Rioting 'sporadic' in wake of death

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Thousands of mourners filed passed Bobby Sands' open coffin today in his family's small row house in Belfast. In the city's streets anti-British rioting gave way to sporadic stone-throwing by Roman Catholic youths.

By early afternoon, the city of 363,000 was the quietest it had been since the 27-year-old IRA member's 66-day hunger strike ended in death early Tuesday at the Maze Prison outside Belfast.

In the Maze, three other fasting members of the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing grew weaker, and all 440 jailed IRA men pledged to continue hunger strikes until Britain yielded to Sands' demand for political prisoner status, the Republican Press Office said.

The office issued a statement it said was smuggled out of the Maze in which the prisoners said that Britain would never "rob of us our principals."

There are many Bobby Sands in these blocks and we will continue to die on hunger strike if need be to safeguard those principals."

It was not clear if the prisoners intended to carry out a threat of a mass hunger strike announced on Tuesday by Sinn Fein, political front for the IRA. The front said Tuesday that 70 Maze prisoners were prepared to join a hunger strike, but no final decision had yet been made.

On Tuesday, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher declared again that Britain would never grant the fasters' demand that imprisoned IRA members be classified as political prisoners. Most leaders of the opposition Labor Party supported her stand.

But today in London, 11 Labor members of the 635-seat House of Commons broke with their party's support for Mrs. Thatcher's refusal to yield to the prisoners. They issued a statement, also signed by a Welsh nationalist member, that said Sands' had died because of the Conservative government's "intransigence" over the demands.

There were renewed sporadic disturbances in Belfast earlier today following overnight rioting which spread to Dublin.

Up to midnight, 22 people were reported injured, three of them critically, in the rioting that erupted in Roman Catholic districts of Belfast and Londonderry early Tuesday when words of Sands' death spread.

It was the worst violence in two weeks of daily disturbances, since it became apparent that he was determined to die and that the British government would not give in.

Security forces were prepared for worse violence after Sands' funeral Thursday and the end of the three-day mourning period proclaimed by the IRA. But so far the riots had not spread to Protestant districts, where militants vowed to fight if attacked.

President's popularity seems to scare speaker

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., faced with almost certain defeat in efforts to cut off an administration-backed budget blueprint, is pleading with divided Democrats not to "run into the woods" simply because they fear President Reagan's popularity.

Reagan, taking no chances on a last-minute slip in support, was putting his popularity to work right up to the vote, now expected Thursday. Fifty-one House members have been brought to the White House for face-to-face chats with the president, with another dozen due today.

An Associated Press survey late last week and private counts by both parties showed dozens of Democrats ready to join minority Republicans and give Reagan a budget plan tailored to his deep cuts in social programs and a three-year, 30 percent tax reduction.

Nevertheless, Reagan said Tuesday, "You know me. I run scared all the time."

While the White House was practicing a soft sell, O'Neill used an impassioned speech to step up pressure on Democrats to resist the Reagan tide.

"Listen, you have got to have courage along the line and courage is thinking of Americans first," O'Neill told Democrats during a private caucus Tuesday. His office released a transcript of his remarks.

O'Neill described himself as a lifelong liberal and pleaded with his colleagues to reject Reagan's budget, which he said would cut "off the services for health, education and senior services," and support a less-austere Democratic plan.

The Democrats' alternative isn't ideal, O'Neill acknowledged. But he said "it cuts you off at the knees so you will use a prosthesis, rather than cutting you off at the hip where you have to walk along with a crutch the rest of your life."

The Massachusetts Democrat cited gains made in combating poverty from the worst days of the Great Depression and said: "You don't think that happened by accident, do you? That happened by design and by legislation of the Democratic party through the years...."

"Are we running into the woods because we are frightened, because a man, the president of the United States, is as popular as he is?"

"The man on the street" doesn't know what is in the Reagan plan "and he is influenced by a president with charisma and class and is a national hero because of events that have taken place," O'Neill continued.

Airline employees 'up in the air'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

A successful attempt by Texas International to snare a controlling interest in the stock of Continental Airlines would be a "hostile takeover," according to two of the Proud Bird employees who on Tuesday explained developments to block that action.

Russ Carlson, a Continental ticket agent based in Midland, and Karen Harvey of Houston, a member of the Continental Employees Association, are soliciting support from cities served by Continental Airlines for the employees' efforts to purchase part of the airline's stock.

Ms. Harvey explained that Frank Lorenzo, president of Texas Air Corp. which is a parent company of Texas International, had received permission from the Civil Aeronautics Board to purchase 48.5 percent of Continental's stock. In an effort to stop that sale, which Ms. Harvey said would give Lorenzo the controlling share, Continental employees have voted 96.2 percent in favor of gaining majority ownership of the airline. The 50 local Continental employees voted 48 in favor while two didn't cast ballots.

Lorenzo already owns a small amount of stock in Continental, said the two employees. Today, the stockholders are meeting in Denver, Colo., and Ms. Harvey said Continental employees — including some from Midland — will conduct a peaceful rally to demonstrate their support of the effort known as ESOP, or Employee Stock Ownership Plan.

Next is a hearing on May 18 before the CAB who will determine if the ESOP plan will prevail over Lorenzo's "hostile takeover," according to Ms. Harvey. She and Carlson are asking that governmental bodies write to the CAB if they are in favor of the employees' plan.

The employees association is working on the theme of "The airline that PRIDE built (and bought)."

Continental's ESOP plan is based upon the theory promoted by Louis Kelso who proposed an employee benefit plan that would result in more widespread capital ownership among the workers in that economy. ESOPs create new capital for a company to use to expand and grow, and the results of that growth can flow through to the employee-owners of the company.

Lorenzo, whom Ms. Harvey described as a financial wizard but without regard for the employees, would take away labor protection, determine "null and void all contracts and take 100 percent of the voting rights."

"He would have total control over Continental," she added.

Under the ESOP plan, employees have a say on the board of directors and also reap benefits from the stock they own if the company is profitable.

"We feel that people who have a vested interest in their company work longer and harder," said Ms. Harvey. "If it's going to change hands, why not to us? We would be glad to earn money for Lorenzo as a stockholder. But we don't want him to have the controlling interest."

An earlier effort to "merge" Continental with Western Airlines "is shelved," said Ms. Harvey.

"We were for a merger with Western," explained Carlson. "That was a mutual agreement. Western would have protected the employees and the two airlines complemented each other."

The $185 million which the employees would pay for Continental's 15 million shares of stock would benefit the airline's treasury and turn around

Houston 'over a barrel' in recent gun auction

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — At least one local official says he expects the city to come under fire for sponsoring a public auction of 535 rifles and shotguns seized by police during the past year, but he says Houston needs the money too much to worry about it.

"I'm sure some people won't like it, but we have to do what we think is best for the city," Assistant Treasurer George Odom said after Tuesday's gun auction.

"There's an awful lot of money over there (at the auction), and I'm sitting here trying to put together a budget to finance the city operations," he said. "It would seem a crying shame not to have that money available."

The auction, which attracted about 240 collectors, sportsmen and others, raised more than $43,000, he said. Besides rifles and shotguns, also on sale were holsters, ammunition clips, bowling balls and tennis rackets.

Odom said handguns were not included in the auction. "Handguns are never put back into circulation," Odom said. The police department said it routinely melts down pistols and revolvers.

Odom said in the past, rifles and shotguns seized by police have been sold at a retail store, but he said the sales were not bringing in enough money. He said the auction went so well that it probably would be repeated twice a year in the future.

Suit filed against Ector officials

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Two inmates in the Ector County Jail in Odessa and a former inmate there have filed a $245,000 lawsuit against six Ector County officials in claiming 14 jail-related violations of their civil rights.

The suit was filed this week in federal court in Midland. Defendants are Sheriff Bob Brookshire, County Judge Gary Watkins and Commissioners David Childers, Julian Pressly, William "Bill" Hicks and Willie Hammond Jr.

Plaintiffs are George Heatwole Jr., 22, who is in jail while his five-year sentence for assault on a police officer is being appealed; Randy Moore, in his mid-20s, who has been released from custody following dismissal of an aggravated robbery charge against him; and Ronald Don Lopez, 16, who is awaiting trial for attempted murder. Lopez has been certified as an adult. Heatwole's case has been on appeal since November.

Nowhere does the petition allege brutality. But it does claim that the three plaintiffs were deprived of their "right to be free of cruel and unusual punishment" through jail "conditions and inadequacies" which were permitted by the commissioners and the judge. Those five, who constitute the Commissioners' Court, have been "aware of the...conditions and inadequacies for at least three years," said the petition, "and have consciously and deliberately failed to take remedial action to alleviate these inadequacies...."

"These omissions on the part of these commissioners were not based on good faith on their part," the petition further states.

Each plaintiff, too, claims "great physical pain and mental anguish." For that suffering, Heatwole is asking $75,000; Moore, $10,000; and Lopez, $50,000.

In addition, Heatwole is seeking $50,000 for the alleged "retaliatory" nature of certain omissions; Moore, $10,000, and Lopez, $50,000.

The complaints against the Ector County officials seem hinged on the county's alleged failure to comply with the regulations set forth by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

However, the county commissioners do plan to almost double the capacity of the jail, which was built into the second floor of the downtown courthouse in the 1930s, in a $1 million remodeling and expansion, which would include an "overhang." Plans, too, reportedly call for a prisoner exercise area on the sunroof atop the three-story building, which was enlarged in the 1960s. Currently, inmate population hovers around 100.

In addition to their alleged denial their right to be "free of cruel and unusual punishment," Heatwole, Moore and Lopez contend that they have been denied right to counsel and right to a fair and impartial trial.

Specifically, they are complaining that:

—The Ector County Jail provides "inadequate facilities for the segregation and classification of inmates."

—The jail has no system of communication from inmates to guards.

—The jail has no space and equipment for medical examination and treatment and "no reliable program for inmate care."

—The jail has no secure exercise areas for inmate physical exercise and recreation.

—Conditions of overcrowding exist in some areas of the jail.

—Extreme changes of temperature levels exist.

—Protection of inmates against fire hazards is inadequate.

—Jail rules are not conspicuously posted in Spanish or English and are not available to inmates.

—Prisoners are required to take their meals in unsanitary places.

—The prisoners' food is inadequate to ensure health.

—Inmates are not provided "access to sunlight."

—Prisoners are not provided with

Angelo to head political panel

WASHINGTON — Ernest Angelo Jr. of Midland, Texas, has been selected to head a national party panel to study political issues ranging from proposed changes in primary laws to the role of such independent groups as the National Conservative Political Action Committee.

Making the announcement here Tuesday was Richard Richards, Republican national chairman. Angelo, a petroleum engineer who directed Reagan's 1976 and 1980 primary campaigns in Texas, will head the Committee to Study Political Election Reform.

Richards explained some of those reforms could include shortening the presidential campaigns, revising campaign laws and reporting of election results before polls close. The committee also will take a look at the role of political action committees and independent expenditure groups, said Richards.

"Lest anyone misunderstand our purpose, let me make it clear it is not our objective to criticize conservatives or conservative committees," he added.

Angelo commented that the committee would look at such groups, but "I am quite reluctant by nature about trying to legislate a reduction of people's right to participate in the political process." Their right to raise and spend money appears to be protected by the Supreme Court decision that upheld the constitutionality of the federal campaign laws, he noted.

Size of the panel hasn't been determined, but Angelo estimated it might number 20. Richards pointed out in his announcement that the committee might consist of a "cross-section of viewpoints" since both political parties share some areas of concern.

Big-time battle brewing over money market bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Money men competing for Texans' savings are fighting over a bill that could dull the luster of high-interest money market funds, which have lured $5.5 billion from Texans.

More than 200,000 Texans have decided money market funds — paying about triple the interest of a passbook savings account — are the place for their money. Much of that money has been shifted from passbook accounts.

Sen. Bill Meier's proposal, which eased through a Senate committee last Thursday, would require the funds to maintain reserves, just as banks do.

The uninsured funds now do not have reserves, and that is part of the reason they easily top the 5 1/2 percent return on passbook savings accounts.

Money market funds have paid as much as 17 percent in recent months. The current yield is around 14 percent, said Carl Stuart of Rotan-Mosle in Austin. The funds pool investors' money and invest heavily in high-yield short-term debt such as commercial paper and U.S. Treasury bills.

The first shot in the lobby battle came Friday when Reg Green of the Investment Company Institute jetted here to fight the Meier effort. Radio and full-page newspaper ads urging Texans to voice their opposition appeared within days, winning the professional respect of the opposing lobbyists.

"I have never seen such a sophisticated and well-financed lobby group," Texas Savings and Loan League lobbyist Durwood Curlee said of the opposition. "It's a level of lobbying effort I've never experienced."

Curlee said Texas savings and loans have lost hundreds of millions of dollars in deposits in recent months, with much of it going to the money market funds.

"It's become the new savings account," said Stuart of Rotan-Mosle, which handles a money market fund.

He said the bankers and savings and loan officials don't like the competition.

"A few years ago you and I couldn't get 14 percent on our money. Now we can and the competition is something uncomfortable for them," he said. "Now that they have to compete for the money, they want to change the rules of the game."

Stuart and Green said maintaining reserves would force inevitable changes in the funds.

"At best, it would reduce the rate of return. At worst, it could make them inoperable in Texas," said Green.

The decrease in interest would depend on what reserve requirement was set by the state banking commissioner. If the drop is large, the funds might decide to cease operations in Texas rather than force investors nationwide to face lower interest, said Green.

Green said the banks and savings and loan associations tried similar "murky language at the last minute" maneuvers in other states, but failed.

Curlee said the rules should be changed to even the game. However, Green said savings and loans and banks already get some advantages by maintaining reserves.

Midland College won't have baseball team, board decides Midland College won't be fielding a baseball team in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference — at least for the time being.

That decision was reached during a college board meeting Tuesday, after school President Dr. Al Langford told trustees he had been approached by Howard College (Big Spring) officials on the subject.

"They're pushing for such a (baseball) program on a non-scholarship basis," said Langford. "Our athletic program, in general, is going well, but problems of housing our athletes may soon arise."

"We also lack baseball facilities, such as a diamond and equipment. And we'd have to hire a coach. I recommend a letter to Howard College, saying we're not prepared to take action at this time."

Trustees agreed unanimously, after noting there had been no local requests for such a program.

In other action during the brief meeting, the board adopted a resolution supporting equal educational opportunity in Texas, heard a report from Langford on continued favorable state funding for junior colleges, routinely approved teacher appointments in the cultural and adult education divisions of MC, and met in closed door session to discuss hiring a replacement for Langford, who is leaving MC to take a position in the private sector later this year.

Midlander reports marijuana theft

Police received an unusual theft complaint Tuesday when Robert Bonilla, 2439 Whitmore Boulevard, said someone stole $30 in cash, a $10 check, some sleeping capsules and a bag of marijuana from him. Officers indicated this morning they weren't sure how to approach the issue of contraband recovery.

In burglary complaints, Gordon Arnold of 1403 Holloway said someone entered an open window of his residence and took numerous items — including a TV set, clothing and a 35 mm camera — worth a total of $1,630, and Lee Brenner, 2823 Auburn Drive, told officers tools valued at more than $200 were taken from a shed behind his home.

Investigator raps compromise

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The state is just trying to pacify Walker County officials by only giving the county money — instead of manpower — to look into state prisoners' claims of civil rights violations, a county investigator says.

Prisoners have slapped the county with three lawsuits alleging it is doing a bad job of looking into complaints. And officials say the nine-man sheriff's department — with one man assigned to inmates' rights — is snowed under.

County officials want out of the civil rights investigation business, but state law requires some Texas law enforcement group to check prisoner complaints and the Department of Public Safety has opposed a bill that would give it the responsibility.

Almost 10,000 inmates are held in five state prison units in Walker County. They are, one official said this week, "10,000 potential civil rights plaintiffs."

"It's going to get to the point where it's going to be a burden on the small counties," said sheriff's investigator Ted Pierce. "We just don't have the manpower."

Local law enforcement agencies pay the bill for investigating, prosecuting and conducting all criminal and civil cases involving inmates or prison employees.

County officials reason that since the inmates are state prisoners, looking after their civil rights should be the state's job. DPS officials disagree.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, thought he had solved the problem Tuesday when he added a last-minute amendment to a bill that would reimburse counties for criminal prosecution of an inmate or prison employee.

The amendment also would repay counties for investigating alleged civil rights violations.

Caperton said the compromise was worked out among Walker County officials, his office, and DPS Col. Jim Adams. The amended bill will substitute for another — now languishing in committee — that would have delegated the investigative task to the DPS.

"Adams didn't want it. Nobody really wants it," Caperton said. He said the repayment compromise was the best that could be done late in the legislative session and he would let his bill giving investigative responsibility to the DPS die.

Pierce said at first, in a telephone interview, that the compromise "won't solve a thing" because it would generate reams of paperwork without giving him more men to handle the investigations.

"It's not what we want," he said, adding that he was beginning to understand why Grimes County residents strongly opposed locating a new prison there. "The state just gave us a little bit to nibble on, I guess to kind of pacify us."

The number of civil rights complaints has increased sharply in recent years, he said.

And he predicted that U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's ruling that Texas prison conditions violate inmates' civil rights will generate even more complaints.

A call from Caperton's office calmed him, he said later.

"I was a little hot over not getting the manpower, but I'm real happy with what we got," he said.

Gravity-free gadget designed to pull tensions away

Find yourself, or maybe lose yourself, in warm salt-water tank

By FRANK GREEN
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — Americans in the last decade have increasingly sought relief from stress and tension by resorting to meditation, yoga, self-hypnosis, hot tubs and saunas.

Now, in the continuing search for tranquillity, some have taken to floating like corks in isolation tanks, sitting in sensory-stimulation chairs and watching animated graphs on television screens.

To find out firsthand what the cognoscenti are up to, I experienced one of the latest "new age" gadgets. I am making no attempt to assess the validity of claims made in connection with any of these devices, but am sharing with you my own experience — with mixed results.

The imposing 4-by-4-by-9-foot box at the Ocean Front Center in Mission Beach looks more like a coffin than a gravity-free isolation tank supposed to help me relax.

My palms are sweaty and my heart is racing as my instructor, psychologist John-David Schonbrock, runs through my orientation.

"Inside the box, allow yourself to float," he instructs, smiling slightly. "Surrender your body to the silence and blackness."

As I step over the top of the box and into the 93.5-degree, 10-inch-deep water, I wish that I was home listening to a baseball game, or on a less hazardous assignment — like covering a Chamber of Commerce meeting.

The box is a Samadhi sensory-deprivation tank, invented 25 years ago by John Lilly, guru of "New Age" faddists.

Only recently has it become the mental caviar of the self-indulgent set — those intent on getting in touch with their bodies and minds. Schonbrock says the tanks became practical last year when operational problems were ironed out. The very salty water is now pumped out and sterilized after each session and the oxygen is changed every 24 hours.

During hourlong $25 sessions in the tank, one is able to shut out the outside world and "totally relax," says Schonbrock, "directly experiencing you and your universe. Emerging from the tank, you should feel energized, ready to act on or from the insights gained in the tank."

Schonbrock, a psychologist, has been using two tanks for his clients at his shorefront offices for the last six months.

The tanks are quite popular, he says, with some people using them to relax, others for stress reduction, to help stop smoking or help cure drug addiction. "The tank is not a gimmick, not holistic and not a passing fancy," he says. "It is a total support system like a womb."

In the tank, I doubt his words.

For an instant, I see him standing over me, closing the door to the chamber.

I am in pitch-black darkness, floating to the rhythm of the water. Except for my face, part of my stomach, knees and toes, I am under water.

I fight the tank. My muscles are tense and I hold my head up. Schonbrook warned it would be this way, that I would resist for 15 or 20 minutes before giving in to the soothing waters.

I notice that the air is humid and warm and that it is hard to breathe. How am I going to stay in here for an hour?

During my orientation Schonbrock had said, "Some people have rebirthing or out-of-body experiences in the tank." Recalling this is enough to make me panic again. I thrash around a bit and hold my head up, reaching for the door.

But then I think, "You'll look like an idiot bailing out after only three minutes of floating."

When I have assured myself that I can actually open the door at the touch of a finger and that I am not experiencing a claustrophobic seizure, I settle down to fully experience my isolation.

I force my muscles to relax, my head dips below my ears into the water.

I flash on the upcoming baseball season. My mind then jumps to politics. I try to focus on the struggle taking place in El Salvador and the possible invasion of Poland by the Soviet Union. But I can't concentrate. With body relaxed, my mind wanders off.

I recall some pleasant childhood experiences. The faces of friends I hadn't thought about in years come back to me. I recall an incident when I was about 12. Two buddies and I climbed a farmer's fence near our neighborhood and picked some plums and pomegranates. The farmer caught us and chased us off his property, yelling that he was going to call the police. It was scary at the time, but looking back now in my half-conscious state, I remember it as being a lot of fun.

Suddenly, a drop of water falls from the ceiling into my left eye and shatters my daydream. The water, mixed with the salt, stings. I try to rub my eye, but it only makes it worse. My tear ducts soon wash the sting away, but I am tense again.

I try to relax. I take a deep breath of the stuffy air. I can feel drops of water that had condensed on the tank's ceiling falling on my body.

My mind races, trying to recapture what I was dreaming a few minutes earlier.

Sometime later, I let my muscles relax and my head drop under the water almost up to my eyes. I close my eyes. I am at the beach, laying back in the sand and taking in the heat of the sun. Then, I am at a picnic in a park full of trees. It is cool and pleasant.

There are three sharp raps on the tank door. Schonbrock said this would signal that I had 15 minutes left.

I know I will not get back to my pleasant, semiconscious state again, so I float and wonder if I should get out now.

Finally, after what seems like another 45 minutes, the tank door is opened and I welcome the cold, fresh air and the sound of human voices.

Except for sore eyes and a sore neck from floating my head at an odd angle, I do feel somewhat relaxed. Or is it just thankfulness that the experience is over? Maybe I would have been better off sitting in a bathtub of hot water for an hour reading Hemingway or Dickens.

I shower, get dressed and leave. Outside, sore neck or not, the world does seem fresher, brighter and less hectic.

WE SAW HIM RISE STRAIGHT UP TO HEAVEN!

"Why are you frightened?" Jesus asked. "Why do you doubt that it is really I? Look at My hands! Look at My feet! you can see that it is I Myself! Touch Me and make sure that I am not a ghost! For ghosts don't have bodies, as you see that I do!"

As He spoke, He held out His hands for them to see (the marks of the nails), and showed them His feet. Still they stood there undecided, filled with joy and doubt. Then He asked them, "Do you have anything here to eat?" They gave Him a piece of broiled fish, and He ate it as they watched!

Then He said, "When I was with you before, don't you remember My telling you that everything written about Me by Moses and the prophets and in the Psalms must all come true?"

Then He opened their minds to understand at last these many Scriptures! And He said, "Yes, it was written long ago that the Messiah must suffer and die and rise again from the dead on the third day; and that this message of salvation should be taken from Jerusalem to all the nations: There is forgiveness of sins for all who turn to Me. You have seen these prophecies come true. And now I will send the Holy Spirit upon you, just as My Father promised. Don't begin telling others yet—stay here in the city until the Holy Spirit comes and fills you with power from heaven."

