.

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading the letter signed, "Thinking It Over," written by an American college girl who was offered a nice sum of money to marry a foreign man — in name only. It's people like her who make it difficult for people like me.

I am an American woman married to a Filipino man whom I am petitioning to have here in the United States on a permanent visa. My husband and I had to go through immigration interviews that sounded like the third degree.

We had to bring wedding photos and we had to answer questions separately such as, "What side of the bed do you sleep on?" "What distinctive birthmarks does your spouse have?" "And what color is the shower curtain in your bathroom?" It has been a very humiliating procedure.

Abby, please give us Americans who married immigrants out of love a break! I proudly use my husband's name. I am ... LINDA TANESCO

DEAR LINDA: I was under the impression that people living in the land of the free and the home of the brave were presumed to be innocent until proved guilty. But as long as our immigration laws are being abused, it would seem necessary that such questions must be asked.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

'Do-it-yourself' TV dinners make weekday cooking easier

Copley News Service

If you're tired of cooking dinner every night, don't do it! How can you avoid it? Use time management techniques in your kitchen, and one cooking session can provide you with several nights of wholesome frozen dinners.

Why not just buy frozen and prepackaged meals? Because they're often quite high in fat and salt, and are considerably more expensive than those you can easily make at home.

To begin, choose recipes that can be prepared ahead and freeze well. Plan your meals so that they include milk and dairy products, meats, fish, poultry, fruits and vegetables, breads and cereals. Many entree recipes will include some of these four food groups, and those that don't you have only to add a salad, fresh fruit, milk, whole grain bread or rolls to complete an excellent meal. Using these foods will ensure your family of "powerhouse" nutrition.

After you've planned your ingredients for the week, stock up on freezer wrap, wire twisters, freezer bags, small aluminum or microwave containers, strong tape and a marking pencil. Do all similar preparations together: peel, slice all vegetables, fruits, all meats or whatever else is used. Combine according to recipes, and cook at the same time, if possible.

If you want to lower the fat and calories in your meals, use skim or low fat dairy products, remove all visible fat from meats, and refrigerate soups, stews and some casseroles, then skim fat before freezing.

To lower salt, use herbs, spices and lemon instead.

Use skim and low fat dairy products such as yogurt, cottage and other cheeses, and milk wherever possible, to increase calcium in the diet.

Here are some preparation tips that will help you prepare successful frozen meals at home:

- Undercook foods slightly before freezing.
- Cool food before freezing to avoid a big rise in the temperature of your freezer.
- Set freezer at 0 F for best quality food.
- Remove as much air as possible from containers before freezing.
- Allow one-half inch for liquids to expand in containers, as they freeze.
- Avoid using foil on tomatoes or fruit juices. The acidity will eat through the foil.
- To thaw foods, refrigerate overnight.
- Don't freeze fried foods. They become soggy when re-heated.
- To retain color and texture of vegetables, immerse them quickly in cold water after cooking, before freezing.
- Underspice foods because spices are intensified when frozen.
- Freeze fruits on a cookie sheet in freezer first, then put them into containers.

Try streamlining your meal planning and preparation, and you may find yourself with more time.

Future liability suits should require safety net

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

A consultant Tuesday recommended the city of Midland stash away between $2.5 million and $5 million for protection against future liability lawsuits.

The money — which would still earn interest — would be a safety net if the city loses one, or several, high-dollar lawsuits.

Officials with Joseph-Ivy Co., an Austin-based firm, also recommended the city not self-insure its general liability policy.

Consultants, who were paid $15,000 for their work, gave their report Tuesday to the City Council.

The recommendations will be studied by the city staff. A decision on whether to follow the advice will be made later in the year.

"I don't think they (the consultants) intended us to build up the fund in one year," said Assistant City Manager Mike McGregor.

McGregor said it is likely the city would gradually build up to that reserve if the idea is approved by the City Council.

The consultant was hired earlier this year as Midland city officials — like many agencies nationwide — were alarmed by the skyrocketing insurance rates.

Officials said they hoped the study would determine how to save money and still be safely insured.

"We will meet in the next few weeks," McGregor said, "and look more closely at the recommendations."

McGregor said if the $2.5 million is put in a special fund for insurance, it likely will come from the city's surplus fund or from utilities money.

Another possibility, he said, is for the city to budget a certain amount each year until the total is reached.

The City Council was told by Francis Fey, one of the consultants, that the city of Midland had an "excellent" track record.

He said it is doubtful, based on the city's past record, that any huge lawsuit would be lost, but noted the special fund would put the city in a good financial position.

"You could still earn interest on the money," he said. "Insurance companies figured out a long time ago that this was the way to go."

Consultants said the $5 million projection was a "conservative" estimate, meaning it would not be needed unless something out-of-the-ordinary occurred.

They said $2.5 million was the minimum reserve fund they would suggest.

The city's biggest lawsuit loss in the last few years is only $60,000, officials said.

The consultants said the city also should continue being insured by the Texas Municipal League.

City officials — who were looking into being totally self-insured — now must pay $445,245 annually for a $2 million general liability policy.

That amount — which will go up again — was nearly twice the $238,253 premium the city paid two years ago.

General liability also includes automobile liability and coverage of law enforcement agencies.

"I don't think pure self-insurance is the way to go now," Fey said, recommending the city get a general liability policy with a $500,000 deductible.

"We're not sure what the (insurance) market is going to do, and it would be better to let it settle down some.

"Then next year, if you desire, you can look around."

The council did not take action on the report.

McGregor said he will meet with City Attorney David Reagan and David Hunter, director of administrative services, to discuss the report.

"Once we get everything looked into," he said, "then we'll take it to the City Council."

City offers $9,300 for bus transfer to local agencies

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

The city of Midland has offered to pay some $9,300 to the state as a part of an agreement to transfer several MidTran buses to local agencies.

The offer, which must be approved by the agencies, was formalized during Tuesday's City Council meeting.

The Council also was informed there will be no rate hike on natural gas and passed a golf course ordinance.

Discussion about the buses has been going on for the past two months. The city decided to end MidTran June 10, citing a lack of ridership.

If the plan was approved by both sides, Casa De Amigos, the Mental Health and Retardation Center, Midland Association for Retarded Citizens and Trinity Towers would get the vans.

The offer, which was mailed Aug. 4 to the various agencies, said the city would pay the state $9,300 — 13 percent of what the vans are worth.

When the city began MidTran, it received 80 percent of money for the vans from the Department of Transportation, 13 percent from the state and used 7 percent from its budget.

Under law, the vans can be transferred to the agencies without reimbursing the Department of Transportation.

The city will forfeit its 7 percent. Deputy City Manager Fred Poe also told the council that city residents will not have to pay more for natural gas.

For the past two years, Weststar has been attempting to get a rate hike from the city of Midland and 62 other municipalities, Poe said.

The issue focused around the transportation of natural gas from a plant to the city limits.

Poe said Weststar — an Amarillo-based company — originally had talked of raising the rate from some 28 cents per unit of natural gas to $1.60 per unit.

Poe said the average Midland consumer probably used anywhere from 2 to 10 units per month.

The request then dropped to 75 cents per unit and then 50 cents per unit.

But this week an agreement was reached where no increase would go into effect, Poe said.

Former investigator in murder case gives testimony

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The defense called several witnesses early today in the murder and robbery trial of James Robert Chambers, including a former investigator on the case.

Sgt. Monnie Weddell, formerly with the Midland County Sheriff's office, testified that statements taken from co-defendent Leroy McKee were inconsistent, which echoed McKee's testimony Tuesday.

Weddell said McKee did not implicate Chambers in the killing until the second statement he gave to investigators.

Chambers, 25, is accused of taking part in the June 9, 1982, beating death of 45-year-old Wylie Randolph Wilson, whose body was found the next day in a pasture along County Road 160 in southeast Midland County.

The state rested its case late Tuesday after the jury heard testimony from McKee and his estranged wife.

The case is being tried before Judge Pat Baskin in 142nd State District Court.

Leroy McKee, who pleaded guilty to robbery in the case and is serving a 20-year sentence, was called to the stand by the prosecution and was questioned by Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre.

McKee testified he, his wife Patricia, his brother Elroy, the defendant, and another man, Jackie Dorn, were at his apartment at the Kingsway Inn Apartments, 3801 W. Wall, when the victim drove up in his automobile, a Datsun 280ZX.

McKee told the 11 men and one woman on the jury the men were "just talking" when the subject of money came up.

"We were just inside the apartment drinking and listening to music," McKee said.

Schorre then asked, "When he (Wilson) drove up was there any talk among you...about robbing the guy?"

"Just about some money," McKee said.

He said Dorn then mentioned robbing Wilson. McKee said the four men left his apartment and went to the back of the building.

He said the defendant and Dorn attacked Wilson while he was walking back to his car from a nearby package store.

"James grabbed him, pulled him over to the field and Jackie hit him with a jack handle," he said.

He testified Wilson was struck in the head area at least three times, and said he was "in shock" when he saw the incident.

"Did you see Jackie Dorn hit him?" Schorre asked.

"Yes sir," he replied. "They got his rings and his money."

He testified the defendant, Dorn, and his brother then put Wilson's body in the back of the Datsun and drove off.

McKee said the men returned about an hour later with their shirts and pants covered in blood.

He said a sack with rings, a necklace and some money was emptied in his presence.

He also testified he was given $50 cash, and the other three divided up the jewelry.

McKee pointed out Chambers in the courtroom as the man who grabbed Wilson.

He also identified from a photograph a piece of jewelry identical to that believed worn by Wilson when he was killed.

Robert Sutphen, Chamber's attorney, questioned McKee about seemingly conflicting statements he had given Weddell of the Midland County Sheriff's office in August 1985.

He admitted that in a statement given August 5 he said he stayed in his apartment and did not see the crime, and when asked who committed the murder then he said "Jackie and Elroy."

Sutphen read a part of that statement to the jury, which did not mention Chambers.

In it, McKee said Jackie and Elroy returned to his apartment after the body was dumped, and he said "Jackie was laughing and joking about how he and Elroy had rolled a man."

In another statement two days later, he mentioned someone named "James" participated in the killing.

"And you were just an innocent bystander?" Sutphen asked.

"Yes sir," McKee said.

Earlier, Patricia McKee, wife of Leroy, testified she was at the apartment the night of the murder.

"I was living with my husband, but I didn't know anything about anyone getting hurt," she told First Assistant D.A. David Rosado.

"But Elroy, Leroy, James and Jackie, they came in with blood on them...what I can remember is that they all had blood on them."

She said Elroy McKee tried to sell her some of the stolen jewelry, but she refused.

Mrs. McKee identified Chambers as the man she saw the night of the murder with blood on him, and said he and the other men "were all laughing" about the murder.

Bret Grove, a former investigator with the sheriff's office, testified the body was found near the road. He said dirt found on Wilson's pants, and heel marks in the dirt leading from the road to where the body was found indicated the killing probably took place elsewhere.

He said after the body was found, Wilson's car was found parked at the Kingsway Inn. He said there was blood, and some brain matter, found in the car.

Dr. Christopher Hall, a Midland pathologist who did not perform the autopsy but studied the report, said Wilson's death was caused by a massive skull fracture. He said the blow to the man's skull shattered it into eight pieces.

Elroy McKee was tried in March and received a life sentence for the murder and 20 years for the robbery.

Chambers was arrested April 25 and Dorn, who is scheduled to be tried in Judge Baskin's court August 26, were arrested April 24 following their indictment April 23.

Authorities never found the murder weapon.

