DEATH VOTED DALLAS ATTACKER

Shumate Burglary Story Must Have Support, Judge To Rule

MARTIN TELLS JURY TO SIFT TRIAL STORIES

Verdict Expected Today In Charges Against Former Constable

PRYOR TAKES STAND

He Arrested Shumate For "Prestige" He Would Gain, Court Told

In his charge to the jury trying Ed Pryor as accomplice in a burglary, Judge P. A. Martin Thursday morning will say that the uncorroborated testimony of Henry Shumate cannot convict the defendant, and that the statement of Mrs. Lillian Blair, another leading state witness, is inadequate corroboration if she knew of Shumate's escape at the time she gave him aid.

Denies Knowledge of Escape

Shumate Tuesday morning told the jury that he robbed a newsstand in Electra of 60,000 cigarettes at the suggestion and under the protection of Pryor, then constable. Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Blair, whose alleged complicity in Shumate's escape from jail will be referred to in the charge, testified that she delivered a message from Shumate to Pryor and Tom Shook, former Electra chief of police, and that she had seen the three men together on the night after Shumate's escape from jail here. The escape was effected in June, 1928, after Shumate had been arrested on burglary charges. Shumate was re-arrested as he lay in bed with Pryor, according to the testimony. Both Pryor and Shook were arrested and held as accessories on the same night.

In his cross examination of Mrs. Blair Tuesday afternoon, Shields Heyser, counsel for the defence, sought to show that in delivering messages and calling for the traveling bags of Shumate on the day after his escape, the witness had been acting as an aid and was an accessory after the fact. Mrs. Blair denied any knowledge of Shumate's arrest and escape.

Judge Martin's instructions to the jury will read in part: "You are charged that the witness Henry Shumate is an accomplice, and you cannot convict the defendant upon his testimony unless it is corroborated by other evidence tending to connect the defendant with the offence charged, and the corroboration is not sufficient if it merely shows the commission of the offense."

Judge's Charge

In reference to the testimony of Mrs. Blair, Judge Martin will say: ". . . if she knew that Henry Shumate was charged with crime and was making his escape, and with such knowledge she aided and assisted him to avoid arrest and make his escape to Electra, then she would be an accomplice and her testimony could not be considered by the jury as sufficient corroboration of the testimony of Shumate . . . If under these instructions you find that she is an accomplice, then you are charged that there must be other and further corroboration of Henry Shumate and Mrs. Blair, tending to connect the

STOREY PLANS OIL LAND BILL

Settlers Would Have Prior Claim to Vacancies

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Jan. 16.—Cecil Storey of Vernon will present a bill in the house during the present session which would give Texas land settlers prior claim to land left open by resurvey of old patents, according to announcement made here Wednesday by W. B. Hamilton of Wichita Falls, chairman of the Oil and Gas Bureau of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

A second bill providing for trial of vacancy suits in the county where such vacancies occur also will be offered by Mr. Storey. The two measures will be sponsored in the senate by Senator C. C. Small of Wellington.

H. J. Adair of Wichita Falls, manager of the oil and gas bureau, who accompanied Mr. Hamilton here, declared that the two bills were fully endorsed by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Hamilton has called a meeting of the oil and gas bureau of the regional organization here Thursday, when members of the legislature will be memorialized to sanction the charges in state land title suits. Other routine business will be considered at the meeting.

Under the present law regulating vacancies, trials must be heard in Austin, Mr. Hamilton said. The present procedure in land title suits, which allows any person to file on vacancies created by resurvey, without the knowledge of the landholder, was characterized as unjust by the bureau chairman. The proposed bill would give the present holder of such vacancies the first opportunity of refiling on the disputed property.

Graham Builds $70,000 Auditorium To Serve As Civic Center for Town

Financing of Project Completed, With Award of Contract Expected Soon by Board of Trustees

By C. W. ROGERS
The Record News Staff

GRAHAM, Texas, Jan. 16.—Graham's most ambitious civic project for 1929, construction of a memorial auditorium and community center, to cost not less than $70,000 and now completely financed, has progressed to the point of agreement upon the design of the building. Acceptance of final plans and awarding of contracts is only delayed by reason of illness of a number of the personnel of the offices of Voiecker & Dixon, Wichita Falls architects planning the structure.

This information was released by A. A. Morrison, member of the memorial auditorium board of trustees. The board is composed of Graham P. Stewart, chairman; representing the Graham Rotary club; A. A. Morrison, representing the Graham foundation, a fund established for civic improvements, by M. K. Graham, son of the late Col. E. S. Graham, founder of the city; J. J. Gallaher, representing the chamber of commerce; S. S. Bates, representing the American legion and Mrs. Fred T. Arnold, representing the Graham Chautauqua and Literary society.

According to Mr. Morrison, the board of trustees is eager to receive and pass on the final plans and is hopeful that this may not be later than Feb. 1 and that construction be started soon thereafter.

Plans of the auditorium provide for a theater with a seating capacity of 1,067, a library, quarters for the American legion with social and assembly rooms, quarters for the chamber of commerce, home demonstration and county farm agents and the Red Cross. It is proposed to utilize the basement as a gymnasium in connection with the Young Men's Christian association.

Of the amount to be expended in construction and equipment of the memorial auditorium, $40,000 was donated by M. K. Graham, pioneer citizen. And additional $40,000 was subscribed by the public through the efforts of the Graham Chamber of Commerce.

APE MAN FIRES HIS LAWYERS

Northcott Questions Boy But Fails to Score Point

RIVERSIDE, Calif., Jan. 16. (US)—Gordon Stewart Northcott today assumed the role of his own attorney and staged one of the strangest legal moves ever known in the criminal jurisprudence of this country.

In an attempt to break down the damaging story of wholesale murder told from the witness stand by Sanford Clark, his 15-year-old nephew, Northcott played a lone hand.

Assumes Own Fate

Setting a precedent in Riverside county's criminal trials, Northcott, earlier in the day, discharged his battery of legal counsel, and placed his fate in his own hands.

But when court adjourned tonight, Northcott had failed, even in the slightest degree, to shake the story of Sanford Clark, his self-confessed accomplice.

Shortly after 2 o'clock, Northcott, by permission of Superior Judge George R. Freeman, before whom he is being tried for the murder of three boys, was granted permission to act as his own attorney and cross-question Sanford Clark.

Questions Boy

Northcott opened his lines of questioning by asking his nephew whether or not he was certain of their relationship. He went further and asked young Clark if he was sure that Winifred Clark was his mother.

Portions of the cross-examination follow in part:

RANGERS SEEK BANK SUSPECT

Texas Officers to Buffalo For Whitey Walker

Special to The Record News

BORGER, Texas, Jan. 16—State rangers tonight were en route to Buffalo, N. Y., to return "Whitey" Walker, wanted in Borger on two murder charges, who escaped from a district court room at Stinnett a year ago while a jury to try him was being secured. Walker and Ed Bailey are charged with killing Almer Terry and Pat Kinyon, deputy sheriffs, in April, 1927. Bailey is said to be a fugutive from justice also.

FIRST COME, FIRST SERVED, AT BUFFALO

BUFFALO, Jan. 16 (INS)—Bryon Walker, 29, alias Clyde Roberts, and Fred Nave, 34, two members of the notorious Ace Pendleton gang of western bank robbers, were positively identified today as men wanted in connection with at least 10 murders in the west and southwest.

The identification was made by department of justice officials who hurried here from Washington following the pair's arrest on Saturday on suspicion charges.

Just who will be given the job of meting out justice to the slayers is problematical. Authorities from various cities are rushing here to take the men back with them, and, according to local police, they will be turned over to the first to claim them.

H. C. Harper, sheriff of Colorado Springs, is en route here in connection with the Lamar bank robbery and Texas rangers are reported to be on their way to get the men for bank robberies in Borger, Texas.

LAMAR ROBBERY COST FOUR LIVES

LAMAR, Colo., Jan. 16 (AP)—Clyde Roberts, identified in Buffalo, N. Y., today as one of the men who robbed the First National bank here on May 23, is one of five men charged with shooting up the bank and taking a toll of four lives in making their escape with $200,000 in cash and securities.

The robbery of the First National bank resulted in the deaths of four men. A. N. Parrish, president, was deliberately shot down as the bandit gang entered the bank and his son, J. F. Parrish, was fatally wounded when he resisted them.

To facilitate their getaway, the gang used Everett Kessinger, cashier, as a human shield. For weeks nothing was learned of the fate of the cashier, and finally his body, badly decomposed, was found in a deserted shanty near Liberal, Kan.

During their flight the gang abducted Dr. W. W. Wheiger of Dighton, Kan. He was forced to treat the wounds of one of the gang who had "shot it out" with the younger Parrish. The doctor's body, pierced with bullets, was found on a lonely road near the Kansas-Colorado line near his demolished automobile.

STATE SLEUTH DRAWS FIRE IN SOONER PROBE

Whilom Yellow Dog Saloon Owner Main Subject For Investigation

LETTER PRODUCED

'Get Busy' Was Import Of Missive On Election Sent to Negro

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 16. (AP)—Skipping about from topic to topic in search of solid instances of irregularity in the administration of Gov. Henry S. Johnston, the house of representatives investigating committee apparently placed importance today on the governor's employment of Buck Eldridge as a state detective. Eldridge was keeper of the Yellow Dog saloon at Perry in territorial days. Perry is the governor's home town.

The committee, however, retained the Croseswaite pardon case as its main subject of inquiry, and most witnesses were questioned on this case.

Johnston May Appear

The possibility that Governor Johnston might be summoned for questioning in the case was seen when H. E. Sullivan, his secretary was asked what his attitude would be if he were requested to appear. Sullivan said he would deliver the message, but did not answer the question directly.

Evidence purporting to show that Eldridge had engaged in political work while on the state payroll was introduced in the form of a letter which a handwriting expert said was the chirography identical with Eldridge's signature on the state payroll. The letter was to Barnes Taylor, a Perry negro who had been referred to previously. The letter follows:

Texas of Letter

"Friend Barnes: I want you to balance your people and get out and help to nominate Joe McClelland to the legislature as we surely don't want our K. K. K. friend Bill Fry to come back down here. You know what I'm talking about. Now get busy and do this and if you don't, I am going to see that you are raided every other day. I hope I won't have to do this. Your friend, W. Buck Eldridge."

W. R. Fry was a Republican representative in the legislature from Noble county in 1927. A Democrat, a Duff Tillery, was elected last November.

Eldirdge and A. B. Cooper were dismissed yesterday from the bureau of investigation.

SMITH TO GIVE BOOK TO PARTY

"Warrior" Lets Democrats Profit on Speeches

NEW YORK, Jan. 16. (AP)—Alfred E. Smith, recent Democratic presidential candidate and former governor of New York, appealed to the rank and file of the Democratic party by radio tonight to help raise the $1,500,000 deficit that stands as an aftermath of the "Happy Warrior's" defeat. He spoke over a coast-to-coast hookup of 30 stations under auspices of the national committee.

Mr. Smith announced that his contribution would be the gift to the Democratic committee of his campaign speeches, for which he said he had had several offers from publishers. A bound copy of the speeches, illustrated with photographs taken on his campaign tours and published by the national committee with no profit for the former governor, will be sent to each contributor who sends in $2 or more.

Publicity Needed

In making his appeal, the former governor seconded recent assertions of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt that the Democratic party needed more consistent national publicity between campaigns.

"Immediately following every national election," he said, "there is always apparent a general lack of interest in the welfare of our party. It has been the habit of the Democratic party to function only six months in every four years. This is demonstrated by the fact that no attempt was made to liquidate the deficit left from the national campaign of 1924 until the spring of 1928. When the Democratic party finds itself facing a national convention, it begins to shop around the country for the place likely to put up the most money towards the liquidation of the deficit.

Power Distribution

"More than that, it has been the custom right along to have the party deficit taken care of by a comparatively small group of people, and usually the small group has an interest in some particular candidate. This I hold to be an unwholesome condition for any political party. It tends to place too much power exactly where it should not be—in the hands of the few."

He urged that the Democratic party be progressive and militant and pointed out the need of a minority party under a system of government such as that of the United States.

"The dark chapters of American history from 1921 to 1924 are an indication of what can take place in the government of our country in the absence of an active minority party," he said. "Were it not for the vigilance of the Democrats and progressives in congress, the whole shameful story of the oil leases might never have been told."

A political party, he asserted, "that polls nearly 16,000,000 popular votes should be a tremendous factor in the politics of the country, and the strength and force of that great body should not be lost by failure to maintain an organization which would enable them to make themselves heard and felt in the affairs of our nation."

BEN ALDRIDGE MUST DIE FOR GIRL ASSAULTS

Jury Unanimous for Highest Penalty on Second Vote in Half Hour

ATTACKS ADMITTED

Le Roy Merriman Goes On Trial Monday as Companion in Crimes

DALLAS, Jan. 16. (UP)—Bennie Aldridge was sentenced late today to die in the electric chair for the criminal assault on an Oak Cliff girl.

He was hurried from the courtroom under heavy guard immediately after the sentence was passed to avoid possible violence from a crowd that had gathered outside the courtroom.

The jury deliberated 35 minutes, taking two ballots. The first vote was nine to two for the death penalty and the second was unanimous.

At the opening of Judge Grover Adams' court this morning, Aldridge unexpectedly pleaded guilty to charges of holding up three youths parked with their girl companions on a lonely road near Dallas on the night of Dec. 8, abducting the girls and criminally assaulting them.

Lee Roy Merriman's trial on charges in connection with the same assault has been continued until Monday. The state will ask the death penalty for Aldridge's companion, the prosecution indicated.

Tiny Radium Capsule Taken From Incinerator

DALLAS, Jan. 16. (AP)—Unharmed, though it had passed through a city incinerator, a minute capsule of radium valued at $5,000 was recovered today by two students of advanced chemistry at Southern Methodist university.

An appeal for assistance from a group of doctors at Fort Worth, joint owners of the precious metal, started the search. The tiny capsule containing the radium had been discarded with hospital waste and reduced to ashes in the municipal bake oven.

J. G. Kearby and Paul Jeffers were assigned to the task. They directed three electroscopes into the heap of residue from the ovens and within an hour had recovered the stuff.

Orient Stockholders Lay Plans To Make Road a Modern Rail System

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Jan. 16. (AP)—Reorganization of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient railway of Texas along lines conforming with the Santa Fe, new owners of the system, was begun at the annual meeting of stockholders and directors here today.

A new set of bylaws was adopted to conform to operations of the Santa Fe and steps were taken to change the capital structure of the company. The old Orient company had approximately $9,000,000 of outstanding debts in the form of bonds and mortgages. The directors voted to call a stockholders meeting to vote on a proposition to authorize execution of a general mortgage of the Texas property from Alpine to Red river.

At the same time the stockholders will be asked to vote on a proposition to increase the capital stock of the company from 10,000 shares of $100 par value to 50,000. Under this plan it is proposed to change the capital of the company from $1,000,000 capital stock and $9,000,000 bonds to $5,000,000 capital and $4,000,000 bonds.

