

Continental pilots to strike Saturday

HOUSTON (AP) — Union executives representing Continental Airline pilots voted today to strike against the airline, which slashed salaries when it sought bankruptcy protection.

Gary Thomas, a spokesman for Continental pilots in Houston, said the pilots would walk out at 2 a.m. CDT Saturday and stay off the job until "a satisfactory back-to-work-agreement is negotiated."

"We intend to make it stick," Thomas said. "We're going to withhold service. We will not return."

Flight attendants also would join the work stoppage, he said.

"We want to return to the basic agreement we had," Thomas said.

He said he expected Continental pilots who were still in the air to "leave the cockpit." The financially-troubled carrier has 2,025 pilots, with 1,435 still working, Thomas said. He said the work stoppage would affect the airline's international flights.

Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks said the strike would not have any effect on the airline's service.

"We are and have been fully prepared to operate as we have been expecting this reaction by the union leadership," Hicks said.

"There are only 15 union leaders, but there are 1,400 pilots and many more than enough to continue today's full operation that have affirmed to us their willingness to continue flying despite such a call by the union," he said.

Hicks said the company believed a strike would be "totally illegal under the Railway Labor Act. Obviously the company would have the ability to get an injunction."

About 40 people attended the meeting, including 15 members of the Continental pilots executive board. The rest were flight attendant representatives.

The pilots met for 40 minutes this morning and then recessed for a 20-minute executive session of the 15-member board. Thomas said as he came out of the executive session, "We're going to do some voting."

Minutes later, he re-emerged and said the union executives had voted to for "withdrawal of services."

Thomas said the executive session was called for because "some people just wanted to say some things in private."

The strike motion was tabled Wednesday until after 200 Continental pilots in Los Angeles could discuss the issue. Those pilots voted later to go along with their colleagues in Denver and Houston, who decided to strike rather than work for the carrier for less than half their previous pay.

Agree to reopen airport

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's cease-fire committee said it agreed to reopen Beirut airport today and that it worked out arrangements to ensure the safety of all roads to the terminal.

The airport has been closed for more than a month in a renewal of Lebanon's civil war, and its reopening would be evidence that the cease-fire is working.

Attack Reagan's arm move

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov says President Reagan's latest proposal to limit nuclear arms in Europe is an attempt to build NATO strength while disarming Moscow, but he did not reject the plan outright.

Andropov said the Soviets were committed to "peace on Earth" and termed Reagan's offer a "so-called new move" that did not significantly alter the U.S. stand at Geneva talks on limiting medium-range missiles.

The Soviet president and Communist Party chief accused the United States of "unwillingness to conduct serious talks of any kind on arms control." His statement was carried Wednesday by the official Soviet news agency Tass.

"In brief, we are proposed to talk on how to help the NATO bloc to upset to its advantage the balance of medium-range nuclear systems in the European zone. And this move is presented brazenly as something new," he said.

Tropical storm nears coast

By The Associated Press

Tropical Storm Dean zigged west today toward the Atlantic Coast after crippling a tugboat and hurting two crew members with 60 mph winds that sent heavy surf crashing over beaches on the Outer Banks of North Carolina.

The island of Hawaii, meanwhile, braced for an attack today from Tropical Storm Narda, approaching hurricane strength and expected to pass within 50 miles of the Pacific chain's largest island.

Although Dean was moving west and small craft advisories spanned more than 1,100 miles of the Eastern Seaboard, forecasters said it was too early to advise residents to begin making emergency plans.

Gale force winds from Dean extended about 300 miles outward from the storm. Along the Outer Banks, gales pushed surf over beaches along the narrow, 60-mile long strip of land to produce "some coastal erosion," said meteorologist Mike Matthews of the National Weather Service in Cape Hatteras, N.C.

Blood drive slated at Ira

A community blood drive at Ira is planned Monday under the sponsorship of the Ira PTA. The drive will be conducted in the Ira Community Center from 3 until 7 p.m.

Every fourth donor at the drive will receive a free six-pack of Dr. Pepper courtesy of the Dr. Pepper Bottling Company. In addition, a free hamburger courtesy of Whataburger in Snyder will be given to each donor.

The drive is sponsored in conjunction with the Scurry County advisory council to United Blood Services of Lubbock, whose personnel will conduct the drive.

Bond issue to voters Oct. 1

Ira voters will go to the polls Saturday to decide a $750,000 bond issue called last month by school trustees.

Voting will take place at the Ira Community Center between the hours of 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Grady Moore will serve as election judge and Barbara Preston is alternate election judge.

The funds are targeted for construction of classrooms, a new cafeteria and some renovation work on the existing structure.

New cheerleaders named at college

Three new faces have joined the ranks of the Western Texas College cheerleaders after recent campus tryouts.

Faculty sponsor Mickey Baird says 11 girls tried out for the three vacant spaces on the squad and "all showed more talent and ability than any group in the history of WTC."

Newly selected are Galveston freshman Darla Carter, Haskell freshman Gena Whitaker and Colorado City freshman Loretta Morris. They join Sweetwater sophomore Veda Owens and Ozona sophomore Vicki Vargas as yell leaders for this year's Westerner and Duster games.

Snyder freshman Vera Lopez was named alternate for the group and will serve in the absence of one of the other five.

The cheerleaders from Angelo State University judged the tryout competition.

The spirit group will begin their regular "season" simultaneously with the men's and women's basketball teams. The men's Westerner team opens play Nov. 1 against the McMurry JV in the Scurry County Coliseum.

The cheerleaders will be back in action locally Nov. 3 as the Duster women's team open play against Weatherford.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "If you don't think people have short memories, just ask someone what you've accomplished."

Probably because of the proximity to Lubbock, Snyder likely has more Texas Tech graduates than any other college in the state.

Snyder folks are interested in Red Raider football, and many of us for years have been frustrated by frequent coaching changes, inability to recruit and lack of gridiron victories.

There was renewed optimism this year in Raiderland as one respected sports publication put Tech in the Top 20. The Air Force then shot down that theory, and many Red Raiders became Pink Raiders.

But the SWC school on the Plains redeemed themselves last weekend with a big television victory over the Baylor Bears. Diehard Raider fan Dr. Robert Hargrove was one of those in Waco to savor the victory.

Rev. Miller Robinson, a devout Baylor fan, was disappointed with the loss but found one cheerful aspect about the Tech victory last Saturday.