Democrats pick ex-legal aide for JP slot

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Ken Arp, a 38-year-old tax representative and former legal assistant, will be the Democratic Party's nominee for the Midland County justice-of-the-peace term left vacant by ex-JP Charlie Sprayberry.

Ken Arp

Arp will be challenged by the Republican Party nominee, Keith Jobe, a 38-year-old sheriff's investigator, in the Nov. 4 general election.

Both are seeking to fill the unexpired second term of Sprayberry, who was removed from the office he had held since 1981 after he was convicted earlier this year of aggravated sexual assault on his secretary. Sprayberry, 45, ran on the Republican Party ticket.

"We believe Ken Arp is a fine human being," said Chris McCormack, chairman of the Democratic Party nominating committee. "We believe that he will be an able candidate, and when he is elected, he will be an excellent justice of the peace who will serve the community exceptionally well."

Arp, who holds the associate degree in pre-law from Tulsa Junior College and the bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Tulsa, worked for three and a half years as a legal assistant for Midland lawyer Jimmie D. Oglesby in collecting delinquent taxes. Later, he worked for an Austin law firm.

"I worked pretty extensively with the JP's office when I worked for Mr. Oglesby in filing lawsuits to collect delinquent taxes on personal property," Arp said.

As JP, Arp said he would help relieve Justice of Peace Robert H. "Bob" Pine of his heavy case load.

"In the past years, most of the cases that have been filed in JP court have been filed in Judge Pine's court," he said. "There were very few (cases) filed with Sprayberry. I think I can get people to file in both courts."

Arp said he would "like to bring back the integrity of the justice-of-the peace office" once held by Sprayberry. "I think Bob Pine is a great JP," he said. Pine, a Democrat, is running for re-election to the office he has held since 1964.

Arp was born in Lamesa in 1948, moved to Midland County in 1951, attended Midland, Garden City, Imperial and Courtney public schools, and served in Vietnam with the U.S. Marine Corps.

"I'm proud of that fact," he said. He was a Marine from 1967 to 1976.

Arp noted that he earned the four-year bachelor's degree in slightly under three years and held two jobs in working his way through school.

Arp said he wants to encourage people to vote in the general election.

"I want the people to know I will be there (in the JP office) to represent them," Arp said. "My office will be open at all times to anybody."

Shell Oil rejects water contamination allegation

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A $30,900 fine is being recommended against an Odessa oil refinery for water contamination, but company officials say they are contesting Texas Water Commission findings.

"We do not agree that we have contaminated the groundwater, but we are attempting to reach an understanding with the state at this time," said Donald Deister, superintendent of operations for Shell Oil.

A fine was recommended Tuesday against the company for the "unauthorized discharge" of about 35 industrial wastes into groundwater and an "inadequate groundwater monitoring system," Woodfin said.

A sample of seven wells dug by the commission during a routine check on May 30 revealed, "large volumes of various industrial solid and liquid waste disposed in the east pasture area," Woodfin said.

The company is located about three miles southeast of downtown Midland on South Grandview.

However, Deister says, "From our experts and our analysis, we see no impact.

"We as a corporation are dedicated to doing what is required by law, but when you start talking about technical areas, you can often get many different opinions," Deister said.

Using a system called "land farming," the company has tilled residue from processed crude into the soil for several years, Deister said.

"We rely on biological degradation to make the waste harmless," he said.

Also, the groundwater underneath the the pasture is not "palatable" Deister said.

Woodfin agreed that the water contamination posed no threat to any drinking water supplies.

Along with paying the fine, the company must submit a cleanup plan to the commission, Woodfin said.

Shell Oil must respond to the commission charges at an Austin public hearing on Sept. 24. If the commission accepts the recommendation to impose the fine, Shell Oil has 30 days after the hearing to pay it, Woodfin said.

The recommended fine against Shell Oil is not excessive, Woodfin said.

"It's certainly a significant fine, but we have recommended some fines in the hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said.

Shell Oil is the second Odessa firm to be fined by the water commission this year.

Katty Industries, which repairs gas compressor components, received on June 27 a $18,400 fine for dumping wastes into groundwater, Woodfin said.

Sentence 'clear message' to federal employees

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton Tuesday sent a "clear message" to federal employees when he sentenced 23-year-old Thomas Odin Eliason to two years probation for lying before a Federal Aviation Administration board, defense attorney J. Michael Cunningham said.

Eliason, a former air traffic controller at Midland Regional Air Terminal, received the two-year probated sentence after pleading guilty last month to one count — making a false statement to the FAA investigative board.

In a plea-bargaining agreement, Bunton dismissed another count which alleged that Eliason erased that portion of a tape which reflected an "operational error" he had made on Jan. 20.

"I'm very pleased (with the probated sentence)," Cunningham said. "I don't think he (Eliason) is a candidate for incarceration."

However, Cunningham said Bunton made an "example" of Eliason and sent a "clear message" to federal employees that "If you make a mistake and try to cover it up you face severe consequences."

Eliason could have faced up to five years in federal prison.

In pronouncing sentence, Bunton told Eliason:

"I think there is hope for you. I don't think, at this time, incarceration will benefit you."

Cunningham said the "operational error" was in Eliason's failure to keep a 3-mile separation between the two aircraft as required by FAA registration.

The two planes came within 2½ miles of each other, he said.

One plane reportedly was gaining altitude after taking off while the other aircraft was flying overhead.

In a Feb. 4 statement — now part of a court document — made to a FAA special agent, Eliason admitted making the tape erasure of voice recordings made when he was "working at the approach-control position" at the Midland airport.

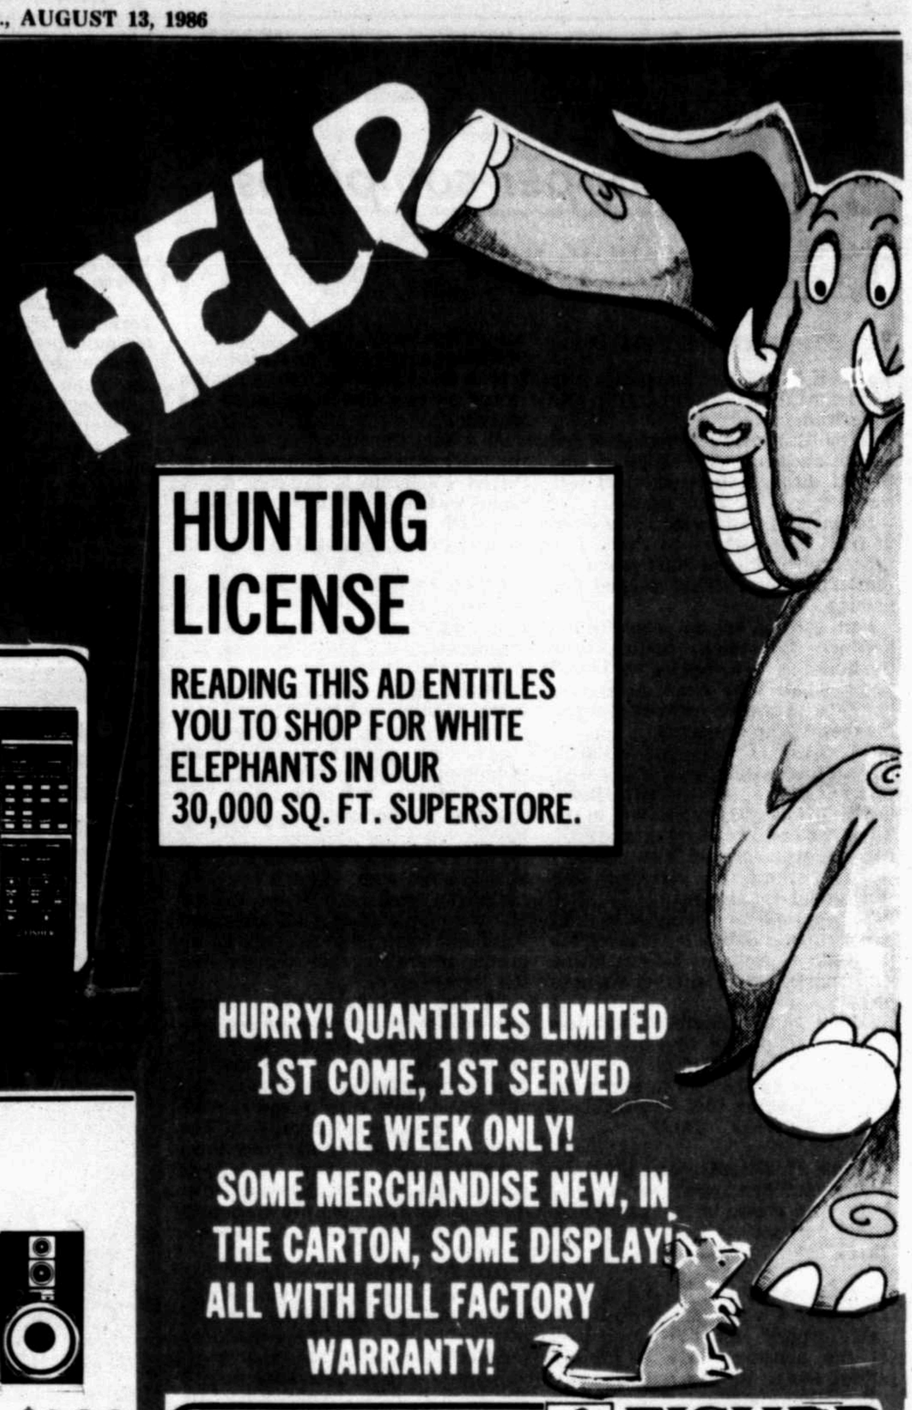

"I was losing separation" between two aircraft, Eliason said in the statement. "I had an operation error."

Later, he admitted giving false statements to the FAA panel about the operational error and acknowledged his mistakes after suffering the pangs of guilt.

The FAA in March relieved Eliason of his air-traffic control duties and re-assigned him to administrative activities.

Eliason has said he values his "job quite highly" and plans to make a career in the FAA.

Leroy McKee, who pleaded guilty to robbery in the case and is serving a 20-year sentence, was called to the stand by the prosecution and was questioned by Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre.

McKee testified he, his wife Patricia, his brother Elroy, the defendant, and another man, Jackie Dorn, were at his apartment at the Kingsway Inn Apartments, 3801 W. Wall, when the victim drove up in his automobile, a Datsun 280ZX.

McKee told the 11 men and one woman on the jury the men were "just talking" when the subject of money came up.

"We were just inside the apartment drinking and listening to music," McKee said.

Schorre then asked, "When he (Wilson) drove up was there any talk among you...about robbing the guy?"

"Just about some money," McKee said.

He said Dorn then mentioned robbing Wilson. McKee said the four men left his apartment and went to the back of the building.

He said the defendant and Dorn attacked Wilson while he was walking back to his car from a nearby package store.

"James grabbed him, pulled him over to the field and Jackie hit him with a jack handle," he said.

He testified Wilson was struck in the head area at least three times, and said he was "in shock" when he saw the incident.

"Did you see Jackie Dorn hit him?" Schorre asked.

"Yes sir," he replied. "They got his rings and his money."

He testified the defendant, Dorn, and his brother then put Wilson's body in the back of the Datsun and drove off.

McKee said the men returned about an hour later with their shirts and pants covered in blood.

He said a sack with rings, a necklace and some money was emptied in his presence.

He also testified he was given $50 cash, and the other three divided up the jewelry.

McKee pointed out Chambers in the courtroom as the man who grabbed Wilson.