Then Jesus led them out along the road to Bethany, and lifting His hands to heaven, He blessed them, and then began rising into the sky, and went on to heaven. And they worshipped Him, and returned to Jerusalem filled with mighty joy, and were continually in the Temple, praising God.

MENTAL HEALTH UPDATE

Role of stress not clear cut

By KENNETH H. WOLF, MSSW, SP

Much is being written and said about the role of the "stress of modern life" in the formation of mental health problems. Stress defies an accurate, all-inclusive definition because what may be stressful to one person may be taken completely in stride by another. Some life events, however, clearly impose physical and psychological stress on individuals and families.

Some of these events include death, divorce, separation, loss of employment, significant debt and legal difficulties. There are several different "stress inventories" which attempt to assign a score to quantify the total significant amount of stress in a person's life.

The difficulty with such approaches is, as previously noted, that many items on such scales may not be stressful to large numbers of people.

An example from one of the stress scales which illustrates this point is the question about whether or not a person entered into a large debt such as a home mortgage within the past year. Such large debts are assumed to be stressful, and an affirmative answer to this question increases the person's total stress score.

However, a debt such as a home mortgage may also be stress-reducing because of the satisfaction gained from home ownership or the satisfaction gained from obtaining a lower interest rate than would be available at a later date.

Whether or not a particular life event is experienced as stressful is dependent on several factors. Among such factors are a person's past experience in dealing with similar events, a person's general personality structure, environmental support such as family and friends, and the presence of a religious orientation to life.

Some reactions to stress are immediate and others are delayed. Immediate reactions occur soon after the stress is experienced and may include intense anxiety, pounding heart, profuse perspiration, depression, sleep disturbance or appetite disturbance. A stress reaction affects a person's physical as well as psychological state. Chronic stress may produce stomach problems, intestinal problems, higher blood pressure or headaches. Delayed reactions to stress usually occur after the stressful event has passed.

Usually, delayed reactions are associated with very overwhelming stress, such as situations of multiple deaths or of being held as a prisoner or hostage. Such stress is so overwhelming in most cases that the individual's psychological defenses may mobilize to completely block the person's experience of the fear and anxiety during the event itself.

It is later when the stress is lessened and the person's defenses relax that symptoms of stress occur. Delayed symptoms may include rage reactions, withdrawal, panic attacks, nightmares and obvious changes in a person's personality. Such delayed reactions are being seen in some combat veterans and will probably be seen in some of the recently freed hostages.

Many stress reactions are resolved without any professional treatment being needed. When symptoms are severe, long-lasting, or significantly interfere with a person's functioning, professional help should be sought. Of course, since a chronic stress reaction may produce physical problems, such physical problems require the attention of one's physician as well as psychotherapy or counseling.

Psychotherapy affords the individual the opportunity to determine the sources of his stress, develop choices for dealing with the stress, and express the wide range of emotions which are inevitably associated with stressful life events. The listening ear of a trained counselor or psychother-pist can help the person restore psychological equilibrium.

Helping the cities

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen has given some sound advice to cities that may run into money problems before long if they don't watch their step.

Bentsen, who chaired the Joint Economic Committee last year, said financially troubled cities would do better to seek assistance from their state government before running to the federal government.

The senator specifically cited New York City's request for federal financial assistance in 1978 when the New York state government had a $2 billion surplus.

"We're going to see more and more of these Northeastern and Midwestern cities coming to the federal government wanting bailouts, and I really don't think that's the solution we should be going to," Bentsen said. We agree with the senator, but we would go even a step further.

The federal government has been relied on too much by the nation's cities and the result has been a mushrooming bureaucracy that is costly and largely ineffective. A byproduct of that reliance has been the relaxation of standards formerly maintained by the cities. There has been more sloppiness and waste as a result. The philosophy apparently has become "if we fail ourselves, Uncle Sam will pull us out."

Unfortunately such practice has resulted in the federal bureaucracy extending its stranglehold to areas in which it doesn't belong.

President Reagan talked about states' rights both prior to and since his election, and appears to be working toward returning some rights and responsibilities to the states that rightfully belong to them. Sen. Bentsen is correct in saying that financially troubled cities should first seek help from their state governments.

They would be wise, though, to first look to the future and plan on first helping themselves. Any government is a servant of man, but also can be misused by man. The trick is to get the most out of government without going too far.

Sen. Bentsen noted that a policy for dealing with the expected financial emergencies of the Northeastern and Midwestern cities needs to be developed and carried out consistently.

That's a good idea. The federal government has to learn when to say no and now is as good a time as any.

'Benefits' of detente

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger spoke with deep skepticism about the "benefits" of detente with the Soviet Union when he addressed NATO leaders in Bonn, West Germany.

During the Cold War in the 1950s, he said, Soviet defense investment — the money spent on actual military hardware — remained roughly constant. Since 1963, during the detente period, Soviet defense investment shot up from just over $40 billion a year to nearly $70 billion — both figures expressed in 1972 prices, he said.

In that period the Soviet Union outspent the United States by some $335 billion. At the same time, U.S. defense investment declined and the balance of power shifted in favor of Moscow. "If this be progress, we cannot afford it," Weinberger said.

The USSR had managed to convince Western public opinion that detente was a good thing by "singing songs of accommodation abroad while marching to martial music at home," Weinberger concluded.

He might have added that the Soviets are now marching to martial music away from home also, as in Afghanistan.

New 'ruckus' over abortion may serve to educate people

WASHINGTON — The pro-life movement is justified and smart in pushing for a human life bill with all deliberate speed. After eight years of fighting the tide, pro-lifers now have political power and should use it. They've been through worse than the ruckus developing around the Senate hearings on the question of when human life begins.

Abortion is a grizzly tragedy, performed in great volume in the U.S. The Alan Guttmacher Institute, which believes abortion is socially desirable, estimates that in the U.S. there were at least 1.5 million abortions in 1979 — a new record — and that means 30 abortions for every 1,000 women of reproductive age.

My hunch is that this institute, affiliated with Planned Parenthood, is disappointed that Scotland, which has few Catholics, has the world's lowest abortion rate — 8 per 1,000. The goal of the pro-abortion groups must be the Cuban rate of 52 or possibly even Bulgaria's 68, the world's highest rate.

Anyway, President Reagan is pro-life, and Congress is far more respectful of the movement than it was one year ago. So pro-life legislation has been introduced, employing the 14th Amendment, to establish, in the states, personhood for the unborn child.

Pro-abortion groups argue that the question was settled by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1973. But Congressman Henry Hyde (R-Ill.) points out that if Congress accepted every Supreme Court decision as final, blacks would still be chattel (Dred Scott decision), and there would be no Voting Rights Act (the court once upheld literacy tests). Besides, in its 1973 decision, the Court disclaimed any sure knowledge about when life began and was entitled to protection.

The hearings, conducted by Sen. John East (R-N.C.), are intended to help Congress determine when life does begin. Pro-lifers claim it begins at conception, when the fertilized egg implants itself on the wall of the uterus. Pro-abortion folk claim it doesn't begin until birth.

They also argue that if pro-lifers have their way on the conception issue, birth control will be stopped. Not so, say pro-lifers, because a condom or diaphragm prevents sperm from uniting with ovum. An IUD device (some dangerous, by the way) is considered an abortifacient — an abortion causer — because it intercepts the fertilized egg trying to implant itself on the uterus.

The distinction between fertilization and conception, important as it is, would be a matter left for the states, if the bill was passed. The Human Life Bill, in effect, sends the abortion question back to the states to handle. The likelihood is that the states, following constitutional direction, would not permit abortions unless the mother's life were in danger, because they would be obliged to protect the personhood of the unborn child.

That prospect delights pro-lifers, who are also happy that President Reagan has appointed Dr. C. Everett Koop, chief surgeon of Philadelphia's

U.S. aid to Pakistan may lead to disaster

WASHINGTON — Several weeks ago, I warned that the United States was inviting another Iran-style disaster in the Middle East by cozying up to Pakistan's hated dictator, Gen. Muhammad Zia ul-Haq.

Since then, according to the latest intelligence reports, the situation has deteriorated inside Pakistan. Yet the Reagan administration, instead of backing away from this potential nightmare, is planning to commit the United States even more deeply to Zia's unpopular, repressive regime.

Secret foreign intelligence cables reviewed by my associate Jack Mitchell reveal that the "Shah Syndrome" is already beginning to materialize in Pakistan: American citizens have been assaulted in broad daylight on the streets of the country's largest cities — for the sole reason that they are identified with the United States, which is supporting their detested dictator.

Surrounded by shameless yes-men, Zia has delayed three times the free elections he promised, has instituted unprecedented martial law and has arrested and tortured thousands. He is caught in a vicious circle of his own making. The more he cracks down on his countrymen, the more unpopular he is and the more vocal his opponents become. This then causes him to tighten the screws still more.

But though Zia sits precariously on a powder keg, White House policymakers seem determined to provide him with the latest in military technology. The reasons are the same as those advanced to justify support of the shah: The United States needs a "dependable ally" in the region to confront the Soviet Union, and Saudi Arabia must be protected to assure a continued flow of oil.

But diplomatic sources warn that time may be running out on Zia, just as it did for the shah. Pakistan's highest judges have refused to go along with the general's kangaroo courts, in which defendants are convicted without benefit of witnesses, lawyers or appeals. Lawyers have also shown their distaste for the dictatorship by openly supporting prominent colleagues who have been arrested on trumped-up charges and tortured.

The recent burning of a DC-10 at the Karachi airport was officially termed an accident, but government insiders say it was sabotage.

Still the repression continues. Newspapers carry photographs of cruel floggings, and the possibility has been discussed of punishing adultery by publicly stoning the transgressors to death.

Education is deteriorating; Zia and his generals have closed down schools as a means of curbing opposition. The government has also increased censorship of the media.

Yet it is this hated dictatorship that the White House seems determined to identify with, trying to prop up Zia's shaky regime with hundreds of millions of dollars in military aid. If there are dissenting views in the administration, they have been effectively silenced by Secretary of State

'Peace is too dangerous to be left to civilians'

I may not have been reading the newspapers too carefully lately, but I haven't seen the word "peace" mentioned by one person in the Reagan administration.

When I brought this up with someone on the Reagan team, he said it wasn't true. "We talk about peace all the time. But we don't make a big deal of it."

"How do you talk about peace?" I asked him.

"We've called for the placing of neutron bombs in Europe, the installation of an MX system, revival of the B-1 bomber, the sale of AWACS to Saudi Arabia, and the building of a three-ocean Navy. If that isn't talking about peace, I don't know what is."

"Come again?"

"You can't have peace unless you have strength. The more weapons you have, the less chance there is of someone starting another war. It's the people who talk about peace all the time that are endangering it."

"Does the Reagan administration have an embargo on the word peace?"

"We're not censoring anyone, but if some high administration official wants to use it in a speech, he'd have to clear it with the White House."

"Why?"

"It's very dangerous to talk about peace because we could be sending the wrong signal to the Soviets. "You believe the more you talk about going to war with the Russians, the more impressed they'll be that you are seeking peace."

Art Buchwald

"Exactly. Everytime we announce a new weapon, they know our only reason for building it is to assure ourselves that they will think twice about starting a war."

"But suppose someone in the Kremlin believes that you are building the weapon for offensive purposes and decides to test us. What do we do then?"

"We go with everything we've got. If they can't read our signals properly they're in a lot of trouble."

"Then they go with everything they've got, and there goes your peace strategy."

"The Soviets talk about peace all the time, but all they're doing is preparing for war. We talk about war all the time, but we're really preparing for peace. If we talked about peace they would be sure we wanted to start a war."

"Couldn't we just have one person in the administration who thinks in terms of peace?"

"We do, but nobody listens to him."

"What's his name?"

"We can't tell you or the Hawks on The Hill will want to fire him."

"There are some Americans who are getting very nervous about all this war talk."

"You can't worry about them. There have been peaceniks since time immemorial. But they haven't learned anything from history. The only way we can have peace in our time is to make sure everyone has enough stuff to kill everybody else."

"So the Reagan administration believes the road to peace is to arm everybody."

"Not everybody. Just our friends. By giving AWACS to the Saudis we are assuring their peace."

"How do you assure the Israelis their peace if they know the Saudis have AWACS?"

"We supply the Israelis with long-range fighter planes to shoot down the AWACS."

"And ad infinitum?"

"Something like that. To paraphrase General Custer, 'Peace is too dangerous to be left to civilians.'"

The four things commonly held most dear to all God-fearing, patriotic Americans are Mom, the flag, apple pie and fixed home mortgage interest rates.

I WISH WE WERE AS SURE OF ANYTHING AS THEY ARE OF EVERYTHING —

NATO allies harmonize differences

ROME (AP) — The United States and its North Atlantic allies have harmonized their political differences by agreeing to a unified approach to the Soviet Union that emphasizes both dialogue and deterrence, American officials say.

The communique issued Tuesday after the NATO foreign ministers' meeting contained phrasing reflecting both the hawkish sentiments of the Reagan administration and the pro-detente attitudes of the European allies.

U.S. officials, speaking privately, said for a NATO communique, the references to the Soviet Union were unusually harsh — and clearly were the handiwork of Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

The declaration called on the Soviet Union to "abandon the disturbing buildup" of its military strength and to stop resorting to "fear and intimidation."

It described the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan as "totally unacceptable" and said a Soviet invasion of Poland would have the "gravest consequences" for international relations.

The American delegation also won an allied commitment "to make available all the resources needed" to improve NATO defenses.

The 1979 NATO agreement to deploy U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe was described as "more essential than ever" because of Moscow's deployment of SS-20 missiles aimed at Western European targets.

The allies agreed to that language despite growing sentiment in Western Europe against the American nuclear deployment. Anti-missile activists fear the deployment will increase the possibility of nuclear holocaust on the continent.

The Europeans were willing to go along with the anti-Soviet tone of the document because the United States yielded on an issue of vital importance to them. Despite reservations by some Reagan administration officials, Haig told the allies his government is willing to open talks with Moscow before the end of the year to limit the nuclear missiles stationed in Europe.

U.S. officials accompanying Haig said there is virtually no possibility of an agreement before the United States is scheduled to begin deploying the missiles in 1983. They said they expect the negotiations with the Russians to be protracted.

Plane wreckage due closer look

HOWIE-IN-THE-HILLS, Fla. (AP) — Air Force officials have been called in to examine what appears to be the wreckage of a World War II fighter plane emerging from a drying-out irrigation pond in a nearby citrus grove.

The water, already about 150 feet below its normal level because of dry weather, was to be drained today so officials could get a closer look at the wreckage.

Linda Folsom, owner of the pond, said Air Force officials told her not to talk about it, but she said they expect to find the remains of a 40-year-old fighter plane. So far, she said, she has pulled a radio, machine gun and other equipment from the water.

Parts of the aircraft first became visible Sunday, nearby growers said.

Before authorities sealed off the pond, Basil Dunn showed visitors around the shoreline. His son-in-law, Ray Kemp, owns a section of the grove.

"That's the first thing we found, what you would call a flap," said Dunn, pointing out visible parts. "When we first saw it, Ray said, 'I believe that's a piece of airplane.' I said, 'Nah,' and then we pumped some water."

That left some more pieces visible around the edges: a universal joint, a piece of wing, a wing flap, a fire extinguisher, a radio, a 20-millimeter gun, a compass and a manifold gauge, he said.

But still, no one knows why no one knew the plane was there all those years.

"Seems to me that if it went down and the pilot was aboard, he would have told them where it is," Dunn said. "Well, you wonder if the boy is still in there because he'd have walked back and told them where he left it."

Chuck Whigham, flight safety manager for Patrick Air Force Base in North Florida, said archives' workers weren't able to determine whether a fighter was lost in Lake County during the war. About 2,000 planes were lost across the nation during the World War II era, and many are suspected to have crashed in Florida, he said.

Reagan dumps last element of Carter system

WASHINGTON (AP) — The last element of a judicial selection system that former President Carter praised as helping him put a record number of blacks and women on the federal bench is gone.

On Tuesday, President Reagan abolished four panels established by his predecessor to help find nominees for vacancies on the 11 federal circuit courts and several special courts.

By executive order, Reagan ended the United States Circuit Judge Nominating Commission, the Committee on Selection of Federal Judicial Officers, the Judicial Nominating Commission for the District of Puerto Rico and the United States Tax Court Nominating Commission.

The Circuit Judge Nominating Commission established by Carter set up citizens' panels for each of the 11 federal circuit courts to screen and recommend candidates.

Carter and top officials in his administration claimed during the 1980 campaign that the citizens' panels helped them appoint a record number of blacks and women to the bench and reduced the role of politics in selecting judges. Republicans said the politics just had been moved to a new forum.

Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair said Tuesday that there are nine vacancies on the circuit courts.

"We don't think this superstructure is needed to meet our goal of finding well-qualified candidates, especially when we want to move expeditiously to fill these nine posts," he said.

DeCair said the administration will consult with senators, bar associations and "a wide spectrum of people in the legal community and public life" to fill the seats. "We would welcome recommendations from any interested group, including those representing women and blacks," he said.

The policy for selecting judges for future circuit vacancies is under review, DeCair said, but the administration is unlikely to return to the system abolished Tuesday.

Earlier this year, the administration returned to the tradition of permitting senators from the president's political party — in Reagan's case, Republicans — to recommend potential nominees for federal district court judgeships.

Attorney General William French Smith asked the senators to submit three to five names for most key posts. But in some cases, the administration has rejected each of the first suggestions and asked for more.

Thirty-seven vacancies now exist at the U.S. district court level, where the Carter administration had pressured, but not required, senators to establish their own citizens' panels.

Carter's guidelines for senators recommending district court judges stressed the need to seek qualified minority candidates. The guidelines issued by Smith earlier this year make no mention of special efforts to find minority and female candidates.

U.S. considers expelling diplomats

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration may expel Libyan diplomats in Washington because of concern over that country's support for international terrorism and its military moves in northern Africa, it was reported today.

The Washington Post said the administration also feared that Libyan diplomats here might try to eliminate Libyans in the United States who are foes of the African country's leader, Moammar Khadafi.

Eight Libyan dissidents were murdered last year in Great Britain, Italy and Greece and a Libyan dissident was shot last October in Colorado.

The newspaper said no final decision has been made, but it quoted one unidentified official as saying the expulsion may come in the near future.

The United States has not stationed any diplomats in Libya since May 1980, when pro-Iranian mobs burned the U.S. embassy in Tripoli, but diplomatic relations between the two countries have not been officially broken.

Libya is the third-largest supplier of oil to the United States.

Libya's diplomatic mission here is called a "people's bureau" since it was overtaken by Libyan students, with Khadafi's approval, in September 1979.

Ali Ahmed Houderi, Libya's chief diplomat in the United States, told the Post that he was unaware of any plans to close the embassy.

"We're not anticipating anything, but if anything should happen, we would abide by it" and leave peacefully, he was quoted as saying. "If it were to happen — God forbid — we are not going to take it lightly."

Houderi said there are 60 to 70 people connected with the mission here.

Isn't the bottom line of any diet the number of pounds a person is able to lose? — Cindy

Dear Cindy: The advantages of a program of weight control should be measured in more than the number of pounds lost. In many respects, devising a diet that guarantees weight loss is a simple matter. Substituting raw vegetables and diet sodas for a week, as you suggest, will produce a loss in weight, but so will a diet of cottage cheese and water, or grapefruit and black coffee, or any similar combination.

But how realistic is it to expect anyone to adhere to such diets for any length of time? What happens when the person reverts to his or her usual manner of eating? And what is the cost to the person in terms of health in following a diet that may be low in calories, but is also low in nutrients? These factors should also enter into the computations that make up the bottom line.

My primary concern with my patients is their health. Although many of people who come to me to lose weight want to do so for cosmetic reasons — and I don't minimize the importance of this — as a doctor, my main focus is their health. Therefore, the diets I prescribe for my patients who have to lose weight must meet three criteria: First, it must be low in calories so that weight loss does occur; second, it must be nutritionally well-balanced so that it helps the patient maintain or improve his or her health; and third, it must be a diet that the patient will be able to follow with only some slight modification once the desired weight is achieved.

I made these points years ago in my book, "Doctor Solomon's Easy, No-Risk Diet," and I have repeated them many times since: "All crash fad diets eliminate some important nutrients your body needs for optimal health.... What you want to do is to develop lifelong, sound eating habits, coupled with good exercise. It is impossible to do this on unbalanced diets."

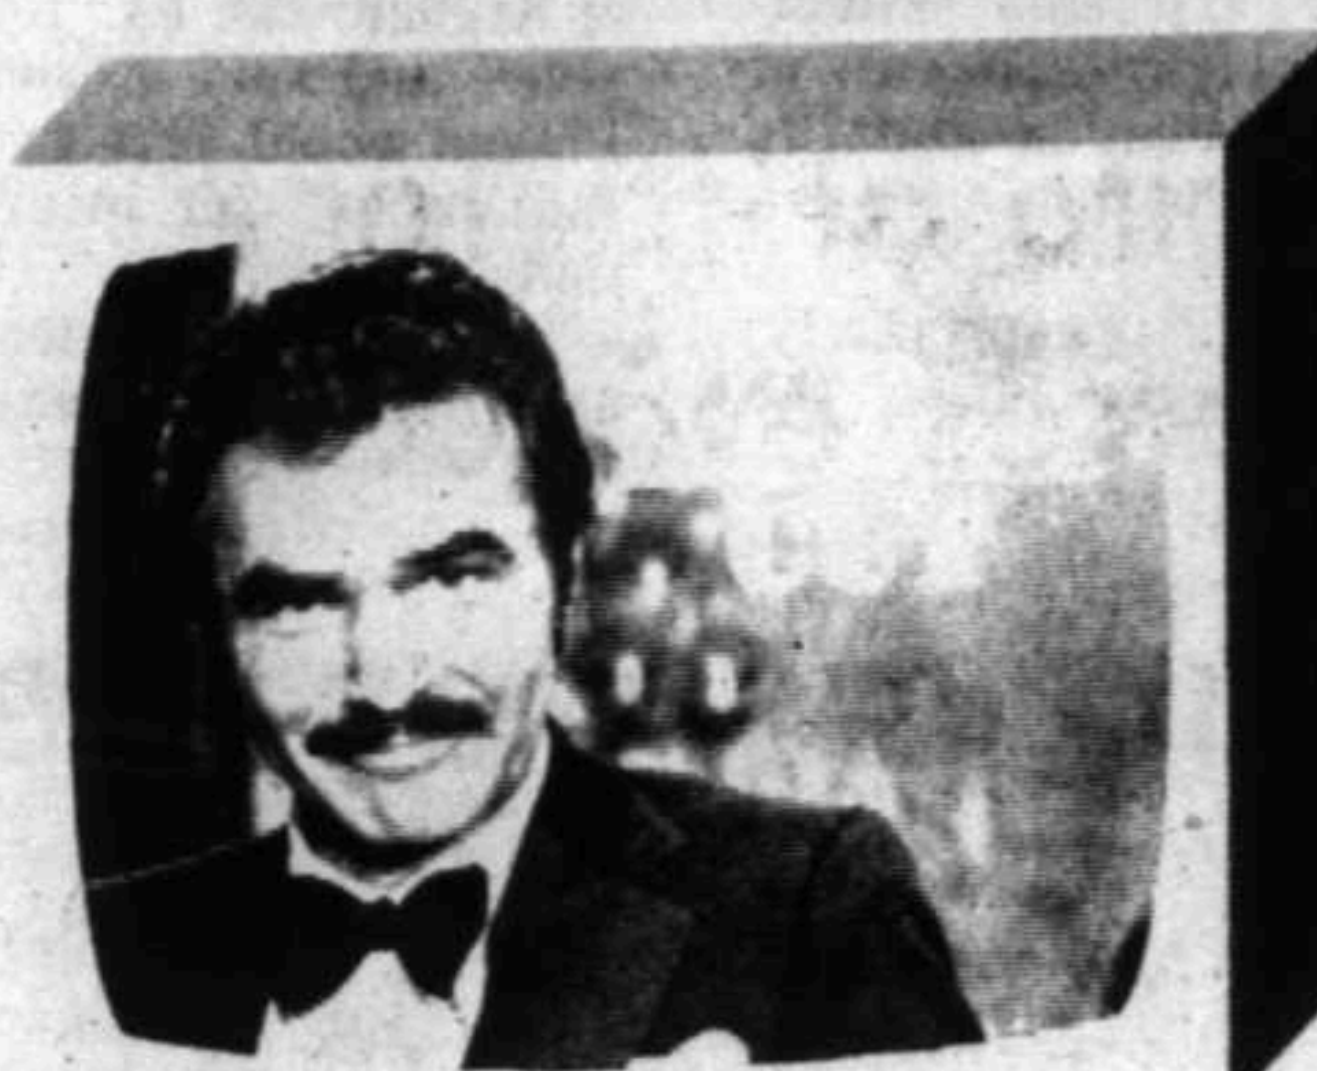

Nothing that has happened during the past several years since this was written has caused me to change my mind. On the contrary, my feelings about the possible harmful effects of fad diets have been confirmed. It is a theme I have repeated in other books I have had published or still in preparation.

