Webb leaving Northside

■ Accepted job in Indiana

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

Northside Community Center Executive Director Max Webb is leaving Big Spring to take a position with the Indiana Department of Corrections in June.

Webb tendered his resignation to the board during their regular meeting Monday evening. He has accepted a job in Muncie, Ind., and will be employed with the drug abuse program to help inmates kick the habit.

Webb received two degrees from Ball State University in Muncie including a bachelor's degree in sociology and business administration and a master of arts degree in psychology.

He has been with the center for 14 months and was hired to replace its founder Marianne Brown.

A special board meeting is scheduled for June 1 and members will decide what steps to take to replace Webb.

When asked what he has accomplished as director, Webb replied, "We developed a viable accounting procedure. We use both accounts receivable and payable to reveal our sources of income and expenses. This information is open to the public.

"We hold our clients accountable so they must justify their need for our services. We have developed avenues for community assistance for education, training and work. We did this through the Lakeview GED program and Howard College. This provides an alternative to welfare."

Webb also says he, along with the board, were able to establish a sense of professionalism at the center and provide the services in a professional way as well.

Two bitten by rabid cat

■ Latest raises number of rabies cases to 41

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The latest incident of possible rabies in Howard County ocurred this past weekend involving two people and one cat.

Animal Control Supervisor Lt. Terry Chamness said two Big Spring residents, a 10-year old boy at 1101 W. Sixth and a 35-year old man at 404 Aylesford, were attacked by the same animal Sunday.

The boy was attacked at about 3 p.m. Sunday and the man was bitten several times at about 6 p.m. as he was mowing his lawn.

According to Chamness both victims were advised to begin the series of rabies vaccinations. The cat was not captured when he attacked the little boy, but Animal Control officials were able to capture the cat after he attacked the man.

The animal's head was sent to Austin and results showed Wednesday that the cat was rabid.

This most recent confirmation brings the total number of confirmed rabies cases to 41 in Howard County and the third case of rabies confirmed in a domestic animal since the epidemic began in mid-January.

The domestic animals have been two cats and a dog and the other rabid animals included two skunks, a coyote, two raccoons and 33 foxes.

Chamness said with the school year coming to an end, it is especially important parents tell their children to be extremely careful out in the open.

He added, "Parents need to tell their children that if they see a stray animal, stay away from it."

Because the epidemic began in the winter, which was mild this year, Chamness said the hot weather of summertime probably won't have an effect on the number of cases one way or another.

Chamness added even though

Car flips after running red light; four injured

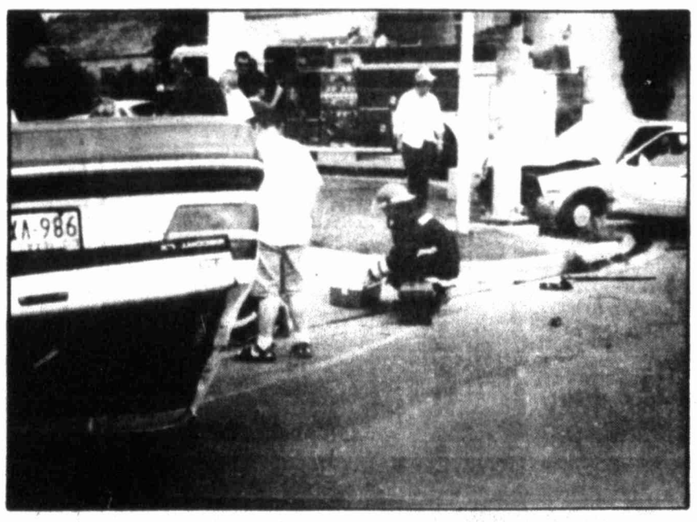

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

Three teenage girls escaped serious injury when the vehicle they were riding in overturned on Gregg Street Wednesday afternoon.

Police reports say a 16-year-old girl was driving a Ford Escort north on Gregg when she ran a red light and struck a Volkswagen Jetta driven by Dr. Elizabeth Ong, 42, of 4013 Dixon, who was eastbound on 17th Street. Ong's car then struck a utility pole at the intersection.

The Escort flipped in the air and came to rest on its roof. The driver was cited for disobeying a red light. She had two other passengers in her car, who are both 15.

All four victims were transferred to Scenic Mountain Medical Center where they were treated and released.

it seems like Howard County has hit a peak as far as the number of confirmed rabies cases is concerned, the epidemic is still not over. People are still advised to vaccinate domestic animals against the disease.

Recently, at the request of several West Texas legislators and the Texas Department of Health, Gov. George W. Bush recently mobilized the Texas Army National Guard to assist with the efforts to combat the gray fox rabies epidemic in West Central Texas.

According to the governor's office, the National Guard will work with community officials and local veterinarians in affected areas to develop mobile teams to offer low cost rabies vaccinations for domestic animals.

Bush thanked Sen. John Montford, Sen. Bill Simms, Rep. Rob Junell, and Rep. David Counts for their efforts in seeking state help and emergency action to combat the crisis.

Bush also issued an appeal to West Texans, saying, "For your own safety and the safety of all the children in Texas, I urge you to be responsible pet owners and have your pets vaccinated against rabies. The state can and will help by providing resources, but ultimately the responsible action of pet owners in having their animals vaccinated is critical to our efforts to protect our children."

According to Chamness a time has not been set, but on June 13, members of the San Angelo Rabies Center of Excellence will be in town discussing the rabies crisis.

Dr. Jayne Marlow of the Texas Health Department in San Angelo and Zoonosis Specialist Dr. Bob Oliver will be in Big Spring to talk about the problem and to assist the efforts of local officials handling the epidemic.

State funds that have been requested for a bait drop program to combat the rabies epidemic are expected to be approved, and the bait dropping is scheduled to begin in October.

ple in Big Spring and hopes his replacement will have a background in social work. Webb says someone who is a retiree and needs to supplement their income would make a good director.

"I've enjoyed working with the board and they have helped me to be creative in coming up with new programs. The board is very easy to work with," Webb continued.

Webb says he will be starting his new job either June 5 or June 15. He is waiting to hear from Indiana as to what date they want him to begin.

Christine Brockman, a board member, adds, "We (the board) support him. He has done a wonderful job. We hope to hire a new director but we will make that decision at the June 1 meeting."

Technology of war put to peaceful use on Georgia farms

ARLINGTON, Ga. (AP) — The technology of war has found a peaceful purpose in the cotton, peanut and canola fields of south Georgia.

Instead of guiding missiles to their targets, the technology produces computer-generated maps resembling psychedelic art and satellite signals that help farmers improve crop yields and reduce pesticide use.

The technology — known as precision farming — is being used on the huge farms of the Midwest and now is being adapted for use in the South, where fields are smaller and crop varieties are greater.

Earlier this week, the technology was inaugurated in Georgia with the harvest of a canola field.

A computer mounted in a harvester stored yield data and satellite signals that gave the machine's precise position on the globe. With that information, the farmer can figure out how yields differ in various parts of their fields, and then possibly boost low-yield areas by adjusting applications of fertilizer or pesticides.

Backers of the technology also demonstrated a fertilizer sprayer that applies precise amounts based on the needs of specific parts of the field. It, too, relies on computers and signals from the Defense Department's fleet of satellites.

"With this and with biotechnology, we're on the verge of a new agricultural revolution," said Craig Kvien, director of the University of Georgia's National Environmentally Sound Production Agriculture Laboratory in Tifton. "That's probably equal to (the development of) the tractor and chemicals for pesticide control and fertilization."

University scientists will test precision farming equipment throughout south Georgia this year in wheat, rye, canola, cotton and peanut fields. Equipment designed for the smaller fields of the South should be commercially available in a few years.

"We know we're headed toward a more economically sound agriculture and this is one of the vehicles to get us there," said Calhoun County farmer Mike Newberry, who has 39 acres of cotton that will be fertilized and harvested with precision farming equipment.

Satellite receivers mounted on harvesters or tractors give farmers their location to within about three feet. That information, stored in on-board computers, is transferred to home computers equipped with special software to draw detailed maps of fields. The maps show variations in moisture, pests, fertility, soil and other conditions.

This technology allows farmers to monitor and control precisely small areas of their fields. Instead of spraying the same amount of fertilizers or pesticides on the entire field, they can adjust the rate to meet the needs of areas as small as 50 square feet.

Field Day = Fun Day

Special to the Herald

Future Homemakers of America, spanning five decades, celebrated its 50th anniversary during the 1994-95 school year.

Barbara Justiss, Coahoma High School home economics teacher and FHA advisor, was inducted into the Texas FHA Hall of Fame during the state conference April 27-29. Mrs. Justiss has taught in Coahoma for 25 years and has worked with local, region and state officers.

The Coahoma Chapter of Future Homemakers of America attended the conference. Members attending were TaNeal Anderson, outgoing Region I vice president of records and Coahoma FHA president; Tabatha McIntosh, incoming chapter president; Lori Brockman, STAR event participant; Cyndi Jones, STAR event participant; Jodi Rodgers and LaTisha Milliken. The students were accompanied by Barbara Justiss, advisor.