He also identified from a photograph a piece of jewelry identical to that believed worn by Wilson when he was killed.

Robert Sutphen, Chamber's attorney, questioned McKee about seemingly conflicting statements he had given Weddell of the Midland County Sheriff's office in August 1985.

He admitted that in a statement given August 5 he said he stayed in his apartment and did not see the crime, and when asked who committed the murder then he said "Jackie and Elroy."

Sutphen read a part of that statement to the jury, which did not mention Chambers.

In it, McKee said Jackie and Elroy returned to his apartment after the body was dumped, and he said "Jackie was laughing and joking about how he and Elroy had rolled a man."

In another statement two days later, he mentioned someone named "James" participated in the killing.

"And you were just an innocent bystander?" Sutphen asked.

"Yes sir," McKee said.

Earlier, Patricia McKee, wife of Leroy, testified she was at the apartment the night of the murder.

"I was living with my husband, but I didn't know anything about anyone getting hurt," she told First Assistant D.A. David Rosado.

"But Elroy, Leroy, James and Jackie, they came in with blood on them...what I can remember is that they all had blood on them."

She said Elroy McKee tried to sell her some of the stolen jewelry, but she refused.

Mrs. McKee identified Chambers as the man she saw the night of the murder with blood on him, and said he and the other men "were all laughing" about the murder.

Bret Grove, a former investigator with the sheriff's office, testified the body was found near the road. He said dirt found on Wilson's pants, and heel marks in the dirt leading from the road to where the body was found indicated the killing probably took place elsewhere.

He said after the body was found, Wilson's car was found parked at the Kingsway Inn. He said there was blood, and some brain matter, found in the car.

Dr. Christopher Hall, a Midland pathologist who did not perform the autopsy but studied the report, said Wilson's death was caused by a massive skull fracture. He said the blow to the man's skull shattered it into eight pieces.

Elroy McKee was tried in March and received a life sentence for the murder and 20 years for the robbery.

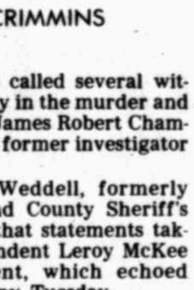

Chambers was arrested April 25 and Dorn, who is scheduled to be tried in Judge Baskin's court August 26, were arrested April 24 following their indictment April 23.

Authorities never found the murder weapon.

Democrats pick ex-legal aide for JP slot

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Ken Arp, a 38-year-old tax representative and former legal assistant, will be the Democratic Party's nominee for the Midland County justice-of-the-peace term left vacant by ex-JP Charlie Sprayberry.

Ken Arp

Arp will be challenged by the Republican Party nominee, Keith Jobe, a 38-year-old sheriff's investigator, in the Nov. 4 general election.

Both are seeking to fill the unexpired second term of Sprayberry, who was removed from the office he had held since 1981 after he was convicted earlier this year of aggravated sexual assault on his secretary. Sprayberry, 45, ran on the Republican Party ticket.

"We believe Ken Arp is a fine human being," said Chris McCormack, chairman of the Democratic Party nominating committee. "We believe that he will be an able candidate, and when he is elected, he will be an excellent justice of the peace who will serve the community exceptionally well."

Arp, who holds the associate degree in pre-law from Tulsa Junior College and the bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Tulsa, worked for three and a half years as a legal assistant for Midland lawyer Jimmie D. Oglesby in collecting delinquent taxes. Later, he worked for an Austin law firm.

"I worked pretty extensively with the JP's office when I worked for Mr. Oglesby in filing lawsuits to collect delinquent taxes on personal property," Arp said.

As JP, Arp said he would help relieve Justice of Peace Robert H. "Bob" Pine of his heavy case load.

"In the past years, most of the cases that have been filed in JP court have been filed in Judge Pine's court," he said. "There were very few (cases) filed with Sprayberry. I think I can get people to file in both courts."

Arp said he would "like to bring back the integrity of the justice-of-the peace office" once held by Sprayberry. "I think Bob Pine is a great JP," he said. Pine, a Democrat, is running for re-election to the office he has held since 1964.

Arp was born in Lamesa in 1948, moved to Midland County in 1951, attended Midland, Garden City, Imperial and Courtney public schools, and served in Vietnam with the U.S. Marine Corps.

"I'm proud of that fact," he said. He was a Marine from 1967 to 1976.

Arp noted that he earned the four-year bachelor's degree in slightly under three years and held two jobs in working his way through school.

Arp said he wants to encourage people to vote in the general election.

"I want the people to know I will be there (in the JP office) to represent them," Arp said. "My office will be open at all times to anybody."

Shell Oil rejects water contamination allegation

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A $30,900 fine is being recommended against an Odessa oil refinery for water contamination, but company officials say they are contesting Texas Water Commission findings.

"We do not agree that we have contaminated the groundwater, but we are attempting to reach an understanding with the state at this time," said Donald Deister, superintendent of operations for Shell Oil.

A fine was recommended Tuesday against the company for the "unauthorized discharge" of about 35 industrial wastes into groundwater and an "inadequate groundwater monitoring system," Woodfin said.

A sample of seven wells dug by the commission during a routine check on May 30 revealed, "large volumes of various industrial solid and liquid waste disposed in the east pasture area," Woodfin said.

The company is located about three miles southeast of downtown Midland on South Grandview.

However, Deister says, "From our experts and our analysis, we see no impact.

"We as a corporation are dedicated to doing what is required by law, but when you start talking about technical areas, you can often get many different opinions," Deister said.

Using a system called "land farming," the company has tilled residue from processed crude into the soil for several years, Deister said.

"We rely on biological degradation to make the waste harmless," he said.

Also, the groundwater underneath the the pasture is not "palatable" Deister said.

Woodfin agreed that the water contamination posed no threat to any drinking water supplies.

Along with paying the fine, the company must submit a cleanup plan to the commission, Woodfin said.

Shell Oil must respond to the commission charges at an Austin public hearing on Sept. 24. If the commission accepts the recommendation to impose the fine, Shell Oil has 30 days after the hearing to pay it, Woodfin said.

The recommended fine against Shell Oil is not excessive, Woodfin said.

"It's certainly a significant fine, but we have recommended some fines in the hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said.

Shell Oil is the second Odessa firm to be fined by the water commission this year.

Katty Industries, which repairs gas compressor components, received on June 27 a $18,400 fine for dumping wastes into groundwater, Woodfin said.

Sentence 'clear message' to federal employees

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton Tuesday sent a "clear message" to federal employees when he sentenced 23-year-old Thomas Odin Eliason to two years probation for lying before a Federal Aviation Administration board, defense attorney J. Michael Cunningham said.

Eliason, a former air traffic controller at Midland Regional Air Terminal, received the two-year probated sentence after pleading guilty last month to one count — making a false statement to the FAA investigative board.

In a plea-bargaining agreement, Bunton dismissed another count which alleged that Eliason erased that portion of a tape which reflected an "operational error" he had made on Jan. 20.

"I'm very pleased (with the probated sentence)," Cunningham said. "I don't think he (Eliason) is a candidate for incarceration."

However, Cunningham said Bunton made an "example" of Eliason and sent a "clear message" to federal employees that "If you make a mistake and try to cover it up you face severe consequences."

Eliason could have faced up to five years in federal prison.

In pronouncing sentence, Bunton told Eliason:

"I think there is hope for you. I don't think, at this time, incarceration will benefit you."

Cunningham said the "operational error" was in Eliason's failure to keep a 3-mile separation between the two aircraft as required by FAA registration.

The two planes came within 2½ miles of each other, he said.

One plane reportedly was gaining altitude after taking off while the other aircraft was flying overhead.

In a Feb. 4 statement — now part of a court document — made to a FAA special agent, Eliason admitted making the tape erasure of voice recordings made when he was "working at the approach-control position" at the Midland airport.

"I was losing separation" between two aircraft, Eliason said in the statement. "I had an operation error."

Later, he admitted giving false statements to the FAA panel about the operational error and acknowledged his mistakes after suffering the pangs of guilt.

The FAA in March relieved Eliason of his air-traffic control duties and re-assigned him to administrative activities.

Eliason has said he values his "job quite highly" and plans to make a career in the FAA.

DEATHS

Mary E. Glover Wilson

SAN ANGELO — Mary Etta Glover Wilson, 71, of San Angelo died Tuesday morning in a San Angelo hospital.

Graveside services were to be today at 2 p.m. at the Fairmount Cemetery in San Angelo with the Rev. Robert Hedges, pastor of the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd, officiating. Services were to be under the direction of Johnson's Funeral Home.

Mrs. Wilson was born Nov. 14, 1914, in Baird. She graduated from the Mary Meek School of Nursing at Hardin-Simmons University and pursued a career in nursing for several years.

She was a past president of the Junior League of San Angelo. She was involved in the Miss Wool pageant, the San Angelo Crippled Children's Center, and Planned Parenthood of San Angelo. She was also a member of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Auxiliary.

Survivors include three sons, John William Wilson, Duke Glover Wilson, and Word B Wilson, all of Midland; three brothers, Joseph Marion Glover Jr., of Gonzales; Ben Ward Glover and Phinias Thomas Glover, both of Springdale, Ark.; five sisters, Christine Glover Monzello of Brownsville; Alma Glover Stephenson and Hope Glover Evans, both of Baird; Ida Mae Glover Waddell of Putnam; Corinne Glover King of Abilene; and 11 grandchildren.

Salary, hiring, expenses freeze called for

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A four-part recommendation — presented Tuesday to Midland school trustees — calls for a freeze on school district salaries, employee hiring and capital expenses during the 1986-87 fiscal year.

The recommendation also asked that the school district conduct a "self inspection" of its function and performance.

Dr. Al G. Langford — speaking on behalf of Tax Awarenees Group — said the four-part recommendation is in response to Midland's sagging oil economy and necessity for all local taxing entities to "cut back."

"This city has been severely wounded," Langford said. "It's kind of tough sometimes to cut back, but we're all going to have to at some time or another."

Trustees in June approved a preliminary 1986-87 budget that is about $57,000 less than last year's despite a projected increase in enrollment and state-mandated expenses.

The proposed 1986-87 tax rate of 79.9 cents per $100 valuation is 9 percent less than the effective rate. About 85 percent of Midland homeowners will pay less or the same taxes than they did in 1985-86.

The board also voted to cut more than $1 million in fringe benefits and administrative costs to compensate for an average 4 percent increase in teacher salaries.

Final approval of the 1986-87 budget and tax rate is expected August 26.

In other business, trustees tabled action on procedures for disciplining athletes, band students and other extracurricular participants who use drugs, alcohol and tobacco.

The proposed policy — part of the MISD's stance against chemical abuse by students — forbids the use or possession of tobacco products, alcohol and/or mood-altering drugs during the period in which a student participates in an extracurricular activity.

The period of participation is defined as the "time between the first and last practice, game or meeting of the activity" and includes out-of-school as well as in-school hours.

Students caught under the influence or in possession of drugs or alcohol would be suspended from extracurricular activities for two weeks on the first offense.

A second violation would result in the student's loss of extracurricular privileges for the remainder of the school year.

If after the second violation the student and family successfully complete an approved chemical dependency program for a minimum of six weeks, the student may be reinstated in MISD activities, under the policy.

Baressi said the penalties are in addition to those imposed by MISD's general chemical abuse policy.

Smith: Oil recovery only through price deregulation

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Recovery of the Permian Basin oil and gas industry will come only through deregulation of prices and withdrawal of governmental intervention, said Republican Lamar Smith, 21st District congressional candidate.