For visiting SHS senior...

Anti-U.S. sentiment 'different'

By Shirley A. Gorman
SDN News Editor

A Snyder High School senior took the opportunity this summer to visit a country currently at odds with the United State — Argentina.

Amy Lancaster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lancaster, had her visit arranged through the local chapter of the American Field Service.

And while she says she enjoyed her three-month stay, she notes it was definitely different.

She was actually an alternate AFS scholarship winner (Chris Wiman was selected for a visit to Spain), but when the opportunity came for her to go as well, she readily agreed, even taking a temporary job to help raise funds for the trip.

While in Argentina, Lancaster lived with a family in the city and province of Santa Fe.

The family — with both the husband and wife practicing lawyers — were in the upper middle income bracket. They had two children, a daughter age 17 and a son age 20.

Lancaster characterized the experience as a little scary as she spoke no Spanish and her host family no English. But they learned to communicate as best they could, she said.

"By the time I left I was communicating pretty good and was even able to understand some of the things I was picking up from other conversations around me, but I really needed another month."

Due to the controversy and war with Britain over the Falklands Islands, sentiment in Argentina was running high against "Yankies." Her host family was very protective of her, she said.

As for their countrymen, she said some she met would call her "Shanky"

"I can't remember when we had so many Tech exes in church Sunday morning," the Baptist minister quipped.

Last summer Jay Huckabee was in New York and decided it would be appropriate to walk across the famous Brooklyn Bridge. The bridge isn't for sale, but New York City is trying to lease 115,000 feet of unused space beneath it for a retail mall development.

There are still lots of new ideas. Take for instance the condominium developer in Chicago who was having difficulty moving his new apartments.

His "better mousetrap" was to offer a year's free maid service with the purchase of an apartment.

The free enterprise system that promotes individual initiative is still what makes this country tick.

Ken Brumbelow is an avid golfer, and a friend was telling him that practice is the secret to improving his game.

"If practice makes perfect, why does it become more instead of less difficult to get out of bed each morning?" Brumbelow asked.

Inmate philosophical about his fate

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Death row inmate James David Autry says he doubts he will die as scheduled Oct. 5, but adds that he is ready if his execution is not stayed.

"I already made up my mind that there isn't any sense worrying about it," Autry told the Huntsville Item Wednesday. "There isn't anything I can do. It's not really left up to me. It's up to the Supreme Court and my lawyer."

Autry, who celebrated his 29th birthday Tuesday, was convicted in the April 1980 shooting death of 43-year-old Shirley Drouet, a Port Arthur convenience store clerk. One customer also was fatally shot, and another was crippled.

Autry's attorney, Charles Carver, asked U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White to delay the execution so arguments could be heard in the case. White referred the matter to the full court, which is meeting in conference this week.

"I'm prepared mentally and emotionally," Autry said. "I've thought about dying. I don't think dying is a bad thing. Everybody dies."

Earlier this week, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said he would not oppose the request for a stay.

Autry, nicknamed "Cowboy" by fellow inmates, said he thinks Mattox's decision will have little effect on his chances.

"They might just be playing games. It (the execution) could happen, but I don't think it will," Autry told the Item.

Other inmates said Wednesday that they were concerned about the impact Autry's execution could have.

"I think everybody's aware that the time is drawing near. I think we're all affected by it unless there are some that are cold dead stone," said Ronald Clark O'Bryan, a former Deer Park optician convicted in the Halloween 1974 poisoning of his 8-year-old son with cyanide-spiked candy.

Prosecutors said Autry and a companion, John Alton Sandifer, shot Mrs. Drouet between the eyes during a robbery of the Sak-N-Pak convenience store in Port Arthur. Fearing two witnesses to the shooting would recognize them, Autry returned to the store and shot them, prosecutors said.

John Broussard died, while a Greek sailor suffered permanent brain damage.

Autry denied the allegations, saying government witnesses "put the gun in my hand."

Both Autry and Sandifer, 31, were indicted on capital murder charges. But the indictment against Sandifer was dismissed and he received a seven-year sentence in an unrelated burglary.

He was paroled Sept. 13 after serving less than three years of the sentence.

Carver had sought immunity so Sandifer could testify at Autry's trial, but the request was denied. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans affirmed the action, but two courts have ruled differently in similar cases.

Carver said Wednesday he was concerned about his client's fate, citing the ruling in the case of Thomas Andy Barefoot, another Texas prisoner who was convicted in the shooting death of a Harker Heights policeman.

"The Supreme Court issued a decision in the Barefoot case that an inmate is not entitled to an automatic stay. They may feel this is the appropriate case to reinforce the ruling. Therefore, the Supreme Court could deny a stay of execution and cite the Barefoot case as authority," Carver said.

Carver said he would ask Texas Gov. Mark

White for help if the high court denies the request.

"I think he has a chance. But at the same time, as each day passes by, that event may come to pass," Carver said.

Autry was first scheduled to die Dec. 17 — 10 days after Charlie Brooks, a Fort Worth man accused of killing a mechanic, became the first U.S. convict to die by chemical injection. A federal judge granted the stay two days before Autry was to die.

Another execution for Feb. 21 was also blocked.

Texas has executed 362 prison inmates since 1924, all but one by electrocution, prison spokesman Charles Brown said.

At Wit's End

Where have all the children gone?

I don't mean the battery-driven ones who spend their days and nights propped up before TVs and computer terminals. Or the 35-year-old minds in children's bodies who operate a microwave oven and have their own door key before they are six. Or the ones who log 10,000 jet miles a year visiting two sets of parents.

I'm talking about the children who used to enjoy a couple of years of doing nothing but discovering things around them, exploring their curiosity, easing into a family and being loved. It had a name. It was called childhood.

It was an important time in which a child could only guess what was across the street, behind the fence, or on the other side of the traffic light. For the moment, he had to know what his home was all about and how safe he felt and that no matter what, it would always be there and feel the same way.

Where have the children gone? They've passed Childhood and proceeded directly to Adulthood. Realistically, that's where all the action is today anyway.

Who wants to be a child anymore? There isn't a day goes by that you don't see a sign on an apartment that says, "No Children or Pets Allowed." Children cost more to raise than a condo in Palm Beach. Their worth as an income tax deduction has dropped within the last 10 years. Child care centers are near the bottom of priorities in this country.

