School's out early

Midland public school students will be in crosswalks at odd hours today due to early dismissal. Today is the second of six early dismissal days scheduled this year by the school district to comply with state regulations on teacher in-service activities. All classes will be dismissed two hours early. Half-day kindergarteners and 3- and 4-year-olds will be dismissed at 11 a.m.; Head Start and migrant pupils at noon; full-day kindergarteners and first, second and third graders at 12:30 p.m.; fourth and fifth graders will be dismissed at 1:40 p.m.; sixth graders at 1:10 p.m.; and junior high school students at 1:20 p.m. Lee Freshman High School students will be dismissed at 1 p.m. Midland Freshman High School students and both senior high schools will be dismissed at 1:30 p.m.

Local government

NEW YORK — Compared to other local governments throughout the nation, Texas city and county governments generally are smaller and their employees make less money, the U.S. Census Bureau reported Tuesday. Nearly all of the 28 Texas cities surveyed — municipalities with more than 75,000 residents — fell below the national average of 150 full-time city workers for every 10,000 residents.

Diet failures

CHICAGO — Getting overweight Americans to modify their eating habits is a dismal failure, according to two researchers who say uncontrollable eating might be better treated like an addiction. As such, it might be more successfully treated by helping sufferers counter their self-defeating thoughts and emotions surrounding overweight and helping them get into strong social support systems, the researchers said./8A

Study: Oil imports may hit 75 percent

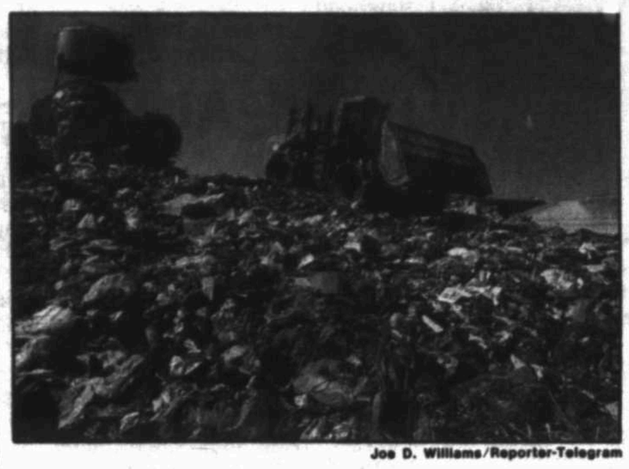

By James R. Owen
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Unless Americans increase energy conservation or find new domestic sources, the United States will be forced to import more than 75 percent of its oil within 20 years, a congressional study said Tuesday.

The Office of Technology Assessment, a congressional research agency, said the nation needs greater energy conservation measures and increased energy production to counter that reliance on foreign oil.

The United States now imports about half of the 17 million barrels of oil consumed daily.

Landfill concerns pinch small towns

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Some small West Texas towns face a Catch-22 situation when it comes to trash disposal. They can't cost-effectively operate a landfill of their own, but tighter controls are making it increasingly difficult to contract for use of a larger city's facility.

The city of Rankin, for example, has used Midland's landfill for two years, since the nearby county-operated landfill closed. Reducing their weekly pick-ups from two to one, Rankin

Bush, Gorbachev urge cooperation at talks

■ Israel to participate despite attacks; Palestinian signals new flexibility.

Associated Press

MÁDRID, Spain — President Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev urged Middle East antagonists on the eve of a historic peace conference to put aside ancient feuds and "act responsibly with great understanding." Israel and Palestinians made last-minute declarations of good intentions.

