The election held last Saturday to determine whether or not Stephenville should issue bonds to the amount of $12,000 for the purpose of erecting a new school building, resulted favorably and the council will at once make application to the attorney general for authority to make the issue. If he rules favorably on the result of the election these bonds will be issued and sold and applied properly.

There is some talk now that an immense dam will be constructed about three-fourths of a mile west of the Dick Williams' farm which lies east of Stephenvile. This will form a great lake and will cover an immense area of the Dock Wright farm. From this lake water can be thrown over the court house at Stephenville. Dick Williams will put his house on stilts and continue to live there and fish the balance of his life. Dock Wright is expected to donate the land, as his property will be made very valuable.

Saturday night five young men visited the home of Mrs. Shaddox, near Bowman Ridge, during the absence of her husband, who was at church, and she claimed that they attempted to rob her. It was generally reported that Dr. Goodner had paid the Shaddox's two thousand dollars during the day for a piece of land, and these young men demanded that she turn over this money. A complaint was filed and Dave Deaton soon had the alleged robbers under arrest. Bond was made and the examining trials of four of the party are set for next Monday. During the same evening five men visited the house of "Uncle" Jimmie McInroe, but he, too, was at church. They told Mrs. McInroe they were going to a party, or were hunting one.

Her many friends and neighbors deeply sympathize with her and her family. Our informant says that her recovery is very doubtful, owing to advanced age.

Cures When Doctors Fail.

Mrs. Frank Chiasson, Patterson, La., writes June 8th, 1901: "I had malaria fever in very bad form, was under treatment by doctors, but as soon as I stopped taking their medicine the fever would return. I used a sample bottle of Herbine, found it helped me. Then bought two bottles which completely cured me. I feel grateful to you for furnishing such a splendid medicine, and can honestly recommend it to those suffering from malaria, as it will surely cure them." Herbine, 50c bottle at Overton Drug Co.

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by Overton Drug Co.

Hayden-Cranfill Shooting Scrape.

Telegraphic reports from Texarkana under date of yesterday says: "A sensational shooting affray occurred on the east bound Texas & Pacific train coming into Texarkana this morning, between Rev. J. B. Cranfill, editor of the Texas Baptist Standard at Dallas, and Rev. S. A. Hayden, editor of the Baptist Herald at the same place.

"The encounter occurred in the lavatory of the sleeper on which both men were en route to the southern Baptist convention at Nashville, Tenn. When they met Cranfill drew a pistol from his grip and leveled it at Hayden and the latter seized the weapon and turned it upwards and in the scuffle the two shots fired entered the ceiling. Cranfill says he only used the pistol to prevent Hayden from injuring him.

"Dr. Cranfill was arrested on arrival here and arraigned blefore Justice Henry on a charge of assault to murder. He waived examination and was released on $1,000 bond. Cranfill was represented by Hon. Frank Ball. Todd & Armistead appeared for Dr. Hayden, who was not arrested but appeared to prosecute. Cranfill declined to make a statement Hayden talked freely. He said he did not know Cranfill was in the lavatory of the sleeper until he entered to make his toilet.

"Dr. Cranfill left for Nashville this afternoon and Hayden will resume his jounrey tonight. No further trouble is anticipated.

"The affray caused intense excitement here, on account of the prominence of the parties in religious affairs of the state. The encounter grew out of past differences, legal and personal, between the principals familiar to the people of Texas. Dr. Hayden was accompanied by his wife and daughter and Dr. Cranfill by a party of friends."

Another dispatch from Dallas under same date says: "The law firm of Crane & Gilbert received a telephone message from Austin today stating that the Hayden-Cranfill case has been reversed and remanded.

"This is the second time the case has been in the higher court. The judgment was for $15,000, as rendered by a jury in the forty-fourth district court at Dallas and was affirmed by the court of civil appeals. The style of the case in the supreme court was J. B. Cranfill et al vs. S. A. Hayden et al. The case has attracted much attention in legal and religious circles throughout the state. The judgement at the first trial was for $30,000, which was set aside by the supreme court."

For Those Who Live on Farms.

Dr. Bergin, Pana, Ill., writes: "I have used Ballard's Snow Liniment; always recommended it to my friends, as I am confident there is no better made. It is a dandy for burns." It should always be kept in the house for cases of emergency. 25c, 50c and $1.00 at Overton Drug Co.

BRILLIANT SOCIAL AFFAIR

Given by Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Higginbotham Friday Eve.

One of the most brilliant social events ever transpiring in Dublin occurred last Friday evening, May 6th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Higginbotham in honor of the delegates and visitors to the first district meeting of the Texas Federation of Women's Cluts.

The palatial home was opened for several hours and on entering the spacious hall, which was artistically decorated in the local club colors of red and white, the guests were cordially greeted by Prof. W. J. Neal and from there transferred by the Misses Marr, Akard and Flack to the receiving line which was composed of the following ladies and gentlemen: Mr. and Mrs. R W. Higginbotham, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. St. Clair, Mr. and Mrs. E. Bramlette and Mrs. J. C. George of Stephenville, Mrs. E. P Turner of Dallas, Mrs. Rotan of Waco, Mrs. Frank Mahon of Cisco, and Mrs. J. C. Bell.

After a general exchange of greetings the guests were ushered from the receiving room into one adjoining, where Mrs. A. A. Hartgrove and Miss Louise Higginbotham requested that each visitor write their respective name with the left hand in a dainty book prepared for the occasion for this created considerable merriment and much friendly bantering as to who could accomplish this feat most legibly. The guests were then conducted by Miss Emma Perry to the dining room, which was made beautiful by the house decoration of carnations and smilax so tastefully arranged as to form a beautiful harmony of color and a pleasing background for the handsome gowns of the visitors. An especially elegant feature of decoration was the dining table with an arrangement of flowers entwined from center piece to the chandelier. Here Miss Sallie Higginbotham, assisted by Misses Rookh Jordan, Ollie Moore and Alice and Dora Higginbotham, served tea punch and a delicious salad course, followed by ice cream and macaroons. From this point the guests were taken in charge by Mesdames R. A. Miller and W. R. Wasson, who conducted them to a final registering table presided over with much grace by Mrs. S. A. Green. The violet shaped registering booklet was a creature of her own deft and artistic skill and the guests were required to register one on each petal. A dainty souvenir card decorated with a hand painted violet, the club flower, and the date of the event on the face was then presented to the guest.

During the entire hours of receiving delightful music was discoursed by the Dublin orchestra composed of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Huchingson, W. E. McKinney, E. A. Cowan and J. F. Edmonds.

The list of guests fortunate enough to have been included in this delightful affair were:

D. M. Britton was seriously hurt last Tuesday afternoon by his horse running away and throwing him from his spring wagon. A boy was sitting on a keg in the wagon driving the horse and Mr. Britton was in the rear end of the wagon. Near the Central depot the horse became scared and ran away. Mr Britton was thrown out in front of the Mecca Bar and sustained serious injuries on his head and his right side. The wound on his head was a double gash cut in the shape of a cross and each cut was over three inches long. Dr. Miller was summoned and at once dressed the wound and Mr. Britton was taken home in a cot. We understand that he is doing reasonably well at this time.

Cure Catarrh by Nature's Own Method—Every Breath of Hyomei Brings Relief.

Nearly everyone who has catarrh knows how foolish it is to try and cure it by drugging the stomach. Temporary relief may be given, but cure seldom comes.

Until recently your physician would have said the only way to cure catarrh would be to have a change of climate; but now with Hyomei you can carry a health giving climate in your vest pocket and by inhaling it a few minutes four times a day soon cure your self.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs $1.00 and consists of an inhaler which can be carried in the vest pocket, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. The inhaler lasts a lifetime, and if one bottle does not cure an extra bottle of Hyomei can be obtained for 50 cents. It is the most economical of all remedies advertised for the cure of catarrh, and is the only one that follows nature in her method of treating diseases of the respiratory organs.

The Dublin Drug Co. have sold a great many Hyomei outfits and the more they sell, the more convinced they are that they are perfectly safe in guaranteeing to refund the money if Hyomei does not cure.

ECHOES FROM THE WAR

Striking Example of a Japanese Prisoner's Patriotism.

EAGER TO SHARE IN BEATING FOE

Sentenced to Be Hanged, He Sent Money Saved to Buy Sake to War Fund—Government Refused Coin, Then Prisoner Told Warden to Give It to Some Soldier's Wife. Gallantry of a Stoker.

From time to time interesting incidents have been brought out by the Russo-Japanese war. Here are a few of them:

Yoneichei Endo, whose first name means "one grain of rice," has languished in one of the Tokyo civil prisons since four years ago, when he killed a man at Migata, says Will Levington Comfort, the Tokyo correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch. There must have been some extenuating circumstances, because the trial, begun a few days after the killing, was recently terminated. Endo was sentenced to be hanged.

