

Big Spring to get new phone system

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

The Big Spring area is getting a new telephone system, a local businesswoman reported today. Southwestern Bell Telephone plans to modernize the community's phone system, said Johnnie Lou Avery, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Industrial Team Phone Modernization Committee.

A press conference is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Tuesday to give details on the plan, including features of the new system and the installation timetable, she said.

About 12 to 15 members of the telephone company's top management team are expected to fly into Big Spring for the press conference and a reception at 4:30 at the Big Spring Country Club, Avery added.

The announcement of the new system is a result of a Dec. 17 meeting of Southwestern Bell representatives and local industry and government officials, who requested the system be improved.

Darlene Gifford, community relations manager for Southwestern Bell, said at the meeting that improving the phone system has been considered for several years. The company was on the verge of approving the project when the oil recession struck, "setting back a lot of things," she said.

The cost of the new system will be $7 million to $10 million, she said.

Gifford said the project usually takes about a year for planning, training employees, shipping and installing new equipment.

Gene Solloway, Southwestern Bell district manager, said at the December meeting that when the company receives a $3 million to $4 million rate increase, but needs to spend $7 million on one town, "you have to make hard decisions."

But he said "I don't think it's a revenue question. It's a competition for dollars, where you invest your money."

He compared the company's decisions to that of an individual investing in the stock market. "You're looking for the best return for your money," he said.

Solloway said he believes that if money had been available, the Big Spring system would have been improved earlier.

Avery noted in a recent letter that Big Spring is the only town in the proposed superconducting supercollider site without a modern phone system.

"If the Department of Energy chooses this site for the $7 billion project, it will depend on a modern communication system in the whole area," she said. "We are working diligently to plug up any

Ugliest fish to have day

SIDNEY, Mont. (AP) — Mark it on your calendar — Friday is the day to honor Montana's strangest and probably ugliest fish.

On May 1, "Peter Paddlefish Day," folks here will turn out hoping to spot one of the portly, long-snouted fish that migrate up the Yellowstone and Missouri rivers every spring.

Organizers say the sighting of "Peter Paddlefish" or his mate "Paula Paddlefish" on the Yellowstone southeast of Sidney assures a successful season for paddlefish, which have eggs similar to caviar and can weigh in at about 90 pounds.

Peter Paddlefish Day includes a picnic with music by the Sidney Community Band, drawings for sporting goods and fishing equipment and demonstrations of fishing techniques.

New on the agenda for the fourth annual festival are an arm wrestling contest, Peter and Paula softball tournament, a poetry contest and a pageant for 8- to 10-year-olds to crown paddlefish royalty.

Safeway couples have double trouble

FORT WORTH (AP) — As former Safeway employees are joining unemployment lines, the out-of-work grocery workers included at least 30 married couples.

Some had met while they bagged groceries and stocked shelves together, then stayed on at the grocery store because the pay was so good. On Friday, they lost their jobs together and Saturday, they were in line at the Texas Employment Commission offices.

The couples were among more than 700 Fort Worth Safeway workers of 1,700 who were put out of work when the grocery chain closed the stores in its North Texas division.

Zelma Baties, director of the regional TEC office, estimated that the commission will pay as much as $1.6 million a week to more than 8,000 Safeway workers thrown out of work when the 131 stores closed. In Big Spring, about 13 former Safeway employees visited the Texas Employment Commission this morning, manager Joe Wallis said at 11:30 a.m.

He said he doesn't know yet if the commission will be able to place the employees in new jobs, but he added that the commission is helping Furr's Inc. take applications this morning.

Furr's announced Sunday that it would begin taking applications until 7 p.m. today at the Park Inn off Interstate 20.

Positions to be filled include stock, produce, floral, deli, fish, sack and bakery clerks, cashiers, meat cutters and wrappers, according to a Furr's advertisement.

Wallis said he doesn't know how many positions are available, nor how many Safeway personnel will be hired.

Jack Monkres, business agent for the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union Local 368R, said at least 100 couples worked for Safeway stores in the Fort Worth area.

Most earned more than $1,000 a week between them, but they will now have to get by on a combined average of about $400 a week in unemployment benefits for as long as 26 weeks.

Tony Waldrep, who worked 9½ years as a checker at a Fort Worth Safeway store, said she met her

Complex offers work plan to state hospital's clients

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

Some people have made a career out of living at Career Village, but all that is changing, its director says.

Career Village is a Big Spring State Hospital apartment complex for discharged patients, Village Director Emil Zilai explained. He added that the trend toward de-institutionalization of mental hospitals slowly is altering the function of Career Village.

The Village allows former Big Spring State Hospital patients to do remedial jobs for the hospital and use their pay to live in a structured setting on hospital grounds.

"A lot of these people are not very lovable," said Big Spring State Hospital Supervisor Robert von Rosenberg. "They're not problem free; it's not a country club by any means."

"We take patients that are dependent, not productive, not likable and not acceptable to the community, and we transform them into more productive people," von Rosenberg said.

Residents at the Village are changing from "docile chronics" who have been committed to mental hospitals for most of their lives to young, more aggressive clients who haven't experienced long hospital stays, Zilai said.

Because they aren't actual patients of the hospital, the residents, referred to as clients by Village staff, are free to come and go, Zilai said.

"They have as many rights as you and I," von Rosenberg said.

They can be discharged from the Village, however, if they are disruptive, not performing their work duties or found to be mentally incompetent.

"Our only recourse is to kick them out — we can't discipline or fine them," because of state laws, Zilai said.

It's an all or nothing punishment,

Leo Larkin holds wheelbarrow while J.R. Robinson and Lynn Criswell till the ground for a garden. The residents at Career Village do jobs around the facility, receiving pay for their work.

he said, explaining that the staff doesn't dismiss anyone who has no other place to go.

"We're not babysitters," he said, but he explained that clients are expected to follow rules, such as signing out if they will remain out past 10:30 p.m.

Von Rosenberg said he supports the nationwide shift toward de-institutionalization that began several years ago.

"Those patients who can be treated in their home community should be," he said, adding that hospital stays need to be as short as possible and be followed by outreach programs.

County criticizes CRMWD's stand on Natural Lake

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

The Colorado River Municipal Water District is causing the high water levels at Natural Dam Lake and is trying to push liability for it onto the county, county commissioners said today.

That sentiment was expressed at this morning's meeting of the Howard County Commissioners' Court.

The Water District published an advertisement in the Herald Friday, stating that it wouldn't finance additional modifications or repairs to Natural Dam Lake without equal participation from the city and county.

The county, however, is not liable for Natural Dam Lake because it doesn't own the lake, which is situated on private property, County Attorney Tim Yeats said.

"After so many years of utilizing that lake, I think they (CRMWD) are liable for it," Commissioner O.L. (Louis) Brown said.

The Water District has a permit to pump water into Natural Dam Lake, and it has built what is a natural heel at the lake, said Commissioner David Barr, who added that many people don't realize that an actual dam does not exist at Natural Dam Lake.

"They created the problem, let them solve it," he said.

"I don't see why they don't let some water out," County Judge Milton Kirby said.

According to CRMWD's statement, the District is concerned that heavy rains could cause a disastrous flood in Howard County and Big Spring if modifications aren't made at Natural Dam Lake, located about 10 miles west of Big Spring.

It's the District that would cause an overflow because it is pumping water into the lake, Yeats said.

In other business, the Court heard road improvement suggestions from Arnold Marshall, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Transportation Committee.

He requested improvement of a stretch of road located west of the airport near Western Container Corp. He explained the road is used extensively by trucks.

Marshall also suggested paving a one-mile stretch of dirt road past Fairview gym. All but one mile of the road is paved, Marshall said.

In addition, he proposed two extensions — one for South Birdwell Lane to Driver Road and the other a continuation of Driver Road to meet a county road.

The Court also:

• Approved a motion to abandon a county road located on Cosden Refinery property.

When the road was dedicated as a county road in 1960, it was determined that if the county closed the road it would revert back to Cosden, County Engineer Bill Mims said.

Cosden has moved its gates to encompass the entire road, and it hasn't been used as a public road for several years, Mims said.

• Approved a motion to accept bids for 1987 on concrete and asphalt to repair county roads. Bids will be opened May 11.

• Approved the advertising to buy two motor graders in August.

Polls open until 7 in runoff election

Polls are open until 7 p.m. today for voters in the District 3 runoff election between City Council incumbent Harold Hall and D.D. Johnston.

Polling places are the same as for the April 4 election: the fire stations on Wasson Road and at 18th and Main Streets, according to Finance Director Tom Ferguson.

Although Johnston received the most votes, he fell slightly short of the 50 percent plus one vote total required to win.

Johnston received 49.1 percent of the vote and Hall 26.6 percent in the general election. Patsy Cawthon, who is not eligible to participate in the runoff, received 24.2 percent.

City Council will meet at 5 p.m. Wednesday in the Big Spring Air-park meeting room to canvass the election results and swear in the winner, City Manager Mack Wofford said. A City Hall notice erroneously lists the meeting date as Tuesday, April 29.