Indeed, their very right to be born is in jeopardy.

Small children ... more than any other single group ... have had to bear the brunt of the changes of the '80s: our mobility, our redefined family structure, changing technology and new attitudes toward everything, including them.

Children are no longer a dominant force, an excuse, a reason, a goal, a status or a commitment. They are just there.

I have no idea whether this is good or bad. I am just trying to imagine what it is to be a child in these times and to wonder if we could spare a few years so that childhood could once again flourish. With it, you can take just about anything life has to throw at you. Without it? I'm not sure I could have survived.

Report says jail violence rampant

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A court-appointed monitor has charged that the Texas Department of Corrections has made "no significant effort" to stem brutality in state prisons, despite a federal judge's order for sweeping changes to protect inmates, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

In a recent report, Paul T. Belazis concluded that widespread brutality by guards continues two years after U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler issued a reform order in a landmark civil rights case filed by Texas prison inmates, the newspaper said.

Belazis said TDC has taken no apparent action to discipline guards who beat prisoners. "TDC's efforts instead have reflected deliberate indifference to complying with the court's order and, in many cases, deliberate efforts to impede monitoring," Belazis' report said. "In the meantime, illegal use of force continues unabated at TDC institutions."

Belazis' 82-page confidential report was distributed Sept. 13 to Texas prison officials, the Texas Board of Corrections and lawyers for both sides in a civil rights case which prompted Justice's order for widespread prison reforms, the Times Herald reported.

Justice had specifically directed the TDC to adopt standards governing the use of force, to document and investigate complaints of prisoner abuse and to discipline guards who violated those standards.

TDC spokesman Rick Hartley said he was "very disappointed that this is public now because we have not even had a chance to respond to it."

"We're in the process of reviewing the report and will respond accordingly," Hartley said.

Hartley said it would not be proper for officials to comment publicly until they had "ample" time to review the report.

"I don't think it's fair for us to make comments on something that is to be confidential at this time. We are reviewing it and looking into the matters raised by the monitor," he said.

Belazis' report noted that all sides would be allowed to comment on the findings and conclusions, and their comments would be incorporated in the report before it is officially submitted to Justice.

Once the report is filed with the court, the prison system may ask Justice to conduct a hearing before he decides whether to accept or reject it.

Belazis, who was given the task of reporting on prison guard brutality, said most of his observations spanned the period between December 1982 and August 1983. During that time, Belazis said he received 670 complaints of abuse, but conducted thorough investigations of only 14 cases.

"The incidents formally investigated by the monitors must be regarded as only a fraction of those which routinely occur," he wrote. "It is inconceivable that they constitute isolated or aberrant incidents upon which the monitors stumbled by coincidence."

Citing specific examples of what he considered to be violations of Justice's order, Belazis said it was clear that "physical abuse of inmates has continued to occur with alarming force and frequency."

The monitor said the instances of abuse "go beyond overreactions to situations requiring the use of some physical force."

"In a great many instances, brutal, unprovoked beatings were inflicted upon inmates who were guilty of violating institutional rules but who posed no immediate threat to safety or security," the report said.

Henry II, the king of France, died in 1559 of a wound he had received in a tournament.

Wood carver creates works of arts

PALMDALE, Fla. (AP) — Tom Gaskins wants to be remembered for his "knees." After all, it was he who made them famous.

They have nothing to do with this 74-year-old man's anatomy. Gaskins, a naturalist, woodsman and champion wild turkey hunter, is an expert on cypress knees, a botanical oddity nature has given only to the cypress tree.

Most of Gaskins' time is spent at his Cypress Knee Museum in this small south-central farming community, or at a workshop across U.S. 27, where he embellishes nature's creations into works of art.

"No one knows why the cypress has knees, but it's the only tree that has them," says the spry Gaskins as he walks a catwalk he has built through a nearby cypress swamp. "A knee never becomes a tree, it's not part of the root system, doesn't have leaves and takes thousands of years to grow." Botanists generally are in agreement that knees are outgrowths which help aerate the tree's root system when it is submerged in a swamp. Not all cypress trees have knees.

While these bark-covered growths protruding from the earth bring to mind something from a horror movie, Gaskins discovered their beauty as a child when he learned to whittle.

A talented wood carver, he began his museum collection in 1934 and moved it south to Palmdale three years later, when he was granted a U.S. patent on his cypress knee products. He opened the museum to the public in 1951.

No two cypress knees are the same. They vary in height from only inches to as much as 8 feet. Gaskins explains that circumference and height are determined by the size of the tree, root system and age.

Knees generally grow in conical shapes, and their formations are determined by bruising suffered from fallen limbs, nature's elements and wildlife.

"It is easily scarred, but the healing process causes it to take exquisite forms," Gaskins says.

After he cuts the knees, Gaskins steams them in large metal tubs so the bark can be peeled. They are then dried in the sun, which results in different shades of color ranging from a light maple to almost a deep red.

Once stripped of its bark, the knee's graceful swirls, twists and bends form a work of art, says Gaskins.

Some of his creations are hollowed out and can be used as vases or plant holders; others are converted into lamps and clocks. However, most are sold as ornamental conversation pieces.

Remarkably, when one looks at a finished cypress knee for any length of time, it appears to resemble people's faces, caricatures, animals or nature scenes. For years, Gaskins' cypress products were sold in fashionable department stores across the country.

He's well known through much of the state either for his museum, a wild turkey caller he manufactures, or his prowess in hunting the large game bird.

"But I'm not considered an old-timer yet," he adds. "You got to be 80 for that."

Still agile and sinewy, Gaskins jogs three miles each morning after doing 90 pushups. His personal philosophy on how to stay healthy includes standing on his head five minutes every day "to prevent glaucoma," and ingesting a creosote and plastic combination of his own invention "to cure arthritis and prevent cancer."

NOTICE OF INTENTION To engage in Weather Modification Operations within the State of Texas.

Prepared: September 19, 1983

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT the Colorado River Municipal Water District of P. O. Box 869, Big Spring, Texas 79720, holder of Weather Modification License No. 83-1 of the State of Texas, has applied for a permit to engage in an operation to change or attempt to change by artificial methods the natural development of appropriate atmospheric cloud forms or precipitation forms which occur in the troposphere. An application has been filed with the Texas Department of Water Resources for consideration to conduct a weather modification operation to increase precipitation within the area described and by the method stated below:

1. The equipment, materials and methods to be used to conduct this operation include: a weather radar set, meteorological analysis information, a twin-engine aircraft, air-to-ground radio communications, and wing-mounted racks to hold silver iodide flares; a meteorologist directs the aircraft to a radar-selected cloud to begin cloud-seeding at cloud base to increase rainfall in the target area.