Multi-Millionaire Who Saved His Town More Than Once Is Dead

FORT WORTH, Jan. 16 (AP)—The hero of West Texas true stories, Breckenridge Stephens Walker, born penniless, died here today—a multi-millionaire at 52.

His first name came from a town that oil raised from a population of 1,000 in 1917 to more than 20,000 two years later.

His middle name came from the county, west of here, in which several famous oil towns sprang into centers of bustling activity, where sleds carried passengers at 25 cents a head across streets waist deep in mud and where ham and eggs rose in price to equal that charged for use of a cot in an ex-army tent.

Walker was the first child born after the county was organized, and though he was a son of the first county judge, his early youth was about as penniless as that of other children in the county. It was a county where no records were hung up in agricultural production and where most of the land was grazed on by cattle.

His first business venture was with his brother in conducting a defendant with the offense charged."

By a special motion presented by the defense the judge will add to his main charge an instruction ordering the jury to find the defendant not guilty if they find the testimony untrue or the result of "political intrigue."

Judge Martin's charge was prepared early Wednesday afternoon, but the filing of special motions and the requests for special charges from the defense occupied the afternoon until adjournment at 5 o'clock. The charge will be read the jury when court opens Thursday morning.

Arguments will begin immediately. It was understood that two hours time for arguments would be allowed each side. George Anderson, assistant district attorney, will open the case for the state. Harry Bunnenberg, one of the defense attorneys, will reply. Arguments from Fred Weeks, special prosecutor, and Shields Heyser, defense counsel, will follow. Sam B. Spence, district attorney, will close the case for the state.

The defense Wednesday entered its exceptions to the main charge of the court and offered several special charges which were overruled.

Police Commission in Car

In its rebuttal testimony Wednesday afternoon, the state introduced in evidence a document purporting to be Tom Shook's cancelled commission as a member of the police department of Electra. Shumate was recalled to the stand and testified that Shook had given him the paper in Pryor's presence and had told him that if he was ever arrested outside of this district he could probably get out by the use of that commission. The paper was added to the records of the case over the vigorous protests of the counsel for the defense.

The alleged commission was found by Roy Hart, night chief of police at Electra, in the car in which Shumate was taken to jail after his re-arrest, according to the testimony. It was turned over to George E. Ragland, mayor of Electra, and then given to Sheriff W. G. Bralley, the evidence said. Mayor Ragland was called to the stand, and questioned by Mr. Heyser about the feeling existing between himself and the Shook-Pryor faction in Electra. He denied that his political differences with the men had anything to do with his having received the paper from Hart and passing it on to Bralley.

Throughout the rebuttal testimony, Mr. Heyser continued his attempts to make Shumate say he had been offered immunity for implicating Pryor and Shook, and to develop his claim that political intrigue lay behind the arrest and prosecution.

Pryor went on the stand in his own behalf Wednesday morning. He denied all the charges, stating that some women had brought Shumate, sick, to his home on the night all three men were arrested and that he was holding Shumate as his prisoner. He told the jury of bitterness and fraction between him and the city officials of Electra, and that he was "tickled" to make the arrest because of the publicity and prestige he would get. He added that Shumate had said he had come to him because he was afraid he would be roughly handled by the officers in the jail from which he had escaped the night before.

10,000 Must Register Cars Before Feb. 1, County Records Reveal

Ten thousand citizens of Wichita county must register their automobiles within the next two weeks if the terms of the licensing law are complied with, S. O. Hamm, highway officer, announced Wednesday. All cars driven in the county must bear the 1929 license plate on Feb. 1, he said, or suffer the double penalty of a 25 per cent increase in the cost of the plates and liability for arrest and the payment of court costs.

Only 5,000 registrations are recorded in the office of the county tax collector to date. Twice as many plates must be issued within the next two weeks as have been distributed since Jan. 1 if the law is obeyed, Mr. Hamm said.

Strictly interpreted ,the law requires the plates on every car on Jan. 1, but Mr. Hamm had given the month of January for the completion of the registrations for the convenience of the owners, he said. After Feb. 1, a 25 per cept penalty automatically takes effect against any car which is driven after that date without a 1929 plate.

Home-Made, but Ends Bad Cough In a Hurry

To end a stubborn cough quickly, it is important to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes, get rid of the germs and also to aid the system inwardly to help throw off the trouble.

For these purposes, here is a home-made medicine, far better than anything you could buy at 3 times the cost. From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Put this into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to fill up the pint. This takes but a moment, and makes a remedy so effective that you will never do without, once you have used it. Keeps perfectly, and children like it.

This simple remedy does three necessary things. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and soothes away the inflammation. At the same time it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This explains why it brings such quick relief, even in obstinate bronchial coughs and "flu" coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Farrell Gives City Law On Disposition Of Tree Trimmings

Dr. J. M. Farrell, chief sanitary inspector, issued an urgent request Wednesday to citizens of the city to discontinue the practice of piling in the alleys branches and trimmings from trees and shrubs on their properties.

Much trimming is being done at this time by many property owners, it was said, and in numerous cases the limbs and vines which have been removed have been thrown into the alleys. Four reports of alleys completely closed by such matter came to the office of Dr. Farrell Tuesday evening.

The city ordinances, Dr. Farrell stated, require that such waste matter be placed upon the property of the resident until it can be removed to the city dumping grounds.

Woman Wins $7,200 In Insurance Suit

Mrs. Emma Moss was awarded damages in the sum of $7,200 minus an interest discount in her suit against the Security Union Insurance company Wednesday morning. The plaintiff sought to recover the sum after the death of her husband, Leonard Moss, alleged to have overcome by gas fumes while he was in the employ of the American Refinery company in December, 1927.

A jury in the 30th district court found for the plaintiff and awarded her a judgment of $20 per week for 360 weeks to be paid in a lump sum and therefore to be reduced by the amount of interest accruing. The case was tried before Judge Allen D. Montgomery.

New Recipe for Coloring Gray Hair

By LOIS PAGE

One of the questions most frequently asked me is: "What shall I do for my graying hair?" Unhesitatingly I recommend that tried and proven recipe of sage tea and sulphur. A brew of common garden sage with sulphur and alcohol added, makes the best hair restorer I know of.

You can either prepare the mixture yourself at home, or as most people prefer to do, buy it already prepared and ready to use. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is the name of the ready-to-use preparation and since all druggists sell it at 75c a bottle, there is really no need of going to the bother of making it yourself.

You simply moisten a comb or soft brush with it, and draw it through the hair, one strand at a time. One application banishes the gray and one or two more completely restores your gray, faded or streaked hair to its original color. There is no hard, dyed look. The whole effect is one of perfect naturalness. Thousands of men and women use this preparation with no one suspecting it.—Adv.

--avoid "dosing"

A PECULIARITY of influenza is that its toxins upset the digestive system.

Too much "dosing," especially in the case of children still further disturbs the digestion, and should be avoided except on advice of a physician.

Vicks VapoRub is especially valuable because it is applied externally, and so can be used freely without upsetting the most delicate digestion.

FLU

How best to use Vicks VapoRub

1. As A Preventive

Several times a day, insert Vicks up the nostrils, also melt a little night and morning in a bowl of boiling water and inhale the steaming medicated vapors.

2. If a Cold Starts

If possible, go home and go to bed. Apply hot wet towels over throat and chest until the skin is thoroughly reddened. Then rub vigorously with Vicks. Spread on thickly and cover with warm flannel.

Leave the bed-covering loose, so that the vapors, released by the body-warmth, may be freely inhaled. At the same time, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice.

Repeat this treatment every four hours, eat lightly, and stay in bed until the cold is broken. Complete rest helps the body to throw off the cold more quickly.

3. After a Flu Attack

Physicians advise that the chief danger in this epidemic is after Influenza. Then, more than ever, colds attacking the weakened system may lead to bronchitis, sinus-trouble or pneumonia. This is especially true of children or old folks.

Heed even the slightest cold as a danger signal and treat it promptly without "dosing."

1918- And Now

In the present epidemic as in 1918, Vicks is proving to be the family standby in millions of homes. In spite of increased equipment it is again necessary to run the laboratories night and day.

HELEN DROPS "POKER MASK"

Helen Wills Gives Views On Marriage, Etc.

BERKELEY, Calif., Jan. 16. (INS)—Modern women should be intelligent enough to weave a career and romance into a harmonious life.

That was the dictum uttered today by Miss Helen Wills, world's woman tennis champion, in commenting upon the announcement today of her engagement to wed Frederick S. Moody Jr., San Francisco bond salesman.

A future in which she will follow a triple career—as an athlete, an artist and a wife—was painted in rosy colors by the Berkeley girl, who for once lost her "poker face" when members of the Woman's Athletic club greeted her.

Blushes and smiles that brought suggestions of dimples to the face that has been described as "classic" were Helen's reward for the enthusiasm of her welcome.

"I shall never stop playing tennis until I'm too old to lift a racquet," was her answer to the query whether or not marriage will halt her remarkable career on the courts of the world.

Miss Willis' marriage probably will not take place for a year or more and the tennis queen will continue to shine on the courts even after she becomes Mrs. Frederick S. Moody Jr.

This was the announcement today by Mrs. C. A. Wills, mother of the world's net champion.

"There have been no definite plans made for the wedding," Mrs. Wills said. "Helen has another full year of college ahead. She is taking some special work at the University of California this semester and probably will take a full course next year. We expect that she will graduate in the spring of 1930.

"Her marriage probably will not take place for a year or more, perhaps not until she has finished college."

NEW SCIENTIFIC FORMULA, SARGON POWERFUL TONIC

The instant and phenomenal success of Sargon is easily explained. Its effect is almost immediate. Thousands of half-sick rundown men and women who have taken it with the most astonishing and gratifying results, report that it seems to pick them right up and put them on their feet.

It is not only a powerful reconstructive tonic designed to impart tone and strength to the entire system, but it is a constitutional treatment as well and exerts a tremendous influence upon the processes of assimilation and elimination. It also contains other ingredients of recognized therapeutic value which are valuable for their influence upon the appetite and digestion.

Sargon is fulfilling its great mission. It is doing it in a new and revolutionary way. Sargon is accomplishing its results by helping Nature to correct the improper functioning of three all-important organs and fluids of the body it is designed to aid.

One of the basic ingredients in Sargon is designed to stimulate the liver to normal activity. Because, after years of medical research, it has been proven conclusively that seven out of every ten people, past the age of 30, suffer from deficient bile flow caused by a sluggish liver. And unless the liver is performing its proper functions, the processes of digestion, assimilation and elimination become deranged, resulting in dyspepsia, gastro-intestinal disorders, auto-intoxication, constipation, hyperacidity and other distressing symptoms which are now so common in this modern age.

Another basic ingredient in Sargon is designed to build up the richness and vigor of the blood stream by increasing the amount of haemoglobin which the red blood corpuscles contain, and thus enable the blood to purify itself.

Still another principal ingredient in Sargon is designed to stimulate the all-important secretions of the endocrine glands, which form a network throughout the body and which science has learned govern our very outlook on life, making us either ambitious and alert or dull and depressed.

Sargon may be obtained in Wichita Falls from the Rexfro Drug Co. stores, Eighth and Scott avenue and Seventh and Indiana.

Prince of Wales' Brother to Announce Engagement to Scottish Damsel

LONDON, Jan. 16. (US)—As soon as King George's convalescence is assured, the announcement will be made from Buckingham palace of the engagement of the Duke of Gloucester to the daughter of a most powerful Scottish dukedom, one of the sprightliest younger women in the upper set of society, it was learned today.

The announcement was to have been made when the duke returned from his African trip with his brother, the Prince of Wales, but the desperate illness of the king made the announcement unseemly then.

It may be said that the announcement of the betrothal of Princess Martha of Sweden to Prince Olaf of Norway, marks the passing of another candidate for marriage with the recalcitrant bachelor, the Prince of Wales. At one time she made several visits to Buckingham palace and was vigorously groomed as a possible future queen of England, but it just did not click with the Prince of Wales as it did with her sister, Princess Astrid, now the wife of the Belgian crown prince.

Arkansas Governor Cheered Spiritedly

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 16. (UP)—Harvey Parnell today was inaugurated governor of Arkansas amid loud cheers before a joint session of the house and senate.

Governor Parnell, Democrat, succeeded Gov. John Martineau when the latter was made a federal judge in 1927, and was re-elected at the general election last Nov. 6.

In his inaugural address Governor Parnell stressed tax reform, federal aid in flood control, farm relief and the placing of the state government on a "sound business basis."

He pledged his administration to carry through the $18,500,000 highway program initiated by his predecessor; promised additional appropriations for education and warned legislators to keep their appropriations within the budget.

OKLA. HIGHWAY HEARING WAITS

Attack on $3,000,000 Award Is Continued

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 16.(UP)—Hearing of the suit attacking the proposed awards of $3,000,000 in state road contracts was continued until Monday by Judge Sam Hooker in district court today.

The highway commission at about the same time sent a letter to James C. Nance, speaker of the 12th house of the Oklahoma legislature, virtually declining to delay the letting of contracts until Feb. 9, as suggested in a resolution introduced by Robert Graham, Oklahoma county, yesterday.

Judge Hooker's ruling followed three hours of argument by attorneys for the commission, contractors and the attorney general's office.

F. M. Box, attorney who filed the suit alleging the highway commission did not have the money required by law before the letting, argued that the road work could not begin now because of climatic conditions, in pressing his reason that the commission had a motive for continuance.

J. Berry King, assistant attorney general, said that W. L. Murphy, also of the attorney general's office, had withdrawn as counsel for the commission because special counsel had been engaged.

Having been director of publicity for the Republican national committee in the presidential campaign, Allen is expected to confer with the president-elect before Hoover departs for Florida.

Real Love, Not Sheiks, Subject of New Book Written by Count Salm

BERLIN, Jan. 16. (US)—"I am writing a book for my son—a book of love, not a book of a sheik."

Count Salm von Hoogstraeten, former husband of Millicent Rogers, $40,000,000 heiress, clad in lavender pajamas and propped up in bed where he is recovering from an attack of the grippe, told Universal Service today when he forsook the sunny skies and the glamour of beautiful women in Florida and on the Riviera, for a hermit life in a Berlin flat.

"I sought a quiet place to write," he said. "Not that I have forsaken romance and the stir of life for the doubtful pleasure of reliving my life on paper, but while the memory of my love for my son, Peter, in order to purify the atmosphere in which he will grow up.

"It will be a book of my love for him, and therefore a true version of my life and loves, but not a book of the adventures of a sheik.

"I am not writing my memoirs, really. This book is not my last will and testament. I have much to live for and much to see. The book is a record of those events about which my son will some day hear, and I want him to hear his father's version."

Identification Head Prepares to Quit

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 16. (UP)—J. M. Barker, superintendent of the state bureau of identification, today prepared his written resignation for submission to Gov. Henry S. Johnston.

Barker's act followed criticism by the governor of Barker's testimony before the house investigating committee late yesterday.

Efforts were made shortly after noon to dissuade Barker from presenting the resignation to the governor.