■ Related story/3A

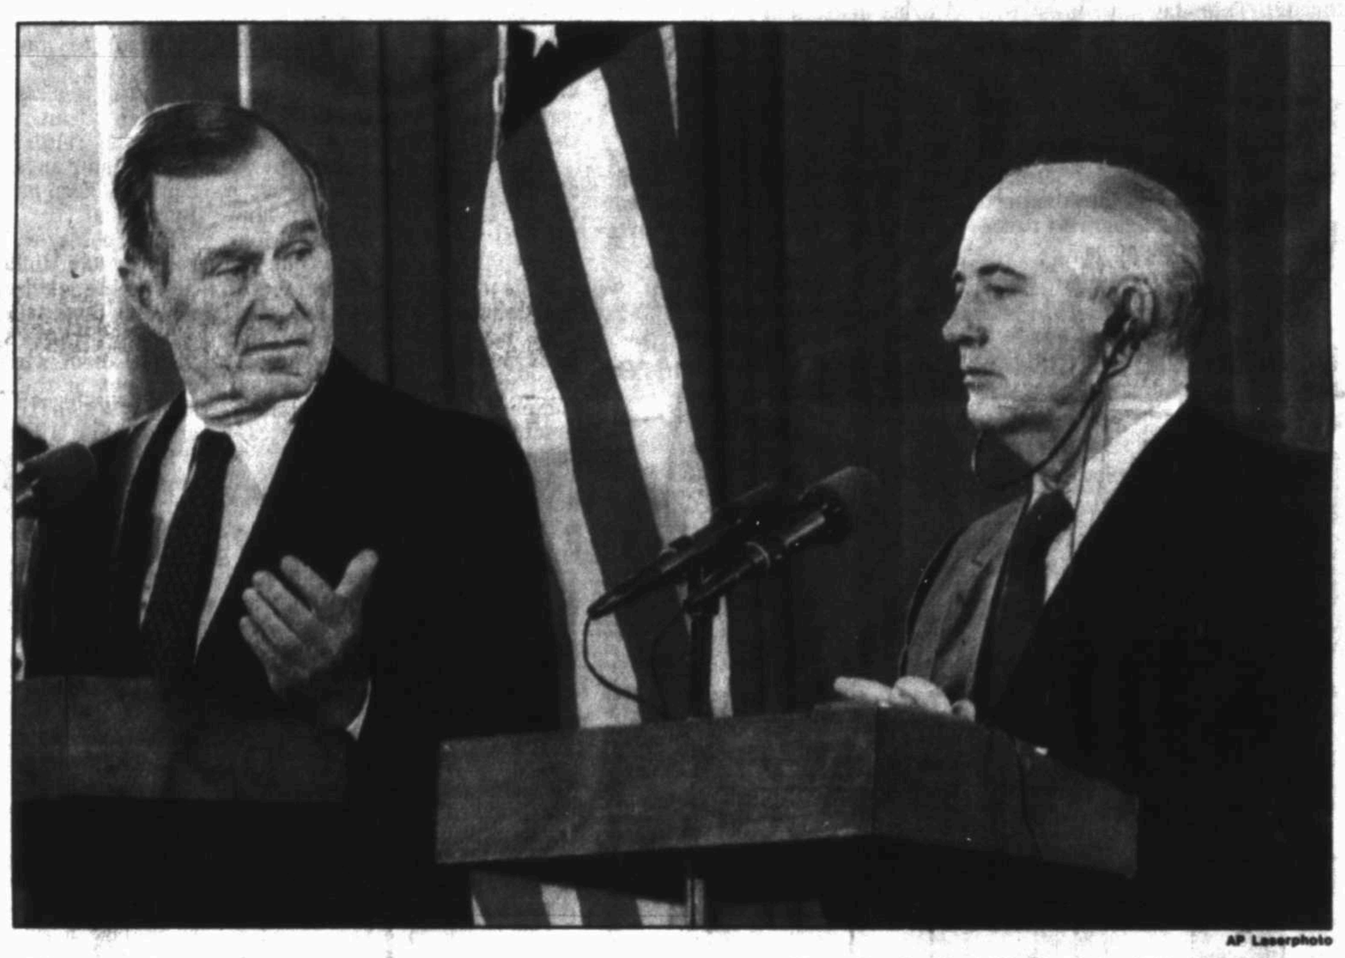

A senior Palestinian official signaled new flexibility on Tuesday, endorsing negotiations for autonomy within the occupied territories, as Israel has demanded, rather than immediate statehood.

