Soviets launch manned craft

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched two cosmonauts into space today in the first manned space shot since the space shuttle Challenger exploded Jan. 28, killing all seven astronauts aboard.

Breaking with a tradition of secrecy, Soviet television carried apparently live coverage of Soyuz T-15's 3:33 p.m. liftoff (7:33 a.m. EST).

The sleek red-and-white craft streaked into a slightly overcast sky above the Baikonur Space Base in Kazakhstan, Soviet central Asia, carrying commander Leonid Kizim and engineer Vladimir Solovev. The cosmonauts hold the endurance record for time spent in space — 237 days.

The official news agency Tass said they are to link up with the Soviet space laboratory, the Mir (Peace), in two days. The Mir was launched without a crew Feb. 20 and is designed as a permanent space platform with docking facilities for six spacecraft.

Soviet television viewers could hear Kizim and Solovev reporting back to Earth 50 seconds after their craft blasted into the sky trailing orange flame.

In footage shown on Soviet television, Kizim and Solovev could be seen strapped in their seats, with Kizim reading what appeared to be sheets of instructions. A television announcer said the pictures came live from inside the craft as it headed for orbit.

Before the launch, Soviet television showed the cosmonauts undergoing final medical check-ups and heading out to their craft.

Kizim, 44, an air force colonel, was shown saluting to an unidentified space official not seen on camera, and reporting that his crew was "ready to fulfill its tasks." The two men then boarded a bus and clambered into the rocket.

The Soviets announced Wednesday that Soviet television would carry the launch live on the nation's main evening news program. The launch also was televised in the United States.

Disclosure of the names of the cosmonauts and the planned launch time marked a break with the usual secrecy applied to Soviet space missions that do not include foreigners.

The Soviet media gave no reason for televising the launch. However, it seemed in line with an effort by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to boost the Soviet Union's image as a dynamic, confident power by contrasting today's successful launch with the space shuttle Challenger disaster.

Soviet televison showed dramatic footage of the Challenger explosion and the official Soviet press has given extensive coverage to the U.S. investigation into the cause of the disaster.

Only once in the history of the Soviet space program has there been live television coverage of a launch that involved a purely Soviet crew — the 1975 blastoff of a craft that later linked up with the U.S. Apollo spaceship.

Unused spacesuits among debris retrieved by divers

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Divers have recovered unused spacesuits and parts of Challenger's flight deck, and crews are working to retrieve what they believe is the rocket booster suspected of causing the shuttle explosion.

The recovery ship USS Preserver steamed into port Wednesday night without running lights, carrying more remains of Challenger's astronauts, the suits and an astronaut's personal effects along with other debris, sources said.

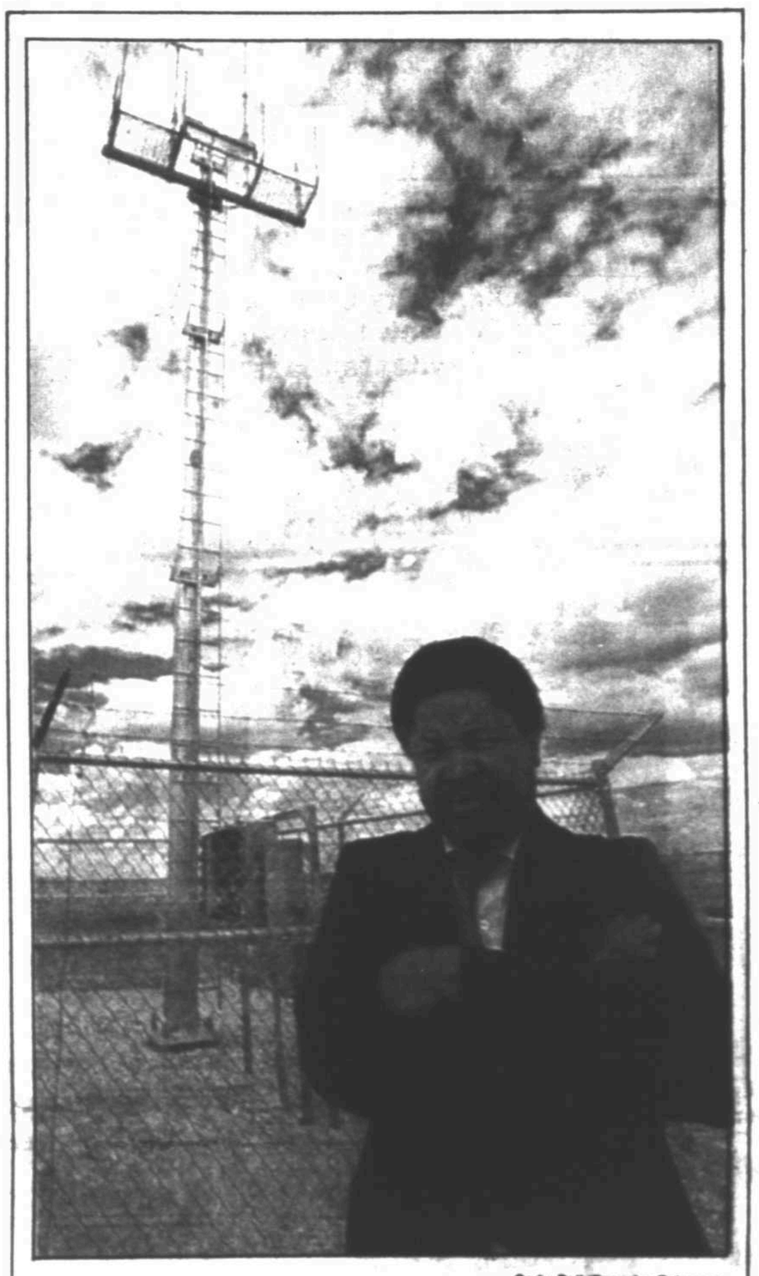

Reporters watching from a distance estimated that eight containers, which sources said held the astronaut remains, were placed into ambulances.

Also aboard ship, the sources said, were sections of the flight deck where four of the seven astronauts rode.

The Preserver docked at the Navy's Trident submarine dock, a secure area across a channel away from the public. The ship had not been expected to return until today.

It was believed the remains were taken to a hospital at nearby Patrick Air Force Base, where other body parts were taken after recovery Saturday.

Fort Worth blast injures 22 persons

FORT WORTH (AP) — James Taylor forgot his homework Wednesday morning. He was on his way home to retrieve it, riding an eastbound bus past the construction at Frank Kent Cadillac on the southern edge of downtown Fort Worth, when a ruptured gas main turned the building into a bomb.

"The bus shook," said James, a seventh-grader at Riverside Middle School, who said he saw "bricks and flames coming down. It seemed like a volcano or something. I was real scared."

Taylor, who suffered from eye irritation, was the only passenger on the bus and one of 22 persons hurt in the explosion, most of them cut by flying glass and debris.

The bus driver, Alberta Thomas, 37, suffered knee abrasions.

The front windshield of the bus was shattered, said Jo-Anne Kennedy, a spokeswoman for the Fort Worth Transit Authority. Both driver and passenger were treated at Harris Hospital and released.

The explosion and five-alarm fire was triggered when a demolition crew severed a natural gas line with a backhoe at the old building just south of Interstate 30, a fire department spokesman said.

A fire investigator said the force of the blast at the site of the closed car dealership was felt at the Fort Worth Fire Department about 12 blocks away.

No total damage estimate was available, but officials at Frank Kent Cadillac said new cars worth about $1.5 million were destroyed near the building.

At the Fort Worth Hilton hotel nearby, people were injured by flying glass from the 10:11 a.m. blast, said fire Capt. Bill Pierce.

Wind-shear alert system in place

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

When more than 130 people lost their lives in the August crash of a Delta Airlines jet at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, part of the blame was laid to wind shear — a sudden, unexpected change in wind speed and direction.

The process by which a huge jet airliner hurtling along at more than 100 mph touches down on a concrete runway is a delicate one, and such sudden wind shifts can be deadly.

"It can happen at any given time," said Eddie Upchurch, control-tower supervisor at Midland Regional Airport.

Since Feb. 28, however, Upchurch and his crew of air traffic controllers have been better prepared to deal with the wind-shear phenomenon. That was the day the airport's new wind-shear alert system was commissioned by the Federal Aviation Administration.

"This is one of 110 Low Level Wind Alert Systems currently planned by the FAA to be installed nationally," said Louis A. Pare, Midland FAA local coordinator, at a Wednesday press conference.

The FAA installed and paid for the $265,000 system, which consists of one wind sensor placed in the airport's center and five dispersed around the perimeter near the ends of the runways.

The sensors measure wind direction and velocity, and feed their information electronically to a computer in the control tower.

"The air traffic controller will receive a display of all six sensors," Pare said. When the sensors indicate a significant difference between readings at the perimeter and those recorded at the center, the controllers "will issue a wind-shear advisory" to the pilot.

Dealing with possible wind shear is the pilot's responsibility, but the LLWAS system can at least give him a warning, Pare said.

Midland FAA employees Willis Nary and Vincent Higgins spent three weeks at the FAA's Oklahoma City training facility learning how to maintain the system, which was first developed in the mid-1970s.

Though LLWAS is not a new system, it's the best one available to detect wind shear, Pare said.

World crude oil prices climb back to $14.01

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Prices for crude oil and petroleum products continued their rally on the world oil markets Wednesday, finishing at their highest levels in nearly two weeks.

Prices for crude oil contracts closed at $14.01 a barrel, up 91 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange, and at $14 a barrel, up 80 cents, on the open market. Heating oil futures contracts surged nearly 3 cents Wednesday, to more than 50 cents a gallon, while leaded and unleaded gasoline prices leaped 4 cents, to 43 cents and 44 cents a gallon, respectively.

Oil analysts said the broad advances stemmed from a weekly oil industry report Wednesday that showed substantial drawdowns in stocks of gasoline and heating oil. That report fed a growing view among traders that the steep decline in prices may now have bottomed out.

Some oil analysts, such as William Search at the First Boston Corp., agreed that conditions in the world oil market and within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which will hold a full ministerial meeting this weekend, were now ripe for a price rebound.

P.T. Barnum can still reel 'em in

By LARRY McSHANE

NEW YORK (AP) — If there's a sucker born every minute, showman extraordinaire P.T. Barnum continues to reel 'em in nearly a century after his death.

The self-proclaimed "Prince of Humbug" — who brought us 26-inch tall Gen. Tom Thumb, Jo-Jo the Dog-Faced Boy and Jumbo the Elephant during his entrepreneurial career — is drawing a crowd these days with an exhibit at the New-York Historical Society.

"Barnum was a master manipulator of the press, a very clever person who could make other people laugh," said Jean Ashton, curator of the exhibit which opened Wednesday. "He allowed his people — country people — to be a part of the joke, then told them, 'Don't tell your friends.'"

Barnum, born in Bethel, Conn., in 1810, quickly realized he did not want to work for a living — a fact evident from the letters, posters, pictures and displays which fill a room on the second floor of the Manhattan building.

Ruling on guaranty could cost FDIC $382 million

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. "will suffer extremely heavy losses" if the former First National Bank's guaranty agreements cannot be enforced by FDIC, an FDIC official said in a federal court document.

The official, Richard Heiar, said "no less than" $382 million in FNB loans was issued under the bank's guaranty agreement which U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton has ruled is not enforceable. Heiar is assistant managing liquidator of the Midland Consolidated Office of FDIC.

Bunton's ruling stemmed from a trial in which the FDIC sought to recover $485,644.50 from two investors in a Midland firm, Trafalgar Drilling Co., which had secured a $1.3-million FNB loan to buy a drilling rig in 1981.

The bank, Texas' largest independent bank, failed on Oct. 14, 1983. FDIC took over the bank's assets and liabilities. So far, FDIC has recouped about a third of the $1.5 billion it hopes to salvage.

The investors, Austin lawyer Daniel N. Matheson and Austin book-collector John H. Jenkins, had signed guaranties in which Jenkins pledged to guarantee 19.2 percent of the loan and Matheson guaranteed 17.7 percent of the loan should Trafalgar renege on the loan agreement.

MIDWAY IN THE trial, lawyers for Matheson and Jenkins discovered a clause in the guaranty which apparently was a loophole, made the guaranty void, and relieved them of their obligations. The clause in part said that "all indebtedness to the creditor shall first be paid in full" before any successor to the creditor could receive benefit of the guaranty.

The FDIC in effect paid about 69 cents on the dollar for FNB assets and not the full or face value. However, the lawyers admitted, the fair-market value of some FNB loans was considerably less than face value or even zero.

"They (FDIC) paid as much as the assets were worth," said Austin lawyer Tom Watkins, who represented Jenkins. Midland lawyer Jim Boldrick, who represented Matheson, noted the marketable value of some notes was worthless despite their face values.

Bunton ruled that Trafalgar's loan "has not been paid in full" and ruled against FDIC.

FDIC in turn asked for a new trial, which the judge denied. FDIC plans to appeal the case to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La.

Reportedly, about 600 FDIC cases still outstanding are linked to guaranties similar to those signed by Matheson and Jenkins.

IN SEEKING a new trial in the FDIC-vs.-Matheson and Jenkins case, FDIC attorney James T. Berry noted that guaranty agreements are "universally employed in the banking industry with great frequency to support loans to weaker borrowers...."

"Many banks would not make commercial loans to certain categories of borrowers, particularly closely-held corporations, without personal guaranties," Berry said. "The enforceability of the guaranty is essential to the security or effectiveness of many, if not most, commercial loans, which are normally among the weakest in a failed bank."

Berry expressed fears that the unenforceability of guaranties would "significantly reduce" the number of "P&A (purchase and assumption) transactions" in connection with failed banks, which would go into receivership.

Museum of Modern Art receives major gift

NEW YORK (AP) — The Museum of Modern Art recently announced the gift of 11 masterworks from the estate of the late William A. M. Burden, a collector, philanthropist and longtime member of the museum's board of trustees.

The works range from major paintings by Claude Monet and Georges Seurat through important sculptures by Jean Arp and Constantin Brancusi.

An official said the bequest "is one of the greatest gifts the museum has ever received." It is constituted of "nothing but masterpieces, ranging from earlier 20th-century masters and great works of the inter-war period to key works of the Abstract Expressionists."

Scientists fear 'El Nino' formation

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists studying the climate said today they are becoming concerned that a new "El Nino" may be developing, possibly repeating the climate changes that caused havoc over much of the world just three years ago.

Dr. Eugene Rasmusson, of the Climate Analysis Center at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said he has seen early indications that a new El Nino may be developing.

"This is not a forecast, it's an advisory. It's like the leading economic indicators. Some signs indicate an El Nino may be coming, but not all the signs," Rasmusson said.

He told a recent National Academy of Sciences meeting on long-term climate veriability that he was becoming increasingly concerned by signs that the phenomenon could recur.

These early signs include rising Pacific Ocean temperatures off the coast of South America and changes in the air pressure over the Pacific, he said today.

Changes in the heat of the ocean are important in these events, he continued, but another change in sea level which usually occurs has not yet taken place.

While Rasmusson said he was not yet ready to predict a new El Nino, he noted that other scientists are more confident that one is about to develop. In particular, Mark Cane and Stephen Zebiak of Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory at Columbia University have developed a climate model which forecasts an El Nino this year.

Rasmusson noted that the last El Nino in 1982-83 caused worldwide climate chaos but said that one was unusually severe, and if another one occurs it is more likely to be milder.

"The economic impact...on individual countries or individual sectors of the economy can be staggering, and the effect on world markets has often been substantial," Rasmusson said at the academy meeting.

El Nino refers to an unusual warming of the eastern tropical Pacific which occurs every few years and lasts a year or two. The name is Spanish for The Child, referring to the Christ Child, and was given years ago because the first indications of the event are often noticed at Christmas time, with failure of the anchovy crop off Peru.

The last El Nino, in 1982-83, was one of the most severe in at least a century and had a major impact on weather around the world. It has been blamed for between 1,300 and 1,500 deaths worldwide, and damage ranging from $2 billion to $8 billion.

"Because (it) is global in nature, it leads to the nearly simultaneous appearance of severe climatic conditions over a variety of regions around the world.... The arid and semi-arid regions of the tropics are particularly vulnerable," Rasmusson reported.

In January, a joint U.S.-Chinese study was launched to determine causes of the events, which seem to originate in the Pacific Ocean and occur every two to seven years.

Some scientists prefer the term ENSO for the events, derived from the phrase El Nino-Southern Oscillation.

Southern Oscillation is a global seesaw in air pressure with its ends located in the eastern and western pacific. Rising air pressure on the surface in one area occurs when pressure drops at the other end. For years, this action was thought to be separate from El Nino, and only since 1969 have scientists concluded the two are related.

In addition to disrupting fishing for South Americans, major storms lashed the West Coast of the United States during the last ENSO, and the ongoing drought in Africa was made worse, helping lead to massive starvation in Ethiopia, according to scientists who studied the phenomenon.

Other impacts which have been associated with the 1982-83 ENSO included the first typhoon in 75 years to hit French Polynesia, followed by five more in as many months.

Australia suffered the worst drought in 200 years, while China faced floods in the south and drought in the north.

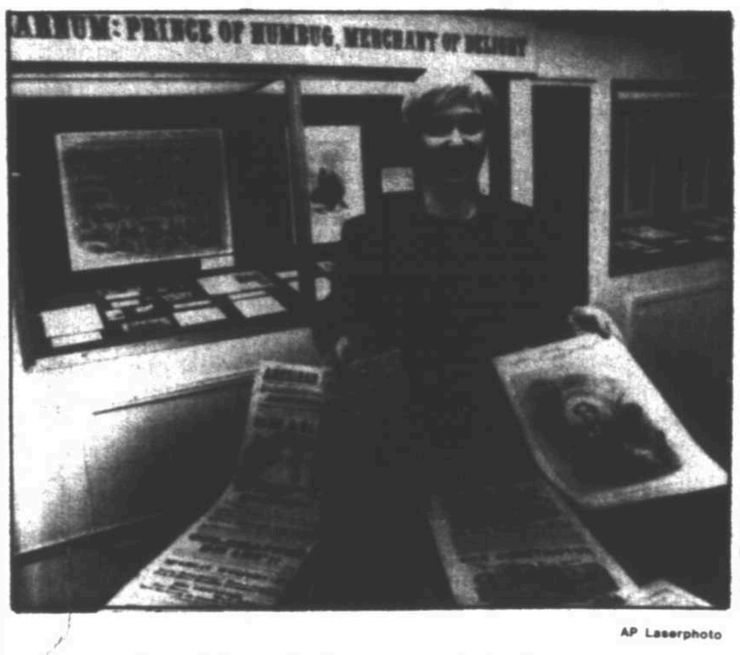

The events begin with changes in sea surface temperature in the Pacific, with unusual warming in some areas leading to increased evaporation of water, more clouds being formed and changes in the weather. Scientists do not know what causes these events to begin.

In the 1982-83 ENSO, rainfall records were shattered in Ecuador, and Peru had the most rain in some 450 years. Severe drought affected Indonesia, Malaysia and other islands.

These rainfall changes help alter overall air circulation, and eventually can spread north and south to all parts of the world. Ocean currents also change during the events.

In 1982-83, winter storms that normally would have swept into Alaska and Canada instead hit Oregon and California, an extraordinary snowpack accumulated in Colorado, and weather changes reduced farm crops in the United States, Canada, Australia, South Africa, France and India.

While records document ENSO events back to the 1890s, the most recent occurrances, of varying intensity, have been in 1957, 1963, 1965, 1969, 1972-73, 1975, 1976 and 1982-83.

BARNUM

"In his youth, Barnum was perceived as lazy, which he was not," said Ashton, who assembled the collection billed as "P.T. Barnum: Prince of Humbug, Merchant of Delight." "He was looking for ways to make money without working."

The young man quickly did so. His first great attraction in 1835 was "George Washington's Nurse" — a 49-pound woman who Barnum claimed was 161 years old and had taken care of the first president.

When critics attacked the woman as a fraud, the ever-adaptable Barnum quickly admitted they were right. Instead, he claimed, the woman was a robot working with a ventriloquist, attracting many people for a second look at what was only an anorexic old woman.

The exhibit holds more than 100 pieces of Barnumabilia: a 1½-inch calling card from Gen. Thumb, an 1836 letter from the Siamese twins Chang and Eng, photos from the 1850s of Madame Clofullia, the Bearded Lady who had two children.

Barnum also ran his own newspaper in the 1830s, served as mayor of Bridgeport, Conn., for a year, and wrote an autobiography which he updated annually and sold at his circus.

"He was never at a loss for words," Ashton said. "Even if he had nothing to display, he found a way to display it. That is, I think, part of his charm."

Among his more "charming" attractions were:

— The Feejee Mermaid, an 18-inch stitched half-monkey, half-fish figure which Barnum advertised with an 18-foot sign bearing the picture of a beautiful blonde mermaid.

— The Egress. When Barnum found his American Museum in Manhattan was becoming too crowded, he posted a sign: "To The Egress." People rushing to see another display instead discovered egress was simply another word for exit.

And just prior to his death in 1891, Barnum pulled his final prank, persuading the New York Evening Sun to run his obituary four days before he died.

SEARCH

There was a possibility they could have been taken to the Brevard County medical lab because the medical examiner had complained that NASA was violating state law by taking the remains to the Air Force base. A compromise was reached Wednesday after NASA had agreed to let his staff observe the autopsies.

Autopsies could help determine if the astronauts were burned to death, poisoned by fumes, died from sudden loss of cabin pressure, were killed by flying debris or impact with the water, or drowned.

The cause of death, if known, could aid the investigation.

Out of deference to the families, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has refused to discuss the recovery of the bodies. The news has come from sources who speak on condition of anonymity.

The remains and other cabin debris were recovered by the Preserver's divers from a depth of 100 feet, 18 miles northeast of the launch pad from which the shuttle lifted off Jan. 28, the sources said.

About 14 miles north of that site, the four-man submarine Johnson Sea-Link 2 located a 4-by-5-foot chunk of what's believed to be the wreckage of the right solid rocket booster, said Navy Lt. Cmdr. Deborah Burnette.

The piece weighs up to 500 pounds and is believed to contain propellant and part of the external tank attachment ring, she said.

Still and television photos were taken of the booster part and brought ashore Wednesday night. Recovery of the segment could take several days because of its 600-foot depth and strong underwater currents, officials said.

Some officials have said the precise cause of the explosion might never be known unless the booster segment was recovered. Chief suspects are a pair of O-rings designed to prevent hot gases from escaping through the joint.

"Even if it turns out to be a segment of the right SRB that is not the joint that contains the O-rings, it will still give us an idea where to search for those pieces of the right SRB," Burnette said.

Panels of the presidential commission investigating the explosion that killed the seven Challenger crewmembers, meanwhile, were at the Johnson Space Center in Houston and at a NASA facility in Huntsville, Ala., today to ask more questions about what could have gone wrong.

OIL

Randol said that because of the speed and severity of the price fall, and the evident unwillingness of non-OPEC producers to cooperate in restraining production, "the economic incentives for OPEC to do so are now overwhelming."

Randol explained that prices had fallen so low that all the OPEC members "are leaving a lot of money on the table." He said, "Everyone now wants a higher price, and they know that the only way to achieve that is to cut production."

Randol said that OPEC may not reach an "ironclad agreement" to cut production at its meeting this weekend, but asserted that it will do so "sooner rather than later."

However, other analysts said that this week's rally was misleading.

"It looks like we've hit a cyclical bottom," remarked Peter C. Beutel, assistant director at Rudolf Wolff Futures Inc., "but how long it will last is uncertain. We've yet to shut a lot of crude oil in the ground, which is very important."

Nauman Barakat of Smith Barney, Harris & Upham & Co. said that rally was suspect. "It's ignored the fact that nothing new has happened at the international level," he maintained.

Joseph Story, president of Gulf Consulting Service, an oil consulting organization, asserted that the firming of prices was merely following a pattern that has occurred before most of the OPEC meetings of the last four years.

"Prices have firmed on hopes that some definitive action would be taken to slow the erosion of oil prices," Story said.

FDIC

"Among the adverse consequences of the increased number of receiverships (as a result of unenforceable guaranties) ... are," Berry said, "economic dislocation and loss to the community, diminished public confidence in the banking system, increased charges to and consequent reduction in the size of the insurance fund available to the FDIC with which to pay insured depositors or finance P&A transactions, and the potential necessity of increasing the premium charged to member banks to maintain the fund."

BERRY SAID that FDIC holds "guaranties containing similar language through failed banks, and will likely acquire still more as other banks fail."

FDIC attorney E. Link Beck said the court's interpretation of the guaranty will have a "severe detrimental impact" on FDIC and will "cause millions of dollars of losses in the administration of the First National Bank of Midland failure."

Jewett E. Huff, an Amarillo lawyer and founder of the Texas Association of Bank Counsel, said the guaranty's clause was "so inartfully worded" that it could, "if construed in a vacuum," be interpreted to favor the guarantors (Jenkins and Matheson).

The FDIC had asked Huff to review and analyze the guaranty.

Further, he said the construction of the guaranty's provision "as urged" by Matheson and Jenkins "leads to results of an absurd nature."

Huff also argued the Federal Deposit Insurance Act "not only commands the FDIC to collect all indebtedness owed to the failed bank, but also favors it with certain exalted powers and status beyond that which the bank itself enjoyed."

"If its efforts in that regard produce funds exceeding the amount expended by it in making the depositors whole and in recouping its own expenses of collection," Huff said, "such excess is to be distributed first to the bank's unpaid creditors and the surplus to the shareholders of the bank."

WIND

"Your 22 major airports do have it," Pare said.

One of those airports is Dallas-Fort Worth, where the investigation of the Delta crash first brought the wind-shear phenomenon to the public's attention.

That crash occurred as the airplane was passing through a sudden storm. Wind shear is frequently associated with such sudden, violent downbursts, which are difficult to predict, according to information supplied by Pare.