Barker testified before the committee that Buck Eldridge of Perry has been carried on the payroll of the bureau since before the appointment of Barker as superintendent but that Eldridge has performed no services for the bureau. He was paid $150 a month and about $75 a month expenses, under instructions of H. E. Sullivan, secretary to the governor. Eldridge was discharged as an employe of the bureau yesterday after Barker testified.

PRUETT'S LOST APPAREL FOUND

Suspect May Be Linked In Waco Crimes

DALLAS, Jan. 16. (INS)—A hat and top coat was today identified as those of William Pruett, 23, under arrest in connection with the killing of William Mann, 18, and half a dozen other crimes that kept Dallas terrorized for 10 days. The hat was found stuffed in a hedge about three blocks from where the killing of Mann occurred. Police said the top coat was found in Pruett's room.

The employe of a local store told police that Pruett stayed with him the night of the killing of Mann. Pruett said he was in San Antonio the night of the killing.

A possible link-up between Dallas crimes and a series of holdups and crimes in Waco was seen with the statement of a druggist that Pruett placed a call in his store to Waco the night that Mann was slain.

Dr. Caldwell's 3 Rules Keep You Healthy

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 67 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their systems. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person.

Get a bottle today, at any drug store and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.—Adv.

Drink Lots of Water —Guard Against Flu

Here are four good rules to guard against the Flu. (1) Keep away from crowds. (2) Drink lots of water and eat only good wholesome food. (3) Go to bed early and sleep with at least one window partly open—Keep your bowels open—BE SURE. The best intestinal cleanser is the simple glycerin, buckthorn bark, saline compound, known as Adlerika. This acts in ½ to 2 hours on BOTH upper and lower bowel (most medicines act on lower bowel only.)

Adlerika often brings out foul matter which may have poisoned you for months and which you would never believe was in your system.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, well-known New York bacteriologist, after testing Adlerika on living subjects, reports: "Adlerika markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacill, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action."

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel! Just ONE spoonful gives wonderful relief in chronic constipation, GAS bloating, sour stomach and sick headache. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

It contains no aloes, calomel or senna, therefore acting without griping or discomfort of any kind. Adlerika is sold by leading druggists in tin-foiled bottles.—Adv.

Only a few of these silky beauties grow on each tobacco plant . . . that's the kind OLD GOLD buys.

"Down here, in my country, where the fine cigarette tobacco grows, every planter knows what keeps the coughs out of the carloads.

"There are three kinds of tobacco that grow on the same stalk. The ground-leaves ['sand lugs' in plantation language] are thin and dry: they have little taste or flavor. The top-leaves ['gummy tips'] grow rank and weedy: they are harsh to your throat. But the heart-leaves ['golden cutters'] are fragrant as a peach blossom and cool as a dipper of spring water!

"OLD GOLD buys the heart-leaves. Just a few golden beauties from the heart of each plant. That's how OLD GOLDS get their 'honey-like smoothness.' That's why you can smoke them mornin', noon and night."

Writers Department Has Interesting Program at Luncheon Wednesday

Members of the writer's department of the Woman's Forum met at the Forum clubhouse Wednesday at 12 o'clock for luncheon when a straw vote was taken for officers of the general Forum. Mrs. H. F. Weldon, chairman of the department, had charge of the meeting.

Immediately following the luncheon Mrs. W. W. Silk read several original poems among which were "G. O. K." or "The Song of the Mutt on the First of the Month," "The Deserted House," which was written from an inspiration gained from a picture Mrs. Silk possesses, "Insomnia," "A Memory," "A Sabbath of Peace" and "My Dream Child." The poems were well received and appreciated.

Another interesting number on the program was a talk on "Recent Plays I Saw While in Chicago and New York" by Mrs. James P. Bowen. Mrs. Bowen first discussed "The Blackbirds of '28" which had an all negro cast but was exceptionally well received by the New Yorkers. "The Strange Interlude," a nine act play, according to Mrs. Bowen was especially interesting because over half of the lines spoken during the play were thoughts of the characters, which gave a wierd effect.

The play "Front Page," a newspaper melodrama Mrs. Bowen said was the least interesting of any of the plays she saw. It portrays the life of a newspaper reporter who even misses the train for his honeymoon to get a scoop, while "The Show Boat" was rather cheap but funny, Mrs. Bowen said.

"Every scene was some part of the boat and one scene portrayed the World's Fair in Chicago in the early days."

"Paris Bound," Mrs. Bowen pronounced a pretty play., the setting being in a New York apartment house. "The lighting effects were better than the usual play," she said.

"The Trial of Mary Dugan" was the most natural and realistic of all, Mrs. Bowen pointed out. It was a courtroom scene and the ushers were policement. The theater was modeled into a courthouse for the production and the curtain never fell until the play was over. The intermissions were noted by the court taking a recess."

"Nobody's Girl" Mrs. Bowen believes will be very popular in the near future as it is the kind of a play that does not take so well at first. It is the story of a man who was a former mayor but was accused of embezzlement and is forced to leave town but later returns and the remainder of the plot centers around him trying to prove his innocence. He lives under the name of Nobody and his daughter is "Nobody's Girl."

"Porgy" is a folk lore story that is centered around "cat fish" row and is the story of a crippled negro while "Dear Brutus is built on the Shakespearian theory. There is an enchanted garden where each character is given a chance to live his life as he would like to live it but in the third act each character is very happy to find that it is all a midsummer night's dream.

burnt sugar ADDED to gravies

Philadelphia woman gives recipe popular with men

A PHILADELPHIA woman runs a restaurant that is very popular with men at lunch and dinner time. Asked about her delicious brown gravies, she gave the following recipe: Burn one-fourth cup of granulated sugar in a cheap tin pan. When the sugar is hot and black pour a cup of water over it. The black liquor in small quantities is a wonderful color for sauces and "pale" gravies. Keep a bottle of it on hand. Use a cheap pan, as charred sugar is hard to remove.

No other ingredient adds so much to the enjoyment of other foods as sugar. Sugar is perfection as a condiment. Tasteful, delicious cookery revolves around sugar. Sugar is the inexpensive food, and to be well nourished is necessary to health.

Medical authorities are issuing warnings about the dangers of starvation diets. Too much reducing often results in permanent injuries. To be undernourished is to place yourself at the mercy of diseases such as typhoid, pneumonia, influenza and colds. "Keep children and young people well nourished and up to weight," says a famous doctor, as a guard against tuberculosis.

Eat healthful foods. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute

STOP THE FAT AND GET THIN

The way to reduction is to stop the formation of fat. Modern science has found that way—by turning your food into fuel and energy—by supplying a natural element that helps do that. It is much better than starvation. That modern, scientific method is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. Now the results in slender figures, new beauty and vitality, are seen everywhere.

Each box of Marmola contains the formula, also the scientific reasons for results. So you know the effects are beneficial, and why they all occur. Learn what so many have learned in 20 years about it. Do it now. Ask your druggist for a $1 box of Marmola and learn what it means to you.

Home Cheerfulness Is Requisite For Successful Wedded Life, Dorothy Says

Warning to Lugubrious Wives—Why Some Husbands Are Niggardly About Money—Consolation For the Golf Widow.

Dear Dorothy Dix—One of the reasons why the middle-aged woman so often loses out is because she is a whiner. Heaven knows what women expect marriage to be—a perpetual picnic and lovefest, apparently, but, anyway, when they find it isn't, the great majority of them have not the grit to meet the gaff. They sit down and weep and lament and make their homes such demmed, moist, unpleasant places, as Mr. Martillini used to say in one of Dickens' stories, that they drive their husbands away from home and to livelier companions.

Tell your readers that if middle-aged wives want to hold their husbands they had better cheer up.—THE HUSBAND OF A WHINER.

Answer: These are words of wisdom to which I especially call the attention of all of the young wives who are just settling down to the real business of matrimony and who still have it in their power to determine whether they will make their marriage a success or a failure and to settle whether, when they are 45, their husbands will still be eating out of their hands or chasing around after other women who are feeding them on angels' food.

There is no use in saying anything to the middle-aged woman who is a whiner because she has acquired the self-pity habit, which is just as incurable as the dope habit and just as deadly and benumbing to every moral sense. She has atrophied every perception of justice. Her brain has gotten so befogged that she can't see anything clearly any more and she lives in a world of imaginary wrongs of which she is the poor, unfortunate, innocent victim. She couldn't cure herself if she would, and she doesn't want to, because if she did she would have to give up the role of the neglected wife, which is a perfect cinch.

That is if a woman has no self-respect. For the whiner is nothing but a coward, one who has not the courage to stand up and fight the battle of life like a good soldier. And it is inevitable that a coward shall always go down in defeat. The craven-hearted always do.

How the whining wives get that way goodness only knows, for generally they have far less to complain of than any other of their sex. Generally they have really drawn a soft snap as their lot in life, but like the princess in the fairy tale, they dig around under their 40 mattresses of ease until they have found the crumpled rose leaf, and then they proceed to make moan over it.

Everywhere you can hear women whining because they have to keep house and make homes for their families. Everywhere you can hear women whining because they are so tied down by their children. Everywhere you can hear women whining about domestic life being monotonous, and about not being able to run around to parties every night, and about their husbands not giving them as many cars, nor as fine clothes, nor as grand houses, as some other women have. Their final whine is because their husbands are no longer interested in them.

You feel like batting them over the head instead of offering them a shoulder to weep upon, because they are acting like cry-babies instead of rational human beings. You are filled with contempt for them because they have welched on life. They have evaded every responsibility they could, and they are howling out for sympathy because they have been forced to do a few of the things that they should have been glad to do.

One wonders what these women who whine because they have to cook dinner would think of their husbands if they whined over having to earn what went into the pot. One wonders still more how any woman can expect her husband to stay in love with her when she shows herself all yellow and such a poor sport that she turns quitter at the first hardship, and how she can possibly expect a man to yearn to come back to a home whose atmosphere is dark blue and filled with complaints, and to a wife who is continually bemoaning her fate.

Every man has about all the unpleasant things that he can stand having happen to him in his day at business, and when he comes home he wants to come to a place of cheer and brightness, and to a wife who is at least happy and contented, and who will bolster him up with her optimism, not weaken his morale with her tears of self-pity.

So my advice to all young wives is to avoid whining. Adopt a brave attitude toward life. When troubles come laugh them off, and when you are middle-aged you will still have your husband. No man ever gets tired of a wife who is a cheerful companion.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I was a business girl earning a fine salary. Before I married I told my husband that the one thing I could never bring myself to do would be to ask him for money, and he grandly said that, of course, everything he had was mine and that we would have a joint checking account. But that joint checking account never materialized. He pays the household bills and occasionally he will put a dollar or two down on the table and say that is for my carfare, but he has never given me a cent of my own, and when my clothes wore out, rather than ask him for some, I went out and got myself a job. Then grand heroics. But still no offer to give me even a small allowance.

Now what are we to do? Our home life is disrupted. My husband is furious and grouchy. The house is less well kept. I am tired when I return from work instead of being fresh and rested to meet him. I would be glad to give up my job in favor of the one which really pleases me most if only my husband would give me for himself even the wages of a cook. But he won't. What to do?

Answer: Why don't you put the proposition straight up to your husband and tell him that if he will give you a servant's wages you will resign your other job. If he refuses to do this, it seems to me that he is such an incredible tightwad that you will do better to stick to a job that has real money in it than to work for a slave driver who expects to get your services for nothing.

The attitude of husbands toward an allowance for their wives is not so often the result of stinginess as it is of men holding to the queer theory that women have not the sense of personal dignity and self-respect that men have, and that they don't mind begging their husbands for money. A man knows that he could not endure to ask even the kindest and most generous wife for every cent he spent. He couldn't even ask an indulgent father for carfare or a new necktie, but he doesn't see why a woman would mind asking him for every penny and having to give an account of what she did with it.

Certainly if your husband cares anything for you he will be able to get your viewpoint on this matter.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—What do you think of a man who is so addicted to golf that he gets up at 6 o'clock every Sunday morning and after the game goes to his mother's for lunch and, incidentally, a game of pinochle, and strolls home about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, thus spoiling every Sunday for his family. We seldom go to the theater or out for the evening, with the exception of an hour or so in the car once or twice a week. We are continually arguing about this. In fact, it is about the only thing we do argue about, but it is spoiling our home life. —MRS. S.

Answer: If your husband is a reasonable man, why not offer to compromise the matter with him and let him have his golf in peace if he will agree to take you to some place of amusement that you wish to go to some time during the week. A good play in payment for his golf seems to me fair.

Anyway, as long as he doesn't do anything worse than play golf, don't nag him about it. It is an innocent and healthful diversion, but if you worry him too much about it you may make home so unpleasant that he will spend the balance of his Sunday with some more agreeable lady.

If it is any comfort to you, you have plenty of company in your misery. There are lots of golf widows. —DOROTHY DIX.

The reception suite was attractively decorated for the occasion with baskets of cut flowers with yellow jonquils predominating. The order's colors, red, yellow and green, were noted in the lovely refreshment plate of sandwiches, moulded salad with a crescent on the top and coffee. Plate favors were yellow jonquils. Mrs. R. E. Shepherd poured coffee from a silver service and refreshments were served to Mesdames Caldwell, Cline, Frank Collins, R. E. Shepherd, Guy Rogers, L. G. Hawkins of Vernon, Martin Rowe, W. W. Gardner, Ed Peterson, W. B. Hamilton, N. B. Chenault, Harry Hines, Lester Jones, Albert Ellis, W. S. Langford, Sam Kruger, L. H. Cullum, B. D. Sartin, S. A. Gaines, Charles I. Francis, C. C. After exposure, look out for SORE THROAT

Listerine kills germs in 15 seconds

When your feet are wet, and after exposure to germs in crowded cars and stuffy offices, gargle with Listerine full strength.

Then you immediately attack the germs that cause sore throat, and its usual sequel, a cold, and often prevent either from becoming serious.

Listerine, full strength, kills even the B. Typhosus (typhoid) germ in 15 seconds, as shown by repeated tests. This is the germ the Government uses to test the power of antiseptics. Though powerful, Listerine is so safe you can use any amount in any body cavity.

Keep Listerine handy and for your health's sake, use it systematically in bad weather. Write for our great free book "Personal Hygiene"—a help to anyone. Address Dept. S. 40, Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

Do this and escape colds

Countless colds start when germs are carried to the mouth on foods. By using Listerine on the hands before every meal, you attack such germs and lessen the risk of cold. Remember this, mothers, when handling baby's food.

The solid car load of fresh fillet of white haddock unloaded Tuesday by the Busy Bee Fruit Co., was said to be the first carlot of fresh fish ever received in this city. The fish came straight from the New England seaboard, being frozen shortly after they were taken from the water and remaining in that condition until delivered here. The fillet is a solid steak, boneless and skinless, carved from the flank of the fish.

"Printer's Devil to Bank President," Record Made by Seymour Financier

Special to The Record News

SEYMOUR, Texas, Jan. 16.—"From Printers' Devil to Bank President" might be mistaken for the title of a romance of the Frank Merriwell type; in fact, it represents the alpha and omega of the career of a now sedate president of a Seymour bank with resources of more than three quarters of a million dollars who began making his way in the world as the "devil" of a west Texas country print shop.

