Poison Control Center Open 24 Hours A Day

Timing and treatment after intake of poisonous materials may be crucial survival factors. That's why residents of Plainview and surrounding area are fortunate in having poison control center services available.

Plainview's Poison Control Center is a service of Central Plains General Hospital and is one of 22 centers in Texas. Other centers in West Texas are located in Lubbock, Amarillo, Odessa, Midland and Wichita Falls. Center activities are coordinated through the Division of Occupational Health and Radiation Center of the Texas Department of Health.

Most important aid through the Center is the numbers of antidotes to known dangerous substances readily available.

Dr. Dorothy Long is Center director and Ruby DeVoll is assistant director. According to Miss DeVoll, approximately 100 poisoning cases were treated through the Center last year.

"Most of these are children from one to five years of age. Their poisonings were ordinary household chemicals - all necessary for cleaning and other chores around the house - but all dangerous when taken internally," she said.

Another common "poisoning" in children is overdose of aspirins. Miss DeVoll said.

Advising on treatment for poisonings, Miss DeVoll recommended calling the Center immediately. "We have a direct telephone line and experienced people on the job around clock," she said. "The most important thing is the correct treatment. Doing the wrong thing is just as bad as doing nothing."

"To supply the correct information on what to do, we must know what has been consumed, how much and how long ago. If

Keith Lewis Suffers Burns

Keith Lewis, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lewis, was burned in a farm accident Saturday morning as he worked in a field directly across the highway from the Joe Harrell home, south of the city.

Lewis had turned off the anhydrous ammonia tank on the tractor with which he was working and started to make an adjustment when pressure left in the hose caused the volatile substance to be sprayed out upon him.

Clothing protected Lewis somewhat, and quick and effective washing down with water by Mrs. Harrell prevented more extensive injuries.

Rushed to Central Plains General Hospital in Plainview via Parsons ambulance he was treated for first and second degree burns upon both arms and kept in the hospital overnight for observation.

Injury by inhalation was ruled out by the examination and Lewis has attended some classes this week, according to his mother.

Voice Of Business

by Arch Booth

In recent years, the 'welfare problem' has become more and more like a tough piece of steak: The longer you chew it, the bigger it seems to get.

The situation is now so close to being completely out of hand that even one of the men most closely identified with federal social welfare programs --- Sen. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut --- has been moved to speak out.

The Senator, who is a former Secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, dropped a real bombshell in Washington when he publicly withdrew his support of H. R. 1, the welfare "reform" bill incorporating the Administration's "family assistance plan," which would provide a guaranteed annual income. Senator Ribicoff's reasons are worth repeating:

"I think the time has come that we must evaluate social programs in this country and analyze them to see how they will work before we force them on the American people at fantastic cost, and then we have the great disappointment and the disillusionment of the poor.

"Right now we have 168 programs at a cost of $31 billion to alleviate poverty. And we've got more poverty in this country than we did last year. And the irony is if we took $11 billion out of that 168 programs, and spread it around among the people in poverty, everybody in this country would be out of poverty."

Put simply, the Senator has discovered that the government is not very efficient when it comes to getting results with our tax dollars. This is not a new discovery, but for some reason, it seems to need rediscovering every year or so.

Just about everyone recognizes, by now, that "social engineering" is a lot more complicated than the plain old technological kind. And yet, no responsible engineer would think of spending millions -- even billions -- on a new gadget without a lot of preliminary research to make sure it will perform the way it's supposed to.

So the Senator wants small scale field testing of new welfare programs before the government commits billions of dollars to them on a hit-or-miss basis. Amen.

And he also warns against letting the test be evaluated by the same bureaucrats who want to spend the money, because "they are going to come up with an evaluation to show that it works and it is good. If it is a bad evaluation, they bury it." Amen, again.

The National Chamber favors a welfare program that places the emphasis on preparing welfare recipients for good jobs, and then removing any obstacles to their taking those jobs (such as providing day care for the children of working women). But we would certainly join with Senator Ribicoff in advocating that our proposal -- and all other proposals -- receive a proper field test and evaluation before a full-scale program is funded. Surely, this is only common sense.

What effect has the Senator's suggestion had on the Administration? A curious one. The Administration now wants Congress to authorize BOTH the full-scale welfare program AND a pilot-project test of it.

It is not hard to guess the reason for such an odd procedure. Anyone who stays around Washington for any length of time quickly learns that it is much harder for Congress to pass a law than it is to pass it. The remaining supporters of H. R. 1, evidently lack confidence in the outcome of the "test", so they are in a hurry to get the program nailed down before the taxpayers have a chance to see what they are buying.

