President Reagan

Group to recommend budget cuts

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan's budget advisers are recommending that he cut spending by $50 billion in fiscal year 1986, but are likely to leave decisions on where the cuts will come in the president's lap, according to an administration official.

The official, speaking only on condition he remain anonymous, said late Sunday that a high-level budget group is likely to recommend that Reagan cut the federal deficit from its current level of 5 percent of the Gross National Product to 4 percent in fiscal 1986, 3 percent in 1987 and 2 percent in 1988.

That apparently translates into a deficit target of roughly $160 billion in 1986, compared with an estimated 1986 deficit of $206 billion if no further action were taken.

Under this plan, the deficit would be reduced steadily to just more than $100 billion in 1988, down from the currently projected $210 billion deficit at the end of fiscal year 1985 in October.

As the budget debate swirls among his aides, Reagan is spending a Thanksgiving vacation at his ranch, "resting and rejuvenating himself for the second term," said deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

The budget group, made up of 12 high-level administration officials, met for more than 12 hours last week in an as-yet unsuccessful effort to agree on ways to recommend the budget savings in the 1986 budget now being prepared.

The official said it appeared likely that instead of presenting Reagan with one recommended way of achieving the budget savings, the highly splintered group would instead force the president to choose how to reduce the federal budget when he returns to Washington after his vacation.

That would be a sharp departure from past practice, in which Reagan ususally receives a consensus recommendation that has been hammered out at a lower level. This time, such consensus appeared impossible, the source said.

For instance, there is widespread disagreement on whether defense spending should be cut, and on to what extent other federal programs such as student loans and Medicaid should be reduced.

Faced with the lack of agreement, this official suggested the high-level group may submit to Reagan a long list of areas in which cutbacks are possible, along with the costs of each program. The president then would be forced to select for himself which programs would be reduced and by how much.

As for defense spending, the official held out the possibility that Reagan's option paper would list a 7 percent increase in military spending, a 5 percent increase and no increase — again forcing Reagan to choose. Once the level of defense spending was settled, the president would have to select other areas to cut in order to come up with a total spending reduction of $50 billion.

Fitzwater was tight lipped on the subject of the internal budget negotiations, saying only that "We are just starting the budget process. We have no idea where we will come out." He said the goal is to "reduce the deficit as far as we can as fast as we can."

Gas plant explosions cause fires

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A series of explosions at a natural gas processing complex triggered a huge fire today in a suburb of the Mexican capital, devastating a densely-populated residential area. Authorities said at least 80 people were killed and more than 550 were seriously injured.

Mexico State Gov. Alfredo del Mazo said in a live television interview, "A little more than 80 people have perished and more than 300 were injured."

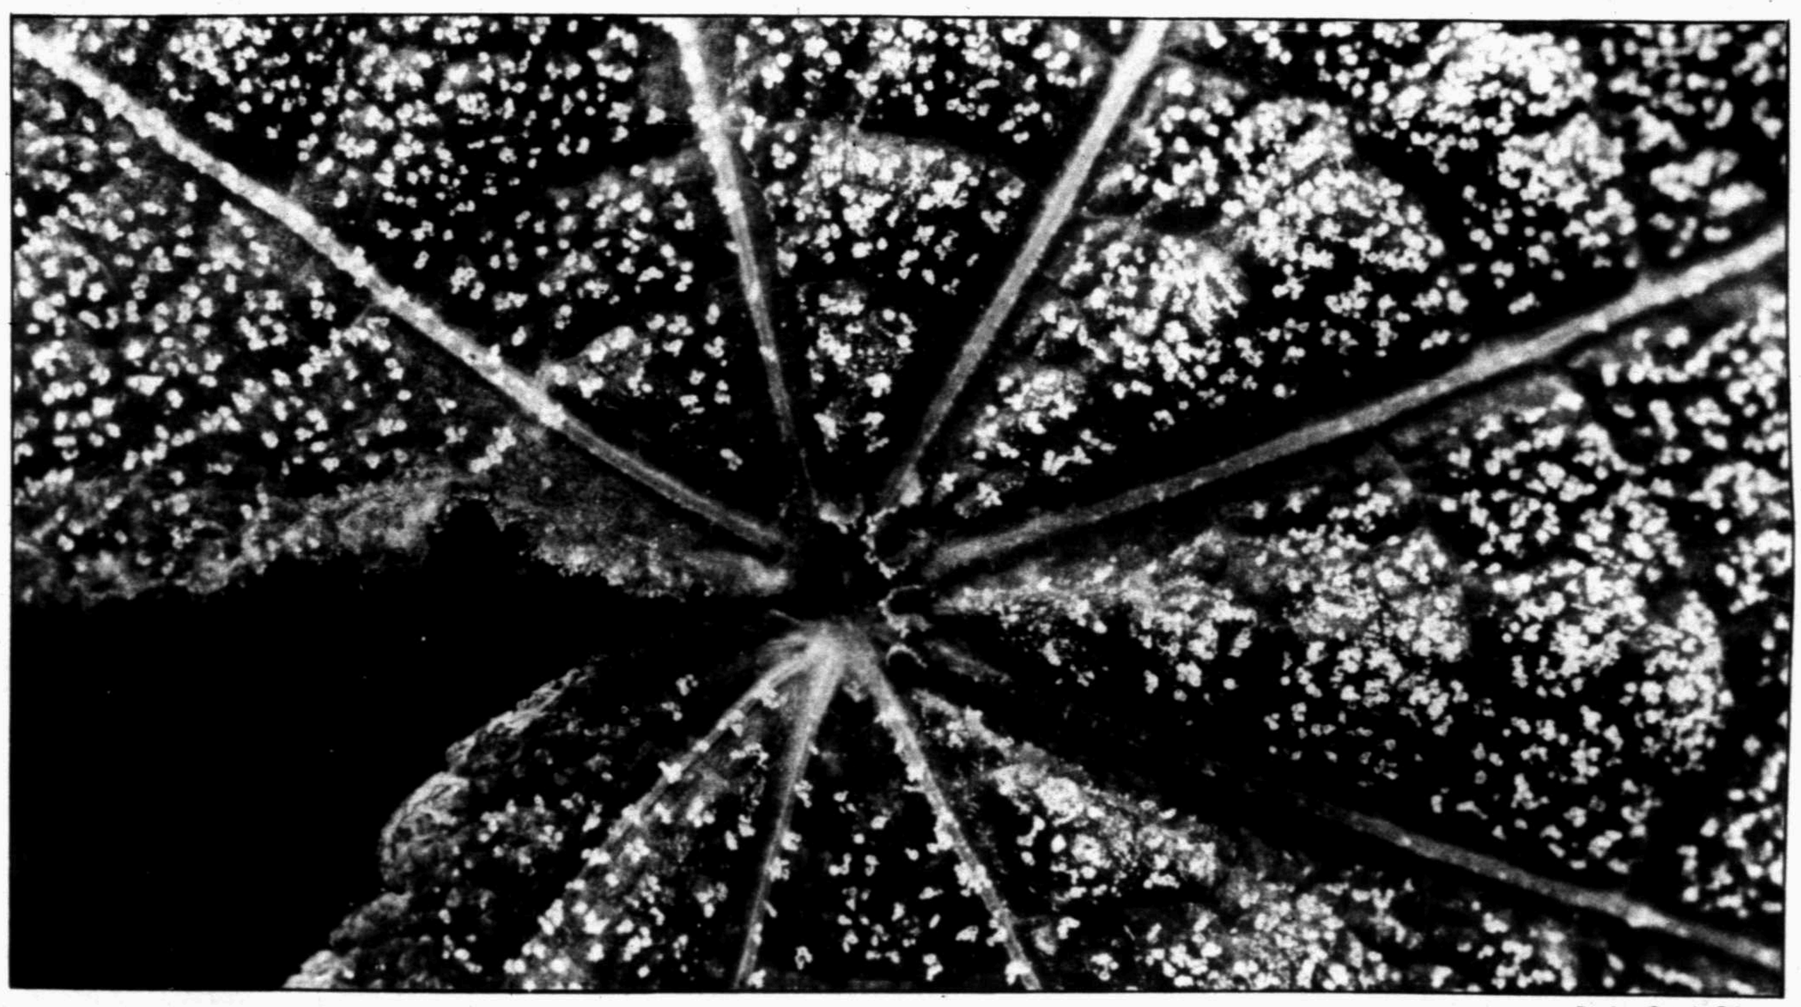

Red Cross and police rescue workers, setting up first aid facilities in a subway station and a church in the poor, crowded city of Tlalnepantla on the northeast outskirts of the Mexican capital, said at least 550 people had been treated for serious injuries.

"The place is full and more still are coming. They're all over the place," said Dr. Alfredo Jaime, a surgeon at the Medica Center General Hospital.

At midmorning, rescue officials were evacuating thousands of residents — some in city buses and some in school buses — because they feared flames could ignite a huge central storage tank containing millions of gallons of liquefied gas belonging to the state petroleum monopoly PEMEX.

Witnesses reported the fires broke out immediately after one large explosion followed by perhaps a dozen others. The fires, which sent plumes of smoke rising a mile into the air, were still burning four hours after the first explosions.

Pretty pattern

An overnight cold spell left this frost pattern on a leaf, found this morning along Fort Worth Street.

Couple finds out daughter's adoption illegal

EL PASO (AP) — Lori Burr's troubled birth was followed by 18 happy years as the adopted child of a missionary couple. But authorities now say the daughter of a Mexican prostitute is an illegal alien who could be deported.

William and Roberta Burr say they were deceived by a Mexican attorney who told them they could adopt the girl simply by declaring her as their natural-born child.

But U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials say the adoption is not legal, and that Miss Burr may have to marry a U.S. citizen, wait for the law to change or file for residency in seven years if she's allowed to stay.

One INS official said deportation is not an immediate threat.

"I think about it once and a while," the 18-year-old high school senior said of her predicament. "I try not to let it bother me."

The Burrs were missionaries of the Independent Christian Church, living in Chihuahua City, Mexico, when they heard through another church member about a prostitute named "La Guera" — The Blonde — who had given birth to an unwanted baby whose father was unknown.

They found Lori when she was 2 or 3 weeks old — weak, dirty and surviving on tea instead of mother's milk. Her weight had dropped three pounds since her birth.

"You could hardly hear her cry, she was so weak," said Mrs. Burr, 47.

The Burrs had a daughter, but feared Mrs. Burr would be unable to bear another child. They wanted to adopt and "La Guera" was willing to give her baby away for a small fee.

A Mexican lawyer told them Chihuahua state law allowed adoptions only for childless couples at least 40 years old. Both were 28 at the time.

"(The lawyer) said since we might run into some problems that we should adopt her in the common practice, the Mexican way, to register her as our own natural-born child and get a couple of witnesses," Burr said.

U.S. State Department investigators eventually caught up with the falsehood. Burr said he was told "not to worry" about U.S. citizenship papers for the girl until they moved to the United States.

"They had considered, and I have no reason to doubt them, that she was legal," said Henry McGehee, deputy district director of the El Paso INS office. "They presumed (her adoption) made her an American citizen."

Libyans say they planned to hijack F-16

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Libyan agents arrested in Cairo in a plot to kill a Libyan exile have confessed that they also planned to hijack a U.S.-built F-16 jetfighter and assassinate Egyptian leaders, Egypt's interior minister was quoted today as saying.

The weekly newspaper Mayo, published by the governing National Democratic Party, also quoted Interior Minister Ahmed Rushdi as saying the Libyan agents promised to introduce their Egyptian collaborators, who in fact were undercover security police, to the international terrorist Carlos.

Rushdi cited purported confessions made by Anthony Gill, 48, said to be the leader of the four-man team sent by Libya to Cairo to assassinate former prime minister Abdel-Hamid Bakoush, who has lived in the Egyptian capital since 1977.

Egyptian security used pictures showing Bakoush lying in a pool of blood to trick the team into believing the former prime minister had been killed last week. Bakoush appeared alive with Rushdi at a news conference Saturday.

Today, in an appearance on NBC's "Today Show," Bakoush called for an economic or diplomatic boycott against Libya to protest terrorism. "There must be an action by the whole world against this Khadafy," he said. "How can such a man be left loose?"

Rushdi said Godfrey Shiner, 47, London and two Maltese were also arrested in the plot. The four arrested agents are currently being interrogated by state security prosecution authorities prior to being served with an official indictment.

"Confessions by the leader of the group showed that one of the principal aims was to gather information about the F-16 and to explore the possibility of hijacking one to Libya," Rushdi was quoted by Mayo as saying.

Egypt has received 80 F-16s from the United States and another 40 will be delivered by the end of next year, air force commander Gen. Abdel-Hamid Hilmy said.

Rushdi said Libyan agents also confessed that Libya "planned to assassinate some Egyptian leaders and blow up some vital Egyptian installations in a manner similar to what happened in 1976." He gave no details.

The Egyptians blamed Libya for explosions in 1976 in a government building housing several ministerial departments in Cairo and on an Alexandria-Cairo train.

Egyptian officials have said since the arrests that the Libyans were plotting to assassinate several world leaders, including West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Israel rejects Lebanese demands for prisoners' release, reparations

NAQOURA, Lebanon (AP) — Israel today rejected Lebanese demands for the release of prisoners and the payment of up to $10 billion in war reparations, during negotiations on the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

At the start of the third round of talks, Israel's chief delegate instead stressed the need to agree on measures to protect Israel's northern border after an Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon, which it invaded almost 2½ years ago.

The Lebanese spokesman, Lt. Col. Bassam Saad, retorted that the Lebanese were not "policemen of Israel and our only objective is to seek peace in south Lebanon and to let the Lebanese civilians feel secure."

Saad said his delegation "accentuated the role of the United Nations in our country. We reminded the Israelis of the U.N. (resolutions) that say Israel should withdraw from Lebanon and let the central Lebanese government control the south."

Saad said the Lebanese negotiators "totally rejected" any role after an Israeli withdrawal for the South Lebanon Army, a militia equipped and guided by Israel. He said that included any efforts to integrate the militiamen into the regular Lebanese army.

Chief Israeli delegate Brig. Gen. Amos Gilboa said in a statement: "In regards to the request for compensation of $8 (billion) to $10 billion, I wish to assert most vigorously that the Israeli delegation rejects this request outright."

"The reason for our presence in this forum is to discuss security arrangements which will insure the safeguarding of our northern border. It is not our role to discuss the irrelevant matter of compensation," Gilboa said.

During the second session of the talks in this border town last Thursday, Lebanon demanded the war reparations to offset the cost of repairing damage caused by Israel's invasion and occupation of south Lebanon.

Gilboa also rejected other Lebanese demands, including the release of hundreds of prisoners held by the Israelis at south Lebanon detention centers and the opening of key roads connecting south Lebanon with Beirut and the north.

Thanksgiving turkeys 'happy birds'

RAYLE, Ga. (AP) — A roundup at Callaway Farms never begins until after sundown, because a turkey's journey to the Thanksgiving dinner table must start as a cool walk in the evening, not a stampede in the sunshine.

So say the folks at Callaway, where a turkey's life consists mostly of eating and taking it easy in a way most commercial birds never experience: They grow up on the range, not in pens.

"A bird on the range is a happier bird, and a happy bird will convert food (into turkey) faster and the cost of growing them is cheaper," said Herman Nation, who runs the turkey program for owner Eugene M. Callaway.

The farm buys day-old birds and raises them in houses for about seven weeks, when they weigh about five pounds.

Then the birds are trucked to the range, where they live in the sun or under the shade of Georgia pines until they grow large enough to make a centerpiece at a holiday meal.

But getting the turkey from the range to the table takes lots of care; the bird must be protected from all sorts of hazards — including itself.

Nation said summer rangeland must be one-third wooded, to provide shade, and rolling, with no cuts, washouts or ravines.

"The birds will just pile into a ravine, one atop of each other," he said. "Hundreds of them will smother. If you leave a wheelbarrow or a bucket in a turkey house, they will jump into it until it is full, smothering each other."

Then, the birds are released only when the weather forecast calls for several days without rain.

Rain can destroy a flock before the birds become acclimated to the outdoor life. After that they enjoy the rain, playing in mud puddles for hours.

Most flocks comprise about 12,000 birds spread over 18 to 20 acres; rounding them up may be the trickiest task of all for a grower.

"If you push them too hard and they get hot, they'll just sit down" and die of heat stress, said Malcolm Chafin, Callaway Farms general manager.

To help the thousands of birds milling around the loader keep cool, workers mount huge fans on trucks to keep the air circulating.

Shipping begins in July and continues to about Christmas. In February the first crop of day-old birds arrives and the cycle begins again.

After several lean years, the turkey business is good this year, said Chafin.

Avian flu forced growers in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley to destroy their flocks, including breeders, and demand for turkey has taken an upturn, partly because of the rising cost of red meat, Chafin said.

"And as a rule, the country is eating 1 percent more turkey a year," Nation said.

In addition to the traditional Thanksgiving turkey dinner, the bird is finding its way into the American diet in more and more ways.

Turkey breasts, turkey drumsticks and turkey rolls have found their way onto grocers' shelves beside whole birds.

But the real innovations have come in the way turkey substitutes for red meat in a number of products.

"More and more, processors are going into other things, making turkey ham and turkey loaf and turkey hot dogs," Chafin said.

Most of today's turkeys never make it to the roasting pan, he said. "Most now go into processing for baloney or some other product."

Former senator from Vermont dies at age 92

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Former Sen. George Aiken, R-Vt., a vintage Vermonter whose career spanned five decades and whose half-serious plan for ending the Vietnam war led colleagues to describe him as "a wise old owl," died today at age 92.

A spokesman at the nursing home where Aiken was staying said he died at 9:05 a.m. Aiken had been hospitalized since September.

Aiken, who parlayed his horticultural expertise into a political base used to topple the GOP's old guard and flirt with a presidential bid, was best known for his prescription for ending the Vietnam War.

His 1966 peace plan — "The U.S. should declare victory and get out" — prompted a congressional colleague to describe Aiken as "neither a hawk nor a dove, but a wise old owl."

Throughout a political career that spanned five decades, Aiken always listed his occupation as a farmer and plant grower, and his Yankee roots never weakened during his stay in Washington.

Aiken was a progressive Republican, who left his plants in 1931 for a seat in the state House. He spent two years as speaker of the state House, two years as lieutenant governor, four years as governor and 34 years as a U.S. senator. In 1975, he returned to his gardens on a Putney hillside.

Aiken was a Vermont institution. In his last re-election bid, in 1968, he reported spending $17.09, mostly for postage to thank people for circulating his nominating petitions, "which I didn't ask them to do," he said.

But it wasn't always that way. His radical ideas so angered the GOP establishment in the 1930s that the state Republican chairman referred to Aiken as "that Communist" when Aiken first ran for the U.S. Senate.

Aiken sent Republican regulars sputtering in 1938 when he told the GOP's Lincoln Day dinner in New York: "The greatest praise I can give Lincoln today is to say that he would be ashamed of his party's leadership today."

That nationally broadcast address was part of a concerted campaign to promote Aiken as a "5-foot-8 Lincoln" whose presidential candidacy would breathe new life into the spiritless Republican Party.

Aiken abandoned the presidential effort but never stopped fighting for rural America, spearheading efforts to bring electricity to remote areas, build the St. Lawrence Seaway, and to create the nationwide food stamp program.

When Aiken retired from the Senate in 1975 he was dean of the Senate, the oldest senator and the ranking Republican on both the Agriculture and Foreign Relations committees.

He was considered an expert on foreign affairs, serving as U.S. representative to the United Nations in 1960 and attending the 1963 Moscow test-ban treaty talks on behalf of President Kennedy.

But he was best known for the simple virtues that epitomized the Vermont Yankee: honesty, decency and independence.

During his years in Washington the white-haired Aiken could be found in the early mornings feeding peanuts to the pigeons on Capitol Hill.

He was often described as a man with little power but immense influence. Presidents from Franklin Roosevelt to Gerald Ford called on him for advice and many turned to him in their most troubled moments.

In a recent interview, Aiken singled out his counseling and consoling as his proudest accomplishment. He at first balked when asked what he thought was his important accomplishment.

REAGAN

Although Reagan pledged during his 1980 campaign to balance the federal budget, aides acknowledged last week it was highly unlikely that could happen until the 1990s, after Reagan has left office.

Part of what makes it difficult for the president's budget advisers to reach agreement, the source said, is that Reagan has promised not to raise taxes or cut Social Security or defense. Reaching the budget goals means either breaking a promise or making all the required savings among remaining programs, which make up only one-third of federal spending.

The source also said that preidential counselor Edwin Meese III handed out at a Cabinet meeting last week galley proofs of a to-be-published Heritage Foundation budget document suggesting where government programs could be cut.

Some officials at the session worried that distributing the work of the conservative policy center at a Cabinet meeting was tantamount to announcing the government was considering cutting programs suggested by the foundation. Fitzwater said the document "has no official standing."

The New York Times and the Washington Post reported that the document's recommendations included cutting Medicaid payments to states deemed to have "excessive" health care costs.

Reagan, who arrived at his secluded, century-old adobe ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains on Saturday, launched immediately into ranch chores. Fitzwater said the president was on vacation, with no meetings or public appearances scheduled.

Instead, after the rain-drenched trails on his 688-acre spread dried a bit, the president went horseback riding Sunday and began work on an underground sprinkler system for a pasture near the small ranch home.

Reagan's arrival in California on Saturday occurred just six days after he had concluded a post-election vacation at his ranch. The president averages a trip to his ranch about every other month.

Unless something unforeseen arises, Reagan will not be seen this week by anyone except the select few who are allowed entry through the well-guarded gates to his property. That list includes Reagan's family, Secret Service agents, and a few aides who actually work at the ranch in shifts, such as communications personnel, his physician and a military aide who has custody of the famous black leather case that holds the codes needed in event of nuclear war.

Nancy Reagan, who visited her mother in Phoenix, Ariz., over the weekend, flew to Los Angeles for some private appointments and was spending the night there before arriving at the ranch today.

On Thanksgiving, three of Reagan's four children, his brother, Neil, and all of their spouses are planning a visit to the ranchfor dinner.

Many people fled the fires on foot, some clad only in their underwear.

Dozens of ambulances were seen moving in and out of the suburb northeast of the capital. The injured were taken to several hospitals. At one facility, reporters said the injured were crowding the hallways.

Arturo Escamilla, a worker with the private volunteer rescue organization Laser, said more than 30 acres in the poor, crowded district were devastated by the first explosion.

"I, myself, saw more than 35 bodies there. And that is one area only," Escamilla said.

His brother Isidro Escamilla, also a rescue worker, said, "There were people coming out of there all ablaze." He said the explosions sent sections of flaming gas pipes and other construction material raining down on nearby homes and other buildings, setting them afire.

A spokeswoman at the Traumatology Hospital said the facility was "saturated" with wounded and many of the injured had to be diverted to other hospitals. She said many people suffered severe burns.