At the same time he learned that his country was at war. He had pennies to the amount of $1 gold, with which he planned to buy cakes and sake on the day of his death. The ideas of war upset this purpose. He gave the warden his money to turn into the war fund. The prison officer accepted the amount and carried it in person to the war office. Endo's mite was refused. A convict is one from whom the government can accept no favors. The prison warden was distressed at the thought of returning the money to the prisoner, but there was no other way.

"Buy sake with it. It will make the end easier," the warden advised.

"I do not care about pain," said Endo, "but I would like to do my part toward beating Russia since I cannot fight. Give the money to some soldier's wife and do not tell her whence it came lest it be refused."

The warden obeyed. Moreover, he told the story to a reporter of one of the Japanese papers, who wrote four lines about it. Perhaps he had a better conception of the story's value than I. At least what he wrote was enough to make me call upon Endo at the Ichigawa prison on the day of his execution. I found a trim little man of twenty-seven, whose face was whitened by confinement, but very good to look upon. Through an interpreter I told Endo that I thought he was a brick or something similar and that he looked pretty cheerful for a man just about to go out.

He replied that the going out matter was a mere bagatelle. The thing that bothered him was the means. He had the Japanese hatred for hanging. He invited me to stay and witness the proceeding, and the warden added a courteous pressure.

Sake is very good. It is more powerful than wine and less potent than whisky. It is also very cheap. You can buy a barrel of it for the price of a bottle of wine. Endo did not drink quite a barrel, but I was officially assured that he dropped into Nirvana in high and proper spirits.

A striking example of gallantry was shown by a stoker on board the cruiser Asama on March 6, says the New York Globe. While the Japanese squadron was proceeding to Vladivostok one of the pipes of the cruiser connecting with her machinery became clogged with ice. The situation was a difficult one, as the sea was running high and the weather so severe that the decks and sides of the vessel were coated with ice. But in neither arm of the Japanese service is there ever any dearth of volunteers for an enterprise involving peril to life or limb.

Second Stoker Keizaburo Miyazaki stepped forward and a moment later was slung overboard and quickly broke away the ice from the mouth of the pipe. Hardly had he completed his chilly task than he was struck by a huge wave, which severed the rope and carried him away to an awful fate in those icy northern waters.

The Japanese papers are now full of heroics, some of which ring with pathetic simplicity. The following is an instance:

Kenzo Umehari, a second class engineer, was one of the desperate seventy-seven who sallied forth to block the entrance to Port Arthur by sinking their ships. He has died of his wounds. His aged father, when he received the news of his son's death, addressed his family as follows: "Now, boys, your elder brother died an honorable death at the blockade of Port Arthur. His death was for the sake of our country, so we must not weep, but rather it should make us proud. Suppose that he should hear our sorrowful voice, certainly he would not be pleased; therefore you must not drop tears."

After saying this he lit a small fire and burned incense sticks to commemorate the brave sailor's death according to the Buddhist custom. All his family followed him without tears. It is harder not to weep than to drop tears.

Commander Arima, who took part in the first attempt to blockade Port Arthur, gave his wife a novel keepsake on leaving his home to join his ship. He produced from his pocket a small parcel, and, smiling, said: "I have shaved off my mustache, which I have cherished for a long time and have wrapped it in this packet. I trust you will preserve it in remembrance of me."

OPEN BOAT TRIP TO PANAMA

Toledo Man Expects to Sail 7,500 Miles In a Year.

A Toledo (O.) man will undertake a trip of 7,500 miles in an open boat, says the Toledo News-Bee. The man of this quite extraordinary undertaking is A. Stanley Parker, who has had experience in the past with similar expeditions on a smaller scale.

Parker will start from Toledo early in June on his long and perilous journey by water to Panama. The trip will be from Toledo by the lake route to Chicago, thence through the Chicago drainage canal to the Illinois river, to the Mississippi, to the gulf. Then the coast of Mexico will be skirted to the city of Panama, Parker's destination.

This trip will be made in an open boat rigged with a leg o' mutton sail. The craft is a fifteen footer and four feet beam, light, but very stanch and well adapted to this purpose.

"My object in taking so light a boat," said Mr. Parker in speaking of his undertaking, "is to have a craft that I can beach myself, as I will be alone. I expect to sleep ashore most of the time and must have a boat that I can pull up on the beach without help.

"I will take along a tarpaulin so constructed that I can convert it into a tent. This tent I will pitch anywhere on the beach or shore wherever I may be. I will take along a few clothes, cooking utensils and provisions. While in American territory I will not carry much provision because I can stop in any city along the route and buy from time to time what I need.

"At Galveston, which will be the last American city of importance on my route, I expect to put in a supply of provisions that will last me until I get to Panama. I won't need much, for along the gulf coast I can sustain life largely upon fish and fruit, which are abundant and cheap there.

"I expect it will take me at least a year; maybe longer. My object is to reach Panama about the time operations begin on the interoceanic canal. There is no telling exactly when that will be, but I want to be on the ground at the time."

Mr. Parker is well qualified for the journey and its hardships. He has soldiered in the Philippines, "roughed it" many times and once made a trip in a small open boat around the peninsula of Florida.

MOUNTAIN AS A GIFT.

Vermont Millionaire Will Convert a Lofty Peak Into a Public Park.

That at least one peak in the majestic old Green mountain range will be preserved in its natural grandeur, unharmed except by the hand of time, is due to the generosity of Joseph Battell of Middlebury, Vt., says the Boston Globe. For many years Mr. Battell has interested himself in the preservation of the forests of his state, especially those upon the slopes, and that the people may enjoy the charms which nature provides so lavishly he has purchased a peak, which he proposes to convert into a park for the benefit of the citizens of Vermont.

Towering high above the majority of its companions, Ellen mountain, as it has been christened by the owner, stands a silent sentinel 4,000 feet above the beautiful valley below, in which nestles the town of Warren. The top, which comprises some 4,000 acres, gives one a panoramic view that cannot be eclipsed in New England. The mountain is still very largely covered with forests and the upper portion of it with the original spruce.

Mr. Battell intends to construct a massive steel tower and otherwise add to the comfort and convenience of the tourist by the building of suitable bridle paths.

Mr. Battell devotes considerable energy to the study of the sciences. His wealth has been acquired largely by inheritance, but his fortune has been increased by his large purchases of timber lands in Vermont, his holdings approximating 40,000 acres.

Music For Russian Workmen.

"The laboring man in Russia, though in rougher surroundings than found in other countries for the same class, has undoubtedly compensations which serve to make his life happier than could be imagined under such conditions," says a writer in Social Service for May. "One is love of music, cultivated and enlarged by the fine rendering of the anthems and chants of the services of the churches. The choral singing of men and boys in some of the smaller hamlets is indeed so rich and finished in style as to be a constant source of wonder to all travelers. Soothing and delightful also is the delicious melody of the church bells, which render hourly their music, and musical as well as cheering is the tinkling of the bells on the harness of the horses. No whip is needed by the drivers, who urge their beautiful ponies only by the exhilarating sound of national or popular airs sung in their rich chanting tones."

Adventures of a Russian Deserter.

An extraordinary story of desertion and its sequel has recently been laid before the assize court of Farnopol, in Austrian Poland, says the London Globe. Some time since a Russian deserter, after swimming across the Zbuca, reached the village of Kurina, on the Austrian side, when he celebrated his escape by making himself incapably drunk. In this condition he was carried before the mayor, in compliance with whose orders the man was taken back and forcibly left in midstream, where he was seized by a Russian patrol. On the story reaching Vienna a prosecution was instituted, and the mayor has been sentenced to fourteen months' imprisonment. Six other peasants were sentenced to one month each.

School Picnics.

School picnics have been very plentiful lately, and among them we note the following:

Lancaster.—The school at Lancaster school house, about two miles from Bunyan in the Green's Creek district, closed last Friday with a school picnic. A nice program was rendered by the school children and addresses were made by S. Frank, Davis Doyle, Will Pannill, Prof. E. E. Bramlette, J. C. George and Prof. Frank Hartgraves. Milton Kiker, on behalf of the patrons of the school and at their suggestion, made a short talk, stating that they were well pleased with the way the school had been conducted. The school was taught by Miss Carrie Compton and was her second term in that community.

Indian Creek.—One of the largest crowds seen at an occasion of the kind this year was at Indian Creek last Saturday at the closing of Prof. George Wadlington's school. Addresses were made by several of the candidates and a ciphering contest by the school children in the afternoon proved to be very interesting.

Keyser.—The Keyser school, between Alexander and Stephenville, was taught this year by Prof. Tom Lawson. The term of five months closed with a picnic Tuesday of this week. Here, as at other places, several candidates were present and several speeches were made, and here, as at each of the other places mentioned, a very fine dinner was spread. The ladies of this country are to be commended for their culinary art, and they with their entire families are to be commended for their hospitality and their interest in the schools.