At the conference, Lori Brockman and Cyndi Jones participated in STAR (Students Taking Action for Recognition) competition. Lori competed in Senior Comprehensive Job Interview and received fifth place. Cyndi competed in the Focus on Children event.

Both students are to be commend for reaching state level competition.

Coahoma FHA was recognized as a Champion chapter for affiliating 15 more students this year than last year.

During the conference the students participated in general sessions as well as workshops dealing with teen issues. Future Homemakers is a dynamic youth organization that has the family as its central focus. Future Homemakers of America is considered the "best kept secret." Many people have the opinion that home economics is only cooking and sewing, but in fact, the leadership and life skills gained can and will be beneficial for many years to come.

Schwinn has gone full cycle

Mike Royko
Columnist

The gleaming bike was in the window of a shop in a small Wisconsin city. One look and I was inside talking to the owner.

Yes, he said, it was a perfectly restored Schwinn, probably built in the late 1940s.

It had the fat tires, wide handlebar, kickstand, foot brake, chain guard, no gear shift and the classic coil spring that absorbed bumps.

Not the kind of bike some European road racer would use. But from the 1930s through the '50s, it was this country's favorite. Every kid in my neighborhood dreamed of having the top model.

But only Norb had one. Norb, who was tall and broad-shouldered for his age. Norb, whose smooth swing drove a softball deeper than anyone. Norb, who dated the prettiest girl. Norb, who didn't study but charmed the teachers into passing grades. Norb, who would inherit his father's construction company. Norb, with the perfect teeth, deep tan and that natural blond cowlick.

As Slats Grobnik once said: "How could one kid be so rotten?"

And there it was, the bike of my boyhood dreams.

The shop owner said he had found it at a garage sale. It was almost new and hadn't been used for years.

What was his price?

He shook his head. He wouldn't part with it for any price. It was in the window as an eye-catcher so he could sell more of the sleek racing models and rugged off-road bikes that young people favor.

That was at least 15 years ago, and I recall telling the shop owner that it would be smart of Schwinn to bring back that classic.

He disagreed. "People today want the lightweight bikes with the gear shifts. Or the mountain bikes. The old-time bikes wouldn't sell."

Now, it turns out that I was way ahead of the times in my marketing instincts.

This year, Schwinn brought out the old model, and it is having amazing sales.

Skip Hess, vice president of the bike division, said: "We'll have our 100th anniversary in October, so we decided to introduce the Cruiser Classic to set the tone.

"We began shipping the basic model and five others in January, and since then, they've been red-hot. The Cruiser Classic is outselling everything.

"It's retro and 1950s, and the 1950s are hot right now. We tried to reproduce the original. It was retooled and designed from the original blueprint. It's a 1950s bike with 1994 technology. But it's more retro-tech. No gears, no titanium, no chain lines.

"You don't have to worry about your heart rate, how many calories you're burning, whether you're experiencing anything aerobic or not. You don't have to be concerned with your miles per hour. This bike doesn't care if you're in shape. It's a single speed with a big, comfy saddle and big, fat tires.

"What's really been great in terms of sales is that our two largest markets have been the young and the older consumer. One of our No. 1 markets is in Florida. All of the beach communities, where you've got the snowbirds and retirees.

"The other big market is on college campuses all over the country. The college kids call them 'bar bikes.' They ride 'em to the bar and back."

Cache Mundy, bike marketing manager for Schwinn, said: "It started big on both coasts. Now, it's huge in Texas, the South, and Chicago is one of our biggest markets. Surfers in California are hooking up a trailer, strapping on their surfboards and heading for the beach.

"The thing about the Cruiser is that it's so forgiving. It has the feel and ride of the original -- ultra laid-back, mellow. It corners like a dream. It's not at all like those mountain bikes which are so performance-oriented and require all that work."

"We're lucky," Hess said. "We just happened to hit the retro timing right on. People are tired of not being able to program their VCRs. Low-tech is in. Look at consumer electronics. They're moving back, trying to simplify. The key nowadays is simple, easy, nonthreatening."

Simple, easy, low-tech, laid-back. That's me. I am retro personified. It appears that I have been retro all my life, even before anyone used the word.

And, in a few days, I'll pick up my new, old, retro Schwinn. Just like Norb. Almost. It's a bit late for the cowlick.

School, home or both?

Home schooling helps parents alleviate worries

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

Concerns about values, morals and the quality of education has influenced some parents to teach their children at home.

In May 1989, the courts ruled home schooling was legal and was officially recognized by the state government.

Earlier this month, Gov. George W. Bush declared May 7-13 as Texas Home Education Week. Bush is a supporter of home schooling and says studies show it is effective because of the individual attention and family participation.

There are about 50 families in the area who teach their children at home. Some say they do not want their children in public schools because of the drugs and peer pressure, while others say their religious beliefs do not agree with what is being taught in the classroom.

Cathy Kelton teaches her three children at home and says there are no state regulations for home schooling but rather some guidelines set up by the courts they must follow.

"There are five recommended areas we must teach including spelling, writing, grammar, math and good citizenship. We are not required to teach history or science but 99 percent of the home schoolers do," said Kelton.

"If you want to teach at home, you don't even need a high school diploma to do so. I have a bachelor's degree in elementary education with a specialization in special education. There are studies that show those taught at home are better prepared for college and have more self-motivation and discipline," said Kelton.

One of her children has a learning disability and Kelton saw the need to teach her daughter at home. She says she was afraid her child would get "lost in the cracks" and her disability would not be addressed.

> I feel like we can offer a better moral basis.
> Marie Dunnam

Kelton, like many other home schoolers, come from a one-income family where the dad works and the mothers teach. She says she wants to be the influence on her children, rather than a peer group being their influence.

Her two sons do participate in city sports such as baseball and soccer. She says this helps the children so they do not feel isolated from others.

She adds it can cost anywhere from $150 to $1,800 per child each year to teach them at home and the investment is worth it.

Meanwhile, Marie Dunnam also teaches her children at home. Her and her husband Barry have four children and two are of school age.

"I feel like we can offer a better moral basis. I think there has been a misunderstanding about what separation of church and state means. At home, I am able to give them the academics and strong family values at the same time," said Marie.

Barry added, "This is self-paced and if they accelerate in one area, they can go ahead and learn more about that subject. When they are outside playing, their education laps over. If my son finds an insect or plant, he will bring it inside and look it up to find out what it is. The children can be educated without them being in a structured environment."

"We are a one-income family but we feel like the sacrifices are worth it. We get together with other home schoolers for playtime and has an informal social time," Marie continued.

The Dunnams add because their children are not segregated by age they learn to get along with both adults and children regardless of their age.

Barry says there is a misconception by some that parents are cheating their children out of a chance to be with other children. "They shouldn't be trained to be children because ultimately they will be adults. They are being taught values and convictions they will have with them all their lives."

Both families say universities are recruiting home-schooled children because they are less dependent on parents and more inclined to have better study habits.

Payment plan for liens approved

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

City Finance Director Tom Ferguson updated the council on the status of the paving lien amnesty program it approved last month at Tuesday's meeting.

Ferguson said letters have been sent to most of the property owners. He added 102 letters have been sent out and seven people so far have paid off their liens, but others are asking if they can set up some type of payment plan with the city because they cannot pay the full amount of their lien all at once.

Under the city's amnesty program, all liens must be paid within 30 days of receiving a letter from the city.

Ferguson's request of the council was to allow people to set up a payment plan within the 30-day period and, without interest or penalty, have up to two years to pay off the lien. He added some of the lien balances are large and some are small.

The council approved Ferguson's request and those people wanting to set up a payment plan must make arrangement with City Hall.

Councilman John Paul Anderson agreed with the idea, saying the city would collect far more (of the outstanding liens) by allowing payment plans than if it didn't.

Other action taken by the council included approving a budget amendment transferring $72,500 to the Cemetery Fund as a subsidy to cemetery operations.

According to Ferguson, the transfer of funds puts the cemetery Fund in the black (back to a $0 fund balance).

As required each year by the Texas Property tax code, the council approved the homestead exemption, senior citizen exemption, and disability exemption.

Ferguson added for the 1995 property tax year, the maximum allowable exemption under the code is 20 percent the market value of a residential homestead.

Ferguson's recommendation to the council was for the 20 percent exemption and a $5,000 exemption for senior citizens and disabled citizens for the 1995 tax roll year.

The council, with the stipulation that at least three bids be sought by Fina, approved an emergency reading of a resolution authorizing Mayor Tim Blackshear to execute an agreement between the city of Big Spring and Fina Oil and Chemical Company for the relocation of a five-inch water line near Beals Creek from Channing Street to Dundee Street.

According to City Engineer Ralph Truszkowski, the relocation is required before construction can begin on the Beals Creek project.

Once the resolution is signed the council plans to inform Fina that it will reimburse Fina for relocating the line.

Blackshear said, "This is basically a reimbursement to Fina from the city."

Specifications for moving the line will be drawn up by Fina to avoid problems moving the line.