"We are saturated with wounded and injured. We even have them in the corridors," said the spokeswoman, who refused to give her name.

Hundreds of less severely injured people and other refugees were evacuated to a makeshift clinic at the Basilica of Our Lady of Guadalupe.

Dozens of nearby houses were wrecked, residents said. Residents told reporters a small supermarket was behind the area where the first explosion occurred, and that many people were in line outside the store waiting to buy milk at the time of the blast.

Genovevo Rivas, a traffic policeman, said the explosion blew away the roof of the supermarket and the flaming debris set it ablaze. "There were a lot of people in there," he said. "Maybe 30, maybe 40 casualties. I don't know."

An air force pilot, Captain Gonzalo Sciler, told a television interviewer he flew over the area and "the fire was spreading everywhere."

Salvador Del Rio, a spokesman for PEMEX, said a gas truck exploded and the resulting fire spread to the installations of the Unigas company and then to the Pemex installations where natural gas for two nearby refineries is stored.

The explosions began at 5:42 a.m. (7:42 a.m. CST). Residents said the blasts were heard up to two miles away and smoke could be seen at least four miles away. Huge columns of fire could be seen from several miles away.

"It felt as if there was an earthquake, it shook the earth and then a huge flame shot up," an unidentified resident told the Televisa television network.

Lt. Guillermo Bolsa of the Federal Highway Police said the state petroleum monopoly closed its main gasline that bring natural gas from the Gulf of Mexico fields to the capital.

"It was imperative to do that immediately since the 16-inch line could well explode. The place is an inferno. No one can get near," said Bolsa.

In a television interview, Bolsa said the main highway linking Mexico City with points north was also blocked and traffic diverted. He said an area of at least 15 blocks around the site was being cordoned off.

"Israel at the present time cannot permit herself to make such gestures as long as the hostile activities against her continue," Gilboa said.

Israel had sought a cease-fire in south Lebanon but the offer was rejected by Shiite Moslem leaders.

A joint communique read by U.N. spokesman Timor Goksel at end of the day's talks said the two sides would meet again Wednesday. It said that "principles for security arrangements were presented by both sides and some positive elements appeared."

Since Israel invaded Lebanon on June 6, 1982, to rout Palestinian guerrillas, 602 Israelis have been killed and more than 3,500 wounded in Lebanon.

An average of about 50 attacks a month have been reported this year against the Israeli occupation force, with the majority blamed on Shiite Moslems who emerged as the dominant force in the wake of a flight by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Israel's daily Haaretz newspaper said today that from the end of June 1982 until last week, there had been 1,010 attacks on Israelis in Lebanon. Israeli military sources said the figure "seems to be accurate."

LIBYANS

On Sunday, President Hosni Mubarak said evidence from the four agents pointed to Libyan involvement in the Oct. 31 assassination of Indira Gandhi, India's prime minister.

The Libyan news agency JANA carried a Foreign Ministry denial of Mubarak's allegations.

Rushdi met Sunday with the ambassadors of France and West Germany to brief them on information said to have been obtained from the agents.

Rushdi said Gili confessed that after assassinating Bakoush, he planned to establish an investment company in Egypt to serve as a cover for further terrorist acts.

Gill had been a "terrorist operative for the last 12 years" and had carried out terrorist operations in Britain and France, including the assassination of a Libyan dissident in Paris, Rushdi said.

Rushdi quoted Gill as saying he had met Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy "many times" and had seen Carlos "more than once" ar a hotel in the Libyan capital, Tripoli.

"Gill promised those Egyptians whom he thought were working for him, and who were in fact policemen, that they would meet Carlos after the assassination of Bakoush," Rushdi said.

Carlos, a Venezuelan whose real name is Ilyich Ramirez Sanchez, has reportedly been responsible for several major terrorist actions.

Rushdi quoted Gill as saying that he had met Mohammed Abbasi, a Pakistani, in Tripoli and "understood from him that Col. Khadafy was financing a clandestine Pakistani group to overthrow the Pakistani regime within the coming eight months."

The aim was to replace Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq with one of the two sons of Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, a former prime minister ousted and executed by Zia, the minister said.

Rushdi quoted Gill as saying that Abbasi was in contact with Arthur Scargill, leader of the striking British miners union. The union was reported to have contacted Libya in an attempt to get funds for the strike.

Abbasi, who lives in England and heads an anti-Zia group named al-Zulfikar, denied in a radio interview that he knew or had any connection with Gill or that he was a go-between for Libya with Britain's striking miners.

Rushdi said Gill confessed that he had paid his supposed Egyptian collaborators in the Bakoush plot $10,000 and promised to pay another $140,000 following the slaying.

Gill told a national television audience Sunday that he had been working with the Libyans since July and had been in Egypt since late October.

The Burrs moved to El Paso when Lori was 6, and when she applied for a Social Security card last spring, she discovered the legal problems with her citizenship.

McGehee said Friday that no decision has been made on deporting Miss Burr.

"(Deportation) is not one of the priorities right now," he said. "With cases like this, there's such tremendous appealing humanitarian factors present where we would not want to deport them."

The law gives local INS officials the discretion to keep cases like Lori's in indefinite limbo, he said. At worst, he added, the INS could impose an extended waiting period before she would have to leave the country.

Burr said he blames himself partly for the problem, but that he would do it again."If we had not taken her, she probably would have died, died within two weeks."

Roll bars could prevent nearly half of farm tractor deaths

By LEE SIEGEL

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Small farm owners, struggling to survive financially, often fail to buy roll bars or protective cabs for their tractors, says a researcher who found nearly half of all farm dwellers killed on tractors die when the machines overturn.

"Farm tractor overturns killed three times as many people as any other fatal tractor accident," said public health specialist Robert H. McKnight.

"Almost all of the 1,163 overturn deaths (during 1975-81) could have been prevented if the tractor had been equipped with a roll bar" or protective cabin, said McKnight, speaking at the American Public Health Association's annual meeting.

Owners of small farms should be required to have these basic safety items, which cost between $350 and $500, he said.

McKnight, the coordinator of public health graduate programs at the University of Alaska in Anchorage since April, conducted his study while he was a doctoral student at Johns Hopkins University in Maryland. He said it is the first nationwide study ever to categorize the cause of farm tractor deaths.

Examining federal statistics on reported tractor-related farm deaths for 1975 through 1981, he found 45 percent of the 2,566 deaths occurred when tractors overturned.

Thirteen percent of the deaths were caused by falls from tractors, 12 percent by people being run over, 10 percent by people being crushed and 5 percent by people getting their clothing, hair or jewelry entangled in the "power takeoff" — the drive mechanism and shaft that runs powered farm implements towed by tractors.

McKnight said U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration rules require such "rollover protective structures" only on tractors used by farms with more than 10 employees, so most of the victims are the owners of small farms, their families and employees.

"It's a reasonable hypothesis that if you're struggling to pay for a farm tractor, it may be hard to pay $350 to $500" extra to buy a roll bar or protective tractor cabin, McKnight said.

"...If we could require rollover protective equipment, that would solve the problem," he said. He also urged passage of new state laws, extension of OSHA requirements to farms with 10 or fewer employees, and a new requirement to require installation of roll bars on old tractors.

The best available estimates indicate that fewer than 30 percent of the 4.5 million farm tractors in America are equipped with the devices, McKnight said, adding they usually are not standard equipment on low-horsepower tractors frequently used on small farms.

States listed by tractor death rates

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Here's a grouping of states by their annual farm tractor death rates, according to a nationwide study of tractor-related fatalities:

HIGHEST: (13 to 20 deaths per 100,000 farm dwellers) — Massachusetts and West Virginia.

HIGH: (9 to 12.9 deaths per 100,000 farm dwellers) — Arizona, Connecticut, Hawaii, Kentucky, Maine, Mississippi, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Utah, Virgina and Vermont.

MODERATE: (5 to 8.9 deaths per 100,000 farm dwellers) — Arkansas, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Michigan, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Texas, Wisconsin and Washington.

LOWEST: (less than 5 deaths per 100,000 farm dwellers) — Alabama, Alaska, Delaware, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota and Wyoming.

Blood pressure drug relieves withdrawal symptoms of smokers

By PAUL RAEBURN

NEW YORK (AP) — Cravings for cigarettes appear to be alleviated by a drug that has been known to diminish withdrawal symptoms in heroin addicts, suggesting that the cravings for heroin and cigarettes are similar, according to a recent study.

The drug, called clonidine, is normally used to treat high blood pressure and might eventually be useful as a treatment to help people quit smoking, according to a study published in Science magazine.

"The real news isn't that this is a cure for smoking," said Dr. Alexander Glassman, principal author of the new study. "The real news is that a very specific drug that affects a limited number of cells in the brain affects addiction to alcohol, opiates and smoking."

The new study found that clonidine alleviated cigarette cravings by reducing activity in certain small areas in the brain that make up what's called the noradrenergic system.

The noradrenergic system governs the automatic functions of the nervous system, such as signaling the heart to beat and regulating blood pressure, said Glassman, a psychiatrist affiliated with the New York State Psychiatric Institute and Columbia University in New York City.

It is Glassman's hypothesis that increased activity in the noradrenergic system is a signal "to the addict to seek the substance he has come to expect will diminish his impending distress."

Clonidine's ability to lower the activity of noradrenergic nerve cells is what makes it effective in treating high blood pressure, Glassman said in an interview Thursday. Fewer than one-quarter of 1 percent of the brain's neurons are noradrenergic cells, he said.

He said his findings could lead to better understanding of addictions of all kinds and more rational treatments for them. But he added he did not know how effective clonidine might be in helping smokers quit.

"I don't want to be quoted as being too optimistic about this as a treatment," he said. "The real question with this is will it keep them from going back. There you require a much longer experiment, and we haven't done it yet."

Roger Brown, chief of the neuroscience branch at the National Institute on Drug Abuse in Washington, D.C., agreed that clonidine might be an effective aid to giving up smoking.

"It sounds like a good idea to me — I'm in favor of it," said Brown, a former smoker who was given clonidine because he had high blood pressure and said he found that it reduced his cigarette craving.

"My own physician said he has found that clonidine was effective in some patients, not all of them," Brown said.

Clonidine has no dangerous side effects but is a sedative and thus makes people sleepy, depending on the dose they receive, he said.

Glassman's study was done with 15 heavy cigarette smokers who were asked to give up smoking for 24 hours on three occasions. Some were treated with clonidine, some with another Valium-like sedative called alprazolam and some with a placebo that had no effect.

The smokers who took the clonidine reported significantly less obsession with cigarettes during their day of not smoking, said Glassman.

Ten of the volunteers preferred clonidine to either the sedative or placebo. Two reported no relief from any of the substances.

Teen-ager's lawyers want change of venue

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for a teen-ager accused of murdering a female letter carrier say the trial should be moved to another city because of publicity generated since the youth's parents were jailed for refusing to testify before a grand jury.

Attorney Jack Zimmermann said he would ask State District Judge I.D. McMaster today for a change of venue.

No trial date has been set, but prosecutors have said they hope to start the proceeding early next year.

David Port, 17, is charged in the shooting death of Debora Sue Schatz, 23, who disappeared June 7 while delivering mail in the affluent west Houston neighborhood where the Port family lives. Her body was found two days later in a wooded area north of Houston.

The teen-ager remains free on $20,000 bond.

The case has been highly publicized in recent months because the youth's parents, Bernard and Odette Port, refused to testify before a grand jury investigating the slaying and were jailed Sept. 12 on contempt charges.

Bernard Port was released Nov. 9 after he answered the panel's questions. Mrs. Port also appeared before grand jurors, but McMaster ruled her testimony was insufficient to purge her of the contempt charge.

Mrs. Port, the teen-ager's stepmother, was the first to arrive home the day of the killing. Investigators searching the couple's home say they found bullet holes in the stairwell and blood on the stairs.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has asked to review transcripts of Mrs. Port's testimony to determine if she should be freed.

The Ports have argued they should not be forced to testify in the investigation, citing a parent-child privilege similar to a state law that allows spouses not to testify against each other. Texas law does not provide for a parent-child privilege.

The victim's mother, Barbara Schatz, said the couple's claims to a parent-child privilege anger her.

"It makes me awfully mad at times. I feel my parent-child relationship has been taken away," Mrs. Schatz said in a Houston Post interview published Sunday.

Mrs. Schatz said her daughter "didn't have a chance to talk about her rights" before she died. "She was doing her job. Next thing she knew her rights and her life were gone."

Mrs. Schatz said she believes her daughter's death contributed to the Aug. 6 death of her husband, Albert, 57, who suffered a heart attack.

One day after her husband's death, Mrs. Schatz filed a wrongful death lawsuit against the Ports and their son. The suit, which seeks $5 million in damages, alleges the slaying prompted Albert Schatz's death.

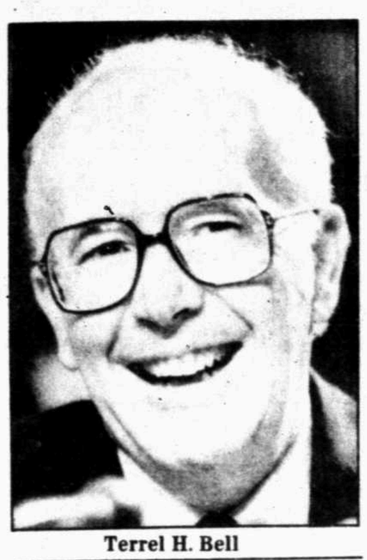

Reflected glory

The walls may be traditional, but the look is modern. Windows on the side of a store in downtown Texarkana show bits and pieces of the Criminal Justice Building, while catching segments of the sky.

Board of education needs to be 'pushy'

Terrel H. Bell

DALLAS (AP) — The State Board of Education needs to be "aggressive and pushy" in seeing through the reforms that the Texas Legislature adopted this summer, the outgoing U.S. education secretary says.

Terrel H. Bell calls the education reform package one of the five best enacted in recent years and says the Texas board should not "turn tail and run" when it begins getting complaints from interest groups.

"Powerful groups are going to be coming at the (board members) and trying to persuade them — both parent and teacher groups," Bell told the Dallas Times Herald Sunday. "You need leadership that's going to hang in, and that's going to be aggressive and pushy."

Bell, 63, who said he will resign his Cabinet post at the end of the year, said the Texas school package was comparable to the outstanding ones in California, Florida, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Bell said the Texas board should find a strong-willed person to replace Raymon Bynum, the former education commissioner.

"That board ought to go out and get the best leader they can get — someone who is very firm and very tough and who will insist on implementing those reforms," Bell said.

He added, "We ought to anticipate (the complaints) and we hadn't ought to turn tail and run when we start getting a reaction."

He says he was concerned about the controversy surrounding the Select Committee on Public Education, headed by Dallas computer magnate H. Ross Perot.

The controversy on limiting extracurricular activities as proposed by the committee would stop the reform package from being passed, he says.

"I was very pleased and very encouraged to see the statute pass. Texas is a large and complex state, and they have a far-reaching statute that's absolutely going to revolutionize education if...they can successfully implement the reforms that have been enacted," he said.

He also suggested that Texas students learn another language.

"Every student ought to master another language, and for most students in the United States, that ought to be Spanish," Bell said.

Bell is leaving the Cabinet post at the end of the year to take a professorship in school administration at the University of Utah.

Geter urges youths to stay out of trouble

FORT WORTH (AP) — Lenell Geter, freed from prison last March after being wrongly convicted of robbing a fast-food restaurant, urges youths to "stay away from the things that will cause you to be an enemy of the people."

Geter, a black engineer who works for E-Systems Inc. in Greenville, told a youth prayer meeting that "you should live the kind of life so that if someone says bad things about you, there will be somebody who will say, 'That's not true.'"

Geter was convicted of robbing a Balch Springs Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant in 1982 and sentenced to life in prison, even though co-workers at the E-Systems plant said he was working when the robbery was said to have occurred.

Charges against Geter were dropped earlier this year after a twice-convicted narcotics dealer became the prime suspect in the case.

He told youths at the Pilgrim Valley Baptist Church on Saturday that they were where they should be to win the loyalty that helped him through his ordeal.

"Stay away from the things that will cause you to be an enemy of the people who protect the laws," he said. "Get an education. Make yourself a marketable product. Go to school. Stay away from drugs. Our future is in you all."

Although his ordeal made him skeptical of the criminal justice system, he says it strengthened his faith in God and his friends.

"If you ever come in contact with misfortune, believe me that the devil is trying your faith," he said from the church pulpit Saturday. "Whenever you call yourself a Christian, you can expect an attack from the devil."

In prison, Geter taught Bible classes and preached while his family, fiancee and coworkers launched a campaign to get him released.

After national publicity, Geter was released for a retrial, but Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade dismissed all charges against Geter.

Boy who killed parents to be released soon

Teen-ager can't go to college near siblings

DALLAS (AP) — David Randall Keeler was 14 when he shot his parents to death in their wealthy North Dallas home.

That was three years ago, and Keeler, who will turn 18 on Dec. 29, is about to be released from an exclusive psychiatric facility.

Those who know him say the youth is a lot like any other high school senior approaching graduation. He thinks about attending college and wonders what the future might hold for him.

But Keeler is the family outcast. His relatives speak to him only through lawyers. They want him to go to college only if it's far away.

Keeler was a handsome honor student at St. Mark's School in Dallas when he shot his parents following a scolding by his father over his hairstyle and failure to make his bed.

The deaths of William A. Keeler, president of Arco Oil and Gas Co., and his wife, Anita Faye Keeler, on July 12, 1981, shocked the couple's friends. They described the parents as devoted to their youngest child.

Health experts say the father's criticism unleashed an uncontrollable rage in his son that had been building for years.

Texas law did not allow Keeler when he was 14 to face charges as an adult and doctors advised against sending the boy to the Texas Youth Commission. Instead, they recommended that Keeler be committed to Timberlawn Psychiatric Hospital.

The recommendation was followed by state District Judge Craig Penfold.

In an interview with the Dallas Morning News, Penfold said he is convinced that Timberlawn was the proper place to send Keeler because of the limted resources of the state youth commission.

The judge said he believes society has been protected and that the youth's restricted lifestyle at Timberlawn has served to punish him.

"He also has to live with what he did for the rest of his life," Penfold said. "That may be the worst punishment of all."

On his 18th birthday, Keeler will be declared an adult not subject to control by juvenile authorities. His juvenile record can be sealed and he cannot be prosecuted in adult court for the slaying of his parents.

Unless his family tries to have him declared mentally incompetent to manage his own affairs, Keeler will also be emancipated from a legal guardianship imposed on him by a Dallas probate court judge.

As part of a settlement agreement with his sister and two older brothers, David will share in the $1.2 million estate left by his parents.

"I think the spirit of the deal is that no one will comment," said Darrell Jordan, an attorney for Keeler's sister, Barbara, and brother, Robert.

Penfold said a condition of the settlement was that Keeler not attend Southern Methodist University in Dallas or the University of Texas at Austin because of the proximity to his siblings.

"It's just tragic situation," Penfold said.

Navy looking at Texas sites as possible bases for ships

HOUSTON (AP) — The Navy is planning to boost its battleship fleet and officials are looking at five area sites as a possible home for the revamped vessels.

Navy representatives on Saturday finished a two-day round of visits to local sites proposed for a home-port naval base they hope to have finished by 1990.

The proposed port is part of a Navy plan to increase its current fleet of about 530 battleships to 600 by 1990, said Lt. Max Allen, a Navy spokesman in Washington.

"The home-porting program is very important to us because we need a place to put all those ships," Allen said.

Navy officials said they hope to persuade Congress to earmark funds to make the USS Wisconsin seaworthy. The battleship was used in World War II and the Korean War.

Site selection officials are looking at port towns from Tampa, Fla., to Brownsville as possible sites, and they met with 30 technical experts to discuss a possible homeport in the Houston-Galveston area.

"We have a better understanding of what the Navy is looking for. We think the Navy has been impressed with our efforts," said John Focke, manager of the Houston-Galveston area team.

The five proposed sites in the area visited by Navy officials included Fort Point at Galveston Island's east end; Snake Island at the mouth of Galveston Bay; Bayport Channel north of Seabrook; a Baytown tract on Tabbs Bay; and Baytown land owned by U.S. Steel.

Focke said he believes Fort Point is a leading contender for the homeport because it is on the Gulf of Mexico and would require minimum dredging to accommodate the battleship USS Wisconsin.

Murder-for-hire trial to begin

EDINBURG (AP) — Testimony was scheduled to begin today in the murder-for-hire trial of two brothers-in-law, and prosecutors say they plan to call an Ohio man to testify against them.

An eight-man, four-woman jury was seated Friday for the capital murder trial of Dr. Victor Leal, a Brownsville eye doctor, and his brother, Ramon Leal of Raymondville.

The two are charged in connection with the shooting of their brother-in-law, Dr. Narciso Cortez, in August 1982.

Cortez was shot in his home's driveway two days before he was to face the Leal brothers in court over a land dispute.

Ferraro moves off campaign trail into the history books

By SUSAN JETTON
Copley News Service

An Analysis

Ferraro

Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro's motorcade was rolling across the flat Illinois landscape on Nov. 4 when the crackling of a CB radio broke the stillness inside the bus where reporters and campaign aides dozed.

Truckers were grousing to one another about all the highway patrol "Smokies" blocking on-ramps along the interstate between Chicago's Midway Airport and Joliet. "That Ferraro" was to blame, fumed one trucker.

"Don't worry," another assured him. "In a couple of days she'll just be another page in the history books."

He was right.

Geraldine Anne Ferraro — congresswoman, lawyer and mother — was inscribed in U.S. history and civics books forever when she left the stage of the Grand Ballroom in the New York Hilton after her concession speech on Election Day evening.

In one regard, it didn't make any difference whether she had won or lost. As Ferraro herself put it, "American women will never again be second-class citizens."

TALKING earlier that evening to reporters, Ferraro campaign manager John Sasso was sad at the result but proud of the race.

"She has changed the course of American politics forever," he said. "We can never go back. Never again will a political party select its nominees without at least considering a woman."

In less than four months, the 49-year-old Ferraro moved from relatively obscure status to being one of the best-known women in the United States. And she did it without making a movie, murdering someone or marrying a millionaire.

Her campaign laid to rest any idea that a woman lacks the grit or the grace to handle the rigors of a national political race.

She was strong enough to face 200 reporters for almost two hours of grilling on details of her and her family's financial circumstances. She was tough enough to blast Vice President George Bush when she thought he was patronizing her during a head-on debate on foreign policy.

She was energetic enough to dance with her 20-year-old son, John Jr., to Motown records at a late-night sock-hop put on by reporters and aides at a Chicago hotel after a 16-hour, four-state, two-time-zone campaign day.

SHE WORKED seven-day weeks. She grew hoarse making a half-dozen speeches a day. Her fingers ached from shaking all those hands, her mouth from all that smiling, her feet from standing.

In the last week of her campaign, Ferraro traveled 12,000 miles, crossing the continent twice and making campaign appearances in 11 states.

