Archer City Group Sinks Big Shaft In Search Of Copper

TRACE OF LODE FOUND IN OIL WELL CUTTING

Copper Ore Believed To Be Located About 45 Feet Down

168 ACRES LEASED

Test to Locate Ore Now Under Way to Take Two Weeks

Special to The Record News.

ARCHER CITY, Aug. 15.—A well is belong dug by hand on Carson survey No. 136 Archer county in search of copper. Two weeks ago, C. B. Long in drilling an oil well discovered a very hard formation 45 feet below the surface of the ground which was five feet in thickness and which took him exactly six bits to drill through. This formation he believed at the time to be copper.

However, no examination was made at this time. A copper mine was in operation on this location in 1889-90 but owners were never able to locate the main statum of copper and it was discontinued.

At present time copper can easily be found lying on the surface of the ground in large nuggets.

When Mr. Long made a report of his discovery a company was formed by the citizens of Archer City and 160 acre tract of land was leased. This company is having a well dug four feet wide and down to the formation 45 feet deep. This well is being dug entirely by hand and when the formation is reached it will reveal if the discovery is really copper and if it to be mined in paying quantities.

The time allotted for the drilling of this shaft is two weeks.

The company is composed of the following Archer City citizens:

D. F. Daubs, John P. Fleming, T. C. McAudy, Joe C. Hamilton, P. J. Hays, W. L. Andrews, T. L. Looney, Waynie King, W. E. Forgy.

TWO RANGERS AT CHILDRESS TO STOP RIOTS

Attempts to Chase Out Negro Cotton Pickers Is Claimed

FIGHTS IN STREET

Scrap Between Boys Of Rival Races Starts Big Trouble

CHILDRESS, Aug. 15. — Dick Moore late today was named police chief of Childress to succeed Hiram Cook, resigned. Cook's resignation came as a sequel to sporadic battles here during the last few days between negroes and whites in which it was charged that efforts were being made to scare away negro cotton pickers. M. T. Gonzaullos and C. O. Moore, Texas rangers, are in Childress to aid local authorities in controlling the situation, which was tonight reported quiet.

By Universal Service.

CHILDRESS, Aug. 15.—Two rangers arrived here late today to quell what was first believed to be the makings of a first class race riot.

The call for the rangers was broadcast last night when a group of whites became embroiled with a group of negroes over the outcome of a dog fight in the main street.

According to Sheriff John Thompson, a white boy started a fight with a negro lad when his dog lost. Several older boys joined in the fracas and as others dashed up to the scene they took sides and soon a free-for-all was raging.

Local officers, aided by county officials, took the side of law and order and were forced to use their clubs in separating the combatants.

'Hot Heads' in Jail.

As a result the Childress jail was overflowing this morning and the night in jail cooled off many of the hot heads.

However, local officials were prepared tonight to thwart any attempt of the whites to scare away hundreds of itinerant negro cotton pickers drawn here by the report of an exceptionally good cotton crop.

A report was received today by Sheriff Thompson that a band of white youths were warning the negro cotton pickers to leave Childress in an effort to increase wages of cotton pickers in this area.

With a large cotton crop, planters will need more than the usual number of cotton pickers.

Ranger Sergeant M. T. Gonzallos arrived here at 5 p. m. Monday as a reinforcement to Ranger C. O. Moore, both of whom have been sent to the scene of the probable race war to stamp out all evidences of an economic strife that would cause the loss of millions to farmers from here to Amarillo, it was said.

Fight Saturday.

The affray began early Saturday afternoon when a fight between a negro and a white boy attracted the attention of scores on Main street. Soon after a set of five or six negroes began fighting among themselves, supposedly at the instigation of the whites and before the affair closed, approximately 500 people thronged the streets of the town. Officers under Sheriff John Compton, and men of the city force began prompt action, arresting all participants. More arrests are expected, Sheriff Compton said, and charges against the men held are to be held up pending further arrests.

Inhabitants of the region exhibit no fear of the consequences, since the affair is known to be the work of radical laborers, intent on a boost in wages in surrounding cotton fields, city officials said.

'Race War' Gets Funny.

The "race war" swerved into a ludicrous vein later Saturday evening. Excited spectators were running from one fight to another, shouting "fight, fight." One such alarm given caused hundreds to run to the scene, which exhibited a scramble between two dogs.

Arrival of the rangers on the scene is expected to put an end to the affair, it was said.

"FARMER JIM" GIVES ADVICE

Former Governor Worries Over Cotton Price

By Universal Service.

AUSTIN, Aug. 15.—Declaring that Texas farmers should not sell their cotton below 25 cents a pound, James E. Ferguson, former governor, today urged cotton planters not to "throw" their cotton on the market all at once.

"If all this crop is thrown on the market as it is picked in the next two months the price is sure to go down, no matter what the reports should show," said Ferguson.

"Every banker and every merchant should begin right now to keep at least one-third of this crop off the market," the former governor declared. "That awful old hypocrite, the federal reserve bank is now bragging that they are loaning money at five and one-half per cent. If they ever did intend to help the farmer, now is the time to show it.

"Let the federal reserve bank announce that they will loan $75 to $80 a bale on middling cotton now owned by actual farmers and not yet sold to cotton buyers, but pledged to member banks, cotton will go up $10 a bale and under no circumstances will it go down."

13 MEN RIDE "BLACK MARIA" UNDER GUARD

Two Face Charges Of Operating Gambling Devices

11 OTHERS PAY FINE

$3731 Of Coin in Game Held By Bralley After Raid

A mammoth dice game was raided by deputy sheriffs at the Mission hotel in the heart of the business district Monday afternoon. Officers estimated that the total amount of money in the game was more than $7500.

The officers seized $3731 in the raid and the money was deposited in a bank by Sheriff W. G. Bralley to await its final disposal, which, officials said, may result in its confiscation along with the equipment found by the officers in the room. Officers estimated that about $4000 was on the persons of the men arrested.

Thirteen men were arrested in the raid. Fines of $11.80 were paid by 11 of them, seven pleading guilty and paying off in Justice of the Peace R. V. Gwinn's court and four others followed the same procedure in the court of Justice of the Peace O. L. Gibbs.

Charges Are Filed.

Charges of operating and possessing gaming tables were filed against E. S. Kuhn and J. A. Roach in Judge Gwinn's court by Sam Spence, assistant district attorney, and Deputy Sheriff W. G. Morris, who led the raid.

Bond in each of the cases were set at $1000. The bonds were perfected and the accused men released.

When the 11 who pleaded guilty to gaming charges in justice courts paid their fines, practically every one of them displayed large rolls of bills, which ranged in denomination from $10 to $100 with the latter denomination being numerous.

Three-Day Probe.

The raid, which culminated three days of unusual activity by city and county officers here, was made about 4 o'clock at the Mission hotel on Indiana avenue. The officers watched the game for several minutes through a transom before entering the room which is on the second floor of the building.

Deputy Morris mounted a bedstead in the hall and surveyed the game. When he was on the floor again Deputy W. W. Belcher watched the players. The two officers, with Deputy Charles Gant then entered the room.

There was considerable confusion, the officers stated, when they opened the door. Money disappeared from the table and went into pockets. Aside from the table Deputy Morris picked up a money bag containing the $3731.

13 Put in "Maria."

The raiding officers called on the police department for a patrol wagon and the 13 men were taken to the court house in two trips of a patrol wagon.

The officers seized two pairs of dice, a leather padded dice cup and destroyed two tables. The tables were covered by a large piece of wall board which was padded with canvas, according to the officers.

Ability to watch the game before entering the room was attributed to the hot weather. A towel had been hung over the transom but had been folded up to allow a draught, the officers said.

6000 Texas Troops Parade For Dan

Governor Calls Texas Militia World's Best

CAMP PALACIOS, Aug. 15.(AP)—Declaring that he knew a little bit about the army as a buck private, Gov. Dan Moody told the officers of the 46th division Texas national guard, in an informal address on the field following the division review here Monday afternoon, that he had never seen anything in the regular army or any other national guard unit that surpassed the performance on the field today.

"I am told that I am commander-in-chief of this division," he said. "I know that it is you officers who are responsible for the splendid showing of these troops. After watching the review I am prouder to be associated with this division than any other honor that has come my way.

"As governor of Texas I stand willing and ready at all times to co-operate with the national guard to make it a better organization."

After the 6000 troops had passed in review the governor, four planes plying in echelon formation dipped close to the ground in front of the reviewing stand as a salute to the chief executive. Later Governor Moody and Maj. Gen. J. A. Hulen, commander of the division, made a short inspection tour of the camp. In the evening the governor was the guest of honor at a ball given by the officers' club.

Prize Records of Early Texas Missions Are Discovered In Library of Mexican Cathedral at Matamoras

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Aug. 15.—Two long lost documents containing the records of the Bahia del Espiritu Santo, now Goliad, Texas, have been located after having been lost for many years, according to C. E. Castaneda, librarian of the Latin American collection at the University of Texas. These two documents are in the Matamoros cathedral, Matamoros, Mexico.

The existence of these two books in Matamoros has been mentioned by Dr. Herbert Bolton, historian at Berkeley, Cal., in his "Guides to Materials for United States History in the Archives of Mexico," written in 1913. Mr. Castaneda, on a recent visit to Matamoros was permitted by the Mexican authorities to examine the volumes.

The two books contain the records of the San Refugio mission, according to Mr. Castaneda. One of the volumes is the baptismal record of the mission from 1807 to 1825 and contains much valuable information regarding the Indians who were baptised at that time. The other volume is a record of burials for the same period. The last entry in either of the volumes is dated November 8, 1825.

In the last two pages of the first volume there is an interesting note which throws much light on the hardships endured by the faithful missionaries in their last years of work at Refugio, according to Mr. Castaneda, who copied the note, which reads as follows:

"All the baptisms made from July 9, 1824, on were performed at the parochial church of La Bahia because of the inability of living at the mission due to the hostility of the Comanches."

Permission has been granted to Mr. Castaneda to make photostat copies of the records for the archives of the University of Texas library.

GERMANS FAIL IN OCEAN HOP

Second Attempt Will Be Made Later

By Universal Service.

DESSAU, Germany, Aug. 15.—Germany will try again. The Junkers company, builders of the Europa and Bremen, will renew their attempt to span the distance between Germany and America with other airplanes as soon as the weather improves.

There was gloom in the great Junkers works here today with the news of the crashing of the Europa in its landing at Bremen, and the gloom increased with the return of the Bremen after the latter had passed Ireland. Driven back by raging storms the pilots of the Bremen turned about and landed safely at the Junkers field here at 4:24 this afternoon. The Bremen had been in the air for 22 hours.

Weather Is Adverse

The fury of the elements brought to naught Germany's first ambitious attempt to pin the blue ribbon of the air to her wings. A conspiracy of storm, lightning, rain and fog, which helped to smash up ensnared the second would-be conqueror as well and after her all night battle.

The Bremen gave up at seven this morning when well out beyond the Irish coast.

The track of the "White Bird" remains untrodden but the elements were more kind to the Germans than they were to Nungesser and Coli. All the members of the two crews are safe and unhurt, though furious at the hard luck and anxious to make a new attempt.

Europa Damaged

The machines are also safe except for the damage to the Europa which can be easily repaired.

All Germany is downcast and chagrined at the failure but glad that no lives were lost. She seeks consolation in the splendid fight put up by the pilots, and Koehl, in the Bremen. The skill and daring shown by these masters are praised, their flight is called a masterpiece of aviation, and there is nothing but applause for their courage in turning back when science failed to master nature. A continuation of the attempt would have been but a reckless gamble with death.

Byrd Had Winds

No comparison with the effort of Commander Byrd had a backwind whereas the Europa and Bremen had to fight head-winds that at times were so strong the plane seemed to be standing still.

SUN LIABLE TO EXPULSION

Will Annihilate Human Race, Scientis Says

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Human life, made seemingly safe from destruction by civilization is at the mercy of an explosion of the sun at any moment, prominent astronomers at Yerkes observatory disclosed here today.

The disclosure is based on the knowledge that every star or planet in the universe has either already experienced this explosive stage, or may do so momently.

Planet Expands

C. T. Elvey of Northwestern university, who is preparing a paper on this subject, from observations he is making at the observatory, said that the last star to explode was Nova Pictovwa Ris. It expanded many thousands of times its size in 1925.

"There is no reason why the sun should be an exception to the rule," said Mr. Elvey. "There is no proof that it will not explode tomorrow or a million years from now. As yet we don't know exactly what the cause of this explosion may be, but of several theories advanced to explain it, this one seems to be the most probable.

Caused Internally

"The explosion of a planet is generally believed to be caused by an internal eruption brought on by the liberation of atomic energy.

"If this is the cause, the liberated energy travels from the center of the star at an explosive speed. When it finally reaches the outside the star has become many times its original size just as its intensity has increased many times. Nova Pictoris increased in intensity more than 40,000 times.

Food For Cynics

"If this were to happen to the sun, we would know of it in eight minutes and we would have 138 hours more to live. At that time the burning gases would reach the earth and we would be annihilated.

"This will be wonderful gossip for cynics, but as the earth has survived thus far, it seems that we will all be able to last a normal lifetime."

