Yank Hurler Nervous at Beginning but Tightens; Ruth et al Busy

YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—As the governor of North Carolina may have remarked to the governor of South Carolina:

"If it isn't one of those damn Yanks, it's another."

"Ole Pete" Alexander found that out today.

The fighting Yankees found out "Ole Pete" too, and knocked him out of the box in the third inning as they rode roughshod and triumphant over the St. Louis Cardinals in the second game of the world series by the score of 9 to 3.

Crowd Smaller

There were about 10,000 fewer fans in the big ball park up in the Bronx today than at the opening game but they didn't miss much in the way of a ball game. From start to finish, the American league champions won as they pleased, and they were eased up and actually clowning their way through the closing innings as though it were an exhibition game with the Cuttybunk Colored Giants.

George Pipgras, a young right-hander who has been one of Miller Huggins' main helps throughout a season which found the Yankees badly crippled as far as pitchers went, started out as nervously as an old maid at a husking bee, but before long he found the red ear and mowed the Cardinals down inning after inning, allowing just four hits.

At St. Louis Sunday

Immediately after the game the two ball clubs were whisked away westward to resume the series on Sunday at Sportsmen's park, St. Louis. The standing is:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Yankees	2	0	1000
Cardinals	0	2	.000

And that, as they say, is hardly the half of it.

Something has happened to the Cardinals.

"Pete" Alexander looked just the same as ever out there this after-

The sons, Nelson and Lewis, have been missing several weeks. Mrs. Winslow inspected a cap found in a suitcase abandoned by Northcott and declared it "certainly looked like Nelson's." She wept when she saw the cap.

KILLER ADMITS ROBBING TAFT HOME OF GEMS

Strange Confession Taken From Man in Jail At Washington

HE TELLS OF MURDERS

Unruly Prisoner Says He Killed Boston Boy and Another

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5. (UP)—An amazing confession of murder and robbery stretching over a 28 year period has been made to capital police by Carl Panzran, 38-year-old seaman, who has been held in district jail since Sept. 4, awaiting grand jury action on a charge of house-breaking.

His conscience apparently troubled by the weight of his crimes, Panzran summoned Maj. William L. Peake, the jail superintendent, and detailed to him how he had murdered a youth, 16, in Philadelphia last summer, killed an 11-year-old boy in Boston in 1920, and robbed the New Haven, Conn., home of Chief Justice William Howard Taft of $40,000 worth of jewels.

Unruly Prisoner

Panzran, who Major Peake describes as the most unruly prisoner he has ever had to deal with, made a written confession to a detective after his verbal confession to the jail superintendent, in which he said his life of crime started when he was 12, and that he has since served 20 years in prison.

His prison terms, Panzran's confession said, have been 11 penitentiaries, three reformatories and 200 jails.

The Philadelphia murder was committed on the property of the Essinger Yacht club, Panzran said. He described, Peake said, how he had choked the boy to death, wrapped the body in a blanket and threw it in the river.

Philadelphia authorities later confirmed this part of the confession when they wired police here that a body answering the description of the victim had been found in the river Aug. 24, and buried without an autopsy.

Had No Motive

Panzran said he had no motive for either murder.

Boston authorities wired district police they had no record of the murder of an 11-year-old boy in 1920.

Panzran said the $40,000 in jewels taken from the Taft home had been disposed of for $15,000. He said the money was used to purchase the yacht "Keister" from James Gordon Bennett, the publisher, at Newport, R. I.

In his hurry to escape from the Taft home after the robbery Panzran said he had injured his head on a broken pane of glass and left behind him a blood-stained hat.

Only last Wednesday night Panzran made a bold attempt to escape from the district jail, but was frustrated by guards.

HOOVER ENTERS SOUTH TODAY

Candidate to Address Tennessee Crowd

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (UP)—The first invasion of the solid South by a Republican presidential candidate in modern political history will start tonight when Herbert Hoover boards a Southern railway special train for a flying trip to Elizabethton, Tenn., to deliver his southern appeal Saturday afternoon.

The special train will leave here at 11 p. m. and is due to return to Washington at 8 p. m. Sunday.

Hoover will be accompanied by Mrs. Hoover, his 21-year-old son Allan, 26 newspapermen and six newsreel photographers.

The speech will be broadcast over a nation-wide radio hookup starting at 3 p. m., Eastern standard time, Saturday, and it is estimated that in addition more than 50,000 persons will hear him at Elizabethton.

Extensive preparations are being made to handle this huge crowd. Special trains are being run to Elizabethton from many points in the South.

The Republican nominee will spend eight hours of Saturday in the Tennessee mountains, motoring, lunching and parading. After his speech at Elizabethton, he will go to Johnson City nearby in the afternoon for a short address and to attend a dinner at the Chamber of Commerce.

Hoover's calling list was not crowded today, so that he could rest in preparation for his southern speech and to give him an opportunity to work on his Boston speech, scheduled for Oct. 15.

CRASH VICTIM IS THOUGHT DYING

Electra Men Are Struck by Switching Train

Special to The Record News

ELECTRA, Texas, Oct. 5.—Physicians at the Parmley-Ogden hospital said late tonight they held no hopes for the recovery of Garvan Hogan, 38, Kemp City farmer, who, with a companion, L. C. Jenkins, was struck by a switching train while crossing the West Front grade crossing in an automobile today. Jenkins, who is 20 years old and unmarried, received lesser injuries in the hand and arm.

Hogan, physicians said, sustained a badly crushed skull, and has no chance to live.

The men were attempting to cross the grade just as a carload of steel was being pushed across the street by a switch engine. Witnesses said that when Hogan, who was driving, saw that he could not escape being hit by the train he turned the car and speeded down the track in the direction the train was coming, hoping to avoid a collision by swerving the car from the track. The two left wheels caught in the rails, however, witnesses said, and the oncoming train struck them after a race of 100 yards.

Hogan is married and has two children.

Moody Only Demo Leader Not Actively For Smith

Washington Observer Finds That Only Question Is "Getting Out Vote" in Texas

Editor's note: Raymond Clapper of the United Press Washington staff is touring the country to report and analyze the presidential campaign from an unprejudiced point of view. Following is his article on the Texas situation.

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Correspondent

DALLAS, Oct. 5.—Contrary to the situation in many states, in Texas Herbert Hoover is strongest in the cities and Gov. Alfred E. Smith in the country. As the population of Texas is three to one rural, regular Democratic leaders believe they can carry the state easily if they can get out the rural voters.

"It is only a question of getting out the vote," Rep. Tom Connally, who has just been promoted to the senate by defeating Senator Mayfield in the recent Texas primaries, told the United Press correspondent here. "I wish they would bring Hoover into the state. He would lose votes. The pro-Hoover forces are making lots of noise but the state is not in danger."

Of the three outstanding Democratic leaders in the state, two—Senator-designate Connally and Senator Morris Sheppard, for years the hero of the Anti-Saloon league—are strongly urging the election of Smith. Gov. Dan Moody is silent but will vote for the ticket. Connally is to make a few speeches in the state and will then place himself at the disposal of the Democratic national committee wherever it thinks it can do Smith the most good.

"I am a dry but I will tell my fellow Democratic that the dry congress will protect prohibition and that they ought to be thinking about the terrible Republican corruption when they are casting their ballots," he said.

Senator Sheppard made his opening speech this week at Wichita Falls and will stump the country. He praised Smith as a friend of humanity and declared that while he had no brief for Tammany hall, the Philadelphia machine back of Hoover was just as bad.

He said every Democrat could

'Give Him a Hand!' Is Wichitans' Way of Treating Hapless Stranger

Stranded Tourist Given Purse After Arrest; Probe Suggested as Morgan Defends Action

When a man is down, give him a hand up.

And Wichita Falls Friday extended friendly hands to John A. Hale, tourist, and in his name set in motion official machinery which is designed to lead to a thorough inquiry into the arrest and fining of motorists in various precincts over the county.

Hale, with his party of 18 men, woman and children and his $5,43, swelled somewhat with donations from kindly Wichitans, was on the open road Friday on his way to Pueblo, Colo., and far from the commotion his arrest had set up in Wichita Falls. He left behind him, however, receipts issued by a precinct officer for the $12.30 fine he paid Thursday night on the charge of operating a truck without a tail light. The fine represented more than two-thirds of the amount of money Hale had available to feed and transport the men, women and children in his party to Colorado.

Investigation Likely

District Attorney Dick Kenley said Friday night he will suggest an investigation of precinct arrests to the grand jury when that body reconvenes for work Tuesday morn-

DAN TELLS 'JOE' TEXAS IS 'SAFE'

FOUR DIAMONDS WORTH $2,800 TAKEN IN RAID

Residences of Judge and City Marshal Are Entered

THREE MEN SOUGHT

Trio Attempts to Sell Loot On Carnival Grounds

Special to The Record News

HASKELL, Texas, Oct. 5.—Barely 24 hours after thugs had knocked the knob off the Wichita Valley depot safe on the eve of the annual Haskell fair, thieves pilfered the homes of two prominent officials while the latter were amusing themselves on the fair grounds Thursday night, Sheriff Al Cousins reported today.

Four diamond rings valued at $2,800 were missing today from the home of Judge W. H. Murchison. The residence of W. E. Welsh, city marshal, was also entered, but pending an definite check by members of the family nothing of great value was reported taken.

Sheriff Cousins left today for Stamford where he indicated he has trailed three men suspected of the robbery. Identity of the men was established, Sheriff Cousins said, by several Haskell residents and members of a carnival troupe at the fair, who said that at various times Thursday night they were approached by persons who had diamonds for sale. Suspicious of the vendors, they all refused to purchase the stones, and, hearing of the robbery Friday morning, they offered their assistance to the sheriff's department.

The two robberies of last night mark the second offensive in knob knocking and burglarizing drive which opened in this sector Wednesday night, when safes in the depots of the Wichita Valley railroad here and at Goree, Seymour and Bemarton was robbed. The hunted gang to a degree repeated exactly battle plans drawn up by another, and perhaps the same ensemble which robbed the safes at Goree, Seymour, and Haskell a year ago last Wednesday night, which, the same as this year, was the eve of the annual Haskell fair.

Safety Council Member Nabs Driver Of Liquor Car in Chase Over City

Police made their second big liquor haul of the week early Friday night when "Speck" Robinson, traffic officer took in tow the driver of a Ford roadster that had been chased over a good portion of Wichita Falls by G. N. Borton. Robinson thought he was arresting a speeder and reckless driver but he changed his mind about charges when 20 half-gallon jars of whiskey were found in the car.

Borton was driving home to dinner when his car was struck by the Ford. He got out to see what damage was done, but before he could turn to the driver of the other car, the offender was departing rapidly. Borton gave chase and the roadster led him from one end of the city to the other, finally ending at Ninth and Brook where he stopped the driver and called police.

Robinson took the prisoner in tow and an examination of the car disclosed two cases of "giggle soup" cached where the "grumble" seat ought to be. The car bore an Oklahoma license, and its driver is being held for federal authorities.

Borton, who is a member of the Wichita Falls Safety council, was complimented by the police for his aid in catching the driver.

Robinson Forced to Change Trains As Engine Explodes; Trainmen Hurt

CLOVIS, N. M., Oct. 5. (AP)—An explosion of the engine boiler on "The Scout," Santa Fe train from Chicago to California, tonight forced Senator Joe Robinson to use a special train from Amarillo to this city to keep a speaking engagement. The Democratic vice presidential nominee's two private cars, which were to have been picked up by the crippled engine at Amarillo were hooked onto another engine which brought the senator into Clovis a little ahead of schedule.

The explosion occurred about 30 miles east of Amarillo.

W. E. Goodloe, division freight and passenger agent for the Santa Fe, who took charge of the senator's special train, said he was advised that the engineer, named Larsen, and the fireman, named Simsons, who manned the engine on "The Scout" had been seriously burned. He said the injured men had been rushed from Panhandle, Texas, where the accident occurred, to a hospital in Amarillo and that their recovery was doubtful.

No one else was reported injured, although three baggage cars were said to have been damaged.

'QUEEN CITY' IS PRIDE OF STATE

Quitaque Shows Signs of Development

QUITAQUE, Texas, Oct. 5.—"The Queen City of the Valley" they call it, and as one drives off the towering cap rock and views the beautiful little city of Quitaque (pronounced Kitty-Kway), basking in the brilliant sunshine of an Indian summer day, the impression is gained that the slogan of the town is well chosen.

Quitaque has many desirable features. It is a clean town and a pretty one. Its buildings are impressive, and it is surrounded by a remarkably fertile country, but none of these assets are greater than the magnificent scenic setting which the early settlers chose for their home. The majestic cap rock forms a crescent about the city. Towering crags and cedar clad hills form a beautiful background for rugged canyons, and a plain of greenwood as beautiful as the famed valley of the Nile. In the distance is seen the outline of Quitaque peak, which was named by the Indians and which was used by surveyors in running lines for the entire county.

Good Trading Point

Quitaque has been a good trading point since the days when G. Tunnell, present merchant of Quitaque, founded the first store there. Settlers pushing westward seeking a better place in which to live, early recognized the value of the magnificent farming lands there. A thriving population moved into the valley, and Quitaque was a good town, even before the announcement was made that the new Denver South Plains railroad would connect Quitaque with the outside world with twin bands of steel. But the development which has come with the railroad is bringing realization to the dream of the pioneers who first made the valley their permanent home.

The recent population of Quitaque is fully 1,500 persons. The scholastic enrollment of the Quitaque public schools exceeds 550 children. There has been a heavy increase during the past year, and this increase is continuing as more and more farmers locate in the valley, and as more business men move into the town. Three thousand acres of virgin land have already been plowed this year, and there remains still other thousands of acres yet awaiting cultivation. In this year when crops are short in many sections of Texas, it is refreshing to enter Quitaque valley and view the bounteous yield which is awaiting the crop gatherer there now. Great fields of heavily laden cotton, and almost unbelievably well filled heads of maize are seen on every hand. Gardens and truck patches have made unusually abundant yields during the present year, and livestock and poultry literally teem upon all the farms.

New Railroad Aids

This agricultural prosperity and the coming of the new railroad have brought great development to Quitaque. G. H. Russell, editor of the Quitaque Post, has made a survey of the development, which shows $500,000 of new building just completed and under construction. This building includes new residences, business houses, schools, a new gin, a $60,000 high school building, a new sewerage system and farm homes. Quitaque has just solved its water problem and has discovered a splendid water strata underlying a section adjacent to the town. The well bored to a shallow depth produces 300 gallons of pure water per minute each, and an automatic electric pumping system keeps the town reservoirs filled at all times.

The Denver road is now handling freight shipments to Quitaque in car lots. The new depot has been completed, and it is expected that a station agent will be on the ground and regular service will be inaugurated during the next 30 days. Quitaque merechants expect that 10,000 bales of cotton will be ginned in Quitaque this season, and the new railroad is certain to enjoy a healthy business from the start.

While cotton and grain sorghums constitute the principal crops of the Quitaque valley, fine Hereford cattle are produced in quantities. Recently Quitaque Herefords were produced of such great size that they had to be shipped to northern markets where the succulent "K-C" steaks are highly prized. One hundred and ten head averaged 1,500 to 1,800 pounds each.

Quitaque was the scene of some great engineering when the new railroad was built. It is near Quitaque that the Denver was forced to construct two tunnels in order to climb the cap rock. Great cuts and horseshoe curves make the railway trip one which furnishes thrills to the passengers.