And Israel said it would participate in the talks despite attacks on its soldiers in Lebanon and on settlers in the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

"Let's just open the conference and start working," Gorbachev said at a joint news conference with Bush at the Soviet Embassy. Promised Bush: "We are here to be a catalyst."

There was an air of suspense and anticipation as the world awaited the first Mideast peace conference in nearly two decades and the first-ever direct, formal negotiations among Israel and all her Arab neighbors, including the Palestinians.

Parley highlights new relationships

By Thomas L. Friedman
N.Y. Times News Service

MADRID, Spain — It is too early to say whether the Madrid Middle East peace conference heralds a new relationship between Arabs and Israelis, but it has already highlighted new relationships between Arabs and Arabs, between Israel and the United States and, most important, between the United States and the Soviet Union.

■ Assessment

On the U.S.-Soviet front, it would not be an overstatement to say that the Soviets have literally made themselves an arm of American Middle East diplomacy in recent months, as they did everything possible to facilitate the peace conference to win American good will, which they hope to cash in later for American economic aid.

While the Soviets are technically co-sponsors of the conference with Washington, that is in name only. A senior European diplomat recalled Tuesday that when he asked the Soviet official supposedly working jointly with the Americans on the conference a question about seating arrangements, the Soviet official just shrugged and said: "You have to ask the Americans. We don't know anything. The Americans are handling everything."

With the end of the cold war, Israelis can no longer argue that they are a strategic asset for the U.S.

Indeed, the new Soviet-American relationship in the Middle East was perfectly captured in Jerusalem 11 days ago, when Secretary of State James A. Baker III and the Soviet foreign minister, Boris D. Pankin, held a joint news conference at the King David Hotel to announce that invitations to the peace conference were being sent.

Baker had written an opening statement about how the United States saw this historic opportunity, and he mentioned the general themes to Pankin before they took the rostrum together. Moments before Baker was about to speak, Pankin leaned over and whispered in his ear, asking if Baker would tell the journalists that his statement was a "joint Soviet-American statement," as Pankin had none of his own. Baker gladly complied.

Jurors in I-30 condo retrial hear sizzling accusations

Faulkner

MIDLAND (AP) — Attorneys in the retrial of the state's largest thrift fraud case attempted to revive jurors during closing arguments Tuesday with sizzling accusations about the evidence, which includes thousands of documents and scores of mind-numbing financial statements.

The closing arguments came after just 5½ weeks of testimony in the I-30 condo trial, a sharp contrast to the original proceeding that lasted nearly seven months.

Prosecutor Josh Hochberg told jurors that Garland land developer D.L. "Danny" Faulkner and former Garland Mayor James Toler knowingly masterminded a plan to defraud five savings and loans out of more than $130 million by illegally inflating land prices east of Dallas.

"This case is about establishing a massive conspiracy that corrupts the core of the banking system," Hochberg said. "The defendants took money as quickly as they could out of the savings and loans — a plan merely to loot these institutions."

Mike Fawer, Faulkner's attorney, argued that the government's case was tainted because its star witness was Clifford Sinclair,

School trustees scramble to cover higher-cost bids

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Escalating construction costs have put school-board trustees in a bind.

A recent construction bid to add additions to Fannin, Pease and Washington elementary schools came in $538,837 higher than had been projected.

School-board trustees are scrambling to find a solution to continue all projects planned within existing bond monies.

"We have some tough decisions ahead of us in the next few weeks," said board president Ken Marks at a special Tuesday night meeting.