Texas Flier to Take Extra Load in Race To Hawaii to Test Power of His Ship

Capt. Erwin Will Try 4300-Mile Jump For Hongkong After His Hop to Honolulu Today

OAKLAND, Calif., Aug. 15.(AP)—Captain William P. Erwin, war ace, who will pilot the Dallas Spirit in the Hawaiian air race, was advised today by two of his rival pilots to take off from the island of Molokai on the second leg of his Dallas-to-Hongkong flight. Martin Jensen, Honolulu pilot, who will fly the Iloha in the Dole race, and Lieutenant Kenneth Hawkins who will navigate the El Encanto to the islands, where he was stationed for the navy for several years, informed Erwin that the only field he could possibly take off from is located on the leper island near the spot where Ernie Smith was forced down.

There is a natural four-mile runway on the island with about a two per cent grade and a hard surface, Jensen told the Texas flier. Erwin will carry a 400-pound extra load from here to Honolulu to test the lifting power of his plane for the 4300 mile jump from the islands to Hongkong.

LIEN QUESTION BEFORE CITY

Council to Hold Public Hearing

If a municipality has the right to re-assess property for street paving purposes will be decided, insofar as the Wichita Falls city government is concerned, two weeks hence when the city council will hold a public hearing on the question of ordering a re-assessment of property repossessed by an owner from a purchaser, of the property failing to meet time payments, who during the possession ordered the street paved.

The question was broached Monday night to the city council by M. E. Nutt, attorney for the L. E. Whitham company. According to Mr. Nutt's allegations the owner after repossessing the property, through court proceedings had the paving lien, owned by the Whitham company, cancelled.

Mr. Nutt in his pleadings set out that if the council does not re-assess the property that the Whitham company will not be remunerated for the paving.

A. W. King, park and sanitary commissioner, asserted that in his opinion the city council was "being used as a collection agency." however, Mr. King assented to the council holding a public hearing on the matter.

The question of whether a council can re-assess property is a new one in Texas, according to the opinions advanced by those attending the Monday night session.

All bids for the laying of a water line from the new municipal west side water tower to Ozart avenue were rejected by the council on motion of P. B. Curd, water commissioner. Mr. Curd in making his motion declared that in his opinion, all of the bids were too high.

An ordinance regulating the preparing of graves in city cemeteries was passed by the council on its second reading.

Proceedings were started by the council on the project of paving Bluff street, from Second to Sixth. The project of paving Blonde street, from Bridwell to Holliday, was passed on its first reading.

Quartet Which Robbed Apache, Okla., Store Headed for Wichita Territory

In a telephone conversation at noon Monday with officials at Apache, Okla., Sheriff W. G. Bralley's department was urged to keep a sharp lokout for four men who robbed a store there early Monday and drove towards Wichita Falls.

Two of the men are about 30 years of age and the other two were described as boys. They were seen to drive away from an Apache store which was discovered to have been robbed of $100 in cash, according to the report.

The Apache officers also asked the local officers to look out for two boys in a Ford coupe who are believed to have in their possession a cream separator stolen there. Apache is a short distance north of Lawton.

MODISH MITZI— Enough Is Not Enough By JAY V. JAY

She has her winter coat on her mind. Not that the weather means anything to Mitzi. It's the style. The only way to settle that is to look at all the coats in the world or at least those in this shop and decide. This stand-up ruff-like collar is of ermine and very stunning on a black kasha coat.

The first model wears a coat with the side flare made of fur. The flare is circular and hangs below the usual hemline. The other coat is one of the models showing a wrapped silhouette. The collar and cuffs are of the new and soon to be popular "shaved fur." The broadcloth is finely tucked.

The cape effect to coats is well liked. Polly is wondering how this particular coat would fit her. The tiered capes have a bolero effect. The collar and cuffs of fur are wide. As this is about the 99th model she has seen Polly is feeling a little bewildered and slightly dizzy a la mode.

Hasn't Mitzi seen enough? The Goofer asks if Mitzi won't take tea with him? She must be tired. The new velvet hat she wears prompts her acceptance. She'd love to go to some place where they could see a lot of people and she adds—more fashions. Tired? Hardly. Tomorrow—New Hats

TWO HOMES MADE HAPPY

By Women Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I think it is the most wonderful medicine I ever tried," is the statement made by Mrs. Goldie Shoup of St. Joseph, Illinois. She declares that after taking the Compound she is in better health than before.

Mrs. J. Storms of 29 Lane Street, Paterson, N. J., writes: "I can not speak too highly of your medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

These statements were taken from two enthusiastic letters which tell of the help that has been received from using the Vegetable Compound. Both Mrs. Shoup and Mrs. Storms were in a run-down condition which caused them much unhappiness. When women are suffering from lack of strength and from weakness, their own life and that of their family is affected. When they feel well and strong and are able to do their housework easily, happy homes are the result.

Are you on the Sunlit Road to Better Health?

Life's Most Gripping Stories

WHAT is more thrilling, more soul-stirring than the swift-moving drama of life itself? The novel, short story or play merely entertain. The frank records of human experience grip the imagination, and stir the emotions because they are true.

That is why the narratives in True Story Magazine have won such a vast reader audience. They are actual happenings involving real people. They reveal intimate details of the human temptations, errors, struggles, triumphs and failures that make fiction colorless and tame in comparison.

The 16 big features in September True Story, for example, are fairly packed with inspiration and thrills. You cannot afford to miss this remarkable issue. Your newsdealer can supply you. Get your copy today.

BURKBURNETT SOCIETY

Special to The Record News.

BURKBURNETT, Aug. 15.—The Woman's Missionary society of the Methodist church met Monday in business session with the president, Mrs. W. R. Hill in the chair.

The devotional opening service was specially good including a program of song and prayer directed by Mrs. J. S. Mills.

The following interesting report was made covering the general activities of local work by the members: Twenty-three visits to the sick and to strangers, four trays carried, also one floral gift sent to sick room and five dollars in money used for helpful relief.

The meeting then took on a more social nature and naming Mrs. H. Maloney as honoree, presented her with a set of silver as an expression of appreciation for her valuable services as a member of the Missionary society, and as an expression of regret at her early departure from Burkburnett. Every good wish for her future was expressed with the statement that she would be missed by all her friends in this city.

Those present were: Mesdames J. L. Coffee, T. D. Tarkington, W. R. Hill, R. H. Henry, J. S. Bills, Sam Davis and Ellis Greeson.

Mrs. George Green honored her little daughter, Mozelle Green, with a pretty party Saturday afternoon from four to six o'clock in celebration of her tenth birthday.

The rooms of the Green home were bright with a decoration of yellow and white and a large number of boys and girls made merry with a bean bag game and other amusements suitable to the occasion. In the game, Rupert Fry won high score among the girls and Myron Greeson among the boys.

A treat of brick cream and cake was served by the kind mother assisted by Ray and Rhetta Davis, Mary Moody, Mrs. L. C. Griffin. The refreshments were also featured by the cutting of a large beautiful birthday cake bearing 10 yellow candles, special tribute to the honoree.

Those present at this gay party were, Florence Davis, Isla Mae Rhea, Joe Ann Bailey, Darothula Farmer, Bobbie Louise Ballenger, Dorothy Coats, Lois Griffin, Mary Helen Gosnell, Manilla Milford, Bobbie Chamberlain, Rupert Fry, Mary Jo Henson, Marilyn Harwell, Mary Virginia Coats, Maxine Willingham, Betty Sue Green, Florence Fowler, Ruth Coats, Maurine Goodwin, Margaret Coats, Marguerite Morris, Geraldine Hill, D. The community night open air concert Monday night was well attended and the audience well seated at the Maxwell-Key corner on Avenue B.

Carl Cowles of the chamber of commerce was manager of the evening entertainment and presented a good program centering about the Burk band boys who furnished good music for the occasion.

Other numbers on the program were a black faced comedy with music by the members of the North Texas Tom Cat orchestra, where Paul Davis, supported by Russell Duvall were the chief fun makers.

Earl Wright gave to two solos with accompaniment and Mark Westbrook added a clever jig and Charleston dance. Other contributing to the dancing program were Billie Jane Chatham, Pauline Henry, Eva Dodson.

A showing of comic pictures was also given in the Monday night program.

At the conclusion, Mr. Cowles announced a similar entertainment at Fairview school on Aug. 19.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church report a most delightful afternoon party at the home of Mrs. F. A. Wiggins with Mrs. Ed Williams as joint hostess.

The amusement of the entertaining hours was featured around a series of "Pit" tables, resulting with Mrs. Lee Vere Cunningham as the highest score winner and Mrs. H. M. Hood listed for consolation prize.

Following the game, an ice cold watermelon feast was enjoyed by the guests: Mesdames N. G. Goodlett, William Gage, O. Gray, Frank Basham, John Anderson, Whitehouse, Frank Winn, H. A. Brooks H. M. Hood, L. V. Cunningham and a special guest, Mrs. Sam Davis.

Rev. James Wood, a theological student, who has been serving as supply pastor for the Presbyterian church during the summer months left Monday for his home in Zephyr, Texas, to prepare for entering Lane's Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian church in Cincinnati, Ohio.

SORE ITCHING RASH FOLLOWED BERRY-PICKING

Spread rapidly, but was checked at last and quickly healed

Carrolltown, Pa., Aug. 19:—"One day last year after picking berries my hand began to itch very badly. I scratched it but did not bother to put anything on it. Finally the place became red and sore and began to spread all over my hand. Then I became alarmed and seeing your advertisement I sent for a sample each of your Resinol Soap and Ointment. After using these samples the relief was so great, I purchased two full size cakes of Resinol Soap and two jars of Ointment and continued their use until my hand was finally healed. I can never thank you enough for what your Resinol has done for me, and I hope that all who have skin trouble will try these products."—(Signed) Agnes Frederick, Box 17.

Amazing Nite Cream

"It is a small thing to do in behalf of that most precious of woman's possessions—facial attractiveness. Yet, there are still women who go around with skin blemishes, premature wrinkles, flabby cheeks and unsightly hollows," says Mme. Chernoff. "It is needless, as thousands of women can testify. My Nite Cream has, I fully believe, done more to nourish underfed tissues and indifferent complexions into new life and bloom than any other known preparation. I have yet to know of a failure, no matter how hopeless the case has been." Sold at leading toilet counters.

TACT AND THE CHILD

By DR. REED

Suggestion More Powerful Than Command

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.

Former President of the American Medical Association.

CHARLES A.L. REED, M.D.

YOU, as a father, more particularly as a mother, may have discovered that, in managing your children, you often can catch more flies with sugar than with vinegar. By this I mean that often you can accomplish more by coaxing than by driving, more by suggesting than by commanding.

Suggestion is, indeed, the most effective means by which to direct and to control the growing and plastic mind of the child.

Suggestibility is that part of our nature that inclines us to behave in accordance with the will of other people. It is the faculty which, properly controlled, makes us good members of society.

Parents and teachers are apt to forget this side of a child's psychology. Many of them think of the child as an inherently naughty, self-willed creature whom it is necessary to bring under control, but overlook its amenability and sociability, which are just as important as its independence.

The two sides are present in adults and children alike. There is a part of us which seeks its own ends and tends to disregard others. This at its best is ambition, without which no one would do anything. The other part makes us want to be pleasing to others, and open to the opinions of others. To harmonize these two sides is the great problem of our moral life.

Children, says A. J. Hadfield ("Maternity and Child Welfare"), are highly suggestible beings, and the way to educate a child is not to drill him into unquestioning obedience, but to appeal to the side of him that wants to conform. Most suggestion is quite unconscious, and the best teachers educate a child without its realizing that the process is going on. Imitation is a form of suggestion, and probably the most usual form in early childhood. A baby will imitate its mother if she smiles or frowns in front of its cradle, and every child is a born mimic. The important thing at this stage is to give it the right things to imitate, for children copy the faults of the parents perhaps more easily than they do their virtues. A calm mother makes a placid, good-tempered child, an irritable mother makes a difficult, obstinate and irritable child. About two and a half years is an age of great plasticity; the child demands stories, asks questions and absorbs all he hears, and this is the time when suggestibility counts for more perhaps than it does at any other.

From four to eight the child is liable to swing to the other extreme and be intensely critical and self-assertive. From accepting his environment as he finds it he turns to inquiring the reason for everything. The only way to deal with a child at this period is to treat him as grown-up and to give him reasons. Underneath his independence he is intensely suggestible to his own ideals and ambitions, and a normal child's one ambition at this age is to be grown up. If, therefore, we refrain from trying to impose our opinions and wishes on him directly, and instead appeal to his own ideals, we can do anything we like with him. But we must have taken the opportunities which the earlier years gave us of developing these sentiments of loyalty, self-respect and responsibility which we now wish to appeal to. Children of this age are often anxious to express their independence by helping to dress themselves or to do the work of the house, and if dealt with patiently they soon become very useful.

FOUR HEADS WITH BUT A SINGLE WISH

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"WHO Will My Future Husband Be?" Funny kind-of—how that's the busiest question in the girl-mind. Is it—who will be the girl I'll marry?—the chief meditation in the mind of a young men? If he should say it isn't—we still will not know, those of us who are not boys or men.

Four pretty girls, scoffing at necromancy, magic, crystal-gazing, fortune-telling, will hover over somebody's magic crystal. Somebody very serious, will pass a hand slowly over it between their bright eyes and its answering brightness. Somebody's voice will say, "Do not laugh; but look! Something surely you will see. Wish and look, and do not laugh."

