

Successful 'Scouting for Food' program benefits local pantry

Two dozen local scouts were among the volunteers who collected and sorted 3,649 canned and dry food items Saturday as part of a "Scouting for Food" project that resulted in the largest single donation to the Bailey County Ministerial Alliance Food Pantry.

"This is wonderful," said Food Pantry volunteer Kay Graves in the midst of organizing the items onto shelves. "It's better than Christmas."

The food items will be distributed to needy families in the area, according to Graves.

The food drive surpassed the expectations of event organizers.

"It speaks highly of the people of Muleshoe and their willingness to donate so others do not have to go without," Scout leader

Cliff Black said. "I think one of the things that made a difference is that folks know the donations stay here."

Scouts earned points toward their community service badge for their efforts, but learned a bigger lesson according to Black.

"It was a lot of fun and it was good for them because it lets them see that there are people out there in the community that are not as fortunate as they are."

After distributing "Scouting for Food" bags two weeks ago, the scouts spent two hours Saturday collecting donations throughout the city.

The items were then brought to the Food Pantry on American Boulevard where they were sorted and stocked.

Some of the items can be used for Christmas baskets.

Muleshoe area scouts help sort items that were collected Saturday as part of the "Scouting for Food" campaign. The food will be distributed locally through the Bailey County Ministerial Alliance Food Pantry.

A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

A Mule Mania Christmas

Editor's note: The following poem was written by Watson Junior High seventh-grader Ryan Marricle for an English project.

'Twas the night of the big game and all through the stands,
Not a player was quiet, not even the fans.

Their jerseys were all hung on the new lockers so bright,
Wondering what number they would be wearing tonight.

The players were suited up all tight in their pads,
While visions of end zones filled the heads of those lads.

Fans wrapped in warm blankets with programs in hands
Sang the National Anthem played by the bands.

When all of a sudden the referee blew his whistle,

And Ryan Hodge backed up and kicked the ball like a missile.

The fans all cheered as the Mules ran down the field

To capture their enemy and make the running back yield.

The parents gazed down at their mighty young men.

Was it yesterday, they had been only ten?

Our defense was stubborn, they were unable to score,

So with time running out, we had the pigskin once more.

With a quick running back that could make them all miss,

He made a good play, so I yelled, "Way to go Chris."

Faster and faster his strong blockers they came,

He hollered and shouted and called them by name.

"Now Turney! Now Conklin! Now Nunez and Rhett!

On Mata! On Mason! On Whipple and Bret!"

To the thirty and twenty he ran with the ball!

Now, dash away! Slash away and follow the wall!

They fought and they blocked and they opened the hole,

And McClanahan shouted, "You can't stop this foe!"

They rambled through the defense and scored a touchdown,

And up in the stands there was not one single frown.

They shouted and cheered for we had just won the game,

And the good fans of Muleshoe were glad that they came.

Subsidies key to wheat market

LUBBOCK — Wheat prices are lower than any grower would like and their upside potential is at best a mixed bag. Still, agricultural economists at three land-grant universities are optimistic about higher long-term prices.

"Wheat prices this summer were the lowest they've ever been since the summer of 1991. Prices reached a seasonal low in August-September, but rallied substantially faster than I expected in light of the current U.S. supply-demand situation and the large expected carryover stocks for the 1998-99 marketing year," said Dr.

Mark Waller, grain marketing and policy economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "Tight world wheat supplies, expectation of smaller U.S. acreage and weather problems in Oklahoma and Texas helped prices bounce back."

Although the current U.S. supply-demand situation seems burdensome (USDA now projects 1998-99 ending stocks of 902 million bushels) more subsidized sales of U.S. wheat could support prices, the economist said.

"Overall, the world economy isn't as strong as last year's, but people still need to eat and our government knows we need to sell grain," Waller said. "As a result, I think we'll see more subsidized wheat sales this year and that will help both demand and prices through the winter and into spring."