She took the slings and arrows along with the adulation and applause. Her husband and her parents were scrutinized and criticized, her ethnicity was disparaged, her religious faith challenged.

She came under more personal attacks than perhaps any previous candidate for vice president. Barbara Bush, her opponent's wife, said she was "that $4 million — I can't say it but it rhymes with witch." George Bush's press secretary referred to her as "bitchy." The president of the United States called her a token and said her nomination didn't mean much.

There were vicious, seemingly sexist attacks from those who disagreed with her about abortion. Ferraro is a devout Roman Catholic who personally opposes abortion but believes women should be free to choose. No pro-choice Catholic man — including such prominent politicians as Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo — ever has been subjected to the kind of harassment that she was.

FOR EXAMPLE, one poster which followed her across the country read "Gerry's Kids" and bore a color picture of a dead fetus. Posters and chants urged her excommunication by the Catholic Church.

It angered and, she admitted, hurt her. It never made her lose her cool.

"I'm always a little bit taken aback when people's concern stops only at the unborn and does not extend to the born," she frequently responded to the anti-abortion hecklers.

Her campaign proved a woman can preach economics and foreign policy as well as education and health. The issue of war and peace prevails above all others, she said, talking knowledgeably about arms control and Central America.

But there was an added dimension to her words — a woman's touch.

"Like every mother, I did not raise my son or daughter to die in an undeclared war, against an unnamed enemy, for an uncertain cause," she said frequently.

"Ferraro Cares" said a sign at Michigan State University in East Lansing. "Put Our Soldiers' Lives in the Hands of a Mother."

Ferraro blundered, especially early in the campaign. She questioned President Reagan's religious convictions, then admitted she had spoken without thinking. She promised to release her husband's tax returns, then reneged temporarily saying he disagreed — adding flippantly that those who were married to Italian men would understand.

BUT SHE learned quickly. For a woman who never had addressed a big political rally, she became a ham who could deliver punch lines without smothering them and used facial expressions effectively. She began to make her Queens accent work for her rather than against her. She began to guard her tongue without restraining her spontaneity.

As for her future, Ferraro says she is not excluding anything — even another bid for the vice presidency — although it appears much more likely that her next public venture would be to challenge first-term Republican U.S. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato of New York in 1986.

She will, she warns, watch the Reagan administration carefully and speak out on the issues about which she cares.

Currently vacationing for 10 days — beginning last Thursday on St. Croix in the U.S. Virgin Islands — Ferraro has said she'll spend a while as a private person before deciding what her next step will be.

Immediately, she said, she'll try to shed the extra 10 pounds she put on during the campaign, and she'll look for work in the legal profession. She also has been keeping notes for a book about her experience.

Recovered satellites need work before they can return to orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Two satellites recovered by space shuttle Discovery's astronauts are in good shape externally but will require considerable internal work before they can be returned to orbit, NASA says.

The Palapa B2 and Westar 6 communications payloads were lifted out of the shuttle's cargo bay Sunday and were moved to a hangar for servicing, including draining of volatile hydrazine fuel used in small steering rockets.

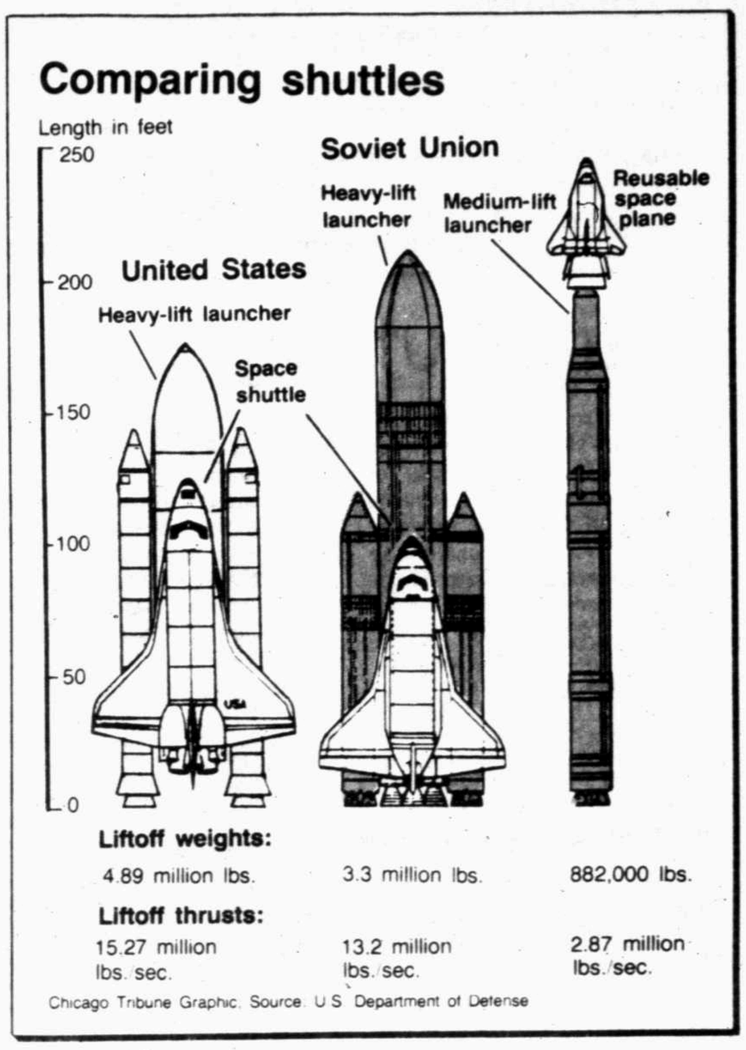

"They appear to be in good shape," said Jim Ball, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "But until experts examine them, we won't know how much internal refurbishment will be needed."

A few solar cells, which draw electrical power from the sun, were nicked when astronauts Joe Allen and Dale Gardner wrestled the payloads into the cargo bay during two bold space walks last week. Discovery landed here Friday, concluding the first space salvage mission.

Palapa and Westar will be flown next week to the Hughes Aircraft plant in El Segundo, Calif., for renovation. New fuel and rocket engines will have to be added, and some of the electronics will have to be replaced.

Insurance companies paid NASA $5.5 million for the retrieval and will pay Hughes, which built the satellites, about $5 million for guiding them into position for recovery and for repairing them.

The companies hope to resell them for about $50 million to recoup some of the $180 million in claims they paid out when the satellites' booster rockets misfired and left them in useless orbits in February.

Cuban defector says Castro's goal 'to make lot of Cubas everywhere'

NEW YORK (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro speaks of the United States "in the lowest terms you can imagine," making improved relations between the two countries unlikely, says a defector who was a high-ranking Cuban official.

Jose Luis Llovio Menendez, in a three-hour interview published in several U.S. newspapers today, described Castro as an impulsive, impassioned leader whose foreign policy goal is "to make a lot of Cubas everywhere."

"Fidel hates totally the United States of America," Llovio said Friday. "He hates its institutions. He hates its policies. He hates everybody here. He speaks of the United States of America in the lowest terms you can imagine."

Llovio, 48, chief adviser to the head of the Cuban State Committee for Finance from 1977-80 and chief adviser to the Minister of Culture from 1980-82, moved to Montreal in late 1981 and to the United States in 1982.

He surfaced publicly for the first time Friday, telling a group of invited reporters from The New York Times, The Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times that he and his wife had been granted official asylum last month.

Speaking of the Cuban foreign policy, Llovio said, "They want Nicaragua and El Salvador. After that, Honduras and Guatemala, you can be sure."

However, Llovio said his expertise was mostly in domestic affairs. He described several blunders made under Castro, saying aides are unwilling to check the president's impulsiveness.

At one point, he said, Castro decided to plant 110 million "caturra" coffee trees to provide a "green belt" around Havana. Castro failed to check into the soil conditions, however, and only 15 million of the trees survived because the soil was not proper for them, he said.

Murder convictions show organized crime not invincible

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The murder convictions of a reputed Mafia chieftain and two other men stemming from a bloody war over gambling, drugs and loansharking pierces "the myth of organized crime's invincibility," a prosecutor says.

Harry "The Hunchback" Riccobene, 74, and Joseph Casdia, 41, were found guilty Sunday of first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder in the May 13, 1982, contract slaying of Frank Monte. Vincent Isabella, 46, was convicted of third-degree murder and providing the hired killer with the death weapon.

Prosecutors claimed that Riccobene — described by the Pennsylvania Crime Commission as "an old-time LCN (La Cosa Nostra, or Mafia) member" — had Monte assassinated after learning a contract had been put out on his own life.

The three main prosecution witnesses, two hired killers and Riccobene's half-brother, broke the underworld's oath of silence, testifying that Riccobene had ordered the killing and that Casdia and Isabella helped.

"We have shown that with good investigation and with pressure we can get members of organized crime groups to break the code of silence and testify against others," said District Attorney Ed Rendell.

"The myth of organized crime's invincibility — that it can shoot and kill with impunity — is over," Rendell said after the verdict, which came in the fifth day of deliberations after a six-week trial.

"We have shown that with good investigation and with pressure we can get members of organized crime groups to break the code of silence and testify against others. The myth of organized crime's invincibility — that it can shoot and kill with impunity — is over."
— District Attorney Ed Rendell

The defendants showed no emotion as they listened to the verdicts. Riccobene, wearing a dark red jacket and a full Santa Claus beard, cupped his chin with one hand, while Casdia and Isabella stared at the jury.

"Of course, I'm disappointed," Riccobene said. "I was railroaded."

Death sentences were ruled out before the trial began, but Riccobene and Casdia face mandatory life sentences under state law. Isabella, who was acquitted of conspiracy, faces a maximum 10-20 years in prison for murder and 2½-5 years for the weapons violation.

Confessed triggerman Joseph Pedulla testified that the killing was ordered by Riccobene, whom prosecutors said was seeking to wrest control of the mob from Nicodemo "Little Nicky" Scarfo of Atlantic City.

Riccobene testified he was "retired" and that the witnesses were lying.

The Crime Commission has called Riccobene — nicknamed "Hunchback" because of his short, bent stature — the head of "a lucrative loansharking, gambling and drug business...who has been resisting an attempt by the Scarfo faction to take over his illicit operations."

The commission described Monte as counselor to Scarfo, who allegedly grabbed control of the organization after the slayings of former bosses Angelo Bruno in 1980 and Philip "Chicken Man" Testa a year later.

His court-appointed lawyer, A. Frank Reynolds, said Pedulla and Victor DeLuca, long-time Riccobene associates until they agreed to testify to escape the electric chair, and the half-brother, Mario Riccobene, told a deceptive story.

"The source of the evidence...is tainted," Reynolds said. "The witnesses had too much to gain by fabricating evidence, and nothing to lose."

Pedulla testified he shot Monte, and DeLuca testified he drove Pedulla to and from the murder scene.

Americans' personal income rises, but consumer spending down .1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income rose 0.6 percent last month but consumer spending dipped 0.1 percent, the poorest showing on the spending side in eight months, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the 0.1 percent drop in personal consumption spending, which includes virtually everything except interest payments on debt, compared to a 1.7 percent spending surge in September.

That increase followed two months in which consumer spending had posted no gain at all and gave analysts hope that the economy was finally rousing from its summer doldrums.

However, a variety of other economic statistics have signalled that the current slowdown in growth may be a prolonged one, although few economists believe the economy is about to tumble into a recession.

The government will revise its estimate of overall economic growth for the July-September period on Tuesday. Many analysts expect the new figure will be lower than the 2.7 percent current estimate. That growth rate is less than one-third the 8.6 percent rate turned in during the first half of the year.

The drop in consumer spending, which has been one of the key forces driving the recovery from the 1981-82 recession, was in line with a 0.1 percent dip in retail sales for October.

On the income side, the 0.6 percent gain in wages followed a 0.7 percent increase in September and matched a 0.6 percent August gain.

Bomb damages abortion clinic

WHEATON, Md. (AP) — Early morning explosions rocked an abortion clinic and a family planning center in this Washington suburb within about 15 minutes of each other today, Montgomery County fire officials reported.

The first explosion, which occurred at about 6:15 a.m. at the Metropolitan Medical and Women's Clinic in Wheaton, sparked a two-alarm blaze that caused "extensive damage" to the building, said Sgt. Gary Mann, a spokesman for the Montgomery County Fire Department.

The second blast didn't cause a fire but inflicted "considerable interior damage" to the Randolph Medical Building, about a mile away, Mann said.

The first facility, where abortions are performed, was the scene of a demonstration Saturday that resulted in the arrests of 46 protestors for disorderly conduct.

Think cutting

Prior to the Nov. 6th election that put him back into the White House for another four years, we noted that one of the most pressing domestic problems Ronald Reagan will face this term is the growing federal deficit. With the door on the voting booths barely closed, Budget Director David Stockman is telling the President the same thing, in other words.

Late last week Stockman gave Reagan a set of hard options for cutting the budget deficits. Stockman wanted to let Reagan and his Cabinet officers know "the kind of pain that would be involved in the various ways of reaching a much lower deficit."

In the first place, most Americans probably realize that current economic reality dictates a measure of pain in the interest of bringing about a start toward meaningful economic growth. The ones who don't yet realize that probably will in the near future because while enormous progress has been made on the problem of inflation and with interest rates down considerably from 1980, real growth and recovery hasn't begun and millions of Americans remain out of work as a result.

Any number of options can be chosen to try to bring down budget deficits. Some obviously are preferable to others and some, such as a tax increase, have been attracting steadfast opposition from President Reagan. But what we said before the election still pertains today and will pertain three months or six months from now because until rising federal deficits are brought under control, no real growth can take place in the economy.

What is not needed is such rapid economic growth that inflation heats back up and interest rates go through the ceiling again. What is needed is slow, steady, sustained economic growth that can give all Americans the chance to share in the fruits of this country's labor. That's what Reagan talked about prior to Nov. 6th and he caught the public's interest.

Now that he's back in for another four years, it's time to follow through with an assault on the deficit problem and some real economic growth for a change.

Russian inhumanity

Afghan children shipped off to indoctrination camps in the Soviet Union are the latest victims of the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

Western diplomats told The Associated Press that more than 800 Afghan children, aged 7 to 9, were recently separated from their weeping parents and sent to the Soviet Union, where they will be schooled for 10 years. The regime called the program a "magnificent friendly gesture by the Soviet Union toward the Afghan people."

We call it the kidnapping and indoctrination of helpless youngsters.

Some zealous parents were undoubtedly convinced by the Communist Party that sending their children to Russia was the right thing to do for their futures. It is easy to imagine the bright promises of professional and party rewards being dangled before the parents: Your children will return to Afghanistan as the vanguard of socialism!

But undoubtedly many parents were coerced into giving up their children. The pain of the mothers and fathers who may never see their children again, or who, once reunited, will find their children changed by indoctrination, is difficult to imagine.

The Soviets justify their occupation of Afghanistan by comparing it to U.S. military intervention in Central America. But we can remember no time in U.S. history when this country forcibly took young foreign children to be indoctrinated in America.

Communism is based on an ideal of building a new society of equality. But it relies on tearing apart families and using children as guinea pigs. Of the inhumanities done in the name of communism, the abduction of children is one of the most cruel.

Life with John

If you've made all the usual contributions to charity and your compassion is yet unspent, consider the plight of John DeLorean and forward a hefty check to defray his legal expenses.

You remember John. He's the high-living automaker who was recently acquitted of conspiring in a $24 million cocaine deal. A full-page advertisement in the Los Angeles Herald Examiner the other day urged readers to donate up to $100 to the DeLorean Defense Fund.

The fund is supposed to be the incorporated inspiration of DeLorean sympathizers but there are reports that John himself organized the group and forked over the $5,000 for the ad.

So what. It's a free country. Even jet-setters have a right to pass the collection plate once in a while. And you've got to admit that poor-mouthing at $5,000 a throw is begging in style.

Besides, DeLorean's troubles would wring tears from Ghengis Khan. DeLorean charges government harassment has ruined his life and his marriage and put him into bankruptcy. His trial was a "horror story" that could happen to any innocent American, the ad states. Well, hardly.

The fact is, though, John will have to shell out a lot to the legal fraternity. There's the bill for the trial, the divorce, the bankruptcy fees and, oh yes, the pending grand jury investigation of the $17 million allegedly missing from the DeLorean Motor Corp.

On top of it all, there's the matter of living expenses and John likes to live it up. You can't operate on peanuts in the caviar set.

Have a heart. Slip the guy a fin.

TODAY IN HISTORY

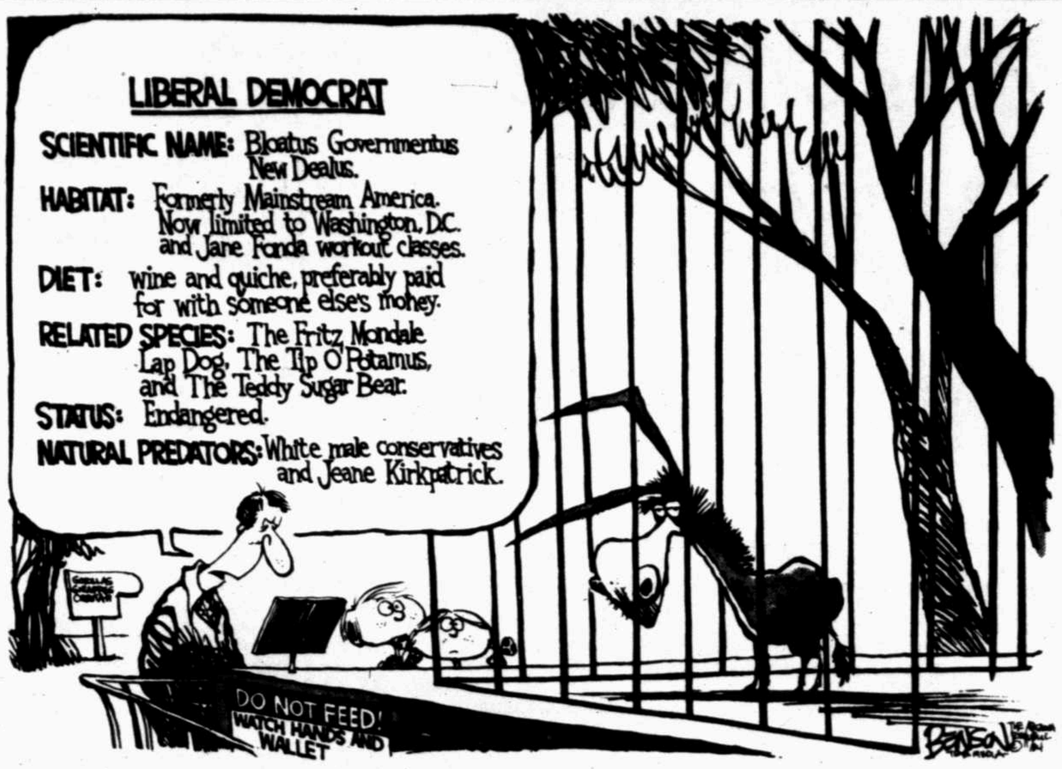

In 1977, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat arrived in Israel on a mission of peace.

In 1978, first word began to reach the outside world of the Jonestown mass murder-suicide in Guyana.

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford was formally welcomed to Japan by Emperor Hirohito and Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka.

Five years ago: Iran released three of the hostages — two black Marines and a woman secretary.

One year ago: The Justice Department said it would appeal a federal court ruling denying the government access to the medical records of a severely handicapped infant in New York known as Baby Jane Doe.

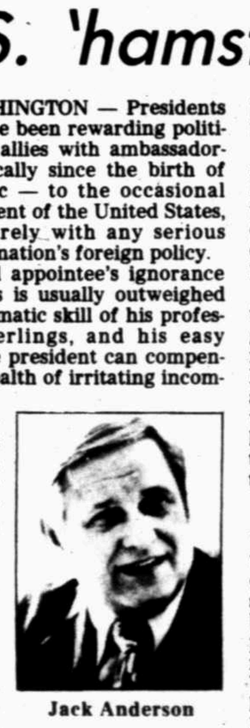

JACK ANDERSON

U.S. 'hamstrung' by inept envoy

WASHINGTON — Presidents have been rewarding political allies with ambassadorships practically since the birth of the republic — to the occasional embarrassment of the United States, but only rarely with any serious harm to the nation's foreign policy.

A political appointee's ignorance of his duties is usually outweighed by the diplomatic skill of his professional underlings, and his easy access to the president can compensate for a wealth of irritating incompetence.

Jack Anderson

But something went wrong with the traditional safeguards when Joseph Werner Reed set out on the road to Morocco in 1981.

The result was a strategic disaster for the Reagan administration: the astonishing union of a supposedly staunch U.S. ally, Morocco, with the virulently anti-American dictatorship of Libya.

It would be unfair to lay the Morocco-Libyan rapprochement solely at Reed's door. The CIA is still trying to figure out what happened, and the agency will have some hard questions to answer before outraged congressional committees.

But Reed can certainly bear a large share of the blame for the White House's failure to learn what was in the works until it was too late for anything but hand-wringing. Though the Libyans had been courting King Hassan of Morocco for over a year, Reed was so blithely confident of his close friendship with Hassan that he discounted evidence that the king might not be completely loyal to the United States.

It was a measure of Reed's detachment that he was vacationing in Maine when Morocco's "friendship treaty" with Libya was announced. Old hands in Foggy Bottom and on Capitol Hill weren't surprised that Reed was, literally, so far out of it.

Reed has admitted, in conversations with irate members of Congress, that his old buddy Hassan informed him of the treaty with Libya only an hour before the monarch announced it to the rest of the world. For years the ambassador had assured anyone within earshot that he had "unprecedented" access to Hassan and his inner circle.

Reed's behavior as ambassador was based on his sublime confidence that his close relationship to Hassan ensured continuing U.S.-Moroccan solidarity. Reed once had the sentry boxes outside his Rabat residence painted red, white and blue, and named the house Villa America. When the Moroccan prime minister had tea with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in Washington, Reed unfurled a large banner to welcome him.

In fact, Reed suffered from a severe case of "clientitis" — a malady not unknown in the Foreign Service. He sang Hassan's praises to Congress and the White House. He helped engineer an intelligence-sharing agreement with Morocco that gave Hassan information that U.S. spy satellites had picked up on the Polisario rebels in the disputed western Sahara war. This agreement and several others are now under review; the White House is understandably leery of sharing intelligence with Khadafy.

For all his claimed intimacy with the Moroccans, Reed is often ridiculed by them, State Department sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado. And this opinion was shared by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., who referred to Reed after a 1982 visit to Morocco as "a 14-karat nitwit."

An ambassador is supposed to be the president's eyes and ears, as well as the mouthpiece for an administration's views. Once again, an American president has been hamstrung by having an unprofessional ambassador in a sensitive foreign embassy.

Footnote: A spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Rabat said that "Morocco is a sovereign country" and has no obligation to discuss its business "even with its good friends."