If a patient follows my instructions, unless he has an uncorrected medical problem, he should lose weight and have an enhanced feeling of well-being, but I do not deal in fad diets or miracle cures. That is my bottom line.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Anniversary passes quietly on Ohio's Kent State campus

KENT, Ohio (AP) — The campus of Kent State University was quiet this week as 1,200 students marked the 11th anniversary of a National Guards shooting that killed four students.

Unlike the 10th anniversary last year and earlier memorials, Monday's observance was held without loud anti-war protests. Some concern was expressed over U.S. involvement in El Salvador, but not on a large scale.

Classes at the northeastern Ohio campus were suspended from 11:50 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. to allow students to take part in memorial events, which included speeches by two actors from a TV movie broadcast in February.

The memorial was sponsored by the May 4th Task Force, a student organization.

About 600 people marched Sunday night in the annual Candlelight Procession sponsored by the Center for Peaceful Change. An all-night vigil at the site of the shootings followed.

Many of the students who visited the site of the shootings were in elementary or junior high when four students were killed and nine wounded by Guard gunfire on May 4, 1970.

Alien flow from Canada into U.S. a steady stream

DETROIT (AP) — They aren't coming in "hordes," but illegal aliens are funneling into the United States from Canada in a steady stream. Frustrated immigration officials say little can be done to prevent it.

"They like to use Mexico or Florida as much as they do us, but the reason they're using this country (Canada) is convenience," said Staff Sgt. David Morrison of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Toronto.

"We do not require people to have visas to get in as visitors," Morrison said. "But the U.S. requires them of visitors from most countries. They're taking advantage of that open border."

The aliens using Detroit and Buffalo, N.Y., as their ports of entry are largely from the Caribbean and West Indies, officials said.

"For the past decade our immigration problems have been increasing," said Paul McKinnon, Immigration and Naturalization Service district director at Detroit. "Just look at the world situation. There are millions of refugees in the world ... and they want to come here."

However, he said strict restrictions make immigration difficult, and "those who hold little hope of getting here legally will do whatever they can to get in."

RCMP Cpl. Stan Bass said Canadian officials are doing as much as they can to help U.S. officials, but "we can only do as much as we're administratively allowed to do."

Aliens who have a legal visa allowing them to visit Canada have not broken any law until they cross into the United States without permission, he said.

Fire at factory forces evacuation

HARRISBURG, Ore. (AP) — Barrels of an industrial solvent exploded in a factory here, spewing a black toxic cloud over nearby neighborhoods and forcing the temporary evacuation of about 200 residents, authorities said.

No injuries were reported in the Tuesday night explosion and subsequent fire at D-G Shelter Products Co., which makes wood and plastic moldings. Authorities said the evacuees were allowed to return home after the fire was brought under control about 9 p.m.

"Everybody has been notified that it's safe to return home," said Susan Hanf, Harrisburg fire dispatcher.

But she said, "they'll be out there for a couple of days mopping up."

Harrisburg Fire Department spokesman Warren Cramer said the fire started after 65-gallon barrels of acetone, an industrial solvent, and containers of paint and thinner exploded, sending a cloud of black smoke hundreds of feet into the air.

Authorities said nearby residents were asked to leave their homes because acetone is toxic when burned.

There was no explanation why the barrels exploded.

No one was in the factory at the time of the explosion and fire, authorities said.

Milburn to speak at UTPB commencement ceremony

ODESSA — Recently appointed University of Texas System Board of Regent Beryl Buckley Milburn of Austin will speak at the annual commencement ceremony for The University of Texas of the Permian Basin at 2 p.m. May 16 in the gymnasium. More than 350 members of the class of 1981 have been invited to participate in the ceremony.

Mrs. Milburn, who was appointed to the board in January 1981, will be on hand to confer degrees on those participating in the commencement.

Mrs. Milburn served as chairman of the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System from 1979 to 1981, relinquishing that position upon her appointment to the UT System Board of Regents. She holds a bachelor's degree in Spanish and French from UT-Austin and did graduate work in government at UT-Austin.

She served as vice chairman for the Texas Constitutional Revision Commission in 1973 and was named one of "Five Outstanding Women of Austin" in 1974.

Mrs. Milburn is a director of the City National Bank of Austin and is a member of the National Association of Bank Women.

In 1976-77, she was a member of the U.S. Advisory Commission on International Education and Cultural Affairs, and in 1978, she served as regional chairman of the Clements for Governor Campaign. In 1979, she was co-chairman of the Texas Inaugural Committee.

Nurturing tomorrow today

"The Midland-Lee Youth Centers is a non-profit corporation originally formed in Midland in 1945 as the 'Midland Junior Canteen.' The purpose of the corporation is to provide a meeting place with wholesome recreation and entertainment, under proper guidance and supervision, for the students of Midland and Lee High."

— The Midland-Lee Youth Centers, Inc.

It started with a dream — one of providing a gathering place for Midland's youth. The dream became a reality.

At the close of World War II, a rundown U.S.O. building on Main Street became the first youth center — the Midland Junior Canteen. Because of Midland's growth at that time, another location had to be found. The teen-agers located a vacant church and parents acted as chaperones for the activities held there.

When the city took over a nearby deserted army air field, it donated the officers' clubbuilding to Midland's youth. The building was placed on a lot, across from Midland High at B Street and Illinois Avenue, leased from the First Presbyterian Church. Eventually, even this facility became too small.

The current Midland High Youth Center was completed in 1954 at a cost of more than $75,000. The land it sits on was donated by Mr. and Mrs. James H. Chapple. When it was built, the available finances fell far short of the estimated costs and once again the people of Midland responded to the teen-agers' need for assistance. Clubs and individuals donated furnishings and equipment all the way from a mail box to a pool table.

Today the center is debt free, owning the building and all the contents.

Lee High Youth Center was built in the 1960s after the school was completed. Even though the centers are built next to each high school and the activities at each center around school functions, neither is a part of the Midland Independent School District. Funds for their maintenance and continued operation, other than custodial services which are provided for by MISD, are obtained through $7-per-year membership dues, snack bar sales, special projects including a yearly fund raiser and the United Way.

The centers' board of directors is composed of nine parents from Midland High and nine parents from Lee High who serve for a three-year term. Service is on a voluntary basis.

This year's major fund raiser is Saturday night. Country Western entertainers Tom T. Hall and Bill Anderson will appear at Chaparral Center for an 8 p.m. concert. Tickets may be purchased at area record stores and at Chaparral Center. Proceeds from this concert will go to keeping the youth center doors open for yet another year for Midland's youth.

DEATHS

Mrs. Smallwood

SLATON — Services for Mrs. G.N. (Tennie) Smallwood, 89, of Slaton, mother of Mrs. Billy Ramsey of Midland, were Monday in Englund's Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Robert Moore, pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was at Englewood Cemetery in Slaton.

Mrs. Smallwood died Saturday in a Slaton hospital.

She was born July 31, 1891, in Frost in Navarro County.

Other survivors include five sons, 15 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Inmates spend night in field to protest prison conditions

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — About 15 inmates in the Texas Department of Correction's Eastham Unit spent the night in the farm fields protesting prison conditions, the third such demonstration in the last two weeks.

TDC officials Tuesday confirmed that the inmates, who presented no demands were part of about 100 inmates who took part Friday in the protest at the facility, located in Houston County.

Funeral arrangements pending for AP writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Funeral arrangements were pending today for Robert C. "Rob" Wood, a veteran Associated Press writer and administrator for the past 24 years.

Wood died Tuesday in Memorial City hospital after a lengthy illness. He was 53.

A graduate of Baylor University and Mexia High School, Wood joined the AP's Albuquerque bureau in 1957. He served there and in Phoenix before being named AP Political Writer for California on Sept. 4, 1964.

Wood, who co-authored one of the earliest biographies of Sen. Barry Goldwater, was picked to join the AP's Special Writing Task Force that was formed in the 1960s to cover major news stories across the country. He went to the Raleigh, N.C., bureau as correspondent in 1965, and worked at the Columbia, S.C., bureau before moving to the Dallas Bureau in 1975.

He had worked in the Houston bureau for four years prior to his death.

Before joining the AP, Wood worked from 1950 to 1952 at the Waco News-Tribune as a police reporter, then joined the Houston Chronicle where he worked until 1956 as a sportswriter.

He also worked at the Albuquerque Journal before joining the AP. Survivors include his wife, Johnnie, his mother, Mrs. Katie Wood of McGregor, a son and a daughter.

Parkview Hospital to sponsor blood pressure screening booth

Parkview Hospital will sponsor a free blood pressure screening booth at the Midland Park Mall Saturday as a kick-off of both National Hospital Week and National High Blood Pressure Month.

"Thousands of people suffer from high blood pressure and may not even know it," Administrator Steve Wallace said. "We feel that through such basic screening programs in the community, we may possibly be able to assist our community citizens in spotting a high blood pressure problem and referring them to their family physician."

The booth will be open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and will be staffed by registered nurses from the hospital.

Basic blood pressure and pulse information will be taken and given to each citizen participating in the program.

"Midlanders should take this information to their doctors if our preliminary screening indicates a high level of blood pressure," Wallace said.

Suzuki urges greater U.S.-Japan cooperation

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States and Japan must redouble efforts to resolve economic conflicts and deal cooperatively with "the chronic threats to world peace," says Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki.

In an address Tuesday to the Japan Society, a non-profit public affairs group, Suzuki called for a renewed spirit of cooperation between his country and the United States, saying the two nations together can build "the world peace and order that is our shared vision."

"Differing as we do in the basic conditions of national existence ... and in the trends of our domestic economies, we could not hope to avoid completely occasional problems between us," the prime minister said.

But Suzuki made no direct mention of U.S. objections to the growing influence of Japanese automobile imports on the beleaguered U.S. auto market. Last week the Japanese government announced voluntary restraints on auto exports to the United States, apparently resolving a possible point of conflict in advance of Suzuki's visit Thursday with President Reagan.

"I am confident that growing mutual understanding — through constant and close dialogue, frank expression of each other's views, and mutual concessions and adjustments of interests — will eventually enable us to resolve any problems amicably," Suzuki said.

Suzuki, who took office last July, said he would seek to give Japan a "fresh start" toward its goal of fulfilling its "international responsibilities to reinforce and consolidate the peace in our increasingly vulnerable world community."

Japan has come under increasing U.S. pressure recently to spend more of its gross national product on defense. Suzuki made no direct reference to his country's defense policy, although the subject was expected to be among the issues discussed in his meeting with Reagan and other government officials in Washington.

Shooting suspect says he has no Libyan ties

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — The 47-year-old former Green Beret suspected of shooting a Libyan student at Colorado State University has no ties to Libya as FBI agents claim, says the man's attorney.

Eugene A. Tafuya was arrested last month at his home in Truth or Consequences, N.M., and is being held in Albuquerque on $1 million bond in connection with the alleged shooting of Faisal Zagallai last Oct. 14 in Fort Collins.

Law enforcement officials in Fort Collins and FBI agents are investigating the possibility that the Libyan government may have hired Tafuya to kill Zagallai. The attempt on Zagallai's life failed.

Attorney Ira Robinson said his client "takes strong exception to the overtones of international intrigue that have been drummed by federal and state authorities in Colorado."

Robinson, a former district attorney in Albuquerque, spoke during a hearing Monday before District Judge Frank Allen in Albuquerque.

Allen has set May 18 to hear legal arguments on the extradition of Tafuya, who is resisting his return to Fort Collins, Colo., to stand trial on attempted first-degree

DEAR ABBY

No deferred payments here

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In your recent column concerning premarital contracts, I'm glad you agreed that they made sense.

I offer my own experience as a testimonial. I have been widowed twice, run a very successful business and at 32 am now married to a wonderful man of 56. We have a premarital contract and it's no problem at all. I gave my husband the beautiful 2,000-acre ranch we live on and an allowance for life. So far it's been a perfect marriage. I work at my business all day and come home to a chilled martini and a gourmet dinner prepared by my husband, who's a marvelous cook. While he jokes about being a "kept man," I know he is delighted with this arrangement.

He putters around the ranch and plays golf. He is a wonderful father to the children of my second marriage. On our first anniversary I gave him a paid-up country club membership for life and I find myself continuously buying him presents to show my devotion. This is the best business deal I ever made! — HAPPY IN SANTA YNEZ

DEAR HAPPY: And your husband made a pretty good deal, too!

DEAR ABBY: Concerning premarital agreements: Aren't you doomed to failure if you begin a marriage by anticipating divorce? — ANN ARBOR ATTORNEY

DEAR ATTORNEY: Not necessarily. In some cases it's better to anticipate divorce than to be surprised by bankruptcy.

DEAR ABBY: I know I must have many sympathizers on this one. I need some up-to-date advice on how to look feminine and glamorous at the office without letting men think I am on the make.

If I wear high-fashion clothes that flatter my figure and bring out the best in me, all the old creeps (never the nice eligible men) make passes at me. If I dress to repel the old creeps, I creep further into old-maidhood. I am 30. Any suggestions? — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: "Nice, eligible men" never make passes at anyone. A guide to appropriate office attire includes a long list of don'ts:

Don't strive for "glamour" in the office. Femininity, yes. Glamour, no! Don't wear shorts, or too-short skirts. Don't wear plunging necklines or anything skin tight. See-through blouses are a no-no. Leave the junk jewelry at home. Don't wear cocktail clothes to work. Pants are fine if they are well-tailored and worn with a matching jacket. Lounging pajamas, jumpsuits or jeans with T-shirts are inappropriate.

If you follow the above suggestions, and the old creeps still make passes at you, you'd better check the look in your eye.

Ten missionaries seek converts to the ERA

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Nine women and a man, modeling their technique to that of Mormon missionaries, set off Monday to win converts to the Equal Rights Amendment.

"The church sends missionaries to share their message with non-Mormons around the world. We, too, have an important message to share. The door-to-door effort will give us the opportunity to deliver the message about the ERA, to share facts that are not being heard in Utah," said Rebecca Fenstermaker, coordinator of the project sponsored by the National Organization for Women.

Leaders of the Salt Lake-based church have opposed the proposed amendment, contending it would threaten the family. The church lists about three-fourths of the Utah's population as members of the church.

Ms. Fenstermaker, a Salt Lake Mormon, said the missionaries will "expose the church hierarchy's political involvement in opposing constitutional equality for women."

She contends the church's activities against the ERA have blocked ratification of the amendment in Utah, Nevada, Arizona, Missouri, Virginia, Illinois and Florida.

She said they expect to find that a "substantial portion" of the church members support the ERA.

"I don't know what she means by 'substantial,' but I suspect that there are actually very few, if any, faithful Latter-day Saints who oppose the prophet (church President Spencer W. Kimball) on this issue," said church spokesman Don LeFevre.

"Considering our comparatively minuscule numbers, it's rather flattering that our critics give the church credit for damming the progress of the amendment," LeFevre said. The church had 2.6 million on its 1979 U.S. membership rolls.

"But you must remember we aren't alone. There are millions of intelligent, thoughtful people in this country who obviously share our concerns. Otherwise, the amendment would have been ratified long ago," LeFevre said.

The missionaries, wearing sensible shoes, were traveling in pairs, as is the practice of the church's missionaries, mostly young men whose expenses are paid by themselves and their families.

The ERA missionaries also have come at their own expense, and sponsors expect more to come through the summer, each committing two weeks to the project.

Patrick and Twiss Butler came from Houston, Texas, where Butler gave up his job with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to campaign for the ERA.

"I'm here to make my mark in history," said Joyce Tortorice of Union, N.J.

Among those attending the spring conference of District 44, Toastmasters International were, from left, Bill Keaton of Midland, district governor; John Slyker of Midland, an international director; and Vance Bradford, incoming district governor from Plainview. The event was held in Lubbock.

Toastmasters attend conference

Thirty Midland Toastmasters were in Lubbock this past weekend to attend the spring conference of District 344 of Toastmasters International. The conference program offered all day educational sessions focusing on improving oral communications, and especially better listening, thinking and speaking.

Midland Pop-Up Toastmaster Paul Hiebert participated in the educational portion with a presentation entitled "Communications Club Management." Ab Ellis of the Midland Permian Toastmasters Club was a contestant in the evening banquet speech contest. Tall Town Toastmaster Roger Friedline was Midland's entry in the annual "Tall Tales" contest.

District Governor Bill Keaton of Midland presided over the conference activities.

Midlander John Slyker, a recently elected international director of Toastmasters International, was a featured participant in the evening program.

The district 44 conclave included Toastmasters from 32 clubs representing over 600 members located from the Panhandle to the Rio Grande.

Harvey Edelman, bird psychiatrist

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Harvey Edelman spends his days talking to birds, playing with them, petting them and treating them like other people treat cats and dogs.

"The average person doesn't know how to deal with a bird," says Edelman, who bills himself as a "bird psychiatrist" and who, for a fee of $25 an hour, will figure out why your bird turns nasty and uncooperative.

A case in point is Butch, a white cockatoo. Butch had plucked his feathers from his chest and had turned on his owners, biting, snapping and generally being aggressive.

Butch's owners brought him to Edelman and, after a week's worth of therapy, Butch was sitting at the front counter of Edelman's bird store — the Avium — pretty much the gracious bird, murmuring "hello" to passing admirers.

"Butch just needed attention," Edelman explains as other birds around him coo and chirp. "He needs to play with someone and have someone talk to him."

In recent years, more and more city dwellers, unable to give a dog or cat proper care in an apartment, have turned to the exotic birds, such as parrots, macaws and cockatoos, as pets.

And that's why there's a growing concern about bird "psychiatry."

"Birds have definite personalities, they have a wide range of emotions and get bored and unhappy, just like people," Edelman says. "Keeping them in a cage all day and not letting them out, well, they're why they get nutty."

About 25 New Yorkers have brought their troubled birds to Edelman since he hung out his shingle in November. He tells them, "If you want a bird you don't want to be bothered with, get a canary or finch. But if you've got another kind of bird, you have to give it time, just like other pets."

As for Butch, once he's ready for "discharge," Edelman will work with his family so that he does not revert to his previous unmanageable self.

Working with the family is very important. "Sometimes I can observe in people's homes why the bird acts a certain way and I try to work with the family in the home as well. But if a bird needs more help, I'll bring him to the store."

The store, on Manhattan's East Side, is crowded with all kinds of birds, including a variety of parrots, finches, canaries, parakeets, macaws and almost any kind of exotic bird you can think of. Most of the birds are allowed to fly freely through the store, even though one of Edelman's "assistants" is Fido, a black and white cat.

Edelman, 40, has been dealing with birds for more than 30 years. He says his behavioral techniques come from "trial and error."

Birds that dislike women are handled by his female assistants. Birds that screech or bite often have to be "shocked" out of their anti-social behavior.

Edelman notes that the bigger birds, such as cockatoos and parrots, "can sometimes become the tamest of all birds" and generally make good pets.

For example, Coconut, a blue hyacinth macaw from Brazil, loves to be petted, sits passively on Edelman's shoulder, and even does tricks, like playing dead and rolling over — just like a dog.

While Edelman admits to liking all animals, he clearly prefers the bird, saying, "They're more affectionate. They're brighter. They're nice to look at. They talk." He shrugs, "People don't give them a chance."

Chief executives

NEW YORK (AP) — If you have a degree in marketing instead of engineering you may have a better chance of becoming president of a high-technology company, says an executive recruiter who works with technically oriented firms.

According to Dr. Jeffrey H. Honig, vice president of Richards Consultants, Ltd., an executive recruiting firm, more high-technology companies are currently filling their top slots with people with marketing backgrounds.

"During the 1960s," says Honig, "most high-technology companies were formed by the engineer or engineers who had a new idea or developed a new product and they ran everything — management, marketing, research and development."

"However, as these companies grew, many of the founders realized their talents were in the areas of research and development and not in marketing. As a result, they began turning to people who could direct this aspect of their business better than they could."

Create your atmosphere

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. I am enchanted with idea of having a sunroom. However, where the light exposure is good, the view is dismal.

Also, this area must serve as our family entertaining space. How can I get the feeling I want and still have the room as usable space for the family? — W.F.

A. Create your own atmosphere inside, regardless of the view or what the weather is outside, through your selection of materials.

For example, you might choose a light-colored vinyl flooring in a pleasing geometric design that will create an easy-care surface and at the same time give an outdoor look.

Select an overall floral-pattern wallpaper to treat the walls to a dash of drama. Use bamboo furniture, wrought-iron bases for tables topped with glass. Shutter the windows to obscure the view you dislike. Slipcover upholstered furniture with easy-maintenance fabric in lighthearted colors.

Q. We have a large, barn-like living room with one window that lets in lots of light. We don't need draperies at the window for privacy. In fact, I rather like the window just plain with no window treatment. However, the lack of draperies seems to make the room seem even colder and without softness.

I have a very limited decorating budget but I would like some ideas on how to soften the room and add interest.

Our furniture was brought from a previous apartment that was small so our pieces seem to get lost in this larger room. However, I can't buy new furniture right now. — B.C.

A. The scale of your furniture is too small for your present quarters but you can compensate for that by furniture arrangement and adding some additional items. You could place your dining table by your window so you can enjoy the view when you are relaxing and dining. Add importance to the window by creating some screens that could partially enclose the dining space.

These screens can create a dramatic focal point in an otherwise drab room if you cover them with a interesting fabric or a fabric that ties in with your color scheme.

