Carter Talks To Private Citizens

CASTING A WARY EYE — Jeanene Walker of Lubbock is taking no chances on Friday the 13th. Consultants Meet With LCHD Panel

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

COUNTY HOSPITAL district board members remained tight-lipped Thursday after secretive discussions with representatives from other state teaching hospitals finally ended late Thursday afternoon.

Participants in the closed door "workshop" had neither comments on the meeting itself nor predictions as to what may come out of it. But a written report from the visiting officials is expected in a week or so, board member C. Wayne Smith said.

Board members met with Texas Tech regents and visiting officials from the Bexar County teaching hospital, the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston, and the University of Texas at Austin. The session started at 10 a.m., breaking briefly several times during the day.

Similar Problems Faced

The purpose of the session was to allow hospital district officials to talk with administrators and medical school officials who have faced similar problems. Visiting with the board were Dr. Warren Harding, administrator at the Bexar County hospital; Dr. Truman Blocker, president emeritus of the UT Medical Branch at Galveston; and Jack Thompson, administrator at the hospital.

Dr. Ed Brandt, vice chancellor of health affairs at UT, and George Brewer, Methodist Hospital administrator were in on the discussion. Attending regents were J. Fred Bucy, Lee Stafford and Roy K. Furr.

No "Magic Answers"

George McGowan, top administrator at Health Sciences Center Hospital since former executive director Gerald Bosworth was dismissed recently, said the day-long session didn't produce an "magic answers." But the consultants will be back in contact with the board, McGowan said, probably to give their suggestions for the hospital's problems.

The problems they were called in to study include unpaid patient bills totalling more than $7 million, lack of community physicians support and the inability to fill the hospital's available beds. Studying the reactions of community physicians, the board and visiting con-

Jetliner Crash In Indonesia Kills 61 Aboard

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — An Indonesian jetliner on a domestic flight crashed into a mountain on Sumatra and burned, killing all 61 people aboard in an accident apparently caused by bad weather, authorities said Thursday.

The Fokker F-28 jet of the Indonesian government's Garuda Airways, carrying a crew of four and 57 passengers, struck 6,400-foot Mount Gunung Sibayak, 39 miles south of Medan, on Indonesia's westernmost main island of Sumatra.

Witnesses said the plane burst into flames on impact Wednesday night.

A Garuda spokesman in Medan said bad weather conditions may have caused the pilot of the plane to alter his normal flight pattern by flying at a lower altitude.

The Medan control tower operator said radar indicated the plane was flying too low to clear the mountain, but before he could warn the pilot he lost contact with the plane.

The plane was on a normally scheduled flight from Palembang, in southern Sumatra, to Medan. Airport officials at Medan lost contact with the aircraft 10 minutes before its scheduled arrival.

Airline officials said the pilot, co-pilot, two stewardesses and 57 passengers apparently were killed instantly.

"They (the people aboard) were all dead," one witness told members of a rescue team. "Parts of the wreckage were scattered over several hundred meters. There was nothing we could do."

Garuda officials reported that all aboard the plane were Indonesans except for Gregory Noonan, 37, of Australia.

Furr's Super Markets May Sell Within Month

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

FORT WORTH– Attorneys for Furr's Inc. said Thursday afternoon that sale of the financially troubled grocery store chain could come within a month.

Possible sale of the Lubbock-based firm was announced Thursday during the first meeting of Furr's creditors in Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers's court here.

The company has been operating as a Debtor-in-Possession since May 26. Four days earlier, Furr's officials filed a petition under Chapter XI of the Federal Bankruptcy Act to provide an automatic stay of legal proceedings against Furr's while an arrangement with its creditors was formulated.

When asked by Flowers when Furr's might be able to file such an arrangement with the court, the corporation's attorney, Henry Simon Jr., told the judge "in 30 days."

Dealing With Prospects

"We have no crystal ball but we believe we have a real chance of making a trade with one or two of the avid entries we have in the race (to purchase Furr's)," Simon said.

"Although we may have to come back and ask for more time, we think we can have it (a sale) done in 30 days," he said.

While the sale of Furr's would not erase its more than $56 million in debts, the company's new owner would assume the responsibility of devising a method to pay Furr's almost 5,000 creditors.

During the morning session of the day-long meeting, it was revealed that four companies "have expressed interest in purchasing either the assests of or the stock evidencing ownership" of Furr's.

German Firm Interested

Simon told about 130 creditors at the meeting that a West German grocery store chain already has presented a specific purchase plan to Furr's officials. The offer made by Rewe Handelsgesellschast Leibbrand OHG (Rewe-Leibbrand) was included in a report Furr's filed Thursday morning with the court and its creditors.

W. Leibbrand, chief executive officer and a principal partner of Rewe-Liebbrand, also was at the meeting and talked with several of the creditors. If the West German group does buy Furr's, it would be Rewe-Liebbrand's first merchandising operation in the United States.

Three other companies also have expressed a strong interest in purchasing Furr's. They are Cullum Companies of Dallas (Tom Thumb Stores), Smith Management Co. of Salt Lake City, Utah and Handy-Andy or affiliates through the offices of Morris Jaffe of San Antonio.

Patrick J. Murphy, chief executive officer of Furr's, told about 130 creditors of the financially troubled firm he thinks the company should be sold.

"I'm trying to be responsive to the directions taken at an annual meeting that says sell," Murphy said.

"It was the unanimous decision of the stockholders to sell," he added.

Flowers set a hearing for 10 a.m. Aug. 21 on any arrangements Furr's may reach, either with a buyer or another plan to pay its debts. Any plan filed

Probated Sentence, Fine Given Grocer In City Arson Case

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 137th DISTRICT Court jury Thursday found Calvin Brown guilty of arson in connection with a Jan. 28 grocery store fire and gave him a 10-year probated sentence and a $10,000 fine.

The jury deliberated two hours and 15 minutes on guilt and 55 minutes on punishment.

Lead prosecutor Clint Averitte had asked for a 20-year sentence, the maximum for the second-degree felony arson charge, and head defense attorney Tommy Turner made an impassioned plea for probation.

Brown, 45, was charged with arson after the Serv-U Food Market he managed at 704 E. Broadway Ave. burned to the ground and two men inside died in the blaze.

Turner asked for probation, noting that Brown had never been convicted of a felony and had not previously shown any criminal tendencies during his life.

Several friends and business associates of Brown testified as character witnesses.

Turner told the story of Jesus on the Cross and asked the jury for "the same mercy for Calvin" that Jesus gave a thief being crucified alongside him.

"In punishing Calvin, you should not attempt to destroy him," Turner said. "A penitentiary sentence, when this man is going to have to live the rest of his life with this anyway, is not justice."

In asking the maximum sentence, Averite and co-prosecutor Hollis Browning argued that the conditions of probation would not be sufficient punishment for the crime.

"By your verdict, you can tell him and everyone like him in Lubbock County that you're not going to put up with arson," Browning said.

Averitte and Turner verbally clashed Thursday morning in final arguments on guilt or innocence.

Turner was criticizing prosecution arguments at one point, and Averitte was making a succession of objections when Turner told the jury, "I'm hurting him or he wouldn't be objecting."

"I object to that!" the heavy-set Averitte shouted, his face turning red as he

Starving Nicaraguans Begin Seizing Farms

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Guerrillas and peasants in the countryside have begun seizing farms as a food shortage caused by six weeks of civil war worsens, according to reports reaching here Thursday.

The head of the Nicaraguan Red Cross said three U.S. cargo planes made available for Red Cross relief flights would begin bringing food into the capital to help alleviate the desperate shortage for hundreds of thousands of refugees.

Fighting between Sandinista guerrillas and the forces of President Anastasio Somoza was at a lull, Thursday. U.S. Ambassador-at-large William C. Bowdler and leaders of a provisional government named by the Sandinistas met for a fifth time in three days in San Jose, Costa Rica.

Seeking Agreement

They have been trying to agree on conditions for Somoza's resignation and a cease-fire.

Somoza has said he is prepared to resign, but only if his Liberal Party is represented in any new government, and his National Guard kept intact. The United States is known to have sought an expansion of the junta to include more moderates.

The guerrillas hold or control 28 major cities and towns and virtually all highways. The guard holds Managua, where Somoza on Thursday was holed up in his fortified office-residence.

Mrs. Willim Walker who, with her husband, owns a 5,000-acre cotton farm with several hundred head of cattle near Managua, described one of the reported takeovers of farm land in the countryside.

"They came to our farm a week ago and told us to get out or they would shoot us," she told a reporter.

"I don't know what we're going to do. We don't know for sure yet how this thing is going to go. Some friends told us that the Sandinistas killed a $50,000 bull and cut it up for meat. Another friend of ours lost a farm that was much bigger than ours."

The Walkers are Americans who have lived in Nicaragua more than 20 years. Mrs. Walker said her husband, a pilot

Make-Break Speech In Preparation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter left Camp David unannounced, late Thursday, to seek advice from private citizens in a wrapup domestic policy meeting before an address to the nation Sunday that could be, for his political future, a make-or-break speech.

In the address, Carter will outline new directions in domestic policy.

The White House refused to say where Carter went, but ABC-TV reported that his meeting with private citizens was somewhere in Pennsylvania — perhaps near Wilkes-Barre, about 150 miles by helicopter from Camp David in western Maryland.

To Return Thursday Night

A Carter spokesman also refused to say who the private citizens were, but said the president was expected to return to Camp David sometime Thursday night.

White House officials had said Carter would be meeting, Thursday afternoon and evening, with aides at Camp David. Actually, the president slipped away to meet with the private citizens in a session he had scheduled a week earlier, but kept a close secret.

The White House said nothing about the trip until after the president left. A reporter pointedly asked White House deputy press secretary Rex Granum, "Where is the president?"

Granum responded, apparently reading from a prepared statement: "The president is concluding the domestic summit by meeting with private citizens away from Camp David .... To insure candid and productive conversations, the president is accompanied by a minimum number of staff members.

"There will be no announcement of the time or place of the discussions," Granum said.

Away From Camp David

He gave no other details except to say that Carter thought of taking the trip last Thursday and decided to talk to the private citizens away from Camp David because it would be "more productive if he went to them rather than bringing them to the White House or Camp David."

With Carter still cloistered at Camp David, Md., the White House announced that he will make a nationally broadcast speech "on issues which he feels are important" at 10 p.m. EDT Sunday.

On Monday, the announcement added, Carter will "present additional specifics on energy" when he flies to Kansas City to address a convention of the National Association of Counties.

The president will appear in Detroit, later Monday, at the annual conclave of the Communications Workers union. There he will "speak briefly and respond to questions from the audience."

Domestic Discussions

Carter met Thursday with his chief domestic policy aide, Stuart Eizenstat, to discuss possible ways to curtail oil imports "and other domestic matters," a White House official said. The official,

City Opposes Phone Rate Hike

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LUBBOCK CITY COUNCIL members will join a fight against higher phone rates in Texas, they decided Thursday, and will battle to preserve the 1 percent local option sales tax.

"I don't see that we have any choice," Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan said of the suggestion that the city fight the propsed rate increase.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. is asking to increase its revenue by $145.2 million a year in Texas, a 6 percent increase.

If approved by the Public Utility Commission, one-part residential rates would jump in Lubbock 25.8 percent — from $6 a month to $7.55.

City Attorney John Ross said the Texas cities might have most success fighting the allocation of the rate increases.

"The biggest rate increase is in residential service where (Southwestern Bell) has no competition," he said.

City Manager Larry Cunningham said it will cost the city about $2,600 to intervene in the case, but added "we do feel we need to have some sort of voice."

Texas Municipal League officials organizing the intervention effort said the cities "could have some effect on getting the rate increase reduced," Cunningham said.

"I think it's crucial we do get involved," Mrs. Jordan said. "I don't know how any citizen can complain about us getting involved to see about keeping telephone rates down."

Last year the City Council supported similar intervention in a telephone company rate case, and additionally challenged telephone rates being established on a statewide rather than regional basis.

Because of the lack of success in that effort council members were advised

Granberry Tapped For LCHD Committee Post

By DAVID HURLBUT
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock County Judge Rodrick Shaw announced Thursday that former Lubbock Mayor Jim Granberry willl serve as chairman of the newly created financial advisory committee for the ailing Lubbock County Hospital District.

Granberry has the "admiration and respect of the community and the LCHD board" necessary for the committee, Shaw said in making the appointments.

Granberry did not rule out the possibility of a tax increase as a prescription for the financially ailing hospital district, but said such a recommendation would be "at the bottom of my list of priorities.

"Before we can ask for a tax increase, we have to be businesslike and show the public we have done all we can," he said.

Twenty-four other Lubbock County residents will serve on the panel with Granberry, who said the committee would have its first meeting at 7 a.m. today in the board room of the Health Sciences Center Hospital. Granberry said the committee's first task would be to organize a number of subcommittees to deal with the following areas:

- Operations and management, and how the hospital can cut down its operating and personnel expenses;
- The political status of the hospital district with governmental agencies, and legislation and grants which might aid LCHD;
- The cooperative relationship between the hospital district, Texas Tech University and the Tech School of Medicine;
- The rapport between HSCH and local physicians, with emphasis on encouraging more physicians to use HSCH;
- Regional counties' support for the hospital district;
- Community relations; and
- Private fund raising.

Granberry said he believed there is a "vast reservoir of people in the community who have particular desires and interests" who might make large contributions to the hospital.

Although Texas Tech also relies on large amounts of private gifts, Granberry said there might be potential donors in the community who have not made contributions to the university who would give to the hospital.

"There are people who give large sums to athletics only, and wouldn't consider giving to anything else," Granberry said. "There may be people who feel the same way about the hospital."

Granberry compared the county's problem with the hospital to what he called a "beauty and the beast syndrome."

"We romance (the hospital) to our community and colleagues. But it is a beast in that it is eating us alive with poor management and cost overruns," Granberry said.

He said the purpose of the advisory committee is to do everything possible to get the hospital running as efficiently as possible on the resources it now has available. Then, Granberr said, the committee would look into the possibility of getting money from private donors, government grants and legislative appropriations.

"After doing all this, if we had to go for a tax increase, it would be so small that it might be accepted by the community," Granberry said. "Taxpayers would not stand for a tax increase unless we had an efficient in-house organization, with everything running in order. Then, if we presented a need, the environment would be such that the public possibly would accept a tax increase."

Other appointments to the committee announced by Shaw were:

Bill Blackwell of American State Bank; W.B. Criswell, member of the Soil and Water Conservation District; E.B. Dixon, administrator of the Lubbock Women's Clinic; R.C. Douglas, a Lubbock physician; Horace Drisdale, of the Soil Conservation Service; Mrs. Jack Faulks, assistant district attorney; Rex Fuller; Jaime Garcia, president of Comerciantes Organizados Mexico Americanos;

Also, Paul D. Godwin, of Insurance Associates; Father Tony Gonzales, priest at the Christian Renewal Center; Tim Hatch, president of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce; Lonnie Hollingsworth, former Lubbock City Council member; George Johnson, president of Idalou Co-op Gin; Ronald Key of Key Auto Supply; Don Langston, farmer; William R. Moss, a local attorney;

Also, Bob Murders, of Republic National Life Insurance; T.J. Patterson, editor of the Lubbock Digest; Albert Perez, a local attorney; Wimmiam R. Sewell, a retired banker; John Selby, a local physician; Ron Shelly, of Texas Instruments; Charles Verner, of First National Bank; and Mrs. Bob Whipple, president of the Health Sciences Center Hospital Auxiliary.

Air Force Colonel Welcomes Friday The 13th

By LAWRENCE GIBBS

STILLWATER, Okla. (NEA) Today, Friday, July 13, will probably be a lucky day for one retired Air Force colonel.

In fact, Robert Vincent (count 'em, 13 letters) says he may lie down that day in the middle of this town's busiest intersection "because somebody probably will come by and give me a thousand dollars."

Vincent expects only good things to happen to him on the 13th of every month.

That's because 13 is his lucky number. Hanging in his den is a large coat of arms bearing the motto "Honour sans Triskediaphobia" — which he translates as "honor without fear of 13."

Vincent has a thick "File 13" on his contact with the number.

His first brush with 13 cam when he was a child. He still has the postcard dated July 13 (year unknown) in which his grandparents told his father that their oil well came in as the first producer in Oklahoma's Edna Oil Field.

Most of his luck with number 13 came during his World War II days as an Air Corps pilot. Vincent, who saw military service from August 1941 to June 1971m flew 35 combat missions over Germany plus five combat-support missions delivering gasoline to Gen. George Patton.

These are what Vincent considers his most significant 13s. But he asserts that there are scores more:

• On Aug. 13, 1941, Vincent received his letter of appointment as a second lieutenant.

• He picked up his combat airplane at Florida's Orlando Air Force Base on April 13, 1944.

• On May 13, 1944, Vincent arrived in the European combat zone.

• On Aug. 13 of that year, he passed his check ride for first pilot. His 13th mission two days later was his first as an aircraft commander.

• Vincent never flew a combat mission on the 13th day of a month. And he never has a mission beyond 13-degrees East longitude, the strongly defended area that included Berlin.

• On Jan. 13, 1945, Vincent arrived back in the United States.

• Vincent's only bad luck with the number occured that Feb. 13, when his beloved B-24, "Dog Life," crashed at Norwich, England. But he was lucky enough not to have been there at the time.

• Exactly one year later, he received a new assignment as a meterology specialist.

• On July 13, 1959, he was appointed assistant professor of air science for Oklahoma State University's ROTC program.

• Two years later on July 13, he was assigned to "Flying Category 2." That meant he would no longer have to face combat.

• On Dec. 13, 1963, Vincent survived a NATO aircraft accident in which there were several casualities.

• Vincent's service record reveals that he received a total of 13 medals.

• And recently Vincent received his card as a character member of the Stillwater Airport's Civil Air Patrol Composite Squadrom. The number of the membership card is — what else? — 13.

13TH UNLUCKY? — Who says 13 is an unlucky number? Certainly not retired Air Force Colonel Robert Vincent. Even the license number of his car is "PF-1313."

Fireworks Stand Owner Offers $10,000 Reward

Owners of a fireworks stand just west of Lubbock are offering a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of the person who set the small building ablaze almost a month ago.

U.S. Fireworks of America Inc., is offering the large sum so that they "will stand more of a chance of someone reporting a friend or associate," said Thomas Manley, president of the company.

"Rarely does anyone commit a crime without telling someone," theorized Manley, president of one of the largest distributors of family fireworks in the nation.

"The main reason we waited so long" to offer the reward, he said, "was to give the arsonist more time to brag about it."

Sometime during the night of June 18 the empty 32-by-7 foot tin and wood structure was burned, six days before opening for business.

The stand had no electricity and did not contain trash, debris or fireworks, said Manley, which makes him suspect the fire was deliberately set.

Manley estimates that cleanup and transportation costs and the replacement cost for a new structure will reach near $10,000.

Although Manley said his company has not had problems with arson in the past, the company suspects two of three buildings lost to fire within the last year were by arson.

U.S. Fireworks of America Inc. began serving the Lubbock area in 1972, but "we've never had trouble with arsonists," said Manley, whose firm distributes in 11 of 31 states allowing the sale of fireworks.

Should a co-conspirator wish to provide information about the incident,that person would not be prosecuted by the firm, Manley said.

Those with information on the June 18 fire should contact the Lubbock Police Department or call collect 214-576-3512. Callers will remain anonymous.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The only beneficial influences in effect today for you are from events that can be sudden and unexpected. Be on your toes to accept them. Otherwise accidents and arguments are likely to occur to test your ability to handle them with tact.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You feel you are restricted and cannot gain your aims, but this is only because you are forcing issues. Your mate can bring you benefits you had not counted on. Avoid a troublemaker.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You are not making the progress you desire but a good friend can be of help to you now, and conditions improve. Not a good time for social visits or accepting invitations.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Not a good day for business matters but fine for social duties you want to perform. Listen to what a fellow worker has to suggest.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Those new interests you are studying could prove troublesome, so get out for recreation and forget about them. You can handle a creative idea well, though.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) An obligation you have needs care in the handling and listening to advice of a close tie for best results with it. Gain the favor of one who comes to visit you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Avoid arguments with partners or there could be a severance of connections, which you would later regret. Follow through with what your closest tie suggests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are not in the mood for work but can do fine where money is concerned. A fine opportunity to advance presents itself. Don't let it slip through your fingers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be careful that you are not too extravagant and start saving money instead. A good day to get creative idea working that can yield fine benefits, satisfaction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan time to get your life on a more secure foundation, but don't let it floor you if someone breaks a promise. Try to please your family more.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Exercise much care in all you do today, especially in driving. Don't be sarcastic with allies and listen to one who is serious and wise. Fussing over reports and statements could lead to arguments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study your monetary position and don't commit yourself to more than you can afford. Listen to suggestions of one in an official position. Plan small repairs to property also.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Don't be forceful with others in order to gain your aims. Take time to study into new philosophies. Try to be helpful to others in their goals and gain good will.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will understand early the problems of other individuals. Give a good education slanted along lines of the law or psychology for best results throughout the lifetime. Not much interest in sports here.

Skylab--Appropriate Salute

THE FIERY plunge back to earth of Skylab, the U.S. Space Agency's huge orbiting satellite which added greatly to man's knowledge of "the other world" out there may have been a showbiz type thing to many.

To others, it epitomized the "waste" of the space program. And to others, it was an exclamation point to one of this nation's most successful national ventures.

In some respects, one might say the space program in general represents one of the few all-out successful efforts made in the past two decades by the U.S.

THERE ARE those who will put up all sorts of arguments to the contrary.

The money, some critics say, could much better have been spent on welfare and improving man's lot on earth.

The money, others argue, could have been spent on peaceful ventures, such as aiding the Vietnamese refugees, or upgrading the lot of human rights victims.

Or, the money, which amounted to more than $25 billion for placing a man on the Moon alone, could have been saved.

ALL OF THOSE things are true, but with major qualifications.

The U.S. and much of the world reaped untold benefits from the American and Russian space programs, many of which are yet to be realized.

It was because of the space program that miniaturization was speeded up, later showing up in science, medicine and other commercial products.

It was because of the space program that NASA came up with new heat resistant type metals and other products which already are being used by consumers.

It was because of the space program that we are now taking a new, in-depth look at the far reaches of the universe of which we are a part. No one knows what knowledge or treasures may await man out there.

Skylab itself had some specific goals, one of which was to find out how man could exist in space for an extended period of time. Another was to make special studies of the earth, its forests, possible hidden oil and mineral reserves, to study its farm lands, and the sun and stars. Without the knowledge gained with Skylab, plans for all future space projects would be more or less in the dark.

AND FINALLY, the space program has kept thousands of persons employed.

Today, the next step for the U.S. in space will be the Space Shuttle, a ship capable of carrying people and cargo, of carrying out even more advanced scientific and medical experiments.

When he launched the U.S. space effort, President John F. Kennedy set a goal which he saw as a national goal, one which the nation had no choice but to enter and accomplish. Because of the effort, because the U.S. did put Man on the Moon, because of all that was and is involved, Skylab was in effect a salute to an achievement in the best of American traditions.

AN EDITORIAL:

'Synfuels' Not Only Answer

NOW THAT the bloom is off deregulation of domestic oil production, the solution of the moment on Capitol Hill is "synfuels," shortspeak for synthetic fuels—gasoline substitutes derived from coal, shale, tar, sands, farm crops and other unlikely sources.

The House has passed and sent on to the Senate one of several dozen bills in the congressional hoppers designed to promote synthetic production.

This particular one provides government underwriting of production of up to 2 million barrels of synthetic fuel per day, more than 10 percent of current national consumption.

Private industry would be encouraged to get into costly synthetic production with the assistance of federal loans and guaranteed purchases. The Pentagon would take a quarter of the total output.

ACCORDING TO current estimates, five years would be required to begin producing significant quantities of fuel at a developmental cost of some $18 billion.

The technology for producing synthetic petroleum products has been available for years and is currently proving itself. South Africa, a pariah among the oil-supplying nations, already is well advanced in meeting most of its requirements through coal conversion.

Initial cost of synthetic fuel would be high, up to $10 or more above recent prices for imported natural crude. As OPEC goes its merry price-hiking way, that gap is steadily narrowing. Consequently, synthetics are becoming steadily more economical.

BUT POLITICS rather than economics determine the OPEC price. The exporting countries charge not according to what it costs them to produce but according to what the importing countries can be compelled to pay.

If the price of natural crude can be raised by OPEC virtually at will, so can it be lowered. Once snythetics reached volume production, unit price might be expected to drop. But not below levels at which OPEC could still profitably operate.

There may be something to be gained in synthetic fuels, but in themselves they are no substitute for a balanced energy program involving conservation and development of a range of alternative sources.

Without such a program, we could well find ourselves with an $18 billion synthetic elephant instead of an answer to the fuel shortage.

M. STANTON EVANS:

From Riches To Rags In Four Short Steps

WASHINGTON—Among the most dangerous aspects of government involvement in the economy is the manner in which one type of intervention leads on to another—creating an endless series of problems that seem to cry out for regulatory solutions.

Consider the current mess in energy. This is entirely the result of government intervention in the marketplace, extending back across a span of years and producing a host of interlocking problems extremely difficult to understand. The result is to create frustration and bitterness in society as people blame each other for their economic troubles, and to set the stage for still more Federal intervention.

In the process leading up to the energy crisis, at least four stages of Federal involvement can be identified—each creating a problem that seems to require another intervention. The number chosen is somewhat arbitrary, since still other examples could be added to the list. It will do, however, as a framework for analysis:

1—BEGIN WITH THE problem of inflation. For years, the federal government has been steadily increasing the money supply, far in excess of advances in the volume of production. As more dollars bid for the existing supply of goods and services, prices are pushed upwards.

The government pursues this policy as a means of monetizing the Federal debt and easing pressure on interest rates. Then, having caused the inflation, it tries to scapegoat elements in the private economy as the responsible parties.

2—In alleged response to the problems thus created, the government in 1971 attempted an ill-fated venture in wage and price controls. Since controls deal only with the symptoms of inflation (prices) and not the causes (monetary expansion), such efforts are always doomed to failure.

Their major purpose is political—creating the impression that government is doing something. In economic terms, the chief effect is to generate shortages, since holding the price of a demanded commodity below its market level encourages consumption and discourages production.

3—BY 1973, THE failure of the program had become generally recognized, and it was abandoned—with certain key exceptions. Price controls were kept in place on domestic production of crude oil and the pump price of gasoline, on the pretext that energy was such a vital commodity that consumers needed this "protection". The result was to insure that consumers faced a shortage of the very commodity in question, as demand continued to rise and production correspondingly declined. That the shortage occurred only after controls went into effect—and that we have no shortage of things that aren't controlled—is viewed as a coincidence.

4—Having caused the shortage, the government then set out to solve this problem by means of further regulation.

To this end, it invented a complicated set of rules and guidelines, deciding how much crude oil should be used for winter fuel supplies, how much for gasoline, and so on.

THE MAIN EFFECTS of this procedure have been (a) to curtail the amount of crude oil available for gas in favor of fuel production for next winter, and (b) an allocations system that prevents the movement of gasoline, in response to demand, from one marketing sector to another.

It is this latter feature that is directly responsible for the recent gas lines. In four uneasy stages, therefore, the Federal planners have brought us to the current impasse:

Inflation leading to price controls; price controls leading to shortage; shortage leading to allocation; and allocation leading to enormous gas lines.

Now the planners who have caused it all are demanding still other interventions—such as total Federal takeover of the energy industries. If and when that is accomplished, it will doubtless lead to an even bigger mess, requiring still other interventions that have yet to be imagined.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Tongue In 'Check'

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—So alarmed are President Carter's SALT-sellers about the impact of Soviet blustering on ratification of the arms control treaty that the Kremlin has been sent a private plea, whose diplomatic language boils down to this advice: please shut up!

It was one thing when President Carter warned the Senate against amending the treaty; it was quite another when Soviet leaders, President Leonid Brezhnev and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, took up the cry with scowling threats of worldwide trouble if the Senate exercises its constitutional prerogative.

Unwittingly, the Kremlin's masters have all but insured at least one major amendment.

Why did Brezhnev and Gromyko butt in, without asking advice from Carter? "I think it's just the Russians acting with their usual finesse," one high-ranking administration SALT-seller told us. "They have no understanding of American politics and less interest in learning."

WHILE SEN. Howard Baker improved his stock on the Republican right by declaring opposition to SALT II, he is bucking the party current by supporting President Carter's nomination of a liberal Republican to the Federal Election Commission (FEC).

Sixteen Republican senators—including Baker's own presidential campaign chairman—have written letters requesting a "hold" on Senate confirmation of Frank P. Reiche to the FEC.

Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, national chairman of the Baker-for-President committee, told us Republicans need an unwashed partisan to represent them in the commission's rough-and-tumble, while Reiche "is a philosopher king."

Reiche, currently chairman of the New Jersey Election Law Enforcement Commission, has expressed willingness to go along with the Democratic campaign for public financing of congressional elections.

Consequently, many Republican senators wonder why Baker, as Senate minority leader, included him among approved nominees for an FEC Republican seat. They wonder even more why Baker still supports the appointment in the face of party opposition.

Many Republican senators wish Baker would withdraw his support for Reiche, and at least one put it in writing. But Baker has no intention of switching. Lugar told us he has not tried to change Baker's mind, but added, "This situation is one of the misfortunes of being minority leader."

OPERATIVES SUPPORTING John B. Connally's presidential campaign are up to their eyebrows in a surprisingly successful campaign to harass front-runner Ronald Reagan in his home state by changing California's winner-take-all primary to proportional representation.

A bill requiring over 50 percent of the vote to get 100 percent of the state's 168 Republican delegates won surprising endorsement (8-to-5) from the Senate Republican Caucus. Even more unexpectedly, it captured 47 percent support in an informal, non-secret ballot of Republican State Central Committee members.

All this is unlikely to actually pass the bill, but it is causing the Reagan campaign aggravation on its home ground that was not expected.

National campaign managers for Howard Baker and George Bush timidly kept hands off the California primary. But veteran California operative William Roberts, a one-time Reagan manager and now western regional director for Connally, did not hesitate. The effort to divide up California's delegation has had a strong Connally flavor.

THE PRESENT FRONT-runner to be the next leader of turbulent House Republicans is hard-charging Rep. Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan. But he has enough weaknesses to make the succession uncertain.

The best bet is that Rep. John Rhodes of Arizona will not serve another term as House minority leader. He probably will not seek re-election to Congress, and likely could not retain the leadership even if he did.

Rep. Robert Michel of Illinois is next in succession as minority whip. But aggressive younger Republicans who consider Rhodes too cautious feel much the same way about Michel.

The obvious alternative is Vander Jagt, who as chairman of the Congressional Campaign Committee is stirring Republicans nationwide with his oratory. Many freshman congressmen are politically indebted to Vander Jagt for help from his campaign committee. His drawback is unfamiliarity with House procedures. A regular on the banquet circuit, he is seldom seen on the House floor.