And in spite of themselves the four, not giggling, but tongue in cheek, will look. And in spite of their gay disbelief, the four will certainly make a wish. And if the wish should really shape itself, gathering form and color from formless radiance, into the thing they wished for—if it SHOULD—it would be the same picture for them all!

Not money. Not fame. Not knowledge. But the laughing face of a nice young man!

Their future husband! All in the same face. For each would wish him young, handsome, good, good-tempered; and the only one of his kind at large.

How Acquaintance Blossoms Into Friendship

SHE was the Woman Across the Way. Just that; nothing more to me than I was to her.

We knew each other's names, and when we met we nodded. Once or twice we mentioned the weather. She was, as I say, just a woman who lived nearby.

LUCY LOWELL

And then sorrow came. And the whole world turned gray and the sun didn't shine any more. And life was a dreary road which began nowhere and ran on to nothing.

Then I saw her face and felt her hand. A hand, warm and friendly, reached out with swift, sure strength to take mine for a way along that bleak road.

I realized then what the word "friend" means.

It's a thing you don't find out on sunny days. It takes the darkness, the grim touch of trouble, to show what there is on the other side of that nod and smile passed by so lightly.

Soul lies deep below the surface amenities, the pleasant conventions which people show to each other.

You never would find it, perhaps, if sorrow never came to you. The nod and smile—a name—that's all the Woman Across the Way would be to you. Just a passing acquaintance. Like dozens of acquaintances you have and I have—not friends.

There are cares that life sends which sear and twist the heart, which change us through and through before they have gone.

And yet we can bear them without bitterness and with bits of hope gleaming through. For it is these which change someone, like the Woman Across the Way, into a friend.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am going to a wedding. I do not know the bride, but the bride's relative has sent me an invitation. I have no escort. Now what gift would be appropriate, and who is to buy it, my escort or myself, or should we both give her a gift? DOROTHY H.

YOU, not your escort, would buy the gift, which should be something for the new home. You can send an item in silver or glass for the table, or some decorative detail for the house.

Fear of Punishment Makes Children Lie

By L. Lamar Matthews

WHAT makes children tell lies?

That's what somebody asked the other day.

"What makes humans human?" was the reply he received.

L.LAMAR MATTHEWS

And that reminded a bystander of this experience in her own childhood:

"The first story I ever told my mother," she said, "was about a peony that grew in our yard. I've never seen one of those flowers since that I did not immediately recall that lie that I told when I was five years old.

"The peony was just beginning to open, and I simply took my little hands and pulled it wide open—with perfectly good intentions of helping the pretty thing along. I was really pleased with my efficient service and felt quite happy about hastening so pleasant a happening as the early blooming of a big fragrant flower.

"That is, I felt happy until my mother appeared, looked with disapproval upon the work of my hands and asked in stern angry tones, 'Who pulled open this peony?'

"Three other members of the family joined her and there was nothing encouraging in the attitude of any of them. My guilty face must have betrayed me; but I met my mother's gaze and answered firmly, 'Not me.'"

"That makes me laugh," remarked the sister of the woman who told the story. "Do you know that the first story I can remember telling my mother was about that same thing? She had some callers and I wished to surprise them all by bringing in some flowers. None was open, so I pulled them open. Then when Mother questioned me about it, I flatly denied it."

"It runs in the family," laughed the first confessor.

"It runs in the whole human family," stated another member of the group. "I have always been haunted by a lie that I told about pulling some lilac blooms," she continued. "There was a big lilac bush on the lawn of a home, where my mother and I lived with a wealthy family. After the lilacs bloomed I stopped at the bush every morning and broke off a branch to take to my teacher. By the end of the week, the bush was a wreck and I was brought to trial. I swore I had not pulled even one lilac bloom, and was finally acquitted. But I haven't forgotten that falsehood yet."

These lies that little children tell are not so very serious after all. It is just one of the weaknesses of frail human beings. It is usually fear of punishment that makes children lie. After they are older they can be made to understand that punishment is preferable to showing a yellow streak—that is, if parents prove that fact by their daily lives.

If boys and girls once come to realize that falseness leaves its stamp upon the face, the voice, the manner of untruthful people, they have learned a great lesson.

Teach your children little by little and day by day that honesty actually pays, and that nothing is really gained in the long run by lying and deceit.

But don't imagine that because they are sometimes untruthful that they are headed straight for the penitentiary. With the proper example and influence they will develop a sense of honor and a firm belief in the principle that truth must prevail.

Do You Know?

A hedge sparrow's nest with a brood of three newly hatched nestlings was found on the top of a decaying brussels sprout.

Rackets were not originally used in tennis. The impulse was given to the ball by the hand. Afterwards a leather gauntlet was used, and about the middle of the fifteenth century rackets were introduced.

-:- Our Rhyming Optimist -:-

By Aline Michaelis.

HOW earth has bowed to them, the valiant few, how it has honored them since time began, her splendid sons who greatly dare and do, the dauntless members of the hero clan! For them, the cheers resounding long and loud, the wonder and the worship of the throng, the heart unweighted and the head unbowed by any force of ignorance, or wrong. Their laurels come, it may be, after years of cruel hardship and of grinding toil; but still they know no failures and no fears, no stain of doubt their hope's fair shield can soil. Earth holds them dear for all their mighty deeds and for one boon outweighing all the rest that ever they pass on the priceless seeds of hero-acts to flower in youth's brave breast.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Are You Engaged?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three years old. I have been married and have a little boy. I am deeply in love with a young man about one year older than I am. He seems very much in love with me. He is good to me in every possible way.

His mother wants to meet me, but I am worried because I have not told him yet that I have been married and have a little boy. I kept putting off telling him, because I was afraid he would not like it.

He knows I am keeping something from him, and seems to think I have another sweetheart. I am so worried I cry, then he is still more suspicious. What shall I do about this, please?

WORRIED.

HAS your friend asked you to marry him? Are you engaged to him? If so, you should tell him the truth at once about your former marriage and the little boy. This is only fair. He will have to know sometime, if you were married. If he really loves you, he will love your child for your sake. But there is no reason why you should confide all the details of your past life to him, unless he has proposed and you wish to marry him.

Did You Slight Him?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met a certain young man last November. He has always treated me with respect whenever we met, as he is a perfect gentleman. I love him, and I think he cares a great deal for me. He told one of my friends that he thinks highly of me. I have only been out with him a few times, as he does not call or take girls out often.

Recently, I invited him to a party at my home. Not realizing what I was doing, I avoided him the latter part of the evening and spent the time with another young man. The man I love remarked about this, and I know he is disappointed in me. Please tell me how I can regain his friendship. ANXIOUS.

UNLESS you actually slighted your friend, I cannot see that you gave him cause to feel hurt.

You and he are not engaged, so surely, he does not expect or claim all your time and attention. If you are sweet and friendly to him when you meet, I am sure he will realize there was no slight intended and will not think less of you because other young men also enjoy your companionship.

Folly's Daughter

A Thrilling New Mystery of New York Night Life

By Ann Lisle

Debates With Himself.

JILL HATHAWAY couldn't understand herself. And she hadn't much sympathy with the sort of person she seemed to be. Vacillating. Uncertain.

ANN LISLE

"You wanted to go with Tony," she told herself harshly. "Why didn't you do it?"

Then as if she were somebody else, answering and explaining, she arose from the chair by the airshaft window in the shabby room in the Hotel Xavier, and replied heatedly: "I had the courage not to. Of course, I wanted to go. I'm lonely—and I guess I'm human. But I don't really care for Tony. And I don't want to be that kind of a girl."

And that, she realized suddenly, was that! As long as she was so crazy about MacNell Shannon, she just couldn't go off with any other man.

She shook with the force of her young longing. It was primitive, demanding, bigger than she was, undeniable. And there had never been a gentle, understanding woman to explain her young emotions and their power to Jill. She had no choice, no way of sorting out her feelings and finding how to handle them, she had mere blind instinct driving her to MacNell Shannon—who didn't want her.

"Why didn't he let Tony have me, then—the dog in the manger?" she asked herself. She didn't know the answer.

MacNell Shannon did. He was a dog in the manger, and he knew it. He didn't want the girl enough to take her and face his own conscience for making her his toy. He didn't want her enough to marry her and face the world for making her his wife. But he did care enough to protect her against other men—and himself as well.

"The only thing I can't protect her against is herself," he thought bitterly. "If she's the kind that Duane woman would be likely to make her, she's a wrong un, and if it isn't me or Savelli it will be some other man. It might as well be me. I'd be fairly decent to her——"

He put his hand out to his telephone receiver. Why shouldn't he call her, tell her to come to him, take her away from the Duane woman and rats like Savelli and a dump like the Xavier and make her happy for a little while?

There were two of him. The first Mac said: "You'd be happy, too, old man. And you'd be doing her a good turn."

The other Mac cried out against him and said: "Give the kid a chance. Don't be a rat yourself, Mac Shanon. She'll fight it out. She's got something. She won your respect the very night she got all muddled up in her own emotions and your. She's not common——"

"How can she help being?

"She's not. That's what is to her credit. She wants love—and she fights it. Let the kid fight it out. If she comes clean she will be a wonderful woman some day. If she gives in to her own temptations and the rats who are so willing to make it easy for her to slide down to perdition, you can at least have the satisfaction of knowing that you weren't one of them."

"Heigh, ho!" said both Mac Shannons. "Wonder if there's a good bridge game on over at the club."

He jammed on his hat, marched over to the club, rapped on a table where four men were playing, cut into the next rubber, got a redouble on a four spade double, went four no trump and made game rubber. Then he settled down to the business of playing bridge and forgot all women. When he left the club at 4 a. m. he had won $700 and had donated it to the club toward a new radio. The next morning there was a bank loan to take up, a new hotel in the South to consider, the advertising booklet Roy Scarlett had just finished to look over. Tony Savelli to be shut up with a thousand dollars and a detective's apology for detaining him by—mistake.

When Mac saw Jill again much water had run under the bridge. And Jill had learned what she had to fight.

Don't Be Jealous of a Ghost If You Wed a Widower, Girl Is Told

Qualifications for a Widower's Second Wife—Advice to the Friendless Girl Whom Nobody Loves—Can a Girl in Her Teens Love as Deeply as Older Girls?

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a young woman in love with a widower who has two small sons. He can give me every luxury, but there are two things that make me doubt the wisdom of marrying him. One is that I shall expect my husband to fully return my affection, but as he has married before, could he earnestly and sincerely do this? Also the thought that he has belonged to another woman and is the father of her children maddens me. The other objection is that I am very independent and cannot bear to think of giving up my glorious freedom. What shall I do? M. C.

Answer: It does not seem to me that you are cut out for a widower's wife. To begin with, the woman who marries a widower should be big and broad-minded enough to accept the fact of his previous marriage without jealousy. As you are not able to do so, that is disqualification No. 1.

Of course, no man can have for a second wife the romantic love that he gave to his first wife. That belongs to youth, and can no more be conjured up again than can any other boyish illusion, so the second wife has to reconcile herself to that. Experience takes the edge off any experience, and the man who has been married and who has learned to adjust himself to domesticity and who has gone to housekeeping comes into matrimony a second time as a professional and not as an amateur. No bride can be again the awesome and wonderful creature that his girl bride was to him, and setting up a new establishment cannot give him the thrill that he got out of buying his first pots and pans and chairs and tables.

Of course it isn't in any woman who loves a man not to feel a pang of regret that she shouldn't have been his first wife and share these first experiences with him, but there is gain as well as loss in being a No. 2 wife. For the mere fact that a man has been married once fits him better for it a second time. Like the hero of Mr. Kipling's story, who learned about women from every lady he loved, the widower has obtained a liberal education about the feminine sex and how to handle it from his first wife. He is house-broken, so to speak, and, particularly, he is bill-broken.

He doesn't think, as the youthful bridegroom does, that a wife must be a miracle worker who can run a home on air. Widowers are proverbially good providers. And having had experience of women's moods and tenses, they are able to distinguish between temper and nerves and know enough not to argue when a woman wakes up with a jumping headache and have the sense to put on their hats and make a sneak of it when she ties up her head and starts in on a day's cleaning.

And not infrequently, although the widower may not give his second wife the romantic love which he gave his first wife, he gives her a deeper passion, for the first love may have been just a hobbledehoy affection that he outgrew, while his second love is the full abiding love of his manhood.

So don't marry a widower if you are going to be jealous of his first wife, and don't marry any man if your freedom looks better to you than he does. Because a woman's personal liberty is the one offering that marriage invariably requires her to sacrifice. The wife must give up her time, her thoughts, her attention, her pleasures, her desires and tastes to her husband and children. There is no getting around that. It is the very essence of the marriage bond.

Furthermore, don't marry your widower unless you love children and are determined to be a real mother to your husband's little boys. There is no crime greater than that of being a cruel or neglectful stepmother.

DOROTHY DIX.

DEAR MISS DIX—No one loves me. I haven't a friend in the world. Every day is the same old thing—get up and eat and go to bed and start over again the next day. How can I find something worth while in life? LONELY.

Answer: If nobody loves you and you have no friends, it is your own fault and you have only yourself to blame. The world is full of people who are just sloshing over with affection that they are ready to bestow on any one who will let them.

But in order to be loved you have to be lovable! You have to be sweet and amiable and easy to get along with. And if you are to have friends you have to be friendly. You must be willing to do things for other people to give them pleasure. You must literally weep with those who weep and rejoice with those who rejoice.