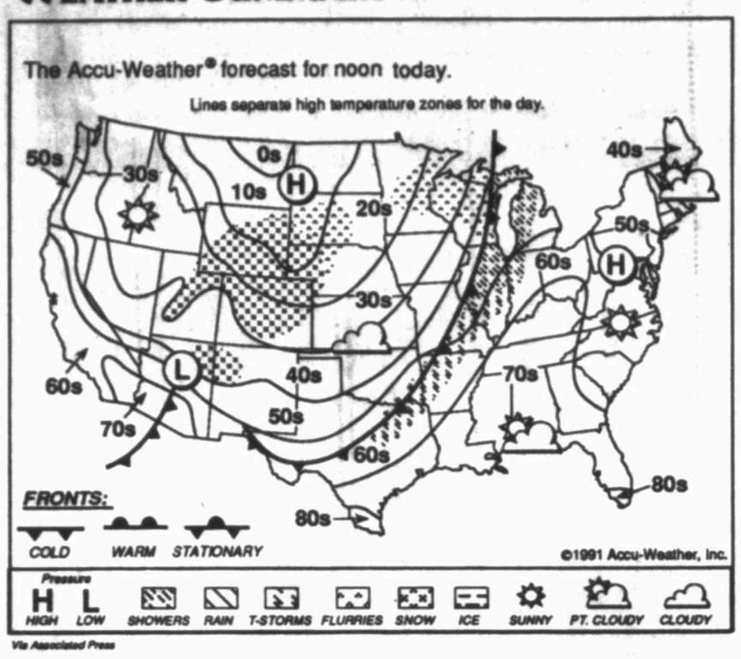

Wilson Heidelberg, executive director of auxiliary services for the school district, said Tuesday's meeting was called to offer construction options to trustees.

Heidelberg cited several reasons for the more than a half-million dollar increase in construction.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Expect clouds, 60 today

Staff Report

The forecast for today calls for mostly cloudy skies with a high near 60 and east to southeast wind at 10 to 15 mph. Tonight should be cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low in the lower 40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a high in the lower 50s.

After an overnight low of 44, Tuesday's high was 59, nearly 30 degrees short of the record high for that date of 88 set in 1987. The record low for that date is 30 set in 1980.

STATE

Colder, drier air invaded Northwest Texas on Tuesday behind a front that triggered torrential rainstorms across North Texas and South Central Texas. A flash flood watch was issued for the eastern two-thirds of North Texas. Rainfall of 3 to 4 inches was received in the Hill Country and Edwards Plateau.

It was cloudy and cooler across most of Texas with northerly winds of 10 to 20 miles an hour. Winds across Southwest Texas and Far West Texas were southerly at 5 to 10 mph.

Temperatures reached into the 90s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley ahead of the front, but reached only the 30s behind the front.

The forecast for North Texas included the continued chance for heavy rains with highs from 45 degrees in the northwest to 65 in the southeast. Scattered showers and thunderstorms were to continue through Thursday with lows from 38 to 65 degrees.

NATION

Frigid arctic air swept across the northern Plains to the Dakotas and down to Arizona on Tuesday, and thunderstorms brought more flooding to Texas and Louisiana.

A lingering snowstorm that began during the weekend piled up more than a foot of snow in the western mountains of Montana and Wyoming.

Cold air sweeping into the northwestern United States pushed temperatures down 20 degrees or more across much of Montana, northern Wyoming and Oklahoma.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

TALKS: Palestinian official signals new flexibility

(From 1A)

Bush and Gorbachev, cosponsors of the conference, will convene the meeting today. The actual negotiations, if they stay on track, could stretch into months or even years.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has offered the Arab nations peace after 43 years of conflict, but has ruled out relinquishing territory. The Arabs are insisting that they recover the West Bank, Gaza and the Golan Heights, which Israel won in the 1967 six-day war.

Shamir has also offered limited self-rule for Palestinians, who in a policy shift seem to be edging away from demands of immediate statehood.

Shamir, arriving in Madrid, said Israel would participate in the conference despite attacks this week on its soldiers in Lebanon and its settlers in the West Bank. Three Israeli soldiers and two Jewish settlers were killed.