Excellent Schools

Quitaque is a town of education and religion. The Quitaque schools have long been recognized for the excellence of instruction offered. Splendid buildings house the schools and modern equipment is provided for high class instructors. The churches of the town are modern and active. This has given Quitaque an unusually high type of citizenship and the caliber of the citizens is reflected in the town they have built. A chamber of commerce functions there with C. C. Arthur as president. Steps are now under way to employ a full-time secretary for the organization. W. E. Lowe is another energetic young business man of the town. O. W. Stroup, J. B. Russell, Olin Stark, P. O. Woods and Amos Parsons are others who are active in civic development of the town and country, and they are only a few of the energetic and progressive men who are building at Quitaque a "Queen City" which is attracting the admiration of the entire state.

WORKS HARD IN THE FIELD

Relies Upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rankin, Illinois.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a tonic before and after my first child was born six years ago. Then when my second child came and I felt weak and rundown, I took it again. I am still taking it and I am feeling better. My mother used it for herself when I was small and always got good results. She still takes it. I do all kinds of heavy work, including my housework and I also help in the field. I recommend the Vegetable Compound and I am willing to answer any letters."—Mrs. Bert Osmeland, Route 2, Rankin, Illinois.

War Veteran, Protestant and Mason, Tells Why He Opposes Herbert Hoover

Editor, The Record News: Former Governor Colquitt in his speech Thursday night reflected on the patriotism of Catholics and Jews in George Washington's time. I have just seen a letter from Col. L. L. Respectfully, Jackson, Miss.

At this time there are lots of letters being written for and against the two nominees of the major political parties, Smith and Hoover. In my section of the country, the South, a few religious bigots and intolerants are against Governor Smith because he is a Catholic. They are hiding behind a smoke screen and saying it is because he, Smith, is wet. In fact, Governor Smith is not wet, but he is a State's Right Democrat, and believes in each state deciding its liquor question. This is the doctrine of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland, and Woodrow Wilson. If you sound these religious bigots out, 90 per cent of them will knowledge they are against Governor Smith because he is a Catholic, and not because he thinks each state should decide its own liquor problems.

I wish to state that I am a Protestant and Master Mason, and have been since I reached legal age, and I am for Smith. The Catholic church was my church and your church for 1,500 years. Some of the greatest men in the world have been Catholics. When Carroll, a Catholic, signed the Declaration of Independence, we did not cry, "Stop! you are a Catholic." When LaFayette, a Catholic, fitted out a regiment at his own expense in France, and come to America and fought beside Washington for our independence we did not cry, "Go back, LaFayette, you are a Catholic." We welcomed Count Pulaski, Rochambeau and De Kalb, all Catholics, during the Revolutionary war. Does the fact that the Star Spangled Banner was written by a Catholic keep the words from being sweet? The songs, Dixie and My Bonny Blue Flag, were written by Catholics. General Beauregard and Admiral Ralph Semmes were Catholics, but no one fought harder for the South, while on the other hand Rosecrans and Thomas, who were Catholics fought for the North during the Civil war. During the World war, Marshal Foch, a Catholic, was commander of the allied armies.

Some people say "Catholics all vote together." This is not true. France and Mexico, both over 90 per cent Catholic, have Protestants and Masons as presidents.

I enlisted in the army April 7, 1917, the day after war was declared, and was in the army until after the armistice was signed. When we left our homes and loved ones, our people escorted us to the trains with brass bands, and there, with tears in our eyes, we told our mothers, wives, sweethearts goodbye, and they with prayers on their lips, bade us Godspeed to stop the murderous Hun. They told us there would be nothing too good for us when we returned. We fought for 18 months on foreign soil to make "the world safe for democracy." We left many of our buddies sleeping in Flanders' snow-clad fields never to return. Over there we had Protestants and Catholics, Gentiles and Jews, but there were no Quakers there. It makes my blood run hot when I think of being at Camp Mills, Long Island, N. Y., and seeing a large group of Quakers sent home, they being conscientious objectors and opposed to war for any cause whatsoever. We had a man in our outfit who was a low-grade man and under indictment when he was drafted. When we were getting our final examinations before going overseas, this man claimed there was no need to give him a physical examination. The medical officer asked why, and he said, "Because I am a Quaker and a conscientious objector." The medical officer got his service record and said, "Why you are a Baptist." He said, "I have changed since I have been up here." If you have any doubt as to the patriotism of the Catholics of this country, by writing to the adjutant general you will find that approximately 70 per cent of the volunteer army during the World war was Catholic.

I am not a religious bigot or intolerant, and Hoover being a Quaker would not keep me from voting for him secretary of state, state auditor or attorney general, but the president of the United States is commander in chief of our army and navy, and to have a Quaker who is opposed to war for any cause whatsoever would be a dangerous thing. I am of the opinion that the American flag could be insulted, knocked down and trampled under foot, and he would be opposed to war. The Quakers have all the protection of our flag, but they have never defended it from Revolutionary war to World war.

The sergeant major of my regiment was a Catholic and a Knights of Columbus. He died with his head in my lap. His last words, "Buddy, I won't be with you to help break the Hindenburg line, but you do your part and mine too."

When I came back from France I was unanimously elected first post commander of the American Legion post at Mayfield, Ky. I have been associated with ex-service men ever since, and I am of the opinion that 85 per cent of the World war veterans will not vote for a Quaker for commander in chief of the army and navy, regardless of their past political affiliations. I think it would be a slap in the face of every World war veteran to elect a Quaker, a man whose sect and religious cult is opposed to war from any cause whatsoever, commander in chief of the American army and navy.

I am yours for a patriotic country.

Salt From Rotterdam Swamps Galveston Port

GALVESTON, Oct. 5. (AP)—Coming in quantities that necessitate special freight trains to ship it to the interior, salt cake is imported into Galveston from Rotterdam and other European continental ports.

This commidity is used in the manufacture of glass, pulp boards, and other items and has been received in large lots during the past season. One cargo was about 2,000 tons and was sufficient to load 80 large railroad freight cars.

FLAGS COVER LEGION CITY

San Antonio Flaunts Gay Pennants

SAN ANTONIO Texas, Oct. 5. (UP)—In carrying out the most elaborate scheme of decoration ever planned for an American Legion convention, workmen are busy stringing pennants, hanging flags and draping telephone and electric poles along approximately 60 city blocks in San Antonio, Texas. Nearly every business house in the down town district is decorating as never before, and when the 1928 convention opens Monday, San Antonio, city of conventions, will be more gaily attired than ever before in its history.

By day San Antonio will be vivid with its red, white and blue pennants, flags of all the allied nations and legion emblems, and by night it will glow with brilliant street lights. The skyline will be traced in gay colors as many of San Antonio's skyscrapers will be outlined in lights.

The legionaires are being greeted at the railroad stations with welcome banners and huge American flags. The streets from the station to the downtown district are continuously decorated in their honor. The hotels are flying flags, flaunting banners, pennants and streamers, welcoming their guests.

Merchants Co-operate

Approximately 30,000 feet of pennants, making a continuous overhead canopy, are being used on three main streets alone. All the telephone, trolley and electric light poles throughout the downtown section and along streets from the stations to the business district, are draped with American and Texas flags. In the center of the street flags of the allied nations are suspended from all of the wires running across the streets. It is estimated that more than 3,000 flags are being used in this manner.

Never in the history of the city have local business houses and firms been as lavish in their individual decorations. But not all the festivity and gaiety is confined to the down town sections. Community centers in the residential sections are gay for the occasion, and vast numbers of the residences will be flying the American flag.

In the windows of many will be seen the service flags whose stars tell the family's war record.

More than 50,000 additional electric lights will be used to illuminate the city streets at night. Another 50,000 will outline nine of San Antonio's most prominent buildings. The effect will be a skyline developed in red, white and blue, or combinations of orange and red, red and green, and other colors.

Not only are the exteriors of the buildings being decorated but many merchants are devising novel displays in their windows and in their stores to carry out the spirit of the convention. The large department stores are giving special attention to their windows.

The huge municipal auditorium where the convention sessions will be held is being decorated inside and out with flags, banners, emblems and pennants. It will be brilliantly lighted at night.

GINS READY TO GO

Special to The Record News.

LITTLEFIELD, Texas, Oct. 5.—The gins here are now all ready for the 1928 crop of cotton. This cotton is beginning to come in, and will all mature earlier than last year. The staple shows up considerably beter than last year. It is estimated that this section will gin around 15,000 bales.

Village Mayor Expresses Deep Regret Over 'Ritual Murder' Rumor Query

NEW YORK, Oct. 5. (AP)—Mayor W. Gilbert Hawes of Massena, N. Y., has expressed his "deep and sincere" regret over the questioning of a rabbi concerning a "ritual murder" rumor.

The mayor's letter was made public by Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish congress, after a hearing on the case in Albany ordered by Governor Smith. Louis Marshall, president of the American Jewish committee, had demanded that Mayor Hawes either apologize or resign.

The incident developed over the questioning at police headquarters of Rabbi Berel Brennglass after the disappearance of four-year-old Barbara Griffith. The child later was found in a nearby woods unharmed.

The rabbi was questioned by Corporal McCann of the state police, whose apology Dr. Wise also made public. Mr. Marshall charged that Mayor Hawes had "arranged" for the questioning.

LEGION NOT IN POLITICS

Sole Intent Is Patriotic Duty, Says Adjutant

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 5. (US)—The American Legion is vitally interested in patriotic policies, but not in party politics, James F. Barton, national adjutant of the legion, said today. He is here for the tenth annual convention of the legion which opens here next week.

While admitting that he knows nothing about the political situation in the South, Adjutant Barton said that in the eastern and northern states, "where bootlegging and politics go hand in hand," the people are coming under the rule of a coarse thumb—not that of a king, but of the ruthless, selfish politician.

"The legion must combat this menace," he said, "and the veterans will be asked next week to take an active part in politics, that is, every legionnaire will be asked not only to go to the polls and vote, but to take an interest in the nomination of candidates before election.

"They will also be asked to continue their interest in the men in office and watch all public officials to see that their campaign pledges are kept."

San Antonio is preparing for the reception of thousands of veterans of the world war.

Martin County Poultry Raisers Want Hatchery

Special to The Record News.

STANTON, Texas, Oct. 5.—Martin county poultrymen are anxious for a hatchery to be installed at Stanton. A considerable number of the poultry producers of the county sold all their cocks and have been producing infertile eggs for the past three months. They declare that the loss from fertile eggs during late spring, summer and early fall months is tremendous and from 25 to 30 per cent and sometimes 50 per cent loss had been reported on fertile eggs shipped short distances to market.

Prince Talks to Natives In Their Own Tongue

NAIROBI, Oct. 5. (UP)—The Prince of Wales amazed natives here today by addressing them in their own tongue when he was presented and a photograph of himself was taken with a number of chiefs. The prince spoke in the native Kishwahili tongue, which he had recently studied en route here. The Duke of Gloucester will start on his first big game hunt Friday.

Held As Wife Slayer

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 5. (UP)—Aaron Johnson, a farmer of near Groerton, 40 miles south of here, was held by police today in connection with the death of his wife, whose body was found last night in a chicken house on their farm.

Mrs. Johnson's head had been crushed.

EDUCATORS TO SOLVE CRIME

Courts Fail in Mission, Judge Says

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 5 (UP)—In the laboratories of educators and scientists and not in the court rooms or legislative halls, will be solved the problem of crime and delinquency, Judge Charles W. Hoffman, of the Cincinnati juvenile court and marital relations, told the national conference of juvenile agencies here late today.

"It was a common belief that delinquency could be prevented and cured by a direct method which included force, admonition, threats and the infliction of pain, or punishment in the form of whipping or imprisonment in penal and semi-penal institutions. The indirect scientific method of dealing with the behavior of children was unknown, or if known, was never applied," Judge Hoffman said.

Judge Hoffman has studied the broken home for years and has listened to 15,000 divorce cases. The ranks of delinquents and criminals are recruited from those who in their school days were known as truant, retarded, lazy, indifferent or incorrigible children, is his belief. And in his work, he has found that retardation of a child, which is an early sign of maladjustment, may be traced to faulty home conditions.

At the bottom of much of the delinquency is the child's acceptance of the role of inferiority when he is unable to keep up with his school mates due to a recent illness, malnutrition, want of sleep, dissension and strife of parents and kin in the home.

"A child debased in its own mind is on the way to a pauper, a delinquent or a criminal," he continued. "A child subjected to unreasonable censure, upbraidings and possible punishment, becomes insensitive to the respect of others; will not conform to conventional standards of the home, school or community."

Within three decades culture and environment changes have by necessity changed our modes of behavior. Our children today hear more and read more about prize fights, murder trials, divorce cases, prohibition raids, bandits and banditry than of those things that make for peace, order, law morality, religion and social progress, Judge Hoffman said.

Murder Charge Filed In Palestine Slaying

PALESTINE, Texas, Oct. 5 (UP)—No date has been set for the examining trial of Reagan Pettiette, 25, for the murder of Bill Abbie in a cornfield near Bethel, a small community near Palestine, late Wednesday.

Formal charges were filed in Justice W. H. Black's court today.

Now, Little Miss, Let's See You Do This

Beards Protect Males From Aping Girls

CHICAGO, Oct. 5. (UP)—Just as boys will be boys, men will be men, and there will be no mistaking of them in the near future.

Tired of being mistaken for the shingled-haired boyishly-bobbed weaker sex, the red-blooded he-men are going back to granddaddy's days and soon will be growing moustaches, Horace Greely fringes, sharp-pointed goatees and even full beards of the Smith Brothers' size.

This was the prediction made today by Secretary Joseph Byrne of New York at the convention of the National Beauty and Barber Supply Dealers' association.

"Men," he said, "have grown weary of being aped by the women. Their haircuts, sensible shoes, sunburned make-ups, soft shirts, tailored clothes, felt hats, hose designs and athletic figures, all have been copied by the ladies.

"Anticipating the day which is not more than 50 years away when, at the present rate of imitation, a microscope will be necessary to tell the difference between the sexes, the man of today is going in for a beard in self defense, and defying his woman folks to imitate him."

Burnsides and military moustaches, he said, already have made their appearance and he predicted that within 18 months, hirsute appendages of all descriptions would be seen on the faces of men.

"Besides accentuatin the sex of man," Byrnes continued, "a neat moustache or beard adds considerably to one's masculine attractiveness. A carefully pruned goatee will lend a million dollar appearance to a man who is out at the knees, and there is no denying the luxe of a moustache a la Kaiser.

"Douglas Fairbanks would not be so attractive without his neatly-trimmed lip adornment and imagine former Secretary of State Hughes without his chin whiskers."

Should Byrne's prediction be fulfilled, men would only have to look with scorn upon the bearded lady in the circus sideshows and in that he would have the approval of even the modern masculine women.

Byrd Explorers to Hear Radio News

BOSTON, Oct. 5 (UP)—Arrangements for a special weekly broadcast to Commander Richard E. Byrd and his companions on the antarctic expedition have been completed by the Westinghouse radio station, officials of the company announced tonight.

The broadcast, which will be inaugurated on Nov. 17, will follow the far north broadcasts late every Saturday night. Personal messages from relatives and friends of the members of the expedition will compose the larger part of the broadcast, but a special musical program will be included as well in each broadcast, Westinghouse officials said.

Radio stations participating in the weekly boradcast are WBZ, at Springfield, Mass.; WBZA, at Boston, KDKA at Pittsburgh and KYW at Chicago.

NEW ACTIVITIES AT GRANDFIELD

School Adds Variety to Student Work

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Oct. 5.—Many new and varied activities are being introduced in Grandfield high school for the first time this year, according to Mrs. Margaretta B. Netzel, principal.