Fire claims three

AZLE (AP) — Social workers had been warning Carrie "Sue" Powell Flewelling for years that her house was a dirty, dangerous place that needed cleaning up.

Had she been more sanitary, or if she had installed a smoke alarm in her five-bedroom home, officials say she may have been able to avoid a fire early Wednesday that killed two of her grandsons and her disabled 18-year-old daughter.

Ms. Flewelling, 56, escaped the blaze, as did her 24-year-old daughter, Molly Flewelling, and eight-month-old granddaughter, Stephanie Daugherty.

But another daughter, 21-year-old Amy Flewelling — who also suffers from cerebral palsy and was bedridden — had to be rescued by two police officers who endured flames, heat and smoke to drag her from the back of the house.

Amy Flewelling was flown by helicopter to Dallas' Parkland Memorial Hospital, where she was being treated for smoke inhalation. She was in critical condition early today.

"We thought she was dead at first," said Sue Flewelling, who adopted both her disabled daughters. Molly Flewelling also was adopted.

Tarrant County Deputy Fire Marshal Randy Renois said the blaze likely was caused by either an electrical problem or by lightning. He said the fire probably began in the home's attic for some time before spreading.

"If it had a smoke detector, this might not have happened," Renois said.

Ms. Flewelling was awakened by her dog around 2:45 a.m. Wednesday and immediately smelled smoke.

"I tried to use the phone, but it wouldn't work," she said. "I went to the neighbors' house banging and banging on the doors and I couldn't get anyone to answer."

Meantime, Molly Flewelling grabbed the 8-month-old baby and fled the house.

Neighbors called fire officials but they couldn't arrive in time to save the lives of Steven Daugherty, 8, or his brother Kevin Daugherty, 4. Both were found in the bedroom they shared.

"I tried and tried, but I couldn't get to Stephen and Kevin. I just couldn't get to them," Sue Flewelling said.

Renois said the children had to be dug from the rubble.

"The roof had collapsed into the garage, and (one of the boys) was under six or eight inches of debris," said the fire official.

Teacher shot outside school

SHEPHERD (AP) — An elementary school teacher gunned down as she arrived for the last day of classes had been warned to keep her distance from the man accused in her death, a former boyfriend out on bail on attempted murder charges, authorities say.

Patrick Dale Walker, 24, was freed on $25,000 bail four months ago on charges he put a gun to Angela Collins' head and tried to kill her.

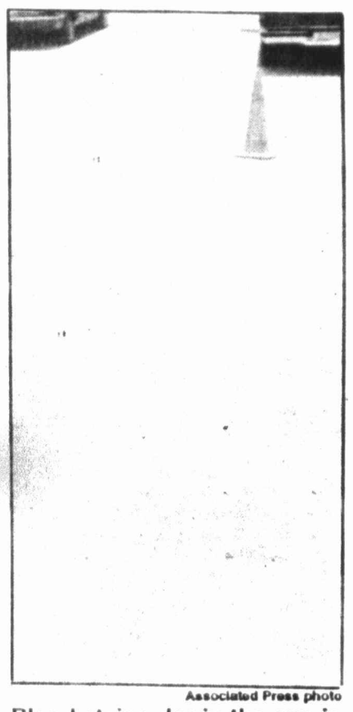

On Wednesday, Walker was charged with capital murder and held without bond in the San Jacinto County Jail, suspected of shooting Ms. Collins with a rifle as she got out of her car in the Shepherd Elementary School parking lot.

Tommy Walker, the Polk County investigator in charge of the first case, said the $1 million bond he had recommended in January initially was set. It was later reduced.

"I don't know how that happened," Walker said.

"I told the victim that she had to absolutely stay away from him. I told her to run, leave, get away from him."

Children were getting off a bus on the other side of the school Wednesday morning when Ms. Collins was shot and did not witness the slaying, officials said.

Blood stains dry in the sun in the Shepherd Elementary School parking lot Wednesday where school teacher Angela Collins was gunned down before school opened. Patrick Dale Walker, 25, was arrested and charged with her murder.

Walker was arrested at the home he shared with his mother in Goodrich, about 15 miles from the school, less than 45 minutes later.

Ms. Collins was shot twice in the neck and once in the head. Authorities said Walker fired one shot through the back window of the Ms. Collins' car and then walked up to car and fired at least twice more.

A .30-30 rifle was found in Walker's possession and believed to be the murder weapon, officials said.

Sheriff Lacy Rogers said Walker, an unemployed accountant, and Ms. Collins had lived together but he was not certain how long or when the relationship ended.

Investigators said Walker put a gun to Ms. Collins' head on Jan. 20 and pulled the trigger, but the weapon malfunctioned. Part of the condition of the bail was that he have no contact with Ms. Collins.

Ms. Collins had been teaching pre-kindergarten classes since January at Shepherd Elementary, where her mother, Nettie, also taught. She had just graduated from Sam Houston State University in December and returned to her hometown about 55 miles northeast of Houston.

Bomb threat shuts down nation's federal buildings

AUSTIN (AP) — Federal offices in downtown Austin were evacuated Wednesday after a bomb threat was made involving government buildings across the country, authorities said.

"Information was received that the federal facilities in several cities might be victimized by some sort of bomb," said San Antonio-based FBI spokesman Mike Appleby. "Some buildings in Austin did act upon it and evacuate, including our FBI office. It appears to be a hoax, but it is being pursued."

In Austin, the downtown federal building, two floors of the Homer Thornberry Judicial Building and FBI offices were evacuated about 11:30 a.m.

They were reopened about 2 p.m. after searches for explosives.

Security guards in Austin searched bags carried by people entering the buildings. Many employees did not return to work when the buildings reopened.

Mistrial declared in arson trial

HEMPHILL (AP) — Although a Sabine County jury agreed that a 19-year-old was guilty of setting the fire that destroyed a game warden's home, they weren't sure whether he plotted with others to do it.

A mistrial was declared Wednesday, allowing Lennis Rice to go free and bond and be able to graduate with his class from Hemphill High School on Saturday night.

Rice isn't off the hook yet. District Attorney Charles Mitchell said a new trial will probably be scheduled in the fall.

Want to see the sheriff? Ram a barricade

GALVESTON (AP) — Convicted rapist Jim Ainsworth twice went to Galveston County Sheriff Joe Max Taylor's office, but left both times without meeting with him. He really went after Taylor's attention on his third visit.

Ainsworth tried forcing his way inside Wednesday by driving up to the building going at least 50 mph and plowing through two 12-inch plastic pipes filled with concrete.

After all that trouble, Taylor wasn't even there.

Ainsworth, one of four notorious brothers, was charged with deadly conduct and turned over to local mental health and mental retardation officials for evaluation, said Galveston police officer Brian Gately.

Sheriff's Capt. Donnie Allen said that about an hour earlier, Ainsworth approached him outside the jail and demanded to see Taylor.

"I asked him if he had an appointment, and he said, 'I'm here on God's business and God doesn't need an appointment," Allen said. "I told him God might not, but he did."

Shared valedictorian honor heading toward court

SNYDER (AP) — As far as Jack and Barbra Jones are concered, their daughter Holly should be the only valedictorian of Snyder High School. They're willing to go to court to prove it.

The West Texas school district's superintendent said Wednesday he won't budge. Holly Jones will have to share the honor for top grade point average with Veana Clay.

"It gets down to technical wording in the handbook," Mrs. Jones said.

The handbook states "student ranking points and honor points shall be awarded each semester and at the end of the four years of high school students shall be ranked according to the total of points earned."

Both Holly and Veana have perfect 4.0 grade averages. The difference is Holly went to Snyder for four years and Veana is graduating after just three years of high school.

DWI checkpoint bill dead for current session

AUSTIN (AP) — A proposal to allow police checkpoints to be used on Texas roads in an effort to crack down on drunken driving appears to be dead for this legislative session.

The bill won unanimous approval in the Senate earlier this month but had stalled in a House committee.

On Wednesday, Rep. Will Hartnett tried to revive the legislation by offering it as an amendment to a bill revising the penal code. But the proposal failed to win the two-thirds approval it needed to pass.

Supporters said checkpoints were necessary to combat drunken driving. They said the idea is strongly supported by Mothers Against Drunk Driving and law enforcement officials.

"It's an effective tool in deterring drunk driving and getting drunk drivers off the streets," said Hartnett, R-Dallas.

"This is the only way to get the attention of these habitual drunks," said Rep. Clyde Alexander, D-Athens. "I am sick and tired of coddling criminals and being soft on the law. It is time to kick some butt and do what's right."

Opponents said the bill would be unfair to innocent drivers who would be forced to undergo the same treatment as criminals.

"I think it's the wrong thing to do to arbitrarily stop each and every Texan," said Rep. Allen Place, D-Gatesville. "There is not going to be any control of this situation if this becomes law. Who is going to police the police?"

Under the measure, vehicles would be stopped according to a predetermined selection process, such as every third car. An officer could conduct a field sobriety test only if there was reasonable suspicion or probable cause to believe the driver had committed an offense.