"Some might have expected that in the face of this terror Israel would not attend the conference," Shamir said. "But despite this violence, our quest for peace is unrelenting."

In Beirut, meanwhile, a rocket fired from a hillside blasted the wall of the U.S. Embassy compound. There was no immediate claim of responsibility. Iranian and Arab radicals had promised to attack targets of the United States and others involved in the peace conference.

In Madrid, Faisal Husseini, leader of a group of advisers accompanying the Palestinian delegation, said the Palestinians hoped to secure an agreement for autonomy within Israeli-occupied territories as a stepping stone to an independent state. That state, he added, would later join in a confederation with Jordan.

Israel rejects the idea of an independent Palestinian state, but agrees to the idea of Palestinian confederation with Jordan, with whom the Palestinians are participating in a joint delegation in Madrid.

Wary of terrorist threats, 12,000 police officers and paramilitary civil guards were deployed throughout the Spanish capital.

In other peace-conference developments:

■ Jordan's King Hussein predicted in Amman, Jordan, that Israel would stop building settlements in occupied lands once the peace conference opens. Additional settlements would "threaten the (peace) process from the beginning," he told the London-based Arabic language newspaper Al-Quds Al-Arabi.

■ About 2,000 people took part in a peace march in Gaza in the occupied Gaza strip. Israel radio said soldiers watched as marchers chanted "we are with the peace conference."

Bush refused to predict the outcome of the negotiations but said the conference itself was "an important sign that there is a chance for success."

Determined not to derail the meeting, Bush refused to spell out any conditions for the talks or even restate administration calls for Israel to trade land in return for Arab guarantees of peace.

"This is too sensitive a time," Bush said.

REVEALS: Soviets are co-sponsors in name only

(From 1A)

So it has been from the beginning of this peace conference diplomacy. Washington has written the story line and all the speaking parts, and the Soviets have entered and exited on cue. But what did they actually bring to the game? That is, was Baker bringing them along just out of habit, or was there really some value added by the Soviets' involvement?

The Soviets, Baker aides insist, made a definite contribution during the eight months it took to put the peace conference together. Their most important contribution, the officials argue, was not twisting arms of their former patrons; it was providing the Arabs with the symbolic cover that many of them needed to take part in what was essentially a "made in America" diplomatic initiative.

The Palestinians, the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Syrians in particular needed the Soviets to be sitting next to the Americans to justify to themselves and their once-radical constituencies that they were not simply marching to an American tune.

Even if that was the reality, the image would have been too hard to swallow for peoples in countries whose own self-identities have so long been nurtured on the notion of resisting American domination and "imperialism" in the Middle East, American officials say. The Arabs did not want to come to an "American" peace conference. They wanted to come to an "international" conference.

"While the Arabs recognized the pre-eminent American role," said a senior American official, "they had an interest in demonstrating that this was not just an American show, because the Americans are perceived in the Arab world as pro-Israeli."

Beyond this symbolic role, the Soviets also wittingly or unwittingly played an important blocking role for Washington. The United States did not want either the United Nations or the European Community involved in its Middle East diplomacy — particularly the community, which, unlike the Soviets, has real weight.

By presenting the diplomacy as a joint Soviet-American initiative, Washington had the best of both worlds: a pliant Soviet partner and a perfect excuse to exclude the United Nations and the European Community from the action.

LANDFILL: Small towns face Catch-22 situation contracted with Permian Basin Disposal, which now hauls the city's garbage to Midland.

(From 1A)

Recently, Midland officials considered discontinuing the dumping agreement with Rankin. Liability for hazardous or toxic waste was among concerns, as was the future of Midland's facility.

"In a situation like that, there's always a concern about what is the long-term use of your landfill," said Utilities Director John Lowe. "At some point in time you may need to expand (the landfill) to accommodate this kind of use."

But Lowe and others admit that Rankin and Glasscock County, both of which have one-year dumping contracts with Midland, generate a relatively insignificant amount of trash.