According to state law, votes must be canvassed not less than two nor more than six days after an election, Ferguson said.

City Council also was having a 3 p.m. work session today at the Airpark, and will conduct its regular meeting there at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Wofford said the main topic being discussed at the work session is bids for city insurance premiums, including building insurance and liability coverage for public officials and police. Employee health insurance is not included, he said.

Post: State probing 'dumping' reports

HOUSTON (AP) — State health officials are investigating 18 complaints alleging that economics were behind the transfers of unstable patients from private hospitals to tax-supported public hospitals, The Houston Post reported.

In a copyright story published Sunday, the Post said complaints under investigation by the Texas Department of Health include four from the Dallas County Hospital District against hospitals in its area and one Harris County Hospital District officials made against Humana Clear Lake Hospital.

The complaints concern alleged "dumping," a term used when poor patients are transferred solely for economic reasons. Dumping has become a controversial topic since new state and federal laws for transfers became effective last April.

"Every transfer is potentially harmful and should not be done unless necessary for medical reasons," argues Dr. Don Winston of Houston, a critic of hospital district transfer policies.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services can suspend Medicare payments to an offending hospital and impose monetary fines, while the Texas Department of Health can revoke a hospital's license and also impose civil penalties.

No disciplinary action has been taken so far against any private hospital for dumping, health officials said.

For a transfer from a private hospital to the hospital district, the new rules require the permission of a doctor in the transferring hospital and permission of a hospital district doctor.

If the transfer is not being made for medical reasons, the patient also is supposed to be eligible for hospital district services and be in "stable" condition.

"Stable for transfer is a hospital euphemism for 'patient doesn't have insurance,'" Winston claims.

Village might have to be changed, however, because the new wave of clients don't seem to want to work and they can't be forced, Zilai said.

Career Village consists of three apartment buildings that can house as many as 30 residents.

Currently, 24 clients are living at the Village.
Bridging the gap from the hospital to independent living by providing a structured living environment and instruction in work and adaptive skills is Career Village's goal, Zilai said.

To be admitted, a person must demonstrate physical and mental fitness with sufficient remission of any psychotic symptoms or behavior disorders, according to a hospital procedure manual.

Prospective residents can be referred to the Village by the hospital or the community, Zilai said. They must be able to perform their work duties and show stability to participate, he said.

The Village maintains a crew to wash and wax state vehicles. Clients also can obtain jobs with the food service, laundry service and maintenance crew.

Eight full-time and two part-time staff members supervise the clients.

Zilai, the only member of the Village staff with a college degree, received a master's from West Virginia University in counseling.

Timothy Decker, a staff worker at Career Village for two years, said staff members receive two weeks of training that includes first aid, fire prevention, Heimlich maneuvers, handling disturbed patients and handling aggressive behavior.

They also take part in annual hospital training sessions.

Twenty-four hour supervision is provided at the apartment complexes, with as many as five employees working during the day and one on duty from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m., Zilai said.

The treatment at Career Village is the living situation, he said, explaining that the staff is there to help the clients learn to live outside the hospital.

It's a place where they can live and grow, von Rosenberg said.

possible holes in our proposal to the federal government to locate the SSC project here."

She also said that Big Spring derives a disproportionate part of its economy from state and federal installations, which have plans to grow and, indicating increased communication needs in the near future.

In addition, Avery said, a state and federal agricultural research center here continues to attract farm and ranch research scientists from around the world, while Howard College has campus extensions in Lamesa, Fort Stockton, Pecos and San Angelo.

Representatives from the federal prison camp, state hospital, Veterans Administration Medical Center and city and county governments discussed problems with the phone system at the Dec. 17 meeting.

They complained of malfunctions in the system ranging from being "cut off" during phone conversations to difficulty transmitting computer data.

Jo Ann Stauleup, chief of office operations at the Veterans Administration Medical Center, said the VA plans to install a new phone system, but is waiting until the local system is improved.

She said the VA often has trouble transmitting computer data through the system and making in-house calls.

Tony Belaski, superintendent at the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp, cited the possibility that the camp will be enlarged, requiring additional phone services.

Clyde McMahon Jr., president of the Big Spring and Howard County Industrial Foundation, said the faulty phone system could present problems for businesses considering locating here.

Pedestrians injured in auto collisions

An 11-year-old girl was hurt when her bicycle collided with a car Saturday night, and a 16-year-old pedestrian hit by a car Friday remains in the hospital after surgery.

Wendy Christensen, 11, 1905 E. 25th St., was treated and released from Scenic Mountain Medical Center after she was hurt in an accident at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

She was riding her bike on the parking lot of apartments at 1900 E. 25th St. and Rebecca Drive, and had just turned west when she collided with an east-bound car, police reports said.

The car, a 1979 yellow Chevrolet Suburban, was driven by William Thomas Sanders, 32, 4107 W. Highway 80. He was not injured.

Police reports said the car had already stopped when the bike hit, and that the car left approximately 5 feet of skid marks.

Paula Granado, 811 S. Johnson

St., remains in Scenic Mountain Medical Center after undergoing surgery for one of two broken legs, according to her mother, Elida Granado.

Police reports erroneously listed Elida Granado as the 16-year-old injured girl, but the woman corrected the mistake this morning.

Granado said her daughter probably will be in the hospital for a month or longer. Paula Granado had one leg in a cast when she was struck by a car while crossing West Highway 80 near Airport Grocery, she said.

She was crossing the highway in a group of four or five others when a red 1986 Pontiac driven by Salvador Calvio Jr., 18, 1208 Lindbergh St., was travelling east on the highway, Police Sgt. Lee Everett said.

Calvio swerved into the left lane to avoid Granado, but was unable to avoid hitting her, Everett said. No charges were filed, he said.

Goetz trial beginning

NEW YORK — More than two years after Bernhard Goetz shot four young men on a subway, the question of whether he overreacted or read the situation clearly in thinking he was about to be mugged is being put to a jury.

Opening arguments were scheduled today in the case that ignited a national debate over the rights of citizens to defend themselves versus the risks of vigilantism.

The prosecution maintains Goetz panicked, and shot with an unlicensed .38-caliber handgun four youths who were only panhandling.

Goetz's lawyers counter that the threat was real and that Goetz, badly beaten in a previous mugging, realized he was in danger and did what he had to do.

13 still missing at site

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — As many as 150 weary rescuers slept in shifts on cots at the site of a building collapse that killed at least 15 workmen as the search continued today for 13 others missing in the tangle of concrete and steel.

The first funerals since the accident Thursday were scheduled for today, including services for a 17-year-old high school student who was spending his spring vacation working on the construction project to earn money for college.

Mayor Thomas Buccie's office put the death toll at 15, with 14 bodies pulled from the rubble of the L'Ambiance Plaza and one other spotted.

Casey hospitalized

GLEN COVE, N.Y. — Former CIA Director William J. Casey, who resigned after brain cancer surgery, remained hospitalized today after being admitted in critical condition with pneumonia over the weekend, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Renee Paley, a spokeswoman at Glen Cove Community Hospital, would not say early today whether there had been any change in the 74-year-old Casey's condition. She said his family had not authorized her to make a statement.

Man kills scout, self

BETTENDORF, Iowa — A teen-age Explorer Scout who was shot in the head while on patrol with police apparently was mistaken for an officer by a man who then went home and killed himself, officials say.

Sheryl Horak, 17, was killed early Saturday as she sat alone in a patrol car parked outside police headquarters.

Later in the day, the body of Kenneth D. Griffith, 33, of Riverdale, was found at his home. Bettendorf Police Chief Decker Ploehn said at a news conference Sunday. Authorities said Griffith had been upset with the department.

She was wearing an Explorer uniform, which officials said could be mistaken for a police uniform.

Demonstrators carry signs as they protest the Reagan administration's policies in Central America and South Africa outside the CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., Monday morning. Many changed the 60's slogan, "the whole world is watching."

CIA protest 400 arrested at headquarters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 400 protesters, many chanting the 60s-style slogan "the whole world is watching," were arrested today as they sat down in front of entrances to CIA headquarters during the morning rush hour.

The non-violent protest was a major event in three days of demonstrations against Reagan administration policies in Central America and Southern Africa.

U.S. Park Police, with jurisdiction over the north gate of the facility in nearby Langley, Va., arrested 175 people. Fairfax County, Va., police, with jurisdiction over the south gate, arrested more than 200.

The demonstrators succeeded in closing the main gate to the headquarters for at least three hours.

Among those arrested were antiwar activists Daniel Ellsberg and Philip Berrigan. One protester was John Stockwell, former CIA official involved in Angola operations, who subsequently turned against the CIA.

"This building is filled with people who know what they're doing is wrong," said Ellsberg, who was detained only briefly and returned to the main gate. He praised police for being efficient and polite.

"We're releasing some on summons, but a lot are refusing to give their identities so we're having to detain them," said Dave Mulvey, a spokesman for the county police department.

Most of those arrested were charged with obstruction of passage, a misdemeanor carrying a $50 fine. Park Police spokesman K.C. Perry said those who scuffled with police would be charged with disorderly conduct and disobeying a police officer, as well as demonstrating without a permit.