The activity period of from 10 to 10:30 a. m. will be set aside every Tuesday for the meeting of clubs and organizations. The two dramatic clubs for senior high and junior high students, F. F. O's, and journalism club will meet during this period. The journalism group will also meet on Wednesday. Other clubs under consideration to be formed later are English, commercial, penmanship and domestic science clubs.

Boys' glee club practice will be held every Monday and Wednesday. The Girls' glee club will meet Friday at activity period and on Monday and Wednesday at 3:30.

All physical training classes will meet during study periods instead of activity periods as in former years.

The assembly period will be held on Thursday during the activity period. All clubs, organizations and classes will be expected to present some type of entertainment for chapel at least once or twice during the school term, Mrs. Netzel stated.

The adolescent is the "joiner." Sufficient proof of this is found in the many secret societies, cliques and organizations to be found among students of the high school age. The school club offers a fine opportunity for the beneficial capitalization of one of the strongest urges in the adolescent student, Mrs. Netzel said.

Prisoners of War Fail to Come Back

BERLIN, Oct. 5 (US)—An army of 125,000 German war prisoners captured by various countries during the world war has never returned to the Fatherland, according to figures given out today at the conventions of the two German leagues of former war prisoners.

The leagues allege that many of the prisoners are forcibly retained in foreign countries, especially those who were compelled to take service in the French Foreign legion and those in Siberia.

Many of the victims, it was said, are bound to the land in Siberia by debt, like peons.

Avalanche May Sweep French Mountain Away

GENEVA, Oct. 5 (UP)—Geologists said today that the present avalanche which swept away three mountain peaks in the Montarbino district probably is only the beginning of a general collapse of the mountain region. A lare lake formed by the collapse was exerting tremendous pressure on the fallen earth and it was believed evacuation orders would be given in near by villages.

LIONS ELECT

FREDERICK, Okla., Oct. 5.—After balloting twice with a tie each time at last Thursday's luncheon the names of the three candidates were again submitted at the Lions club luncheon Thursday noon of this week when Will J. Dickson was declared elected second vice president over Charles McConnell and J. C Johnson.

DALLAS WATER CONTAMINATED

Officials Seek to Prevent Sewage in Lake

DALLAS, Oct. 5. (AP)—Informed by a state sanitary engineer that 1,500,000 gallons of raw sewage is flowing each day into Lake Dallas, from which the city gets its water supply, city officials and citizens are attempting to devise methods whereby North Texas towns could be stopped from dumping sewage into streams which feed the lake.

V. M. Ehlers, Austin, state sanitary engineer, told members of the Lake Dallas committee in a closed conference that 70 North Texas towns were pouring 1,500,000 gallons of raw sewage into Lake Dallas every day. He said that according to his present estimate, 1.40 per cent of sewage could be found in every glass of Lake Dallas water.

Firm at Littlefield To Feed 15,000 Sheep

LITTLEFIELD, Texas, Oct. 5.—The firm of Boswell-Kahn and Wandle of Fort Worth, have just leased from the city five acres of land along the railroad east of the city wells, on which they expect to feed out between 15,000 and 20,000 sheep. They will send in 5,000 sheep at a time and replace them with another 5,000 just as soon as these are shipped out. Sheds and runways have been built, with other improvements, at an expense of around $5,000. Three carloads of hogs have also been received here for fattening purposes. This provides ready market for the large grain crop grown here this year.

Electra Charity Drive Succeeds

COLEMAN, Texas, Oct. 5. (AP)—H. A. Halbert, the Luther Burbank of West Texas' died without seeing his latest experiment.

R. S. Johnson, Coleman building contractor, recently displayed a jar of English walnuts grown on a Spanish walnut tree in his backyard. The nuts were larger than imported walnuts but the shell was thicker.

The tree was one of the last budded by Halbert and is two years old.

Husbands Must Be Taken Just as They Are, Faults and All, Is Advice

Wise Observations on the Nature of Husbands—How the Wife Who Is a Quitter May Be Made to Return to Her Husband—When Flight Is the Only Remedy.

Dear Miss Dix: I have been married 16 years to a very intelligent and successful man. He is generous, kind and devoted to me, but I am nothing but a plaything to him. He shuts me entirely out of his intellectual life and takes no interest in my serious pursuits. In fact, it bores him when I try to talk to him about the things that I really think about myself. He will never change. Can I change myself?

—PLAYTHING.

Answer: The only hope for you is to acquire that philosophy that all women must learn after marriage, unless they find matrimony a total loss. And that consists in making up their minds to take their husbands as they are, individual eccentricities of temperament, faults and all, included, and make the best of them.

First of all, write this down in your little book that men and women very rarely look at marriage from the same angle, or desire the same thing from the ones they marry. Nearly all women marry to get companionship. They look forward to being all-in-all to their husbands, to sharing in their husband's interests and plans and thoughts.

But very few men really want a wife to be a companion. They want a wife who will make them comfortable and amuse them. Of course, men won't admit this, but if the average man were to put into two words his definition of a perfect wife it would be a combination cook and toy.

Very few men want to discuss anything seriously with a woman, even with their own wives, and that is why the fluffy-headed little flappers and vamps and the gold-diggers and the baby dolls and the women who are frankly playthings cannot only marry all around the clever, intellectual women, but can snare away the husbands of sober-minded, helpful wives from them.

Nor is this quite as silly as it sounds. Every man who amounts to anything gives to his work every bit of intelligence, every ounce of brain power that is in him, and when he comes home at night he is mentally fagged out. His mind needs rest and change, and he doesn't want to exert it by holding intellectual conversations with his wife, or be forced to rally all of his mental faculties again to discuss abstruse subjects.

He wants idle, frivolous, amusing gossip instead of a discussion of the Einstein theory. And if he doesn't want to talk about his work, it isn't that he doesn't want his wife to know what he is doing, or that he doesn't think her capable of understanding the ramifications of his business. It is just because he doesn't want to go over again all of the anxieties and annoyances of the day. He wants to forget them and give his taut nerves a chance to relax.

Also, while a wife desires to enter into her husband's interests, and to know what he thinks, not one man in 10,000 ever wants to know what a woman thinks or has any interest in her interests.

The first wisdom tooth a woman ever cuts, she cuts on the hard fact that there is no quicker way to drive a man away than to talk to him about herself. The minute she begins to vivisect her emotions and her complexes and reactions, he seizes his hat and departs, never to return.

So, my dear lady, you will just have to accept the fact that you are more interested in your husband than he is in you, and that if he wants to make a plaything of you, your cue is to be a toy which will always have some new and alluring angle.

Don't forget the story of Scheherazade, who kept her own head and held her husband by telling him a story that entertained and amused him, and that was never finished. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix: Six years ago I married a young girl, 20 years my junior, and we were ideally happy until after our baby came. But my wife never treated the child as a mother should, and this state of affairs caused many quarrels that finally ended in divorce, my wife leaving me, although I have always been a model husband and a splendid provider.

My wife now says that she intends to come back and remarry me some time, but when I try to get her to say when, she keeps putting me off, saying she is not ready yet. I make a very generous allowance for her and the child's support. I still love my wife. I long for a home and would do anything to have my child. Is there anything I can do to hasten my wife's return to me?

—PERPLEXED HUSBAND.

Answer: The remedy is in your own hands. All you have to do is to stop the alimony, and your wife will come back to you rather than go to work and support herself. Except for the child, you would be well rid of a woman who has so little sense of her duty as a wife and mother, and who evidently has no real affection for you.

Your wife belongs to that large class of women who regard matrimony as a graft, and who, as soon as they are called upon to give as well as take in married life, quit cold, and rush to the divorce courts with some trumped-up charge against their husbands and thereafter live in ease and luxury on the alimony that the poor men are forced to pay them.

It is right and just that a woman who has given the best years of her life to her husband, and in helping him build up his business, should receive alimony if he deserts her and is untrue to her and forces her to leave her home. But in those cases where the wife is a quitter, and where she never tries to do her duty, it is unjust that a man should have to continue supporting her after she leaves him. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix: I have been married six weeks and am sick and tired of my wife already. She won't get my breakfast in the morning, and when I come home for dinner I have to cook it. She is lazy and slovenly and jealous, and opens my letters and reads them, but when I tell her I am going to leave her she puts her arms around my neck, and cries like a baby. What would you do?

—AN UNHAPPY HUSBAND.

Answer: Well, if I had an able-bodied young wife and she wouldn't cook my meals, nor keep the house clean, nor make herself neat and attractive, I would beat it while the going was good.

—DOROTHY DIX.

MORRISON NEW LABOR LEADER

English Party Elects Woman Vice Chairman

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Oct. 5. (UP)—Herbert Morrison, of London, was elected chairman of the labor party for 1929 at the closing sessions of the party conference tonight.

For the first time in history, a woman, Susan Larence, parliamentary member, was chosen vice chairman.

Former Chancellor of the Exchequer, Philip Snowden, M. P., told the conference today that the finance policy must be based on a system of raising revenue from profits, from large incomes, from accumulated wealth and from sources of wealth socially created.

He said that by eliminating administrative waste and economizing on armaments, larger sums would be available for the government to use for social expenditure. Snowden opposed nationalization of banks but said the Bank of England should be controlled by a public corporation consisting of representatives from the treasury, board of trade, industry, labor and cooperative groups.

Red Cross Hurricane Fund Needs $700,000

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5. (UP)—The Red Cross West Indies hurricane relief fund tonight totaled $4,308,173. Approximately $700,000 more is needed to complete the minimum $5,000,000 fund asked by the Red Cross for relief of storm sufferers in Florida and West Indian islands.

Iowa Voters Demand Hoover Answer Charge

DES MOINES, Oct. 5. (UP)—Demand that Herbert Hoover comment on the statement of Senator Smith W. Brookhart that the presidential nominee attempted to prevent President Coolidge from vetoing the McNary-Haugen bill, was made today by the Iowa Agricultural Equality Voters league.

MOODY STAYING OUT OF BATTLE

Republicans Wage Strong Fight for Votes

do more to aid the cause of prohibition by staying in the Democratic party than by going elsewhere.

Sheppard met the situation boldly but he promptly drew an attack from the state W. C. T. U., which happened to be in session at the same time. Those ladies who have been his chief support in politics for years adopted a resolution endorsing Hoover and voted to send a letter to Sheppard asking him to come to the defense of the 18th amendment or else quit the platform and "not further oppose the moral forces in this state."

That is a revolutionary thing to happen to Sheppard. The spectacle of this ardent dry supporting the wet Tammany presidential candidate is provoking much criticism from dry Democrats.

The third state Democratic leader, Governor Moody, has not followed the outspoken course of Sheppard and Connally. While he has said he will support the ticket, he has refused requests of the national committee and the Texas national committeeman to speak either here or outside the state. He is known to oppose Smith at heart. His father-in-law, George Paxton, has signed a pledge to vote for Hoover, B. D. Sartin of the Anti-Smith Democratic organization, told the United Press.

Moody is said by some to be planning to oppose Sheppard for the senate two years hence and if he does he will seek to use Sheppard's present support of Smith against him, it is believed here.

Most good judges of Texas politics are betting on Smith but are predicting Hoover will get the largest vote any Republican ever received in Texas. Democrats count the 20 electoral vote of Texas as necessary if Smith is to win. For that reason the regular organization here is for the first time in a presidential campaign throwing everything it has into the fight. It is handicapped not only by the refusal of the church forces to accept Smith but by very practical physical obstacles. Voters must pay a poll tax in person by Feb. 1 preceding election to be eligible to vote. Democrats did not anticipate such a hot fight and did not get as many voters to qualify as they would otherwise have done. Pro-Hoover forces also suffer from the same situation and the losses to each side may cancel each other, but no one knows.

The size of the state and its sparce population offer other difficulties. The Hoover forces are strongest in the city, where they can get their people together. But the regular Democrats have to contend with a state which is so large that all of the other nine southern states could be laid down inside of it and still have room for Rhode Island. It takes more than 24 hours to cross the state. Cut Texas out of a map of the United States and stick a pin in the northwest corner of the panhandle, which incidentally could put the whole state of Pennsylvania to bed inside of it, and swing the cutout around the map and Texas will reach the Pacific and Atlantic oceans and stick far into Canada.

Spread out thinly over this tremendous empire is a population which averages less than 20 to the square mile as against 320 or so for New York state. The regular Democrats will be lucky if by election time some of their more isolated sections know Smith has been nominated.

The bolters are handicapped by the fact that neither candidate's name appears on the ballot. Ignorant voters are apt in many cases to mark their ballots as usual for this reason.

Just to double rivet the regular organization, the party leaders made an attempt recently to force all state candidates to sign an ironclad pledge to support Smith. This was designed partly to hold local candidates in line. But Governor Moody balked and refused to sign the pledge until he and several advisors had revised it into more general terms.

Shouting in Texas

Whispering has disappeared because they are shouting out loud here. A cartoon is being widely circulated showing Smith with a stein of beer in his hand leaing against a saloon labelled "I am against the saloon." Some are saying negro teachers are placed over white children in New York schools. The fact that New York has negro policemen in some sections is used against Smith. Regular Democrats reply in kind. They also charge the Hoover forces are using the religious argument against Smith.

"It is not enough for Hoover to deny use of religious propaganda in the north and east where it will do him harm, and reap the benefits of such methods in localities where it will help him!" said Albert Sydney Johnson, secretary of the state Democratic executive committee.

"He cannot dodge the responsibility of attacks made upon the Catholic church in printed matter sent out by anti-Smith workers here and by speakers who are adequately financed from the same source."

Life-long political friendships are being broken in the most bitter presidential campaign Texas has seen since reconstruction days.

Except in the McKinley-Bryan contest of 1896, when gold Democrats bolted and ran up McKinley's vote to the largest any Republican presidential candidate has ever received in Texas, the Democrats have never fought a hard presidential fight.

Always Democratic

Texas always has been Democratic. Often no complete count of presidential ballots is made. The state fight is decided in the primary. Seldom are state candidates put up by the Republican party and the Democrats do not even open up campaign headquarters in ordinary presidential elections. This year, when the nomination of Herbert Hoover against Gov. Alfred E. Smith threatened a real fight in the state, the Democrats had to hunt up precedents to learn whether the national committeeman or the state chairman should take charge of the campaign headquarters.

To appreciate the unprecedented conditions which this campaign has created and the consternation which regular Democrats feel at the thought that the 20 electoral votes of Texas may be in doubt this year, it must be born in mind the political affairs of this state have been held secretly in the hands of a Democratic party organization which has had all the clannishness and intense loyalty of a fraternal order. Leaders have had their differences and bitter ones, too, and factions have been strong, but it all has been within the party.

The Democratic primary ballot bears a pledge which binds all who votes to support the nominee of the primary in the general election. In this campaign bolters have been thrown off the state political committees and this action has been sustained by the courts, in language strongly upholding the principle of party loyalty, which has been the foundation of Texas politics since the civil war. When a man bolts the Democratic party in Texas it is like turning on his lodge and he is thereafter regarded by the ardent regulars somewhat as one who had been excommunicated for turning infidel.

However, some of the most outstanding persons in Texas are doing it this year—men like Alvin Moody, who was on the Democratic state committee. Some of the old line Democratic leaders are fearful this means the beginning of a new political grouping in the state.

That is frankly what the Republicans are hoping to work out of it. They want to create a Republican party in Texas which will be respected and influential. R. B. Creager, a well-to-do business man of Brownsville, began this eight years ago through the assistance of President Harding, his intimate friend. Creager took charge of patronage distribution in the state and as Republican national committeeman has developed his party into a healthy, growing organization.

If Hoover wins, Creager's influence is likely to increase, since he was among the first Republican leaders to declare for Hoover in the pre-convention fight. Only Creager's bitter feud with Rep. Harry Wurzbach, the third Republican Texas has elected to congress since its admission in 1845 and the only one to get more than two terms, has prevented the party organization from growing more rapidly. Their feeling is so bitter that they often denounce each other in public statements. Wurzbach resents Creager's control of federal patronage.