At a Midland fund-raiser Tuesday, Smith said the Reagan administration is coming to appreciate the WestTexas oil and gas crisis.

Smith said he supports the repeal of the windfall profits tax and a temporary oil import fee to help stabilize the economy, although he said he hoped the import fee issue would become moot as the price of oil rises.

If elected, Smith said he would also go to Congress to battle for a depletion allowance and intangible drilling cost allowances.

"The two parts of the energy crisis we face are the low prices and the uncertainty of the situation.

"The prices are higher than they've been in 18 months and I expect them to be up to $17-$20 by the end of the year.

"This would help restore the confidence in the industry — hopefully even in the banker's minds," Smith said.

Smith said history showed that Democrats only looked to the Permian Basin for cheap energy and tax revenues.

In a House vote taken Dec. 17 concerning tax incentives, depletion allowances and intangible drilling costs allowances for the oil and gas industry, across the board, Republicans were for and Democrats were against the issues at stake, Smith said.

He said one can count on a politician to vote the way his party votes. Thus, he stated, a vote for a conservative Democrat would not be a vote for recovery of the oil and gas industry.

"A future for our families will be based on opportunity for growth," Smith said.

This would not be attainable according to Smith, if a Democrat, "favoring a liberal welfare state with a weak defense," is elected to represent the largest congressional district in Texas.

"We can't give handouts. We must encourage individual economic growth."

Odessa man pleads guilty to transport of toxin

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Wayne Ross Brunson, 25, of Odessa pleaded "guilty" Tuesday in federal court to transporting a four-liter bottle of toxic acetic anhydride aboard an American Airlines flight out of Dallas-Fort Worth.

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton set sentencing for noon, Sept. 4.

Brunson was arrested March 15 by the FBI at Midland Regional Air Terminal after a bottle of the toxin broke while being removed from the airliner's baggage compartment.

Testimony by FBI agents Scott French and Victor Houston in a hearing before U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith last month indicated Brunson made his living by picking up the chemical at "drop sites" and transporting it to a "speed lab" where it could be made into illicit methamphetamine or "speed."

Houston testified that Brunson admitted to making about $6,500 a month and that he was paid in "speed" and in cash.

Police reports said Brunson's flight arrived in Midland about noon March 15, but he couldn't locate his luggage. So, he went to the American Airlines counter to report missing luggage under the name of "Mike Hower."

American Airlines ticket agent Dennis Dudley began filling out the missing-luggage report for "Mike Hower," the report said.

Brunson spotted a policeman before the report had been completed and "took off running," reports said.

He was apprehended by Midland Police Sgt. Reece Thurston in front of Air Terminal.

American Airlines supervisor William Thurmon had reported to authorities the "highly toxic chemical substance" on the aircraft.

Brunson initially denied the black canvas bag containing the broken bottle was his and began filling out a second lost-baggage report.

He later admitted that the bag and bottle were his.

Acetic anhydride is a clear, colorless liquid which smells of vinegar, has a flash point of 129 degrees Fahrenheit, and is used to make fibers, plastics, pharmaceuticals, dyes and explosives.

OC trustees approve tax rate making budget $1.1 million less

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The 1986-87 budget for Odessa College will be $1.1 million less than in the current fiscal year.

Meeting in special session Tuesday night, OC trustees approved a tax rate 1.4 cents higher than the previous year that will bring in only $14 million.

According to OC president Dr. Phil Speegle, reduced taxable values and an estimated 13 percent cut in state funding will mean no salary increases. Reduced revenues, however, will result in only minor program cuts, he said.

The tax rate of 14.4 cents per $100 of appraised value approved by trustees is expected to increase taxes on a $50,000 home by about 24 cents.

The actual amount of funds OC will receive from state coffers this year will not be known until state legislators meeting in special session decide how state spending will be funded.

Search for buried cyanide in cemetery proves futile

AUSTIN (AP) — A search for a pound of buried cyanide in a North Austin cemetery proved fruitless after two days of digging.

"I was hoping we'd find something just to put the matter to rest," said Tim Powell with the Austin-Travis County Health Department.

He said Tuesday all that remains in the effort is for the Rollins Environmental Services Co. to complete tests of soil samples, which may show traces of the suspected cyanide and other toxic chemicals believed buried in the cemetery about 30 years ago. The tests are expected to take several weeks to complete.

Powell said the only thing the workers found in the cemetery — used by the Austin State Hospital for the burial of poor patients and body parts from official autopsies — was some old Coca Cola bottles and a few bones.

"We more than tripled the area pointed out to us as the suspected location of the cyanide," he said. "We took soil samples and dug pits and then dug lateral trenches beyond the pits to see if we could find anything. We'll just have to wait to see if we get any positive readings on the samples. We know where they were taken from."

The Rollins firm was hired at the direction of the health agency by the state hospital after Kenny Dudley, hospital director, confirmed the recollection of a former hospital official that toxic chemicals had been buried in the cemetery in the late 1950s and early 1960s.

Fred Lara, a retired doctor of pharmacy and former director of the hospital's toxicology laboratory, said he recalled burial of a pound of cyanide that apparently had been ordered by mistake. Several other current and former hospital employees also remembered chemicals in bottles being buried there although Dudley said no records of the burials could be found.

Woman gives birth to son along Houston freeway

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston woman delayed en route to the hospital by a flat tire gave birth to a healthy son in an ambulance parked alongside a freeway.

Joretta Silas and her baby are reported in good condition today at Jefferson Davis Hospital, hospital officials said.

"This is a miracle baby, a baby born on the freeway," LHlian Blackmon, Ms. Silas's godmother, said.

Ms. Blackmon said she and two friends had taken Ms. Silas to a doctor Tuesday when Ms. Silas went into labor at the doctor's office. All three were on the way to the hospital when their car's front tire blew out, Ms. Blackmon said.

Odessa man to be arraigned on robbery charge

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 23-year-old man was scheduled to be arraigned in Municipal Court late this morning on an aggravated robbery charge in connection with the Tuesday night robbery of a near-downtown convenience store.

Police spokesman Cpt. John McAhon said the suspect was apprehended by a K-9 unit officer a short time after the 10:36 p.m. robbery of the Stop-N-Go store, 604 E. 8th St.

Clerk Mary Pittman, 22, told investigating officers a male in his mid-to-late 20s entered the store, produced a large-bladed knife and demanded she give him all the money from the cash register. She said she gave him currency and change amounting to $37 and he left the store on foot.

Ector County jury sentences 18-year-old

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 70th District Court jury of six women and six men late Tuesday afternoon sentenced an 18-year-old man to 35 years in prison for the March 2 aggravated sexual assault of a 79-year-old woman in her home.

Benny Ray Hudson Jr., 1001 W. Ada St., had earlier pleaded guilty to the sexual assault charge.

Prosecutors indicated they also plan to bring Hudson to trial again in connection with the November 1985 aggravated sexual assault of an 83-year-old woman.

Testimony during the punishment phase of the trial indicated Hudson forcibly entered the elderly woman's home to rob her. In a statement given police, Hudson said he had his eyes on a television set when the woman asked who was in the house. When she tried to strike him with a radio, he said, he struck her with a screwdriver, removed her nightgown and sexually assaulted her.

Assistant District Attorney Preston Stevens asked jurors to assess Hudson the maximum punishment, but his attorney, Anthony Foster, saying Hudson was trying to rehabilitate himself, asked jurors to consider the full range of punishment, from five to 99 years.

Police records show three residences sustained heavy losses in burglaries

From Staff Reports

Midland Police Department records show three residential burglaries of considerable value took place over the past 24 hours.

A burglary of a residence was reported Tuesday by Pat Jennings, 3515 Wedgewood.

After entering through a bedroom patio door, the burglar or burglars stole jewelry and a typewriter, reports said.

Later in the day, Harold Howard, 1811 E. Magnolia, was the complaintant in another residential burglary.

Taken were a camera in its case, two gold nuggets, a gold bracelet and coins.

Stolen from the residence of Jeannie Medlin, 600 W. Cuthbert, Tuesday, were a 19-inch General Electric color television set and an AM/FM cassette stereo, valued at $400.

Jack's Frozen Yogurt, 4344 W. Illinois, reported a theft of $129 in cash Tuesday afternoon.

A Smith and Wesson 9 mm revolver, valued at $300, was stolen from Chris Vanvaghie, 303 W. Estes Ave. Tuesday afternoon.

Needa Faught, 2808 Stutz Drive, reported a heater, weedeater, lawn edger and two storm assemblies were stolen from her residence on Tuesday.

"We just didn't think they were entitled to any increase," said Poe, who banded together with a committee comprised of the 63 cities involved.

"We wanted to look out for the interest of the citizen."

Some 25,000 Midlanders use natural gas, Poe said.

Weststar apparently dropped their proposal and agreed to pay all attorney fees in the case, Poe said.

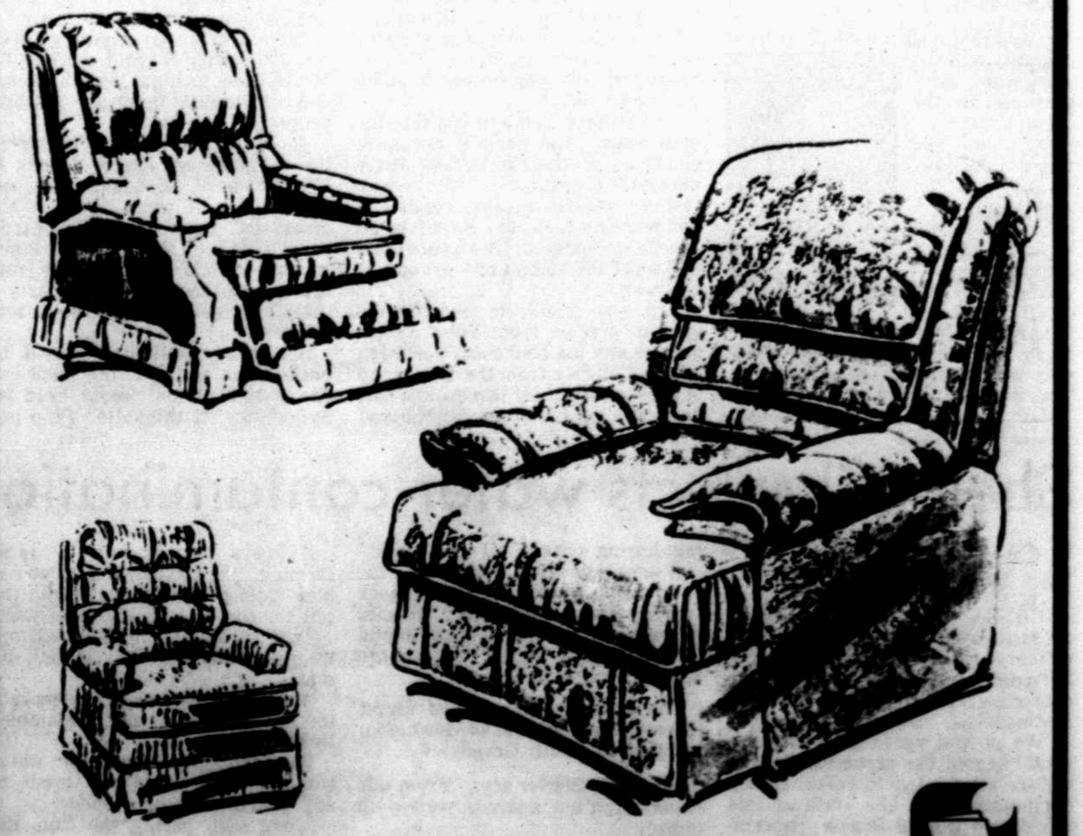

The Council also approved an ordinance making certain conduct illegal at Hogan Park golf course.