I have seen designers cover screens in soft felt and then finish edges with contrasting colored gimp or braid in a dramatic print (a brilliant floral, or a Moorish-geometric) and even an imitation snakeskin vinyl.

Imposing screens can be created by hinging together several hollow-core doors. Or lighter composition material can be used.

Another trick to dramatize a room: create fabric hangings or banners to be suspended from the ceiling or on long, plain walls. Find an exciting fabric that blends well with your room. Cut a panel of the fabric or several panels, stitching a loop at each end. Slip the@loop through wooden drapery poles and hang in the same manner as tapestries.

Interesting fabrics can be an excellent buy, considering their colorations and design qualities. When the fabrics are sheet or or when it is possible to buy mill ends of extraordinary fabrics, the price can be well worth the excitement the fabric can provide.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Trick for wrinkle-free laundry is air fluffing

TO FRESHEN DRAPES

DEAR HELOISE: To clean and freshen my drapes, valances, even my quilts, I put them into the dryer and turn the heat control to "air fluff," then add a fabric softener sheet.

They come out wrinkle-free, fresh-smelling and dust-free. — Mrs. Helen Bjork Super! Great to use in between dry cleaning or laundering, as the case may be.

However, don't use this "in lieu of." For longer wear and to retain their beauty, drapes need dry-cleaning, etc., about once a year. Thanks for sharing a good hint. — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: When my stick deodorant is used down to the rim, I pry out the remaining dab and put it into my medicine cabinet, dirty clothes hamper, or a clothes drawer.

The fragrance continues to deodorize and freshen the air. — Harvey Dyer

BLOOMIN' PLANTS

Dear Heloise: I love my plants and working with them but, alas, they don't bloom year 'round.

And, of course, some don't even have blooms. So, to add a colorful touch, I add artificial flowers. When I have fresh flowers in the garden, I've even been known to add them to a potted plant.

Pretty flowers and green plants year 'round! — Dorothy Kommer

MEDICAL RECORDS

Dear Heloise: To keep accurate records of your children's immunization records, place them on a recipe card, then file them in your recipe box under 'M' for medical or whatever is easiest for you to remember.

They're always at your fingertips for easy reference and updating. — Mrs. Donald Ihrke

Recipe cards make a great filing system, no matter what your needs, and they take up so little room. Just label each box accordingly. — Heloise

SHOPPING WITH KIDS

Dear Heloise: While grocery shopping recently, I saw something I felt was rather unique and thought you might like to share it with readers who have small children.

Can you imagine bringing four children, ranging in age from 3 to about 6 years, grocery shopping with you?

Well, one brave mother did! At first I thought the kids a little rambunctious but, as I observed more closely, I noticed it wasn't the mother who was doing the shopping but the four little tykes. Mom was just making sure it was being done right.

She would tell one child to get four cans of soup, another a can of juice, while another three loaves of bread. This went on throughout the entire store.

The children were learning so many things, and Mom didn't have to bend over for those ankle-high shelves and those four little children were too busy to get into any mischief! — S. Riley

With four little ones that close in age, moms have to think fast on their feet. This one seems to have the situation well in hand! — Heloise

Have a great learning trick that's worked with your own kids? Send it to Heloise care of this newspaper. She can't answer your letter personally but will share the best ideas received in her column.

Savory serving suggestions for artichokes

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

Some people say they like snails when what they really want is a socially acceptable excuse to consume inordinate amounts of garlic butter. A similar argument might be made for artichokes. What else gives us such a good reason to down all that melted butter, Hollandaise and mayonnaise?

Of course, artichokes have their own flavors (snails love to feast on artichoke plants — there's a moral lurking here). But they do take to embellishment like few other foods.

In the recipes that follow we'll take the subject from its most simple incarnation to more grandiose heights.

Boil the chokes in water with a little lemon and bay leaf until the stem end can be easily pried with a fork. With tongs, carefully remove the cooked artichokes from the water and let them drain upside down.

They can be eaten hot or cold. Pull off a leaf and pull it through your teeth to scrape off the morsel of meaty flesh at the base of the leaf. Continue doing this until you have practically denuded the artichoke. There will be a small crown of leaves remaining. Twist these away and the fuzzy "choke" will be revealed. Scrape that off with a spoon and the remaining meaty "heart" can be eaten.

The leaves and heart can be dipped into melted butter, Hollandaise or mayonnaise, depending on your preference.

Dipping sauces are delicious partners with artichokes. Here are a couple of ideas that go beyond clarified butter.

VERDE DIP

1 cup mayonnaise
One-half cup finely chopped parsley
2 tbsps. minced onion
1 tsp. mustard
1 small clove garlic, minced
Salt to taste
1 pimiento, diced (or green pepper)
1 cup plain yogurt or sour cream

Stir together the mayonnaise, parsley, onion, mustard and garlic. Add salt to taste. Mix in about half the pimiento or green pepper and fold in the yogurt. Cover and chill the dip several hours. Sprinkle on any remaining diced pimiento. Makes about two and one-half cups.

ARTICHOKE VINAIGRETTE

One-half cup light olive oil
1 tbsps. mustard
2 to 3 tbsps. wine or cider vinegar
Salt, pepper to taste
Minced parsley, basil or tarragon (about 1 tbsp.)
In a small bowl, beat together the oil, mustard and vinegar. Add salt and pepper to taste and stir in the herbs. Let the vinaigrette stand a few minutes before serving. Makes about three-fourths cup.

CREAMY CURRY DIP

1 cup mayonnaise
3 tbsps. chili sauce
1 tsp. minced onion
2 tbsps. tarragon vinegar
One-half tsp. (about) curry powder
Sliced stuffed olives
In a small bowl, stir together the mayonnaise, chili sauce, onion and vinegar. Add curry powder to taste. Garnish the dip with sliced olives. Makes about one cup.

SAUSAGE-STUFFED ARTICHOKE

6 artichokes, trimmed
Juice of 1 lemon
Salted Water
1 lb. ground beef
1 large onion, chopped
1 egg
1 cup soft bread crumbs
One-half cup chopped parsley
1 tsp. salt
One-fourth tsp. pepper
One-third cup grated Parmesan Place the artichokes in a large pan. Add the lemon juice and salted water to cover. Bring them to a boil and simmer the artichokes for 30 minutes. Drain them well, cut them in half and remove the choke with a spoon.

Mix the remaining ingredients except the cheese and spoon the mixture on the cut surface of the artichokes. Place the artichokes, side by side, on a baking dish. Pour about one-half inch of water into the dish.

Sprinkle on the cheese and bake the artichokes at 350 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes, until the meat is cooked through. Serve them hot, sprinkled with additional grated Parmesan if desired. Makes six servings.

Note: The meats may be cooked in a skillet until brown, then drained and combined with the remaining stuffing ingredients. Cook the stuffing a few minutes to toast the bread slightly. The stuffing can then be spooned into whole artichokes. First, cook the artichokes as directed. Spread apart the large leaves and pull out the small cone of leaves. With a spoon, scrape out the fuzzy choke. Fill them with stuffing, top them with cheese and bake until heated through and the cheese melts.

Hair apparent

STRATFORD, Conn. (AP) — Blonde hair can turn to a shade of green and brunette hair can turn to an orange tint through "excessive exposure to sun and swimming-pool chemicals," says Priscilla Riley, testing coordinator for a hair-care product manufacturer.

Wear a hat in the sun and a bathing cap in chlorinated or salt water for protection, she advises. If hair still becomes discolored, she recommends using a semi-permanent hair-color aerosol foam, which will neutralize the discoloration.

Seafood suppers make nautically nice meals

By SHARON A. HILLIS
County Extension Agent
Home Economics

Flatter fish fillets with tarragon vinegar — a vinegar marinade. Serve them with creamy Cucumber Sauce, and you have a seafood supper that's nautical and nice! Different? Yes. Dull? Definitely not.

Use a special and popular fish, if possible — black drum. It's plentiful and if you don't catch your own, you can usually find it reasonably priced in most seafood markets. Otherwise, any fish fillet, fresh or frozen will make a tasty substitute.

To prepare fish fillets with tarragon vinegar, just marinate the hand-sized fillets for a short time in the vinegar, roll them in a mel-crumb mixture and brown them in sizzling fat.

This tempting treat is enough to please even the most polished palate, but you can take flavor one step further for real menu magnificence. Serve the golden-crusted fillets with an easy-do Cucumber Sauce. And for the big eaters in the crowd, pop the fillets between heated buns.

CRISP TARRAGON FILLETS WITH CUCUMBER SAUCE

2 pounds drum or other fish fillets, fresh or frozen
½ cup tarragon vinegar
½ cup fine corn flakes or bread crumbs
½ cup cornmeal
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. paprika
fat for frying

Pour vinegar over fillets. Cover and refrigerate 30 minutes to an hour. Combine crumbs, cornmeal, salt and paprika and mix well. Coat fillets with crumb mixture. Save vinegar to use in sauce. Fry single layers in hot fat, using large pan over moderate heat for five minutes. Turn carefully. Fry second side five minutes longer, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Serve with Cucumber Sauce. Makes six servings.

CUCUMBER SAUCE

½ cup salad dressing

or mayonnaise
½ cup dairy sour cream
2 tbsps. tarragon vinegar
¼ teasp. salt

3 or 4 drops liquid hot pepper sauce
1 cup chopped pared cucumber

2 tbsps. sliced green onion

Combine salad dressing or mayonnaise, sour cream, vinegar, salt and liquid hot pepper sauce. Mix well. Stir in cucumber and onion. Serve over fillets. Makes about 1½ cups of sauce.

Cardin purchases controlling interest of restaurant

PARIS (AP) — French fashion magnate Pierre Cardin has bought a controlling interest in Maxim's, one of Paris' most famous restaurants.

She said negotiations between the couturier and the 78-year-old owner of Maxim's, Louis Vaudables, were concluded late Monday night. She said the price and the exact percentage of shares involved were secret, but Cardin's controlling interest was unlikely to be more than 51 or 52 percent.

Cardin already has a joint merchandising operation with Maxim's, a synonym for French cuisine and taste around the world. Cardin's own empire sells around the world and includes high fashion, ready-to-wear for men and women, perfume and a wide range of other products.

The restaurant has been in the Vaudables' family for 50 years. The spokeswoman said he had decided the administration was too demanding and he "would like a calmer time."

She said he would stay on for several months to train a successor, yet to be named, but that his son would also leave the restaurant.

Maxim's turn-of-the-century decor is classified as a historical monument by the French government and cannot be altered. The restaurant has long been in the highest three-star category of the Guide Michelin, the most coveted accolade in the French restaurant world.

Sleepwear manufacturers call Tris ban 'regulatory overkill'

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)

Sleepwear manufacturers and retailers, charging they were left holding a bag "full of pajamas," are equating the financial survival of some companies with a bill that would allow them to recover losses due to the government ban on Tris, a suspected cancer-causing chemical.

"We appeal to your sense of justice," David T. Shirey of the American Apparel Manufacturers Association told a Senate hearing Monday. He called the ban on Tris "regulatory overkill," which caused many small companies to go out of business.

Representatives of the Environmental Defense Fund planned to testify

Tuesday before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee considering the Tris bill.

The sleepwear manufacturers told the subcommittee Monday that some faced financial ruin without the bill, which the Congressional Budget Office estimates could cost taxpayers between $40 million and $50 million.

The legislation would allow manufacturers of children's sleepwear to recover losses due to the Tris ban by filing suits before the U.S. Court of Claims.

A similar bill easily passed both houses of Congress in 1978 but was vetoed by then-President Carter, who said it would set an unwise precedent. "Producers and retailers have a basic responsibility for insuring the safety of the consumer goods they market," Carter said at the time.

But industry spokesmen testified that the government forced manufacturers into using Tris by requiring them in the mid-1970's to chemically treat children's sleepwear to make them flame resistant.

"A few of us have suffered bankruptcy, while others have simply locked their doors," said Shirey, who owns a textile firm in Texas.

"For most of us, however, we continue to survive because we believe that the many inequities imposed on us ... will eventually be recognized and ... we will be given the compensation we still so desperately need," he said.

Retailers also spoke in favor of the bill, although their stake in the recovery is believed to be far less, perhaps as little as

$1 million, according to some estimates.

Joanne E. Mattiace, a lawyer representing the National Retail Merchants Association, said the retailers were stuck holding the bag when the ban was adopted. "And the bag was full of pajamas," she said.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission ordered the Tris ban in April 1977.

The manufacturers said they were stuck with the unsold garments, even though they say Tris was first used by fabric producers without the knowledge of sleepwear manufacturers.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., said he was troubled by the bill, asking: "In every case that a government action is stupid or idiotic, should someone be compensated?"

The bill is sponsored by senators who represent states with major textile industry, including South Carolina Republican Strom Thurmond, the Judiciary Committee chairman, and Massachusetts Democrat Edward M. Kennedy, a former chairman.

The Reagan administration has not taken a position on the bill and the Justice Department turned down an invitation to testify at the subcommittee hearings this week.

When Carter was in office, the Justice Department strongly opposed the idea of compensating the firms. It testified that the clothing manufacturers had other options besides Tris to meet federal regulations to protect against combustible sleepwear.

Veterinarian makes house calls

By MARIAN FOX
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — House calls by the family doctor may be a thing of the past, but a Memphis veterinarian rolls his entire office door-to-door for pet owners.

"I started doing this when I was in normal clinic practice and people would call in to ask if we made house calls," said Dr. Gerald Blackburn, a graduate of Auburn University's vet medicine program who literally hit the streets with his practice in November in a 1980 recreational vehicle.

"There was no way I could handle clinic work and make house calls at night and do an adequate job. And I realized there was a need," he said.

Blackburn, 27, who grew up on a Dickson farm with an assortment of animals, sees three or four clients a day, some with more than one pet. Most own cats or dogs or both.

"A lot of them are elderly, people who don't drive or who have so many animals they don't want to risk driving through traffic with all their pets."

Vets are also making house calls in Atlanta, Chicago, Little Rock and in some Florida cities, he said, but he is the only one in Memphis.

Blackburn's 20-foot-long, $25,000 "Mobile Veterinary Clinic" averages 350 to 500 miles a week and burns regular gasoline at 10 miles per gallon. It contains all the equipment he needs except X-ray facilities.

Using microscope, centrifuge, anesthesia and oxygen equipment, he performs heartworm tests, blood analyses, worm checks and diagnostic tests. He can perform minor surgery and emergency major surgery.

"It's really not an efficient way to practice because I can't see as many animals as if I had a clinic where people brought their pets in," said Blackburn, whose fees vary according to the treatment.

Operating out of a traveling office has advantages, though.

"I keep my own records. My overhead involves gasoline, maintenance, insurance and that's it," he said. The van costs about $1,500 a month to operate.

Blackburn, who pets each animal, calling it by its name, before treating it, has another reason to like the van — his patients do.

"One reason animals fear the vet so much, especially cats, is that they are taken out of their home, driven through traffic and deposited on a steel table," he said. "In the van they can roam around and sit on a table and look out at their own neighborhood. They feel more at home and are easier to treat."

Three girls stroll along a Belfast, Northern Ireland, street Tuesday while two British soldiers of the Royal Fusiliers keep watch for snipers after a spate of rioting.

Although rioters took to the streets in the early hours of the morning following the death of IRA hunger strike Bobby Sands, much of the city had returned to normal by dawn.

IRA no nearer unity goal

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Bobby Sands' death has united Northern Ireland's Roman Catholics against the British, but their fighting arm — the Irish Republican Army — is split into feuding factions and apparently no nearer to its goal of reuniting Ireland.

"There is a lack of political agreement and coherence within the struggle itself," said Bernadette Devlin McAliskey, the radical republican political leader.

Yet "there has never been more unity" among Northern Ireland's 500,000 Catholics in their opposition to British rule and domination by the province's million Protestants, she said.

THE HUNGER strikes by Sands and three other jailed guerrillas have brought a truce in the squabbling between the IRA's three factions — the Provisionals fighting a guerrilla war in Northern Ireland, the Marxist Officials and the revolutionary Irish National Liberation Army.

But this has not given them cohesive direction. Nor has it advanced the cause of reunification or the IRA's ultimate objective of overthrowing the political establishment in the Irish Republic.

The Republican News, the Provisionals' weekly newspaper, said last week that the Dublin government of Prime Minister Charles Haughey represented a "ruling class which has more in common with the British ruling class than with its own working class."

"We are determined," it said, "to secure conditions in which all the people of the country will unite in a ... democratic, socialist republic. Nothing less will suffice. Nothing else will be accepted. Nothing else can make up for the deaths and suffering of our people."

SANDS STARVED himself to death demanding that the British treat convicted guerrillas as political prisoners rather than criminals. Sands, a Provo, was jailed for 14 years in 1977 for illegal possession of a handgun.

The Provos' carefully orchestrated propaganda campaign against this British policy of "criminalizing" the guerrillas has rekindled support for them among Northern Ireland's Catholics.

One such standing in the rain as thousands filed past Sands' bier asserted:

"To commit a crime is for personal gain. Bobby never did anything for gain, he was an Irishman. I don't see how you can put it down as a crime."

The Provisionals have pinned down 30,000 police and British troops in the six counties of Northern Ireland for more than a decade. David O'Connell, the guerrillas' former chief of staff who is now vice-president of their political front, Sinn Fein, said during the weekend they have the weapons, men and money to wage their "war of liberation" for years.

An analysis

BRITISH intelligence officers estimate that they can fight on for at least five years even without mass support from the Catholic population. British sources say the guerrillas are believed to be short of explosives but have plenty of weapons.

Army intelligence estimates the Provos have no more than 400 hardcore members, but several thousand sympathizers provide them with safe houses in which to hide, transport and other support.

This support ebbs and flows, depending on how threatened the Catholics believe themselves to be. But tens of thousands have taken to the streets to support the hunger strikers. And 30,000 in the Fermanagh and South Tyrone district elected Sands to the British Parliament on April 9. Many viewed the vote for Sands as a vote for the IRA. But the district was overwhelmingly Catholic, Northern Ireland traditionally votes along sectarian lines, and Sands was the only Catholic candidate.

THE PROVOS claim to be the standard bearer of the generations of Irish rebels who have fought to drive the British from the Emerald Isle. They trace their roots back to Theobald Wolfe Tone, leader of an unsuccessful rebellion in 1798 to establish an independent republic, and the rebels who proclaimed that republic in the 1916 Easter Rising in Dublin.

The Easter Rising was crushed, and the IRA fought the British in 1919-21 to win home rule. Ireland was partitioned in 1922, with the Catholic South becoming the semi-independent Irish Free State and the North remaining in the United Kingdom to provide a haven for the Protestants whose ancestors had been encouraged to migrate to Ireland. Then the IRA fought a civil war against its former comrades who settled for less than a united, completely independent Ireland.

The Irish Free State became an independent republic in 1937 and quit the British Commonwealth in 1949.

Former Nazi camp guard may be closer to deportation

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — With the threat of deportation hanging over him, former death-camp guard Feodor Fedorenko is searching for a former U.S. vice consul to Germany who might help him remain in this country.

A U.S. immigration judge ruled Tuesday that Fedorenko's trial admission that he had lied on a 1949 visa application was enough evidence to deport the 74-year-old retired Waterbury, Conn., mill worker. But he also gave Fedorenko another chance to fight his ejection.

Fedorenko's lawyer, Brian Gildea, was granted two weeks to try to find Ralph G. Clark, a former U.S. vice consul in Hamburg, Germany, who granted Fedorenko's immigrant visa in 1949. There was no indication where Clark might be.

"I think Ralph Clark might well say that even if Mr. Fedorenko had said that he was a guard at the Treblinka concentration camp, it might not have made any difference," Gildea said after a two-day hearing was adjourned.

Fedorenko's citizenship was stripped last month after the U.S. Supreme Court agreed with an appellate court that the falsified application violated visa regulations.

Meanwhile, Fedorenko has applied to the Soviet Union for permission to return to the Ukraine, where his wife and two sons live, if he cannot stay in the United States.

He also told Immigration Judge Gordon Sacks he would want to return to the Ukraine if he is deported. The government didn't object.

Fedorenko continues to deny claims by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service that he helped Nazis persecute Jews while he was a guard at the Treblinka death camp in Poland during World War II.

"Whatever I did was only to save my life," Fedorenko told Sacks Tuesday in Russian through an interpreter.

He denied allegations by Treblinka witnesses that he beat and shot Jewish prisoners, saying as a Russian soldier captured by the Germans he, too, was a prisoner. Witnesses claim hundreds of thousands of Jews died in Treblinka's gas chambers.

Jason James, 4, has been sawing catgut since he was 3 and has made appearances at the Llano Old Time Fiddlers Contest and other events and has collected a gold medal, a plaque and $30. Jason's father, Jesse James, says the youngster inherited his love for the fiddle from his grandfather.

French press cautious on results of debate

PARIS (AP) — Much of the French press declined to judge today whether incumbent Valéry Giscard d'Estaing or Socialist challenger François Mitterrand won the candidates' last debate before Sunday's presidential election.

Most comments on the 2½ hour debate Tuesday evening were along the lines that "the electorate will decide on Sunday."

Only newspapers firmly committed to one or the other candidate took positions, such as the conservative Figaro, which headlined "Mitterrand hides in vagueness," and the Socialist Le Matin, which said that Giscard d'Estaing had been forced for the first time to come down from the heights of the presidency and act like a candidate in defending his management of France.

The American-style debate, a face-to-face encounter before a panel of interviewers, was the candidates' last chance to influence voters before Sunday's runoff election, and focused on unemployment and a Communist role in government.

Giscard d'Estaing, shown by polls to be running slightly behind Mitterrand, turned the first 35 minutes into an argument over how the Socialist challenger would govern with the Communist support he would need.

Mitterrand countered by attacking the economic record of the last seven years under Giscard d'Estaing, which have left 1.6 million people unemployed.

Le Parisien Libre said no new ideas were presented in the debate, and that "switching off their TV sets last night, many French people must have been dissatisfied."

One of the few newspapers to make a judgement on the debate's impact was the Charente Libre of western France, which said that Giscard d'Estaing "did not succeed in getting a major advantage over" Mitterrand.

Giscard d'Estaing's clear domination over Mitterrand in their first televised debate during the 1974 election campaign was seen as the deciding factor in a close race he won by 1.6 percent.

Debate continues on appropriation amendments

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — House members have narrowly rejected an attack on state funding for the arts while beefing up state police salaries and money for combating child abuse.

Debate on attempts to amend the House's $26.5 billion general appropriation bill for 1982-83 continues today as representatives reach the politically sensitive education article.

The Senate Finance Committee approved its version Tuesday of the bill by a 13-0 margin and the Senate is expected to begin debate on the measure Monday.

After the House and Senate complete debate on their respective versions, the final bill will be written by a 10-member House-Senate committee of negotiators, probably prior to the June 1 adjournment date.

Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, tried Tuesday to cut $1 million from the recommended $4 million appropriation for the Texas Commission on the Arts, a pet of Gov. Bill Clements.

Green said the commission funds projects in areas that are "among the richest in the state," like Highland Park in Dallas and River Oaks in Houston, but has refused grants to groups in his working class district.

"It is insensitive to non-Anglo and working class artists. Our job as custodian of these funds is to be sure money is spent in service of our constituents," Green said.