Recovers Claim on Suicide Policy.

Morgan News.

On Friday night after supper the court tried without a jury a case of Mrs. Lucette R. Cole vs. The Fraternal Union of America. This was a suit in which the plaintiff sought to recover something over one thousand dollars from the defendant on account of the death of her husband, Arthur P. Cole, who was up to the time of his death agent for the Texas Central at Iredell, and who held a benefit certificate in the defendant association. The defendant admitted that it was bound to pay $344, or one-third of the amount that it would have been required to pay had the deceased died a natural death. It was admitted that his death was caused by suicide. The plaintiff sought to recover the full amount of the certificate held by her because of the fact that the defendant had in its constitution a clause making a certificate issued by it incontestable under certain conditions, notwithstanding another clause in the constitution limiting the defendant's liability in case of suicide to one-third what it would have been in case of natural death. The court held that the plaintiff was only entitled to recover the amount previously tendered by the defendant, $344. The defendant made a test case of it under the suicide clause in its constitution.

Comanche District Court.

W. W. Reed vs. Della Reed, suit for divorce, not granted.

In the five cases of Joe Jones, charged with rape, the defendant plead guilty in one case and was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. The four other cases will be dismissed.

One of the eleven cases against Ed Wilson, the cotton exchange operator, charged with theft of money, was tried but resulted in a hung jury. The case will again be tried at this term.

Jack Parker plead guilty to having received stolen property (a horse) and was sentenced to two years in the pen.

The grand jury has indicted Sol Ingram and Tom Smith, who live on Leon river near Gustine, in two cases each for assault to murder. It is alleged that the defendants made an assault upon a man by the name of Houston some time in April.

Sam Hancock has been indicted for assault to rape and an attempt to rape.

The grand jury adjourned Saturday, after returning one hundred and one indictments. The last batch of true bills were as follows: Gaming one, rape one, giving whiskey to minor one, malicious mischief one, assault two, abusive language one, fraudulent disposition of mortgaged property four, assault to murder three, keeping gaming house three, carrying pistol one, adultery one, disturbing peace three.

The criminal docket has been postponed until some time in June. District Attorney Arnold left Wednesday for his home in Gatesville.

People May Go Without Food for Days but Not Without Sleep.

Fasters have gone without food for many days at a time but no one can go without sleep. "For a long time I have not been sleeping well often lying awake for two or three hours during the night up to three weeks ago, but now I sleep sound every night and wake up refreshed and vigorous," says a California woman.

"Do you know why? It's because I used to drink coffee but three weeks ago I cut off the coffee and began using Postum. Twice since then I have drank coffee and both times I passed a sleepless night, and so I am doubly convinced coffee caused the trouble and Postum removed it.

"My brother has been in the habit of drinking coffee three times a day. He has been troubled with sour stomach and I often would notice him getting soda from the can to relieve the distress in his stomach; lately hardly a day passed without a dose of soda for reilef.

"About two weeks ago he asked me for a cup of Postum—said he liked it well enough to give up coffee and since then has been drinking Postum three times a day and says he has not once been troubled with sour stomach." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Even after this lady's experience with coffee her brother did not suspect coffee was causing his sour stomach, but easily proved it.

Coffee is not suspected in thousands of cases just like this but it's easily proved. A ten days trial works wonders, and of course "there's a reason."

Hard Times in Oklahoma.

From the following clipping taken from the Whitney Messenger it would seem to the casual observer that the "beautiful Eldorado Oklahoma" is not flowing with milk and honey as some have been led to believe:

"J. B. Treadaway and family, who left this section last November to locate on a homestead allotment near Guymon, O. T., returned last Saturday to again make Whitney their home, thoroughly disgusted with the Oklahoma country where they located. Mr. Treadaway says he would not live there long enough to hold a homestead for ten thousand acres of the land deeded to him. He says the country and what it would produce was grossly misrepresented to him by the locating agents in the territory, and that hundreds of others have been misled as he was. He says lots of people are leaving and that many are too poor to leave, while there are some two hundred people on the pauper list of the county. He said when he left one man actually cried and said he would give anything in the world for money enough to leave there. Mr. Treadaway says it has not rained there since August and that everything is waste. He secured employment in a store during his stay there and acquired a house and two lots, which he succeeded in renting upon leaving."

In Memory of George R. Benson.

Mr. Georgia Rhodes Benson, oldest son of Mrs. Fannie E. Benson, near Alexander, Texas, was on the 22nd day of March called from earth's stage of action to his eternal home.

Mr. Benson was born December 13th, 1879, and died March 22nd, 1904, making him twenty-four years and three months old. He returned home from his professional vacation in the west on account of ill health, saying to his mother on his return: "Mother, I, have come for you to nurse me back to life again." During his illness he often remarked, "Life is not worth living this way," yet he never murmured at his lot. He seemed to realize that his attack was unto death and the day before he died he said to his mother, "Mamma, I am ready for the worst, regardless of what it is." Those words are truly expressive of the reign of the Lord's comforting and fortifying grace in the heart.

Of this young man's life we can freely speak commendably without fear of over-rating it's virtues. While he, as all others, had his imperfections, yet I never knew a more exemplary life in one of so tender years. His cheerfulness, tenderness and devotion as a son and brother rendered him a pride of a now broken, distressed and sorrowing family. He was not only loved and praised by a loving mother and tender brothers and sisters, but by all who knew him. During his life I always regarded him as a true and confidential friend of mine, and this was verified in his request for me to come, though a hundred miles away, to speak at his funeral. How inadequate I felt for the occasion, yet with a sorrow of mind and deep and tender sympathy for a heart broken mother and children I went and spoke of the joys of our eternal home and his fitness to share its lasting benefits, as I hope to the comfort of the bereaved.

Mr. Benson was a young man of sterling worth and promising future, having just entered the field of action in his chosen profession (law). His intellectual ability and energy in concert with that philanthropic regard for his fellowman, the suffering and innocent, together with his staunch disapproval of wrong and vice, would have certainly rendered him a useful man in his chosen profession.

While these were noble and commendable traits, still above and more noble than all he left living and unmistakeable evidence of a preparation of grace in his heart for that heavenly home, where there will be no vice and evil to condemn and surpress, and the innocent will need no defense, but will stand eternally acquitted by the sovereign Judge above whose judgment and verdict there can be no appeal. What a radical difference between the cares of this world and the joys of heaven. Then dear mother, brothers and sisters dry up your tears; rejoice in his glorious and inestimable gain. Some sweet day the summons will come to you and oh, may you, like your dear boy and brother, say "I am ready for the worst.", and have an abundant entrance into the joys that he now enjoys.

Submitted in tender remembrance of the deceased and profound sympathy for the bereaved.

S. A. Paine.

A team drawing a carriage in which was Mrs. W. H. Vandyke and another lady of near Bunyan came near making trouble Wednesday near the Cooper Grocery Co.'s wholesale house. The ladies attempted to drive down the alley to the ice factory and the team became scared at a lot of burning rubbish and turned suddenly in the close place in which they were being driven. The tongue was broken out of the carriage and it was otherwise damaged and the team would have certainly ran away except for the presence of mind of Mrs. Van Dyke, who held a firm grip on the lines and applied the whip to the horses to keep them from crushing backward into the carriage.

The election for school trustees in the Dublin independent school district developed very little interest and only fifty votes were polled in the election last Saturday. There was no opposition to the gentlemen whose times had expired and they were re-elected for another two years, viz: J. B. Waldo, B. W. Lafferty and J. S. Daley. The other members of the board whose terms will expire next year are Messrs. M. C. Witcher, Jno. G. Harris, C. S. Oates and G. B. Maloney. A meeting of the board was held Tuesday and the returns canvassed and declared.

Field's Singing Class Reunion.

As was announced the class met on the morning of the second Sunday in May about 10 o'clock. It was a very beautiful day, a nice breeze from the north just sufficient to be pleasant and make every one feel good. The late rains had cleared everything of dust and had only dried enough to prevent us being in the mud and not enough to be dusty.

As has been stated the crowd had assembled at 10 o'clock and a more pleasant and happy crowd could not be found anywhere, all faces beaming with love and good feeling toward each other with expressions of delight at being together, which placed us a few years back in our imagination to where we were boys and girls together, not realizing what pleasures we were enjoying until they had passed forever from us.

'Tis true some seats were vacant, some by moving away, others by passing to the home beyond, where their voices are today, perhaps, blended with the choir where no mistakes are made. Notwithstanding all this we all felt happy, for we had others with us who sang as well and felt at home with us. In all our past gatherings we never saw a more nicely behaved crowd.

We had an opening song by Prof. J. D. Wilkins, our leader; a lesson by Prof. McClanahan of Clairette; prayer by "Grandpa" Hicks; welcome address by the warmest and truest friend of the class, J. R. Bell, which was short, but very much to the point; a lesson by Prof. Will Leverett of Indian Creek. After these exercises we had dinner in abundance spread on tables especially prepared for such occasions. After all had satisfied their appetites there was plenty left to feed them again had it been necessary. After spending an hour in conversation we were again ready for duty.