Conduct disrupting play or persons driving their golf carts off the designated paths will be subject to a fine of no more than $200.

Roach product sterilizes any young survivors

AP Laserphoto

NEW YORK (AP) — An actor dressed as a laboratory scientist holds up a test tube filled with murky liquid and launches yet another weapon into the centuries-old war against cockroaches.

"It's birth control for roaches," the "scientist" says in commercials for Black Flag, the second-biggest brand name in a $200 million a year business.

The product, named Roach Ender, joins the arsenal of powders, liquids, sprays, bait, foggers and traps that people are deploying with varying degrees of success against the resilient bugs.

Roach Ender contains both a conventional insecticide and an ingredient to sterilize any young survivors, Black Flag marketers say. They hope it will increase the market share that its maker, American Home Products Corp., holds in the roach killer category.

S.C. Johnson & Son Inc.'s Raid brand presently is the market leader with a share estimated by the companies involved at 40 percent to 45 percent.

Black Flag is in second place with 15 percent to 25 percent of the market, the companies say. American Cyanamid Co.'s new Combat has 10 percent to 15 percent of the market, Sterling Drug Inc.'s D-Con has about 10 percent and a variety of principally regional brands accounts for the remainder.

The latest Black Flag ads are markedly different in tone than the humorous approach that had characterized its advertising.

Raid, which has 11 roach-killing products, has been using cartoon-like bugs in its commercials for nearly 30 years, according to John Bleharski, who oversees marketing the Raid brands.

"It's a way to deal with a distasteful subject tastefully," he said.

Black Flag has taken a similar approach in the past by using its own cartoon-like bugs who made the mistake of dropping in at one of its "Roach Motels."

But the company shifted gears this year, according to Edward J. Dougherty, category director at the Boyle-Midway division of American Home Products, because it felt the message of a new technological development warranted it.

In its 30-second commercial called "Laboratory," the scholarly-looking man in the white coat proclaims "an advance in biotechnology that goes beyond other roach killers."

"Other products kill, but survivors breed thousands more roaches," the actor says. "New Roach Ender kills and sterilizes young survivors so they can't reproduce. It's birth control for roaches."

Or at least birth control for some roaches.

Dougherty said the birth control ingredient, developed by some of the same scientists involved in work on developing a human birth control pill, inhibits the growth of young roaches, preventing them from reaching sexual maturity.

But adult roaches that survive the insecticide would be unaffected by the sterilization ingredient, he said.

Bleharski said the Racine, Wis.-based Johnson & Son plans to spend about $10 million advertising Raid roach products. Dougherty said American Home was spending $10 million to advertise Roach Ender and another $10 million to advertise a half-dozen other Black Flag roach killers.

Laboratory cyanide lethal in hands of thieves

NEW YORK (AP) — A University of Texas student didn't buy the cyanide he used to kill himself. He took it from a laboratory.

So did a technician at Washington State University. The woman died of cyanide poisoning after taking two Tylenol capsules, and officials said the poison came from her lab.

The way the two got their cyanide shows the problem facing those seeking to end product tampering. Cyanide is everywhere, and clever thieves who take some safety precautions can steal enough to kill.

"Enough" can be just a pinch. Three people have died this year after unknowingly taking cyanide-tainted pain relievers. In all, 10 people have been killed and at least three others have committed suicide by taking medicine poisoned with cyanide since 1982.

In recent weeks, authorities have received dozens of calls from people claiming to have added cyanide to products. Although none has produced an actual case of tampering, thousands of dollars worth of products were removed from shelves.

Cyanide is extraordinarily dangerous; the substance can enter the bloodstream if merely spilled on unbroken skin. Although careless handling could lead to accidental poisoning, a thief would not need any special knowledge to handle cyanide, said Jay Young, a chemical safety consultant; the labels explain what precautions to take.

It is likely that a cyanide killer would steal the product rather than try to get it through more difficult legitimate means. Over-the-counter drug manufacturers have called for a study to see if access to cyanide can be limited, although limitations could prove difficult because of its widespread use.

Cyanide is vital in processes from cleaning, refining and hardening metals to art printing, cement making, disinfecting, photoengraving, metal plating, soldering and tanning leather.

"The number of occupations where there is exposure to cyanide is all the way from A to Z, acid dippers all the way to zinc platers," said William Grigg, a spokesman for the federal Food and Drug Administration.

E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. — the world's largest manufacturer of the poison and the only one in the United States — is seeking new safeguards against theft.

Du Pont, which makes more than 100 million pounds of cyanide each year, is trying to develop a seal for its 200-pound drums that would signal if the drums were opened without authorization.

But that would have little effect on the smaller users, like chemical laboratories and electroplating shops, where cyanide is most readily available, said Marshall Baker, business manager for Du Pont's industrial chemical division. They number in the thousands and get their cyanide from various sources.

FFA losing students

HOUSTON (AP) — Education reforms and the depressed farm economy are taking their toll on the Future Farmers of America, a vocational club that is losing students after its recent boom in secondary-school membership, officials say.

Three years ago, 136 students enrolled in agriculture classes at Cypress Creek High School in Houston, and there were plans to add a fourth agriculture teacher.

But FFA enrollment dropped to 92 students last year, and agriculture teachers now must teach other subjects.

Statewide, enrollment fell 3.5 percent from 55,336 students in 1985 to 53,380 students this year, said Jay Eudy, the Texas Education Agency's director of agricultural education.

"We're starting to feel like Custer," vocational agriculture teacher Larry Cooper said.

In the fall, Cooper expects to teach biology for the first time since joining the Cypress-Fairbanks Independent School District 22 years ago.

"We're probably not going to have enough to even maintain two full-time ag teachers this year," he said.

Under educational reforms passed by the 1984 Texas Legislature, students were given an advanced curriculum option that reduced the time available for elective courses.

The no pass, no play rule also prohibits students who fail a class from participating in extracurricular activities, including FFA, for the ensuing six-week grading period.

"When I first got into ag, it was booming. That was the thing to do," said Daryl Smith, a 1986 graduate of Cypress-Fairbanks High School. "And once no pass, no play came in, it really killed ag."

Smith, 18, belongs to a family of farmers, who in better times made agriculture their work. Smith joined FFA, raising and showing rabbits, hogs, heifers and steers for the club's annual projects.

Salary, hiring, expenses freeze called for

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A four-part recommendation — presented Tuesday to Midland school trustees — calls for a freeze on school district salaries, employee hiring and capital expenses during the 1986-87 fiscal year.

The recommendation also asked that the school district conduct a "self inspection" of its function and performance.

Dr. Al G. Langford — speaking on behalf of Tax Awarenees Group — said the four-part recommendation is in response to Midland's sagging oil economy and necessity for all local taxing entities to "cut back."

"This city has been severely wounded," Langford said. "It's kind of tough sometimes to cut back, but we're all going to have to at some time or another."

Trustees in June approved a preliminary 1986-87 budget that is about $57,000 less than last year's despite a projected increase in enrollment and state-mandated expenses.

The proposed 1986-87 tax rate of 79.9 cents per $100 valuation is 9 percent less than the effective rate. About 85 percent of Midland homeowners will pay less or the same taxes than they did in 1985-86.

The board also voted to cut more than $1 million in fringe benefits and administrative costs to compensate for an average 4 percent increase in teacher salaries.

Final approval of the 1986-87 budget and tax rate is expected August 26.

In other business, trustees tabled action on procedures for disciplining athletes, band students and other extracurricular participants who use drugs, alcohol and tobacco.

The proposed policy — part of the MISD's stance against chemical abuse by students — forbids the use or possession of tobacco products, alcohol and/or mood-altering drugs during the period in which a student participates in an extracurricular activity.

The period of participation is defined as the "time between the first and last practice, game or meeting of the activity" and includes out-of-school as well as in-school hours.

Students caught under the influence or in possession of drugs or alcohol would be suspended from extracurricular activities for two weeks on the first offense.

A second violation would result in the student's loss of extracurricular privileges for the remainder of the school year.

If after the second violation the student and family successfully complete an approved chemical dependency program for a minimum of six weeks, the student may be reinstated in MISD activities, under the policy.

Baressi said the penalties are in addition to those imposed by MISD's general chemical abuse policy.

Smith: Oil recovery only through price deregulation

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Recovery of the Permian Basin oil and gas industry will come only through deregulation of prices and withdrawal of governmental intervention, said Republican Lamar Smith, 21st District congressional candidate.

At a Midland fund-raiser Tuesday, Smith said the Reagan administration is coming to appreciate the WestTexas oil and gas crisis.

Smith said he supports the repeal of the windfall profits tax and a temporary oil import fee to help stabilize the economy, although he said he hoped the import fee issue would become moot as the price of oil rises.

If elected, Smith said he would also go to Congress to battle for a depletion allowance and intangible drilling cost allowances.

"The two parts of the energy crisis we face are the low prices and the uncertainty of the situation.

"The prices are higher than they've been in 18 months and I expect them to be up to $17-$20 by the end of the year.

"This would help restore the confidence in the industry — hopefully even in the banker's minds," Smith said.

Smith said history showed that Democrats only looked to the Permian Basin for cheap energy and tax revenues.

In a House vote taken Dec. 17 concerning tax incentives, depletion allowances and intangible drilling costs allowances for the oil and gas industry, across the board, Republicans were for and Democrats were against the issues at stake, Smith said.

He said one can count on a politician to vote the way his party votes. Thus, he stated, a vote for a conservative Democrat would not be a vote for recovery of the oil and gas industry.

"A future for our families will be based on opportunity for growth," Smith said.

This would not be attainable according to Smith, if a Democrat, "favoring a liberal welfare state with a weak defense," is elected to represent the largest congressional district in Texas.

"We can't give handouts. We must encourage individual economic growth."

OC trustees approve tax rate making budget $1.1 million less

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The 1986-87 budget for Odessa College will be $1.1 million less than in the current fiscal year.

Meeting in special session Tuesday night, OC trustees approved a tax rate 1.4 cents higher than the previous year that will bring in only $14 million.

According to OC president Dr. Phil Speegle, reduced taxable values and an estimated 13 percent cut in state funding will mean no salary increases. Reduced revenues, however, will result in only minor program cuts, he said.

The tax rate of 14.4 cents per $100 of appraised value approved by trustees is expected to increase taxes on a $50,000 home by about 24 cents.

The actual amount of funds OC will receive from state coffers this year will not be known until state legislators meeting in special session decide how state spending will be funded.

Odessa man pleads guilty to transport of toxin

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Wayne Ross Brunson, 25, of Odessa pleaded "guilty" Tuesday in federal court to transporting a four-liter bottle of toxic acetic anhydride aboard an American Airlines flight out of Dallas-Fort Worth.

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton set sentencing for noon, Sept. 4.

Brunson was arrested March 15 by the FBI at Midland Regional Air Terminal after a bottle of the toxin broke while being removed from the airliner's baggage compartment.

Testimony by FBI agents Scott French and Victor Houston in a hearing before U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith last month indicated Brunson made his living by picking up the chemical at "drop sites" and transporting it to a "speed lab" where it could be made into illicit methamphetamine or "speed."

Houston testified that Brunson admitted to making about $6,500 a month and that he was paid in "speed" and in cash.

Police reports said Brunson's flight arrived in Midland about noon March 15, but he couldn't locate his luggage. So, he went to the American Airlines counter to report missing luggage under the name of "Mike Hower."