But though the LLWAS system did not prevent the Delta crash, it may prevent others, which is why the FAA is now installing the system at smaller airports, according to Pare.

Midland Regional had one obvious qualification for being selected, he said: "We do have quite a lot of winds."

BLAST

"It sounds like major damage to the building," Pierce said. "There was damage across I-30 at the Hilton Hotel. There were broken windows, and some people were injured with broken glass. We are probably 10 to 12 blocks from it and it shook the building here," Pierce said.

Ted Mosley, vice president of operations at the Hilton, said 45 windows were damaged by the blast, which also knocked loose ceiling tiles. He said fire investigators who checked the hotel found no structural damage.

"I've never felt anything so powerful, and I was in an earthquake once, when I lived in Southern California," Mosley said. "The whole building shook. We were lucky."

Eight people were treated at John Peter Smith Hospital, hospital spokeswoman Ruth Eason said. A spokeswoman at Harris Hospital said six people were treated with various injuries. And three more people were taken to St. Joseph Hospital, spokeswoman Beverly Robb said.

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board came from Washington to investigate the probable cause, said NTSB spokesman Michael Benson.

He said the board is charged with investigating pipeline accidents involving fatalities or property damage of more than $100,000.

Police officer H.O. Middleton said the explosion's force blew out windows and a glass door at the Fort Worth Administration Building about seven blocks away. Officers diverted traffic from the area around the explosion site.

"I saw all that timber and debris going up in the air," said Middleton, adding that the force of the blast caused his police vehicle to swerve. "Then I heard the blast and saw the mushroom cloud and I said, 'What in the world!'"

Police officer A.T. Herrera said many windows were broken in downtown buildings.

Correction

In the March 12 edition of the Reporter-Telegram, a story on street paving listed the project on Indiana Avenue as starting at Benton Street. It should have read Clay Street.

The list of projects obtained from City Hall also failed to include Freddie Nelms' name as one of the groups requesting that paving project.

In another story concerning a new YMCA facility, Nelms was listed as being against the project. Instead, he only questioned the number of facilities in the city.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the errors.

Reagan says he never pressured NASA to launch shuttle

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the White House never pressured NASA to meet any schedules for launching space shuttles, stating, "I am not a scientist and they are," a published report says.

Reagan's comments, made Wednesday in an interview with The Baltimore Sun, came as the White House disclosed that weeks before the shuttle Challenger disaster, NASA asked the president to highlight the Challenger mission in his State of the Union speech by calling it "the ultimate field trip" of an American schoolteacher.

"We have never from here suggested or pushed them for a launch of the shuttle," Reagan was quoted as saying in an article in the today's editions of the Sun. "I would feel that I was way out of my depth in trying to do that. I am not a scientist and they are."

Asked whether a White House directive calling on NASA to aim for 24 shuttle launches a year had created pressure to go ahead with the disastrous launch, Reagan replied: "No, and we have never done anything except to approve their schedule."

The president added that he would not decide whether to approve financing a replacement for the Challenger until receiving a report from the commission he appointed to study the Jan. 28 explosion that killed all seven crew members 73 seconds after launch.

William Graham, NASA's acting administrator, said Tuesday it would cost $2.8 billion to replace the shuttle, which had cost $1.2 billion to build.

Reagan said in the interview that he believed there should be no more shuttle flights until all safety problems found by the commission are fixed.

But he added, "There's a limit beyond which you can't go. Anyone who gets on an airplane knows that, that there are things that can happen."

The president lauded the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's safety record.

"You know, when you look at it, you have 24 times right and one accident — one wrong — you can't cancel out the program," he said.

Meanwhile, NASA's recommendation for the president's State of the Union address was "filed and forgotten," and never made a part of any draft of the speech, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said.

U.S. holds Marcos tab for $450,000 expenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deposed Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos, who is househunting in Hawaii, has cost the United States nearly $450,000 in transportation costs from Manila and lodging expenses at a U.S. Air Force base, according to a Pentagon official.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman says Marcos is trying to arrange the rental of a home in Honolulu but that there have been complications involving the lease.

In the meantime, it has cost $150,000 for the services of guards and military personnel attending Marcos at Hickam Air Force Base, where Marcos has been living since late February when he fled his palace after his 20 years' rule.

James A. Kelly, a deputy assistant defense secretary who supplied the figures at a House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on Wednesday, said $87,000 was also spent for "upkeep" of the Marcos party.

He said it cost about $200,000 when United States military planes flew Marcos, his 89 associates and 300 boxes of possessions and money from Manila to Hawaii.

Kelly said it has not been resolved who would pay the bills, which include overseas phone calls and thousands of dollars in purchases at military post exchanges at Hickam and in Guam, where Marcos' party made an intermediate stop.

Redman said earlier this week that Marcos was a guest of the United States.

Among the possessions brought out by Marcos were boxes of documents that could shed light on the bitterly contested issue of the Marcos family bank accounts, real estate and other assets.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asia, said the U.S. Customs Service has agreed to give his panel copies of 1,500 documents.

The panel has been seeking the records as evidence in its effort to help the new Philippines government of President Corazon Aquino regain control of any wealth that Marcos might have sent abroad illegally during his rule.

"I am pleased we have been able to work out an agreement with the administration for them to turn over to us these documents in a timely fashion," Solarz said.

The documents will be turned over to the panel this weekend or early next weekend, Solarz's office said.

According to published reports, the documents could include details of Marcos' bank accounts and real estate holdings in New York, which the Philippines government has been claiming in legal proceedings in several states.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Times reported in today's editions that Pentagon investigators have subpoenaed Gen. Fabian C. Ver, former chief of the Philippine armed forces, in a federal grand jury investigation of possible kickbacks involving U.S. military aid.

The subpoena was served Tuesday on Ver at Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii by agents of the Defense Criminal Investigative Service, the newspaper said.

Salonga asks return of Philippine assets

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The head of a Philippines commission seeking return of assets allegedly taken from the country by Ferdinand Marcos said he expects a legal battle over properties in the United States.

Jovito Salonga, chairman of the Commission on Good Government, was greeted at San Francisco International Airport Wednesday night by cries of "Cory, Cory, Cory," the nickname of new Philippines President Corazon C. Aquino.

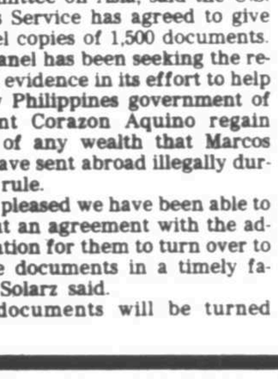

He said his commission is looking into alleged Marcos holdings said to be worth between $5 billion and $10 billion in Switzerland, Brazil, Austria, the United States and other countries.

Salonga said he anticipated no legal problems recovering Marcos assets in the Philippines. "That is within our jurisdiction," he said. "With respect to properties in the United States, we foresee some litigation."

He said he will be staying at least a day in the San Francisco Bay area before heading for Washington where he is to meet with State Department officials over the weekend.

Opposing sides fight ad campaign for, against U.S. aid to Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Muammar Khadafy has plans for America," says the television announcer as a picture of the Libyan dictator flashes on the screen. "He sits on our doorstep — supplying arms and terrorist experts to the communists in Nicaragua."

The lead editorial in a slick paper magazine says, "Our responsibility as U.S. citizens is to challenge President Reagan's distorted logic and stop the vicious war being fought in our name...Every day, more Nicaraguans are murdered by the U.S-armed Contras."

Reagan calls the commercial, part of a $2 million television blitz sponsored by the National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty, "a vital link in the effort to forge a democratic outcome in Nicaragua."

He calls the magazine, Nicaraguan Perspectives, published by the Nicaraguan Information Center in Berkeley, Calif., "pure propaganda" put out by a "great disinformation network."

No matter what you call them, the television ads and the magazine article are significant elements in the battle over Reagan's proposed $100 million package of aid to Contra guerrillas fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

House and Senate votes on Reagan's aid request are expected next week.

In the meantime, journalists covering the debate are catching criticism from both sides.

LAST WEEK, WHEN reporters repeatedly asked White House spokesman Larry Speakes if the use of U.S. troops in Nicaragua might ever be considered, he replied: "I think what you are trying to participate in is a scare tactic on the American people."

At the same time, the Nicaraguan Perspectives editorial, by E. Bradford Burns, professor of Latin American history at the University of California, Los Angeles, says, "We cannot stand silent while the president tells lies about Nicaragua and the media repeat them unquestioningly."

Reagan told a group of out-of-town reporters Wednesday that he recently had been handed a copy of Nicaraguan Perspectives and found it "filled with propaganda."

"It is a propaganda thing against the Contras and against us and in favor of them (the Sandinistas)," he said, adding that a "prominent university professor had written a lead article in this particular issue, and if that is what he tells his students, God help them, because it was pure propaganda."

■ Latin American nations oppose aid to Contras.

The president prefaced his remarks by saying, "There is a great disinformation network that is at work throughout our country."

Burns, who White House aides confirmed was the professor to which Reagan referred, responded in Los Angeles on Thursday: "I would hope that in the U.S. people have a right to express their opinions. I've expressed mine. I hope I have a right to do it without being attacked."

THE SEMIANNUAL MAGAZINE, which sells for $3.75, is funded by subscriptions and donations and gets no money from the Nicaraguan government, said Philip Martinez, a spokesman for the publishers.

Spitz Channel, president of the National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty and a former fundraiser for the National Conservative Political Caucus, said the television ads are also privately financed.

The ads began running Feb. 19 and have appeared on stations in Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, Oklahoma, Georgia and Washington, D.C., according to Rich Miller, a spokesman for the organization.

In addition to the ad highlighting terrorism by Khadafy, there also are ads charging the Sandinistas with religious and other persecution and showing film footage of Soviet-built helicopters, which the foundation says was taken by a crew it hired in Nicaragua last month.

Both Channel and Patrick J. Buchanan, White House communications director, said the endowment — a conservative fund-raising and political organization — is working independently of the White House. Channel said, however, he has met with the president, and that he also has had several letters of support from Reagan in the past three months.

In addition to the television ads, the endowment has sponsored tours by anti-Sandinista speakers, including representatives of the Contra rebels.

In a letter to Channel on Feb. 21, Reagan said, "Your Central American program is a vital link the effort to forge a democratic outcome in Nicaragua."

Reagan: Nuclear test ban would jeopardize security

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will resist demands from Congress and a panel of international leaders to seek a comprehensive nuclear test ban with the Soviet Union because testing is essential for the nation's security, administration arms control analysts say.

Reagan on Wednesday denounced a House-passed resolution calling on him to negotiate a total ban on nuclear tests, saying it does not "serve the interests of the United States, our allies and our friends" and would undercut his efforts to make progress on the issue.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev last month declared a unilateral moratorium on all testing that will expire at the end of March if the United States doesn't join, which Washington has refused to do.

While in the past the administration has cited inadequate verification as the chief reason for resisting a comprehensive test ban, a senior Pentagon arms control analyst said Wednesday there was a "very pressing national security issue" for continued testing for both existing and new weapons.

He said in an interview, "We are going to continue to test," because there is an obligation to prove the reliability, effectiveness and safety of existing weapons, and also to develop new and more sophisticated weapons to counter Soviet developments.

"EVEN IF WE don't have a problem with verification, even if we are absolutely certain that the Soviets ...were going to adhere to it absolutely, just as we were, we've still got this problem," said the analyst, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

"That's a problem that has not been adequately addressed until fairly recently by the administration and still hasn't filtered into the Congress," he added.

The administration has been strongly criticized by some former arms control officials for not continuing the negotations for a comprehensive test ban begun by previous administrations.

Spurgeon Keeny, a prominent critic of administration policy who was deputy director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency from 1977 to 1981, said Reagan is the first president since Harry Truman who has not endorsed the concept of a comprehensive test ban.

"I personally find it a tragic situation that the United States finds itself almost totally isolated internationally in its opposition to even attempting to negotiate a comprehensive test ban (CTB)," Keeny, who is head of the pro-arms control Arms Control Association, said at recent seminar.

The Democratic-controlled House late last month overrode administration objections and passed a resolution calling on the administration to negotiate a comprehensive test ban with the Soviet Union. The vote was 258-148.

AND LAST WEEK, present and former leaders of six nations — Sweden, Greece, India, Argentina, Mexico and Tanzania — urged both Reagan and Gorbachev to suspend all nuclear testing until the superpower summit tentatively scheduled for later this year.

"This could pave the way for an agreement on a mutual and adequately verified moratorium for nuclear explosions," they said in a letter to the two leaders. "It would also facilitate the negotiation of a comprehensive test ban treaty."

Reagan, reacting to Gorbachev's unilateral moratorium last year, said the United States needs to complete testing of weapons already in the development stage, and suggested that it might be possible to consider a test ban when those tests are completed.

But officials at both the Pentagon and the State Department say a test ban must be part of a comprehensive arms control negotation that would reduce the threat of nuclear weapons generally.

The Pentagon official said the United States relies more on its nuclear deterrent than does the Soviet Union, which has larger conventional forces, and would thus have more to lose from a test ban that curbed the development of new weapons.

Reagan on Wednesday said a comprehensive test ban remains a long-term goal of the United States, but that one is not possible as long as there is no agreement on "broad, deep and verifiable arms reductions," on enhanced verification measures and a greater balance in conventional forces.

REAGAN MADE THE statements in a letter to Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. The text of the letter was released by the White House.

Moscow and Washington agreed to a Limited Test Ban Treaty in 1963 which bans nuclear weapons explosions in the atmosphere, underwater and in outer space. It included a commitment to negotiate a comprehensive test ban.

Agreement was reached during the Nixon administration on a Threshold Test Ban Treaty, banning underground nuclear weapons tests over 150 kilotons. While it was never ratified, both nations abide by it.

Richard Garwin, a member of the President's Science Advisory Committee under Presidents Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon and who was involved in designing the first hydrogen bomb, said at a recent seminar that reliability and verification aren't any longer an issue.

Paul Warnke, chief negotiator at CTB negotiations in 1977 and 1978 and former ACDA director, said it "is not just the Reagan administration" that has blocked a test ban.

Tax plan would hike price of gas, alcohol

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee is unveiling a far-reaching plan for overhauling the federal income tax — a proposal that would be paid for in part by regular increases in taxes on gasoline, cigarettes and alcoholic beverages.

The proposal by Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., which was still undergoing revision late Wednesday, would reduce the income taxes of most Americans and raise the burden on corporations.

Similar to a plan recommended last year by President Reagan and to one passed by the House in December, it would produce the biggest change in the tax system in more than 30 years.

Packwood was making his plan public today. He hopes the Finance Committee can begin considering it next week. Reagan, who has made tax overhaul the top domestic priority of his second term, has issued a general endorsement of Packwood's proposal.

Packwood spent the last two days briefing committee members on his proposal, and most of them agreed with Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, that, "It is a good first step toward tax reform."

But some members already were zeroing in on provisions to raise the tax on wine immediately; adjust the levies annually on all alcoholic beverages, cigarettes and gasoline; and deny corporations a deduction for excise taxes and tariffs paid, which presumably would be passed on to consumers.

Packwood had little to say publicly about his bill before its release. But a summary obtained by The Associated Press on Wednesday included these provisions, in addition to the changes in excise taxes:

— Existing special tax breaks for oil and gas, timber and hard minerals would be retained.

— Replace the present 14-rate individual tax structure (15 rates for single people) with three rates of 15 percent, 25 percent and 35 percent.

— Boost the standard deductions substantially, to benefit lower-income people.

— Continue full itemized deductions for home mortgage interest, real estate taxes and charitable contributions. Other itemized deductions would be deductible only against the 15 percent or 25 percent tax rates. Thus, a couple whose income after deductions exceeded about $70,000 could cut their taxable income by only 25 cents, rather than 35 cents, for each $1 of deductions.

— The deduction for consumer interest would be limited to the amount paid on the mortgages on two homes plus an amount equal to investment income plus $1,000 ($2,000 for a couple). Loans to pay for contributions to Individual Retirement Accounts would no longer be deductible.

— A worker would be limited to putting $7,000 a year into a pension plan known as 401(k). Each dollar put into a 401(k) would reduce by $1 the maximum contribution to an IRA.

— The special deduction for two-earner couples would be repealed.

— No deduction would be permitted for state and local sales and personal-property taxes. Real-property taxes would remain fully deductible; the writeoff for state and local income taxes would be limited for those in the top tax bracket.

— The top individual tax rate for capital gains — profits from the sale of an asset owned more than six months — would remain at 20 percent.

Deadly storms wreak destruction on South

Associated Press

A wave of violent thunderstorms swept through the Deep South today, and cleanup continued after three days of deadly storms that spawned more than 55 tornadoes from the Gulf Coast to the Great Lakes.

Tornadoes and gale-force winds raked the South on Wednesday, killing two people in Alabama, injuring dozens and flipping mobile homes, trucks and cars. Five twisters were sighted in Alabama and eight in Mississippi, Bill Barlow of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today.

Other storm-related injuries and damage Wednesday were reported in Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee.

At least eight people have died in tornadoes and high winds since the first wave of storms rolled across the Plains on Monday, injuring more than 100 people in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, and doing nearly $30 million damage.

"It looks like the area today will be parts of the Southeast," he said in a telephone interview. "It's not really that early for the Gulf Coast. It's their peak season now, March and April."

Heavy and severe storms spun out today across parts of the Southeast from a storm system centered over Missouri, the National Weather Service said. The worst storms were in northwestern Georgia and in southern Alabama.

Families charge polluted well water caused childrens' cancer deaths

BOSTON (AP) — As lawyers debated whether two poisoned water wells killed five children, bulldozers demolished what was left of what one official called a "monument to man's stupidity in contaminating the environment."

The bulldozers were called into action in Woburn on Wednesday, the third day of a U.S. District Court trial here of a lawsuit by eight Woburn families against two giant corporations. The trial is expected to take seven months.

Attorneys for the families contend there's a link between chemicals used by the companies, the poisoned drinking water and the cancer deaths. Attorneys for W.R. Grace & Co. of New York and Beatrice Foods Co. of Chicago deny it.

There was no symbolism in having the area cleared as the 4-year-old lawsuit finally came to trial, Woburn Mayor John Rabitt said.

However, he added, "the wells stood there as monument to man's stupidity in contaminating the environment."

The case has attracted national attention, including stories on CBS' "60 Minutes" and PBS' "Nova," due to its potential as one of the most detailed legal examinations ever of the health effects of environmental pollution.

Attorneys said they have spent more than $1 million on geological testing, health screening of the families and a detailed reconstruction of the period between 1964 and 1979, when the wells supplied the East Woburn neighborhood.

AP Laserphoto

A bulldozer rolls over the building housing one of the contaminated drinking water wells in Woburn, Mass., Wednesday. Eight families have a suit underway against two large corporations who occupied an area near the well sites.

The families must show the companies negligently allowed solvents like trichloroethylene — a cleaning agent suspected of causing cancer — to be dumped and that the chemicals contaminated the wells. They also must show the victims drank enough of the water to cause their medical problems.

Attorneys for the companies say it is impossible to prove that the tainted water led to the outbreak of cancer in the neighborhood.

"You don't get leukemia from drinking well water," said attorney Jerome Facher, representing Beatrice, now called Beatrice Companies Inc. He told the jury there was no credible evidence linking the chemicals to leukemia.

But Jan Richard Schlictmann, an attorney for two of the families, said he was ready to trace the chain of events.

House expected to 'bash' budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's fiscal 1987 budget, already rejected with little fanfare by Senate budget writers, was headed for certain defeat on the floor of the Democratic-led House of Representatives.

Democratic leaders said that during debate today — for which four hours were set aside — they would highlight inequities in the package. Republicans called for the Democrats to produce their own budget instead and denounced today's scheduled yes-or-no vote on Reagan's spending proposal as a partisan sideshow aimed at embarrassing the president.

"They (Democrats) obviously just want to waste an afternoon in president bashing," said Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., a member of the House Budget Committee. Republican leaders said they would simply vote "present" to protest the proceedings.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said the Republicans "haven't got the guts to vote for it and they don't want to vote against it."

The heated budget rhetoric in the House was in sharp contrast to the quiet talks in the Senate between the senior Republican and Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, who have been working privately to fashion a bipartisan spending package for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Even before Democrats — who control the legislative schedule in the House — set today's vote, Republicans had complained about a series of hearings the House Budget Committee held around the nation last month.

Nonetheless, the committee has set hearings for Friday in Helena, Mont., and Saturday in Worthington, Minn., to focus attention on the administration's spending priorities and their impact on agriculture and rural America.

The impact of Reagan administration policies on farmers is becoming an increasingly popular election-year topic among Democrats.

Nonetheless, some Democrats are complaining that too much partisanship is being displayed on the budget issue.

During a meeting of the House Rules Committee on Wednesday that cleared the way to today's action on the House floor, Rep. Anthony C. Beilenson, D-Calif., said that although he did not like Reagan's budget, "I don't think this proposed exercise will be terribly useful or responsible."

Mrs. Martin said, "Reasonable people on both sides know it's time to settle down."

Yet there was no sign the partisanship in the House would be abating soon.

In the Senate, meanwhile, Sens. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., the Budget Committee chairman, and Lawton Chiles of Florida, the panel's top Democrat, have been bargaining over a spending plan.

Javits' legacy

Jacob Javits was an enigma — a liberal in the conservative-oriented Republican Party. He made an indelible mark on the United States Senate, regardless, and his death late last week will not wipe away the impact of his long public service.

The reason so much was written about the former senator in the few days following his death at age 81 is that he gave so much to his country. He set examples of hard work, courage, and devoted public service that will endure for years.

He was born into poverty and faced other hardships, but his was a spirit that sought to overcome rather than be conquered. That determination helped him to get an education and earn a law degree. A public career that spanned five decades included service in the House of Representatives, a stint as New York's attorney general, and 24 years in the U.S. Senate, a record for any senator from New York.

Javits was a man of strong opinions, so naturally he evoked strong opinions in others, both favorable and unfavorable. It was a credit to him that those who disagreed the most with some of his political statements always respected his integrity and intellectual honesty. These words were used repeatedly by those who have been commenting on the nobility of his life, and were emphasized by those who spoke at his funeral service. His will to carry on despite a crippling disease in the past few years was an inspiration to those around him. Throughout it all he remained steadfast in his determination to live the best life he could despite adversity.

Jacob Kopel Javits was a strong man, a statesman, a model of valor and good cheer, a champion of civil rights and a selfless patriot. His good works will live on, for his is a legacy to be treasured by all Americans.

LETTERS

Reject aid proposal

Late last month President Reagan asked Congress to approve aid in the amount of $100 million to the rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government. Of the money to be given to the contras, $70 million is to be used to fund military aid and the balance of $30 million is to be allotted for humanitarian purposes. At present Congress is expected to vote on the proposal during mid-March.

Providing any aid the contras that helps maintain them as a fighting force inevitably prolongs and deepens the conflict in that country, and necessarily encourages further state restrictions of civil freedoms.

Additionally, assistance to the contras as a fighting force frustrates the on-going and essential efforts of the neighboring states (the eight Contadora and Lima Support Group countries) to mediate a political settlement.

The Contadora process should take precedence over any financial aid from the United States. If this political/diplomatic process is further delayed, prospects are enhanced for the conflicts in Central America to deepen and widen. Direct intervention by the United States, which must at all costs be avoided, becomes more likely.

Ending United States' responsibility for the armed insurgency can force Nicaragua to make good its commitment to its neighbors and can give the Contadora countries the peace-assuring role they are prepared to accept.

Before a final vote is taken, voters should contact their Senators and Representatives in Washington and urge that this proposal for financial aid be rejected.

Testing essay ability

The only thing the teachers' test proved is whether the teacher can write a short essay, with proper punctuation, spelling and grammar.

The measure of a good teacher encompasses so much more. The rapport between teacher and pupil, the ability to draw out talent, the encouragement for a job well done cannot be tested. There are good teachers and bad teachers, just as there are good and bad doctors, and politicians. All professions have "do nothings." Personally, I had rather my child have a teacher who reaches out, encourages, understands and most of all has a little love to give.

This test will not drive out the "bad teachers." It may cause an excellent math or science teacher to lose their teaching certificate and they will be replaced with a teacher who can write a proper essay!

Law helps the disabled

It can happen in an instant. It can happen to anyone.

Within the next 24 hours, you or someone you know could become disabled.

It's a frightening thought — becoming disabled. It's an idea that most people would just as soon put out of their minds.

"That could never happen to me."

It can happen. It happens to people every day. Through an accident or illness — simply by aging — thousands of people join the ranks of the disabled population each year.

For many of these people, the net result of such an occurrence depends upon an important law currently under consideration for reauthorization by Congress — the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

This is the law that has helped break down many of the barriers that have isolated disabled people from the rest of society. It is based on the abilities and talents of some 32 million disabled Americans and their absolute right to participate fully and equally in our society, both at work and at leisure. And, it is a guarantee that all of society will benefit from their energy.

Congress should reauthorize the Rehabilitation Act with no major changes. If you agree, please write your congressman.

Defense official backs accused woman

WASHINGTON — Richard Armitage, assistant defense secretary for international security affairs, has drawn mixed reviews for his high-profile activities lately. He was blamed for the confusion over the POW/MIA issue, but then got high marks for his part in the successful outcome of the Philippines crisis.

Jack Anderson

The White House is now reportedly concerned about Armitage's acknowledged friendship with a woman who has been implicated in illegal organized gambling operations in the Washington suburb of Arlington, Va. She is a Vietnamese refugee, Nguyet Thi O'Rourke, and she has pleaded guilty to conducting an illegal gambling operation.

We first reported the story two months ago, after the President's Commission on Organized Crime questioned Armitage about his relationship with Mrs. O'Rourke. The commission grew concerned after learning that Armitage had written a letter, on official Defense Department stationery, urging the Arlington County Court to "show mercy" on Mrs. O'Rourke.