"When somebody takes a pot shot at the arts, they always use the minorities," grumbled black Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, who voted against the cut.

Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, said the Legislature should not cut the commission's budget because among all the states and U.S. territories, "Texas ranks 51st, after Puerto Rico and Guam, in support of the arts."

Green's attempt failed on a 63-63 vote. Ties count as defeats in legislative rules.

After an emotional debate, the House voted 88-53 to shift $5.2 million in state funds from such projects as Capitol air conditioning to child abuse protection. The money would attract another $15 million in federal matching funds, for a total increase of $20.2 million.

"God save the little children. If the Texas Legislature won't do it, God will have to do it," said Rep. Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite, a supporter of the increase.

Lyon displayed a sheaf of 8-by-10-inch black-and-white photos of beaten children in an attempt to generate emotional support for the increase.

Without the budget increase, 5,000 child abuse cases a year would not be investigated, he said.

Reps. Craig Washington, D-Houston, and Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, authors of the amendment, said it would enable the Department of Human Resources to reduce the average caseload of child abuse prevention workers from 47 to 36 cases.

Reps. Bob Davis, R-Irving, and Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, opposed the increase, saying the Department of Human Resources and its workers had abused their authority in specific cases.

They said stiff criminal penalties were the best way to attack child abuse.

Other amendments added in Tuesday's debate would:

— Raise Department of Public Safety salaries by $2 million and those of game wardens and liquor agents by $400,000 over the next two years. A rank-and-file trooper would make $22,128 in 1983 compared with $21,420 in the Appropriations Committee's recommended bill, while a highway patrol captain's 1983 salary would be $30,744 compared with the committee's recommended $29,748.

— Increase the once-a-year extra payment to welfare children for school clothes, shoes and similar expenses from $100 now to $120. The committee recommended $110. Cost: $5 million.

— Add 20 more DPS narcotics agents at a cost of $2 million.

States find 'found money' helpful

By DAVID KAYE
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Back in 1836, the federal government divided up a $28 million surplus among the states. But there were strings attached: If the secretary of the Treasury ever wanted it back, the states would have to hand it over.

After 144 years, those strings were quietly cut in the waning moments of the Carter administration.

And New Jersey, which had salted away its share in a special trust fund all those years, now has three-quarters of a million dollars to spend.

"I can't say we're turning cartwheels, but it will help," said Robert Cubberly, supervisor of the bureau of the budget.

Dubbed "found money," New Jersey's $764,670.60 is being transferred out of the trust fund and will be used to help balance the budget, according to Daniel J. O'Hern, chief counsel to Gov. Brendan Byrne.

The fund came into being under the Revenue Sharing Act of 1836, when the federal government found itself with a surplus far above the $5 million it was allowed by law to keep.

"The money apparently was distributed according to the proportion of members in the House and Senate, but there's no documentation of that," U.S. Treasury staff accountant James Zurawski said Tuesday. "We don't know the nitty-gritty of how it was computed."

He said $28,101,644.91 was paid out in three installments. There was to have been a total of four payments, but the last was rescinded "because of changes in the economy and the government at the time," said Zurawski.

The states had the use of their share — and the interest if they chose to bank it — with the proviso that they return the money if the secretary of the Treasury ever wanted it back, Walter Jordan, assistant controller of finance for the Treasury Department, explained Monday.

But the federal government never asked for the money, and each year New Jersey withdrew the interest, transferring it to the state's general fund or investing it.

New Jersey officials were unable to calculate the total interest that had accrued since 1836. But the interest for fiscal year 1979 totaled $47,911, said Harry Fitzwater, section supervisor of the state Bureau of Accounting. For 1980, it was $54,273.

Since 1978, the interest has been transferred to the New Jersey Cash Management Fund, which invests the state's "working capital," Fitzwater said Tuesday.

The obligation for New Jersey and the other states to return their original shares to the federal government ended because of a law signed by Jimmy Carter on Dec. 28, 1980, Jordan said.

The Treasury Department alerted the governor to the law last month. Since then, part of the principal has been transferred, and officials are in the process of closing down the fund, Fitzwater said.

$28 million surplus divided among 26 states

Bank won't budge in its battle for federal funds

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — While federal budget-cutters scrap over billions, a tiny bank helping consumer cooperatives is irking the Reagan administration by refusing to give back a $60 million appropriation.

The administration, intent on impounding the money, threatened Tuesday to call in the Justice Department to enforce its demand. So far, the bank isn't budging.

Both sides say the law is on their side in a battle that pits Reagan officials against the National Consumer Cooperative Bank.

And each side says the other is acting improperly.

The bank, which got started last spring, was set up by Congress to make loans to consumer co-ops that might have trouble getting money from private banks. The co-ops would be non-profit groups banding together to buy food or services more cheaply.

The government was to provide initial support by buying stock in the bank at first, with the bank gradually becoming a private institution.

Congress voted $116 million this fiscal year to support the bank's loans, which are made at market interest rates. But then President Reagan took office, and the $60 million portion for the second half of the year was ordered withheld.

The bank fought back, and it won a ruling by the U.S. comptroller general last month that the administration had no authority to impound the money.

Then, two weeks ago, bank president Carol Greenwald sent certification forms to the Treasury. And a disbursement officer sent the $60 million in two installments.

That constituted "an improper withdrawal," David Brennan, acting general counsel at the Treasury Department, told reporters at a briefing Tuesday. The money was simply not available for disbursement as she certified it was, he said.

At one point Brennan said if the money is returned, "there will be no further problems." But he also said it would be up to the Justice Department to decide whether to take any action against Ms. Greenwald or the bank.

Her reply: "Naturally we are stunned to find ourselves under criticism for pressing an open and above-board and legally sound claim for these funds."

"If the Treasury Department released the money unintentionally, then perhaps it should re-examine its procedures rather than attack a small institution like NCCB."

She also said she felt administration opposition to the bank was "ideologically motivated" on the part of officials who believe an inner-city co-op that can't get a loan from a commercial bank "by definition can't be credit-worthy."

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The "widows of terrorism" are crying out for recognition. Amid the worldwide wave of sympathy for IRA hunger striker Bobby Sands, a Protestant woman whose husband and brother were killed by the Irish Republican Army has opened a campaign on behalf of the relatives of victims of terrorism in Northern Ireland.

"After listening to all the stories about criminals and seeing that nobody cares about their victims, I decided there is something that one person can do," said Edith Elliott.

The 47-year-old mother of five children wants to bring her own case and those of others who have had relatives murdered to the attention of the European Human Rights Commission in Strasbourg, France, to publicize their plight.

Since the campaign was launched a week ago through the Protestant press, 109 widows and other relatives have sent in dossiers, Mrs. Elliott said. A few were Roman Catholics.

"You have to be a 'troubles' widow to know what people like myself have been going through. It's just impossible to describe," she said in a telephone interview from her farm home in Moy, 35 miles from Belfast, near the border with the Irish Republic. "Troubles" is the euphemism used for the terrorist violence and sectarian strife that has taken at least 2,096 lives in British-ruled Northern Ireland since August 1969.

Mrs. Elliott said she was angered by the publicity given to Sands and his fatal hunger strike.

"He chose that," she said. "The hunger striker has choice but neither my husband or brother had any."

George Elliott was shot and killed last June at a cattle sale yard in the Irish Republic. Jack Donnelly, her brother, was murdered last month in a bar in Moy. Her husband was a former member and her brother a member of the Ulster Defense Regiment, a local unit of the British army that many Catholics consider a hotbed of Protestant extremists.

"You are just numb and stunned when it happens," she said. "Widows are usually too shocked and shy to speak out on the pain and the damage."

The petitions to the European Human Rights Commission are being handled through the Unionist Party, Northern Ireland's biggest Protestant party. Mrs. Elliott acknowledged that this will probably discourage most Catholics from joining her cause.

Among the aims is to put pressure on both the British and Irish governments to provide better security for the citizens of Northern Ireland.

Protestants claim that IRA guerrillas cross the border to strike in Northern Ireland and then return to sanctuary in the Irish Republic. Mrs. Elliott said she hopes the Human Rights Commission will put pressure on the republic to extradite suspects wanted in Northern Ireland.

A truck is overturned to form a barricade in the Divis Flats area of West Belfast, Northern Ireland, Tuesday as riots broke out following the death of IRA hunger striker Bobby Sands.

Americans mourn Sands

By The Associated Press

As thousands of Americans mourned the death of Bobby Sands in street demonstrations and church memorials, union dockworkers pledged to boycott British ships at U.S. ports Thursday in support of the Irish Republican Army hunger striker.

Cardinal Terence Cooke scheduled a Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York today for "reconciliation and peace in Northern Ireland."

An estimated 2,000 people sang and marched Tuesday in Philadelphia, 2,000 people marched in New York City behind a coffin draped with Irish flags, 1,000 gathered for a memorial service in Hartford, Conn., and thousands more denounced the British government in Paris, Athens and Norway.

Two bomb threats were made on the British consulate offices in New York, but no explosions went off.

Sands, recently elected to Parliament, died Monday night after a 66-day hunger strike aimed at winning political status for jailed IRA members.

"I don't think we can sit on the sidelines of a moral crisis," Rep. William Ratchford, D-Conn., told the gathering in Hartford. "We have to bring some type of change to the policy of Great Britain."

Other politicians appealed for calm. U.S. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said in Washington that he feared Sands' death would "dramatically escalate violence." He appealed "to all concerned with the problems of Northern Ireland to reject the bullet and the bomb."

The Massachusetts Senate adopted a resolution mourning the death of "The Right Honorable Robert Sands, Member of Parliament, Prisoner of War and Irish Nationalist."

And former 1960s anti-war activist Abbie Hoffman, serving a prison term on drug charges, ended a fast begun April 20 in support of Sands, prison officials said.

Some leaders of the Philadelphia rally, held in front of The Bulletin Building, offices for the city's afternoon newspaper and The Associated Press, criticized press coverage of the Northern Ireland conflict.

"The American media has failed to investigate the situation and has taken the British government's word as the gospel truth," said Al Clark, one of the rally's organizers and a member of Irish Northern Aid.

Protesters who gathered in front of the British consulate in New York burned a Union Jack and chanted "Bobby Sands Lives On."

Queen Elizabeth II, on a four-day visit to Norway, was greeted by thousands of cheering welcomers and a few angry protesters chanting "Bobby Sands, Bobby Sands."

In Paris, hundreds of demonstrators marched through the streets with an Irish flag and shouted "Save the Irish prisoners." Some 300 people in Athens carried banners proclaiming "British imperialists out of Northern Ireland."

Meanwhile, the 110,000-member International Longshoremen's Association announced it will boycott British ships for 24 hours, beginning Thursday, "to demonstrate against the violation of human rights by the British government in Northern Ireland."

The boycott would loading or unloading of British ships at ports in Puerto Rico, the Gulf of Mexico, along the Atlantic and in the Great Lakes, where the union has jurisdiction.

The union said it did not know how many ships might be affected.

Meanwhile, in Los Angeles, the head of the official church of England celebrated Mass amid tight security.

Demonstrators Tuesday held aloft a burning British Union Jack outside the British Consulate office in New York City. They were among hundreds of demonstrators from various Irish Nationalist organizations in the New York area who joined in protesting the death of IRA guerrilla Bobby Sands.

Ballots being counted today in mail-in election

SAN DIEGO (AP) — After months of bitter debate that splintered political alliances and triggered a record turnout, ballots were being counted today in the nation's largest mail-in referendum.

More than 60 percent of San Diego County's 430,211 voters returned ballots in the single-issue special election to decide whether to spend $224 million on a new convention center backers say will expand the city's $1 billion a year tourist industry.

The turnout was nearly double that of previous single-issue special municipal elections.

The election attracted national interest because the mail-in system is estimated to cost about half the amount of a regular ballot-box election. Ballots were sent out two weeks ago.

At the center of the issue is an ambitious redevelopment plan for downtown San Diego, which ranked second nationally last year with 1,495 conventions of 50 or more persons and attracted 17.2 million visitors.

Tourism is San Diego's third largest industry, behind manufacturing and the military.

Critics of the downtown complex claim the city's general fund would be raided if projected revenue sources can't cover the $24 million a year bond payments.

"Yes, it's a risk, but one that ought to be taken," says leading advocate Roger Hedgecock, a member of the county's Board of Supervisors. Calling it "a necessary catalyst," Hedgecock predicts $1.4 billion in income would be generated by the center in the first year.

Opponent Fred Schnaubelt, a county supervisor who led the fight against the project, says $224 million "is too high a price to remove three tattoo parlors," referring to the blighted neighborhood that would be redeveloped. Schnaubelt contends the present convention center, which can accommodate about 3,000 delegates, is losing $2 million a year.

Hedgecock has said the convention center could be "the driving wheel of a downtown renaissance." He said the city would gain an additional 4,000 hotel rooms if the center is built. He said tourism would have to decline by 50 percent a year before the city was short of revenues for bond payments.

The proposed complex would total 535,000 square feet.

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate this week gave final approval to a bill by Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson, D-Midland, that would allow the Texas Department of Human Resources to place abused or neglected children under temporary conservatorship.

Snelson's Senate Bill 471 passed without opposition after the Senate suspended the constitutional rule requiring that a bill be considered on three separate days.

Snelson urged passage of the bill stating that an oversight in legislation passed last session had prevented TDHR from making use of funds appropriated for foster care.

Under the 1979 legislation, TDHR was only authorized to seek termination of parental rights in cases of abuse and neglect.

Opponent Fred Schnaubelt, a county supervisor who led the fight against the project, says $224 million "is too high a price to remove three tattoo parlors," referring to the blighted neighborhood that would be redeveloped. Schnaubelt contends the present convention center, which can accommodate about 3,000 delegates, is losing $2 million a year.

At the center of the issue is an ambitious redevelopment plan for downtown San Diego, which ranked second nationally last year with 1,495 conventions of 50 or more persons and attracted 17.2 million visitors.

Tourism is San Diego's third largest industry, behind manufacturing and the military.

Critics of the downtown complex claim the city's general fund would be raided if projected revenue sources can't cover the $24 million a year bond payments.

"Yes, it's a risk, but one that ought to be taken," says leading advocate Roger Hedgecock, a member of the county's Board of Supervisors. Calling it "a necessary catalyst," Hedgecock predicts $1.4 billion in income would be generated by the center in the first year.

Opponent Fred Schnaubelt, a county supervisor who led the fight against the project, says $224 million "is too high a price to remove three tattoo parlors," referring to the blighted neighborhood that would be redeveloped. Schnaubelt contends the present convention center, which can accommodate about 3,000 delegates, is losing $2 million a year.

Hedgecock has said the convention center could be "the driving wheel of a downtown renaissance." He said the city would gain an additional 4,000 hotel rooms if the center is built. He said tourism would have to decline by 50 percent a year before the city was short of revenues for bond payments.

The proposed complex would total 535,000 square feet.

Celtics escape with victory

BOSTON (AP) — The atmosphere in the winning locker room was subdued, almost funereal. There were few smiles.

The Boston Celtics knew they had escaped with a victory that very easily could have been a loss. In the opener of their National Basketball Association championship series with the Houston Rockets, the Celtics played like anything but champions.

"We didn't play well as a team," said an unusually restrained Boston forward Cedric Maxwell. "We're almost talking like we lost this game. But we didn't."

With 13 championship banners earned by past Celtic teams hanging over them, the current Celtics overcame a 22-8 deficit, 19 turnovers and 43 percent shooting, to haul down the Rockets 98-95 Tuesday night in the first game of the best-of-seven series.

THAT, SAID Larry Bird, should give the Celtics something to think about going into Thursday night's second game here.

"If this game was played at Houston, I'm afraid we would have been beaten," said Bird, who led Boston in scoring for the 10th time and rebounding for the 11th time in its 12 playoff games.

"It's one of our worst games. It's definitely a confidence factor for us that if we could play so badly and still beat them, it's got to stick in their minds," Bird added.

For three quarters, the Rockets played like the team that pulled play-off upsets over Los Angeles and San Antonio before beating Kansas City to reach the finals. For the last quarter, they played like the team that struggled to a 40-42 regular-season record.

"We were patient early in the game and didn't give the Celtics good shots ... The Celtics were able to get back in the game with opportunity baskets," said Houston reserve guard Calvin Murphy, who scored 16 points. "We lost our composure at the end."

THE ROCKETS, who have lost their last 14 games with Boston, carried an 81-76 lead into the final quarter, but scored just 14 more points. After Murphy's jumper gave them a 91-88 lead with 5:18 to play, they managed just two field goals by Tom Henderson.

Consecutive baskets by Robert Parish, Bird, M.L. Carr and Maxwell put the Celtics ahead for good, 96-91, with 2:54 left. Henderson then sank his two buckets.

But, on one possession, Bird snared an offensive rebound, missed a shot, got another rebound and laid the ball in for the final points with 19 seconds remaining. Rudy Tomjanovich's three-point field goal attempt for Houston failed in the closing seconds.

Bird finished with 21 rebounds, matching his regular-season high; 18 points, eight of them in the final quarter, and nine assists.

The ball, he said, "was just coming into my hands."

The Celtics had 25 offensive rebounds, including five in the last 10 minutes, to 19 for Houston, and outrebounded the Rockets, 54-42.

"Our offensive rebounding down the stretch — that was the ball game," said Boston Coach Bill Fitch. "That was perhaps the only effective thing we did in the whole game."

The Rockets, idle since eliminating Kansas City last Wednesday, came out firing. They bolted to a 12-2 lead as forwards Robert Reid, who led Houston with 27 points, and Billy Paultz, scored six points each.

"We didn't expect an easy one," said guard Chris Ford of the Celtics, who wrapped up a grueling seven-game Eastern Conference championship series with Philadelphia Sunday.

With a Western Junior College Conference basketball champion and women's golf and tennis teams that are headed for the national junior college championships in Florida this week, Midland College honored its most talented group of athletes ever at the All-Sports Banquet in the Chaparral Center Tuesday night.

Junior College All-America Charles Johnson (basketball), Teresa Landry and Danny Olesen (tennis) and Bruce Carrol and Debra Kargetta (golf) were named the Most Valuable Players while Fighting Chap awards went to Kevin Willingham (basketball), Doug Dabbs and Michelle Wilks (golf) and Rudolfo Rico and Jane Webb (tennis).

IN REVIEWING the high points of a 30-3 basketball season, Coach Jerry Stone, who leaves on a recruiting trip to Cleveland, Ohio, today, commented, "These 12 basketball players put Midland on the map but it's not going to stop with this year."

The Fighting Chap award, a tribute to the team's most inspirational player, went to Kevin Willingham, a 6-3 postman, for the second year in a row. Virgil Slay won the Defensive Player of the Year award.

Freshman Puntus Wilson earned a rare double, all-WJCC and all-Regional as a rookie, but when it came to MVP, the honored belonged to 6-6 Charles Johnson. "C.J. is the best ever to come through here," said

Stone. "He made all conference, all-region and All-America. And that All-America was for real, voted on by the national office. Those Texas Tech folks don't know for sure what they've got hold of and are they going to be surprised."

The Chaparrals also pulled off another rarity, winning the WJCC Sportsmanship award, usually reserved for some game team that fought-the-good-fight but without that much success.

TENNIS COACH Brian Gilley will be taking six girls to Florida this weekend. "And with a little luck, may be we can win it."

Diane Wortmann was all-WJCC second flight while undefeated Karen Mannheimer and Linda Hankins were all-WJCC No. 2 doubles and all-regional. Jane Webb was undefeated all-WJCC in the third flight and Brenda Burgess was first flight WJCC doubles and fourth flight singles champion.

For Miss Landry, her MVP was the second in a row and came after a season in which she won the WJCC title and was undefeated in WJCC doubles.

Big Spring's Danny Olesen was WJCC champion in No. 2 doubles with Luis Zavala while Barry King was No. 3 regional winner and Tony Macken was the fifth flight WJCC champion.

COACH SUSAN Holland's women golfers spent most the season playing four-year college opposition, but established themselves as state juco champion by beating Temple, the only other JC team in the state, in every meeting.

Special awards presented by MC Athletic Director Delnor Poss went to Midland High trainer James Dodson for his work as supervisor of student trainers; Saul Herrera, the Chaparral Student Body Spirit award; Bill and Peggy Williams, the Community Chaparral Spirit award; John Hollenberger, for staff-administration; Bob King, who prepared a brochure on short notice to promote Charles Johnson for All-America recognition; and Larry Campbell, for promotional efforts.

Jane Webb received the Academic Achievement award, presented by Dr. Tim Green while Kevin Willingham and Teresa Landry were presented the Student Senate Award for leadership-friendship-citizenship by Student Body President Alan Castor.

Bulldogs now have a shot

Pack controls own destiny with 8-3 win over Cooper

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Frank Garramone and Teddy Bartley combined to drive in six runs while Mark Hewitt held Abilene Cooper to three runs on four hits as the Midland High Bulldogs defeated the Cougars 8-3 Tuesday at the Memorial Stadium field.

The win, fourth in a row for the Pack, gives MHS a 4-1 second half mark and leaves the Dogs one-half game behind Midland Lee, 5-1, following the Rebels 8-5 loss to Abilene High. Cooper tumbles to 1-4, 11-12, after tying for the first half crown with Lee and Abilene High at 5-2.

THE BULLDOGS are now in control of their own destiny in the second half race since they can win the second half title outright with victories Thursday and Saturday.

Midland High spotted the Cougars a one-run lead in the top of the first. Shane Awalt was safe on Fabian Ramos' error at second, Jeff Blackburn sacrificed him to second and he rode home on Scott Harris' sharp single to left.

Coming from behind has become the Purple Pack's stock in trade and the one-run deficit proved to be no barrier. In the home half of the first, Tim Davis and Teddy Bartley singled and then scored on Frank Garramone's solid single to left.

MHS added two more runs in the second. Mark Hewitt opened with a double, on David Bledsoe's sacrifice attempt, Cougar catcher Scott Harris went to third in an attempt to get Hewitt. The throw was off the mark, and MHS had runners at the corners with nobody out. Cooper starter Tommy Clemons then lost touch with the plate and walked Eddie Portillo and Davis to force in one run.

Billy Mitchell moved from left field to the mound and got Bartley to ground into a run-scoring fielder's choice for the second out. Zachery grounded out to end the inning.

COOPER RALLIED for a run in the third when Shane Awalt beat out an infield hit and scored on a two-out single by Harris.

The Purple Pack sent nine batters to the plate in the fourth inning and scored three runs. Kyle Ford started the inning off with a double, Eddie Portillo singled, David fled out to center for one out, Bartley doubled to left-center for a one run. Jerry Zachery was intentionally walked, but Garramone wrecked that strategy by whacking a RBI-single up the middle. MHS scored its final run of the frame when Mitchell hit Michael Feldt with a pitch with the bases loaded.

Cooper picked up its last run of the game in the fifth inning. Awalt reached on an error by Portillo and scored on Harris' third single of the contest.

Midland High answered with a run in the home half of the inning. Portillo walked, Davis doubled and Bartley's single plated Portillo with the Purple Pack's eighth run.

MHS coach Tim Whalen said, "I wish we could start the season over right now. We are playing real well. We are getting solid pitching, our hitting has been excellent and the fielding, well, it has come around 180-degrees since the first half of district."