So suppose you start out and cultivate people. Don't wait for them to make all the advances. Go to see them. Make yourself pleasant and entertaining. Listen to bores. Remember anniversaries. Send people flowers—especially when they are sick. Do the thousand little things for others that you would like to have them do for you, and watch them respond.

You say each day is like each preceding day—eating, sleeping, getting up in the morning and going to bed at night. Well, life is bound to be a routine, but you can put in a lot of interesting things between the breakfast bell and the dinner bell. What you need is work. Get some absorbing occupation that will keep you so busy that the days will go by in a flash and never be half enough to get done all that you want to do.

And don't forget this, that we take out of life only what we put into it. If you put love and friendliness into it, you get love and friendship out of it. Also your work will be a boresome task to you or a thrilling adventure in accordance with the spirit with which you go about it. DOROTHY DIX.

DEAR MISS DIX—Do you think that girls from the ages of 14 to 17 can love as much as those older? B.

Answer: No, my child, they really can't love at all. All they can know is a kind of sickly little calf love that they outgrow in a few years and that is no more like the deep and abiding love of a grown woman than skimmed milk is like cream.

Of course, girls at that age think they are in love, because they have never experienced any real love and so have no standard of comparison. They think they are in love because they get a kick out of meeting a boy and they fill their thoughts full of him and they have a good time when he is around and miss him when he is absent. But this is just because they are feeling the first thrill of adolescence and it flatters them to death to realize that they have sex attraction, and they are so much in love with the idea of being in love that they can imagine themselves in love with any boy that happens along.

But in reality what they feel is only a passing fancy. They outgrow it, as they do their taste for all-day suckers. Their ideas change, and the boy they thought they would die for if they didn't get when they were 15 or 16 or 17 they wouldn't have on a bet when they are 21.

In the course of a year I get thousands of letters from girls who married when they were 16 or 17 and every one of them tells the sad story of a girl who thought she was in love when she was a schoolgirl and married and who now finds out that she was mistaken. And nearly always she has fallen in love later with some man whom she cannot marry because she is already tied to a husband.

Don't take serious! what you feel now, B. They are just growing pains that you will get over. And, oh, how thankful you will be later on if you wait for the real man and the real love.

DOROTHY DIX.

Justice Strikes Hard

ALABAMA is the home state of United States Senator J. Thomas Heflin, a very flamboyant orator who is ever crusading for his private or personal fads and ever holding the center of the stage as an expounder of democratic wisdom and the woes or the wrongs of the downtrodden. Alabama is the home state of Oscar W. Underwood, for almost 40 years a democratic leader and statesman until he read the handwriting on the political wall and stepped aside. Underwood was denied a presidential nomination. He is a rich man. He had been covered with honors by his people, he purchased a magnificent estate in Old Virginia. Now he is going to live like a gentleman and snap his fingers at the politicians and the fickle people who make heroic figures out of play at the ballot box.

This is neither here nor there. Alabama justice is on the way. It first trailed and then it smashed a bunch or erstwhile powerful advocates of mob law and mob vengeance. Two were convicted and given long terms in the penitentiary. Six alleged accomplices ran up the white flag and asked for compromise verdicts. Five were given six months each in jail and heavy fines, while the sixth was let off with a heavy fine.

Southern governors are protecting persons accused of crime. Southern governors are using the national guards if necessary to put down mobs and to insure fair trials in courts of justice for persons accused or indicted for law violation. This is as it should be. Alabama agents of the law are to be congratulated.

Governor John G. Richard of South Carolina is to be congratulated. Since his inauguration as governor of the Palmetto state, he hasn't hesitated to send national guardsmen into the haunts of mobbites and to crush them if necessary, in order that Judge Lynch shall be taught a lesson and that courthouse justice shall be meted out to all who are entitled to it.

Governor Fuller of Massachusetts is holding the center of the stage. He declined to extend clemency to men who had been given a fair trial. Texas is setting the pace. Murderers and hijackers are finding the Lone Star state a rocky road to travel. It wasn't so in the old days. Now life is regarded as a sacred thing and the demand is that the punishment shall fit the crime.

Given a Half Loaf

AN ARMY of locomotive engineers, an army of 30,000 or more, on 54 eastern railroads demanded a 15 per cent wage increase, estimated to amount to $13,000,000 annually. Arbitration failed. Then the United States board of meditation stepped in and issued a decree providing a 7 1-2 per cent wage increase or half of what the engineers asked.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is a close corporation and perhaps the most powerful of all American labor organizations. Now when will the farmers of the country organize their forces? When will they arrange for a program which will give them prices for the staples they produce above the cost of production?

Organization appears to be the thing in the railroad world. All the managers or operators are organized. All the rail employes have their organizations. Some day the farmers may be organized. Some day they may tell the tariff barons where to head in. Some day they may control their own marketing systems. Some day they may fix prices on their own product. They have been dreaming of this for years.

Magic Valley Cotton

MAGIC VALLEY cotton growers have picked and ginned 30,000 bales of cotton, or approximately half the crop, and the experts say that the valley total will run between 60,000 and 65,000 bales. All gins in the valley are operating but none are running night shifts. There are plenty of pickers and growers who are maintaining the rate of 75c per hundred for picking.

Hundreds of pickers left the valley last week for Nueces and San Patricio counties where the cotton is now open. Texas is a remarkable state. In the valley many farmers have picked their cotton and are doing their fall plowing. Away out in West Texas they will be picking cotton in late December and do their plowing in the spring of 1928.

Hester Has the Figures

IN ROUND figures cotton deliveries from Texas for the crop of 1926 are fixed by Col. Henry G. Hester at 5,898,000 bales. This was an increase over the previous year of 1,052,000 bales. Furthermore the crop sold at an average price of 12.44 cents a pound, or at $66.73 a bale, compared with $100.92 a bale the previous year or $34.19 a bale less, although the quality of the crop was a quarter of a grade better.

Of the crop of 1926 Japanese mills took 1,257,000 bales and during the past six months the Japanese mills have consumed more American cotton than ever before in their history.

American mills have taken in and consumed more American cotton than ever before in their history although most of the gain was shown in the south. American mill takings reached the total of 8,220,000 bales of American cotton compared with 7,283,000 last year.

World consumption of American cotton, Colonel Hester fixed at 17,428,000 bales, compared with 15,112,000 bales the previous year. He placed the carry-over at 7,328,000 bales.

Now what will be the total yield of Texas, speaking of the crop of 1927? What will be the consumption by American mills of the crop of 1927? What will be the total taking of foreign buyers for foreign mills of the crop of 1927? Students of cotton economics have a wide field to cover. Texas is on the map.

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch To The Record News

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—A current advertisement describes a famous opera in the following snappy terms for the purpose of luring the customers to its movie counterpart:

"THIS IS THE TROPICAL TALE OF CARMEN AND HER TEMPESTUOUS LOVE AFFAIRS, AND OF THE GREAT TOREADOR WHO THREW THE BULL —AND HOW!"

Last night I was addressed by royalty in rather intimate terms. If you do not understand the full force of what I am about to relate to you, it is because you have never been inside Roxy's "Cathedral of Motion Pictures." I was addressed as an equal by one of the elaborately uniformed young men in attendance there. Never make the mistake of referring to these young men as ushers: they are too austere and aristocratic for that. In their getup they make the prince of Wales in full dress uniform look like the super who carries a spear in a Roman mob scene.

Can you imagine the shock you would get if a chap you recognized as the prince of Wales should come up to you and say, "I beg your pardon, old chap; but I'm a stranger in this town. Could you tell me where a toff might get a slug of gin?"

Well, I entered the Roxy and was humbly standing in line waiting for a seat. One of Roxy's young princelings said to me, quite casually mind you:

"Now that's a pretty ballet, isn't it?" He referred to some undraped ladies who were doing what has somehow got to be called "interpretative" dancing.

I nodded.

"See the girl in green, second from the left? She's the captain. She's one of the nicest kids you'd want to meet, awfully nice kid."

It was too much. I mumbled and stammered and hemmed and hawed, and could not think of a thing to say in reply to the uniformed young princeling.

Another gyp racket has been discovered by this column. In lower Manhattan, Nassau street is filled with haberdashery stores. About a week ago one of my spies saw a sign in one of the windows of such a shop, advertising broadcloth shirts with collars attached for $1 apiece. This seemed a great bargain to him and he entered the shop to lay in a stock of shirts.

But it seemed that the store was just out of shirts his size. They were expecting more tomorrow. In the meantime, however, they had some very fine shirts ordinarily selling at $3.50 (so the clerk said) which they reduced to $2.49. These were not what my spy wanted, so he walked out.

The next day he happened to be passing the store and remembered that another consignment of shirts his size at $1 each were due. Again he was disappointed. The shirts had not yet come.

He grew suspicious. The third time he deliberately went into the shop and asked for a size larger than he actually wore in the broadcloth shirts. Again he was told that there were no more shirts of that size left, but that he could have a bargain in a more expensive shirt.

Just to prove to his own satisfaction that this was a stock trick, he went into the place on three later occasions and asked for three varying sizes of shirts advertised for a dollar. They never had "just that size" on hand. But the sign in the window remain. "Genuine English Broadcloth shirts—$1.00."

READ THIS FIRST:

SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the prop and mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who has not lived with her mother for 9 years. The family consists of MRS. JEROME, the twins, BEAU and MILLIE, and Sally herself. Mrs. Jerome enjoys poor health, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work for MR. PEEVEY downtown afternoons.

In the flat below the Jeromes lives young TED SLOAN, an automobile salesman, who wants her to marry him and keep on working. But the only man in whom she is interested is JOHN NYE, whose real estate office is across the hall from Mr. Peevey's. Nye hires Millie as his secretary, and becomes blindly infatuated with her at once. Sally is heartsick and jealous.

Beau and Millie spend most of their earnings on themselves, and Sally's only real financial help is an occasional check from her absent father, and a loan every now and then from her spinster aunt, EMILY JEROME, an energetic school teacher who has decided to set up a restaurant business in her country home.

Beau raises a check given him by Ted Sloan from $10 to $110, and when Ted threatens to make trouble for him Sally borrows a hundred dollars from Mr. Peevey and gives it to him. But instead of paying Ted with it, Beau uses it to elope with his fiancee, MABEL WILMOT, a jazzy slangy young creature. Mrs. Jerome is crushed by the news of Beau's marriage, and Sally is relieved when she goes to spend all day Sunday in the country with Aunt Emily. During her absence Millie asks John Nye to supper. Sally invites Ted, too, who has torn up Beau's bad checks. Just as the four sit down at the table, Beau and Mabel burst into the house, a bit tipsy from too much celebrating of their marriage. Beau produces a flask, and the evening ends with him and Mabel completely spoiling what started to be a quiet little supper party. Much the worse for drink, they go to sleep in Beaus old room, where Millie had angrily vowed they never should stay. Sally cries with humiliation at the end of the evening because John Nye saw them all at their worst.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIV

Mrs. Jerome stayed the night with Aunt Emily. And Sally was deeply thankful that she did, and was not at home when the newlyweds left the next morning.

For their departure was anything but pleasant.

They were furious at the way Beau had been turned out of his bedroom, now that they were sober and had had time to think things over.

Sally had risen early to make Beau's favorite jelly pancakes and a pan of rich cocoa. But neither he nor Mabel would touch a bite of breakfast, although they cast longing and hungry eyes at the table.

"No, thanks, we won't eat a bite here, where we're not wanted," snapped Mabel, answering for the pair of them. "And we're going just as soon as the man comes for our trunk, too! We'll never give the Jerome family a second chance to ask up to close the door on the outside, believe you me!"

Sally could have cried as she looked at them. They seemed so young, so pathetic, as they stood with their arms around each other against the background of white curtains and red geraniums, looking from her to the steaming dishes on the table.

"Oh, don't be silly, please!" she begged them. "Do sit down and have something to eat! — You know you're perfectly welcome to stay here until you've found a place of your own!"

Mabel sneered. "Yes, it looks as if we were welcome here, with Millie's things all over Beau's room!" she said, bluntly. "With his trunk all packed the minute he was out of the house! It was a pretty rotten trick you pulled on him, if you ask me! You know it, yourself, too, Sally Jerome!"

Sally did know it. And she went straight to the room at the back of the flat where Millie was brushing her bright, fluffy hair, before the toilet glass.

"Millie," she faltered, as her troubled eyes met her sister's in the mirror, "Don't you think we ought to go and ask Beau and Mabel to stay here for a few days until they find a place of their own? They're so hurt because you packed up Beau's things. They think we don't want them here."

"Well, we don't!" replied Millie, who was as hard-headed as she was soft-eyed. "You know that if we ever let them get a foothold here they'll stay forever. You know that's what they're looking for—for us to ask them to stay on for a while. Wait! I'll go and tell them a thing or two."

"Oh, don't!"—Sally flung out an arm to stop her. But like a flash Millie was down the narrow hall that led to the dining room.

"What's the matter with you two!" Sally heard her ask the

"But I don't know you," she protested.

honeymooners, and her voice was as soft as usual. "Aren't you satisfied with disgracing me the way you did last night before John Nye without kicking up another rumpus this morning? What is it you want, anyway?"

Instead of answering her question Mabel looked her up and down slowly and insolently.

"Disgrace you?" she repeated, in mock surprise. "Why, how could anyone disgrace you before a man, Millie Jerome? Any man who knows you knows all about you! You're a disgrace yourself, and you know it as well as I do!"