In the afternoon we had lessons by Messrs. Coltson, Grant, Geo. Stringer and a lesson in the "Old Christian Harmony," by E. I. Stringer. As many of the old class as were there stood around the organ and sang one of our old favorites, "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother," and it seemed that we never before sang with such pathos as at this time.

A lesson by Prof. John Carrol of Wilson followed.

A committee was appointed consisting of J. R. Bell, president, and Jasper Jones, Moses Jones, Miss Lillie Laird and Will W. Caudle, corresponding secretary, to secure leaders, prepare program, etc., and by mutual consent declared this day, second Sunday in May, as an annual re-union of the old class.

We were dismissed by singing "Shall I Meet You Up There?"

Will W. Caudle,
Corresponding Secretary.

MEN WHO LOOK ALIKE.

It Is Easy to Become a Victim of Mistaken Identity.

"One of the strongest pieces of evidence against an accused man when there is any doubt connected with the identity of the criminal is the statement of any one or more witnesses that 'he is the man: I could pick him out of a crowd,' and yet despite the awful weight this often has in deciding the result of a trial it is in reality weak and fallacious and would fall to pieces if a good, practical test were made of the witness' alleged remarkable perspicuity," said the man who is fond of criminal research. "I think it has been the experience of nearly every man who has traveled any to meet with numerous people who will take him for some one else. At least a dozen times in my career has this occurred. This has been in broad daylight, on the street or some public place where with clear vision and unhampered thought a man does not know if I am myself or some one else. Change the conditions—sunshine for darkness, an ordinary street scene for one of crime, perhaps murder, with its attendant excitement and mind disturbance, and say if it be possible for a man who has caught perhaps one moment's view of the fleeing criminal to go into the witness stand and 'identify' the man. Suppose we were to advertise for three or four men bearing a close resemblance to the prisoner (and they would not be very hard to find in a city of this size), dress them exactly like the accused and let them mingle and intermingle among themselves, and it is almost a foregone conclusion that the best witness in the court will be so puzzled he cannot tell one from another."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

MODERN SPIRITUALISM.

It Dates Only From the Middle of the Last Century.

Some forms of spiritualism have had followers from remote antiquity. In the Levitical law we find the injunction, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live," and throughout Old Testament history there are frequent references to this subject, while demons, pythonesses, sibyls, augurs and soothsayers have their places in the secular annals of mankind.

In its modern form spiritualism dates only from the forty-eighth year of the last century, when, at the house of a farmer of Hydesville, in the state of New York, the spirit of a peddler who had been murdered there some five years previously was said to produce certain unaccountable rappings and disturbances in the room occupied by little daughters of the house.

An investigation by the neighborhood followed, and, to quote the words used by Farrar in his pamphlet on the subject, "It soon became evident that an organized attempt was being made by the denizens of the spirit world to establish a method of communication with mankind."

From that time spiritualism spread rapidly, and by the year 1871 the number of its supporters was variously reckoned at from 8,000,000 to 11,000,000.

LIGHT REFLECTION.

The Reason Why Foam Always Appears White In Color.

When water is violently agitated small bubbles of air are mixed up with it, and thus foam is formed, and its whiteness is due to the fact that when light passes from one medium to another of a different refractive index it is always reflected, and this reflection may be so often repeated as to render the mixture impervious to light.

It is, then, this frequency of the reflections of the limiting surfaces of air and water that renders foam opaque, and, as each particle reflects light in all directions, so much light is reflected that the mixture appears white.

To a similar cause is due the whiteness of transparent bodies when crushed to powder. The separate particles transmit light freely, but the reflections at their surfaces are so numerous that the resulting effect is white. Thus glass when crushed is a white powder and is opaque, but when it is put under water it once more becomes transparent, because the water fills up the interstices between the particles, and the reflections are destroyed. Salt and snow are also common examples of this condition.

GLACIER MOTION.

The Movement Is Like That of Pitch Upon a Plane.

The motion of glaciers has been scientifically defined as that of a viscous mass, partly sliding upon its bed, partly sheering upon itself under the influence of gravity. In other words, the motion resembles that of pitch poured upon a table, which spreads, not by the expansion of the bottom of the mass, but by the edges rolling over above the lower stratum, which is dragged by the table surface. It was argued against this that ice was a brittle substance, but Principal Forbes was able to show that glacier ice differs from others in possessing a distinct granular structure and that the grains, by imparting a certain amount of motion to each other, as in water, gave the whole plasticity.

The rate of motion varies with local conditions, but is sometimes extremely slow. Thus the Theodul glacier ejected, in 1885, from its end two skeletons, with fragments of clothing, and two medals, dated 1582.

Other high authorities attribute their motion to other natural forces, such as alternate expansion and contraction.

A Dance Cure.

Dr. Bishoff of Valdivia, Chile, describes the hard work of the mining peons, who carry 150 pounds of ore in bags strapped to their shoulders while they climb up hundreds of feet on ladders, often consisting only of notched trees. They toil without a recess from 6 a. m. to 4 p. m. and might seem to be in need of all the rest they can get, but before supper prefer to take the strain out of their muscles after a fashion of their own—viz, dancing vehemently to the sound of a fiddle for an hour or two or even longer if their lady friends happen to muster in force. —Health Culture.

National Manners.

It is curious to watch on board a steamer how the men of different nationalities behave to a lady no longer young who is traveling alone. The Frenchman is absolutely rude if he gets the chance; the German simply takes no notice; the Austrian is frigidly polite; the Englishman takes trouble to be kind if his aid is solicited; the American is kind from habit and without effort.—London Standard.

Fathers and Sons.

Descanting on the changes in life and work brought about by time, a farmer said, "When I was young I used to think my father had na muckle sense, but my sons look on mysel' as a born eediot!"—"Reminiscences," by Sir Archibald Geikie.

BIG PRICE FOR A COIN

Silver Dollar of 1804 Sold For $2,000.

RECORD FIGURE FOR THAT SPECIE

Famous United States Coin Purchased by a Pacific Coast Collector. Only Seven In Existence—Rest of Issue, Lost at Sea, Was Sent to Pay Off American Sailors In North Africa.

A United States dollar, now in its one hundredth year, recently began the long trip from Denver to Portland, Ore., after having lain in a Denver collection of coins for more than eighteen years, says a Washington special dispatch to the St. Louis Republic. Though the dollar is about the size of those coined during the present year and contains about the same number of grains of silver, it brought in the neighborhood of $5.35 per grain of pure silver in its combination, and all this because it has been in the one form for 100 years.

The dollar is one of the coinage of 1804, of which there are only seven known to be in existence. It was bought by the late J. V. Dexter at the Chapman sale of coins in 1885. At that time the coin had been but lately secured from a collection in Berlin, being the only one of the dollars that is known to have been in a foreign collection.

Mr. Dexter paid $1,000 for the dollar, having to bid against several other collectors, the price being at that time the largest that had ever been paid for one of the coinage named. Since then one of the other coins has been sold for $1,200, a record that held good until H. G. Brown of Portland, Ore., paid $2,000 for the coin to R. G. Parvin, who succeeded to the ownership of the Dexter collection. Mr. Parvin did not willingly part with the coin at that price, for he had held it as the key piece of his numismatic collection.

About a year ago the story of the Parvin 1804 dollar was printed in papers throughout the country. As a result Mr. Parvin has been receiving letters ever since concerning his collection of rare coins from all parts of the country. A Chicago man tried to buy the dollar, offering up to $1,500, and failed. Then a man in St. Louis tried to get it for a collection to be exhibited at the world's fair.

During these negotiations Mr. Parvin thought he had discovered the limit of bidding and that no man would go over $1,500 in trying to get the coin. So when he was asked to put a price upon it he replied that he was not willing to dispose of it, but had set his price at $2,000.

Mr. Brown did not wait for the slow progress of the United States mail, but telegraphed to send on the dollar. After that telegrams came at the rate of one a day, and while Mr. Parvin was reluctantly placing the dollar in a candy box and labeling it there came another telegram to hurry up the dollar anyway and to send it "C. O. D." if there was no other way. So the dollar started west.

The scarcity of the dollars of the 1804 mintage is explained by an accident at sea. The larger part of the silver dollars of that year were struck off to pay United States soldiers and sailors doing duty in Tripoli, north Africa, and were shipped to that place. The vessel that carried them away from this country was never heard from again, so the entire cargo is supposed to rest somewhere upon the floor of the Atlantic ocean.

Just seven copies of the dollar of that year are in existence, two lying in the mint at Philadelphia and the others being in private collections. In 1858 some copies of the coin of 1804 were struck off, being known as "restrikes," but all but two of them were called in, the records show, and destroyed. One copy of the "restrike" is in the mint at Philadelphia, and the other is owned in England. No counterfeit of the 1804 dollar was ever known.