Police had warned the protesters over loudspeakers, "This is an illegal demonstration. If you do not leave now, all of you will be subject to arrest."

As CIA employees passed by, the demonstrators shouted "join us, join us." But none did. Some workers parked away from the grounds and walked, passing the protesters without acknowledging their presence. One man formed his fingers into the V-for-victory sign.

Ferry death toll at 180

ZEEBRUGGE, Belgium — Salvagers today refloated and towed back to port a British ferry that capsized March 6 off this North Sea port. Officials said divers found two more bodies inside, bringing the confirmed death toll to 180.

Four tugboats and three floating cranes were used to tow the 7,951-ton Herald of Free Enterprise 1,000 yards into Zeebrugge harbor. Public health officials then boarded the vessel and declared it safe for five British and 13 Belgian navy divers to enter and resume the search for 10 bodies believed to be on the lower decks.

Hans van de Wal, a spokesman for Zeebrugge naval base, said divers found two bodies shortly after entering the vessel.

The divers also planned to remove cargo and dozens of cars and trucks from inside the vessel.

Poland to release nine

WARSAW, Poland — Poland announced Saturday it will release nine people held on terrorism charges. Solidarity activists had contended they were political detainees.

The prosecutor general, acting on the recommendation of Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak and "guided by humanitarian reasons," granted amnesty to the nine and ordered their release, the official PAP news agency reported.

At the same time, PAP announced, police conducted a nationwide "preventative operation" against illegal organizations by holding warning talks with 537 people Friday and Saturday.

Arafat reunites PLO

ALGIERS, Algeria — Chairman Yasser Arafat's concessions to hard-line leaders reunited the Palestine Liberation Organization but appeared to dim prospects for a Middle East peace settlement.

The Palestine National Council, which the Palestinians call their parliament-in-exile, ended a stormy five-day session Sunday after Arafat agreed to abandon ties with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and drop all attempts to negotiate a peace settlement in coordination with Jordan.

Environment discussed

LONDON — The world can and must find new energy sources and strategies for developing poor countries that don't destroy the environment, a panel of world leaders declared.

"The next few decades are crucial. The time has come to break out of past patterns," the World Commission on Environment and Development said in a report released today in London and Washington.

The 383-page report, entitled "Our Common Future," calls for a "vast campaign of education, debate and public participation" and says: "This campaign must start now if sustainable human progress is to be achieved."

West and east recall Chernobyl

LONDON (AP) — Tens of thousands of demonstrators from Mexico City to Tokyo staged mock funerals, lit memorial bonfires, marched and picketed nuclear plants to mark the first anniversary of the Chernobyl nuclear accident that spewed radiation over much of the world.

In the Netherlands, protesters clashed with police after tearing through a security fence at a nuclear plant. In Communist Czechoslovakia, police arrested five protesting Westerners.

Firefighters and nurses in London threw 31 wreaths into the Thames river to commemorate the 31 Soviets killed in the April 26, 1986, explosion and fire at the Chernobyl nuclear plant in the Ukraine.

Hundreds more were injured and about 135,000 were evacuated from nearby areas.

There was no official commemoration in the Soviet Union on Sunday. But eight members of a small dissident organization, the Group for the Establishment of Trust Between East and West, held a 90-minute protest in central Moscow.

Five people from Western Europe were arrested by Czech police in Prague — three for draping an anti-nuclear banner across the front of the National Museum and two for trying to hand out pamphlets charging the Soviet-designed WWR 440 reactor is a bigger risk than the Chernobyl plant.

Thirty-four WWER 440 reactors are operating in Eastern Europe and Finland.

An anti-nuclear group in Hong Kong submitted a petition against the building of a Chinese nuclear plant near the border with the British colony. It was addressed to China's Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang and handed to Beijing's Xinhua News Agency office.

In Japan, the only country hit by atomic weapons in war, demonstrations were held in several cities, including Tokyo and Osaka.

Opinion

Views of other Texas papers

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around the state.

Texans don't need 'man's man'

The newspaper headlines say that Dallas has entered a new era: Voters there elected the first woman mayor to serve Texas' second largest city. On the Texas coast, Corpus Christi also opted for a woman mayor.

Annette Strauss of Dallas and Betty Turner of Corpus Christi will take their places in history alongside other women who have served — or currently serve — the larger Texas cities as chief executives. Austin and San Antonio elected women in these capacities before 1981, when Houston elected Kathy Whitmire.

Texans are proving it doesn't take a man's man to run a city government — an uptown, more progressive state of affairs than ever before. The next frontier? Who knows, it may be Fort Worth. • The Houston Post

Tort reform should be about money

Texans Against Tort Reform advertisements on television show a little girl about to be run over by a tractor-trailer rig driven by an apparently intoxicated driver and suggest Florida's experience with tort reform has not been good.

The irony of tort law and tort reform is that it pits insurance companies and lawyers against one another. Insurance companies want to limit the amount of money they pay out for punitive or exemplary damages.

Lawyers, who often derive a lot of money from these punitive damages, of course want to continue our system of awarding whatever a jury says is fair.

It's a complicated issue, to be sure. But surely, it shouldn't be decided on the kind of advertising Texans Against Tort Reform are using. It's an argument waged over money, but obviously intended to elicit an emotional response, the very thing the anti-tort reform side says juries should be counted on to subvert when they decide who should pay.

Nominates prairie chicken for post

We are thumping with the Texas Senate. Why not make the official state grouse the prairie chicken, if that will get Gov. Bill Clements to pop his ostrich head out of the ground on the state budget?

Says no-pass, no-play still lacking

A bill to revise the no-pass, no-play law is an improvement on the original law, but still is not the best bill to serve the students of Texas.

Legislation authored by Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Herford, would reduce the weeks of ineligibility of students who fail a class to three from six.

Certainly, it was a hardship on many teams when the six-week rule was implemented. In the first year, some athletic teams were cut back drastically when the first round of grades came out. But by the second year, students had learned to deal with the rule and fewer students had to drop out of extracurricular activities. But the old rule, and even the amended rule, if passed, isn't the best way. A student who has all As and Bs, but perhaps flunks one difficult class, isn't allowed to play. But another student who makes straight Ds still is allowed to continue extracurricular activities.

Wouldn't a grade average be a fairer judge of academics? Require that students meet 75 or C grade averages to stay in extracurricular activities. Then, if not, ban them for three weeks.

It would be a better improvement of a well-intentioned law.

• The El Paso Times

Accuses Austin of playing games

They're playing games with individual rights in Austin again, trying to push through legislation that would interfere with the constitutionally protected right of women to choose to terminate pregnancy.

The effort shouldn't succeed. What's more, it shouldn't even reach the floor; the legislative calendar is too full of necessary items to allow prolonged debate on what is essentially a non-issue at the state level.

There are bills in both the House and Senate to put barriers in the way of the right to choose. Of the two, the House bill is the worst — but that's simply a matter of degree. Neither is acceptable.

Both bills would ban abortions after the fetus has reached a state of "viability." The trouble is, no one can agree what that means. Does it mean any fetus which can be kept "alive," in the sense of viable animal matter, through heroic means and the full panoply of medical technology? Or does it mean any fetus able to live outside the womb on its own?

In any case, it's an attempt to circumvent the Supreme Court ruling on abortion — and impose one set of moral and religious standards on everyone else. The state has no business attempting such legislation; the legislation should remain in committee for the rest of the session.

• Corpus Christi Caller

Calls football probe an Aggie joke

The latest Aggie joke has become Texas A&M's so-called "investigation" into its football program. The university was right to try to keep this 2,000-page document (expurgated to 800 pages of non-issues and blank spaces for the public) secret: It's an embarrassment.

The point of the investigation should have been efforts by the university to get to the bottom of accusations against quarterback Kevin Murray. As it turns out, the university decided to leave this job to the NCAA and not even interview Murray.

Why? Because, A&M said, the NCAA had already started its investigation of Murray. This smacks of the university's not wanting to know the whole truth or being afraid of actually uncovering a stone the NCAA might miss.

For the sake of its own conscience or because it simply wanted to know for itself how clean or dirty the affair was, the university should have investigated the most substantive accusations it had pending against the program, those concerning Murray.

Instead, the university has chosen to bury the football program in a mound of paper. A&M may have the cleanest program in the country but such a lack of good faith on the part of university officials investigating it leaves us with little faith in their ability to demonstrate that possibility or to clean up any problems if they do exist.

Unqualified FAA students allowed to make the grade

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — Instructors at the government's school for air traffic controllers passed some students who should have been washed out, according to the Federal Aviation Administration's inspector general.

Many instructors at the Mike Monroney Aeronautical Center training academy in Oklahoma "overgraded" a particular type of laboratory test problem, "allowing some academy students to underservingly pass their academy training," the inspector general charged. His report, obtained by our reporter Karen Talley, covered fiscal year 1985.

The inspector general did not suggest that the inflated test scores resulted in unqualified applicants actually getting jobs in the nation's airport control towers. The academy provides basic lab and classroom instruction for would-be controllers, and those who pass go on to field training, which involves real and simulated flights. Presumably, any unqualified candidates are weeded out at that stage.