BARTLEY, who has been a terror at the plate and in the field in the last five games, continued his excellent play. He made several outstanding fielding plays at third and went 3-for-four with three RBI. In his last five games, Bartley has gone 9-for-14.

Shortstop, which had been a problem area for the Pack in the early going, has been turned in a solid position with the return of Portillo.

Lee Rebs stumble on way to crown

ABILENE — A not so funny thing happened to Midland Lee on its way to the District 5-5A baseball championship.

Needing just one win to lock up the title, the Rebels went to Abilene with high hopes of downing the Abilene High Eagles and wrapping up the crown nice and neat. Unfortunately, for the Rebs, AHS had different ideas and dealt the Rebs an 8-5 setback. The loss was the first in six second half outings for Lee while Abilene's record now stands at 5-2. Lee is still in the driver's seat, needing only to defeat Midland High Saturday in the final regular season game to claim the title.

ABILENE HIGH took the lead with a four-run outburst in the second inning. Chance Hall lead off with a double, Scott Hamilton followed by grounding to Chris Parker at third but he threw wild to first and Hall scored and Hamilton ended up on second. Nolan Rives singled, Mike Hargeshiemer bunted along the first base line, Alan Koonce, Lee's pitcher picked up the ball and tagged Hargeshiemer but dropped the ball and Hamilton raced home on the miscue. With two outs, Carl Dobbs laced a two-run single to right to cap the four-run rally.

Lee answered with four runs in the top of the third. Randy Velarde lead off with a single to left, Barry Blackwell singled and Ron Smedley walked to load the bases. Hargeshiemer then walked Koonce to force in a run, Bill Dern singled up the middle for another run and with the bases still loaded, Chris Parker hit a sacrifice fly to right. After Barry Corley walked to load the bases again, Randy Pepper grounded back to the mound to force Koonce at home. But, with two outs, and a count of two strikes on Ricky Wright, Hargeshiemer hit Wright with a pitch to force in the fourth run.

Abilene took the lead for good with a single run in the fourth. A one-out double by Pat Sigala and a two-out error on Wright in right on a fly ball Portillo, named as all-district short-stop last year, has missed most of this season with a back injury. But, in the last two games he has indicated he is well again, going deep into the hole to flag down ground balls that would have sneaked through for hits in earlier games.

Another bright spot for the Pack Tuesday was the pitching performance of Hewitt. Hewitt was another of the Pack that has missed considerable playing time because of illness. He missed almost three weeks of the season while battling a case of chicken pox. His performance against Cooper ranks as one of the top jobs turned in by a MHS hurler this season. Hewitt is the first pitcher for the Pack to go the distance without surrendering a walk.

hit by Mark Hudson accounted for the run.

LEE'S ONLY major threat after the third came in the top of the seventh. Koonce singled, Dern hit into a fielder's choice, Parker grounded back to the mound but Hargeshiemer threw wildly to second trying to get the double play and all hands were safe. Corley then walked on four straight pitches to load the bases, Pepperpopped to second for the second out before Wright drew a bases loaded walk to score Dern from third. Velarde ended the threat by grounding out.

Abilene scored what proved to be the winning run in the fifth when Sigala laid down a squeeze bunt and Dobb hit his second two-run single of the day.

The Rebels have one game left, an important home contest with Midland High Saturday. If the Bulldogs defeat Big Spring Thursday in a makeup game, the second half district title could be hanging on the outcome. If Lee beats the Bulldogs the overall district title will go to the Rebs. If Lee should lose to the Purple Pack, as many as four district clubs could be involved in a playoff to determine the overall district kingpin.

Newspaper defends story

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The editor of the Birmingham Post-Herald has defended a report by his newspaper that a Huntsville, Ala., businessman pressured a high school basketball star to sign with Alabama.

The newspaper on Monday quoted the player, Bobby Lee Hurt of Huntsville, as saying he had co-signed a $4,000 loan with Glenn "Cotton" Johnson to help buy a 1968 car, but he would have to repay the money if he did not attend Alabama.

"This is not a story about an 8-year-old junkie that we can't find," said Angus McEachran, editor of The Post-Herald. "The story is not based on anonymous sources. It's not based on innuendo. It's based on a series of interviews with all of the participants, including Hurt."

At a news conference Monday, Hurt claimed he apparently was set up by a Scottsboro, Ala., man, Charles Harris, and denied the newspaper report. "I didn't tell those writers any of that stuff," Hurt said.

Breunig is ready for another year despite former critics

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

When Bob Breunig was drafted out of Arizona State eight years ago by the Dallas Cowboys, there were plenty of critics saying he was too small and too slow to make it in the National Football League.

Well, Breunig is too small and too slow to be a middle linebacker, but he is still playing, leading the team in tackles along the way. In fact, this is one position where the Cowboys have never made a mistake. There have been only three in Cowboy history — Jerry Tubbs, Lee Roy Jordan and too small and too slow himself.

So, entering his eighth season with the silver and blue, Breunig still feels an air of confidence. He's ready for another season. But are the Cowboys?

"I am very optimistic about the coming season," Breunig says. "We're coming off a year where we didn't go all the way, but I think it was a better year than most expected from us. Danny White should be much better after a year of experience and we had a lot of young kids on defense who learned a lot."

BUT AREN'T there rumors that Charlie Waters, the backbone of the Dallas secondary, may retire? And can Randy Hughes put shoulder injuries behind him? These are major questions that need answers.

"I think Charlie is still evaluating his position right now," Breunig said. "He had another operation in the off season and he has a decision to make. I would sure like to see him back, but I don't want him to jeopardize his life-long outlook."

"There is no question that we would miss Charlie if he didn't come back, but in pro football when anyone of us leaves, there is always someone to eventually take our place. We all know and understand that."

Even though Hughes is said to be sound physically, there will be eyes on him this year after two injury plagued seasons. "Randy's shoulder seems to be very strong. The doctors say a vice grip couldn't pull out this time. Randy is a physical specimen and he can play where ever they put him," Breunig said.

Linebacker D.D. Lewis has also stated that this may be his last year as a Cowboy and Breunig thinks that may be a possibility. "I think this may be D.D.'s last year, but that is only a guess. Lewis is probably the youngest 13-year player you will ever see."

Despite all this Breunig keeps his optimism. "I really feel confident about the defense. I think most of the worry comes from the outside because we (the players) feel we can do the job. People worry a lot about our secondary, but with young kids like Aaron Mitchell, Dennis Thurmond, Benny Barnes, Aaron Kyle and Randy Hughes you have a lot of talent even without Waters. They're only going to get better."

BREUNIG THINKS the Cowboys are pleased with the recent draft. "I know a lot of people thought we would go for defensive help early in the draft, but the coaches say that Howard Richards out of Missouri is going to be a good offensive tackle. They say he could play quick, but I don't know where with the offensive line we already have. The coaches are also pleased with receiver Doug Donley out of Ohio State."

"I do think the Cowboys wanted Bobby Butler of Florida State very badly, but Atlanta took him. Butler is a good looking defensive back, so the Cowboys would have picked for defense first if Atlanta hadn't beaten us to the punch. "We did draft five linebackers, and what's that supposed to tell me?" Breunig asked.

Breunig also played at Arizona State under Frank Kush and had some feelings about the recent trial where Kush was acquitted after a suit filed by a player accused Kush of hitting him.

"I'm just glad Coach Kush got through it all without a conviction," Breunig stated. "I'm glad he has a coaching job in the Canadian Football League. He has a lot to offer as a coach."

"Some of the things being said about him may be true, but I always got along fine with him. I just never talked to him when I was there. I didn't agree with everything he did, but I respect him and he has done a lot for me. It's takes different types of people in football. I do know that he got a lot out of players that no one else could have."

"He wasn't the toughest coach I've ever had. Bill Saloney, my high school coach in Phoenix, was as tough as they come. So, it was no shock to play under Kush at Arizona State."

Breunig was in Midland to speak to some businessmen at the Petroleum Club Tuesday night about the Happy Hill Farm Children's Home, one of the organizations he and his wife have done a great deal of work for.

"It's something we believe in. In fact, my wife has put together a cookbook of recipes from the Cowboys and their wives. All the proceeds go to the Happy Hill Farm."

BREUNIG SAYS he has been working out in the off season, but jokingly says, "I'm a member of A.A. — that's Athletes Anonymous. When you feel the urge to workout, you call a teammate and talk about it until the urge leaves."

But actually, Breunig is probably in top physical form. He hasn't missed many Cowboy games through seven years. "I missed four games my rookie season with a broken foot, but other than that, I've had only two shoulder operations and a couple of broken fingers. It's all part of the territory, I guess."

And that really isn't bad for a guy that's just too small and too slow.

Midland's rally falls short, 8-7

SAN ANTONIO—San Antonio's Dodgers headed off the Midland Cubs at the pass just in time for an 8-7 Texas League victory in the opener of a five-game series before 2,298 ecstatic Dodger fans here Tuesday night.

Tom Neidenfuer arrived just in time to stop a five-run Midland rally in the sixth, as the Cubs stormed back from an 8-2 deficit. Then, in the ninth, after Mel Hall singled, moved to second on a sacrifice and Tom Grant was passed purposely, Rich Hersher came in to retire the side and earn his fifth save.

GRANT ignited the sixth inning rally with his seventh homer to open the frame, chase starter Charlie Jones, Los Angeles' No. 1 draft choice in 1980, and set the stands to buzzing. The solo job cleared the double-deck fence in dead center, 400 feet into a prevailing wind, a feat that has been accomplished only a half dozen times.

The blow was one of two for the hot-hitting Grant, who extended his MIKE ZOURAS' three-run homer off lefty Tom Spino, 0-2, in the third highlighted a five-run inning for San Antonio. Tim Milner pitched shutout ball for the Cubs in the final three innings, but it was too late.

The Dodgers committed four errors in the Cubs' big sixth, but the were fleeced for four stolen bases, committed three errors and catcher Mike Diaz had a passed ball.

Hall, Grant, Diaz and Carmello Martinez each had two hits for Midland while Leo Hernandez, Steve Sax and Doug Holman had a pair of hits for San Antonio.

The teams go at it again tonight at 7:30 p.m. at St. Mary's College with Carlos Gil scheduled to pitch.

Alvarez lifts Amarillo past Diablos

By The Associated Press

John Alvarez had three home runs, including a grand slam, and drove in 10 runs as the Amarillo Gold Sox beat the El Paso Diablos, 16-8, in a Texas League baseball game Tuesday night.

In other Texas League action, Shreveport defeated Arkansas, 5-1, and Jackson edged Tulsa, 2-0.

Alvarez had a solo homer and a three-run homer in addition to his grand slam. He also drove in two more runs with a triple. For the night he had four hits in five trips to the plate.

Johnny Evans had a three-run homer for El Paso. Troy Dixon was the winning pitcher. Rick Kranitz, who gave up 10 runs, was the loser.

Islanders douse Rangers in sweep

NEW YORK (AP) — After they had eliminated the Toronto Maple Leafs in the opening round of the National Hockey League playoffs this spring, the New York Islanders were almost blasé. It was something they were supposed to do.

Following their six-game triumph over the Edmonton Oilers in the Stanley Cup quarterfinals, the defending champion Islanders sounded more relieved than ecstatic. Once again, they were expected to handle the upstart Oilers.

On Tuesday night, after they had demolished their local rivals, the New York Rangers, with a 5-2 victory that capped a four-game semifinal sweep, the Islanders weren't holding back.

The celebrations weren't as raucous as the ones that followed their Cup-clinching victory last year. But the Islanders were most satisfied with themselves after turning "The Battle of New York, Part 3," into a one-sided rout they deserved to be proud of. "This is as good a series as I've seen here," said super scorer Mike Bossy, who connected for a pair of first-period power play goals as he and his team set several NHL records. "There is a lot of satisfaction. We proved that what was said about us and the Rangers was not the way it would be."

What had been said, particularly in the media, was that the Rangers held a large psychological edge over their neighbors stemming from a six-game semifinal upset of the Islanders in 1979. The prevailing opinion seemed to be that the Isles couldn't win at Madison Square Garden and that, perhaps, their Stanley Cup of last year was an oddity that would not be repeated.

"Everybody was saying that last year was a fluke," said Islanders left wing John Tonelli, who boosted his team ahead 1-0 just 1:02 into the contest with a 15-foot backhand past Rangers goalie Steve Baker. "We would think of it. It was an added incentive."

"I remembered how bad my summer was in 1979. It was really tough being in the same area and having to explain what happened. None of us wanted that again."

North Stars gain edge against Calgary Flames

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — After Tuesday night's 7-4 loss to Minnesota, the Flames now have their backs against the proverbial wall — the Stampede Corral wall in Calgary, where game No. 5 of the National Hockey League semifinal series takes place Thursday night.

But it ain't over yet, insists Calgary Coach Al MacNeil.

"I don't feel we are on the ropes," said MacNeil, whose team was dissected by the tandem of Dino Ciccarelli and Bobby Smith. Ciccarelli, a rookie, and Smith, who three years ago was the National Hockey League Rookie of the Year, combined for four goals and three assists as the North Stars forged a 3-1 cushion in the best-of-seven series.

"We think we can beat that hockey club," MacNeil said. "It's as simple as that. It's not over by any stretch. We'll win at Calgary and we'll be back here."

The winner of the series advances to the Stanley Cup finals, where they'll have the chore of facing the defending champion New York Islanders. The steamrolling Islanders thumped the Rangers 5-2 Tuesday night to sweep that semifinal series in four games.

"We can't think about the Islanders yet," said Smith, whose picture-book goal late in the first period gave Minnesota a 3-1 lead. "The Flames are a long way back, but they're going to be ready to play Thursday."

Nahorodny bides his time

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA (AP) — Bill Nahorodny looks at the string of zeroes beside his name and wonders "if I'm on the disabled list or something." But although the third-string catcher for the Atlanta Braves hasn't appeared in a game this season, he's willing to wait.

The 27-year-old Nahorodny has spent 23 games in the bullpen, warming up pitchers and wondering if anyone knows he's still on the club.

"I don't feel funny calling up somebody on the team for breakfast and standing beside someone in batting practice ... The guys are pulling for me," he said. "All you can do is look at it (the daily statistics) and say, 'Well, I didn't make any errors.'"

But Nahorodny added that the situation "burns at you."

"You just wonder what the heck is going on," he said. "Believe me, I'm not satisfied sitting. I'm totally against it, and I hate it. I'm a fighter and I'm not laying down or anything."

"But you can't fight yourself. I try not to think about it too much ... try to spend as much time as possible with my family. Instead of putting during games, I try to tell a few jokes and keep people loose."

While he's telling jokes, he's also trying to retain his confidence.

"I still feel like I'm one of the best catchers in baseball," he said. "I've got my head up because I know I can play."

Nahorodny hit .242 with five home runs and 18 runs batted in last season. For his five major-league seasons, he has a .243 average.

Manager Bobby Cox has little encouragement to offer.

Griffin suffers in victory

By The Associated Press

Tom Griffin was in the shower when he heard that his nine-run lead was going down the drain.

"There I was taking a leisurely shower when I heard a lot of noise on the radio in the dressing room," said the San Francisco Giants' pitcher. "I paid little attention at first but when the roaring kept on, I left my shower to find out what was going on."

"To my amazement, I discovered the Mets were scoring like crazy and had the tying runs on base before Greg Minton finally put out the fire."

Before it was over, the Mets were able to put seven runs across to jeopardize Griffin's second victory of the season. But the Giants managed to hold on and win 9-7.

Griffin, 2-2, had pitched just two days before, getting pounded by Philadelphia before exiting after two and a third innings, so he didn't complain too loudly when Manager Frank Robinson lifted him after seven innings with a 9-0 lead. Griffin had given up but four hits to that point.

"Frank said Randy (Moffitt) needed some work," said Griffin. "It was a matter of looking for my next start also. As a pitcher you would like to stay in there but with a nine-run lead it looked like a good time to get Randy some work."

Griffin, a last-minute replacement for ailing Vida Blue, not only pitched well during his seven-inning stint but also knocked in two runs for the Giants, one with a homer. Moffitt coasted through the eighth, but then ran into trouble in the ninth and needed relief help himself from Fred Breining. Breining wasn't able to hold the fort, either, and left in place of Minton.

The Mets scored on an RBI single by Hubie Brooks, RBI double by Alex Trevino, a two-run triple by Doug Flynn, two-run homer by Mike Jorgensen and an RBI single by Dave Kingman.

Griffin gave the Giants a 1-0 lead in the third with a homer, his first of the season and the 10th of his 13 years in the majors. The pitcher singled home another run in the fourth, when San Francisco scored twice. The Giants scored six more runs in the fifth and as it turned out, needed just about every one of them.

Astros 4, Cubs 3
Alan Ashby's pinch two-run double in the ninth powered Houston over Chicago. Jose Cruz opened the Houston ninth with a single and moved to third on an infield single by Art Howe and an error. Two outs later, Ashby lashed his game-winning double to erase a 3-2 Chicago lead.

Dave Smith was the winner in relief of Joe Niekro while Lee Smith took the loss.

"I wasn't the guy you'd want up there, not the way I've been hitting," said Ashby, who took a .183 average to the plate. "I couldn't warm up. When I went to bat, my hands were frozen and my teeth were chattering."

"I wasn't looking for anything in particular. He (Smith) was throwing hard. He gave me a fastball low and away and I went with the pitch. I hadn't been hitting well to the opposite field."

Phillies 8, Dodgers 7
Manny Trillo's sacrifice fly scored the winning run as Philadelphia rallied for two runs in the ninth to defeat Los Angeles. Mike Schmidt doubled home the tying run before Trillo delivered his game-winning sacrifice fly off reliever Steve Howe.

Earlier, Pedro Guerrero's two-run homer featured a five-run rally in the top of the eighth inning that propelled the Dodgers into a 7-5 lead. In the bottom of the eighth, Trillo got a run back for the Phillies with his second homer of the season.

Expos 4, Padres 3
Pinch-hitter Willie Montanez singled home Warren Cromartie from third with two out in the ninth to lift Montreal over San Diego. Cromartie singled off Steve Mura leading off in the ninth, advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Larry Parrish, took third on Chris Speier's groundout and coasted home as Montanez drilled a pitch from reliever Gary Lucas into the gap in left center field.

Woody Fryman tossed two innings of one-hit relief to gain his second victory in as many decisions.

"I don't get that many chances, so when they finally do arrive, I have to make the best of them," said Montanez.

Montanez has been true to his word this season — he has only three hits but two of them have won games.

Cardinals 4, Braves 1
George Hendrick and Darrell Porter belted solo homers in the fourth inning, powering St. Louis over Atlanta behind Larry Sorensen's seven-hit performance. The Braves' seven-hit effort by Tommy Boggs, Sorensen didn't walk a batter and struck out one in winning his fourth game without a loss.

After the two home runs in the fourth, the Cardinals added two insurance runs in the sixth on RBI singles by Sixto Lezcano and Mike Ramsey.

Dale Murphy's RBI single in the ninth provided the Braves with their run and snapped a 232-3 scoreless streak by Sorensen.

The victory was the Cardinals' 12th in 14 games.

Carlos Kirmayr upsets McEnroe in net tourney

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Carlos Kirmayr isn't an unknown in tennis circles.

After all, he's been a member of the Brazilian Davis Cup team since 1971 and he numbers among his victims Jose-Luis Clerc, Eddie Dibbs, Victor Pecci, Eliot Teltscher and Ilie Nastase.

Now you can add John McEnroe.

Kirmayr stunned the top seed in the $592,000 Tournament of Champions at Forest Hills Tuesday, 5-7, 7-6, 6-2.

Also upset was third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis, the defending champion. He was beaten by hard-serving Fritz Buehning 7-5, 7-5. But it was McEnroe's defeat — and the way that it was accomplished — that sparked the sparse crowd.

McEnroe, the world's No. 2-ranked player and fresh off Sunday's victory in the World Championship Tennis Finals in Dallas, hit apparent winners all night. And all night Kirmayr ran down the ball and returned it. McEnroe would hit another apparent winner. And again Kirmayr somehow got the ball and kept it in play.

"He has a nice touch — he doesn't hit the ball hard, but he's a smart player. He makes the most of what he has and I give him credit for that."

McEnroe broke Kirmayr in the seventh game of the opening set, but Kirmayr, who attended Modesto, Calif., Junior College and San Jose State, broke right back in the eighth game. Then McEnroe, trailing 5-4, reeled off three straight games to win the one-hour, 17-minute first set.

Gross unleashes barrage on Tigers

By The Associated Press

Wayne Gross is finally hitting his weight. Don Baylor, on the other hand, still isn't hitting anyone's weight, but at least he's starting to hit.

After a week's absence from the lineup while Oakland faced a diet of left-handed pitchers, the 205-pound Gross boosted his average from .143 to .208 Tuesday night with a solo homer, two doubles, a single and three RBIs as the A's trimmed the Detroit Tigers 6-2.

"I don't like to sit them out, but I think it helped me this time," the A's third baseman said. "When you sit on the bench that long, if you've had some bad habits at the plate you forget them."

Baylor, California's 210-pound designated hitter, jumped from .083 to .118 with three singles and three RBIs in four at-bats to lead the Angels to a 6-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

The A's bounced back after dropping a doubleheader to the Yankees Sunday and improved their record to 21-5, best in the majors. Gross tied the score in the fourth inning with his second double of the game and Dwayne Murphy put the A's in front with a solo homer in the fifth. Gross connected an inning later and singled a run home in Oakland's third run eighth.

Meanwhile, Mike Norris scattered eight hits, including three infield singles and one bloop, to run his record to 6-0, matching Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers for the major league lead.

"Twenty-five wins sounds good," said Norris. "If I can do that, we should be in first place and win at least 100 games."

California's Baylor is a power hitter who was overjoyed to get three singles for a change. He had only six hits in his first 72 at-bats — two singles, a double and three home runs.

"Hitting an occasional home run is nice, but sometimes there are game situations when a single is what's needed," Baylor said after tying the game with a two-run single off New York's Tom Underwood in the fourth inning and singling home an insurance run in the fifth.

Leon Roberts smashed a three-run homer in the sixth inning and Danny Darwin and Steve Comer stopped Chicago on nine hits as Texas won for the eighth time in 11 games and tied the White Sox for second place in the AL West. Roberts' first home

Hobbs' Wallace Williams inks cage pact with Chaparrals

Wallace Williams, a former Hobbs, N.M., basketball star and starter at the University of New Mexico this past season, has signed to play for Midland College during the 1981-82 season.

The 5-10, 155-pounder was a first team All-District and first team All-State performer for Hobbs basketball coach Ralph Tasker as a shooting guard. He averaged 17 points and six assists per game his senior year and led Hobbs to one of its many state titles in 1980, when he was team captain.

But Williams was unhappy with his role as point guard, rather than a shooting guard, for the UNM Lobos and wanted to play closer to home.

"Singing Williams is really a bonus for us," MC coach Jerry Stone said,

Billie Jean keeps letters from print

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tennis star Billie Jean King has won a temporary restraining order to stop her former lover, Marilyn Barnett, from selling letters King wants to keep "forever private and confidential."

Documents filed by King's lawyer alleged that Barnett had been threatening for two to three years to publish the personal letters "if Billie Jean King did not give Marilyn Barnett what she wanted."