2. The area intended to be affected by the operation is the target area which is bounded by a line beginning at a point of origin at Big Spring, Texas and running along Highway 87 in a northwesterly direction to Lamesa, thence north-northeast on Highway 87 to the north border of Dawson County, thence east along the northern boundary lines of Dawson, Borden and Scurry Counties to Highway 84; thence southeast along Highway 84 to Roscoe, in Nolan County; thence south-southeast to Maryneal; thence southwest to Silver in Coke County; thence South-southwest to Highway 87 at a point approximately 13 miles northwest of Sterling City; thence northwesterly along Highway 87 to the point of origin at Big Spring, Texas.

3. The area in which the equipment is to be operated includes the operational area and the target area. The operational area is the land-area between an outer boundary which is defined by a line that encompasses the block of counties of Lynn, Garza, Kent, Fisher, Nolan, Coke, Sterling, Glasscock, Martin and Dawson, and an inner boundary which is that of the target area.

4. The persons approved by the Department to be in control and in charge of the operation are Ray Pat Jones and Owen H. Ivie, P.E.

5. The period of the operation is expected to be March 1 through November 30 during the years 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987.

6. The initial Texas Weather Modification License was issued to the Colorado River Municipal Water District Dec. 18, 1974, and has been renewed each year.

The Commission shall, if requested by at least 25 persons, hold a public hearing in the area where the operation is to be conducted prior to the issuance of the permit. Schmidt contributes...

Phillies clinch NL East

CHICAGO (AP) - Mike Schmidt refused to call it symbolic, but he had to have a big hand in Philadelphia's clinching of the National League East title Wednesday, despite the fact Bo Diaz went 5-for-5 and Joe Morgan 4-for-4.

Schmidt contributed his major-league leading 40th homer and a triple to the Phillies' 19-hit attack in a 13-6 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

But all of that was secondary as far as Schmidt was concerned. With champagne dripping down his forehead, the two-time National League Most Valuable Player had a bigger role in what turned the Phillies around.

"Yes, I'll take some credit," said Schmidt, who had a bitter exchange with interim manager Paul Owens early in the month before the Phillies started their title drive.

Amidst a lot of grumbling within the ranks, Schmidt at the time said the team didn't know who the manager was and that "the lineup was decided by committee (Owens and the coaches)."

Owens, who had stepped in for Pat Corrales in July, told Schmidt not to worry about the managing and to concentrate on playing to his potential.

"We went 19-3 after that," said Schmidt, "I think that's what turned us around. If we had gone 3-19, I could have hung up my spikes. They would have said I was the reason the team had failed and that I had caused the dissension."

"But a lot of the guys agreed and told me so," said Schmidt. "It's going to have to change, we decided, and it did. I'm a Christian and believe that maybe it was something that was supposed to happen."

Schmidt led off the fourth inning with a homer to break a 3-3 tie and put the Phillies ahead to stay with his 12th game-winning run batted in.

The homer was his 39th in Wrigley Field and his 59th against the Cubs, but the crux of the victory that brought the Phillies their fifth divisional title in eight years was the hitting of Diaz and Morgan.

Coach looking for team to respond Friday night

Snyder's Tigers start a new season Friday night, one they hope will go better than the previous one.

"I think you have to put it all behind you whether you won or lost because there is always another game coming up," said Tiger varsity football coach George Byerly. "So it's a new season for us. We have to put the last three games behind us. We haven't played badly but we haven't played well enough to win," he added.

The Tigers open the District 2-4A season Friday by hosting undefeated Sweetwater. Byerly said the Tigers go into the con-

Coyotes host bulldogs in 2-1A six-man test

Ira, Highland and Trent, all undefeated teams in the 2-1A six-man football conference are on the road Friday night, hoping to extend their streaks to five straight victories.

The toughest matchup is expected to come at Gail, where the Borden County Coyotes play host to Ira.

Borden is 1-3 for the season but 1-1 in district play. The Bulldogs arrive with 2-0 and 4-0 records.

Defending state champion Highland, also 4-0, visits winless Paint Creek in a contest sure to evoke the 45-point rule, while unbeaten Trent tests the Eagles at McCaulley, 1-3, 0-2.

In the only other game scheduled, winless Hermleigh packs for McCaulley, 1-3, 0-2. Leuders-Avoia is open this week.

Freshmen pop Breckenridge

Snyder freshmen fought to a 30-6 halftime lead and went on to defeat Breckenridge 36-12 here Wednesday evening.

The victory gives Snyder a 4-0 record as they prepare for a game in Lamesa next Thursday.

Earl Ware accounted for most of the Cats' scoring. He combined with quarterback Kyle Guerry on a 66-yard pass play to put Snyder on the board in the first quarter. Guerry then hit Chris Garrett for the two-point conversion.

Later in the second quarter, Jeff Rose crossed the goal line on a four-yard run.

Ware score the next three TDs. He broke free on a 26-yard reverse and a 42 yard reverse in the second quarter and had a 72-yard kickoff return in the third.

Rose and Guerry each scored a two-point conversion.

Guerry was four of six in Question: What two NFL teams are undefeated?

Answer: The Dallas Cowboys and the Los Angeles Raiders.

Question: What NFL teams will be undefeated Monday morning?
Answer: None.

Question: None? Answer: None!

Upset City, here we come. Figure on the Cowboys and the Raiders to lose, and Florida State in a mild-type upset over Auburn. And yes, the Aggies will out-field goal the Red Raiders, Arkansas is going to beat TCU and Baylor will handle Houston.

Last week's picks turned up a measly 13-7 for .650. For the year it's 55-25 for .687. That's down from .700 because the percentages have now been altered to account for Andrew's forfeit to Seminole. Sometimes even when you win, you lose.

Here we go...

Sweetwater at Snyder: Seems to me Sweetwater is ripe for an upset, but do the Tigers have the confidence in themselves? That's the question. They'll have to prove it. A major column-eater if I'm wrong...MUSTANGS 21, TIGERS 7.