But the inspector general pointed out that the easy grading system wasted both time and money, and hampered the FAA's efforts to replenish the work force following President Reagan's wholesale firing of striking air controllers in 1981.

The number of students who should have flunked could not be determined by the auditors, who based their conclusion of overgrading on reports of the academy's own evaluation team.

The evaluators reviewed instructors' grades and said that in many cases the grades should have been lower. For some students the higher grades meant the difference between passing or failing the 12-week training program, the report states.

Academy officials disputed the charges, and continue to question their validity. However, they said they are planning to monitor the instructors more closely.

The investigators found that evaluators had questioned test scores in 59 of 81 cases studied. The difference of one to three points between instructors and evaluators was enough to give some students a passing grade. It was not possible to determine how many students graduated because of the undeserved points on their test scores.

"By overgrading students in the classroom" the inspector general explained, "it not only places greater demands on field training resources and supervisors, but also increases salary costs." The auditors figured that about $22,000 in salary was wasted on field training for each candidate who should not have graduated from the academy.

The report also pointed out that "grading errors tend to frustrate the FAA's efforts to return the air traffic control work force to full strength" following the firing of some 11,000 strikers.

Academy officials challenge not only the inspector general's findings, but their own evaluators' scoring methods, which involve the use of tape playbacks instead of the actual lab environment. The officials also faulted the evaluators' lab sampling because the test problems reviewed were not randomly selected.

The academy superintendent said that "some changes" are planned because of the audit. But the "improvements" are planned for the process used to evaluate and monitor the instructors.

In other words, the planned changes are not in the instructors' grading, which was criticized by the inspector general, but in the review system that gave the inspector general ammunition for his criticism.

DROWNING IN DEBT: Senior administration economists are afraid American families and corporations are going the way of Brazil — and they don't mean dancing the samba.

It's debt that worries the economists. Total public and private American debt has shot up from $3.6 trillion to about $7.7 trillion since 1980. And the national income hasn't grown nearly as fast, so there is now about 40 cents more debt for every dollar of income than five years ago.

This could mean the difference between a mild recession and a hair-curling depression, if both businesses and consumers curtail spending to pay off their debts.

We and bees learn lesson the hard way

By SPENCER SANDOW Staff Writer

Complaints that a neighbor's 18 bee hives are a nuisance remind me of the time an unwelcome hive trespassed on my family's property several years ago.

I returned home from college one afternoon to discover an extraordinary number of honeybees bumbling blindly around our front yard in the characteristic swarming stupor, bumping into various inanimate obstacles, but somehow avoiding anything living.

When I caught a glimpse of the wall near our front door, my blood ran cold.

Thousands of little buzzers had attached themselves to the wall — my worst phobia had come to life! The noise was as loud as a car engine.

I crept around the back of the house and pounded on the glass door until Mom admitted me.

Neither of us knew what to do, so we called the fire department.

A beekeeper arrived shortly. If he could get the queen bee into the container, the others would follow, and he could remove the hive safely without killing them, he explained.

Only he couldn't get the queen bee into the box.

The queen had nestled deep into the heart of the hollow wall, which he discovered was filled with old honeycomb.

Apparently, bees had been nesting in the wall for years, and no one had known.

So we left them there. After their initial day of swarming, the bees were relatively peaceful. They didn't bother us as long as we didn't get too close.

The only one who got stung was the dog, when it accidentally sat on a bee.

When winter came, our guests remained to hibernate. Mom closed the hole in the wall that served as a hive entrance, thinking the bees would be unable to exit, and would die.

No such luck. By spring, they had dug their way out. We were told we were lucky they dug outside, instead of through the inside of our house.

Mom had had enough. Although at first unwilling to kill the beneficial, honey-producing creatures, she gave in to the inevitable and called an exterminator.

For months we swept tiny winged bodies from the front yard.

But we must have gained a tough reputation in the insect kingdom. We haven't seen a bee there since.

get out and open the gate when we finally did get there.

The colored man who kept the land for whoever owned it came up to Daddy's side of the truck and pointed way out the pasture. I'm not sure what he said, but whatever it was, it made Dad think twice about taking me with him.

So he pointed me to the colored man's front yard right up next to the road, where a little black girl was playing, and told me to stay there and play with her.

You could have knocked me down with a feather. Not that Daddy ever told me to stay away from colored people, but he didn't exactly encourage it, either. And here I was supposed to play with one.

I walked in the yard, not knowing what to say to this girl about my age who was so very black. I couldn't say much anyway because my tongue was just about stuck to the roof of my mouth, dry and all mediciny-tasting, from the long ride down. She was hopping around, making little clouds of dust in the grassless yard with her feet, and holding the most delicious-looking, half-eaten purple Popsicle in the world.

I guess my eyes stuck to that purple Popsicle about like my tongue was stuck to the roof of my mouth. "Hey," she said. "Hey," I said. Then she lifted the Popsicle up between us and held it there. I stared at it stupidly, and only a minute later did I realize she was offering it to me.

A half-eaten Popsicle. Purple. That a colored girl had already bitten into.

I knew I would drop dead if I took one bite, even a slurp. I might drop dead if I even thought about taking a slurp.

And yet I was awful thirsty, maybe the thirstiest I'd ever been in my 5 years.

I took it in my hand.

That was the longest moment of my life. I felt suspended in time as I was drawing that purple Popsicle up to my mouth.

I was fixing to drop dead and go to hell forever and ever and never see my little brother again.

But I took a bite anyway. All in all, I took two bites and three slurps before I gave it back to her. It was a very good Popsicle.

And after that, when I saw all those signs over water fountains and on doors and in conversations saying, "black" and "colored," I thought someone must have tricked a whole bunch of people or something along time back and no one had found out about it yet.

Sure, there's black and white always has been, always will be.

But there's also purple, the color of the juicy Popsicle a little black girl gave me one hot, Louisiana afternoon when I was thirsty.

Clements given low rating

HOUSTON — Republican Gov. Bill Clements has been given a negative job performance rating by Houston-area respondents to a recent University of Houston poll sponsored by the Houston Chronicle and television station KPRC.

When asked to rate Clements' performance as governor, 39 percent of those responding to the poll rated his performance as "only fair," while 29 percent rated it as "poor."

Nineteen percent of those responding rated his performance as "good," while three percent rated it as "excellent." Ten percent said they were unsure.

"(They are) the worst numbers I've seen for a governor this early in an administration," said University of Houston political scientist Richard Murray, who conducted the poll. "It usually takes a while to work up to this level."

Clements, who has been in office for slightly over three months, declined to comment on the results.

"Gov. Clements was elected to solve problems, not to win popularity contests," said Clements' press secretary, Reggie Bashur. "And as his solutions solve problems, Texans will hold him in the highest regard."

Worshippers pray for wife

DALLAS — A prominent Methodist minister's wife remained in a coma, but some of the estimated 300 worshippers at a downtown prayer service for her said they held out hope she might somehow sense their presence.

"I felt like if we could all come together and pray, somehow she would be all right," one of the worshippers, Yvonne Harris, said of a service held for Margaret Bailey, who was found near death early Wednesday in the garage of her home.

She is the wife of the Rev. Walker Bailey, senior minister of Dallas' First United Methodist Church, and police are trying to determine if there is a connection between her attack and several anonymous threatening letters her husband received.

Authorities provided guards for Bailey recently because of threats he received after preaching on several occasions against racial prejudice.

Sunday afternoon's service was at Thanks-Giving Square in downtown Dallas.

Lawyer poses as courier

HOUSTON — A Houston-area lawyer says he has been posing as a drug courier for Louisiana police to show drivers have been wrongly coerced into allowing searches of their vehicles.

Criminal defense attorney Gary Trichter, who is defending a Houston couple arrested in Louisiana last year, says he has been secretly taping encounters with Louisiana police who have stopped his car because he deliberately met a description profile of a drug courier. He says he has been gathering evidence of what he calls unfair intimidation by Louisiana patrolmen.

Trichter says he has driven a rented car with Florida license plates across Louisiana at less than the speed limit, with stuffed garbage bags sticking out of the trunk, and a Hispanic passenger.

He says that combination of car, occupants and behavior conforms to a drug-courier profile used by Louisiana police, who then may pull over the car for supposed traffic violations.

Trichter says he plans to use his experience and the testimony of other drivers who say they were pulled over by Louisiana police to ask a judge to throw out the case against a Houston couple stopped for speeding last September, and then arrested when police allegedly found marijuana in the car trunk.

Minority enrollment drops

AUSTIN — Private schools in Texas provide significant exceptions to the national downward trend of enrollment of blacks and Hispanics, a spokeswoman for the institutions said.

Carol McDonald, president of the Independent Colleges and Universities of Texas, says enrollment of blacks and Hispanics has hovered around 16 percent for most of the 1980s, compared with below 10 percent nationally.

The peak enrollment was 16.2 percent in 1981, followed by a slight up-and-down movement to 15.3 percent in 1985, the latest year for which statewide figures are available, Ms. McDonald said.