Armitage told the commission and us that he had been a friend of Mrs. O'Rourke's since his service in Vietnam and had seen her on numerous occasions in this country. But he denied knowing of her alleged involvement in organized crime.

Our associates Donald Goldberg and Corky Johnson have now learned that Mrs. O'Rourke has been linked by law enforcement officials to Raj Kumar Bansal, described in police records as a major gambler and loan shark heavily involved in organized crime. He was recently arrested on gambling charges in Virginia. In an interview, Bansal denied any involvement in gambling, and said he didn't know why he had been arrested. He said Mrs. O'Rourke is a friend of his, but that they have had no business dealings.

A report on file in the Arlington court, referring to a 1983 organized crime report from next-door Alexandria, Va., states: "Bansal was a major gambling figure who was tied to the organization of Michael A. Larusso, also known as Mario A. Scarfoni; James Corbitt Ballard; Roger W. Simkins Jr.; Herbie Cole, (and) Richard A. McCaleb; all known and convicted gambling and organized crime figures."

According to the report, Bansal recently assumed operation of a Washington, D.C., adult movie house from Cole, who is described as "into gambling and narcotics" and who is now serving time for tax evasion.

The report filed with the court quotes law enforcement officials as saying that "Bansal was the person who was over the Nguyet Thi O'Rourke gambling operation." Mrs. O'Rourke, given immunity to testify before the president's crime commission, stated in secret testimony that she phoned Bansal at his office two or three times a day. In police records, she is quoted as saying, "As the money got more and more, I couldn't cover the bets, so I passed the bets on to bigger people in Washington."

While Mrs. O'Rourke was awaiting trial on the gambling charges, according to police records, she and a friend were stopped by police as they were leaving a high-stakes gambling operation in Silver Spring, Md. Her friend had allegedly fired a machine gun during a dispute moments before. Police sought to revoke Mrs. O'Rourke's bond after that incident.

Three months later, on June 6, 1985, Armitage wrote to the Arlington court on Mrs. O'Rourke's behalf, describing her as "a successful businesswoman (with) a reputation for fairness and honesty ...." Referring to her arrest, the Pentagon official wrote: "I believe that this experience has chastened her, clearly embarrassed her and certainly has left her with a better appreciation of our own law and norms."

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: The American embassy in Manila built up an impressive record for solid intelligence in the last months of the Marcos regime in the Philippines. Consider this query from Washington late last year: "If the opposition should succeed in uniting behind a single candidate and that candidate should be elected president, what would be the overall impact on U.S.-Philippine relations?" The cabled reply: "The opposition could be expected to act responsibly and the U.S.-Philippine relationship would prosper. This would be particularly so if the opposition were able to create a new sense of purpose and hope for the future." Bingo!

GEORGE F. WILL

Iron-curtain society searching for self-esteem

MOSCOW — To watch dusk descend on Moscow is to watch a city vanish. It is as though it sinks into the sandy soil that limits high-rise construction in this horizontal capital. To see Moscow at night is to be struck by what you do not see, and to long for neon — the electronic exuberance that is freedom's signature in the form of capitalism's crackling energy.

George F. Will

A wit, seeing Times Square for the first time, said: It must be beautiful if you can't read. That is somewhat true of Moscow bedecked with red banners proclaiming slogans that are punctuated by the obligatory exclamation mark. It is a city without what we call "commercial clutter." It is a city where mass appetites are not expressed and satisfied in the populist democracy of the marketplace.

An American in Moscow can suffer an ailment diagnosable as "PSD" — Pointer Sisters Deprivation. The absence of popular expression of the sensual side of life is a telling facet of the Soviet system. In the West, the social atmosphere may be overdosed with aphrodisiacs. However, a sojourn in an anti-sensualist society such as this underscores a theme of Orwell's "1984": Eroticism is feared by a regime that feels threatened by any realm of privacy or flicker of spontaneity.

The sensory deprivation here is highlighted by exceptions to it, such as a performance of the Bolshoi Ballet in the ornate theater which, like almost all things pleasing to the eye, was built before 1917. A sumptuous performance of "Sleeping Beauty" is attended by 2,500 of le tout Moscow and a few visitors. The performance seems all the more ethereal and remote because it is such a stylized, tantalizing glimpse of life lived beyond the gray walls of ideological categories.

"Sleeping Beauty," an echo of an earlier age, was performed the evening of the day the Communist Party congress echoed with Gorbachev's thoughts on matters cultural. He denounced literature, art and scholarship in which, "under the guise of national originality, attempts are made to depict in idyllic tones reactionary nationalist and religious survivals contrary to our ideology, the socialist way of life, and our scientific world outlook." He said "the people" need "only a literature that is ideologically motivated," and not "showy verbosity on paper, petty dirty-linen-washing, time-serving and utilitarianism." This is Gorbachev, voice of the "bold new generation," expressing Stalinist values with Khrushchevian crudity.

The Soviet Union is a Third World country with first-class missiles at the disposal of a regime with a mind that never even rises to the second-rate. The morning of the day Gorbachev spent declaiming about the glittering high-tech future of the "qualitatively new" Soviet experience, a visitor sought a bit of breakfast in a lobby refreshment area in a hotel so grand, by Soviet standards, that only a few privileged Soviet citizens are allowed in.

Visitor: I'd like some buttered toast.

Waiter: There is no toast today.

Visitor: What do you have?

Waiter: Cheese or ham sandwiches.

Visitor: I'll take a cheese sandwich.

Waiter: The cheese is not fresh.

Vladimir Bukovsky, the exiled dissident, says that Soviet public-health problems — high infant mortality, low birthrates (below replacement rates among some nationalities, including Russians), increasing birth defects — indicate that the Soviet crisis has gone beyond mere disillusionment and apathy to "biological exhaustion, a fatigue of human material."

Certainly the sullenness and rudeness that Westerners living here find so wearing reflects the grinding-down experience of going around with an empty bag, jostling with others in the search for the necessities of life, potatoes here, perhaps some meat over there. And the inessentials? There are hundreds of people outside a store because it has received a shipment of wallpaper and who knows when there will be more. The communist aristocracy is, of course, exempt from these rigors. That aristocracy is another tradition. A commander of a Soviet ship in a 1937 naval review was addressed as "Arch-Comrade."

The vigor of a society can, in the short run, be stimulated by revolutionary ardor or wartime discipline. But over the long haul, social vigor is a function of fun, in this sense: People will be more energetic, creative, productive, fecund when they are enjoying themselves. A capacity for enjoyment is grounded in self-esteem. That is difficult to develop in a society in which the individual is considered a mere manifestation of this or that collective category ("worker," "peasant," "vanguard"). Individual attributes and achievements are made to seem trivial in comparison with ideological goals — such as "new Soviet man" — by which the collectivist society is lashed into discipline.

RUSSELL BAKER

'Old-timers' have a lot of faith in marriage!

We dropped by Great-Uncle Jim's the other night for the big wedding anniversary, it being the 36th for him and Great-Aunt Simone. They were barely cordial to us, at least until they saw we'd brought two bottles of champagne.

Russell Baker

Granddaddy had said we oughtn't go at all, as a 36th wedding anniversary is not an occasion when old-timers are just dying to have whippersnappers drop in to stare at them. How Granddaddy would know that, being at present on his fourth marriage, none of which lasted more than three years, I don't know.

However, we felt people who had been married for 36 years, and all that time to each other, might appreciate seeing people who still had some life left in them, especially Aunt Simone, who hates being called "Great-Aunt" Simone" because she says it always reminds her that if they ever pass a truth-in-nomenclature law she'll have to be called "Lousy-Aunt Simone."

I remember her telling me years ago when I was still too young to be a yuppie that she had no interest in being an aunt, and even less in being a great-aunt, and thought it was unfair that women could be pressganged into aunthood whether they were interested in it or not.

That was before she changed her name to Simone and was still just Aunt Myrtle.

Well, as I said, they weren't too cordial when they peeked through the curtains and saw it was us come to marvel at them. Great-Uncle Jim was wearing the mustache that makes him look like the late Josef Stalin, which he always puts on before peeking out to see who's calling.

Boy Bob, the brilliant young Harvard business graduate with whom I share my life, said: "We must have the wrong address, Gloria. That face definitely belongs to the late Josef Stalin."

"How could it?" I said to Boy Bob, explaining what "the late" signified about Josef Stalin. I told him Uncle Jim always put on his Stalin disguise when he didn't want to be disturbed by callers urging him to sign petitions, get born again, save the whales or appear on television game shows.

After we held up our two bottles of champagne Uncle Jim let us in, though asking us to be civilized enough to leave after the first bottle was empty, as he and Simone intended to plan a trip to Venice or possibly Singapore and could do it better if they didn't have to share the second bottle with visitors.

After I said we'd come to share their happiness, Great-Aunt Simone said there was nothing particularly happy about having been married for 36 years. The trick was to get married while you were still reasonably young, at age 16, or 20, or 25.

Then you could be married 36 years by the time you were 52, or 56, or 61.

That was easy for them to say, but as I pointed out, there was no way Boy Bob and I could undertake marriage at such an early age, even if we wanted to, because first we had to share our lives without artificial legal constraints to see if we truly loved each other, and what's more, before marrying I had to fulfill myself as a person while Boy Bob had to fulfill himself as a dynamic business executive by bankrupting a few companies.

After that, maybe we could marry, but by then of course I would be 47 years old while Boy Bob would be 48.

"Forty-eight," said Boy Bob. "I have to lie about my age or the headhunters will think I'm too arthritic to be a brilliant young executive."

Great-Uncle Jim said in that case it would be a mistake for us to get married at all, since I would be 83 and Boy Bob would be 84 at the time of our 36th anniversary, and at that age couples ought to be celebrating 60th anniversaries.

But having a 36th anniversary in our 80s would be so peculiar, he said, that newspapers would harass us with silly questions like, "What's the secret of being married only 36 years when you could have been married 60?" To which we would have to answer, "We had to wait for years until we'd fulfilled ourselves."

Boy Bob said what was wrong with that, and Great-Aunt Simone said when you're 84 you'd feel pretty silly having to tell the whole world you delayed life's important things just so you could fulfill yourself.

"I'm glad we didn't do that," said Great-Uncle Jim, popping the second champagne cork and ostentatiously not pouring any for me and Boy Bob. Outside Boy Bob said, "Those old-timers are really out of it. Your uncle thinks there'll still be newspapers when you and I are 80."

"Not only newspapers," I said, "but also marriage."

Butcher mushes to finish, breaking record in Iditarod sled dog race

NOME, Alaska (AP) — With a headlong rush that started in Unalakleet, Susan Butcher charged across the finish line and into the history books early today in the fastest-ever Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race from Anchorage to Nome.

Flushed and perspiring after setting a record-breaking pace to win the 1,158-mile race, Butcher put an end to her history of near-wins in the Iditarod. Twice, she has finished in second place.

She became only the second woman to ever win the punishing contest when she crossed the finish line on Nome's Front Street at 4:06 a.m. EST behind her lead dogs, Granite and Spoons. Libby Riddles won the contest last year.

Hundreds of spectators perched atop cars and buildings to get a peek at the 1986 Iditarod champion, who arrived in blaze of television lights and flashbulbs. Nature's Northern lights streamed across the sky above Nome.

Butcher said she was numb after her victory, but her dogs appeared unimpressed with the ensuing bedlam. They curled up and looked bored in the finish chute as Butcher posed for picture after picture.

Asked what she would do with the $50,000 first-prize money, the 30-year-old musher replied, "All of the money that I ever win in any race just goes back into the kennels." She said she has 100 dogs.

Butcher completed her journey in 11 days, 15 hours and six minutes. The old record was 12 days, eight hours, 45 minutes and two seconds set in 1981 by four-time Iditarod champion Rick Swenson of Manley.

"I could tell it was fast because I'm tireder than ever before," said Butcher, who completed the race with 13 dogs.

Last year, when storms twice delayed the race, Riddles crossed the finish line after 18 days on the trail.

Joe Garnie, the soft-spoken mayor of Teller, a tiny village some 60 miles northwest of Nome, finished in second place early today, with an elapsed time of 11 days, 16 hours, 1 minute and 11 seconds.

The crowd, which gave Butcher a warm welcome, went wild when Garnie pulled across the finish line.

"I just had to get here before the party was over," Garnie said. "I should have been here a half a day ago."

Dogfighters suspected in pit bulldog thefts

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — In the past year, pit bulldogs have vanished from the Caddo Parish Animal Control center almost as soon as they're picked up. And authorities fear that the 11 dogs stolen in as many months have been sold for illegal dogfighting, perhaps for as much as $1,000 apiece.

Shreveport Police Lt. J.D. Perdue, who made the estimate, said the dogs were probably taken outside the city and sold.

Dogfighting is a felony offense in the state of Louisiana, and is punishable by up to a year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Rep. Addabbo in coma

Addabbo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., one of Congress' leading Pentagon budget-cutters and the "powerhouse" of New York's delegation, remained hospitalized in a coma today and was not expected to survive.

Peter Esker, a spokesman at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, said Addabbo was transferred there Wednesday from Georgetown University Hospital and placed in intensive care. He declined to provide further details.

Addabbo's office issued a terse statement saying the congressman "has slipped into a coma and is not expected to survive."

Addabbo, 60, a jovial man widely respected by his colleagues in both parties, quietly fought bladder cancer for six years, and most of his associates did not know of his illness.

"The suspicion among many members was that it might have been cancer, but Joe was doing his best to carry on," said Rep. Guy V. Molinari, R-N.Y. "He was trying to act as though nothing had happened."

Vietnam aids MIA search

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnam is being increasingly helpful to U.S. efforts to find out what happened to the 2,436 Americans unaccounted for from the Vietnam War, the Reagan administration told Congress.

In the last eight months, the Vietnamese government has decided to "move from ad hoc gestures on this issue to a comprehensive program aimed at fully resolving the question in Vietnam within two years," said John Monjo, acting assistant secretary of state for Asian and Pacific Affairs.

Monjo made his assessment Wednesday in testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Pacific and Asian subcommittee.

Monjo opposed the creation of a separate presidential commission to oversee how the U.S. government is handling the MIA issue.

He said such a commission would send the wrong signal to Hanoi and "could provide the Vietnamese with an opportunity to stall under the mistaken belief that they may be able to obtain leverage through this issue."

He noted that the Vietnamese have promised to soon turn over the remains of 21 more people who might be Americans. The largest single repatriation of remains since the end of the war came last August and involved 24 Americans.

He said the Vietnamese government also has promised to begin investigating the live sighting reports that have raised questions about whether there are still American prisoners.

Weapon-building banned

CHICAGO (AP) — The City Council on Wednesday banned development of nuclear weapons within the city limits, making it the largest municipality in the nation to do so, according to backers of the ordinance.

The measure is partly symbolic, said Alderman David D. Orr, who introduced the ordinance, but a report from the city's Department of Economic Development said it might affect $1.5 million in contracts awarded by the Defense Department to companies in Chicago.

Officials did not know if any of the contracts involved nuclear weapons.

The ordinance, passed by voice vote without opposition, gives companies two years to phase out the design, production or storage of nuclear weapons.

It also calls for an annual observance on Aug. 6, the date the United States droppped a nuclear bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, in 1945.

Mostly cloudy skies prevailed over the Panhandle, portions of North Central and Northeast Texas, and the Coastal Plains. Fair skies were reported elsewhere.

NATION

A storm pushed turbulent weather across the Southeast today and spread snow through the central and northern Plains.

A tornado watch was in effect this morning for much of central and southern Alabama and the Florida Panhandle and a flash flood watch was in effect through today in sections of West Virginia, where up to 3 inches of rain was possible.

Snow-prompted travelers' advisories were issued for north central and northeastern Nebraska, eastern South Dakota, northwest Iowa and southwest Minnesota. The advisory area had 1 to 3 inches of snow and from 1 to 4 inches more was possible.

Snow combined with low temperatures and gusty winds in South Dakota, prompting a livestock advisory.

'Dogs, Rebs face tough track test

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

With title trophies dangling from the neck, both Midland High and Midland Lee track teams take on some higher ambitions this weekend when they trek a short 20 miles west for a shootout in the 42nd annual West Texas Relays.

Midland High won the Lubbock Invitational last weekend while Lee's Rebels captured the Mustang Relays in Andrews. Lee has two titles in a row now, but the Rebels could notch a fifth consecutive West Texas title with a victory when the smoke clears Saturday. Still, winning this particular title is an ambitious chore for any team.

WT Relays

Sixteen 5A schools will be on hand, ranging from El Paso, Lubbock and District 4-5A. Only Abilene High and Abilene Cooper will miss this event as far as league teams go.

IN ALL, 53 track teams will bring over 1,350 competitors for the four divisions of competition, which includes divisions for girls, 5A, 4A and 3A and below.

"We're really excited about the meet," said Odessa athletic director John Wilkins. "I don't know of another meet in West Texas that will have these numbers. And it should be a very competitive field."

The two-day event begins at 2:30 p.m. Friday with some field event finals in all divisions and all running preliminaries. The remaining field event finals are slated for a noon start Saturday and the running finals are slated for a 12:30 p.m. shootoff.

THE MHS and Lee girls, both of which have shown some talent this year, will also be in the WT event after having a week off to prepare for it.

All four of the local teams should give a good account of themselves.

Lee, MHS, Odessa Permian and San Angelo are figured to have a title shot in 5A while the MHS and Lee girls will battle against Permian and some stiff competition from teams in the lower divisions.

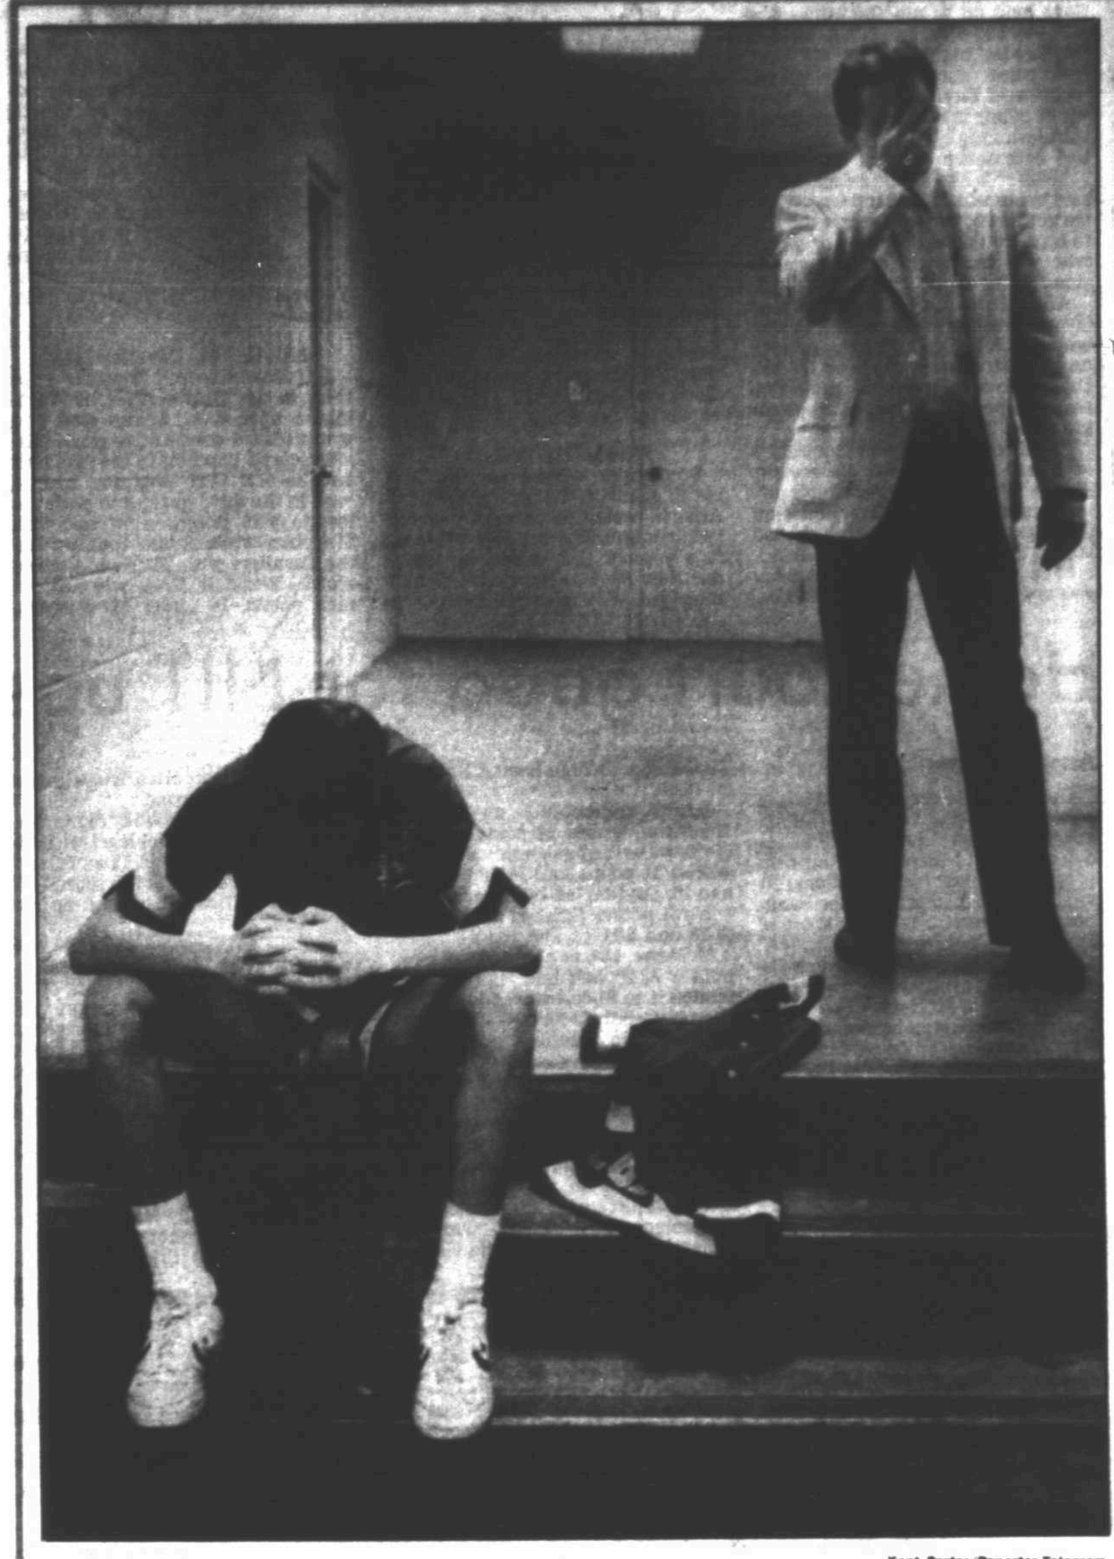

Lee's Quintus Hampton is unbeaten in the 300 hurdles and has won twice in the highs, records he would like to extend. Lee's Brad Cooper is unbeaten in the 400 meters while Mike Garza is unbeaten in both the 1600 and 3200. Those three alone scored 65 points for Lee last week in Andrews. Lee is also unbeaten in the 1600 relay and may be ready to break the 3:20 mark.

Midland High has shown some sprint power as Tyrone Oliver has won twice in a row in the 400 and Anthony Adkinson has a two meet string in the 100. The Bulldogs have also been strong in the relays, winning both the sprint and 1600 relays the past two weeks.

The Lee girls had an impressive outing two weeks ago in Big Spring, finishing second to Abilene High. Roz Eaden, triple jump; Tami Woodberry, hurdles; and Tangi Carter, 100, all had victories the last time the Rebels competed.

The MHS girls got victories from Ethel Edwards, undefeated in the 200 for two years in West Texas meets; Amy Cumings, high jump; and 1600 relay, a unit that is also unbeaten.

With a large field, both MHS and Lee girls should be in title contention. It is a meet where quality counts more than overall depth whether in the girls or boys divisions.

Midland College coach Jerry Stone and Chaparral player Todd Duncan hide their sorrow after Midland College suffered a 107-92 loss to San Jacinto Wednesday night.

Ravens end MC title bid

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

FORT WORTH — San Jacinto was everything everybody said it was and the Ravens made the most of their height advantage for a 107-92 bi-regional victory over Midland College in Wilkerson-Greines field house Wednesday night. The win sends the 33-0 Ravens to the NJCAA tournament at Hutchinson, Kan., next week.

The loss was a bitter defeat for the Chaparrals, ending the season 33-1, still MC's best record ever, and severing the school's longest basketball winning streak.

Nevertheless San Jacinto's final margin left no "what ifs" or "maybes" to ponder, even the Chap players were convinced.

Ricky Grace, MC's All-American candidate who kept the bottom from falling out with his deadly outside shooting when the Chaps were backed into a 17-point deficit, said "It was more than the free shooting. They simply outplayed us in every aspect of the game."

"We were just outmanned," commented a subdued Tony Wright, "We played hard, but not hard enough."

"It was like a replay of the 1983 game," said MC Coach Jerry Stone, referring to the Chaps bi-regional loss in this same gym to this different San Jacinto team. The Ravens used that win as a springboard to the first of two national championships and many are convinced it will lead to a third title in four years.

SJ Coach Ron Arrow admitted as much and then hastily added, "But we still have to go up there and win it."

"This game was everything I said it would be. I said it would be high-scoring and it was. I said it would be a heiluva a game, and it was. It's just a shame more people in the Fort Worth area didn't come out to see it. They would have seen junior college basketball at its best. They'd have seen eight to 10 players on the floor capable of playing Division I ball right now."

Arrow added, "It's a shame both these teams couldn't go to nationals, but we'll do our best to represent Texas."