Assistant Utilities Director Jack Burns, who oversees the landfill, said the cities brought a combined total of about 640 tons last year.

"It's really not a problem, with the quantity we're handling out there — about 350 tons a week," Burns said. "The amount they bring in is really so small in comparison" — less than two weeks' worth.

Outside trash is typically more difficult to monitor, however, Burns said.

"But in this case, I don't have a concern about what we're getting," he said. Monitors at the landfill and an attentive hauling company keep harmful waste out, Burns said.

Rankin Mayor Elveen P. West recently told Midland city officials he also has taken action to ensure no toxic materials are brought in.

"We're trying to educate our people about what they can and can't put in the dumpsters," he said. "We've tried to educate about what is hazardous waste."

Rankin's 1,011 residents have access to a central collection site for motor oil and a tire shredding machine. Medical waste is collected and incinerated by the local hospital. Through the local newspaper and utility-bill inserts, the city spreads the message about what is safe for the landfill.

"We wouldn't want anything to endanger getting to carry our stuff to Midland," West said. "It's been a good solution for us."

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas, who supported extending the contract, said he empathizes with Rankin's concerns.

"I think I have an understanding of some of the problems of smaller communities. Midland is a relatively small city," Thomas said. "The requirements put on them are very difficult and costly, and it seems the smaller the community, the bigger the burden."

Without the option of dumping in a larger city's facility, Rankin would have little choice but to handle its own garbage.

Burns said the Environmental Protection Agency has begun generating stringent rules that may effectively force regionalization of the facilities. It is becoming more difficult to secure a landfill permit, and quite expensive to operate it, he said.

Although city officials have considered extending the Midland landfill's role into service for the surrounding area, they say it's unlikely.

"It wasn't designed with that in mind," Lowe said. Thomas said although the possibility for profit exists in such a venture, liability concerns may outweigh the benefits.

A Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission committee is studying the idea of a regional facility. Fred Poe, Midland city manager, and a group of others meet regularly to consider information generated by several consultants.

"They're doing a full-blown study of what it would take," Poe said. State money generated by landfill charges could be used to fund the facility.

Meanwhile, smaller cities will continue to take whatever options are available.

"It's just not feasible for us to put a landfill in," West said. "Until we have another choice, we'll try to stay where we are."

PROJECTS: Escalating costs put trustees in bind

(From 1A)

the October 1990 bond election — which failed," he said. "Subcontractor bids to general contractors came in higher because the infrastructure is saturated — there are less subcontractors available."

Heidelberg said the board already is hoping interest generated on bonds issued will amount to $1.4 million.

"We already need $1.4 million to cover construction costs," he said. "The bond passed at $24,215,000, and projected costs are $25,219,392."

"I've talked to various people in the construction trade and they told us bids we received in 1988 were not very reflective of the market," Heidelberg said, comparing previous construction costs per square foot to present costs.

"Since 1988, all costs in construction have escalated," he said. "Materials and overhead have increased and Worker's Comp (compensation) has increased 50 percent."

The recent bid for construction projects on the three elementary schools also included carpet and light fixtures.

Heidelberg offered several options to trustees to complete all projects within existing funds. They included "changing the scope of the work and re-bidding, re-bidding in larger bid packages to attract construction workers from out of town, create larger construction packages and reduce the scope of work, hire a construction manager and have the board serve as general contractor, and allow more flexible completion schedules."

He said that where general contractors proposed bids in a lump sum, a construction manager could use the team concept in value managing projects daily.

"Subcontractors would be bidding to you (the board)," Heidelberg said.

Board trustees said they were dismayed to see construction costs rise roughly $13 a square foot since 1988.

Heidelberg said workers who bid low in 1988 are no longer in business. "They took a risk," he said.

"We didn't know that the 1988 bonds were too low," George Staley said. "When we put out a bond issue we expect costs to come in close and to not have to do major surgery."

Heidelberg projected that the district could save 2 percent to 4 percent on project costs by utilizing a construction manager.