STRICTLY PERSONAL: Many readers complain that they can't make any sense out of the highfalutin pronouncements of the economists who profess to know where the country is headed. If it's any consolation, some of our top officials share your bewilderment. Take this example of bafflegab perpetrated by the president's Council of Economic Advisers in a recent internal memo:

"Financial regulatory agencies are intertwined and interconnected. If we think of the various regulatory goals as being represented as points on the circumference of a circle, there are lines across the circle connecting each point with all the other points in a tangled web. In shaping regulatory policy the entire circle and all the interconnections must be kept in view. Yet a written analysis is necessarily linear."

An official of the Comptroller of the Currency, courageously exposing the emperor's state of undress, scribbled this comment in the margin: "Paper incapable of being outlined in any logical way. ... Rambles at best — makes no sense at worst."

Deaver departure sets upheaval

WASHINGTON — With Michael K. Deaver confiding to associates that he will be gone from the White House next spring, Interior Secretary William P. Clark is the new favorite as eventual successor to James A. Baker III as White House chief of staff.

Confirming what we reported two weeks ago, Deaver last week told a senior colleague he would quit as deputy chief of staff to take a public relations job in April. Ironically, that puts Clark, Deaver's arch-enemy, in line to succeed Baker when a Cabinet post is found for the chief of staff — expected to happen sometime in the next six months to a year.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

That pleases conservatives who held an emergency meeting during the Republican National Convention in Dallas last summer when it seemed Deaver was in line for the job. But the succession of Clark promises such a personnel upheaval, with a conservative bias, that White House staffers may try to block him before Baker actually leaves.

GERALDINE FOR PRXY

Far from being disheartened by the Reagan-Bush ticket's sweep or worried by John Zaccaro's continued legal problems, campaign staffers for Rep. Geraldine Ferraro were so elated by her performance that they have been seriously discussing bypassing the 1986 Senate race in New York and concentrating on a 1988 presidential run.

Even before Walter Mondale picked her as his running mate, Ferraro was a likely contender for the Democratic nomination against Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, a first-termer considered vulnerable as a conservative Republican in a liberal state. But some of her campaign aides believe Ferraro is now a national figure who could could go for the gold in 1988.

Skipping the 1986 Senate race would avoid a bruising Democratic primary against Rep. Thomas Downey and possibly State Attorney General Robert Abrams. Furthermore, D'Amato has carefully built a strong base of support over the past six years and will not be easy to beat in the general election.

GRAMM FOR PRESIDENT?

No sooner had Rep. Phil Gramm won his unexpectedly easy Senate race in Texas than he and his advisers began talking presidential politics. The decision was that 1988 probably is too early, but a bid for the White House is in the 42-year-old congressman's mind.

That contradicts reports by Washington insiders that Gramm soon will join the parade of presidential hopefuls to survey New Hampshire. The front-running status of a fellow Texan, Vice President George Bush, requires Gramm to tread softly in 1988. Nevertheless, some conservative insiders view Gramm as their best alternative if Rep. Jack Kemp chooses not to run.

A footnote: Oilman Boone Pickens of Amarillo, Texas, who won a fabled takeover battle against Gulf, is being pressed by Republicans to try to unseat Democratic Gov. Mark White in 1986. Pickens tells friends he has no desire to try a 1-in-4 shot, but might be willing if White is battered by authoring an unpopular tax increase next year.

A LETTER TO JESSE

The prospect that a newly re-elected Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina may become chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee suddenly galvanized the Reagan administration to draft a reply to his letter about the Soviet arms buildup in Cuba that had gone unanswered since it was sent to President Reagan last June.

A pro forma response was put in the mail within a week after the election. Another reason, besides Helms, for this belated haste was that the letter also was signed by Sen. James McClure of Idaho. He is a strong contender in the Nov. 28 election for Senate majority leader.

Sen. Steve Symms of Idaho, a persistent critic of communist arms in the Caribbean, was originator and a third co-signer of the letter. The three senators wrote the president May 21, saying that the Soviet military buildup in Cuba is worse than in Nicaragua and violates agreements that followed the 1962 Cuban missile crisis.

KEMP BOOSTS LEHRMAN

Although they had differences in the past, Rep. Jack Kemp is urging his contacts at the White House to name New York supply-sider Lewis Lehrman to fill the long vacant chairmanship of the Council of Economic Advisers (CEA).

Actually, thanks to his role the past year as chairman of the Reagan-backed Citizens for America, Lehrman probably has better White House connections than Kemp. Lehrman, who has not tipped whether he again will try for governor of New York, is not lobbying for the CEA post but would not turn it down.

CHARLEY REESE

Nicaragua power play target U.S.

What Americans should understand about the communist insurgency in Central America is that it is directed at us, not at Central America. Central Americans are merely pawns in a power play by the Soviet Union.

Charley Reese

The Soviet Union, East Germany, Bulgaria, and North Korea do not have the least bit of interest in how the people of Central America are governed. Nor do their agents in Nicaragua and El Salvador.

Now communist disinformation efforts are trying, as always, to sell the notion that the hostility of the Sandinistas is only a reaction to our hostility toward them.

You may rightfully ask why I attribute this to communist disinformation rather than to an honest difference of opinion. Well, for the very good reason that the public record is so clear that this could not possibly be true that anybody who still argues that it is, is clearly engaging in deliberate deception.

The United States government assisted in the overthrow of the Somoza government in Nicaragua. The late Sen. Frank Church of Idaho led the on slaught in the Senate. The U.S. cut off all economic and military aid to Somoza. The U.S. government publicly castigated Somoza. The U.S. Secretary of State, Cyrus Vance, went before the Organization of American States and made the unprecedented demand that Somoza relinquish his office. The U.S. ambassador to Nicaragua pressed Somoza almost daily to step down. The U.S. government intervened with other nations and prevented them from supplying Somoza's army with ammunition. Finally, when Somoza stepped down, the U.S. refused to grant him asylum. The Congress immediately gave the Sandinistas $75 million in economic aid.

In short, if the Sandinistas' attitude toward the United States were in fact based on the United States' attitude toward them, they would be our loving friends. They would not be in power but for our intervention in Nicaragua's internal affairs.

It was folly for President Jimmy Carter and his entourage of leftists, however, not to recognize that from the beginning the hard-core Sandinistas were Marxist-Leninists, even though they had formed a united front with non-communist Nicaraguans opposed to Somoza.

Negre Chamorro, now one of the leaders of the contras and a veteran opponent of Somoza, has said that the day he came out of the jungles into Managua he found Cuban military officers already in place. Chamorro went home, telling his supporters, "We've been (expletive deleted)." Indeed Nicaraguan democrats had been. The incredibly incompetent Carter Administration had been duped.

Cuba's Fidel Castro had cautioned the Sandinistas to go slow lest they wake up the Americans. Nevertheless, the Sandinistas proceeded along the classic communist pattern. In the initial coalition, they grabbed the guns — police and military. Then they eliminated non-communists from positions of power. They began to indoctrinate children with Marxism-Leninism under the guise of a Cuban sponsored literacy program. They confiscated private property, imposed food rationing (a standard form of communist control), set up the block security system, and entered into massive arms agreements with the Soviets. All this occured long before the first contra received the first bullet from the CIA.

Now, why do I say it is directed at us, rather than at Central America? Because under no stretch of the imagination do the Sandinistas need a 100,000 man army and the massive amounts of sophisticated weapons they are obtaining just to control Nicaragua.

Look at a map of the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean. The choke points can all be controlled from Cuba and Nicaragua. If you can visualize a communist Central America and a communist Mexico, 70 million strong with a long open border with the United States, you do not have to be a strategic genius to see what the Soviet Union has in mind.

You can either fight communists in Central America or you can fight them in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California. Take your choice.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi told 200,000 mourners at a memorial rally today that his mother, Indira Gandhi, was assassinated in a conspiracy to weaken India.

Thousands of troops stood guard to protect Gandhi as he called on Indians to "take revenge, not in anger or fury," but by keeping the nation united.

Opposition leaders charged that the rally, organized by the city government to mark what would have been Mrs. Gandhi's 67th birthday, was a misuse of public funds and exploitation of national grief to boost the governing Congress Party's chances in next month's national elections.

"The ramifications of the conspiracy that was hatched to kill Mrs. Gandhi, to dismember India, to make the country weak, are being revealed today," the 40-year-old prime minister told mourners at the rally. "We must use our full strength to crush such forces.

"Every day we are reading in newspapers how some people abroad are helping the agitation. We have to see that no such disruptive forces grow in India," he said in Hindi.

His remarks were the first formal statement by a government official that a conspiracy was behind the assassination of his mother Oct. 31. There have been newspaper reports alleging a conspiracy in the prime minister's shooting death.

"All the powers in the world tried to shake India," he said. "But the foundation of India is not so weak that it will be shaken by a few bullets. We showed the world that our country is stronger than bullets.

"Whenever a giant tree falls, the world shakes a bit," he said as the crowd cheered.

Anti-Sikh violence claimed more than 1,000 lives after the assassination as Hindus sought to avenge Mrs. Gandhi's slaying by two men identified by the government as Sikh guards.

The government is investigating the assassination and interrogating one of the two bodyguards it says was involved in the killing. The other bodyguard was shot and killed after the assassination.

Press reports have said investigators are seeking the extradition of a Sikh diplomat who defected in Oslo, Norway, after an army raid on the Sikh's Golden Temple in Punjab state in June. Another report said the government is seeking extradition of a Sikh secessionist leader from England.

A spokesman for the Ministry of External Affairs said today that he was not able to confirm the reports of possible extradition in the Norwegian case, and he was not aware of a move to extradite the Sikh leader in London, head of the small movement favoring a proposed separate state for Sikhs in Punjab.

Schools and factories were closed and government buses were used to transport people to the rally grounds. About 600 private buses and trucks also were pressed into service.

WORLD

A police official said 8,000 police and paramilitary troops were deployed around the meeting grounds and the police commissioner said extra troops had been ordered in. A police spokesman said the security was the tightest ever arranged for an Indian prime minister at a public gathering.

Few Sikhs were present at the rally. Some said they were staying home in fear of attack by Hindus.

Indian newspapers today published accounts of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak's charge that Libya may have played a role in the assassination. The prime minister's spokesman, Sharada Prasad, said he had no comment on the allegation, which has been denied by Libya.

Large color portraits of Mrs. Gandhi and her late son Sanjay, killed in a plane crash in 1980, were displayed and decorated with marigolds in a mourning tribute at the rally. Portraits of Rajiv Gandhi also were displayed.

Congress Party workers were highly visible, waving flags and bringing in spectators. Crowds chanted, "Indira Gandhi, you are immortal. Your name will live as long as the sun and the moon survive."

Loudspeakers played Indian classical music and patriotic songs. Banners quoted Mrs. Gandhi's words on the night before the assassination: "If I die today, every drop of my blood will invigorate the nation."

Opposition party leaders complained that the memorial rally was converted into a Congress Party election meeting. They accused the New Delhi administration of unfairly aiding the governing party.

Atal Behari Vajpayee, a former foreign minister and president of the right-wing Bharatiya Janata party, said government machinery was being misused at a time when the election commission had issued a code of fair conduct for the polls. He said the mass meeting was politicizing a national tragedy.

Gunman kills Turkish diplomat

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A gunman shot and killed a Turkish diplomat today, firing three times at close range as the envoy slowed his car at a stoplight, police said. An anonymous telephone caller claimed the killing on behalf of an Armenian extremist group.

The United Nations regional headquarters identified the victim as Evner Ergun, deputy director of the U.N. Center for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs.

Police spokesman Franz Gruenbeck said the victim was killed by a shot in the head. He quoted witnesses as saying a man on foot approached the diplomat's car as it slowed for a red lighte.

Gruenback said the assassin, apparently armed with a handgun, fired three times at Ergun, who was "killed by a shot in the head."

Police quoted several witnesses as saying the gunman, described as dark-haired, swarthy and wearing sunglasses, rushed to the side of the vehicle after it had slowed to turn at an intersection.

He fired three shots and threw a black flag with the initials A.R.A. through the car's open window before fleeing on foot, the witnesses reportedly said. Ergun's car rolled a few yards, before coming to a stop against a parked car.

A man who called The Associated Press claimed the shooting on behalf of the Armenian Revolutionary Army.

"The Armenian Revolutionary Army will continue its attacks against its oppressors," said the man. His statement sounded as though it had been tape-recorded.

Police said the shooting occurred about 9:45 a.m., and the telephone call was received about 15 minutes later. A similar claim was later telephoned to the AP bureau in Rome.

Since 1975, according to Turkish government officials, more than 60 people have been killed and more than 200 wounded — mostly Turkish citizens — by Armenian terrorist attacks. Many of the victims have been Turkish diplomats in Europe.

The Armenian extremist groups which have claimed responsibility for the attacks say they are trying to avenge mass killings of Armenians at the hands of the Turks between 1915 and 1916.

The Armenian extremists claim Turkey massacred more than 1 million of their people. Turkey does not acknowledge the claim; it says several hundred thousand Armenians died during World War I when they sided with invading Russian troops against the Turks.

Marcos aide refutes rumor Philippines president had surgery

MANILA, Philppines (AP) — The presidential palace said today that President Ferdinand E. Marcos is well and working "as usual," and denied a former Cabinet minister's claim that Marcos had undergone a "major surgical operation."

A palace news release quoted Amante Bigornia, assistant presidential press secretary, as saying that Marcos, who has not seen in public for several days and has been rumored to be ill, "has been in touch with key officials of the administration all the time."

"Contrary to rumors circulating in metropolitan Manila, President Marcos is well and performing his official functions as usual," the three-paragraph statement said.

Marcos' former information minister, Francisco S. Tatad, quoted unidentified palace sources today in his regular column in the economic newspaper Business Day as saying Marcos underwent a major operation last week. Tatad, president of the opposition Social Democratic Party, said the operation was a success.

The palace statement said Marcos conferred over the telephone Sunday night with Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, acting Armed Forces Chief Lt. Gen. Fidel V. Ramos and Media Minister Greg Cendana.

"There has been no operation," Bigornia told The Associated Press just before the palace issued its statement.

Government sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said they saw the president today and that Marcos was "reading and going through papers." Another source said Marcos was "resting."

The sources described Marcos as "amused" at the published reports about his health.

Tatad wrote: "The operation was a success, they (the palace sources) said. But medical informants who claimed to be familiar with the case could not say for sure whether he (Marcos) was completely past his crisis."

Unconfirmed reports swept the capital that Marcos, long rumored to be suffering from an incurable disease affecting the kidneys, had either slipped into a coma, was recuperating in a local hospital or had been flown to a hospital in the United States.

Tatad said according to his sources, Marcos received a kidney transplant in August 1983 and the transplanted organ has recently "become a problem affecting other organs," including the heart.

"They said he needed at least two operations, one involving the kidney and another the heart, and it is not known whether doctors had to perform just one, or two surgeries," Tatad said.

The latest series of rumors began a few days before the 67-year-old president met at the palace last Tuesday with visiting U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn. Marcos appeared healthy in the film footage shown on government television of the meeting with Dodd, but has not appeared in public since.

Group admits claim of poison candy hoax

LONDON (AP) — An animal rights group today admitted that its claim to have injected Mars candy bars with rat poison was a hoax aimed at protesting tooth-decay research on monkeys.

As British shopkeepers worked to remove an estimated 10 million Mars bars from their shelves, Ronnie Lee, a spokesman for a group calling itself the Animal Liberation Front, said, "No Mars bars in shops were poisoned at all. I can confirm that now."

Lee said in a radio interview the hoax was designed to cut into Mars' profits and call attention to the research the company funds at London's Guy's Hospital. The manufacturer, Mars U.K. Ltd., denied any cruelty to the monkeys used in its studies on the dental effects of a sugar-rich diet.

The animal rights group, whose members previously have claimed responsibility for attacking research laboratories, freeing zoo animals and vandalizing fur farms, triggered a nationwide alert Saturday when it telephoned a newspaper saying poisoned candy bars had been planted on store shelves.

A telephone caller identifying herself only as Vivien said: "There will be actions of this sort by the Animal Liberation Front against all companies that abuse animals. It will continue to step up its actions in any way necessary to put these companies out of business."

Some Mars bars — fewer than 20, according to police — were found on candy counters with warnings slipped into their wrappers. Tests showed none was tainted, and no one who has eaten the candy has gotten sick, Scotland Yard said.

In at least six cities and towns, including Coventry, Leeds, Manchester, Plymouth and Salisbury, bars were found with punctures in their heat-sealed wrappers. Britons buy 3 million of the milk chocolate, nougat and caramel Mars bars a day, the company said.

Lee defended his group's actions, which the government condemned as blackmail and the British press dubbed "candymail." "I think it is important to do something effective against companies that are involved in a great deal of cruelty to animals," he said.

Asked in a broadcast interview which was more important, the lives of animals or the lives of children who might have been poisoned, Lee responded: "I think the greater suffering is most important. Millions of animals are tortured every year. There are no poisoned children."

The Royal Society for the Protection of Cruelty to animals criticized the candy threat, saying it would "in no way ease the plight of animals which the extremist group claim to care about."

Mars said it pays $31,250 a year to fund the monkey research. Loxley Ryan, corporate affairs director, denied any cruelty to animals. He said the monkeys get Mars bars as part of their diet to see whether dental problems in children can be prevented.

Conservative lawmaker David Mellor, undersecretary at the Home Office which controls the police, denounced front members Sunday as fanatics who "need to be caught.

"They are dangerous and must be stopped before someone is severely injured or even killed," he said.

Mellor has come under criticism from animal rights activists because part of his job is to license animal experiments.

Last month in Japan, extortionists demanding $400,000 from a Japanese candy maker placed boxes of cyanide-laced candy in stores in Osaka and Tokyo. The candy was marked "poison" by the people who inserted the cyanide, but they then said other tainted bars would be placed in stores without warnings. No one has been reported stricken by the poison and no arrests have been made.

Purge predicted in wake of Polish priest's death

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Western diplomats say Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski may be preparing for a purge of Communist Party hardliners in response to last month's killing of a pro-Solidarity priest.

Jaruzelski has held a series of meetings over the past two weeks with officials of Poland's East Bloc allies, including a meeting Sunday with Soviet Marshal Victor Kulikov, commander of Warsaw Pact forces.

Western diplomats said the meetings appeared to be part of an effort by Jaruzelski to line up support for a purge of party hardliners who may have been behind the killing of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko.

The official Polish news agency PAP, reporting the Jaruzelski-Kulikov meeting, said the session "served to review further cooperation of the Polish armed forces with other armies of the Warsaw treaty organization in light of the present international situation." The agency did not elaborate on the talks or say how long Kulikov would remain in Poland.

The Polish government has charged three secret police officers in the Interior Ministry with the abduction and killing of Popieluszko.

Vietnamese continue to assault camp

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese forces backed by artillery fire continued an assault on a major Cambodian resistance camp today, sending thousands of refugees fleeing towards Thailand, Thai military officers and relief agency officials said.

The attack near the Thai-Cambodian border — the first major Vietnamese assault of the dry season — has killed at least two Cambodians and wounded more than 40 during three days of fighting, international aid officials said.

Unconfirmed reports said 20 or more Cambodians have been killed in the attack. The aid officials said as many as 22,000 refugees have fled the Nong Chan camp.

The Vietnamese forces resumed firing at Nong Chan at dawn today and by the early afternoon had penetrated front-line defenses and occupied at least a part of the camp, military and aid officials said.

Army spokesman Maj. Gen. Naruedol Depradiyuth told reporters in Bangkok that the Vietnamese troops have surrounded the camp, the third largest on the border, but that Nong Chan's main military headquarters has not yet fallen into Vietnamese hands.

Thai military officers at the key border town of Aranyaprathet said resistance guerrillas and Vietnamese troops were facing off only 450 feet apart with AK-47 rifles and rocket-propelled grenades.

Since their invasion of Cambodia in late 1978, the Vietnamese have been trying to root out guerrilla forces in the Thai-Cambodian border area. Cambodian civilians, such as those living in Nong Chan, have moved from the interior to the rebel-controlled encampments.

Nong Chan is run by the Khmer People's National Liberation Front, a non-communist group and one of three rebel factions fighting an estimated 160,000 Vietnamese troops and the Vietnam-backed government installed in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital.

An aid official said most of the camp's 22,000 refugees had fled to other areas along the Cambodian side of the border, mostly to the area of a tank ditch a couple of miles from Nong Chan.

A Thai military report on Sunday said 4,000 to 5,000 Vietnamese troops, supported by 130mm artillery fire, struck against the southeastern sector of Nong Chan.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Captain may be suspended because of stowaway

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet is recommending the suspension of a merchant marine captain for setting an African stowaway adrift on a makeshift raft and has ordered police to open a criminal investigation of the case.

The 1982 incident came to light with the publication of pictures in an Israeli newspaper 10 days ago showing the captain tying a rope around the neck of a Tanzanian stowaway and the stowaway sprawled on a wooden raft in the ocean.The stowaway's fate is unknown.

After a preliminary investigation ordered by the Transport Ministry, the Cabinet on Sunday approved a report recommending suspension of Captain Avner Gilad and turning the case over to police.

Gilad has denied any wrongdoing. He said on Israel television that the stowaway was set adrift 500 yards offshore with a wind and current pulling him toward the coast.

Embassy probing deaths

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The U.S. Embassy was trying to determine today whether drug traffickers or Maoist guerrillas carried out a bloody assault on a jungle campsite in which at least 15 employees of a U.S.-financed anti-cocaine program were killed.

A police spokesman said the attackers, estimated by survivors to number between 50 and 100, opened fire on the sleeping workers before dawn Saturday. Police said 15 workers were killed, three were missing and two were wounded.

The dead and wounded, all Peruvian employees of a program aimed at destroying coca crops, were evaculated to Tingo Maria in air force helicopters, according to police.

A U.S. Embassy official in Lima told The Associated Press that the embassy was investigating the incident to determine if the attackers were members of the Maoist guerrilla group Shining Path, which has been active in the area recently, or gunman hired by local coca leaf processors to stop the coca eradication effort.

Brothers die in cave-in

DONCASTER, England (AP) — A cave-in of clay and shale killed two sons of an unemployed man and injured the son of a striking miner as the boys dug in a rail embankment for coal to sell for Christmas pocket money.

The dead boys' father, Trevor Holmes, 38, said he dug for more than an hour with firefighters and striking coal miners on Sunday to dig out his sons and the injured friend, according to the local ambulance service.

The ambulance service said Paul Holmes, 15, and his brother Darren, 13, were killed, and Jim Rawson, 16, suffered broken legs and chest injuries. Rawson's father is among thousands of British coal miners who have been on strike for 36 weeks protesing plans by the the state-run coal industry to shut down money-losing mines.

Spaniards protest bill

MADRID, Spain (AP) — An estimated 500,000 people marched in rain through the center of Madrid to protest government-backed legislation that they say would restrict educational freedom.

The proposed bill, which gives the Ministry of Education more control over subsidies it provides to private schools, has been approved by both houses of Parliament.