HEIGHT AND SJ's unerring shooting accuracy proved the difference. The Chaps fought the 6-9, 6-9, 6-7, 6-5 Ravens under the boards, but the dreadful price showed up at the free throw line and in personal fouls that saw three MC players saddled with four just five minutes into the second half.

The Ravens, a team without an apparent weakness, exploited the Chaps' one weakness, the free throw.

And when MC sent the Ravens to the free throw line they made 14-of-16 in the first half and it was the wedge needed for a 50-43 halftime lead. MC was just 1-of-8 in the first half.

"We never got in the one-and-one in the second half," Stone, still stunned, said. "They killed us on the boards in the second half"

"Anything I would have done differently? I'd have turned and run the other way as fast as I could on defense. I didn't realize they could get the ball down the court so fast. Sometimes they caught a defensive man looking for his man, who was in scoring position at the other end of the court."

With the Ravens' 31-4 edge in free throws, the fact that MC outscored SJ 44-38 from the field went almost unnoticed. Of course, SJ hit a chilling 38-of-62 from the floor.

Six-five Ledell Eackles, who plays like 6-10 around the basket, set the pace with 33 points, 13-of-15 from the field go go with 7-of-8 from the line.

Six-nine Tyrone Shaw scored 24, 10-of-11 from the line, while the guards Boo Harvey and Michael Porter chipped in with 18 each.

Grace led MC with 23 points and agreed that MC, off to an uncharacteristically tentative start, "May have respected them a little too much. We made the Final 24. The national tournament started here tonight. It's just too bad the No. 2 and No. 3 teams had to meet this early."

Jesse Benavidez

Benavidez no stranger to Rebels

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Jesse Benavidez, Lee's newest addition to the Midland Lee coaching staff, won't exactly be a stranger to the Rebels when he begins spring training chores next month.

In fact, he probably knows the 1986 edition of the Rebels about as well as anyone. Benavidez has coached most of the Lee players at one time or another, or in one sport or another as a coach at Lee Freshman.

"I've been at Lee Freshman for 11 years. It was Austin Freshman when I came here. I've had all these kids while coaching either football, basketball or track," said Benavidez. "This is a move I've always had my eyes on since I came here. I feel really great to have the opportunity to coach on the varsity level.

"It's going to take some getting used to coaching the older kids, but I feel like I'll fit in with them just fine. I think they are as thrilled about me coming up as I am. A lot of my kids in the past have asked when I was going to move up."

NEW LEE head football coach Earl Miller completed his staff when he made the move to elevate Benavidez, another Lee move within the school system.

"Jesse will fit right into our system and he isn't really a stranger to any of us. We're excited about having him.

Benavidez replaces David Browning, who recently resigned to become head coach and athletic director at Class 4A Willis. Benavidez, however, will coach the Lee secondary while Ronnie Stephens will move over to the offensive line, which was Browning's responsibility.

"I've always coached the secondary and wide receivers since I've been in Midland. I'll be right at home here," said Benavidez.

Benavidez has been a jack of all trades in the school system, including scouting assignments for both basketball and football. He has also worked with the current Lee staff during spring training drills.

Benavidez is a 1966 graduate of Odessa High. He spent two years in the Navy, following high school, and made the All-Navy softball (fast pitch) team both years.

After the service, he played baseball for Odessa College in 1969 before moving on to Lubbock Christian College in 1970, where he was a two-time All-America selection in baseball. Benavidez is LCC's first All-America selection in baseball.

He came to Midland 11 years ago and now has a chance to fulfill a dream without leaving town.

"This is something I really wanted. There won't be any problems working into this staff. I know everyone here and they know me," said Benavidez.

It hasn't taken Benavidez long to get in the swing. He has already started his duties as junior varsity baseball coach.

"Actually, I'm not the JV baseball coach until Monday, but I'm coming over on my own time the rest of this week to get my feet on the ground."

History doesn't favor NCAA dreams of Mississippi Valley State

Associated Press

If the Delta Devils of Mississippi Valley State are looking for inspiration, they might consider the Flying Dutchmen of Lebanon Valley.

The little, financially troubled school whose mailing address is "Highway 82, Itta Bena, MS, 38941," is receiving an untold amount of national attention because it has to play top-ranked Duke today in the opening round of the NCAA basketball tournament. The Blue Devils are seeded No. 1 in the East Regional at Greensboro, N.C.

The history of the NCAA tournament is littered with the broken dreams of unassuming little schools which found themselves vying for the national championship and all too quickly found themselves out of the running, with no more than a "Thanks for coming and drive home safely."

Rarely does a team of Mississippi Valley's stature survive a first-round meeting with a team as powerful as the Dukes of the world. Last year, for example, little Lehigh was pictured as being fed to the lions — accurately, as it turned out. The Hoyas of Georgetown licked their collective chops and swallowed Lehigh 68-43.

Ahh, but once every so often ...

IN 1953, Lebanon Valley, now a Division III member of the Middle Atlantic Conference was invited to the NCAA tournament. The Flying Dutchmen were decided underdogs against Fordham University, but the kids from Annville, Pa., knocked off the big boys from the Bronx, N.Y., 80-67.

Coach George "Rinso" Marquette's dream died in the next round when Louisiana State beat Lebanon Valley 89-76.

Chap Center seems to be lucky for Tech

It's something that would never be confessed to in public, but if Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers is as superstitious as I am, we may never get rid of him.

For the last two years, Myers has brought his Red Raiders to the Langford Chaparral Center for a preseason scrimmage. For the last two years his Raiders have won the Southwest Conference championship.

In 1985, Tech embarrassed the forecasters who spend weeks studying such things by not only winning the SWC regular season title, but scoring a double by winning the tournament and earning an automatic berth in the NCAA field of 64.

This year Tech's achievement was even more remarkable. In the first place, Myers lost all of his starters from the 1985 team that pulled off the rare double, including Bubba Jennings, the SWC's Player of the Year.

TECH BEGAN the season with four straight SWC wins and it looked like Myers might have patched together another contender out of last year's leftovers and newcomers. The surprising early victories must have gone to the Raiders' head. They figured if they were going to be champions and create a dynasty, they'd have to do it with a flourish...in other words the Dunk...vestiges of the University of Houston influence.

Missed dunks in the final seconds not only cost Tech its SWC unbeaten record, but a shot at a tie for first in the regular season race. Texas, TCU and Texas A&M wound up in a flat-footed tie.

So after a second straight miracle finish Myers is the toast of the SWC.

IT WASN'T too long ago that some were wondering if time had passed by Myers and his disciplined style of play. That was after Tech's 11-20 season in 1982-83. Myers' only losing season at Tech.

This, they argued, was an era of run-and-gun and damned-the-torpedoes. "Maybe that's the kind of coach Tech needs," said the change-seekers. "Someone who would give these kids their head and turn 'em loose. Bring Tech basketball up to date."

Tech could have brought in someone who would let the Raiders run, but they never would have won ties either year. Tech doesn't have the raw talent that can play that kind of ball with the nation's more gifted hotbeads...and never has had....and, probably never will have.

MYERS IS precisely what the Tech basketball program needs, someone who can get the most out of the kind of talent that matriculates to Lubbock. Besides, it would be difficult to get used to Tech basketball without Myers, unless they tear down the coliseum.

Myers was a guard out of Borger, which annually contended Pampa for WT, in those days state, basketball laurels, on the Polk Robison team when they opened the 10,000-seat arena in the mid-1950s, 1957 I think. Although it is currently listed as 8,174 capacity, they crammed in more than 10,000 a game until they decided that was too many for safety. And Tech wasn't even a member of the SWC at the time. However, Myers stuck around long enough to become the first Tech athlete to win all-SWC recognition.

After coaching apprenticeships at Lubbock Monterey and Houston Baptist University, Myers came home in 1971, taking over for Bob Bass, the high-powered coach from up north someplace who had quickly become disenchanted with Tech's basketball potential, and abruptly left at mid-season.

In the intervening years Myers has surpassed his old coach, Robison, as Tech's winningest coach in history and this last season passed the 300-victory mark.

The only time I was uneasy about Myers as a coach was the year he came through Midland on the annual coaches' summer golf good-will tour and scored a hole-in-one at Hogan Park or shot a 63, one is as incriminating as the other. That didn't look good for a coach...but he learned his lesson. He hasn't done it again...at least, not publicly.

Of course, Myers knows what resurrected his basketball program and brought him successive SWC championships. And I'll lay odds that his Raiders will be back in the Chap Center for a preseason scrimmage in November.

Davis hot in OT as Suns tip Bucks

Associated Press

Walter Davis scored Phoenix's first 10 points in overtime and the Suns held on to nip the Milwaukee Bucks 127-126 in NBA action Wednesday night.

"I came alive. I finally played well," said Davis, who scored 12 of his 32 points in overtime, including a game-winning jump shot from the key with seven seconds left.

"Walter is like a scoring machine," said teammate Mike Sanders. "When we get down, we want to get the ball to him. You need that type of leader who you can go to during crunch time."

After Davis scored the Suns' first 10 overtime points for a 122-115 lead with 1:53 remaining, the Bucks went on a 11-3 streak to pull ahead 126-125. Davis followed with his game-winning jumper. Davis scored 26 points after the intermission.

Paul Pressey and Terry Cummings each had 22 points for Milwaukee. Sidney Moncrief, Milwaukee's all-star guard, return after missing three games with a rib injury and scored 24 points to lead the Bucks.

"The Walter Davis of old is what you saw tonight," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod. "And you know who wanted to shoot it at the end of the game."

NBA Roundup

Kings 127, Mavericks 126, OT

Sacramento caught Dallas still celebrating its first victory over the Boston Celtics and slapped the Mavericks back to reality, ending a string of eight consecutive losses to them despite a career-high 46 points by Rolando Blackman.

Blackman's two free throws tied the game 109-109 with 41 seconds left in regulation but Sacramento's Reggie Theus hit six free throws and a basket in overtime. Theus' eight points in the extra period gave him 32 for the game. Eddie Johnson added 31 for the Kings.

Hawks 113, Nets 97

Dominique Wilkins scored 12 of his 35 points in the second period as Atlanta posted its seventh consecutive triumph. Trailing 31-26 after the first period, the Hawks outscored the Nets 38-16 to take a 64-47 halftime lead. Wilkins scored eight of his 12 points in the decisive period on spectacular slam-dunks. Kelvin Ransey led the Nets with 21 points.

Pistons 111, Pacers 101

Bill Laimbeer and Isiah Thomas scored 26 points each and Detroit held off Indiana's fourth-quarter rally. Indiana, which lost its fourth straight, trailed 70-64 in the third quarter but outscored Detroit 11-3 to pull within 93-90 with 4:48 left.

Laimbeer, the NBA's leading rebounder, pulled down 22 as Detroit won for the 12th time in its last 14 games. He had 14 points and 10 rebounds in the first quarter. Herb Williams scored 19 points to lead Indiana.

Bullets 128, Cavaliers 114

Jeff Malone scored 39 points, 12 of them in the third quarter, as Washington opened a 16-point lead and won its third consecutive game. Malone scored 19 points in the first half and he and Cliff Robinson had 12 each in the third quarter to push the lead to 95-79. Robinson finished with 21 points while Eddie Johnson led the Cavaliers with 25. Their leading scorer, World B. Free, was held to nine points, 14 under his average.

Warriors 118, Jazz 111

Purvis Short scored 39 points, including 16 in the second period, as Golden State, with the second worst record in the NBA, led from start to finish. Eric Floyd added 19 points and Joe Barry Carroll 17. Adrian Dantley, who has been embroiled in a feud with Coach Frank Layden, led the Jazz with 30 points.

Clippers 100, SuperSonics 96

Marques Johnson scored 23 points and rookie Benoit Benjamin scored five of his 19 in the final two minutes to help Los Angeles snap a four-game losing streak. Benjamin, who also had 16 rebounds and blocked six shots, broke a 91-91 tie by converting a three-point play with 1:51 remaining. Seattle, which has lost 17 of its last 19 road games, was led by Gerald Henderson's 23 points.

76ers 105, Knicks 95

Moses Malone had 28 points and 15 rebounds as Philadelphia handed the Knicks their fifth straight setback. Charles Barkley added 17 points and Maurice Cheeks had 15 plus a season-high 14 assists for Philadelphia.

Home court good for NIT upstarts

Associated Press

Upstarts McNeese State and Southwest Missouri State used their home courts to good advantage Wednesday night and beat a pair of big-time programs in first-round National Invitation Tournament games while Boston University fell just short of duplicating that feat.

At Lake Charles, La., Jerome Batiste and Kenny Jimerson combined for 45 points as McNeese's Southland Conference champions recorded its 21st consecutive home victory with an 86-75 triumph over Dayton.

And at Springfield, Mo., Winston Garland scored 15 points and had eight steals to lead Southwest Missouri over Pittsburgh 59-52.

However, Providence, playing at home, sank 12 of 13 free throws in the last 3½ minutes and withstood a last-minute scoring binge by Jeff Timberlake to edge Boston University 72-69.

Batiste, an honorable mention All-American, scored 24 points and led McNeese with 12 rebounds. Jimerson scored 21 points and Mike Marshall had 15. Dayton, led by Damon Goodwin's 31 points, finished its season at 17-13 and 2-11 on the road.

McNeese, 15-0 at home this season, built a 39-28 halftime lead and extended it to 81-60 with 1:50 left. The Cowboys shot 33-for-53 — 62.5 percent — from the field.

SW Missouri 59, Pittsburgh 52

Southwest Missouri and Pitt traded the lead six times in the first half with Pitt leading 29-28 at the intermission. The Bears regained the lead for good 38-37 on a basket by Garland with just under 15 minutes left. Their biggest lead was 52-44 with 4:25 remaining and they iced the victory with seven consecutive free throws in the final 28 seconds.

Also scoring in double digits for the Bears were Phil Schlegel with 12 points, Chris Ward with 11 and Greg Bell with 10. Charles Smith scored 15 points for Pitt, which wound up 15-14.

Providence 72, Boston U. 69

Dave Kipfer sank both ends of a one-and-one with 3:30 left to put the Friars of the Big East ahead for good at 60-59. It was the 12th lead change in a 9:43 span. Ernie Lewis, who led Providence with a career-high 18 points, and Matt Palazzi also converted one-and-ones for a 66-61 lead.

Then Timberlake led the Terriers back. He hit a jumper with 46 seconds to go and, after two free throws by Providence's Billy Donovan, connected on a bank shot with 26 seconds left, making the score 68-65. Timberlake's layup with two seconds to play made it a one-point game but the Terriers were forced to foul twice on Providence plays.

It was the first postseason triumph for Providence since the 1976 NIT. Boston University, which last won a postseason game in the 1959 NCAAs, ended its season at 21-10. The Terriers were led by Paul Hendricks with 16 points, Dwayne Vinson with 14 and Timberlake with 12.

In tonight's games, Southern Mississippi is at Florida, Georgia at Tennessee-Chattanooga, Middle Tennessee State at Clemson, Drake at Marquette, George Mason at Lamar, Texas at New Mexico, Louisiana Tech at Northern Arizona, Texas A&M at Wyoming, SMU at Brigham Young, Loyola-Marymount at California and Cal-Irvine at UCLA.

COM swimmers head for state TAGS meet

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

The City of Midland Swim team heads to Dallas this weekend for the three day Texas Age Group state swimming tournament with hopes of its first top 10 finish since 1979 — and they plan to do it with numbers.

"We're going to do a heckuva' lot better again this year," said COM coach Brad Swendig. "We're shooting for the top 10, but it will take a great meet for us to do it. We took 16 last year in the Spring meet and scored 38 points. This year we're taking 27.

"In big meets like this, it takes numbers to move up. You can have some great individuals score for you, but you need the kids with the third and fourth places to really score."

With 27 swimmers making the trek to Dallas, COM is approaching the kind of numbers he feels are needed to scratch the top 10. Swendig, in his third year at the helm of the COM swim program, took his team to a 27th place finish his first TAGS season and moved all the way up to 15th in last summer's state meet.

TEN SWIMMERS will swim in individual events in the meet Friday, Saturday and Sunday — with Michaela Hasek and Matt Houston leading the way with seven individual events apiece. Seventeen others will swim only in relay events.

Hasek, swimming in her first state meet in the 15-18 seniors division, will try to retain her state titles in the 100 and 200 backstroke in the older age group as well as swim in five other individual events.

Houston, 12, will swim in the 11-12 boys age group and compete in two relays as well as seven individual events.

Sam Perry, who will also swim in the UIL sponsored high school state meet on March 21-22 in Austin, is the defending state champ in the backstroke as well. He is a potential high scorer in this week's swim, but will not reach his peak until the next weekend.

"They both have a good shot at winning the backstroke events, they both won in it in the summer, but it will take great swims to do it," Swendig said. "Sam's probably a longer shot, he'll probably go in a little tired and a little sore because he's still swimming hard."

OTHER TOP individuals for the COM team are: 10 & under girls, Stacy Fennell (3 events); 15-18 girls, Jane Marker (2),; 10 & under boys, Clay Brown (1); 11-12 boys, Shannon Guignon (1); 15-18 boys, Alan Reed (2), Paul Harris (1) and Rickey Perkins (1).

Swimmers that will compete in the relays are: 10 & under girls, Sheila Kennedy, Jennifer Miller, Trina Kieffer, Robin Hill; 13-14 girls, Caroline Reed, Debbie Colson; 10 & under boys, Jon Green, Matt Horne, James Henderson, Tom Klements, Will Childress, Craig Kieffer, Rado Archer; 11-12 boys, John Waller, Clayton Hoelscher, Matt Welch.

NCAA——

Mississippi Valley Coach Lafayette Stribling is delighted to be pursuing the dream this year. "We're not going in there with the attitude that we can't win," he said. "We respect all but fear none. ... I've always said that before you can be successful you have got to overcome obstacles. We'll hang in there. We are not coming in with a defeatist attitude."

Yes — but what about playing Duke?

"We are proud to be here, to be a part of the NCAA tournament. And playing a team like Duke is another honor. We'll just go in, play and do our best."

Yes — but how do the Delta Devils match up with the Blue Devils?

"We don't match up with anybody. Our lineup goes 5-11 and 6-3 at guards, 6-7 at center and 6-5 and 6-3 at forwards. And our center (Carl Curry) weighs 165 pounds. He's just skin and bones.

"But our kids have done a fine job. And we don't play scared. We use a variety of defenses, we are not reluctant to change defenses, and we put some motion in our offense. We also like to fast break and fill the lanes."

Yes — but what are the Delta Devils' chances of winning?

"We'll pray a lot," Stribling said.

Rangers drop one-run games to Yanks, Braves

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The Texas Rangers had a rough day of it in two exhibition baseball games, one of their squads losing 8-7 to the New York Yankees and another 6-5 to the Atlanta Braves.

Texas third baseman Mike Stanley's second key throwing error of the game enabled the winning run to score in the bottom of the 13th inning as the Yankees edged out the Rangers in a game here Wednesday night.

Al Lachowicz, the seventh Texas pitcher, walked Andre Robertson to start the 13th, wild-pitched him to second and also walked Henry Cotto. Stanley then fielded Juan Espino's bunt but threw wildly back to third base, allowing Robertson to score.

The Yankees, who have a 3-1 exhibition record, tied the score with two runs in the eighth. Orestes Destrade walked and one out later Stanley threw wildly to first on Mike Fischlin's grounder, putting runners at second and third. Destrade scored on a wild pitch by Kenny Rogers and Phil Lombardi's sacrifice score tied the score 7-7.

Britt Burns, acquired from the Chicago White Sox over the winter, made his spring debut for the Yankees. He pitched two innings and allowed two hits, one of them a mammoth two-run homer by Texas rookie Pete Incaviglia.

Bob Shirley, Brian Fisher, Al Holland, Kelly Faulk and winner Bill Fulton blanked Texas over the last seven innings.

Tom Paciorek had two doubles and a single and drove in three runs for the Rangers, who are 3-2 in exhibition play.

Earlier in the day in Pompano Beach, Fla., another Ranger squad squared off against the Braves but lost 6-5. Omar Marino's two-out, two-run homer capped Atlanta's four-run ninth inning comeback.

The loss was the Rangers' first of the spring against three victories.

Midland College Chaparral Tony Wright (54) has his shot blocked by San Jacinto's Ledell Eackles (33) in Wednesday's 107-92 Chap loss in a Nationl Junior College elimination game in Fort Worth.

CHAPS

In addition to No. 3 MC, No. 1 Delgado, La., and No. 4 Moberly, Mo., ranked No. 1 much of the year, also will be at home when nationals tip off next week.

SAN JACINTO threatened to blow MC out of the tub early in the second half, widening the seven-point intermission lead to 68-51 five minutes into the second half. And with three starters carrying four fouls and Derrick Lewis cooling his heels on the bench with three personals, the Chaps not only were out of it, but playing in handcuffs.

However, Grace's swisher from the corner and three-point play revived the Chaps who trimmed the SJ lead to 74-66 with 11:47 left and there was still hope.

But the Chaps couldn't keep the Ravens off the free throw line and never could come any closer. Mookie Blaylock, MC's second leading scorer with 21, contributed three baskets during the run and Tony Wright came up with some big defensive plays to ignite fast downcourt strikes.

"In the two games I saw Midland play, they won because they controlled the game's tempo with their changing defenses. Tonight I think we handled their changing defense well and controlled the game's tempo with our defense."

Arrow went on, "Midland College is one of the best we played all year. I think our series with Lon Morris prepared us for Midland. They play similar style games. And I think the Midland game was the kind of game we need to prepare us for nationals."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣

Let's take a look at your skill as a declarer. Cover the East and West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would play three clubs after West starts by drawing three rounds of trumps and then shifts to a heart.

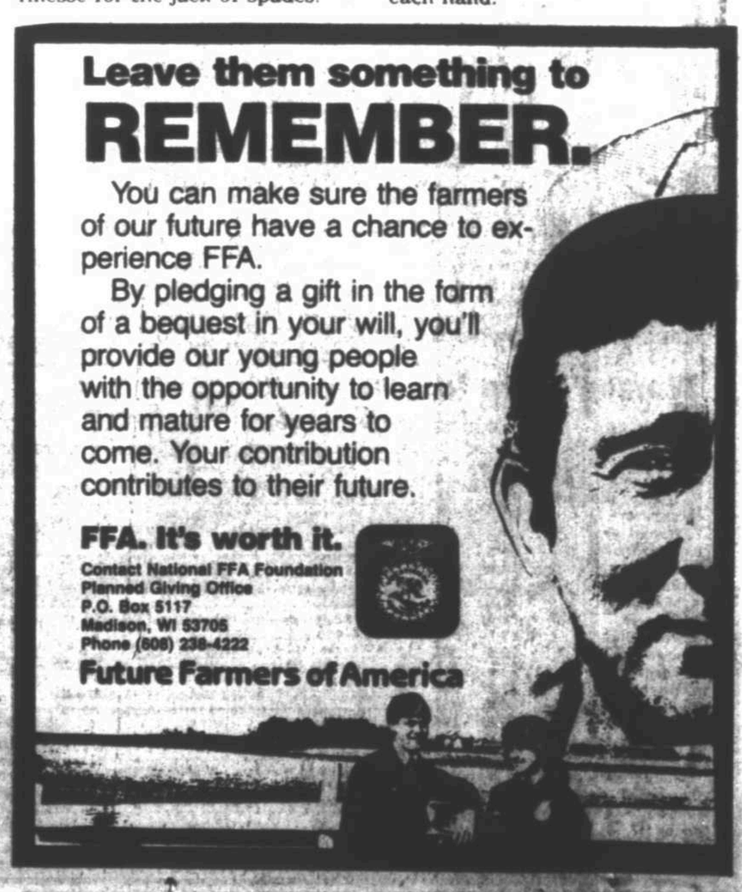

First, consider yourself lucky the opponents did not enter the auction. As the cards lie, they would have little trouble making at least nine tricks at a heart contract. The vulnerability, and perhaps an excess amount of caution on the part of East, can be held responsible.

The defenders start by drawing three rounds of trumps, on the last of which East signals with a high heart. West dutifully shifts to that suit, and all you have to do is make the rest of the tricks bar one. Obviously, you will still have to lose a trick to the ace of spades.

If diamonds break 3-2, you can claim your contract. But what if the suit splits 4-1? If you find out early enough, you can fall back on another chance.

Win the ace of hearts and cash the king and ace of diamonds. If both defenders follow, it is all over. As the cards lie, however, East shows out on the second diamond. Now your best chance is to finesse for the jack of spades.

When a spade to the ten forces the ace, you are almost home. Ruff the heart return and cash the king-queen of spades. When both defenders follow, school is out. Ruff a spade in dummy, return to hand with the carefully preserved queen of diamonds and cash your high spade. That brings your total to nine tricks — three spades, one heart, three diamonds and a ruff in each hand.

Hudson estate files countersuit

Christian

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock Hudson's estate has filed a $2 million countersuit against the actor's male lover, claiming the man blackmailed Hudson out of $72,000 by threatening to expose his homosexuality.

The suit filed by Wallace Sheft, the estate's executor, also accused Marc Christian of selling sex for money while Hudson was out of the country and stealing $60,000 of Hudson's property.

After Hudson died of AIDS on Oct. 2, Christian filed a $14 million suit against the estate, claiming the actor might have given him the deadly disease.

In papers responding to the countersuit filed in Superior Court, Christian's lawyer, Marvin Mitchelson, said his client denied "each and every scurrilous and perjurious allegation."

Sheft's countersuit, filed Feb. 28, said that when Hudson tried to break off their love affair, Christian extorted from Hudson money, food, services and the use of his home by threatening to expose his homosexual life to the world.

The countersuit also seeks $2 million in punitive damages and the return of a lengthy list of personal items the executor claims Christian took, including 7,000 records, 200 films and tapes of motion pictures, extensive audio and video equipment and a needlepoint rug and pillow made by Hudson.