This one-time "devil" who became a bank president is R. E. Baskin of the Farmers' National bank of Seymour.

To an old-time printer visiting in the bank a few days ago Mr. Baskin confided that more years ago than he cared to admit he became obsessed by an ambition to become a master of the "art preservative." He became a printers' "devil" and "deviled" through the customary period of apprenticeship. Then followed years in the capacity of journeyman printer in various west Texas towns, according to Mr. Baskin's narrative. He was granted a card in the printers' union, which he retained until his retirement from the trade.

The visitor was eager to hear how the transition from printer to bank- er was effected, but this was not explained.

"My present occupation is satisfying," Mr. Baskin declared, but as an afterthough he added: "Sometimes I find it difficult to repress a hankering for a return to the rattle of the linotypes, the acrobatics of the ad-lizards, the pounding of the presses and the smell of printers' ink"

Mr. Baskin further confided that upon visits to Wichita Falls he sometimes found his way to the composing room of The Times for a chat with cronies of other days.

Young County 4-H Girl Wins Acclaim

Special to The Record News

GRAHAM, Texas, Jan. 16—An unannounced feature of the program of the Graham Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture banquet Tuesday night was the introduction by Miss Norfleet Grimes, county home demonstration agent, of Miss Jewell Smith, 13-year-old 4-H club girl whose accomplishments have attracted state-wide attention.

Miss Smith, with the poise and composure of a finished speaker, explained the objects of home demonstration work and its benefit to her home community. Her delivery was simple, unmarked by affection and artifices and at the conclusion of her address the applause was prolonged.

Miss Smith, whose home is in the Ingleside community, near Olney, has been interested in girls' club work only two years. In her first year she was awarded a trip to the A. and M. short course at College Station. Last year she was awarded a trip to the Dallas fair at the expense of "Uncle Johnny" Ware, Young county leader in community development work. At Dallas Miss Smith won first, second and third prizes.

DANDRUFF

A Sure Way to End It

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—Adv.

"Lucky is a marvelous pal—

George M. Cohan,
America's Stage Favorite

NO longer need a trim, slender figure be your envy. No longer need you face the rigid requirements of harsh dieting methods. Overweight is banished when you banish fattening sweets and eating between meals and light a Lucky. "Reach for a Lucky instead of a sweet."

20,679 physicians have confirmed the fact that Lucky Strike is less irritating to the throat than other cigarettes. These professional men realize the value of toasting, the secret process that eliminates impurities and irritants. Lucky Strike is a delightful blend of the world's finest tobaccos. And toasting develops a flavor which is a delightful alternative for fattening sweets.

Many prominent athletes testify that Luckies steady their nerves and do not harm their physical condition. Men have long known this and practiced it successfully. These are the men who watch their health, who keep trim and fit, realizing the dangers of overweight. And now, women may enjoy a companionable smoke with their husbands and brothers—at the same time slenderizing in a sensible manner. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

A reasonable proportion of sugar in the diet is recommended, but the authorities are overwhelming that too many fattening sweets are harmful and that too many such are eaten by the American people. So, for moderation's sake we say:—

UNCLE SAMUEL MIDAS

Daily Editorial

THE past wasn't even rich in imagination.

The farthest flight of legend's fancy only reached to Ophir, Golconda, Eldorado and the Seven Cities of Cibola whose combined reputed resources weren't equal to a week's turnover on the New York stock exchange.

A hundred years ago royalty couldn't have matched pooled incomes with Rockefeller, Ford and the du Ponts.

But, for that matter, in 1829, both American continents wouldn't have brought ten billion dollars on the auction block.

Total state and federal revenues were then less than forty millions. Which far exceeded the price paid for the Louisiana territory—an acquisition that stirred impeachment talk and convinced many citizens that the United States had been shamefully outspaded by slicker diplomats.

But that protest was a tempest in a teapot compared to the gale of wrath that swept the land when Seward "squandered" seven millions, or thereabouts, on the "worthless" Alaskan peninsula.

Now, after a single century, Uncle Sam has a billion dollars of spare change in each of four national banks, and twenty-seven billions in the rainy day deposits of various savings institutions.

OUR assets exceed the assessed worth of the whole British empire with France, Germany, Italy and Russia thrown in for good measure. And every penny of it created by descendants of peasants, small tradesmen and refugees whom Necessity introduced to Opportunity—a lady of many aliases, including "natural resources," "inventiveness" and "perseverance."

She's still making dates at the old stand—with ambition, with shrewdness and with confidence.

The chances to make good in this amazingly fecund republic increase with the growth of industries, the hunger for luxury and the need for time-shaving, man-saving ideas.

We've the capital to finance a thousand-fold the enterprise that produced it.

The outstanding task of the twentieth century is to keep its funds profitably employed. So, anybody with a practical job for our surplus cash, is a made man.

Think in big, fundamental, interest-bearing terms, and Uncle Samuel Midas will underwrite an acre of skyscrapers, a square mile of factories, a chain of department stores or a submarine freight line.

That's why he's building all these billion dollar banks.

I wonder what all the 105-year-old ladies, who went to the polls in wheel chairs, will say when they hear that President-elect Hoover attended the races in Brazil on Sunday an' licked up some champagne? Who recalls when poor, old, tired mother got an easy chair for Christmas instead o' silk hose?

You Tell 'Im

He: I want to see a pair of silk stockings for my wife.
She: Sheer?
He: No, she's home.—Judge.

Professor Burges Johnson complains the old profanity is inadequate and no effective new cusswords have been invented. The professor must be getting ready to run into an opened door in the dark.

Chairman Robinson of the Federal Radio commission feels that the air should be censored of "cuss words," but what with static and sopranos, it will take more than an edict of the commission to regulate father.

Co-eds in one of the University of Wisconsin dormitories have asked regents to provide a place for them to smoke. Pretty soon the men will be demanding a place to practice that effeminate habit, too.

Houdini's "Messages"

IT would be very odd if Harry Houdini, who spent a good share of his restless life fighting the theory that the dead could return and speak to the living, should now be trying himself to send word from beyond the grave to his widow.

Mrs. Houdini believes that a New York medium has given her an authentic code message from the great magician. And while some close friends of Houdini are still openly skeptical about it, scenting a fake, Mrs. Houdini seems to be persuaded that the message was genuine.

During his lifetime Houdini demonstrated beyond a doubt that a great many mediums are fakes. Yet, obviously, that does not necessarily mean that ghosts cannot walk or that those who have passed on cannot speak.

If the spiritualists were wise, they would ruthlessly put such fakers out of business themselves. For while every living man has some loved one beyond the grave, with whom he would give all he has to speak, there is no denying that most people are more or less actively hostile to spiritualism. We long to communicate with those whom we have lost; but the thimble-rigging hocus-pocus of darkened parlors on cheap streets, tinkling bells, ignorant mediums and nonsensical "controls" disgust us. We feel that if our loved ones wanted to speak to us they would not be bound by any such cheap clap-trap.

Yet too facile skepticism is as bad as over credulity. Just as in Hamlet's day, there are more things in heaven and earth than our philosophy dreams of. To doubt these messages from the dead because of the odor of fraud which clings about the average medium is one thing; to doubt them because of a cocksure assumption that a world of radios, airplanes and organic chemistry has no place in it for disembodied spirits is quite another.

It is this second attitude which too many of us adopt. Perhaps, for that reason, it would be a good thing for us if it could be definitely proved—as it can't in the nature of things—that the message Mrs. Houdini received came from Harry Houdini. It might jar us out of our complacent self-sufficiency.

In spite of all our modern science—in spite of our healthy preoccupation with things that can be seen and handled and built up or torn down at will—we still are gripped by the necessity of finding a satisfactory answer to the old question that was put in Judea 20 centuries ago: If a man die, shall he live again? It is still true that this is one kind of universe if the answer to that question be Yes, and another kind if the answer be No.

We shall always hunger after that answer; and we shall always know, in the bottom of our hearts, that we are lost and helpless if that answer is not what we hope. This business of Houdini's code message may mean nothing at all. It may be only a clever swindle. But, on the other hand, there is a chance that it may be genuine. And any cocksure assumption to the contrary is a trifle out of place.

We Never Burned Witches

THE trial of the York (Pa.) man who killed another because he believed he was bewitched has led innumerable writers and speakers to refer to the "witch burnings" at Salem, Mass., in pre-revolutionary days.

Right now, it might be a good idea to correct this notion. No witches were ever burned in Salem, or in any other American colony.

Salem tried a number of women as witches, convicted quite a few, and hanged them. The ignorance and barbarity that led to such steps are shocking, of course; but the cruelty implied by burning at the stake, at least, was absent. The next time you hear a man speak of Salem burning witches you might correct him.

Adjectives

IF YOU plan to write anything, from a newspaper article to a novel, you would do well to consider remarks made by the late Senator Albert J. Beveridge, whose recent "Abraham Lincoln" is hailed as a masterpiece of biography.

Beveridge, pointing out that he used as few adjectives as possible, said:

"Adjectives are like emergency medicine and must be given sparingly and seldom, like strychnine and other powerful stimulants. Adjectives often employed mean little or nothing. They are drugs that blur vision in the reader and save the writer the toil of description. Great writers are not victims of the adjective habit."

Plain, unadorned writing is always the most forceful. This is a good thing for everyone to remember, from cub reporter to historian.

OKLAHOMA POLITICS

Again Oklahoma politics rides a troubled sea and again unfavorable publicity begins to appear in the national print. Oklahoma has suffered much because of political misfortune. May the causes of storms on the political seas of Oklahoma be removed by the present session of the legislature and the results of its achievements. Then possibly Oklahoma politics can settle and ride on the tides instead of the waves. —Greer County (Okla.) News.

PAYING FOR CITY DEVELOPMENT

Taylor voted this week to change its charter so that its Chamber of Commerce could be supported by a tax. The change carried by a good majority and the directors of the Chamber of Commerce automatically become members of the board of city development, the name of the tax-supported organization.

This makes a total of 15 towns and cities in Texas which have a Chamber of Commerce supported by a direct tax, and each of these towns are outstanding in its class, progressive and is enable to do a great many things which larger cities are unable to do with subscription supported organizations.

The plan of the tax supported chambers of commerce is new in Texas, but other parts of the country have been using the system for some time. The beauty of the plan is that the cost of city development service is spread around in an equitable manner, instead of having a part of the public spirited firms and individuals bearing the bulk of the burden. —Denton (Texas) Record Chronicle.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—She was young, pretty, cosmopolitan (born in Budapest, of Russian father and Spanish mother), and had been everywhere and had seen everything. She had come to New York with her parents at 14 and spoke the exquisite English she had learned in Paris. She really was quite self-confident and really had, or thought she had, poise.

There was a check to cash. The paying teller who chanced to be on duty when she presented it was very liberal, but he did want her to identify herself. She was helpless. She had no letters, nor cards, nor anything, and consequently she waxed indignant.

"Really," said the paying teller, "haven't you anything at all that may identify you? You know, I am trying to help you. I hope you can identify yourself."

Her answer was a quick dash toward the door. The doorman twirled the winter revolver for her, but she hesitated, and then came back.

"Do you really demand positive identification?" she asked. "Then, here!"

From her neck she drew a bit of lingerie and showed her initials embroidered in beautiful blue. The paying teller blushed and said that was O. K.

Hotel clerks are as accustomed to receiving telegrams as switchboard operators are accustomed to receiving calls. It is all in a day's work with them. The telegrams of course are always for other people. Now and then, though, a hotel clerk gets a telegram addressed to himself. Then there is consternation, excitement, terror, what not.

The clerk of a downtown residential hotel received one the other day. Nervously, he opened it and nervously he read:

It was signed by a woman guest of the hotel who was temporarily out of town. After the clerk had calmed down, he read his telegram again and, dejectedly, began to give orders about the rough-and-ready diet of the savage Percy upstairs. Percy, by the way, is about six inches long and, as the American Association for the Advancement of Science would say, belongs to the dog family.

Read this and see if it will shake your faith in human nature:

A man of slightly less than middle-age was passing along Chambers street, east of Broadway, soliciting passersby for "just a bit to eat." This in spite of the fact that he appeared well fed and not in immediate need of any nourishment.

But even so, there is always somebody who will pay serious attention to these calls for aid and in this particular case it was a woman.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," explained the woman to the beggar. "I'll take you into the lunch counter in the hall of that building there and pay for your dinner, but I won't give you the money."

The beggar acquiesced and the deal was on. So they walked in and she ordered the clerk to fix him up two sandwiches and a "cup of coffee with cream in."

The clerk looked askance under his eyebrows to his helper, for he had seen this bird before. But he placed the order on the counter. The woman laid down a dollar bill and told the clerk to give the beggar the change, which was done, of course.

"Nice woman,' said the beggar to the clerk, "I know her."

But when the woman had gone the beggar requested the clerk to wrap up what remained of the two sandwiches — which was about three-quarters—his intention being, of course, to throw them away when he got up the block.

Then he left the cup of coffee "with cream in" standing on the counter, right where the clerk had put it.

And the change of the dollar? Well, that went down into the pocket of the overcoat.

Corset Business Shows Depletion During Year

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. (US)—Another and quite different "save old Ironsides" campaign seems to be in order.

Less than 9,000,000 corsets were manufactured in the United States during 1927, compared with twice that number in 1925, the department of commerce announced today.

By HOBART HENLEY

This big megaphone man of the movie mills began his theatrical career behind the footlights when he was 5 years old. Twenty years ago he was under Belasco's management. Eighteen years ago he became a front-rank cinema star. During the last 15 years he has directed more than 150 movies. Now he's turning his attention to the making of sound pictures—or chinemas, as we say, now and then.

HOBART HENLEY

"The best story I know," he told me, "concerns a movie executive who was having trouble with a scenario writer. One day he called the scribe into his office and said: 'Write me a perfect scenario or else write your resignation!' The author asked that a 'perfect scenario' be defined.

"'A perfect scenario,' said the executive, 'must contain five basic elements—a suggestion of the Deity, a mention of comedy, a reference to society, a soupcon of sex appeal and a certain amount of general interest.'

"A few days later the scenarist returned to the executive's office. 'I have written the perfect scenario which you wanted,' he said. 'All five of the elements are in it!'

"'Read it,' said the executive.

"The author pulled a slip of paper from his pocket and read:

"'Good heavens!' laughed the duchess, 'take your hand off my knee!'"

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has invented the Vicarion, a device with which it is possible to re-create scenes out of the past. The invention is a sensational success, with all the theaters installing it in place of motion pictures. Complete Illusions, Inc., which at that time controls all the improvements on the movie, faces ruin, but when Ferdinand Mortimer and Jerry Ballard, heads of the company, call on him, Brainard refuses to make terms.

Brainard's records of the past are contained in "bombs," which hold liquid air, and while he is projecting one of the "bombs," which was unmarked, he sees a beautiful gossamer-clad girl, with whom he falls in love, although he is engaged to Phyllis Norman. During the first demonstration of the Vicarion, with Phyllis and her family looking on, a strange man staggers in the studio. He is unable to tell who he is and Brainard names him Van Winkle, and makes him his aide.