The documents said Barnett claimed she had been offered $25,000 by the National Enquirer for rights to some 100 letters which King wrote to her during their love affair.

"I wrote the letters to Barnett with the intent and understanding that they were and would remain forever private and confidential," the tennis star said in an affidavit filed with her request for the court order.

"Had I been of the belief or understanding that there was any possibility that Barnett would publish these letters to a third party, I would not have sent them to her," King said.

IF THE letters are published, the tennis star said no amount of money could reimburse her for the damage she would suffer.

"My right to privacy in the letters I sent to Barnett is a matter of incalculable value and importance to me," she said.

Superior Court Judge Thomas Johnson set a hearing for May 14 to determine whether an injunction should be issued to keep the letters from publication.

King, 37, made a surprise admission last week that she had a homosexual affair with Barnett which has been over for quite some time. She and her husband, Larry, said their 19-year marriage is stronger than ever.

The Women's Tennis Association, meanwhile, urged King to remain its president. WTA executive director Jerry Diamond said that 10 of the WTA's 15 board members had been polled following King's offer to resign after she admitted to the relationship with Barnett.

"All unanimously supported Billie Jean to remain as president," Diamond said from the WTA's offices in San Francisco.

Diamond said the association had talked to some sponsors to gauge their reaction to the Barnett suit and to King's admission of the relationship.

"There's been no negative feedback," Diamond added.

Barnett, 33, who became a paraplegic in a fall last year, is suing King for lifetime support and a Malibu home which she said she was promised when they were lovers. King says she promised nothing.

BARNETT HAS been living in the Malibu beach house purchased by the Kings in 1974. They say her lawsuit was prompted by their request that she move out so the house could be sold.

The court documents indicate a behind-the-scenes struggle by King's representatives to head off the lawsuit earlier this year by arranging a financial settlement with Barnett.

King's business manager, James Jorgenson, said in a statement accompanied by a cancelled check that he paid $4,000 to Barnett's attorney, Joel Ladin, last March to make sure the letters from King to Barnett were not published.

Jorgenson said he believed the payment was part of "an over-all resolution of matters between the Kings and Barnett."

But after the check was delivered to Ladin, he said, the attorney phoned and announced: "The deal is off."

Ladin did not return repeated phone calls to his office Tuesday.

Jorgenson said Ladin mentioned that Barnett "was desperate for money and could not pay her bills."

When they spoke, he said, Ladin told him "there were over 100 letters and they were in his possession."

King contended that Barnett has threatened for some time to sell the letters.

"At various times over the past two to three years, Barnett has told me that she was going to publish to third parties the letters I had written her and that she felt she could make a great deal of money from their publication," King's affidavit said.

"On one occasion, Barnett told me that she kept one-half of the letters in a safe deposit box and one-half of the letters at home. I was alarmed that she would maintain the letters in such a fashion," King said.

IN A separate affidavit, a woman identified only as Susan Cameron said Barnett told her the National Enquirer had offered $25,000 for publication rights to the letters.

"Marilyn Barnett said to me that if Billie Jean King did not give Marilyn Barnett what she wanted, Marilyn would sell the letters," Cameron said.

"She said that what she wanted was the house in Malibu in which she was living to rule that they are the legal owners of the Malibu house and that the personal letters are Mrs. King's property and can't be published without her consent."

In another development, NBC-TV announced it would retain King's promotional services, while Squibb & Sons Inc., disclosed it was dropping King as spokesperson for its vitamins.

Squibb maintained the action was dictated because King "overpowered" the ads, not because of publicity surrounding her relationship with Barnett.

King, who averages about $750,000 annually in product endorsements and TV commentary, got a vote of confidence from NBC and its executive producer of sports, Don Ohlmeyer.

"I don't know how this could possibly affect her being able to do a good job," Ohlmeyer said.

Cooney looks past Norton

NEW YORK (AP) — Gerry Cooney is looking forward to his next fight, and even more to the one which supposedly will come after it.

He will fight Ken Norton Monday night, and then, according to his co-manager, comes the big one — a shot at World Boxing Association heavyweight champion Mike Weaver.

Cooney, who is ranked the No. 1 contender by the WBA and the World Boxing Council, is scheduled to meet Norton in a 10-round bout Monday at Madison Square Garden. But, according to Mike Jones, the next step in Cooney's future already is planned.

"It's little premature now to acknowledge a signed and sealed agreement," said Jones, who, with Dennis Rappaport, manages the undefeated Cooney. "We've reached an agreement in context. Sam Glass offered us the fight."

Weaver's manager, Don Manuel, was not available for comment. But the New York Post quoted him as saying: "Yes, we have signed to fight Gerry Cooney at the last of the year. We have signed with Glass to fight Cooney if he wins this one (with Norton)."

Should Cooney get by Norton, there could be another obstacle in the way of a Weaver-Cooney fight.

Indy track clear, but pace is steady

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — There was no action on the track, but the pace was steady in garages at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway as drivers, owners and crews worked preparing for Saturday's scheduled start of qualifications for the 63th running of the Indy 500.

"There's many things going on in the garages," said defending champion Johnny Rutherford in a Tuesday visit to the press room. "There were a few little things that we found after our run yesterday that needed to be changed, so the day isn't a waste to us."

Rutherford, seeking to join A. J. Foyt as the only four-time winners here, says his yellow Chaparral is "already faster" than the car he drove to victory last year.

"But it looks like we'll have to go faster than that," noting that two-time winner Bobby Unser had already topped 197 mph and several other cars have been above 190. "We'll just have to fool with the car a little bit to see what happens."

The new Chaparral designed by owner Jim Hall of Midland is basically the same as last year's model, Rutherford said.

"We've had to make some changes in the design in order to accommodate the no-skirt rule, but the car proved itself last year, so we certainly weren't going to make major changes."

Rutherford won five races last year and dominated champ car racing as he finished second three times and also had a fourth and fifth-place finish during a 12-race program. And in his first 11 races, Rutherford completed more than 2,828 miles of racing to set a modern record for consistency by a driver-car team. The old standard of 2,253.11 miles had been set by Al Unser during the 1969-70 racing seasons. Only Hall of Famer Earl Cooper, who had more than 2,900 miles during the 1915 season had a better record of consistency.

"Jim Hall has done a wonderful job with that machine. It's held up and it's a really durable machine. It doesn't give you any surprises," Rutherford said.

Rutherford began 1981 winning at Phoenix and he says he's ready to become the first person to record back-to-back victories here since Al Unser took top honors in 1970 and 1971.

"It would be a big thrill to put together the fourth victory and tie A.J. for victories here. His record in racing is unprecedented and it sure would be gratifying to be in his company," Rutherford said.

The rain did cut into the practice time of some of the rookies who hope to make a qualifying run during the opening weekend. Before they can do that, they need to pass the U.S. Auto Club's tests which include driving 20 laps around 160 mph and 20 more at speeds of at least 170 or more. Nine of the 26 rookies entered in the race have completed that requirement.

Sugar Bowl switches to prime time on ABC

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Sugar Bowl, the Southeastern Conference and the American Broadcasting Co. have signed a six-year contract that will move the annual New Year's Day football game to prime time on television.

The change in kickoff time, to 7 p.m., CST, means the 47-year-old post-season college classic will go head-to-head with the Orange Bowl on television. Instead of continuing its afternoon ratings rivalry with the Cotton Bowl.

Although the Sugar Bowl has outdrawn the Cotton on television in recent years, the money for daytime television isn't as great as the payoff for prime time.

Sugar Bowl officials would not give a dollar figure on what its new three-way contract with the SEC and ABC would mean.

But Sugar Bowl President Mike Smith said that with the agreement announced Tuesday, "We'll be competitive with the Orange Bowl,

Williams considers refraining from any Senate proceedings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. is considering whether to surrender his vote in Congress pending an appeal of his Abscam bribery conviction and an ethics committee investigation that could result in the first expulsion from the Senate since the Civil War.

The chairman of the ethics committee, Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said the panel would decide quickly whether to recommend disciplinary action against Williams, a New Jersey Democrat with 22 years in the Senate.

Meeting twice Tuesday in closed session, in what was described as "the indictment stage" of the Senate inquiry, the committee voted to file formal charges against Williams, judging him on Senate rules instead of criminal laws. The next step will be hiring a special counsel and holding hearings.

The panel can recommend expulsion, reprimand or no action. The full Senate would make the final decision.

Williams' press secretary, Michael McCurry, said the senator had "taken under advisement" suggestions that he temporarily refrain from Senate proceedings.

Wallop said that if Williams were to yield his voting rights during the probe, it "would make life a lot easier, but I'm not about to make that judgment."

Under a Senate rule, a senator would have to ask permission to refrain from voting if he wishes to do so. "My guess is that if he (Williams) asked for such permission, it would be granted," Wallop said.

Williams has circulated a letter among his fellow senators, asking for patience and pointing out that the jury verdict was not final. He said his attorney has yet to argue a number of motions which could result in a reversal of his conviction.

The ethics committee, meanwhile, declined to release details of its charges against Williams, saying it wanted to give him a chance to see them first.

Mine worker union chief facing uphill struggle

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Sam Church Jr. and B.R. "Bobby" Brown are a pair of former country boys who have been thrust into the spotlight by the 41-day nationwide coal strike.

Church grew up in a rural West Virginia mining family. He went to work in the mines and fought his way to the presidency of the 160,000-member United Mine Workers.

Brown is the son of an Arkansas farmer. He went off to college, got a job in the oilfields and now is president of Consolidation Coal Co. and chief negotiator for the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

Despite common roots, however, Church and Brown are the chief adversaries in the UMW's strike, which enters its seventh week Friday.

Both have refused to say what they will place on the bargaining table when contract talks resume Thursday in Washington, D.C. But at the moment, it appears the burly union leader is holding the weaker hand.

On one side he faces Brown, while on the other he's being watched closely by union members who already have rejected one proposed contract.

Church, who faces an election next year, has been depicted by Brown as being an ineffective leader, unable to sway the members of his union. At the same time, he has been criticized from within the UMW as a poor bargainer who almost saddled the union with a potentially disastrous contract.

This appears to leave Church in need of some major bargaining concessions from Brown. Another rejected contract could damage his credibility with coal operators and hurts his chances of re-election.

After the proposed contract was defeated March 31, Church went into seclusion for a week. When he emerged, he got into a fistfight with a UMW safety official on the sidewalk in front of the union's Washington headquarters. Since then, he has been trying to get Brown back to the bargaining table and wooing the rank and file.

Brown and Church did meet briefly April 17. Church laid down a list of seven new demands, including proposals that BCOA negotiators give up several provisions the industry gained in the previously negotiated settlement — such as elimination of royalty payments on non-union coal purchased by BCOA companies and implementation of 45-day probationary periods for new employees.

Brown took a look at the list and walked out. He told Church to let him know when he had decided to be "realistic."

Brown has been getting solid support from the BCOA's 130 members. The few complaints have come from small companies that have felt the pinch of the strike. They've urged him to reach a settlement.

Brown is aided further by the soft-coal market, which is just that — soft.

Most of the nation's big coal-burning utilities, which constitute the major market for BCOA coal, amassed 90- to 120-day stockpiles before the strike. They still have plenty of coal, probably enough to hold out until the air conditioning peak later this summer.

Brown does have some potential problems, however. One is that a long strike could jeopardize the steam coal export market, which has begun to boom in recent months. BCOA operators have vivid memories of how the export market for metallurgical coking — coal all but died after the UMW's record 111-day contract strike in 1977-78.

Increasing violence in the Appalachian coalfields, where several men have been shot in strike-related incidents, also could begin to take a toll on the BCOA's collective will.

Meanwhile, the economies of UMW coal states, such as West Virginia, have been hit hard. Tax revenues have plummeted, forcing cutbacks in government services.

Church says he believes he can negotiate an agreement within a few days; Brown isn't talking. Industry observers say they expect this next bargaining session to last for weeks, and they're not predicting the outcome.

House committee gives rough treatment to Reagan's farm proposals

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's farm program, dismantled by a Senate panel last week, is getting even harsher treatment from the House Agriculture Committee.

Despite strong indications that stringent spending targets will be approved by the full House, the committee has endorsed farm price-support plans well in excess of administration recommendations and the spending targets likely to be set by Congress.

"I want to make sure that everybody knows we're going to be back in here trying to cut $2.5 billion out of programs we're considering now," said Rep. Floyd Fithian, D-Ind.

In its first day of work on commodity-support programs in the 1981 farm bill, the Democratic-controlled committee on Monday discarded Reagan's dairy, peanut and wool support plans for its own alternatives.

Last week, in the Republican-dominated Senate, where more liberal dairy and peanut programs were endorsed, the administration's proposal on wool was at least generally accepted.

The House committee versions of dairy and peanut supports are similar to those tentatively approved by the Senate but even more expensive. Although some cost of the price-support programs is recovered when loans are repaid or government bought commodities resold, the administration is concerned that its economic program would be thwarted if it had to come up with the initial money for loans.

Although Congress supported Reagan in March by eliminating a scheduled April 1 semiannual adjustment in dairy supports, saving some $147 million, the House committee, like its Senate counterpart, restored the semiannual adjustment for future years.

As in the Senate, the House committee version sets minimum dairy supports at 75 percent of parity, the amount a commodity must sell for to give producers the same buying power they had in 1910-1914.

But the House panel sets the semiannual adjustment at 75 percent of parity, while the Senate panel calls for only 70 percent. The administration wanted supports generally set at 70 percent with no semiannual adjustment.

According to Agriculture Department estimates disputed by several committee members, the House version would cost some $5.6 billion over its four-year life, the Senate version about $4.4 billion and the administration's about $2.8 billion.

In 1982 alone, the House committee plan would require outlays of $1.6 billion while the spending targets likely to be accepted by the full House set aside just $622 million for next year's price supports.

Critics are hinting Carnation Co. may have gone dry

"HEATHCLIFF'S CATNIP PATCH WON A RIBBON FROM THE GARDEN CLUB."

By BILL SING
The Los Angeles Times
LOS ANGELES — In recent years, Carnation Co. has come under growing criticism from some food industry analysts who say the 82-year-old, Los Angeles-based firm's "contented cows" have gone complacent.

Critics say the firm, which chalked up $3.2 billion in sales last year, has lost the creative knack that made it one of the most highly regarded food companies on Wall Street and in the American home.

Since the mid-'70s, they say, Carnation has produced little to compare with its earlier "winners" — the first instant milk, first non-dairy coffee creamer (Coffee-mate), its Slen-dex diet foods, Instant Breakfast drinks and Friskies pet foods.

The new products it has developed, such as a Fish Ahoy cat food and a Come 'N Get It dog food, both introduced last year, are seen by these critics more as extensions of their existing pet food product lines than innovations.

"I think most people view Carnation as a pretty boring company," says analyst William Leach of Donaldson, Lufkin and Jenrette. Carnation stock has declined from a price-earnings ratio of about 30 in 1972, above the food industry average, to about 7 now, near the industry average.

The brunt of the criticism has fallen on Carnation's 74-year-old chairman and chief executive, H. Everett Olson. A white-haired, deep-voiced accountant who has worked for Carnation 50 years, and has been running it for 13, he is described by insiders and independent analysts alike as a brilliant financial expert, but one who has suppressed creativity in favor of fattening short-term profits even as several products continue to lose sales and market share.

Olson has never said much publicly in response to the critics.

Continuing a close-mouthed policy begun years ago by company founder E. A. Stuart, who maintained Carnation as a tightly run family dairy business, Olson has generally refused to attend analysts' meetings and speak to reporters.

Instead, he and his publicists have pointed critics to the firm's enviable record of 28 straight years of earnings records as proof that Carnation remains an aggressive, growth-oriented company.

"By our earnings record, I don't think we've lost our aggressiveness at all," Olson said in an interview following Carnation's annual meeting late last month. He noted that the company is ranked No. 1 nationally in hot cocoa products and in canned pet foods — two areas, he says, where new products have been coming out regularly.

Olson added that critics are being a bit too harsh when they accuse Carnation of failing to produce "breakthrough" products like Instant Breakfast or Coffee-mate. "You must remember that when we came out with those products, our earnings were around $11 million to $14 million."

"Now they're in the area of $154 million. So a breakthrough at that time won't necessarily be a breakthrough at this time" because with a much larger earnings base, it is more difficult for a single product to have so much impact.

Added company president Dwight L. Stuart, the founder's grandson who many believe to be next in line to become chief executive: "If you look at all food companies in the U.S. in the past 10 years, I think you'll only find maybe four or five so-called breakthroughs with sales over $100 million."

Some analysts agree that they may be expecting too much from Carnation. Other food companies have also been hard pressed to come up with big winners, and many, like General Mills Inc., have followed Carnation and others by diversifying into non-food businesses in recent years. Carnation, for example, acquired a scholastic products operation in 1973 while General Mills has delved into games and toys, furniture and apparel.

In any event, some analysts say Carnation is showing signs of entering a new period of aggressiveness as it tries to reverse declining or stagnant sales in several of its domestic markets, including its diet, instant breakfast, and tomato products.

It's time for islanders to give up basking in solitude

MIDDLE BASS ISLAND, Ohio (AP) — The days are growing longer. Lake Erie's winter ice is just a memory. Ferry boats are starting to churn out from the mainland, and the 35 people who live year-round on Middle Bass Island are coping — again — with upheaval.

John Hendrickson shakes his head at the thought.

"The tourists will be coming," he said. "We'll have to start paying attention to which side of the road we're driving on."

In the winter, only a few families live on Middle Bass. Summer houses stand vacant. Ice encases empty boat docks.

In the summer, tourists bask in sunshine. In the winter, islanders bask in solitude.

Tree-covered and almost billiard-flat, South Bass, Middle Bass and North Bass islands skip from the Ohio mainland, a scant three miles away, toward Canada, like lily pads on a giant pond.

South Bass, more often called Put-In-Bay, is best known. From its north shore, Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry sailed to meet the British during the War of 1812 and sent back his famous dispatch: "We have met the enemy and they are ours — two ships, two brigs, one schooner, and one sloop." A lighthouse-type monument to his heroic feats is a tourist attraction.

To the north, spaced less than a mile apart, lie Middle Bass and North Bass, or Isle St. George. About 50 people live on the northern island, about 35 on Middle Bass. Some have retired. One is a commercial fisherman. Others work in the North Bass vineyards. Their children attend one-room schools.

In the winter, it requires an island-hopping airplane flight or a long snowmobile ride across the frozen lake to reach the islands.

There, the silent dawn glides across the landscape. No rush, no bustle, no haste; time doesn't much matter.

Ed Kubicka awoke one day recently, went downstairs in the old house he and his wife Tina are restoring and settled down to watch the television program "Sunday Morning."

It was Wednesday.

"I don't know how that happened," Kubicka said with a laugh. "It just seemed like Sunday, I guess."

That will happen on an island.

ignitions. A fishing crew's spring preparations are discussed by all.

In three years of teaching in Middle Bass School, Carolyn Mowry, 58, has logged several hundred round-trip flights to and from her mainland home. Teaching one kindergartener, four seventh graders and an eighth grader, she reaps a different satisfaction than she did in 10 years at a larger school system in Elyria, Ohio.

"In a class of 25, a teacher seldom has time to give them individual attention. Here, when I give back a paper, I can explain to each of them why they missed the questions they did. That's one of the things I like best about it."

North Bass is more isolated. Even in summer, no ferry runs are scheduled. Few tourists venture out.

Instead, the island has grapes. Half its surface, 350 acres, were planted in long, neat rows of vines. Seventeen varieties are grown on the island.

Tending the 280,000 grapevines is a year-round job. In winter, island residents and migrant workers prune the vines. In spring and summer they spray for bugs and weeds and watch the weather. In the fall, they harvest.

The surrounding lake moderates temperatures in spring and fall, warding off danger from frost.

"The climate here is very good, for growing grapes. Some of these Catawba vineyards are over 100 years old," Dale Burris said, looking out his kitchen window toward the vineyards he manages for Meier's Wine Cellars.

His wife, Billie, is postmistress on North Bass. A native of Detroit, she has lived on North Bass for more than a decade and wouldn't live anywhere else.

"It's so nice here, so peaceful," she said. "I don't have to lock my doors. If somebody stole something, where would they go? The kids can stay out and play at night without our having to worry about what's happening to them." Outside, Paul and Patty Smith knelt in the dirt pruning vines one by one.

"We'd never heard of Isle St. George," Mrs. Smith recalled with a smile. "We saw an ad in the newspaper where they were looking for caretakers for the vineyards."

The Smiths took the jobs a year and a half ago, moving out from the mainland with their son, some furniture, three dogs, five cats and a horse.

They live in an old house in the woods now. The loudest noise is the clucking of chickens in the side yard. Walking around the yard, taking care not to disturb a sleeping cat, Mrs. Smith smiled again.

House has second chance to set school subjects

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — House members have a second chance to consider a bill that would set out basic subjects for instruction in Texas public schools.

The controversial bill passed the House once but it underwent widespread changes Tuesday before it was approved by voice vote in the Senate and sent back to the House.

"We have tried to answer all the criticism we have had about the bill since the House passed it," said Sen. Pete Snelson, D-Midland.

Basically the bill gives the State Board of Education responsibility for setting out guidelines for courses of instruction in Texas public schools, but it also gives local school boards a final say, Snelson said.

The bill says that subjects taught from kindergarten through the 12th grade shall include English, other languages, math, science, health, physical education, fine arts, social studies, economics "with emphasis on the free enterprise system," business education, vocational education, and Texas and United States history as individual subjects and in reading courses.

A Senate amendment states that "a primary purpose of public school curriculum is to prepare patriotic citizens who can function in a free enterprise society."

Snelson, reacting to recent criticism, said the bill specifies that the State Board of Education and local school boards "shall continue the tradition of teaching U.S. and Texas history and the free enterprise system in the public schools."

Red Rose School lists interesting curriculum

By RICK GLADSTONE
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — At a night school for adults, people are paying $15 to learn about revolution, the U.S. labor movement and the history of socialism.

The Red Rose School, in its third term and growing in size, also offers classes such as "Workers in Revolt," "Revolution and Repression in Latin America" and "Who Rules Oregon?"

The school is so named because Portland is called the Rose City and red roses are historical protest symbols, school founders say.

"We don't mean it to be crudely pinko," says Ross Danielson, a 38-year-old sociologist and member of the founding committee. "The school's name seems to connote a kind of activism."

The school does not give grades or exams, but students are required to read books, he says.

It is typical of many schools recently started in U.S. cities, Red Rose teachers say. Classes usually are in someone's home or a church center, run by leftists who say they feel overwhelmed by increasing American conservatism. They say they are retrenching to assess their positions.

"When there are periods of defeat, there's a tendency to pull back and rethink the issues," says Jan Haaken, Red Rose School coordinator.

She says Ronald Reagan's election, massive defeats for Democrats in Congress, growing demands for school prayer, military strength, the death penalty and bans on abortion have left many leftists dazed and frustrated.

"When we discussed founding the school, it was partly out of fear of rowing right-wing sentiment," Ms. Haaken says. "We wanted to start a school where people could come and share ideas about what is happening in this country."

Red Rose School founders say their school is different because it is not affiliated with a political party, it is incorporated and it meets regularly, unlike casual study groups or discussion sessions.