Lake View at Lamesa: Lake View pads its stats...CHIEFS 35, TORS 7.

Andrews at Monahans: Monahans won't be able to keep up...MUSTANGS 24, LOBOES 7.

Ft Stockton at Pecos: Tougher than it should be...PANTHERS 21, EAGLES 14.

Hermleigh at Grady: Hermleigh's best chance at victory so far, but Grady is probably thinking similar thoughts...WILDCATS 34, CARDINALS 18.

Ira at Borden County: Ira has been winning with a so-so schedule. Borden is losing with a tough one. They say winning is contagious though, so...BULLDOGS 35, COYOTES 28.

Texas A&M at Texas Tech: It took a while, but I've got this one figured out now. The answer is really simple. The Aggies will win, four field goals to three...A&M 12, TECH 9.

Rice at Texas: Texas will learn from Baylor and Houston...LONGHORNS 35, OWLS 17.

Baylor at Houston: Baylor's not nearly as bad as it looked against Tech last week...BEARS 28, COUGARS 22.

Arkansas at TCU: Legitimate upset pick, but I'm betting on the Razorbacks to regroup...ARKANSAS 24, TCU 14.

Texas-Arlington at SMU: The Mustangs got a scare last week. UT-A won't have a chance...SMU 38, TEX-ARLINGTON 7.

Florida State at Auburn: The game of the week as far as I'm concerned. I've got a feeling...FLORIDA STATE 28, AUBURN 24.

Brigham Young at UCLA: This should go to UCLA, but who can tell anymore...UCLA 31, BRIGHAM YOUNG 28.

Pittsburgh at West Virginia: West Virginia is too tough...WEST VIRGINIA 30, PITT 19.

Indiana at Michigan: The Hoosiers will make a game of it, but...MICHIGAN 23, INDIANA 20.

Dallas at Minnesota: Upset Special? My guess is Dallas didn't learn much from last week's incredible win...VIKINGS 27, DALLAS 20.

Houston at Pittsburgh: Hapless is the word for Houston this year...STEELERS 31, OILERS 17.

LA Raiders at Washington: Upset Special No. 2. No more undefeated teams in the NFL, folks...REDSKINS 21, RAIDERS 20.

Miami at New Orleans: The Saints won't have to give this one away...MIAMI 31, NEW ORLEANS 17.

SF 49ers at New England: The Niners are rolling...FRISCO 35, NEW ENGLAND 24.

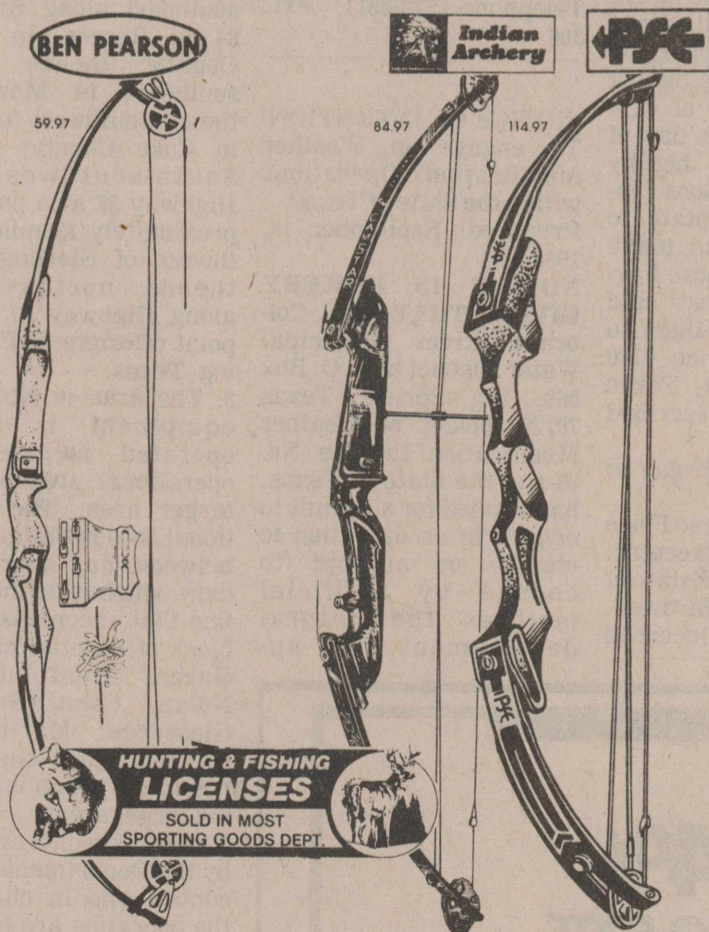

Jets moving to New Jersey

NEW YORK (AP) - The New York Jets of the National Football League will move to Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., at the end of the season, becoming the second NFL team to leave New York City within a decade.

Mayor Edward I. Koch announced at a news conference that the city was giving up its fight to keep the Jets at Shea Stadium, where they have played since 1964.

Dear Abby

Hurt Student's Lesson Comes From School of Hard Knocks

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a junior high school girl with a problem concerning my gym teacher. I love everything about her, so I asked if I could talk to her privately after school and she said yes. After school I told her that I loved everything about her and asked if she would be my special friend. I told her she reminded me of my mother who died a few years ago, then I asked her if I could call her by her first name outside of class.

She didn't seem pleased at all. She said she couldn't be my special friend because she was a teacher and I was her pupil, and she didn't want me to call her by her first name anywhere. Then she said she felt uncomfortable being "loved" so much by a student, and I should try to get over it.

That night I wrote her a letter apologizing for making her feel uncomfortable and begging her to be my special friend.

Now she treats me like I'm invisible. Abby, she means the world to me, and I don't want to get over it. How can I let her know how I feel without making her angry?

LOVES MY TEACHER

DEAR LOVES: Please don't pursue a special friendship with this teacher. She obviously feels threatened by your aggressive behavior and can't handle it.

Talk to your school counselor about this. You need a mother image — someone with whom you can have a mutually loving relationship — but this gym teacher is definitely not the one. Back off, honey, and get counseling.

DEAR ABBY: This is a very touchy situation. A nice young couple we hardly know (socially) are expecting a baby soon and they have asked us to be their child's godparents. (We did not accept. We told them we would let them know.) They then informed us that if the baby is a boy they will name him after my husband, and if it's a girl, they will name her after me.