Brainard calls in the operator who made the unmarked record, but gains no information from him. He orders Van Winkle to investigate the making of the bomb.

"That's just it, sir. I've got the index I thought I was workin' on. But it ain't the right one. I looked it up on the list an' it's supposed to be for the Leland Stanford—"

"But you know how your dials were set, don't you?"

"No—I'm awfully sorry, but I don't. Of course, you must 'a' seen one o' them records if you went through the tray. Maybe morn'n one. But I tried another scene an' only got—"

"Why don't you know how your dials were set?"

"Because I started to dust up the machine after I set 'em for the Stanford stuff. Somebody interrupted me or something. I left the rag lyin' on the dial board.

"When I went to verify the index mark, the rag was still lyin' there, an' when I took it away it caught on one of the keys. Of course, it changed the setting—"

"Yes, yes! But it won't be difficult to find out how the dials were set before you began to dust."

The man shook his head. "I must 'a' moved 'em while I was dustin.' I condensed a record o' how they stood before I begun to dust, an' Mr. Van Winkle run it. An' the dials was set for the Stanford stuff, all right."

Brainard turned and walked halfway across the room. There he stopped and stood completely still, intent, though arresting every muscle, Phyllis, vaguely alarmed, watched him an instant. Then her eyes went back to the machine operator. She surprised on his face a leer that told her instantly he had been lying.

"Radley!" she exclaimed.

But the operator's face went blank as Brainard turned. And Brainard gave no heed to her.

"Go back to your machine," he directed the other. "Make records before and after you dusted, and let me have them as soon as they are ready. Make a record of your dusting, setting to get the dial board complete while you worked over it."

The man bowed, turned, and went softly out.

"And Van," said Brainard to Van Winkle, "have one of the other operators do the same thing. And have still another one set up for the west window, and see if we can get what that fellow says he saw there. I haven't made a record of a record yet. Maybe that's possible, too."

"Radley," she said quickly, "that fellow was lying."

His face sobered instantly.

"While you were turned away," went on the girl, "he—just leered at you."

"Eh?" said Brainard. His gaze fell away from her into the visions of his rapid thought.

"And—wasn't his explanation—wasn't it too elaborate?"

Brainard went slowly back to his chair without answering. He sat down with both his hands on the edge of his desk before him, his eyes fastened upon them as if they inspired his ideas.

"But why," asked Phyllis, tardily recognizing the singular fact, "why are you so concerned about that—that woodland scene? I thought it was the mill accident—"

The look on his face stopped her. Embarrassment, a flush, his eyes wavering. Then he began taking out a cigarette, with careful unconcern.

"I've been more upset than I needed to be," he explained presently, with an air of patience. "This is the first threat of a leak, just as my organization is beginning to work. It merely shows that I shall have to check up everything carefully."

"I'm glad it's no more serious than that," said Phyllis, sure she was being rebuffed.

When he came back he said he had told Ushigi to serve luncheon for two here in his office. They lunched by the window from which they could look down upon the street and see the crowd leaving the morning matinee and gathering for the afternoon. For the stream of people was continuous at the theater doors now.

Phyllis was unable to fit the events of these days upon the days which had preceded her illness. She frequently felt sure that she must presently wake to find that she had been lost in some vaporings of unconsciousness. There were moments when the sudden longing was great to go back to those other days for reasons even apart from the wish for Radley's old attitude toward herself. If one might but turn back actually to the dearer moments of the past! But she quaked, hot and cold, at the rising idea of a "record" of one of those moments! There were things too sacredly sweet even to repeat.

Wonder

But after the luncheon Radley called Van Winkle and suggested that he "show Miss Norman some of the pageant records he was preparing for public view." And she felt that she was dismissed as she went.

But in the multiple-unit room, as they called it, Van Winkle showed her things that made her even forget. To sit in a quiet room in California in 1935 and see Henry Hudson sail up the river of his name in 1609—and then to see New York's pageant-memorial of it 300 years later, and now 27 years ago—it was enough to make one forget most other things for the moment. Of course, as she looked at the historical scene, and its beautiful but not very like imitation, there was nothing about either that could fix its date. Either might have been mere pageantry—but each was as if she stood on a high short of the beautiful river and looked down upon the event itself. And this being the first of the Vicarion's product she had seen since she had been ill, the impression of astounding wizardry returned in all its force. It was overwhelming again.

She tried to describe her sensations to Van Winkle. He was so consistently courteous, considerate, unassuming, that he disarmed even the aversion she had earlier felt toward him. And now he seemed accustomed enough to the marvel of the Vicarion to take it calmly. It grew no less difficult for her to do so, however.

"Well," Van Winkle said, "you remember when the Mount Wilson telescope first began to show us new 'frontiers of the universe,' and scientists began to tell us about solar systems among the atoms, we gaped. There will always be new frontiers of knowledge for us to scoff at, and then explain about, and then ignore. Makes you think of Pope's lines about vice. And the way we scoff first, and then ignore, is a sort of racial vice at that."

He did not talk like a man in whose memory existed a great gap he could not fill. But almost any freak could be expected of his affliction, she supposed.

"Do you remember the day you asked me if I understood what it means—The Vicarion?" she asked.

"Quite well."

"Do you think it is going to be a racial vice?"

"There are people—some in these booths here—who are already addicts."

"What a—term to use!"

"Wait till you have seen a theater full of people—as I did last night—getting their first taste of blood!"

She stared at him. His voice was calm, his words terrifying.

"It—catches them?"

"It enslaves them!"

"It hasn't—enslaved me."

"It will—when it strikes your keynote."

"And you?"

"It won't strike my keynote."

"Is that—why you don't look back on your life?"

His eyes dodged hers. "I don't dare to—Phyllis."

Confusion at this sudden focus on the personal checked her thoughts. Before she could recover she heard a step at her side and her brother dropped into a chair next to her.

"Dippy About It"

"Hello!" he said. "It's got you, too, has it?"

He was smoking; as he blew a thin cloud at once from lips and nostrils she saw that his skin was sallow, that his lips were drawn in subtle little tight lines at the corners, that his lids were heavy. He had lost the freshness she had so loved in him. Why had she not noticed it sooner? He regarded her coolly. It occurred to her that the adorable quality in him, which had been like something learning youthfully forward in alert eagerness over life, was sitting back now, enlightened. She put her hand on his.

"John! Do you mean—it has got you?"

"Sure! I'm dippy about it. I've found out more things than I ever expected to know."

"What do you mean?"

"I've been watching the masks come off. Haven't you?"

"Whose masks?"

"Everybody's—the guys whose real faces I thought I'd been seeing."

"I don't understand."

"Oh, yes, you do. You don't pretend to be different, do you? Nobody gets away with a bluff now, you know. Might as well own up and be comfortable—before Rad shows us up!"

"What have you been seeing?"

"Seeing?" He laughed. "A lot of the holier-than-thou chaps in their unholier moments! Some of spotlight moralists between shows!"

"John!"

He looked at his cigaret, unsmiling. "Ge, it's funny!" he said. "I've heard all my life the old line about everybody having a private little skeleton in his closet—but I never got what it was about till Rad came along with his little skeleton key!"

He tossed her hand aside.

"Pretty soon Brainard will have the whole dam' world on a string to a ring in its nose—if somebody doesn't kill him first.

"The only chap he won't get will be the one that's always done what he liked and doesn't care who knows it! Believe me from now on that's going to be me!"

She caught his arm. "Oh, don't say such things!"

He laughed again and got to his feet. "Don't start anything, Sis," he answered her, and turned away.

She stood up and watched him go down the length of the room. Then she looked at Van Winkle. He was standing poised as if to do anything she might ask. But he did not move or speak. He did not quite look at her!

She left him. She almost ran from the room and into the hall. She found Ushigi there and told him to call his master. The Jap told her Brainard was in the small studio and was not to be disturbed!

"Call him!" she insisted.

The man hesitated, then went to the studio door and knocked. There was no answer. He knocked again. No response followed. He looked back at Phyllis and half shook his head. Then he turned to the door and called.

"Mist Brainar'! Missy Norman, she call you come out!"

After a moment he tried the door. It was locked. He turned back to the girl, his face full of anxiety.

Phyllis ran to the studio door and beat upon it with her knuckles.

"Radley!" she cried. "It's Phyllis! Let me in!"

Only silence answered her. She beat again—till her hand was bleeding. Fruitlessly!

"Phyl! Phyllis! What's the matter?"

It was Carol's voice beside her. Phyllis turned from the door on which she was breaking her hand, and realized that it was frenzy and not reason that had impelled her.

Ushigi was disappearing discreetly. If he had human curiosity in him, he had also a human willingness to relinquish responsibility.

"O Carol!" cried Phyllis—and then realized that she had no words in which to explain. What was there to explain? Panic again! She covered her face with her hands.

"Don't you know Rad's had the door of the studio muffed so he won't be disturbed?" asked Carol coolly, with the tone of superiority one takes when observing another's unwary self-revelations.

Phyllis raised her head. "Have you seen John?" she demanded.

"Not today," returned Carol easily. "Why?"

"I—thought you saw him every day!"

"Dear, no!"

"Carol! Don't you care?"

Carol's eyes narrowed. "What's the matter, Phyl? Pull yourself together. Anything happened to John?"

Phyllis tried to answer. But there were no words in which to put the things that crowded for expression.

"I get you," said Carol, smiling slightly. "He's been handing you some of his talk. And you, being his doting sister, are naturally shocked to discover that he's grown up. I, being in his confidence, have suspected for some time that he was—adolescent!"

"He's—changed!" was all that Phyllis found to say.

"Of course he is. But he's just like the rest. Ever been out with the gang, Phyl? A gang of college men, I mean? Little supper parties? Talk-fests behind doors?"

Phyllis stared at her.

"Oh, don't look at me like that! You're the one who hasn't grown up. If you must know where I got my dope, I'll tell you—part of it. Rad gave me some university student life stuff the other day, supposing it was safe for a young girl's consumption. It hadn't been expurgated."

She laughed. Then she reached out and shook Phyllis by the shoulder.

"My child," she went on, "you are out to the Pilgrim model—or our notion of what the Pilgrim model was. And that's something I'm going to get a line on, too! But you hail from farther back even than Aunt Belle! Don't you know yet that the most insufferable animal on earth is the human—particularly just when it reaches the stage where it begins to think it is sophisticated?"

"Frankenstein"

Phyllis found herself nursing her bleeding hand. The thing that had been too poignant for her, against which she had flown into wild rebellion, began to ebb out of her like the shock and pain of a violent fall. She found slowly that she could struggle up, and walk—albeit limping.

Carol watched her understandingly. "You simply illustrate, Phyl, in your truly pleasing person, the folly of coming up to the adult state without getting wise to the things which are! You are the stuff of which reformers are made. A nice name for it is Inexperience! Nobody who knows the cruel world ever tries to reform anybody. Better go home and patch up your hand, and let the rest of us bark our own knuckles when it's our turn."

"I was—frightened," admitted Phyllis. Then she looked suddenly at the younger girl. "Do you remember what you said to Radley, Carol, the first night we saw his—discovery? About Frankenstein?"

"Is that what's on your nerves?" returned Carol. "Well, just bear in mind that everybody belongs to the Frankenstein family. Each of us has a little monster of his very own. But the thing that really makes me feel better about mine is that I know you've got one! Have you a little monster in your home? Of course you have! And one touch of monster makes the whole world kin!"

She laughed, enjoying the bubbling of her own thought. Then she regarded Phyllis quizzically.

"Of course, you're still wondering," she added, "what I saw the day I dropped to the mat. Well, if I should tell you I'd blight the fair flower of your innocence, too. And that's not up to me any more than it's up to you to guard mine! The way I dope out this fitly named human game is that I'm not divinely delegated to play anybody else's cards!"

Carol put an arm around her and led her toward the outer door. Phyllis went, feeling like a fool, and wondering why she had not arrived at convictions about life—convictions, not conventions. Carol went down with her and called a taxi. Their good-nights were simple enough; Carol turned back into the Bonmar. And Phyllis drove home, her mind phrasing her own wonderings in Carol's own lazy drawl: "Why convictions, anyway? Drive as cautiously as you like if you don't care for speeding. But don't try to play the traffic cop yourself!"

She found her mother had telephoned not to expect her home to dinner. Her father was at the club. Nobody ever expected John till he came. She pretended to eat, to satisfy Charles, then went to the library to look into the papers now for the world's opinion.

She was amazed at the space the papers devoted to the Vicarion. Indeed, in the evening editions, there was little else. First pages were virtually covered with stories from every imaginable source regarding the effects of the "epoch-making" discovery. They united to declare a new epoch. The stories ran over into other columns on other pages, filled with superlatives, and all arrived at conclusions—convictions!

The first story on which Phyllis stumbled told what Brainard did with his critics.

"He answers nobody who questions him on his plans," one writer said; and went on to relate that one young father of a family rushed to the Bomar to complain of the effect of liquid events upon his offspring, that day initiated in the theater. "Brainard took him to a private room and put a bag on his head," read the story, "and at last accounts he was still there. Question—was it folk lore of the Follies or merely Geisha Girls?"

They all referred to the arrangement of the headpiece for private view of the Vicarion's marvels as the "nose bag." This was inevitable. Phyllis rather wondered that she did not come upon John's natural variation—the nose ring.

An editorial opposite the last column of this first story seriously discussed the attitude of young people who would instantly see in the Vicarion their opportunity to slake their proverbial thirst for seeing life. And propounded a heavy query as to whether life ever lies in its sensations.

Another paper told of a young mother who instinctively recognized menace in the marvels she witnessed at a first showing, and rushed from a theater with her 6-year-old child to forestall its threatened demoralization. The absurdity written all over this tale was curiously flavored by one line in which the reporter seemed to admit that his own view of Liquid Life had left him an uncomfortable sense that it was a dangerous abnormality.

RUSSIAN 'CZAR' IS SELECTED

Young Student Chosen To Occupy Throne

PARIS, Jan. 16. (UP)—A young Oxford graduate who is studying engineering after working hours, but whose blood is that of the Romanoffs was elected to the lost throne of monarchist Russia today at a secret meeting of the supreme Russian monarchist council.

The new "emperor of Russia" and leader of the shadowy "white army" of once royal exiles is Prince Nikita, 28, son of Grand Duke Alexander. He takes up the banner dropped by the late Grand Duke Nicholas, claimant to the vanished throne of the czars, and becomes the key figure in an impotent gesture against Soviet Russia.

Nikita, who married the Countess Vorontzoff in Paris in 1922, was chosen over half a dozen other candidates for the role of pretender to the Romanoff throne because "his attitude and appearance are in keeping with the bearing of a monarch." Grand Duke Alexander, his father, is now touring in the United States.

The outstanding opponent of the late Nicholas Grand Duke Cyril, was eliminated because of his unpopularity with the Russian exiles who have devoted great efforts and large sums of money to the "white army" cause in the last 10 years, hoping to lead a counter-revolution in Russia which would re-establish the Romanoff throne. Cyril also was opposed because he is not a member of the Russian orthodox church and therefore, not eligible to the throne.