Black enrollment was consistently 8 to 8½ percent from 1981 to 1985, and Hispanic enrollment was 7 to 7½ percent, she said.

Total enrollment at the 40 ICUT schools has remained about 78,000 through the 1980s. Among the schools are six historically black private colleges which have a combined enrollment of about 3,300.

Nationally, black enrollment in higher education dropped from a high of 9.4 percent in 1976 to 8.8 percent in 1984, according to the American Council on Education in Washington. Hispanic enrollment rose from 3.5 percent to 4.3 percent during those years.

Child drowns on river ride

SAN ANTONIO — The drowning of a 4-year-old boy who fell from a paddle boat on the San Antonio River may lead to stricter rules regarding the operation of paddle boats in Brackenridge Park, officials say.

Ron Darner, director of the city's Parks and Recreation Department, told the San Antonio Light Sunday that officials will probe the Saturday death and determine if any state regulations were violated when the boy was allowed on a paddle boat without a life preserver.

Jason Barger drowned after falling from a paddle boat being operated by his mother Saturday. The incident occurred as the boat passed the Koehler Pavilion near the entrance to the San Antonio Zoo.

The boy, who could not swim, was not wearing a life preserver, witnesses said. Police reported the boy had stood up on the boat before slipping and falling into about 9 feet of slow-moving water.

The boy's mother, also a non-swimmer, was rescued after she jumped into the river in a desperate attempt to save her son.

Firefighters and volunteers recovered the boy's body after a 2½-hour search.

Chester L. Burdett, director of law enforcement for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, said the state's Water Safety Act requires that anyone riding a boat "have a life preserver available to wear."

Burdett said children 12 years old and younger are required to wear preservers when aboard certain classes of motor boats.

Life preservers are available to boat renters at no extra charge, but most people choose not to wear them, according to Phil Sheridan, owner of the park's paddle boat concession.

"You can't force people to use them," he said.

Concerned mother gives car banners

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me where to write to obtain some "Please Call Police" reflective banners that can be taped on the front and back windows of automobiles in case of a road emergency.

My teen-age daughter and her friends are approaching the age when they will be driving, and I think those banners would make terrific sweet-16 birthday gifts.

MRS. ROBERT SVIHLA, RIVERSIDE, ILL.

DEAR MRS. SVIHLA: Write to: WCIL-BANNERS (Westside Center for Independent Living), P.O. Box 66942, Los Angeles, Calif. 90066. The cost is $4 per banner — postage and handling included. Make your tax-deductible check or money order payable to WCIL-BANNERS. This organization exists to help disabled people live independently. Thank you for suggesting that the banners would make terrific gifts. I agree.

DEAR ABBY: Because of a recent personal experience, I am writing with the hope that you will print this (anonymously, of course) to remind professionals that "confidentiality" is still of vital importance in the nursing profession.

My husband is a recovering alcoholic. He went to a physician for a physical examination. Several nurses in that doctor's office were nursing classmates of mine.

A few weeks after my husband's visit to that doctor's office, the husband of one of the nurses came to me and told me how "proud" he was of my husband because he had quit drinking! He told me that his wife had read my husband's medical history, and told him "everything." I was shocked.

Abby, I, too, am a nurse, and I have always regarded a patient's medical history as privileged information — to be held in the strictest of confidence.

Perhaps other professionals need to be reminded of this. Thank you for letting me air my opinion.

NURSE

DEAR NURSE: And thank you for airing it as a reminder to everyone who, in the line of duty, has access to privileged information. This includes therapists, lawyers, school teachers, hairdressers, housekeepers, telephone operators, hotel (and motel) personnel — the list is endless.

DEAR ABBY: My 30-year-old sister is finally getting married. She is having a formal church wedding, reception and sit-down dinner for 200 guests, but no children!

However, she has made one exception — our 7-year-old daughter, whom she has asked to be the flower girl in the wedding. We accepted. The catch is that we also have a 4-year-old daughter whom my sister is specifically not inviting.

Naturally, we objected. We told her that we were not about to hurt the feelings of our younger daughter, and if she can't go to the wedding, none of us (including our older daughter) will attend. My sister insists that we are being insensitive to her feelings and her rights as the bride-to-be.

Abby, the wedding is two months away, and there has been no compromise. Who is being insensitive — the bride, or are we?

BIG BAD BROTHER IN HAWAII

DEAR BROTHER: You are. It's the bride's big day. To "boycott" her wedding by refusing to allow your daughter to be her flower girl — and absenting yourselves unless she invites your 4-year-old — would, in my view, be a serious mistake.

Also, consider the precedent you'd be setting if you arranged for your younger daughter to be invited everywhere big sister went. Think about it.

Spring begins poison ivy season

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Whenever I have an outbreak of poison ivy I constantly hear two misconceptions voiced. "Don't get near 'Skippy' because he picks it up so easily," and "Don't scratch it or the fluid will make it spread."

Please explain to your readers that only contact with the plant or its juice will cause a reaction. And that what many people are really experiencing when they have spread of poison ivy is either recontamination by the plant, delayed skin reaction to initial contact, or repeated contact later from clothing or animals that still have the plant juice on them. — J.W.

You're absolutely correct, Skippy, and thanks for taking over part of my annual duty of warning readers about this noxious weed.

The only way you develop the rash is by contact with the plant oil. The oil is an irritant to the skin. It's in the leaves, stems, branches, flowers and berries of poison ivy, oak and sumac.

Clothing and garden tools can have the oil on them and can cause the rash if they're used. Animals get the oil on their coats. They don't get the rash, but they can transfer oil to human skin.

Blister fluid does not spread the rash. You're right on that count, too. But you shouldn't scratch blisters because you might infect them. Stay away from suspicious three-leaf plants. If you have to be around it, change clothing immediately and rinse off skin areas exposed. The new cortisone skin creams will ease the inflammation from ivy irritation.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Can you explain glossopharyngeal neuralgia? My doctor has me on Tegretol for it. I have extreme pain in my right ear. I am almost making an invalid of myself out of fear an attack will happen when I'm out. — B.T.

You've heard of trigeminal neuritis, inflammation of a nerve in the face area that causes excruciating facial pain. Glossopharyngeal neuralgia is a distant cousin of that. The nerve affected is a different one, one serving the throat and ear regions.

As with trigeminal neuralgia, slight provocations can set off attacks. In your case, as you well know, simple swallowing, talking or a cough can cause one. The medicines used for trigeminal neuralgia are used for your problem. The one you mention is an example. I do hope it puts an end to your misery and fear.

Highlanders sweep Hawks for title

WACO — Errors and uncharacteristically weak hitting plagued the Howard College Hawks Sunday, and the Hawks dropped an important double-header to McClennan.

By sweeping the three game series from the Hawks, McClennan wrapped up the Region V title with a 19-2 record. Both of those losses were to the Hawks earlier in the year in Big Spring.

Howard fell to 33-8 on the season and 13-6 in the region. The Hawks are three games ahead of third place Ranger in the battle for the last playoff spot. All of Howard's five remaining region games are against Ranger — a double-header there on Wednesday and a three-game series here this weekend.

If Howard wins two of those games, they qualify for the playoffs.

The Hawks dropped the opener 7-1 as Ted Hebert (12-1) lost his first game. The Hawks committed four errors and had just four hits. John Wiles' solo homer in the seventh accounted for Howard's tally.

"Hebert pitched well enough to win, but we just didn't hit and our defense was extremely shaky," said Coach Bill Griffin. Only three of the Highlanders' runs were earned.

In the second game, McClennan exploded for a seven-run, two-out rally in the bottom of the sixth to break open a 1-1 game.

With two-out and a man on first, a Highlander batter hit the ball in the infield and the Hawks made an error. McClennan made the most of the opportunity, with five hits and three walks accounting for the seven runs.

The Hawks scored one in the second when Jeff Shultz batted in Chad Baker. They added two more in the top of the seventh when Shultz again batted in Baker, and Ernesto Castro sacrificed Wiles home.

Chrissie edges Martina on Houston clay

HOUSTON (AP) — Chris Evert said she felt relatively at ease going against Martina Navratilova for the championship of the Virginia Slims of Houston tennis tournament because the match at Lakeside Racquet and Athletic Club was to be played on a clay surface.

"I was a lot more relaxed out there," Evert said. "With Martina, I felt, if I'm ever going to beat her, it's going to be on clay."

Evert, the tournament's No. 3 seed, was extended to a third-set tie-breaker, but finally wore down top-seeded Navratilova 3-6, 6-1, 7-6 (7-4) Sunday for the $30,000 first place money in the $150,000 tournament.

The victory was only the 34th for Evert in her 71 meetings with Navratilova, and the first since she won the French Open last year. But in 12 battles on clay, Evert has lost only twice.

"I'm the underdog on clay," Navratilova said after Sunday's match. "How can Chris be the underdog?"

Evert won the Houston tournament for the second straight year and now has won the tournament four times. The win was her 150th on the women's pro tennis tour.