Man shot trying to injure officers

HARLINGEN (AP) — Harlingen police and Cameron County sheriff's deputies shot and wounded a 28-year-old man they say tried to run them over with his car.

Authorities say they shot at Jason Fredrick Park three different times during his clash with authorities on Wednesday. He suffered one gunshot wound to the neck and two more to the back.

Two police officers and two deputies fired at least 10 shots at the man, Harlingen police chief Jim Scheopner said.

Police, sheriff's deputies, Cameron County Constables and Department of Public Safety troopers had been chasing Park after they received a report he tried to forge a check.

Investigators re-enact drowning of boys

UNION, S.C. (AP) — Investigators rolled Susan Smith's car into a murky lake and let it sink with a video camera in the back seat Wednesday to show what her two little boys may have seen in their final moments.

It took about six minutes for the 1990 Mazda Protege to go down, its trunk lifting high into the air before it slid under the surface with a rush of air bubbles.

Sheriff Howard Wells, who got Ms. Smith to confess that she drowned her boys, stood grim-faced on the bank.

"We found that there were several questions during this investigation that needed to be answered before the trial, and a re-enactment was the only way we could do it," he said. He would not elaborate.

Ms. Smith's murder trial began Monday. If convicted, she could get the death penalty.

In her confession, Ms. Smith said she was suicidal the night of Oct. 25. She never explained, however, why she got out of the car, and let it roll into John D. Long Lake with 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex strapped into their car seats in the back.

Originally, she told investigators that a carjacker had taken the boys. That touched off a nationwide search. Nine days later she confessed.

Defense attorney David Bruck said he will probably pursue a defense that hinges on her mental state at the time. Ms. Smith, 23, has been examined by state doctors to determine if she was sane, but the judge has sealed the report.

Investigators solemnly watched as one of them released the burgundy car's hand brake shortly after noon, closed the door and let it roll down a boat ramp into the lake. As the car sank, divers took photographs and investigators videotaped it from several angles on-shore.

The car came to rest upside down, with its newly replaced windshield cracked, much as divers had found the car on Nov. 3 after Ms. Smith confessed, State Law Enforcement Division spokesman Hugh Munn said.

In her confession, Ms. Smith said she watched the car float for a few minutes before she ran to a house nearby.

Whether Judge William Howard will let the jury see videotapes of the re-enactment is unclear. Her lawyers contend it could inflame jurors and make them more likely to Ms. Smith to the electric chair.

Unidentified officers enter the [illegible] of Mary Modjeski in Falls Church, Va., early Wednesday. Leland [illegible] ran toward the White House with a gun before being shot by

Invader may have been suicidal

WASHINGTON (AP) — [illegible] man who was shot by a Secret Service officer after he scaled the fence and tumbled over the White House fence carrying an unloaded gun appears to have been trying to commit suicide, officials say. He had a history of mental problems.

Law enforcement officials, speaking Wednesday on the condition of anonymity, said they were investigating the possibility that the man, Leland [illegible] Modjeski, was desperate and was trying to get himself killed.

He must have known that carrying an empty gun onto the White House grounds would provoke the president's security force, the officials said.

"There is some indication of mental history," federal prosecutor Eric Dubelier told reporters after a brief hearing Wednesday.

"We're in the process of looking into his background, looking out people who knew him, interviewing individuals who knew him, gathering medical records and trying to make a determination of what his motivation was," Dubelier said today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Susan Lloyd, spokeswoman [illegible] identified sources.

She also said he had been depressed after parts of Pennsylvania Avenue were closed, beginning Saturday, to increase White House security, the Post said.

Modjeski's brother, Robert, killed himself to death in 1986.

Modjeski, who remains under guard at George Washington University Hospital, has been charged with assaulting three Secret Service officers and carrying a firearm across state lines with the intent to commit a felony. Each crime carries a maximum penalty of 10 years imprisonment.

Dubelier said he didn't know whether any more charges would be filed.

A Secret Service uniformed officer, Scott Giambattista, 35, was wounded during the struggle with Modjeski, apparently by the same bullet that wounded the intruder, authorities said.

On Wednesday afternoon, a U.S. magistrate delayed Modjeski's court appearance until next Tuesday and appointed two assistant federal public defenders to represent him until then.

Budget cuts mean less farm support

WASHINGTON (AP) — If he weren't so busy planting his crops this spring, Tim Schrage might be reckoning whether he would be better off growing an additional 75 acres of corn.

Schrage, 41, grows 2,000 acres of corn and soybeans and fattens hogs in Butler County, Iowa. He must keep the 75 acres idle this season to qualify for government payments on the rest of his corn crop.

Congress must decide how and how much to trim farm spending, which averages $10 billion a year. Most likely, the cuts will require Schrage to grow corn on more acres for less government money, or draw payments on less corn.

Less support means fiercer competition and more financial troubles in the farming-dependant part of the Midwest, where the people who raise crops, cattle and hogs particularly feel the strain, Schrage says.

"Some people that don't want to expand tremendously in the livestock business try to expand their cropping operations in an effort to farm more acres and make more profit," he said after a planting frenzy that kept him in the fields past midnight. "Now if we cut some of the profits out of the cropping operations ...."

Depending on the size of cuts, farm programs could be reshaped entirely, dropped or tinkered with slightly.

The Clinton administration, courting farm votes and leaving any dirty work up to a Republican-controlled Congress, has opted for tinkering.

Among Republicans on the congressional agriculture committees, only the Senate panel's chairman, Dick Lugar of Indiana, has proposed large cuts — $15 billion over five years by lowering subsidies for corn, cotton, rice and wheat, and ending a $1 billion-a-year export subsidy program.

Cuts will drive debate this summer and fall over the 1995 farm bill, which sets government agriculture policy for five years.

Gang members kill rival member then kill themselves

APPLETON, Wis. (AP) — D-Mac Crew, a gang of six teenage friends, was tough enough to murder a rival gang member who harassed them and owed them money.

But soon after the gang's leader got nervous and ordered the body moved, three of them went to a park and shot themselves to death, apparently afraid they were about to be caught.

Two other boys, who remain unidentified because they are minors, have told police details of the murder plot and are jailed in connection with the killing. One boy is 16; the other is 17 and the reputed chief of the D-Mac Crew.

"I would hesitate to call them a hard-core gang," said Paul Reque, police chief in Grand Chute, where the bodies of the three boys were found in a car, each shot in the head. A .25-caliber pistol was found nearby.

"These kids were very close with each other. What one said, the other one did. Whatever they wanted to do, they did it together as a group. They were very, very close, probably from grade school on."

The tale began to unfold on May 11, when a maintenance worker at a park near Appleton, a city of 65,000, found the bodies of Shane Gray, 18, Danny J. Gregurich, 16, and Mitchell Weller, 18.

The next day, at Gregurich's grandfather's property in Antigo, 100 miles away, the burned body of Jermaine Gray, 17, no relation to Shane, was found in an abandoned silo. He had been choked, stabbed and bashed in the head with a rock.

Juvenile court records link the murder plot to harassment and a $250 drug debt between Jermaine Gray, the leader of the Gangster Disciples, and the D-Mac Crew, whose members had once belonged to Gray's gang.

Jermaine Gray's slaying took place on May 2. Gregurich, Weller and Shane Gray lured the victim to rural Oconto County with the promise of guns, and attacked him at a cottage owned by Weller's foster father, court records said.

That night, the 17-year-old chief of D-Mac Crew rented a motel room in Appleton and waited for the three boys to return. Court records show that when Gregurich arrived, he told the others, "Nigger boy is dead, man."

Later, fearing they would get caught, the 17-year-old chief ordered Jermaine Gray's body destroyed.

Zairean Red Cross volunteers, whose job it is to spray all workers and visitors to the Kikwit General Hospital with disinfectant, rest outside the hospital. Many volunteers have been ostracized by their families and others because they handle patients with Ebola.

Volunteers ostracized by their own people

KIKWIT, Zaire (AP) — They are pariahs in their own city. Neighbors chase them and pelt them with rocks. Merchants refuse their money.

They are the dozen Red Cross volunteers who each day clear Kikwit of corpses that could spread Ebola virus.

"If I were scared, I would have run away long ago. I made this choice," said Mudiangu Masekka, a 38-year-old mother of seven. Her husband works in another part of Zaire and has no idea what she's doing.

"The people hate us. They throw rocks sometimes. Maybe they don't understand that what we are doing is actually helping them — I don't know," she said.

The World Health Organization says 108 people have died of Ebola in Zaire this year, out of the 144 people known to be infected by the virus. Most cases have been in Kikwit, 250 miles east of Zaire's capital, Kinshasa.

The volunteers' day begins at 7 a.m, when they gather at Kikwit's hospital to suit up in rubber boots, gloves, masks and goggles. Then they learn where Ebola victims are waiting to be taken to the hospital or the morgue.

In their orange dumptruck, the Red Cross volunteers handle the corpses of Ebola victims, from the time they die their gruesome deaths — bleeding to death from their mouths, ears, and noses — until they're put into a mass grave on a weed-covered hill on the edge of Kikwit.

The volunteers get almost nothing for their services except two meals a day, if there is food.