BRITAIN GLAD MORGAN NAMED

Reparations Expert Satisfactory to England

LONDON, Jan. 16. (US)—Though no official announcement has been made, it may be said that the British government is enormously pleased with the appointment of J. P. Morgan as a representative of the United States on the expert reparations commission. The government's pleasure will only be unofficially expressed because of the fear of wounding the sensibilities of a certain European power which may not share the same enthusiasm.

This undercurrent of extreme satisfaction is based on Britain's past experience with the head of the house of Morgan when he was wartime agent of the United States to purchase British war supplies. At that time Britain found him a thoroughly sound business man, unmovable by popular hysteria, always with both feet on the ground, ready perhaps to drive a shrewd bargain, but never susceptible to being swayed from his determination once his mind was made up.

As a responsible member of the government said to Universal Service this afternoon:

"We feel that the selection of Mr. Morgan and his consent to serve assures that the United States is going into the reparations conference with the highest qualifications to speak with authority. We know Mr. Morgan as one of the world's recognized financiers, a sound man with the firmest grasp on world finance."

ROME PLEASED AT APPOINTMENT

ROME, Jan. 16. (US)—The selection of J. P. Morgan as one of the Americans on the committee of experts for determining Germany's reparations liability is praised by the Italian press. The selection is interpreted as direct contradiction of rumored opposition of American bankers to the promotion of German bonds.

Morgan is pictured in Rome newspapers as a "colossus of finance," the head of a bank group "with immense influence in international affairs."

Hoover to Name Impartial Group To Survey Prohibition Conditions

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. (INS)—Herbert Hoover is so convinced of the necessity of a sweeping, impartial investigation of prohibition that one of his first acts after entering the White House will be to appoint the citizens' commission of nine to conduct the inquiry. Already the president-elect is giving much thought to the personnel of the commission.

The investigation was discussed by Mr. Hoover today with Senators Jones, Republican of Washington, a dry, and Edge, Republican of New Jersey, a wet. They have sponsored a resolution authorizing the president-elect to appoint the commission.

After the conference, Jones and Edge announced they would not press for adoption of the resolution because Mr. Hoover feels that as president he will have sufficient authority to name the inquisitorial body without previous congressional action. In this respect, Mr. Hoover pointed to appointment by President Coolidge of the Morrow board to investigate aviation.

Jones explained that after the commission is appointed the special session of congress in mid-April can appropriate the money for it to function.

Mr. Hoover is anxious to have the inquiry cover all phases of prohibition even to the question of general violations, to determine whether abuses under the law are inherent in the Volstead act itself, Jones declared.

SCHOOL TAXES CASE AFFIRMED

Suit Against Fergusons Is Upheld

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 16. (AP)—The third court of civil appeals today reformed and affirmed the case of the Academy Consolidated independent school district against Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson and her husband, James E. Ferguson, involving delinquent taxes, interest and penalties on property in the district.

The Fergusons had claimed that the land the board assessed was "so remote and inaccessible with reference to the location of the school houses as not to be benefitted by the schools or taxes for an amount in excess of their true and fair market value."

A jury trial on special issues was held in Bell county resulting in a verdict for the school district. The judgment as to delinquent taxes, interest and penalties was affirmed, but reformed as to that part where assessments were increased 10 per cent as a penalty for non-remedition.

Uncle Sam Even Has Trouble Giving Money

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. (US)—Uncle Sam is having trouble giving money away.

The retirement division of the bureau of pensions today complained that it has nearly a million dollars due government employes who were retired from service prior to July 1, 1927, but not yet claimed. About 20,000 pensioners are included in the list.

The money is due as the result of deductions made from the employes' pay during their time of service in the government, and not claimed at the time of retirement.

WHAT can stock speculation do to love? What did it do to Rita, whose husband had made thousands in the market? And to Addie Jessup, whose father still shopped around to do the family marketing? What did it do to the $4000 Addie borrowed from Rita and carried to her broker friend? The answer, in which vital facts about speculation and investment are vividly, humanly portrayed, is in BUBBLES, by Maximilian Foster.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16. (AP)—With the race one fourth over Michigan and Purdue have a combined first mortgage on the 1929 Big Ten basketball championship.

As neither team meets the other in the campaign, indications point to another double jointed championship.

Michigan, however, stands as the favorite because of triumphs last week over Wisconsin and Iowa.

MERGERS

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Wall street had a quiet session last week.

It settled down to abnormal.

There were a few well groomed panics, seven or eight corners in Winter Cement and only a gross or two of assorted mergers.

We don't tumble to this merger business, but it seems to be important. This symptom of the investment college is what is known as a healthy reaction.

When a clam is tossed into the chowder he is merged. If he gets out again it is a healthy reaction.

Last week we bought two shares in American Vestless Button and put it away in the safety deposit waste basket.

We watched the ticker very closely as we heard rumors of a big shake-up in the street. Some prominent men were going to do something big. Put a mustard plaster on the Palisades, or something.

Vestless Button started throwing off dividends, one button at a time.

The next thing we heard was that Vestless Button had been merged with Indoor Harvest Machinery.

This made us a stockholder in two very strong corporations. We didn't know whether Vestless Button had absorbed Indoor Harvest or whether the parent company had eaten its young.

But our board of directors held their annual parade through cheering aisles of disgruntled stockholders who objected to a marriage without a honeymoon.

The merger paid two for one, which means they pay two other guys instead of you. For every share in Vestless Button the stockholders got two shares in Indoor Harvest and were on the road to get rich if it hadn't been for the detour signs.

That made two boards of directors, one to suggest and the other to do the heavy nodding.

We now owned four shares in Indoor Harvest, which got so successful that it was merged with Public Toothbrush of Arizona. The president of Vestless Button was promoted to office boy of Public Toothbrush. He had his picture printed in the Wall Street Journal alongside of Jackie Coogan under the caption.

"Success came to them late in life."

The second merger paid three to one. So we now owned 12 shares of Public Toothbrush, paid up and non-profit sharing.

This company was merged with Old Fashioned Mustache Cup, under the trade name of Gulp Refining Company.

That was a 10 to 1 proposition. Everybody who started with two shares of Vestless Button became the owner of 120 shares of Gulp Refinery.

Merger followed merger, until now we own 1,600,000 shares of Sun-Kissed Mushrooms.

They say that Sun-Kissed Mushrooms would be a very good investment if it were not for the fact that mushrooms will not grow in the sun.

Cold Klondike Caused Tex's Pal To Quit but Rickard Kept Going

Promoter, in Reminiscent Mood, Told Lawrence of Perilous Journey to Reach Land of Coveted Gold

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—When Tex Rickard and Willie Stack, bound for the goldfields of the Klondike, stepped off the boat at Juneau, the latter's face fell very perceptibly. The place was seething with activity. Bearded, fur-clad men who had either just "come out" or were just "going in" were rushing all over the place, shouting, giving orders and all talking at once. Sledges and equipment were piled high in all directions and the rough, rugged trails that passed for streets were cluttered with tangled dog teams.

It was a scene such as America had never witnessed before and will never see again. Juneau was the great "shoving-off" spot for those who were just starting on the great adventure and for those who were returning to civilization. Juneau was the adventurers' curb market. Over its countless bars the boys gathered to exchange yarns and bargain for dogs, sledges and supplies. Those who were coming out sold their equipment to those who were going in.

Juneau, at the moment when George Lewis Rickard and Stack stepped off the boat, was a place where emotions ran high. Those who were about to tackle the vast solitudes of the Yukon in the most romantic of all adventures were keyed up to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. Those who were leaving the frozen north behind were filled with a boundless joy.

And it was in Juneau that these high-spirited factions met—mostly over the most convenient bar. Here, too, was the confidence man and the sure-thing gambler, waiting to relieve the battle-scarred miner of the gold he had torn from the hills north of the Chilkoot pass. Many a musher lost in Juneau the gold for which he had suffered and struggled for a year in the bleak solitudes of the Klondike.

Picturesque Scene

The city presented a vivid, picturesque scene as Stack and Rickard stepped off the boat. But to Willie it brought only a shiver. He looked about him forlornly. He had been seasick on the voyage from Frisco and Seattle, and was quite without enthusiasm that morning. He was probably longing for the baking suns of the Mexican border. He was rapidly losing interest in the arctic circle.

"Well," he said to the gaunt, iron-faced youth who was Tex Rickard, "I don't see no gold around here." And he shivered again as a penetrating blast from the frozen northwest made his teeth rattle.

Sitting in his cozy, quiet office on the ninth floor of the old Garden, Tex Rickard chuckled as he recalled that far-off day in Juneau.

"I never seed nuthin' like it," he said. "All the way from the plains of Texas to the rim of the arctic circle folks had been tellin' me how cold it was gonna be. They told me a guy would have to spend five years at the equator in order to get warm after bein' in that north country for six months. But, at that, they didn't tell me half of it.

"I remember that me and Willie hopped into a gin mill to get a couple of slugs of red liquor and I happened to remark to some feller that looked more like a bear than a man that it was goll-darned cold. I saw right away that I had pulled a boner. He gave me one look of pity and said: 'Cold! My boy, you ain't seen nuthin' yet, you ain't! You ain't seen nuthin' and you ain't felt nuthin'! What they need around this town is moree leetric fans.'

"I remember Willie Stack gulpin' down a big hooker of rye and havin' another chill." Tex permitted himself another of those submerged chuckles.

"Nuthin' Like It"

"Nope," he said, "I never seen nuthin like it."

The Rickard-Stack expedition hadn't been in Juneau very long before the two youths discovered that the real battle was all before them. As they sought advice and information from those who were coming out of the frozen wastes to the north the hardships and perils that faced them seemed to mount to unbelievable proportions, it was disheartening and discouraging, but Tex Rickard never faltered. He never for a moment thought of turning back. He was going to the Klondike if it cost him his life. It was a characteristic he often displayed afterward in ventures almost as hazardous.

It was in Juneau that Rickard and Stack fitted out for the long hike into the unknown. And fitting out just about took their last nickel. When they finally got under way they were practically flat financially. They had purchased food supplies sufficient to last them a year. Much of this stuff was lost later on in an accident.

Going out of Juneau, the two faced the prospect of hauling their heavy sleds 300 miles, mostly over mountains, before they could reach the gold country.

"And that was the roughest, toughest, wildest country I ever traveled through," Rickard once told me. "It was the most God-forsaken land the eyes of man ever fell on. It was late spring when we finally got started, and we figured we'd make the Yukon by late summer. But winter was just about setting in when we reached the headwaters of that river. The first 50 miles were the hardest. We had to scale a mountain in order to reach the Chilkoot pass, which was the only way of reaching the frozen lakes over which we had to haul in order to get to the Yukon. Getting over that mountain was something that still makes my back ache every time I think of it. It was too steep to haul our sleds up it, so we had to park our stuff at the bottom and carry each item separately to the top. Then we hauled our empty sleds to the crest and reloaded them. We were 10 days doing that, and when we had finished we were a couple of wrecks. We were on the ropes for fair.

"Then we started to slide down the other side, and about every hundred yards the sleds would upset and scatter our stuff all over Alaska. Once we came within an inch of skidding over a precipice. One of our sleds capsized and a lot of our equipment went hurtling down into a gorge. I guess it's there yet."

All this time Willie Stack's enthusiasm was subsiding. The atmosphere was rapidly cooling his ardor for gold. When the two would go into camp for the night Willie's mind would invariably revert to the sunny plains of Texas and the warmth of the Mexican border. He would continue his disconcerting chatter until Tex Rickard would have to cry:

"Aw, for the luvva Pete, shut up!"

Rickard knew that before long he would be going it alone.

When they had finally clambered through the rough and dangerous Chilkoot pass and crossed the chain of frozen lakes leading to the Yukon, they met two bewhiskered, fur-clad mushers just coming out of the gold fields.

"If we hadn't met them I guess maybe Willie Stack would have stuck along," Tex said afterward. "It was so cold right then that your breath froze in your nostrils, but when we passed these strangers one of 'em says: 'Mornin', stranger, looks like we're gonna get cold weather 'fore long!'

"Well sir, that was too much for Willie Stack. For the next two days as we trudged along lugging our heavy sleds behind us, Willie would keep mumblin' over and over to himself, 'Looks like we're gonna get cold weather 'fore long.' The thing seemed to be working on his mind—what that miner had said to us. 'Looks like we're gonna get cold weather 'fore long.'

"We reached the Yukon about noon on a Sunday, having covered something like 340 miles. That was where Willie quit. He turned to me and said:

"'George, this is where we say good-bye. I may be dumb, but I ain't no fool. I'm goin' back to Texas, 'cause I feel like we're gonna get cold weather 'fore long.'

"And with that he turns his sled and starts marchin' back to Juneau. But he might just as well have stuck along with me, because he was killed a year later in a gunfight on the Mexican border."

BOXING SHOW PLEASES FANS

Ross Honored by Scrappers, Ringsiders, on Birthday

Yesterday was Alex Ross' 52nd birthday, and boxing enthusiasts and boxers of Wichita Falls gave the promoter fitting returns of the day. The leather pushers provided a corking show, the best ring program seen here in many a month, and the fans gave Ross a shower of silver and currency.

Sam Riley of Altus, Okla., and Cyclone Hall of Childress stepped 10 fast rounds in the windup. Riley, clever and more experienced, outboxed Hall but the Cyclone did a majority of the leading. Hall's rally in late rounds was impressive and Riley was very weary when the bout ended.

Scott Star of Show

Howard Scott of Electra and Kid Murdock boxed eight dazzling rounds in the semi-windup. Scott was awarded the decision in the eighth round when Murdock was disqualified after hitting low frequently and butting incessantly. Scott, weighing 115 pounds to Murdock's 128, according to the announced poundage, carried the milling to his foe all the way. Howard fought probably the greatest bout of his career against the Oklahoman, and was far in front when the go was halted.

Kid Garland of Burkburnett scored a knockout over Adolph Fourpin of Wichita Falls in the second round; Art Street and Kid Lewis boxed four rounds and Young Sturdivant and Joe Colbert also stepped four rounds in prelims.

Hodgins Praises Alex

George H. Hodgins, former chief of police, made a nice little ringside talk about how Ross has given this city interesting boxing and wrestling, and the fans needed no urging to shower the canvas with coin and paper money.

It was, as Alex had promised, a corking card. Every bout was average or better.

AGGIES CHASE FOOTBALL JINX

Cadets Couldn't Beat Matty Bell—So They Hired Him

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Jan. 16. (AP)—After failing four times to beat a football team coached by Madison Bell, the Texas Aggies have hired him for their own.

MADISON BELL

"Matty" will succeed Dana X Bible, who goes to Nebraska next fall with five Southwest conference titles to his credit.

When the Texas A. & M. college won its last championship in 1927, it crushed every opponent except Bell's Texas Christian university eleven. The Farmers and the Frogs battled to a tie at Fort Worth. Their 1926 game also ended a draw, each team taking the count of 13. It was the only time Bible's men scored against Bell's. Texas Christian won with a field goal in 1925 and with a touchdown in 1928.