However, Spain's constitution allows bills to be reviewed by a constitutional tribunal before they become law, and the conservative opposition to the Socialist government has appealed to the tribunal.

Dreams, nightmares come true

Bills ride herd on Cowboys, 14-3

By JOHN F. BONFATTI
AP Sports Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. - The realization that his Dallas Cowboys took the Buffalo Bills too lightly came on the first play of the game for Coach Tom Landry.

"You kind of feel it might not be your day when a team opens with an 85-yard score," said Landry.

His hunch proved right on target. The heavily-favored Cowboys, playing for the first time ever in Rich Stadium, ran into a winless Buffalo team aching for some respect.

The Bills earned a good measure of respect with their 14-3 upset victory Sunday in the National Football League.

UNQUESTIONABLY, the game's first play, an 85-yard touchdown run by rookie Greg Bell, was the game's biggest. It gave the Bills the lead, which they never relinquished, and the knowledge that Dallas was beatable.

Cowboys-Bills

The run, the longest ever from scrimmage against the Cowboys, was the realization of a sleepy notion that came to both Bell and Bills' fullback Booker Moore the night before the game.

"Before the game, I was talking with Booker and he told me he had a dream that I'd run the first play all the way for a touchdown," said Bell, whose 206 yards rushing marked the first time anyone's ran for more than 200 yards against Dallas since Jim Brown in 1963.

"I told him I had the same dream," added Bell, who also scored on a 3-yard touchdown pass from Joe Ferguson.

A WIN AGAINST the 7-5 Cowboys seemed like a dream to most Bills fans, who came within 800 seats of selling out the 80,000-seat stadium and who, one suspected, came more to bury Buffalo than to praise the team.

"They were all out there to see the Dallas Cowboys put a whipping on the poor old hapless Buffalo Bills," said Buffalo nose tackle Fred Smerlas, who has been roasted weekly on the radio show he shares with linebacker Jim Haslett.

But with one play, a quick-count delay that saw Bell jump into the Dallas secondary and streak 85 yards to the end zone, the fans sensed the Bills might manage what has been the impossible this season.

"Dallas came up here and our fans cheered for them and I think that inspired the boys," said Bills defensive end Ben Williams.

THE FANS turning against them, and Bell's run, got the Bills motivated.

"A big play like that really lifts you up," said cornerback Brian Carpenter, part of a Buffalo defense that limited the Cowboys to a second-quarter field goal by Rafael Septien and 297 net yards of offense.

"The defense was excellent," said Buffalo Coach Kay Stephenson. "We had sound, solid play today. I felt we've played well defensively the last few weeks and I felt if we got some offense today we should have been better this week than last."

Landry, who said his offense "didn't do too much to tell how really good they (the Bills defense) was," admitted he was "somewhat embarrassed" by his team's performance.

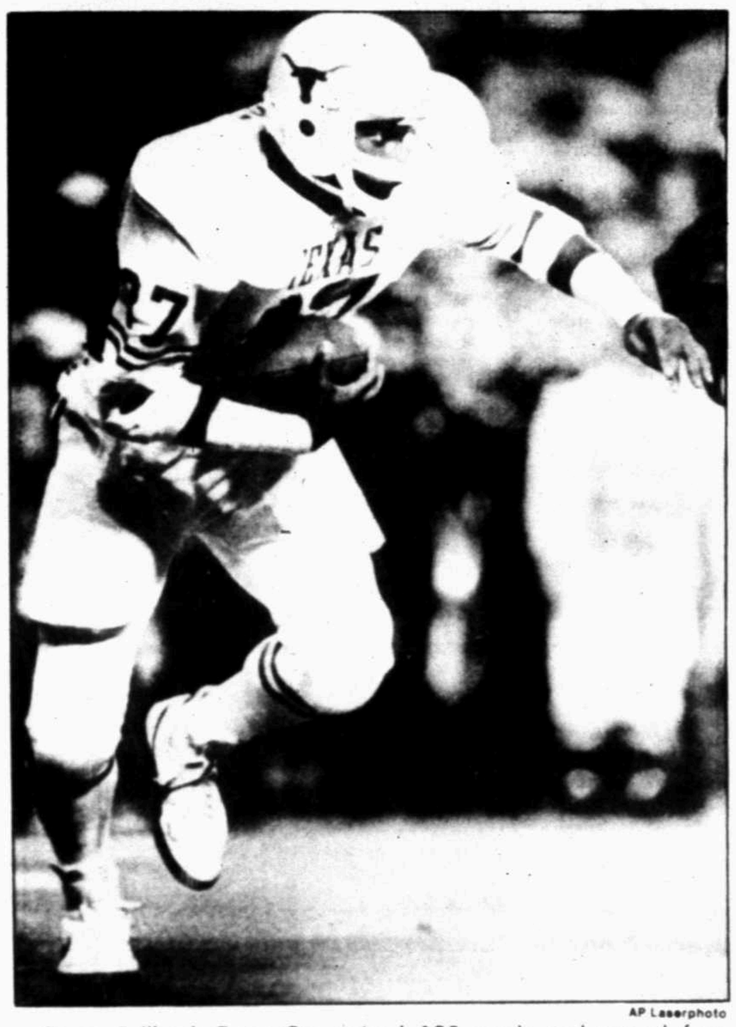

"The first run from scrimmage took some of the wind out of our sails," he added. "We were not ready to play today. Maybe we thought it would be too easy."

The victory was so stunning, at least one Cowboy still had trouble beleiving it happened.

"There's no way we should come up here and lose to the worst team in football," said Tony Dorsett.

THE BILLS may or may not be the NFL's worst team, but the victory showed the Bills at least have some character.

"I don't think too many teams could have gone through what we have this year and come back and won like we did today," said Stephenson.

Texas Fullback Terry Orr gained 195 yards and scored four touchdowns for Steers in win over TCU Saturday.

UT, BC Cotton probables

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Cotton Bowl will have to wait two weeks to invite its Southwest Conference host team, but the Texas Longhorns have the inside track.

Official invitation day for the bowls in 6 p.m. next Saturday, when the Cotton Bowl will extend the guest invitation to bowl-ready Boston College.

Texas will be in Waco playing the Baylor Bears, who have upset the Longhorns from time to time in the past. The Longhorns will close out their season Dec. 1 in Austin against the Texas Aggies.

Texas struck midnight for Cinderella Texas Christian on Saturday with a 44-23 flogging in Fort Worth to take a game lead on Texas Christian, Arkansas, Houston and Southern Methodist in the SWC chase.

Arkansas blanked Texas A&M 28-0, SMU shut out Texas Tech 31-0 and Baylor overcame Rice 46-40 in other SWC games.

TCU is assured of at least a visit to the Bluebonnet Bowl, which loves the Frogs. The Liberty Bowl considers Arkansas its No. 1 prospect.

SMU is courting the Aloha Bowl.

HORNS GIG FROGS ONCE AGAIN

FORT WORTH — Texas has now defeated Texas Christian 17 games in a row and the Horns did it with a crisp offense.

"The best way to beat TCU is just keep your punter on the bench and that's what we did," said Texas Coach Jim Akers.

Quarterback Todd Dodge, who had two touchdown passes after a miserable outing against Houston, said "We took a lot of abuse after the Houston game. We got tired of it."

ALOHA TO MUSTANGS?

LUBBOCK — SMU is hoping its seven victories will cause the Aloho Bowl in Honolulu to come calling.

"I sure hope this impresses somebody," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins. "If people realized we were on the road in Lubbock playing a pretty good football team, they'd have to be impressed with the final score."

SMU's chief Aloha Bowl opposition is Maryland which beat Clemson 41-23 on Saturday.

GIVE THE RAZORBACKS LIBERTY

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — "Well," said a Liberty Bowl official, "we've found one team and now we have to look for the other."

The Liberty Bowl was a big fan of the Hogs after they took advantage of seven A&M turnovers to whip the Aggies.

"I'd say we dominated all three areas, offense, defense and the kicking game," said Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield.

BAYLOR WEATHERS STORM

HOUSTON — The luckless Rice Owls had scoring plays on a 76-yard run, passes of 75 and 23 yards and a 90-yard kickoff return but the Baylor Bears weathered the storm of points for a 46-40 come-from-behind victory.

"It was absolutely a track meet in the first half," Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said. "Everytime I looked up someone was going 70 yards for a touchdown. There were a lot of unusual and interesting plays int that game."

The most interesting two scores came in the final five minutes when the Bears rallied from a 40-33 deficit to win it on a fumble recovery in the end zone and a 45-yard touchdown pss from Tom Muecke to Glenn Pruitt with 38 seconds left in the game.

"I wish I had some feeling in my body," a drained Rice Coach Watson Brown said immediately after the game. "I'm just numb all over. We knew it was going down to the wire and that's what happened."

Horned Frogs promise to return

FORT WORTH (AP) — Horned Frogs die hard.

There were no tears in the Texas Christian dressing room Saturday after the Frogs lost their "Showdown in Cowtown" Southwest Conference meeting with Texas 44-23.

"The loss doesn't matter because we'll be back," said running back Kenneth Davis. "We haven't been anywere yet and we've come too far to be down from this. It won't be tough to get up next for Texas A&M."

TCU hasn't been to the Cotton Bowl in 25 years and the loss dropped the Horned Frogs into a second place tie behind Texas with Arkansas, Houston and Southern Methodist.

Texas assumed command of the game and the SWC race with the convincing victory. The 'Horns have only one league loss to two defeats for the runnerup teams.

"You can always second-guess some of the things you do during a game but Texas was just a better football team," said TCU Coach Jim Wacker. "Maybe we got a little rattled.

"We're 8-2 now and obviously we wanted to be conference champions. I had thought before the season that we might be about 6-4 right now. But we're going to have a great recruiting year."

Quarterback Anthony Sciaraffa said, "We didn't play well but by Monday we will forget about it."

The Horned Frogs are the darlings of the Bluebonnet Bowl which says it will take TCU, win, lose, or tie next week against Texas A&M.

No April Fool—Dolphins lose, Oilers win

Associated Press

Miami's bid for an unbeaten season ended Sunday as the Dolphins suffered a 34-28 overtime loss to the San Diego Chargers on a day of upsets in the National Football League.

Also losing were three favored teams in the tight NFC East race, as the Dallas Cowboys lost to the winless Buffalo Bills 14-3, the Washington Redskins were beaten by the Philadelpia Eagles 16-10 and the St. Louis Cardinals were defeated by the New York Giants 16-10.

In other NFL action, it was Chicago 16, Detroit 14; Green Bay 31, Los Angeles Rams 6; Cleveland 23, Atlanta 7; New England 50, Indianapolis 17, and Seattle 26, Cincinnati 6. The Los Angeles Raiders beat Kansas City 17-7, Denver stopped Minnesota 42-21, San Francisco defeated Tampa Bay 24-17 and Houston trimmed the New York Jets 31-20.

NFL

BUFORD MCGEE scampered 25 yards for a touchdown 3:17 into overtime as San Diego rallied from a 14-point deficit to end Miami's winning streak at 11 games.

The Dolphins fell one short of the NFL record of 17 consecutive regular- season victories set by the Chicago Bears in 1933-34. The loss also prevented the Dolphins from clinching the AFC East Division crown.

The Chargers trailed 28-14 after three quarters, but rallied behind quarterback Dan Fouts' pinpoint passing for a pair of fourth-quarter scores that forced the overtime.

Defensive end Fred Dean, in his first game after ending a holdout, made two big plays against the Buccaneers as the 49ers, 11-1, assured themselves of at least a wild-card playoff berth.

John Elway dissected the Minnesota defense with five touchdown passes in less than three quarters of playing time, sparking the Broncos to their 10th straight victory.

Linebacker Rod Martin returned one Kansas City fumble for a touchdown and forced a second that set up another Los Angeles score as the Raiders broke a three-game losing streak by whipping the punchless Chiefs.

Houston's Warren Moon threw three touchdown passes — two to Tim Smith — during a string of 31 points to lift the Oilers over the Jets.

PITTSBURGH will play at New Orleans in the Monday night game.

Eagles' rookie free agent Andre Waters returned a kickoff 89 yards for a touchdown and rookie Paul McFadden kicked three field goals as Philadelphia beat the Redskins.

Washington's Mark Moseley had just given the Redskins a 10-9 lead on a 33-yard field goal with 5:26 left in the third period when Waters, from little Cheyney (Pa.) State, broke loose on the ensuing kickoff. Waters took the ball at his 11, raced up the right side to the 20, cut left and outran the Redskins defenders to the end zone.

ALI HAJI-Sheikh kicked three third-quarter field goals and Mark Haynes picked off two passes as the Giants forced six turnovers to top the Cardinals in a bitter game fought almost entirely by two smothering defenses.

Kicker Bob Thomas salvaged a sputtering offense with his third field goal of the game, a 19-yard effort with two seconds remaining, to lift Chicago over Detroit.

Eddie Lee Ivery rushed for three touchdowns and cornerback Tim Lewis returned an interception a team-record 99 yards for another TD to power Green Bay to its fourth straight victory.

Cleveland's defense unloaded with an NFL record-tying 11 sacks and Paul McDonald hurled a pair of touchdown passes as the Browns beat the Falcons in a game marred by an injury to Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski, who suffered a sprained knee. A team spokesman said Bartkowski will be out for the rest of the season.

New England quarterback Tony Eason passed for 292 yards and four touchdowns, three of them to Derrick Ramsey in the first half, as the Patriots cruised to an easy victory over the Colts.

Life at top Bowl of Cherries

With two minutes still left to play against the Plainview Bulldogs at Lubbock's Jones Stadium Friday night, it was easy to see that everything was under control as far as the Lee Rebels were concerned.

Of course, the scoreboard was tilted 42-7 in favor of the "New Tradition" at the time and the Lee players were enjoying the fruits of victory.

Linebackers Donnie Rivas and Pool Webb were discussing who really got an interception. Webb got credit and Rivas was fuming — with a hint of a smile on his face.

"I had that ball," he told Webb. "If I didn't have this broken hand, I would have had it. I was fumbling the ball and pushed it right in your arms."

WEBB replied with a quick, "Yeah, but I get credit for the interception. You don't."

Life at the top is an easy one when such mundane matters can be discussed before the game is even over. But there wasn't much else to do. Neither was playing. The Lee bench had taken over.

Lee running back Rodney Simms, who has been used primarily as a kickoff returner, was in the game and scoring his first touchdown of the year. He was also happy.

"This was fun," he said. "I think we have it all together now."

Lee linebacker Terry Powell was miffed last week when an interception of his against Midland High was overlooked. He had another chance against Plainview and blew it. I had promised him if he made another interception in the playoffs, it would be noted.

"I was thinking about you when I dropped the ball," said Powell. "You caused all my problems, but I'll get the next one."

OF COURSE, these were the words we wanted to hear. It was just mindless chatter, showing that Lee had returned to playoff form and was serious about another strong post-season bid. The Lee Rebels didn't have to explain their actions Friday night. Forty-two to seven said it all.

Many were thinking prior to Friday that Lee had lost its touch while fighting through what many considered the offensive doldrums. Even the Lee offense was saying it was true prior to Friday night.

Lee halfback Walter Jones said last week, "We really haven't been impressive, have we? We'll see how we react when the playoffs start. I think we will be ready then."

Webb said after Friday's game, "The whole team has come together. We peaked before Permian and we came back and played this one like we did against San Angelo and Cooper. We're ready to peak again."

This is a special group of Rebels. Fifty-five seniors, who led the state playoff march for six games last year, are not around. This is a small Lee team. Perhaps, one of the smallest the school has seen in several years.

STILL, THEY seem to know their mission well. They know when they aren't performing and admit it. They've worked hard to get the wheels back on track. That's special. Defensive back Earl Davis calls it "a big heart. That's what we have."

If you saw both Lee and Odessa Permian play this weekend, you surely came away with a bigger appreciation of District 4-5A football. You almost get the feeling that the playoffs is a step down.

It makes you wonder how teams like Abilene High, San Angelo, Abilene Cooper and Midland High would fare in the early playoff rounds. My guess is that 4-5A could hold its own. After all, six of the eight league teams had a 5-5 record or better. You will have to travel far and wide to find another district like it.

Both Lee and Permian should be congratulated for representing 4-5A well. They are proof positive that West Texas plays football with a "big heart." And folks, it's right here in our own backyard.

LaBonte wins Winston Cup

From Wire Reports

AUTO RACING— Geoff Bodine took the lead four laps from the end, when luckless Bobby Allison came up with a flat tire, and beat the gathering darkness to win the Winston Western 500 at Riverside, Calif., a race in which steady Terry Labonte captured his first Winston Cup season championship with a third-place finish. The 312-mile race, delayed at the start for nearly three hours by rain, finished under heavy clouds as the sun set, leaving the Grand National stock cars, which have no lights, running at speeds of up to 170 mph in the near darkness. The prestigious NASCAR title earned Labonte, car owner Billy Hagan and the rest of the Piedmont Airlines-sponsored Stratagraph Team about $250,000 from the rich season point fund...

FOOTBALL— Winnipeg overcame a 14-point first-quarter deficit to defeat Hamilton, 47-17, for the CFL title in the Grey Cup game at Edmonton. A pass interception by David Shaw ignited a 27-point second-quarter outburst by the Blue Bombers in the below-freezing temperatures that created slippery conditions. the theft led to a three-yard TD by Willard Reaves to cut the Ti-Cat lead to 17-13. Quarterback Tom Clements passed 12 yards to Joe Poplawski and tackle Stan Mikawos returned a fumble by Dieter Brock 22 yards for the other Winnipeg touchdowns in the second quarter...

BASKETBALL— Jack McKinney resigned as Kansas City Kings coach of the Kansas City Kings and Phil Johnson was hired for his second tour as coach.
The Kings , 1-8, have the second-worst record so far in the NBA. "I do this regretfully because for the past two months I have been working very hard to get the team straightened out and turned into a solid NBA club," said McKinney, who had spent the three previous season coaching the Indiana Pacers. "Trying to do this has become extremely frustrating to me. The stress has given me many sleepless nights ... until I have reached a point of being burned out."...

HORSE RACING— A Slim Chic, lightly regarded at 14-1 by a crowd of 6,007, shot past Rabels Gal in the stretch and dashed to a 1¾-length victory in Sunday's $32,525 Silent Beauty stakes at Hawthorne. The winning jockey was Eddie L. King who made A Slim Chic his third of four winners on the nine-race program...

Five-day plan may save 4A

AUSTIN (AP) — A "five-day plan" to get the state high school football playoffs back on schedule won approval from most of the 39 schools' officials who gathered here Sunday.

So if University Interscholastic League attorneys can wade through a mass of lawsuits by Tuesday, a Taylor-Belton game Wednesday night could be the answer to the two-week controversy surrounding the timetable for the 1984 Class 4A state playoffs, officials said.

Under the plan approved at the meeting, which was called by UIL Director Bailey Marshall, Taylor would play on the fifth day after beating Westlake 14-7 Friday night in a 6A South Zone elimination game.

The Taylor-Belton winner would have another five days until a Nov. 26 contest against one of two District 5A teams, either champion Dallas Hillcrest or runnerup Seagoville.

Marshall said at the start of the 90-minute meeting that he would not take responsibility for ordering teams to play every five days as UIL ruled permit.

But the representatives, heeding arguments led by Bay City superintendent R.L. McMichael against delaying the state championship game until Dec. 29, voted 29-10 to compress the schedule for Taylor or Belton and one of the 5A schools.

Some representatives said the 6A division is responsible for the problems created by the season-long participation of Westlake quarterback Todd Maroney.

The UIL wants to void Westlake's season record because it says Maroney's parents held him back a year in the 8th grade for athletic reasons. His parents counter that their son's illness forced him to repeat a grade.

A state court has allowed the senior to play until the issue is settled. A Nov. 5 injunction granted in Georgetown allowed third-place Taylor to join Georgetown and Westlake as South Zone playoff representatives.

Superintendents Joe Pirtle of Belton and Bill Borgers of Taylor resisted suggestions that their schools flip a coin to determine a state playoff representative so competition could start on schedule this weekend.

Cowboys lose their cinch win

Apparently there is no limit to the capabilities of the Dallas Cowboys.

What team could avenge a loss to St. Louis one week and lose to Buffalo next week? The answer: no team in the NFL could, for that matter, win or lose the week before playing the Bills and lose to Buffalo.

It's the first time this has been achieved this season, losing to Buffalo, that is. So much for those who said it couldn't be done.

A week ago, Dallas appeared to have turned things around. The Cowboys looked so good against the Cardinals that some even predicted that Dallas was ready to make its move, regardless of the quarterback.

IF THIS is the move, the Cowboys are in trouble. With Washington, New England, Philadelphia and Miami to be faced down the stretch, Buffalo looked like the one sure win. Philadelphia and New England looked like "probables", which meant the Cowboys would have to upset either Washington or Miami to make the playoffs.

After Buffalo, New England becomes a "hopeful" and after what the Eagles did to Washington Sunday, Philadelphia can't be listed as anything more than a "maybe." Of course, that's assuming that Buffalo over Dallas was an upset, otherwise forget the rest of the season.

The only silver-lining was the Eagles win over the Redskins. That left the Cowboys tied with the Giants and Skins for first and the Cards and Eagles still in the chase.

In fact, the NFC East may be renamed the NFC Central. At least, they are playing more like the old Black and Blue division back a few years ago when the nickname reflected what the opposition left the Central teams when they got through with them.

If it weren't for the AFC Central, once the most feared division in the NFL, the NFC East would be the weakest division in the NFL. Probably Pete Rozelle would be doing the fans a favor if he expelled the division from playoff consideration if it doesn't have a team that finishes .500 or better. I think that's a distinct possibility.

Turmoil really reigns supreme in the pros these days. Who would ever think they'd see the day when a headline blares, "Dolphins lose, Oilers win"? And after five touchdowns passes Sunday, maybe Denver fans will stop booing quarterback John Elway...another upset.

SPEAKING OF upsets, that shambles college football pollsters are sifting through is the Top 20 after last week's upset carnage.

It will be interesting to see who is No. 1 this week. Brigham Young, 10-0, is the obvious choice since the Cougars are possessors of the nation's only unblemished record. But no one really takes a Western Athletic Conference team that seriously, so BYU will have to settle for No. 2 or 3.

I guess, Florida, on the heels of wins over Georgia and Kentucky, is the logical choice, even though the Gators are in NCAA manacles.

Oklahoma State ranked ahead of Florida, No. 5, last week, but until and unless the Cowboys beat Oklahoma they can't be taken seriously.

The immediate reaction to the Sooners' win over Nebraska is to wonder how OU would fare against Syracuse.

Joining No. 1 Nebraska among the weekend casualties were No. 2 South Carolina, No. 7 USC, No. 9 LSU, No. 12 TCU and No. 20 Clemson.

Maybe this year there really isn't a Top 20.

In view of the casualties, Notre Dame's 41-7 scalding of Penn State should propel the Irish into the Top 20 and a pretty good bowl bid if it gets by USC this week.