If not Vander Jagt, House Republicans may go to a relatively junior figure. Two aggressive young conservatives—Reps. Trent Lott of Mississippi and Henry Hyde of Illinois—are frequently mentioned. An even darker darkhorse is Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, if he does not run for the Senate.

ANDREW TULLY:

No Fun To Run

WASHINGTON—The gasoline lines have started fist fights and turned many Americans to thoughts of a life of crime, starting with the decapitation of that gas station owner now classified as a former friend.

In Washington, a husky female not only knocked a male adult down—she kicked him in the mouth. A youthful weirdo shot holes in the tires of a car driven by an old lady, then sped off to what, in the nation's capital, almost surely was freedom.

But the crisis, or whatever it is, also has manufactured two other kinds of people—braggarts who empty civilized rooms with nauseating references to their stamina as long-distance walkers, and wretches who feel guilty because they never exercise.

I NOW MAKE it a point to avoid a neighbor I used to consider a regular fellow. If I can manage it by animal cunning, I'll never again have to listen to his tale of walking five miles to and from downtown Washington every day since Big Oil established its dictatorship of the proletariat.

I confess I occasionally do some dispirited jogging and a furtive sit-up or two. But I do not consider it pleasure. I exercise only because I am not a Rockefeller, and frequent trips to the neighborhood loan shark for funds to have my meager wardrobe let out threatened to land me in debtors' prison.

I went along with the late Dr. Robert Hutchins of the University of Chicago when he announced that whenever he felt the urge to exercise, he had a good lie-down until it passed.

EXERCISE IS, in fact, a crashing bore. It is fine for children because it keeps them from robbing banks and running dope dens, and besides, only with advancing age comes the priceless knowledge that sitting down to a good book is more relaxing than training to fight for the world's heavyweight championship.

A leisurely stroll on a spring day, yes. Even a game of catch with a male child. But valor should defer to discretion when some athletic type suggests a neighborhood game of touch football. Last time that happened, I spent most of the time with some brute's thumb in my right eye and wound up with a broken toe.

Fortunately, I am not one of those males who compare themselves favorably with Jim Rice and Reggie Jackson. My appraisal of the athletic competence within my not uncomely body can only be called underweening. I watch racehorses run, not try to catch them.

IZZAK WALTON undoubtedly was right when he declaimed: "Look to your health—for health is the second blessing...a blessing that money cannot buy." It's also good for what ol' Izaak called the first blessing, namely, conscience. I don't feel quite as guilty about wolfing a second helping of dinner's dumplings if I've jogged that morning.

But unless Congress did something silly while I was waiting to get my gas tank filled, there's no law that says one must enjoy what is so aptly described as a "workout." And as Talleyrand warned: "Above all, not too much zeal."

JAY HARRIS:

One Life To Live

WHAT CAN BE done to combat the sharply rising crime rate among teenagers?

At what age does a youngster "get into trouble?" And can he or she be "scared" into "going straight?"

An answer of sorts to those questions will be afforded Lubbock and South Plains residents Saturday night when Station KAMC-TV, Channel 28, broadcasts an unusual and controversial documentary on the juvenile crime problem.

The name of the show, which airs at 9 p.m. is "Scared Straight!" Hosted by actor Peter Falk, it has won all sorts of kudos, including an Oscar. Because of its raw, unbridled, "four-letter" language, it also has won mixed reviews.

No matter what else, anyone viewing it won't soon forget it, adult or teenager.

"SCARED STRAIGHT!" is a real-life account of a visit behind prison bars with a group of 17 juvenile delinquents.

The show depicts the guts of a program developed by a group of hardened criminals in the maximum security section of Rahway State Prison in New Jersey. The people, the youngsters and the murderers and other major criminals they meet are real people, not actors. The "script" is from real life.

Twice each day, and with the full support of the Rahway Prison officials and the surrounding community, a group of juveniles enters the prison walls to serve a three-hour "sentence."

They go in, cocky, boastful, proud, lost, hurt, in trouble. They come out, subdued, puzzled, scared, thoughtful. A report on the group three months later shows all "going straight" with one exception.

THE DARING slice-of-life documentary isn't for everyone by any stretch of the imagination.

In fact, Rusty Jones, news director at KAMC advises that the film should not be viewed by the young, perhaps under 10 or 12 nor by anyone with an aversion to language seldom heard in any living room or on television.

Although acclaimed by most law officers and major educational groups, the film is debated on two points. First and foremost, the explicit language is shocking and to many offensive.

Secondly, while the real-life encounter with the criminals obviously does have an effect on the juveniles, the question remains as to how much effect the film itself may have.

"If televising this program helps even 10 kids go straight or prompts the formation of even one more program like the one at Rahway, then it has been worth it," argues Forrest N. Shumway, head of The Signal Companies which sponsored the show in some areas. Here, Crime Line, with the use of private funds, is sponsoring the show.

REGARDLESS OF the film, the facts on juvenile and adult crime are something Lubbock and area residents can understand.

Recent figures show Lubbock's "anything goes" crime rate thus far this year unabated for all practical purposes. Those who committed the armed robberies, assaults, murders and rapes also are real people. And their victims were real. And both once were juveniles, or still are.

What is happening here is just a small part of the picture across the nation. According to the latest FBI statistics, a violent crime is committed every 31 seconds in this nation, a crime against property every three seconds.

Almost half such crimes are committed by youths 10 to 17 years of age. Teenagers today are in the vanguard of criminal behavior. In 1977, a total of 2,170,193 youngsters under 18 were arrested. Juvenile crime is increasing twice as fast as that for adults.

WE AREN'T talking about a bunch of figures. Each statistic is a person.

The following story from The St. Petersburg Times says it all...

"Five youths finished a game of pingpong Feb. 6 and decided to 'make some money.' They took a bus to the home of 85-year-old Ralph Germano.

"Germano moved slowly to his door when he heard a knock. In moments, he was caught in a whirl of events. He tumbled onto the ground as the youths yanked open the door. He felt them grabbing his arms and legs and taking him back into his house. He heard them demand money.

"You're all nice kids. Don't do this," Germano pleaded. His pleas turned into curses as he felt repeated blows to his face and head. Someone poured milk over his head to make fun of him.

"FROM ROOM to room the youths dashed and searched until someone found it. Money. Stashed in a potato chip bag. Satisfied, they left. Each had 'made' at least $150.

"Germano remained on the floor of his home. He bled and mourned for 12 hours before he was found. Thirty-seven days later, Ralph Germano died."

The next line read: "MIAMI—The state of Florida decided that four juveniles became adults the night they killed Ralph Germano. They were convicted and sentenced as adults and will grow up under the supervision of Florida's Department of Corrections..."

One girl, 13, was given 114 years for second degree murder, burglary and strong-arm robbery. A 17-year-old boy got a life sentence for first-degree murder, life for burglary and assault, 15 years for robbery, all to run concurrently. Another girl, 16, got lesser sentences and a boy, 12, two 25-year terms and a 15 year term, all to run concurrently. One youth pleaded innocent and awaits trial.

Granted, the documentary, "Scared Straight!" isn't a pretty picture. But neither was what happened to Ralph Germano. As the headline on the story said: "They were out of second chances the night Ralph Germano was killed." That's so, for Germano and the "kids" who became adults the hard way...

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

ANOTHER GIMMICK that tavern types can use to win bets is this: Will bet you a quarter on the corner that you can't tell me what a "commando" is. Most folk think it's an assault soldier, but that's only a recently accepted meaning of the word. The original commando was an attack force of 600 men.

Claim is that a fourth of all the gold and silver ever mined on earth is now at the bottom of the sea in the holds of sunken ships.

A characteristic common to almost all overweight women is the tendency to assume a relaxed position either sitting or standing by crossing their arms comfortably over their midsections. So reports a medico.

When success goes to a person's head, it's usually a short visit.

Patriotism is easy to understand in America. It means looking out for yourself by looking out for your country.

The only day really worth claiming is when you do something for someone which can't be paid back and for which you expect no favor in return.

Federal Appeals Court Against Nixon In Wiretap Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court ruled Thursday that former President Richard M. Nixon can be sued for authorizing reporters and government officials to be wiretapped without a warrant.

The U.S. Court of Appeals rejected Nixon's claim that presidents and former presidents are immune from civil damage suits.

"Presidents are scarcely immune from judicial process," the court said. "The president is the elected chief executive of our government, not an omniscient leader cloaked in mystical powers."

The immunity principle was explained in two 3-0 decisions that affirmed in part rulings by U.S. District Judge John Lewis Smith Jr.

While upholding Smith on the immunity question, the appellate court reversed him on another key issue. Smith had ruled that Nixon and top aides did not violate a 1968 law that limited warrantless wiretaps to national security matters.

The appeals court disagreed. The panel expressed the view that Nixon had not complied with the 1968 law and told Smith to hold further proceedings on the issue.

Nixon, concerned about news leaks, in 1969 authorized an electronic surveillance program which resulted in warrantless wiretaps on 13 government employees and four news reporters.

Former national security aide Morton Halperin and New York Times reporter Hedrick Smith, two of those tapped, later brought separate suits against Nixon and his top aides.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was named as a defendant in both suits, but Judge Smith had ordered him dropped from the Halperin case.

The appeals court reversed that decision Thursday and made him once again a defendant in the Halperin suit. Kissinger, as head of the National Security Council, was Halperin's boss. The court said he was involved in the decision to institute the wiretaps.

In both the Halperin and Smith cases, the appeals court said, there appears to be no evidence that a national security threat was involved — the criteria for wiretapping without a judge's warrant.

In the Halperin case the appeals court said, "We conclude that a warrant was required for the Halperin wiretap in May 1969." The court added, "we see little evidence" that national security was a factor "from May 1970 to February 1971," when the tap was removed.

The case was sent back to the district court for further review. If the lower court agrees with the appeals panel's conclusion, Nixon and top aides could be liable for steep civil damages for violating the 1968 law.

Judge Smith had awarded Halperin $1 in nominal damages on grounds that Halperin's Fourth Amendment rights against improper searches were violated.

Other defendants in the Halperin and Smith cases include former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman and former Attorney General John N. Mitchell.

In the Hedrick Smith case, Judge Smith had found for the defendants, refusing to award any damages. The appeals court reversed that decision, sending it back to Smith for a retrial.

The appeals panel said that nothing in the record contradicts the reporter's contention the taps were placed because his stories were "personally embarrassing."

"There appears to have been little reason to believe under the government's own guidelines, that Smith posed a continuing security risk," the appeals court said.

The appeals court said the Halperin case "presents the conflict between the government's need to act decisively to safeguard the nation's security and those individual rights that are implicated in any surveillance situation."

It noted the Supreme Court has "taken an extremely narrow view of the circumstances in which the executive may exercise extraordinary powers under the Constitution.

"We believe ... that whatever special powers the executive may hold in national security situations must be limited to instances of immediate and grave peril to the nation."

Halperin told reporters Thursday he felt his position was "vindicated decisively" by the ruling.

Asked if this meant Nixon could be required to appear as a witness, he replied, "The likelihood that Richard Nixon would have to come to a trial in Washington is substantially higher than it was this morning."

But Halperin noted that the decision could be appealed to the Supreme Court. And he declined to rule out an out-of-court settlement that would avoid a trial, saying such speculation was "premature."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I placed a buy order on a real estate investment trust (REIT) stock at a limit price of $2, after being informed by my broker that the asked price was 2⅛. The next day the newspapers quoted that stock at 1¾ bid, 1 15/16 asked. That was less than the $2 a share I paid.

Are the newspaper quotations on over-the-counter stocks only rough approximates that cannot be relied upon? Or do I need a new broker?

A. I can't even guess whether or not you need a new broker, because I have no idea of that stock's quotation at the time you bought it. But I do know you should bone up and get a better understanding of the over-the-counter (OTC) market before you dabble in it.

Unlike stocks listed on a stock exchange — which has a central trading floor — stocks traded OTC are handled by brokers all around the country, usually by telephone and wire. Consequently, there's nothing resembling a complete record of prices.

The OTC prices you see quoted in newspapers are supplied by the National Association of Securities Dealers and are "representative interdealer" prices at the end of each business day. They could have been lower or higher during the day. The "bid" price is the average price brokerage firms are quoting to buy. The "asked" price is the average price brokers are quoting to sell.

But those quotations do not include the "markup" added to the price when you buy or the "markdown" deducted from the price when you sell, if your broker acts as a principal. Nor do they include the commissions you pay, if your broker acts as an agent.

In the OTC market, the action can get wild and woolly. I guess you're prepared for that, considering that low-priced REIT you bought. Some REITs have done well over the years. But most of them are still suffering from the beating they took earlier in this decade.

Q. One of the utility stocks I own pays dividends, part of which is a "return of capital" and therefore not subject to income tax. I realize that the nontaxable portion of my dividends reduces the "cost basis" of my stock. If I sell the stock, my profit will be the difference between my reduced cost basis and the amount I receive from the sale.

If I keep the stock, eventually my cost basis will be "zero." If I sell then, my profit will be the full amount of the sale and I would have to report the whole thing as a long-term capital gain.

But what happens if I continue to hold the stock after my cost basis is zero and continue to receive non-taxable dividends?

A. When and if that happens, you would then be required to report the return of capital portion of your dividends as long-term capital gains each year on your income tax returns. The rest of your dividend would be reported as dividend income.

If you hold onto that stock long enough for that to happen, you should be happy. Long-term capital gains are taxed lower than dividends and other ordinary income.

Q. My husband will soon receive approximately $15,000 from a pension fund from a company he left about three years ago. Would it not be to his advantage to put the money in a "rollover" individual retirement account (IRA)? I understand such an account is tax free, until the money is withdrawn at 59½.

A. It certainly would be to his advantage. Assuming that the money represents a total lump-sum distribution of that company's contribution to a qualified retirement plan, your husband won't have to pay income taxes on the $15,000 or any money the $15,000 earns while it is in the IRA.

He will have to start paying taxes on it when he begins withdrawing money from the IRA — no earlier than age 59½ and no later than age 70½. Early withdrawals from an IRA result in severe tax penalties — except in the case of physical disability.

Inspections Turn Up Another Crack In DC-10

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inspectors found a new crack Thursday in the pylon of a DC-10 jumbo jet, bringing to six the number of fractures discovered in the latest round of inspections of the troubled plane.

A Federal Aviation Administration spokesman described the crack, like the five found earlier, as "non-critical."

"We're still saying it's not a big problem," he said of the latest discoveries. FAA officials say the cracks are located in non load-bearing parts of the pylon that attaches the engine to the wing.

FAA spokesman Jerry Lavey said the crack was found on a Continental Airlines jet in Los Angeles.

Similar cracks were found earlier on a United Airlines plane, two belonging to Trans International Airways and two other Continental jets.

FAA Administrator Langhorne Bond told Congress on Wednesday he had been ready to permit a resumption in DC-10 flights earlier this week until the new cracks were found.

The FAA chief is awaiting a report on the new cracks before making up his mind, possibly late this week.

The report of the new crack came as McDonnell Douglas Corp., defending the design of the DC-10 engine pylon, said a crack found on the plane that crashed in Chicago occurred when the craft was out of service.

John Brizendine, president of Douglas Aircraft Co., strongly implied, but did not say directly, that the 10.5-inch crack occurred during maintenance performed by an American Airlines crew.

"Tests have proved that the DC-10's engine support pylon.. .is a good design and a good structure that performs as we originally intended" and complies with federal regulations, he told a Senate aviation subcommittee.

But an American Airlines official, raising a different possibility, said it was possible the crack resulted from the use of shims, or thin metal fillers, in the manufacture of the plane. He said one shim used in the plane that crashed was 50-thousandths of an inch thick.

Donald J. Lloyd-Jones, American Airlines vice president, conceded, "It may be that we did cause the crack."

Brizendine and Lloyd-Jones testified before a Senate aviation subcommittee as maintenance crews for the nation's domestic airlines continued inspecting the DC-10 for a new type of crack discovered earlier this week.

Officials say the cracks, found so far on five planes of 57 inspected, are in a non-load-bearing part of the pylon that connects the engine to the wing. But Federal Aviation Administration chief Langhorne Bond has decided not to permit a resumption in DC-10 flights until he receives a comprehensive report on the cracks.

All 138 DC-10s in the nation's domestic airlines fleet have been grounded since June 6. The grounding order came 11 days after the crash in Chicago that claimed 273 lives in the nation's worst air disaster.

Meanwhile, FAA spokesman Jerry Lavey said 94 Boeing 747s have been inspected since the discovery Wednesday of cracks in an engine mount on a Pan Am jet in New York. No cracks have been found on any other plane, Lavey said, although the remainder of the nation's fleet of 121 747s is being inspected.

Pan Am and FAA officials both have said the cracks did not pose safety hazards, and the 747 fleet is free to operate.

On the subject of the plane that crashed, McDonnell Douglas spokesman Brizendine said the crack "could only have occurred when the pylon and the wing were not connected and the aircraft was not in service."

Officials of the National Transportation Safety Board told the same Senate subcommittee Wednesday there was no doubt that the crack was caused during maintenance of the plane at an American Airlines facility. They said the crack apparently occurred while a maintenance crew was installing the pylon and engine assembly under the wing after making repairs.

Brizendine disputed the possibility that a shim used in construction could have caused the crack. "This type of crack had to be caused by impact forces," he said, adding, "We do not believe that (the shim) had anything to do with the cause of the crack.

Storms Pelt Southeast, Dampen Panhandle Area

Scattered thunderstorms pelted Southeast Texas and lightly dampened the Panhandle Thursday night, but South Plains residents again coped with dry, hot weather.

Showers and thunderstorms concentrated near Victoria, Sealy and Alvin and other scattered storms were reported near Paris in the northeast and Corpus Christi in the south.

Light showers fell in the Panhandle area, mostly around Borger. Two thunderstorms were located at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the area, one near Marfa and the other at the southern tip of Big Bend. Both storms were reported moving northwest at 10 mph.

Most Lone Star residents enjoyed sunny skies and temperatures averaging in the low 90s. Temperature readings stretched from 86 degrees at Texarkana to 108 degrees at El Paso.

Lubbock skies are expected to be partly cloudy this afternoon, and forecasters are calling for a 20 percent chance of mainly nighttime thunderstorms.

Temperatures should continue to be hot through Saturday, with the high near 100 degrees and the low near 70.

Winds should be southerly today, 15 to 20 mph.

A few nighttime thunderstorms are expected to move across the mountains of southwest Texas and across the Panhandle late tonight, which will account for any rain which might dampen the Lubbock area.

Otherwise the rest of the state should have fair to partly cloudy skies today and hot temperatures.

Man Charged In Murder

A-J Correspondent

SNYDER — David James, 22, of Snyder was arraigned Thursday on charges of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the shooting of Donna Lee Byrom, who died only hours before the arraignment.

Bond was raised from $1,500 to $5,000.

Miss Byrom, 23, of Snyder was shot once in the stomach with a 30-30 rifle on July 4. She died at 12:59 a.m. Thursday at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

The shooting incident occurred about 4 a.m. on July 4 at 1908 Coleman St., Apt. 4. James was arrested at the scene.

The body was sent to Abilene for an autopsy and will later be sent to Tennessee for funeral services and burial.

Miss Byrom, a native of Hazelcrest, Ill., is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee C. Byrom and a brother, Timothy, all of Lynchburg, Tenn.

Eight-Year-Old Succumbs To Rabies

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An 8-year-old boy died of rabies Thursday, the third child in the past two months to die in an outbreak of the disease along the U.S.-Mexican border at Eagle Pass.

One 2-year-old girl from Poteet, about 30 miles south of here, remains hospitalized in serious condition with a suspected case of rabies. Her disease has not been confirmed by laboratory tests.

The latest victim was Gerardo Castano, a Mexican living in Eagle Pass with his uncle. The boy was bitten on his right hand May 11 in Piedras Niegras, just across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass.

The dog that bit the child disappeared. Young Castano was hospitalized in the Santa Rosa Medical Center here June 8, and his ailment was confirmed as rabies June 29 by the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. He lapsed into a coma two weeks ago.

Hospital spokesman Jack Finger said the boy died of cardiac arrest.

An 8-year-old girl, Marianita Garza, died of rabies last week — the first Texan to die of rabies contracted in the state in 10 years. She was bitten by a rabid dog May 31 in Eagle Pass.

A 9-year-old Mexican girl died last month in Piedras Negras of rabies, Mexican officials say.

State health officials have focused their battle against the disease in Eagle Pass, 150 miles southwest of San Antonio. Teams of the doctors were in their second day of a door-to-door campaign Thursday to make vaccinate dogs and cats against rabies.

City officials estimate about 300 pets — a third of the city's dogs and cats — have been inoculated since the house-to-house drive began Wednesday.

Adviser Says SALT II 'Threatens Security'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief military adviser to the U.S. delegation at the SALT negotiations denounced the arms control treaty Thursday as one that "establishes the conditions which threaten our security for years to come."

"This treaty does not meet minimally acceptable standards," retired Lt. Gen. Edward L. Rowny told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee

The retired general said that based on his experience, negotiating with the Soviets, he believes a stronger treaty from the U.S. standpoint "was — and still is — attainable."

He insisted that if U.S. negotiators had persisted in their March 1977 proposal for sharp reductions in the most powerful missiles on both sides, that the Soviets would have agreed. The proposal submitted by the Carter administration was flatly rejected by the Soviets who refused to consider it a basis for further negotiation.

Rowny's statement was challenged by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, who said, "You are saying that we could have had a better treaty if we had tried harder ... You are saying it was so evident to you, it should have been evident to other negotiators ... It ought to be based on something better than a person's gut reaction to personalities."

Muskie kept insisting that "I want to blame somebody ... I want something tangible." But Rowny was unable to cite any evidence other than his experience to support his contention that the Soviets would have accepted toughter U.S. proposals.

Rowny served on the SALT delegation for six years as representative of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He retired from the Army when the negotiations ended and joined the ranks of critics urging rejection of the agreement.

He testified on the fourth day of hearings on SALT II, a day given over to opponents of the treaty.

Meanwhile, the Senate Intelligence Committee began closed hearings on whether the United States can verify Soviet compliance with the provisions of the treaty. That committee's findings will have a critical role to play in whether the treaty is ratified.

Adm. Stansfield Turner, director of the CIA, was the opening witness before the Intelligence Committee.

Earlier, Paul Nitze, a former deputy secretary of defense, said the treaty provisions "one-sidedly favor the Soviet Union." Nitze also called the treaty "wholly ambiguous" and said it could be used to prevent the most effective deployment of the U.S. MX missile.

Nitze is an advocate of the so-called MPS basing system for the MX missile. Under MPS, dummy silos would be constructed to prevent the Soviets from knowing the exact location of each of the nation's intercontinental ballistic missiles.

President Carter is expected to decide on a missile basing system by Aug. 1. When it is deployed in the mid-1980s, the MX will be the largest missile in the U.S. arsenal. MPS is one of the options being considered.

Nitze, a slight, gray-haired man who heads the Committee on the Present Danger, told the committee the MPS system is the only basing method that could adequately protect the MX from a Soviet missile attack. And he testified that he is certain the Soviets would object to MPS as a violation of SALT II.

When senators questioned his assumption about the treaty, Nitze said his information came from discussions with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

"Ask them," he told Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb.

"I have and they've indicated otherwise," said Zorinsky.

The discussion on the MPS occurred as several members of the committee pressed Nitze to say whether any of the steps he says are necessary to upgrade U.S. strategic forces would be prohibited by SALT II. The only one he cited was the MPS deployment method.

Nitze objected to allowing the Soviet Union to maintain its force of 308 giant SS-18 missiles and to the failure to include the Backfire bomber as a strategic weapon covered by the treaty. "I move from a position not far from parity to one of Soviet strategic nuclear superiority," Nitze said.

When Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., asked Nitze if he were saying the two superpowers were about equal now, the witness replied:

"I believe we've slipped over the edge ... It is on the wrong side of parity."

Saying that "the world as a whole looks upon the United States as conducting its foreign policy in a weak and vacillating manner," Nitze urged rejection of the treaty by a clear majority.

"I think we would be in trouble if only 34 of the Senate voted against it," he said. A two-thirds majority is required for approval. If all 100 senators vote, 34 are the minimum negative votes needed to reject it.

"If a majority of the Congress would say this is not the way to act," said Nitze " ... then I think all kinds of good things would happen."

After Rowny and Nitze testified, the Pentagon made available to reporters a defense official knowledgeable on the negotiations to rebut criticisms of the treaty.

This official, who could not be identified under the ground rules, contended there is "no reasonable basis to believe that any of the important provisions of the treaty could have been different" if the United States had used different negotiating tactics.

This official said there were times when the United States took a position that the Russians opposed and won out. "We dug in on equal aggregates and prevailed," the official said in referring to the question of strategic nuclear force levels.

The Pine Tree Flag was the first U.S. naval ensign, made at the request of George Washington's military secretary in 1775 to be flown by a fleet of armed schooners.

Paul Banks

ANDREWS (Special) — Services for Paul Banks, 64, of Andrews will be at 10 a.m. today in the Means Memorial United Methodist Church with the Rev. Keith Wiseman, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Highland Cemetery in Stamford under direction of Kenney Funeral Home of Stamford. Local arrangements were handled by Singleton Funeral Home of Andrews.

Banks died at 7 p.m. Wednesday following an auto accident 17 miles east of Andrews on Texas 176. Justice of the Peace Tom Ragsdale of Andrews pronounced Banks dead at the scene of the hit-and-run accident.

He had lived in Andrews 12 years, and previously had lived in Stamford for 47 years. He was born near Stamford. He worked as a retired field maintenance foreman for Exxon Corp. for 31 years.

He was a member of the Means Memorial United Methodist Church, the Masonic Lodge of Stamford, the Wichita Falls Maskat Temple of the Shrine and a past patron of the Order of the Eastern Star.

He married Geraldine Ivey Aug. 31, 1940, in Aspermont.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Charlott Ham of Abilene; three sisters, Dorothy Johnson of Baytown, Wanda Jones of Cisco and Rachel Williams of Howley; a brother, J.W. of Baytown; and three grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Dewey Braswell, J.W. Moxley, Preston Grissom, Leland Hamilton, Jack Hilgenfeld, C.G. Ward, Harold Bankens and Kenneth Bartell.

Exxon employees will be honorary pallbearers.

Boat, Trailer Lost To Hot Check Artist

Lubbock County sheriff's deputies Thursday were looking for a man identified as Gene Allen Rasmussen, who allegedly bought a boat from a local marine dealer with a false check.

Rasmussen bought a 1979 bass boat and trailer, valued at $2,482.40, from Furr Marine on the Buffalo Lake Road in late June, and drove away with his new purchase after paying for the boat with a check for the exact amount drawn on a local bank.

Shorty Furr, owner and operator of the boat dealership, told deputies Rasmussen had written the check on an account that was closed. Rasmussen has not been located since leaving the shop pulling the boat and trailer.

An official of the Lakeside Nursing Home at 4306 24th St. Thursday told Lubbock police someone has been taking drugs from a narcotics closet inside the nursing home.

Donna Sue Brown of the home's staff said several types of drugs, including Darvocet, Darvon, Benadryl, Elavil, Seconal and Phenabarbital, have been taken over a month-long period. She said she did not know exactly what the missing narcotics were worth.

Burglars removed two CB radios and some tools from a tractor and a barn belonging to Larry Wimpler of Box 276, Lorenzo, sheriff's deputies reported Thursday.

Investigating officers said they found footprints and tire tracks at the barn, but had made no arrests in the case. The missing property is valued at $888.

A stamp machine was ripped from the wall of an abandoned service station at 102 University sometime earlier this week, according to police.

Ouio Myers, a city fireman who managed the station, said the machine was worth about $175, and had about $50 worth of stamps in it.

A custodian at Bowie Elementary, 2912 Grinnell St., told police someone removed more than $100 cash from her purse Thursday morning while she worked at the school. Erlinda Lopez said she saw several persons in the school during the morning but didn't know who might have taken the money.

Lubbock police were searching Thursday for an aggravated kidnapping suspect a Lubbock woman said tried to rape her after offering her a ride home from her friend's East Auburn Street residence.

The woman told police the man drove her to Mackenzie Park, stopped his automobile and threatened to kill her if she didn't submit.

The victim said she was able to escape and returned to her friend's house.

The friend told police the man was in Lubbock attending a funeral and had been visiting her when he offered the woman a ride.

In other activity Wednesday, a Midland woman was arrested on charges she shoplifted and bought with a stolen credit card June 11 $623 in merchandise from Montgomery Ward department store, 5015 Boston Ave.

Police traced the card the 23-year-old woman was allegedly using to a Midland man who told police it had been taken from his wife's purse.

Late Wednesday afternoon, police arrested a 25-year-old Lubbock man after he led police in a chase all the way to his Teak Avenue residence and then bit the officer attempting to arrest him.

Police said they began chasing the man on Quirt Avenue after he cut sharply into their lane. After following him into his driveway, the man reportedly began cursing and threatening the patrolmen, biting one on the little finger and thumb.

Police charged the man with evading arrest, simple assault on a police officer, disorderly conduct and failure to stop for the partrol car's siren and lights.

Also Wednesday, police arrested an 18-year-old Lubbock woman on suspicion of prostitution after she allegedly offered to have sexual intercourse with a plainclothes policeman.

Singer Minnie Riperton Dies Of Cancer At 31

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer-songwriter Minnie Riperton, known for the baby's breath she wore in her hair and her 1974 hit "Loving You," died of cancer Thursday at age 31, a spokeswoman for her record company said.

"She died at 10 a.m. in her husband Dick Rudolph's arms," said Kyo Sharee of Capitol Records. "They were listening to a Stevie Wonder tape of a song he had written for her."

Miss Sharee said Miss Riperton, who had a breast removed in 1976, entered Cedars-Sinai Medical Center at the beginning of the week because of an arm injury at first believed unrelated to cancer. But the cancer had spread to her lymphatic system, Miss Sharee said.

Miss Riperton was serving as honorary chairman of the American Cancer Society's 1979 national education crusade.

"She was a symbol of hope and courage to many," said Dr. LaSalle D. Leffall Jr., president of the American Cancer Society.

He said that in a 1976 appearance on the "Tonight" show, she reassured millions of women that losing a breast need not mean the end of the world.

"The overriding outlook should be happiness about being alive," she told viewers.

A few months later, President Jimmy Carter presented her the cancer society's Courage Award in White House ceremonies.

One of eight children in a musically-minded Chicago family, Miss Riperton studied opera before turning to pop music when she took a job as a receptionist with Chess Records in 1963 at age 14.

Clayton, N.M., Benefits From Wind-Powered Electrical Turbine

By DAVID HURLBUT
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The wind that blew across the flat prairie south of Clayton, N.M., gradually reached 12 mph. The 60-foot blades of the town's wind-powered electrical turbine gradually turned faster, and within a minute the rotor was turning at 40 rpm.