"It's a sacrifice, but it's a job that has a calling. It's a gift," said medical student sende Kalume, 35, after returning from dumping seven plastic-wrapped bodies into the mass grave. "We're exhausted, but we can't just let the situation go on."

On Tuesday, seven bodies were in the morgue. They carried out bodies, holding only the corners of the white bags with their deadly cargo, tossed them into the back of the truck, then headed to the mass grave.

Australia passes euthanasia law

DARWIN, Australia (AP) — Defying opposition by religious and aborigine groups, an Australian territory passed a law today to let terminally ill patients end their lives with a doctor's help.

The Northern Territory law would require diagnoses from a physician and a psychiatrist that those who want to end their lives are both terminally ill and sane. Patients from other parts of Australia could travel to the territory for euthanasia.

"You'll have to be a person in a very dire medical state to be eligible," said Marshall Perron, the Northern Territory's chief minister and the bill's sponsor. He announced Wednesday he was retiring from politics to remove any suggestion he would pressure legislators to support his bill.

The 25-member legislature approved the law 15-10 after a 14-hour debate that ended early today. It will take effect when signed by the territory's administrator, a federal official. That is expected in the next two weeks.

Foreigners cannot legally travel to Australia for assisted suicide, since immigration laws bar visitors who are in poor health.

The law — dubbed the "Kill Bill" by opponents — was strongly opposed by religious groups and some aboriginal organizations. During hearings on it, one witness testified that many aborigines would avoid getting routine shots if they knew that doctors could also use injections to kill.

"A decison by 25 politicians in no way resolves the most fundamental issue of all, and that is that no one in society ought to have the right to end someone else's life," said the Rev. Brian Lucas, spokesman for the Roman Catholic Archdiocese in Sydney.

In addition, the Islamic Council of New South Wales said Australia's 350,000 Muslims would not support voluntary euthanasia.

The territory still has to formulate regulations on such things as the means used for euthanasia. Perron says it is likely to be by injection or an overdose of pills, probably barbituates.

Weapons deadline passes

■ Serbs open to NATO strike

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serbs let a deadline pass today without returning heavy weapons to the United Nations, opening themselves to the threat of NATO air strikes.

After a day in which tanks, cannons and mortars pounded the capital, the U.N. commander in Bosnia, Lt. Gen. Rupert Smith, gave the Serbs until noon today (6 a.m. EDT) to return four heavy guns taken from U.N. storage depots or face NATO raids.

The Serbs let the deadline pass without returning the weapons. And peacekeepers at one weapons depot were trapped by Serb-laid mines, though the United Nations refused to characterize them as Serb hostages.

"The four Serb weapons ... have not yet been returned," said Yasushi Akashi, the chief U.N. envoy in the former Yugoslavia. "Therefore, our statement of yesterday stands, and this makes the Serb side subject to air strikes.

"That might happen this afternoon," he said in his headquarters in Zagreb, Croatia.

U.N. spokesman Alexander Ivanko said Smith had contacted NATO officials shortly after the deadline passed.

In Brussels, Belgium, a NATO spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the alliance was ready to respond but had received no request for air strikes half an hour after the deadline passed.

Fighting eased overnight around Sarajevo and throughout Bosnia, but it was unclear whether that was a result of the U.N. threat. NATO jets flew low over Saravejo front lines today, as they did Wednesday, but there were no attacks.

The western military alliance is authorized to attack heavy weapons within 12.5 miles of the capital. The United Nations has been reluctant to call in NATO planes for fear of retaliation against peacekeepers, and has not done so since November.

The effectiveness of NATO air power is questionable. Previous air strikes against Serb weapons have failed to deter the Serbs.

Smith issued the ultimatum after the Serbs ignited a day of fighting Wednesday with an attack on a strategic hill south of the city center.

Car bomb kills four in Lima

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A car bomb exploded before dawn today outside a hotel-casino in a Lima suburb, killing four people and injuring 13.

A spokeswoman for the attorney general's office said one person was arrested at the scene of the bombing, which went off about 4:15 a.m. in front of the Hotel Maria Angola, destroying the front of the 10-story luxury hotel and casino in the Miraflores suburb.

Marco Rosell, head of hotel security, said a second suspect had been detained. The dead were identified by the hotel as two security guards, a casino employee and a cook in the hotel's restaurant.

Various news reports quoting police and the attorney general's office had said at least three people were dead and up to 50 injured.

The hotel said about 40 people were in the casino when the bomb went off.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility but most bombings have been linked to the Shining Path guerrillas, a radical Maoist group that usually operates in the interior of Peru.

Reports indicated the attackers set off 200 pounds of dynamite in a car parked in front of the 125-room hotel, which is only blocks from Tarata Street, scene of Peru's worst terrorist bombing three years ago. Twenty-five people were killed in that attack.

Heights too lofty for Steers

■ Fort Worth team gets revenge, beats Big Spring

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

ARLINGTON – For Fort Worth Arlington Heights, it was a night of firsts. For the Big Spring Steers, it was a night to forget.

Coming into Wednesday's Arlington Heights Big Spring Class 4A baseball playoff, the Yellowjackets had never won a regional semifinal, had never won in Abilene and had never defeated a District 4-4A team.

All that changed Wednesday. Arlington Heights jettisoned a ton of mental baggage at Big Spring's expense, downing the Steers 13-4 at Hunter Field. The Yellowjackets (22-7) advance to their first-ever state quarterfinal against either Andrews or Lamesa. Big Spring ends its season with an 18-12-1 record.

> They've got a great program. It looks like they're all clones. They look the same, and they play the same.
> Bobby Doe
> on FW Arlington Heights

"It was just a night where everything clicked for us," Arlington Heights coach Tommy Elliott said. "It seemed like everything the kids did, they performed ... This is a big relief."

It was a battle for control – pitching control – that decided Wednesday's game. Arlington Heights' Darren Wood (7-3) saw his scoreless-inning streak end at 15, but he didn't seem to mind. Wood was the losing pitcher in Game 2 of last year's Arlington Heights-Big Spring series.

"We had them last year," Wood said. "We felt good after the first game of the series, but we just didn't come to play the last two games, and Big Spring did. I commend them for that ... What helped was our offense. This was probably our best game all year, offensively. And the defense came through, too."

The Steers had just as many hits as Arlington Heights – nine for each team – but pitcher Zac Leslie (12-6) struggled with his control. All seven of Leslie's walks led to Arlington Heights runs.

"I think the whole thing centered on bases on balls," BSHS coach Bobby Doe said. "I'm not going to blame Zac for that – he pitched a good game."

Leslie's walks especially hurt the Steers in the first few innings. The Yellowjackets turned four hits and four walks into a 6-1 lead after two innings.

The Steers rallied in their half of the fourth, closing to within three runs on a run-scoring single by Mike Sizenbach and a RBI groundout by Leslie Adkins. But Arlington Heights had an answer for the Steers' run, as in a four-run fourth fueled in part by three Leslie walks.

Any hopes for a Big Spring comeback were dashed by Brandon Fulgham's three-run home run in the sixth. Fulgham ended the night with six RBIs.

"They've got a great program," Doe said of Arlington Heights. "It looks like they're all clones. They look the same, and they play the same."

Bulldogs are more than just McGuire

When you think Coahoma baseball, you immediately think Brandon McGuire.

The Bulldogs, which plays in a regional baseball playoff Friday, is much more than McGuire, as the Bulldogs' 12-5 victory over Ozona in the bi-district playoffs proved. Look at Mike McMillan, the sophomore shortstop who started the season batting ninth but now sets the table from the leadoff spot. McMillan is batting over .400 and scoring runs, thanks to the batting sticks of Brian Ruiz, Brandon and Kelby Bailey behind him. McMillan said his success simply came from experience, getting more at-bats. While such hitting from a freshman is a bit surprising, the production from McMillan has become commonplace.

"Mikey's been a pleasant surprise for me," Coahoma first-year coach Terry Baxter said. "We're really proud of him, because he's come a long way. When we cut [Mike], I told him right away that he was going to make it. He was adamant that he wasn't really interested in it. But he's responded well – he's grown up a lot."

When McMillan moved from shortstop to leadoff, he swapped places with third baseman Kendall Wright. Wright has batted at the bottom of the order – he had two hits in the bi-district win over Ozona – but when you think about it, he was hitting well before the lineup change. So was McMillan for that matter. Wright's near the .350 mark.

Mikey was hitting the ball at No. 9 – that's not why we moved him," Baxter said. "He's hitting .404 now, and we just decided to make a change and shake up the lineup a little bit. And you've seen what Marshall's doing at No. 9, so we haven't lost anything by moving things around."

Dave Hargrave
Sports Editor

Seems Coahoma's made all the right moves to this point. The Bulldogs seem more confident and more competitive than they were last year at this time - that's simply a byproduct of experience. But there's still more to this team. Just as there's more to Coahoma than McGuire, there's more to McGuire than a right arm that can throw a baseball 92 mph.

It would be extremely easy for resentment to build on the Coahoma baseball team. McGuire, being scouted by major-league teams and colleges all over the country, gets nearly all of the attention - from the scouts, from the media and from casual observers.