Ministers For Hoover

Most of the ministers are fighting for Hoover. These include the leaders of the Baptist and Methodist churches, which almost control Texas politics when they are united upon a single issue. Rev. George W. Truett, one of the most influential Baptist churchmen in the southwest, is influencing many voters in favor of Smith. Rev. H. D. Knickerbocker, Little Rock, Ark., a leading Methodist, is swaying members of his denomination toward Hoover. Rev. John Roach Straton has been in the state.

Republicans have been trying to get Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt to speak here. The Texas Anti-Saloon league is routing preachers all over the state in its fight to line up the church vote solidly for Hoover and it is this situation which frankly worries the regular Democrats who fear not only the effect in this campaign but the possibility of having to explain their support to these elements in future state primaries.

Deny Religious Issue

Pro-Hoover leaders deny the religious issue is the chief factor influencing this vote.

"I'm opposed to Smith only on prohibition," declared Alvin S. Moody, president of the anti-Smith Democrats of Texas, and not to be confused with Gov. Dan Moody. "If Senator Walsh had been the nominee he would have done nothing. It is not religion, it is prohibition we are fighting Smith on."

Leonard Withington, secretary of the state Republican executive committee, told the United Press:

"The issue here is prohibition. The religious issue is not nearly so much the actual issue that it appears on the surface."

B. D. "Bone-Dry" Sartin, manager of the anti-Smith Democratic headquarters here, said to the United Press:

"I think Smith would actually be weaker here is he were a Protestant because lots of people who would otherwise be against him on prohibition are leaning over backwards and supporting him because they don't want to be accused of bigotry. The South is the most tolerant section of the United States. I used to have two or three Roman Catholic room-mates."

Withington said his confidential secretary was a Roman Catholic and that the vice chairman of the Republican Hoover organization was J. F. Lucey, a Catholic oil man, who, however, is out of the state because of illness.

Officers said it was probable that he was a member of a party of three German aliens, two of whom were caught at a village 40 miles from here Tuesday, admitting they swam the Rio Grande near Eagle Pass.

SOUND 'BEAMS' ARE SUCCESS

Invention Will Be Aid to Aviation

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 5. (UP)—Science today demonstrated for the first time the practicability of directing a "beam" of sound waves to a definite distant pilot.

Officers of the U. S. navy dirigible J-4, flying at 1,000 feet over Camden, heard the voices of Victor talking machine officials, sent to them by a "super-directional horn," mounted on the roof of a 10-story building.

Instead of the radiation of the sound waves as in broadcasting, the new horn is said to emit a "beam" of sound which is was possible to direct to the dirigible in the same manner in which a searchlight is handled.

The horn was designed by S. T. Williams of the Victor company and is expected to prove especially useful in aiding dirigibles through heavy fog, since it supplements the radio beacon which, at short range, becomes ineffective.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The manuscript of John Erskine's dramatization of his "Private Life of Helen of Troy" has been delivered to Agnes Morgan of the Actor-Managers, and it's likely that this play will be the organization's next offering. Perhaps "The Eternal Helen" will be the title. The cast will be recruited from members of the "Grand Street Follies" troupe.

"Sure, I'd like to be a proof-reader, and if you will show me the marks used I'll study hard and maybe I can land a job in New York. I'm so tired of the farm!"

"All right, here's your first lesson. Your village paper is so full of errors it will be good practice for you."

The following line was pointed out to Ambitious ". . . the lilocs will soon be blooming . . ."

The would-be reader takes the paper, looks carefully at the line indicated, but fails to see the error.

"Look again; take each word separately, letter by letter," was advised.

The would-be brightened. "I see it now; they have left the 'k' out of 'lilocks'."

It was decided then and there Ambitious could not land a New York job.

One of the oddest and most fascinating markets of all New York is half hidden away in old Allen street, in the heart of the lower East Side. To that quarter, in the region of Canal street, repair connoisseurs in brass, bronze and wrought iron.

For some reason difficult to explain the market for brass candlesticks, bronze ornaments, wrought iron candelabra and other attractive specimens of metal work is pretty well centered in this one small and obscure district.

There are upward of 20 rather dingy shops to be found there, every one of them jammed full of the clever work of artisans in metal. Not infrequently you would find luxurious motor cars parked in the narrow street or in side streets—Park avenue and Fifth avenue doing a little personal shopping in the quaint quarter.

Around holiday time Allen street booms, and other occasions for giving presents produce spurts of trade. There is something of London's picturesqueness about it all—something different from the modern and conventional—a little touch of the old world.

Bad Guesses By Experts

SPORTS writers are, notoriously, prone to err when they try to pick the winner of an important prize fight. The number of bad guesses centering about the first Dempsey-Tunney fight is still fresh in the public memory.

But it might be pointed out that political experts, as far as the present campaign is concerned, are in a sad plight also. After reading a number of prognostications, one is forced to the conclusion that most of them simply haven't an idea of what's going to happen.

The other day two New York papers printed analytical stories of the effect of Governor Smith's first western tour. One paper, the World, Democratic, announced that Republican headquarters were shivering with fear, that they already conceded Smith Wisconsin, North Dakota and South Dakota and that they feared more states would follow. The other, The Herald-Tribune, Republican, asserted that the campaign tour had been a flop, and that Republican leaders were now satisfied that Smith could not carry a single state in the northwest.

What is a bewildered voter to do in such a case? Apparently each "expert" quoted here was simply letting his conscience be his guide. And so, one may guess, it will continue to be, down to the end of the campaign.

Colquitt's "Support" of Woodrow Wilson

FORMER Governor O. B. Colquitt in his speech here Thursday night said that for the first time in his life he found himself unable to support the Democratic nominee for president. We do not know just what Mr. Colquitt means by "support" but we do know that in 1916 he was saying things about the Wilson administration that gave aid and comfort to the enemy.

When Woodrow Wilson was in the midst of his fight for re-election here are some of the compliments then Governor Colquitt paid him as given out in a carefully prepared interview at Houston:

"The Wilson administration has been the greatest failure in history of the presidency."

"The Wilson administration's foreign policy has been imbecile."

"The administration's anti-trust laws are bare-faced fakes."

"The South is literally a land filled with milk and honey, and yet because of the utter incompetency of the administration (Wilson's) business is prostrated, its credit is impaired and thousands of people are starving."

After recalling Mr. Colquitt's support of Woodrow Wilson we are somehow reconciled to his opposition to Al Smith.

A New "Quentin Roosevelt"

THEODORE BORUTZKI, veteran of the German army who came to America after the war, became a naturalized American citizen in Oshkosh, Wis., the other day. To prove that he renounced all allegiance to his former country, he not only gave up his name, but surrendered also one of his most prized possessions—an iron cross won by heroism under fire while fighting for the kaiser.

For his new name this immigrant chose the name of Quentin Roosevelt. And his iron cross will go to France and, fastened to a wreath, will be placed on Roosevelt's grave.

It's an interesting tale. Somehow, we have a feeling that old Colonel Roosevelt, if he were alive, would heartily approve this man's action in taking Quentin's name.

The Men Who Die in Subs

ENGLAND recently gave military burial to the bodies taken from the hull of a British submarine which was sunk, in 1919, in an engagement with a Bolshevik warship in the Baltic sea. The Russians recently brought the submarine to the surface.

One wonders how the relatives of these dead British sailors feel. What did these men die for? England was not officially at war with Russia. The world war itself was over. Their deaths accomplished nothing. The soviet is as secure today as it would have been if that submarine had stayed at home.

The answer, of course, is that some British officials got excited and blundered. It was all a mistake. That may be cold comfort for the relatives of the dead soldiers—but it is about all that can be said.

LET'S ELIMINATE HORSEPLAY

News of yesterday told of a Houston youth who died from the effect of "horseplay" at a fraternity initiation in Austin, seat of the University of Texas. But last week, news came out of the University of Oklahoma concerning the brutality of a certain campus pep organization in its initiation ceremonies.

The dead Houston boy is Nolte McElroy. The cruel ceremonies at Oklahoma are those of the Ruf Neks and many another organization of that campus, not eliminating national Greek letter fraternities themselves.

These two recent indictments of the college man's inhumanity to his fellow student should bring about a revulsion of feeling throughout our institutions of learning that will abolish student hazing for good and all. This is an old subject, and it comes alive again each year as new means of dealing out punishment are devised and no apparent check on them is made by school authorities.

The Room Under the Stairs

The Baffling Story of a Man Who Read of His Own Murder

Synopsis of Preceding Installments

Thomas Dean, well-known writer of mystery novels, has buried his past in his present success. No one knows that he is Paul Forrester, who as a youngster had been mixed up in a chorus girl's breach-of-promise suit, and had also figured in a self defense killing out West. As a result of the latter he bears a scar on the right side of his neck. Dean, therefore is dumfounded to read in the morning paper the death-bed confession of Paul Forrester's murder made by Martin Lamont, western business man on a visit to New York, in which the dying man repents his five-year-old crime. Matters are further complicated by a visit from a strange lady, mysterious little Viola Gray, who tries to connect one of Dean's stories with Forrester's secret.

Resolving to clear up the mystery, Dean visits his family home, where the murder was committed, and runs into his friend, Lieutenant Shane, of the police force, who believes the novelist is merely seeking fiction material.

Together they visit "The Room Under the Stairs," and find the remains of Paul Forrester. Identification of the body is completed by a watch bearing the initials "P. F."

A visit to Lamont's bedside at the house of Dennis Littleby, famous lawyer, brings further complications, for the dying man speaks of the scar and points to Dean before collapsing.

That night Dean visits the scene of the murder and discovers pieces of a broken watch crystal. He is surprised at the sudden entrance of Littleby.

Details That Mean Little—Or Much

Arriving in the city, Dean decided to call on Shane. He did not feel he had played quite fairly with his friend. There were so many angles of the case that threatened to swamp his thoughts whenever his mind dwelt on them, and he did not know how to broach them to the lieutenant. He had tried once, in an indirect way, while stating his hypothetical solution of the mystery, and the lieutenant had laughed at him. With the two pieces of glass it was different. They were at least tangible, and he could talk about them with Shane without laying himself open to suspicion or ridicule.

He took the precaution of telephoning police headquarters from a public booth to see if the lieutenant was in. After a brief delay Shane was finally located in the bureau of identification, and he told Dean to come over at once. The novelist boarded a car and 15 minutes later he found his friend poring over a set of records in an office located in the basement of the building.

"What luck?" asked Dean.

Shane raised his eyes and regarded him with a shade less than his usual candor.

"Oh, so-so. I've been trying to check up on one or two things in Lamont's confession."

"Then there is a doubt in your mind?"

"Not exactly a doubt. All the statements in the confession hang together, and until yesterday I thought the case was closed. Then, last evening, Lamont pulled that queer stuff just before he collapsed, and I started wondering. It can't cut any ice as far as the facts in the case are concerned, but—Well, I'm still wondering." He looked at the novelist with a scowl on his broad face, as if his bewilderment were partly due to him. "What's up, Dean?"

Dean sat down and unfolded his handkerchief, exposing the two pieces of glass. Shane gave him a puzzled glance, looked at the smaller of the two fragments, dropped it, then examined the larger one.

"Looks like a piece from a watch crystal," he observed, holding the beveled edge to the light. "Where did you find it?"

"In the sitting room in the Forrester house. The two pieces were lodged in a crack in the floor."

Shane lifted his blue eyes from the fragment of glass and gave Dean a curious glance. "So, you went back there. Didn't you get enough atmosphere the first time? Well, what do you see in this piece of glass?"

"Nothing, yet," said Dean, glad that Shane had not inquired how he had entered the Forrester house. "I am not sure it means anything. There is just one little point in my mind that I want to clear up. Shane, will you let me see the watch you found in the room under the stairs?"

The lieutenant whistled softly. "You're off on the wrong track. Even if this piece of glass came off the watch I found, it wouldn't mean anything. It didn't though. The crystal of that watch isn't broken."

"I know, but please let me see it."

Shane produced the watch, with the air of one humoring a child. It was an open-face timepiece, and Dean unscrewed the rim and took out the crystal, then placed it on a sheet of paper and drew a circle around it with a pencil. Finally he laid the larger of the two fragments against the periphery of the circle. He shook his head.

"So much for that," he said, a trace of excitement in his voice. "They don't match. This broken piece has a smaller degree of curvature than the crystal belonging to the watch."

"Well, what of it?" demanded Shane, who had watched him in a mood of mingled amusement and impatience.

"Having a smaller degree of curvature, it must have been a larger crystal. Consequently it belonged to a larger watch than the one you found in the room under the stairs, probably one of the kind that used to sell for a dollar before the war."

Shane eyed him uncomprehendingly. "Suppose you tell me what you are driving at?"

"Only this. It looks as if, at one time or another, a watch crystal was broken in the room where Lamont says he killed Paul Forrester. If I were to chuck the facts and draw on my imagination, I should say the accident happened during the struggle between Forrester and his muderer."

Shane looked as if he were trying very hard to keep his patience. "But you have said yourself that the broken piece doesn't fit Forrester's watch."

With a faint smile Dean looked up at the detective. "It doesn't fit the watch you found in the room under the stairs," he said with a slow emphasis.

The detective grunted, but suddenly he sat back in his chair and stared. His eyes had a dazed look, as if a staggering idea had come to him.

"But that's crazy!" he declared at length. "There isn't a shred of sound fact to support such a wild idea."

Dean still smiled. "Yet you picked the idea out of my head before I had time to put it into words."

"Makes no difference. It's just one of those wooxy things that look all right in fiction but have no place in a world of hard facts. Why, for all you and I know a dozen watch crystals may have been broken in that house."

"It has stood vacant for over five years," Dean pointed out, "so this particular crystal must have been broken either at the time of the murder or shortly before. By the way, remember the fictitious solution I gave you yesterday?"

"It was as full of holes a a sieve. You said you could fill in all of them but one."

"And I think I could plug up that one with this piece of glass. Just now my mind isn't equal to the performance, though. See you later."

Dean was off, and with an intent look on his face the lieutenant picked up the watch he had found in the room under the stairs. For a long time he regarded it closely.

"It's crazy as the dickens," he declared fretfully, concluding a long and twisted train of thought, "but nothing else explains the way Lamont looked at Dean just before he collapsed. H'm. Next time I see Dean I'm going to ask him, just for fun, if there's a scar on the right side of his neck."

Cul-de-Sac

After a solitary luncheon Dean took a train to Kew Gardens and visited the notary who had witnessed Lamont's confession. He found the man in a real estate office only a few blocks from Dennis Littleby's residence. He was a busy little man, bald and fat, riding high on the crest of the realty boom sweeping that section, and the brief interview was punctuated by several telephone calls.

"Have you known Mr. Littleby long?" inquired the novelist.

"What's that? Known him long?" Don't know him at all except by reputation. They tell me he won't look at a case unless he's paid a retaining fee of a thousand on the spot."

"I understand he sent for you when he wanted a notary to witness Lamont's confession."

"So he did. It was thought his friend would cash in that night, so naturally he sent for a notary living in the neighborhood."

Dean nodded. The explanation seemed sufficient. He leaned forward a little out of his chair, hesitating before he put his next question.

"Was there anything about the confession that seemed suggestive to you—queer in any way?"

"What's that?" The notary's comfortably rounded body bristled. "Anything queer about it? If there had been, do you suppose I would have put my seal on it?"

"Certainly not," Dean hastened to say, for he could see that the man had a keen regard for the properties and the responsibilities of his position. "It just occurred to me that you might have noticed something that didn't strike you as peculiar until afterward."