Clayton city engineer J.R. Webb was explaining the successes and failures of the 200-kilowatt wind turbine when some people from Fort Worth drove up to the site. They began discussing the project and the fact that wind energy has been slow in gaining acceptance.

"Of course, people need to be educated about these things," the woman said.

"Well, when people notice how much their electric bills are increasing, they might have a little bit of incentive to get educated," someone said.

Clayton was one of the sites selected by the Department of Energy and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for experimental wind energy programs. NASA installed the wind turbine for the town in November of 1977.

Since it began generating electricity, the wind turbine has supplied roughly 2 percent of the town's electrical power. The bulk of Clayton's electricity is generated by diesel or natural gas. The present actual generation of the town's power plant is 5,800 kilowatts.

NASA engineer Richard Shalten said selection of the Clayton site was based on wind data for Amarillo, located about 120 miles southeast of Clayton.

According to the National Weather Service, the average yearly wind in Amarillo is 13.7 mph. Amarillo's minimum monthly average is 12 mph during August, with maximums of 15.5 mph during March and April.

Clayton city manager Robert Johnston said most of the town's 3,000 residents approved of having the $2.5 million experimental project located in their town. However, he said most people there do not regard the wind turbine as a major source of electricity.

"It's more like a landmark," he said, explaining that residents of the town enjoy the "prestige of having a project like this which is the first of its kind."

Johnston said the town was responsible for furnishing the site, keeping data and doing routine maintenance on the turbine. The town also supplied equipment to tie in the turbine with the the regular power supply. The federal government bore the remainder of the cost.

"We regard the turbine as more of a fuel-saver, because you can't control when the wind blows," Johnston said.

NASA engineers consider the Clayton turbine as something more successful than a tourist attraction. NASA project engineer Art Birchenough said for a first prototype, the turbine has been "remarkably trouble-free."

"When we started, there was almost no recorded data on wind turbines. We began with a 100-kilowatt machine in Ohio in 1973, and it was the first look at wind turbines in this country since World War II," Birchenough said.

Second In A Series

Birchenough said NASA and DOE had no intention of producing economic electricity with the Clayton wind turbine. "It was an experiment to test the technology, feasibility and public acceptance of such projects," he said.

However, data from the Clayton project is being used to develop a larger wind turbine which is designed to produce electricity economically. Birchenough said the larger turbine should generate 2.5 megawatts (or 2,500 kilowatts) of electricity at a cost of about 3½ to four cents per kilowatt-hour, which is competitive with electricity generated by fossil fuels.

NASA engineers visit the Clayton site only once a month to make periodic checkups on the turbine. Webb and another local engineer perform routine maintenance on the machine. Prior to the dedication of the turbine, the two attended an eight-day training session at NASA's project center in Cleveland, Ohio.

"It's really an amazing machine," Webb said. "Some of the old-timers around here consider this thing some kind of monster. They can't believe it turns and adjusts itself."

The angle of the rotor blades and the direction of the entire unit are controlled by two miniature computers, both of which are about three feet square by 1½ feet tall.

Most of the mechanics, including the generator, are housed on top of the tower with the rotor. There was enough room inside the unit for Webb to stand straight as he explained the system.

"The turbine can cut in (begin operation) in an 8 mph wind," Webb said. "But we have so many times when the wind will dip just below that speed. So they changed the cut in speed to 12 mph to insure a more constant operation.

"The unit takes its own wind data, then adjusts itself for the proper direction and blade angle," he said. The wind, electrical generation and mechanical data are monitored in a building at the base of the 100-foot tower. In addition, there is a remote monitoring system located at the town's power plant.

Webb said the town of Clayton is on a closed utility grid, meaning that nearly all of the electricity produced by the town's generating plant is used within the town. He said that under normal operation, the wind turbine supplies about 3 to 5 percent of the town's electricity. The wind turbine at times has supplied as much as 15 percent of Clayton's power during times of low usage.

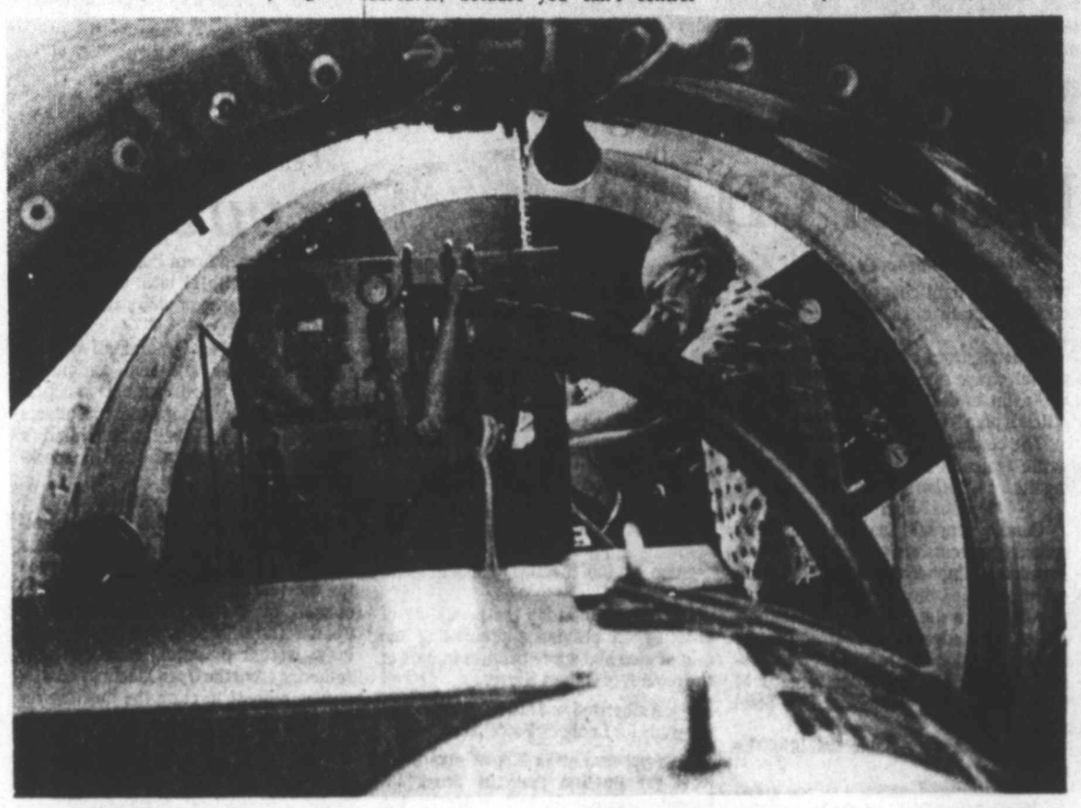

Webb talked briefly about a similar wind turbine which DOE and NASA will dedicate this week in Boone, N.C. The turbine is designed to generate two megawatts of power in winds similar to those which drive the Clayton turbine.

"That one will put out 10 times the power of the one we have," he said. "If we had a machine that size in Clayton, we'd be in business."

The wind turbine at Clayton is one of three machines of its kind currently in operation. The other two are located at Block Island, R.I., and at Culebra, Puerto Rico. A fourth 200-kilowatt turbine is being installed on the island of Oahu in Hawaii.

In addition to the larger two-megawatt machine in North Carolina, NASA plans to install three 2.5-megawatt turbines. Amarillo is one of 12 sites under consideration for the machines.

Birchenough said the 2.5 megawatt turbines should be installed sometime during mid-1980.

VIEW FROM THE INSIDE — Clayton chief engineer J.R. Webb examines some machinery inside the town's 200-kilowatt wind turbine. He and another Clayton engineer have done most of the routine maintenance on the wind machine since the Department of Energy and NASA installed the turbine 18 months ago.

Gov. Rockefeller, Wife, New Parents

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Sharon Rockefeller, wife of Gov. Jay Rockefeller, gave birth to a son Thursday, and both mother and baby were reported in fine condition.

The baby, named Justin Aldrich Rockefeller, weighed 10 pounds, 2 ounces and was born shortly before 6 a.m. at Charleston Memorial Hospital, said Anna Maxwell, hospital night supervisor.

CHILD MOLESTER SENTENCED

HOUSTON (UPI) — A 61-year-old man who pleaded guilty to sexually abusing an 8-year-old girl has been sentenced to 50 years in prison. Louis Pratt pleaded guilty to molesting a girl abducted at gunpoint June 3 while she was walking home from a convenience store.

House Unit Okays Gas Standby Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A plan to give President Carter standby authority to ration gasoline and require Americans to leave their cars at home one day a week was approved, Thursday, by a House subcommittee.

The 13-8 vote by the House Commerce energy and power subcommittee gave a major boost to the legislation, which Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill predicted the House will pass by the end of July.

"I think it will sail," O'Neill said. He said the new plan stands a far better chance than Carter's original standby rationing plan, which the House rejected May 10 by a 256-159 vote.

The new measure, the result of Carter's challenge for Congress to come up with its own plan, would give the president standby power to:

—Draft a rationing plan which could be triggered by a 20 percent decrease in U.S. oil supplies or a seven percent drop in world production. Congress then would have 15 days to review the plan, during which time either chamber could vote to block it.

—Establish fuel-saving targets for states and the nation as a whole. In the event of a 10 percent shortage of supplies, states could take steps of their own choosing to meet these goals.

—In states failing to meet the fuel-saving targets, impose a sticker plan to prohibit driving on the day listed on the sticker. The motorist could pick the day of the week.

—Require gasoline purchases of no less than $5 — or $7 for eight-cylinder cars — to discourage "topping off" gas tanks.

Floor Action Dated

The full House Commerce Committee was expected to approve the bill next week, and floor action has been tentatively set for the week of July 22.

Said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., the subcommittee chairman:

"I think the gasoline-station lines and the tremendous price increases and events of the last several months since the Iranian crisis have substantially bettered the chance of passage of this proposal."

Under new federal pricing rules the Energy Department plans to implement Sunday, motorists could be paying three cents to five cents more for a gallon of gasoline as early as next week.

The new rules, intended to improve service station owners' profit margins, will allow a markup of 15 cents to 20 cents per gallon, department officials say privately, compared to the present average of 12.5 cents a gallon.

The Energy Department meanwhile has advised the president in an option paper that the United States could produce 500,000 to two million barrels of synthetic fuels by 1990, said an administration source who declined to be identified. U.S. oil imports now total 6.3 million barrels daily.

Anti-Strike Efforts Fail

Last-minute efforts at a White House meeting to avert a strike of independent service station dealers in Pennsylvania and Delaware, starting Friday, apparently failed, according to Pennsylvania members of Congress who took part.

The dealers, who represent about 30 percent of the 13,000 gas stations in the two states, are demanding increased profits and fuel allocations, but White House energy troubleshooter Jack Watson was quoted as saying, "If the dealers are persistent in their determination to go out, then there's nothing more the government can do."

The new gasoline rationing bill would repeal part of a 1975 energy law that gives Congress two chances to vote on details of any rationing plan — when it is proposed and when it is to be invoked.

When the House votes on the new one-step bill, members will not know how much gasoline their states would get under rationing. In May, by contrast, state-by-state lists were published.

All details of rationing under the new plan would be left up to the president. Congress would have only one chance, during the 15-day review period, to vote if Carter tries to put the plan into effect.

The parts of the bill dealing with state conservation targets, the sticker plan and the $5 minimum purchase would not be subject to congressional veto.

The subcommittee approved the bill as a substitute for a Senate-passed measure that would authorize the president to take a variety of energy-conservation steps short of rationing, but also separately approved Carter's original standby rationing plan.

Probated Sentence, Fine Given Grocer

jumped to his feet. "That's a sidebar comment!"

Judge Robert C. Wright sustained the objection.

Turner and co-defense attorney Gene Cobb argued that the state failed to prove Brown had any insurance claim to the building and that the law required proof he took part in burning the store to collect insurance money.

Averitte countered that Brown only had to be proven a party to arson, and he said a hole had been knocked into the back of the building and a lock broken so that it would appear a burglar had set the fire to cover up a burglary.

Andrew Zournas, 52, owner of the building, and Mark Corley, 27, both died in the fire.

"What reason is there to burn the building down than to collect insurance?" Averitte asked. "There is none."

Cobb, a tall, older attorney whose presence counterbalanced that of the young, pugnacious Turner, argued that Brown had no apparent reason to be involved in burning the store down.

"Where is there a single, solitary motive for Calvin Brown to assist in setting fire to that building?" Cobb asked.

Turner objected when Averitte suggested Brown left the fire scene to see if Corley and Zournas had escaped and gone to "a rendezvous" point, and Averitte objected to "counsel's conduct" when Turner sat back down and covered his mouth, laughing, after Wright overruled the first objection.

Averitte closed by saying, "We want to know what the people of Lubbock County think of this kind of situation."

In the first half of the prosecution argument, co-prosecutor Hollis Browning went over the charge on applicable law and listed 19 reasons he said indicated Brown was involved in arson in the store fire.

Seizures Of Farms Reported

who owns a small private plane, has been taking people out of Nicaragua daily and was currently in neighboring Honduras on one of these trips.

Ismael Rees, president of the Nicaraguan Red Cross, estimated Thursday that at least 20,000 people have been killed in the past six weeks of fighting in Nicaragua, bringing to 25,000 Nicaraguans — one of every 100 — the number to have died in a year and a half of violence.

Most of the dead are civilian noncombatants, Reyes said.

Reyes also estimated that there are 600,000 homeless living as refugees on the brink of starvation, crowding Red Cross centers, or living in lean-to shelters made of sticks and plastic sheeting.

Reyes said three U.S. Air Force C-130 Hercules transports would begin soon to fly in food and medicine daily from a number of points in Central and South America.

Hundreds of tons of supplies have been kept waiting at airports throughout the region because until now, no government was willing to risk flights into Managua. Last month, a Colombian C-130 was shot at while landing in Managua to bring in supplies and evacuate people.

The new diplomatic meeting in Costa Rica came as a surprise, because on Tuesday night the talks had been suspended in apparent disagreement.

In San Jose, junta spokesman Manuel Espinoza said, "we believe the meeting will be a decisive one, since we will present to him the organic law the junta proposes to impart and the specifics of forming a new army in Nicaragua and what situation the National Guard will remain under."

Espinoza refused to elaborate.

Carter Talks To Citizens

asking that he not be named, said Richard Moe, Vice President Walter Mondale's chief of staff, also was at Camp David.

Also at the Catoctin Mountain hideaway was Hendrik Hertzberg, a top Carter speechwriter.

Carter summoned a number of journalists to Camp David for a luncheon, Friday. White House spokesmen would not identify those invited, but it was learned that the group included Walter Cronkite of CBS, Frank Reynolds of ABC and a number of newspaper and magazine political columnists.

Carter, who abruptly canceled plans for an energy policy speech scheduled for a week ago, now plans to discuss "energy in its broadest context" — an umbrella large enough to cover the economy and the likelihood of an early recession.

Many of the 130-plus official and unofficial advisers who have met with the president at Camp David also expect Carter to deal with broad moral and philosophical questions.

Some participants in the Camp David meetings report privately that the president talked about what he sees as national moral decay, citing family breakups and complaining that he has to go back to the 1950s to find motion pictures suitable for his 11-year-old daughter, Amy.

Carter's wife Rosalynn, speaking Thursday to a luncheon of the Womens' National Democratic Club, said those who met with the president at Camp David were nearly unanimous in saying the nation faces many problems besides energy and that the problems require strong corrective measures.

"They are problems that have developed over a number of years," she said. "There are no quick fixes." Mrs. Carter, who attended most of the Camp David meetings, said her husband would outline specific proposals later.

A subject of more intense speculation was the future of Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger. Although White House press secretary Jody Powell has labeled as "uninformed speculation" a report that Schlesinger is resigning, rumors of a successor abounded even in the absence of a formal resignation.

must be approved by 51 percent of the creditors.

Thursday afternoon, the judge heard 1 1/2 hours of testimony on a motion filed by five of Furr's creditors to have Murphy's contract with the corporation suspended pending review by creditors.

On June 11, Flowers authorized a two-year contract for Murphy making him top Furr's official with a $160,000 annual salary.

Judge Denies Motion

Flowers, however, denied the motion, saying he thinks Murphy has so far done a very competent job of running Furr's and "it's time to go about more constructive matters."

Also Thursday, an official 11-member committee of creditors was selected. Giles Forbess of 4009 69th St. was named to the committee. He is owner of Benton Oil Co. of Lubbock, "a major creditor" of Furr's.

Flowers also authorized Furr's to pay $172,000 in non-union insurance claims filed by its employes since the company filed under Chapter XI. He also allowed Furr's to set aside another $80,000 to cover future insurance claims by employes.

Payment of about $148,000 in union health and welfare insurance plans also was authorized by the judge.

BUSES ALLOWED NEW ROUTES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission, citing the nation's gasoline shortage, gave intercity bus companies nearly unlimited freedom Thursday to establish new routes this summer serving any city they wish. The temporary order is effective immediately and will continue until Sept. 25. The companies can add any route they want, but they can not discontinue any present service.

First Case Brought Under Spanking Law

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A 13-year old Halmstad boy brought the first case under a new law against parents spanking or manhandling their children, but police said Thursday there was insufficient evidence.

Authorities in the southwestern city said the boy arrived home late Monday evening and was reprimanded by his parents. They said the boy became violent, his father wrestled him to the floor to calm him, and the next day the boy called police.

The boy apparently regretted his action, but police investigated the case, the first reported since the law took effect July 1. They said he had not received a direct blow from his father and there was no evidence of a crime under the law.

Council Approves Part Of CD Plan

this year to fight changes in Southwestern Bell's rate allocation structure instead.

Officials from cities wanting to fight the telephone rate hike will meet Friday in Austin to discuss the issue. Lubbock officials plan to attend the meeting.

The council also decided to support a battle against a U.S. Steel suit challenging the local option sales tax in Texas.

"Serious Repercussions"

Cunningham said the suit has "pretty serious repercussions" because the corporation triumphed in a virtually identical suit filed in Ohio.

Although a statute passed in the most recent legislative session may protect the local option tax in the future, Ross said the court could order refunds of taxes collected in the past if U.S. Steel wins the case.

"That is a very viable liability," he said.

The Attorney General's Office asked the Texas Municipal League to "participate actively in the defense of the case," Ross said, and the cities already involved decided to hire the Houston law firm of Fulbright and Jaworski.

"I recommend we go ahead and participate," Ross said. "The city has a real stake in the lawsuit."

Lubbock's contribution to the fight against the lawsuit would be based on the city's population and the cost would range from $1,500 to $3,000 "tops," Ross said.

Plan Partially Approved

After considerable grumbling about federal regulations, the council approved portions of a beefed-up citizens participation plan for the Community Development Block Grant Program, but balked at other recommendations.

Mrs. Jordan called the required changes in the plan "nitpicking junk from someone on the federal payroll who's got to justify their existence."

"I'd like to tell them just to forget it," she said.

However, Cunningham said the city's annual allocation of CD funds would be held up "if we don't provide something along these lines."

Ironically, Cunningham said the city's participation plan of a few years ago was used as a model for other cities to follow.

"Now, two or three years later, they come back and say it's not good enough."

The Department of Housing and Urban Development gave the city 60 days to submit a new citizens participation plan or indicate how the current plan will be changed.

In response to the deadline which is on Monday, council members approved seven changes in the plan which were specifically required by HUD.

However, Councilman Alan Henry objected to other changes which would cost nearly $10,000 which would be taken away from CD-funded projects.

Henry suggested a letter be written to HUD inquiring whether department officials wanted that much money taken away from projects "instead of leaving it in where it would do some good."

Other Actions

Also at the meeting, council members:

— Agreed to study the possibility of enacting an ordinance prohibiting the sale of glue and spray paint to minors at the request of Gilbert Herrera.

— Authorized a $125,000 power supply study for Lubbock Power and Light.

— Approved an ordinance creating a legal presumption that the driver involved in a hit-and-run accident is the owner of the vehicle involved.

— Appointed former city attorney Fred Senter as a temporary Municipal Court judge and reaffirmed the appointment of Syrian Marbut as a temporary judge.

— Allocated $65,000 in Community Development contingency funds to finance traffic lights and street improvements at East 50th Street and Quirt Avenue as requested by Lubbock school officials.

— Approved an application for a grant of $218,525 from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to fund improvements on an athletic field quadraplex to be constructed in the Yellowhouse Canyon Park.

Consultants Meet With LCHD Board

sultants met with 14 local doctors for a luncheon exchange of views at the hospital cafeteria.

Board member Gwen Stafford said the interchange between community physicians and board members was productive. McGowan said the consultants hoped to get a feel for the community's attitudes toward the hospital by speaking to the doctors.

Given Worshop Status

The actual discussion between regents, board members and consultants was never opened to the public. Notice for the meeting was not posted, under opinion of the LCHD legal counsel, Charles Galey, who said that the meeting's workshop status exempted the gathering from the Open Meetings Law.

The request to close the meeting reportedly came from the consultants, who wanted a private discussion.

"You can't get an open discussion if you know you're going to be quoted," board chairman Jack Strong said.

Administrator Harding told reporters that many of the problems the local teaching hospital is facing are similar to problems he faced at Bexar County. Asking for help from other teaching hospital administrators is not uncommon, he said.

"It's a shortage of funds, when you come right down to it," Harding said of Bexar County's own problems. But he added that Bexar County's problems are not as critical as the problems faced at Health Sciences.

Harding wasn't prepared to sum up the hospital's problems or single out any one thing responsible for its shakey financies. Occupancy is a major problem, he said, but added "You have to do everything you can to collect patient bills."

Underworld Chieftain Slain In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Mafia chieftain Carmine "Lilo" Galante — free on bail and reportedly running the 200-member Joseph Bonanno mob — was shot to death Thursday afternoon in an apparent underworld hit at a Brooklyn restaurant, police said.

Two other men died and a fourth was critically wounded in the spray of shotgun fire from two teams of masked assailants at the Joe & Mary Italian-American restaurant, police said.

The 69-year-old Galante died with a cigar in his mouth, seated at a table in the afternoon sun with three luncheon companions. A jug of wine and salads were on the table in a garden behind the restaurant.

Marked For Death

Galante had been marked for death by mob enemies for more than a year, federal authorities said.

Killed with the mob leader were his luncheon companions — his chauffeur-bodyguard, Leonardo Cappolla, 40; and the restaurant owner, Giuseppe Turano, 48. Turano's 17-year-old son, John, was critically wounded.

A fourth person at the table, who was not immediately identified, got up and walked away after the shootings — apparently uninjured.

Deputy Inspector Martin Hayes said of the masked men: "They were executioners, it's that simple."

Police said six gunmen took part in the assault. Four of them arrived at 2:45 p.m. in a blue Mercury, pulling up in front of the restaurant on a narrow street in the Bushwick section of Brooklyn.

Three gunmen went through the front door of the restaurant, past a picture of the Last Supper, and into the garden — where they opened fire on Galante and his luncheon companions.

Rapid Gunfire

"It sounded like 'boom, boom, boom, boom' — fast, something like that," said a wide-eyed 10-year-old boy who heard the gunfire from the street.

The fourth gunman stayed outside the cafe, keeping passersby at bay by sweeping his shotgun toward any who came near.

Meanwhile, a second car pulled up, and two gunmen walked into the restaurant, shooting young Turano, who was talking on a pay telephone. They ignored three diners and left.

Witnesses said the drama was over in less than five minutes as the gunmen inside left and, with their companion on the sidewalk, leaped into the car, which then sped away.

The shootings recalled a gangland rubout in 1972, when Joseph "Crazy Joe" Gallo was shot to death in a restaurant in Manhattan's Little Italy.

As head of the old Joseph Bonanno mob family, Galante's ruthless amassing of underworld power seemed destined at one time to lead him to the top of organized crime. He had begun his crime career as a teen-age shoplifter.

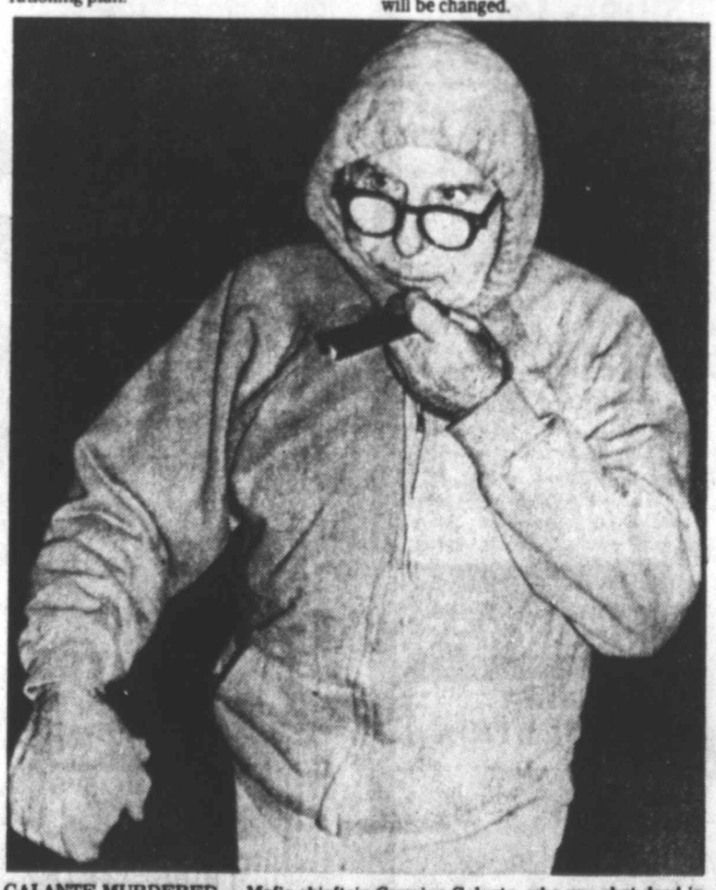

Leading Candidate

Galante had been depicted as a leading candidate for the "Boss of Bosses" mantle of the late Carlo "Don Carlo" Gambino. But a parole violation sent Galante back to federal prison in 1977 and Frank "Funzi" Tieri reportedly moved up to the top rung of the mob ladder.

When he was shot, Galante was free in $50,000 bail after his constitutional rights were adjudged violated during hearings which led to his imprisonment in 1977 as a parole violator. The U.S. Parole Commissioner reportedly voted last month to return Galante to prison.

But he was said to be entitled to a federal court hearing before he could again be incarcerated.

It was while Galante was still in prison that federal authorities claimed to have received information "from a highly reliable source" that the mobster was the intended target of assassination.

Death Toll At 71 Following Luxury Hotel Fire

ZARAGOZA, Spain (AP) — Fire started by an exploding pastry machine roared through a luxury hotel in Zaragoza Thursday. Authorities said at least 71 persons died and 47 were injured in the worst hotel tragedy in Spanish history.

The civil governor's office said best estimates pointed to 71 dead and 47 injured, although more bodies could be buried under the debris. City hall sources said the death toll might reach 80.

Nearly 200 people, among them the 79-year-old widow of dictator Francisco Franco, managed to escape the fire at the 10-story Hotel Corona de Aragon, one of the finest in northwest Spain.

But three guests leapt to their deaths and one couple, trying to save their baby, threw it to its death when it missed a fireman's net.

Two U.S. rescue helicopters from a nearby air base plucked three people from a rooftop and one from an upper-story window, as other guests jumped from windows, climbed down knotted bedsheets or firemen's ladders, and groped down stairways through choking smoke.

The death toll was reported by the civil governor's office.

While it was Spain's most tragic hotel fire, the toll did not match that of the world's worst hotel fire, in which 162 died in Seoul, South Korea, on Christmas Day, 1971. In the United States' worst hotel fire, 119 died at the Winecoff Hotel in Atlanta on Dec. 7, 1946.

Zaragoza mayor Ramon Sainz de Varanda told reporters that the Corona de Aragon did not meet required safety standards — a charge disputed by the civil governor — and that a meeting was scheduled later Thursday to look into the matter.

Most of the 300 registered guests were Spaniards, but hospitals reported at least four foreigners were among those killed.

The nationalities were not immediately made known.

Helped by firemen, Dona Carmen Polo de Franco was led off a hotel escalator by a fireman as smoke swirled through the building. Scores of others fled down firemen's ladders, using bedsheet ropes to drop to safety and walking hand-in-hand downstairs through the black smoke.

Military authorities said two U.S. Air Force Huey helicopters from the joint U.S.-Spanish airbase outside Zaragoza helped in the rescue.

One, using a basket, lowered S. Sgt. Charles L. Hart Jr., 26, of Orlando, Fla., onto the roof of the burning building. He helped two men into the basket, and they were flown to a bullring nearby. The helicopter then returned to pick up Hart and a third guest on the roof.

Meanwhile, an unconscious man was hauled from a window by another para-rescue sergeant — Tech. Sgt. John L. Pighini, 34, of Philadelphia. Officials said he clung to a "penetrator" cable dangling from the other helicopter and strapped the unconscious man to the cable so the helicopter could fly him to a nearby rooftop. "Penetrator" cables were used in Vietnam to clear jungle landing pads.

Civil Gov. Francisco Laina said the fire was caused by an explosion, probably of boiling cooking oil, in a machine for making "churros," or breakfast fritters, in the ground floor coffee shop.

He said there had been anonymous telephone calls Wednesday warning of bombs in hotels and banks, but he did not think the fire was part of a Basque separatist campaign to wreck foreign tourism. Earlier this summer Basque terrorists bombed several sites in Spain, including hotels popular with foreign tourists, but gave warning and they were evacuated.

The governor disputed the mayor's charges that the hotel lacked fire safety precautions, and said it had 160 extinguishers for 237 rooms.

Firemen said smoke from the burning oil was sucked into the ventilation system and about half of the victims died from suffocation. They brought the fire under control about three hours after it began.

Mrs. Franco, a Madrid resident, was in Zaragoza to see her 21-year-oldgrandson, Jose Cristobal, enroll in a military academy. She was accompanied to Zaragoza by her daughter and son-in-law, but was alone in the hotel while they stayed with friends. She was released from a Zaragoza Hospital after being treated for shock and smoke inhalation.

Among the victims were several Spanish Army officers and their families, who had come to attend a military ceremony.

Officials said the Americans involved in the rescue effort were from Detachment 9 of the 67th Air Rescue and Recovery Squadron. Those in Hart's crew were identified as: Capt. James Davis, 26, of Poplar Bluff, Mo., pilot; 2nd Lt. Carl A. Steel, 25, of Huntingdon, Pa., copilot; S. Sgt. Leonard E. Stewart, 34, of Fairview, Utah, flight mechanic; and S. Sgt. John R. McGee, 26, of Ft. Pierce, Fla., para-rescueman.

Grant To Strengthen Emergency Care In Region

A $220,000 federal grant will be used in 15 South Plains counties to beef up emergency medical care in the region this year.

The grant money, which had been sought by the South Plains EMS Committee, will be used to help counties and towns develop communication systems and to provide training for ambulance personnel, said Giles McCrary, Post mayor and SPEMS chairman.