But jealousy, or arrogance on McGuire's part, just isn't there.

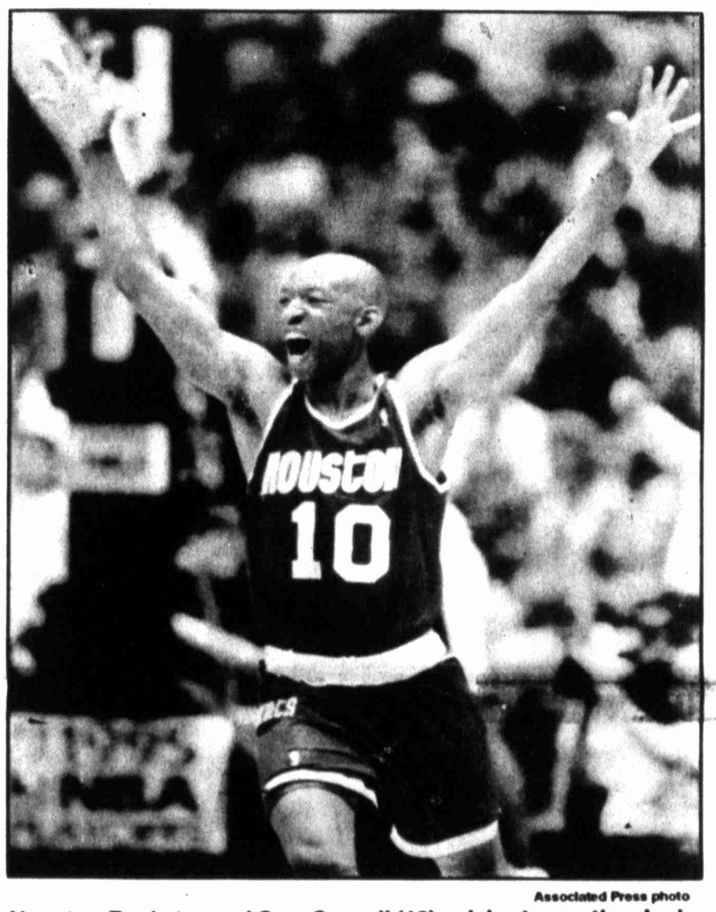

"There's no jealousy," Baxter said after the win over Ozona. "I think all the guys step up their game, too, because they know the scouts are there to see Brandon. They figure if they play well, they might get some offers, too. Everybody's behind Brandon, pulling for him to do whatever he wants to do."

When asked about the attention McGuire receives, Bailey simply said, "We expect it." The circus surrounding McGuire is hardly noticeable anymore. People in Coahoma are used to it.

McMillan said people who still view Coahoma as a one-player team - Brandon McGuire and his supporting cast - don't concern him.

"We earn our respect from other teams."

The 'Dogs could earn more respect Friday at Snyder's Moffett Field, if they beat the Stamford Bulldogs for the first area playoff title in the history of the Coahoma baseball program.

Rockets push top-seeded Spurs near elimination

SAN ANTONIO (AP) – Maybe the rallying cry for the Spurs can be "Forget the Alamodome."

Houston played the role of General Santa Ana in a 106-96 conquest of San Antonio on Wednesday night and left town with a startling 2-0 lead over the Spurs in the Western Conference finals.

Hakeem Olajuwon and David Robinson, the NBA's most valuable players the past two seasons, faced off in a classic big-time, big-man matchup, with the unanimous decision in Game 2 going to Olajuwon.

Olajuwon, the leading scorer in the playoffs, had 41 points and 16 rebounds. He scored 31 in the second half, 19 in a string of dizzying moves in the third quarter.

Robinson had 32 points and 12 rebounds. He scored 14 in the fourth quarter as the Spurs rallied from a 13-point third-quarter deficit to take a brief 82-80 lead, only to fall under a continuing barrage of Rockets 3-pointers. Through it all, Dennis Rodman sat on the floor beside the San Antonio bench and watched, waiting for a call from his coach. Rodman played only the first three minutes of the second half.

"It didn't have anything to do with Dennis, my decision tonight," San Antonio coach Bob Hill said. "It was all about a chess match. They had momentum. I had to match that the best I could with some offense."

The Spurs, the team with the best record in the NBA, have lost three in a row at the Alamodome for the first time this season. Game 3 is Friday in Houston.

Driver-turned-owner teacher of Indy racers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — One of these days, Dick Simon may finally get to Victory Lane.

Simon has been coming to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway for a quarter-century, first a driver, later a car owner, always a teacher. He has groomed enough drivers to almost fill a starting field by himself.

> It's really an asset because he knows the place like it's his own back yard. He tells you about the little tricks that you need.
> Eliseo Salazar

"It's really an asset because he knows the place like it's his own back yard. He tells you about the little tricks that you need," said Eliseo Salazar, one of two rookies in the four-car Simon stable for Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

"Coming here, I felt comfortable because I was with Dick Simon, and the reputation he has of never having a rookie miss the race," the first-year Indy driver from Chile said. "I didn't take it for granted, but I thought I'd do well and get in the race. Now I hope to do well in the race."

Salazar, the slowest qualifier, will start the race from the outside of the eighth row, 24th overall. He earned a better starting position than nine other drivers because he qualified on the first weekend of time trials.

Simon drove in 17 Indianapolis 500s between 1970 and 1988. He holds the record for the most starts at the Speedway without ever leading a lap, and his best finishes were sixth and ninth in his final two races. He retired as a driver after the 1988 race in order to devote all his time to running his team.

At age 61, Simon is still in shape to drive. He passed the drivers' physical earlier this month and drove six laps on the opening day of practice, May 6, while Davy Jones was in Sonoma, Calif., for a NASCAR Winston Cup race.

Jones, Salazar, Lyn St. James and rookie Carlos Guerrero qualified Simon cars for this year's race.

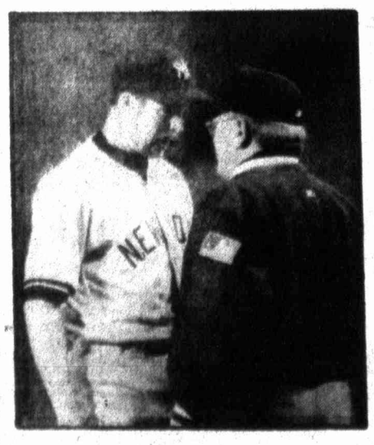

Other Simon drivers in past years included Scott Brayton, the pole-starter on Sunday; Raul Boesel, the fourth-place finisher two years ago; Hiro Matsushita, Dean Hall, Tero Palmroth, Stephan Gregoire, Marco Greco, Hideshi Matsuda and Dennis Vitolo. In the mid '70s, Simon also tutored Janet Guthrie, the first woman to drive in the 500. St. James, the second woman in the race, was rookie of the year in 1992 in a Simon car.

"At some times you would like to get a little more attention from him because he spreads himself," Salazar said. "He spreads the time fairly, but I've told him that Indy racing has become so competitive that what he does, he may have to cut down. Look what happened to Penske. I think that it shows that sooner or later, Dick will have to concentrate on running fewer cars."

Roger Penske, the winningest car owner in Indianapolis history, failed to put a car into this year's race when neither of his drivers, two-time and defending champion Al Unser Jr. and two-time winner Emerson Fittipaldi, couldn't find enough speed.

Despite a much smaller budget than Team Penske, Simon somehow gets his drivers in each May. Last year, Simon had six cars in the lineup.

Harassment charge against Moon dropped

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A former cheerleader for the Minnesota Vikings has dropped her sexual harassment lawsuit against quarterback Warren Moon and the team after learning the documents were being published, the Star Tribune reported Wednesday.

Attorneys for Moon, former Houston Oilers quarterback, had prepared a defamation suit claiming that the woman and another cheerleader conspired to defame his character in an attempt to make money, the newspaper said.

Owners approve plan to keep Raiders in LA

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A plan aimed at keeping the Raiders in Los Angeles and providing them with a new stadium was approved by NFL owners in two days of meetings.

To help keep the Raiders where they are, the 30 owners awarded two Super Bowls, probably in 2000 and 2005, to Los Angeles, contingent on a new $200 million stadium for the Raiders being built in Hollywood Park.

Under the plan, the Raiders would stay in Los Angeles for the next two years, move into the Hollywood Park stadium in 1997 and then share the stadium with another team in 1998.

Fifth-grade students at Moss Elementary School recently performed their version of the musical "Oklahoma!" for fellow students and parents. Pictured left to right are Bonnie Knecht as Aunt Eller, Kristy Luna as Nettie and Chris McGee as Curly.

'Oklahoma!' More than a state - it's a Moss musical

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

The musical "Oklahoma!" was first produced as "Green Grow the Lilacs" on Broadway in 1931. Sixty-four years later, fifth graders at Moss Elementary decide to perform the popular musical.

Principal Ron Moss rewrote the play for the children, and 57 students have been rehearsing for the last month during their music and physical education classes.