Senator Ribicoff said, "I think the Senate boggles at the thought of taking 14 million people now on welfare and adding another 11 million people on welfare without knowing how it is going to work."

Well, it's time SOMEBODY boggles.

Sue's Views

BY SUE CANNON

Well, I guess if all the states ratify the women's rights legislature, all mothers can start worrying about their daughters being drafted as well as their sons.

Boy, how stupid can some women be?

You know, the Bible tells us that God created women to be a helper to man. Seems to me, that these ding-a-lings that have been pushing women's rights got sorta side tracked.

This may sound strange coming from a woman... and a business woman at that, but there are some situations that arise that cause women to have to get out and compete in a man's world. And I'd bet my bottom dollar that the majority of the gals yelling for women's lib have never HAD to make a living. They just probably work because they want to have extras that they couldn't have otherwise. Or they just didn't dig this baby sitting bit.

Now granted, this baby sitting bit and house keeping gets pretty dull. But let me tell them sisters something they might not know.... So does trying to put beans on the table!

They'll probably be the first to holler the longest and loudest if they had a daughter drafted and sent into combat. It's bad enough that America's young men have been being sent to slaughter for the past 10 or 15 years and now, heaven forbid, her daughters may follow in her sons tracks.

Well, so much for that! Just had to get it off my chest.

IT IS A FACT

Red Cross disaster teams throughout the country respond to an emergency every 30 minutes, every day in the year.

EMPHASIS

The emphasis of the American Red Cross is on preparedness for immediate action to meet emergencies--to bring emergency relief in disaster, to transmit emergency messages to servicemen wherever they are stationed, to train people to meet first aid and water safety emergencies, to supply life-giving blood to the ill and injured.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

So that the spirit of Christmas can be felt by the servicemen in South Vietnam, Red Cross chapters, with the help of cooperating firms and organizations, have made, filled, and shipped enough Christmas bags, so that every serviceman in Vietnam has had at least one gift for the holiday.

LEWIS LLEWELLYN

Voters Favor School Prayer

In the Florida primary election, in which Sen. Edmund Muskie was knocked out of first place by the state's Democrats, several other issues were also on the ballot.

In one of these questions, voters were given an opportunity to express satisfaction or dissatisfaction with Supreme Court decisions over the past 10 years which have had the effect of eliminating prayer from the opening exercises in many of our public schools. The question was: "Do you favor an amendment to the U. S. Constitution to allow prayer in the public schools?" Seventy-nine per cent voted "Yes."

Ever since, in 1962, the Supreme Court overturned more than a century and a half of legal precedent and declared that it was unconstitutional for prayer and Bible reading to be a required part of the opening of the school day, this has been a controversial issue.

Misleading Statements

Opponents of school prayers have made some misleading statements. Recently, Louis Cassels, UPI religion editor, said, "Many religious people have expended their energy in recent years trying to amend the Constitution to authorize voluntary prayer in schools—something that already is entirely permissible."

Is Mr. Cassels not aware that students in Netcong, N.J., went to great lengths to have voluntary prayers at the beginning of each school day, even meeting before school began and using prayers from the Congressional Record—prayers which were considered proper in the U. S. Congress — and that a court ordered them to stop this practice?

Does he not know that a group of parents of small children in a New York school asked that their children be allowed to pray "God is great; God is good; and we thank Him for our food" before eating their crackers and drinking their milk in school, and that this voluntary prayer was forbidden by court order?

Action Needed

The First Amendment states, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

If our courts would interpret this provision as it was intended to be understood—and as it was understood for well over a century and a half—there would be no need for a constitutional amendment at this time. But if the U. S. Supreme Court cannot understand that what the Congress was forbidden to do they have no right to do either, then some action must be taken.

It would be simpler and quicker to do this by congressional action limiting the authority of the Supreme Court in such cases — a procedure which is provided for in the Constitution. But, whether by such legislative action or by constitutional amendment, the situation must be corrected.

The Bible says, "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." Many of us believe that we need God's blessing at this time in our nation's history.

Paula Strain Recognized As State Degree Candidate

FROM HART

Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Ellis had as visitors Sunday their son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ellis, Richard and Tiwana of Hart.

PAULA STRAIN

"Decisions For You in '72" was the theme of the Area I Future Homemakers of America meeting last weekend in Amarillo's Civic Center.

Attending the Saturday session from Olton were Misses Leona Cooper, Sarah Roberts and Relda and Paula Strain. Mrs. Jody Seaborn, advisor, and Mrs. Russell Strain accompanied the group.

Dr. Gerald Mann, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Hereford, was guest speaker. He cautioned the 3000 girls attending the meeting to "be sure to follow the right dream."