To Sally's astonishment, Millie reddened under the stinging words and did not say a word in answer. Instead, she swung on her heel and walked deliberately back to her room, closing her door gently behind her.

It seemed that Millie was afraid to go on with the battle. There was no other way of explaining her behavior.

All morning long Sally thought the thing over, when she was alone in the flat, washing up last night's dishes, changing the linen on Beau's bed, making a plate of tomato sandwiches to leave in the ice box in case her mother should come home before night.

Mabel's words came back to her again and again. . . . What did she know about Millie that had made her say a thing like that: "Any man knows all about you?"

What did it mean? . . . What disgraceful thing could John Nye, for instance, know about Millie? Why, she didn't even smoke a cigarette before him, or touch a drop of anything intoxicating! And she had fibbed to him about Mrs. Sloan's pink asters, in order to make him think that she was the sweet, simple type of girl who would find pleasure in a little garden.

Perhaps, then, Mabel knew things about her that nobody else knew! Things that Sally did not know, and that John Nye did not know. After all, she and Mabel had worked side by side in Bursall's big office for months. They had known each other very, very well, indeed.

And what was it Mabel had once said about her? "Millie just won't stay in an office unless there's somebody there that gives her a thrill!" That was it!

Sally sighed as she dressed for the office at 11 o'clock. . . . It came to her that the little sister who helped her make mud-pies in long ago days had become almost a stranger to her.

"I don't know a thing about her except that she likes good clothes, a good time, and lots of men friends," Sally went on thinking, walking along under a cloudless blue sky fifteen minutes later.

Then another thought struck her. . . . Millie's men friends had suddenly vanished into thin air! They no longer called on the telephone every hour of every evening.

For the last month Millie had seen none of them, talked of none of them, except John Nye. He alone held the field.

"It certainly looks as if Millie had settled down at last," Sally decided, and felt more unhappy than before. "But I wish she had picked Davidson or somebody else."

Anybody but John Nye, was what she meant. Anybody but him.

* * *

That night Millie stayed down town to have dinner with John Nye.

She came fluttering into Mr. Peevey's office with the news at 5 o'clock, when Sally was putting on her hat to go home.

"I thought he'd never want to see me again," she said in high triumph, sitting on Mr. Peevey's empty desk and fluffing a powder puff across her smooth little face.

"Why?" asked Sally. "Because of last night?"

"Millie nodded. "Of course. You know Beau was simply disgusting. Telling him that he'd be around to borrow some money from him by-and-by, and all that stuff. And Mabel—" Her mouth hardened at the corners as she spoke Mabel's name.

The laughter rippled across her face again like the reflection of sun on water.

"I guess my Johnny must be pretty keen about me," she said with great satisfaction. "Last night never made any difference to him—and he never even mentioned it today."

She fluttered down from the desk, all color and radiance and heady perfume.

At the door she paused. "He hired a new girl today to help me out," she giggled. "He said the work was too hard for me. But what he really wanted was someone to watch the phone and so forth, while he and I go out to lunch every noon. Isn't that rare?"

With another shower of laughter she was gone.

A half minute later her gay voice rang out in the hall as she and John Nye set forth for their evening of pleasure.

Sally stood looking out of the window at the banners of sunset in the evening sky, for a long minute.

The telephone on her desk rang She answered it.

"Sally," came her mother's voice, what have you heard from Beau? Did he really marry Mabel, or what? And where are all his clothes and things? They're all gone."

"I'll be right home, Mother," Sally's voice was slow and so was her step as she left the office and started down the long white hall to the elevators.

The long evening at home stretched ahead of her like an eternity. Mrs. Jerome Crying over Beau's marriage. The clock ticking mournfully on the green-tile mantlepiece, the melancholy sound of a piano three doors down the street—the most melancholy sound in the world.

She sighed as she squared her shoulders and turned towards the German delicatessen on West Ninth street. She would take a loaf of Bohemian bread and a pound of bolonga home to her mother.

Mrs. Jerome could always be cheered up by some kind of food that she was particularly fond of. And she fairly loved bologna and Bohemian rye bread.

* * *

On the next Saturday night Sally and Ted carried out their usual Saturday night program.

They went to dance at the Blue Lagoon, among the golden lights and the excited pleasure-loving crowd of people as young and poor as themselves.

It was one of those close hot nights that often mark the beginning of autumn. Heat reddened the cheeks of the dancers and polished their flesh with perspiration

"Let's get out of here and take a dive. What do you say?" Ted asked toward 11 o'clock, when the crowd was at its thickest and noisiest—when the blare of the jazz music seemed to be splitting Sally's eardrums.

"Im ready to go home, if you are,' 'she said, without any of the sparkle that usually brightened her speech.

She wondered, waiting at the edge of the great blue-and-gold room, for Ted to get their wraps, why she had suddenly lost her sense of enjoyment in the Blue Lagoon. For the first time in her life she had found no pleasure at all in dancing, that night.

For months the Blue Lagoon had been a sort of rag-time Paradise to her and Ted Sloan. They had Charlestoned and one-stepped and waltzed there, and had wanted nothing else in the way of entertainment.

But now it seemed tawdry and showy to her. The crowd struck her as being a silly, childish sort of crowd—even though she knew she was younger than most of the girls dancing around her.

"Want to dance?" a voice asked in her ear, and she turned sharply to find a large, blond, good-looking man standing just behind her.

His smiling face was familiar, but she was sure she didn't know him. "Probably he's just somebody who has seen me in the building down town," 'she thought, and was on her dignity in an instant.

"I don't know you," she said coldly, and swung around from him.

Then she felt his hand on her shoulder. "Don't you remember me, Miss Jerome?" he asked. "My name's Davidson. I used to be a friend of your sister, Millie."

Sally remembered him then, and held out her hand to shake his.

GARY FUNERAL ON THURSDAY

U. S. Steel Head Victim Of Myocarditis

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, died at his Fifth Avenue home early today just as he always said he would "with his boots on."

Although he was eighty-one years old he had only been ill a few weeks and this was not generally believed to be serious until a few hours before the end when he took a sudden turn for the worse.

His death resulted from chronic myocarditis, an inflamation of the muscular tissues of the heart.

Funeral Thursday.

Early plans set for the funeral provide that they be held at 10:30 o'clock next Thursday morning in the Gary Memorial church at Wheaton, Ill., the town of his birth.

First news of Mr. Gary's illness became public when he missed the quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the United States Steel company in the latter part of July.

At that time it was rumored that he would retire and various men were mentioned as his successor. But this was immediately denied and Judge Gary's long expressed wish that he end his life in he service of the gigantic organization he built up, or, as he put it, "with his boots on," became common knowledge.

And that hushed the rumors.

Death News Delayed.

Although Judge Gary died at 2:30 o'clock the news was not officially confirmed until 10:30 o'clock. This gave time to prevent any serious reaction on the stock market.

The formal announcement of the steel magnate's death was finally made in the form of a two line type written statement issued from the offices of the United States Steel corporation. It read:

"Judge Elbert H. Gary died at 2:30 a. m. today from chronic myocarditis."

The news was a shock to the financial district where, as one of the world's leading financiers, every word from him has carried great weight for the last quarter of a century.

Steel Stock Slumps.

The announcement was followed by an immediate decline in the price of United States steel stock. It dropped a point to 130 1-4 but rallied later to the opening price of 131 1-2. Some of the leading stocks declined a point or two but there was no confusion.

Judge Gary's death was the main topic of conversation all during the day. Everybody in "the street" knew him—a man of steel, a man of strong convictions, who had built up the greatest industrial organization in the world.

Men told anecdotes about him, of his marvelous executive ability, his great memory and described how he was in constant touch with all the affairs of his company and how he had every angle and detail of the corporation's workings at his finger tips.

During the early part of his recent illness he was fully informed of all that was going on.

Successor to Be Named.

No sooner was his death announced than men began to speculate on his possible successor. Three names were advanced as contenders for "one of the biggest jobs in America." They are Nathan L. Miller, general counsel of the United States Steel corporation and former governor of New York; Pierre DuPont, chairman of the board of directors of E. I. Du Pont De Nemours company, and Irenee Du Pont, vice chairman of the same company's directorate.

These three, by the way, had been mentioned during the first rumors of a successor a few weeks ago. At that time, E. I. Du Pont was the most consistently named because the Du Ponts had just confirmed buying 114,000 shares of steel at a price of $14,000,000.

Miller Has Edge.

Former Governor Miller, however, seemed today to be the logical successor to a majority of those who were conjecturing. He has been closely associated with the executive and administrative functions of the corporation.

HEALTH AND DIET ADVICE

By Dr Frank McCoy

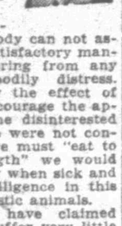

Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

QUESTIONS IN REGARD TO HEALTH & DIET WILL BE ANSWERED BY DR. McCOY WHO CAN BE ADDRESSED IN CARE OF THIS PAPER ENCLOSE STAMPED ADDRESSED ENVELOPE FOR REPLY

©1926 DR. COY HEALTH SERVICE LOS ANGELES-CAL.

IS FASTING A CURE-ALL?

Those physicians who advocate the fasting cure recommend it alike for all acute and chronic disorders. The fast should not be considered as a remedy in the same sense as many regard certain medicinal preparations. It is more a method or plan of control over assimilation, which gives the body a chance to readjust the metabolistic processes.

It is easy to understand that the body can not assimilate food in a satisfactory manner if one is suffering from any kind of pain or bodily distress. Acute disorders, by the effect of their symptoms, discourage the appetite and make one disinterested in his meals. If we were not continually told that we must "eat to keep up our strength" we would certainly stop eating when sick and show as much intelligence in this regard as our domestic animals.

Many naturalists have claimed that wild animals suffer very little from disease except that produced through injury in fighting with other animals. Our domestic pets are petted and stuffed into being sick quite often, but will always fast at these times if food is not actually forced upon them.

Doctors who urge their patients to eat when sick have a good deal to answer for because of such senseless advice. Those who have not had the experience of seeing the benefits of fasting for the cure of chronic disease may be more easily forgiven for not understanding this method of treatment, but there is positively no excuse for the parrot-like repetition of "eat to keep up your strength" which has been the means of urging many into early graves, who would have quickly recovered from acute ailments by missing a meal or two.

Fasting is probably as much of a cure-all as will ever be found for acute or chronic diseases. The reason for this is plain. When the assimilative powers are rested, elimination of bodily toxins takes place more rapidly. The energy which has been used in digesting and assimilating foods is then turned entirely into eliminative channels and poisons are thrown out more rapidly through the skin, breath, kidneys and bowels.

The body is constantly eliminating poisons at all times, but during a fasting period the functions of all of the eliminative processes are increased. It is difficult to measure exactly the amount of this increase, but it apparently is at least ten times greater. Thus, during four or five days of fasting, with the help of internal and external bathing, the body will pour out as much impurity as it would ordinarily in forty or fifty days. Is it not easy to see that this increased elimination would be tremendously effective in the cure of any kind of disorder?

Many of my readers are only four or five days away from feeling better than they have for many years. Missing a few meals, and giving the body a chance, will work wonders for you if you only have the good judgment to try such a simple method.

QUESTION: Mrs. A. T. F. writes: "I have been paralyzed for 18 months from high blood pressure. Doctors claim it first started in two fingers on the left hand and finally went up in the arm and all over the left side. Have taken electric treatments, and have done everything I know, but get no better. Can you help me in any way?"

ANSWER—Your high blood pressure can be reduced to practically normal through fasting and dieting. The paralysis will disappear as soon as the blood clot has been absorbed, but you can only accomplish this by living on the most rigid diet. The D'Arsenvol high frequency treatment will temporarily reduce your blood pressure after each treatment, but does not have any permanent effect.

QUESTION: Student writes: "I am much interested in your health column, and am being greatly benefitted, but I am having difficulty in getting it through my head just which foods to combine. Will you be good enough to give some kind of a rule to go by?"

ANSWER—Proteins, which are the meats, cheese, nuts, etc., properly combined with non-starchy and salad vegetables, such as string beans, spinach, celery, etc., are extremely easy to digest. The starches, such as potatoes, macaroni, rice should also be combined with the non-starchy or salad vegetables, but never with the proteins. Just remember this, and study the menus given in this column each week, and it will soon become very easy for you to select good foods and correctly combine them.

QUESTION: M. B. C. writes: Please advise me what to do for chronic osteomyelitis in femur. Has been fine since last operation two years ago, till lately, and now it is cold and painful. I have to take aspirins at night to get to sleep. Will they affect it any?

ANSWER: It is useless for me to attempt to give you any definite advice through the columns of this paper for a condition as serious. Of course, you will be helped in every way through adopting a sensibly planned diet, but the special treatment for your case would depend upon a correct diagnosis which, of course, cannot be given by mail. Theoretically, all sedative or hypnotic drugs are harmful but there are cases when the least harmful ones like aspirin seem to be necessary to relax the body in order that one may get needed sleep.

PENICK LAUDED AS NET COACH

University Position Secure In Tennis, Bell Says

By Universal Service.

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 15.—Why does Texas university, which might be termed as obscure institution in comparison to the big schools of the north and east, practically dominate intercollegate tennis?

This question is answered by Marshall Bell, prominent San Antonio letter and brother of the illustrious Berkeley Bell, who is at present touring the big time tennis circuit. Bell explains the extraordinary success of Longhorn racketeers in just two words:

"Daniel Penick."