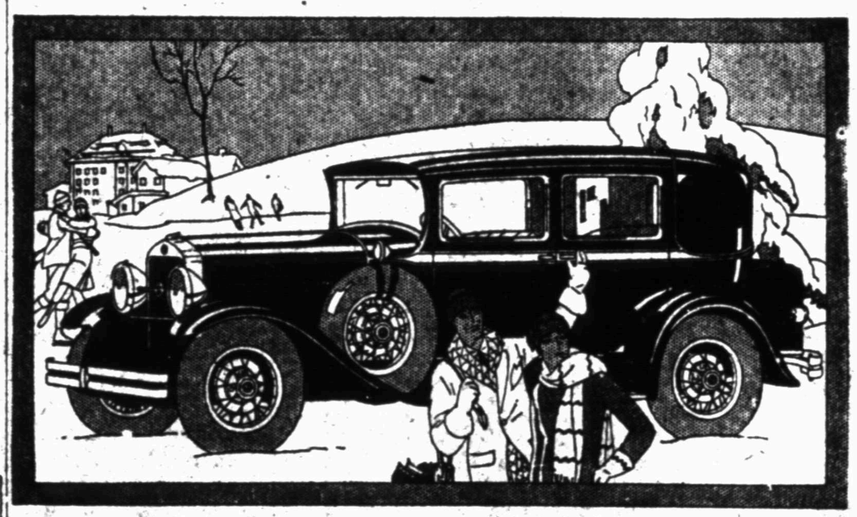

Bell is 29 years old. In his playing days he starred with "Bo" McMillin at Centre college. He coached at Haskell Indian institute, Lawrence, Kan., and Carroll college, Waukesha, Wis., before he entered the Southwest circuit.

A score of betterments enhance the speed and spirit and stamina that made this great car champion six of the world. The new Commander is steadier at high speed, due to its new double-drop frame and lower center of gravity. Ball-bearing spring shackles and hydraulic shock absorbers provide matchless riding ease.

The new Commander brings to the boulevards a refreshing new style note. Its colorful coachwork, instead of being mere design, is an interpretation of the capabilities of the car itself. There is speed and tireless energy, eagerness, and pride, in every line of the long, low bodies.

Windshield is non-shatterable safety glass. Steering wheel is steel-cored, unbreakable. Brakes are velvet-smooth, yet insistent, quick and powerful. Narrow steel pillars give full vision.

Flaming Youth vs. Smoldering Age

Parents have always been willing to blame the incorrigible characteristics in their children on some inherited influence—always from the other side of the family tree. Science now believes that "bad" boys are developed by the environment and training after birth. There are no inherently bad children. They are only badly trained. It is the undernourished, undernised, unhealthy children who form the potential criminals and social delinquents.

Children are never good children when they are suffering from enlarged tonsils, adenoids, bronchitis, colds, catarrh, or any one of the multitude of other disorders to which children are subject. There is no doubt that these are the usual causes of many mental and moral defectives. As soon as the child has been cured of these definite physical defects, there is an immediate improvement in his mental and moral attitude. This has taken place without an exception in every case of this type that I have had under my supervision.

The responsibility for the growing child lies with the parents, who should make a thorough study of child training and diet. Some of the cases where the children are supposed to be incorrigible only indicate that a child has a will of its own. This is a good quality which should really be encouraged. Parents often make the mistake of trying to force children into being miniature examples of themselves.

It seems to me that most of the criticism of the youth of today arises out of a kind of envy. Intelligence tests taken with a great number of people show that the average adult only equals the mentality of the average modern child of 14 years of age. There is no question that the children of today, who are properly educated, are much more advanced than children of the same age of a generation ago.

The motion pictures, radio, newspapers and magazines are building such a different concept of life that it is almost impossible for middle aged parents to understand the new viewpoint. Children are not being as repressed emotionally now as they were at the beginning of this century, which is good as there can be no question that many of the disorders of old people actually originated from these repressions.

I do not believe that any good results will come from the efforts of the so called "reformer" who attempts to suppress true facts about life. If these facts are introduced truthfully and naturally from infancy, there is very little tendency toward morbidity.

We know that the problems of the emotions can not be lightly cast aside, nor puffed out by the mere breath of the censor. The child must be properly and correctly educated if he is to forge a place for himself in the world of opportunity. A plentiful supply of wholesome food, exercise, responsibility and a useful trade are of far more value for keeping a child straight than is punishment.

Children who are trained to help others do not become criminals. It is a well recognized fact that Boy Scouts, for instance, rarely if ever become members of criminal gangs.

A child's waking hours should be balanced between play and helpful recreation. A vigorous participation in competitive games is the best preventive against morbid thinking or vicious practices.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Stuttering

Question—H. G. asks: "Could you advise me as to the cause of a slight stuttering when I begin talking? I have also noted that my voice does not ring clear, but thick. I am also troubled with constipation which enemas do not seem to overcome. Is there a diet I could go on?"

Answer—I would advise you to consult a teacher who is an expert in methods of overcoming stuttering. You can doubtless cure your constipation by eating less starches and more of the bulky green vegetables. Also take exercises for your abdominal muscles and walk several miles daily.

Ventilated Cooking

Question—L. M. H. writes: "I was taught that vegetables should be ventilated while cooking so I never use a tight cover but allow any gases that may be generated to escape. Has the ventilation theory been entirely superceded? I find that vegetables cooked with a lid produce more gas.

Answer—Most foods should be cooked in almost air tight vessels, but such foods as cabbage, brussels sprouts, and cauliflower will be less gas-forming if no lid covers the vessel, for then the sulphur fumes escape more readily. If this sulphur gas is retained it will cause more flatulence.

X-Ray Burn

Question—L. M. asks: "What is the best treatment that could be effected for healing an X-ray burn. Is there any cure to it?"

Answer—These burns must be treated very carefully, according to their severity, and it would be unwise for me to attempt to advise you through this column.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 16. (AP)—While somewhat irregular, the cotton market was generally higher today on covering and trade and commission house buying, which appeared to be inspired by reports of a better tone in the stock market and of continued steadiness in the spot situation. March contracts sold up from 20.18 to 20.36, and closed at 20.35. The general market closed very steady at net advances of 12 to 15 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 4 points to a decline of 6 points and sold about 2 to 6 points net lower during the first few minutes under realizing or liquidation and some local selling. The offerings were light, however, and after easing off to 20.08 for January and 19.78 for July, the market turned steadier. There was some trade buying as well as covering or rebuying by sellers of yesterday afternoon, accompanied by reports of an improving spot demand and a steady spot basis in the South, while sentiment was influenced by reports of a better tone in the stock market.

After showing net advances of 10 to 12 points, prices eased back to about yesterday's closing quotations under realizing, but the offerings were soon absorbed. The market firmed up again in the late trading on a renewal of covering, trade and commission house buying.

January advanced to 20.30 and July to 20.00, making net gains of 16 to 17 points. Last prices were within a point or two of the best. Reports that Worth street was doing rather a better business in cotton goods may have contributed to the advance. Private cables said that London and continental liquidation had been absorbed by trade calling and Bombay buying in Liverpool and that there was a good demand for cotton cloths from China, with fair business in cotton yarns. Exports, 37,338, making 5,269,609 so far this season. Port receipts, 24,413. U. S. port stocks, 2,274,566.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS Jan. 16. (AP)—After ruling sluggish all morning and in early afternoon the cotton market strengthened in final trading today, making new highs for the day under a demand stimulated by the firmness of stocks. March contracts rallied from 19.53 to 19.70 and closed at the latter figure, net 14 points up. The general market closed steady at net advances of 11 to 15 points.

Liverpool cables were relatively easier and the market here opened at decline of 1 to 2 points. Some further offerings after the start extended the decline to 19.52 for January, 19.53 for March and 19.57 for May, or 2 to 4 points under yesterday's close.

The easiness met good trade buying and some covering probably promoted by a reported good spot demand at a higher basis and before noon March traded at 19.66 and May 19.71, or 13 to 14 points up from the lows.

Trading was moderate during the morning, probably due to the influence still exerted by yesterday's disappointing boll weevil report. Around noon some liquidation and realizing developed and carried the level off 9 to 10 points from the highs to about parallel with yesterday's close.

In the final hour the demand broadened, due to the firmness of stocks and active positions made new highs for the day with January selling at 19.65, March 19.70 and May 19.75, or 13 to 18 points above the early lows. Final prices were at the top.

United States Steel's Strength Leads General Market Higher

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Jan. 16. (US)—Spectacular strength in United States Steel common superseded money as a market factor today and stocks generally closed higher, with sizeable gains in many favored issues.

It was recognized that the mid-month tightness in money has passed but the call rate failed to ease after an 8 per cent renewal. Steel's performance, however, attracted more attention and whatever doubts were entertained as to the market's stability were overcome for the day at least. There was some cheer also in the expectation that Tuesday's reaction my be reflected in a more favorable weekly loan statement.

Steel was carried within a quarter-point of its record high. An indication of the almost bullishness on the issue was forcibly presented by the experience of a leading operator who desired a "call" for 30 days nine points above the market. It was impossible to locate such an option.

Steel Seen as Leader

The biggest speculative clique operating in the market is declared to have selected Steel as a possible leader of the 1929 market. Their opinion has been predicated on the expectation that this year will prove highly profitable for the entire industry, and that Steel's net-per-share may rise to the highest since the war. Current bullishness on Steel is in anticipation of official disclosures of its earnings at the forthcoming directors' meeting, which also holds out the possiblity of a special distribution to stockholders. Other Steel shares were inspired by Big Steel's strength and all developed strength. Republic is understood to have been taken in hand by a powerful group.

Coty was another strong feature rising several points on knowledge that one of the largest operators has become active in this stock. Earnings of the company have been growing rapidly. The same operator was declared responsible for the activity and strength in Continental Motors, in which foreign buying was also reported. City Stores "B" reacted fractionally. A powerful new group is just entering into this situation, having been attracted by the company's past record and bright future prospects.

It is expected that greater popularity, will be accorded the company's shares when the four-for-one split up is effected.

Bush Terminal added over two points to its gain on realization of impending expansion plans.

Trucks Attract

Leading truck stocks are attracting considerable attention from powerful interests. Mack, White, Federal and other truck manufacturers have all enjoyed a comeback after their depressing experiences last year. Credit facilities in the truck line have been tightened in a manner which will save for the companies the best business and do away with sales which have proved disastrous in the past. New interests have come into White, Mack's management has again built up its business to former proportions, and Federal is said to be sought by a leading passenger-car manufacturer. Yellow Truck's position is unlike that of the others in respect to its market, but a more friendly attitude toward the stock is declared to be evident in General Motors' circles.

Davison Chemical advanced on appreciation of the complete transformation which has occurred in its affairs. The company's principal subsidiary has developed almost a dozen new fields which will find use for its products. Coupled with this improvement, the fertilizer field, in which Davison has always been active, is showing betterment. Earnings of the company are stated to be showing substantial improvement.

Paramount-Famous Lasky was quiet despite a large turnover as reports were heard of a leading bank acquiring a block of its stock. International Combustion was up slightly. Public Utilities presented the strongest group, Public Service of New Jersey and Commonwealth Power advancing sharply and Consolidated Gas two points.

Oils were not unusually active, there being an undercurrent of uneasiness inspired by the Rockefeller-Stewart dispute. To offset this in part, however, it is understood that a large new holding company, with a probable capital of $100,000,000, is in process of formation and will utilize its funds exclusively in oil shares. There are many mergers pending in the oil industry. Marland was helped by a report that it was to be included in a large independent enterprise, a former executive of which was recently named president of Marland.

Livestock

TEXAS REVIEW

FORT WORTH, Jan. 16. (AP)—Cattle sold to a fair demand on the livestock market today. With the exception of cows that sold a little lower, all classes of cattle held steady.

About half a dozen loads of slaughter steers included in the receipts. Early sales at $10.25 and up to $11.25, or barely steady.

Slaughter yearlings and heifers fully steady, a carlot selling at $13.50 and another load at $12.25, and others in the $11.00 notch. The common kind in package lots around $7.50.

The supply of bulls light but fairly steady. A few odd head sold up to $8.50; a package at $8.40; other heavy bulls on down to $8; the common, light ones mostly around $6.25.

Quality considered, better cows called a little lower than yesterday's prices, on a decline about equal to Tuesday's advance. Carlots sold at $8.75 and through the $8.00 notch. The bulk of canners and cutters sold at $4.50 and $5.50, an occasional one under $4.50.

The calf supply was light—mostly package lots, but sales fully steady. Calves in the southern division sold at $11.25 to a packer buyer. The bulk of the cull calves sold at $6.00 and $6.50. Stockers calves sold at $12.00, other loads due to bring more money.

The sheep receipts showed 2,200 head, the bulk of the supply on contract. A few wooled wethers sold at $10.00, fall shorn wethers at $9.00, wooled fat feeder lambs at $14.50 and fat wooled yearlings at $12.50; wooled feeder yearlings at $11.75.

Hogs showed an advance of 20 to 30 cents today, rail hogs having most advance; rail top, $9.25; truck top, $8.65. The bulk of the packing sows sold at $7.25 to $8.00; best butchers, 175-200 pounds, at $8.35@9.25.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 16. (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture)—An active trade featured the fat lamb market again today and prices ruled 25@50c higher. Choice fed lambs reached $17.00 at Chicago, while a comparable grade at the river markets brought $16.65; mature classes were scarce, and prices were strong at 25c up, with best fat ewes going at $10.50 at Chicago. Receipts were moderate, with total arrivals at 41,400 against 71,105 last Wednesday and 54,801 a year ago.

A broad shipping demand was responsible for a 15@25c higher hog market at all points. Offerings scaling under 240 pounds had the preference. Weightier kinds closed with some weakness in evidence. The extreme top reached $9.45 on 170-200-pound weight at St. Louis. Total arrivals at the 11 markets were 109,800, as compared with 131,740 a week ago and 121,286 a year ago.

Trade in all killing classes of cattle was slow, but no material change in values was registered. In between grades of yearlings and heavy heifers met a dull outlet at the Kansas City market, with prices somewhat lower; vealers ruled strong to 50c higher, with the demand fairly broad; best fed yearlings brought $15.25 at Chicago for the day's top; limited receipts of stocker and feeder steers at all points held prices on a firm basis; choice yearling stockers scaling around 700 pounds brought $12.25, and choice stock calves $13.50 at Kansas City. Offerings totaled 35,050 against 38,512 a week ago and 44,027 a year ago.

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 16. (AP)—Hogs—Receipts 12,000; 15@25c higher; top $9.10 on good and choice 190 to 240 pounds; packing sows $7.25@8.00.

CHICAGO REVIEW

CHICAGO, Jan. 16 (AP)—Somersaulting prices turned the corn market end over end today, and established new high-price records for the season, with May delivery vaulting above $1. Broad buying activity developed after rains reported in the drought-stricken Argentine corn belt were shown to be inadequate. Meanwhile, wheat demand was stimulated by word that Canadian Mills had booked their full capacity four months ahead with trans-pacific flour orders.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, ⅝c to 1⅛c net higher. Wheat finished 1⅛c to 1¼c@1⅜c up, oats varying from ⅛c decline to ⅝c advance, and provisions at 7c setback to a rise of 15c.