The notary gave him a long, wondering look, then shook his bald head. "No, nothing like that. Everything was straight and aboveboard—just a simple case of a man wanting to go into the next world with a clear conscience. Why did you ask?"

Dean explained that he had certain interests at stake that he could not go into at present, thanked the notary and started for the door. He had accomplished nothing beyond substantiating his previous impression that the circumstances of Lamont's confession contained nothing of a doubtful character.

At the door he turned back, impelled by an impulse that he could not understand, and looked diffidently at the notary, already absorbed in a mass of papers.

"Just one more question," he said, in the tone of one who realizes that his words must sound idiotic, "Did Lamont act as if any sort of pressure was exerted on him?"

This notary jerked up his head and stared blankly for a moment. "What's that? Pressure? Say, what are you driving at?" Then he laughed in a mollified way as he saw Dean's disarming smile. "No, nothing like that. He acted like a man who had something on his mind and couldn't get rid of it quick enough. If there was any pressure, it was his own conscience." He paused, and his good-humored eyes wandered off into space. "There was one funny thing, though, come to think of it. Not that it mattered as far as the confession is concerned, but it struck me afterward as a kind of queer."

"Yes?" said Dean expectantly as the man hesitated.

The notary scratched the side of his bald head. "Lamont comes from out West, doesn't he?"

"So I understand."

"Don't you suppose people use telephones out there?"

Dean smiled at the simple question; then, as a recollection came to him, he stiffened suddenly.

"Without doubt they do," he said as calmly as he could. "Why?"

"Well, there's a telephone beside Lamont's bed. I caught him looking at it once, just before he put his signature on the paper. He acted as if he'd never seen such a thing before. He seemed actually scared of it, as if he was afraid it might blow up. Funny, wasn't it?"

"Very," Dean admitted, his whole body tingling as he recalled a similar observation made by himself at Lamont's bedside. Shane had remarked upon it too, stating that Lamont had looked at the instrument as if he expected it to "fly up and bite him," and now it appeared the notary had observed the same thing.

"But of course it didn't mean anything," the notary hastened to say, once more turning to the papers on his desk. "People do act queer at times like that. Good-day, sir."

EGOTISM

Of all the fools that do exist,
The worst one is an egotist.
Why, when a man is really great,
You'll never hear that man relate
His story, of the fights he's won;
He never boasts of what he's done.

Oh! Man is such a minor thing—
So small that he can hardly bring
One ray of light, to faintly play
In God's eternal—endless day.

Reporter Takes Part in 'Talkie' Film To Describe New Process

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Oct. 5. (UP)—Noiseless, perfectly adjusted machinery plays a highly important part in the making of sound synchronized films.

The director raised his hand. Outside the studio a bell rang and a red light flared. Carpenters stopped working on a building. All noise outside and within the studio ceased. The noiseless machinery started turning.

The little group of actors, technicians and executives were the hub of a world of silence.

Again the director raised his hand in signal and the actors recited their lines and played their parts.

The silent machinery relentlessly, irrevocably recorded every sound and every movement.

Reporter Takes Part

Gone is the familiar studio cry of "camera" for starting action. Gone, also, is the megaphone, so long the badge of directors. In their place have come the call to "interlock," and mechanical devices that reduce to a minimum possibility of human error.

This correspondent took a "bit" part at Paramount studios in "Intereference," a film being directed by Roy J. Pomeroy, recognized leader in the making of talking pictures. It was declared the first time that a newspaper man had talked for production in a sound film and one of the first times one had been permitted on a set during actual production.

Studios and directors refused to let visitors see the making of a sound film for obvious reasons—a sneeze, a cough, a scraping foot or a whispered word would ruin the work of hours.

Machines Watched

Everywhere were machines, with experts bending over them, watching their every action and making sure that nothing slipped—for the horror of the "talkie" would be to have the words heard after the actor's lips had ceased moving.

Most of the machines were out of sight. The caged cameras were only partly visible to the actors. Microphones were connected with the machines by carefully hidden wires, and even in the "engine" room there was nothing to indicate that the sound and action stories of a drama were being written, surely and unchangeably.

Quietly the motors turned. The cameramen peered through the glass of their cage. The "mixer" looked down and listened. Silence dominated and yards away the record of "Interference" was being continued.

Stanton to Have Fair Oct. 26-27

Special to The Record News.

STANTON, Texas, Oct. 5.—Martin county will have its first real fair Oct. 26-27. The fair idea grew out of a realization on the part of Martin county farmers that great progress in agricultural development has been accomplished during the past few years, and that a fair whereby ideas would be exchanged and farmers could see true demonstrations of what had been accomplished would still further stimulate and promote agricultural development in the county.

The different communities in the county, divided according to school districts, are being organized whereby each community will bring to Stanton a complete exhibit of the products grown in the community, in addition to the individual entries of the various products grown in the county. The 4-H club membership in the various communities are organized and are assisting materially in the selecting and preparing of samples for display at the fair. City Government Rift Over Public Meetings

BEAUMONT, Texas, Oct. 5. (AP)—Beaumont's city administration has suffered a rift over a controversy as to whether newspaper reporters should be present at all meetings.

When the city commission asked the equalization board to appear before it to explain methods of fixing valuations, the board asked that the public and newspaper reporters be excluded. Mayor E. W. Gross, as spokesman for the commission declined, saying that all city business was open to the public. The result was that the equalizers retired from council chambers and refused to make any report to the commission.

The matter is now "up in the air" with both sides refusing to give in—and in the meantime, no report has been made to the commission.

CHAIN SYSTEM HAS LIMITATION

Independents Rise in Fury at Recent Expansions

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Oct. 5. (US)—The business scene has been characterized to such an extent by the rapid growth of chain systems that there has been a tendency on the part of their critics to attribute perhaps greater powers than they really possess.

The chain idea has taken hold rapidly, and is now on the crest of its fortunes thus far, but its sponsors recognize it has limitations.

Storm of Criticism

The recent invasion of the great chain systems into smaller towns, particularly in the South and West, which were hitherto neglected has brought a storm of criticism, especially from small independent merchants who felt unable to meet the new competition. Accordingly, politicians have begun to take cognizance of the development. The Federal Trade commission, in accordance with the Brookhart resolution passed in the last session of the senate, is already in the preliminary stages of an investigation of chain store methods, and several state legislatures have considered adverse legislation against the chains. North Carolina has levied a special tax on organizations which operate more than five stores in that state. Although the Maryland legislature rejected a similar bill, one county in that state adopted one.

In his resolution, Senator Brookhart asserted: "It is estimated that from 1921 to 1927 the retail sales of all chain stores have increased from approximately four per cent to 16 per cent of all retail sales."

Has Weak Spots

A partial answer to the critics of chain stores is offered by Charles R. Walgren, president Walgren company, which operates a chain of more than 200 drug stores. Mr. Walgren, pointing out that the chain has weak spots which the independent can seek out, says in The Nation's Business: "There is, and will be, ample room for the live, progressive independent merchant using modern methods in location, the selection of stock, arrangement of fixtures, training of personnel and cooperation with other independents to mutual advantage.

"The immobility of the chain store reaches further than mere location.

"Another outstanding advantage of the independent is his opportunity to keep his hands on the supervision of his store, an intimate touch that can be made a big factor in building a substantial business.

"Our competition, so far as prices are concerned, does not hurt the independent drug store store in the least provided it is operated on twentieth century methods."

Old and New Orders

As a matter of fact, real struggle is not between independents and chains, as such, but between the old order of inefficiency and the new order of scientific merchandising. Well conducted chains are one exemplification—but by no means the only one—of the new spirit of economy in the field of distribution. Chains best lend themselves to the exploitation of standard, stable articles, whereas in matters of style, personal taste, and individual artistry, such as tailoring, dressmaking, and millinery, the single unit merchant who can sell his own personality and capacity for service, is still preeminent and is likely to remain so.

GERMAN RICHES ARE BORROWED

Mueller Warns Against Any Misunderstanding

BERLIN, Oct. 5. (UP)—Chancellor Herman Mueller warned against a general misunderstanding of Germany's capacity to pay war reparations in a speech to German newspaper publishers in convention here tonight.

The German chancellor's address followed a statement last Sunday by Premier Raymond Poincare of France, that the French government did not intend to cut Germany's war debt.

Mueller told the newspapermen that there was great danger of an international "illusion" regarding Germany's capacity to pay and said that when European statesmen recently at Geneva, regarded German resources optimistically, they had ignored the fact that her wealth today was largely borrowed.

The chancellor appealed to the publishers to help destroy erroneous conceptions abroad that Germany's revival economically is a sign of great riches.

"In fact," he said, "Germany's revival blossom is flourishing in dry soil."

He demanded the re-establishment of Germany's sovereignty in the Rhine valley, now occupied by 60,000 foreign troops.

SOUTHERN METHODISTS BATTLE ARMY TODAY AT WEST POINT

PONY PASSING MAY COP TILT

'Can't Stop Them,' John Heisman Asserts

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 5. (UP)—A strong Southern Methodist university team will meet Army here Saturday afternoon in the East's first big intersectional game of the season.

The Dallas, Texas team is coached by Ray Morrison, former all-American quarterback at Vanderbilt, and boasts a record for the past five years that is second only to Notre Dame.

Coach Morrison has originated an ingenious lateral pass maneuver to place Hume, star halfback, in an open field. The Army will depend on its two hulking tackles, Perry and Sprague, to drop the "keyman" in his tracks.

An Army scout recently sought John Heisman, former coach at Rice institute, Houston, Texas, and asked him how he might plan to stop the S. M. U. aerial attack.

"It can't be stopped," was Heisman's reported reply. "The only way to beat the team is to get hold of the ball and never give it up."

Probable lineup:

S. M. U.	Position	ARMY
Roach	Left Tackle	Sprague
Baccus	Left Guard	Hammack
Ray	Center	Hall
Hammon	Right Guard	Dibb
Brown	Right Tackle	Perry
Skeeters	Right End	Messenger
Reed	Quarterback	Nave
Hume	Left Half	Cagle
Hopper	Right Half	Allan
Love	Fullback	Murrell

Simmons Plans Conference Bid

S. M. U. Game Here Bears On Entry Into Loop

Special to The Record News

ABILENE, Texas, Oct. 5.—Episode No. 2 of Simmons university's fall campaign for admission to the Southwest conference will be enacted for the benefit of Wichita Falls football fans on Saturday, Oct. 13, when Frank Bridges takes his Cowboys to the big faith and oil town as neutral meeting ground for their clash with S. M. U.

A week prior to the tangle with the Mustangs, the Abilene collegians face another Southwest circuit representative in T. C. U. That game also is billed for neutral territory, at Breckenridge.

S. M. U. and T. C. U., together with Texas Tech, to be played late in November, constitute the high lights on the Simmons schedule, which from the point of the number of games is the heaviest assignment ever given a Texas college team. With two victories already on the ledger, the Ranchers have eleven more games coming up, while plans are afoot for another with the Olympic club of San Francisco in December.

Neither the Frogs, Mustangs nor the Matadors of Tech are in the same conference with Simmons, but inasmuch as Simmons is looking to a higher rating, Coach Bridges openly avows his preference for victory over those three teams to a championship of the Texas conference, composed of six denominational schools.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

THE LONE STAR standard will be carried into battle today in a clash with the cadets of the Army on the gridiron at West Point. The Southern Methodist university Mustangs, representative of the best football as played in the southwest, meet the future second lieutenants in a game that will have great bearing on the national rating this year of football in this section. The invasion of the Ponies to "The Point" not only is one of the most important clashes of a day replete with interesting games, but is regarded as one of the outstanding contests of the year, from an intersectional standpoint.

◇ ◇ ◇

Football in the southwest is as good as any football. The Ponies will give the Cadets a strenuous fight, Army ranks as one of the best teams in the east. The long trek of the Mustangs and the possible effect in the change of climate will militate against their chances. Army should win by a close score.

◇ ◇ ◇

ANOTHER SOUTHWEST conference team engages in intersectional play today. Dana Bible's Texas Aggies, ranking with the Ponies as leaders in this section, meet Sewanee at Dallas. A victory for the Farmers looms.

◇ ◇ ◇

OTHER TEXAS members of the conference engage state teams and figure to win, but not without hard tests. Simmons, foe here next Saturday of S. M. U., engages Texas Christians at Breckenridge. Frank Bridges' Cowboys are likely to give the Frogs a gruelling encounter. Texas will have a hard game with Texas Tech but the Longhorns probably will cop by two or three touchdowns. Baylor rates about that superior over Trinity. St. Edward's may fight Rice to a near-standstill. Arkansas meets College of the Ozarks.

◇ ◇ ◇

CENTENARY, another foremost team in the southwest, will meet Daniel Baker and probably will run up a comfortable score. Detroit journeys to Tulsa to meet the Oklahoma eleven coached by Gloomy Gus Henderson, former Southern California mentor.

◇ ◇ ◇

Holding the football spotlight in the middle west today is the meeting of Notre Dame and Wisconsin. The Irish were unimpressive last week in eking out a 12-6 win over Loyola of New Orleans. But don't be surprised if Rockne presents a greatly-improved array today. Wisconsin looms strong this year. This game is a tossup.

◇ ◇ ◇

OTHER BIG TEN elevens also play today and with non-conference opposition. Indiana, with a stronger eleven than the Hoosiers have had for years, meet Oklahoma of the secessionist Big Six. Indiana probably will win by a close score. Chicago, after its disastrous double header last week, doubtless will rally to beat Wyoming. Northwestern will be extended by Butler and Purdue by DePauw. Other Western conference members should win handily.

◇ ◇ ◇

AGGIES OF KANSAS and Oklahoma clash at Stillwater. This will be a fiercely-fought battle with apparently little to choose but the Jayhawkers may reverse their defeat of last year. Added interest to this encounter is that it will mark the first important game played by the Kansans under the tutelage of their new coach, Bo McMillan. Incidentally, the rival farmers are coached by former all-Americans, the Oklahomans again being led by John Maulbetsch, the great University of Michigan halfback of a decade and a half ago.

◇ ◇ ◇

NEBRASKA and Iowa State meet in one of the outstanding conflicts in the Missouri valley. Victory for the Cornhuskers is forecast. Kansas probably will beat Grinnell.

◇ ◇ ◇

A host of noteworthy contests are scheduled in the south. Alabama meets Mississippi, conqueror last week of Arkansas. A win for the Crimson Tide by a low score looms. Once mighty Centre, now reduced in grid prestige, seems in for a beating from Tennessee. Georgia, a ranking southern team, will beat Mercer handily. Colgate and Vanderbilt clash at Nashville in another outstanding intersectional fray. Vanderbilt's football has declined a trifle in recent years, the Commodores having lost their rating as among foremost elevens of the south, and victory for the easterners is likely. Georgia Tech and Virginia Military will have an interesting game and the Tornado probably will win.

◇ ◇ ◇

ALL EASTERN machines, including the former "big three," are in action today. Yale's mighty host meets Maine. Harvard will encounter a sturdy foe in Springfield and Vermont will test Princeton. Cornell may meet a Tartar in Niagara. Pennsylvania and Syracuse won't have cinches in their respective combats. The roving Haskell Indians, who travel around to play football like their forebears roamed to fish and hunt, meet West Virginia. There's no dope on this affair, but the Indians seem to have the edge. A "little three" squad seems in for a lacing, with Connecticut Aggies apparently stronger than Wesleyan. Amherst has little, if any, margin over Bowdoin.

◇ ◇ ◇

OTHER LEADING eastern clubs figure to win, but in this day of football, the so-called "little school" may arise at any time to smite the favorites.