Navratilova committed three errors in the tie-breaker, and Evert passed Navratilova with a forehand down the line and two perfect lobs. At double-match point, Evert clinched the victory with a drop volley.

"After a three-set tie-breaker, someone's always going to feel ecstatic, and someone's going to be bitterly disappointed because they came so close," Evert said.

After this particular meeting, it was Navratilova who felt the disappointment.

"You did it to me today," Navratilova said at the awards ceremony after the match.

Evert played near-flawless tennis, with a consistent baseline game.

But Evert broke Navratilova to take a 1-0 lead in the second set. After Navratilova broke back to tie the set 1-1, she didn't win another game throughout the set.

"Chris started playing better," Navratilova said. "She wasn't making any unforced errors. Something made me lose my concentration at 2-1, and when I was down 3-1, I thought: 'It's a long way back unless Chris hands me something on a silver platter.'"

"I thought my chances (of winning) were pretty slim," Evert said about trailing 5-4 in the third set. "That's usually where Martina is her toughest. But I hung in there, and didn't get down on myself."

Navratilova missed half of her first serves in the match. She lost approximately 24 points on backhand errors.

Navratilova and partner Katy Jordan of King of Prussia, Pa., the No. 2 seeds, won the doubles championship. They defeated the third-seeded team of Zina Garrison and Lori McNeil, both from Houston, 6-2, 6-4 in the final.

Chris Evert concentrates on the ball before slamming a backhand during action in the Virginia Slims tournament this weekend in Houston. On Sunday, Evert defeated rival Martina Navratilova for the title.

Bucs make sure Vinny doesn't Bo

NEW YORK (AP) — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers have taken the suspense out of the first pick in the NFL draft. They've also took the safe route by making sure they had Vinny Testaverde signed, sealed and delivered.

The Buccaneers had the NFL's worst record for the second straight year and once again will open the proceedings Tuesday morning. They won't make the same mistake twice.

Last year, the obvious selection for the Bucs was Bo Jackson, the Heisman Trophy-winning running back from Auburn. Tampa Bay did the right thing by selecting Jackson, then did the absolute wrong thing by failing to sign him. Instead, Bo bolted to baseball's Kansas City Royals and now is their starting left fielder.

"It wasn't going to happen again," Buccaneers owner Hugh Culverhouse said after signing Testaverde, who succeeded Jackson as the Heisman Trophy winner and will succeed him as the No. 1 overall pick in the draft. "We got the man we wanted. We made sure."

Ray Perkins, who left Alabama to become coach and general manager in Tampa, was praising Crimson Tide linebacker Cornelius Bennett, claiming he might take Bennett over Testaverde. That was just camouflage, however, although Bennett is considered the best of a superior class of linebackers.

"Cornelius will be a great professional player," Perkins said. "I've been associated with some great linebackers and Cornelius rates with many of them."

There have been some comparisons made between Bennett and Lawrence Taylor, the fearsome, dominating outside linebacker of the Super Bowl champion New York Giants. Taylor was the No. 2 overall choice in 1981 behind another Heisman Trophy winner, George Rogers.

"He is a one-man wrecking crew," Mike Hickey, the New York Jets' player personnel director, said of Bennett. "He is a great athlete and a super competitor. But he is not LT, yet. Maybe he is a better athlete on quickness and speed than LT. But LT is a better all-around athlete."

"I still can't believe there is anyone better than LT. There is only one of him, then there are the others."

Bennett has a chance to move into Taylor's class, though.

"He is an outstanding football player, smart and instinctive," Hickey said. "If we were picking second, I would probably take Bennett."

The Indianapolis Colts have that option. Nobody expects them to pass it up, although several teams have been bargaining with the Colts to get the selection and take Bennett.

The other linebackers likely to attract first-round attention include Shane Conlan of Penn State, Mike Junkin of Duke, Tony Woods of Pittsburgh and Chuck Faucette of Maryland.

Also regarded as a strong position in the draft is the defensive line, and there are several standout running backs. But not much is available on the offensive line or in the secondary.

"There is a corps of real good players, impact players, in the top nine or 10," Hickey said. "The blue-chippers, the ones everybody asks about."

Those blue-chippers include defensive linemen Reggie Rogers of Washington, Jerome Brown of Miami and Jason Buck of Brigham Young, the 1986 Outland Trophy winner as the best lineman in the country. The top runners are Alonzo Highsmith of Miami, D.J. Dozier of Penn State and Brent Fullwood of Auburn.

Every scout raves about the athletic ability of Rod Woodson, a defensive back-wide receiver-kick returner from Purdue. Woodson is certain to be among the first 10 picked.

"It isn't a question of whether Woodson will be an All-Pro," said Dick Steinberg, director of player development for the Patriots.

Pistons abuse Bullets; Hawks win

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Detroit Pistons' only worry with a 2-0 series lead over Washington is that they might have awakened sleeping giant Moses Malone.

The Pistons set an NBA playoff record by building a 76-36 halftime lead over the Bullets Sunday night before winning the second game of the best-of-5 series 128-85.

Rick Mahorn, who has combined with Bill Laimbeer and Adrian Dantley to put a defensive net on Malone, holding him to 31 points in two games, went out of his way to praise the Bullets' center.

"Moses is the ultimate center," Mahorn said. "Stopping Moses is like trying to stop a rock from going through a window. I expect a dogfight down there (in Game 3 at Landover, Md.). It's like do or die. They're going to come out and play hard, and we've got to play hard also."

The Celtics, Hawks and Pistons lead their series 2-0, while Philadelphia-Milwaukee and Portland-Houston are tied 1-1.

After an off-day today, the playoffs resume Tuesday, when it's Boston at Chicago, Portland at Houston and Dallas at Seattle.

Wednesday's games have Milwaukee at Philadelphia, Detroit at Washington, Atlanta at Indiana, the Lakers at Denver and Utah at Golden State. Los Angeles and Utah lead 2-0, while Seattle and Dallas split two games.

Dantley, who scored 18 points in the first half, finished with 24 and Isaiah Thomas finished with 17.

Hawks 94, Pacers 93
Atlanta again was carried by Dominique Wilkins, who scored 43 points and passed to Kevin Willis for a key basket with 58 seconds left against Indiana.

Willis, who hadn't scored since the second period and finished with only eight points, hit a short hook to give the Hawks a 94-91 lead.

Celtics 105, Bulls 96
Boston won its 31st straight game at home and beat Chicago for the 15th consecutive time despite 42 points by Michael Jordan.

Larry Bird, held to just 17 points in the playoff opener, had 29 points and Kevin McHale added 20 for Boston. Ainge and Johnson had 18 apiece, while Charles Oakley had 25 points and 15 rebounds for the Bulls.

76ers 125, Bucks 122
Philadelphia pulled even with Milwaukee as Charles Barkley scored eight of his 26 points in overtime.

Barkley, who also had 15 rebounds, gave the 76ers a 121-120 lead with 39 seconds left in overtime when he stole the ball from Terry Cummings and scored.

Roy Hinson scored 28 points to lead the 76ers, while Julius Erving added 23. Ricky Pierce scored 24 points, Cummings 21 and Moncrief 20 for Milwaukee.

David Wingate had 11 points in the fourth quarter to help the 76ers rally from a 10-point deficit.

Trail Blazers 111, Rockets 98
Portland got 32 points from Clyde Drexler and used a halfcourt trapping defense to force 25 Houston turnovers.

"Our ballhandling was atrocious and embarrassing," Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said. "I think when we see the films, we're going to have some players with red faces."

Rejuvenated Saberhagen thumps Tigers

By The Associated Press
Bret Saberhagen has always liked pitching in Detroit. But this season, he seems to be enjoying his job no matter where he pitches — because this year, he's healthy again.

Saberhagen, plagued by a sore right shoulder and right foot last season, ran his record to 4-0 Sunday by scattering seven hits as he pitched the Kansas City Royals to a 6-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The victory improved Saberhagen's career record at Tiger Stadium to 7-0 and dropped his earned run average in four games this season to 1.32.

"I said in spring training that if I stayed healthy, I would win some ball games," said Saberhagen, who finished 1986 with a 7-12 record and 4.15 ERA.

His nightmare last season was a marked contrast to the dream season of 1985, when at the age of 21, he won the American League's Cy Young Award and was named the World Series MVP. That season, he finished 20-6 with a 2.87 ERA.

"He's much better than he ever was before," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "If nothing happens to him, you can put down for 20 (wins) or more. If he loses six or seven, that will be a lot."

Frank White's second homer of the season gave Kansas City a 2-0 lead in the first inning against Detroit starter Walt Terrell, 1-3.

Saberhagen beat the Yankees 13-1 with a two-hitter on April 10; Detroit, 2-1, with a six-hitter over eight innings on April 15; and Boston, 10-2, with a seven-hitter over eight innings on April 20.

Yankees 14, Indians 2
Tommy John pitched seven shutout innings for the second straight start, this time allowing Cleveland one hit.

The 43-year-old left-hander allowed only an infield single to Julio Franco with two outs in the third inning. John retired 14 Indians on groundouts in improving his career record against Cleveland to 19-12. Last Sunday, John pitched a four-hitter over seven innings against Kansas City.