Corn trading was spectacular both on account of sudden reversal of price trends today and because of the big volume of transactions, as well as owing to the fact that two out of three of the principal future deliveries of corn have attained the long-coveted goal of $1 a bushel.

Another bullish factor was evidence of a decrease in country offerings of corn to Chicago, implying that farmers were holding back for higher prices, although at the maximum reached today the market was about 24c a bushel above the season's bottom level.

Wheat displayed strength from the start. By far the most important development was in the shape of Winnipeg reports of huge flour shipments in progress from Canada to North China, and assertions that some of the flour is going to Russia, besides, Liverpool wheat quotations were higher than expected.

STEERS BRING GOOD PRICE

Farmers Supplying Hogs For Local Markets

Ed Eckert, local cattle buyer, closed two deals in the market at Fort Worth Wednesday, selling 59 head of steers and cows which had been assembled from the Wichita Falls territory during the last few weeks, and buying a car of 35 steers for delivery Thursday.

A group of steers included in the stock sold by Mr. Eckert brought $10.25. They had been fed for some time in the feed pens near the Palace Meat Market abbatoir on the Petrolia road. Prices on the remaining stock ranged from $5.10 to $8.00.

The steers being delivered here Thursday for feeding range from one to two years old, and list at $7.50.

Hogs for local kill are still being supplied largely by farmers in this area. Large shipments to the market are rare, however, because a single owner seldom has a sufficient number of hogs of like age, weight and stock to comprise a car lot.

Cotton made another small gain Wednesday, and has now climbed to the figure reached just before Christmas. Local buyers offered 18.30 and 18.40 on middling basis Wednesday afternoon.

Chicago Suburb Imports 320 Cars of Sugar During Year

CHICAGO, Jan. 16. (US)—Federal authorities today undertook to de-sweeten Melrose Park.

Evidence introduced by the government at the trial of 81 residents of Melrose Park, charged with conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, showed that in 10 months of 1927 a total of 320 carloads of sugar went into the suburb. From this, federal authorities said, 660,000 gallons of alcohol could be manufactured.

Of the 200 persons arrested in the wholesale raids, 104 were indicted. Since the arrests, however, five of the 104 have died and 18 others have never been apprehended.

The vote on the resolution was by acclamation and carried unanimously with the exception of Representative H. R. King, Tillman county, who voted no.

Just before the vote Representative King arose and inquired "if two lawyers would be employed of every sub-committee," taking a slap at the employment of Judge H. F. Hill and Edward Box as counsel for the original committee.

JAY WALKERS ARE DEFENDED

Veteran Traffic Chief Gives Some Advice

CHICAGO, Jan. 16 (US)—Let the pedestrian alone!

Let him hop, skip and jump with and against the traffic lights—it'll improve his health.

This was Capt. Frank J. Matchett's advice to all village, town and city traffic departments, and having been head of Chicago's police traffic department for many years his advice is sound.

"Anti-jay-walking ordinances are the bunk," declared Captain Matchett, who continued:

"And that goes for Chicago, New York and other large cities as well as for the medium sized and smaller cities.

"Leave the lowly pedestrian alone. When they dodge automobiles all day they don't need setting-up exercises. Jay-walking ordinances are very well for those who have not tried them.

"We have them—but we let the pedestrian suit his own pleasure crossing at street intersections or in the middle of the block, just as long as he doesn't interfere with traffic.

"And, the pedestrian, of his own volition, is solving the problem—he moves and fast."

Captain Matchett outlined that in congested zones the crowds can not move as rapidly as motor traffic and should the jay-walking rules be enforced sidewalks would be jammed for blocks, as the surplus of foot traffic was caught between the changing of lights.

CHANGES PROPOSED IN WIDOWS PENSION LAW

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 16 (UP)—Drastic changes in the widows pension law will be asked of Oklahoma county legislators by C. C. Christison county judge, he said today.

Under the present law, the smallest county in the state with perhaps 10,000 people can receive as much aid as with 250,000 population. Christison pointed out that Oklahoma and Tulsa counties, especially, need larger appropriations. He will ask $40,000 for Oklahoma county.

BISHOP OPENS CHURCH MEET

Noted Speakers on Program For Methodists

Pastors and members of Methodist churches in several nearby cities joined the Methodist congregations of this city Wednesday night to form a large gathering at the union meeting held in the auditorium of the new First Methodist Episcopal church preparatory to the opening of a one-day missionary institute of the Wichita Falls district Thursday morning.

Bishop U. V. W. Darlington of Huntington, W. Va., who is in charge of the missionary activities of the Methodist church, South, in Europe, presented a review of the work done thus far among European peoples by his organization, and discussed plans for further extension of their missionary program.

Dr. J. W. Perry of Nashville, Tenn., home mission secretary of the board of missions of the South ern Methodist church, gave a general survey of the missionary work being don by the church of the United States.

Dr. W. J. Johnson, presiding elder of the district, presided at Wednesday night's meeting, which was dismissed with prayer by Rev. Robert F. Bryant of Dallas, missionary secretary for the North Texas conference.

The Floral Heights, Grant Street, Adams Street, and Sibley-Taylor Methodist church of this city were represented by their pastors and large numbers of their members. Several members of the First Methodist church at Electra accompanied their pastor, Rev. H. E. Anderson, to Wichita Falls for the occasion. Rev. Paul Martin, pastor of the Methodist church at Henrietta, and other members of the church, were present, and other visitors from all over the district.

The missionary institute will open Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in the auditorium of the old building at Tenth and Lamar. Speakers for the day will include Rev. R. F. Bryant, Dr. J. W. Perry, Bishop Darlington, and Dr. Johnson. Bishop Darlington will speak at 11 o'clock.

Ladies of the First Methodist church will serve luncheon at noon to the out of town visitors at the institute. The meeting will be continued for the afternoon following the luncheon recess.

Electra Pastor Talks At Lions Luncheon

"Conservation of our time and talent through their application to the worthiest endeavors is just as important as saving our money," declared Rev. C. C. Klingman of Electra in his address on "Thrift" at the weekly meeting of the Wichita Falls Lions club Wednesday noon at the Y. W. C. A.

Rev. Mr. Klingman was the principal speaker on a program given by members of the Electra Lions club, about 20 of whom were guests of the local club. Bob Hall was introduced by G. R. Davidson, president of the Electra club, as chairman of the program committee. Musical numbers were given by Misses Leatrice and Eloise Wofford, and by Honey Boy and Sassafras of the KGKO staff of radio entertainers.

Dr. R. H. Graham presided at the meeting. A singsong was led by E. F. Bohmfalk.

Local Man Endorses Orgatone After Taking Two Bottles, Feels Fine Now

"Anyone can't say enough for Orgatone or praise it too highly, if it does for everybody what it did in my case," said Mr. M. A. Stevent, residing at 3406 Grant street, a prominent and well-known local man, who is employed by the school organization, on the board of education, and while talking with an Orgatone representative recently, he said:

"I was in a very run-down condition and couldn't seem to find anything that would do me much good. I was severely constipated and had heart trouble caused from the gas forming on my stomach and crowding my heart. I didn't have any appetite at all for everything I ate would hurt me so I didn't eat only just when I had to. I was surely worried about my heart for sometimes it would palpitate so fast, it would nearly run away from me.

"Orgatone was advertised so highly and everyone that I had talked with who had taken it got very good results and so I bought a bottle. I am getting wonderful results and will continue taking it as long as it helps me. I now eat anything I want, food does not bother me, and the gas formation is a thing of the past now. My heart does not beat as it did and seems to be perfectly normal. Orgatone has certainly proven remarkable in my case."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific preparation containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Allison's Drug Store, 716 Indiana avenue, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative who is meeting the public daily. Out-of-town customers are being supplied promptly by mail upon receipt of price, one bottle $1.25 or six bottles $6.25.—Adv.

Frank C. Jones, potentate of the A. A. O. N. M. S., paid his annual visit to Maskat temple Wednesday.

Mr. Jones was highly enthusiastic over the work that is being done over the country in maintaining the Shrine hospitals for crippled children.

A total of $1,200,000 is paid into the treasury each year by a subscription of $2 from each Shriner, in addition to various other methods practiced by the Shriners for raising money for maintaining the 15 hospitals, Mr. Jones stated.

BRECK WALKER PASSES AWAY

Oil Millionaire Claimed By Death at Fort Worth

wagon yard and carrying government mail to Ranger, in the next county south. His first job was as a freighter at 50 cents a day.

From the wagon yard he and his brother graduated to the hardware business, and "Breck" bought out his brother and added a stock of general merchandise. Oil was a long way off, but the store prospered, and in 1911 he and C. M. Caldwell formed a partnership that became outstanding in oil development of Stephens county. The partnership included many other developments even after liquidation of the holding company at $1,500,000.

Not a Plunger

Walker was a business man rather than a plunger, but he invested all the funds he was able to in land and especially in leases and royalties. When the oil boom swept over that section of Texas and worked its miracles he owned many leases and owned in fee 3,500 acres close to the town of Breckenridge. At the time of his death he was the largest holder of royalties in Stephens county.

Almost overnight he became princely wealthy.

His big interest was in his home town. In 1907 he had purchased a controlling interest in the First National bank there. His strength as a financier and business man was attested by his successful operation in the panic of the same year and in the depression that followed the world war. Two banks closed their doors. Walker notified the public that he would lend to depositors of the two banks with accounts of $50 and less the full amount of their accounts.

Built Waterworks

When the existence of the town was threatened by lack of a water supply in 1921, Walker and Caldwell built a waterworks at a cost of $1,000,000 and operated it successfully until it was sold several years ago to eastern interests.

He served three years as mayor of Breckenridge. His liberality made possible a large church; he and Caldwell donated land for a high school, and Walker contributed and was responsible for the large Y. M. C. A. building.

He largely was responsible for getting three railroads into his town, which, when oil came, was without a railroad.

When the lean years followed the oil boom Walker put up $400,000 of his private money for the use of the bank, which has always been one of the strongest in that section of the state. He added ranching to his interests several years ago and purchased a large property in Shackelford county. He held stock in a number of banks, controlling three in west Texas. At the time of his death he was chairman of the board of directors of the First National bank of Fort Worth and a director of the American Exchange National bank of Dallas. Walker moved to Fort Worth several years ago, but maintained at Breckenridge a home as well fitted as the one here.

Funeral services will be held at his residence tomorrow.

Sticks to Story

Throughout the more than two and one-half hours of grilling, Sanford Clark stuck to his story, and not once did he vary in substance from the grewsome stories that he had told the jury all day yesterday, under direct examination by Deputy District Attorney Earl Redwine and Special Prosecutor Loyal C. Kelley.

At the close of court tonight, Northcott turned to Sheriff Clem Sweeters and said:

"I suppose you have heard, shiriff, that a man who acts as his own attorney has a fool for a client. But honestly, sheriff, how do you think I did acting as my own lawyer?"

Northcott will continue his cross-examination of young Clark all day tomorrow, he declared tonight as he was being taken back to his cell.

BRANIFF LINE TO OPEN FEB. 1

Operator Lays Plan Before Wichita Leaders

Announcement of his intention to begin passenger air service from Oklahoma City to Dallas by way of Wichita Falls and Fort Worth by Feb. 1 was made Wednesday noon by Paul Braniff, air line operator of Oklahoma City, at a luncheon in the Wichita club dining room with about 25 local business men present.

Orville Bullington, president of the chamber of commerce, presided at the luncheon conference, which had been arranged by a committee appointed last week on the Braniff proposition, consisting of W. N. Bonner, chairman; C. W. Cahoon, and J. Alvin Gardner.

Mr. Braniff stated that his company, which now operates a passenger line between Tulsa and Oklahoma City, has a capital of $74,000, and that he expects to raise $25,000 each in Fort Worth, Dallas and Wichita Falls as additional capital in connection with the extension of two-way daily passenger service to those cities.

With the announcement Tuesday by the Texas Air Transport company of the early opening of an airline to this city and Amarillo, and the plans of the Lone Star Aviation company here to inaugurate passenger service soon between Wichita Falls and San Angelo, the city is promised three new passenger airlines in addition to that now in operation between here and Dallas by the Wichita Falls Air Transport company.

Officials of the Texas Air Transport concern have indicated their intention of visiting Wichita Falls this week for the purpose of completing arrangements for terminal facilities here.

Weeks to Stress Life's Pleasures In Farm Project

The advantages of a movement "back to the soil, but not too much of the soil," were pictured to members of the Optimist club Wednesday noon by Charles Weeks, who last week inaugurated a program of farm colonization on irrigated land west of Call Field.

The ideal held up to the Optimists as being made possible under Mr. Weeks' plan for intensive development of small tracts includes provision of a comfortable living from an acre or two of ground, a normal working period each day, flowers and trees to satisfy the taste for beauty, and time to keep pace with the intellectual and artistic progress of the world. A school for the study of poultry raising and allied subjects, an adequate co-operative marketing system and a community social center also would be included in the working out of Mr. Weeks' plan.

Solon H. Featherston presided at the meeting. A singsong was led by B. D. Sartin.

Rev. Patrick Henry, pastor of the Highland Heights Christian church, formerly a member of the San Antonio Optimist club, was introduced as a new member.

ANSON, Texas, Jan. 16 (AP)—Bill Fritts' trial for the slaying of young Earle W. Hamilton was postponed today because of the prevalence of influenza here.

T. H. Harper, one of the defense witnesses, testified that threats against Bales had been made by Keasler before the shooting.

B. T. Boston and the greater part of the rest of the defense witnesses also testified that threats had been made against Bales by Keasler.

The evidence is expected to be completed Thursday afternoon.

SERVICES HELD FOR MATTHEWS

Flyers Scatter Flowers Over Grave of Comrade

Funeral services for Wilbur C. Matthews, 27, whose death resulted early Monday as a result of an airplane crash near this city Sunday afternoon, were held at the Grant Street Methodist church Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Roy Percival of Howe, Texas, officiated, assisted by Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, pastor.

Active pallbearers were Fred Uhrick, Dudley Rider, H. C. Hostetler, Samuel E. Latham, John P. Jones and R. Eugene Hartline, while A. L. Williams, Carl O. Walkup, Earl W. Estep, Chester Bales, C. C. Hocker, Clarence D. Winters, Wayne Harris, R. E. Thompson and James H. Wyman were honorary pallbearers.

As the funeral cortege reached the grave in Rosemont cemetery, three planes from the local airports glided over the burying ground, scattering flowers over the grave of their late flying associate.

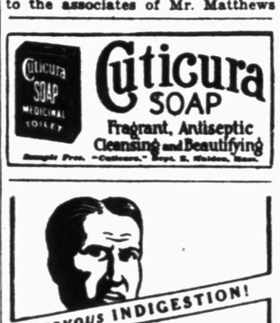

Mrs. Agnes Matthews, wife of the deceased; her sister, Miss Esther Bowles, and her father, E. C. Bowles, expressed their gratitude to the many friends of the family, and to the associates of Mr. Matthews in his recent flying activities, for the kindness shown and the floral tributes offered incident to the death of Mr. Matthews.