Abby, the young father-to-be only recently went to work for my husband. We are already godparents to as many children as we care to be, and we really do not care to have their child named after one of us.

How can we decline these honors without hurting their feelings?

SMALLTOWN, U.S.A.

DEAR SMALLTOWN: You may not be able to, but if you must hurt their feelings to avoid being drawn into a commitment with which you are uncomfortable (and being godparents is a lifelong commitment), you will have to risk it. Decline as tactfully as possible, saying you think that such honors should go to family members or closer friends.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has not worked for over a year, and we are just barely making ends meet. Is there a tactful way to stop exchanging Christmas presents? We can't afford to send any, and we don't want any gifts, so how can this be handled?

IN DEBT IN DULUTH

DEAR IN: As I've suggested before, around Thanksgiving, send cards to those on your Christmas gift list saying, "We are thankful for folks with whom we can be frank. We are not a position to send Christmas gifts this year, and we don't expect gifts, but please accept our love and sincere good wishes for a healthy, happy, blessed holiday."

Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Radner signs her new book

NEW YORK (AP) — Fans of Rosanne Rosanadanna, the character from NBC's "Saturday Night Live" show, lined up around a bookstore as Gilda Radner signed 300 copies of her first paperback, "Rosanne Rosanadanna's 'Hey Get Back to Work!' Book."

"It went very well," said the 37-year-old Ms. Radner who appeared Tuesday without her character's usual wad of chewing gum, painted face and electroshock hair.

"Rosanne was only in the show for the last year or two," Ms. Radner explained. "People wanted to see more of the character. So we sat down and gave her a life."

Wardrobe program planned

Does your clothing budget never stretch far enough? Do you have a closet full of clothes but never anything to wear? If this sounds like your dilemma you may gain new insights into solving the problem by attending the program on wardrobe planning at 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 8, at the Fall Fashion Fair and Bazaar sponsored by Scurry County Extension Homemakers Clubs.

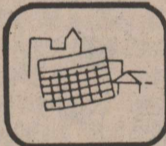

Kathy Roberts will discuss ways to develop a versatile year-round wardrobe as opposed to a strictly seasonal one. Ways of stretching a basic outfit to make it functional for different events will be included in the demonstration. Fad fashions as opposed to basic fashions will be discussed.

Mrs. Roberts is the extension agent-home economics in Scurry County and previously taught home economics in Snyder High School. Her presentation will be followed at 2 p.m. by the Fashion Show of fall clothing presented by 20 local merchants under the sponsorship of the Scurry County Family Living Committee.

Extension clubs will have bazaar booths and a Candy Shoppe available for shopping, merchants will have displays and other educational programs will be on table fashions, cosmetic fashions and denim fashions.

The public is invited and there is no admission charge. Doors will open at 9 a.m.

Hawaiian models well liked

HONOLULU (AP) — They're high school girls, worried about the next chemistry quiz and the pep squad meeting. But unlike the rest of their classmates, they are also concerned about tax shelters and work visas.

Earning as much as $20,000 a year at part-time jobs, these girls are rarely recognized as being more than peppy, pretty teenagers. But in Japan, they have fan clubs and are stopped for autographs on the street.

They are part of the new wave of "hapa" models, teenage girls from Hawaii who are of part-Caucasian and usually part-Japanese ancestry, but also of other Oriental backgrounds. They are the rage of the advertising agencies of Japan who hire them through local model agencies and photograph them for television and magazine commercials, sales catalogs and promotion brochures.

It all began with Agnes Lum, a Kailua High School girl discovered nine years ago by agent Sohbi Reynolds, and who became a national sensation in Japan. Ms. Lum, unlike any of the successful hapa models that have followed her, is Chinese-Hawaiian, but all have what the Japanese advertising agencies call "the Hawaiian girl look."

By 1976, according to Ms. Reynolds, "80 percent of the material being published in Japan included either Agnes' photograph, her name or a story about her."

She starred in major advertising campaigns, and was voted the most popular model in television in Japan by the All Japan Radio and Television Commercial Council.

Ms. Lum, now 26, remains a popular model, if no longer a sensation, in Japan.

The same award for the most popular model in television was won last year by 19-year-old Tory Mendoza, who is also under contract to Ms. Reynolds and who was the Shiseido Girl, featured in all of their advertising. An exclusive contract like this is worth between $7,500 and $15,000 a year, plus the regular modeling fee of between $400 and $600 a day.

Ms. Mendoza made 11

trips to Japan last year, some for as short a stay as two days, for the filming of commercials and a few personal appearances. On all of her travels she was chaperoned by Ms. Reynolds or another woman.

Kathy Muller, who operates her own agency here, agrees that the chaperoning and the preplanning are vital to the safety and success of the model.

"These girls are younger than the average high-fashion model," she said. Our school girls inevitably are sent with chaperones. We're real watchdogs, not only about their safety in Tokyo but in their grades here at home.

"Most of our girls are in private schools, and the schools keep on top of the situation. We take a girl off our books whose grades are failing, and keep her off until she picks them up."

Duplicate Dave was playing rubber bridge for a change. He arrived at a normal no-trump game and wasted no time in going after overtricks. He won the spade lead in dummy, led a club to his ace and a second club toward dummy. West discarded the eight of diamonds and all of a sudden the expected overtricks had disappeared into thin air. In fact, while he might still have brought home the game, he wound up going down.

He would not have had a bad match point score. The three no-trump contract was a very normal one and every declarer would have taken the simple club play to go after as many overtricks as possible.

An expert rubber bridge player would have taken a specialized club safety play. The safety play is designed to make sure of four club tricks against anything but a 5-0 break.

The expert attacks clubs by playing dummy's king followed by a low club toward his own hand. East would play his eight and South would finesse his nine. East would then be held to one club trick.

For the record, the expert rubber player would win the first spade in his own hand. He would retain both major suit aces in dummy, so that he can set up and play the fifth club.

Falls short, says Hightower...

Block announces drought aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has announced steps it says will make it easier for drought-stricken West Texas ranchers to obtain emergency loans, but Texas' top agriculture official says those steps fall short of what's needed.

Reduced interest rates on the emergency loans were announced Wednesday by Agriculture Secretary John Block, who had been under increasing pressure in Congress to step-up drought relief for West Texas and elsewhere.