Rickey Henderson led off the game with his sixth home run — the third time this season Henderson homered leading off — to spark a five-run first inning for New York. Henderson has five homers against Cleveland.

Gary Ward added three hits and three RBI for the Yankees.

Rangers 5, Red Sox 3
Texas, off to an unexpectedly slow start, might have found the answers with a three-game sweep of Boston. Pete O'Brien, who entered the game batting .182, completed the sweep with a two-run homer in the bottom of the 13th inning.

Calvin Schiraldi, 0-2, came in to start the 13th and gave up a single to Scott Fletcher before O'Brien hit his second homer of the season for the Rangers, who entered the weekend series with a 3-11 record.

"We had so many chances to win it," said O'Brien, "but we made some mistakes and failed to capitalize. I was just glad for the chance to win it for us."

Roger Clemens started for Boston and allowed 10 hits, walked four and struck out 10 in eight innings.

Brewers 5, Orioles 3
During Milwaukee's 13-game winning streak at the start of the season, a new hero seemed to emerge each day. That pattern is continuing.

Juan Castillo hit his first major-league home run as the Brewers improved their record to 16-1 by completing a three-game weekend sweep of Baltimore.

Twins 10, Angels 5
Steve Lombardozzi, not considered a longball threat in the power-packed Minnesota lineup, broke a seventh-inning tie with his first home run of the season.

With the score tied, 5-5, Lombardozzi hit a solo homer off reliever Mike Cook, 1-1, with one out in the seventh. The victory gave Minnesota a one-game lead over second-place California in the AL West.

Gary Gaetti, Greg Gange and Kirby Puckett added homer for the Twins while Wally Joyner hit two out for the Angels and extended his hitting streak to 10 games.

Blue Jays 5, White Sox 2
Toronto's power hitters broke out of their slump as George Bell hit two homers and Jesse Barfield added a solo shot to help beat Chicago.

Bell homered with two outs in the first inning after Lloyd Moseby drew a walk off Jose DeLeon, 2-2. Bell hit his fourth homer in the eighth off reliever Bobby Thigpen and Barfield followed with his fifth homer three pitches later.

Jimmy Key, 4-1, gave up seven hits, walked five and struck out three before being knocked out in the eighth. Tom Henke finished to earn his fourth save.

Through Toronto's first 17 games, Bell, Barfield and Moseby had combined for seven home runs in 205 at-bats. Last season, the trio combined for 92 homers in 1,819 at-bats.

Mariners 8, Athletics 5
Harold Reynolds drove in the go-ahead run with a triple in the fourth inning and Jim Presley added a two-run homer in the ninth to overcome Reggie Jackson's 550th career home run.

Haas takes Houston on extra hole

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — Jay Haas had goose bumps and Buddy Gardner added another chapter to his 10 years of hard luck on the PGA Tour on the first sudden-death playoff hole at The Woodlands Country Club Sunday.

"I wasn't nervous until he missed his putt and then I started shaking," said Haas, who sank a 2-foot putt on the par 3, No. 16 playoff hole to beat Gardner for the title in the $600,000 Houston Open.

Haas earned $108,000 and Gardner got $64,800 to ease the pain of another loss.

"I really had goose bumps standing over my putt," said Haas, ending a 5-year victory drought.

Haas shot a 5-under-par 67 after starting the day three shots off the pace and Gardner, who shared the third-round lead with Dan Forsman, shot a final-round 70.

They finished regulation with 12 under par 276 totals. Payne Stewart shot a final-round 67 and earned third place, worth $40,800.

Gardner, who has four second-place finishes in 10 pro seasons, missed a 3-foot putt on the playoff hole, opening the way for Haas to win his sixth PGA Tour event.

"I just absolutely shanked it," Gardner said of his playoff putt. "I pushed it and that's all I can say. I'm pretty disappointed."

"I'll probably feel sorry for myself and shed a few tears, but it won't have a negative effect at all. I'll forget about it by tomorrow."

The playoff never would have happened if Haas hadn't rolled in a 60-foot birdie putt on the final regulation hole to go 12 under for the tournament and put pressure on Gardner, just coming up to play the final hole.

"It just must have been my time," Haas said.

Someone in the gallery sneezed a split-second before Haas' 60-footer. The noise actually helped.

"Usually when something like that happens, things don't turn out so well," Haas said. "But in this case I hit it a little hard and it turned out just right."

Haas started the day with a cold putter, missing several birdie chances on the front side.

"I was really getting down on myself at that point, I felt I should have been about two under by that point," Haas said. "But I didn't give away any shots in that stretch and that's what wins golf tournaments."

Gardner two-putted from 100 feet to force the playoff, but then his dreams ended on the par-3, No. 16 first playoff hole.

"I wasn't nervous, they kept asking me that," Gardner said. "I just missed it."

"I played as good golf as I can play today," he added.

Nick Price and Wayne Levi, each with final-round 71s, finished in a tie for fourth at 279.

Greg Norman, who narrowly made the cut, finally gave his huge galleries something to cheer about with a final-round 7-under par 65, the low round of the tournament, to finish at 284.

Donaldson may sit out Tuesday

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mavericks center James Donaldson said he might miss Tuesday's NBA playoff game in Seattle because of bone stress and soreness in his lower right leg.

The 7-foot-2 Donaldson, who has appeared in 536 consecutive games and established a Mavericks record for minutes played this season, was checked at a hospital for a possible stress fracture after Saturday's 112-110 upset loss to the Seattle SuperSonics.

"They say I don't have a stress fracture, yet," Donaldson said, "but now it's getting worse and worse."

"Judging by the way it feels today," Donaldson said Sunday, "I don't feel I can play. But the next game is a couple of days away."

Donaldson was taken to Baylor Medical Center for X-rays Saturday, and but it was determined he has a "hot spot," or early stage for a stress fracture, on the bone. Time and rest, Donaldson said, are the best treatment for the ailment. He said he also would apply ice to it.

Donaldson played only 28 minutes Saturday and had one point and seven rebounds.

"The injury definitely prevented me from giving the effort I wanted to give," said the 7-2 Donaldson. "I was having trouble getting up and down the court and wasn't as effective as I like to be. That's why I didn't play as much as a I usually do."

The Seattle-Dallas best-of-five Western Conference series now goes back to the West Coast even at one game each. Game 3 is Tuesday night and Game 4 is Thursday night.

Dawson destroys Expos, Reds rout Astros

By The Associated Press
One reason Andre Dawson left Montreal after 10 years was that his tender knees couldn't take the constant pounding on the artificial turf. This weekend, the Expos couldn't take Dawson's constant pounding for the Chicago Cubs.

The former Montreal right fielder had two home runs Sunday to lead the Cubs to a 7-1 victory over the Expos and a sweep of their three-game series. It capped a weekend in which Dawson was 7-for-12 with those two homers, six runs batted in and six runs scored. "I don't want to think I was beating up on my ex-teammates," said Dawson, who turned down a $1 million offer from the Expos to sign for $500,000 with the Cubs. "I was just trying to concentrate on my job. I knew if I came in here trying to do too much, I wouldn't get much done."

Dawson wasn't the only big basher for Chicago — Leon Durham hit his third homer in three games to give Chicago a 1-0 lead in the second off Larry Sorensen, 1-1. The Cubs added three runs in the third, Dawson hit a two-run, 450-foot homer to center in the fourth, and then added a solo shot in the ninth.

Andres Galarraga's first homer of the season leading off the ninth accounted for the only Montreal run off Steve Trout, 1-1, who pitched his first complete game since Sept. 29, 1985, allowing seven hits.

Reds 11, Astros 3
Dave Parker hit two homers, good for five runs, as the Reds completed their sweep. Dave Concepcion had four hits and Eric Davis, who entered the game having struck out nine straight times, added three hits and scored three as the Reds completed their sweep.

It was particularly satisfying for Parker to accomplish it in the Astrodome.

"I don't like to play here and I don't see the ball well here normally. Today was the best day I've ever had here," said Parker, who now has eight home runs, one more than he's ever hit in April in his 14-year career.

"I have really come out of it here. Last year, I hit just one home run against these guys; now I've already hit three this year."

The Reds, who lost 14 of 18 to Houston last year, won their sixth in seven starts against Houston. They got a lift from Mario Soto, making his second start after undergoing arthroscopic shoulder surgery. He went 6 1-3 innings, allowing three runs and seven hits for his first win since last August.

Jack Clark homered and singled twice as the Cardinals, playing with a substitute-filled lineup, got 15 hits for their fifth win in six meetings with the Mets this year.

Pitcher Bob Forsch added two singles and a suicide-squeeze bunt, Jose Oquendo had three hits and Steve Lake a pair of RBI singles for St. Louis.

"Everybody is helping each other," said Oquendo, who replaced injured second baseman Tommy Herr. A lifetime .234 hitter, he raised his average to .423.

NCAA postpones hearing on Longhorns' 63 violations

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas will not appear before the NCAA Infractions Committee in connection with 63 rules violations until June because new information has been received, UT officials say.