Said an amateur numismatist the other day: "I've been studying about coins for a long time, reading all the books and treatises on the subject I could lay my hands on, and enjoin it upon you, my friend, if you ever come across an 1804 silver dollar, grapple it hard and fast. I can tell you," he said, "that one of them has a fictitious value of at least a thousand times its weight in gold, and the possessor of one who is sordid enough to wish to sell it can get a princely sum for it. I find in the libraries solid evidence of the fact that the real, pure, unalloyed 1804 dollars are among the rarest coins in the universe—I mean, of course, United States coins. There were originally some less than 20,000 of them coined, and the few in existence today are in carefully guarded cabinets of well to do coin collectors."

A Story of Maurus Jokai.

An amusing story is told concerning the late great Hungarian novelist, poet and dramatist, Maurus Jokai. His youthful drama, "Dalma," was performed in its author's presence at Pesth some time ago, and the students, with true continental enthusiasm, took the horses out of his carriage to drag the hero home. Arrived at the house, Jokai put his head out of the carriage window, says the Glasgow Herald, declaring that he had left these premises more than three months, a fact which he had for some moments past been endeavoring to explain to them. Nothing therefore remained but for the students, with many a hearty laugh, to drag the carriage to the poet's new abode.

SPANISH NAMES.

How They Came to Be So Freely Scattered Over California.

It was the custom of the old Spanish explorers to name places after the saint for whom was named the day on which they camped there. In this manner a great number of melodious and sonorous Spanish names have been scattered over California, so that the names of a great number of places begin either with "San" or "Santa." In some cases a subtitle, as it were, has been affixed. For instance, we have San Luis Rey and San Luis Obispo (Saint Louis the King and Saint Louis the Bishop), also San Juan Capistrano. In the case of Los Angeles, it was named "Nuestra Senora de los Angeles" (Our Lady of the Angels). This name is altogether too bulky for frequent use, so the early officers shortened it to "Angeles."

One curious name among the saints is that applied to a picturesque little settlement on the divide between the San Gabriel and Pomona valleys—San Dimas. San Dimas, be it known, was one of the two men who were crucified at either side of Jesus—the one who asked to be remembered by the Lord when he should enter into paradise. He is the patron saint of robbers. The way this name came to be given to the San Gabriel valley village was thus: In early days a gang of Mexican horse thieves had their "lair" in a canyon there, which was subsequently referred to as the Robbers' canyon or the canyon of San Dimas. When the Santa Fe railroad came along and laid out the station there the name of the canyon was adopted; hence San Dimas.—Los Angeles Times.

CHANGING A QUARTER.

It May Be Done Twelve Ways and Takes Seventy Cents.

"How much money does it take to make change for a quarter?" queried the man whose fad is freak mathematics. "Twenty-five cents, eh? You're away out. To change a quarter in the various way it can be done requires a capital of 70 cents. If a fellow wanted plenty of coin for his quarter he'd tax you for twenty-five pennies. On the other hand, the man who wanted the least loose change for his quarter would come at you for two dimes and a nickel. The chap who wanted a diversity of coin in his change would get into you for two five cent pieces, one dime and five pennies, which would allow him to jingle copper, silver and nickel in his jeans. Others might ask you to produce four nickels and five pennies, three nickels and ten pennies, two nickels and fifteen pennies or one nickel and twenty pennies. If you escaped these demands you might be requested to come up with five nickels, three nickels and one dime, one nickel, one dime and ten pennies, one dime and fifteen pennies or two dimes and five pennies. There are just twelve ways of "breaking" a quarter in current United States coin, and to be there with the goods for any demand you would require twenty-five pennies, two dimes and five nickels—in all, 70 cents."—Philadelphia Press.

Electricity.

Concerning the fundamental nature of electricity itself there is still no certainty, but there are several hypotheses, says Electrical World. There are several theories for explaining both electricity and magnetism in terms of the ether. None of these theories seems capable of being submitted to experimental demonstration. It is certain, however, that, since the interconnection between electricity and magnetism is known, a demonstration of the nature of the one must, by corollary, include a disclosure of the nature of the other. Moreover, it would not seem likely that the complete unraveling of the nature of electricity would necessarily include a revelation of the nature of both matter and of gravitation.

Effigies In Westminster Abbey.

It was formerly the custom at the funeral of a great man to dress up an effigy representing him while in life and then to carry it before his hearse to the grave. After the burial it was set up in the church, sometimes under a temporary monument, to which a laudatory poem or an epitaph was affixed. The royal effigies in the abbey can be traced back to the fourteenth century, but the oldest original one is that of Charles II.—George F. Parker in Century.

LITTLE THINGS.

Importance They at Times Assume in Affairs of Life.

"The longer I live," observed the cashier of a bank downtown, "the more I realize the importance of little things. Here is a case in point," he continued, referring to a letter he just had received. "A few weeks ago I had two callers in my office, one an excitable old man a big depositor, and the other the president of a manufacturing company and the writer of this letter. The manufacturer left, and soon afterward the excitable man discovered that some one had taken his hat. He looked about the place until one of the clerks suggested that perhaps the manufacturer had taken it by mistake. The excitable man demanded his address and started out to hunt him down to give him 'a piece of his mind.' The other day I read a letter from the manufacturing concern and was interested to see among the names of stockholders that of my excitable caller the vice president. My curiosity was aroused, and I made some inquiries. I learn that the excitable man was very pleasantly received when he called for his hat that his anger cooled down. Then he got to talking about the manufacturer's business and the money he was making. A few days later he invested heavily in the concern and was elected its vice president. All because of that little mistake about a hat."—New York Press.

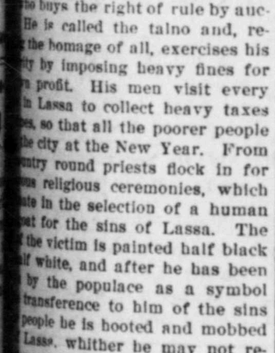

New Year's In Tibet.

The 18 is New Year's day in Tibet, and for the succeeding three weeks Lassa is the scene of strange proceedings. The government passes from the hands of a monk of the Debang monastery, who buys the right of rule by auction. He is called the talno and, receiving the homage of all, exercises his authority by imposing heavy fines for his own profit. His men visit every house in Lassa to collect heavy taxes and fines, so that all the poorer people leave the city at the New Year. From every country round priests flock in for the various religious ceremonies, which culminate in the selection of a human scapegoat for the sins of Lassa. The selected victim is painted half black and half white, and after he has been cursed by the populace as a symbol of transference to him of the sins of the people he is hooted and mobbed out of Lassa, whither he may not return for a year.

The Umbrella Tree.

The umbrella tree is found in Ceylon in greater profusion than anywhere else in the world. As a matter of scientific fact, these trees grow to their full height and attain to their full size in very wet, rainy countries. This growth frequently is due to the fact that the tree requires a great deal of moisture and not because it is needed to keep off the rain. The leaves are so complete an umbrella that a number of persons might take shelter under its spreading branches. The foliage is, as a rule, so thick that it is able to keep off the rain almost perfectly even in a heavy downpour.

THE LIFE OF THE WORLD.

Traditions That It Will Last but Six Thousand Years.

There is a general and widespread notion, which the curious investigator will find scattered throughout both mediaeval and modern literature, that the world will last 6,000 years from the date of its creation. An inscription in one of Martin Luther's books reads as follows: "Elijah, the prophet, said that the world had existed 2,000 years before the law was given (from Adam to Moses), would exist 2,000 years under the Mosaic law (from Moses to Christ) and 2,000 years under the Christian dispensation, and then it would be burned."

In the Etrurian account of the creation (by Suidas) I find a similar tradition: "The Creator spent 6,000 years in creation, and 6,000 more are allotted to the earth."

In the black letter edition of Foxe's "Acts and Monuments" there is a whole sermon given, with the 6,000 year limit of the earth's duration as a text. (See above work, edition of 1632.)

Some writers contend that the "six days" referred to in Holy Writ really mean 6,000 years, and that the "seventh day" is a type of the coming millennium, or "Sabbath of a thousand years." The psalmist says, "For a thousand years are in thy sight as yesterday." (Psalm xc, 4. See also II Peter iii, 8.)—St. Louis Republic.

HUGE DUCK FARMS.

They Are to Be Seen on All the Waterways of China.

Enormous flocks of tame ducks, numbering many thousands, are to be seen on all the waterways of China. These are carefully herded by the duck farmer and his sons and guided by them to suitable feeding grounds. A recent writer speaks of seeing them on the Yangtse in midstream, floating down in compact masses with the racing current and surrounded by their guardians in tubs, who, armed with long bamboos, smartly whacked any birds that happened to stray.