Christian denied in court papers filed March 7 that Hudson ever tried to break off with him and said he never extorted anything from the actor.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Pete Seeger, Gil Scott-Heron and folk singer Holly Near plan to appear during a 10-hour concert April 12 to raise money to fight apartheid in South Africa, officials say.

Scott-Heron

More than a dozen groups are expected to perform during the concert, and proceeds will go to South African Bishop Desmond Tutu's scholarship and refugee funds, to the Washington-based anti-apartheid lobby TransAfrica, and to the Afro-American Cultural Alliance here, said organizer Aashid Himons.

Himons, a member of a local reggae-blues fusion band, Afrikan Dreamland, began organizing the concert last November.

Scott-Heron, who wrote the protest song "Johannesburg," is waiting to sign a contract, said his agent, Bruce Nichols.

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson, rumored to be headed down the aisle this fall, were together for a surprise visit to the Royal Ballet but Andrew escorted actress Sophie Ward to the London premiere of her new movie.

Andrew, 26, showed up Wednesday night with Miss Ward, who plays the girlfriend of young Sherlock Holmes in Steven Spielberg's $15 million movie of the same name. The premiere was a benefit for disabled servicemen.

On Tuesday night, the second son of Queen Elizabeth II and Miss Ferguson, 26, made a surprise appearance at Covent Garden for the ballet.

Buckingham Palace said the Tuesday night appearance was "a private engagement," while the premiere was "an official one."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oprah Winfrey, the Chicago TV talk show host who won an Oscar nomination for her role in "The Color Purple," will be syndicated to more than 110 TV stations in September, a spokeswoman says.

The "Oprah Winfrey Show," featuring guests ranging from entertainers to authors and professionals, is shown live in Chicago starting at 9 a.m., Mowani Carter, a spokeswoman for originating WLS-TV in Chicago, said Wednesday.

Ms. Winfrey, 32, was born in Kosciusko, Miss., and attended schools in Milwaukee and Nashville, Tenn., before landing her first job as a radio reporter on Nashville's WVOL, Ms. Carter said by telephone.

Steven Spielberg picked Ms. Winfrey in her first motion picture role in "The Color Purple," and she was nominated as best supporting actress.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationally televised benefit by many of the nation's top comedians to raise money to provide medical care for the homeless won't cure the problem, but it will be a first step, says comic Robin Williams.

Williams, Oscar-nominated actress and comic Whoopi Goldberg and comedian Billy Crystal joined Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., at a news conference at the Capitol on Wednesday to promote the March 29 event.

The "Comic Relief" benefit is scheduled for the Universal Amphitheater in Los Angeles and will be broadcast on the pay TV service Home Box Office.

Ms. Goldberg, nominated for an Oscar for her role in the "The Color Purple," said that as a welfare mother two years ago, she had to depend on friends for shelter.

"I want to cover my back in case I need help. It's hands across the street, boys and girls. It could be me tomorrow. It could be you tomorrow. It could be Mr. R." she said, referring to President Reagan.

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — Former Miami Dolphins running back Eugene "Mercury" Morris, who spent three years in prison on a cocaine conviction, helped kick off an anti-drug campaign by urging a group of high school students to avoid the habit that landed him in jail.

Morris

"These particular types of rallies are indicative that we all care about each other.... Education is key and knowledge is key," Morris, a three-time Super Bowl star who had a 20-year sentence, said Wednesday at South Dade High School. He was granted a new trial last week by the Florida Supreme Court.

The anti-drug campaign was planned by residents and businessmen tired of the massive influx of narcotics into Dade County, the drug trade's U.S. gateway from Latin America. The cheap and abundant supply of narcotics in the Miami area should disappear if there are no buyers, say campaign organizers.

"It's very easy to chart one's demise when you're involved in this destruction. I was involved in it," said Morris, 39. "Now I'm able, through information, to pass my knowledge to you.

"This problem is not unsolvable. You have the power to overcome everything and so do I."

NEW YORK (LAT — Sonny Terry, a country blues singer who, along with Pete Seeger, Josh White and Leadbelly, was instrumental in the folk revival in the 1940s and 1950s and later teamed up with fellow bluesman Brownie McGhee, died Tuesday at Winthrop-University Hospital of Mineola. He was 74.

Terry, who lived in Hollis, Queens, has been hospitalized since Feb. 26, a hospital spokesperson said Wednesday. She had no details about his illness.

Terry, whose given name was Teddell Saunders Terry, was blind as a result of a childhood accident. He was born in Greensboro, Ga., and grew up in North Carolina, where he honed his moving, vocal blues style on the streets and playing in local medicine shows.

He is survived by his wife, Emma Terry.

OPEC will meet to deal with oil glut, infighting

Members face possibility their cartel may have been wrecked

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

PARIS — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will meet in Geneva this weekend to face up to the possibility that the market forces its members have helped to unleash have wrecked their cartel.

As oil prices plunge toward $10 a barrel — and some wells begin to shut down in California and Texas — what can OPEC's 13 members do to push prices back up and restore order in the market? And if OPEC cannot agree on any coherent action that will influence the market, what future does the cartel have?

In the view of a high official at the International Energy Agency in Paris, the "oil directorate" of the major industrial nations, OPEC's future is not bright.

"It is theoretically possible," he said, "that a clear and determined decision by OPEC to cut its collective production, say, to 14 or 15 million barrels per day and then stick to it would start the price of oil back up to the $20 price range in the next few months.

"But we know that this is simply not going to happen. There is too much oil sloshing around in the world, and OPEC members were notoriously undisciplined about production quotas even when they were in the driver's seat two years ago. They will go on scrambling among themselves for markets and cut prices, and it could be anywhere from two to five years before the supply-demand ratio closes and prices return to the $20 level."

If, as seems apparent, OPEC is neither ready nor able to take action to cut the world oil supply, it will have to wait for market forces to take effect — for lower-priced oil to force the closure of marginal or high-priced production, such as the wells in California and Texas that produce small amounts at a cost of up to $15 per barrel. But it will be some time before this has an effect on the market.

In the meantime, while OPEC is caught up in infighting over how to regain its predominance in the market, the consuming nations of the world are in an upbeat mood, with glowing forecasts of the benefits of lower oil prices spreading into economic recovery.

There has never been any great unity among OPEC's members. The differences were easy to bury 10 years ago, when the 13 members were providing more than half of the world's oil and OPEC could fix prices because demand was high and supply was low. But today the OPEC countries account for less than 30 percent of world production, and for the past two years OPEC has been unable to exercise any firm control on its members in terms of pricing or production.

Now, with supplies readily available and a free market dictating prices, OPEC is breaking up into factional groupings, each trying to corner a share of the market.

At the center is the Persian Gulf bloc, led by Saudi Arabia and including Kuwait, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Iraq, with non-OPEC members Egypt, Oman and Bahrain cooperating on the fringes.

Collectively, this OPEC inner circle has the largest oil reserves in the world and, with the exception of Egypt, small populations to worry about. The gulf states can adjust their production up or down with minimal domestic effect.

Opposed to the gulf moderates and conservatives are the "revolutionaries," the hard-line states of Libya, Algeria and Iran. These are the states that consistently have refused to adopt price reductions or to comply with production quotas, and they helped bring about the supply glut.

In Latin America, there are OPEC members Venezuela and Ecuador; Mexico, a non-member, is moving toward cooperation with them. In Africa, Nigeria and Gabon are OPEC members; both have large populations and large problems that are totally at odds with the situation in the gulf area. Indonesia is the sole OPEC member in the Pacific, and its resources are nearly depleted.

Even if the oil market were tight, with supplies limited and prices on the rise, it would be difficult for OPEC to work out any coherent market strategy to cover the disparate political and economic interests of its 13 members.

In the weeks leading up to the Geneva meeting, the tendency of OPEC to break up into factional groups has been accelerating. Venezuela has been meeting with Mexico; the "revolutionaries" have met separately, and Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aghazadeh has proposed that OPEC suspend all production for two weeks a month until the market turns around. This suggestion has not been well received by other OPEC members.

Saudi Arabian's oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, appears to be developing within the Gulf Cooperation Council a long-term strategy aimed at bringing about market stability with higher prices.

There is no sign yet that Saudi Arabia is ready to lead a substantial cut in OPEC production. The Saudis seem prepared to go on pumping oil until low prices and a production glut take their toll and production in general begins to slow down.

Two-stick Popsicle to lose a stick

ENGLEWOOD, N.J. (AP) — The two-stick Popsicle, created during the Depression so that slurpers could share with a friend, will be mostly phased out to please mothers who think the big treats are too messy, its maker says. The change applies to Popsicles sold in supermarkets in boxes of 12, which make up 80 percent of sales, said Popsicle Industries' marketing vice president Paul Kadin.

Twin-stick Popsicles still will be sold individually at convenience stores, amusement parks and sidewalk pushcarts, he added.

The smaller size is "more in keeping with the amount and shape mothers want to give to their kids," Kadin said.

"The mothers, who are the primary purchasers, have been very dissatisfied with the inconvenience and messiness of the twin-stick size," he said, citing marketing studies conducted in Birmingham, Ala.; San Antonio, Texas; and Phoenix, Ariz.

The new, bullet-shaped Popsicles will weigh 1¾ ounces compared with the twin-stick size that is 2⅛ to 3 ounces, depending on the dairy that produces it for the company, Kadin explained.

The new popsicle will be shipped to supermarkets in April by the company, a division of Sara Lee Corp. of Chicago. It will contain vitamin C and a higher level of flavoring, Kadin said, a recipe that also will be used in the old-style popsicles made after then.

The new Popsicles will sell for about 9 cents above the current $1.50 price for 12, because of inflation and the recipe changes, he said. The company makes more than 1.1 billion cold treats a year, but does not disclose how many are Popsicles.

When Popsicle Industries opened its doors 63 years ago, it offered a one-stick treat.

The two-stick variety emerged during the Depression when the company thought it could win over customers by selling the treat for a nickel and saying it could be split with a friend, Kadin said.

Popsicle Industries, Inc. announced that it will sell only one-stick ice pops in supermarkets while offering the two-stick variety singly at convenience stores and amusement parks. Joanna Budge shows off the different popsicles.

Phillips sells carbon plant to Fort Worth company

BORGER (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. has sold its Philblack carbon plant to a Fort Worth-based company for an undisloced amount as part of Phillips' debt reduction plan, officials said.

Company officials, which announced the sale Wednesday, also revealed a plan that could result in workforce cutbacks.

Phillips spokesmen in Borger and Bartlesville, Okla., said the sale and possible layoffs are not related. They blamed the possible layoffs on the depressed oil industry.

"In the past three months, we've seen a dramatic drop in crude oil prices. In addition, prices are down for another one of our chief products, natural gas," Glenn Cox, president of Phillips Petroleum, wrote in a letter to employees.

"The most recent step we've taken to cope with these new conditions is to trim some $400 million from our capital spending budget and additional adjustments are likely."

Art Austin, a Phillips spokesman, told the Borger News-Herald details of layoffs have not been worked out. Each operation is analyzing itself to see how many employees are needed at each location. Specific plans will be released in April, he said.

The Philblack plant, established in 1943, was sold to the Sid Richardson Carbon and Gasoline Co., a subsidiary of Bass Enterprises in Fort Worth. Negotiations for the plant's sale have been going for several weeks. Phillips officials announced last week the plant was for sale.

Dan Harrison, Phillips spokesman, said officials from both the Richardson Carbon Co. and Phillips will begin meeting with Philblack employees Thursday to discuss the sale and staffing requirements. Philblack employs 110 people of 2,300 Phillips employees in Borger.

Harrison said the Fort Worth company plans to continue operations in Borger, but didn't know details of the company's plans. John Hogg, president of the Sid Richardson Carbon and Gasoline Co., couldn't be reached for comment.

Details will be finished in the next several weeks, Harrison said.

The plant has a capacity of 250 million pounds of carbon black annually. Carbon black is a reinforcing agent in tires and other rubber products.

Phillips operates a refinery, a plastics manufacturing company and another carbon black plant in Borger.

Phillips is the largest employer in Borger and Hutchinson County, located in the Panhandle, about 35 northeast of Amarillo.

Bank refuses to waive loan violation by Bell Petroleum

From Staff Reports

Midland-based Bell Petroleum Services has announced the postponement of its annual shareholder's meeting, and asked for an extension in filing its Form 10-K for the eight months ending Dec. 31, 1985.

According to Ed Runyan, company president, the move was precipitated by notification from First City National Bank of Midland, Bell's principal lender, that it would not waive Bell's violation of the net worth covenant of its loan agreement with the bank.

He explained that the net worth covenant is a provision in the loan agreement that a company must maintain a set net worth. He said the current troubles in the oil industry has caused the company to lose some value, and fall below the set net worth, thus violating the covenant.

He noted that the company has been in violation of the covenant for the last couple of years, but that the bank had waived the violation before now. First City's refusal to waive the violation now means the company is in technical default on its loans, Runyan stated.

"I'd like to emphasize that this caught us completely by surprise, because we are current on all interest and principal payments to the bank," Runyan said. "Right now it's in the bank's hands. We will try to negotiate with the bank and try to get them to waive the violation. They said they'd have to talk to their lawyers and get back to us." He stressed there have been no adverse events affecting the company to explain the bank's decision. According to Runyan, the bank has requested that Bell pledge additional assets as collateral for the loan, but has not accelerated or demanded repayment.

The annual meeting won't be rescheduled until negotiations with the bank have been completed, Runyan said.

HNG InterNorth cancels plans to build proposed Louisiana to Florida pipeline

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — HNG InterNorth has canceled its proposed Transgulf Pipeline, which would have carried oil from Louisiana to Florida, company officials said Wednesday.

The company also announced that it would seek to increase the capacity of the natural gas pipeline system of its Florida Gas Transmission Co. subsidiary.

Kenneth Lay, HNG InterNorth's chairman and chief executive officer, said in a statement that canceling the Transgulf project was an exceptionally difficult decision.

"I have been personally involved with the project as far back as the mid-1970s when I was with Florida Gas Co.," Lay said. "Nonetheless, in light of the significant delays in the project, we now face a decline in oil prices and uncertainty in economic conditions surrounding the project. We are left with no recourse but to cancel Transgulf at this time."

Transgulf was proposed about 12 years ago, HNG InterNorth spokesman Randal Blauvelt said. It would have carried light petroleum products such as gasoline and jet fuel from Baton Rouge, La., to the Florida peninsula.

HNG InterNorth said it would seek the proper regulatory approval to expand the Florida Gas Transmission pipeline, which moves natural gas from the Gulf of Mexico off Texas and Louisiana to southern Florida. Blauvelt said the system's current capacity is 725 million cubic feet per day.

Lay said scrapping Transgulf was part of HNG InterNorth's effort to reduce capital expenditures. The company has cut its 1986 capital expenditures budget to about $400 million from $600 million, he said.

Transgulf represented about $90 million of the $200 million reduction, the company said.

"It is our firm belief that our corporation's assets, in these particularly difficult times, should be expended in those areas where we see the greatest return to our shareholders and benefit to our customers," Lay said.

Houston Natural Gas acquired Florida Gas Transmission in December 1984. In July 1985, Houston Natural Gas and InterNorth Inc. merged to form HNG InterNorth. The company is based in Omaha with major subsidiary offices in Houston.

Exxon cuts 1986 budget by $2.8 billion

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the world's biggest oil company, said today it will cut 1986 capital and exploration spending by about $2.8 billion compared with 1985 because of the traumatic plunge in crude oil prices.

The reduction from the $10.8 billion spent last year to approximately $8 billion planned for this year reflects the intense pressure U.S. oil companies face because of the depressed market, which has roughly halved the price of a 42-gallon barrel in the last five months to about $15.

"The 1986 spending plans for all segments of Exxon's worldwide operations have been reduced as a result of a recent reappraisal," the company said in a statement released by its New York headquarters.

The statement said expenditures for oil and gas exploration and production, which totaled $7.6 billion in 1985, will be reduced by about 26 percent this year to approximately $5.6 billion, while spending in petroleum refining and marketing is estimated to total $1.5 billion, or 21 percent below that of 1985.

"These reductions are largely in response to the sharp decrease in crude oil prices and a re-examination of our strategies in light of today's business environment to ensure Exxon retains its strong financial standing and has the flexibility and resources to pursue attractive opportunities," Exxon Chairman C.C. Garvin Jr. said in the statement, which gave no further elaboration.

The company initially had intended to spend about $10 billion on 1986 capital and exploration before revising its plans, Exxon spokeswoman Juliet McGhie told The Associated Press by telephone.

Exxon's move came amid uncertainty over what direction oil prices will take in the near future.

Rich OPEC nations led by Saudi Arabia have been flooding the world with oil in recent months to retain their share of the market, which has been increasingly eroded because of competition from non-OPEC producers such as Britain, Norway and Mexico.

Exxon is one of several major U.S. oil companies that have slashed capital and exploration budgets for this year, raising major questions about the industry's ability to find untapped supplies if shortages occur in the future.

While the plunge in crude prices has been welcomed as a benefit to the world economy because it reduces inflation, some analysts have expressed fears that the United States and other industrialized oil importers may allow themselves to become dangerously dependent on foreign supplies.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

No progress reported in settling TWA strike

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal mediator says three hours of negotiations between Trans World Airlines and its flight attendants union made no progress toward settling the attendants' strike.

Following Wednesday's talks, the first since bargaining stopped Friday at the start of the walkout, no new negotiations were scheduled.

Victoria Frankovich, president of the 5,700-member Independent Federation of Flight Attendants, blamed the impasse on the absence of TWA Chairman Carl Icahn from the negotiations.

Trade deficit reaches $124.3 billion in 1985

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department says the U.S. trade deficit hit an all-time high of $124.3 billion during 1985, largely because of a slump in farm exports and a sharp gain in auto imports.

The government reported Wednesday that the 1985 deficit was 8.9 percent bigger than the previous year, as imports edged higher while exports dropped by 3 percent.

Western Union announces restructuring plan

UPPER SADDLE RIVER, N.J. (AP) — Western Union Corp. has unveiled a major financial restructuring plan aimed at ending the company's severe cash squeeze and a three-year streak of losses.

Robert S. Leventhal, Western Union's chairman and chief executive, said the plan includes an offer to exchange new debt securities and common stock for almost all the corporation's outstanding debentures and notes.

Newspaper advertising revenues rise 7 percent

NEW YORK (AP) — Spending on newspaper advertising rose an estimated 7 percent to $88.17 billion in 1985 after a 14.3 percent rise the previous year, according the Newspaper Advertising Bureau.

The group said Wednesday that newspapers remained the biggest media generator of ad revenue with commercial television in second place at just under $20 billion.

Mesa declares cash distribution

AMARILLO (SWN) T. Boone Pickens, Jr., general partner of Mesa Limited Partnership, announced that the partnership has declared a cash distribution of $.50 per unit for the first quarter of 1986. The distribution will be paid on May 15, 1986, to unitholders of record as of March 31. Pickens also stated that the partnership intends to make a cash distribution of $.50 per unit for the second quarter of 1986.

In another development, the Kansas Corporation Commission indicated on Tuesday, March 11, its intention to approve a four-year phased program of infill drilling within the Hugoton Field of Southwest Kansas. The infill program outlined by the commission would allow producers to drill a second well on each 640-acre spacing unit, beginning January 1, 1987. During each calendar year, producers would be permitted to drill up to 25 percent of the total number of infill wells for which they qualify. A final order containing specific infill rules and regulations is expected to be issued by the commission in the near future.

Panhandle Eastern adopts stockholder protection plan

HOUSTON (SWN) Panhandle Eastern Corp., a diversified energy company, announced that its Board of Directors has adopted a stockholder rights plan as an added protection against an inequitable tender offer.

Robert D. Hunsucker, President and Chief Executive Officer said:

"The plan approved today does not intend to and would not prevent a takeover but it should encourage anyone with such an objective to negotiate with the Board. However, in light of recent mergers and acquisitions in our industry, our Board of Directors has concluded that it is essential to assure stockholders that all will be treated fairly in the event an unsolicited effort is made to acquire the Company. This action was not taken in response to any specific takeover attempt."

To implement the Plan, the Board declared a special dividend distribution of one participating preferred stock purchase Right for each outstanding share of the Company's common stock. The dividend distribution will apply to stockholders of record on March 21, 1986. The Rights will expire on the later of March 1, 1996, or the third anniversary of the date on which the Rights become initially exercisable.

The Rights are not taxable to stockholders, will not result in any dilution and stockholders need to take no action at this time. Prior to the time the Rights become exercisable, the Rights will be automatically attached to the common stock and will not be separately traded on securities markets.

Under the Plan, the Rights will be exercisable only after a third party acquires 20 percent or more of the common stock, or announces a tender or exchange offer for 30 percent or more of the stock. Thereafter, each Right will entitle the holder to purchase one one-hundredth of a share of a new series of preferred stock for $125.

After the Rights become exercisable, if certain transactions or events occur and the Rights have not expired, been redeemed or exercised to purchase preferred stock, each Right will entitle its holder to purchase for $125 certain publicly traded securities worth $250.

The Company will be entitled to redeem the Rights during or before a "window period" ending 10 days after a public announcement that a person or group has acquired 20 percent or more of the Company's common stock.

In such event, the redemption price will be $.05 per Right. After such date, the Rights may be redeemed only if, within two years, the holders of a majority of the shares of the Company's common stock, not beneficially owned by a 20-percent holder, approve the acquisition of the Company by someone other than a 20-percent holder.

In prior actions dealing with takeovers, the stockholders approved in 1983 two amendments to the Articles of Incorporation. One provision protects against "two-tier" offers by requiring an 80-percent majority vote on any business transaction involving a change in control. The other 1983 amendment requires that stockholder action can only be taken at a properly called meeting of stockholders.

HNG/InterNorth will seek approval to expand pipeline

HNG/InterNorth said it would seek the proper regulatory approval to expand the Florida Gas Transmission pipeline, which moves natural gas from the Gulf of Mexico off Texas and Louisiana to southern Florida. Blauvelt said the system's current capacity is 725 million cubic feet per day.

Lay said scrapping Transgulf was part of HNG InterNorth's effort to reduce capital expenditures. The company has cut its 1986 capital expenditures budget to about $400 million from $600 million, he said.

Transgulf represented about $90 million of the $200 million reduction, the company said.

"It is our firm belief that our corporation's assets, in these particularly difficult times, should be expended in those areas where we see the greatest return to our shareholders and benefit to our customers," Lay said.

Houston Natural Gas acquired Florida Gas Transmission in December 1984. In July 1985, Houston Natural Gas and InterNorth Inc. merged to form HNG InterNorth. The company is based in Omaha with major subsidiary offices in Houston.

Stockholders will meet April 10 to consider changing the company's name to Enron Corp.

The company earlier had proposed the name Enteron Corp., but the proposal was dropped. A dictionary definition of 'enteron' is the alimentary canal, a tubular passage that is part of the digestive system.

Blauvelt said last week when Enron was proposed that Enteron was scratched by the HNG InterNorth board because of the word's "biological connotation."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

One-time exclusion will only help with principal residence

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We own a four-apartment building and live in one of the units. We are both retired, I being 66, my wife 58. We have bought a retirement home in another state.

If we sell the four-apartment building, can we use the once-in-a-lifetime deal to exclude tax on $125,000 of the profit from the sale?

Doyle

A. Unless that's a very posh little apartment building, it's most unlikely you'll be able to duck that much tax. Because you're past 55 and assuming you have owned the building and lived in your apartment for three of the five years before the sale, you can use the once-in-a-lifetime exclusion.

However, you can exclude and not pay federal income tax only on up to $125,000 of the profit from the sale of your "principal residence" — the apartment unit in which you lived.

Let's say you have a $200,000 profit on the sale of that building. You have to apportion that profit among your apartment unit and the rest of the building.

In this example, if the profit apportioned to your apartment unit works out as $50,000, you can exclude that. But you'll be required to report the other $150,000 profit as a capital gain on your income tax return.

Apportioning the profit is not as simple a thing as dividing the total profit by four, as in this example. It's complicated by how much of the building is "common space" used by all residents. I urge you to turn that chore over to a good accountant, whose fee could be more than offset by tax savings.

Q. We plan to sell our home this year and buy another home. We expect to realize a profit of approximately $30,000 on the sale of our present home. Is there any way we can shelter that profit from tax?

A. Sure. When you buy a principal residence within two years before or after the sale of your former principal residence, you postpone tax on all or part of the sale's profit.

If the purchase price of your new home is more than the sale price of your present home, you defer tax on the profit from that sale and reduce the "basis" of your new home by the amount of the deferred profit. Here's a quick example. If you sell your present home for $100,000 and buy a new home for $150,000, you won't pay tax on your $30,000 profit. The basis of your new home will be $120,000 — the $150,000 purchase price, minus the $30,000 on which you postpone tax.

Things get even more complex, when you buy a new home at a lower price than the selling price of your old home. In that case, you pay capital gain tax on the lesser of the profit from the sale of the old home or the amount by which the adjusted sale price exceeds the purchase price of the new home. If it's the latter, you postpone tax on the rest of the profit and reduce the basis of your new home by that amount.

You are required to postpone tax every time you sell your old home and buy a new one within the two years before or after the sale. You do it by filing Form 2119 with your federal income tax return.

Q. The profit on the sale of a person's home is the difference between the net proceeds from the sale and the principal residence's "basis," minus "fixing up" expenses for work done within 90 days before the contract for sale is signed and paid for within 30 days after the sale.

You have explained that the costs of all additions and improvements — but not repairs and maintenance — increase the home's basis. Can the price of tools, such as an electric bench saw for carpentry, and a reasonable price for do-it-yourself labor be included in the home's basis?

A. If the bench saw is left at the house, a case can be made that it was an addition to the basis. But you can't tack on any price for your own labor. The basis for additions and improvements increases only by money paid. The IRS gives no allowance for "sweat equity."