Agriculture officials also said regulations governing the program would be reinterpreted to make more ranchers eligible for such loans.

However, shortly after Block's announcement, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, in an "eyeball to eyeball" meeting with Block, told the secretary he had not gone far enough.

Hightower, a Democrat and persistent critic of the Reagan administration's drought aid program, told Block that the latest move to assist farmers and ranchers was a "step in the right direction" but that it's "not going to be the ultimate help."

Hightower urged Block to provide West Texas ranchers for use as feed millions of bushels of damaged corn being stored by the government in the Panhandle.

As the meeting in Block's office opened, Hightower told Block he was pleased to sit down "eyeball to eyeball," and that "we have a unique situation in Texas with that drought."

Block responded that "I'm pretty well appraised of the situation" and that he felt the eased loan requirements announced Wednesday "would be helpful."

Earlier, Block had announced that, on instructions from President Reagan, he was reducing emergency loan interest rates for qualifying farmers and ranchers in counties designated eligible for relief under the Natural Disaster Emergency Loan Program.

The rates would be reduced by three percentage points, to 5 percent from the current 8 percent, on loans of up to $100,000. On amounts above that, the rate would remain at 8 percent, Block said.

Further, farmers and ranchers who are still able to obtain credit elsewhere would continue to pay interest of 13.75 percent under the emergency loan program, he said.

However, agriculture officials said that regulations governing the loan program would also be reinterpreted in an effort to make more ranchers eligible for such loans.

Under current interpretations, farmers can more easily demonstrate the amount of losses required to qualify for a loan than can ranchers, and that will be changed, said

Walt Bunch, an Agriculture Department official.

Bunch also said it will become easier for ranchers and farmers to show that they could not obtain credit elsewhere, thus making more of them eligible for the reduced rate loan program.

Twenty-three Texas counties have been declared covered by the program, and Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, said he expected three more counties would shortly be added to the list: Crockett, Glasscock and Irion.

But he said that so far, because of the restrictive regulations, not one West Texas rancher has been able to obtain such a loan.

Loeffler, who had earlier been pushing for Congress to force Block to provide additional drought aid, called the steps announced by Block a "very, very positive step forward."

At a news conference, Loeffler said that "this in essence is what we've all sought, and that is some form of adequate and responsible feed assistance to mitigate the very severe impact of the drought" on Texas ranchers.

Loeffler said that, for the time being at least, he would drop his efforts to get an amendment attached to a federal spending measure requiring Block to provide some kind of emergency feed assistance to farmers and ranchers.

He also criticized Hightower for not moving to provide state aid to the ranchers, saying that "maybe it's time (for Hightower) to go home to Texas and see what Texas has to offer."

Hightower, meanwhile, said Block should also activate programs that would provide cash payments to farmers for their crop losses and partially subsidize their feed grain purchases.

Government buries all cheese which spoiled

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A private relief agency may have to pay for 24.4 tons of government surplus cheddar cheese that had to be buried after it spoiled in an airconditioned but unrefrigerated warehouse, a state official said.

The Texas Department of Human Resources was investigating whether Programs for Human Services was negligent and financially liable for replacing the cheese, with a retail value of $122,100, said Harold Cartmill, regional food services director for the DHR.

Programs for Human Services had been holding the 1,221 cases of cheese for distribution to needy families in the Southeast Texas area, but was forced to bury it Tuesday and Wednesday at an Orange County landfill because some cases had bloated and the cheese began to stink.

The cheese, some of which had been stored for three months, was kept at 60 degrees — 15 degrees too high — said Julia Lee, state food and drug inspector for the Texas Health Department.

"It was not held at the proper temperature," she said.

The Federal Food and Storage Guide sets the proper storage temperature at 36 to 40 degrees with a maximum of 45 degrees, Ms. Lee said.

The agency's directors, who said they didn't know why the commodity was stored improperly, agreed Tuesday to destroy "all the cheese that was questionable" rather than go through the time (and expense) of testing it" to see if any was still safe to eat, Ms. Lee said.

She also supervised destruction of more than 33 cases of butter valued at $1,880. Agency's directors say it was damaged after Hurricane Alicia knocked out power to the cooler where it was stored.

However, she said the agency was not responsible for the loss of the butter.

Programs for Human Services director Don Johnson told the Beaumont Enterprise he didn't know why the free cheese was not kept refrigerated.

And he acknowledged that the agency planned last week to distribute some of it — despite the warnings of local health officials and employees — because the U.S. Food and Drug Administration had said the week before that it was safe.

However, The agency decided against distributing the cheese when the employees persisted in their complaints, Johnson said.

The FDA official who handled the inquiry, Bill Sedgwick, told the Enterprise that he was given incomplete information.

Edward VII, the son of England's King Henry VIII, died in 1553.

Battle of the bulge

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 53 years old, weigh 115 pounds and am 5 foot 7. I have a nice figure and no extra weight anywhere. But lately I have a stomach which I cannot hold in. It just came. I get a reasonable amount of exercise and am most active.

Is it possible to eliminate this problem by exercise, or is a "tummy-tuck" the only answer?

DEAR READER — It depends upon what is causing it. Since you indicate you are healthy I have no reason to think you would be accumulating fluid in your abdomen, or that you have a tumor — or that at your age you are pregnant.

Assuming that you have the usual girth control problem, there is a lot you can do about it without a "tummy-tuck."

Sit-ups strengthen the upper abdomen. Leg-lifts strengthen the lower abdomen. But I think it is best to not use a straight leg-lift but bend your knees. I have described the modified method of leg-lifts in The Health Letter 17-12, Winning The Battle of the Bulge, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

You should also do voluntary abdominal contractions. Lie down and pull in your abdominal muscles as strongly as you can and hold them in that position for 30 seconds. Relax and repeat the contraction.

Your posture is also important. If you tend to slump at all you will bring your lower chest cage closer to your pubic bone. This decreases the tension on your abdominal muscles and contributes to an expanded waistline.

If you just have slack muscles, a good program for your abdominal muscles and your back muscles and good posture will probably take care of your bulge. But if you are gaining fat while you are losing muscle, then you will definitely need to make an effort to eliminate body fat despite the fact that you are not overweight in terms of pounds-for your height.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In one of your columns you stressed the dangers of coconut oil and urged your readers to read labels and avoid foods which contain coconut oil.