These ducks always appear to be of the same age, a curious fact that is explained by the Chinese use of incubators on a large scale. They are very chary about revealing details, but it would appear that these incubators are either made of manure and lime in the open air or in rooms heated by charcoal fires, the eggs in this case being placed in baskets covered with straw or cotton wool.

To illustrate the magnitude of these operations it may be mentioned that a boat on a river will sometimes encounter a floating mass of eggshells numbering tens of thousands and coming from an incubator where ducks have just been hatched.

A READY PREACHER.

Notable Instance of Presence of Mind in the Pulpit.

Frederick the Great, being informed of the death of one of his chaplains, a man of considerable learning and piety, determined to select a successor with the same qualifications and took the following method of ascertaining the merit of one of the numerous candidates for the appointment: He told the applicant that he would furnish him with a text the following Sunday, when he was to preach at the royal chapel. The morning came, and the chapel was crowded to excess.

The king arrived at the end of the prayers, and on the candidate ascending the pulpit he was presented with a sealed paper by one of his majesty's aids-de-camp. The preacher opened it and found nothing written. He did not, however, lose his presence of mind, but, turning the paper on both sides, he said:

"My brethren, here is nothing, and there is nothing. Out of nothing God created all things." And he proceeded to deliver a most eloquent discourse on the wonders of the creation.

The Story of a Crest.

There is a curious tradition concerning the almost miraculous preservation of the life of the first Earl of Kildare, which explains the origin of the crest used by the Offaly Geraldines. While an infant, so the record runs, he was in the castle of Woodstock when an alarm of fire was raised. In the confusion that ensued the child was forgotten, and on the servants running to search for him the room in which he lay was found in ruins. Soon after a strange voice was heard in one of the towers, and on looking up they saw an ape, which was usually kept chained, carefully holding the child in his arms. The earl afterward, in gratitude for his preservation, adopted a monkey for his crest.—London News.

Ages of Birds.

Small singing birds live from eight to eighteen years. Ravens have lived for almost a hundred years in captivity, and parrots longer than that. Fowls live ten to twenty years. The wild goose lives upward of a hundred years, and swans are said to have attained the age of 300. The long life of birds has been interpreted as compensation for the great mortality of their young.

A Fatal Omission.

"I can't for the life of me make out what my wife is driving at in this letter?"

"Of course you can't, old chap. Don't you see that she forgot to add the postscript?"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

CZAR AND THE PEOPLE.

Russia's Ruler the Saddest Man In Europe, Says Gilson Willets.

The story of the war's rebound on the social and political organization of the forty different nations and religions composing Russia begins with the czar, the man whose dominant characteristic is horror of war, says Gilson Willets in the April World's Work. The tale of the Romanoff family shows why the czar has this aversion. His father went to his tomb overwhelmed by religious superstition; his grandfather was killed by an assassin's bomb; his great-grandfather, crushed by catastrophes in the Crimea, committed suicide; his great-great-grandfather died a mysterious death; his great-great-great-grandfather (1801) was murdered. The effect of the war upon this autocrat has been to make the most melancholy of the world's monarchs the saddest man in Europe.

To General Bobrikoff, the governor of Finland, I once said, "Is the czar a good shot?"

"My master," replied the governor, "shoots like a bookworm. And he wears a uniform as an educated man would wear livery—self consciously and with detestation."

One day in St. Petersburg I said to my guide Billy (I couldn't pronounce his real name): "Billy, the streets are a-glitter with uniforms. What do you suppose all these soldiers think they are soldiering for?"

"For God and the czar, sir."

That morning Billy took me to the railroad station to see the prisoners take the train for Siberia. Billy talked to one of the soldiers who guarded the 500 prisoners. "Ask that man, Billy," I said, "what he thinks he is soldiering for."

"He says," replied Billy, "for God and the czar, sir."

Two hours later, in the palace square, facing the Winter palace, a vast crowd had gathered. The czar had been thrown from his troika, sustaining slight bruises.

"Doesn't this crowd suggest personal attachment?" I asked Count B. as we drove into the square.

"It is no more a testimonial of personal attachment," he said, "than the crowds one sees at a lord mayor's parade in London. A crowd like this is not permitted here. Watch!" Hoofs were heard, and a company of Cossacks charged into the square—with whips. The crowd dispersed. It had seen those whips before. All my ideas of personal attachment melted at the sight of those whips—knowing that in the hands of Cossacks the whips were not merely for horses.

POPULAR GERMAN SPORT.

Pushball, a Rapid Game, Played by Teams on Horseback.

A new and extremely interesting game has recently been started at the Berlin circus in Berlin, says the New York Journal. It is pushball, played by teams on horseback. Not only have professionals engaged in the game, but a number of amateur teams have been organized, and the sport is rapidly rising in popularity.

The same number of players are employed in the game as when it is played by teams on foot. The only difference is that the teams are mounted, and the ball is considerably larger. In Berlin the ball is a trifle over five feet in diameter and is made very strong. The goals are the entrances to the arena, and each goal is guarded by a mounted keeper.

As in the game when played on foot, the purpose is to push the ball through the goal posts and so score. As the ball is very light, pushball on horseback is a rapid and somewhat dangerous game. Riders frequently have falls, and not infrequently both horse and rider go down together. It is, however, not so dangerous as polo and is almost as rapid. Riders are not allowed to touch the ball with their hands, the pushing being done entirely by the horses.

Telephone Mouthpieces In Germany.

A special mouthpiece for the public telephones has been introduced in Germany with the object of avoiding the spread of diseases carried by the condensed moisture of the breath, says the London St. James Gazette. A pad of a large number of disks of paper, with a hole in the middle, is inserted in the mouthpiece, and the upper disk of paper is torn off after every conversation. The Vienna call boxes are provided with napkins, bearing the request, "Wipe, if you please." The practice of wiping the mouthpiece of the transmitter is a sanitary precaution.

Hardy Daisies.

It is authoritatively announced that a noted flower breeder has succeeded in producing two new varieties of daisies which are enormously large. These are known as the Alaska and the California and are from four and a half to five inches in diameter, borne on stems two to three feet long, says the Experiment Station Record. Each flower is composed of thirty-eight to forty-two petals with a very small disk. It is claimed that these flowers are perfectly hardy and will grow anywhere in the United States.

Iceland's First Railway.

The first railway in Iceland will probably soon be begun by an English company recently formed for the purpose of working the sulphur mines at Theisstareykir, in the north of Iceland. The mines are about seventeen miles from Husavik, the nearest harbor, to which the proposed railway will run.

Army Schools In Russia.

In every regiment of the Russian army there is a school, says the Metropolitan Magazine, and a young man cannot leave the army and go back to his village without having learned to read, write and cipher.

The Tissue Paper Man

By WILLIAM H. OSBORNE

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

The maid knocked gently upon Miss Catherwood's door and handed in a card. Miss Catherwood looked at it and tossed it to the floor.

"Oh, the dickens!" she said frankly. It will be seen at once that, although Miss Catherwood was a young lady of beauty and charming personal characteristics, she had decided opinions about various things. One of the things was Mr. Anthony Wadsworth, who, as appeared, was waiting below for an audience with her.

"The dickens!" reiterated Miss Catherwood. "I suppose I shall have to see him." Miss Catherwood's mother happened to be within earshot.

"Who is it?" she inquired. She was informed. "Dear me," said Miss Catherwood's mother, "why, Mr. Anthony Wadsworth has always appeared to me to be a very proper young man."

"That's just the trouble, mother," returned Miss Catherwood. "He's too proper. He's too conventional. He's a tissue paper man."

"Dear me," answered her mother, "he—he doesn't look like a tissue paper man."

"Oh, I know," petulantly responded the young lady, "I know. He's just about the proper weight and proper height, and his shoulders are just the proper breadth. He's like a pattern—a fashion plate. He's just unbearable."

Miss Catherwood's mother, who could not quite reconcile her daughter's premises with her conclusion, sighed. Her daughter swept out of the room and went downstairs.

Mr. Anthony Wadsworth rose as she entered and bowed in a quaint old fashioned way. He was flustered and embarrassed, and there was good reason for it, for Mr. Anthony Wadsworth was there for a purpose, and his purpose ultimately became apparent. He was there to propose to Miss Catherwood, and he proposed. He didn't do it very well, and Miss Catherwood, who had had a proposal or two before, as she listened to him made mental comparisons that were unfavorable to this particular suitor.

"Don't—don't give me your answer tonight," implored Mr. Wadsworth, the perspiration standing out upon his brow. "Wait—wait until tomorrow night. Take time."

Miss Catherwood, who would have preferred to end it at once, assented. She said with all the coldness she could summon to her aid that she would consider it; that she would wait until tomorrow night. And she had a reason for it. She had an engagement with Tommy Boggs for the next night, and she intended to write a short note for Mr. Wadsworth to receive when he came. That would be the end of Mr. Wadsworth.