Super Plastics

Stronger than steel. Lighter than aluminum. Able to leap tall markets at a single bound. Look, it's popping up everywhere. It's super plastic!

These special plastics are known as advanced composities. Theya re plastics reinforced with glass, carbon or aramid fibers to make them especially strong — strong enough to replace metals in many cases. In fact, they're coming to be known as synthetic metals.

Advanced composites are still in early commercial states. But down the road, they are expected to turn up in a lot of places:

- Within the next ten years, the aerospace industry is looking at advanced composites to make up about 60 percent of both military and commercial aircraft.
- The U.S. Army is looking at advanced composites for military vehicles, lightweight bridges, ballistic armor, rocket launchers and laser range-finder housings.
- Car makers are looking at advanced composites for auto engine parts, including pistons, drive shafts and leaf springs.
- The oil industry is looking at advanced composites for "downhole" equipment like subsurface meters, fittings and valves.

Analyzing income-producing property is vital to successful investment according to professors at Texas A&M.

Analyzing Property

The expected rate of return is vital to successful investment in income-producing properties, but knowing exactly how to analyze a property may confuse many buyers.

An overall analysis of the property is the first step. The location and quality in relation to similar properties should be evaluated along with multiple-unit properties is the break-even occupancy ratio.

OPEC

"Eventually, there will be a common interest among the producers, the oil companies and the governments of the consuming countries to see the oil market stabilize once again at a higher price, probably in the $20-per-barrel range," an analyst with the International Energy Agency said. "There is the danger that a low oil price which goes on too long could lead to an excessive upsurge of consumption. This could result in the kind of oil scarcity that the industrialized world had to cope with in the 1970s.

"And with low prices there would be neither the investment nor the incentive to develop new production capacities in the world. So, eventually, everybody is going to want to see the oil price recovered to a more sensible economic level. But it looks as if it is going to take time to achieve."

In an effort to speed the return to a more or less controlled market, the OPEC countries have been all but pleading for cooperation with the non-OPEC producers. They have invited non-members to Geneva for informal talks on March 18, after their own meeting is over. But, so far, only Mexico, Egypt, Oman, Bahrain and possibly Brazil are likely to show up. And these countries will not add much weight even if OPEC's members are able to agree on what they should do.

The big non-OPEC production is in the North Sea, where Britain and Norway between them pump almost as much oil as Saudi Arabia. Norway was polite enough to send its oil minister to Geneva last month for informal talks with the OPEC president, Venezuelan Oil Minister Arturo Hernandez Grisanti. But that is the extent of Norwegian readiness to line up with OPEC, and Britain, under Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, is far from even hinting at any talks.

Britain's minister of state for energy, Alick Buchanan-Smith, even canceled plans to attend a mid-February oil seminar of industrialists and government officials in Norway because a representative of OPEC would also be present. Thatcher is committed to free markets, and OPEC is not going to get any help from Britain in putting the cork back in the production bottle.

North Sea crude can probably stand the price competition for at least a few years. Although development costs for rigs, platforms and drilling in the North Sea are high, when the oil begins to flow it comes out at less than $5 a barrel. Saudi costs are probably less than $3 a barrel.

Therefore, although the decline in oil revenue from the North Sea is hurting the British treasury, it is not going to force the oil companies to close down or go broke. And oil makes up only about 5 percent of Britain's gross national product. Norway, with a much smaller economic base, has been hit much harder by the price fall.

Texas Instruments claims nine companies violating TI patents

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. International Trade Commission will investigate charges that nine Japanese and South Korean companies are violating patents held by Dallas-based Texas Instruments Inc.

TI has charged that eight Japanese companies and a Korean company have infringed on 10 TI patents covering design and manufacturing processes of dynamic random-access semiconductors, used in computer memories.

TI filed a patent infringement lawsuit Jan. 24 in federal district court in Dallas against Japanese semiconductor makers Fujitsu, Hitachi, Oki, Toshiba, Matsushita, NEC, Mitsubitshi and Sharp, and Korean manufacturer Samsung. TI media relations director Stan Victor said today.

The company filed a complaint with the trade commission Feb. 7, asking the commission to investigate the Japanese companies under Section 337 of the Tariff Act of 1930, which protects U.S. companies from foreign competitors who infring on U.S. "intellectual property" — patents, trademarks and copyrights.

The six-member commission voted unanimously Monday to start a year-long investigation of the companies, the Dallas Times Herald and Dallas Morning News reported today.

"It would be virtually impossible to build a dynamic RAM without infringing on one of these patents. We invested millions of dollars in research and development to make these patents possible," Victor said today.

He said the company sued to "protect our intellectual property" and to get more money from the foreign companies through licensing agreements. "To a degree, the real issue is the value of the intellectual property," he said.

Eagle grounding leaves Brownwood with no air service

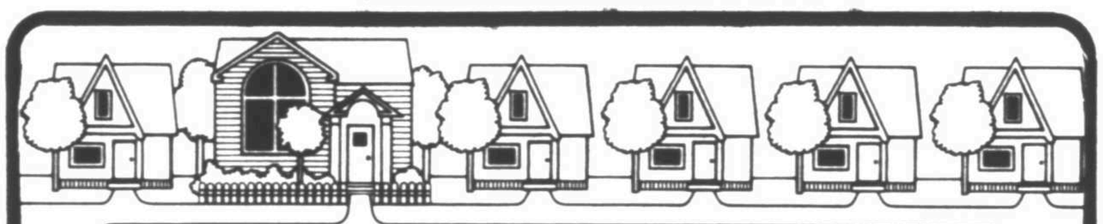

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) — Brownwood is without commercial air service after its only airline lost an appeal of a Federal Aviation Administration license revocation.

Administrative law judge Thomas Reilly of the National Transportation Safety Board upheld Monday the FAA's revocation of Eagle Airline's air taxi certificate. The FAA revoked the certificate Feb. 21, citing violations of safety regulations. The airline was grounded immediately.

FAA public affairs specialist Mitch Barker of Fort Worth said the airline has two remaining appeals.

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Mayoral candidate Barbara Harris speaks at a candidate forum while opponent Carroll Thomas waits his turn. The forum was sponsored Wednesday by the Midland County Republican Women's Club at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland is entering a tough economic period and finding solutions to the city's and county's problems will require strong leadership, according to candidates who spoke Wednesday to the Midland County Republican Women's club.

To candidates seeking the county judgeship or county commissioners' seats, the jail was the main issue cited. For the City Council and mayoral candidates, the issue was how to keep the city running as revenues fall along with the price of oil.

City Council, Midland County Hospital District board and Midland College board members will be elected April 4; county candidates will be elected in Republican and Democratic primaries May 3.

In the mayor's race are Barbara Harris, a former Midland teacher; Carroll Thomas, a former councilman; and Steve Davidson, councilman from District 3.

Midland was compared to a living organism by Ms. Harris, who said that it "needs new blood or it will die."

IN HER CAMPAIGN, she is seeking a multi-purpose center for the southeast side — similar to the Dr. Martin Luther King Center in Dallas; a detention center for youths under the age of 18; and marked license plates for all council members.

"I get somewhat emotional when I think of the economy and the many segments of the community that we neglect. I come from the poor community and I know how they're affected" by the dropping oil prices, Ms. Harris said.

Davidson said a mayor has to be someone who has the desire to serve, to be accessible and to have a good track record "of dealing with all diverse elements of the city."

Midland isn't a town any longer; it is a city, said Davidson. With the question of revenues, the council has "taken several steps to ensure more efficiency," he said.

Among his issues are continuation of the city's capital improvement projects, diversification of industry, quality of life and maximizing the city's productivity of the work force.

Thomas, an independent geologist, said he believes Midland's future is bright. "We have significant reserves of oil and gas here, although we don't have control over the price. In the interim we must tighten our belts and learn to live with the revenues we have."

AMONG HIS issues are calling for a freeze on the city budget, city taxes and city employees.

Lawrence Connolly and Kelly Fish are running for the District 3 City Council seat being vacated by Bart Hotchkiss. Robert Rendall is unopposed for the District 4 seat being left open by Davidson.

Connolly said he has no political ambitions but to serve on the City Council, and noted five years ago he lead a neighborhood group that opposed making Michigan and Louisiana one-way streets. He also has opposed linking Garfield Street to Andrews Highway.

In campaigning for this position, Connolly said he has learned the major issue is that city government "should reflect the conservative spending that we've been doing lately, both in business and personally."

He suggested the council should establish priorities and ensure that its departments are held accountable for their expenditures, and the budget should be studied line by line during the July review. "I believe the new budget that will be presented to the Council in July should reflect the drop in oil prices and the prospect of their staying below $15 (a barrel) for some time," he said.

Fish, an independent oilman, said he understands the pressures of the oil industry. "We've seen a dramatic drop in the price of oil and we should look at how does that relate to the revenues the city receives and to the services it provides," he said. "It presents challenges and the answers will not be easy. The decisions will be difficult."

OPPONENTS ON the Republican ticket for county judge are incumbent Bill Ahders and Matthew Blair.

Ahders said the position requires someone who has a knowledge of county government. During the years he has served, the county has worked with the City Council to iron out problems and he would like to see that cooperation continue.

On the jail issue — whether to build a new one and where or to find other solutions to the facility that now is in violation of numerous Jail Commission standards — Ahders said he prefers a joint city-county jail that would save on duplication of costs for separate facilities.

Blair, who uses the motto of "It's time to get the job done," said a county judge is the chief executive officer who is responsible for spending taxpayers' money.

Nader predicts 'epic struggle' over insurance coverage

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader Wednesday warned of "an epic struggle" between the Texas insurance industry and a coalition of groups defending the legal rights of victims.

Nader blasted the state's liability insurance industry for what he called a manufactured crisis to "restrict the rights of injured people and increase the industry's profits."

He said the Texas Legislature will become a battleground where the insurance industry and the "panicked business community" will push hard for changes in the state's tort system. Nader said he will return to Texas to help defend victims' rights along with a coalition of consumer, labor and senior citizens' groups.

"What's at stake here is nothing less than the civil justice system" and the ability of injured parties "to sue wrongdoers who harm people because of hazardous chemicals, product defects and negligent practices," Nader said.

The "cynical" strategy of the insurance industry, Nader asserted, is to arbitrarily cancel businesses' coverage and then solicit their aid in changing state laws that govern victims' compensation.

"The businesses cry 'Why are you doing this?' and the industry says 'Because the courts and juries are going haywire, so if you want to relieve the paying business community, go to the Legislature and restrict victims' rights.'"

Nader called the attempt to change current law the most concerted attack on victims' rights in the last 30 years.

"The casualty insurance industry, because of its own financial mismanagement, is willing to sacrifice one of the pillars of our democracy, which is the rights of injured people," he said.

Nader said Texas is "the leading state in the development of personal injury law" because of the value it gives to human life and health. He predicted state legislators will be a primary target of the industry and its allies.

When asked if awards to plaintiffs were simply too high resulting in soaring premiums, Nader said there is no evidence that verdicts and settlements within the past 25 years "have done nothing but keep up with inflation and population growth."

He said the value of insurance companies' stock has steadily risen and remains a viable investment. "It's quite clear that Wall Street knows something about the casualty industry that the casualty industry doesn't want the rest of us to know."

Asked if he supports any reform of the Texas insurance industry, Nader said he would like to see repeal of any laws that prevent businesses or consumers from jointly buying liability insurance. The State Board of Insurance should also "beef up" its staff, which he said is currently "underpower and underwilled."

"If anything, we need to expand the rights of injured people, not to restrict them," Nader added. "The main agenda is insurance reform, not weakening the rights of injured people in any way."

As for the changes in Texas law, Nader said the insurance industry will "have a battle on their hands, and I think they're not only going to lose, but they're going to find themselves exposed to the most comprehensive insurance reform in their sordid history."

Utilities: Generic rate of return on equity won't measure efficiency

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Applying a standard rate of profit to Texas' investor-owned utilities will not help measure the efficiency of those companies, several electric and telephone utilities told the Public Utility Commission Wednesday.

A generic rate of return on equity will not help measure a utility's effectiveness, the companies claimed, because utilities operate under such diverse conditions.

Rate of return on equity is the measure of profit shareholders receive on their investment. Gov. Mark White asked the commission to consider adopting a generic, or standard, rate of return with which to judge all Texas utility companies.

After listening to several hours of testimony Wednesday, commissioners took the matter under advisement, thus delaying final action on the subject until a later date.

Jarrell Gibbs, treasurer with Texas Utilities Electric Co., the parent company of Texas Electric Service Co., said a generic return would not benefit the commission's regulation of utilities.

"You can compare companies, Gibbs said, "but you can't use return on equity as the only measure of risk because there are so many other factors that determine risk."

For example, he said, some utilities serve areas of rapid growth, while others serve a relatively stable number of customers. "Any time you have a major construction program, you have an added risk," Gibbs said, which means shareholders expect a higher rate of return on their investment.

Gulf States Utility Co. had submitted a written statement of its position on the issue, and also sent a representative to Austin to present oral testimony.

GSU spokesman Kim McMurray said the cost of administering a generic return would outweigh any savings that it might bring about. The PUC's current method of determining that rate is not excessive, he said.

"The rate of return is only one aspect of (a utility's) financial integrity," McMurray said. "There would still be several other financial issues that would have to be decided in a rate case."

If the commission decides to implement a standard rate of return, it should do it on an annual basis with quarterly or semi-annual adjustments, McMurray said.

Central Power & Light spokesman Larry Brewer conceded that rate of return on equity is "a primary measure of how well your stockholders are doing," but said the PUC should continue to examine utilities on an individual basis during rate cases.

PBRPC favors continuing training program for low-income youth

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A preliminary plan to continue the training of Permian Basin low-income youth was favorably reviewed Wednesday by the area's planning commission.

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission accepted a resolution approving a preliminary plan for the Summer Youth Program for Employment and Training. The program with a $649,510 budget is operated under the Job Training Partnership Act.

About 500 youth from the ages of 14 to 21 were employed through the agency last summer, said program planner Bob Cunningham. Youth who qualify for the low-income guidelines are trained in fields ranging from microprocessing to retail sales. Once employed they work for $3.35 per hour.

In other action, a $231,000 grant application to expand and upgrade Odessa College's KOCV's broadcasting studios was favorably approved by the commission. General manager John McCarroll said the grant originally asked for a translator in Big Spring. The request was withdrawn because the station may not be able to qualify for a license yet, McCarroll said. The station should begin broadcasting next week, he said.

The commission also passed favorable review on the following items:

- A $10,000 grant application from Big Spring to the Texas Department of Community Affairs for a planning grant under the Texas Community Development Program. The city must match the grant with $10,000 for a total project cost of $20,000.
- A grant application from Big Spring for the Retired Senior Volunteer Program. The application is requesting $26,000 from ACTION, $8,144 from the state to be matched with $6,889 in local funds. The total project cost is $41,033.
- A resolution authorizing the commission's executive director to submit the Maternal and Child Health Care Grant Application to the Texas Department of Health for funding.
- A resolution authorizing the commission's executive director to submit the Primary Health Care grant application to the Texas Department of Health for funding.

'Ira' undermining spirit of American work ethic

The spirit of the American work ethic has been undermined by Ira, who's both a gnome and an archangel.

Ira, the individual retirement account, and its ilk are supposed to do what Social Security apparently is failing short of doing: providing "adequate" income for folks in their retirement years. Adequate, I suppose, would be sufficient funds to allow a person to be financially independent within a frugal-spending framework. The life of a spendthrift soon is crashed.

Folks who shore up their storehouse with goods for leaner times demonstrate foresight and prudence. My grandfather, D. Todd, and Benjamin Franklin would commend them.

Society's consciousness of life-raft funds is heightened, as society ages and more and more folks reach their retirement years. Company retirement plans expand. Banks, stockbrokers and other financial institutions compete for investment funds and profits.

They compete by advertising, and advertisement is a powerful force. It gently bombards us with the fear that if you don't sock away those funds with Ira and the like, times definitely will get worse.

The inclination is to work toward retirement and not for the old ideals: work for work's sake, make the company a profit, do the best you can, take pride in your work, reap your rewards, and hope you have enough money to pay the bills, the mortgage and Ira.

Ira is a vexing gnome, a gremlin, who begs for your "set-aside" cash. Unless your cash flow is such that funding Ira is no great fuss and the stock market is your leisurely game, you are compelled to sacrifice some wiles for Ira. Ira, then, becomes a persistent gnome who says "don't just give 'til it hurts; give and hurt."

In addition to Ira, there are myriads of ways to invest your money: from buying gold, silver and real estate to putting your money in the stock market, enterprises and fly-by-night schemes. There's something exciting about taking a risk: It could make you poorer or richer. But if that's your game of the day, enjoy it.

But there are fears underneath all of this.

— The fear of economic insecurity, which is so pervasive.

— The fear of impending doom.

— The fear of taking a risk.

— The fear of living.

That's the big one.

When you reach 39 once again and haven't made any spectacular gains, your tendency is to reach for the panic button and let out a baleful woe. I've tried that, and you know what happens? Nothing. The clock of life just keeps ticking right along as if I weren't there at all. And for a moment, I become reflective. Youth is fleeting (or has fled almost without notice) and here am I planning on what I'm going to do when things get better in the days to come.

Well, it's the same old stanza. Today is yesterday's tomorrow.

And the message (when I'm willing to listen) from the Giver of Life is this: Reflect on His love and get busy doing good works this very day.

Ed Todd is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

Neighbors and police officers hold Willie Mae Paschal, left, back from the house where her mother Clemmie Paschal, 75, died Wednesday in an afternoon fire.

Girls rescued from fire, while their aunt perishes

TEXARKANA (AP) — Robert Harrison is a hero. But though he helped pull two children from a burning house, all he could think about afterwards was the 75-year-old woman he couldn't rescue.

"I got the little girl out, but I couldn't get that other lady. I tried. I tried," Harris said, choking on his words.

A space heater paramedics had warned the family about just three hours before was suspected of causing the fire that killed Clemmie Paschal in her home on Wednesday, fire chief George Chamblee said.

"She was lying on the floor," Harrison said. "The smoke got to me, and I stuck my head out to catch a breath and went back. But I couldn't get her. I hope I never have to see anything like that again."

Ashley Roberts, 3, and her sister, Brittaney, 5, were treated for minor burns to their arms at Wadley Regional Medical Center and released soon after, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Mrs. Paschal's nieces, whom she was watching for their mother, were pulled from the blaze by Harrison and Audrey Norwood.

"There is no doubt in my mind that those children owe their lives to those people, " Chamblee said. "It is rare these days that people will get involved in something."

March Voter Registration Month

From Staff Reports

March has been proclaimed Voter Registration Month by Gov. Mark White, and according to the secretary of state's office, it will be the largest voter registration drive in Texas history.

To help ensure the success of the statewide drive, the Southland Corporation's 1,000-plus 7-Eleven stores in Texas will be carrying voter registration cards during March.

Persons interested in registering to vote must be at least 18 years of age within 60 days of filling out the application, Texas residents and U.S. citizens.

Registered voters will have the opportunity to participate in state primary elections on May 3, and on April 5, many Texans will be able to participate in local elections.

While voter registration applications are accepted throughout the year, applicants must have submitted their cards to the county voter registrar's office at least 30 days before an election to be eligible to vote.

To assist voters in choosing candidates, the League of Women Voters publishes a voters' guide that contains non-partisan information on all candidates. To obtain a free pamphlet, visit a pulic library or call the local League office.

No comprehensive solution has been found to the jail problem, said Blair. "We have a job to do. There's a lack of leadership on the commissioners' court."

Seeking the Republican nomination to County Commissioner of Precinct 2 are incumbent C. Wallace Craig, Milton Rister and Guy McCrary.

Craig, who favors building a new jail east of the city on county land, also said it will be a hard job to live on today's tax rate during the current economic problems.

He also cited "the good things that have happened" during his tenure on the commission: a settlement with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in which the resulting funds went to build Centennial Branch library, establishment of a second county court-at-law position, work with the Junior League of Midland on a Teen Court, and agreement by the State Highway Commission for a drainage channel for southeast Midland County.

McCrary said the area is undergoing "very dramatic economic changes and we know the change is placing greater responsibility on local government."

NEW LEADERSHIP, he said, is needed to effect these changes. McCrary said issues include finding a solution to the jail problem and starting first with a long-range study, installing more efficient cost-conscious techniques and building better relations with other government authorities, such as the school district.

Rister, who lives at Greenwood, suggested the commissioners' court needs to find "new solutions to old problems." He cited the county roads, drainage, the jail and economic diversification as the major issues.

"The county needs leadership that will identify a problem and find a solution," he added.

Midland College board candidates at the luncheon included Steve Kiser and former MC President Al Langford.

Kiser said there are "tough times ahead and it requires some tough people who can make decisions." Langford said the college can expect to have less money from the state and local entities with which to work. "We'll have to go down to Austin and fight for our fair share. We'll need proven knowledgeable leadership," he said.

Other candidates included Margaret Purvis for MMH board of trustees; Dewey Lee for Midland County treasurer; Jim Fitz-Gerald, county court-at-law judge; Kent Sutton, justice of the peace, place 2, precinct 2; Barbara Culver, district judge; and Vivian Wood, district clerk;

When asked if the PUC should reward utilities for efficient management, Brewer said "yes," but not solely on the basis of a company's rate of return.

"I think that's something that has to be looked at on a utility-by-utility basis," he said, adding that the rate of return on equity should be determined by "perceived risk, which isn't necessarily related to efficiency or inefficiency."

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. official Jon Dee Lawrence agreed that utilities conduct their business under vastly different conditions. "A generic rate of return would be helpful if it avoided controversy," he said, "but I don't think it will."

Lawrence said potential investors consider a utility's efficiency, but termed it a "minimal issue, at least in the telephone industry."

"You've already got the statutory authority to change the rate of return," Lawrence told commissioners. "You don't need some number sitting out there to use as a test."

Assistant Public Counsel Goeffrey Gay, a state-paid attorney who represents residential and small commercial ratepayers at the PUC, said a standard rate of return would be "administratively burdensome" for the commission.

"The process of a generic return is, at best, redundant," Gay said, "and it could deplete the resources and energies of the commission and our office."

Gay said he doubts whether a standard rate of return would save time or make the regulatory process any more fair.

Man flees after allegedly assaulting Midland woman

From Staff Reports

A 28-year-old Midland woman was assaulted in a parking-structure stairwell Wednesday, but her attacker fled after she hit him with a bag of books and screamed for help, according to police reports.

The woman was walking up the stairs to the second level of the parking structure at 500 W. Indiana about 12:50 p.m. when she encountered a man who grabbed her on the buttocks and below her waist. According to police reports, she fell to her knees and began swinging a bag of books at the man while she screamed for help.

The suspect then fled the scene. He was described as a white man in his early 30s, standing about 5 feet 7 and weighing about 175 pounds, with light-brown hair. He was wearing a blue denim jacket, blue jeans and a dark-blue cap, reports said.

In other reports, Jan Tomlin, 3501 Seaboard, reported a Wednesday night auto burglary in which about $1,822 worth of property was stolen.

Among the items taken were a $1,500 coat, two Corvette T-tops worth a total of $500, a $27 pair of shoes, four dresses worth a total of $237, and a $68 Boy Scout uniform, police reports said. The burglary occurred while the vehicle was parked near 4701 N. Garfield.

Edward John Matchus Jr., 709 Sandalwood, reported the loss of a $250 tool box and assorted tools worth about $300 in a Wednesday theft.

The items were taken from his 1977 Chevrolet pickup while it was parked at Petroplex Acidizing on County Road 1305, according to Sheriff's Office reports. The theft occurred sometime between 5:30 and 6:30 p.m.

Teacher ignores labor pains for test

LINDALE (AP) — The state said public school teachers had to take a basic skills test, so who was Karen Grunert to argue.

Despite the presence of labor pains when she awoke Monday morning, the Lindale High School teacher went in to take the TECAT test.

Eight hours later, she had completed the exam and given birth to her third child, a 7-pound, 8-ounce boy.

Mrs. Grunert said from her hospital room Wednesday that she never considered postponing taking the exam.

"I wasn't that uncomfortable," she said. "Once I started taking the test, I didn't time the contractions or anything."

"The test was worse than the contractions," the teacher said.

Mrs. Grunert's husband, Assistant Superintendent Jim Grunert, was called away from his test to take her to the hospital around noon. He'll be allowed to take the test at a later date.

"I knew I was in labor when I got up that morning, but I didn't tell Jim because he had enough to worry about that day," Mrs. Grunert said.

Hospital officials said Wednesday both mother and child, Justin Bradford Grunert, are doing well.

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas man has been charged with capital murder in the death of his girlfriend's 2½-year-old daughter, whom he allegedly sexually assaulted, police say.

The child died Tuesday night from injuries suffered March 1 at her south Dallas home, investigators said. She died after her 25-year-old mother asked that she be removed from a respirator that had kept her alive for 11 days.

Ambers Standifer III, 17, who had been jailed since the incident, was charged late Tuesday with capital murder and was being held in lieu of $100,000 bond, authorities said.

An original charge of aggravated sexual assault had been changed March 3 to injury to a child and was upgraded to capital murder Tuesday night, child abuse investigator Paul Ronyak said Wednesday.

It is the first capital murder charge stemming from a child sexual abuse case since the department's child abuse division was founded in 1979, authorities said.

STATE

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A Texas killer who auctioned off seats for his scheduled execution Wednesday won an 11th-hour appeal thanks to a Sacramento attorney who once represented him more than eight years ago.

"It was a complete total fluke" by which former Sacramentan Roger Leroy DeGarmo's life was spared, attorney Charles F. Bloodgood said in an interview Wednesday.

"I'm sure he would have been executed if I hadn't intervened by happenstance," Bloodgood said.

Bloodgood said he was sitting down with a cigarette and cup of coffee one day last week when he spotted a Sacramento Union story about DeGarmo's planned execution.