SPEMS is a private, non-profit association that will administer the grant. It is comprised of consumers, elected officials and health services providers.

"Competition for this funding was intense," McCrary said. "Only about 20 such grants were to be awarded nationwide. Fortunately, we had regionwide support that was effectively demonstrated in Washington by South Plains EMS representatives and Congressmen Ken Hance and Charles Stenholm."

The federal funds will be available in early 1980 and will kickoff a four-year development program throughout the region, McCrary said.

He explained most of the grant money will be used to up grade communications. Relay towers will be installed throughout the region to provide a communication link with the Panhandle, Permian Basin and eastern New Mexico, he said.

Also, the money will help pay for EMS training programs that will be offered at five area towns throughout the region. The money will help reduce tuition from $200 per person to about $25, McCrary said.

Each community within the 15-county region will determine its own participation in the upgraded EMS program, he said, explaining each community will design its own program and pay according to its available funds.

Communities will have until December to decide whether they want to participate and to what extent.

At the end of the four-year development program, participating communities must be self-sustaining, McCrary said.

Two Lubbock hospitals will be involved in the program in that they have transfer agreements that allow a critically ill or injured patient to receive care at one hospital and then to be transferred to a hospital near his home for recuperation.

The transfer agreements, which would be used only in em ergency situations and which were signed by 23 hospitals in the region, include Methodist Hospital and Health Sciences Center Hospital. They probably will be major transfer points, McCrary said.

The 15 counties involved in the regional EMS program are Bailey, Lamb, Hale, Floyd, Motley, Cochran, Hockley, Lubbock, Crosby, Dickens, King, Yoakum, Terry, Lynn and Garza.

Valorous Soldier Fighting For Job

NEW YORK (AP) — Bolivar Andrade, cited six times for valor as a soldier with the U.S. Army in Vietnam, used his status as a veteran to get a job with the New York City Transit Authority. The city now is trying to fire him because he is not a U.S. citizen.

The matter is the focus of a suit filed in U.S. District Court by the New York Civil Liberties Union. The rights group challenged the constitutionality of a state Civil Service Law rule that veterans must be American citizens to receive hiring preference.

Andrade, 37, is an Ecuadorian who has lived in the United States for 22 years. In November, the Bronx resident used his veteran's preference number to get a job selling tokens for the city Transit Authority, according to court papers.

In June he was told that his veteran's preference was revoked because he is not an American citizen. He was also told to look for other work.

Crime's Wages Portrayed In 'Scared Straight'

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Rusty Jones, the executive vice president of KMCC-TV (Channel 28), said recently he was shocked when one of his reporters discovered that police handled over 4,000 juvenile offenses in Lubbock alone in 1978. KCBD-TV (Channel 11) talk show hostess Alice French told her viewing audience Wednesday she attended a recent rock concert with expectations of finding "12-year-olds and drugs." And only last weekend police arrested a 16-year-old youth in connection with a murder in this city.

Indeed, juvenile crime statistics are growing nationwide, which is why KMCC-TV, with financial backing from Crime Line's board of directors, has rather courageously decided to air the brutally intense documentary "Scared Straight" at 9 p.m. Saturday.

The program, which makes use of extremely graphic language (the sort which would assure an R rating in a theatrical film), has been carried in other Texas cities, Dallas and Amarillo being two examples. But Lubbock, says Jones, is the first city to show "Scared Straight" in what is commonly referred to as "prime time." Both Dallas and Amarillo refrained from showing the film until after the 10 p.m. news, but Jones said, "We just figured the viewing audience dropped off so much in that time period that it would be best to show it earlier.

"There was a lot of discussion in committee here about screening it at 10:30 p.m., but my argument was that the kids who really need to watch this might miss it at that time period. We also did not want to show it too early, though, when we might inadvertently catch very small children. And we had to consider our Clovis, N.M., market, too, since the show will come on an hour earlier there. We figured that 8 p.m. was the very earliest we could show it, and that by 8 p.m. there would be an adult controlling the television viewing in most households."

Why all the concern about a TV show, you ask?

Frankly, the answer lies in the fact "Scared Straight" is no ordinary television program. A multi-award-winning documentary, it is a filmed report about a group of hardened criminals at New Jersey's maximum security Rahway State Prison — all serving sentences of "over 25 years or life" — trying to scare the bravado out of a group of juvenile offenders by forcefeeding them a healthy helping of reality, by telling them in the most raw terms imaginable exactly what prison life is all about. There are no actors in this production (other than Peter Falk, who provides occasional narration outside the prison walls), no script, no coffee breaks for the participants.

The film begins with interviews held with the juveniles before they are taken to meet the prisoners, juveniles driven by an unfeeling motivation, who see crime as "a challenge," who hold no concern for their victims, whose common goal is becoming rich via crime. These young men and women tell the interviewer they began breaking the law at age 15, at age 14, at age 9! They are confident, cool and calculating. Prison is just something in the movies to these kids. One girl even says she thinks it will be "fun" to visit Rahway and see all the "burned out" convicts. Another wants to learn about burglar alarms so he can become a better "professional thief."

But the smiles and laughs and glib manners disappear as they enter the prison for a three-hour session with the group of convicts known as the Lifers. With the sound of doors and bars crashing closed behind them, they are first run through a metal detector and quickly discover the guards are already treating them with a no-nonsense attitude. They are told to enter the cells, to experience, if only for a few moments, stark confinement. Criminals toss out homosexual taunts as they walk, single file, toward the room in which they will meet the Lifers.

And it is in this room they come face to face with discipline, with fear, with the prison tradition of the big controlling and perhaps destroying the little. The human slavery, the homosexual gang rape, the uncertainty, the violence. The language is indeed harsh, but no doubt more offensive to the older generation (parents) than juveniles these days. The words, after all, can be heard in concert halls, movie theaters, school yards, ball fields, anywhere kids gather. But it is the sheer vicious intensity behind these words which make them effective in "Scared Straight."

The convicts are not courteous speechmakers hosting a school field trip. They are there to instill an aura of terror, and they do so by putting their faces inches away from those of the juvenile offenders and spitting out orders and warnings. There is no compassion when the female juveniles begin to cry. And we quickly see that the juvenile tough guys we met earlier have already been reduced to whispering, frightened boys.

One criminal tries to make the delinquents understand their victims' feeling of loss by taking their shoes. Another graphically explains the five ways a new prisoner can deal with being gang raped, a speech made all the more effective when one of the delinquents said afterward he would definitely opt for the fifth recourse — which is suicide. Others tried to reach the kids on an emotional level, explaining that today's prisons are filled with yesterday's delinquents, that nobody plans on getting caught, that there is still time to avoid the life of bells and brutality. "I'm only 26 years old," says one convict, "and I've been here the last seven years. And I regret every (expletive) day I've been here."

More importantly, these convicts emphasize more than once that "you don't have to kill somebody to get to prison."

According to Rusty Jones, the Dallas station which aired "Scared Straight" received a lot of complaints about the program's language. "But," he added, "they did not promote the show as heavily as we are doing. I think that's the key: warning people about the material they will be viewing. I think we have an obligation to do that. We want to inform the public beforehand."

Jones has also given advance screenings of the film for the Avalanche-Journal, local radio stations, Crime Line directors, school administrators, judges and other community leaders, reasoning that, "These people are the ones who will hear about the program from viewers, and we want them to be aware of the program's material and purpose."

The KMCC executive first brought up the possibility of airing "Scared Straight" last December. The station made its decision to go with it in the spring. But now, months later, Jones is still uncertain about viewer reaction. He said, "At the advance screenings, the reaction has generally been very good, though the language has left a couple (of viewers) quietly unenthusiastic. But the reaction of the public is still the $64 million question. Is someone going to blow up the station before Saturday? I don't think so. And that's because of our promotion. We say in advance that 'Scared Straight' has graphic language and shows what prison is like.

"We don't promote it as 'entertainment.' I don't think anyone can tune in the program and then honestly tell us he didn't know what to expect."

Jones and several employees will be at the KMCC studio during and after the screening Saturday night. "I want enough people here to personally handle all the calls which will be coming in," he said.

But Jones seems most excited — and for good reason — about the prospect of fully using the television medium. "This is the first time, I think, that we've really been able to use television, our medium, to its fullest," he said. "As a TV station, we have an obligation to the news. We use our news department to point out problems, like this week with our series on juvenile crime in Lubbock. But now we can use our news department to talk about the problem, and then follow this with what we think is a possible solution to the problem."

But the word repeated is "problem." There is a rising problem with juvenile crime, a problem no doubt magnified by the offenders' ability to mentally eliminate prison as a possible end. But KMCC reporter Bob Hannan said Wednesday, "There is already a marked increase in juvenile crime against property. And in the more serious crimes against persons, the district attorney's office is trying to certify these juvenile offenders as adults. And that means these juveniles could face the adult penal system, as it is portrayed in 'Scared Straight.'"

And who should know better about the chances of staying out of jails than the Lifers, the convicts, the prisoners themselves? As one Rahway inmate stressed to a not-so-bold juvenile, "The police can make a thousand mistakes — you can only make one." KMCC-TV and Crime Line are airing "Scared Straight" in prime time Saturday hoping that that message will sink in, believing that the film's language can be tolerated since one of the best deterrents to crime is showing the potential criminal the possible consequences of his actions.

Crime Line Inc. is not using reward funds to pay for the program. Officers and directors of the organization founded by Mayor Dirk West raised the funds to sponsor the screening.

SHOW HOST — Peter Falk hosts the prison film, "Scared Straight!" It was filmed inside prison walls and features conversations among old-line criminals and young lawbreakers outlining the brutal facts of life in prison.

TOUGH LANGUAGE — Realistic descriptions of the nightmare of prison life are graphically underscored in "Scared Straight!" The television documentary is about a unique program for juveniles started by convicts at Rahway (N.J.) State Prison. Eighty to 90 percent of those who have participated in the program have gone straight. Hosted by Peter Falk, the compeling hour show will be aired nationwide.

Two Days Remain In Photo Contest

Only two days remain before the deadline in the Avalanche-Journal's summer snapshot contest, being conducted in conjunction with the Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards program for 1979.

Entries from amateur photographers received or postmarked prior to midnight Saturday will be eligible for the competition. Photographs must have been taken after July 1, 1978.

Both color slides or photographs and black-and-white photos are eligible. Entries should have the complete name and address of the photographer and should be mailed to the summer snapshot contest, c/o The A-J, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, 79408.

Three winners in both divisions will be selected each week by a panel of judges from the A-J. Weekly winners will receive parchment certificates and will compete at the end of the contest for inclusion in the Kodak competition. Four color and two black-and-white winners will be forwarded to Kodak. The top six finalists will receive $50 each from The A-J.

Kodak is offering $55,000 in cash and travel prizes.

One of last year's local finalists received a special merit award of $100 from Kodak.

New Residents Welcomed At John Knox Village

Residents of John Knox Village hosted a get-acquainted dinner from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday at the Skylight Dining Room for new residents of its new Villager Wing.

The Villager Wing, an addition of 60 units, is expected to be ready for occupancy by Sept. 30, said Barbara Dunn, marketing director.

Entertainment was provided by the Music West barbershop quartet, including Lloyd Thompson, Joe Goodin, Lowel Caddel and Len Webster.

The yard measurement was standardized in 1305 by King Henry I of England as the length of his arm.

Thermostats Are Set, Dallas Judges Disrobe

DALLAS (AP) — There's contempt around the Dallas County courthouse for new thermostat settings of 76 degrees mandated by county commissioners.

Gone are some of the heavy, black robes symbolic of judicial authority.

In Domestic Relations Judge Dan Gibbs' court, litigants will still face a robed judge. But if they peeked beneath the bench, they'd see that Gibbs wears comfortable blue jeans instead of blue serge.

But while some judges have gone informal, none has relaxed coat-and-tie orders for attorneys.

Judges can set their own dress codes in their courts, but they can't tell District Attorney Henry Wade what to wear.

These days, Wade has taken to wearing polo shirts to work, provided he doesn't have to appear at an official function.

"Heck, I'd let all my assistants come to work in polo shirts if the judges would allow it," Wade said.

"It's easy for judges to talk about how cool it is," said one prosecutor who did not wish to be identified, fearing a different kind of heat. "But we're the ones that have to get up there and walk around and shout. That's a lot hotter than sitting on the bench all day."

Many judges say they won't dis-robe no matter what, citing the dignity of the bench.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Boy, you don't know what to believe anymore.

Remember when tan was healthy and pale was sick?

I do.

Back in Ohio, I dedicated four months out of every year of my life to getting a tan. My ultimate goal was to turn brown before Jan Reeves did. I never made it.

Jan was one of those women whom I suspect hung out all winter under a bulb in the refrigerator, greased up when she stood under a lighted theatre marquee, and turned bronze when she strung Christmas tree lights.

If I dragged out to the community pool right after Easter with a coat over my terminal goose bumps, there she'd be anointing her brown body with baby oil. She couldn't have tanned more evenly if she had been revolving on a barbecue spit. When I appeared she'd look over her large sunglasses and say, "You feeling better?" I felt like a naked chicken.

We all had a Debra Paget wish. Tans made your clothes look better, your teeth whiter, and besides, they announced to the world that you had time to loll.

I personalily found being "into sweat" a bore and was relieved when it was discovered to be not only unhealthy but turned you into Dorian Gray. People have done a complete about-face. No woman wants to admit any more that she suns herself. If you find one who is toasty brown, she'll stammer, "I got this in the garden pulling weeds," or "Can you believe I played golf on an overcast day?"

It makes me suspicious that if sun has only recently turned into a villain, maybe it's only a matter of time before someone figures out that carrots cause cavities, roaches are a status symbol, glasses make you look sexy, giving birth is good for your figure, jogging makes you fat, and small cars are gas hogs.

Somehow, I can't get used to telling people who are tan, "Gosh, you look so brown. Have you been sick? You know, you ought to set aside just a couple of hours a day to get out of the sun more."

Bridal Courtesies

DARLA PARRISH

Darla Parrish, bride-elect of Dale Fox, was honored recently with a miscellaneous shower hosted by Phyllis Pendley in the Wolfforth ABC Bank reception room. There were four cohostesses.

The couple plans to be married July 21 in Christ The King Catholic Church.

VICKIE ZOUZALIK

Vickie Zouzalik, bride-elect of Kenny Blackwell, will be honored today with a bridesmaid luncheon hosted by Mrs. Vic Zouzalik.

Special guests will be Mrs. Earlene Patranella, grandmother of the bride-elect; Karen Douglas, sister of the bride-elect; Mrs. Kenneth Blackwell, mother of the future bridegroom; and Terri Blackwell, sister of the future bridegroom.

They will also be honored today with a rehearsal dinner hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Kenny Blackwell.

Other special guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Vic Zouzalik, parents of the bride-elect; Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Zouzalik, grandparents of the bride-elect; and Mrs. L.E. Ruthardt, grandmother of the future bridegroom.

The couple plans to be married Saturday in the Oakwood Baptist Church.

NEVA PERRIN

Neva Perrin, bride-elect of Bob Curlee, was honored Thursday with a bridesmaids luncheon in the home of Mrs. Luther Avitts.

Special guests were Dr. Janis Perrin of Morrilton, Ark., mother of the bride-elect; Susie Dobson of Mission Viejo, Calif., aunt of the bride-elect; Mrs. Robert Curlee, mother of the future bridegroom; and Mrs. Paul Lovdahl, grandmother of the future bridegroom.

The couple plans to be married today in the Westminster Presbyterian Church.

JANA TYLER

Jana Tyler, bride-elect of Ronnie McElfresh, was honored Wednesday with a lingerie shower in the home of Sherrie Blakney. Stacy Rucker was cohostess.

The couple plans to be married Aug. 3 in St. Matthew's United Methodist Church.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

In my job I am the happy recipient of numerous bouquets, flower arrangements, etc. These come from very busy people who have an "arrangement" with their florists and nine times out of ten never see what was sent to the recipient.

After all these years I finally have found the perfect solution of describing the bouquet or arrangement without going into a long drawn-out account. I have one of these cameras that instantly develop the picture. I take two pictures of the flowers and enclose one in the envelope with the thank-you note. The other I save for my own scrapbook and can enjoy the beauty of the flowers as long as the film will hold out. The sender knows instantly what he-she has sent and, in a way, can share in the enjoyment. — A Constant Reader

You are a beautiful person to do this. I'm sure all the people who give these flowers to you really appreciate your effort in sharing their beauty with them. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I've read so many hints from your column. The one I have, I believe will help figurine collectors.

There was a time one could buy the green stick-on felt. Much to my regret, I can't find that product anywhere.

I bought velvet and cut it according to size. With white glue, brush the bottom of your figurine, then place the velvet. After it dries, trim the edges.

Not only will your furniture be spared from scratches but your figurine will not fall so easily.

By the way, the glue takes a few minutes to dry so be very sure it is dry before placing on your furniture.

I truly love your column. What would we readers do without you? — Kitty Kitt

Just figured out I'm not the only mother whose kids eat all but "one" banana — you know the "one" with a dark spot on it. What do you do with "one" quickly aging banana?

So I mashed it, put it in a container and froze it. In a few weeks I had accumulated four frozen bananas, so I made banana bread — best I ever made.

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a problem holding the newspaper pages in place since I had a stroke and have limited use of my right hand and arm.

I have recovered partially and found if I would staple the sections of paper in three or four places down the middle I could open them up like a book.

Now I don't have to worry about messing the paper up for someone else as the pages stay in place perfectly.

I have enjoyed your column for years. — Bea White

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

There is so much written about what is contained in what we eat and drink. That is to say, the things that manufacturers put into the products. I think we need to bring to the attention of all consumers that before a container (can, bottle, or whatever, including fresh fruit) is opened or used it should be cleaned off by water from the tap and a towel.

We never open any can or bottle or prepare fruit or vegetables without thoroughly cleaning them first. — David L. Dennis

DEAR HELOISE:

My friends were complaining they never get around to copying phone numbers from their old telephone directory to the new one.

We stapled a blank page on the inside of the back cover for numbers we use a lot.

I told them I tear the page off, check to be sure the numbers are the same and staple it into my new directory.

It sure saves a lot of time. I don't have to transfer the old numbers and now I'm confident all the numbers are correct. — Dorothy

Dorothy, that is a good idea. I generally have numbers written all over the cover, pages and all. Some things are just every day "doings" to most people but then there are us slow ones! — Heloise

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Could you possibly explain why I would feel sick after a bowel movement? I have indigestion the rest of the day. X-rays show nothing wrong. — Mrs. A.S.

For you and for other readers who complain of a variety of constipation symptoms, a brief review of normal bowel activity is in order.

Food moves through the digestive system and collects in the lower bowel after nutrients have been removed. At this point the residue contains a good deal of moisture. The body, being the efficient machine it is, does not waste this, but absorbs it through the large bowel walls.

When the residue reaches the rectum it is ready for evacuation, so one gets the urge for movement. Many constipation problems emerge at young ages when this normal instinct may be ignored or response to it delayed. Further loss of liquid causes a hard stool, indicating it has stayed in the bowel too long. I suspect from parts of your letter (not printed) that constipation is part of your problem.

This may cause low back and pelvic pain and stomach discomfort, increased gas, general weakness, cold sweats, ear ringing, visual disturbance, rapid breathing, and headache. Straining at stool adds to the total picture of "sickness."

Make sure you have no contributing medical problems, and I'm thinking of such things as rectal disturbances (fissures or strictures) and low thyroid activity, to name two. Some medicines, such as calcium carbonate, aluminum hydroxide and others, aggravate bowel problems.

One way to promote health throughout life is to establish good and regular bowel habits at a young age.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Some people claim that a tablespoon of cod liver oil and two ounces of milk daily for six months keeps your skin smooth and lubricates all your joints so that you never get arthritis or other joint aches. After six months of this treatment you just take it once a week. I started this awful stuff a couple of days ago. It tastes terrible. Does all this make sense to you, or is it just another fish story? — P.M.

It's an old folk medicine idea based on the fact that cod liver oil is rich in vitamin D. But you don't have to take that concoction to get the vitamin D your body needs for sound bones. The milk contains enough of that vitamin, plus calcium, for your needs. Nothing prevents any rheumatoid arthritis you are destined to get, nor will it provide a fountain of youth.

Dear Dr. Ruble: My son (three years old) has ears that stick out. I know from reading your column that there are surgical techniques to correct this, but why must my son wait until he is five or six to have it done? — N.C.

One good reason is that maximum growth has not occurred yet and probably won't for some time. Ideally, it is best to wait until puberty, but psychologically it may be best done prior to school, especially if the ears are quite prominent. A second very good reason for delay is that at three the child probably can not be taught the importance of leaving bandages alone after surgery.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Settle this argument. I say you do your growing while you are sleeping. My husband says while you are up and active. Who's right? — Mrs. T.J.

The pituitary gland, where the human growth hormone is produced, works around the clock. The idea that we grow while sleeping may have arisen from the fact that people do tend to be a bit taller after lying for long periods. They revert to normal height after an hour or two of walking around upright.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MRS. T.L. — The six week post-natal checkup is so the doctor can determine if your uterus has reverted to normal size and if there are any lacerations (bruises, cuts) of the cervix. It is best to avoid sexual intercourse until after that time or until the doctor gives the go-ahead.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and pnysically, by reading Dr. Ruble's booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." For a copy write to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611., enclosingself-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

The late George Kaufman in discussing another bridge player said, "There are two ways you can tell when Smith has a good hand. First his face lights up — then he misplays it."

Here is Smith at work. His face lit up as he sorted his cards. He really chortled when North jumped to three of his suit. Was a trifle disappointed when Blackwood told him that an ace was missing but barged right into six.

He won the diamond in dummy. Played two rounds of trumps to make sure trumps were out, cashed his three high diamonds in order to discard one heart and one club from dummy and went over to dummy with a trump.

Now our hero stopped to think. Finally, he tossed a coin saying, "Heads I lead a heart." It came heads; he led a heart. Down one!

"Even coins can't be trusted," he moaned.

Of course, the hand had been a cinch assuming one suit would work. He should discard two hearts on the long diamonds. Then he would lose just one heart and still be able to try the club finesse.

Louver Doors Add Accent To Any Home

CHICAGO (FNS) — The natural look is in, especially in home decorating. And, what could be more natural than the look and warmth of wood.

Nowhere is the combination of form and function more versatile than in wood louver doors. Because they are attractive as well as efficient, wood louver doors are popular in homes ranging from colonial to contemporary design.

Available as folding or sliding units, wood louver doors are excellent choices for closets in narrow hallways or foyers where there is little room for ordinary swing out doors.

In either folding or sliding styles, these doors can be obtained either fully louvered or with louvers in the top half and closed panels in the bottom.

The slats permit the free circulation of air to keep clothes fresh smelling and free of mildew. This characteristic also makes wood louver doors popular decorating choices for high humidity areas such as laundry rooms, baths and kitchens.

Louver doors also make eye-appealing wall accents when used singly or in pairs, or they can be used as room dividers or connecting doors.

Easy to install and available in stock sizes at local lumber dealers or building supply centers, wood louver doors can be a relatively inexpensive home improvement for a do-it-yourselfer.

Gas-A-Hogs Form Dangerous Breed Of Animals

CHICAGO (Special) — Gas-a-hogs are the newest threat to American health and safety.

Not only are they becoming full-tank neurotics by darting from gasoline line to gasoline line, but they are also endangering themselves and others by carting and keeping secret hoards of scarce and costly fuel.

Indeed, says the Department of Safety and Research of the Combined American Insurance Company, the gasoline shortage is creating a highly volatile situation in more ways than one.

Combined Insurance issued a warning to owners of motor vehicles not to store gasoline at home as a hedge against spiraling prices and reduced supplies at the service station pump.

It was joined by a number of others in issuing the warning. Among them are the Insurance Information Institute, the American Insurance Association, the Health Insurance Institute, the U.S. Department of Transportation, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, the National Safety Council and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

All are worried about the gas-a-hog who is hoarding fuel the way some people stockpiled coffee and sugar during World War II rationing days. While coffee and sugar posed no dangers, gasoline does, for it can be the source of explosion and fire, and sometimes deadly fumes, if improperly stored and handled.

Those concerned with gasoline safety caution against the hazards involved in transporting the fuel in portable containers in the trunks of cars. A minor rear-end collision can set off a dangerous fire and sparks from a short in car electrical systems can trigger an explosion. When you consider the fact that there were nearly 1.5 million rear-end collisions last year, you might agree with the Department of Transportation that a lot of people are traveling around with liquid bombs in their trunks.

Records indicate that the production and sale of gas cans has risen at least 100 percent this year, with the sales of five-gallon containers increasing faster than those of the one-gallon homeowners often keep on hand for mowers and other equipment. There are indications also that retailers are increasing their inventories of gas containers in order to cash in on the shortage.

No one knows how many additional people are storing gasoline in glass and plastic jugs or other containers considered unsuitable for volatile liquids.

The National Safety Council points out that one gallon of gasoline has the explosive force of 14 sitcks of dynamite, which means that these who carry fuel home from the service station are endangering thmselves and the lives of others.

Combined Insurance safety experts say that extra fuel for cars should be transported only in emergencies. When it is carried, it should be placed in containers made for that purpose, and those containers should be removed from the vehicle as soon as possible after reaching home. Once unloaded, it should be placed in a well-ventilated cool place away from sources of heat or sparks.

And, bear in mind, the National Safety Council adds, that even "safety cans" are not really safe if vapors escape through their relief vents in the presence of an ignition source such as a mower or automobile.

Here are some aditional measures to bear in mind in handling gasoline, as recommended by Combined Insurance:

•If you must keep gasoline on hand, store it in heavy metal safety containers with tightly closed lids. Keep the container well ventilated, never in the house or basement. Never light a cigarette when you are near it and never carry it in the trunk of your car.

•It is better to have a full or nearly full can than a nearly enpty one because a can low on gasoline creates a gas-air mixture more explosive than a fuller container.

•Once a container is empty, leave the cap off to let the fumes evaporate, and see that it is well aired.

•Never use a metal container that has any rust on it.

•Keep gas cans away from any source of heat or flame as the liquid expands in volume with higher temperatures and could seep out of even the best of containers.

If you have any doubts at all about whether or where to keep gasoline, the best solution is contained in one word, DON'T, Combined Insurance safety monitors say.

And if you have any questions, call your local fire department. They have all the answers to the problems posed by gasolne storage, and they don't want the problems passed on to them by a fire alarm in the middle of the night.

Inflation Hits Retirees, Firms

By GHITA LEVINE
Women's News Service

NEW YORK (WNS) — A Lou Harris study, made for a company benefits consulting firm, was conducted on pensions and retirement and the study's results confirmed what many older people have known for years: inflation is the biggest enemy of retirement living.

But the study also points out a fact that the public has ignored, the far-reaching consequences of inflation on the providers of retirement income.

According to the survey, today's workers will exert considerable pressure for larger pensions for their own retirement. Spurred by inflation, their pension needs and expectations are rising and both business and government can expect to feel the heat of those rising demands soon.

Where the money will come from to keep up with the rising benefits is a dilemma that the survey acknowledges Current and retired employees surveyed said they feel strongly that Social Security benefits should be increased with the cost of living , as it is done now, but they gave sharply divergent views as to where Social Security should get the money.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Recently I found a tender, loving letter written by my husband of 30 years. I was touched to think he was writing to renew our love.

As I read on I noted references to places I had never been and people I did not know. Soon it became apparent the letter was not written to me.

I asked him about it and he said, "Forget it. It means nothing." He swears he still loves me, adores our children and does not want out of our marriage.

I want to believe him. I'm trying to forget the whole thing, but I can't get rid of this gnawing pain in my insides. I've been reading all sorts of books on the male middle-life crisis, trying to rationalize his behavior.

After so many years of believing in and trusting someone so completely, I am crushed. I now find myself wondering where he is every minute he is out of my sight, and I hate myself for it. What's the answer, Ann? What should I do? — Mildewed In Milwaukee

Dear Mil: What is your objective? Do you want to keep your home and marriage together? If so, forget the past and never mention it again.

If, on the other hand, you'd prefer a life without the man, continue to question his every move, check on him, nag, accuse, cry a lot, demand to know more about the past, and in time he'll get fed up and leave.

Dear Ann Landers: I don't know if this question is medical, psychological, or one for Ann Landers, but I hope you will answer it for me.

I am very fond of a man I work with. I became attracted to him because he is so friendly and pleasant, has a cute sense of humor and his manners are awfully nice, you might even say "courtly."

The problem is that when I'm close to him I get these wonderful, warm vibrations. Does this mean he is getting them, too? What I am trying to say is — are such feelings transmitted from one human being to another?

If this letter isn't worth printing, just put the answer in a Confidential. It might sound silly to others but I really need to know. — Blushing B.

Dear B.: Those "wonderful, warm vibrations" aren't catching, honey, but it may be that Mr. Courtly is feeling them also.

If he's unattached and available why not invite him over for a home-cooked meal? It would be nice to find out from the only person who can tell you. HIM.

Dear Ann Landers: I am going with a man who is divorced. He has two daughters, ages six and eight. They are crazy about their daddy and he would do anything for them — except stay married to their mother, apparently.

What bothers me is that the ex-wife and the girls work together to get extra time and attention from "Jack." On birthdays, holidays — even Mother's Day — they want to be "like a family."

"Jack" keeps falling into these traps and seems to think I should understand. Well, I DON'T UNDERSTAND. In fact, I am furious. What shall I do? — An Ex-Wife And Two Daughters Versus ME

Dear You: Your signature tells me almost as much as your letter. I suggest you change your tune and accept the situation with grace. Actually you have no choice — but you don't know it yet.

How young is too young for a child to learn about sex? That's just one thing you'll find in Ann Landers' new booklet, "How, What, and When to Tell Your Child About Sex." For your copy send 50 cents along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Project Involves Entire Family

For a craft project that includes the whole family, cross-stitch a family tree. Bring the family together and let youngsters trace their ancestors.

Begin with a piece of linen fabric. Plot out your design and decide how many generations you are going to include in your stitchery. On a separate piece of paper, draw your design — a leaf pattern is certainly appropriate and fairly simple. Trace the pattern on the fabric, get the floss, print the names and dates in their places and you're ready to begin.

To get everyone involved, let each member of the family stitch a leaf. Don't be concerned if the consistency of stitching isn't perfect. Remember the kindergarten pictures proudly displayed on the kitchen wall? Let everyone join in on creating this special heirloom, regardless of age.

Other possibilities include a special family tree with only two immediate generations represented, or a sorority or fraternity family tree with all the names of the members of a certain year stitched in place. Start a tradition in any club or organization that will be continued for years.

The Family Tree kit pictured here comes complete with sufficient space to trace four generations of family members. The kit includes design on polyester-rayon linen weave fabric, cotton floss, needle and instructions. It fits the 16-inch by 20-inch solid oak frame displayed.