Upset weekend did not come as a surprise. In all honesty, I must confess that I saw the upsets coming, and picked a good many. Unfortunately, in most instances, they were the wrong ones.

Lakers off, but still post NBA victory

Associated Press

Stop the Los Angeles Lakers' fast break and you stop the Los Angeles Lakers, right? Not all the time.

The Milwaukee Bucks, who gave up fewer points than any team in the National Basketball Association last season, held the Lakers to 40 field goals in 90 attempts Sunday night. But Los Angeles won the game 96-89 for its fourth straight victory.

The Lakers, now only one game out of first place in the Pacific Division after a 3-5 start, held the Bucks to 39 field goals in 86 attempts.

The Lakers outscored Milwaukee 17-2 in the last three minutes of the second period and the first three minutes of the third quarter to take a 56-46 lead. The closest the Bucks got after that was 86-81 with 2:50 remaining.

James Worthy hit 10 of 16 shots to lead the Lakers with 24 points, while Milkwaukee's Terry Cummings was 14-for-20 from the field to lead all scorers with 29.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 20 points apiece for Los Angeles, while Paul Pressey had 17 for Milwaukee.

Nets 102, SuperSonics 97

Michael Ray Richardson scored 13 of his team-high 23 points in the third quarter and New Jersey held Seattle to 39 second-half points.

Richardson hit six of seven shots from the field as the Nets built an 86-74 lead late in the third quarter after trailing 58-57 at halftime.

Al Wood, who led the SuperSonics with 25 points, led a rally that cut New Jersey's lead to 96-95 with 2:53 left, but a layup by Albert King and two baskets by Darwin Cook kept the Nets in front.

Trail Blazers 113, Clippers 105

Mychal Thompson had 31 points and 12 rebounds to lead Portland past Los Angeles.

Coaches like Mustangs

SWC Basketball

DALLAS (AP) — By the time Southern Methodist Coach Dave Bliss stepped to the podium Sunday afternoon, the eight other Southwest Conference coaches had all but handed his SMU Mustangs the regular-season basketball title.

"SMU ought to win it in a breeze," said Arkansas' Eddie Sutton. "I voted for them fourth (in the nation)."

"Any team in this league can probably beat any team other than SMU on a given day," said Texas Tech's Gerald Myers. "I think we said the same thing about Houston last year."

"I don't see how anyone could pick anyone but SMU," said Houston's Guy Lewis.

So Bliss' task at the press conference was to deflect some of the praise hurled at the 10th-ranked Mustangs.

"We've benefited from our exposure, because it's important for us to have a better self-image," Bliss said. "But I don't know of any other team that would have as many nice things said about it that played so bad in its last basketball game. We didn't play very well against Georgetown."

Yet the Hoyas didn't play too well in that NCAA second-round game, either, beating SMU by a single point before going on to hammer the rest of their tournament opponents. And that game remains one of the main reasons the Mustangs are being picked to win the SWC this winter.

"I think they gained a lot of confidence by going to the NCAA, winning a game and playing Georgetown tougher than anyone else played them," Myers said.

The Olympic experience gained by SMU center Jon Koncak also is something rival coaches pointed to.

But Bliss said, "The key to our basketball team is (6-foot-5 junior) Carl Wright. I used to say he's a good athlete who happens to be playing basketball. Now I give him credit for being a fantastic basketball player. The problem I've had is making practice hard enough so that it will keep pushing him."

Bliss doesn't consider SMU's demanding non-conference schedule — North Carolina, North Carolina State, Kentucky, Louisville and Oklahoma are included — a threat to his team's chances for success.

"If you're like us and you haven't won any big games, what you do is schedule a lot of them and hope to get that Bud Grant-itis off of you," he said. "I don't have to worry about a tough pre-conference schedule hurting us in the rankings. We can work on things and try to improve as a basketball team, because my job is getting this team into the 64-team (NCAA) tournament."

As far as the other SWC coaches are concerned, Bliss' job already is done.

The regular season begins Friday, and conference play for eight teams opens Jan. 2.

New York Giants win with basic football

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — To Lawrence Taylor, secretary of defense for the New York Giants, it was a rather simple strategy.

"You just run to the ball and hit people," he explained. "We stuck to our basic stuff and won with it."

There's nothing to it, really. It's just plain, no frills football, the kind that old-fashioned, nose-for-the-ball defenders like Taylor love to play. It created a fair share of sacks (2), recovered fumbles (2) and interceptions (4), and constructed New York's 16-10 victory over St. Louis Sunday.

That left the enigmatic Giants tied with Dallas and Washington — both losers Sunday — for first place in the National Football Conference's Eastern Division.

Surprised?

"No," Taylor said, "but I'll bet you guys are."

Indeed.

In fact, even Taylor's linebacking buddy, Harry Carson, admitted he didn't expect the Giant defenders to manhandle the high-powered Cardinal attack quite so thoroughly.

"When you go to bed Saturday night and you think you're gonna be playing one of the most potent offenses in the league, you don't get much sleep," Carson said. "I woke up at 3 a.m. thinking about (quarterback) Neil Lomax and (wide receiver) Roy Green."

Lomax and Green had been chewing up yardage in huge chunks all season but against the Giants, the Cardinal battery managed just one completion all day.

"That's all I caught?" Green said, sounding a bit bewildered. "One?"

One.

That matched the number of completions Lomax had to Giant linebackers Taylor and Gary Reasons and was one less than New York cornerback Mark Haynes had.

The key to the victory was a tenacious Giant zone defense which would simply not give Lomax any long range room with which to operate. The Cardinal quarterback finished with 230 yards but much of that was accomplished on short pitches to his backs.

"We did a good job," Carson, a tough critic, decided. "We tried to confuse him, get a good rush, put pressure on him, force him to make a decision.

"It was not so much their defense beating our offense. It was their offense being beaten by our defense. Their offense is so potent. We couldn't let up. We kept bearing down, putting pressure on every play. They've got a scoring machine."

Strategy pays off for Whalers

CHICAGO (AP) — After watching the Chicago Black Hawks demolish the Hartford Whalers 7-0, Quebec Coach Michel Bergeron made up his mind to "put one aggressive player on each of my lines to try to slow them up."

Bergeron's strategy paid off Sunday night as the Nordiques outmuscled the Black Hawks 5-3 to end Chicago's National Hockey League unbeaten string at five games.

Elsewhere, New Jersey blanked the New York Rangers 6-0 and the New York Islanders tied Philadelphia 3-3.

"It was probably our best game of the season," Bergeron said. "By putting Jim Mann on one line, Alain Cote on another line and Luc Dufour on still another line, we managed to forecheck the Hawks into mistakes and our aggressiveness paid off.

"Dan Bouchard made key saves in the third period on Denis Savard and Al Secord and the fact that we stopped their power-play chances proved that we can handle a team as good as Chicago."

But the key factor, according to Savard, "was that by matching my line with the line of Peter Stastny, it turned out to be in their favor."

Peter Statsny scored a goal and added two assists and his brother, Anton, collected a goal and an assist while the Savard line was held to two points.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, November 20, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: "Hill Street Blues" star Veronica Hamel, Bo Derek, "Family Feud" host Richard Dawson, comedienne Kaye Ballard, Dick Smothers, Sen. Joe Biden (D-Del.) and the Chicago Cubs' popular Jay Johnstone share your birthday. Also born on this date: the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A unique work opportunity could bring you wonderful new social contacts; use them wisely. Confidential talks behind the scenes will help you solve a professional or personal problem in record time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Real estate matters require special attention. Seek help with a difficult or unfinished project. Higher-ups value foresight and optimism. Do not become temperamental or go off on a tangent.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A parent or elderly relative needs more TLC. Be generous. Your judgment is excellent where finance and romance are concerned. Your social plans work out brilliantly. Limit spending.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone who plays games at work bears careful watching. An acquaintance wants to have a larger role in your affairs. Nab a bargain and save it for a Christmas gift.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A long-term project may require revamping. A loved one's needs must come first. Guard against depleting your savings or other resources. Moonlighting could be the best answer to a temporary cash shortage.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A co-worker's indecision drives you up the wall. Bide your time. A raise or promotion is in the wind. If your work load increases, put first things first: Curb your social life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A casual introduction leads to a rewarding, long-lasting friendship. Push domestic budgeting at this time. An ownership or property issue gets strong support from someone influential. Wear brighter colors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A brother or sister could help you make important new business or social contacts. Spruce up your appearance. Refuse to be rushed into making a financial decision. Weigh all the options.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Others support your efforts to keep business expenses within reason. A friendship is becoming more and more romantic. Someone you have been competing with could turn into an ally.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Work takes up most of your time now. Family members could think that you no longer care about them. Emphasize the benefits of a temporary sacrifice. Hang on to your money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A new relationship looks very promising. Check with experts if a project shows signs of becoming something special. A chance meeting could lead to happy romance. Show your tender side.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Confusion over the details of a deal could halt negotiations. Do not give up! This venture should prove highly profitable. Go slow in romance. Secret transactions could come back to haunt you.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A83 ♡AQ8762 ◇95 ♣K6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You might argue that South has a minimum opening bid and, therefore, should pass. But that is lazy thinking. On any hand where North has first- or second-round diamond control, 12 tricks could be a near certainty. For instance, give North some holding like:
♠xx ♡Kxx ◇Kxx ♣AQJxx
Regardless of the defense, North can make a small slam at no trump. To investigate the possibilities, cue-bid four spades.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ ♡AK873 ◇A952 ♣73
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ◇	?

What action do you take?
A.—It is tempting to double, but your reward might be insufficient. Your side can surely make game, and slam is not out of the question. Since a new suit by responder is forcing, all we would do for the moment is bid two hearts.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J85 ♡J1062 ◇K952 ♣73
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Dble	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	3 ♣	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—First, we trust you know that, in this sequence, North's jump is not forcing. However, it does show a very good hand and, probably, a near-solid suit. Therefore, we would venture three no trump—the gain in closing out the rubber if we succeed is worth the risk.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ63 ♡J5 ◇AKQ82 ♣Q7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Since partner has bid twice, he is unlikely to have a dead minimum, so it might seem that you should take your chances at three no trump. However, in view of the partial misfit, we would proceed cautiouly and raise to two no trump.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A76 ♡8754 ◇K983 ♣73
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner is trying for game and looking for help in clubs. You have an excellent hand for him—four-card trump support, an ace and a king, and a ruffing value where he needs it. Jump to four hearts.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K65 ♡AJ3 ◇A4 ♣10987
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	3 ◇

What action do you take?
A.—It might seem that you should tell your partner about your diamond stopper by bidding three no trump. However, you have no idea whether that is the right contract. The correct action is to pass, thereby announcing that you have a minimum opening bid and leaving the decision to partner. He might elect to double, a decision with which you would heartily concur.

Public television's 'Sesame Street' begins 16th season today

NEW YORK (AP) — "Sesame Street," public television's precocious program for pre-schoolers, has turned sweet 16.

This award-winning, entertainingly educational series began its 16th season today. As with any teenager, "Sesame Street" has all the answers; we supply the questions:

— Which of the the human and puppet characters remain from the November, 1969 debut?

Only Loretta Long, who plays Susan, and Bob McGrath, who plays Bob, are originals. Puppeteer Jim Henson created the Muppets' Big Bird, Bert & Ernie, Cookie Monster and Grover for the show. All of them are still around.

—Why is Kermit the Frog the only character to star in both "Sesame Street" and Henson's "The Muppet Show"?

Kermit was Henson's first character, and he has been part of other Henson productions. The rest of the original cast of inanimate characters were created by Henson expressly for "Sesame Street."

—What was the educational goal of "Sesame Street," and how has that evolved?

"The original emphasis was on numbers and letters," said executive producer Dulcy Singer. "We were trying to prepare kids for school. Over the years, the curriculum has grown to include feelings, the role of women, career awareness, health, environment and computers."

—"Sesame Street" dealt with death last season after Will Lee, the actor who played Mr. Hooper, died. What impact did that have?

A follow-up study, in which 31 children and 20 parents were interviewed, indicated that, for 4- and 5-year-olds, the messages about Mr. Hooper's death were clear and readily understood. The information on death was less clear for 3-year-olds. Parental response to the program was overwhelmingly positive.

"These findings suggest," the study said, "that television can be used effectively not only to educate children but to help parents express their feelings and beliefs about death with their children."

—Will any important issues be raised this season?

Indirectly, the program will touch on the issue of child abuse by giving Big Bird's so-called imaginary friend, Mr. Snuffleupagus, more credibility. Several adults will finally believe he exists — an important lesson that might persuade kids to talk openly with their parents.

The big joke on "Sesame Street" was that nobody except Big Bird and the audience believed Mr. Snuffleupagus existed. "It could have been keeping children from divulging things to their parents," said head writer Norman Stiles.

Specialists say one way of dealing with child abuse in both the preventive and therapeutic stages is for children to have complete confidence about talking to parents.

In addition, "Sesame Street" this season will also attempt to familiarize children with hospitals and make them less threatening through the situation of Luis (Emilio Delgado) breaking his arm and going to the emergency room.

"We'll follow the healing process," said Ms. Singer. "We'll stress that the injury was accidental, that it doesn't happen all the time. We don't want to worry kids."

DENNIS THE MENACE

"DID THEY HAVE HOSPITALS WHEN YOU WERE BORN OR WERE YOU HOMEMADE?"

HEATHCLIFF

"SORRY...WE DON'T ALTER FINGERPRINTS."

MARMADUKE

"Next time I get the top bunk...I got bonked twice during the night by your bone!"

FAMILY CIRCUS

"Grandma got out some of mommy's toys from when she was little, but we're only allowed to look at them."

Feminist Ginny Foat writing book about her murder trial

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A year after she was found innocent in a murder trial that brought nationwide attention to a New Orleans suburb, California feminist Ginny Foat has returned to do research for a book.

Accompanied by free-lance writer Laura Foreman of Philadelphia, Ms. Foat spent part of the past week in her lawyer's offices reviewing materials from her trial.

An ex-husband of Ms. Foat had accused her of taking part in the 1965 murder of Argentine businessman Moises Chao, who was beaten with a tire iron near New Orleans in 1965. But when the case was tried in the city of Gretna, a jury found her innocent Nov. 16, 1983, on the first vote.

The book, "Presumption of Guilt," is three-quarters finished and is scheduled for spring publication by Random House, Ms. Foat said.

"I have total control over the book. It will be honest and it will be accurate," Ms. Foat said.

Also in the works is a television movie, a project unrelated to the book, she said.

Ms. Foat said she spends her time making speeches and working on the book and that she still owes about $50,000 from a legal bill that once totaled about $250,000.

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Al "Lash" LaRue, star of numerous 1940s cowboy movies, says he's excited about his first major role in over 30 years, in a horror flick that will be filmed in Belews Creek and Kernersville.

Shooting of "The Dark Power" is scheduled to begin Nov. 26, said producer and director Phil Smoot of Asheboro, who has worked in various capacities on 24 feature-length motion pictures.

With the exception of a few minor walk-on parts it will be LaRue's first movie role in more than 30 years, and his first in which he isn't playing a cowboy.

"I think that the technical developments in films have been fantastic and I still hold the ambition of eventually directing and producing films," LaRue said.

LaRue's name has been kept alive in North Carolina through his numerous appearances at conventions held by cowboy film buffs and at annual cowboy movie conventions in Siler City and Pittsboro.

LaRue is perhaps best remembered for the movie "King of the Bullwhip," made at a time when LaRue's black outfit, dark demeanor and snapping whip were bywords among fanciers of cowboy films.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Authorities are expecting the biggest crowd to ever witness the unveiling of a Hollywood Boulevard star when rock superstar Michael Jackson claims a piece of the sidewalk in front of Mann's Chinese Theater.

Michael Jackson

The Police Department is sending about 50 officers — six times the usual complement of eight — to the event Tuesday, said Monique Moss, a spokeswoman for the Hollywood Trust, which administers the Walk of Fame program.

The trust expects about 5,000 fans to show up. "This will be the biggest," Ms. Moss said. "But the only thing special about it is the security."

Jackson, 26, will occupy a space between Lefty Frizzell and Lupe Vele. The Jacksons — the group consisting of Michael and five brothers — already has a star.

Jackson's star will be the 1,793rd on the Walk of Fame, which runs along Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street.

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Marie Osmond, married two years ago to former Brigham Young University basketball player Stephen L. Craig, has "temporarily separated" from her husband, a family spokesman says.

Marie Osmond

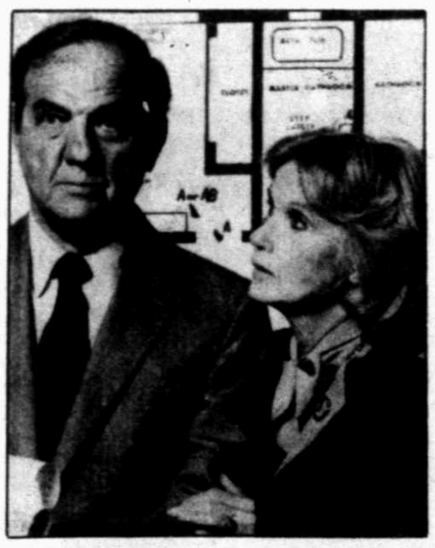

The spokesman told the Salt Lake Tribune the couple, who became parents of a boy last year, decided last week to spend some time apart.

"They are in a reconciliation period and will not be issuing any further comments or statements," said the spokesman, whom the Tribune did not identify.

The couple made Los Angeles their home after their wedding in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' Salt Lake Temple.

Ms. Osmond has been making appearances on behalf of children's hospitals while Craig remains in California, the newspaper said.

Frank Norwood, 2501 Shell, gets his yard ready for winter with a little help from his 4-year-old grandson Michael Brown.

'The leaves fall early this autumn, in wind'

People takes less notice of the changing of the seasons these days, because their lives are less dependent upon the weather. When it gets hot, we turn up the air-conditioning; when it gets cold, we turn up the heat. So why make a fuss?

Tradition, that's why. Within the carefully insulated brain of modern man lurks an atavistic desire to celebrate the seasonal transitions. But the original motivation has been lost; our modern rituals have no thematic connection to the event.

Take autumn. Instead of singing and dancing to celebrate the harvest as our ancestors did, we have Labor Day barbecues. Leaves still fall and days still grow shorter, but that tangy crispness in the air which once announced the coming of winter has been reduced by TV sports announcers to "good football weather."

For most people, the end of summer is no longer an occasion to contemplate the inevitable cycle of life: birth, maturity, decline, death. Instead, it means getting ready for a new season of "Dynasty."

It wasn't always thus.

"That time of year thou mayst in me behold
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang
Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang."

For Shakespeare, autumn was a reminder of man's mortality, of the inevitable decay to which all living things must someday come. Not quite the kind of upbeat message our positive-thinking era prefers, but even so modern a poet as Ezra Pound shared Shakespeare's autumnal malaise:

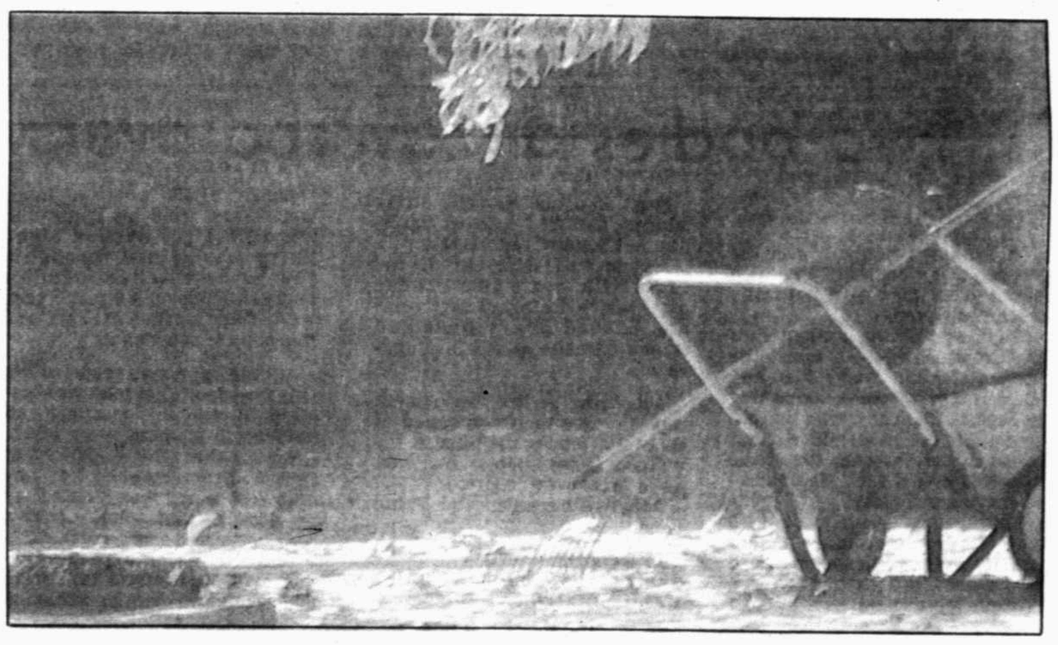

"The leaves fall early this autumn, in wind.
The paired butterflys are already yellow with August
Over the grass in the West garden;
They hurt me. I grow older."

Well, poets always were a gloomy lot, and Shakespeare and Pound had no television to distract them from the harsh realities of life and death. But autumn is sweet as well as sad; the dying leaves blaze with color, the brisk wind puts color in the cheeks but doesn't yet carry the sting of January.

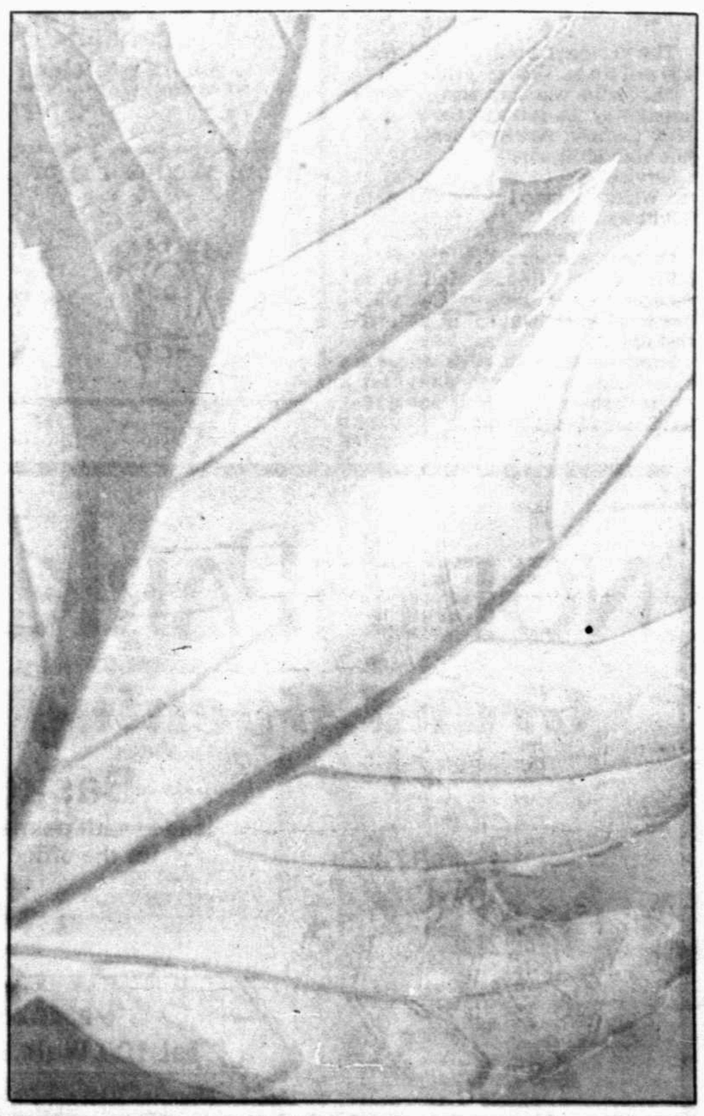

Autumn is twilight, the seasonal sunset that precedes the dark night of winter, "Death's second self, which seals up all in rest." Autumn gives off a glow like the embers of a dying fire, giving comfort even as the chill deepens. Life is change, it tells us; all things come to this.