Bloodgood recognized the unusual name as the same one of one of his earliest clients in 1977 whom he had represented in a worker's compensation claims case over a job-related severe head injury.

The story Bloodgood read described how the former California drifter was going to give a play-by-play commentary of his last moments as he was being administered lethal injections of sodium thiopental, Pavulon and potassium chloride.

Bloodgood immediately began tracking down DeGarmo's lawyer in Texas and in the process discovered two things:

DeGarmo's senior American Civil Liberties Union defense lawyer had given up hope of saving DeGarmo because of his client's wish to be executed.

In making its decision the jury never learned about DeGarmo's earlier brain damage.

Bloodgood said an ACLU lawyer, Rick Urben of Magnolia, Texas, teamed with him to raise the issue sufficiently to persuade a federal judge in Texas to grant a stay within hours of the state's first scheduled double execution in 35 years.

The other inmate, Charles Bass, 29, kept his date with the executioner in Huntsville, becoming the nation's 56th execution since 1976 and the second of the year. He killed a Houston City marshal in 1979.

DeGarmo, 31, was supposed to die for fatally shooting Kimberly Ann Stricker, 20, in the trunk of her car Jan. 8, 1979, after she had been abducted from a Houston shopping center parking lot.

Bloodgood and Urben hope to eventually persuade the courts that DeGarmo should get a new trial on the grounds of incompetency of his trial lawyer in failing to investigate and present to the jury an opportunity to consider DeGarmo's mental state.

Bloodgood said a jury should be able to consider evidence of whether DeGarmo had the ability to premeditate, whether there was diminished capacity and whether DeGarmo's brain damage would make a difference in the jury's decision.

Bloodgood said that sometime after Monday DeGarmo changed his mind about making a last-minute appeal. He had already rejected the often-used Texas appeal attacking the jury selection process in that state.

While Bloodgood and Urben were elated, DeGarmo was not happy about his aborted rendezvous because "I'm still here, in the same old cage and the same old place. I am unhappy for myself, but I am happy for my people."

Bloodgood said that while DeGarmo was saying "I anticipate the pleasure" of the execution, an aunt and a sister who were staying with Urben frantically hoped something would happen to spare DeGarmo's life.

Sacramento, Calif., lawyer Charles F. Bloodgood says Texas Death Row inmate Roger Leroy DeGarmo, above, would have been executed if not for his intervention by "happenstance."

Bloodgood, 37, said DeGarmo was seriously injured May 9, 1974, while working in a garage. He said DeGarmo was hit in the forehead when a rim exploded while he was trying to reassemble a split ring tire assembly.

The attorney said DeGarmo came to him in September 1977 after three surgeries to represent him on his workmen's compensation claim.

Bloodgood said DeGarmo complained of a personality change, blackouts, periodic lapses of memory and loss of attention span and there was some not fully disclosed neurological damage.

The attorney said that when he tried to get DeGarmo's records from the California Workers Compensation Appeals Board to send via Federal Express back to Texas, a clerk told him it would take 10 days to retrieve the records from archives.

"She told me, 'Well, I will write RUSH on the request, but I can't guarantee anything,'" he said.

So Bloodgood went to a supervisor and was able to get the records within an hour.

DeGarmo picked up the nickname "Animal" last week when he disclosed his plans to auction off three witness seats at his execution and have a microphone taped to his chest to narrate his own death.

"I'm going to narrate this whole thing down to the point where I can't talk any more to show I'm an experimental animal," DeGarmo said in an interview.

Bloodgood said there were five $1,000 bids and two bids for $1,500.

"You can just imagine some good ole Texas boy coming in with a ticket in one hand and a beer in the other to watch the show," Bloodgood said.

He said DeGarmo had also threatened the jurors in his case if they did not vote for the death penalty.

DeGarmo's previous records included convictions for burglary, shoplifting and writing bad checks.

"My main income was robbery," DeGarmo said in an interview. "It was the only way to get money. Working didn't seem to be making it."

Federal court takes sting out of company's lawsuit

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court wrote its own script in overturning a $521,000 damage award to a Texas theatre enterprise, ruling there was no sting in movie hype aimed at selling a flop about a killer bee invasion.

"The distinctly unsettling thought of angry 'killer bees' terrorizing an unsuspecting Texas town lies at the heart of this case," wrote Judge Irving Goldberg for the three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

In late 1977 Warner Brothers was wrapping up filming on "The Swarm," directed by Oscar winner Irwin Allen, of "The Poseidon Adventure" and "The Towering Inferno" fame.

Warner Brothers Distributing Co. began advertising the film to interested theatres far in advance of the July 1978 release date, and Presidio Enterprises persuaded a federal court it had been hoodwinked by a campaign designed to garner theatre interest in the film, about a Texas town terrorized by a swarming of South American bees.

"Warner Bros. thought it could turn this idea into a 'chilling, rivetting, harrowing, cinematic experience,' and spent $10 million trying to do so," said Goldberg, noting that Presidio agreed to pay Warner $56,000 for the right to show the film at the two Austin theatres when it came out in 1978.

"To make a long story short, the film was a flop. Stung by this turn of events, Presidio flew enraged into federal court, where it somehow managed to persuade a judge and jury that it had been tricked into purchasing a defective product and could collect damages under Texas consumer protection law," the opinion said.

Agreement announced

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith and three black leaders announced in 1978 an agreement for an interim government that would place the nation under black majority rule by the end of that year.

Chemical company sued

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox filed suit Wednesday against Witco Chemical Corp., near Marshall, for allegedly discharging hazardous wastes into Gray's Creek, which flows into Caddo Lake.

"Witco has a long history of using Gray's Creek and ultimately Caddo Lake as its own private sewer for dumping hazardous wastes," Mattox says in the lawsuit.

The suit also alleges that Witco has stored hazardous wastes in ponds that were not lined to prevent seepage and has used open-trench burn pits to dispose of general trash and trash contaminated with hazardous chemicals.

The suit, which was filed at the request of the Texas Water Commission, seeks civil penalties, Mattox said.

Alleged sexual attacker arrested in victim's bed

HOUSTON (AP) — A man charged with sexually assaulting a woman at gunpoint was arrested after authorities found the man sleeping on the victim's bed, police said.

The victim told police she was confronted by the man Monday night when she returned home. He was holding her gun, which was unloaded.

"He sexually assaulted her during a period of four or five hours," said Wayne Wendel, Houston police sex crimes detective.

The woman said her attacker put the pistol in her mouth and asked her, "What number do you want to die on?" apparently in reference to Russian roulette, police said.

After the attack, the man fell asleep on the victim's bed about 3 a.m. Tuesday, police said. The woman slipped away and went to a relative's home nearby for help.

Officers had to wake the man before arresting him early Tuesday, police said. Wendel said Cory A. Eugene, 25, of Houston told authorities he had taken a drug that may have caused him to fall asleep. Hewas charged with aggravated sexual assault and burglary with intent to commit aggravated sexual assault, Wendel said. Eugene remained in the Harris County jail Wednesday on $40,000 bond, he said.

Bishop's killer sentenced

HOUSTON (AP) — A 32-year-old hitchhiker has been sentenced to 60 years in prison for killing a Morman bishop who gave him a ride.

Paul Connall pleaded guilty Tuesday in the July slaying of Ronald Gierisch and was sentenced by visiting State District Judge Frank Price.

Prosecutors said Gierisch was bound with duct tape and locked in the truck of his car. His body was found July 14, and an autopsy showed he died of heat exhaustion and asphyxiation.

Connell was arrested after he tried to use the victim's credit cards, prosecutors said.

Gierisch worked as a brick layer and served as a bishop — layman responsible for a congregation — in the Morman church.

Poll: Traffic not chief worry

HOUSTON (AP) — For the first time in five years, residents of the nation's fourth-largest city are worrying more about making ends meet financially than about the traffic, a survey shows.

Stephpen L. Klineberg, a Rice University sociologist who directed the fifth annual Houston Area Survey, said energy-related problems have made the economy the chief concern of Houston residents.

In the previous four years, transportation was the biggest problem facing the city, Klineberg said Tuesday.

Now, they are more concerned about job opportunities, inflation, unemployment and the problems of the oil industry, he said.

'Mama Soul' fined $1

HOUSTON (AP) — A 74-year-woman known to neighbors as "Mama Soul," was fined $1 and placed on 10 years probation after she pleaded guilty to charges of delivering drugs to undercover officers twice last year.

In handing down the sentence Tuesday, State District Judge George Walker told Sally Evans to "sin no more."

Mrs. Evans, who has more than 60 children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, is known as "Mama Soul," and "Mama Sally," in the neighborhood where she has lived for nearly five decades.

Police found $4,000 worth of Valium, codeine and marijuana in Mrs. Evans' house on July 26, when she was arrested for selling five Valium pills to an officer.

Mattox calls for panel member's resignation

Attorney General Jim Mattox is calling for the resignation of Suzanne Hildebrand, member of the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officers Standards and Education.

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox has joined the president of a law officer association in calling for the resignation of Suzanne Hildebrand from the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officers Standards and Education.

Ms. Hildebrand reportedly made derogatory statements to a black police officer who was stopping cars from entering a restricted area at the San Antonio Livestock Show and Rodeo last month.

Ron DeLord, of the 6,000-member Combined Law Enforcement Association of Texas, said Wednesday his association would try to oust Ms. Hildebrand from the commission.

The police officer, Clifton Jefferson, said he had an attorney "looking into the civil side of this."

Asked how he felt about Ms. Hildebrand, Mattox told reporters, "For the good of the law enforcement community, it is best that she resign."

Ms. Hildebrand, of San Antonio, was appointed by then-Gov. Bill Clements as the public member of the commission, according to Mattox's office.

Regarding the criticism, she said Wednesday, "They have a constitutional right to express themselves."

Mattox also told a news conference he wanted Texas "to have the best in law enforcement. Better training for officers can only result in better service to our citizens and better morale within the law enforcement community."

The news conference was held shortly before the Commission on Law Enforcement Standards began consideration of tougher standards.

DeLord said the rules include a requirement that a peace officer must be trained before starting work. After a break in employment, a peace officer would be required to undergo retesting or retraining.

Commission chairman Walter Rankin of Houston said none of the commission members asked Ms. Hildebrand to resign during a lengthy private session following the public meeting.

"This is purely political," said Ms. Hildebrand.

Unhappy residents invite Goodyear chairman for talk

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of unhappy Central Texans sent the president of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. a plane ticket Wednesday and invited him to come talk with them.

At stake is the route of a proposed pressurized, hot-oil pipeline that under present plans would cross the environmentally sensitive Edwards Aquifer.

"We are not opposed to your pipeline," said a letter to Robert Mercer Sr., Goodyear chairman, from state Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, Travis County Judge Mike Renfro, and Hays County Commissioner Dan Campos.

"We want your oil and the employment it will bring but the route through our state poses an almost unimaginable danger to the future of Central Texas," said the letter, which contained an airplane ticket to Austin.

"Come down and talk to us, visit our creeks and springs, drink our water, listen to our side of the story," the letter said.

The Central Texans proposed two alternative routes for the 1,800-mile pipeline from California to the Texas Gulf Coast.

One alternate route would add 20 miles to the present route but would take the pipeline around the northern end of the aquifer which provides drinking water for much of Central Texas. A southern route, also missing the aquifer, would add 60 miles but also avoid highly populated areas of the state.

"Sir, if you would come to Texas, you would understand why we are adamant in our opposition to the route over our aquifer," said the letter to Mercer. "And, once you understand, we are confident that you will take steps to resolve this problem."

Cancerous tumors in crustacea difficult to detect

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. Years ago I remember reading about a nun who was devoting her life to research. In her laboratory she was trying to find out why lobsters and crabs do not get cancer. If anything resulted from her research, I never did read or hear about it. Is it true that crabs and lobsters do not get cancer? Do scientists know why? Do other shellfish get cancer?

A. Louis Leibovitz, the director of the Laboratory for Marine Animal Health at the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass., states: "In my experience with a wide range of animal species, I have come to the conclusion that all animals are subject to tumors (cancer). Claims are frequently made that some animals do not manifest tumors and do not suffer from cancer. This has been said of ducks, sharks, lobsters and other animals. But upon closer study, tumors have been found in these animals although the reported incidence is low.

"In the case of lobsters and other crustacea in the wild, representative sampling of the affected population is very difficult." Since lobsters are cannibalistic, says Liebovitz, sick ones will be eaten and removed from the environment.

"One of the greatest difficulties in detecting tumors in crustacea," explains Leibovitz, "is related to the anatomy of the crustacea. The hard armor-like covering of crustacea covers the soft tissues of the animal, making visibility and detection of tumors difficult."

In spite of all these difficulties, cancerous tumors "do occur," Leibovitz states, "but our knowledge of them is limited due to the paucity of information and study."

Q. Are Mexican refried beans fried twice, or what? How can I make them?

A. According to "The Dictionary of American Food and Drink" by John Mariani, refried beans are a Mexican-American dish of mashed, cooked pinto beans, usually served as a side dish or as a filling for various tortilla preparations.

"The term 'refried'," explains Mariani, "is actually a mistranslation from the Mexican 'frijoles refritos,' which means 'well-fried beans.' So they're really just fried once."

Here is Mariani's recipe: "Cook 4 cups pinto beans in water to cover till tender, and place in a skillet with 4 tablespoons of lard or bacon fat. Mash down the beans, adding a little of the bean liquid. Add 2 minced garlic cloves, salt and pepper. Cook over medium heat for about 30 minutes, till edges are crispy. Turn out onto a warm plate. Serves 6."

Q. I've cut back a great deal on salt simply because of warnings in the media and a question occurred to me which no one I know can answer: Since thirst is one indication that we have eaten too much salt, does our body indicate to us in any way that we have not had enough salt? Is it possible to have a deficiency of salt without realizing it?

A. "It is unlikely that a salt deficiency occurs under normal conditions," states Professor Gertrude Armbruster of Cornell University's Division of Nutritional Sciences. Salt deficiencies are rarely encountered because most foods naturally contain enough of it. You don't have to sprinkle salt on meat, fish, poultry, eggs or milk. It's already there.

Salt is not one chemical but two, a combination of sodium and chloride. Sodium helps to maintain normal water balance and chloride aids in digestion. Intense sweating, vomiting or diarrhea can cause a considerable loss of sodium from the body, but it's rare. Eating ordinary food without added salt will not cause a sodium deficiency.

Q. When I wash my son's down jacket I cannot get it dry in the dryer. All the down feathers mass together in clumps. It takes a day to dry out in the air and I have to keep shaking the jacket to redistribute the feathers so they can dry. Is there any other solution to drying it?

A. Label information accompanying a down and waterfowl feather vest made by St. John's Bay suggests that you add some dry bath towels to the dryer along with the jacket to absorb the moisture. To minimize clumping of the feathers, also throw in three tennis balls. The balls bang against the jacket and separate the clumps.

EXTENSION EXTRA

Meat terms vary

By MARIAN FARR

The meat in your supermarket may carry names like "extra lean," "gourmet lean" and "super trim" on the label, but what these terms mean depends on the butcher. Because there's no mandatory system for naming beef once it reaches the market, extra lean might mean 85 percent lean to one butcher and 75 percent lean to another. But the beef industry does have a voluntary standard limiting lean ground beef to 24 percent fat and extra lean to 15 percent fat.

The only time you can be certain about the names of beef steak and roasts is when they're called "prime," "choice" or "good." Only meat graded at the packing house using U.S. Department of Agriculture guidelines can be labeled with these words. Government graders assign these designations on specific criteria, such as age and the degree of fat marbling.

The beef with the most fat marbling tends to be the most tender and is the most likely to be called "prime."

Recent USDA figures show that about half the markets in the county do not use the federal grading terminology exclusively. If your supermarket doesn't use the federal terminology, become familiar with the labeling terms they do use by asking the butcher what they mean. Consumers can also get nutrition information on labels or at the meat case in many Texas stores.

Many supermarkets are using "Meat Nutri-Facts," a program supported by the red meat industry to inform consumers about the nutritional composition of meat.

Large Nutri-Fact cards displayed in the meat case show the amount of calories, total fat, cholesterol, sodium, protein, iron, zinc, thiamin, niacin and vitamin B-12 contained in a cooked, trimmed, three-ounce serving of a particular cut of meat.

This information can help consumers select meat cuts according to nutrient needs, and may be of great use to shoppers on special diets. Consumers who pay attention to both the grading of meat and its nutrient content can make better decisions about getting the most for their meat dollar.

Chain letters common scheme

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

The lure of easy money is why many people become victims of one of the oldest schemes around — the chain letter.

This type of scheme requires the recipient to pay money or send something of value to one or more names on a list, make copies of the letter dropping off one name and adding his own, then distributing the letters to others by mail or other means.

Persons receiving the copies are instructed to do likewise, and on and on it goes.

Chain letter promoters promise that one can make a lot of money by participating. The trouble is more people stand to lose money than to make it.

The schemes are bound to fail because eventually the market becomes saturated and there is no one left to buy in.

In a typical scheme where each person is supposed to involve six additional people, a "perfect" participation score would exceed the population of the United States before round 11 was completed (six to the 11th power is 362,797,056):

CHAIN LETTERS

Round	Persons
1	6
2	36
3	216
4	1,296
5	7,776
6	46,656
7	276,936
8	1,679,616
9	10,077,696
10	60,466,176
11	362,797,056

In the real world, of course, the chain does get broken. Chain letters tend to spread rapidly and then die down rather quickly, so that a small number of people, usually the organizers, gain at the expense of a much larger number.

Information from the Postal Inspection Service indicates that "anyone who promotes or participates in a chain letter which requires payment of something of value ... and offers a prize dependent upon chance, is in violation of federal mail fraud and lottery laws. Even if the chain letter itself is not mailed, as long as the payment or prize is sent through the mail the entire scheme is ILLEGAL."

Persons who violate the mail fraud statutes may be punished by a $1,000 fine or two years in prison or both for a first offense, and up to five years in prison for a succeeding offense.

Even if the mails are not used to perpetuate the chain letter scheme, information from the Texas Attorney General's Office indicates that the County Attorney has the power to prosecute the operators of such schemes under S32.48 of the Texas Penal Code, which states that "a person commits an offense if he contrives, prepares, sets up, proposes, operates, promotes or participates in an endless chain."

Such an offense is a Class B misdemeanor and may be punishable by a $1,000 fine or 180 days in jail or both.

The Consumer Protection and Antitrust Division of the Attorney General's Office may also prosecute participants of the scheme under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act.

This act declares chain referral sales and pyramid sales unlawful.

If you should be the recipient of a chain letter asking you to send something of value, such as cash, money orders, bonds, etc., you should contact the Better Business Bureau and one or more of the agencies listed below:

P.O. Box 1230

Chain letters that do not require items of value, such as those circulating prayers, poems or recipes are not illegal, although some people may regard them as a nuisance.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

'Dippin' ' sauce disappointin'

By LINDA ANDERSON

Fast foods go in cycles — hamburgers are always in demand, but trendy foods make their appearance at fast food restaurants with amazing regularity.

Taco pizza, deep-dish pizza, breaded chicken sandwiches, deli-type sandwiches and salad bars have all had their day in the sun — or rather in the fast lane.

The newest fast food darling is chicken bits. Everyone is trying to out-do everyone else in offering "tender, white-meat-only, best of the breast chicken chunks."

To disguise the fact that the meat is actually processed chicken pieces, various sauces are offered for dipping the meat into.

Every frozen food manufacturer has already introduced chicken bits in various sizes, shapes and prices, so now marketing departments have decided to go after the dipping sauces.

In an every-advancing effort to be as current as everyone else, some food manufacturers are now marketing bottled sauces for home use, which are designed to taste just like the ones in fast-food establishments.

We found a barbecue sauce by Lawry's which was made just as a dipping sauce. Because we're partial to barbecue over mustard, sweet and sour and all the other dipping sauce flavors, the usual taste-testers couldn't resist checking out this sauce for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Price for a 9-ounce bottle of this barbecue sauce cost $1.39. Regular barbecue sauce for cooking costs about the same price for an 18-ounce bottle. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Label advertising is slightly obnoxious with its claims: "Pour some on your plate and dip in! Our barbecue sauce was made for dippin'. Not cookin.' ... One taste and you may never want to light up the charcoal again." (Oh, really?) "Adds hearty flavor to baked, grilled or breaded chicken — even nuggets! Great with steaks 'n taters, too!" (No kidding, that's the way it's spelled on the label.)

Ingredients listed on the label include water, tomato paste, sugar, vinegar, soy sauce, salt, natural hickory smoke flavor and other ordinary items.

The only things listed that might not be found in a home kitchen were modified food starch, caramel color and sodium benzoate (a preservative).

Chicken bits from fast food restaurants are a hot item at our house — the teen-agers consider themselves "pros" when it comes to this dish — and since the sauce was designed for "dippin'," the taste-test was made to order for them.

According to these experts, the Lawry's dipping barbecue sauce is OK, but not spectacular. They said it was at least as good as McDonald's dipping barbecue sauce, but not any better.

It seemed a little too sweet to me, but then I don't like to dip chicken bits in sauce. It seems a shame to put barbecue sauce on anything but barbecue — whatever the meat — being cooked on the grill.

And why on earth should I spend the same amount to get half as much?

I wouldn't be surprised if ordinary bottled barbecue sauce can be used for "dippin' " too.

Many working women don't get paid maternity leave

Copley News Service

Sixty percent of all working women in 1984 had no paid "parental (maternity) leave." Paid time off from work to accommodate pregnancy and childbirth is called disability leave.

Only 40 percent of women workers in 1984 were covered by some sort of disability leave insurance or an employer's paid maternity-leave policy.

The Pregnancy Disability Act of 1978 prohibits discrimination because of pregnancy and requires insured wage compensation for the period (usually 6 to 8 weeks) that a woman cannot work, if her employer provides other kinds of short-term disability coverage.

Complaints unreported

WASHINGTON (AP) — What do most Americans do when they are dissatisfied with a product or service? Generally, nothing, according to consumer affairs specialists.

While government and private business offices handle millions of complaints every year, experts estimate that two-thirds or more of customer problems go unreported.

Why?

Because they don't know where to complain, they don't believe it will do any good, or they are just frustrated in attempts to deal with government or corporate bureaucracy, according to Esther K. Shapiro, director of the Consumer Affairs Office for the City of Detroit.

Ms. Shapiro and a panel of other consumer-affairs experts from across the country took up the topic of consumer complaints recently at the annual meeting of the Consumer Federation of America. The experts arrived at similar conclusions.

And even as they met to discuss the problem of angry consumers unable to voice their complaints, one federal agency was offering help.

The United States Office of Consumer Affairs has published an updated 1986 edition of its "Consumer's Resource Handbook," a 96-page compendium of more than 2,000 government and voluntary offices set up to help individuals deal with consumer problems.

Designed to help people handle their own complaints, the volume also explains how to complain most effectively, including a primer on writing a letter.

Copies of the handbook are being distributed to post offices, libraries and state and local consumer agencies. In addition, single copies may be obtained by individuals and organizations, at no charge, by writing Handbook, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

In general, the complaint experts said, consumer problems have tended to remain remarkably consistent over the years.

Mail-ordered products, automobile dealers and repair shops, furniture stores, department stores and dry cleaners remain among the top problem areas, said Candace Von Salzen of the National Council of Better Business Bureaus.

At least in part, the heavy volume of complaints in these areas may merely reflect that these are businesses dealt with by most people at one time or another.

Newly emerging complaint areas, she said, include financial and investment schemes, including discount broker advertising, pyramid schemes, art investments, and oil and gas deals.

Complaints about advertising for unproven medical products, such as diet pills and arthritis aids, have increased, she said, as have consumer concerns about advertising directed at children.

Walter Dartland, consumer advocate for Dade County, Fla., suggested that consumer inquiries may mask many complaints, hiding high frustration levels.

For example, he said, people rarely call his office to complain about utility bills, but their inquiries show growing anger and alienation from such firms.

Surveys show dissatisfaction with utilities at 80 percent or more, Dartland said. "That does not mean utilities are bad guys, but they have a real problem."

Ranking just below utilities are automobile dealers and repair shops, followed by electronic repair services, he added.

New products such as video recorders and computers are complex, and few individuals are knowledgeable enough to judge what repairs are needed and what they should cost, he explained.

Among senior citizens the major concern is the long-term cost of health care.

Nudity worries grandmother

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am truly frightened that someone might report my daughter and her husband to the authorities, but I cannot get them to listen to reason.

Somewhere they got the idea that if they exposed their daughter to nudity in the home, she would not have any sexual hang-ups when she got older. So my daughter and her husband have let their baby shower with them since she was tiny.

"Amy" is now 2½ and she's aware that her father's body is different from hers and her mother's. This bothered my son-in-law at first, but my daughter said he should let Amy look at (and even touch) him, so nudity would be no big deal.

This doesn't seem right to me. My daughter insists it's OK because their motives aren't bad. I say if Amy tells someone outside the family what is going on, the police will probably be called.

My daughter is college-educated and thinks she knows everything. Please answer in the paper, as my husband says I should stay out of it, so I don't want to get mail at home about this. Thank you. — WORRIED GRANDMA

DEAR WORRIED: Children raised in societies where nudity is an accepted part of their culture may have fewer hang-ups about sex, but I think your daughter has carried that theory too far.

A child's curiosity about the differences in male and female anatomy is natural. Questions should be answered verbally, but touching should not be permitted.

Children should be taught to allow no one to touch their private parts, and they should not be encouraged to touch the private parts of others.

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to see the letter in print from the lady whose husband had severe headaches caused by the heavily perfumed envelope their department store bill came in.

We mail carriers also get headaches from perfumed envelopes, only it's 100 times worse because we have to carry a whole bagful. Some stores enclose samples of a new perfume with every bill. Then there are seed companies who sell rose plants and mail out samples.