◇ ◇ ◇

IMPORTANT GAMES are played in the far west. Stanford's juggernaut, hailed by Pacific coast critics as the best in that section, meets Oregon. California will be forced to its best football by St. Mary's. California (Los Angeles), in the Pacific Coast conference this fall for the first time, and under the coaching of Bill Spaulding, former Minnesota coach, will be extended by California Tech. Denver, rating as a foremost Rocky Mountain contender, apparently has little more than a setup in Colorado Mines, and Colorado Aggies should run a crusher over Greeley Teachers.

Indians Battle Grandfield Preps Scoreless Tie, Second of Season

Collegians Lose Touchdown on Violation of Rules; Bearcats Fail to Boot Field Goal in Chance to Win

By GORDON FULCHER

Again the Wichita Falls junior college Indians lacked the punch to put a score across the line in their clash Friday afternoon at Spudder park with the Grandfield, Okla., Bearcats and the game, as last week's with Vernon, ended in a scoreless tie.

Three times the Indians drove the ball down the field within scoring distance and once they went over the 1-foot line but lacked that extra bit of drive that would have put across a score.

Touchdown Disallowed

The Indians did cross the line in the second period for the first and only time this season on a forward pass, Dickey to Castelberry, but the play was called back and Wichita Falls penalized for the passer being too close to the line of scrimmage. The ball went to Grandfield on the 5-yard line.

The Bearcats fumbled an attempted lateral pass behind their 10-yard line and Henry Barton recovered the ball for Junior college on the 5-yard line. Castelberry picked up two yards at the line, Dickey hit the line for a yard, Castelberry lost two yards off right tackle, Mitchell brought the oval back to the 1-foot line but the ball went to Grandfield on downs. Lawson punted out of danger.

Grandfield missed its only real chance to score in the first quarter when a place kick from the 15-yard line failed. The Bearcats intercepted an Indian pass on the 30-yard strip in the last quarter and might have scored had Mitchell not intercepted an attempted pass on the next play.

Donald Penn Stars

Donald Penn, Junior college quarterback, was the outstanding ball carrier of the game, while Lawson and Dykes ripped off several long gains for the Bearcats.

Captain McClain at center was the outstanding lineman of the Grandfield team, while Hutto, H. Barton and Pinney played well at times for the Indians. Lineups:

OLNEY, Oct. 5.—The Olney Cubs won their first conference game of the season here this afternoon, defeating Nocona, 33 to 0.

The Cubs registered 26 first downs to Nocona's 3. Olney attempted four passes, completing three of them for a total of 94 yards. Nocona completed one pass out of six attempts.

Every man in the Cub backfield gained at liberty through the Nocona line. The Cub line was a stone wall, Nocona penetrating only two times for first downs. Two times in the last half the Cubs failed to make touchdowns after taking the ball to within a yard of the goal. Lineups:

TEXAS AGGIES FACE SEWANEE

Teams Renew Intersectional Play at Dallas

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 5. — From out the purple hills of old Tennessee came a jungle beast today licking its jaws in anticipation of vengeance tomorrow when Sewanee's Tigers meet the fighting farmers of the Texas A. & M. college in their sixth intersectional gridiron battle here.

In five previous years the mountaineers have come to the southwest in high hopes of flashing an offensive that the Aggies could not match and in four instances they have turned their faces homeward with the sting of defeat on them.

In 1926 Sewanee battled the Texans to a 6-6 tie in one of the greatest gridiron contests this section has ever witnessed, but in other years the power of Bible-coached teams proved too much for the squad.

Against the tried Sewanee forward wall, Coach Dana X. Bible will pit a comparatively untried Farmer line, but in each of the two early season contests in which they have engaged, Aggie forwards have shown continued polish. Tomorrow's game will be the test as to whether the line can live up to the exploits of last year's matchless championship club.

In the backfield Bible is better fortified, having veteran ball carriers in Burgess, Mills, Dorsey, Conover, Colgin, and Ish. Zarafonetis, a sophomore, has forced his way into the starting lineup.

Frank Snyder Resigns As Manager of Buffs

HOUSTON, Oct. 5 (AP).—Resignation today of Frank Snyder, manager of the Houston baseball club, coming close on the Buff's first Texas pennant in 14 years and their only Dixie championship, was consternation to sports fans.

The erstwhile Giant and Cardinal backstop said he was anxious to stay in the St. Louis Cardinals organization if possible, but stated he would consider one or two other offers to manage minor league clubs unless he reached a complete understanding with Branch Rickey of the Cardinals and President Fred Ankenman of Houston.

ALTUS DEFEATS VERNON 26 TO 12

Altus Outplays Lions; All Scoring in 2nd Half

VERNON, Texas, Oct. 5.—The Altus, Okla., High school Bobcats outsmarted and roundly outplayed an indifferent Lion organization here Friday afternoon, piling up 26 points in the second half after the teams had battled to a scoreless tie in the first half. The Lions scored two touchdowns in the last half to make the score 26 to 12.

Russell of Altus could hardly be stopped, and the Altus ends hit out along the sidelines and snared long passes time after time without meeting any opposition from Vernon. The visitors recorded 11 first down to the Lions' six.

The lines appeared evenly matched but the broken field running of Russell and the craftiness of the visitors were too much for Vernon.

Health and Diet Advice

Nettle Rash

Many people are troubled with the appearance of a rash on the skin, accompanied by an intense stinging, burning sensation. This rash is in the form of wheals, and they may become maximum size, varying from that of a pinehead to that of a half dollar, within a few minutes, and they sometimes disappear as rapidly as they form.

These lesions may appear on any part of the skin, and they sometimes occur inside the throat on the epiglottis, giving a choking sensation or feeling of suffocation. When they appear on the tongue, they may cause it to become greatly enlarged.

The itching is so intense that it is almost impossible for the patient to resist scratching, which only increases the size of the wheals.

Attacks of hives can only occur in people who are suffering from a form of chronic acidosis, and each attack is preceded by a period of lassitude, digestive disorders, coated tongue and possibly headaches. A fingernail drawn over the surface of the skin of these patients usually leaves a red line, and it is possible to write words on the surface of their bodies in this manner.

Poorly fed and undernourished children are most frequent sufferers from this disorder. The eruptions are usually small and appear about the hair follicles, accompanied by the usual intense itching.

In some forms of this disease, technically known as urticaria, there are also large swellings under the skin, like small eggs, occuring most frequently on the face. The disease has a variety of forms. In some cases it occurs at regular intervals. Sometimes the irritations leave blemish discolorations or stains. These people usually become badly swollen as the result of mosquito or insect bites.

One susceptible to this disorder may suffer an attack from a number of causes, but there is almost always some irritation of the digestive tract. The foods that are most frequently blamed for bringing on these eruptions are shellfish, cheese, sausage, pork, strawberries, cucumbers, and an almost endless variety of foods and drugs.

This disease may occur as a complication in the course of many chronic diseases, and in susceptible people the irritation of various substances applied to the skin will bring on an attack. Some of the substances which bring on this rash most frequently when in contact with the skin are rotogravure ink from newspapers, the content of certain plants such as the primrose, various types of essential oils and gases. Worry and nervous irritation are also likely to bring on the eruption.

Such eruptions are readily cured, since all that is required is to thoroughly alkalinize the blood. This is accomplished through the use of the acid fruit diet, such as apples, grapes, oranges or grapefruit for a period varying from five to ten days and followed by a well balanced diet as outlined in my weekly articles in the newspapers.

One should be particularly careful to avoid fermentation in the intestines, and I am convinced that wrong food combinations are more responsible for skin troubles than most of the foods that are blamed by the sufferers. One with a tendency to such a disorder must be particularly careful in this respect. I will gladly send without charge my article on food combinations to those who are interested, provided they will send large, self-addressed, stamped envelopes.

Questions and Answers

Question—Mrs. H. writes: "I have been told by a friend that a rolling pin is good for reducing. Another friend contradicted the statement, saying that it was very injurious. Is it or is it not? I am five feet, five inches tall, 22 years old, and weigh 126 pounds. Am I underweight or overweight?"

Answer—The only correct way to reduce is through diet and exercise. Massage with a rolling pin is not very effective, and only tends to break down the cellular structure. Your weight for your age and height seems to me to be about normal.

Question—I. L. writes: "I am very interested in your articles, and would like very much to see a write-up on 'Alcoholic Drinks'."

Answer—I cannot elaborate on this subject in a short answer in this question and answer department. Alcoholic drinks should be used carefully if at all. They are stimulating and helpful in certain cases and under certain conditions. Where too much is used, stimulation stops, and depression or intoxication begins.

Question—G. H. asks: "What would you advise for gall bladder trouble? I am having sick headaches, and vomit often."

Answer—I have written a great deal on this subject, and will be glad to send you complete information about the cause and cure of various forms of gall bladder trouble if you will send a request to me, inclosing a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope. In the meantime, cut down on the amount of food you are using, and to begin with, try a short fast on fruit for a few days.

Baron Huenefeld was the commander of the German plane Bremen on her momentous transatlantic flight from Dublin, Ireland, to New York. "Now, there's an amusing story," the Baron said, "about a farmer boy and a fair damsel from the city who were looking over the farm together. The rustic was rapidly falling beneath the spell of the fair one's eyes.

"'A very beautiful scene, that,' said the boy, pausing beside the fence of a paddock in which a cow and a calf were rubbing noses together. 'The sight of it makes me want to do the same.'

"'Well, go to it,' said the girl, placidly, 'it's your cow.'"

Historical Relics Added To San Angelo Museum

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Oct. 5 (AP)—A picture of the first white girl born in San Angelo, the official notice of the election of W. S. Cunningham, first mayor, after incorporation was voted in 1889, and an old gun found on an Indian battle ground near here have been contributed to San Angelo's museum.

Mrs. T. A. Kincaid, records disclose, was the first girl born after the town was moved from a fort across the river.

The document announcing that Cunningham had been elected was contributed by Mrs. Henrietta Austin Cunningham of Washington. It bears the signature of James Neill, county judge of Tom Green county.

Other recent additions to the museum are a picture of Indian weavers and a treasury note of the Republic of Texas, the date of which has been cut out.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE (416) OUR PRESIDENTS

When Roosevelt returned from Africa his friends informed him that President Taft had not continued his policies but had favored his opponents within the Republican party. From every side came the demand that Roosevelt become a candidate in 1912. Finally he agreed, but so many of the delegates already had been chosen that his friends were at a great disadvantage.

By NEA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge, Copyright, 1923-28.

The convention decided for the most part in favor of the Taft delegates and many of Roosevelt's followers refused to remain in the convention.

There were many contests in the convention and it was soon plain that the result depended upon which of the contesting delegates were seated.

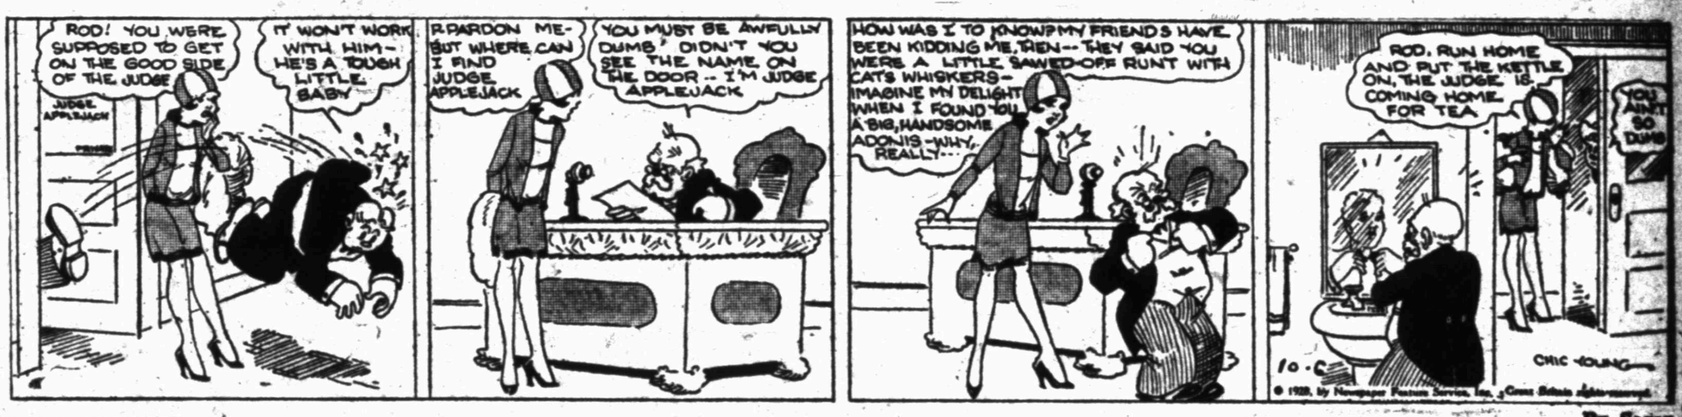

Six weeks later a new convention met and organized the Progressive party. Roosevelt was nominated and began a hard campaign. While in Milwaukee he was shot, but not seriously injured, by a lunatic. Meantime the Democrats had chosen as their standard bearer Woodrow Wilson. Wilson was elected though the popular vote of Taft and Roosevelt together was much greater. (To Be Continued)

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Oct. 5. (AP)—Further pre-bureau realizing or liquidation promoted by reports of fairly good weather over the greater part of the South and relatively easy Liverpool cables, was reflected by declines of about 11 to 15 points in the cotton market here today. December contracts sold off to 18.82 and closed at that figure, with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 11 to 14 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 2 to 8 points in response to the easier cables. Offerings were light and were well enough absorbed by the initial demand to send prices up 2 or 3 points, but the selling continued and prices worked gradually lower during the balance of the day.

Last prices were at the lowest of the day on the active months, with the price of December contracts showing a decline of about 60 points from the high price of last Monday.

Three more of the private crop reports were published during the day. The first to make its appearance placed the condition of the crop at 54.1 and the indicated yield at figures ranging from 14,200,000 to 14,700,000 bales, compared with a range last month of 14,500,000 to 15,400,000 bales. The second report also made the condition of the crop at 54.1 but placed the indicated yield at only 13,827,000 bales. While the third made the condition 55 and the indicated yield 13,300,000 bales.

According to a canvass made here today, members of the New York cotton exchange, on the average, are looking for a crop estimate of about 14,500,000 bales, the lowest individual estimate being 13,570,000 and the highest 14,850,000. Private cables reported hedge selling and liquidation in Liverpool but said there was a fair turnover in cotton cloths for India. Exports today, 39,794, making 1,230,514 so far this season. Port receipts, 86,808. U. S. port stocks, 1,168,560.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 5. (AP)—Pre-bureau influences caused cotton prices to work slightly lower today although at times the market was supported by moderate demand induced by bullish private estimates, price fixing and trade buying on the scale-down. December contracts after trading to 18.38, eased off and closed at 18.22, or 16 points net lower. The general market closed steady at net declines of 13 to 16 points.

The market opened easier in sympathy with lower Liverpool cables than due and first trade showed losses of 3 to 6 points and after the start the initial decline extended to 18.29 for December, 18.26 for January and 18.20 for March, or 6 to 9 points under yesterday's close. The early weakness was attributed to liquidation by traders endeavoring to even commitments in advance of the government's crop estimate to be issued Monday.

After rallying slightly the market weakened again under realizing and some hedge selling and before the offerings were absorbed December sold off to 18.27, January 18.23 and March 18.15, or 11 to 12 points net down. The moderate demand that absorbed selling was probably promoted by three private crop estimates with probable yields ranging from 13,300,000 bales to 14,700,000, which traders evidently construed as bullish. On the bulge December traded to 18.38, with active months generally advancing 10 to 11 points above the lows.