The outlook for world wheat production dropped in November, said Kansas State University grain marketing analyst William Tierney. This suggests global wheat stocks in the 1998-99 marketing year could end up the second low-

Boll weevil referendum vote in March

By LESLI RADFORD
Journal staff writer

Area farmers are still uncertain about supporting a boll weevil eradication program.

Texas Department of Agriculture representatives recorded comments on the proposed Northwest High Plains Eradication Zone Monday during a public hearing at the Bailey County Coliseum.

Mark Williams, chairman of the Northwest High Plains Eradication Zone committee, which includes Bailey, Castro, Lamb, Deaf Smith and Parmer counties, explained the proposed referendum to growers and producers.

The committee proposal includes an assessment fee of $12 per acre for irrigated land and $5 per acre for dryland cotton.

Farms will be surveyed, trapped and sprayed under these costs. An office will be set up in this area so that boll weevil traps can be set up around the perimeters (the committee estimates every five acres) of each cotton field and watched closely for boll weevils.

Spraying would start in the spring and would be based on trap catches. The program also includes a fall diapause program and then in-season spraying as necessary.

Several local farmers expressed concern about the cost of the program going up.

Bryan Patterson, a Lamb County grower and committee member, explained that the budget was set for the worst case scenario and that the assessment may actually be lower than the set amount.

"To me, I'd rather pay the low expense now than to wait for the problem to grow and later, end up paying three times as much to take care of the original problem," Patterson said. "Twelve dollars is cheap compared to spraying ourselves every five to six days."

Retired DPS trooper keeps busy training dogs

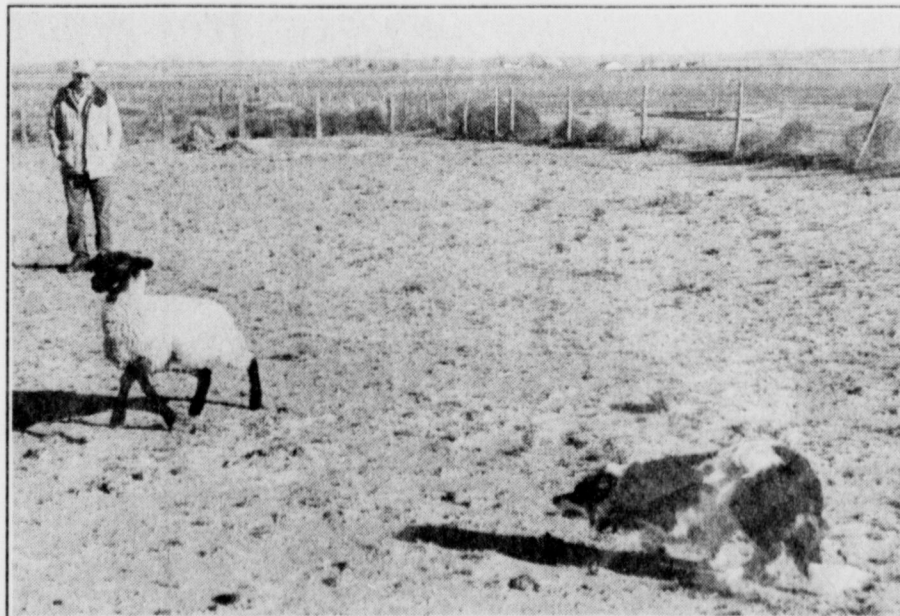

By LESLI RADFORD
Journal staff writer

Lyndon Huckaby looks proudly at his dogs as he leans over a wire fence in the backyard of his Muleshoe home.

All five are purebred border collies, including Annie, who recently won the Ranch and Novice Class at the Texas Sheep Dog Association Championship in Ozona. Huckaby and Annie took home a total of two trophies, two plaques and a shepherd's crook.

During the trials, the dog herds sheep through a course directed by the commands of the handler. The dog must round up the sheep, pen them and control the remainder of the sheep while one is sheered. The trials are based on a point system.

Standards for the trials are set by the International Sheep Dog Society.