American Airlines ticket agent Dennis Dudley began filling out the missing-luggage report for "Mike Hower," the report said.

Brunson spotted a policeman before the report had been completed and "took off running," reports said.

He was apprehended by Midland Police Sgt. Reece Thurston in front of Air Terminal.

American Airlines supervisor William Thurmon had reported to authorities the "highly toxic chemical substance" on the aircraft.

Brunson initially denied the black canvas bag containing the broken bottle was his and began filling out a second lost-baggage report.

He later admitted that the bag and bottle were his.

Acetic anhydride is a clear, colorless liquid which smells of vinegar, has a flash point of 129 degrees Fahrenheit, and is used to make fibers, plastics, pharmaceuticals, dyes and explosives.

Search for buried cyanide in cemetery proves futile

AUSTIN (AP) — A search for a pound of buried cyanide in a North Austin cemetery proved fruitless after two days of digging.

"I was hoping we'd find something just to put the matter to rest," said Tim Powell with the Austin-Travis County Health Department.

He said Tuesday all that remains in the effort is for the Rollins Environmental Services Co. to complete tests of soil samples, which may show traces of the suspected cyanide and other toxic chemicals believed buried in the cemetery about 30 years ago. The tests are expected to take several weeks to complete.

Powell said the only thing the workers found in the cemetery — used by the Austin State Hospital for the burial of poor patients and body parts from official autopsies — was some old Coca Cola bottles and a few bones.

"We more than tripled the area pointed out to us as the suspected location of the cyanide," he said. "We took soil samples and dug pits and then dug lateral trenches beyond the pits to see if we could find anything. We'll just have to wait to see if we get any positive readings on the samples. We know where they were taken from."

The Rollins firm was hired at the direction of the health agency by the state hospital after Kenny Dudley, hospital director, confirmed the recollection of a former hospital official that toxic chemicals had been buried in the cemetery in the late 1950s and early 1960s.

Fred Lara, a retired doctor of pharmacy and former director of the hospital's toxicology laboratory, said he recalled burial of a pound of cyanide that apparently had been ordered by mistake. Several other current and former hospital employees also remembered chemicals in bottles being buried there although Dudley said no records of the burials could be found.

Woman gives birth to son along Houston freeway

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston woman delayed en route to the hospital by a flat tire gave birth to a healthy son in an ambulance parked alongside a freeway.

Joretta Silas and her baby are reported in good condition today at Jefferson Davis Hospital, hospital officials said.

"This is a miracle baby, a baby born on the freeway," LiHian Blackmon, Ms. Silas's godmother, said.

Ms. Blackmon said she and two friends had taken Ms. Silas to a doctor Tuesday when Ms. Silas went into labor at the doctor's office. All three were on the way to the hospital when their car's front tire blew out, Ms. Blackmon said.

Odessa man to be arraigned on robbery charge

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 23-year-old man was scheduled to be arraigned in Municipal Court late this morning on an aggravated robbery charge in connection with the Tuesday night robbery of a near-downtown convenience store.

Police spokesman Cpt. John McAhon said the suspect was apprehended by a K-9 unit officer a short time after the 10:36 p.m. robbery of the Stop-N-Go store, 604 E. 8th St.

Clerk Mary Pittman, 22, told investigating officers a male in his mid-to-late 20s entered the store, produced a large-bladed knife and demanded she give him all the money from the cash register. She said she gave him currency and change amounting to $37 and he left the store on foot.

Ector County jury sentences 18-year-old

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 70th District Court jury of six women and six men late Tuesday afternoon sentenced an 18-year-old man to 35 years in prison for the March 2 aggravated sexual assault of a 79-year-old woman in her home.

Benny Ray Hudson Jr., 1001 W. Ada St., had earlier pleaded guilty to the sexual assault charge.

Prosecutors indicated they also plan to bring Hudson to trial again in connection with the November 1985 aggravated sexual assault of an 83-year-old woman.

Testimony during the punishment phase of the trial indicated Hudson forcibly entered the elderly woman's home to rob her. In a statement given police, Hudson said he had his eyes on a television set when the woman asked who was in the house. When she tried to strike him with a radio, he said, he struck her with a screwdriver, removed her nightgown and sexually assaulted her.

Assistant District Attorney Preston Stevens asked jurors to assess Hudson the maximum punishment, but his attorney, Anthony Foster, saying Hudson was trying to rehabilitate himself, asked jurors to consider the full range of punishment, from five to 99 years.

Police records show three residences sustained heavy losses in burglaries

From Staff Reports

Midland Police Department records show three residential burglaries of considerable value took place over the past 24 hours.

A burglary of a residence was reported Tuesday by Pat Jennings, 3515 Wedgewood.

After entering through a bedroom patio door, the burglar or burglars stole jewelry and a typewriter, reports said.

Later in the day, Harold Howard, 1811 E. Magnolia, was the complaintant in another residential burglary.

Taken were a camera in its case, two gold nuggets, a gold bracelet and coins.

Stolen from the residence of Jeannie Medlin, 600 W. Cuthbert, Tuesday, were a 19-inch General Electric color television set and an AM/FM cassette stereo, valued at $400.

Jack's Frozen Yogurt, 4944 W. Illinois, reported a theft of $129 in cash Tuesday afternoon.

A Smith and Wesson 9 mm revolver, valued at $300, was stolen from Chris Vanvaghie, 303 W. Estes Ave. Tuesday afternoon.

Needa Faught, 2808 Stutz Drive, reported a heater, weedeater, lawn edger and two storm assemblies were stolen from her residence on Tuesday.

Roach product sterilizes any young survivors

NEW YORK (AP) — An actor dressed as a laboratory scientist holds up a test tube filled with murky liquid and launches yet another weapon into the centuries-old war against cockroaches.

"It's birth control for roaches," the "scientist" says in commercials for Black Flag, the second-biggest brand name in a $200 million a year business.

The product, named Roach Ender, joins the arsenal of powders, liquids, sprays, bait, foggers and traps that people are deploying with varying degrees of success against the resilient bugs.

Roach Ender contains both a conventional insecticide and an ingredient to sterilize any young survivors, Black Flag marketers say. They hope it will increase the market share that its maker, American Home Products Corp., holds in the roach killer category.

S.C. Johnson & Son Inc.'s Raid brand presently is the market leader with a share estimated by the companies involved at 40 percent to 45 percent.

Black Flag is in second place with 15 percent to 25 percent of the market, the companies say. American Cyanamid Co.'s new Combat has 10 percent to 15 percent of the market, Sterling Drug Inc.'s D-Con has about 10 percent and a variety of principally regional brands accounts for the remainder.

The latest Black Flag ads are markedly different in tone than the humorous approach that had characterized its advertising.

Raid, which has 11 roach-killing products, has been using cartoon-like bugs in its commercials for nearly 30 years, according to John Bleharski, who oversees marketing the Raid brands.

"It's a way to deal with a distasteful subject tastefully," he said.

Black Flag has taken a similar approach in the past by using its own cartoon-like bugs who made the mistake of dropping in at one of its "Roach Motels."

But the company shifted gears this year, according to Edward J. Dougherty, category director at the Boyle-Midway division of American Home Products, because it felt the message of a new technological development warranted it.

AP Lasergraphic

In its 30-second commercial called "Laboratory," the scholarly-looking man in the white coat proclaims "an advance in biotechnology that goes beyond other roach killers."

"Other products kill, but survivors breed thousands more roaches," the actor says. "New Roach Ender kills and sterilizes young survivors so they can't reproduce. It's birth control for roaches."

Or at least birth control for some roaches.

Dougherty said the birth control ingredient, developed by some of the same scientists involved in work on developing a human birth control pill, inhibits the growth of young roaches, preventing them from reaching sexual maturity.

But adult roaches that survive the insecticide would be unaffected by the sterilization ingredient, he said.

Bleharski said the Racine, Wis.-based Johnson & Son plans to spend about $10 million advertising Raid roach products. Dougherty said American Home was spending $10 million to advertise Roach Ender and another $10 million to advertise a half-dozen other Black Flag roach killers.

Laboratory cyanide lethal in hands of thieves

NEW YORK (AP) — A University of Texas student didn't buy the cyanide he used to kill himself. He took it from a laboratory.

So did a technician at Washington State University. The woman died of cyanide poisoning after taking two Tylenol capsules, and officials said the poison came from her lab.

The way the two got their cyanide shows the problem facing those seeking to end product tampering. Cyanide is everywhere, and clever thieves who take some safety precautions can steal enough to kill.

"Enough" can be just a pinch. Three people have died this year after unknowingly taking cyanide-tainted pain relievers. In all, 10 people have been killed and at least three others have committed suicide by taking medicine poisoned with cyanide since 1982.

In recent weeks, authorities have received dozens of calls from people claiming to have added cyanide to products. Although none has produced an actual case of tampering, thousands of dollars worth of products were removed from shelves.

Cyanide is extraordinarily dangerous; the substance can enter the bloodstream if merely spilled on unbroken skin. Although careless handling could lead to accidental poisoning, a thief would not need any special knowledge to handle cyanide, said Jay Young, a chemical safety consultant; the labels explain what precautions to take.

It is likely that a cyanide killer would steal the product rather than try to get it through more difficult legitimate means. Over-the-counter drug manufacturers have called for a study to see if access to cyanide can be limited, although limitations could prove difficult because of its widespread use.

Cyanide is vital in processes from cleaning, refining and hardening metals to art printing, cement making, disinfecting, photoengraving, metal plating, soldering and tanning leather.

"The number of occupations where there is exposure to cyanide is all the way from A to Z, acid dippers all the way to zinc platers," said William Grigg, a spokesman for the federal Food and Drug Administration.

E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. — the world's largest manufacturer of the poison and the only one in the United States — is seeking new safeguards against theft.

Du Pont, which makes more than 100 million pounds of cyanide each year, is trying to develop a seal for its 200-pound drums that would signal if the drums were opened without authorization.

But that would have little effect on the smaller users, like chemical laboratories and electroplating shops, where cyanide is most readily available, said Marshall Baker, business manager for Du Pont's industrial chemical division. They number in the thousands and get their cyanide from various sources.

FFA losing students

HOUSTON (AP) — Education reforms and the depressed farm economy are taking their toll on the Future Farmers of America, a vocational club that is losing students after its recent boom in secondary-school membership, officials say.

Three years ago, 136 students enrolled in agriculture classes at Cypress Creek High School in Houston, and there were plans to add a fourth agriculture teacher.

But FFA enrollment dropped to 92 students last year, and agriculture teachers now must teach other subjects.

Statewide, enrollment fell 3.5 percent from 55,336 students in 1985 to 53,380 students this year, said Jay Eudy, the Te~as Education Agency's director of a ricultural education.

"We're s arting to feel like Custer," vocational agriculture teacher Larry Cooper said.

In the fall, Cooper expects to teach biology for the first time since joining the Cypress-Fairbanks Independent School District 22 years ago.

"We're probably not going to have enough to even maintain two full-time ag teachers this year," he said.

Under educational reforms passed by the 1984 Texas Legislature, students were given an advanced curriculum option that reduced the time available for elective courses.

The no pass, no play rule also prohibits students who fail a class from participating in extracurricular activities, including FFA, for the ensuing six-week grading period.

"When I first got into ag, it was booming. That was the thing to do," said Daryl Smith, a 1986 graduate of Cypress-Fairbanks High School. "And once no pass, no play came in, it really killed ag."