Tommy Boggs, a boisterous young man whom she rather liked, was going to do for her what no one had ever done. He was going to take her down to a big political rally in the Fourteenth ward—down where she could see politics as it really is. She looked forward to it with pleasure. She liked to learn about the real things that real men did.

She started with Tommy about 7 o'clock in the evening in order to get a choice seat in the ladies' quarters. She left the fatal note with her mother, with instructions to hand it to Mr. Wadsworth. She told her mother what it was. Her mother, who was a very tender hearted old lady, met Mr. Wadsworth at the door—he came at 8 o'clock sharp—and Mr. Wadsworth was so downhearted when he found that Miss Catherwood was out that the old lady thought she would keep the note to herself.

"I—I'll call tomorrow evening," said Mr. Wadsworth tremulously. "She probably forgot last night that she had this—this engagement for tonight, although— I'll call tomorrow night."

Down in the Fourteenth ward, in Bailey's hall, Tommy Boggs and Miss Catherwood were having the time of their lives. The campaign was in full blast. Election was near at hand. Miss Catherwood kept her eyes on the speaker, and she listened to every word he said.

"Isn't he fine?" she exclaimed to Tommy. "It's just great to be a man like that, a man who can sway men."

There was a burst of applause from something more than one-third of the crowd as the man upon the platform paused in his speech at the proper place. He was a paid campaign orator, and he was good at that. But there was just a bit of dissatisfaction visible upon the faces of the crowd. A man near Miss Catherwood moved about uneasily.

"Aw, ——," he said, "why don't they bring on the alderman? What the —— the use o' this?"

Another man nudged him. "The alderman," he explained, "ain't a-goin' to be on hand tonight."

As he spoke a stout man entered from behind the scenes and stepped up toward the front of the stage. He was cheered loudly.

"That must be the alderman," whispered Miss Catherwood to Tommy Boggs. But he wasn't. He whispered for a moment to the speaker, and the speaker nodded and shook his head. The big man raised his hand.

"Ladies and gents," he said, "we'd fully expected to have the alderman with us here tonight, but I'm givin' it to you straight that"—

He was interrupted by a mighty yell. "Hi, hi, hi!" yelled the crowd. "What ye givin' us? Look behind you!"

The big man turned, and everybody looked and howled. "Hooray, hooray, hooray!" yelled the crowd. Miss Catherwood looked with the rest, and then she gave a little gasp, for the man that the whole crowd was looking and yelling at was a young man attired in a full dress suit. He was bowing, with conventional stiffness, right and left, and he was none other than Mr. Anthony Wadsworth.

"Tony, Tony, Tony, Tony!" yelled the crowd. The big man stepped forward. "Mr. Tony Wadsworth," he exclaimed by way of introduction, and pandemonium broke loose. Mr. Anthony Wadsworth stepped forward a pace or two. "Ain't he corkin'?" said the loquacious individual near Miss Catherwood, "and he always comes here in a swallowtail suit. He knows what's what, he does."

Wadsworth nodded, and the crowd became instantly silent. "I didn't intend to be here tonight," he explained. He hesitated. "The fact is," he went on, "I had an engagement with my girl, and she turned me down. I didn't have any other place to go, and I came here."

This, in black and white, amounts to nothing. But it was the way that Wadsworth said it that took. "Ha, ha, ha!" roared the crowd. "Imagine Tony's girl a-turnin' of him down. Go on, Tony!"

Mr. Anthony Wadsworth raised his hand high in the air and started in. Suddenly he stopped. He was looking directly into the eyes of Miss Catherwood herself. He turned white and then turned red. Then he turned away and apparently forgot her. And then he started in. He started in as only Alderman Anthony Wadsworth knew how. Miss Catherwood had thought the campaign orator had talked as no other man could talk. That was because she had never heard Mr. Anthony Wadsworth. With one hand in his trousers pocket and the other in the air the alderman walked up and down the stage, casting into the very faces of his audience humor, pathos, expletive, vituperation, sarcasm, congratulation—everything.

And when he finished the crowd surged up to the platform and literally overwhelmed him. Miss Catherwood, when it was all over, drew a sharp breath. "To think," she wailed to herself, "that I have refused such a man!"

The next night Mr. Anthony Wadsworth called upon her. She met him at the door. She was radiant.

"I—I've come to ask your pardon," he said contritely.

"For what?" she inquired.

"You—you haven't forgotten," he stammered, "about—about my—my girl last night. I—I don't know why I said it. I felt reckless, I suppose."

She laughed joyously. "That," she said, "is the only part of your speech last night that I had forgotten. It was just superb."

He laughed. "Dear me," he answered, "that's nothing. Every fellow in politics has to do that. That's not the question," he went on. "There's something else."

"W-what?" she inquired timidly.

"I want to know," he continued, "whether—whether my—my girl is going to turn me down tonight? If so I've got a meeting in the Fifth district. The boys are waiting for me."

Miss Catherwood stepped toward him and held out her hand. "They can't have you," she answered gently, "Anthony Wadsworth, alderman."

Somewhat Surprising.

"John," remarked Mrs. Bifkins coldly at the breakfast table, "you were saying some rather queer things in your sleep last night. You mentioned something about Kittie and a full house and a showdown and a few other things along that line. What were you talking about?"

Did Mr. Bifkins tell his wife that Kittie was the name of the woman who cleaned out the office and that he was probably dreaming about a full house down at the show the other night? The funny papers would have you believe that he did. But he did not.

"I was probably dreaming of the poker game I sat in that night," he replied without batting an eye. "I lost $37.15 in that game, by the way, so I can't let you have that $19.98 for that new hat for a couple of weeks."

Did Mrs. Bifkins scream and burst into tears and call him a brute and go right straight back to her mother? The comic writers and the jokesmiths would have you think she did. But she didn't.

"You must be a bum pokerist, John," she said scornfully. "I don't believe you know a straightup from a fourflush. I believe I could give you three kings and beat you to the jack pot myself. What did you think you were doing—digging post holes or playing pingpong?"—Smart Set.

Football For a Husband.

Until early in the nineteenth century it was a very ancient custom practiced at Inverness, Scotland, for the spinsters to meet the matrons in an annual game of football. All the available women took part, and the men surrounded the players and urged on their sisters, wives and sweethearts in their struggle, directing their efforts by word of mouth and encouraging the exhausted to struggle on and secure the prize.

The honors of these unusual combats, strange to say, rested more often with the married than the single, for the men selected their wives from those who showed most prowess and endurance on the football field. Hence all the better players were mated and frequently more than a match for the less tough and skillful maidens, though the latter fought like the knights of old for the lady of their choice and to the death, a strange reversal of positions, which doubtless had its compensating advantages when domestic differences arose between a tyrannical husband and his former footballing consort.

MINISTER OPPOSES

Declares Prohibition is Not the Proper Method to Encourage Temperance or to Control Liquor Traffic.

INCREASES DISREGARD FOR LAW

Published by request.

Preachers generally favor the principle of prohibition as applied to the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. One of the leading preachers of Fort Worth, however, Rev. R. H. Cotton, M. A. B. Sc., rector of Trinity Episcopal church, delivered a sermon recently on the "The Truth About Prohibition," in which he opposed the theories and the policy of the prohibitionists. Incidentaly he also denied the right of the senate to shut out Smoot of Utah, because of one of the customs of his religion. Rev. Cotton is one of the best educated ministers of the gospel in Texas and is in every way in line with the advanced Christian thought of the country.

Dr. Robert Hammond Cotton, rector of the Trinity parish, was born on the Island of Jersey, off the coast of France, October 6th, 1841. His father was one of the puritans, and his mothers' family was of the French Protestants of Huguenot descent. They moved to the Isle of Wight in 1843. Dr. Cotton's college and early ministerial life was spent in the northern part of England. He graduated and received the B. A. degree at the University of London in 1872, and then took up the course in science and medicine in the Owens college of Manchester, England, which afterward became the Victoria university. Among his tutors were men of national and international reputation, such as Professors Balfour Stewart, Roscoe and Jevons. His first teachers in theology were the great Unitarian theologians Priestley, Channing and Martineau. He took the degree of B. Sc. in 1877, but abandoned thhe study of science and medicine for that of philosophy and theology. He graduated in the degree of M. A. at the University of London in 1879. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Farser of Manchester in 1877 and priest in 1878. He acted as curate of All Saints' church, in Manchester, for seven years and came from that place to the United States in 1890. He took work under Bshiop Whipple of Minnesota and became the rector of the Church of the Holy Communion at St. Peters, Minn., where he remanied five years, doing mission work at St. Paul and Glenwood. In 1895 he came to Texas, took work under Bishop Garrett of Dallas, and supplied the churches at Oak Cliff and Greenville. He accepted his present place in 1896 as rector of Trinity parish church, Fort Worth.

THE TRUTH ABOUT PROHIBITION.