Chris McGee portrays the lead male character Curly and Becky Fuller plays Laurey. The two are in love with one another but are too stubborn to admit it in the beginning.

McGee lit up the stage with his rendition of "Oh, What a Beautiful Mornin'." Rosanna Rubio portrayed Ado Annie Carnes as a girl smitten with a peddler. She sang a solo entitled "I Cain't Say No!"

Matt Honeyman was Will Parker, a cowboy who just returned from a cattle drive to Kansas City.

His solo, "Kansas City" was a hit with the audience, including his demonstration of a new dance he learned in the big city called the two-step.

He, along with his friends, then got into a dance contest and kept the audience clapping along.

Kristy Luna played Nettie who also had a solo called "Many a New Day."

The song was an attempt to console her friend Laurey, who is afraid she will be an old maid before Curly pays attention to her.

Kristina Williams is Gertie Cummings, Curly's date to the box social.

Brian Wingert portrays the peddler Ali Hakim, who likes Ado Annie but does not want to marry her. In the musical, Ado and Will end up together.

The peddler ends up marrying Gertie while Curly and Laurey get married as well.

Some of the other characters included Zac Phinney as Judd Fry, Willis Morrison as Judge Carnes and Dustin Rinard as Tom.

The final dress rehearsal was performed in front of the students and the actual play Tuesday night for the parents.

Of the 57 students, 10 of them were the stage crew who help one of the teachers, Mrs. Brooks, build the set.

The other fifth- grade teachers also helped the students with their lines and costumes.

A full schedule of community service and athletic activities didn't prevent Denyce Hayes and Jennifer Sullivan from achieving academic excellence.

HAYES

Denyce, daughter of Scott and Kathy Hayes, and Jennifer, daughter of Billy and Deborah Sullivan, have been named valedictorian and salutatorian of Coahoma High School's Class of '95.

A Coahoma resident since fourth grade, Denyce played basketball for the Bulldogettes four years and participated in cross-country, tennis, and softball.

As a freshman, she qualified for the state competition in the FHA Little Friends Contest. This year she was a state qualifier in office specialist competition for BPA, and a regional qualifier in UIL accounting and mathematics. She has been Coahoma High School's Student of the Month, an Optimist Club Award winner, and a nominee to the National Youth Leaders Conference in Washington, D.C.

Taking a break from preparing an experiment for a physics final, Denyce mentioned she is a member of the Coahoma Church of Christ youth group. She helps with church services conducted at Comanche Trail Nursing Home on Sundays and participates in making Cheer Baskets at Christmas time. She helped raise money during the annual Spirit Link Drive, which supports the Carrie Carnahan Scholarship fund, and has participated every year in the Howard County canned food drive.

She was cited for Academic Excellence for Texas Taas testing, and has been named to the National Honor Roll. She was named best student by her teachers in physics, honors economics, pre-calculus, honors English 4, and Spanish 2. She is the recipient of the WalMart Scholarship, the UTPB Academic Scholarship, the Carr Academic Scholarship, the Permian Presidential Scholarship, and an honor graduate scholarship.

Denyce plans to major in business at Howard College.

Jennifer, a lifelong Coahoma resident, describes herself as "not very athletic," but likes to be involved. She was manager of the cross country team for a year, and has been manager of the basketball team for four years.

Treasurer of the National Honor Society Coahoma Chapter and Vice President of Business Professionals of America, Jennifer is also a member of D-FY-IT, Future Homemakers of America, Junior Leadership, Student Council, the Coahoma Church of Christ Youth Group, and Coahoma's UIL Mathematics, Ready Writing, and Accounting Teams.

SULLIVAN

Jennifer recently traveled to Nashville with Coahoma's BPA team as a national competitor in Information Processing Assistant skills. She is listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students and the National Academic Honor Roll, and has been student of the month.

She participated in the annual Spirit Link Drive, the Howard County Food Drive, in making Cheer Baskets during the Christmas season with her church youth group, and in conducting service at Comanche Trail Nursing Home on Sundays.

Jennifer will enroll as a biology major at Howard College, later transferring to Harding University in Searcy, Ark. She says she may consider changing her major to zoology. Her career goal is to work with animals, possibly in research.

Commencement exercises are scheduled tonight at 7 in the high school auditorium.

School lunches become artistic

By MARTY MEITUS
Scripps Howard News Service

It's 9 a.m., assembly time, at Truscott Elementary School in Loveland, Colo. Strong Sarah and Weak Walter, Sesame-Street like characters from Denver Children's Museum, are dramatizing the difference between breakfast-eaters and non-breakfast eaters.

Then it's time for the really big sheeew: ice carving.

Chef Mike Puzzuto rolls out a 3-foot-high block of ice. He pulls out the chainsaw and carves a fish leaping out of water.

The crowd is is suitably impressed. "Wow," says one teacher. "Would you look at that?"

Ice sculpting is a tough act to follow, but it's just the appetizer on the day's plate.

Seven Colorado chefs are spending the day at Truscott as part of the federal government's program to improve lunches in the nation's schools.

The "Great Nutrition Adventure" is aimed at preparing kids and school staffs for September 1996, when healthy-food guidelines will take effect.

Now, chefs Puzzuto, Bill Franklin, Stephen Ford, Rick Diaz, Carrie Balkcom, Fred Batchelor and Dudley Cable-Larche fan out among the classrooms for an "ask the chef" session.

Franklin explains that the "boss" wears the tallest hat in the kitchen. "Are you the boss of the world?" asks an excited student in Dana Howk's first-grade class.

Next comes a lesson in garnishing to make vegetables look less like, well, vegetables and more like carrot palm trees with green pepper fronds.

The palm trees are fine, thank you, but "what are you going to make us for lunch?" asks Carleen Holmes, 6.

"Oh, probably filet mignon," tosses off Chef Mike Puzzuto.

Brandon Wakefield, 7, is not impressed. "I hope they make chicken patties. They're like nuggets, only round."

Back in the cafeteria, some chefs are setting up for lunch, and the lunch isn't chicken-fried anything. Instead, the chefs have chosen chicken cacciatore with rotini noodles and a cherry crisp for dessert.

They made the decision, says chef Stephen Ford, based on budget constraints, equipment and kitchen facilities and ease of preparation and cooking.

"It's all about how you put the food together," says chef Carrie Balkcom. "Instead of just rice and mushrooms, you make stir-fried rice."

Many school districts already have upgraded their menus.

Carol Miller, director of nutrition services in Windsor, Colo., started four years ago. "I'm a dietitian and I strongly believe you have to practice what you preach."

Overall, the noon meal at Truscott gets high marks. "It's better than usual," allows Steve Whittet, 11. "The noodles are better and the cherry thing is good."

Says Cody Sharrad, 11: "The chicken stuff is better." Agrees Doug Christiansen, 10, "It looks more cooked, that's for sure."

After lunch, the chefs treat the kids to a session on healthy snacks.

The Friends Next Door!

Our Neighbor Canada

Canada is a big country with beautiful scenery and clean, up-to-date cities. Its people have one of the highest standards of living in the world. Canada plays an important role in world affairs and trade.

The United States and Canada are friends. While there were some wars in our early history, for many years the two countries have been partners. We share many things.

Our border and interests

Most Canadians (80 percent) live within about 120 miles of the border. Every day, thousands of Canadians and Americans cross the border on business and vacations.

We are each other's biggest trading partner.

Most of us speak the same language, English.

We share many of the same interests. We listen to the same music. Television and radio stations beam entertainment and news across the border.

The Mini Page thanks Lorena Morante, educational services assistant NIE coordinator, The Montreal Gazette; the Gazette's newspaper and education department; E. Joan Abeles, author of "Places to Go, People to See, Things to Do All Across Canada"; and the Canadian Embassy for help with this issue.

The Canadian kids in this third grade class at Nazareth School live in Montreal, Quebec. They live in an area of the country that is mostly French-speaking. As Canadians, they will learn both French and English.

Immigrant backgrounds

The native peoples were there thousands of years before the first Europeans arrived.

After years of immigration, Canada today is made up of people from many ethnic backgrounds. Many families came from England and France. Other families came from Germany, Italy, Portugal, China, and other parts of Asia.

Kids much like us

To find out something about Canadian kids, The Mini Page took a survey of a third grade classroom at an English school in Montreal, Quebec, a French-speaking part of Canada. Remember, this is only one Canadian class.

Meet the Crash Test Dummies

The Crash Test Dummies are one of Canada's most popular bands. They are from Winnipeg, Manitoba.

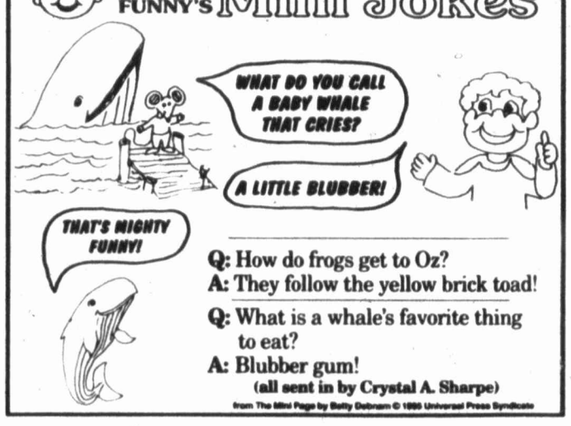

The members are Benjamin Darvill (harmonica), Ellen Reid (vocals), Brad Roberts (vocals and guitar), Mitch Dorge (drums) and Dan Roberts (bass).