Veteran Tennis Wizard.

"As long as Penick coaches tennis at Texas university that school will never be beaten on the courts. They might lose individual matches but never a team match." That's how highly Bell respects the wizardry of the veteran Longhorn net mentor.

For the last three years Texas university has held either the national intercollegiate singles or doubles. Louis Thalheimer and Lewis White, Penick's greatest doubles combination, won national honors two straight years, 1925 and 1926. Wilmer Allison went up to Philadelphia in July and brought back the singles title, defeating the greatest college players of the nation.

Is Greek Professor.

The Longhorns have held southwestern conference honors so long that memory runneth not to the contrary.

And back of all this unparaleled success lies the coaching ability of Dr. Penick, who teaches Greek by profession and shows youngsters how to play tennis principally as a pastime.

SHIPPERS OPEN SERIES TODAY

Spudders Lay Off Monday But Gain Half Game

With a full day's relaxation behind them, the league-leading Wichita Falls Spudders step out against the Beaumont Exporters Tuesday afternoon at Spudder park in the first of a three-game series.

Monday's day of idleness was fruitful for the Wichita Falls team in that while it rested from the rigors of the pennant chase, Fort Worth trimmed Houston again, automatically advancing Wichita Falls a half game further in front of the second place team. The Spudders now stand eight full games ahead of the world.

Owner Jim Galloway and the Exporters rolled into town yesterday and bivouaced in preparation for the three-day stand.

Estell probably will be called on to pitch the opener for the Spudders.

Most of the Wichita Falls team relaxed Monday, their first official off-day of the season, but LaFayette, Fitzgerald and several of the boys went fishing at Diversion lake. There will be many fish yarns spun at the club house the next few days.

So He'll Preach Instead of Fight

BEULAH, Mich., Aug. 15. (AP)—With a knockout at the hands of Dana Haswell, Beulah boxer, as his record in a bout Saturday afternoon, Billy LaMance, 20, son of the Rev. W. M. LaMance, Methodist minister, today prepared to make good a promise that he would study for the ministry if he failed in Saturday's contest.

Young LaMance, central A. A. U. boxing champion, after arranging with his father to serve as his manager for the fight made an an agreement to take up prize fighting as a profession if he was successful and to enter the ministry if unsuccessful.

The Rev. Mr. LaMance arranged for a license for the fight.

Haswell tapped LaMance for the count in the third round.

SORDS POINTS---By Jack Sords

Ol' Soup Bone Alone Will Save the Giants

The National league goes into the closing weeks of a "beautiful" race with at least four and possibly five clubs with an outside chance or better of winning the pennant.

Chicago, Pittsburgh and St. Louis have the edge and may well be considered the most likely contenders. But the improved pitching which McGraw's flingers have been dishing up of late bids fair to put the Giants into the thick of the melee, if it doesn't carry them into a commanding position. And the Cincy Reds are playing .700 ball right now.

McGraw's pitching staff has caused him worry for several years. Last winter he faced the same old problem of weathering along this year with a hit and miss outfit. Then came the deal which made Burleight Grimes a member of the team. But Grimes failed to hit his stride. Dutch Henry, former Dodger, was taken on to help bolster the team with his lefthanded shoots. He got off on the wrong foot, if not arm. This, that and the other happened.

But of recent weeks the staff seems to have rounded into some semblance of form. Jess Barnes, Rube Benton and Young Fred Fitzsimmons have been hurling good ball. Grimes has shown flashes or his real form. And even the loquacious "Dutch" has turned to with a helpful bit of hurling.

The Giants have the batting strength, despite the failure of Eddie Roush to hit at his old-time clip, and the necessity of juggling the lineup occasionally. The team ranks second in batting—and second in total number of runs scored. There is nothing radically wrong with the offensive department. McGraw has needed hurling. Now he seems to be getting fair to middlin' pitching.

John McGraw isn't out of the running yet, all the hue and cry to the contrary withstanding.

Sports Done Brown

By NORMAN E. BROWN.

The Yankees have made a one-horse race out of the American league event mainly through the home run hitting of Ruth, Gehrig and Lazzeri.

The Pittsburgh Pirates are proving to National league teams and the fans in general that home runs aren't a necessary part of a pennant contending outfit. The Pirates are hanging tenaciously to the top in the National league while ranking fifth in home run hitting. The Giants, leading the league by a wide margin in circuit blows, are having their troubles sticking in the race.

The Pirates haven't a man on the team who has hit 10 home runs as this is written. Paul Waner and Glenn Wright, leading the team in this department, have two or three to go before reaching that mark, according to recent statistics. The team had collected 37 all told. The Giants had slapped out 69. The Cubs had cracked out 55. The Cards had run up 49 and the Phighting Phils 43.

Earl Webb and Hack Wilson have been the Ruth-Gehrig combination for the Cubs, collecting close to 40 between them. Hornsby, Terry and Harper have been the leaders for the Giants, Hornsby topping the others. Jim Bottomly has led the Cardinal sluggers, with Frankie Frisch and Chic Hafey running behind him. Fritz Schulte collected six home runs before being injured.

Almost every member of the Pirate staff has contributed a few home runs to that team's meager total, Earl Smith, Harris, Barnhart, Traynor, Cuyler, Grantham, Gooch and Wox Kremer entering the list, Gabby Hartnett and Riggs Stephenson have helped boost the Cub list. Jackson, Lindstrom and Roush have boosted the Giant total, and Lester Bell and Deuthit of the Cards, have contributed five or more for their team's total.

Speaking of the Cubs, checkup on the present personnel of the squad managed by Joe McCarthy shows that only three of the men now wearing Chicago uniforms were members of the team four years ago. The three are Gabby Hartnett, Sarky Adams and Cliff Heathcote.

The other 32 men on the Cub payroll at the start of the 1923 campaign have been sold, traded or released outright.

And judging from the results obtained these shifts were made with a definite purpose in view—that of rebuilding the team into a pennant-winning organization.

It might be mentioned in passing that the best move Bill Wrigley made in those four years, however, was the signing of Joe McCarthy as manager.

Midland Petitions For Extension of Railroad

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 15. (AP)—A petition that the Gulf and West Texas railroad to be opened between Corpus Christi and San Angelo via San Antonio be extended to Midland, Texas, will be presented at the next meeting of the board of directors, R. W. Morrison, president stated Monday.

The petition was received Monday together with a letter from Claude C. Wild, manager of the San Angelo Chamber of Commerce, recommending the proposed extension.

It Ought to Be Nice To Be Vice President

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 15. (AP)—"A vice president has no work," Charles G. Dawes told reporters who suggested to him that he was in a hurry to get back to work after his holiday at his brother's home in Manitoulin island. He was asked if he had been bothered by the Sacco-Vanzetti case. "A vice president is bothered by nothing," Mr. Dawes replied. "He has no work."

Boston Radical Pays $20 Fine For Speech

BOSTON, Aug. 15. (AP)—Powers Hapgood of Pittsburgh, who was arrested yesterday when he attempted to address a crowd on the common without a permit, pleaded guilty to violating the park rules and was fined $20 today. Hapgood, Harvard graduate and nephew of Norman Hapgood, had started to talk about the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Explosion of Rifle Results in Injury

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 15. (AP)—Sergeant Davis McCullogh of Brazil, Ill., a member of the Ninth infantry stationed here today was probably fatally wounded when a shotgun exploded while the sergeant was handling it. The entire charge entered his face.

Looking Back

Joe Tinker, famous old Cub shortstop, still holds at least one world's series record.

In the 1907 series, with the Cubs against the Detroit Tigers, Tinker helped check Hughie Jennings' first effort to win a world's championship by pulling off two double plays unassisted, the record in the fall classic.

Tinker, one-third of the famous old Tinkers to Evers to Chance combination, tried his hand as manager after his playing days were over, bossing the Cubs and Cinci Reds at various times. He became quite a holder in oil and finally devoted most of his time to his properties.

Gene Tunney's training camp will be free to the public, which must be an awful blow to the gate crashers.

CATS ENJOY BUFF STEAK

Idle Spudders Gain As Houston Loses

FORT WORTH, Aug. 15. (AP)—Bill Sweeney's triple in the ninth inning with Richardson perched on first broke a tie and enabled Fort Worth to capture the final game of the series with Houston, 4 to 3, here Monday. It also gave Fort Worth the series over the second place Buff outfit. After the two teams had battled throughout the game deadlocked at 2-all, Fort Worth broke the tie with a tally in the eighth, but Houston came back in the first half of the ninth to again knot the count. TRIPLE PLAY

CHICAGO, Aug. 15. (AP)—In the record books under the heading, "Triple plays, unassisted," may be written the name of Jess Runayer, shortstop for Evansville of the Three Eye league. In the sixth inning of a Peoria-Evansville game at Peoria Sunday with Peoria runners on first and second and none out the batter lined to shortstop. Runser caught the ball, stepped on second to get one runner and then tagged out the runner from first who could not slow up in time.

Pirate outfielder benched and fined for failure to slide into second base. All right, next time he'll go right ahead and tear a hole in his pants.

Veterans Win in Net Civil War

Lott Loses Davis Cup Trial Match to Hunter

By ROBERT A. HEREFORD.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Veteran America proved a bit too experienced for young America in the feature match of the Davis cup tennis trials which were held on the stadium turf courts here today.

George Lott Jr., of Chicago, conqueror of Rene Le Coste, French court ace at Southampton last Saturday, after leading Francis T. Hunter, Olympic and Wimbledon doubles champion, and considered a certain choice for the Davis cup team this year, 5-1, in the deciding set of a three-set trial match, collapsed and allowed Tilden's veteran partner to win the set 11-9.

The first skirmish in the civil war being held among the American forces, went to Hunter 3-6, 6-1, 11-9.

John Doeg, former junior champion, who comes like many another doughty tennis warrior from out California way, scored a decisive three-set victory over his fellow coast star, Cranston Holman, Leland Stanford player, Doeg won 6-3, 7-5, 6-1.

The matches were played as the first of a series which were scheduled for today, tomorrow and Wednesday and which will aid the Davis cup committee in the selection of the team that will face France in the challenge matches at Philadelphia next month. "Big Bill" Tilden and "Little Bill" Johnston, veterans of a decade of Davis cup warfare were not summoned for the trials and are considered certain choices.

SPORTING NEWS — THE RECORD NEWS — FIRST ACCURATE COMPLETE

TOP O' MORN STUFF
By Blondy Cross

PREPAREDNESS

Your Spudders are becoming stocked with youngsters and veterans alike. If Gardner can keep the strings tied, some of these rookies are going to bring him results before many seasons roll by. Two youngsters in the orchard now, Cohen and Buddy Lewis. Lewis packs the ear-markings of a smacking good infielder in the development. You can't expect a kid to break in with a championship outfit—just crash right on in from the gong. You probably won't get to see much of Lewis nor Cohen this year. Both will get to work, however, giving the regulars a rest, when the Spudders are "in" numerically, that is, when Wichita Falls has sewed up the flag beyond a vestige of a doubt. That seems not far in the offing.

* * *

GOOD BYE, FRED

But we're going to need pitchers next year. At least, so it looks right now. How Wichita Falls can keep Steengrafe, Payne and Fussell on the roster is a question. Major loop clubs are ever on the alert. Unless Fussell cracks or blows all to pieces inside of the next few weeks, you can figure the southpaw for a trip back to the big show. That isn't any idle guess. Paste it in your hat band as a memorandum. Steengrafe, the most effective hurler in the league, seems booked for a return voyage. Maybe not, but why not? It is possible they may figure the veteran Payne too old for a trip up at this stage. I don't know. You don't know. But when the season opens in 1928 we will be short one left-hander. How are you going to keep a guy like that down?

* * *

Gardner retains hopes of developing Johnny Buvid into class A material if not big league stuff.

* * *

MASTER-MINDING

Speaking of pitchers, Turgeon and LaFayette in casual conversation the other day brought out a salient point. Neither Pete nor George ever have been on a ball club, much less a club that is fighting for a championship, that that club's pitchers weren't coming up with strained and ailing whips, had not been overworked by this time of the year. Few baseball teams at the moment have staffs that are not worn and frayed from the pace. Houston is an outstanding Texas league example. The Buff staff little by little is crumpling. Yet the Spudder mound corps romps merrily on. It's a case of smart manipulation by a smart manager of a smart set of flingers. Nobody tired on Carl Williams' staff. There's one guy, Herb Cobb, had a little hard luck. Cobb has pitched winning ball but hasn't won, if you gather the inference. Cobb, as remarked here before, is the greatest young pitching find uncovered in the Texas league this year.

* * *

About Cobb, that other one, Joe Cobb, the backstop, hit town just in time. Take it as you would, that guy is a luck charm or something. Joe Cobb went to work for Gardner Friday afternoon. The Spudders through Thursday night and up to Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock were in a miserable slump. Starting with Joe Cobb and Friday afternoon Wichita Falls has copped four straight games and jumped from a four and a half game lead to an eight-game advantage in four days.

* * *

There's a contrast for you: One Cobb hasn't been able to win for losing; the other Cobb hasn't lost for winning.

* * *

THERE'S A REASON

But in regard to gaining those three and a half games in four days over the second place team:

The other day some guy wrote me a letter inquiring as to why I don't ride the Cats while they are down, pan the Panthers while I've got the chance and get a good laugh at them.