Smith, 18, belongs to a family of farmers, who in better times made agriculture their work. Smith joined FFA, raising and showing rabbits, hogs, heifers and steers for the club's annual projects.

Soviet official, delegation arrive to discuss world issues

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A Soviet Foreign Ministry official and his delegation arrived in Washington Tuesday for several days of meetings with American officials that are to begin Wednesday, the State Department said Tuesday.

The meetings will cover Soviet-American issues such as human rights, cultural and scientific exchanges and administrative matters, a State Department spokesman said.

The meetings are part of a series of talks to prepare for a meeting in September between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze. The Shultz-Shevardnadze meeting is intended to prepare for a meeting later this year between President Reagan and Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The Soviet official heading the delegation, Vitaly A. Mikolchak, is a deputy chief of the Foreign Ministry's Department of the United States and Canada, the State Department said. Mikolchak will meet primarily with Thomas W. Simons Jr., a deputy assistant secretary of the State Department's Bureau of European and Canadian Affairs.

Other Soviet-American meetings are also planned in advance of a summit meeting, including a session on Afghanistan in early September.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Castro gets Order of Lenin to designate 60th birthday

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro received the Order of Lenin from the Soviet Union to mark his 60th birthday, the official Cuban news agency Prensa Latina said Tuesday night.

Prensa Latina, in a dispatch monitored in Mexico City, said Castro, whose birthday is Wednesday, received the high Soviet award "for his contribution and consolidation of peace and socialism."

The news agency said Castro also received numerous other awards and messages of congratulations to mark his birthday from the Soviet bloc nations of Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Mongolia, Hungary and Poland.

Five-day work week tried

PEKING (AP) — China's communist government will experiment with five-day work weeks during the current 1986-1990 economic plan, the official China Daily said today.

It said a 40-hour week will replace the national work schedule of six eight-hour days in certain sectors, but gave no date for the beginning of the program.

The newspaper quoted Bi Dachuan, vice president of the National Research Center for Science and Technology, as saying industrial enterprises and public service industries would be the first to try the shortened work week.

Opposition calls strike

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — An opposition coalition has called for a dawn-to-noon nationwide general strike Sept. 1, to protest President Gen. Hussain Muhammad Ershad's military rule.

The eight-party opposition alliance led by Sheikh Hasina Wajed said in a news release Tuesday night that it has asked Bangladeshis to stage street demonstrations on the day of the strike.

The alliance is also protesting a special presidential security force empowered to shoot and kill anyone who tries to escape arrest.

Ershad came to power in a bloodless military coup on March 23, 1982.

Villagers fear oppression

WASHINGTON — A Guatemalan program of rural security patrols is being used as an instrument of government oppression, Americas Watch, a New York-based human-rights group, charged in a report released Tuesday.

The patrols, called Self-Defense Civil Patrols, enlist villagers to police the areas near their homes. Most patrols are made up of Indians from Guatemala's mountains.

Reagan may veto Pentagon budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says President Reagan may veto a Pentagon budget bill being written in the House because the measure contains several major restrictions on Reagan's defense programs.

The Democratic-controlled chamber clamped two more brakes on the Pentagon build up on Wednesday in votes that generally split along party lines. Final passage of the bill is expected before the House adjourns this week for a three-week Labor Day recess.

The House voted 222-197 to continue a ban on testing of anti-satellite weapons, a halt imposed last year by Congress and which has been strongly opposed by the White House.

Then the chamber gave 210-209 passage of a ban on producing nerve gas weapons, reversing last year's House vote which had given Reagan the only weapon previously denied him as part of his Pentagon build-up.

In earlier decisions, the House voted to impose a one-year ban on U.S. nuclear tests, a ban against constructing nuclear weapons that would violate the SALT II treaty and a freeze on "Star Wars" anti-missile research money.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes criticized the House action.

"Any limitation by the legislative branch, even through (the) appropriation process, on the executive branch in the conduct of foreign policy would be regarded very seriously here and it would be something the president would consider vetoing," Speakes said.

Speakes noted the U.S.-Soviet arms control efforts are at "a very serious stage" and said the administration needs to build and test new weapons to show American resolve.

But before the bill reaches Reagan's desk, it first has to be reconciled with the far different Pentagon budget bill passed last week by the Republican-controlled Senate.

The Senate bill has none of the five major restrictions imposed by the House. A House-Senate conference committee will be appointed next month to try to work out the differences.

Overall, Reagan sought $320 billion for defense in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, compared with the current $286 billion budget. The Senate bill authorizes $295 billion, while the House measure proposes $286 billion.

In other votes Wednesday, the House:

—Voted 365-56 to reject an alternative budget proposed annually by a group of Democratic liberals. It would have deeply slashed spending for ships and planes and ban all spending for new nuclear weapons.

—Voted 322-90 to reject a requirement that half the 320,000 U.S. ground troops be withdrawn from Europe within five years.

Last summer, a House-approved ban on testing of anti-satellite (ASAT) weapons was enacted into law and sharply criticized by the Reagan administration.

The administration argues that ASATs are needed to offset Soviet satellite-killers. But opponents contend the Soviet system is far more crude than the American weapon and they fear the U.S. program will touch off a new space arms race.

The nerve gas ban came as the chamber blocked production of the weapons which finally passed Congress last year. The United States has not built chemical weapons since 1969.

Reagan says U.S. gas weapons are needed to offset a large and threatening Soviet gas arsenal and also to force the Soviets to negotiate for a worldwide ban on the weapons.

But opponents contend the U.S. stockpile, which includes some weapons up to 40 years old, is enough to deter any use of the Soviet arsenal during wartime.

"Fair, unfair, I don't know," Rudd said when asked about the $2.4 million bonus that would go to his 12 districts. He pointed out that plummeting oil prices would take some of those schools out of the wealthy list and said he would agree to a plan that would do away with the windfall.

Rudd's schools include Andrews, Seminole, Denver City and Sundown.

Beaumont Rep. Mark Stiles, an Appropriations Committee member who has three of the wealthy schools in his district, said those schools lost state aid after the massive education reforms of 1984.

"It is a plus in the proposal for me," Stiles said of the extra $495,000 those districts would receive. "It doesn't hurt anyone else, and it helps three."

The whole proposal drew more criticism Wednesday from education officials.

"This proposal may defy the Texas Constitution as well as represent short-sighted fiscal policy," said Jon Brumley, chairman of the State Board of Education. "Such a policy would rob Texas school children of a legacy promised to them more than a century ago."

Gerald Hill, vice chancellor of intergovernmental relations at the University of Texas System, said the move could jeopardize UT bonds that finance construction projects. Those bonds, Hill said, were sold with the promise the the PUF "shall be forever kept intact."

Senate Education Committee Chairman Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, accused the House of using an "Esau-Jacob plan" by "selling the birthright of little children of Texas who want to go to school."

Lewis and Stiles defended the moves as financially sound.

"The lobbying effort is pretty heavy by those people who don't want that tampered with," Lewis said. "I still (support it) because I find that most of the lobbying effort comes from those people who would benefit personally from those funds, or are paid to guard those funds, maybe I should say."

Stiles said the House is following the Constitution's mandate that the trusts support education. "Those funds were set up so they would never have to rely on outside sources like general revenue to fund the education of the children of our state," he said.

AID

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., the Foreign Relations Committee chairman, called that "nonsense."

"I felt the analogy to Vietnam was false all the way through," Lugar said.

But he said after the vote that for the Contras to get future U.S. aid, they are going to have to demonstrate that they can build a disciplined fighting force, end human rights abuses, seize and hold Nicaraguan territory and, in general, "show some successes."

Both House and Senate bills would give the Contras $70 million in lethal military aid and $30 million in logistical support.

Supporters of sanctions against South Africa seek to use them to bring pressure to bear to convince the white power structure there to end the country's system of racial apartheid.

Leaders of that group, including Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Alan Cranston, D-Calif., are fighting strong odds to convince the Senate to follow the lead of the House in approving a complete U.S. disinvestment from the South African economy and a near-total trade embargo.

If they are not able to achieve that, they will try to add additional sanctions to those approved by the Foreign Relations Committee.

The committee proposal sets objectives that would permit sanctions to be lifted: the ending of the current state of emergency, the release of African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, the dismantling of apartheid and beginning of negotiations with black leaders toward the creation of a non-racial democracy.

The sanctions it would impose include: barring U.S. landing rights to South African Airways; prohibiting new investment or bank loans; banning the import of South African uranium and coal; barring the import of products produced by industries owned or controlled by the South African government; authorizing the president to sell U.S. gold stocks to drive down the price of gold, South Africa's most important export; and permitting South African officials to enter the United States only on a case-by-case basis.

TAXES

A tax bill during the special session, raising the sales tax rate to 5 percent and bringing in $869 million, would avoid the cash flow problems in fiscal year 1988, she said. The combination of cuts and tax increase must total $2 billion, she said.

"We don't want you to think you can be in a position to come in at the regular session and pass a tax bill," she said. "Not only are you delaying solving the problem, but you're going to have a worse problem a year from now."

If the state exceeds its $1.3 billion interfund borrowing capacity, Ms. Richards said, it must either depend on Texas banks to honor checks that cannot be paid immediately, call another legislative session or start shutting down the government.

Ms. Richards added that she plans to ask the Legislature in the regular session to authorize her to issue "cash management notes" that would allow the state to borrow money against its anticipated revnues. Such notes would relieve cash flow problems in the fall, she said.

Missing U.S. sailor freed by Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American missing since he set sail from the Philippines 16 months ago has been released by Vietnam and will be returned to the United States, the White House announced today.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Robert Schwab III of Atlanta was flown by helicopter to Bangkok, Thailand, after his release. Speakes said it was not known when Schwab would arrive in the United States.

A White House announcement said Schwab had sailed in a small sailboat from the Philippines on April 19, 1985, bound for Vietnam, apparently to bring back a female Vietnamese friend.

U.S. officials were notified by the family in June 1985, that Schwab was missing, Speakes said. Normal search-and-rescue efforts and inquiries by the State Department turned up no clues to his whereabouts.

Senator seeks waste plan delays

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate supporter of the Energy Department's nuclear waste disposal plans, which are now in jeopardy, says he thinks he can convince the House to delay the work for a year.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, made the comment Wednesday after the Senate Appropriations Committee voted without dissent to provide only $380 million for disposal of highly radioactive waste from the nation's nuclear power plants and weapons manufacturing.

The vote followed back-room bargaining among the lawmakers, and was a sharp reduction from the panel's energy and water subcommittee's earlier decision to provide $619 million for waste activities.

The Reagan administration sought $769 million and the House voted $678 million for the program. The money is part of a $14.5 billion appropriation for water projects and the Energy Department.

McClure has long said there are no major technical problems to be solved in nuclear waste disposal, which he says must eventually go forward. But he conceded Wednesday that a delay would be appropriate because of emotional opposition that has been raised against the site by residents of the states where it might eventually be built.

The earlse pproriations Committee report described administration of the nuclear waste program as "satisfactory," and McClure was asked if the House would go along with a year's delay. "I think we can sell them," he replied.

The three sites are at Yucca Mountain near the Nevada nuclear test site, Deaf Smith County, Texas, and the Hanford nuclear reservation near Richland, Wash. The department is supposed to recommend one in 1991 after years of study.

"Based on the Chernobyl incident, and what happened to (the space shuttle) Challenger, I have become concerned about these so-called experts," said Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., whose state has one of the potential sites.

"If there is a nuclear accident, it's not going to be confined, any more than it was at Chernobyl, at the boundary lines of Nevada, Utah or Washington or anywhere else," Laxalt said.