Even Shakespeare ended his autumn sonnet on a hopeful note, after 12 gloomy lines on the inevitability of decay:

"This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more strong,
To love that well, which thou must leave ere long."

There may not be as many leaves per capita in West Texas as in other areas of the country, but local homeowners still have a need for the rake, the broom and the wheelbarrow.

Yellow leaves are a sure sign that autumn has come to Midland.

Strike won't affect fighter production, Air Force says

FORT WORTH (AP) — Air Force officials say a labor strike at General Dynamics, where the F-16 jet fighter is built, will not have an effect on the production of the plane.

"We think a short-term strike will have little impact because we were ahead to begin with," an Air Force official, who declined to be identified, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

About 6,400 members of Local 776 of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace have been on strike since Nov. 5.

But Air Force officials said the company was ahead of schedule on F-16 production when the strike began.

The machinists union has accused General Dynamics, with 16,500 workers, with firing employees engaged in lawful strike activities.

The complaint, filed by the machinists with the National Labor Relations Board, also accuses the company of "restraining and coercing employees" from exercising their right to participate in union activities. It also accuses the company with failing to bargain in good faith.

Air Force officials told the newspaper they don't want to get involved in the labor conflict.

"We're remaining absolutely neutral regarding the negotiations that are taking place," said one official.

"We're remaining absolutely neutral regarding the negotiations that are taking place."

— unidentified Air Force official

Air Force officials said the F-16s are built in batches.

"Right now at GD, they're only working with finished goods — they're not fabricating parts," an Air Force official said. "They're merely assembling already-made parts."

Some 300 Air Force representatives at the plant no longer are working a second shift in order to monitor the assembly of the plans on the shop floor during the single 10-hour daily shift now implement.

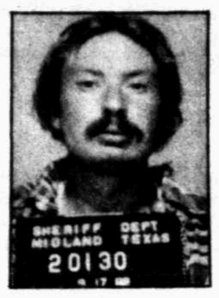

"The Air Force Plant Representative Office was tasked to assess the effect on the F-16 production line for both a short- and a long-term strike," said an Air Force official at the General Dynamics plant.

"We don't think it would have much effect in the short term," he said. "We're not discussing the possibile long-term aspects."

Exotic antelope could help feed poor

KINGSVILLE (AP) — A species of exotic antelope that is "breeding like rabbits" and causing headaches for South Texas ranchers could be an answer to feeding the poor, a professor at Texas A&I University says.

Dr. Ron Ward, professor and researcher at the Texas A&I's Kleberg Wildlife Research Center, said Nilgai antelope have become so abundant that they are beginning to compete with cattle and deer for food.

An estimated 20,000 of the beasts eat and multiply in an area 25 miles wide and 75 miles long, running east of U.S. Highway 77 from Baffin Bay to Port Mansfield. They are the progeny of a mere dozen antelope brought from India to the King Ranch in 1929.

"They're big and have no natural predators here. Like all wild animals they're basically immune to disease," Ward said.

"When you've seen little kids starving, it's hard to get excited about studying ways to make deer grow bigger antlers for some guy in Dallas to hang on his wall. What's important today is food, how can we produce more and why aren't we producing more."

— Dr. Ron Ward, Texas A&I professor

"These animals are healthy, prevalent and breed year round. They're already eating ranchers out of house and home and eventually they could become a menace," he said.

What looked like a nuisance to South Texas ranchers looked like food to Ward. In 1983, he proposed a project to study ways to harvest and market Nilgai as a cheap source of red meat for the poor.

Ward had been concerned about world hunger since working in Kenya as an agricultural consultant in the 1970s.

"When you've seen little kids starving, it's hard to get excited about studying ways to make deer grow bigger antlers for some guy in Dallas to hang on his wall," Ward said.

"What's important today is food, how can we produce more and why aren't we producing more," he said.

The Nilgai is "a resource that's being wasted now. Coyotes eat them and they die of old age."

Ward's research was designed to explore efficient ways of harvesting the beasts, test the taste and food value of the meat, develop a marketing strategy, measure consumer acceptance of the product and evaluate whether landowners had an interest in cultivating Nilgai for sale.

About 27 antelope were shot by Ward or co-workers last year and the animals "sold faster than we could bring them in," he said. Landowners were paid 50 cents per pound — or about $100 per animal.

Prison board member wants to end rodeo

AUSTIN (AP) — Just because the Texas prison rodeo — dubbed "the Wildest Rodeo Behind Bars" — has been a tradition for 53 years is no reason to keep it going, a Texas Board of Corrections member says.

Board member Harry Whittington says the rodeo serves no meaningful purpose and has urged his fellow board members to re-evaluate the costs and legal risks involved in the every-Sunday-in-October rodeo that began in 1931 in Huntsville.

"I don't think there's any way in the world that you can justify it except we've always done it," Whittington said. "At this time I have no reason to support it."

Texas Department of Corrections officials say that with good weather, the rodeo usually makes a profit of $200,000 to $250,000.

But the prison finance office said that because of this year's bad weather, the rodeo brought in only $70,000. Prison officials also want to subtract from that amount the cost of giving prison employees time off for the overtime that they put into the show.

The rodeo's $10 per day stipend and cash prizes are the only way inmates can earn money, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

The rodeo's supporters say the event is one of the few times inmates get the chance to escape the prison routine and allows tourists to visit Huntsville.

But Whittington is concerned that the rodeo dominates the attention of many prison administrators and says it costs more than previous accounts suggest. He also said that inmates consent to the injury release form to make money.

Famous heart surgeon treated for intestinal ulcer

HOUSTON (AP) — World-famed heart surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey was alert and in good spirits after doctors began treating him for an intestinal ulcer, a hospital spokesman says.

DeBakey, 76, was in "very good condition" Sunday in Methodist Hospital, where he was taken by ambulance a day earlier, David Blackshear said.

"He's in a very good mood," Blackshear said. "He's in good spirits."

Doctors determined DeBakey has a benign ulcer on the duodenum, the upper section of the intestine that adjoins the stomach, Blackshear said.

DeBakey was alert when he arrived at the hospital Saturday afternoon for tests and treatment of an "intestinal upset," Blackshear said, adding that officials don't know how long DeBakey will remain hospitalized.

DeBakey is chancellor of Baylor College of Medicine, which he joined in 1948 and developed into one of the country's most eminent medical training and research institutions.

He performed 12 transplants during an 18-month period from August 1968 to early 1970, but stopped because only two of those patients survived more than four months. In February, he resumed performing transplants following the advent of a new anti-rejection drug, cyclosporine.

DeBakey has developed more than 60 surgical instruments and was the first to successfully use a heart pump in a patient.

In 1962, DeBakey got a $2.5 million grant to work on an artificial heart that could be implanted without being linked to an exterior console, but he has said it will be many years before such a device is perfected.

Two bodies discovered over weekend

Raymond Craig, manager of the Crown Inn Motel, found the body of Melvin Peavy Fletcher, 76, at 11 a.m. Saturday. According to reports, Fletcher, who listed a post office box as an address, was found in bed in room 102 of the motel, 3206 W. Front. He was last seen at 9 a.m. Friday.

Police were called at about 9 a.m. Sunday to an alley behind 305 N. Marshall where a man had discovered the body of his uncle, Enrique Morales, 70.

Morales, of the Marshall Street address, had died between Saturday and Sunday, reports said.

A cigarette is thought to be the cause of a house fire Sunday night which destroyed two rooms and caused heavy heat and smoke damage at 503 E. Longview.

According to fire department reports, nine men responded at about 9:30 p.m. to the blaze at the William James Cooper residence. No injuries were reported.

The fire began in the living room.

In complaints filed with police during the weekend, Ralph Mandson, 113 W. Dormard, reported $1,750 worth of items were taken from his house during a burglary Sunday night. Entry was gained through a southside kitchen window between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Taken were four leather jackets and five pairs of dress pants.

Taken were stereo speakers valued at $180, cassette tapes valued at $85 and clothing valued at $350. About $280 worth of damage also was reported.

Gary Wojtek, 804 Howard, told police he was feeding the dogs for Richard Carpenter at 1205 E. Oak Saturday evening when he discovered a bedroom window was broken and the house had been entered.

The only items known to be missing were a 19-inch color television set and a video cassette recorder, value not known.

Deborah Graves of 2121 E. Butternut reported her house was burglarized between Wednesday and Thursday. Taken were a $400 fur jacket, women's clothing, costume jewelry and miscellaneous items.

Midland TESCO foreman killed in hunting mishap

Extra space found in existing rooms

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — "We were thinking of starting a family and the studio next door became available," said Stephen Newman. "We realized we could use the extra space for the extra person." Newman and his wife, Catherine, bought the 300-square-foot studio next to their 725-square-foot, two-bedroom apartment on Manhattan's Upper East Side in June 1983. Several months after the purchase, the couple, both lawyers, learned that Mrs. Newman was pregnant. There would be room for the baby.

Undecided about what to do with the studio and unsure about how to find a designer, the couple waited a number of months, and finally, on a friend's recommendation, hired the New York architectural firm Keenen-Riley to integrate the two apartments.

By the time the architects were engaged, the child was only six weeks away. The architects sketched fast; the contractors had slightly more than a month to do what was in fact a major renovation. On June 29 the polyurethane was drying on the hardwood floor when Daniel Newman, 8 pounds 10 ounces, was born. The apartment was finished the day before mother and child returned from the hospital. Daniel never heard a hammer.

THE BIRTH of a child is usually a cause for celebration, but in Manhattan, it is also often the occasion for a scramble for space. Because of the difficulty in finding apartments in New York City, many people expecting a child, or wanting to have one, are forced to look within, or around, their apartments to find extra space. A couple anticipating more than one child may have to do long-range planning, to find not only space adequate for the children, but also quiet and privacy for themselves.

Making a child's room may be a simple matter of merging rooms or it may lead to replanning much of an apartment. Lofts present a special issue: When a loft is adapted for parents and children with separate rooms, the open plan that made it attractive in the first place becomes more closed and conventional. Whether loft or apartment, many people also take precautionary baby-proofing measures to make the space safe for infants and convenient for parents.

"The contractors were phenomenal; they seemed very concerned about the baby right from the beginning," Mrs. Newman said. The couple drew up the contracts with the architects to stipulate that construction be finished by the expected birth date.

The plan called for the wall between the old and new apartments to be opened and the main kitchen relocated in the studio, along with the baby's room and dining room. With French doors between the two apartments and an open kitchen counter beyond, the architects created a layered view from living room to kitchen.

ONE OF THE simplest cases of finding a baby's bedroom by renovating an existing apartment was done by Bentley LaRosa Salasky, Design, on the Upper East Side. The apartment had the luxury of two existing maids' rooms, which the architects combined into a nursery of comfortable size.

"The principal thing was to create a room that will grow with the child," Sal LaRosa said. The room was large enough for both a crib and a bed for a live-in nurse. The architects designed the bed so that a trundle bed could be placed beneath it for the time when, as an adolescent, the child will have friends over.

Several years ago, James and Patricia Dunning hired the New York architect Tim Wood to reshape the second floor of their new midtown duplex so that there would be room for their first baby. Studying the plan, Wood "found" a 10-by-12-foot baby's room by consolidating closets and rearranging what he called a sloppy hall area; the architect also shaved some space off the den. As a result of that renovation, done several years ago, few changes are necessary now that Mrs. Dunning is expecting a second child. The den will be convertible into a child's room simply with a change in furniture.

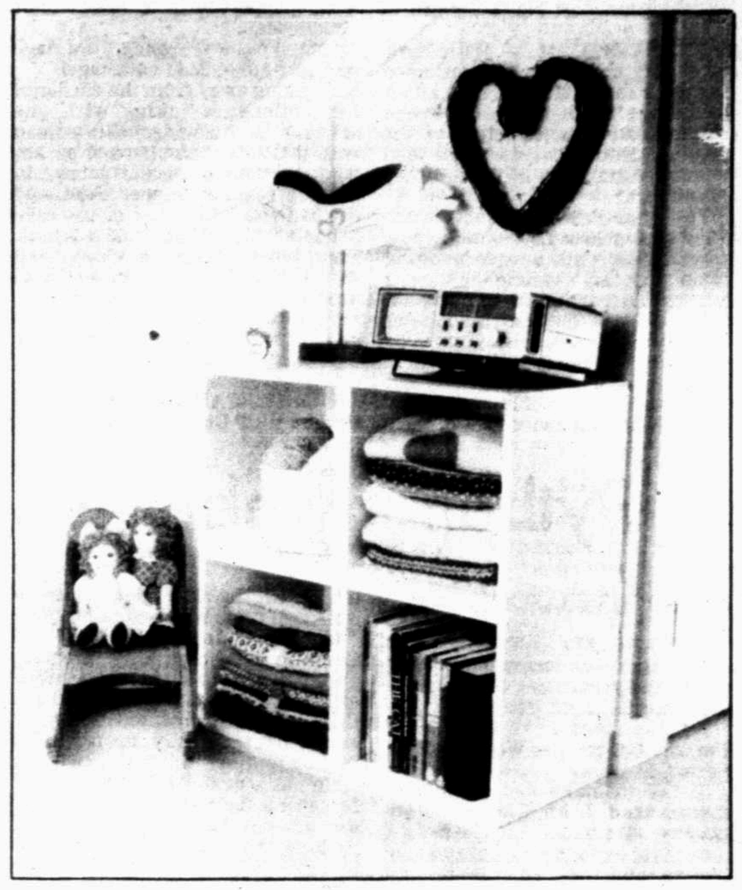

When Susan MacEachron and Bruce Patrick, both lawyers, hired the New York architect Henry Smith-Miller to renovate their downtown loft, they knew she was pregnant but at first did not tell the architect. They assumed there was enough space in the large loft, and they would simply make do, says Patrick: "It was a completely naive point of view."

THE ARCHITECT, meanwhile, was thinking of putting delicate shoji screens in the entry. As soon as he learned of the pregnancy, however, he dropped the shoji screens from the design as impractical, and, like Wood, looked for an extra bedroom in the existing space.

"With a baby, the open plan wasn't operable," the architect said. "A baby is an independent, noisy addition, and privacy becomes paramount."

He found the baby's room by slicing off space from the master bedroom at the back of the long loft and by moving the kitchen forward into the open loft. The baby's room has its own window. The maneuver was simple, involving no change in plumbing.

The New York architect Gary Stluka suggests that anyone planning to work an expanding family into an existing apartment start with a master floor plan, designed with professional help.

Organize any corner of a room with freshly painted storage cubes stacked for function. These storage units can be used for tucking away toys, books, records, even sweaters.

DEAR ABBY

Man can find his lost love by following her 'Oregon trail'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is for "In Love in Oregon," who went to Harris Beach, Ore., and met a girl from Grants Pass. He said it was love at first sight and they spent a fabulous weekend together, but they said goodbye before he could get her last name. He asked you to help him find her.

If he's sincere, he should have no trouble finding her. He could go to Grants Pass and knock on doors, asking, "Does Mary live here?"

Or he could place an ad in the local newspaper saying, "Mary, I love you. Call me!" (And give his telephone number.)

Or he could get copies of the local high school yearbooks for the appropriate years and find her picture.

He could also have fliers printed saying, "MISSING. THE GIRL I LOVE. FIRST NAME 'MARY.' PLEASE HELP ME FIND HER!" and tack the fliers on telephone poles.

Of course, if he feels that the time and expense aren't worth it, he doesn't deserve to find her. — PORT RICHEY, FLA.

DEAR PORT: If he places an ad in the Grants Pass newspaper saying, "Mary, I love you. Call me," and gives his telephone number, he may have more marriageable Marys than he knows what to do with. He might even meet another "Mary" and fall madly in love with her at first sight, too.

There's even an outside chance that his Mary is already married, or going (or living) with someone, and she's hiding.

DEAR ABBY: Your recent column in which you made a pitch for handgun control was a lot of bull. You said: In 1980, handguns killed 77 people in Japan, eight in Great Britain, 24 in Switzerland, eight in Canada, 23 in Israel, 18 in Sweden, four in Australia and 11,522 in the United States. You said we must be doing something wrong.

I can tell you what we're doing wrong. In foreign countries, criminals are stopped after their first crime because bleeding-heart liberals haven't forced the judicial system to put the rights of the criminal before those of the victim.

If people really want to get rid of handguns, they should put the criminals behind bars where they belong. Then the rest of us won't have to carry guns to protect ourselves and loved ones. — B.H., SHENANDOAH, IOWA

DEAR B.H.: Voltaire, the famous 18-century French philosopher and author, is reported to have said: "I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." I'm with Voltaire.

And for those of you who want to send a few bucks to the National Rifle Association, its address is: 1600 Rhode Island Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

DEAR ABBY: I'm hoping that you or perhaps one of your readers can help me. I am a cross-country skier who froze the tips of two toes the winter before last. This past winter, they were very sensitive to the cold and did not take long to freeze. I was miserable.

I have even considered having these toes amputated, one to the first joint and the other to the second joint, but I'm afraid they will feel like they are still there, and frozen.

Does anyone have any suggestions about how to keep these toes warm and from freezing?
LOVES TO SKI IN NEW YORK

DEAR LOVES: Please, do not consider amputation! See your physician. Surely he or she can come up with a suitable solution.

Ice cream 'old'-fashioned treat

NEW YORK (AP) — Although the first commercial ice cream plant in this country was established in Baltimore in 1851, it was only another milestone in the history of ice cream, according to Chocolatier magazine.

The magazine says that nearly every culture which could get to natural ice in the summertime seems to have found a way to make some kind of frozen sweet or other. The Romans, for example, sent runners to bring ice from the frozen Apennines to be scraped, coated with flavored syrup, and enjoyed in the Mediterranean sun.

Later, Marco Polo returned from the Far East with a recipe for a frozen dessert that included milk, and ice cream history was born.

Winners of Lasker medical research awards named

Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — Three Americans, a Briton and a German were selected as winners of the 1984 Albert Lasker Medical Research Awards by an international jury of scientists headed by heart surgeon Dr. Michael E. DeBakey.

The awards, established by the Albert and Mary Lasker Foundation in 1944, are coveted in worldwide scientific circles as the American equivalent to the Nobel Prizes.

The $15,000 Albert Lasker Basic Medical Research Award was shared by Dr. Michael Potter, National Cancer Institute, Bethesda, Md.; Dr. Cesar Milstein, Medical Research Council, Cambridge, England; and Dr. Georges J.F. Kohler, Basel Institue of Immunology, Basel, Switzerland.

Milstein and Kohler also won the 1984 Nobel Prize in Medicine for their work in the development of hybridoma technology, bringing to 40 the number of Albert Lasker Medical Research Award winners who later won Nobel Prizes. Hybridoma technology is a potent new tool for research into the body's immune system and a potentially powerful weapon against cancer, rheumatoid arthritis, lupus, viruses and other diseases, according to a foundation spokesman.

The $15,000 Albert Lasker Clinical Medical Research Award went to Dr. Paul C. Lauterbur, State University of New York-Stony Brook, who developed a non-invasive method of medical imaging called zeugmatography.

Heimlich announces new 'maneuver'

New York Times News Service

Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, who originated the "Heimlich maneuver" to save those with obstructed windpipes, recently described a new method for a choking victim to save himself.

At a news conference at which he was named as a recipient for a medical award, he said a choking person could save himself by falling so that a table or chair hit the diaphragm, forcing it up against the lungs.

In the widely publicized Heimlich maneuver, the rescuer embraces the victim from behind, places the thumb side of a clenched fist against the body just below the rib cage and exerts a sharp upward thrust. This forces the diaphragm to expel air from the lungs, blowing out the obstruction. The same effect can be achieved by compression with the victim lying face upward.

It's family reunion time for former Mouseketeers

ENTERTAINMENT

By DENNIS McLELLAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

ANAHEIM, Calif. — With show time only minutes away, costumed Disney characters scurried about backstage at Disneyland's Space Stage theater and members of the original Mouseketeers made last-minute adjustments of their Mickey Mouse ears.

The theater's 1,000 seats were filled plus nearly 1,000 other people spilled over onto an overhanging ramp anxiously awaiting the show, a musical re-creation of the original Mickey Mouse Club starring nine of the original Mouseketeers.

For the audience, many of them baby-boomers now in their 30s and 40s, it was an irresistible opportunity to see the grown-up versions of their favorite child stars of the '50s.

For the Mouseketeers, themselves in their late 30s and early 40s, it was a rare opportunity to relive their childhoods.

"Stand by, we're going," the stage manager announced backstage.

Breaking away from the cluster of her colleagues joking with one another in the wings, the woman with DARLENE emblazoned on her white turtleneck sweater pointed to the red feather flapper headband she had attached to her mouse ears. "They all like it!" she told a friend. Tradition prevailed, however, and she dropped the out-of-uniform headband on a prop table and took her position with the others on stage behind "The Official Mickey Mouse Clubhouse."

THE CURTAINS parted and the assembly of Disney characters in front of the clubhouse launched into a rousing rendition of "The Mickey Mouse Club March."

Finally, Mickey Mouse himself uttered the familiar refrain: "Mouseketeer roll call, count off now...."

Indeed they did, with the same enthusiasm and energy of their TV heydays so many years ago:

"Don."
"Bonnie."
"Cubby."
"Sharon."
"Lonnie."
"Sherry."
"Tommy."
"Darlene."
"Bobby."

It has been 29 years since Walt Disney assembled a troupe of talented professional and non-professional children and the first episode of the daily "Mickey Mouse Club" aired in black and white at 5 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 3, 1955.