"We can stay within costs and substantially — not severely — increase the life cycle of maintaining buildings," he said.

Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said school-board trustees could consider trade-offs in materials. For example, a lesser-quality carpet could be purchased for the new additions.

"We could save $4 per yard on carpet," he said. "We just may need to replace it sooner."

Trustee Gary Willis asked how the board could "use the bond monies we have and complete the projects promised to the community."

Heidelberg suggested reducing the scope of the work by using cheaper materials, placing projects in larger bid packages and creating a more flexible completion date to eliminate overtime and expediting materials for projects.

"We hit the nail on the head (projecting the cost) for one project, and came in over 30 percent on this one," Marks noted. "And we still have the Alternative School coming up. . . . What scares me is what is going to happen down the road if it escalates like this.

"We have a lot of big decisions to make in the next couple of weeks," Marks said. "I am just really disappointed with this. . . . We did not foresee these problems. We will try to make the best decision we possibly can for the community."

Trustees agreed to have Heidelberg research information on using the construction manager approach. He will present a report on his findings at the Nov. 12 board meeting.

RETRIAL: Attorneys attempt to revive jurors in I-30 case who pleaded guilty to conspiracy charges in exchange for his testimony.

"Clifford Sinclair's thinking is 'If you're going to tell a lie, tell the big lie, because it is just as easy,'" Fawer told the seven-woman, five-man jury.

"His testimony conflicts so much with what others told you, that I question the audacity the government had in putting him on the stand."

Faulkner, Toler and former Empire Savings and Loan President Spencer Blain and appraiser Art Formann are accused of bank fraud and conspiracy for their role in a series of real estate deals that earned them millions of dollars and led to Empire's collapse.

The case centers on "land flips" — quick sales of the same piece of land at soaring prices. In one deal, a 21-acre plot went from $933,000 in value to $7 million all in one day.

The defendants claim Sinclair orchestrated the inflated deals and dragged Faulkner and Toler in.

"Clifford Sinclair walked away by blaming someone else," Fawer said. "He is always walking backwards out of every criminal scene so he can point the finger at someone else."

Empire's $279 million failure in 1984 foretold the problems that put the savings and loan industry in crisis years later.

"Call Faulkner and Toler developers, call them manipulators, call them orchestrators because that's what they are," Hochberg said. "They manipulated the market and bought out the complainers.

"They concealed kickbacks by artificially propping up the land at prices the public would not go for. These deals are strictly on paper. It was a sham. It's not a real deal," he said.

Closing arguments are scheduled to continue today, with jury deliberations beginning tonight.

Faulkner and the three others face multiple prison terms, fines in the hundreds of thousands of dollars and forfeiture of profits from the deals — $40 million for Faulkner, a combined $22 million for Toler and Blain.

OIL: Study sees growing dependence on imports

(From 1A)

The OTA study was released just days before the Senate is expected to act on controversial energy legislation that calls for opening up the coastal plain of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR) in Alaska to oil and gas exploration.

The report stressed that while growing oil imports dependence is not a serious security threat in itself, the nation's capacity to replace foreign oil has dropped considerably since the mid-1980s, which could pose major problems in the event of a crisis.

"If a crisis lasts for anything more than a few months, it's going to be tough to come up with domestic replacements for that imported oil," said Karen Larsen, chief author of the OTA study. "Major and prolonged import disruptions would bring hardship and deprivations."

In the event of another oil disruption, like the one caused last year following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, or the Iranian oil boycott in 1979, "We would really have to scramble," Larsen said.

To counter the U.S. dependence on foreign oil, the OTA study recommended:

■ Increasing fuel efficiency in the U.S. transportation industry.

■ Use of more alternate fuels such as natural gas and ethanol in residential, industrial and transportation sectors.

■ Overall greater efficiency of oil in all applications.

The OTA study was welcomed by advocates of petroleum drilling in the Alaskan wildlife preserve, who claimed oil and gas reserves there would curb that growing U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

"This study is as good an argument (for the energy legislation) as you will get," said Sen. Malcolm Wallop, a Wyoming Republican who helped draft the energy package.