The smell of those samples really does overpower me. Do the people who send them realize this? Or don't they care? Some people on my route say, "Please do not deliver them to the house; throw them in the trash!"

One solution would be to put a sample of the fragrance in a sealed foil packet. The recipients could then decide if they want to open it or not.

You would do the mail carriers a big favor if you printed this. — OKLAHOMA MAIL CARRIER

DEAR MAIL CARRIER: It's the least I can do for the mail carriers. They do so much for me.

DEAR ABBY: I'm an attractive, mature, professional woman who would like to respond to "Pete in Daytona Beach." "Pete" admits he's one of those balding men who has let a few strands grow long to be wrapped around his head to camouflage his baldness. (He did this reluctantly at the insistence of a woman he was dating because she wanted him to present a more youthful appearance.)

The most desirable man I've ever met in my life wears the "wraparound" hair style. Unfortunately, I am not at liberty to tell him that with or without hair, he would still be the man I desire and admire the most.

If he wrapped those few strands around his head 10 times, and put a bone through it to hold it up, he would still be the sexiest, most virile-looking man I've ever met.

Should he decide to do away with the cover-up hairdo and appear completely bald, he would still be the sexiest, most handsome and virile-looking man alive, as far as I'm concerned.

"Pete," you don't need to please anyone except yourself. Find a woman who will accept you as you are. — SALLY

DEAR SALLY: Where are you writing from? You sound like the kind of woman a lot of balding men would like to meet. I wonder how many men out there would like a "natural" woman with no makeup, no hairdo, no bra, no nothing?

(Problems? Unload on Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

Consumers believe American products improving

Associated Press

American goods competing against imports for the trust of U.S. consumers have pulled even with foreign products on issues of quality, and where a product is made could be a deciding factor on which product to buy, according to a Better Homes and Gardens survey.

There is less certainty, however, on issues of competitive price. U.S. consumers believe that American products are too expensive, therefore pricing domestic products out of the market.

Still, it's apparent that American shoppers are increasingly aware of what is U.S.-made and what isn't.

Consumer confidence in American-made products is at the point where 84 percent of respondents believe the quality of U.S. goods is equal to that of imports, and if two products are similar in quality and price, 74 percent of shoppers will check to see which is U.S.-made. More than half of respondents in the Consumer Panel survey also report they routinely shop for American-made products.

That's welcome news for U.S. manufacturers who emphasize product quality in the battle for American marketplace supremacy. Margaret Daly, money management, automotive and features editor of the magazine, said "The concentration on quality is paying off for many U.S. manufacturers. It's very likely a battle they'll have to keep fighting. Foreign businesses aren't going to ease up on the quality of their goods either."

Tempering the enthusiasm, however, is consumer belief that while the quality of U.S. goods has improved, prices of American goods are too high. More than 75 percent of respondents say American manufacturers have priced themselves out of the market.

U.S. consumers would support moves to make American products more attractive in foreign markets while protecting U.S. interests at home.

Marcos has $800 million in Swiss bank account, commission claims

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A government commission created to recover wealth allegedly plundered from the Philippines by Ferdinand E. Marcos has discovered a $800 million Swiss bank account held by the ousted ruler, a commission official said today.

The holding is just a fraction of the estimated $5 billion to $10 billion Marcos is believed to have sent abroad before he quit Malacanang Palace for exile in Hawaii two weeks ago, according to Ramon Diaz, an official with the Commission on Good Government.

Diaz declined to provide further details on the Swiss bank account or say how the commission learned of its existence.

However, the Manila Times quoted an unidentified source on the commission as saying that among documents found in the palace abandoned by Marcos was correspondence between Marcos and unidentified Swiss banks, including code names and account numbers of deposits totaling between $2.5 billion and $3 billion.

The newspaper quoted the sources as saying Marcos opened his first account in 1967 with a deposit of more than $1 million.

On Wednesday, President Corazon Aquino ordered Philippine banks to freeze the assets of members of the ousted government on the recommendation of the commission's chairman, Jovito Salonga.

Under the directive, Executive Order No. 2, Mrs. Aquino's government outlawed any attempts to conceal or transfer the funds of Marcos, his wife, Imelda, and 31 relatives and associates.

The order, handed down after the first Cabinet meeting of the 16-day-old government, made handling the assets illegal until the commission determines whether the members of the ousted government acquired the funds legitimately.

The directive did not say how much the assets amounted to, and Diaz declined to estimate the size of Marcos' bank holdings.

"It is our impression that the majority of their assets are overseas," Diaz said.

"They must have seen that their regime was going to the dogs and gotten the money out of the country," he said.

The directive also empowered Salonga to appeal to foreign governments to freeze the "hidden wealth." Salonga arrived in San Francisco late Wednesday, and during a stay in the United States plans to meet with State Department officials and lawyers of a New York-based organization hired to investigate real estate holdings allegedly held by Marcos.

The commission expects "a high degree of compliance" with the order by Philippine banks, Diaz said.

"Overseas it will be more difficult, but we hope diplomacy will help us regain the funds," he added.

The executive order froze the assets of former Tourism Minister Jose Aspiras, former armed forces chief of staff Gen. Fabian C. Ver, and other associates of Marcos, including Roman Cruz, who was general manager of the Government Service Insurance System, president of Philippine Airlines and the Manila Hotel, and chairman of the Commercial Bank of Manila.

In other developments today, customs officials at Manila International Airport said they were preparing to formally seize a haul of precious stones valued at $5.3 million that local newspapers have linked to Mrs. Marcos.

Officials Sunday arrested Demetrios Roumeliotes, identified as a Greek-American, as he was about to board a flight for Hong Kong with the jewels.

"We don't want to speculate or be unfair to anybody. There will be an investigation to determine the owner," said Bayani Bautista, customs collector at the airport.

Bautista said the jewels included rubies, sapphires, diamonds, and called the gems "the most expensive and sophisticated stones in the world."

Nuns seek surrender of communist rebels

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Seven Roman Catholic nuns left today for one of the Philippines' most active rebel strongholds to seek the surrender of communist insurgents who have been battling the government for years.

The nuns, from the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart, flew on a military transport plane bound for Samar, the country's third-largest island about 300 miles southeast of Manila.

One nun about to board the plane said the missionary group would be expanded to a total of 17 nuns when it enters the hinterlands of Samar, a known sanctuary of the communist New People's Army rebels.

The plane was also carrying three platoons of military scout rangers, totaling 90 men, who were bound for a year of training in the southern Philippines.

The nun, who spoke on condition she not be identified, said the missionaries will visit 24 towns in the island's three provinces, and said the military had promised to cooperate.

Asked if that meant a cease-fire had been declared for the moment, another nun said, "It'll be safer with just us, because they know us."

She said hundreds of rebels remained on the island, but gave no specific estimate.

In the past eight years, the missionary group has concentrated its efforts on trying to persuade the rebels to give up their armed struggle by entering territories where the rebels are active and holding direct talks with them.

Sharon leads successful takeover of Israeli right-wing party

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A populist faction of Israel's biggest right-wing party led by Ariel Sharon suddenly grabbed control of the party convention during a recess early today, causing fistfights to break out among confused and angry delegates.

The move by Sharon and Deputy Prime Minister David Levy, another populist in the Herut party, occurred shortly before the three-day convention of the Herut party ended.

Herut is the largest party in the right-wing Likud Bloc and the organization of former Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Sharon and Levy did not directly challenge the party leadership of Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir because that would negate an agreement with the Labor Party under which Shamir is to become prime minister this fall. However, Levy and Sharon were seeking to position themselves to succeed Shamir when his term of office ends in 1988.

"Herut is committing public suicide," Shamir, leader of Herut's old guard, said earlier Wednesday night in an appeal for unity. "I have never seen such a thing in the party. And why? For what? It's out of greed for power."

But later, during a recess when a majority of the 2,000 delegates were out of the convention hall, followers of Sharon and Levy took control of the stage, ousted the convention president Moshe Katzav and appointed David Magen.

They contended most members of the convention presidium had signed the protocol of the proceedings, which made the move legal. But Shamir's camp said most of the presidium members were not even present in the hall.

Sharon, the commerce and industry minister, did not join his followers on the platform but sat in the front row and clapped in approval.

He later told reporters the step reflected Herut's "deep democratic nature, which allows the delegates to express their will."

Sharon denied Shamir's charges that he and Levy were splitting the party. "Why should we? We had no such intention. It will take a few days and people will come back together," he said.

After the move, hundreds of angry delegates prevented Shamir from addressing them again, and he was escorted from the hall by a cordon of security guards which barely forced a path through the crowd. When he left, fistfights erupted among some of the delegates.

Sharon and Levy, whose constituencies represent Herut's populist camp, appeared to have the support of more than half the delegates as indicated by an important internal vote Wednesday.

Shamir's power was severely eroded when Sharon defeated Benjamin Begin, son of Menachem Begin, for an important committee chairmanship.

Sharon, the architect of Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon, was relieved as defense minister in 1983 after a committee found him indirectly responsible for a massacre of Palestinians in Beirut. However, the vote Wednesday indicated he still is politically powerful.

It also appeared to herald an end to the control of Herut by the party's founding fathers, most of them of European origin, in favor of the mostly Moroccan-born Israelis represented by Levy and Sharon.

During the convention, the delegates were engaged almost solely in jockeying for power, and the sessions were often interrupted by catcalls and shouting.

Doctor: 'Deal in the works' for French hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — French mediator Razah Raad was quoted today as saying he had made "tangible progress" on an agreement to release French hostages held by Shiite Moslem extremists in Lebanon.

"A deal is in the works. Tentative agreement has been reached on the substance. Consultations now focus on formalities, which are no less important than the substance," an-Nahar, Beirut's leading independent newspaper, quoted the Lebanese-born doctor as saying.

"Tangible progress has been made in the last hours. I have succeeded in easing the recent tension," the newspaper quoted him as saying in an Arabic-language interview.

An-Nahar said he described the negotiations as "constructive and fruitful." It quoted him as saying, without elaboration, that "the complicated aspects have been unsnarled."

The newspaper said it interviewed Raad overnight by telephone from its Paris office. It said Raad was in Beirut's Shiite Moslem southern suburbs, but did not say where.

Raad has been locked in secret negotiations with the kidnappers since Tuesday morning. He was booked on a Middle East Airlines flight to Paris later today, but there was no indication whether he would make the flight.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, a Shiite extremist group believed to have ties to Iran, claims it is holding French and American hostages in Lebanon.

It claimed last week that it killed one of its French hostages, 37-year-old researcher Michel Seurat. On Monday, it released photographs that it said prove its claim, but Seurat's body has not been found and there has been no confirmation he is dead.

Statements from Islamic Jihad said Seurat had been killed in retaliation for France's deportation of two pro-Iranian Iraqis to Baghdad. Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980.

Raad's statements quoted today and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's decision Wednesday to pardon the two deportees raised hopes that the French hostages might be freed.

The other three French captives are journalist Jean-Paul Kauffmann and diplomats Marcel Fontaine and Marcel Carton. There has been no mention of the American captives throughout the negotiations.

Islamic Jihad denied it abducted a four-man crew from France's Antenne 2 television station in Beirut's Moslem sector last Saturday. An anonymous telephone caller told a Western news agency that Islamic Jihad "detained" the Frenchmen "for questioning about their suspicious movements in Beirut's Islamic suburbs."

Asked about the conflicting claims, Raad told reporters before leaving for the secret negotiations: "I know I have to deal with two Jihads."

Government sources in Paris said French President Francois Mitterrand personally intervened with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to obtain the pardon for the two deported Iraqis.

Pope: 'Liberation theology necessary'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II warned today that using liberation theology to justify violence or replace secular politics and authority would result in "grave consequences" for the Roman Catholic Church.

"Liberation theology is not only orthodox but necessary," the pontiff told 21 Brazilian prelates and 10 top Vatican cardinals at the start of a three-day meeting at the Hall of Bologna in the Apostolic Palace.

"It is my hope that Brazil, and all of Latin America...fashions the necessary and widespread social reforms with justice, charity with efficacy," he said.

But in tackling Brazilian problems such as poverty and hunger, the church cannot "identify itself with, nor substitute for, the role of the politicians, economists, intellectuals and unions," John Paul said, speaking in Portuguese.

The pope said social reforms should be carried out without resorting to violence. Liberation theology, he said, should be "purified of elements which might adulterate it, in order to avoid grave consequences to the faith."

Liberation theology, a movement born in Latin America more than two decades ago, links spiritual freedom to liberation from social and economic oppression.

The Vatican hails some parts of liberation theology such as its concern for the poor, but it condemns what it sees as some Marxist elements often associated with it.

Advocates of liberation theology use the Gospel to justify political action on behalf of the poor and oppressed, especially in the Third World, sometimes using the Marxist idea of class struggle to analyze social problems.

The pope summoned the bishops to Rome in what Vatican analysts characterized as a "total checkup" on the state of the Brazilian church, which has been torn by conflicting views on its role in promoting social justice and human rights.

Vatican officials said other issues, such as liturgy and the blending of local customs into church rites, will also be discussed.

"But it (liberation theology) will not be a dominant theme," said Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro.

Some church analysts in Brazil have described the meeting as an attempt by the pope to move the church hierarchy toward more conservative positions.

Jose J. Queiroz, a sociologist at The Catholic University of Sao Paulo who works closely with the church, said the pope called the meeting "to reassert his authority on the bishop's conference."

Leaders of the Brazilian church "insist on maintaining a certain distance from the Vatican and continue to be strong defenders of liberation theology," he said.

Hundreds of so-called "base communities" have sprung up in Brazil, mainly among the poor, to implement ideas of liberation theology that include agrarian reform, a more equitable distribution of wealth and better health and education services.

These communities, which have the support of the Brazilian bishops, often have leftist political overtones "and this bothers the Vatican," Queiroz said.

Conservative Brazilian churchmen, led by Cardinal Eugenio de Araujo Sales of Rio de Janeiro, support the Vatican stance on liberal theology. Others, who often outnumber the conservatives, are critical of what they have described as the Vatican's "too restrictive" views.

The meeting comes less than a year after the Vatican ordered Franciscan friar Leonardo Boff, a leading exponent of liberation theology, to keep "penitential silence" as punishment for his views.

Vatican officials took the action because of Boff's 1981 book entitled "Church: Charisma and Power," in which he criticized the church for "elitism" and for failing to take a firmer stand in defense of human rights.

Europe's Giotto closes in on Halley's comet

DARMSTADT, West Germany (AP) — Europe's Giotto spacecraft closed to within 2.5 million miles of Halley's comet early today, heading on course for a rendezvous that officials hope will produce spectacular close-up pictures.

In a statement released by the European Space Agency in Darmstadt, officials said that as of 9 a.m. (2 a.m. CST) Giotto was 2.48 million miles from the comet and approaching it at a speed of 152,520 mph.

The statement said that early today ground controllers carried out a "small attitude maneuver" to keep Giotto on course for the rendezvous late today and early Friday.

All systems on board, including a flight camera, continued to function well, ESA officials said.

Scientists gathered at the European Space Agency's headquarters to make final preparations for the closest encounter ever of a man-made spacecraft with the comet.

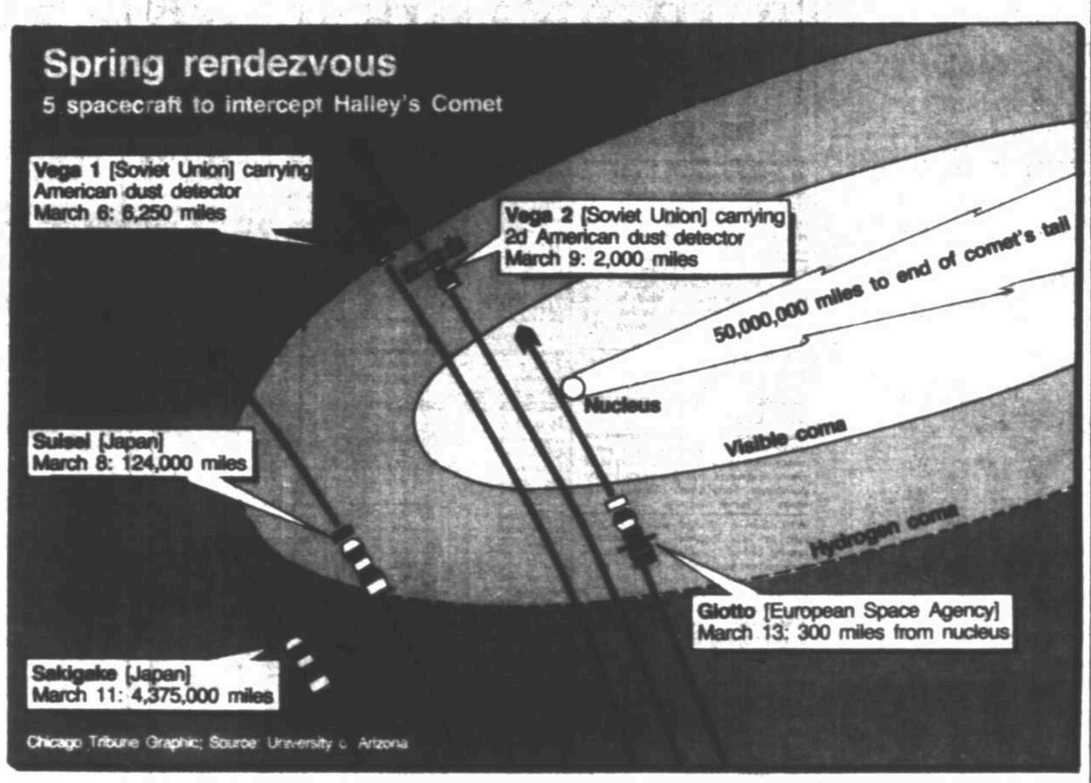

Scientists also made a course correction Wednesday that will bring the probe, at closest, to within 334.8 miles of the comet's nucleus.

Giotto is scheduled to begin taking the comet's picture at about 2 p.m. CST.

The closest encounter, however, is expected to take place at about 6:15 p.m. CST. At that distance, Giotto's flyby could result in scientific breakthroughs, or mean the spacecraft's destruction.

ESA officials say cometary dust particles that move at 50 times the speed of a bullet may destroy Giotto before its equipment can send pictures via radio signals back to earth.

Giotto has been equipped with a double shield to protect it from particles of dust that encircle the comet. But scientists say it is not certain the shield will be effective enough.

Giotto was launched July 2, 1985 by an ESA Ariane 1 rocket from Kourou, French Guiana, and weighs a little more than a ton. The cylindrical probe, which is 9½ feet long and 6 feet in diameter, is carrying sophisticated equipment for 10 on-board experiments.

Among its main missions photography of the nucleus of the comet and the chemical analyses of ions and dust in the cometary atmosphere. Scientists hope data sent back by Giotto will tell them more about comets than all past centuries of study.

Giotto was named after the Italian master who spotted the comet nearly 600 years ago, then painted it in one of his works. But the comet, which returns to the solar system approximately once every 76 years, was first reported sighted some 2,000 years ago.

As of early Wednesday, Giotto was 88.99 million miles from Earth.

Four other probes — two Soviet and two Japanese — have also been launched to explore the mysteries of Halley's comet, but none has come as close as the rendezvous called for in Giotto's flight plan.

Latin American nations uneasy about Contra aid

MEXICO CITY (AP) — While President Reagan pushes for approval of $100 million in aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels, Latin American nations concerned about escalating violence in the region are voicing increasing support for diplomatic solutions.

Even in South America, where four nations are giving renewed vigor to the lagging Contadora peace effort, there is concern that violence could trickle down to affect all.

Argentine Foreign Minister Dante Caputo said last week that South American nations would be "naive" to think they could remain unaffected by a spreading conflict in Central America.

"An outbreak of war would produce a rarification of hemispheric relations, something which we don't want. This is also going to produce a strong polarization of public opinion; we are going to see Argentines against Argentines," he said.

Mexico, Colombia, Panama and Venezuela formed the Contadora group in January 1983, taking the name from the Panmanian resort island where the first meeting was held. They argue that, although no concrete results have been achieved, the threat of a generalized war in Central America has been averted during the negotiations.

The effort appeared to flounder by late last year, but revived at a January meeting in Caraballeda, Venezuela, attended also by the South American support group of Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay and Peru.

In a document entitled "Caraballeda Message for Peace and Democracy," the ministers said the Contadora group offers the only hope to overcome "the arms race, foreign intervention and the politics of force" in Central America.

The foreign ministers of all eight nations then traveled to Washington, where they met with U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz on Feb. 10 to promote a diplomatic initiative.

In a recent interview with The Washington Post, Colombian President Belisario Betancur said, "An initiative such as that which Reagan has taken to ask for $100 million from Congress is mistaken. I know that more can be obtained through negotiations. I know that the American government knows that Latin America has its own language, and that language is expressed through Contadora."

The eight Latin nations have scheduled a meeting in the second half of March on Contadora island, along with the five Central American nations involved, Guatemala, Honduras, Costa Rica, El Salvador and Nicaragua.

The flurry of diplomatic activity also includes some initiatives among Central American nations.

Reagan administration officials' state that the public rhetoric conflicts with private views of Latin governments, especially those nearest Nicaragua, concerned about the drift toward the Soviet bloc of the leftist Sandinista government there.

A diplomat based in Mexico City who has been present at regional sessions said, however, "That is not true at all."

Speaking on condition of anonymity for protocol reasons, he said the public proclamations clearly are the result of private negotiations.

"So it would sound like inconsistent to say that publicly they say 'yes' for diplomatic support and then privately 'no diplomatic support,' since it takes a lot of internal negotiations of private talks to get all the 13 foreign ministries to adhere to one document," he said.

Habib offers hope for talks with Nicaragua

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — U.S. special envoy Philip Habib opened a Central American tour with a swipe at Nicaragua's "aggressiveness," but offered some hope for reviving the direct U.S.-Nicaragua talks suspended 14 months ago.

Habib also endorsed a proposal by Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte that Duarte meet with leftist rebels fighting his U.S.-backed government if Nicaraguan leaders opened talks with U.S.-backed rebels fighting their government.

Duarte's proposal was rejected by the Nicaraguan government, which frequently has said it would only speak with Reagan.

The Reagan administration's veteran trouble-shooter met Duarte for two hours Wednesday and said their talks showed "mutual interest in peace, democracy and security." He offered no other details.

The State Department said Habib would spend 24 hours in El Salvador, meaning he would leave today, but would not say where he was headed.

He repeated the Reagan administration's offer to resume direct talks with Nicaragua if the leftist Sandinistas agree to talk with the rebels, as Duarte has proposed

WORLD IN BRIEF

Man held 'for suspicion' in Swedish leader's death

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Sweden's national news agency said today that a man was being held "for suspicion of complicity in the murder of Olof Palme."

The agency's brief bulletin gave no further details.

According to reports aired on CNN, the man is a Swedish national. A man wielding a .357-caliber Magnum revolver killed Palme Feb. 28 as the prime minister strolled down a Stockholm sidewalk with his wife Lisbet.

Meanwhile, the Swedish Parliament Wednesday elected Social Democrat Ingvar Carlsson to succeed the assassinated prime minister, whose vacant front-row desk in the hall was decorated with a vase of yellow daffodils.

Carlsson, a lanky, bespectacled political veteran who was the 59-year-old Palme's deputy premier, was elected briskly and without an opposing vote.

Test moratorium extended

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union will continue its unilateral moratorium on nuclear testing until the United States conducts a test of its own, Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said in a statement released today.

The moratorium, imposed in August, was due to expire March 31.

In a message to the leaders of six nations, Gorbachev repeated his willingness to allow on-site inspections by U.S. observers if Washington suspects the Soviets have violated their promise not to conduct nuclear tests.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said the test ban extension and Gorbachev's comments on verification were contained in his reply to a joint message from the leaders of Argentina, India, Mexico, Tanzania, Sweden and Greece.

Gorbachev announced the Soviet test moratorium Aug. 6, 1985, to continue through December, and urged Washington to join it. On Jan. 15, he extended the moratorium to March 31.

Pro-NATO vote 'victory'

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez said today that voters won a victory over isolationism and a success for the whole country by surprising pollsters and approving Spain's continued membership in NATO.

Final results of Wednesday's vote indicated that 52.5 percent of the voters supported Gonzalez's decision to keep Spain in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, while 39.8 percent voted against it. The remainder of the ballots were blank, or had been disqualified.

As recently as last week, public opinion polls indicated voters would reject NATO membership by a margin of 4 percent to 7 percent. Anti-NATO and anti-American demonstrations have drawn thousands of supporters in Spain, where there are four U.S. military bases.

"This is a victory of the Spanish people over historic isolationism," Gonzalez, a Socialist, told the private radio network SER.

Tass reports on NATO vote

MOSCOW (AP) — The official news agency Tass today reported Spain's vote to stay in NATO, but suggested that it was a result of a "high pressure propaganda campaign" by the governing Socialist party.

Soviet media had clearly indicated a preference for anti-NATO forces in its reporting on the campaign prior to Wednesday's referendum, but did not predict a result.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda Tuesday criticized the Spanish Socialist Party of Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez for changing its mind about NATO membership.

The Socialists opposed NATO membership and promised a referendum in the campaign for the October 1982 elections in which they took power. Gonzalez later decided that remaining in NATO was in Spain's best interest.

Iran, Iraq trade claims

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran and Iraq claimed Wednesday their warplanes bombed each other's military camps and oil facilities, and ground forces fought heavy battles in southern marshes and northern heights.

Iran renewed a warning to Arab states of the Persian Gulf to stop supporting Iraq in the 5½-year-old gulf war, and Arab parliamentarians meeting in Jordan condemned Iran's offensive into Iraq.

Baghdad radio, monitored in Nicosia, said formations of Iraqi warplanes bombed an Iranian oil complex at Ganaveh on the eastern coast of the gulf, setting it ablaze.

The jets then raided the Musak and Rabat military camps in southern Iran, inflicting heavy casualties and damage, the radio said.