Order Family Tree kit no. 14118 for $8.99 plus $1.45 postage and handling or Tree and Frame kit no. 14119 for $17.49 plus $1.95 postage and handling. Creative Home Crafts is required to collect and pay state and local sales tax in Texas.

Hydroponics Would Allow Farming Year Around

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer

Controlled environment plant growth may help feed the world's population, especially in areas where the climate limits food production.

Model growth units already are in use, raising lettuce and other vegetables under soil-less hydroponic conditions.

Americans consume about 23 million metric tons of vegetables a year. But Dr. Ralph P. Prince and J. W. Bartok Jr., who have been doing research at the University of Connecticut for five years, advise that vegetable production in many areas of the United States is limited to less than five months per year. This means that most vegetables must be grown in the more temperate climates and shipped into the northern, more heavily populated states.

Controlled Environment Plant Growth (CEPG), they say, implies the complete control of light, temperature, moisture, carbon dioxide, water and nutrients.

"We have what is known as a variable spacing bench," Prince said. "It is made water-tight with a polyurethane sealer. A nutrient sealer is pumped continuously beneath the plants which are supported by a number of strips running lengthwise with the bench.

"These strips support the plants which are seeded in a polyester material that acts as a wick to bring the nutrient solution up to a point where the seed can germinate and the roots can flourish. The plants are seeded at one end of the bench and moved along the bench every day being given the necessary space for adequate growth.

"We have more experience with lettuce than any other crop," he said.

"At the present time, it is difficult to compete economically with lettuce shipped in from Southern California," he added." There may be certain times of the year in which it is very economical to produce lettuce under lights and this climate. We are continuing our search to find a way of integrating the growth room approach with greenhouse production that will reduce our energy consumption, decrease the time for adequate yield and improve product quality."

Prince said yields are increased in this type of operation and for lettuce may be in the order of 1,000 tons an acre a year. Unfortunately, energy consumption has gone up proportionately with this production rate.

Current California production of leaf lettuce is about 44 tons a season and in greenhouses the production is about 100 tons an acre.

Researchers also figure that hydroponics could cut production time from about 60 days outdoors to 32 days.

The flat bed at the University of Connecticut is about 4-to-5-inches deep. The nutrient is pumped in and circulated. The bed is under lights and across it are strips of plastic with small punched holes into which are placed small ties containing the seed. No soil is required. It would permit farming the entire year around.

Writer Reviews Photo Books

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

It's summer, a time to relax and catch up with a batch of new photographic books.

The assortment available focuses on many areas of specific interests.

For instance, like many camera fans, I'm planning to build a darkroom soon so it's most convenient to have at hand "The Darkroom Handbook" by Dennis Curtin and Joe DeMaio (Van Nostrand Reinhold Co.). They show how it can be built in a closet, bathroom, kitchen, bedroom or basement, in an apartment or a house. Almost all the problems involved in each case has been solved by others and the experiences are made part of this book.

The actual building of partitions and installation of electricity and plumbing is profusely illustrated with explicit close-ups, sketches and diagrams. With these as a guide, a layout of your own set-up can be planned in advance and then carried out either by the hobbyist, if handy with tools, or by a carpenter and plumber.

In addition, the book introduces in pictures and text, the working darkrooms of well-known professionals. Among them are: W. Eugene Smith, George Tice, Neal Slavin, Harry Callahan, Berenice Abbott and Naomi Savage.

It's helpful to see how successful photographers work and the type of equipment they use. Among the refinements are water temperature regulators; large, efficient print washers for archival protection; bright sodium safelights; enlargers low enough for comfortable sitting-while-working; tile walls for easy cleaning and a pegboard wall for convenient placement of accessories for instant retrieval.

The book also includes information on processing and printing in color; mounting, matting, storing and framing of prints; and lists the names and addresses of manufacturers of darkroom equipment and accessories.

"Great News Photos and the Stories Behind Them" by John Faber (Dover) is a gallery of dramatic pictures of 70 events from 1855 to 1976. Originally published in 1960, this is a second edition which takes us from the coverage of the Crimean War to the election of President Jimmy Carter.

Along with historic photographs, Faber focuses on the photographer behind each picture. He describes the camera and equipment used, the atmosphere and background of the event and how they prepared for — or spontaneously captured — an unforgettable split second in time. As a group, they demonstrate the important role of photojournalists as visual historians of our world.

As historian of the National Press Photographers Association for the past 22 years, he has doggedly pursued and recorded the activities, adventures and images of hundreds of news photographers in personal interviews and searching communications.

For vacation-bound photo fans, "How To Take Better Travel Photos" by Lisl Dennis (HP Books) makes an excellent preparatory course or a helpful companion on any trip.

She writes simply, clearly and directly and makes an interesting observation. She says, when thinking of travel pictures, do you mentally pack bags and take a fantasy flight to a distant city? Why not be a traveler to your own city, look at your surroundings with a fresh eye and be stimulated by your own locale?

Most camera fans become passive on familiar ground and overlook what appeals to strangers who come to photograph your area.

Drop by your convention bureau and pick up literature on upcoming events and photogenic locations. Your library or book store has guide books about your city and your local newspaper usually lists upcoming weekend activities of public interest, all subject matter for your camera.

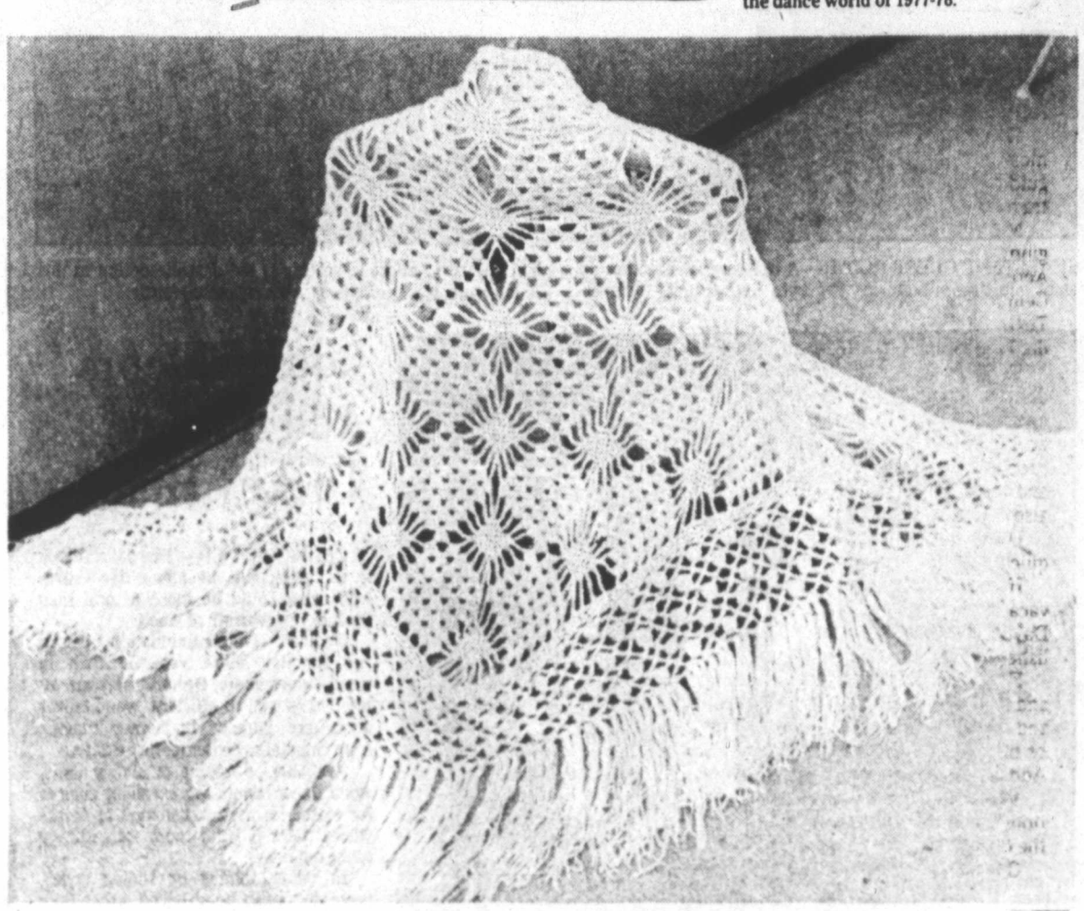

The book goes into the how-to's of photographing in strange regions, discussing equipment, lenses, people, landscapes, special events and how to show your pictures when you return home.

The book contains more than 150 color photos and 30 black-and-whites to illustrate how she captures the essence of a foreign country or a different locale.

For people who love dancers and dance groups, "Dance World 1978" by John Willis (Crown) is a comprehensive pictorial and statistical record of last year's dance season with over 700 impressive photographs.

From the classical ballet to the most modern improvisations, the book lists the programs of dance groups throughout the country; has a picture gallery of principal dancers; biographical data on dancers and choreographers and an index for reference to almost everything in the dance world of 1977-78.

The Life and Legend of One of America's Most Beloved Actors

John Wayne, a towering giant of a man, was a legend in his own time—a symbol of American decency, vitality and courage. Here is a pictorial tribute to the Duke, tracing his life on and off the movie set during a career that spanned half a century and included some 150 films.

A plethora of pictures from The Associated Press provides readers with fascinating glimpses of John Wayne with his family, his friends, his colleagues and co-stars; Wayne with his six-shooter and with his tuxedo, with his grin and his Oscar.

Pre-Planning Trip Eases Fuel Woes

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Travel Editor

More and more travelers are discovering the surprising fact that vacation travel by auto is not only still possible, but just about as easy as ever before.

Notes from vacationers to this writer have emphasized an important policy for traveling since the advent of motor fuel shortages. The policy is pre-planning the trip.

Checking your route on a detailed map, writing for tourist brochures, buying a good guide book or two, reserving accommodations and making a call for gasoline availability information (more about that later) will almost guarantee a care-free vacation.

Why is the travel picture so rosy? City and state governments and travel related agencies have done remarkable work to offset most problems that might be encountered by vacationers.

Approximately 135 million Americans take trips each year and they spend more than $110 billion! Tourism is this nation's third-largest industry and, next to petroleum, the largest single item of international trade. Most states now rank tourism as one of their top three money earners. Understandably, such an important part of our economy affects many people.

DISCOVERY

Here's how to have a better auto vacation during these times, and most likely save some money while traveling. First of all, get a good guide book that has plenty of information on the route you plan to travel and the destination.

Mobil Travel Guide is packed with information. I consider the guide the best publication available for traveling in the United States. Actually there are seven regional guides. The Southwest and South Central Area edition will meet the needs of many trips originating in Texas. The Mobil guide for this region covers Texas, Arkansas, Colorado, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

The guide includes rates for accommodations, ratings for accommodations and food, regional maps, sightseeing, activities and seasonal events. The least expensive places to stay overnight won't necessarily be listed, but the accommodations that are listed are clean and respectable. A special Mobil guide team inspects and rates all lodging and food facilities noted in the publication. Reader response cards are also evaluated annually for ratings of the establishments.

Using just a few of the 24 discount coupons in the guide could quickly pay for the guide. It sells for $4.95 at book stores.

If you are interested in seeing and taking part in activities on your vacation in Texas, be sure to obtain a publication titled Texas Day-By-Day. More than 300 pages of Texas events are listed in the book published by Houstonian Peter Morris.

From watermelon thumps and chili cookoffs to fishing tournament and flea markets, Texas Day-By-Day lists all entries by name, location and date. The paperback sells for $5.95 and is available in bookstores or by mail from Creative Answers, 4915 Milam, Suite 4, Houston 77006. Add Texas state sales tax, plus $1 per order for postage and handling.

Vacationers now have up-to-date information about resort destinations and attractions throughout the country available to them through the Consumer Information Division of the U.S. Travel Service.

One pamphlet titled "Helpful Information Sources" is a guide to federal and state governmental agencies providing information and assistance in planning trips. The pamphlet offers a complete listing of areas administered by the National Park Service, listings of tourism offices and other valuable tips on where to obtain travel information.

To obtain a copy of the pamphlet, prospective travelers should address inquiries to Consumer Information, United States Travel Service, U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C. 20230.

For a complete listing of more than 840 Kampgrounds of America throughout the U.S., Canada and Mexico, in addition to travel maps and money-saving coupons, the KOA Campers Atlas is available for $2 at any KOA Kampground or by writing KOA Atlas, P.O. Box 30558, Billings, Mont. 59114.

G.A.S. has been instituted by KOA operators. The acronym stands for gasoline advisory service. The campground operators check weekly, more often if necessary, with gasoline stations in their area and record the availability, hours of operation and prices.

KOA is promoting gasoline conservation by encouraging campers to "pump-up, slow-up, and tune-up." It notes that fully inflated tires, observance of the 55-mph speed limit and a tuned engine may reduce gasoline consumption by 15 percent.

On the subject of gasoline: more and more areas of the country are reporting that the gasoline situation is only a problem in some major cities, and that problem is being effectively remedied. At this writing the gasoline situation seems to be: if you don't live in a big city and don't plan to travel to a big city with a gasoline availability problem, then your vacation plans need not be changed.

Here's a quick survey of mail that crossed this desk in the past few days: The Corpus Christi Tourist Bureau found at least 47 stations that are open on Sunday. The report does not include convenience stores that also pump gasoline, some on a 24-hour basis. New Mexico's Commerce and Industry Department has announced no gas shortage, no long lines, no rationing, and no odd-even days. New Mexico allocations for the entire summer are expected to be about 95 percent.

Even in Washington, D.C., the gasoline situation has improved for the tourist. Mayor Marion S. Barry Jr. recently has taken several important steps to alleviate the effect of the gasoline crisis on visiting motorists. Priority gasoline sales to out-of-state visitors have been instituted, service station hours have been staggered to make gas available throughout the day between 6 a.m. and 8 p.m. and the "set-aside" program will add up to 5 percent more gasoline to the area's supply.

Mayor Barry, Virginia Governor Dalton and Maryland Governor Hughes have given priority to all out-of-state vehicles, giving travelers the assurance they want for the necessary gas for a round-trip drive to the nation's capital. Also, travelers in northeastern states during June reported fewer gas problems on interstate highways than in major metropolitan areas.

Closer to home, Big Bend National Park Superintendent Robert Haraden said, "The stations here will be open seven days a week unless there should be a national emergency or some other situation beyond our control." W.J. Newell of Newell Oil Company noted, "No station in Big Bend has ever been out of gasoline due to a gasoline shortage."

Even though gas prices are rising, there's still a way to save money on gas when traveling: by finding independent, self-service gas stations and pumping the gas yourself. A new directory pinpoints the locations of more than 1,200 such stations alongside or within one mile of major U.S. highways and Interstates. The directory, "Ryan's Gas Guide," is available at selected stores and campgrounds throughout the country, or by mail $2.50 postpaid from RMS, P.O. Box 20995, Billings, Mont, 59104.

There's still plenty of gasoline available for the motorist traveling in Mexico. Just be sure to only use the best grade. Also, the director general of the Mexican National Tourist Council has announced that there will be no fuel shortage for airlines serving Mexico. The fuel shortage situation will not exist in Mexico, the director emphasized.

Back in the U.S., Holiday Inns and various agencies have made available toll free numbers (see map) across the nation for gasoline availability information. Most chambers of commerce also will provide the traveler with gasoline information or the telephone number of a nearby tourist bureau for fuel information and other travel data.

Top Future Farmers Honored

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

A Cotulla youth was selected for the highest honor conferred by the state Future Farmers of America while an FFA member from Seagraves and one from Quinlan were named nominees for the two highest national awards Thursday at the Stars of Texas Awards Program of the 51st annual state FFA convention at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Monty Lee Vesper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Vesper of Cotulla, was selected Star Lone Star Farmer from a field of 10 Area Lone Star Farmers.

In addition to serving as Area X president, Vesper's FFA projects include a 60-head beef cattle herd, 25 acres of coastal bermuda and eight head of exotic game animals from southeast Asia.

Vesper, a national president nominee of the Santa Gertrudis Junior Association, plans to attend college with a major in agriculture and a minor in law.

Delmon Ellison Jr. of Seagraves is the Star American Farmer candidate of Texas and will be in competition for regional and national honors. Only one member per 1,000 may receive the degree in agricultural production and half that number in agribusiness.

James Anderton of Quinlan is the Star American Farmer-Agribusinessman candidate of Texas.

Results of the awards program were:

Welfare Workers Still Seek 4-Year-Old's Missing Parents

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) — She's about 4 years old, 40 inches tall, has dark, curly hair and dimples. They call her "Kim," but welfare officials don't know her real name.

The little girl was found near this Central Texas town 15 days ago playing alone near a park. She doesn't say much, and Texas Department of Human Resources officials have been unsuccessful in trying to find out who she is and who her family is.

"We are stagnant right now. We just don't have any information at all about her," said Lawrence Parker of the state welfare office in Killeen, which has custody of the lost child.

"It's kind of inconceivable that someone could be looking for the child because she has been missing since June 23," Parker said Thursday.

Welfare officials in Belton, Temple and here have been working on the case since residents of an apartment complex near the Long Branch Park found the litte girl. At the time, the dark-complexioned child was wearing green shorts and a white print blouse.

Officials say Kim has not been able to help much. "The child is not really very vocal. Sometimes if I were to ask her a question she would only repeat my question over and over to herself," Parker said.

He said they have driven her through several neighborhoods in the Long Branch Park area in hopes of jogging her memory, but to no avail. Parker said because Kim appears to be part Oriental. He said he brought in foreign language interpreters to try to communicate with her — but that didn't work either.

"We don't run into many situations like this," Parker said. "Normally, a missing child is reported gone to someone in about an hour. And usually the children can give us some information about themselves.

"Something has to break sooner or later," he added. "Sometime, somehow we will get something.

Contributors List Secret Until 1984

HOUSTON (UPI) — Federal court settlement of a Socialist Workers Party lawsuit against the State of Texas will exempt the party from public reporting of contributors until 1984.

The party challenged a Texas Election Code disclosure requirement in 1974 on grounds disclosure would subject contributors to official and unofficial harassment.

U.S. District Judges Carl O. Bue Jr., Woodrow Seals and Circuit Judge Joe Ingraham Wednesday found "evidence of past and present harassment of members, contributors and recipients of expenditures due to their associational ties."

The settlement, which requires the SWP to maintain records of contributors in case the court later decides some investigation is required, was modeled on an out-of-court settlement with the federal government last January.

Area Demo Input Sought At Saturday Meeting

Area Democrats will have the opportunity to voice their opinions on the Texas Democratic party's plans for the 1980 presidential election at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at the Hilton Inn.

"It's a golden opportunity for grassroots Democrats in this area to speak up and be counted in the important decisions made by our state party," said Dorothy Barker of Morton. "We want to be sure and have a strong contingent there to represent our local views."

Billy B. Goldberg, state Democratic party chairman, said that a key question to be brought up at the Lubbock hearing is "whether it would or would not make sense for us to hold a presidential primary next year, given our party's particular circumstances in 1980.

"Our situation is, of course, different from that of the Republicans. They will definitely have a contest. As the party with an incumbent president, we Democrats may have only one candidate running. In that case, a presidential primary could be a pointless waste of effort, time and money.

"However, we want our grassroots voters to help us decide."

Official drafts of the state party's delegate selection and affirmative action plans for 1980 also will be circulated for public comment at the hearing.

The two plans will determine how Texas Democrats will choose 152 delegates and 77 alternates to the 1980 Democratic National Convention and what steps the party will take to encourage maximum participation in the process.

"Our purpose is to get the maximum possible input and guidance from grassroots Democrats prior to the State Democratic Executive Committee's final adoption of these important plans and their required submission for approval to the Compliance Review Commission of the national party by July 31," Goldberg said.

Area Democrats unable to attend Saturday's hearing, Goldberg said, may mail comments to state party headquarters, 215 Stokes Building, Austin, 78701 before July 21.

Goldberg also strongly encouraged those who participate in the public hearing to bring written copies of their testimony that the party can keep for its records.

Jack Carter Eyeing Congressional Race

CALHOUN, Ga. (AP) — Jack Carter, son of the president, said Thursday he will wait until December before deciding whether to run for Congress from Georgia's 7th District.

The Atlanta Constitution and the Washington Post both reported that the younger Carter will challenge Democratic Rep. Larry McDonald in the 1980 primary. Carter said he "can't dispute" the reports but said, "I've been thinking about it for quite a while, and that's still about where I am."

The newspapers said the president's son soon will announce the formation of an election committee, and Carter confirmed that he is "close to that."

Carter said he wants to "see what the district thinks about me" before making a final decision. He said he doesn't plan a formal tour of the northwest Georgia district, but will meet with residents of the area whenever possible.

"If that turns out good, I probably will run," he said.

STATE DOG DESIGNATED

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The Catahoula leopard dog, a crossbreed used to work hogs, tree coons and corral cattle, has been designated as the state dog of Louisiana.

Gov. Edwin Edward's office announced the signing of a bill awarding the lofty status to the web-footed mongrel, descended from a 16th-century mix of domestic Indian dogs and Spanish war dogs.

Pianist's Assistance Pays Off At White House, Recitals

But several years later in 1955, Miss Price asked Garvey to accompany her at a professional concert.

"Since that time, I've been with her every recital she's ever given," When the 55-year-old pianist isn't rehearsing or performing with Miss Price in New York, he puts in 12-hour days as a music professor at the University of Texas.

Garvey is beginning his fifth year coaching graduate vocalists in his cramped, 12 feet by 20 feet office-studio. The room has just enough space for an old Steinway piano, a filing cabinet, two chairs and some shelves.

The small, paneled office contrasts to the vast concert halls and audiences where Garvey performs.

He has performed four times at the White House with Miss Price. The most recent was in a program to celebrate the signing of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty this spring.

"It was a great, exciting moment in history," Garvey remembered in an interview at his office.

A large German community with a love for music lived in his hometown of Reading, Pa., said Garvey, who remembers attending Lutheran services in German.

"I started studying at an early age. I was 5½ or 6," he said. "There was a great deal of interest in music which I think came from the German population."

After high school, he studied about four years with a teacher in Philadelphia before going to the Julliard School in New York.

Then came Leontyne Price, "one of the major musical figures of my life," he said.

"She came into Julliard the year I graduated in 1949," Garvey said.

The two went separate ways — Miss Price to fame in "Porgy and Bess" and Garvey to successful tours with violinists.

In 1955, the singer asked Garvey is he would accompany her in recital. Since then, he has appeared with her everywhere unless she sings with an orchestra.

"I make up her program. We try it out at her home two times for friends before we perform them," he said.

The two rehearse at Garvey's apartment near Lincoln Center in New York. In Austin, he lives in an apartment within walking distance of the University of Texas campus.

"Frankly, it's not ideal to be that far away from New York," Garvey admits.

He entered the professorial ranks after deciding he needed a change from full-time performing.

"After all, I'd been doing it for 25 years. I didn't need to prove anything any more" he said. "I had a lifetime of happiness that I could share with so many young people who were trying to be born into the profession."

Universities now are taking over from old conservatories in developing youthful talent, he added.

After putting out feelers to several colleges, Garvey came to Austin on a performance with Miss Price and decided to move here.

Always a bachelor, the pianist said he never worried about job security.

"And if I had wanted to make money, I'd be doing something else — playing the stock market or something," he adds.

His 24-year association with the internationally famous singer has been unusually problem-free.

"I always use the word 'strong,'" he said when asked to describe Miss Price. "Leontyne has a kind of utter honesty about herself and relationships with her friends."

Garvey describes himself as "a workaholic. I fill up my life, day and night, with my work."

He tries to sit down at the piano at least three to five hours daily. His coaching classes usually fill up most of that requirement.

"There's not much that I haven't already played before," said the musician. He describes his tastes as eclectic. Perhaps the Romantic period and the French school please him most.

His first concert with Miss Price will be in October at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

AUTO AD OR MATH LESSON?

(BOTH.)

The teacher who uses the Avalanche-Journal in the classroom knows that advertisements are a goldmine for lessons in math, metrics, economics, consumer education and even language arts. (Ever try to separate the facts from the "sales pitch"?)

To help teachers use the newspaper even more effectively, the Avalanche-Journal Educational Services Department sponsors an annual Newspaper in Education/ Living Textbook Conference on the campus of Texas Tech University. Teachers and administrators are invited to attend.

'Serious Legal Questions' Arise From City Tax Cut Petitions

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The petitions calling for a tax limitation election given to the Lubbock City Council Thursday present "serious legal questions" and may never be submitted to the voters, city attorney John Ross said.

There are "constitutional questions in the initiative process they (the Lubbock Property Owners Association) are attempting to follow," Ross said, adding the problems arise from the state constitution and the general laws of the state of Texas.

"I seriously question whether the city council could offer these three amendments" to the voters, Ross said.

The city attorney said he has not seen the actual petitions, since the council did not receive them until Thursday, but said "there are definite constitutional questions involved that we have to look at."

Ross said those questions will be examined prior to the calling of any election and said he could recommend that the council not submit the three proposed charter amendments to voters.

Ross said there is a question as to "whether these three amendments are subject to the initiative process" by which voters can petition the City Council for an election on certain charter changes.

Once a state tax reform bill goes into effect which requires property to be assessed at 100 percent of market value, it will supersede one charter amendment which would limit the assessment ratio to the current 60 percent of market value.

However, Ross said there are "serious questions right now with the existing constitution and existing statutes."

The LPOA amendments, in addition to limiting the assessment ratio, would freeze the city tax rate at the current $1.12 per $100 valuation and require voter approval for any increase in the tax rate or the assessment ratio.

LPOA chairman Bob Green handed the petitions wrapped in brown paper to two council members.

City Secretary Evelyn Gaffga must now validate the petitions to make sure the signatures are those of registered voters and that the petitions contain an adequate number of signatures.

Green also announced the LPOA's opposition to a proposed annexation of 740 acres south of Lubbock and to any future annexations to the city.

The proposed annexation, which the city council will hear public comment on at its next meeting, is "very ill-advised and appears to be for the benefit of two developers only," Green said.

"We are terribly surprised and disappointed in the Planning and Zoning Commission that they would even consider this action when the city is already screaming they do not have enough money to complete a project to alleviate a water problem that already exists in the city."

Green noted the annexation will cost the city "several million dollars" to provide required city services, and said there is adequate land already inside the city for future development.

A 1974 land use report shows "an astonishing 47.74 percent of the land within the city of Lubbock vacant and undeveloped with no apparent plans for development.

"We, as citizens of Lubbock, think you will find it awfully hard to justify to us the expense of further annexation when we have this much vacant land within our city and the evident inability to provide city services and commitments to the existing population of taxpayers on the high evaluations and excessive taxes that we are already paying."

Green also said his organization is opposed to the sale of tax exempt mortgage bonds to provide home loans for low and moderate income persons.

Recently enacted state legislation permits Texas cities to create non-profit corporations to issue such bonds and provide lending institutions with loan funds for the low income.

Green said creation of what he called a housing authority is not a "necessary function of city government" and would be creating another city agency which is not going to be of any assistance to most Lubbock citizens.

Although financial authorities have told the council it would cost the city nothing to create such a program, Green said "We have heard that familiar story before," and cited overruns at the Civic Center, the Canyon Lakes and the Lubbock County teaching hospital.

"Someone somewhere is going to have to guarantee these bonds in case of buyer default and repossession, and I rather suspect the good old taxpayer is going to be obligated again," Green said.

Not only is the LPOA opposed to the sale of mortgage bonds, but Green said the organization is against the creation of any more city agencies "until such time that the city can show without a shadow of a doubt that the creation of a new agency or department will benefit at least 51 percent of the citizens of Lubbock regardless of race or creed."

Chamber Hears Report On Air Service Quest

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In spite of problems generated within the airline industry by deregulation and the fuel crunch, the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce is seeking expanded and improved air service to the city, John Bradford told chamber directors today.

"The airlines tell us that when they (enter new markets) it's because they have been approached, " said Bradford, who heads up the chamber's aviation committee. "That's just what we're doing."

After a recent meeting in New York City with American and Trans World Airline officials, Bradford reported a "very good" response from TWA to the possibility of moving into the Lubbock market, and a "casual" one from American.

TWA, he said, is developing St. Louis and Albuquerque as "hubs" and reportedly is eyeing a St. Louis-Lubbock-Albuquerque connection.

Bradford outlined the committee's strategy, saying "we want to remain in their (TWA's) active file, so they know who we are when we call."

The committee also has meetings planned with Ozark, Frontier, Texas International and North Central Airlines, discussing possible service to Lubbock, and is pressing Braniff International and Continental Airlines for more flights here, he said.

In other business, the directors passed a recommendation to the U.S. Postal Service that they locate their new central station within the downtown area, but avoid the immediate Civic Center area.

"We're going to work with them to locate a suitable site," said board chairman Tim Hatch. The area close to the Civic Center would be inconvenient because of postal service truck traffic, he commented.

Responding to statistics which indicate the Lubbock area will need approximately 1,650 registered nurses by 1980, and that nurses tend to work within 50 miles of where they were trained, board members voted to support education committee efforts at urging Gov. Clements to reconsider funding for the proposed Texas Tech University School of Nursing.

However, city financial consultant Joe Smith of First Southwest Company in Abilene, told council members later in the day the city is prohibited by state law from becoming financially involved in the bond program.

Smith said more than $26 million in mortgage funds could be made available to Lubbock lenders if the mortgage bond program becomes a reality, with bonds to be retired by those making the mortgage payments.

Under state law, Smith said the sale of the bonds "do not constitute indebtedness of local governments" and cities are prohibited from making any payments to retire the bonds.

"Very clearly," Smith said, "the city has no obligation" other than the appointment of a board of directors of the non-profit corporation.

The board would not constitute a municipal corporation or city agency and would not amount to the creation of another bureaucracy, Smith said, because the board would have no employees.

Basically, the corporation board would establish loan policies, while the day-to-day administration of the program would be handled by the participating lending institutions and the servicing agent.

The mortgage bond program has proven feasible in the past year of its existence in cities like Chicago, Little Rock and Denver, Smith said.

Whether the program is needed in Lubbock will have to be determined by a feasiblity study of the Lubbock lending market and the willingness to participate by local lenders.

If the program were in operation now, Smith said 300 to 400 additional mortgages could be made at 8 1/2 percent interest.

Council members, however, remained skeptical about the program, now under scrutiny by Congress, and took no action to initiate a feasibility study.

Additional discussion on the program is expected at the next council meeting on July 26.

Rock Flutist Proving Skeptics Wrong

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Tim Weisberg had any number of problems establishing himself in the rock music firmament, but intense competition wasn't one of them.

There just never has been a huge supply of lead flutists.

Of course there hasn't been all that much of a demand either, which was the source of most of the problems he did encounter.

"Everybody told me that it was impossible to lead a rock 'n' roll band as a flute player and still not sing," recalls the rangy Southern California native. "But I decided that I wanted to try.

"So here I am now, about 10 years and 11 albums later — and it's not impossible."