However, students do not receive academic credit, though some attempts have been made to arrange credit at nearby colleges, school founders say.

Most Red Rose students are in their late 20s and college-educated. Many were involved in anti-Vietnam War protests of the 1960s and 1970s, says Ms. Haaken, a clinical psychologist.

"Many of us are socialists and Marxists of various kinds," she says. "But we try and maintain an openness in the classes."

The school, which offers 10 classes, has attracted an increasing number of teachers, lawyers, social workers, nurses and undergraduate college students, Ms. Haaken says.

"We started out with three or four people in each class," she says. "Now we have nine or 10."

Classes are conducted week nights in southeast Portland at the Friends' Hall, a neighborhood church center. Brochures, tacked up in nearby stores, describe the school as "continuing education for activists."

One class, called Headlines and Frontlines, is team-taught by newspaper reporters and media spokesmen from a consumer group and a local Indian tribal council.

"The course covers the basic media skills that community organizations need to get their message across," the brochure states.

In the United States Labor Movement, students discuss how unions should deal with plant closures, technology and health problems.

Navy not sure ship collision could have been avoided

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sonar aboard a U.S. submarine detected the Japanese freighter Nissho Maru before the ships collided last month, but the Navy isn't certain whether the collision could have been avoided, the Pentagon says.

"This information was passed to the ship's conning station, but was not heard or acknowledged by the officer of the deck," officials said Tuesday in a report demanded by Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, who is in the United States for talks with President Reagan.

"At this stage in the investigation it is not clear that the collision could have been avoided had the sonar information been acted upon promptly," the preliminary investigation report added.

The U.S. submarine George Washington collided with the freighter April 9. The captain and a crewman of the freighter were killed. Thirteen other crewmen were rescued by a Japanese destroyer.

The Navy said the submarine's deck officer, Lt. R. D. Hampton, and its skipper, Cmdr. Robert D. Woehl, have been "temporarily reassigned" pending recommendations and possible action following receipt of the 7th Fleet commander's formal report.

Officials said the reassignment should not be interpreted as implying culpability for the collision, which occurred about 110 miles off the southern tip of Japan in what the Navy says was foul weather.

The report also indicated that there were "excessive delays" in the sub's reporting the collision, mostly because "no one realized that the Nissho Maru was seriously damaged or had sunk ... until the survivors were picked up."

The Navy has accepted liability for the collision, and the report said a U.S. commission is awaiting claims by individual crew members. A $2.7 million damage claim for the ship and its cargo of raw cotton has been received by the United States, the re-

The nuclear-powered, missile-firing sub was slightly damaged in the collision and sailed from Guam under a new skipper early Tuesday, Navy officials said.

The preliminary report essentially repeated what the Navy said shortly after the collision was made public — that Woehl "did not note any signs that the (freighter) was in distress."

The George Washington surfaced right after the collision, the report said, but the captain immediately returned to periscope depth after determining that there was no significant damage to the sub.

"In the three-to-five minutes before Nissho Maru went out of sight in the deteriorating visibility at a distance of about 1,250 yards, he did not note any signs that the ship was in distress," the report said.

"He even observed a man standing stationary on the starboard wing of the bridge, looking toward the submarine. He saw no signs of panic or disruption."

Based on his brief observations and his evaluation of the "physical jolt experienced aboard George Washington," Woehl concluded the freighter "had not been seriously damaged," according to the report.

It said the captain withdrew about eight miles and transmitted his first report "to a higher authority" about an hour and 27 minutes afterward.

Woehl, the report said, asked a P-3C U.S. Navy patrol plane with which the George Washington had been conducting anti-submarine warfare exercises to search the area "to confirm his belief that Nissho Maru had not been seriously damaged."

According to the report, the patrol plane sighted three ships, none of them in distress, further reinforcing the sub's "erroneous understanding of the situation."

Although surviving Japanese crew members thought they had signaled their distress to the submarine and had been sighted by the patrol plane, the report said, "neither U.S. Navy unit was aware of the situation aboard Nissho Maru."

The investigation revealed that the Japanese ship's SOS "probably was never transmitted because, according to the crew, the ship's radio antenna apparently was touching the hull of the ship."

The long delay in action by U.S. Navy authorities in Japan following the collision has been criticized by the Japanese.

The report indicated that U.S. authorities there did not realize the seriousness of the situation until 21 hours after the sub sent word of the collision.

The report said the commander of U.S. naval forces in Japan received a call from the Japanese Maritime Self Defense Force liaison officer "asking for information about the reported sinking of a Japanese ship by a submarine."

"It was not until this point that other U.S. authorities first realized that the collision had resulted in the sinking of the Nissho Maru," the report said.

TV gives lawyers training they can't get in school

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Hey, Bill! Who's going to handle Camera 2?" shouted the judge.

Moments later, the court was convened, but justice wasn't hanging in the balance. And the judge really wasn't a judge. The defendant was a former cop, very honest, and the prosecutor wore dungarees.

It was make believe. But it was serious.

Such mock trials are played out six days a month in a television studio on the fifth floor of City Hall. In an adjoining room, behind a glass partition, sophisticated videotape equipment records the proceedings.

The verdict: The program has proven a big help in polishing up young lawyers' courtroom techniques as the state hunts for more convictions in its war against crime.

"The intent is to train people," said Arthur Shuman, a Philadelphia assistant district attorney, who plays the judge. "By seeing themselves on television afterwards, they get a chance to review their strengths and weaknesses. It really helps and it's something you can't get in law school."

The project is coordinated by the Pennsylvania District Attorney's Association. Three day-long sessions have been held biweekly since November under a $155,000 grant from the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

At one recent session, four lawyers from the Philadelphia DA's office, three from the Bucks County DA's office, two from the state attorney general's office and two from the state Department of Environmental Resources took part.

It was a drug case. The defendant was played by Arthur Verbrugge, a former homicide detective who now trains detectives in the city DA's office. He was charged with possession of drugs with intent to deliver. But he told the judge and the jury, made up of leftover lawyers, that it was a bum rap — his roommate did it.

The defense attorney was played by Eddie Simkin, 25, of the city DA's office, the prosecutor by Marc Brecher, 28, a deputy attorney general assigned to the Philadelphia office.

As two television cameras recorded the action, the lawyers questioned the defendant for about 15 minutes each, a white desk light signaling "go," a yellow one giving a two-minute warning and a red one signaling "stop."

"OK, cut," Shuman said, and he began his critique.

To Simkin: "You use 'OK' a lot. Watch it. When you approached the defendant you had your back to the jury. Never do that. He (the defendant) made a mistake about how long he had known Mr. Neuman (the roommate). You showed good witness control in that respect" (by pointing out the error).

Then turning to the other lawyers who would participate later that day, Shuman noted: "Don't be afraid that you'll be accused of coaching a witness, leading the witness. Coach him. Lead him. Get it over with."

To Brecher: "You started out by saying, 'Good afternoon, Mr. (defendant). That's not the image you are trying to give to the jury. He's the most despicable creep in the world. You don't want to give him that courtesy. Treat him with righteous indignation."

"At one point you said, 'Indulge me.' That always sounds a little French to me. Like you have a powdered wig. It's a personal quirk, but I like, 'Can I have a minute, your honor?' a lot better."

"The yellow light rattled you a little, didn't it? Stuff like that happens in court all the time. People faint. There are disturbances. You just have to keep chugging along."

Afterwards, Brecher watched the videotape on a monitor in a side room, making mental notes of his performance. "It doesn't even look like me," he said.

The studio was designed by Bill Zembruski, a video systems engineer who produces training tapes for the city police department. The program is administered by Mel Nasielski, 26, an administrative assistant to Philadelphia District Attorney Edward Rendell.

Nasielski says that trying cases is in many ways an art form, adding: "I don't think the general public is aware that winning cases before a jury is not just being able to get an A on a law school exam."

The videotape equipment has already been helpful in two real court cases — once to show jurors film of a grocery store robbery and once to beam testimony from a hospital bed to jurors.

This summer it may help the DA's office do some recruiting.

"We will have law students working for us," said Shuman, who has been with the district attorney's office six years. "They will take part in this program. One of the purposes will be to look them over and see if we want them permanently."

PEOPLE

BEDFORD HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Ellen Burstyn will have an expert audience for her performance in "The People vs. Jean Harris."

Lou Ganim, a spokesman for the state Department of Corrections, says Jean Harris, who is serving a prison sentence of 15 years to life for the slaying of Scarsdale Diet developer Dr. Herman Tarnower, will be in front of a TV for the NBC movie based on her trial.

Mrs. Harris, former headmistress of an exclusive girls' school, was convicted earlier this year of murdering her long-time lover. Prosecutors contended she killed the millionaire cardiologist in a jealous rage over his affair with a younger woman, while the defense contended Mrs. Harris meant to kill herself and shot him accidentally.

Ms. Burstyn, who has appeared in "The Exorcist" and "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore," will play the defendant in the three-hour movie, to be broadcast Thursday and Friday.

LOVEJOY, Ga. (AP) — It's a good life, Herman Talmadge says, tending garden, jogging and fishing. But the former powerful U.S. senator says the addiction to politics is a hard one to overcome.

Talmadge served 24 years in the Senate before being defeated last November after a battle with alcoholism and an investigation of his finances.

"If I'd kept a diary, I could have written a best-seller," he said in a recent interview, adding he had no plans to write a book.

The 67-year-old politician says he's enjoying the quiet life at his home here, at least for now.

"Politics is like heroin addiction — it's hard to shake," he said. But political pastures "aren't as green to me anymore, the fire of ambition isn't as strong as it once was. This is the first time in 40 years that I've been able to wake up in the morning and the day is all mine."

"When I left the Senate, I looked around at my colleagues and they all looked like they had just come from their mother's funeral," he said. "The ones who left the Senate — voluntarily or involuntarily — why, they look happy, relaxed."

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) — Demonstrators selling sandwiches and protesting American aid to El Salvador got no business from Liberals and little sympathy from Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

As Trudeau arrived Tuesday night at a Liberal fund-raising dinner, the 40 demonstrators urged him to condemn American economic and military support for the Salvadoran government and accused him of supporting the ruling military junta in the Central American country.

"We are not supporting the government in El Salvador," Trudeau told the crowd.

Brian O'Neill, spokesman for the group, said the El Salvadoran government has been killing thousands of people and that Trudeau should speak out against such action.

"So are the insurgents killing people," Trudeau told O'Neill.

But O'Neill protested that the El Salvadoran government was being supplied arms by the Americans.

"Don't you think the insurgents have guns?" Trudeau asked.

Trudeau then moved on to the $150-a-plate dinner.

ABC planning news show to air on Sunday morning

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC has unveiled plans for a new Sunday morning news program that will replace "Issues and Answers" and incorporate part of its format.

Roone Arledge, president of ABC News, told the annual meeting of the network's affiliates Tuesday that the one-hour program would use the format of "Issues and Answers" but would also include discussion between a permanent host and a panel.

No date was set for the premiere of the show, which will take over the time period of the children's series, "Animals, Animals, Animals."

The 800 broadcast executives representing 207 ABC affiliate stations gave enthusiastic receptions at their meeting here to the two space shuttle astronauts, Robert Crippen and John Young; to Pierre Salinger, ABC News Paris bureau chief who was instrumental in putting together the prestigious "America Held Hostage," a detailed account of the release of the hostages in Tehran; and to David Hartman, host of ABC's "Good Morning, America."

The two astronauts were introduced by Eugene Cernan, himself a former astronaut and the last American on the moon, and now an ABC space commentator.

Young referred to the space shuttle Columbia as "this good ol' truck," adding, "Everything in that shuttle worked, including me and Crip."

Arledge told the meeting that Hartman's contract with ABC has been extended so that the former actor can remain at the helm of the popular morning show.

He also announced that ABC:

—Will telecast the Sugar Bowl during prime time for the next five years, beginning next New Year's Day.

—Will also present the first major network coverage of the New York City marathon, set for Oct. 25.

The broadcast executives also heard ABC vice president Mel Goldberg report that the results of a new opinion poll indicated a majority of Americans want to make their own viewing choices, uninfluenced by any special interest groups.

He said the survey, conducted in March by the National Survey Research Group, also said that only 2 percent of the total population said that religious organizations, advertisers or special interest groups should have primary responsibility for determining program acceptability.

'Dallas' helps CBS win in weekly ratings race

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS won the networks' prime-time ratings race for the third week in a row, with seven of the 10 highest-rated programs including the season finale of "Dallas," figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

CBS' score for the week ending May 3 — the second since the end of the 1980-81 TV year — was 17.9 to 15.1 for ABC and 14.7 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 17.9 percent of the nation's homes with TV were tuned to CBS.

"Dallas," which ended the 1979-80 season with the now-famous "Who shot J.R.?" episode, wrapped up the most recent TV year with another cliffhanger. The rating was 32.9, and Nielsen says that means of all the nation's homes with television, nearly one in three — 32.9 percent — saw at least part of the concluding episode.

In addition to the first-run installment from "Dallas," CBS listed repeats from a half-dozen other series in the week's Top 10.

Despite its ninth consecutive last-place finish in the networks' weekly competition, NBC scored with the first installment in a two-part drama, "Murder in Texas," No. 5.

Two ABC series still in first run, "Fantasy Island" and "Hart to Hart," finished ninth and 10th for the week, with a CBS movie, "We're Fighting Back," in a tie for 11th place. NBC's broadcast of the Academy of Country Music awards show was No. 18.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, May 7, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The first presidential inaugural ball was held on this day in 1789 in New York. It commemorated the inauguration of George Washington. Today was also the birthday of the late great screen star Gary Cooper. Your determination and conscientiousness will carry your career to new heights in the coming year. The financial outlook is much improved. You may be offered a golden investment opportunity. Do not be tempted into making a secret alliance. A true extrovert, you have many friends of both sexes. Be sure to choose a mate who understands your need for a variety of companions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A misunderstanding needs immediate attention and correction. Show your affection openly in a romantic situation. Mate will be delighted!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Employment matters should go well today. Money question can now be answered satisfactorily. Guard a tendency to be indiscreet—it could cause romantic problems.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Joint financial affairs could spell serious trouble. Partnerships do not enjoy favorable influences right now. Postpone signing legal papers. Adopt a wait-and-see attitude.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your artistic and cultural interests rise to the surface today. Be considerate when accepting or rejecting a social invitation. Keep spending to a minimum. Handle electrical gadgets with care.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A crisis situation can occur in an important personal relationship unless you face reality. Do not bury your head in the sand. Wishful thinking is counter-productive now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The spotlight is on legal negotiations, real estate deals, insurance and banking matters. Shy away from a member of the opposite sex who comes on strong. Put your imprint on work projects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Exercise discretion when dealing with higher-ups, individuals connected with employment. Withdraw from romantic alliance if your differences with mate are too great.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.

21): Glad tidings may arrive in an unexpected form. Celebrate with someone special. Make the evening fun but not too expensive. Let mate know plans in advance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your financial holdings may be growing faster than you had hoped. Look for ways to increase productivity at place of business. Romance moves in new directions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Certain goals you have pursued for a long time now move within your reach. Be less critical of your actions and efforts. You are inclined to expect too much of yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Buy essentials only and put the rest of your money away for a rainy day. A new creative cycle has begun. Look for a chance to assume more authority. Capitalize on your managerial skills.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Favorable influences affect romance. Try not to jump to conclusions. It pays to keep an open mind. Expand your horizons by enrolling in a special course or joining a study group.

genious plan. South won the king of spades and cashed the king and ace of hearts. Next came a diamond to the queen and West's ace. West exited with his last spade. Declarer won the ace, cashed the king of diamonds and threw West on lead with a diamond.

Down to nothing but minor-suit cards, West's only safe play was to attempt an exit with his last diamond. But now declarer revealed the depth of his plan. Instead of ruffing the last diamond, which would have left him with a spade and a club loser in addition to the two tricks he had already lost, declarer stuffed dummy's club!

The defenders now had three tricks, but West was well and truly end played. If he led the ace of clubs, declarer would ruff in dummy, return to his hand with a trump and discard dummy's spade loser on the king of clubs. If, instead, West led a low club, dummy's spade loser would go there and then. Either way, the defenders had shot their bolt and the contract sailed home.

Mother still fighting for son's life, lifestyle

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Ricky's mother was kept from seeing him the day he was born. Permitted her first glimpse of the baby a day later, she was stunned to see that his arms and legs were tied to the sides of an incubator.

"There was no skin on the top of his hands or on his neck," Karen Tumillo recalled. "I couldn't pick him up by his sides and fondle him. I had to put my hands under him and sort of scoop him up."

The baby had a water blister on his nose, another on his chest. Any pressure, and another blister would form and his skin would tear away. He was tied to the incubator so he wouldn't move and rub his skin off.

"He looked like he had been burned," said Mrs. Tumillo, 30.

Doctors at the hospital in Niles, Mich., didn't know what was wrong. Ricky was taken to the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor, where specialists diagnosed dystrophic epidermolysis bullosa, a rare skin disorder that afflicts only about 500 Americans.

They also told Mrs. Tumillo he might not live more than two weeks longer. That was 12 years ago. No one knows how much longer Ricky has. He and his brother, Tony, are Mrs. Tumillo's sons by a first marriage. They live with her and her second husband, Frank, a city employee. The Tumillos also have a 4-year-old daughter. Ricky is in a sixth grade special education class along with 18 other children with disabilities.

"I worry about what will happen to him. He has more guts than most kids. He's a fighter. He never gives up, and I'll never give up fighting for him," Mrs. Tumillo said. "I hope there never is another child born like Ricky. But in a way, we may be lucky. He can talk; he can see; he can hear; he can tell me his feelings."

Outside the house, the boy with blotchy, flaking, peeling skin and webbed fingers and toes is often shunned and teased.

"The other kids know not to touch him and they don't have much to do with him. Some even are mean enough to call him 'snake' because his skin is peeling," said Mrs. Tumillo.

The mother said a man once accused her of burning Ricky with cigarettes. Child welfare officers came to the house to investigate, where Mrs.

Tumillo convinced them of her son's ailment. "When he was 10 and we lived in another neighborhood, a woman told other children not to play with Ricky or they would die — and she said I was not a Christian woman or I would not have had him," Mrs. Tumillo recalled. "When Ricky was much younger, a mother with a young child in tow pointed to Ricky and said: 'If you are bad, you will start looking like him.'"

"At other times, when we go to the store or to a restaurant, people will walk up and say: 'What happened to him? My God, what is the matter with him?' They will stare at him, either afraid of what they see or from mere curiosity."

"I had cards printed. When these things begin happening, I pass out the cards explaining about my little boy," she said.

Mrs. Tumillo said she tries to keep Ricky active. He likes to play disco records and says he wants to be a disco singer.

"I want him to do things himself, to be as normal as possible," she said. "A lot of parents whose children have the disease don't want them to do anything. If you treat a child like he is handicapped, he will grow up and become a handicapped adult."

The skin on Ricky's hands and feet began fusing when he was 2, and the digits formed stumps. He has had six major skin grafts.

"In his last operation on Dec. 16, the thumb of his left hand was separated from the webbed fingers and Ricky for the first time could pick up a hamburger with one hand instead of using the stumps to hold it."

Mrs. Tumillo works as a waitress several nights a week and spends much of her days working as head of the Illinois chapter of DEBRA, the non-profit Dystrophic Epidermolysis Bullosa Research Association of America.

"Nobody knows what causes the disease," said Dr. Nancy Esterly, a pediatrician and dermatologist at Children's Memorial Hospital in Chicago.

She explained that as far as doctors can tell, EB is a series of six diseases. Those that scar, such as the variety afflicting Ricky, are called dystrophic EB. The disease is so rare that finding doctors to take cases is difficult.

"I couldn't understand why there wasn't a cure," Mrs. Tumillo said, recalling the years she searched for medical help after Ricky was diagnosed. "It was very depressing. Sometimes I'd just cry. I didn't know what kind of life he would have."

Ricky Tumillo, 12, plays a disco record as his mother watches. Ricky suffers from a rare skin disorder, dystrophic Epidermolysis Bullosa, which causes his skin to blister when touched.

Artificial heart implanted in woman

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The brief implantation of an artificial heart in the body of a woman who had been declared brain-dead was hailed by doctors as a step that could lead to the eventual use of artificial hearts in cardiac patients.

The device kept blood circulating for two hours and allowed the middle-aged woman's kidneys, liver and lungs to function, doctors said.

"It lends itself to real-life situations," said Dr. Jacob Kolff, 42, who headed the first-time procedure Sunday at Temple University and is chief of the school's department of cardiovascular and thoracic surgery.

He said a man-made heart may be implanted in a living person within a year. Only once before has an artificial heart been implanted into a human. In 1969 such a device was implanted into a dying man in Texas and was kept there for 60 hours until replaced by a transplanted human heart. The patient died two days later.

The anonymous Temple patient was declared neurologically dead an hour before the experimental operation. She was disconnected from her heart-lung machine five minutes after the artificial heart was put in place.

The plastic heart, made of two baseball-sized ventricle devices with four valves attached to four plastic tubes through which air is pumped and blood is circulated, was placed into her chest after the natural heart was removed.

The artificial heart's power supply, a 50-pound machine, was outside the body.

The experiment "showed that artificial hearts can help preserve lungs, livers, gall bladders and other organs of brain-dead people until they can be transplanted to patients who need them," said Kolff.

He said the power supply perhaps "can be reduced in size and weight so it can be carried in a ladies' purse" by the time artificial hearts are ready for living persons.

While doctors praised the two-hour operation, Dr. Leo Henikoff, dean of Temple's medical school, said "long-term survival is the goal."

"The first implant may be considered a success if it kept a person alive a month, but the real goal is for a much longer period, at least a year, or else it wouldn't make much sense to go on with it," he said.

Kolff estimated the artificial heart system would cost $15,000, plus several thousand dollars to make needed electrical connections in the patient's home, and $10,000 for the hospital fee.

Organ donation program set

Joyce Cook, program coordinator of The Living Bank, will moderate a panel on organ donation: Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. at Medical Center Hospital auditorium in Odessa.

Based on connecting human organ donors with patients in need of transplants, The Living Bank is located in Houston in the Texas Medical Center. An international organization, The Living Bank is a non-profit service group which coordinates referrals of these anatomical donations to the appropriate medical facilities nearest the place of the donor's death.

The time limit in collecting organs after death is critical. Kidneys, for example, must be retrieved within minutes after death. In order to expedite notification of The Living Bank and thereby speeding up organ and tissue retrieval, Mrs. Cook said she conducts public education seminars with hospital and safety officials.

Thursday's seminar will feature local medical personnel as well as professionals from the fire department, the highway patrol, police department, morticians, ministers and the Lions Eye Bank.

The session is open to the public and refreshments will be served.

Laetrile available soon in Phoenix area stores

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona's first manufacturer of laetrile, a highly controversial cancer treatment banned from interstate commerce, said his product should be on the shelves of stores in the Phoenix area later this week.

Arizona Laetrile Corp. of Scottsdale said it has received final approval from Maricopa County officials to begin laetrile production following an inspection Monday of the company's plant.

The announcement of laetrile availability in Arizona followed on the heels of last week's report from a national research team that laetrile is "ineffective" in the treatment of cancer.