Annie at work

Lyndon Huckaby watches his border collie Annie work a sheep

Huckaby, a retired Department of Public Safety trooper stationed in Bailey County for 21 years, got into showing border collies about three years ago. He said that he and his family were at the state fair when his daughters, who were just in high school, were showing livestock. In between shows, they watched a "trial" (a dog show of wit) which was being held for border collies.

"I told my wife that would be something I could really get interested in," said Huckaby, who trained bird dogs for 15 years. It was not until he retired from the force that he really got into raising border collies.

He said that he started showing with Annie. The most recent competition they entered was the state championship.

There are several other border collie owners and showmen in the Muleshoe area who compete on a local level twice a year in Muleshoe. Huckaby said that he has competed with some of them at other levels.

"We love to show off," he said. "Anyone who would like to see us herd sheep are welcome to come out anytime or if you're having problems with your dog, we don't mind helping you out at all."

He works his dogs on a few acres of land right outside the city.

"I train puppies in a small pen so I can have control over them. They gradually work their way to a bigger pen and then to an open field."

Huckaby works with 10 sheep to train his dogs, running them through a sample course in the field behind his sheep shed. He often invites his friends along to work their dogs.

He noted that "a finished dog can bring between $2,000 and $5,000."

"Finished" means the dog knows its flanks (left and right) and how to come and go to its owner and "fetch" stock well. A puppy can cost about $200.

"I've never sold a finished dog. They are expensive, but think of it this way: they do the work of four or five ranch hands, they don't complain, they don't talk back, they don't call in sick and they'll last you 10 or more years. Add it up."

The dogs are controlled with verbal commands like "lay down" which means for the dog to lie down and watch the stock. "You never teach a dog to sit," said Huckaby. "You don't want them sticking up there and spooking your stock. They are supposed to 'eye' the stock like a cat stalks prey."

In place of verbal commands, there are shepherd's whistles which are more advanced. Huckaby uses the whistle by making different pitches that mean different commands to the dog.

Border collies are intelligent dogs with superb herding abilities, according to Huckaby.

"Someone once told me that you have to be smarter than the dog to train him, but these dogs are outstanding. You don't train these dogs to work stock. They do it because it's instinct. You train them to use their ability to herd in the way you want your stock to be handled."

The bloodlines of some of can be traced back to the 1800s.

"It's just like race horses," Huckaby said. "There are just some bloodlines that perform better than others."

est in almost 40 years, he said.

The USDA now projects a 1998-99 average market price of only about 42.65 per bushel, said Dr. Kin Anderson, Oklahoma State University Extension ag economist-marketing.

"Producers won't likely see $3.65 wheat until U.S. wheat ending stocks drop at least 310 million bushels. For that to occur, the 1999 wheat crop would have to total less than 2.1 billion bushels—a 20 percent drop from 1998's 2.56 billion bushel crop," Anderson said. "Unless poor growing conditions significantly reduce the U.S. or world wheat crops, I wouldn't look for $3.65 wheat again until at least the year 2000.

"So, producers who can afford storage should consider holding a portion of their crop in order to capitalize on any price rebounds that occur."

Waller said it's not too early for producers to develop a 1999 marketing plan and set price goals.

"Unless the supply-demand situation changes substantially, prices should remain relatively low for the rest of the marketing year. A winter price rally will hinge on better exports," he said. "Even with less U.S. acreage forecast for 1999, producers may not see higher prices next year unless a supply problem develops somewhere in the world."

Several farmers said they lacked information about the program in the past and would like to know how their money is going to be spent.

Williams said the committee hopes to hold several more meetings before the March referendum vote. Ballots will be mailed to county growers and producers on Feb. 19. They must be returned postmarked no later than March 12.

Area cotton grower's with concerns may visit the TDA web page at <http://www.agr.state.tx.us/> for further information on boll weevil legislation.

Christmas concert

The Muleshoe High School choir, under the direction of David Downum, looks for its cue Monday during their annual Christmas concert at the MHS auditorium.