Accomplishing the impossible must be good for your health. Weisberg is 36, but in the cutoffs and T-shirt he wore for a recent interview, he certainly didn't look it. He did look very cheerful, and with good reason.

His album with Dan Fogelberg, "Twin Sons of Different Mothers" has gone nearly double platinum, and his new solo album, "Night Rider," is doing better than any of his previous efforts. For the first time in his career, he's a headliner.

Best of all, he feels he's finally proven what he set out to prove when he turned professional 10 years ago: "That having a flute as a lead instrument is something that can appeal to a mass audience."

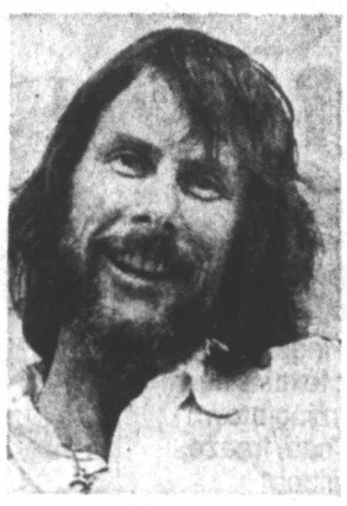

Today, that might not seem such an unusual thing. After all, if Jean-Luc Ponty can build an act with a violin, why not a flute?

But in the 1960s, things were different. Sure, the Beatles used full orchestras, and bands like the Moody Blues featured flute solos. But vocals were the mainstay of rock music, and the odd instrumental hit featured a guitar, piano or horn lead.

Flutists were expected to make their living playing jazz, classical music or John Philip Sousa. Most of them were girls anyway.

Weisberg knew all that when he took up the flute at age 13, but in those days he had no ambitions to play professionally, let alone play rock music.

"I just really felt I could express myself playing the flute," he said. "So I did classical, orchestras, wind ensembles, all-city orchestras, all-state orchestras, bands, marching bands. I was in a couple of Rose Parades, a lot of halftime football shows — that's basically what flute players do when they are in school.

TIM WEISBERG

"But another part of me — the part that wasn't being a competitive swimmer or doing a lot of camping — was going to rock 'n' roll concerts. ... So I led a kind of triple life. I was an athlete, I was a classical musician and I was also a consumer of mass quantities of rock 'n' roll."

Finally, in college, he got tired of staying on the sidelines while his friends played in rock bands.

"Remember the movie 'Animal House?' I played parties like that. Basically, in the beginning, what I did was, when the vocalist would get done singing the lyric, instead of the guitar player taking the lead, they let me take the lead on flute.

"It was unheard of. But the more I did it, the better I got at it. People enjoyed it. But I couldn't get hired — nobody could see a flute player as a permanent member of a group. And so by 1968 I ended up being leader of my own group."

A year later, he dropped his studies for a master's degree in educational psychology to try to land a record contract.

"I had no agent, no manager," he said. "Nobody's interested in a percentage of something that's not going to make it."

Nonetheless, he was playing steadily. "I had an itinerary that was better than a lot of acts that had albums out, even."

Armed with his list of dates and his determination, Weisberg got his contract, and has been churning out albums and respectable sales receipts ever since.

Dispute Delays Military Construction Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate battle between between business and labor forces was postponed Thursday but both sides said organized labor appeared to have the votes to win on a controversial bill.

At issue was an attempt to weaken provisions of the 1931 "Davis-Bacon" law, which requires contractors to pay workers the locally prevailing wage rate on federal construction jobs.

The bill tied up the Senate for more than four hours, until both sides agreed to send it to the Labor and Human Resources Committee for two days of hearings next week. It is to be brought back for debate by Aug. 1.

The issue was part of legislation authorizing $3.7 billion for military construction projects in the United States and overseas. An amendment added in the Senate Armed Services Committee would waive the provisions of Davis-Bacon in military construction.

Critics argued the law is inflationary and unnecessarily drives up construction costs. Supporters said it prevents unfair competition by contractors who would cut wages to win work contracts.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, called the law "a billion dollar boondoggle." Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., cited Pentagon estimates that waiving the law would save between $70 million to $200 million in its 1980 construction costs.

Arguing to retain the present provisions, Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee, said that under the law contractors are "free to compete in terms of efficiency, know-how, skill, but not in how much they can exploit their workers."

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., an opponent of the law, acknowledged there is little chance of weakening its provisions this year. He said that with the makeup of the Senate, "I think the odds are heavily against my side winning on Davis-Bacon."

'Happy Days' Actor Reflects On Show

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Anson Williams says this about "Happy Days": "The Fonz is what everyone wants to be, Richie is what every mother wants her son to be, and Potsie is what everyone really is."

Williams, who has played Potsie Weber for five years on the hit ABC comedy, says, "He's vulnerable, sensitive and always gets his foot in it. He has a hard time playing games. He's a very human character."

He says he is not tired of his role as third banana to Ron Howard's Richie and Henry Winkler's Fonzie. "Sometimes if you have a few weeks with not much to do it gets stagnant. But it's never boring because there's always something you can pick up on and create.

"And you have so much time for other things," he says, "like pitching a project or writing a song. I don't get bored. It just gets stagnant when you don't have much to do."

Williams has plenty to do otherwise. He writes songs, is creating a one-hour dramatic show for NBC and recently taped a television comedy-variety with his new wife, Lorrie Mahaffey, who played his girlfriend on "Happy Days." He'd met her earlier when he performed at the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville.

He says he doesn't consider himself a great actor. "I couldn't even sitthrough 'Hamlet,' much less play it," he says. "I never meant to be an actor. I wanted to be a performer and maybe get into producing. I just sort of fell into acting. I'd rather create and produce a film than be in one.

"My field, I think, is comedy. I'd like to be in a comedy film, but to be honest, I don't know if I could handle drama. But I think I could handle the production end."

Before "Happy Days," Williams's acting consisted of playing the "concerned boyfriend" in dozens of television episodes. He laughs, and says, "The girl would always have 30 lines and I'd say, 'I understand.' Then she'd have 30 more lines and I'd say, 'I'll try to help.'"

He landed the role of Potsie "by auditioning with 800 other guys."

"I was the last person they saw," he says. "They hired me and we started rehearsals the next day. The pilot didn't sell and in the second pilot they added the character of Fonzie.

"Then for the second pilot, they thought we might be too old, so I had to audition again. I not only had to audition, I had to do a screen test. It was luck that I got the part. If I'd had red hair I wouldn't have gotten it," he says.

"The thing to do is take the opportunity and build on it. You use it as a foundation. Some people don't do that and when it's over they're left with nothing. There's nothing glamorous about television. It's hard work. You make it glamorous for the people who watch."

Williams, 29, says he doesn't know how much longer the show will last, but notes ABC already has signed it for the next two years.

"Happy Days" probably will be around forever, at least in reruns, which begin in syndication next year.

He devotes most of his free time to variety, talk shows and concerts. He did succumb to playing a dramatic role in the NBC series "Greatest Heroes of the Bible." "I played somebody called Nabar, a character who's not even in the Bible," he says. "I did my best, but I don't know. I didn't even tell my mother to watch it."

His projected series for NBC is called "Medicine Man," about an Apache Indian who becomes a doctor and combines modern medicine with the mystical medicine of his heritage.

Williams's interest stems from the fact his wife is part Apache. They were married Nov. 19 in Santa Barbara and recently taped a comedy-variety special called "Anson and Lorrie" for airing on NBC in the fall.

Old Settlers Fete Slated At Stanton

The parade, which will include walking and riding units from Stanton, Midland, Big Spring, Odessa and Abilene, will start at 10 a.m. at the First United Methodist Church.

Games, including an egg throw, cow chip throwing, bubble gum blowing, jalapeno eating and tobacco spitting, will get underway at 2:30 p.m. at the community center.

Games for children will be at 6 p.m. in city park, and the barbecue will follow at 7 p.m. at the park.

After the barbecue, the oldest and youngest persons at the festivities will be honored and a memorial service will be held for old settlers who have died since last year's meeting.

Consultant A Performer In World Of Finance

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — When Lyle H. Kennedy II was 9 years old, he earned money as a radio actor and by keeping stock-price charts for his mother.

And while he followed in his mother's footsteps when it came time to choose a profession, he's still a performer.

Visit his financial consulting office in a renovated Groton farmhouse, and he will treat you to a spoof of TV editorializing or run off a string of one-liners that recall his years as a standup comic in the Catskills and Miami.

But his humorous side didn't prevent him from creating an investment fund that he believes is one of a kind in this country, based on both securities and real estate. He said the only similar fund he has found exists in England.

About 240 shareholders have invested $2.5 million in Kennedy Intervest Fund Ltd., convinced by its president's arguments that the fund's 22 real estate properties sustain the fund during periods when it is less advisable to invest in securities.

The 46-year-old Kennedy turns comic to explain his rather conservative approach to the stock market.

"Men who live by crystal ball end up eating lots of ground glass," he says.

The fund has grown in value in 18 of its 20 months of existence, he said.

Real estate has made up the bulk of the fund, ranging from 56 to 95 percent. But for the past five months, Kennedy has completely shunned securities and the fund's residential buildings now provides the kind of secure income that he requires. He said current investment in residential properties earns about 10 percent of the cash value of the property.

"The salmon can swim upstream, but I'm not sure of my ability," he said of his avoidance of securities.

He advised his clients to stay away from even the more reliable stocks between early 1973 and early 1975, when prices were falling, he said. Back in a rising stock market for about two years, he again recommended non-securities investment from mid-1977 to early 1978.

By then the fund was several months old, and he moved cautiously back into the market for about a year, before selling all the fund's securities five months ago.

"One of the great advantages of securities is that you can move in and out very rapidly," he said.

After 15 years with Wall Street funds such as Fidelity and Value Line, he decided to relocate to Connecticut, "to get away from the trees so I could see the forest."

Kennedy's quick wit carried him close to rejecting a business that had brought success to two earlier generations of his family. In 1941, he took part in his first radio show, later becoming one of the Video Rangers on "Captain Video" and playing Jughead for a year on the "Archie Andrews" radio show.

But he left entertainment to his grandfather and his mother into the world of finance. His grandfather, whose name he bears, was founder and publisher of the Wall Street Analyst. His mother, Margaret E. Kennedy, was the first woman partner of a New York Stock Exchange firm.

"What I wound up doing for my allowance was keeping stock prices on charts for my mother," he said.

Old City Site Believed Found On Parris Island Marine Base

WASHINGTON (AP) — Archaeologists believe they have found the site of one of the oldest cities in the United States, the 16th century Spanish settlement of Santa Elena.

A team of University of South Carolina scientists announced Thursday they discovered the remains of what is believed to be Fort San Felipe II on the Parris Island Marine Base in South Carolina.

This fort was supposed to be in the center of the settlement.

Santa Elena, sought by archaeologists for more than a century, was founded in 1566, just one year after the oldest city, St. Augustine, was established in what is now northeastern Florida.

Once the capital of the Spanish Florida territory, Santa Elena had 60 houses, three different forts and a peak population of 400 before being abandoned in 1587, according to historical records.

At a briefing held at the National Geographic Society, which will fund further work at the site, scientists said the discovery made last week under part of the Marine base golf course makes it one of the major historical sites in the country.

Those attending the briefing said many Americans think their country's history started with the first English settlement at Jamestown in 1607. There is a rich but neglected history before this and the new discovery may rekindle an interest in it, they said.

"We haven't found physical evidence yet of Santa Elena," said Stanley South, who led the university digging team. "But if we've found the fort, then the town should be spread out around it."

The archaeologists have identified the rectangular, 14-foot-wide moat around the fort and traces of two gun emplacement bastions.

They also recovered several pieces of 16th century Spanish pottery and a large nail believed used by soldiers above their bunks to hang their belongings on.

The archaeologists dug on Parris Island because two historians studying Spanish records suggested this was the location of Santa Elena. Dr. Paul Hoffman of Louisiana State University and Dr. Eugene Lyon of Vero Beach, Fla., who attended the briefing, said there are many references to Santa Elena.

"The digs verify the documentation," Hoffman said. "As an historian, I have no doubt that the town is there."

The Spanish built Santa Elena and the first Fort San Felipe to counter French settlement attempts and to protect the coastal flank of treasure ship routes. San Felipe, a triangular fortification that has yet to be located, burned in 1570 and Fort San Felipe II was construted the same year on a different, nearby site.

San Felipe II and the town were burned out in Indian attacks in 1576, but the settlers returned and built another fort called San Marcos. The settlement died in 1587 when the Spanish were called back to reinforce St. Augustine, under attack by British led by Sir Francis Drake.

The scientists said a moated area near the San Felipe II site that long has been identified as Charlesfort, a French fortification erected in 1562, must now definitely be considered the remains of Fort San Marcos.

Gen. Robert H. Barrow, commandant of the Marine Corps, told the briefing that the service would support the archaeological work as much as possible and will continue to guard the site.

Comic Strip Hinting Organized Crime Deleted Second Time

By The Associated Press

A Doonesbury comic strip satirizing California Gov. Edmund G. Brown as having alleged ties with organized crime was deleted Thursday for a second day from several newspapers in the state.

The Los Angeles Times and the San Francisco Chronicle were among at least seven newspapers in California that temporarily dropped the Pulitzer Prize-winning strip, written and drawn by Garry Trudeau. But several other newspapers continued to publish it.

The Times and Chronicle both cited potential libel problems and said the allegations contained in the comic series could not be substantiated.

Several newspapers outside California also temporarily deleted the comic strip. The Rochester (N.Y.) Times-Union did not run the strip Thursday, citing "potential legal problems." The Indianapolis Star canceled it for the same reason Thursday and said it would not run Doonesbury through next week.

The Doonesbury strip focuses on a $1,000 campaign contribution Brown has acknowleged soliciting from Sidney Korshak, a labor lawyer listed by the state attorney general as a known organized-crime figure.

Brown's chief of staff, Gray Davis, also mentioned in the strip, said Thursday, "I see no point in commenting on a cartoon." Brown said allegations of improper ties with Korshak "have been rehashed, and they are false and libelous."

Thursday's installment of Doonesbury has a fictionalized Brown telling an aide that he doesn't "even know this creep Korshak."

A spokesman for Korshak's Los Angeles law firm said the lawyer was out of town Thursday and could not be reached for comment.

A reporter's call to Trudeau's home in New Haven, Conn., was taken by his answering service and was not returned. The cartoonist seldom grants interviews.

A spokesman for Universal Press Syndicate, which distributes Doonesbury to 470 newspapers, said, however: "We're comfortable with the series and we're standing by it."

In a front-page item, the Chronicle said the comic strip "will return to the paper although it remains temporarily absent from today's comic page because of the same problem of potential libel."

The newspaper said more than 5,200 "worried and angry fans" called the newspaper on Wednesday to express their "fear that the satirical feature had been canceled permanently."

Los Angeles Times Editor William F. Thomas said the newspaper would not publish some of the current strips because "we know from previous and extensive research that some of the allegations cannot be substantiated."

Editors, Publisher Named For Yankee Quill

BOSTON (AP) — The Academy of New England Journalists has chosen three editors and a publisher as recipients of the 1979 Yankee Quill Awards.

The winners are Everett S. Allen, editor of the editorial page of The Standard-Times of New Bedford, Mass.; Judith W. Brown, editor and publisher of the New Britain (Conn.) Herald; Ernest W. Chard, retired executive editor of the Guy Gannett Newspapers of Maine, and Philip S. Weld, retired publisher of the Essex County Newspapers of Massachusetts.

The awards will be presented at a Simmons College banquet Oct. 25. The names of the honorees will be placed on a roster at the academy's headquarters at Colby College in Waterville, Maine.

They were chosen by fellow journalists who sit on the academy's 16-member board of trustees. Those honored become fellows of the academy.

According to Academy Chairman George B. Merry of The Christian Science Monitor, Allen is being honored for 41 years of service at the Standard-Times, which has produced award-winning editorials.

Mrs. Brown is the third woman in her family to head the New Britain Herald. She is receiving the Quill in recognition of her contributions to the newspaper field, both regionally and nationally, Merry said.

Chard, a longtime force on the Portland, Maine, newspaper scene, was an early fighter for a freedom of information law in Maine.

Weld, who published dailies and weeklies along the Massachusetts North Shore, is being honored for placing news ahead of commercial concerns in his papers, Merry noted.

In the last 12,000 years, the Niagara Falls have retreated seven miles, leaving a gorge 200 feet deep downstream, says the National Geographic Society. They continue to move 3 or 4 feet a year.

VARO, INC. of DALLAS is Interviewing in Lubbock for
SKILLED TECHNICIANS

Our Seminconductor, Night Vision and Power Systems Divisions in a Northeast Dallas suburb have numerous openings for Technicians who can contribute to our continued growth. We will be interviewing this weekend (Saturday, July 14 and Sunday, July 15) in Lubbock. Varo is a major manufacturer of military night viewing systems and is one of the worlds' largest producers of image intensifier tubes used in these systems. The company is the nation's largest producer of semiconductor high voltage rectifiers and multipliers used in consumer and industrial electronic products. Varo also manufactures power conversion equipment and other products. We are an NYSE and AMEX listed corporation.

Our current openings are as follows...

SR. ELECTRONIC TECHNICIANS
Construct and maintain semiconductor test equipment. Must have strong electronics background with experience in both analog and digital circuitry.

REPAIR & MAINTENANCE TECHNICIANS
Repair and maintain electro-mechanical equipment used in manufacture of discrete semiconductor devices. One year of related experience and a 2 year associates degree in electronics required.

MECHANICAL TECHNICIANS
Assist in maintaining and trouble shooting of production equipment. Work with high volume assembly line equipment such as coil winding machines and insertion machines, 1-2 years related experience required with some college level technical training.

SR. ENGINEERING TECHNICIANS
Conduct evaluations of wafer processing and or final assemblies using standard test equipment, set-up tests and evaluate results. Position requires several years related experience and about 2 years of formal training.

SR. ENGINERING TECHNICIANS (evaporation)
Assist in setting-up and evaluating new processes and equipment. A thorough knowledge of semiconductor materials processing including diffusion, etch, photoresist, metalization, scribing, and plating. Qualifications include about 2 years college with 3-5 years related experience.

DESIGNER
Develop and modify designs for mechanical, electrical, and optical assemblies; prepare layout drawings, determine tolerances, select components, prepare detail assembly drawings. Qualifications include 3-5 years mechanical drafting and design experience, 1-3 years of college or trade school, good knowledge of USA drafting standards.

MAGNETIC PROTOTYPE TECHNICIANS
Use spec sheet in fabricating and testing magnetic components such as coils, inductors and transformers, with the use of straight bobbin and toroidal coil winding machines. Must be able to read and interpret engineering specs with about 3 years of related experience.

SR. ELECTRONIC TECHNICIANS
Microprocessor interfacing for measurement and control applications; troubleshooting and repair of digital and analog circuits to component level; assisting in generating software programming for microprocessor system control. Qualifications include experience with TTL logic systems, operational amplifier applications, and interfacing techniques related to Z80 and 8080 systems.

ENGINEERING AIDE
Assist in vacuum tube engineering work involving tube assembly, processing, and listing. 2 years technical school background in electronic circuits and equipment.

SR. DRAFTSMAN
Prepare complete mil spec drawing packages including assembly, schematics, and sheetmetal machine fab drawings, using engineering layouts as basis for preparation. Also, preparation of basic engineering design layouts, selection of hardware, and design of printed wiring boards. About 3 years related experience needed.

QUALITY CONTROL TECHNICIANS
Perform quality assurance calibration and maintenance on electro-optic test equipment. Also, construct electro-optic test equipment.

In addition to excellent salaries, our highly successful organization offers an attractive benefits package and paid relocation to Dallas. For more information about these positions and about possible interviews, views,

Some ideas work and some won't! In 1978 over 2000 growers from California to Delaware and from Canada to Florida agreed that the Spray Sickle is one weed control idea that really works.

The 1979 Spray Sickle is better than ever — (Over 35 New Improvements.) If you have Johnson Grass (or any other problem weed) the Spray Sickle is really the only sure way to eradicate it. "Let Us Help You Grow!"

COMPREHENSIVE EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING PLAN
PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT
The South Plains Manpower Consortium announces it is submitting a grant to the U.S. Department of Labor for funding under Title II ABC, Title II D, Title IV, YETP, Title VI, and Title VII of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1978. The intent of the application is to request funds under the Title II ABC allocation for classroom training, on-the-job training, and work experience. Funds requested under Title II D and Title VI are for public service employment and training to aid in obtaining unsubsidized employment. Funds under Title IV YETP are requested to provide work experience and training for youth 16 to 21. Title VII funds are requested for training persons for jobs in the private sector. The overall purpose of these funds will be to provide job training and employment opportunities for economically disadvantaged, underemployed, or unemployed persons in the City of Lubbock, Hale, and Garza counties and to assure that training and other services lead to maximum employment opportunities.

Title II D	898,460
Title IV, YETP	298,025
Title VI	565,831
Title VII	302,207
TOTAL	3,079,130

The first draft of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Plan and performance for the first three quarters of fiscal Year 1979 may be reviewed at the office of the South Plains Association of Governments, 1709 — 26th Street, Lubbock, Texas, phone (806) 762-8721, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Interested persons wishing to make comment should mail them to the above address and to Richard A. Flores, Jr., Acting Regional Administrator, Employment and Training Administration, 555 Griffin Square Building, Dallas, Texas 75202.

Young Adult Businessmen and Women for...Delivery of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

A young adult on a Avalanche-Journal route is a part-time business person. He/She is in business for themsel and will learn fundamentals of good business practice through actual experience.

The Avalanche-Journal carrier buys for wholesale and sells for retail, realizing a gross profit. He learns to operate his business as efficiently as possible to assure maximum profit. The A-J carrier builds his business by giving good prompt delivery service and through the use of good salesmanship.

It is important that he learns how to keep accurate records. The Avalanche-Journal carrier has the responsibility of keeping his accounts receivable in order so he can take care of his obligations promptly.

This early training will be useful to a child through his adult career. Many parents encourage their children to accept the challange offered an Avalanche-Journal newspaper route.

Cuban Ace Falls At Pan Am Meet

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Unheralded Tony Darden of the United States handed Cuba's awesome Alberto Juantorena his second defeat in three nights at the Pan American Games, beating the two-time Olympic champion Thursday in the men's 400-meter race with a potent finishing kick.

The 21-year-old Darden, from Norristown, Pa., came down the stretch with a flourish and passed an ailing Juantorena and American teammate Willie Smith in winning in 45.11 seconds — his career best.

Darden's time was even more impressive because it was on a hot, humid night, one that generally is not conducive to running fast.

But Darden, after a rather slow start, put on a brilliant burt of sped in the closing meters in overtaking the two co-favorites.

Juantorena, beaten by James Robinson of Oakland, Calif., Monday night in the 800-meter final, finished second in the 400 in 45.25 and Smith, from Auburn, Ala., was third in 45.30.

"My strategy was just to go out with Willie because I didn't think Juantorena was in as good shape as he was in '76 (when he won both the 400 and 800 races in the Montreal Olympics)," said the exhilerated Darden.

"Willie got out fast, as I expected, and he was running very hard," added Darden, after beating his countryman for the second time this year and Juantorena for the first time in his career. "He was about 10 yards ahead of me coming out of the turn on the backstretch".

Then Darden starting making his move, but he didn't gain as much ground as he immediately expected.

"I was panicking because Willie (the pacesetter) wasn't coming to me as fast as I thought he would," said Darden.

WISHFUL THINKING — The Texas Tech football season is still two months away, but plenty of Red Raider fans are already dreaming about the 1979 season-opener. And the sign in the stands at Jones Stadium says it all: Beat USC. When the Trojans travel to Tech for the season-opener for both teams it will mark the first visit ever to Lubbock for USC. The two teams met for the first time last year when USC defeated the Raiders 17-9 in California. (Staff Photo By Dennis Copeland)

Britz, Massey Tied

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Jerilynn Britz and Debbie Massey persevered through the heat and humidity Thursday to shoot one-under-par 70s and take the first-round lead the $125,000 U.S. Women's Open golf tournament.

Britz and Massey held a one-stroke lead over six other players, including defending champion Hollis Stacy, at the 6,010-yard Brooklawn Country Club.

Also at 71 with Stacy, who is seeking an unprecedented third straight Open crown, were Jane Bialock, Pam Higgins, Sally Little, Cathy Morse and Sandra Spuzich.

At 72, one over par, was another two-time Open champion, Donna Caponi Young, along with Beth Stone and Sandra Post. Gallery favorites Nancy Lopez and Laura Baugh headed a group of seven players at 73.

Britz, who nearly won last week's Ladies Professional Golf Association tour stop at Noblesville, Ind., said she was fortunate to post a sub-par roundThursday,saving several pars with critical putts.

Massey, who has missed four of the last eight LPGA tourneys because of torn tendons in her left thumb, said she was "really pleased" with her round, particularly her putting.

Little made a rush at the leaders late in the day, but bogeyed the 16th to slip into second place. Little, who finished in a tie for second in last year's Open, overcame a double bogey on the first hole in Thursday's round.

Tech Season Tickets Go On Sale Monday

Season tickets for Texas Tech's six-game 1979 home football schedule will go on sale Monday, Tech ticket manager Carol Baker announced today.

According to Mrs. Baker, season tickets will be available over the counter beginning at 8:30 p.m. Monday. The ticket office, now located in the new building at the north end of Jones Stadium, will be open 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Sideline season tickts are priced at $51 for the six games. Season tickets in the south end zone can be purchased for $39 for adults and $19.50 for students. Mrs. Baker said season tickets in the endzone would be reserve seats.

Early indications are that Tech is pointing toward one of its best attendance years ever. Last season the Red Raiders averaged more than 45,000 fans per home game and an increase in new option sales during the off-season indicates even better response this fall.

. . .Of Rings And Recruits

WHEN TIME AND space run short. . Rodney Allison is already committed to Tech as a student assistant coach this fall, but there could be more professional football in his future. Allison received a feeler recently from Saskatchewan of the Canadian league — where he played last year — and plans are now to make a run at the club next season. . . Says Dale Brown, cage boss at LSU: "Instead of having a two-inch book of (NCAA) rules, have two pages. Be honest. Give the kids $100 a month spending money. Fly them home at Christmas time and at the end of the school year. Let their parents come to visit one time. Do that and you'll eliminate 99 percent of the (recruiting) trouble." Reckon? . . .

"Did you see that?" asked Tech track coach Corky Oglesby. "Owen Hamilton was sixth in the Southwest Conference (representing Texas), and he gets fourth (in the 800 meters) in the Pan Am games." . . If the Hillcrest Country Club's tennis pro shop closes early Saturday, there is a reason: Hillcrest pro-Tech tennis coach Mark Hamilton will be getting married that night — to Gail Broday. (Ditto on the date and vows for A-J sports guy Chuck McDonald, to Donna Fitzgerald). . .

LISA RISINGER, THE former South Plains College basketball standout, walked into the North Texas State gym one day recently to learn that she had been drafted in the second round by the Minnesota Fillies of the fem pro cage league. But, said Miss Risinger, who played at NT last winter, "It's tempting to go and play, but it's hard to get anything like that started. I've already accepted a coaching job for next year at Olton." . . This weekend, Dean Weese will hold a tryout camp for his Dallas Diamonds pro fem team. It starts at 9 a.m. Saturday at Brookhaven JC in Dallas. . .

Bill Matayastik, a former all-America tennis player at Trinity, is the new pro at Lakeridge, a racquet club in the south part of Our City. . . Sports Illustrated, that well known weekly athletic chronicle, has been cranking out editions for 25 years now. So it has condensed all its cover shots to one booklet, and guess who's the most published in the 25 years? Jack Nicklaus with 18. Well not quite, as Cassius Clay made it 11 times and his successor, Muhammad Ali 12 more. . . Home Boy Makes Good: Stan Musial, with Polish ancestry, visited the home of his relatives at Krakow, Poland recently. Amazing, there were four Musuals in the phone directory — and only three in his hometown of Donora, Pa. . .

LUBBOCK'S RANDY LAMINACK just proved Thursday that the winds in West Texas aren't the cause for all the long drives out this way. Laminack, who had won a regional long-driving contest here earlier this season, won the district PGA contest in Dallas. His drive which whistled out there 312 yards 9 inches, carried almost seven feet farther than his nearest competitor. So now Laminack gets to advance to the national long-driving contest, to be held at Birmingham, Mich., July 31, just prior to the PGA championships. Thursday's competition was held at Preston Trail CC in Dallas. . .

Darrell Royal started it all, and Fred Akers is continuing the procedure. Every UT footballer gets one of these special rings when he completes work on his bachelor's degree. And the Longhorns' academic coach has found that 82 percent of the players on the squad have gotten one of the rings since DKR originated the idea. UT officials claim that only Notre Dame and Penn State have higher graduation percentages. . . Tickets, man: Some 51,000 requests flooded the NCAA from fans wanting tickets for next year's national cage finals at Indianapolis. Only 4,935 requests could be filled. . .

NOW AFTER A week of Bobby Knight in the news, isn't it about time for Billy Martin to step back into the spotlight? Could you imagine them both playing for the same team — as co-coaches? . . And from Carl Maddox, AD at Mississippi State: "Women (because of Title IX) can't expect to get in four or five years where it took men's athletics 85 years to get. But we, on the other hand, can't expect women to wait 85 years either. We (at MSU) aim to be aggressive in women's athletics. Title IX is law. Nobody debates that. But it is something new, and we are having to adjust to it." . .

There are surprises around the baseball world, namely the Astros, Expos and Baltimore. Why Baltimore? For one thing, the team last month won 11 games by a single run; that'll have a major impact on any season. . .

Jun Jun Ni Captures Feature

RUIDOSO, N.M. (UPI) — Jun Jun Ni, the fourth place finisher in the 1977 All-American Futurity, picked up his first win of the year with a convincing victory in the 350 yard featured event at Ruidoso Downs Thursday.

U.S. Cagers Continue Hot Pace

Mike Woodson, switched to guard to replace the injured Kyle Macy, responded with 29 points in the undefeated Americans' 106-88 triumph over Brazil.

Woodson, normally a forward, shifted to guard to replace Macy, who suffered a broken jaw against Cuba Tuesday night.

It was the United States' eighth consecutive victory in the round robin tournament and sends the Americans against Puerto Rico for the gold medal tonight.

They'll take the floor for that game only a few hours after the scheduled appearance of Knight in a district courtroom on charges of aggravated assault against a Puerto Rican policeman, Jose de Silva.

Hubbers Score Easy NBC Win

Larry Horn threw a three-hitter and struck out nine Thursday as the Lubbock Hubbers launched the West Region Texas NBC Tournament with a 6-0 victory over the Lubbock Raiders at Lowrey Field.

Now 16-1 in the summer league standings, the Hubbers broke the game open in the eighth inning with five runs, three on Jeff Harp's bases-loaded triple.