Lissen, those Cats this year have been our best friends. They've lost enough games to us to win an ordinary pennant (the 1927 flag is EXTRA-ordinary, monopoly of big city flag-winners broken) and then stepped out the past three days and whipped Houston for us in three games out of four. We beat San Antonio in three straight while the Cats were drubbing the Buffs in three of four. That advanced us two and a half games, which added to our victory over the Buffs Friday when Cobb made his debut makes it three and a half in four days. Let's don't get those Cats mad at us.

* * *

What's the matter with Griffin, the way he is stiff-legging it around? somebody asked yesterday. Then the story was out. Pug, it seems, while playing first base down at San Antonio on the last road trip just went himself one too good for a fellow who is not in trained condition to handle the first-sacking job. In reaching for a wide one, Pug pulled one of these semi-famous Walter Golvin, ala chorus girl, splits. The old frame wouldn't stand the stretching, so Pug has been kind of staggering around since. They do say Griffin used to be a whizz of a regular first cushioner guardian.

COHEN ARRIVES IN SPUD CAMP

Reading Returns Outfielder Floyd Trexler

Syd Cohen, kid brother of Andy, the former Waco shortstop, rolled into town yesterday and parked at the Spudder club house. Syd, straight from Alabama university, was signed by Spudder President Gardner on Andy's recommendation. Syd's a first sacker. His home is in El Paso.

Simultaneously with Cohen's arrival, the Spudder office was notified by the Reading club of the International league that Floyd Trexler, outfielder, is being returned. Trexler, used by Reading mostly as a pinch hitter, has been batting just a little above the .300 mark. Last release of averages gave him a .303 figure. The Cubs sent Reading a flock of ball players, so they let Floyd out. He is expected in Wichita Falls this week and is to be carried the remainder of the season, Gardner said.

Curwood Rite Set For Today

Noted Author Will Be Buried By Parents

OWOSSO, Mich., Aug. 15. (AP)—Funeral rites for James Oliver Curwood, author and conservationist, who died late Saturday night, will be held at the Curwood home here tomorrow afternoon. Burial will be in Oak Hill cemetery by the side of the author's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Curwood.

In accordance with Mr. Curwood's wishes the services will be simple and Owosso friends will serve as pallbearers.

After Mayor O. L. Sprague had issued a proclamation calling for the suspension of business during the funeral a movement was started for the purchase of "Curwood Castle," the author's studio, and the home in which he was born, as a memorial.

Until the recent completion of the "Castle" Curwood had done his writing in a small bedroom in the old home and on a table which his father had made for him from an old sewing machine.

Born in 1878.

James Oliver Curwood was born in Owosso, June 12, 1878. The son of James Moran Curwood and Abigail Griffin Curwood, he was a descendant of his father's side of Captain Marryat, the novelist.

Educated at the University of Michigan, Curwood entered the newspaper profession in Detroit after leaving college. For seven years he devoted himself to this work, but in 1907 resigned to devote his time entirely to novel writing.

Attracted by the North American wilderness, Curwood traveled there extensively and made this country the scene of his principal stories. He became prominent as a North American naturalist and possessed a large collection of excellent game photographs taken by himself. Through this activity he had the distinction of being the only American ever employed by the Canadian government as a writer of descriptive and exploratory material.

Wild Life Fan.

Following these interests Curwood became a champion of national wild life and forest conservation. Early in 1927 he was appointed a member of the state conservation commission by Gov. Fred W. Green.

As recently as June of this year Commissioner Curwood was continuing his fight for certain changes in the Michigan game laws. He advocated closing the next two years to partridge hunting, the extension for two more years of the prohibition on black and gray squirrel and the including of fox squirrel in the prohibition, a change of the buck law so that only bucks with antlers may be shot ,a change in the open season on rabbits and a prevent n of the use of shot guns in shooting deer.

He was formerly a member of Troop B, Michigan state cavalry.

Among Curwood's best known novels were "The Honor of the Big Snows," "The Valley of Silent Men," "The Alaskan" and his latest "The Black Hunter."

He made his home in Owosso, his birthplace where he had built a residence somewhat in the feudal style, regarded as one of the show places of the vicinity.

Army Gets Grid Luminary From Far West

LEO ROONEY

The army got a peach when Leo Rooney, St. Mary's college football star, decided he wanted to try the soldier school.

Leo is a hot forward passer, a good punter, and an excellent broken field runner. On several occasions he has galloped almost the length of the gridiron for touchdowns.

And when Leo hangs up the moleskins his usefulness isn't over, as he is also a fine baseball player. He was a member of a champion Sacramento baseball team composed of himself and eight of his cousins. Rooney lives in San Francisco, Cal.

INCA TRIBES LOSE REVOLT

Bolivian Soldiers Check Indian Outbreak

LA PAZ, Boliva, Aug. 15. (AP)—Dreams of a new Inca empire reported to be the goal of the Indian uprising in various parts of Bolivia appeared to be fading today, as troops equipped with the white man's war devices were bearing down upon the rebellious hordes.

A whole division of soldiers has been brought into action and the government claims to have succeeded in pacifying certain sections. When the remainder of the troops detailed to the campaign reach their destinations the government contends the situation should be brought under control.

Revolt Gets Setback

In the failure of the Indians in the department of La Paz to join the movement the Incas have lost their principal hope for success and if there is truth in the government's claim that the danger of a rising in La Paz is over then it probably is merely a question of time until the disillusioned natives in the more remote regions will be obliged to resume their labors.

Clubs and slingshots are providing inadequate arms for the restoration of Inca power, pitted against the rifles, bayonets and machine guns and the Indians are making a pitiful defense.

The number of white persons killed by the Indians in the regions affected is not yet known and probably an exact account never will be obtained. The departments of Saucre, Cochabamba and Potosi where the revolt had its origin several days ago, still continue to be the strongest centers of the rebellion.

Agitators Blamed

Placing the blame for the trouble entirely on communist agitators the government declares that after a recent abortive plot to overthrow the government, these agitators incited the Indians to bring about restoration of the lost glory of the Inca empire. The government contends that the illiterate Indians having pent up animosity against the whites because they have dominated the Incas from the time of the Spanish conquest, were excellent subjects for such propaganda. Several alleged communist agitators and many Indian chieftains have been arrested or captured. It is announced they will be summarily tried.

In La Paz city all is calm, the Indians going about their usual duties in their picturesque garb. The white population although greatly outnumbered is showing no signs of alarm.

The Prince of Wales ought to do all his falling off horses now, before the ground freezes.

When Dempsey and Tunney start predicting how their fight will result we'll understand why Chicago is called the Windy City.

A lot of sports have given up crap shooting. Nowadays it's hard to get a square deal with the cubes.

READY FOR BIG GRAPPLE SHOW

Wily Matsuda Goes After Sandow Tonight

With fair weather predicted all was in readiness, according to announcement Monday night by Matchmaker A. B. Ross, for the banner bat program carded Tuesday evening at the Ross wrestling stadium, the feature match of which will be a titular tussle between Matty Matsuda, world's welter championship claimant, and Bobby Sandow, junior welter champion. Matsuda is to make 140 pounds weight for Sandow and try for the junior welter belt.

Many close followers of the game after watching Sandow in his victory here last week over Yaqui Joe, Matsuda's Indian pupil, believe the Seattle grappler stands a great chance of beating the veteran Jap athlete. It is generally believed that Matsuda, never an ounce of fat on his frame, will not be at his best several pounds under weight, which he will be if he comes in tonight at 140 pounds.

The opening match is to start at 8:15 o'clock.

Yaqui Joe tangles with the sturdy little Silvio Checco in a finish match preliminary to the Matsuda-Sandow battle. Checco has appeared here many times and has developed a reputation as a fighter and willing mixer. Plenty of action is guaranteed in both matches.

FIFTH AND SIXTH GAS SANDS IN FOARD COUNTY WILDCAT

PIPE SET TO DRILL AHEAD

Real Oil Well Expected Before Long

Fifth and sixth gas sands were encountered in Foard county's most interesting test and Monday pipe was being set preparatory to resuming drilling toward the big pay, which is expected just ahead.

The well is Roxana Petroleum corporation and Fain-McGaha Oil company's No. 1 Matthews, one mile north of Thalia, eastern Foard county, and in section 3, G. C. & S. F. survey. Monday it was running the eight-inch pipe at 1865 feet.

Having encountered four gas sands previously, the test was keeping operators on edge when another 1,000,000 cubic foot flow was encountered at 1847-51 feet. This was passed up and at 1863-64 feet still another gas sand was entered. No estimate was made of the flow in the latter formation.

Spudded in on a carefully geologized structure, this wildcat was favorably looked upon from the very outset. At 855 feet it hit a strong gas flow.

Casing this off the hole was carried down to 1370 feet and a 2,000,000-foot flow was encountered. Again drilling ahead a 55-barrel oil sand with some gas was encountered at 1480 feet. The well was pumped for two days at this level.

On deepening the fourth gas sand was drilled into at 1670 feet and the flow was cased off. Now geologists look for a really big oil pay higher than 2000 feet. Not a drop of water has been encountered.

Although practically all acreage has long since been purchased by scores of companies and operators, the well will prove to be the most important operation in North Texas during the year if expectations are fulfilled at 1950 feet.

McIlroy Trend May Be to Southeast

AMARILLO, Aug. 15.—The rich pay in the McIlroy pool of southeast Hutchinson county may be raising towards the southeast.

This conclusion has been expressed after the Roxana Petroleum corporation company found oil approximately 140 feet higher in its No. 1 Cockrell, in the southeast quarter of section 3, block B3, of D. S. & E. survey, than did other producers to the north and west.

The Roxana well is spraying wild, and producing from 100 to 500 barrels a day, all of which is either going into the slush pit or being lost while it can be connected up. With no tankage erected, the Roxana engineers are building a trap and expect to connect the well to the trap. The oil is being blown by 80,000,000 feet of gas from 2560 feet.

McIlroy Oil company No. 4 Cockrell, in section 4, same area, is making 30 barrels natural from 2985 to 3010 feet and not shot. Its No. 11, is only making 280 barrels from 2983 to 3017 feet, and also not shot. These are in the gushers area.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. (AP)—Unfavorable weather and crop advices seemed responsible for advances in the cotton market today. December contracts sold up to 19.43 or 51 points above Saturday's closing quotation and closed at 19.41, the general market closing steady at net advances of 48 to 54 points.

The opening was firm at an advance of 29 to 29 points under the relatively firm showing of Liverpool and reports of showers in the south over Sunday. This initial advance was checked by realising. After showing net gains of about 45 to 47 points the market eased off 10 or 15 points from the best during midday.

Except for the taking of profits, or some local selling for a reaction, offerings were restricted by more numerous reports of deteriorating crop prospects, and the market firmed up again. Best prices of today were reached in late trading, when there was rather active covering by recent sellers who appeared to be influenced by the more bullish character of southern spot advices and expectations of unfavorable private condition and crop reports. October sold up to 19.15 and January 19.49, net advances of 50 to 56 points on the active months. Last prices were within two or three points of the best.

The report of the census bureau showing domestic mill consumption of 569,250 running bales of lint cotton for July, compared with 662,636 for June, and 461,743 for July last year, was without much effect on sentiment. There was some bearish comment on the figures because of the falling off as compared with the previous month, but the comparison with last year was bullish and the report on the whole appeared to add very little influence in the day's trading.

Private cables reported trade calling and covering in the Liverpool market, influenced by reports of rain in the south, but complained of a small cloth business in Manchester owing to lack of confidence in current prices. A good many unfavorable crop reports appeared to be reaching here from Texas during the day but there was some scattered southern selling here on the advances.

Exports today 5512, making 117,316 so far this season. Port receipts today 13,366. U. S. port stocks 925,512.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 15. (AP)—Trading in today's cotton market was fairly active and the trend of prices turned upward, due mainly to better cables, rain in the belt and reports of crop deterioration due to weevil damage. December traded up to 19.34, and closed at 19.32, 50 points above the previous close. The general market closed at net gains of 46 to 51 points.

First trades showed gains of 25 to 29 points due to strong cables. The initial advance was soon increased to 19.00 for October and 19.25 for December, 42 to 44 points above the previous close. Prices eased off about 21 points at the end of the first hour on realizing.

Prices rallied again, however, and was on the upgrade during the remainder of the session with only trifling reactions. The census bureau's consumption report making the total July consumption by domestic mills 569,250 bales of line cotton, while not as large as expected, was a new high record for that month.

Exports for the day totalled 5512 bales.

Seminole Wells Found to Be Not So Good When Turned Loose a Day

TULSA, Aug. 15.—Apparent effectiveness of proration in the Seminole area was demonstrated in Saturday morning's figures, which disclosed the Bowlegs pool had been "turned loose" for the 24-hour period from Friday morning at 7 o'clock to the same hour Saturday. The increase was from 167,163 barrels to 187,914 barrels, representing a jump of 20,751 for Bowlegs.

It was explained this order for the 24-hour period was made in order to obtain an accurate guage on Bowlegs' potential production.

The entire Seminole area increased 19,885 barrels from Friday to Saturday morning, showing that the production of the pools outside of Bowlegs, was on the decline.

Orders were issued yesterday morning for a 20 per cent, instead of the customary 10 per cent reduction for the Bowlegs pool. This order went into effect yesterday morning at 7 o'clock. It was explained this order would stand at least one day and probably more, so that production in the Bowlegs can be reduced to make up for the full production Friday.