Making a better Christmas trees

Christmas tree lots across the country are filled with families looking for the perfect tree for their house. About 35 million live trees will be purchased this year and every buyer wants a lush, fragrant and dense tree.

While that perfect tree may be hard to find, genetic improvements mean more will be available for future holidays. Growers are experimenting with scientific improvements to produce faster-growing, more disease-resistant trees.

"It means a better product for the consumer. If you end up with a better product, it's obviously easier to sell," said Duane LaCasce, who has 120,000 trees growing in Dover-Foxcroft, Maine.

Seedlings from balsam fir with genetically superior color, shape and other characteristics are already growing at tree farms across Maine.

Using a special rating system, Maine growers have selected the creme de la creme of trees based on shapeliness, rich color, fast growth, needle retention, and resistance to disease and insects. Growers transplanted cuttings from those balsam fir onto root stock. The resulting trees were grouped together on seed farms so the pollination process is not contaminated by "inferior stock."

Such research is done on all crops, but it's more tedious with trees because they take longer to grow, said Craig McKinley, a Christmas tree expert at North Carolina State University.

In addition to having better-looking trees, farmers can save money if the tree reaches a marketable height in fewer years and if it needs less labor-intensive pruning.

While producing "super trees" is a laudable goal, growers should avoid the temptation to create cookie-cutter trees that are so uniform they are akin to artificial trees, said David Stenger, president of the National Christmas Tree Association, who operates a farm in Oregon, Ill.

"One of the reasons people like real trees is because no two trees are alike. They like the individuality," he said.

LAP deadline extended

Under the Livestock Assistance Program, $2 million was appropriated to provide assistance to eligible livestock owners who suffered qualifying feed losses because of natural disaster conditions.

A county or partial county must be approved for participation in LAP by before applications from eligible livestock producers can be accepted. Bailey County has been approved to begin taking applications for LAP

LAP sign-up was originally scheduled to end Jan. 8, 1999. Because of the length of time necessary to assemble information for DAFP review and approval, many counties were not approved until after sign-up began. Therefore, the LAP sign-up period has been extended until Feb. 5, 1999.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Muleshoe indeed a special place

Dear Editor,

Last month, I came home for mother's birthday. The farmers were in the peak of stripping cotton.

I had missed the area farmers doing Derrel's work last year. I saw a different picture this year, but one that touched my heart. Derrel has worked hard to overcome his heart attack and regain his health. To see him put in a long day inside the stripper was nothing short of a miracle.

Seeing daddy running the modular after his heart attack. Even Joe Sowder helping after his recent loss.

This year it took only Gerald Shanks and Buddy to help get the crops in. Because the area farmers helped last year, it made this year possible.

It sure seems like Muleshoe is a place where God takes care of his.

Tulia topples MHS in final

ABERNATHY — Someone forgot to tell Tulia and Muleshoe it was the boys championship game of the I-27 Tournament.

Instead of a heated contest between former district rivals, Tulia jumped out to a 10-0 lead Saturday and coasted to a 50-33 win.

Muleshoe (6-4) held the Hornets' one-two punch of Charles Sims and Mikey Marshall in check most of the game, but never mustered enough offense to even challenge the state's second-ranked Class 3A team.

"We were flat," Muleshoe coach Ralph Mason admitted. "And quite frankly, I think some of our lesser experienced kids were intimidated."

Dustin Cleavinger was the Mules' lone offensive weapon with 22 points as senior guards Carlton Lewis and Mason Sinclair were held to a combined two points.

"We looked like we were just trying to survive on offense instead of attacking," Mason said. "We weren't step-

Lady Mules play well in 39-31 loss to 4A Levelland

LEVELLAND — Muleshoe coach Jim Gruhlkey knew it would take a near-perfect effort Friday to upset Levelland.

The Lady Mules put together one of their most complete efforts of the season but still came up short as the Class 4A Lady Lobos rode a balanced attack and six 3-pointers to a 39-31 victory.