Tonight's game pits the Town Draw Brewers against the Lubbock Cardinals at 7:30 p.m. at Lowrey Field.

Randy Newton singled in the only run that Horn needed in the fourth and Tim Leslie and Jimmy Shankle singled in runs in the eighth, preceeding Harp's triple.

Marvin Simpson had two of the Raiders hits with Leslie and Darius Copley each getting two hits for the Hubbers.

Hubbers	000 100 05—6-10-3
Raiders	000 000 00—0-3-1

Hubbers: Horn and Shankle. Raiders: Chuck Johnson and Calvin Reese. 3B — Harp.

Minor Leaguers Advance To Finals

Briercroft Conoco of Dixie League No. 2 and Northeast No. 1 advanced to the finals of the Area Minor League Tournament following semi-final victories on Thursday. The teams will meet tonight at 8 p.m. at Southwest Field for the championship.

In advancing to the finals, Briercroft Conoco defeated Cakebox of Southern League No. 2, 8-7, and Northeast won by forfeit against Southwest No. 2

Cakebox and Southwest will meet in the consolation finals tonight at 6 p.m.

Mets Crush Hapless Dodgers 12-5

By The Associated Press

Los Angeles left fielder Von Joshua's two-run error and Frank Taveras' two-run double highlighted an eight-run first inning Thursday night that started the New York Mets to a 12-5 victory over the Dodgers.

It was the biggest first inning in the Mets' 17-year history and the most runs scored against the Dodgers in one inning this season. Los Angeles got four of its runs in the eighth inning, three on Steve Garvey's homer.

RANGERS 6, ROYALS 2

John Ellis hammered two home runs while Buddy Bell had four hits and Richie Zisk and Jim Sundberg collected three apiece Thursday night to power the Texas Rangers past staggering Kansas City 6-2.

It was the Royals' fifth straight loss and 12th in 13 games. In their slide, the Royals have tunbled from a tie for first place on June 28 to fourth in the American League West, eight games behind first-place California.

TIGERS TAKE OPENER

Rookie Tom Underwood combined with Aurelio Lopez on a five-hitter as the Detroit Tigers beat the Chicago White Sox 4-1 in the opener of a Thursday twinight doubleheader.

The second game of a twi-night doubleheader between the Detroit Tigers and Chicago White Sox was postponed Thursday when the playing field was deemed unplayable by umpire Dave Phillips.

PHILLIES 4, PADRES 3

Bake McBride's sscrifice fly in the eighth inning scored Manny Trillo with the tie-breaking run Thursday night as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres 4-3.

BREWERS 5, BLUE JAYS 3

Designated hitter Dick Davis smacked a three-run homer and Sixto Lezcano added a solo home run to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Thursday night.

PIRATES 5, ASTROS 3

Bill Madlock clubbed his first home run for Pittsburgh, a two-run shot in the seventh inning, to rally the Pirates to a 5-3 victory and extend Houston's losing streak to six games Thursday night.

Madlock's blast came after John Milner walked with two out in the inning and erased Houston's two-run lead.

McEnroe Defeats Amritraj

NEW YORK (AP) — Embattled John McEnroe seemed to waste away the middle set but went on to beat India's Vijay Amritraj 6-2, 1-6, 6-1 Tuesday in the $300,000 round-robin Forest Hills Invitational.

McEnroe, who had taken a tough loss to Victor Pecci the night before, 3-6, 7-5, 7-6, rambled through his first set against Amritraj. But things went awry after the first few games of the next.

It was steamy and oppressively hot on court. Amritraj broke him for 3-1, then won his own service game against little resistance. And in the sixth game, on his own serve, the youngster seemed to turn off. He yielded the game at love, serving weakly, making three unforced errors and failing to move for one of Amritraj's service returns.

Amritraj took the next game and the set against two points for McEnroe. The small, restless crowd was rooting for the Indian, not for the hometown boy. Some in the stands speculated that McEnroe was throwing the match.

In the third game of the third set, Amritraj hit a shot close to or on the baseline. The linesman motioned that it was long, but apparently changed his mind — too late for McEnroe, who let the shot go. The umpire called in favor of Amritraj, 15-15.

McEnroe approached the chair for a long dispute. With the crowd commenting loudly, Amritraj strode over to some empty corner box seats and stretched out on the chairs. The umpire eventually agreed with McEnroe that a let should be played because McEnroe had been distracted. The crowd jeered.

Later, Amritraj backed up McEnroe. "Sometimes the people do not understand exactly what is happening on the court," he said. "(McEnroe) had a good point ... In this particular case he was right, though he is not always."

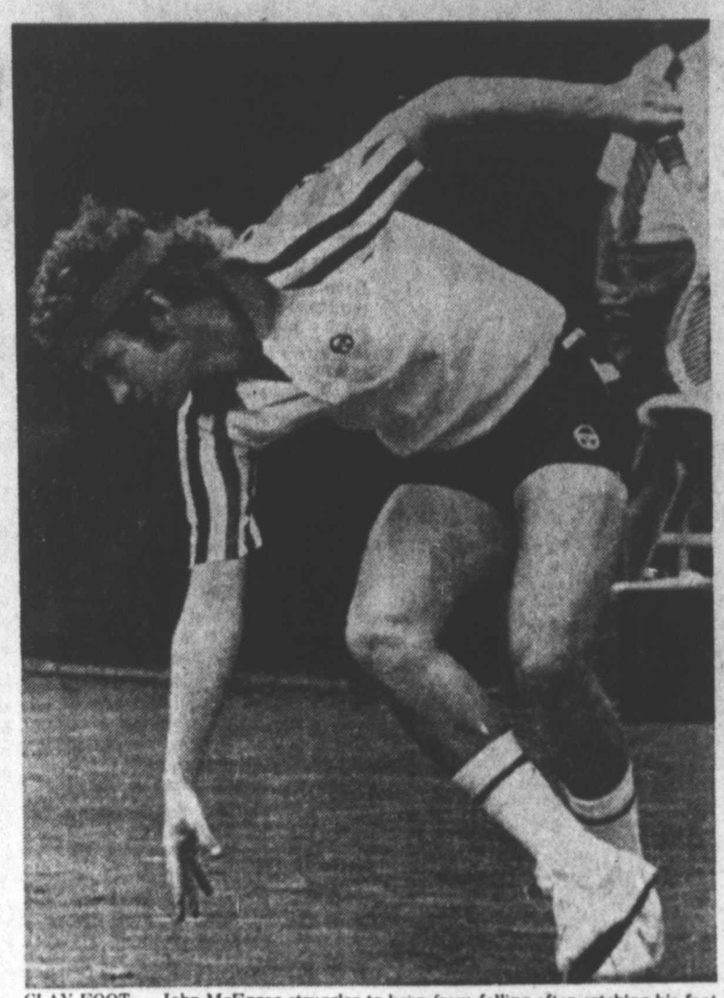

When play resumed, McEnroe netted his serve. The crowd applauded raucously again. The next serve was good, though. Amritraj lost the rally by overhitting.

McEnroe won that game and the next four for the match. The crowd applauded, politely, more quietly. It was subdued.

The night before, McEnroe had blasted a British reporter, blaming him for a critical story published in the London press this week — another of many such stories that appeared during Wimbledon. In other day matches, Pecci beat John Alexander 7-6, 1-6, 7-6. Pecci has a 2-0 match record now and is sure to be in the semifinals. The other certain semifinalist is Harold Solomon, who laso has a 2-0 record. The semis will be played on Saturday.

Poland's Wojtek Fibak defeated Gene Mayer 7-5, 3-6, 7-5 for a 2-1 record in another match.

Also, Raul Rameriz scored his best win of the year, beating defending champion Vitas Gerulaitis 6-2, 6-2. Ramirez moved with unusual speed, and Gerulaitis never was really in the match. He served poorly and overhit frequently.

CLAY FOOT — John McEnroe struggles to keep from falling after catching his foot in a hole in the clay on the edge of the court during the Invitational tennis tournament in New York Thursday afternoon. McEnroe defeated Vijay Amritraj 6-2, 1-6, 6-1 at the round-robin event. (AP Laserphoto)

Wilkinson Posts HOF Tennis Win

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Eighth-seeded Tim Wilkison of Shelby, N.C., pulled a major upset Thursday by beating No. 4 seed Bob Lutz of San Clemente, Calif., 6-3, 6-4, to move into the semifinals of the Hall of Fame tennis tournament.

The 19-year-old Wilkison, who turned pro in 1977 right out of high school, broke Lutz' serve twice on some sharp returns and sparkling play at net in fashioning the upset.

In Thursday's other quarterfinal play of the $100,000 Grand Prix tourney, No. 5 seed Brian Teacher of Los Angeles had little trouble beating unseeded Chris Kachel of Bellevue, Wash., 6-4, 6-4.

Wilkison meets Teacher in Saturday's semi-finals.

No. 1 seed Tim Gullikson of Boca Raton, Fla., will play No. 6 Hank Pfister of Los Gatos, Calif., and No. 3 Stan Smith of Hilton Head Island, S.C., will play No. 7 Geoff Masters of Australia in today's quarterfinals.

Finals are set for Sunday at 1 p.m.

Edmondson Falls At Swiss Net Event

GSTAAD, Switzerland (AP) — Argentina's Jose-Luis Clerc outlasted Mark Edmondson of Australia 6-7, 6-3, 6-2 in a 2½-hour match Thursday and reached the quarterfinals of the $75,000 Swiss Open Tennis Championships.

Edmondson swept into a 5-0 lead in the first set before the second-seeded Argentinian gathered momentum. The momentum changed as the Australian slowed down in the second and third sets, seemingly irritated by Clerc's pinpoint placements.

Fourth-seeded Tom Okker, the 35-year-old Dutch veteran, also was extended in ousting Austria's Hans Cary 6-1, 7-6 on his seventh match point.

McClure Wins Match At Trans-Miss

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — Andy Dillard of Tyler, Texas and Mark Brooks of Fort Worth, Texas, the two youngest players in the tournament, shot subpar rounds Thursday to advance in the Trans-Mississippi Amateur Golf Tournament.

Dillard, 17, was 4-under-par while beating Mark Steiner of Bartlesville, Okla., 2 and 1. Brooks, 18, was 2-under-par while beating Blaine McAllister of Fort Stockton, Texas.

Also advancing to the final 16 was Lubbock's John McClure, who defeated Tom Pernice of Kansas City 3 and 2.

Defending champion Bob Tway of Marietta, Ga., and medalist Rafael Alarcon of Guadalajara, Mexico also advanced as the field was narrowed to 16. Tway whipped Shane Kelly of Irving, Texas, 3 and 2 while Alarcon ousted Bob Mitchell of Tempe, Ariz., 4 and 3.

There will be eight matches today and the eight winners will play another round also this afternoon. The four survivors will meet in the semifinals Saturday with the 36-hole final scheduled for Sunday.

Brute, Ackbar Meet At Fair Park Tonight

The Brute will meet General Ackbar in the feature bout at the Fair Park Coliseum, headlining tonight's weekly wrestling card.

Ricky Romero will also tangle with El Mongel in action that begins at 8:30 p.m. Other matches scheduled are Akio Sato against Steve Starr and Dennis Stamp taking on Kiye Moto.

A special event will be the girls tag team match that pits Vicky Williams and Winena Little Heart against Vivian St. John and Judy Martin.

Weaver Takes Name Off Houston List

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech Athletic Director Doug Weaver said Thursday he has withdrawn his name from consideration for the athletic director's post at the University of Houston.

"The University of Houston did not offer me a position, nor had I decided to accept the position had it been offered," Weaver said in a statement.

"I am withdrawing my name because the events of the last few weeks had detracted from my ability to be effective as a leader, and I want to get on with the job of contributing to Georgia Tech and its athletic program," he said.

Houston is looking for a replacement for Harry Fouke, who is retiring as athletic director there.

Weaver had been reported to be one of three top candidates for the job. He had visited Houston twice for discussions with school officials, a Tech spokesman said.

Jazz Slapped With Restraining Order

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The National Basketball Association Jazz has been forbidden to sell season tickets, hold training camps or do anything else aimed at moving the team from New Orleans to Salt Lake City, the mayor's office announced Thursday.

The prohibition was in the form of a temporary restraining order issued Thursday by Judge Thomas A. Early Jr. The order is in force until July 25, when a hearing is scheduled on a request to require the Jazz to return to New Orleans.

Early earlier granted the restraining order and rescinded it immediately when the company that runs the Louisiana Superdome couldn't post a $7 million bond.

Oilers Reach Agreement With Stensrud

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers reached tentative agreement with second-round draft choice Mike Stensrud — the Oiler's first selection in the 1979 draft — it was announced Thursday by Ladd Herczeg, senior vice president and chief administrative officer.

"We talked several times on the telephone Wednesday and finally agreed to terms in principle about 9:30 last night," Herczeg said. "However, now the agreement has to be reduced to writing that will be acceptable to both parties.

"I don't anticiapte any problems but occasionally language problems are encountered that need to be ironed out," Herczeg added.

"We anticipate finalizing the agreement late this (Thursday) afternoon so Mike can make in in time to a participate in tomorrow's drills."

Holmes To Defend Title In September

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes will defend his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship on Friday night, Sept. 28, promoter Don King announced Thursday.

King said a site has not yet been chosen for the fight, which will be telecast live in prime time by the ABC television network.

Among the sites under consideration to host the fight are Hawaii, Las Vegas, Cleveland and Seattle, according to King.

Holmes, 29, who is unbeaten in 31 professional fights, will be defending his WBC crown for the fourth time. In his last defense, he stopped Mike Weaver in 12 rounds at New York's Madison Square Garden.

Shavers, 34, has a 58-7-1 record and will be making his second bid for the heavyweight crown. He lost a 15-round decision to Muhammad Ali in the Garden Sept. 29, 1977.

Porter Inks Pact, Returns To Bullets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Guard Kevin Porter returned to Washington Thursday with the goal of helping the Bullets regain the National Basketball Association championship.

The Bullets, NBA champions two years ago but beaten in the finals by Seattle last season, announced at a news conference that Porter, who led the NBA in assists the last two years before becoming a free agent, had been signed to a five-year contract.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed, but it was reported that Porter would earn $1 million over the course of the pact.

Porter, an eight year veteran, played for Detroit last season. Under the NBA's procedure in the signing of free agents, the Pistons are now entitled to compensation from the Bullets.

Angel Ace To Try Free-Agent Market

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Hard-throwing California right-hander Nolan Ryan says he will test the free-agent market this fall, but emphasized that he might return to the Angels next season.

Ryan, on the final year of his contract with the Angels, had indicated previously that he wouldn't negotiate until the end of the season. He had a more definitive statement this week.

"I'm going into the free agent market and determine exactly what my value is," he said. "That doesn't mean I won't be back here (in Anaheim) next year. It means I'm going to let the other clubs set the price.

"The Angels are a fine organization and I hope to return here, but I'll just have to see what the offers are."

Ryan, 32, has been the mainstay of the Angels' pitching staff for nine years. He has a 133-113 record for the Angels and is 11-6 with a 2.77 earned run average and a major league-leading 151 strikeouts this year.

Four Knotted At Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Little known Dave Eger, a second year pro in his third event since regaining his tour card June 1, fired a 6-under-par 66 Thursday to create a four-way first place tie in the $200,000 Greater Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament.

Eger, who lost his card last November after he had earned only $1,330 as a Professional Golfers Assocation rookie, finished late in the day with birdies on two of his last three holes.

One stroke back at 67 were Joe Hager, Keith Fergus, D.A. Weibring, Mark Lye, John Lister and Cesar Sanudo.

Twelve players, including 1973 U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller, were at 68. A total of 80 players broke par under virtually ideal conditions at the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club layout. Fairways were immaculately trimmed, the rough was low, greens were soft from rains the previous two days and winds were calm.

"These are probably the best putting surfaces we've had all year," Sanudo said. "Everybody shoots for the flag because the ball just stops on a dime."

Eger, whose only other round under 70 as a pro came on the third round here last year, shouldered his way into the lead when he sank a 25-foot birdie putt on his last hole.

"I don't think I played that well today, but the par 5s are where you redeem yourself on this course," said Eger, who birdied each of the par 5 holes. "The par 5s are all reachable in two, and I'm just average off the tee."

Reid, whose best finish this year was 11th at Los Angeles, birdied three of the par 5 holes.

"It doesn't matter what they do with traps and pin placemints," Reid said. "If you have good greens and fairways like these, the scores will be low. It's that simple."

North, from nearby Madison, Wis., said the friendly galleries and familiar surroundings had helped him to relax. North, currently 60th on the 1979 earnings list, has been dissatisfied with his play since his U.S. Open championship.

Six Rookies Cut

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys released six rookies on waivers Thursday during the forth day o pre-season training.

Squad cuts included wide receivers Dikki Dyson of Arkansas State and Notie Pate of New Mexico State; quarterback Mark Snyder of Rice; and three defensive backs — Joe Branson of Livingston, Isiah Gates of Southern Arkansas and Alvin Harris of Alcorn State.

Ali, Alzado Toss Words, Not Jabs

DENVER (AP) — Muhammad Ali and Denver Broncos' all-pro defensive end Lyle Alzado slapped at each other, rolled and tumbled in an impromptu wrestling match and proclaimed at a weigh-in Thursday that their upcoming eight-round exhibition boxing bout is serious business.

The 6-3 Alzado, an eight-year National Football League veteran and former Golden Gloves heavyweight, weighed first. He was recorded at 243½ dressed in red, white and blue boxing trunks and light shoes.

The 30-year-old New York native then thanked the crowd of reporters and onlookers for "having faith in me."

"I promise that when this fight takes place on Saturday I'll give him all the hell he can handle," the bearded professional football player said.

Ali entered the room about 15 minutes later in a dark business suit, shouting insults at Alzado, proclaiming himself the greatest, and saying the promoters of the bout "gotta be crazy to match me with a football player."

The 37-year-old Ali at first refused to be weighed, but later took off his suit coat and, wearing street shoes, was recorded as weighing 234½.

The two swapped insults and tried to look serious as television cameras moved in for interviews about the exhibition bout Saturday afternoon at Mile High Stadium.

"He called me something that rhymes with 'trigger,'" Ali shouted to the crowd. "I'm so fast I'll hit you before the Lord gets the news," he said to the Alzado.

"Let's start right now," Alzado challenged. "I'm ready. I'm comin' out smokin'," Alzado warned.

"Get your own stuff — that's my line," Ali laughed. "If you dreamed you beat me, you better wake up and apologize."

Alzado appeared uncomfortable and indicated he didn't want to continue the banter.

"Sucker, don't you want to sell some tickets?" Ali shouted.

The two continued to swap insults and threaten each other until Alzado shoved past his small, wiry handler, Bobby Lewis, grabbed the heavyweight champion around the neck and wrestled him to the plush, red carpet that cushioned the three-foot high platform where the weigh-in took place.

Kingman Benched

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dave Kingman, the Chicago Cubs' slugging outfielder, has a bruised left arm and should sit out the Cincinnati series, team officials said Thursday.

Kingman underwent X-rays for a swollen elbow, which proved negative, said Bill Harford, a team spokesman in Chicago. He probably will sit out the entire four-game weekend series with the Reds on the advice of the team's trainer, Harford said.

But Harford added that Kingman apparently will be able to play in the All-Star game Tuesday in Seattle.

NCAA Sharply Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association was characterized by Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, Thursday as employing "benevolent despotism" in its enforcement program and procedures.

Luken criticized the NCAA during a hearing by the House investigations subcommittee which has studied the association's rules and regulations for the past three years.

Luken, a member of subcommittee's parent House Interstate Commerce Committee, was critical of the way the NCAA handled the case of Lasalle Thompson, a high school basketball player recruited by the University of Cincinnati.

The NCAA ruled that Thompson would not be permitted to play in any post-season competition if he attended the University of Cincinnati, whose basketball program was put on probation, for alleged recruiting violations. Thompson elected to attend the University of Texas.

Luken told representatives of the NCAA he was concerned about Thompson's rights because he was never asked to testify before the NCAA's committee on infractions when it held hearings on the alleged violations by the university.

"The NCAA has adopted a maternalistic approach," Luken said. "Your unbending, unyielding (position) shows a benevolent despotism in your approach."

Luken made his comments after he was told that Thompson was not called because the University of Cincinnati disclosed the alleged violations during the hearing and then accepted the NCAA's penalty without appeal' ending it.

"When the university accepted the penalty, what happened to the athlete's rights?" said Luken.

Charles Alan Wright, chairman of the NCAA's infractions' committee, said the Thompson case was the first of its kind to come before the panel -one involving a student-athlete who had not yet enrolled in a school.

Key Races Set At Speedway

Lubbock Speedway will hold its mid-season championship race this weekend with a new leader in command of the late model/modified standings.

The midseason classic will be a two-program affair, the first Saturday and the windup on Sunday. Both will be night shows, starting at the usual 8:30 p.m.

Motorcycle races launch the weekend's activity tonight, with both short track and motocross on tap.

Dragged Into Roller Coaster At Age 6, He's Now A Fanatic

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — When he was 6, Robert Cartmell recalls, his brothers thought it would be fun to drag him onto a roller coaster to "scare the devil out of me."

Today, 30 years and 248 roller coasters later, it is unlikely anyone could drag him away. Cartmell, an art teacher at Albany State University, is a self-proclaimed roller coaster fanatic, regarded by many as the nation's foremost coaster historian and expert.

"I often imagine that here I am in the middle of a childhood dream come true," said Cartmell, 36, who retains a boyish charm and sheepish grin. "I feel that I owe a debt to roller coasters."

The debt is mutual. Following the tracks of a boyhood passion, Cartmell has, since he became "serious" about coasters in 1974, researched their history for numerous magazine articles and for a special traveling Smithsonian Institution exhibit that has visited more than 75 cities since opening in 1975.

He also is working on a book about roller coasters that he plans to publish next spring.

But what has really established Cartmell's reputation as a coaster expert is his rankings of the world's Top 10 roller coasters, which he updates periodically.

He describes the machines as one of the country's more violent means of amusement. "Every park claims that their coaster is the safest, and roller coasters are safe, but whenever there's an accident they publicize it and the lines increase," Cartmell observed.

Almost all coaster accidents occur, said Cartmell, because a passenger is foolish enough to try to stand or climb from one seat to another during the ride. Modern coaster cars can't fly off the track, he said, because they have wheels beneath the track that lock them securely in place.

For many people, like Cartmell, the initial attraction is a determination to overcome "being scared silly on the first ride.

"I remember coming over my first hill and looking down and thinking I was going to be killed," he recalled of his inaugural ride.

But Cartmell conquered his fear and began riding roller coasters every chance he got. "Since I was an Army brat, my father traveled around a lot and I got to a lot of different places," he said.

"Whenever we'd go to a new town, I'd check the yellow pages for the local musement park and go ride the coaster there."

In 1969, Cartmell became interested in learning more about their history. But when he started looking into the subject, he discovered almost no research had ever been done.

Through his research Cartmell increased the number of different roller coasters he had ridden to 248, the most recent one being the Florida Hurricane in Orlando, earlier this year.

He also was successful in tracing the history of coasters, back to their primitive origins in 17th Century Russia, where St. Petersburg residents raced down ice slides on two-foot long wooden sleds.

The roller coaster was refined in France in the early 1800s. In 1870, the Mauch Chunk Switchback, built on the site of an abandoned Pennsylvania coal mine, became the first American coaster.

The first commercial roller coaster was built on Brooklyn's Coney Island in 1884. But it would be 40 years before roller coasters would flourish in America.

In the 1920s, Cartmell said, nearly 1,500 coasters were erected as Americans were caught up in a fit of coastermania. It hasn't been rivaled since this decaden when a renewal in coater popularity has boosted Cartmell's reputation.

"People say the '70s have been dull and terrible, but it's been a great decade for roller coasters," Cartmell noted.

Still, there are only about 200 roller coasters left standing today, Cartmell estimated, since many didn't survive the Depression, when many fell into neglect and disrepair. And although there has been a surge to build bigger and faster metal coasters the past few years, Cartmell said the older, all-wood coasters were the finest ever made.

This summer, Cartmell will continue to barnstorm America, in search of faster and more thrilling coaster rides.

"I don't think I'll ever find the ultimate roller coaster," Cartmell concluded. "Sometimes when I'm looking I feel this sense of power and importance. Then I realize that I'm a grown man and it's only a roller coaster."

Here is a list of the roller coasters Robert Cartmell considers the 10 best in North America:

1. Texas Cyclone at Astroworld, Houston, Texas. Like everything else in Texas, Cartmell says, the Cyclone is "faster, steeper and higher" than any of its competitors. He describes it as "the finest roller coaster in existence," and says it will "probably remain unchallenged until an amusement park is built on Mars."

2. The Thunderbolt at Kennywood Park, West ifflin, Pa. This coaster is the most ingeniousy designed of any roller coaster, Cartmell says. Drama is heightened by a valley cleverly concealed by fences and trees and by unexpected hills 80 and 90 feet high at the end.

3. Mister Twister at Elitch's Gardens, Denver, Colo. This aptly named coaster features two huge, 360-degree turns and "the most fiendish tunnel in creation," Cartmell believes. Mister Twister is a maze of lumber made even more complex by a second, separate coaster that weaves and darts through its structure to form "the greatest labyrinth since the days of ancient Crete," Cartmell says.

4. The Cyclone at Coney Island, Brooklyn, N.Y. The oldest and most famous coaster on the list, the Cyclone has terrified more than 10 million passengers, including Charles Lindbergh and Al Capone. Its violent curves are the best anywhere, Cartmell says, and have been used to attempt cures for stuttering, hiccups and even blindness. Among the array of objects passengers have lost among its tracks, he says, are wallets, wigs, false teeth and even a bra.

5. The Beast at Kings Island, Cincinnati, Ohio. The newest coaster on the list, the Beast boasts the single highest hill in the country, towering 141 feet.

6. The Comet at Crystal Beach, Ontario, Canada. This coaster is a breathtaking array of steep hills overlooking Lake Erie and, with 4,800 feet of track, is the world's longest coaster.

Motel 6 Ribbon-Cutting Opens Up 178-Room Facility In South Lubbock

Participating in the open house program were Rod Kirkham and Robert E. Shattuck, vice presidents in the company's Dallas Regional office.

Included among the 178 rooms are four rooms set aside for handicapped persons. Those units include extra-wide doorways, wheelchair ramps, hand rails in bath and closet, connecting rooms for traveling companions and extra large shower facility, and wheel chair level accessories such as lights and television sets.

"The Lubbock centraplex represents an important move for us," Shattuck said. "Our experiences here and in other parts of the nation have helped us learn to anticipate the needs of the traveler in these times of economical consideration," he added.

Operating on a no-frills approach toward economy while maintaining convenience, the motel chain was founded in 1962 to assist the traveler in finding clean, comfortable lodging "at a rate that wouldn't keep him awake."

Motel 6 rates are: $9.95 for a single; $13.95 for a double; and $16.95 for three to four persons.

Kirkham, regional marketing manager, said, "We're proud of our efforts over the past few years to keep room rates affordable to all travelers. The American people, as never before, are traveling for both recreational and educational experiences. With more than 300 motels across the country, we like to think we've been instrumental in this movement."

The chain currently has locations in some 40 states.

Shattuck said, "Our philosophy of doing business revolves around a policy known as 'The No-Frills Approach' to the lodging industry where the guest pays only for those services he uses."

For example, the company does not provide "free" TV, although television sets are available at an additional fee.

The company said that when a traveler rents a motel room at most chains, he pays automatically for all the additional services, whether they are used or not.

No telephones are installed in the rooms, although they are available at various locations throughout the complex, and threre is no toll free system for making reservations at other locations. Reservations are made with the individual motels, and rooms are guaranteed no matter how late the arrival might be.

The firm also does not maintain restaurants or lounges on-premise.

Referring to the company's beginning in Santa Barbara, Calif., a spokesman said that many motel chains also began with modern, inexpensive accommodations. "But they didn't stay that way. As time went on, they became flashier and more expensive.

"Someone would build a motel a little fancier than the one next door. In turn, his neighbor would counter by adding an extra service, such as courtesy cars, bellhops or color television.

"Soon, all the motels were trying to outdo each other with luxuries. As the extras increased, so did the guest's room charge."

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The South Plains Health Systems executive committee unanimously voted Thursday to recommend that a Denton genetics clinic's Lubbock branch be refunded for $79,253.

However, committee member George Brewer suggested in his motion, and his colleagues agreed, that the Texas Genetics Network coordinate existing genetics programs to avoid duplication of services and to facilitate grant funding.

Concern over duplication of services and of troubles in securing funding because of two programs in a region has been voiced by Texas Tech medical school faculty.

The medical school currently offers genetics services and plans to implement fully a laboratory by September. The medical school program will offer a wide range of services, with an emphasis on prenatal counseling and diagnosis.

The Denton clinic's Lubbock office emphasizes services after a genetically afflicted child is born and how to cope with mental retardation in its education programs.

SPHS committee members decided that no unnecessary service duplication exists now.

But Dr. Wayne Heine, chairman of the obstetrics-gynecology department at Tech, said he is concerned "that when we approach the state for funding," money will not be appropriated because of the presence of the Denton clinic and the Baylor program.

Baylor medical school provides quality control of the Tech laboratory and is assisting Tech in setting up a genetics laboratory.

Dr. Heine's remark prompted the motion notation that state departments coordinate programs and funding.

The SPHS committee's recommendation for refunding of the nine-month-old Denton clinic will be forwarded to the Department of Mental Health/Mental Retardation.

The Denton clinic sends a medical team to Lubbock for three days every five weeks, and a social worker is available at the Lubbock office daily.

MINIATURE MISS WINNER — Renee D'Ann Bilberry, 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Dement of 5428 48th St., was named the overall talent winner in the Miniature Miss Division of the Texas State Cinderella Pageant. Miss Bilberry performed a jazz dance at the June 29 pageant and also placed first in trio dancing and second in novelty dance. She will travel to Baton Rouge next month to compete in the International Cinderella Pageant.

HEARTLINE: In the past, you have been very quick to point out certain documents and such that people should keep and review at intervals. However, I have never seen a warning in your column about a certain problem I ran into a few years ago. I do feel that it is an important item of interest and that many people could benefit from mention of it in your columns. For that reason, I am willing to share it with all.

It took me almost two months of writing and phoning to find out that three insurance policies (life insurance, I might point out), which were paid by me through 1976, were listed as lapsed in 1973. I keep all canceled checks and produced them when I contacted our local agent, the local insurance office, in two letters to the area home office (one by certified return receipt mail) and one letter to the New York office and got no response to any of them. I then contacted, by letter, our State Insurance Department, which roused everyone involved. And now after weeks of despair trying to resolve the problem, we are in the final stages of staightening it out. The books I keep regarding my payments showed payments made through December 1976, but there was no record at the insurance company's home office.

It is unbelievable this could have happened. One policy was more or less straightened out two years ago, but we were not advised then, or now, that it was considered lapsed. No notices have ever been received on any of the three policies. As I pay by the year (12 months) each time, and all policy numbers are shown on the checks, there could be no mistaking.