During the afternoon the market fluctuated narrowly and within the early range but some belated liquidation right at the end carried prices to new lows for the day with December at 18.22, January 18.20 and 18.10 for March, or 14 to 16 points net down.

Wichitans Get Well In Gray

The Le Fors area in Gray county added another good well to its number of producers by the completion of Ray and Massie No. 2 Chapman, flowing 2,000 barrels per day.

The well, which is located in the northeast corner of the Ray-Massie 160 acre lease in section 51, block 25, H. and G. N. R. R. survey, encountered the sand at 2864 feet and after penetrating the sand a few feet into began flowing at the rate of 80 barrels per hour, and is going on record as one of the best in the county.

Chrysler Outstanding Stock Among 'Pool Pets' In Irregular Session

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service Financial Expert

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Chrysler was the outstanding feature of another market in "selected stocks" today. Reduction in the call rate to 6 per cent from a renewal of 7 was the signal for heavy profit taking that induced irregularity in the majority of shares while the pets of the pools continued to give the appearance of strength to the list.

Chrysler was taken in big blocks as it skyrocketed over 9 points to a new high record. It was followed by Hudson in the afternoon as that stock climbed over 4 points to above 90. Hupp turned stronger and much more active, gaining over 3 points while General Motors and others in the automobile group were held back by profit-taking. Steel remained firm but was held to narrow price range with other standard industrials. American Zinc & Lead jumped 7 points to a new high but other metal stocks turned soft. Oils were quiet and fractionally lower while the rails continued to slide off in light trading.

Better demand for Hudson followed final closing of arrangement under which new interests take the stock in hand. The group has regarded Hudson as being out of line with other motor shares for some time but were not desirous of starting activity in a big way therein without the cooperation of insiders. The necessary arrangements were concluded, today, it was stated and as a result the largest pool that ever worked the stock market is ready to begin operations. With the cost of new models taken out of first half year income the results for the final six months, it is estimated, will result in substantial gain in net income so that the company should earn close to $10 a share for the year.

Electric Auto Lite's further move was due to concentrated efforts of the dominating market group. They have had a big position in the stock for many months and now have its technical position in shape to do as they please as to price. They maintain that orders on the books insure increasing income over the next six months. Keith stood out as better demand followed rumor that announcement of a deal with Warner would be made within the next week. There was further accumulation of National Enameling commented upon coincident with estimate that the current six months would prove the best second half period in the history of the company.

Allied Chemical stood out by reason of strength. The insiders expect the company to cut melon for stockholders whenever the steel corporation decides to recapitalize. General Ice Cream added 2 points more to its climb into new high ground on continuation of group operations helped by short covering. Pressed Steel Car registered a new peak also with further buying credited to the new interests in the company. Barnsdall was turned over in heavy volume but had to absorb too much profit taking to move higher. Report continued that the Cutten Interests were gradually adding to their holdings of Sinclair. Bethlehem climbed over a point higher as dividend expectations were voiced but other independent steel shares remained quiet. Universal pipe registered a new high as substantial increase in trading followed report of improving earnings.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 5. (AP) (U. S. D. A.)—Light supplies around the 11 market circuit were cleaned up readily at generally steady prices. Country demand for stockers and feeders continued to show expansion and indications pointed to a broad week-end clearance. Total offerings approximated 10,900 against 17,031 last Friday and 16,326 a year ago.

Shippers at some points purchased hogs at steady to strong prices, but the general market on closing rounds ruled weak to 15 cents lower. St. Louis realized $11.30, the day's extreme top. Aggregate receipts were estimated at 51,000, a decrease of 4,800 from a week ago, but 1,150 more than the corresponding day a year ago.

Fat lambs were on a steady to easier price basis at most points. Choice lambs in Chicago cleared at $13.40. The supply approximated 56,100 as compared with 59,641 a week ago and 63,640 a year ago.

Grain

CHICAGO REVIEW
By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Oct. 5. (AP)—Grains closed higher today and looked extremely strong at the finish. Corn appears to be in the soundest kind of technical condition. Longs were shaken out again and wished they had back the corn they let go.

At the end wheat was ⅜c to ⅝c higher; corn was up 1¼c to 1½c; oats were ½c to ⅝c higher; rye was up 1⅛c to 1⅜c.

Wheat at the close loked as if it might be ready for a sharp advance tomorrow. Bears have pounded all the grains into a tight corner which requires constant pressure to keep them there.

Thomas D. Campbell of Montana, known as the biggest wheat grower in the world, was at the board of trade today. He is very bullish on wheat and flax.

"I think the present price of wheat and flax," he told me, "is unjustly low. Cash grain in Kansas and our northwestern states is selling in proportion to cost of production less than in 1893. Practically all threshing returns in Montana and North Dakota have been less than estimates; our own crop was less than half of an average crop."

The grain markets have worked into a position where they seem to be likely to begin to attract outside support in a big way. The public, expecting an "election bull market," sees one building up under its eyes and may feel that the time is now at hand.

If corn, wheat and rye get under way tomorrow they may advance into new high ground with considerable rapidity. They would seen to be especially worthy of bull consideration if they open at about where they closed today or lower.

But that does not seem probable.

Professionals, however, will be slow to cover short sales or to buy for long account on an opening bulge, but on any early reaction—if the markets open higher—decided buying support may come into all the markets and give them a strong upward impetus.

Shorts may not care to stay in the market over Sunday with the possibilities for developing strength that are beginning to loom up.

In the cash market wheat was 1c up; corn was 1c to 2c up; oats were steady to ¼c off; rye was steady; barley was steady to 1c off.

In Crockett County

Zoch, Moncrief and Marland's No. 1 Todd in Crockett county will be on the east line of the Todd ranch, offsetting on the northwest section 68, block UV, owned by Phillips Petroleum company No. 1 Todd, will be about four miles north and a little west of Young and Donnelly's No. 1 Shannon, which made an estimated 7,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily from around 1600 feet and has been shut in for several months. It has been reported recently that this wildcat will be deepened.

About eight miles west of No. 1 Todd, J. S. Cook drilled in a gasser making some oil in section 50, block YZ, G.C.&S.F. Ry. Co. survey, also on the Todd ranch, and sold the property to The Texas company. Republic-Marland got a small well on the Todd ranch at around 1600 feet 3½ miles west and a little south of Zoch, Moncrief and Marland's location, in section 17, block WX, G. C.&S.F. Ry. Co. survey. Four to six miles south and east of the new No. 1 Todd, small oil shows were encountered in the top of the lime in tests drilled by Cromwell and Young, Young and Donnelly, Marland-Texon and the Crockett Drilling syndicate. Zoch, Moncrief and Marland's No. 1 Todd is located in a valley surrounded by an escarpment.

Skelly-Utah Southern's No. 2 university in Reagan county, will be about 2800 feet northeast of the No. 1, a producer, which came in last January, opening a new area between the Big Lake field in Reagan county and the Powell pool in Crockett county. No. 1 makes around 30 to 35 barrels daily. California No. 4 university, a south offset, is a smaller well.

Three other tests drilled in the area were dry, getting sulphur water in the lime. These were: Marland's No. 1 university in section 26, block 8, two and one-half miles northeast of Skelly-Utah Southern No. 1 university, total depth 205 feet; Skelly No. 1 University-Tonstill, in the northeast corner of the southeast quarter of section 35, block 8, about 1¼ miles northeast of the first producer in the area, total depth 3158 feet; Texon No. 1 university, in the northwest corner of section 11, block 7, about three miles southeast of the producer, total depth 2103 feet.

Gulf Production company's No. 2 O'Brien in Winkler county, will be an east offset, to and 660 feet from Sid Richardson, Frank Kelsey and White Eagle Oil and Refining company's No. 1 O'Brien, a producer in section 50, block F, which has opened a new pool or marked an extension of the Hendrick field almost six miles south and slightly west. The Richardson well gauged almost 900 barrels in 24 hours before casing was cemented last week at 2813 feet. It is 2954 feet deep. Gulf's No. 2 O'Brien will be that company's first in the area, the location for its No. 1 O'Brien having been abandoned.

YANKS BATTER CARDS, 9 TO 3

Hugmen Capture Second in Row From Cardinals

noon with his funny little cap perched atop his grey thatch and his long arms swinging rhythmically as he shot his fast O ball. The difference was that the fast ball, which used to zip past these same Yankees, went whistling back out to the distant parts of the stadium this afternoon.

The spectacle of old Alex ducking enemy line drives until he looked like a man taking his morning setting up exercises by radio, was a novelty to world series baseball.

Cards Collapse

As for the rest of the Cardinals, they seem to have collapsed worse than the Pittsburgh Pirates did in the 1927 series, and this is said with no attempt to detract from the excellent pitching of young Mr. Pipgras once he got settled down to work.

Gehrig Hits Homer

Lou Gehrig struck the blow which put the skids under Alexander in the opening inning, a tremendous home run which went far into the bleachers behind right center, scoring Cerdic Durst and Babe Ruth ahead of him. Alex was so mad he swallowed his chewing gum and retired the next two batters with six pitched balls.

The damage was done, however. That smash of Gehrig's broke the spell which old "Pete" used to weave around the American league champions and from then on his downfall was one of those sad sights which tear at the heart strings of even hostile baseball fans, who, after all, are the most sentimental souls on earth, whether they are throwing bouquets or beer bottles.

Most of the 60,714 fans who attended the obsequies probably felt a little heart throb, despite their joy at the Yankee victory, when Alex took off his peaked cap, scratched and shook his head, and walked with drooping shoulders from the box in the third inning.

Birds Score Three

The Cardinals had tied the score in their half of the second, scoring three runs on two hits and Tony Lazzeri's error, and it looked like anybody's ball game at that point. It seemed to be dollars to doughnuts, as a matter of fact, that Alex would outpitch Pipgras, who was quivering like the last leaf on an oak tree and having more trouble in finding the place than a man full of post war liquor has with a keyhole.

The Yanks did go one run out in front in their half of the second when Durst's second successive single sent Bengough home from second, but as yet there had been nothing to presage the impending catastrophe. That blow of Gehrig's could be put down to ordinary Yankee cussedness, the Babe having been passed, and there being nothing else for Lou to do.

The spectacle of Alexander's downfall, a downfall as cataclysmic as that of his namesake, also called "The Great," a couple of thousand years ago, was reserved for the last of the third.

Babe Ruth led off and the Yanks batted right around before they were through, but that is getting ahead of our story.

The Babe led off with a single to right center, a clean blow. Alexander then faced Gehrig and walked the big first baseman. Bob Meusel, whose home run broke up the opening game on Thursday, slammed a line drive down the left field foul line that would have been good for a homer in almost any man's ball park. But the ball struck fair a few feet from the left field boxes and took a hop for itself, evading the outstretched hands of Chick Hafey and landing in a lady's lap. This restricted Big Bob to two measly bases, and scored the Babe with Gehrig retained on third by ground rules.

Benny Delivers

Lazzeri grounded to High, who tossed him out after holding the runners on their bases, and then Alexander walked Gene Robertson, who was at third in place of Joe Dugan to start the game. This filled the bases and brought up chunky Benny Bengough, who has been of great assistance to the Yankees in this series thus far. It was Benny who delivered the blow which drove Alexander from the box, a clean single to short right field.

Bill McKechnie gave the high sign and old "Pete" walked unsteadily from the box to the bench. A few minutes later he was trotting across the field to the club house. Clarence Mitchell relieved him and pitched splendidly from then on, allowing but two hits.

Clarence's idea of how to pitch to Pipgras with the bases filled was to hit the Yankee pitcher on the back of the lap, but from then on the Yanks on bases were not overly plentiful.

Pipgras, taking heart from that eight-run lead, steadied down, and the game was as good as over. Frankie Frisch made two hits, Maranville one, and Wilson a double, and that was the extent of the St. Louis offensive. The Cardinals have made just seven hits in two games. Jim Bottomley, their leading slugger, was pitiful at bat today, trying to murder Pipgras' slow curve with an eye to another homer, when he should have been concentrating on team play and base hits. Chick Hafey was as bad.

Work Afield Poor

The fielding was ragged today, Lazzeri making at least one St. Louis run possible by an entirely unnecessary wild and careless toss to first base in the second inning. Mark Koenig booted a few, although he was charged with but one official error.

Once again, Babe Ruth proved an able leader of the Yankee attack, which seems not only to hold together but to grow stronger as the series advances. The Babe made two hits out of three times at bat today, striking out once while trying for a homer. Durst made a hit on each of his two trips to the plate before he was replaced by Paschal when the St. Louis pitching became portsided.

The way things looked as the teams went westward tonight was that the Yankees would clean up the series and take the championship in short order. They are logical 2 to 1 favorites to do so. The St. Louis Cardinals won the National league pennant on their road trips this year. No one will accuse them of winning the world's championship in the same manner.

Sox Defeat Cubs In Erratic Game

CHICAGO, Oct. 5. (AP)—Baseball at its best and worst was on exhibition today as the White Sox defeated the Cubs, 13 to 11, in the third game of the series for the city baseball titles before a crowd of 20,000 at Wrigley field.

Nine pitchers, four Sox and five Cubs, paraded from the bull pen to the mound and back again. Young Ed Walsh finally received credit for the victory. Percy Lee Jones, the third Cub hurler, was the loser. The Cubs outslugged the Sox 18 to 15, but they also out-errored them at the critical moments.

The Cubs have won two of the three games played.

COYOTES SET FOR ARDMORE

Pack Ready for Game Despite Cripples

By GORDON FULCHER

Crippled by the injuries of three first string linemen and one promising back, but still in better physical condition than they have been this season, Coach Bud McCallum and his high school Coyotes left Friday afternoon to engage Ardmore, Okla., High school Saturday afternoon in what will probably be one of the hardest pre-conference games of the season.

McCallum's regular backfield of Capt. Harvey Black, Kenneth Mills, Dale Davis and Dick Hambrick are in excellent condition for the contest this afternoon. Hambrick has been calling signals during the week's practice and probably will resume that duty in the game this afternoon.

Line Improves

The Coyote inexperienced line, despite the absence of the three regulars, has improved greatly this week under the direction of Assistant Coach Bill Morris.

Pete Powell, end, who has been working at fullback during the greater part of the season, has been shifted again to a wing and will no doubt start the game this afternoon. Clarence Bains will probably be McCallum's choice for the other end.

The three injured men, who are Jack West, Rollin Dixon and Howard Scott, from the line, and Jerry Elliott, halfback, will hardly be used.

Probable Lineup

The probable starting lineup against the Oklahomans is as follows:

Indianapolis Defeats Rochester by 6 to 4

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 5. (AP)—The sterling pitching of Steve Swetonic, and the heavy hitting of Reb Russell was too strong a combination for Rochester to overcome and Indianapolis won its fourth game of the "little world series" here today, 6 to 4.

One move victory will give Indianapolis, pennant winners in the American association, the series.

TEXAS GIRL IS DUPED IN CITY

Chinaman Given Jail Term By Court

CHICAGO, Oct. 5. (UP)—Tom Wang, 27, a Chinese student, today was sentenced to three months in the Dekalb county jail, by Federal Judge Fred L. Wham, on a charge of violating the Mann act.

Wang pleaded guilty and although the girl in the case, Mary Pauline Spillers, Dodd City, Texas, was not present to appear against him, was given a jail term.

According to Wang's story he joined a "lonesome club" in Hinsdale, Ill., and ran a newspaper advertisement stating that he was a member of the club and wished to meet girls. The Spillers girl answered the ad and after several months correspondence came to Chicago.