The win was 1,199th in the illustrious coaching career of Levelland's Dean Weese.

"We did a good job of being patient and making them play defense," Gruhlkey said. "I was real pleased with the way we played. But they make you pay for every little mistake you make."

Leading by seven at halftime, Levelland (9-3) laid to rest any hopes of a Muleshoe upset with a 7-0 spurt at the second half.

Muleshoe answered with a 7-0 run of their own to close to within 28-21 heading into the fourth quarter.

But Carrie Phelps (nine points off the bench) scored four points and Shara Helmbeck added her last of three 3-pointers to keep the Lady Mules at bay.

Lindsey Field and Erin Wilhite led Muleshoe (3-10) with 10 points each.

Levelland took an 11-8 first-quarter lead on the strength of 3-pointers by Helmbeck and Kelli Brashear (10 points). MHS answered with 3-pointers by Field and Myndi Heathington (seven points).

Phelps and Helmbeck added 3-pointers in the second quarter as the Lady Lobos increased their advantage to 21-14.

Muleshoe hosted Slaton Tuesday and wraps up its pre-Christmas schedule Friday at Lamesa.

SMYER — Lazbuddie let a 10-point lead slip away and lost its first game of the season.

Led by all-state candidate Jamie Parker, Lorenzo stunned the Lady Longhorns 45-43 Thursday in the first round of the Smyer Tournament.

Parker scored 12 of her game-high 26 points in the fourth quarter and Tasha Wall buried a game-winning 3-pointer with 40 seconds left. It was Lorenzo's only lead of the game.

The Lady Longhorns had a potential game-winning 3-pointer rim out in the final seconds. All-tournament selection Laura Jo Via led Lazbuddie with 17 points and Scottie Brown added 11.

Lazbuddie opened the season with a school-record nine wins. The Lady Longhorns (11-1) rebounded from the Lorenzo loss with a pair of easy wins, but the damage had already been done.

"We flat out let one get away," Lazbuddie coach Carey Sudduth said. "We're pretty dis-

■ Longhorns can't match Lorenzo's offensive thrust

SMYER — Lorenzo ended Lazbuddie's title hunt early.

Cory Aycock tallied a game-high 27 points and the Hornets buzzed Lazbuddie 62-53 Thursday in the first round of the Smyer Tournament.

Lorenzo went on to win the tournament championship while Lazbuddie (8-4) rebounded to capture the consolation title.

"I thought we played pretty well (against Lorenzo)," Lazbuddie coach Rich Powers said. "But they just do a better of running their offense than any team we've faced this season."

Josh Morris scored 26 points led the Longhorns with 26 points.

Lazbuddie bounced back from the opening round loss by drilling Southland 86-30 behind 28 points by all-tournament selection Brandon Foster. Cade Morris added 20 points for the Longhorns and Adam St. Clair finished with 10.

Pesticide applicators reminded about license renewal

Pesticide applicators, both private and commercial, face a February 28, 1999, deadline for license renewal.

"Applicators need to check their CEUs (Continuing Education units) while they have plenty of time to get the credits," says Curtis Preston, County Extension Agent. "It's important for producers to stay informed of changing regulations as well as new products and new application methods."

Private applicators must renew their license every five years and obtain 15 CEUs during that period. Two credits must be integrated pest management and two in law and regulations.

Applicators must self-certify their credits by listing them on the renewal form that they should receive by early December.

Private applicators also may earn the required credits by passing a comprehensive recertification exam, which costs $50 for each attempt. After passing, an applicator will receive a certificate of completion of 15 CEUs.

Commercial and non-commercial applicators renew each year and must earn five CEUs annually, including one CEU in each of two of the following categories: laws and regulation, integrated pest management and drift minimization.

Pesticide applicators should check with their Texas Agricultural Extension Service office for courses offered or call the TDA at (800) TELL-TDA of (512) 463-7548 for a list of approved courses.