The meeting had been scheduled Sunday at Hilton Head, S.C., but was postponed to give both organizations time to review and evaluate the new information.

"We would have been unable to get the information together for this meeting," Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds said. "We would have had to go two different times, so we decided and the NCAA decided to wait until June."

The infractions committee will meet again June 3-5 in Kansas City. Texas officials, who arrived Saturday afternoon in South Carolina for the hearing, are unsure if the developments will result in additions to the 63 allegations the football program already faces.

"I can't answer that," Dodds said. "I don't know that and won't until we get down both sides of the track on that. We have to find out if it's right or wrong or contest it. Until then, I don't have enough information to talk about it."

Neither UT nor NCAA representatives would divulge the new information or even what it concerns.

"The NCAA Infractions Committee hearing on the University of Texas at Austin's case has been postponed because of new information developed late Saturday, April 25," university president William H. Cunningham said in a prepared statement.

Texas was charged with violations ranging from players receiving cash loans to players selling complimentary game tickets at inflated prices.

Dodds and Cunningham have called the violations minor.

Some officials said the allegations against UT Austin, spanning 19 categories over a period of seven years, are similar to those that resulted in Southern Methodist University being placed on probation in 1981.

"I have seen the violations and they aren't that different than the ones that got us on probation in '81," said Chris Rentzel, a Dallas attorney who represented an SMU staff member before the NCAA at that time.

"They could very easily receive a similar penalty," Rentzel said.

INS prepares agencies to help process

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The waiting lists are long and will almost surely get longer because private agencies aren't ready to play their crucial role in helping illegal aliens apply for amnesty, officials say.

More than 3 million aliens are expected to apply for legalization beginning May 5 at more than 107 special U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service centers across the country.

But because many aliens are wary of the INS, the agency is calling on Catholic and Protestant churches to step in and help manage the flood of illegal aliens seeking documentation help as the date for legalization nears.

The directors of some of those agencies, called Qualified Designated Entities, say the INS has been slow in sending them alien application forms and they fear their backlog will increase.

"We're not ready," Joe Murray, chairman of the North Texas Immigration Coalition, told the Dallas Times Herald. "We have no idea what the needs of the market we're going to serve will be, and the INS has set up no coordination... (there is) an information hunger out there that the INS has not filled. They have done nothing to provide assistance."

The delays and problems have prompted Murray to ask several Texas congressmen to delay the amnesty start-up until the confusion can be resolved.

The private agencies will be able to charge up to $100 each for processing, document retrieval and fingerprinting services, and the INS will charge aliens another $185 each, or $420 per family, for the application.

"A lot of these people are going to go to these QDEs out of fear of the INS, because they simply can't speak English or because they don't know how to gather the necessary documentation," said John Armstead of the southern region Outreach Services in Dallas. "Some of these applicants are hesitant, somewhat leery of the INS."

The private organizations have been swamped since last year's passage of the immigration bill, which grants amnesty to aliens who entered the country before Jan. 1, 1982.

The INS has failed to select and train the agencies, designating only half of the approximately 400 church and community organizations needed to help applicants fill out their forms, INS officials conceded to the Times Herald.

Of those groups selected in Texas, the INS has designated six churches that did not apply for the job and may not offer the service, the newspaper reported.

E.B. Duarte Jr., the INS's official responsible for establishing the network, acknowledged many of the groups may not be ready for business May 5.

"We'd like to see them all up and running as close to May 5 as possible, and we're trying for that," he told the newspaper. "But we'd prefer it that they have everything in place, that they're trained and ready to go before they open up. If that takes a week to 30 days beyond (May 5), that will be acceptable."

At the Catholic Services for Immigrants in San Antonio, four telephone lines ring constantly as volunteers take names of aliens needing help with paperwork. The waiting list already numbers about 1,000.

In Houston, Lutheran church officials expect to help process applications for more than 20,000 undocumented aliens, mostly Central Americans.

In Dallas, the staff at the Immigration Counseling Services for Catholic Charities will be increased to handle the workload, and the agency already has talked to 1,000 people.

"We've sort of become a clearinghouse for information and we're not set up to be a clearinghouse. It's really been overwhelming," said Vanna Slaughter, director of the Dallas Catholic Charities program that is in partial operation.

"This will help the applicants because they will have a place to come where they have an established level of confidence," Ms. Slaughter said. "They have been here. They've come to church here."

Ms. Slaughter's organization and the INS recently sponsored a one-day seminar on legalization procedures, which was attended by more than 75 directors of Texas church relief organizations.

California, Texas and Florida, in that order, are expected to receive the most applications for legalization, said INS spokesman Duke Austin in Washington.

The U.S. Catholic Conference, working through local parishes, will be the largest sponsor of liaison agencies, Austin said.

To receive approval, agencies had to demonstrate they had experience with immigrants and could do the job, he said.

Austin said private agency officials should not be worried about the delay in INS application forms.

"They are now being printed and are being mailed out," he said. "They will be getting these forms very shortly."

Armstead, with Outreach Services in Dallas, said immigration officials also are keeping an eye out for groups or individuals charging aliens more than $100 each.

Itzel Huerta with the Episcopal Diocese in Fort Worth listens to immigration service officials explain the regulations concerning amnesty for illegal aliens at Holy Trinity Catholic Church in Dallas recently.

SKIPPER TRAVEL TALK

by Mary Valli

RICH CONTRAST

The visitor to Japan is rewarded by the most remarkable richness and diversity to be found in East Asia. Gleaming modernity mingles with ancient tradition. State-of-the-art electronics are to be found aside ancient tea ceremonies. Even the land itself is a picture of diversity. From Hokkaido, which gets bitter-cold winters, to Yonaguni, which lies close to the Tropic of Cancer, Japan's 3,900 islands extend more than 1,730 miles. The richness of the culture, too, is breathtaking. There are schools of flower arranging and ink painting (sumi-e). Lovely Shinto shrines grace the countryside. Buddhist temples evoke awe. And, in the countryside, centuries-old "minka," graceful wood and thatch and paper farmhouses, harmonize with nature. Perhaps nowhere in the world is there so much to be found in so small an area.

To achieve the rewards of travel that you seek, you need only to come to BIG SPRING SKIPPER TRAVEL, 608 Scurry. Our professional staff offers the knowledge, experience and resources so that you may reap the rewards of a journey to any point around the world. HINT — Japan may be the cleanest, safest country in the world.

Economist says farmers are victims of economic forces

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers fell prey to soaring national debt and other big-picture economic happenings in the early 1980s and are still being held hostage by forces over which they have little or no control, says an Agriculture Department economist.

"Over the last four years, the trend in overall U.S. indebtedness has been dramatically different from anything seen in the previous 40 years," said Ralph Monaco of the department's Economic Research Service. "This change has important implications for U.S. agriculture because it affects the macroeconomic environment in which agriculture must operate."

In Monaco's view, the biggest dangers to the U.S. economy — which he termed possible but unlikely — would be an end to the flow of foreign capital into the United States, or trade protectionist legislation and an all-out trade war.

To give perspective to the immensity of U.S. debt — all the money owed by business, government and individuals — Monaco said that at the end of World War II the debt stood at 170 percent of the nation's Gross National Product, the value of all goods and services produced by the United States.

After an abrupt decline and some instability in the early 1950s, total debt as a percentage of GNP grew slowly and steadily through the late 1950s to 1980, when it again reached 170 percent.

Federal government debt as a share of GNP declined from a wartime high of 118 percent in 1945 to a low of 25 percent, according to Monaco's figures.

"It was almost constant from 1974 to 1980," he said. "In contrast, non-federal debt rose steadily from 52 percent of GNP in 1945 to 143 percent in 1980."

Monaco added: "Since 1982, the 35-year trends in total and federal debt as a percent of GNP have been shattered. By 1986, total debt reached about 210 percent of GNP, owing to a string of record federal budget deficits and a 22-percentage-point increase in non-federal debt as a percent of GNP."

"Until more of the current imbalances are corrected, agriculture will have to operate in a risky macroeconomic environment."

In his analysis, prepared for a forthcoming USDA publication, Monaco noted that international developments have occurred that add to the frustrations experienced by American farmers.

"Between 1982 and 1985, real interest rates were about four percentage points higher in the United States than in the rest of the world," he said. "Foreign capital inflows have exceeded U.S. outflows for five straight years, something that has not happened since at least 1940."

As foreign investors poured money into the United States, the value of the dollar rose, making it difficult for domestic producers — including farmers — to sell goods abroad, while causing imported goods to be cheaper to U.S. consumers.

The inward flow of foreign capital helped drive up the value of the U.S. dollar by 37 percent, and prices charged American consumers for foreign imports dropped by about 20 percent by the mid-1980s.

Monaco said, "There are two possibilities which, although unlikely, would jolt the U.S. economy in general" and farmers in particular:

- An end to foreign inflows of capital.
- Protectionist legislation.

He concluded: "Until more of the current imbalances are corrected, agriculture will have to operate in a risky macroeconomic environment."