Wang declares he married the girl at the Northwestern depot, according to the Chinese custom, with a "red cap" officiating.

DEMO LEADERS STUMP AREA

Wichitans Make Speeches For Candidate

Heavy campaigning over the week-end was announced Friday at the Al Smith Democratic headquarters in the Hamilton building by Edgar Scurry, chairman county Democratic committee.

"The true message of Democracy must be carried to everyone in this part of Texas," said the county chairman. "We want every true Democrat to stand up and be counted.

"Excellent speakers, men with the ideals of their party close to their hearts, are giving their time to campaigning for the Democratic party and for Governor Smith.

"Bernard Martin will speak at Archer City at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

"Burkburnett will hear R. E. Huff, C. C. McDonald, and Bert King Saturday afternoon.

"Graham will hear Rube Loftin of Henrietta Saturday. I probably will go there with him.

"These are only a few of the places which will hear good speakers in the immediate future.

"Meantime, we invite everyone who will vote at the coming election to come to the Democratic headquarters here and get information on Smith. We have literature on the platform, on the candidates and on many other things pertaining to the campaign. We also have excellent pictures of Joe Robinson and Al Smith."

Warrants Served On Grand Jury Bills

A warrant on an indictment returned Thursday by the grand jury charging burglary was served by the sheriff's department Friday on Edgar Menefee, who is in the county jail. Warrants on five other indictments brought in by the jury had not been served Friday night, according to Sheriff W. G. Bralley.

An indictment charging burglary and assault with intent to murder was returned against H. P. Rich with Henry Whitner. Whitner is in the county jail from which Rich escaped several weeks ago. He still is at large.

Chicago Employers List 40 Bombings

CHICAGO, Oct. 5. (UP)—Forty bombings laid to rackets were listed today in a report of the employers association which warned of the growing power of racketeers. The report divided "the racket" into three elements—the unscrupulous union leader, the trickster business man and the crooked politician.

Abilene Christians Win From Sam Houston, 6-0

HUNTSVILLE, Oct. 5. (AP)—A 50-yard march down the field in the first quarter enabled the Abilene Christian college Wildcats to defeat the Sam Houston Bearcats, 6 to 0, in their initial T. I. A. A. encounter here today. Roy Stevens, elusive Wildcat halfback, took over the only score of the game on a 15-yard end run.

Political 'Pull' Hurts Justice for Criminals

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 5 (US)—Political pull is seriously hampering the administration of criminal justice in the United States, E. R. Cass, president of the American Prison association, and general secretary of the New York Prison association, declared here tonight. Mr. Cass spoke at the opening session of the fifty-eighth congress of the American Prison association.

NO CHARGE

Al Smith Buttons Free, Says Democratic Chairman

The most ridiculous of all political campaign absurdities is the story that the Al Smith headquarters is charging $1 each for the Al Smith buttons, it was announced at the county Democratic headquarters in the Hamilton building Friday.

"New buttons were expected Friday, for our supply had run out," said Edgar Scurry, county Democratic chairman. "The supply probably will arrive Saturday.

"When we had no buttons at all, we were astonished to receive telephone calls and requests for buttons, the requests being accompanied by the question 'how much do they cost'?

"Inquiry revealed that the word had been passed around we are charging for these buttons. Nothing could be more ridiculous, for we are only too glad to have folks wear these buttons."

HASKELL FAIR AWARDS MADE

Rule Wins First Place in Farm Exhibits

(By Staff Correspondent)

HASKELL, Texas, Oct. 5.—Friday night found Henry Alexander, president, and other officials of the Haskell County Fair association pleased with the success of the first two days of the exposition and confident that the program on Saturday, the final day, would attract greater crowds than were hoped for by the most optimistic at the beginning of the fair.

The automobile racing program, which after Thursday's exhibition, is sure to attract large crowds, has been arranged as a feature of the Saturday program. The five-eighths mile oval is in perfect condition and the crack drivers of this section are among the entries. Time trials, which were an event of Thursday's program, will be held again Saturday when an effort will be made to lower the track record of 69 seconds, established by Vick Felt, Deer Trail, Colo., driver in the Thursday trials.

Judging Completed

Friday was devoted largely to the completion of judging and awarding of prizes to the winners in the various departments. E. A. Miller of College Station judged the agricultural exhibits. C. P. Van Winkle of Dallas was the judge of the poultry show of more than 500 birds. E. R. Eudaley of College Station judged the livestock and Miss Mamie Maxwell of Childress, formerly home demonstration agent in Knox county, was the judge in the woman's division.

Rule took first place for the best agricultural exhibit among independent schools of the county and Rochester was second. Among the rural schools Foster was first, Midway, second; Post, third, and Bunker Hill, fourth. For the first time Haskell domestic science and manual training classes exhibited their work at the fair but did not compete with other schools of the county for prize money.

Painting Attracts

All of the exhibit halls were crowned with visitors Friday afternoon. Visitors were especially attracted to the poultry show where more than 500 birds of practically every breed are being exhibited.

Visitors in the art exhibit, which is in charge of Mrs. C. L. Lewis, were impressed with a painting by Karl McGregor, who is a mechanic at a local garage. The picture, which is a copy of a well-known painting of an Indian chief, is done entirely on screen wire but only a close examination of the "canvas" reals this.

Friday's crowd was estimated at between 2500 and 3000, largely townspeople.

Plot to Stir Religious Quarrel Is Denounced

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 5. (UP)—Dr. John H. Simon, prominent Catholic layman and founder of the German-American Smith for President league, denounced here today what he characterized as "a political plot calculated to stir up religious controversy."

Several prominent Protestant St. Louisians have received letters of unknown origin, signed "Macs," appearing on their face to be intended solely for a Catholic recipient and urging the election of Smith.

"Macks" was explained in the letter to mean "make America Catholic solidly."

C OF C TO NAME 20 NOMINEES

Committee to Select Leaders Friday

Election of a nominating committee of seven members to choose candidates for the board of directors, and an address on "Creating Community Spirit" by Ben R. Vardaman, lecturer on problems of community and civic interest, were featured on the program of the membership meeting of the chamber of commerce Friday at the Kemp hotel.

The committee chosen is as follows: Dr. Everett Jones, E. H. Eddleman, J. C. Hunt, R. J. Irvine, W. P. Killingsworth, Oral Jones and W. S. Curlee. Dr. Jones was appointed temporary chairman. The committee will meet at 1:30 o'clock Friday evening, Oct. 12, at the chamber of commerce to name 20 nominees from which the chamber membership will choose five directors by written ballot in January.

"The spirit of the people of any community determines the strength of that town or city," said Mr. Vardaman as he commented upon the enterprising spirit of the people of Wichita Falls. Unselfish leadership for any community is a requisite if that city is to experience growth, he said. The public is on the lookout for leaders, and unselfish leaders alone have the power to supply the need felt, he declared.

Charles I. Francis, president of the chamber of commerce, presided over the meeting and made announcements. Rev. W. H. Townsend, pastor of the Lamar Avenue Baptist church, gave the invocation.

Hapless Tourist Given Hand Here

ing. He said his office has received several complaints of tourist arrests during the last few weeks.

While Hale and his party slipped out of Wichita Falls on their journey, a man who simply said he represented a "group of Wichita Falls sportsmen," brought to the Record News office $12.30, the amount of Hale's fine. Many other calls and offers of assistance were received but Hale and his party already had continued on their journey.

Arrest Defended

Frank Morgan, constable, defended the arrest of Hale by one of his deputies, although he had not known of the case prior to reading of it in the morning paper. Mr. Morgan said the officer was justified in making the arrest and had reported that Hale's truck was not even wired for a tail light. Members of Hale's party, however, declared the light had bounced out when the party crossed railroad tracks coming into Wichita Falls. Hale didn't seem to think the question made much difference, as he lost his $12.30 either way.

Delegated by Hale to plead guilty for him, the arresting officer presented the case before Jodge O. L. Gibbs, justice of the peace, Friday morning. The defendant did not appear in court and the $12.30 was entered on the justice's books when Judge Gibbs declared Hale's bond forfeited.

Judge Gibbs said, however, he would undoubtedly have freed Hale of the charge and would have refunded the $12.30 had the defendant appeared in court to answer charges.

Bond Forfeited

"This court doesn't want to be hard on tourists and these cotton pickers," Judge Gibbs declared. "And the court doesn't want to be stringent on people in strained circumstances, but these people didn't appear and I couldn't know anything of their financial circumstances. All I could do was to forfeit his bond.

"When a man puts up bond for his appearance and doesn't show up in court all I can do is forfeit the bond and that is the custom in all courts," Judge Gibbs said.

"These traffic laws must be enforced," Constable Morgan declared as he defended the officer in making the arrest of Hale. "I draw criticism whether I enforce them or not. Just suppose, now, that the car had been permitted to remain on the highways and another automobile had crashed into the unlighted end of Hale's truck, and that someone had been killed. Infinitely more criticism would have been due my department for having failed to remove the truck from the highways than is now due because the law was enforced," he said.

"The law leaves no choice as to what we shall do when arrests are made. The way was opened for Hale to return Friday and contest the charge. More than once I have personally contributed to the means of making repairs to automobiles which will permit penniless travelers to continue on their journey without being a menace to all night traffic on the road. I do not feel that any apology is due for Hale's arrest," Mr. Morgan declared.

Questioned by a reporter, Mr. Morgan admitted he probably "would have turned the man free" if he had been present Thursday night.

'What Are You Worth?' Goodell's Question to Young Folk in Talk

"What are you worth?"

That is the question Dr. Charles L. Goodell asked a large crowd of young people who heard his sermon in First Methodist church Friday night. The query he put to his young audience was the subject of his sermon.

"The greatest values are not physical, nor even intellectual, nor are they financial values of any sort," Dr. Goodell declared. "What are you worth, let me ask, with character and service in view?"

"What are you worth to yourself? I know there are men with an exaggerated ego. If you could buy them for their real value and sell them for what they think they are worth you could make a fortune at a single trade. But I am not interested in that view of personal worth. As you sit down with your own conscience and in the light of God's book and measure yourself in your real character, what is your worth?

"Are you a necessity in your family or could your wife's second husband do just as well as you? Are your children growing up with your stamp on them for good, and will they rise up to call you blessed when the brief day of your life is over, and when you sleep the long sleep will they moisten the grassy tent under which you rest with the tears of reverence and love?

"What are you worth to your neighbors? There are some people who are simply ciphers in the community, but there are others who build themselves into the life of the community. I have known business men who were the employers of labor and they felt that their position brought with it great responsibility. They were interested in all the families whose members were in their employ. If there was any sickness they inquired and if necessary, administered. If there was any need or sorrow they were there to share it with the people of their community. Have you the same spirit?

"Again, what are you worth to the church? The church is an organization vital to the life of the community and the nation. In New England every town was organized around a church and the ancient preamble to the founding of a town began something like this:

" 'Whereas, a certain number of families are remote from a place of worship, therefore be it enacted that a new township be set up.' You could not give away corner lots in a town where God's church was flouted and overthrown. Every business man owes it to the community to share in the life of the church. It is an institution from which he gains profit in every way and he ought to feel it a duty and delight to have a share in its support.

"My last inquiry and one which covers the whole range of human activity is, 'what are you worth to God?' You often make an expression of your faith in God. Has it ever occurred to you to seriously contemplate God's faith in you? God has put you in charge of the marvelous works of His creation. He trusts you to see that they are utilized for the advantage of the race. Measured by material conquests it looks as if God's confidence in men had been well placed. But He has far greater tasks for men than those to which he have called attention.

"You are the heir of all the ages. The world has traveled in long and bloody paths in your interest, and that you may sit here in comfort of life, liberty and opportunity as your inheritance, men have suffered and bled and have gone to graves of martyrs."

CHEST SEEKS NEGRO HOME

Committee to Present Plan To Commissioners

A request for co-operation in establishing a home and hospital for sick, aged and disabled negroes will be made on the Wichita county commissioners, it was announced Friday following a meeting of the budget, endorsement and campaign committee of the Wichita Falls Community chest.

A committee was named at the meeting to confer with the commissioners as follows: W. M. McGregor, chairman; C. E. Basham and P. B. Roberts.

A suggestion made by Dr. F. R. Collard for the Salvation Army that the Family Relief association be abolished and the work of that unit of the chest be transferred to the Salvation Army was received by the committee.

After hearing the suggestion and considering it, the committee adopted a resolution by Harry Hines that the Family Relief association be commended for its excellent work this past year and that it be continued this coming year.

Tentative budgets of the member organizations of the chest were received and considered. Letters are to be sent to the member organizations on their budget recommendations suggesting further consideration of them, it was said.

Walter D. Cline presided, and the following members of the committee were present: Mrs. W. A. Maloney, Miss Maud Thomas, John F. O'Donohoe, Joe Art. Wm. Daniel, C. E. Basham, Lester Jones, Mr. McGregor, Mr. Roberts and Mr. Hines, the vice chairman.

KGKO OFFERING OPERETTA AIRS

'Naughty Marietta' Music in Demand on Radio

BaldwinMontgomery and R. E. Shepherd, local musicians, broadcast selections from "Naughty Marietta," opera comique which will be presented Monday evening at the Memorial auditorium under the auspices of the Woman's Forum, from 7:30 to 8 o'clock Friday evening from station KGKO.

Famous Melodies

Mr. Montgomery sang "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" accompanied on the piano by Mrs. R. E. Shepherd. Mr. Shepherd gave "Slumber On, Little Gypsy Sweetheart."

The ticket sale for "Naughty Marietta" being held at McConnell's Furniture store will continue there until Saturday night at 9 o'clock.

Reservations will not be held later than this time unless they have been paid for. Tickets may be called for at the box office of the auditorium until Monday night. The sale will continue Monday at the auditorium box office.

A number of requests have been received to have the songs repeated on the Saturday evening program.

The music of Herbert's operetta is declared to be of surpassing beauty. Its melodies will live long in American hearts, while its Italian street song, with the fascinating Zing, Zing chorus is known over most of the civilized world.

The opera has a score of musical hits. "The Soldier's Song," by Captain Dick and his men, and the Taises Vous of the Casquette girls are famous. The outstanding numbers in the first act are the "Naughty Marietta" song by the prima donna and "It Never, Never Can Be Love," by Captain Dick and Marietta.

"The Dance of the Marionettes" and the "Loves of New Orleans" are remembered by music lovers everywhere.

Motif of Work

One of the most beautiful songs, with its weird, fantestic melody, and its haunting sweetness is "Under Southern Moon."

"The Dream Melody," however, is the great motif of the work. Its theme is carried constantly throughout the whole performance.

All of the music is not lilting and emotional. The comedy is exceptional. To Silas and Lizette, the two comedy roles, are entrusted some of the successful situations into which these two people constantly are precipitating themselves, always furnish good humor and hilarious laughter.

6,000 ATTEND BARNES CIRCUS

Wild Animal Show Draws Crowds Here

Al G. Barnes circus tent was packed to capacity Friday night by 6000 Wichitans. Barnes himself headed the show when he led the equestrian parade on his great, dark bay charger, "Full Dress." Horsemen said the animal is one of the finest specimens ever seen here.

Animal acts, which reached their climax in a mixed tiger and lion act in one cage, featured the evening and divided honors with the wild west features.

The menagerie contained African water buffalos, and also black Nubian lions. There are only a few black Nubians in captivity. Attraction in the menagerie was centered the early part of the evening in a mother tiger and her three kittens who played, cried, bit and tussled in their cage as their mother cared for them in much the same manner as house cats. The kittens were only three weeks old.

An unusually large herd of elephants, aerial trapeze artists, tight wire walkers and all of the other types of entertainment which usually are found in a circus were presented.