The show, a wholesome mixture of Mouseketeer singing and dancing, old Disney cartoons and new Disney serials, quickly became a coast-to-coast dinner-hour staple — and the Mouseketeers, aged 9 through 13 when the show debuted, became mperhaps the most famous ensemble of child stars in show business history, generating more than 350,000 fan letters during the show's four-year run and causing near-riots during personal appearances.

MANY OF the former Mouseketeers appearing at Disneyland still are active in some phase of show business:

Tommy Cole is an award-winning make-up artist; Bobby Burgess is dancing and touring with co-stars from the old "Lawrence Welk Show"; Sharon Baird performs regularly on the Disney channel; Sherry Alberoni does cartoon character voices; Don Grady (known as Don Agrati in his Mouseketeer Days) writes and produces music in addition to doing cartoon voices and occasional acting; and Cubby O'Brien plays drums, most recently touring with Andy Williams and Bernadette Peters. Lonnie Burr is a writer, Bonnie Lynn Fields owns a dance studio, and Darlene Gillespie is a surgical nurse at Burbank Community Hospital, where she is referred to as "the Mouse Nurse."

For the fourth year in a row, however, they've dusted off their Mouse ears and gone to work at Disneyland for five weekends in the fall, doing four physically demanding shows a day.

"We gripe a little and compare aches and pains, but I think we enjoy it or we wouldn't be here," said a bearded Cubby O'Brien.

ALTHOUGH NOT all the Mouseketeers were chosen to appear in the coveted opening and closing segments of the show and only a few were given roles in the serials, the Mouseketeers dismiss any suggestion of rivalry within the ranks.

Ex-Python member is sane man

By MARCUS ELIASON

LONDON (AP) — Twenty years ago, a lanky undergraduate stood before the enrollment desk of a college entertainment troupe.

He was asked if he could sing? Um, no. Dance? No. Well, what did he do?

"I try to make people laugh," stammered John Cleese. Then, crushed with humiliation, he fled.

Cleese eventually joined the troupe, and that led to radio and television, Monty Python's Flying Circus and the unforgettable Basil Fawlty. He makes people laugh all right — millions of them, from America to Japan, from the Middle East to the South Pacific.

And despite the 6-foot-5 frame and apoplectic glare, he's still a trifle shy. During a recent 1½-hour train ride across England, one discovered a supremely modest, quiet-spoken and courteous man who, like most great comedians, is a lot more serious than his screen persona.

At 45 he has gone through depression and marital crisis and survived to tell the tale in a book co-authored by his therapist, Robin Skynner.

He has outgrown the "Ministry of Silly Walks," dead parrots and the philosophers' football match, and now makes people laugh without the help of his five fellow Pythons.

His Python days are over, despite persistent rumors of an imminent reunion. "There is no way that I am interested," he said, adding that he is tired of "committee-work scripts."

On the train carrying him to Leeds to appear on a TV program about psychotherapy, he is self-effacing to a fault, squirming each time he admits responsibility for some particularly memorable Python routine.

He has a quaintly English way of forgetting the name of a sketch he did a week ago while flawlessly reciting the endless nonsense title he made up for a Teutonic nobleman in a 1969 sketch.

If the breakup of the Beatles killed off a certain esprit in the '60s, the end of Monty Python has done something similar for the '70s. Today, the distilled silliness of elephant-trunk transplants, argument clinics, pet halibuts and chocolate-coated crunchy frogs seems out of fashion.

And now the unlikely setting for Cleese's talents is at training seminars for sales people. He is a partner and chief actor in Video Arts, a highly successful British company which makes humorous training films.

English life is fertile ground for Python humor with its absent-minded vicars, pompous retired colonels, judges in wigs, snooty royals, cane-wielding schoolmasters and dour trade unionists.

But English as they are, Monty Python and Basil Fawlty travel well, nimbly hurdling language and cultural barriers. Cleese finds it "quite mysterious and inexplicable" that there are Python fanatics in America.

He says he meets many Americans who can recite Python acts by heart. He recalls forgetting his lines on the New York stage and getting a chorus of help from the front row.

He was invited by British TV personality David Frost to join his humor program and it brought him together with Terry Jones, Terry Gilliam, Graham Chapman, Eric Idle and Michael Palin in what became Monty Python's Flying Circus, a nonsense name chosen after "Owl-Stretching Time" was rejected.

Economic percentages more attractive than actual figures

By PETER T. KILBORN
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In all the wrangling over budget deficits, taxes and prospects for the economy, absolute numbers seem to be fading from use. Instead, the talk among the Reagan administration and economists is of percentages, which appear to be much smaller than the actual numbers themselves.

One reason for the emphasis on percentages seems to be that the absolute numbers for the U.S. economy simply frighten politicians and befuddle the public. In its first year in office, the Reagan administration delivered the nation its first million million-dollar national debt, and next year, it could produce the country's first million million-dollar budget.

While recent discussion about federal budget deficits have focused on its actual size, generally in the range of $200 billion a year, there was a sign last week that the government may be turning to budgeting-by-percentage.

Word came from the White House that the president's top economic officials had advised setting a deficit goal in 1988, of 2 to 3 percent of the gross national product — the combined value of all goods and services — a figure the administration and its critics might consider less alarming than the actual $100 billion to $150 billion that those percentages of a $5,000 billion GNP might represent.

Percentages, which are usually calculated in only one or two digits, look more benign, at least until one starts exploring the numbers behind them. A deficit of 2 percent of the gross national product, for example, might seem close to the balanced budget that President Reagan had promised by 1983, even though in absolute numbers the budget would be far from balanced.

Most economists, too, find it easier now to ponder the economy in percentages. "I always do it in percentages," said Charles L. Schultze, an economist at the Brookings Institution who was President Carter's chief economic adviser.

In Boston last week, Reagan's former chief economic adviser, Martin S. Feldstein, gave a speech on the economy in which he expressed 11 figures in percentages before he used an absolute number, $250 billion, to estimate the budget deficit in 1989 if Congress and the administration do nothing to make it smaller.

Congress and the Administration often debate the absolute size of deficits, but they invariably use percentages in debating government spending and revenues. The administration argues for cutting the 24 percent of the GNP that represents spending, while many Democrats, and some Republicans as well, argue for raising the 19 percent of revenues that the government collects in taxes.

Absolute numbers for military spending are elusive figures, depending on whether they include expenditures the government has committed itself to but will not actually make for several years. So differences over the Pentagon budget now center on the rate, expressed in percentages, by which spending should change.

"The figures are just so huge," said Rudolph G. Penner, director of the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office. "Most of us don't do very well calculating just a million dollars." The ascendancy of percentages may also result from something rather more mundane. Most congressmen and administration officials have pocket calculators by now, and most of their calculators have percentage keys, making it easy for the arithmetically disinclined to calculate percentages. Most of the calculators, furthermore, cannot accommodate numbers in the billions and million millions on their little screens. They stop at eight digits, which means they start rounding things off after 99 million.

Economists see nothing nefarious in reducing the economy to percentages, although they say that percentages can be used like any other numbers to distort arguments. Percentages, in addition, provide the only useful way to talk about interest rates or to measure changes in the economy, such as growth and inflation, and they provide a crisp way to show the part of the population that is unemployed or the part of its industry that is operating.

It is clearer to say the economy declined by 1.9 percent from 1981 to 1982, and was therefore in a recession, than it is to say the country's total production of goods and services fell by $28 billion. No one knows if that is a lot or a little without the inflation-adjusted figure for the 1981 GNP, which was $1,514 billion. This year, that figure could be about $1,660 billion.

Robert F. Wescott, an economist at Wharton Econometrics in Philadelphia, adds that only by expressing the components of an economy in percentages can analysts compare the characteristics of today's economy with the economy of several years ago or compare the economies of different countries. "It doesn't mean much to tell someone the Italian budget deficit is, say, 1,200 million lira," he said.

Survey says gas prices at low level

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Retail gasoline prices have dipped to their lowest level this year, with motorists last week paying an average of $1.1867 per gallon, according to a national survey.

Industry analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday his weekly survey of 17,500 stations in 50 states found that the average price had dropped by .39 cent from the previous week. The highest gasoline got this year was $1.2121 in May.

Water authority operates below projected income

Through October, the Colorado River Municipal Water District continued to run slightly under income projections, but substantially under estimated expenses.

Income for the 10 months amounted to $10,076,134 or $292,518 less than projected for the period. However, expenses or $5,519,929 were $612,232 less than had been anticipated.

Revenue from municipal sales of 8,705,218,520 gallons of water was about $27,000 less than anticipated for the 10 months. Oil companies bought 854,418,420 gallons, $351,000 less than projected, because of a cutoff of surface water to preserve supplies.

Source of supply and pumping expense was $5,519,926 for 10 months, or $615,232 less than budgeted. This was mostly due to an under-run of $634,460 on an electric power billing of $4,225,640.

For the 10 months, total operating expenses were $6,250,365, or $591,699 under budget estimates. Revenues were based largely on sale of 15,147,272,290 gallons of water. Of this, 76.68 percent was produced from Lakes J.B. Thomas and E.V. Spence; 18.86 percent was from wells. Non-potable water produced for oil companies amounted to 393 percent from diverted water and 2.52 percent from brine wells. The potable wells furnished only one-fourth of one percent in October.

Dollar gains ground, gold slips

LONDON (AP) — The dollar gained ground in early European trading today despite reports that the West German central bank was intervening to halt its advance. The price of gold moved lower.

Dealers said that underlying market sentiment was for a continued strong U.S. recovery and high interest rates, and this was pushing the dollar higher.

But traders in Frankfurt reported the Bundesbank entered the market today to offer three-month dollar contracts. One dealer said "considerable dollar amounts" were involved. The bank itself declined comment.

Several times over the past few weeks, the West German bank has sought to sell large amounts of dollars on the open market in a bid to defend its currency.

Despite the reported intervention, the dollar was up at mid-day in Frankfurt. It was quoted at 2.9725 marks, compared with 2.9640 late Friday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 243.20 yen from Friday's 242.40. Later, in London, it was quoted at 242.93 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Friday:

-2.4535 Swiss francs, up from 2.44375.

-9.1250 French francs, up from 9.0955.

-3.3527 Dutch guilders, up from 3.3435.

-1,845.25 Italian lire, up from 1,842.00.

-1.31585 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3152.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.2539, compared with $1.2598 Friday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $343 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $345. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $343.

Electronic transfers not always most accurate deposit method

By Neal Koch
Hearst Feature Service

It's the type of banking transaction that occurs millions of times a day. A couple needed money to pay their mortgage and household bills. They transfered $1,500 from their savings account at a savings and loan association to their checking account at their bank – or so they thought. But the money never showed up in the couple's bank account, and their checks bounced.

"It was out of my savings at the S&L, and it wasn't in my checking account," the man recalled. "It was in limbo." He did have the deposit receipt, but when he produced it, the bank blithely refused to honor it. "They said unless the deposit showed in their records, all the paperwork in the world didn't matter."

The couple eventually recovered their $1,500 from the bank and had the bounced-check charges removed from their statement, but only after enlisting the help of their S&L, one of the nation's largest.

Given the vast number of transactions processed daily, banks "lose" deposits relatively infrequently, and they are not always so reticent about correcting their errors. Nevertheless, once a bank says it can't find any record of a deposit, a customer can begin a frustrating, often infuriating odyssey past doubting bank officials.

Such incidents underscore the fact that in the increasingly automated and complex world of retail banking, the receipt depositors get – whether from an automatic teller machine or a human teller – may be of little help in proving that they have parted with their money.

Yet, points out Ullar Vitsut, a Bank of America assistant general counsel and head of litigation for Southern California, "that receipt is really the only piece of evidence that a customer gets at the time he makes a deposit over the counter at a bank."

The receipt's legal status is uncertain, say regulators and experts in consumer law. In practice, it is not conclusive proof that the deposit has actually been made. Says Vitsut: "The receipt on its face is proof only that the customer has received the receipt."

Depositors are usually warned of this nearly universal banking policy in the printed information handed out when accounts are opened, notes Sheila Kolenc, of San Francisco Consumer Action. "You accept all those policies even though you never read them," she says.

A consumer is better off making deposits by check because a canceled check is strong proof that the deposit was made, says consumer advocate Kolenc. But John Popovich, a First Interstate Bank vice president who has been resolving the bank's consumer complaints for 10 years, says that customers receive greater protection in some ways when using an ATM. Federal Reserve regulations state that if a bank fails to resolve a consumer complaint involving an ATM deposit within 10 days, the bank must provisionally credit the account with the amount of the claimed deposit for 45 days, he says.

Drilling permits down from last week

DENVER—A total of 2,030 permits to drill for oil and gas were issued in the United States during the week ended Nov. 9, Petroleum Information Corp. has reported.

The total is less than the 2,258 permits issued during the previous week. The weekly figure is also 242 permits below the total from the same week a year ago.

Permits to drill, monitored on a nationwide basis by PI, are a measure of the drilling intentions of the nation's oil operators.

New field permits, for purely exploratory drilling, totaled 255 for the week, an increase of 37 wildcat permits from the previous week. Permits for other exploratory drilling, including deeper and shallower pool tests and field extensions, numbered 210, up slightly from last week.

Development drilling permits totalled 1,565, a decrease of 273 from the previous week.

The most active states for permits issued during the week were Texas, 611; Oklahoma, 244; Kansas, 172; Louisiana, 159; Kentucky, 136; and Ohio, 134 permits.

11.85% EFFECTIVE ANNUAL YIELD
11.25% ANNUAL RATE GUARANTEED THROUGH DECEMBER 31, 1984
$25,000 MINIMUM DEPOSIT

Now you can earn a better rate than the money funds pay. And you don't have to send your money thousands of miles to get it.

Invest $25,000 or more in the InterFirst Investment Fund and we'll guarantee your money earns a minimum of 11.25% compounded monthly, through December 31, 1984.

Rates are set weekly. (Of course, through the end of the year the rate will never go below 11.25%.) And, with only 7-days' notice, you can withdraw money from the fund without penalty. You can make additional deposits at any time for any amount. What's more, as a depositor, you're insured up to $100,000 by the FDIC.

So beat the money funds right here at home. Talk to your local InterFirst banker. And start making the most out of your short-term money.

We believe in you.

The InterFirst Investment Fund

InterFirst

If at any time the balance drops below $25,000, the rate paid is 5.5%. To make withdrawals, 7-days' written notice is required. Substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal. Partnerships, corporations and governmental units are not eligible.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a broad loss today, continuing its steady decline since the election.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 31.03 points last week, edged up .44 to 1,188.38 by noontime today.

But losers outnumbered gainers by more than 2 to 1 in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said stock prices had reached levels that brought in some traders who had been waiting for a drop to do some buying.

But they also said worries persisted about the federal budget deficit and a possible business slump.

The Treasury Department is expected to present a tax reform proposal to President Reagan in early December. There have been numerous published reports about possible elements of that plan.

However, brokers said there still was great uncertainty among investors about the ultimate shape of the package, and its prospective reception in Congress — especially with Democrats retaining control of the House.

Another question mark is the approaching holiday selling season, a pivotal period of the year for many consumer businesses. By most accounts, consumers are in a good financial position to make it a busy period in the nation's stores.

The government reported this morning that personal income rose 0.6

Survival of the fittest

SUWANEE, Ga. — Clad in combat fatigues, their faces smeared green, black and brown, the warriors stalked one another through the pine forest. The national defense wasn't at stake, but the National Survival Game championship was prize enough.

The "soldiers" take part in the war games for a feeling of comradeship and competition, said Steve Ingles, 29, of SDM Adventures, which runs the Survival Game in London, Ontario.

"It's a feeling comparable to nothing I've ever experienced," he said, wiping the sweat and camouflage makeup off his face with an olive-drab shirtsleeve.

As the players wait for the starting horn, "everybody's standing there with their stomachs in knots," he said."...I've never done anything in any other sport. Here, it gives me the chance to be North American champion in a new sport. It's a great feeling. If I could bottle it, I'd sell it."

In the Survival Game, two 15-warrior teams, coming from opposite sides, enter a 25-acre patch of pine forest with a small stream running through it. Each team sets up a base camp and hoists its flag.

The object is to capture the enemy's flag and return it to your own base, or — failing that — to "kill" as many of the enemy as possible. The killing is done with orange and yellow paint capsules, fired from air pistols with a maximum range of about 45 yards.

If neither side captures the opponent's flag within an hour, the game is decided by the number of casualties on each side.

The championship's eight qualifying teams were picked from approximately 18,000 people who play the Survival Game, first begun in 1981. The game continues in a double-elimination format until a winner emerges.

When a player is hit, "it's frustration, the most frustration you've ever felt in your life," said Kirk Akins, 25, an aviation administrator for the Navy in Orange Park, Fla. The Florida team lost its first-round match to an Ohio team.

"We went out and got a couple of kills, then just pulled back to the flag and waited," said Ken Workman, 36, a Decatur investment banker, in describing the Atlanta team's opening-round victory over California.

In the other first-round games, Delaware beat Texas and Ontario, Canada beat Indiana.

There are many variations in strategy, ranging from sitting on defense around the flag to charging as hard as possible to overwhelm the enemy.

"Speed is armor," said Bob DeLyzer, 31, a computer operator from London, Ontario, whose team literally charged down the near boundary and stormed the Indiana base.

The Florida team, also an aggressive attacker, includes two of the three women among the qualifying teams.

The only casualty in Florida's second-round victory was Steve Webb, 22, a commercial artist from Jacksonville.

He sacrificed himself for his teammate, who had captured the Texas flag and was headed back to base.

When you're hit, he said, "then it's something you can turn off in your mind. It's an intense game. Suddenly, it's fun again. You can talk to the guy who shot you as you walk off."

Oil tanker's bow towed under Golden Gate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Shepherded by dozens of tugboats and ships, the surviving bow section of the broken petrochemical tanker Puerto Rican was towed under the Golden Gate Bridge and into San Francisco Bay on Sunday, for docking to remove 2.8 million gallons of oil.

Dozens more vessels, including Coast Guard cutters, oil skimmers and tugs dragging oil-containing booms, in the event the bow should leak, waited inside the bay. A firefighting tugboat paced the procession in case of fire.

The bow section was delayed several hours in getting under the bridge by a strong ebb tide running at 2.6 knots, stalling the parade at Mile Rocks, a mile outside the bay. The maximum speed of the tow was 2.3 knots, the Coast Guard said. The 360-foot section finally passed under the bridge at 2:55 p.m. PST.

Towed by the 16,000-horsepower German salvage vessel Titan, the bow was taken to a private shipyard at Hunters Point so its cargo, estimated to be worth between $5 million and $10 million, could be pumped out. The petroleum products in the bow have been described as mostly lube oil.

Hundreds of people, many with binoculars, watched the approaching armada from walkways on the Golden Gate Bridge and from land.

Three explosions wracked the 632-foot-long tanker Oct. 31 and a fire burned on deck for hours. Six men were injured and one man was cast into the sea and presumed dead.

Four days later, after it was lashed by a fierce storm, the ship broke up and the stern section sank in 2,400 feet of water, 26 miles off the coast.

Oil leaking from ruptured tanks, mainly from the sunken stern, has killed some 400 sea birds and coated 650 others that were washed at Marin County bird rescue centers. The oil destroys the insulating qualities of the birds' feathers, leaving them vulnerable to exposure.

Coast Guard Captain of the Port Kenneth F. Bishop said the plan to bring the bow into the environmentally delicate bay was approved after the Puerto Rican's owner, the Keystone Shipping Co. of Philadelphia, agreed to pay up to $100 million for cleanup costs and other damage in case it leaked.

Under orders of the Coast Guard and other agencies, the oil-laden bow had been kept some 65 miles southwest of the Golden Gate until the plan was approved.

NATION IN BRIEF

Editorial cartoon raises funds for starving people in Ethiopia

DENVER (AP) — An editorial cartoon in a Denver newspaper offered not the usual laughs or social commentary but a poignant plea for aid, raising more than $5,000 in one day for the starving people of Ethiopia.

Syndicated cartoonist Ed Stein, whose work appears in the Rocky Mountain News, drew the work captioned, "Let Them Eat Cartoons." One corner of the cartoon had a bite taken out of it.

Other than a sketch of an empty bowl, the cartoon contained only words.

It said, in part: "For weeks, I've tried to draw a cartoon about the famine in Ethiopia, where millions of people are starving. It's not a funny subject; a cartoon seems inappropriate."

Stein said he would sell readers an original cartoon for a $75 contribution or a copy for any smaller donations, with all the money going to Catholic Relief Services.

The cartoon was published Friday morning and by 5 p.m., about $5,000 had been raised, Stein said.

Bacteria caused food poisoning

ENFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Turkey that was served to 150 elementary and high school students, making 80 people ill and sending 52 to a hospital, was tainted with a bacteria that commonly causes food poisoning, a state health official said.

Staphylococcal bacteria probably contaminated the meal somewhere in the preparation phase, Dennis Hannon of the Illinois Department of Public Health laboratory said Sunday. He said tests of the raw turkey were negative.

The meal was served to about 150 elementary and high school students last Thursday in the school cafeteria. About 80 students, a cook and two teachers suffered dizziness, nausea and vomiting afterward.

Frigate finally commissioned

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A $301 million guided missile frigate that was built 27 weeks ahead of schedule then rejected because it was thought to contain flawed computer chips has taken its place on the high seas as an official Navy vessel.

The USS Gary was commissioned Sunday to the cheers of more than 1,000 people, including its crew of more than 200.

The ship is named after Cmdr. Donald Arthur Gary, who led more than 300 people to safety after they were trapped in a ship under heavy attack off the Japanese coast during World War II.

It was rejected in October, but after a check of its computer chips last month the Gary was accepted for commissioning.

Six arrested in cocaine raids

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Evidence found in three homes where police confiscated $3.7 million in cash and cocaine valued at nearly $2.5 million indicates a drug ring had already sold at least $190 million worth of cocaine, authorities said.

Six people arrested in the raids in the suburban communities of Studio City, West Covina and Hacienda Heights were booked for investigation of possessing cocaine for sale and held in lieu of $5 million bail each, said police narcotics officer Lt. J.R. Schiller.

During the Saturday raids, officers found more than eight pounds of cocaine, several boxes of cash and a pistol, Schiller said.

Advertising Age judges papers

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Times, the Allentown (Pa.) Morning Call and USA Today have been judged the top three newspapers in terms of design by a survey of graphics experts, according to Advertising Age magazine.

Ad Age credited New York Times Executive Editor A.M. Rosenthal and Assistant Managing Editor for art Louis Silverstein for the Times' innovative look, which won it top honors.

The Call was the second-best looking paper, according to the survey by Media Research Institute of Pacific Palisades, Calif. USA Today was judged best in use of color and third in overall design.

To Lease or Not To Lease

Reasons To Lease:

1. Leasing is convenient – you only pay for what you use and not for the full price of the car.
2. There is no used car to dispose of at lease end.
3. Leasing frees your cash and you can use your available bank line of credit for other purposes.
4. Lessee – leasing for business purposes will have the benefit of simplified tax records.