Brad writes all the songs. He studied English literature and philosophy at the University of Winnipeg. He planned on being a college professor but became a musician instead.

The group was formed in the mid-1980s when a group of friends got together to play music. Brad sent a tape of the group to some Canadian music festivals, and soon people were calling to ask them to perform.

The Mini Page Teacher's Guide

© 1995 by Universal Press Syndicate

For use by teachers and parents at home and at school.
For use with issue: Our Neighbor Canada

Main idea: This issue is the first in a series about Canada. The following is a list of activities to be used with this issue. They are listed in order of difficulty. Ask the children to do the following:

1. Draw a picture of yourself dressed in popular fads to show Canadian kids what is popular in your school.
2. Pretend you have to put together a box of things to show a Canadian kid about your area. Look through your newspaper for things you would like to include.
3. Pretend you have a Canadian pen pal. Write a letter telling him or her about yourself. What questions do you have for your pen pal about life in Canada?
4. Discuss the following: Have you ever been to Canada? If you were to go there, what would like to see and do? How do you think it would alike and different from the United States? How can we be good neighbors?
5. Look through the weather section in your newspaper for the forecast for a Canadian city. How is it different from your area's forecast?
6. Find all the countries mentioned in this issue on a globe or world map. Look at the Canadian-U.S. border. What lakes border the two? What U.S. states?

Think Canada

Here are just a few key words to remember when thinking about Canada:

Long border

Canada and the United States share the longest undefended border in the world.

Number of miles: 5,524 (including the border between Alaska and Canada).

Big country

Canada is the second-largest country in the world. (Russia is larger.)

- 3,849,674 square miles.

The United States is the fourth-largest country. (China is the third.) It is just a little smaller than Canada.

- 3,618,770 square miles (including Hawaii and Alaska).

Few people

U.S. citizens outnumber Canadians by 9-to-1.

- Canada's population: About 29 million.
- U.S. population: About 259 million.

Look through your newspaper and find stories about our northern neighbor.

Next week, The Mini Page looks at the geography and history of Canada.

Provinces

Canada is divided into 10 provinces and two territories.

Official languages

English and French

All government business is in two languages. Most Canadians speak English; some speak only French. Many speak both English and French.

The maple leaf

The maple leaf has long been the symbol of Canada, which is covered by many forests.

Coat of arms

The flowers at the bottom stand for the four founding nations, England, France, Scotland and Ireland.

Queen

Queen Elizabeth II of England is also the queen of Canada. Canada is still part of the British Commonwealth.

Beaver

The beaver played an important part in the history of Canada. Fur trappers helped settle the country.

Mounties

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police (Mounties) are the national police force.

Totem poles

Native peoples make up about 4.3 percent of the population.

Head of government

The prime minister's job is much like the U.S. president's.

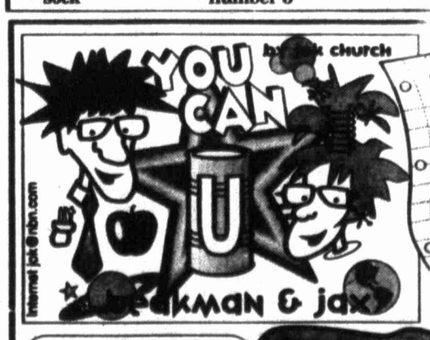

Jean Chrétien, 61, is prime minister of Canada.

Government The governing body of Canada is called the Parliament. It meets in this building in Ottawa in the province of Ontario. This building is called the Parliament Building.

Dear Beakman,
How do fiber optics work?
Justin Kuo
Lexington, Kentucky

Dear Justin,

Fiber optics is a term we hear a lot these days. Sometimes the talk is just hype – a way of selling something by getting everyone all excited.

Fiber optics is pretty much just a new kind of cable. A regular cable sends electricity into a wire circuit. The fiber optic cable sends pure laser light into a thin strand of glass. The big difference is You Can send lots more stuff with fiber optics.

Beakman
Beakman Place

experiment #1
Fiber Optics At Home

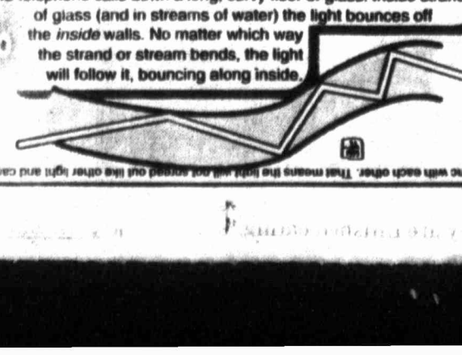

WHAT YOU NEED: Small jar with lid - long black sock - flashlight - the kitchen sink - nail - hammer - total darkness - grown-up help

WHAT TO DO: Punch 2 holes in the lid of the jar. Put the flashlight all the way into the bottom of the sock. Fill the jar with water and put the lid on. Slide the jar into the sock.

Turn off the lights. Turn on the flashlight. Now pour the water into your sink.

SO WHAT: Light travels in straight lines. That means your experiment should shine light along the line marked A. But it doesn't. Your light shone along line B.

You just bent a beam of light around a corner. This is exactly how we can use laser light to send telephone calls down a long, curvy fiber of glass. Inside strands of glass (and in streams of water) the light bounces off the inside walls. No matter which way the strand or stream bends, the light will follow it, bouncing along inside.

So What:

We can send lots of stuff through a fiber optic cable – way, way more than we can send through regular wire cable. Look at this drawing and You Can see that we can send different colored light through the same fiber optic cable.

You already get phone calls that were sent in part on fiber optic cable.

The hype is about what kinds of things we might use it for – like newspapers on a computer or movies whenever we want or even more home shopping.

What turns hype into reality is whether or not people are willing to pay money for all this stuff that might be.

P.S. from Beakman: Laser light is special because its light waves are in sync with each other. That means the light all stacked up like other light and can focus lots of energy tightly

Sex survey respondents may be liars

Abigail Van Buren
Columnist

DEAR ABBY: I just read a report on a sex survey, and it says that the average man has six partners in a lifetime, and the average woman has two. Well, I am well below the average.

What do you think about these sex surveys, Abby? The one I saw said it was a "blind" survey — meaning that the person who filled out the questionnaire did not have to give his (or her) right name as a matter of privacy.

I was part of one of those sex surveys years ago, and I lied like a rug. No way was I as virile as I made myself out to be. I wonder how many others have responded to a sex survey — and how honest they were?

I hope your readers write in and tell you the truth about the way they answered the questions about their sex lives. — LONGTIME IOWA READER

DEAR READER: People who are dishonest when responding to a survey do the project a grave disservice.

I cannot document my suspicions, but I would guess that when it comes to questions about one's sex life, at least as many people lie as tell the truth.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent reply to "Appalled in Mobile, Ala.," you stated that waiters are sending a message, "You folks have been here long enough ... please hurry up." I'm appalled by your response.

I'd like to clarify the fact that clearing the table is simply making room on the table for the next course, or just for the guests to have more room to feel comfortable and talk. In fact, most guests push their plates aside and ask for their server to take the plate away.

If guests have a problem with a server clearing their plate, all they need to say is, "I'm not quite finished yet."

For the millions of servers out there whose tips are their only source of income, your message only hurts them. — ANGRY IN ARLINGTON, TEXAS

DEAR ANGRY: I was severely chastised for my answer. I'd ask for 50 lashes with a braised leek — but I'm afraid I'd have to eat it. Read on for another letter from an irate server:

DEAR ABBY: Having been a food server in fine dining and hotel establishments for many years, I must respond to your comment about waitresses who remove finished plates while others are still eating. If we waited for every last person to clean his plate — especially at banquets — the entire dinner would be held up; then we would really look incompetent.

We are not sending a message to "hurry up" when we remove the dirty dishes from the table. We are working at servicing the table and will serve people when they are ready. I would rather be accused of clearing dirty plates too soon than of standing around doing nothing!

Many diners consider it poor service if we do not remove the dirty dishes as soon as possible. And as for the person who wrote to say that was an annoyance, he or she was probably looking for a reason not to tip. Clearing plates is a big part of waiting on customers, and an attentive waiter does so with courtesy and discretion.

Sometimes in this business, we are darned if we do and darned if we don't. — BEND, ORE.

DEAR BEND: Thanks for giving me a glimpse of the situation from a server's point of view. I shared your letter with Bernard Erpicum, proprietor of Eclipse, a top-rated restaurant in Los Angeles. He summed it up this way: "In Europe, where patrons linger over their meals and socialize, the server waits until everyone at the table is finished before removing the plates. However, in the United States, patrons expect to have the plates removed as soon as they are finished eating."