While I was in the grocery store I checked the labels on all major brands of infant formula and all listed coconut oil in the first few ingredients.

If coconut oil is a real threat to health, how could the Food and Drug Administration allow its use for the entire diet of infants? Why do formula companies use it?

I have always breast-fed my own children.

DEAR READER — I wish they would not use coconut oil. Fortunately, the baby's metabolic system is such that he does not have high cholesterol levels as adults do. There are a few exceptions. Coconut oil does stimulate the formation of cholesterol in people prone to high cholesterol levels. That is because of its high saturated fat content.

So an infant or a young child who uses an artificial milk substitute that contains coconut oil does not face the same risk as an adult would.

I have suggested in the past to one of the large companies that they use something besides coconut oil or palm oil. If they did I would be more comfortable in recommending these same products to adults who cannot tolerate milk and need a milk substitute for cereals and other uses.

Lebanon was always a battlefield

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Seventeen centuries before Christ, Lebanon was a battlefield.

Today, Israeli and Syrian soldiers, only yards apart, face each other in the Bekaa Valley. And Christian forces, with new arms from the Israelis, oppose the Syrian-backed Druse and their Palestinian allies, for control of what is left of their war-tattered country.

Not much has changed since 1700 B.C. when a people known as the Hyksos conquered Lebanon and surrounding lands by introducing the horse into warfare.

The Hyksos were toppled 150 years later. Ever since, Lebanon has been a center of conflict with Egyptians, Persians, Arabs, Turks and others, ancient and modern, trying to control its valuable coastline.

Along the coast from Tripoli and Byblos — which gave the Bible its name — to Beirut, Sidon and Tyre, the Phoenicians built a trade empire unrivaled in the ancient world.

What is now Lebanon was occupied by the Egyptians, the Greeks, the Romans. Lebanon's cedar wood built the palaces of Egyptian kings. Byblos exported papyrus rolls to Greece. To Rome, went olive oil, wine, linen and flour.

Europe also left its mark on Lebanon, most notably from the Crusaders who tried to recapture the area for Christianity in the Middle Ages. Then the Ottoman Turks ruled Lebanon for four centuries.

Lebanon was part of the Middle East battlefield in World War I and, after 20 years of French rule, mandated by the League of Nations, again was part of the battlefield in World War II.

Independence came in 1943, and, in 1946, the departure of the last French troops.

Now there was time for Beirut to grow into a major world capital. Its trade was in oil and banking between the increasingly rich Arab states and the oil-hungry West.

It was a tourist center, too, known as the "Paris of the Middle East."

Americans and Europeans came to see

Lebanon's ancient ruins, remnants of the Greek and Roman eras. Arab sheiks came to do business, to deposit wives and families in elaborate villas in the hills overlooking Beirut, and to gamble and play in the city's casinos and hotels.

But not far from the beautiful beaches, the conflicts that led to today's war were always present.

Maronite Catholics and Druse, members of a sect that split from Islam in the 11th century, had both settled in the central Lebanese mountains to escape persecution. A struggle for power was inevitable, and in the 1860s, thousands of Christians were massacred in the mountains. It was those massacres that first brought the French to Lebanon.

In 1943, at the end of France's mandate, the Maronites took over most of the political power from their French allies. Next in line were the Sunni Moslems. Then came Shiite Moslems and the Druse. As the mostly poor Shiites grew in number, they demanded more power. So did the Druse.

Add to this the foreign influences that always existed in Lebanon. In the 1950s, it was the pan-Arabism of Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser that fed local Arab unrest and, on the Christian side, the fear they would be swallowed up in a totally Arab and Moslem state.

Politics was involved, as well as religion. The Maronites were right-wing, the Druse leftist.

Conservative women building political base

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Our women are not getting the kind of coverage that the feminists are, but we are building a strong base," says conservative activist Beverly LaHaye. "Come next year, the women who talk about the gender gap are going to be surprised."

Mrs. LaHaye, founder and president of the Concerned Women for America, says conservative women are organizing a new "silent majority" of women who will close the gap by voting for President Reagan next year.

On some issues, liberal feminist groups and conservative women's organizations have similar positions — from Individual Retirement Accounts for homemakers to opposition to pornography to tax breaks for working women.

But feminists and conservatives most often are separated by huge differences. At the National Organization for Women's annual convention here this weekend, for example, there will be talk of a new campaign for the ERA.

In contrast, many of the conservative women's groups got their start opposing the ERA — and celebrated in June 1982 when time ran out on ratification.

Chief among these groups is the Eagle Forum, founded by Phyllis Schlafly, who led the battle against the amendment.

"We are a very effective political and lobbying force," said Mrs. Schlafly of her 50,000-member organization.

The much-discussed gender gap — a key to the feminist's 1984 plans — doesn't get a good review from these conservative women. "I'm sensing a quiet, silent majority of women across America that are slowly coming to the front," says Mrs. LaHaye, who now lives in San Diego.

"The gender gap is mostly a false symbol that is exaggerated with mirrors," said Mrs. Schlafly. "It certainly does not arise from the women's issues."

The gender gap is the phrase used to describe generally negative attitudes among women toward Reagan and many Republicans. Polls indicate the gap is centered among younger women who work for pay outside the home.

"The ERA got people politicized. Once awakened, they found there are other issues. And they realized that the issues are inter-related," says Connaught Marshner, president of the National Pro-Family Coalition, a clearinghouse of local and national conservative groups.

Mrs. LaHaye says her group is to "give the Christian or traditional conservative women in America a voice in opposition to what liberal women are saying."

While feminists hold to a central tenet of wiping out discrimination, the conservative groups put it somewhat differently.

"I am not for the elimination of sex discrimination. There is a lot of discrimination that is natural and just," Mrs. Schlafly said. "I am against discrimination against women — or as the president says, unjust discrimination against women."

Sir Francis Drake attacked the Spanish Armada in 1588.

Ex-officer indicted on sex charges

BURNET, Texas (AP) — A former Marble Falls police officer was among six people indicted on sexual abuse charges involving five children ages 2 to 11, authorities said.

The alleged acts took place during the last 13 months, Assistant District Attorney Sam Oatman Jr. said Wednesday. The cases, involving both boys and girls, had been under investigation since July 30, he said.

The investigation began after the children "began to do some talking" when Gerry Herring, 21, of Marble Falls, was indicted May 17 on a rape charge, Oatman said.