Dr. Cotton's text was from the gospel for the day in the Episcopal order—the Second Sunday after the Epiphany—John 2:9-10: "When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was but the servants which drew the water knew the governor of the feast called the bridegroom.

"And saith unto him: 'Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse; but thou hast kept the good wine until now.'"

Speaking directly on the suggestions of this text, he said: "So much has been said on this biblical question that I need not occupy much time under this head except to say that to one who does not receive his religion from the bible, but the bible from his religion, the scriptural arguments are not the conclusion of the whole matter. Suffice it to say that the wines of scripture were of various degrees of alcoholic strength, some having very little intoxicating power, and strong drink, for instance, having very much. That scriptural wines intoxicated we have every evidence in the fact that some of the patriarchs got drunk, and that even Jesus was, by His enemies—the Pharisees or prohibitionists of His day—charged with this sin: 'The Son of Man came eating and drinking, and they say, behold a man gluttonous and a wine bibber, a friend to publicans and sinners.'

"That new wine sometimes intoxicates is evidenced from the fact that the manifestations of the spirit on the day of pentecost were attributed to the effects of intoxication. 'Others mocking, said, these men are full of new wine.' And Peter, standing up, found it necessary to say: 'These men are not drunk, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.' Nine o'clock in the morning was rather early for men to be under the influence of liquor, as indeed is the case today.

"Also let me remind you that the wine Jesus made at this marriage feast was intoxicating wine, as the governor of the feast (a connosieur in the matter) evidently testifies: 'It was good wine—mellow and well matured—such as when men have well drunk.' It had power to dull the sensibilities of the palate, so that the 'worse' might well have been substituted with impunity.

"And how unstinting was the supply of wine provided! Over one hundred and twenty gallons, it is generally supposed. As it could not all have been drunk at the feast, it was intended as a wedding present for the bridegroom. One does not like to think what would have happened if the bridegroom had been a prohibitionist. What could he have done but thrown it in the gutter? and this with his dear Lord's precious bounty! O Tempora! O! mores! Perish the unworthy thought.

"To set myself right with Christian people, though it is hardly necessary to say it, let me make three preliminary remarks:

"First—That drunkenness is a sin everybody admits. The drunkard cannot enter the kindgom of heaven.

"Second—Total abstinence from intoxicating drinks is probably best for us all, especially those who have to engage in intellectual labor. Certainly for young men and women it would seem to be obligatory in every case.

"Third—Total abstinence is not temperance, as every reader of the holy scriptures knows. Temperance means self control, and this is a duty not only as regards the use of intoxicating drinks, but in physical relations, in pleasures and exercises, in our social enjoyments, and even in the serious work of life; especially in regard to exercises of religion. Certainly in total abstinence there is no oppuortunity for temperance.

"Omitting all other lines of argument, there are three points I would like to emphasize tonight in regard to the political question of prohibition as it is generally understood; and the first is, that it is an infringemennt of personal liberty. This is, theoretically, a free country. Sumptuary laws, especially those regarding men's eating and drinking have been tried time and again in the past history of the world, where the despot and the tyrant ruled, and have always proved a failure.

"Man's inalienable love of liberty has always revolted and made such legislation impossible. It passes my comprehension how citizens of this free country can for one moment submit to a law which shall say: 'Thou shalt not, under any circumstances, drink wine.' Ten commandments are as many as we can keep. The average man is not able to keep those. What right has the civil law to add to the commandments of God? At all events, right or no right, it may be understood beforehand that such laws will never be obeyed.

"I deprecate the tendency there is in this country for good people, in their zeal for righteousness, to seek to enact laws binding their fellow citizens to such a degree that the natural and even the spiritual impulses of human nature inevitably must refuse to submit to them, if the citizens have an ounce of love of liberty in their constitution.

"For instanec, though a Christian minister, I cannot be persuaded that the constitution of the United States is of such a nature as to authorize the attempts that are being made, on religious cr theological grounds, to shut out Senator Smoot from congress. Have we a state church after all?

"Secondly—As will already be anticipated, the enactment of such laws—laws which it is known beforehand will not be obeyed—leads to lack of respect and revenence for law. There is enough lawlessness in the United States already. Does it not seem a terrible thing to pass laws so far in advance of the conscience of the community, that the excuses for lawlessness and the want of respect for the law and order should be increased? If you make a law enforce it. If you can not enforce it do not make it. Better infinitely better, be without law than have a law an disobey it. The public conscience will support laws against gambling, against the robbery of the innocent and unwary by sharks and sharpers. Therefore such laws can be enforced. The public conscience will not support a law which practically forbids a man's partaking of alcoholic stimulants. Most men think that they have a right to their pleasure and discretion to exercise their personal liberty in this matter. You can not ehforce such a law as prohibition. As a free citizen I refuse to be coerced by the civil law in this matter. As to my duty to abstain for the sake of example, that is a matter of opinion. My example may, or may not, have the influence you attribute to it. At all events, whether it does or not, is not for the civil law to decide. In the United States you cannot make me gc to church. You shall not make me abstain from intoxicants. I feel sure that five Americans out of six feel thus in regard to this matter, whether they admit it or not.

"But the point that now needs especial mention as an objection to prohibition, is that it leads to secret drinking. Of course, it is recognized on all sides that the sight of an intoxicated person is offensive and positively injurious to public morals, but having in view those arguments which are usually based on the fact of the temptation put in the way of our young men, I fail to see how those temptations can be removed by compelling secrecy in regard to the sale and consumption of intoxicating liquors. I believe that secret drinking is more likely to lead to excess than open drinking. It may be a very painful thing to say, but my firm conviction is that if our young men are determined to go to the devil it is better for us to see them go than for them to get there before either we or they know anything about it. If we see them going we may have a chance to stop them on the road, but when they get there, in five cases out of six, it is almost impossible for them to return. I lived in a prohibition town, when a father came to me with tears in his eyes and said: 'My son gets drunk, I know he does, but it is impossible for me to find out where he gets his drink. This is a prohibition town. Not a drop of liquor is sold in the place, so far as the police authorities and the public are aware. If the saloons were open I should be able to trace him and perhaps save him before it is too late.'

"This indicates an awful state of affairs. Far better that a man should drink his beer and whiskey openly than that he should acquire the habit of sneaking up some back stairs, passing through to some distant room opening out on another street, where, hidden away from all observation and possibility of oversight, he satisfies his unnatural appetite. Far better to drink in a saloon the liquor which it professes to sell than to obtain the supply of the forbidden fruit in a drug store under the name of 'Peruna' or 'Don't Care,' as it has been known to be labeled at the drinking fountains. For a party of visitors to land in a prohibtiion town and find out that the only drink that can be obtained is intoxicating drink under the name of distilled ice water, is a pitiful state of affairs. Every man in this city and the other cities of Texas knows whereof I speak, and must see and understand that in no matter is the saying of the old book truer than in this, 'Whoso covereth his sin shall not prosper.'

"Men will have intoxicating drinks. Not all the laws of heaven and earth can prevent them. I say if there be sin in it, let not that sin be added to by the sins of lying, deceit and hypocracy. If men will drink let them be made to do it openly and be taught that God and man will punish those who are made to cover up their sins, as well as to commit them.

"I have said, and I repeat it, there is greater danger of intemperance, using the word in its common acceptation, in the habit of secret drinking, and indeed in the secret indulgence of every kind of stimulation, that there is in the open indulgence, though the latter may be the most painful.

"In conclusion: I know that I have not said a fractional part of what might be said on this great subject but I believe I have said enough to entitle every thinking man and woman who may be disposed to think that prohibitory legislation is a cure for the evils of drunkenness to call a halt in regard to putting into execution such a form of remedy.

"In the name of God; in the name of Christ; in the name of the Holy Spirit of God; in the name of the religion which we profess, and in the name of the cause of temperance, I earnestly hope that, should the question come up before the people every Christian voter and every member of the W. C. T. U. will make their voice heard at the election against prohibition.

"No one can deny the right of all men in the United States to what they look upon as life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, so long as they do not destroy the equal right of all other citizens. No one can deny also that all legislation which is in advance of the conscience of the community tends to produce lawlessness nor can any one deny that human nature, being what it is physically and morally, prohibitory legislation must lead to secret drinking; and the past history of the movement has afforded ample proof, as a matter of fact, that this is so. If the ordinary motives of morality and religion and the ennobling power of the grace of God, which is at the disposal of every Christian, are not sufficient to cure this evil, the compulsion of the civil law will be utterly powerless in every case; and God help the city that relies upon the compulsory power of the civil authorities for redemption and salvation.

"In all this, let it be understood that I am speaking in the interest of temperance, righteousness and Godliness; and I hope and believe that I shall be credited, in speaking as I do, with that which should be the motive of a minister of Christ seeking the salvation of the individual in the salvatiion of the community, the glory of God, and the hastening of the kingdom of heaven."