McClure said Laxalt was appealing to emotion, and an accident on that scale was not possible with waste.

But McClure added: "Emotions are legitimate reasons for political action. If you push against the emotions too hard, you destroy the very thing you are trying to do."

Sinceoje tho a zcore of lawsuits have been filed to challenge the three potential site selections, "By one measure or another, you are going to lose momentum" — either by litigation or a congressionally imposed slowdown.

"It's an extremely difficult political issue," McClure said, adding that he could not persuade Idaho voters to accept a permanent waste depot if that state had been picked.

The $380 million figure, McClure said, was to keep the department's waste team intact. No language was adopted specifically banning work on the three possible waste sites identified earlier this summer for detailed investigation, because that would have meant the organization would have to be broken up, McClure said.

In other action, the committee approved a $7.96 billion appropriations bill for energy research.

DUMP

"I realize nothing is final," Sarpalius said. "But if the Senate's vote holds up, Texas will have won two straight victories in the war against the nuclear waste dump. First, DOE agrees to abide by our permitting law and now they get all their study money taken away.

"We can't let this victory weaken our resolve to keep the dump out of Texas, though. DOE eventually will get that money and we'll be in the same situation we are in now," he said.

Senators from Nevada and Washington, the two other states with sites chosen by President Reagan earlier this summer for further investigation, all supported the move, said Paul Laxalt, a Nevada Republican.

The other two sites are Yucca Mountain near the Nevada nuclear test site and the Hanford nuclear reservation near Richland, Wash.

The department had planned to begin detailed geological investigations, including the sinking of shafts some 3,000 feet, aimed at recommending one site to whomever is president in 1991.

The cut, if eventually upheld, would leave the department with $380 million for disposal work during the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The department had sought $769 million.

The House has approved $678 million, and the Senate Appropriations energy and water subcommittee had set aside $619 million in its $14.5 billion version of the appropriations bill for the Energy Department and for water projects of the Interior Department and Army Corps of Engineers.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, told the full committee $380 million was "the figure the budget office has indicated will provide for the continuation of the organization but will not provide for any activity."

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., ranking minority member on the commitee, said, "It depoliticizes it, deregionalizes it, yet keeps the (Nuclear Waste Policy Act) from being taken apart."

The 1982 act aims at opening a permanent waste depository by 1998.

PUBLIC NOTICE

TEXAS UTILITIES ELECTRIC COMPANY hereby publishes NOTICE that, pursuant to the provisions of the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the Public Utility Commission's Substantive Rule 23.23(b)(2), it filed an application on August 8, 1986 with the Public Utility Commission of Texas seeking authority to refund to its customers an overrecovery of fuel cost revenues in the amount of $64,779,640 as of June 30, 1986, which includes applicable interest.

Texas Utilities Electric Company has proposed that the refund be made with customer billings in October 1986, or as soon thereafter as the Commission orders. All customers and classes of customers whose electric service rates include charges for fuel cost pursuant to Texas Utilities Electric Company's Rider FC, entitled "Base Rate Fuel Component", and all territories in which Texas Utilities Electric Company provides electric service through its Dallas Power & Light Company, Texas Electric Service Company and Texas Power & Light Company divisions will be affected if the application is granted.

A complete copy of said application is on file with the Public Utility Commission of Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Public Utility Commission of Texas as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. U.S. withdraws endorsement of Botha proposal

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — White House officials were watching President P.W. Botha on television as the South African leader delivered his major policy speech in Durban.

When Botha finished, a complete text was sent from Swaziland to Washington.

But his proposal, in the midst of a lengthy discourse, for a conference of Western leaders did not attract the attention of the White House officials.

And the text, which normally would be dissected by analysts, arrived too late to help prepare President Reagan for his news conference Tuesday night.

As a result, the president relied on a sketchy — and the State Department says a misleading — news account of Botha's proposal when he faced questioners in Chicago.

Reagan wound up endorsing something Botha had not really proposed: an anti-apartheid conference.

Some 17 hours later, the State Department withdrew the endorsement.

"Now that we have had a chance to study what he actually said, it appears that what he was discussing was the need to focus on regional issues rather than apartheid," spokesman Charles E. Redman said Wednesday.

Redman stressed that the United States would be willing to participate in talks to assist South Africa in a prompt dismantling of apartheid.

However, Redman said, "There has been no such proposal."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, meanwhile, that any meeting the United States might attend "would definitely have to concern apartheid."

At the Chicago news conference, Reagan said that while he had not seen full accounts of Botha's speech, he welcomed the South African president's call for a meeting with leaders of West Germany, France, Britain and the United States. The president left open the possibility of attending himself.

But Redman, reading from a prepared statement, said, "As the president indicated last night, we want to be helpful and we would be prepared to consider taking part in a conference with our allies and others, including the South African government, that could assist in the prompt dismantling of apartheid and negotiations among South Africans on a government in which peoples of all races would freely participate."

However, the statement went on, "Early reporting on President Botha's speech suggested that was what he was proposing. It appears that what he was discussing was the need to focus on regional issues rather than apartheid.

"This is an idea that has been mentioned before. But there has been no official proposal from the South Africans, nor have others said whether they would be interested in participating," the statement said.

Redman said the United States would consult with its allies and "study its implications carefully" if Botha made such a proposal.

The U.S. official said there were positive and negative aspects to the South African president's speech.

On the one hand, Redman said, Botha recognized that South Africa had outlived apartheid.

"On the other hand," Redman added, "we are disappointed that he did not take advantage of this occasion to announce concrete steps that would break the impasse in South Africa and lead to negotiations."

Reagan, in apparently endorsing Botha's proposal, had left open his own possible participation in the talks, while also suggesting that Secretary of State George P. Shultz might attend.

"I don't know whether it would require us, or whether it could be done with foreign ministers or not," Reagan said. "For that, we'd have to see the details."

Another U.S. official said Botha's proposal for talks on regional problems was unacceptable because it "begs the question of apartheid" and did not interest South Africa's black neighbors.

Oldest known ancestor to modern birds found

WASHINGTON (AP) — Remains of the oldest known ancestor to modern birds, 225-million-year-old creatures who looked like small dinosaurs with wings, have been discovered in Texas, scientists say.

Texas Tech University scientists said Wednesday that fossils of the crow-sized birds, which they named genus Protoavis — meaning ancestral bird — are the oldest yet found anywhere in the world.

The two partial skeletons discovered in a mudstone quarry not only represent a major find, but raise questions about the importance of controversial remains of another ancient bird relative found in Europe, they said.

Dr. Sankar Chatterjee, the paleontologist who headed the group, said the Protoavis fossils are at least 75 million years more ancient than the previously found oldest example of a suspected bird ancestor, called Archaeopteryx.

Because the latest fossils are more bird-like than Archaeopteryx while retaining some of the characteristics of dinosaurs, they strengthen the early evolutionary link between dinosaurs and birds, Chatterjee said.

Scientists at the British Museum of Natural History, which possesses the best Archaeopteryx fossil, recently published results of extensive studies to prove the authenticity of their specimen, one discovered in Bavaria in 1861.

They said their studies conclusively proved that the prized fossil is not a fake put together by pranksters from unrelated fossils, as some critics had charged, and is an example of the important evolutionary step from reptiles to birds.

However, even if Archaeopteryx is authentic, the Texas discovery indicates it may not be related to the evolution of modern birds.

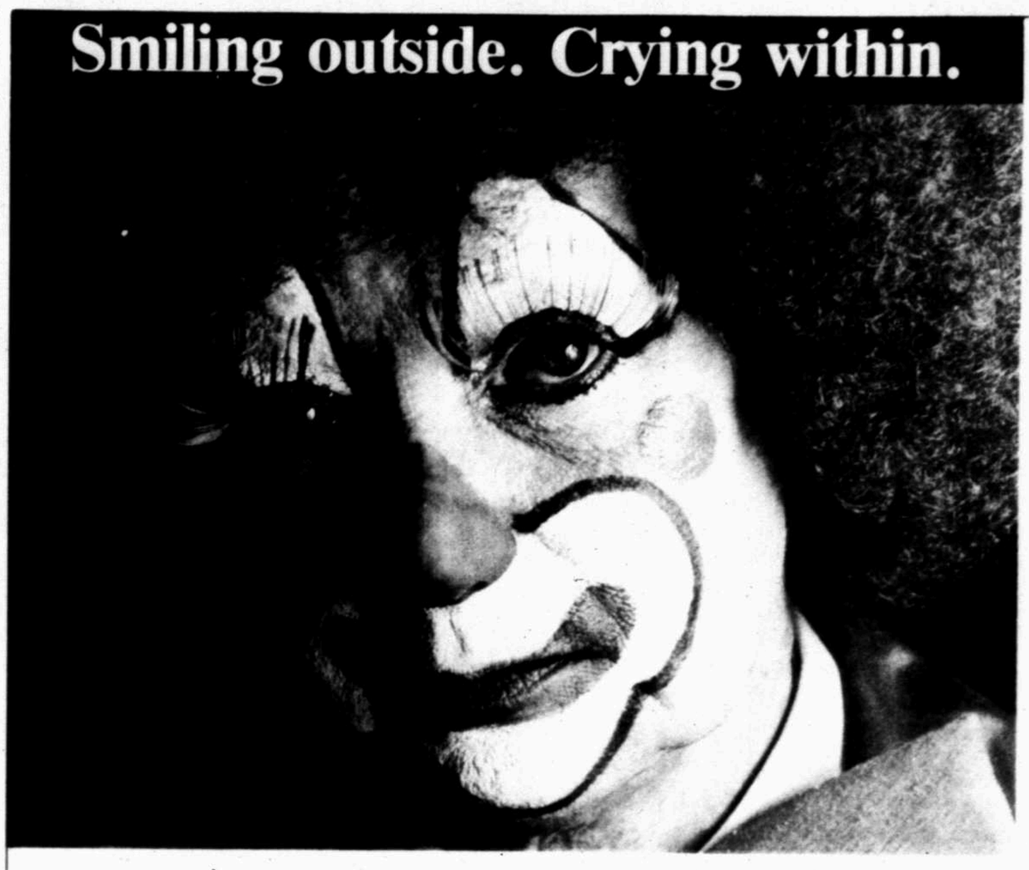

Chatterjee said in a telephone interview Wednesday that the greater development of Protoavis, even though it is much older than Archaeopteryx, supports scientists who feel Archaeopteryx was not in the mainstream of bird evolution.

"Archaeopteryx was probably on the sidelines of evolution, an evolutionary dead-end that is not related to our birds today," he said. "Protoavis and Archaeopteryx may have had separate ancestors and evolved along different paths."

The Protoavis fossils showed the birds had teeth, long tails, pelvises and hind legs resembling those of dinosaurs. No feather impressions were found, the scientists said, but a forearm and hand show a series of bumps to which feathers were attached.

Smiling outside. Crying within.

Often we live behind a mask. We hide our feelings, our problems, our emotions deep within ourselves, afraid to let them out. By not honestly dealing with our true emotions, we ultimately suffer. Depression sets in. Relationships flounder. We're robbed of the joys life should bring.

Beginning August 15th, Permian General Hospital will have a comprehensive mental health management unit within the hospital offering quality care for emotional disorders on an in and outpatient basis.

Because mental health care is sometimes misunderstood, all patient contacts and treatments are handled in the strictest of confidence. And because our mental health unit is found within the confines of a full-service hospital, the cost for treatment is covered by most hospitalization insurance plans.

Living behind a mask can rob you of the joy and happiness you deserve. Learn to feel the warmth life has to offer.