To be sure I am attaching copies of both sides of the canceled checks to the various policies. I am a retired person and, after my demise, I wish the policies to be carried on with no more problems. One of the three is being terminated for cash value.

I might add, one of the policies was paid up in March 1976, but the agent had taken the full amount for 1976 and neither he, the local office, nor the area home office had advised me of same. They did refund the amount paid from April through December 1976, after the State Insurance Commission became involved. I wish to add that I feel that my problem may be only the tip of the iceberg concerning insurance policies, particularly in this area through this nationally-known insurance company. Mine are all considered small policies. Maybe larger ones are not in jeopardy. All three of my policies were issued in the 1940s.

So, I think it would be a good idea to suggest that people check their life insurance policies periodically to make sure everything is in order. Once this sort of thing happens, it's a mess to straighten out. — D.B.W.

Thank you for your comments. We're sure our readers will find this interesting — and perhaps would like to check on their policies also.

HEARTLINE: I am receiving a VA pension and for a few years have been having it deposited directly into my checking account at my bank. However, I will soon be moving to a new town. How do I change the direct deposit of my VA compensation payment? — M.R.

Go to your new bank and fill out a new authorization. This will not take effect for 60 to 90 days. We suggest that you keep your old bank account open until the new authorization has taken effect and payments are being made into your new account.

More Letter Carriers Will Hoof It As Means Of Saving Energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — More of the nation's letter carriers will be hefting leather mail bags or pushing handcarts along sidewalks as the Postal Service switches thousands of motorized routes to walking routes.

The reason? To save fuel.

In the two centuries since Benjamin Franklin organized the national mail service, most deliveries have been made on foot.

But over the last two decades, the Postal Service bought thousands of delivery vans and small trucks, making it easier for its couriers to swiftly complete those appointed rounds, all but disregarding the snow and rain and heat and gloom of night.

"Back in 1960 only about 13 percent of our routes were motorized. Now that has grown to 85 percent," said C. Neil Benson, top operations officer of the Postal Service.

"Because of the fuel crunch and the cost, we are reassessing all of the routes. We think we can pull the vehicles away from some of the routes without losing anything," he said in an interview.

Benson said 115,000 of the 124,000 delivery routes nationwide now use small delivery vehicles, but he declined to say how many would go back to walking routes.

But another postal source, who declined to be identified, said the aim is for 2,000 more routes to be delivered by walking carriers by the end of September. By a year from then, another 10,000 routes will be walked, said the source.

Asked why the agency is going back to walking mail carriers, Benson said, "It's because of the price of vehicles and the price of fuel.

"Five or six years ago we could buy a compact vehicle for $1,600 or $2,000. But now we are up to well over $4,000. Gasoline was 30 cents a gallon and now is 90 cents. These prices have gone up faster than the labor costs needed to deliver mail," he said.

Postmaster General William Bolger has said that a one-cent increase in gasoline prices drives national postal costs up by $3.5 million.

The move back to foot power — which is endorsed by Vincent Sombrotto, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers — is part of an overall Postal Service drive to reduce energy usage.

Bolger says the agency is developing contingency plans for fuel emergencies. "I'd much rather reduce our fuel consumption without reducing service. But we are not ignoring that possibility in an energy emergency," he said.

The Postal Service already has cut fuel usage in its buildings 10 percent since 1975 and has a goal of 20 percent additional reduction by 1985.

"We are making strides in reducing energy in our new buildings, where we can design in reductions. We are getting a 45 percent reduction there," said Benson.

"We also are experimenting with solar power in buildings. That has yet to be proved effective.

Convicted Soldier Facing Execution

FT. LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — An Army private convicted of raping, then murdering a warrant officer's wife with a pair of scissors was jailed in a fading red brick stockade here Thursday, hoping appeals will spare him from being the first U.S. soldier executed since 1961.

Pfc. Wyatt L. Matthews, 22, the youngest of seven children of a Pennsylvania factory worker, arrived by military aircraft Wednesday night from Germany, where the slaying occurred. He was quartered in a maximum-security cell.

Army Lt. Col. James Wilson said that if the death sentence is carried out, it could be by "electric chair, musketry, hanging, or any other approved method."

WYATT MATTHEWS

The convicted serviceman's mother, 67-year-old Carrie Matthews, said, "If the boy is sick, he needs help. Instead, they're talking about killing him." She was interviewed by phone from her home in Chester, Pa., a blue-collar town of rowhouses and factories that hugs the Delaware River.

"Tell him I'm praying for him because there's a Man above," she said. "The same men who pass judgment on him have to die and face God the same way he does. This happened because we're black and poor."

Matthews was found guilty of the Feb. 27 rape-slaying of Phyllis Jean Villanueva, 29, of Birmingham, Ala., who was stabbed 53 times in an Army training base library in Bavaria where she worked.

A jury of eight Army officers sitting in Nuremberg convicted him July 3 and set the death penalty. Matthews, a truck mechanic in the Second Armored Division in Germany, had pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of unpremeditated rape and murder, but the court refused to accept it.

The Pentagon says the last U.S. serviceman to be executed was Pvt. John Bennett, convicted in 1955 of rape and attempted murder. He died on the gallows here on April 13, 1961.

Since then, four servicemen have been dealt death sentences by courtsmartial, but none was carried out. Three of the sentences were commuted to life imprisonment; the fourth was dismissed.

Col. Wilson said here Thursday that Matthews's case would first be reviewed in Washington by the Army Court of Military Review, comprised of three senior military judges. If the sentence is affirmed, it then would go to the U.S. Court of Military Appeals, comprised of three civilian judges. Another affirmation, and the president would have the final say.

Friends say that Matthews saw the Army as an escape from poverty, joblessness and barroom boredom. One friend in Chester described him as "an average dude."

But an Army psychiatrist testified at his trial that he had an explosive personality and suicidal tendencies. His relatives said that in the past he had shown flashes of temper, but that except for a drinking problem he showed no signs of severe mental instability.

"If he has a temper, he got it from me," said his mother, whose husband died last year at age 75 after retiring from a factory job. "I had seven of them to raise, and you can't be mild with that many children."

"Sure, he used to get mad sometimes," said a family friend who was standing in front of a bar. "Who don't? You got to be angry living around here."

The condemned man has a girlfriend in Chester, Joyce Yates, 25, and a son, Wyatt Yates Jr., 5. The soldier was home at Christmas and, according to a sister, Ella Matthews, he didn't want to go back.

"He got so involved in the family then," she recalled Thursday. "He's crazy about that baby, and that little boy is crazy about him, too. His little cousin read the newspaper and told him his father is going to die. Even grown people are saying this to this little boy. It makes me angry.

"The last time I talked to little Yates he said he was going over to Germany to see his daddy."

No-Confidence Vote Scoffed At By Desai

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Morarji Desai, his 28-month-old government plagued by mass defections, declared Thursday his supporters in Parliament will defeat a no-confidence vote against him.

Desai was quoted as saying the no-confidence motion, scheduled for Monday, will be defeated by a "very comfortable" margin despite the loss of his parliamentary majority.

A minor regional party from south India announced it would oppose the motion and Desai's government also is counting on backing from a small north Indian party and the Communists.

Political observers said Desai also would be aided by abstentions from some opposition members who fear the government's fall would leave them ill-prepared for a mid-term election.

Health Minister Rabi Ray and two deputy ministers resigned Thursday, and seven more members of Parliament defected from Desai's ruling Janata Party. Ray and the deputies were the first ministers to quit.

The defections, 55 since the crisis began early this week, reduced Janata strength to 246 in the 539-seat lower house.

All but two of the defectors have joined Raj Narain, a former health minister and outspoken critic of Desai. Narain has demanded the Janata leadership expel members of the Hindu nationalist Jana Sangh faction, and left the party last month following disciplinary action against him.

During debate Thursday on the confidence motion, Narain demanded the 83-year-old Desai resign for tarnishing the ruling party's image by allying himself with a militant right-wing Hindu organization that has ties to the Jana Sangh.

IBM Dips, Stocks Down

NEW YORK(AP) — Disappointing earnings news from IBM, a leading blue chip, helped drag the already skittish stock market lower Thursday in moderate trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed down 7.00 at 836.86, extending its losses since Tuesday to almost 16 points.

International Business Machine's announcement of a 3.4 percent decline in its second quarter earnings — far lower than analysts expected — came against an already gloomy background of worries over energy policy, declining economic growth and pressure on the dollar.

Many investors appeared to be waiting on the sidelines until after President Carter presents his energy and economic message on Sunday, said Robert Stovall, an analyst at Dean Witter Reynold Inc.

"You don't have any strong commitments from either side — either buying or selling in this market," he said.

New York (AP) — Thursday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Area Hopper Count Grows

Threat To Panhandle Cropland Seen

BY JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — Grasshoppers by the thousands are presenting a growing threat to Panhandle area cropland, and the menace is even moving into the outskirts of the local farming community as hordes of the leading insects begin to wear down rangeland and look for greener pastures.

Hoppers are a problem throughout many of the Great Plains states this summer, as their population cycle is at a peak, and in some states, including South Dakota, their numbers may be as high as 100 per square yard.

Entomologists indicate that a population of as few as eight grasshoppers per square yard can consume as much grass as a feeder cow, and with rangeland in much of the Panhandle on the sparse side anyway, the loss of forage for even one animal can prove costly.

Although no real grasshopper problems have been encountered locally this spring and during the early portion of the summer, the pests are being seen in growing numbers to the north and northwest.

Some of the heaviest area populations are being found near Wildorado, and landowners in the Vega region met recently to discuss the grasshopper problem there.

Dr. Carl Patrick, entomologist with the Texas A&M Extension Center in Amarillo, reports that the hoppers are primarily restricted to rangeland at this time, but will probably be moving into the cropland as they use up grass.

"Right now, the highest numbers of these pests are in Moore County, and the worst problems may be in Roberts County. In the immediate Hereford area, it's a marginal situation. There are plenty of grasshoppers, but not the numbers compared to the northern Panhandle, where there's more rangeland," said Patrick.

The entomologist pointed out that the Panhandle isn't alone in being confronted by a hopper horde.

"They're scattered all the way across Texas. We've had reports of some high populations in South Texas," said Patrick, pointing out that the current problem isn't necessarily a sign of a grasshopper takeover.

"I think the population peak we're seeing now is purely a cycle. The population gradually build over seven or eight years, and then they drop dramatically. It took a few years for the number to build to the levels we're seeing now, and we'll see them decline again," he continued.

According to Patrick, the main damage from grasshoppers on rangeland comes from their competition with cattle.

"They can deprive cattle of a lot of grazing land the hoppers can destroy crops they move into rapidly by stripping leaves. There is the potential for them to destroy a whole crop with the populations we're seeing this year," he related.

Because of widespread problem of grasshoppers, a cost-share program of spraying is underway in areas where populations are heaviest, with the federal government and landowners sharing equally in the expenses of spraying.

Some of the spraying is being contracted on a local basis, while the areas where vast acreage are to be covered, such as in Roberts and Hutchison counties, high-capacity twin-engined planes are being utilized to apply pesticide.

According to Patrick, a concentrated form of malathion ULV is being utilized in the spraying program at 8 ounces per acre. Although the pesticide is one of the safest available, it is giving up to "95 percent plus" control to grasshoppers under proper conditions of application.

Patrick pointed out that the success rate of the chemical drops to only 75 percent in areas of heavy brush.

"Hopefully, the spraying program will be wrapped up by mid-month. It's important that the spraying be done prior to the egg laying period, which will begin soon. By finishing the spraying by mid-July, we'll get in just ahead of any egg laying," Patrick advised.

Local aerial spraying firms have gone up against hoppers on only a limited basis in the immediate Hereford vicinity, thus far.

Leland Shelton of Whiteface Aviation here reported that his firm has done some spraying in the Wildorado area to control grasshoppers.

"Anywhere there's more grass, they're thicker. We've been dressing the edgies of fields next to pastures, but it looks like the hoppers will keep moving into crops if they aren't stopped. It's getting worse as the grasses in the pastures and the weeds along the fencerows begin to dry up. The hoppers will be looking for something greener to eat," said Shelton.

Jim Campbell, entomologist for American Dusting Co. of Hereford, indicated that the hoppers still represent a potential problem for cropland.

"We're finding a lot of grasshoppers along the turnrows, and some damage on the ends of fields. Anyone with fields bordering a big wheat patch or grassland sure needs to pay attention to the ends of the rows and the turnrows. Very seldom are the hoppers a problem in the whole field, but they can sure riddle the area they hit," Camp indicated.

The local entomologist explained that while grassshoppers are a concern, a more traditional insect pest in the local area is still only in the first generation.

The Southwestern corn borer, nemesis of area corn fields for a number of years now, is currently in the first generation, which should not require control, according to Campbell.

"The cold winter and wet spring we had have helped us out a whole lot on pests. We found a lot less live borers that had overwintered. The first generation is in the process of hatching now, and it will be as much as three weeks before we get into the second generation of borers, where control measures usually begin," said Campbell.

He pointed out that there is currently good news concerning one of the most serious enemies of corn here the past two years.

"It looks like maybe the spider mite situation is going to be better in corn. We can't find the levels of these insects in the older corn that we were already finding at this time last year. Weather will prove the determining factor in how severe these pests become, but we had a lot less of them coming out of the wheat this year, and maybe they won't hit the astronomical numbers we've seen the last two years," Campbell said.

"Beneficial insects also seem to be a lot higher in number than they were last year, and overall this has to be good news for local farmers," he added.

HOPPER SIGNS — Grasshoppers are moving into row crops in growing numbers in the northern reaches of the Panhandle as they abandon rangeland worn out by their spring onslaught. A peak in the grasshopper cycle has meant large populations of the leaping pests on rangeland and farmers in widespread portions of the Panhandle and South Plains are being reminded to keep a close watch on the borders of their fields as the hoppers migrate from rangeland. Researchers Find Tumbleweeds Nutritious Feed For Cattle

LAS CRUCES (Special) — Believe it or not, those pesky tumbleweeds may some day be converted to sizzling T-bone steaks, delicately marbled roasts and well-rounded round steaks.

And even more unbelievable, those same sticky weeds may some day help Southwesterners conserve precious water supplies.

The story begins three years ago when two researchers with New Mexico State University got together and decided to either confirm or negate rumors that Russian-thistles (tumbleweeds) are a nutritious feed for livestock.

Donning white lab coats and arming themselves with calculators, Jim Fowler, an agronomist with NMSU's Agricultural Experiment Station, and Jim Hageman, NMSU chemist, planted their first crop of Russian-thistles. They then applied water to the newly seeded crop and waited for the plants to grow.

Once the plants reached a predetermined, required height, the researchers harvested their dubious crop, took it to an NMSU laboratory and ran a series of nutrition analyses on it.

"We found cultivated Russian-thistles produce much more dry matter per unit of water than most conventional hay crops, such as alfalfa," Fowler said. According to the researchers, the nutritional value of Russian-thistle has been studied sporadically over the years, especially during or following periods of drought when other feeds were in short supply.

One such study was conducted in western Kansas in 1934 by H. W. Cave and associates. They studied the digestibility of Russian-thistle hay as a diet for dairy cattle. Their findings?

Ground Russian-thistle hay, containing only 9 percent protein, provided 55 percent as much digestibvle protein and 80 percent as much total nutrients as alfalfa.

Cave also found no lingering odors in mills where Russian-thistle was milled, nor was there a laxative effect in cattle fed Russian-thistle hay.

"While Cave's study is important," Fowler said, "we'll obviously have to do additional nutritive evaluations. We'll also have to run feeding trials on Russian-thistle harvested at different stages of maturity before we can adequately characterize its nutritional value."

In another part of their study, conducted in 1975-76, the researchers studied Russian-thistle's water needs.

"Our data confirmed that cultivated Russian-thistle produces much more dry matter per unit of water applied than most conventional hay crops," Fowler said.

"And from our literature review, we know other researchers have found Russian-thistle requires one-third to one-half as much water per unit of dry matter produced as alfalfa, flax and bromegrass," Fowler said.

When the researchers applied nitrogen to Russian-thistle, they found irrigated Russian-thistle fertilized with 100 pounds of nitrogen produced over 4.4 tons of dry feed per acre with only 9.5 inches of total water. That water total included both irrigation and rainfall.

Fowler added, "That is more than 900 pounds of dry matter per acre-inch of water applied."

But what will happen if farmers do raise tumbleweeds? Won't they eventually take over all the state's farmland?

"No," Fowler said. "Cultivating Russian-thistle as a forage crop, in regions which already abound with the weed, should not increase the threat of tumbleweeds in other crop fields."

Fowler reasoned that Russian-thistle, unlike many problem weeds, is easy to control in cropped fields and perennial pastures.

"Therefore," he asked, "if Russian-thistle proves to be a nutritious forage, suitable for livestock feed, why shouldn't we take advantage of its high level of productivity as well as its ability to thrive on very little water and grow it as an economical crop?"

Grain Futures Mart Performance Cited

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY — The spring of 1979 saw a dramatic demonstration of how U. S. grain futures markets function in response to supply and demand factors around the whole world.

Of course, futures markets are responding to supply and demand conditions all the time, but this particular spring period presented an interesting study because prices rose rather steadily and yet there was no single sensational development such as a huge sale to one country, a major crop disaster, widespread war or anything similar.

In retrospect, it now develops that apparently the whole world gradually came to the conclusion that the world was not going to produce quite as much food, specifically grains, this year as it did in 1978

At the same time, it was assumed that the world, which always has more people each year, would consume more food this year than last. Hence, as grain analysts were pointing out — a strong demand.

The world is not heading into a grain shortage, at least so far as anyone can determine at this time. Nobody ever can tell for sure what's ahead. Major crop failures any place in the world obviously could change the outlook dramatically. That is the case in any year. Bumper crops also would have the opposite effect.

But the world is not starting out with shortages this year. Production over the globe was the greatest ever in 1978. Carryovers will be large. The world is not consuming in this marketing year quite as much grain as was produced last year.

But the markets have been telling us this year that consumption likely will be greater than production from the harvests in the 1979-80 marketing year. So the year following, the carryovers could be less.

American futures markets in grain, at Chicago, Kansas City and Minneapolis, perform many functions. A major function is that they "discover" through free market trading processes what something is worth.

And what something is worth is what somebody will pay for it. At the same time, the buyer has to pay what it takes to get it. This interplay determines prices at which trading actually is accomplished.

What is remarkable is how U. S. futures markets, the only such free and open grain markets in the wold, reflected worldwide opinion on worldwide crop conditions as they slowly were developing in the first part of this year.

In any comment on futures markets it must be recognized that prices change every day, and they will change tomorrow. So let's arbitrarily pick a period to cover.

On March 20, the July futures price on hard red winter wheat at the Kansas City Board of Trade closed at $3.15 ¾ a bushel. Ninety days later, on June 20, the closing price was $4.30, up $1.14 ¼, a substantial increase.

For a comparison, it might be recalled that July 10, 1972, just after the government had revealed the United States was going to make big sales of grain to the Soviet Union, the December futures price in Kansas City was $1.51 ¼. Ninety days later, on October 10, the December futures closed at $2.14 ¼, up 63 cents.

So, dollarwise, the increase from March 20 to June 20 this year was greater than the boost from the Russian sales in the 90 days after that announcement in 1972.

The stage for this year's price increases, which, incidentallly were experienced also to an extent by both corn and soybeans in addition to wheat, began with the unusually severe winter over most of the northern hemisphere. Analysts feared there would be winter kill in winter wheat crops in Northern Europe, China and particularly in the Soviet Union. It should be emphasized that crop conditions in the Soviet Union had a major role in the price strength on American futures markets this spring.

But it wasn't just the United States which was observing these crop conditions. The whole world realized that if the Soviet Union didn't produce so much, it might have to import more. And the Soviet Union buys in big hunks.

So, as the planting season approached, the world observed that the Soviet Union was experiencing a cold, late spring. So was Poland and other Eastern European nations as well as Canada, and the United States.

The United States with its highly mechanized farms eventually got all its spring crops planted, almost at the average time. Eventually, the Soviet Union also planted its crops, but they were late and often late crops don't produce to the maximum.

Canada also was late in its seedings of spring wheat and, in some instances, Canadian farmers switched to other crops.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture eventually issued a report stating that the Soviet Union's grain production likely would be down this year from last year's record. The International Wheat Council in London predicted the world's wheat crop this year might by 5 to 10 percent under the 1978 output.

Here's why

PROBLEM	SOLUTION
PERFORMANCE	USE ELCAR. Effective at low rates. One pound treats eight acres.
STABILITY	USE ELCAR. Stable in storage and in field situations.
SAFETY	USE ELCAR. Safe to applicator and environment, with built-in selectivity which keeps beneficials on the job.
RESISTANCE	USE ELCAR. After many generations of testing and use in the field, no resistance against ELCAR has been demonstrated.
SPECIAL PROGRAMS	USE ELCAR in both IPM programs and with conventional treatments.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A CHANGE IN WHAT IS DESCRIBED as a "totally unfair" rule under which the 1979 farm program now is being administered is being sought by the Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.

"It's a procedure which, if followed, is going to cause more than a few of our people to be declared ineligible for any farm program benefits for reasons over which they have no control," says Donald Johnson, PCG executive vice president.

In a number of instances, he adds, producers might not even be aware of the situation until they are notified of the ineligibility.

The problem arises when a producer fails to certify all acreage classified as "cropland" by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

IN SUCH CASES, THE FAILURE to certify, as would be expected, would make that farmer ineligible for any program benefits.

"But that is only the beginning," Johnson says.

"Not only is that farm ineligible, but all other farms in which either the operator or the landlord has an interest also are out of the program along with the different landlords and/or tenants on those other farms."

For clarification, Johnson uses this example:

T. L. Landlord is the owner of Farms A, B and C in Bailey County, on each of which a different operator has program crops planted and is in full compliance with all program regulations.

Landlord also owns Farm D in Midland County, operated by another tenant but with grass for a grazing operation planted on all the cropland.

BECAUSE THE MIDLAND COUNTY FARMER is not participating in the farm program in any way, he does not think it necessary to certify what the cropland is being used for — a fact which is of no consequence to the operator or Landlord on the Midland County farm.

However, the failure of the Midland County operator to certify that cropland also causes Landlord and his tenants on Farms A, B and C in Bailey County to be denied use of the government loan and makes them ineligible for any low yield or price deficiency payments that might otherwise become due.

"This means the three Bailey County farmers would be penalized for the inaction of a farmer in Midland County over whom they have no control and may not even know exists," Johnson says.

AND THE SAME WOULD BE TRUE if Landlord had a fourth tenant in Lubbock County who failed to certify wheat he had growing in borrow ditches, on terraces or on turnrows.

In contrast, Johnson adds, if the fourth farmer overplants his normal crop acreage, fails to have adequate set-aside or is declared out of compliance for any reason except non-certification, eligibility of the Bailey County farmers would not be affected.

"This is just not a fair way to run the program," Johnson asserts, "and we are asking ASCS officials to recognize that and correct the situation before a lot of our people get hurt."

Floor brokers said commission houses also sold early on charts and sell stops and on the passing of former Hurricane Bob into a tropical storm in the Delta. Some mixed, late short covering only slightly pared losses.

Brokers said the Wednesday's higher U. S. Department of Agriculture world cotton estimate, although expected and already largely discounted, enhanced bearish sentiment.

The USDA estimated 1979-80 world production at 62.7 million to 64.9 million bales, up from 59.7 million in 1978-79, with the U. S. crop projected in a range of 12.0 million to 14.2 million bales.

Production in the Soviet Union was estimated at 12.9 million bales, up from 12.3 million this season. China's output was projected at 10.2 million bales, up from 10 million in 1978-79.

The USDA's weekly export report Thursday showed U. S. exporters have reported new sales of 107,500 running bales to China in the week ended July 1. All are for shipment in the 1979-80 marketing year.

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market Thursday was slow. Supplies of cotton for sale were moderate and demand was weak.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations advanced 25 points for white and light spotted grades and declined 50 points for spotted and tinged grades.

August Paces Comeback Surge In Cattle Futures Contracts

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 5 to 112 points higher led by August which was up the limit level of 150 for a time Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Sales totaled 24,842 cars. The market was higher from the start and rose to the best levels in one month.

Aggressive short covering was touched off at the opening following Wednesday's late declines. Traders noted the upturn in carcass beef and firmness in cash cattle as supporting factors. Lighter than year ago kill was also positive as were cheaper feedgrains.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up 1 at 100½ to 101½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to up $1 with the best top $69 per hundredweight at Omaha. Slaughter was 118,000 head. Receipts at the major markets today are expected to total 3,100 head.

Feeder cattle futures closed 85 to 150 higher paced by August at the limit advance. Sales numbered 3,877 lots. Prices were higher from the start and climbed to the highest since May.

The market reversed after Thursday's late declines with reduced feeder cattle arrivals, continued firmness in cash cattle and higher beef sparking demand. Short covering and other buying was also prompted by plentiful feedgrains. Earlier, traders had noted the possibility of a cost-squeeze due to rising feeder cattle and feed prices.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $1 with the best top $137 per hundredweight at Louisville. About 1,100 head are expected today at the major terminals.

Hog futures closed 22 to 97 lower with August under the most pressure. Volume was estimated at 7,327 contracts. Earlier, distant August fell 100, while February gained 35 for a time.

Support spilled over from cattle pits and reduced hog supply. However, heavy kill this week and sharply lower cash prices brought later selling. Pressure was noted despite firmer trend to most pork products at noon.

Deliveries total two thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 1¼ at 60 to 67½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were off 50 cents to $1.25 with the top $42 per hundredweight, which equals the low of November 1977, at Peoria. Kill was 328,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 24,200 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 75 lower to 25 higher on 7,119 cars. Distant July was off the most with only nearby July higher.

Support stemmed from higher cash bellies and continued storage reductions. Weakness in cash and future hogs touched off late selling despite strength in cattle pits.

There have been 33 deliveries thus far. Wholesale bacon was up 1 to 2 at 39 to 42 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Rail Cars Lacking As Wheat Piles Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the 1979 wheat harvest expected to be one of the best on record, federal officials say the midwestern states are short thousands of rail cars daily and grain is beginning to pile up in the fields.

"We're 15,000 to 25,000 cars short on a daily basis now," said Ron Schroader of the Agriculture Department's Office of Transportation.

"In Oklahoma and Texas, where the harvest is over, we've got grain on the ground, a significant amount at least last week," Schroader said. "As the harvest moves up through Kansas and Nebraska and farther north, if (the shortage) isn't alleviated we could have a domino effect."

Schroader said it appears the situation could reach the proportions of a year ago when there was a daily shortage of some 40,000 rail cars.

Ken Carter, chief of the Interstate Commerce Commission's railroad utilization and distribution branch, said the railroads are diverting as many cars as they can to the wheat harvest areas but the car shortage cannot be totally alleviated.

"They're trying to prevent grain being on the ground," Carter said, "but at any particular time there will be grain on the ground because of the inability of the elevators to store it all and the equipment shortage of the railroads."

The Agriculture Department's Rural Transportation Task Force has scheduled a series of hearings including ones in Des Moines, Iowa, and Wichita, Kan., later this month, and the General Accounting Office is also looking into the rail car supply situation.

Earlier this year, the ICC at the request of the Rock Island Railroad temporarily terminated restrictions on the Rock Island's use of cars owned by other roads to move grain out of Oklahoma during the height of that state's wheat harvest, Carter said.

The same action, he said, could be taken for railroads serving Kansas, Nebraska and wheat states to the north as the harvest moves in that direction.

The rail car shortage for the wheat harvest, Schroader said, is also being compounded by the storage of some 100 million bushels of oats and barley.

"The storage bins are just packed," he said. "The railroads have been cooperating very well, but they've got problems. They just don't have the equipment to meet a peak demand period."

E. European Wheat Crop Falling Short

LONDON (AP) — Severe winter conditions in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe have, in this 1979-80 crop year, severely hit that area's wheat production and reduced world hopes for another bumper world crop this year, International Wheat Council estimates indicated recently.

To make matters worse, some areas in the Soviet Union have also been hit by early summer drought, the IWC said.

The IWC, in its first published estimates for the 1979 world wheat crop, said it could reach a total 405 million metric tons, down from last year's record of 441.7 million metric tons. A metric ton equals about 2,200 pounds.

Consequently, it expects carryover stocks at the end of the 1979-80 crop year to fall to around 48 million metric tons, down from 54.7 million metric tons the year before.

The IWC, reasoning that the Soviet Union will again be a potential buyer of wheat, also estimted that trade in wheat could reach a total of 77 million metric tons in the 1979-80 crop year, up 6 million metric tons from the year before.

Of the situation in the Soviet Union, the IWC said: "Difficult planting conditions in the autumn of 1978 reduced sowings of winter grains, including winter wheat. Severe winter wheather is also thought to have caused some damage to the crop."

Yes, you can buy new Gustol™ now!

New Gustol is the spray tank additive specially formulated for use with a viral insecticide like Elcar® and B.t. insecticides like Thuricide®.

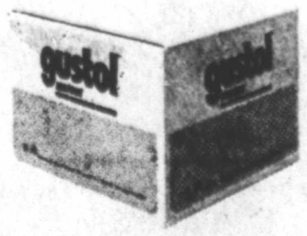

Biological insecticides must be eaten to be effective. And Gustol makes sure bollworms and budworms eat your insecticide. Not just a little but a lot. When that happens, you know your insecticide is going to do what you sprayed it to do. Kill worms.

This is no fluke. Gustol has been researched and put through extensive testing for the past three years by Sandoz, a company that never introduces a product until tests prove it works!

Triumph. The first and only cigarette that delivers good taste with only 3 mg. tar.

If you've ever been disappointed by one of the very low tar cigarettes, you will understand why Triumph is quite an achievement.

Even the draw is a surprise.

The smoke comes through abundantly. The taste reaches you smoothly. Effortlessly. With none of the struggle you may have experienced in other very low tar brands. You don't have to pull—you just puff on Triumph.

No gimmicks, no miracles.

The crux of it: Instead of searching for some yet unimagined answer, Lorillard scientists took a more sensible tack.

Why not, they said, take everything we've learned about cigarettes, and push that technology further than we've ever pushed it before.

Delivering taste, limiting tar.

We found, for example, that combining two types of filter fiber produces the best combination of taste and draw.

That tiny "vents" in the filter-rim smooth the taste.

That lower-leaf tobaccos (shaded from the heat of the sun) tend to be milder and lower in tar than those at the top of the plant.

In short, everything we could find that might intensify flavor at 3 mg. tar, was built into Triumph.

What it all comes down to is this: Triumph is not one of those ultra low tars that spoil your pleasure by short-changing you on taste.

Triumph, at only 3 mg. tar, is a cigarette with a taste you can stay with. A taste so good, we believe you'll never want to go back to your old cigarette.