Today's youth, Dr. Mann said, may choose from three dreams. They may choose "the fantasy world of believing that this nation has done no wrong"

a view shared by members of the extreme right or they may select that followed by the extreme left which leads to "a national nervous breakdown."

Citing the Prodigal Son as an example, Dr. Mann explained that he followed a dream but not the right dream. Choose the third dream, the "middle of the road dream," Dr. Mann advised the girls.

"We must recognize our limitations," he said. "The middle of the road will require more courage and commitment than either the right or left. Know the national and personal limitations and accept them," he advised. "Commit yourself to know yourself."

State Degree candidates were recognized. The last year for such degrees to be awarded, the highest honor awarded in the FHA organization was presented to 129 girls from 44 schools. Paula Strain is one of the recipients. The State Degrees will be awarded at the State FHA Convention later this year.

Special music was presented by the Ina Dee Singers and the Sharon Singers and the Guys. Dan Wilson, student from Texas Tech, sang "I Can't Help Falling in Love With You" and "You Are My Special Angel."

Keeping house is a special joy now for Doris. She and Larry and their children, Melanie, 10, and Rex, nine, moved into their new farm home east of Olton just before Christmas. Awaiting them now is the promise of lots to do as they begin yardwork about their beautiful home.

For a year after she graduated from Tech, Doris taught foreign language to seventh graders in Denver. She found the class a wonderful age to work with.

Doris loves to read. She and Larry share an enthusiasm for travel and drama. Each year, until last summer, they spent a few days at Creede, Colo. and enjoyed attending the summer productions at the Creede Theatre where university drama students present a different play each night. Doris played the haughty old maid school teacher, "Miss Brill", in the Olton Baseball Association's presentation of "Cheaper By the Dozen."

Active members of First Baptist Church, Doris is assistant teacher of a young married women's class and Larry is director of adult one department. Doris is GA director for third, fourth and fifth grade girls, meeting each Tuesday afternoon. She is also an active member of WMA.

Bred-in yield potential is the reason 1972 looks like another record year for Pioneer brand hybrid corn. Last year, High Plains farmers planted nearly twice as much Pioneer hybrid seed corn as the year before. The most popular varieties for grain were 3369A and 3306, both of which have been consistently good hybrids for this area. Yields this past year of 150 bushels per acre and more were common with 3369A and 3306 on good irrigated land. For corn silage, Pioneer brand 9178 is still one of the best for high yield. Pioneer brand 3147, however, is growing in popularity. It yields along with 9178 and has a higher grain to stover ration. If you're planting corn this year, see your Pioneer dealer right away for the seed you need.

Kenneth Christie, Hereford, averaged more than 185 bushels per acre on 104 acres of Pioneer brand 3306 seed corn. He liked the standability, even maturity, and the good threshing qualities of 3306. This year, Mr. Christie plans to plant 380 acres in Pioneer brand 3306

The night was dark and calm. All creatures were silent and leaves stood still as a lone man knelt in a garden called Gethsemane and prayed, "Not as I will, but as Thou wilt."

Around Him Jesus' disciples lay sleeping. Soon He knew would come betrayal, public condemnation and derision . . . and the long last march. And yet He prayed, "Thy will be done."

In the shadow of the Cross Jesus demonstrated perfect love and trust for God, His Father. In the hours ahead He would establish His Sonship for the atonement of all mankind.

And so today, in a world that needs this message of hope, let us commemorate that first Good Friday by acknowledging God as our Father, helping our churches to illustrate His way to the hungry, the sick, and the needy.

Farmers Need Increases To Be Even In Economy

Even though food prices are expected to go up four percent this year and net farm income is expected to set a record, the farmer still is less than three-fourths as well off financially as the city dweller, Texas Agriculture Commissioner John C. White said.

White said charges that the farmer is responsible for the expected food cost increase "is sheer nonsense." He said partly—the measuring stick that shows how agriculture is faring in comparison with the rest of the economy—is at 72 percent. "This means that agriculture will have to increase its income 28 per cent to just be even with the rest of the economy," he said.

Expected increases in net farm income this year "is welcome news, not just for agriculture but for the rest of the economy, too. Farmers are big spenders when they have the money to spend, and a dollar of farm income generates five to seven dollars in new spending throughout the economy," White said.

Some members of Congress have asked for a ceiling on prices paid for agricultural products. White suggested that farm prices be "rolled back to levels of 22 years ago." If that were done, he said, the farmer would be getting more money than he now is.

"Livestock prices are as close to full parity now as any other commodity. Yet, livestock prices today to the producer are no higher than they were 22 years ago," he said.

"The average wage earner today makes about three and a half times more than he did 20 years ago; net farm income is about the same as two decades ago," he said.