The umpire also issued an order yesterday morning for a 15 per cent cut in the Searight, Seminole City and Earlsboro pools. This order will be in effect at least one day.

Stocks Score Further Good Recoveries as Bears Find Bull Tone too Strong for Down Scale Operations

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Further good recovery was scored on the stock exchange today as the bears found their operations were meeting little success and lightened the pressure. Industrials led the advance but there was materially better demand for the railroad shares with the "Hill" northwest roads scoring a new high as a result of the best buying of many months. The further recovery followed about an hour of irregularity during the initial trading of the morning.

The list never faltered once under way and the final prices were close to the high for the session. Steel and General Motors were the bellwethers and their steady move forward did much to wipe out nervousness remaining from last week's "correction" and the unexpected announcement of the death of Judge Gary.

Call money was in abundance at 2 3-4 per cent. Cotton and wheat were higher again as new buying came in from the west, while corn options remained irregular.

The buying of Steel common and General Motors was looked upon as being largely in the nature of banking support. For the first hours, while Judge Gary's death was rumored, these industrial leaders were ragged. Coincident with confirmation from the Steel corporation office they strengthened and moved forward steadily for the remaining four hours of trading. When support is evidence at such a time the market veterans have learned to look ahead and watch for the time that stock that had to be so taken is again passed on and something near a natural market experienced once more.

The main factor in regard to Steel at the moment is not the name of the next chairman, but how soon improvement will set in. The steel business is below what it was a year ago and thus far there has been no concrete evidence of betterment. The Steel corporation organization now is a model of perfection and can do no better than to continue to run along the lines of the policies followed for the last decade.

General Motors, that other ace of that greatest of industrial triumvirates—Morgan-Dupont-First National—remains the subject of conflicting ideas as to what directors will authorize in the way of a dividend on the new stock. There is no reason, however, to change the belief that the splitup sharks will go on a $5 annual basis.

Yellow Truck, Radio and Bethlehem were the three outstanding industrials to follow the lead of Steel and Motors. The buying of Yellow Truck was from the same sources as were active on its advance of a fortnight ago coincident with further voicing of expectattions how the General Motors would make it the outstanding factor in the motor truck field with in a year or so. Radio responded to special advices pointing out that the corporation now is entering the best season of the year and the discussion of dividend possibilities should expected improvement in earnings be realized. Bethlehem ignored the likelihood of dividend postponement.

Shorts in Baldwin found they had once again sold into that sort of a "free and open market" responsible for the recent frowns of the powers-that-be on Manhattan Electrical and the stock skyrocketed again. It caused a few exchange members to wonder at the accuracy of the advice broadcast by their colleagues to the effect that "all weak spots are eliminated." As one of the oldest members of the exchange maintains it is not a sound market in which a stock cannot be sold. The financial strength, personal reputation, etc., of those holding Baldwin was contrasted with the interests in the technically cornered stocks that met their day of reckoning last week. To this it was answered that Durant was 100 per cent in 1919 but in red figures as a market factor after his General Motors bubble burst.

The new high price levels of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific were the result of realization that a dividend of $6 a share annually will be inaugurated as soon as decision on the merger is handed down by the commerce commission. Not that a favorable decision necessarily is expected. Those interested in the rail shares keep their fingers crossed when talking commission these days. But it is maintained that increase in dividend will be ordered whether the merger goes through or not. It is further stated that earnings more than warrant a $6 rate and that the indications from Washington of even bigger crops than heretofore expected should influence directors in authorizing distribution.

Financial

NEW YORK BONDS

NEW YORK, Aug. 15. (AP)—Stock prices gave an impressive demonstration of strength in today's market. A strong opening based on a continuation of short covering and investment buying after last week's drastic reaction was temporarily interrupted by yaf lurry of selling on the announcement of the death of Chairman Elbert H. Gary of the United States Steel corporation, but support was quickly forthcoming and the market headed upward again before noon.

News developments over the week-end apparently had little market influence. Reports from Rapid City, S. D., that tax cuts in 1928 were unlikely because of larger government appropriations were offset to some extent by the publication of statistics placing the increase in farm wealth this year more than $1,000,000,000 above that of 1926. Foreign trade figures for July showed exports and imports under that of the month of June, but the balance, however, still was favorable to the United States.

Today's recovery in prices was influenced by the speculative belief that the "sore spots" in the market had been cleaned up in last week's sensational decline. Pools resumed operations with confidence on the theory that easy credit conditions were likely to continue for some time to come and that any change in the business situation would be for the better. "Bears" showed little disposition to oppose the advance, except in a few isolated issues.

High priced industrial specialties led the rally. Case Threshing Machine ind Ray Corp A 14 13⅜ 14

FANS TO HELP PLANES LAND

Man-Made Gales to Sweep Flying Fields

Special to The Record News.

TOLEDO, Aug. 15.—Giant fans, similar to those used for ventilating mines, automobile factories and public buildings, soon will be installed in all modern airports to whip up 65-mile wind gales for the safe landing and "take off" of airplanes, according to aviation experts who have been interested in selecting a site for one of the most up-to-date landing fields in the United States.

The use of these big fans with other methods for scientifically controling air conditions will make it possible for planes to land on top of office buildings and department stores or within a city block and make the airplane nearly as convenient and readily acessible for daily use as the automobile, these fliers declare. The gale created by the blower fans will supply "braking power" for planes as nothing else and further minimize the risks of ascending it was explained.

Fool Proof Devices

Such leaders in the art of flying as Col. Charles Lindbergh, Major Eddie Rickenbacker, Captain William H. Leininger and others said that safety devices are being rapidly developed to make aviation "fool proof" and that these are to be applied to flying or landing fields to eliminate dangers. All are confident that the airplanes will be the next big competitor of the automobile but visualize a machine which may travel by land or air and which, if some experiments succeed(?) will literally be a "flying automobile."

Rickenbacker, American ace of the World war, is strongly in favor of the multimotored plane.

"The safe plane will have four motors," he said.

How controlled air may be applied for safety of landing planes was explained by Captain Leinger, who commanded a squadron of airplanes on the western front and who was later Lindbergh's commanding officer in St. Louis.

Easy to Land in Wind

"Any flier knows that it is easier to land in a gale of wind than it is in still air or dangerous cross currents of air known as eddies," Captain Leininger said. "Forced air, no matter whether it comes from a huge ventilating fan or from a breeze of Mother Nature will hold a plane up if aided by the correct kind of piloting. The wind gives braking power in landing and coming from a series of big fans would be the equivalent of four-wheel brakes on an automobile. It would help immeasurably in the ascent as, instead of taking off at an angle of 20 degrees, it could be done at 50 degrees.

"Instead of requiring a section of land to descend in, it could be done within a city block or on top of a building. This would aid materially in popularizing the airplane as it would eliminate the delays of coming in from the fields while it is not visionary to forecast that people within a few years will use the airplane for shopping tours. The department stores will maintain special facilities on the tops of their buildings.

"For the average flying field, from 12 to 20 big fans could be used, arranged 10 feet apart in horizontal and perpendicular sections which would be 200 feet wide and 90 feet high. The air would be forced or driven through a screen of steel bars one inch wide and two feet apart. This would break up the eddies of the air and help the pilot to land or take off.

Air-Cooled Motor

"This method suggested for using controlled air for safety indicates that we are on the eve of some mighty important developments. A few years ago many would have challenged the statement that air could be used to cool motors. Yet, the air cooled motor today has established its supremacy. One automobile manufacturer has successfully used it for years to cool his motor by simply keying a small blower fan to the end of his crankshaft."

KIWANIS HEAR LAUNDRY HEAD

George Brown Is Chief Luncheon Speaker

Because it is impossible to secure the desired results from a national advertising campaign without following up with a local "tie-up" the National Laundry Owners association will spend $12,000,000 in local advertising to follow the expenditure of half that amount in a national campaign, declared George Brown, representative of the association, who was the principal speaker at the Kiwanis luncheon Monday at the Kemp hotel.

The campaign is to be an effort to match merchandising ability with the production efficiency of the laundry industry in the United States, said Mr. Brown.

"There is not an industry which excels the laundry industry in production although laundries are getting only 20 per cent of their potential volume of business. Laundries in America do an annual business of $500,000,000," the speaker declared.

Mr. Brown is connected with the Miller Advertising company, the largest advertising concern in the world. He cited as evidence of the value of national advertising campaigns, the results obtained in campaigns put on by the varnish manufacturers, florists, etc.

It was voted at the meeting to press the candidacy of J. L. Jackson Jr., for vice president of the Texas-Oklahoma district at the Corpus Christi convention to be held in September.

A song entitled "Texas," composed by Mrs. W. L. Underwood was sung by a quartet composed of Mrs. J. Brown Hopkins, Miss Glenore Fisk, W. L. Underwood and Alva Willgus. Mrs. Underwood played the piano accompaniment. The song is to be submitted in the state song contest.

Judge Martin Reunites Brother and Sister

An inmate of the Wichita Falls State hospital for the insane for a considerable length of time, a man was released Monday from the institution on order of Judge P. A. Martin, of the 89th district court, and placed in the custody of his sister, who lives in Oregon.

Many years ago the life paths of the brother and sister went in different directions. She started a search for him a short time ago and was informed that her brother, penniless, had been adjudged insane and placed in the hospital.

The sister informed the court that she was financially able to care for her brother and to place him in an Oregon hospital for treatment.

On the recommendation of the state hospital authorities, Judge Martin issued his order.

MISSION: "The Heart Thief," with Lya De Putti. Also Honey Hank Harris and His Honey Girls.

GEM: Kit Carson in "Twin Six O'Brien," and comedy.

GARDEN: "Country Beyond," with all star cast and western picture. Also comedy.

A new De Putti is seen in "The Heart Thief," a dramatic Metropolitan picture, featuring Joseph Schildkraut, which will have its premier showing here at the Mission theater today.

"I have finished with vampire roles for all time," said this petite screen player who created screen history with her vivid performance in "Variety," "for I have learned since coming to America that the motion picture public do not like this type of character and I know that I cannot make a success of my career unless I satisfy their desires.

"I have persuaded the general manager of the studio to let me wear a new style of head-dress—call it a wig if you wish, and my judgment in this matter has been sustained.

"So I will come to you in 'The Heart Thief,' not as a dark haired 'bad' woman, but rather as a native daughter of Hungary, blonde of hair, light of foot, and one thrilled with the romance of a beautiful world."

Joseph Schildkraut has the leading man's role in this production, with Robert Edeson, Eulalie Jensen, Charles Gerrard and William Bakewell in the supporting cast.

NEW COUNTY IN T-O FAIR

Hemphill Sends Entry To Shepherd

As a further indication of the interest being shown in the Texas-Oklahoma fair this year, Hemphill county will be represented with an exhibit. This will be the first time this county has exhibited. The entry blank came yesterday from the chamber of commerce at Canadian.

This is the second county to enter an exhibit for the coming exposition, Hardeman county being the first to fill out the entry blank. Plans are also being made in Clay county for an exhibit. From inquiries received at the offices of Secretary-Manager R. E. Shepherd indications point to at least twenty county exhibits this year, which will be the greatest number of county exhibits ever shown at the Texas-Oklahoma fair.

In the county exhibit division prizes total $3000 and this is one of the big inducements to the counties to enter their farm products. Another great inducement is the fact that the regional fair in Wichita Falls is attended annually by among the largest crowds which attend any fair of the kind in the state.

N. T. U. GIVEN GAS CONTRACT

Commissioners Court Orders Water Investigation

Contract for supplying of gas to the courthouse, county poor farm, Wichita General hospital, nurses home and county jail was awarded Monday by the county commissioners court to the Northern Texas Utilities company. The cost of the gas will range from 17 cents to 45 cents per 1000 cubic feet and will depend on the amount used by the county.

H. L. White, county traffic officer, was instructed by the court to investigate a report that farmers in the irrigation district were allowing the water to cover highways, which is a violation of a state law. White was instructed to report the result of his investigation to the court.

On a bid of $1324, J. D. Holland was awarded the contract for painting of the county poor farm buildings and fences.

The court instructed E. P. Walsh, county auditor, to accept an offer of the 25th school district in Wichita county to redeem five per cent bonds now owned by the county.

The resignation of Roy Blanscet as constable in the Burkburnett district was accepted by the court, which appointed N. P. Sanders to succeed Mr. Blanscet.

W. E. Teal and Robert Owens were appointed by the court as deputy public weighers in precinct No. 3.

Efforts are being made by the U. S. Bureau of Standards to find a use for peanut shells.

MORO TRIBES GROW RESTIVE

Death of General Wood Upsets Filipinos

MANILA, P. I., Aug. 14. (AP)—A dispatch to the Manila Bulletin says great unrest throughout the Sulu archipelago as a result of Governor Leonard Wood's death.

The dispatch dated Zamboanga, says rumors were circulated to the effect that the Philippines would be granted independence immediately and that the Moros would be exploited by the Christians. The Mohammedan priests everywhere throughout the province are praying Allah to inspire President Coolidge to send the islands a governor similar to Wood, although the Moros declare nobody can have the same place in their heart.

The dispatch continues that if some irresponsible Christian Filipinos continue to celebrate Wood's death, hailing it as the removal of an obstacle to independence, the situation will soon become critical. The constabulary here said information on reported unrest was lacking.