But the OTA study pointed out that developing new oil and gas fields alone would not be enough to stem the rising tide of imported fuels.

"Clearly, ANWR by itself will never be enough to significantly reduce our dependence on imported oil," Larsen said.

Estimates of the potential oil reserves in the coastal plain have varied wildly, with drilling advocates claiming as much as tens of billions of barrels, while environmentalists giving drastically lower estimates.

The Interior Department has estimated that there is a 50 percent chance of finding as many as 3.2 billion barrels, an amount that would justify the enormous cost of drilling and extraction.

Opponents of the energy bill vowed again Tuesday to defeat the ANWR provision while sharply criticizing other aspects of the legislation.

U.S. expands trade embargo against Haiti

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The United States tightened the screws on Haiti's military-backed regime Tuesday by expanding a trade embargo to include all but humanitarian aid.

The State Department said the expanded sanctions, which take effect next Tuesday, will remain in effect until democracy is restored.

At the same time, the State Department ordered all non-essential U.S. government employees and dependents to leave Haiti and once again urged all American civilians to depart immediately.

Assistant Secretary of State Bernard Aronson told reporters that only about 30 diplomats will remain at the U.S. Embassy in the Haitian capital of Port-au-Prince after the departures are completed. That is down from 156 U.S. employees and dependents in the country before last month's military-led coup that ousted Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haiti's first freely elected president.

In a statement, the State Department said President Bush had signed an executive order expanding the embargo as "an additional step to make it clear that the United States will have no normal trade or diplomatic relations with Haiti until constitutional democracy is restored there."

That includes restoring Aristide to the presidency, Aronson said.

Haiti is already reeling from the economic impact of a resolution by the 34-nation Organization of American States calling for its members to honor an embargo against Haiti.

In compliance with that resolution, Bush earlier froze all Haitian assets in the United States, suspended American aid to the impoverished nation and blocked exports to the Haitian military and police.

Tuesday's action goes further to ban all trade except humanitarian shipments of basic foods like beans, sugar, rice, cooking oil and donations "intended to relieve human suffering."

It also permits American airlines to fly into and out of Haiti — an exemption necessary to permit U.S. citizens to leave. Before the coup, there were an estimated 12,000 American civilians living in Haiti. The State Department believes about 5,000 remain.

Aronson acknowledged that the United States fears American citizens will be caught in — or become the target of — violence if Haitians turn angry over their worsening economic situation.

The trade ban will hurt Haiti, Aronson said. He noted that Haiti receives 65 percent of its imports from the United States and exports 85 percent of its products there.

Garbage and debris float near a boat moored in Hong Kong's Victoria Harbor. Hong Kong means "fragrant harbor."

Harbor garbage piles up

HONG KONG (AP) — In Chinese, Hong Kong means "fragrant harbor." In reality, it stinks. Two million tons of untreated sewage, chemicals and toxic metals are dumped daily into Victoria Harbor.

Clean-up efforts, such as those in a multibillion-dollar sewage plan, are clogged by financial, bureaucratic and political considerations.

Under the $2.5 billion plan, sewage will be collected in a series of 490-feet deep tunnels connected to a main treatment plant. After treatment, the sewage will be discharged through a 19-mile outfall pipe into the South China Sea.

The percentage of sewage treated will rise from about 50 percent to 100 percent. Right now, the amount of hazardous material dumped daily in Victoria Harbor would fill 1,000 Olympic-size swimming pools.

The sewage project is scheduled to be finished by 2000. But the government has hinted at delays because of commitments to the territory's biggest economic and political priority, a $16.3 billion airport and port plan.

The government originally planned this year to declare the harbor a Water Control Zone to regulate release of all effluents. But that date has been pushed back at least two years because of paperwork and other obstacles.

In addition, the understaffed and overworked Environmental Protection Department has only had mixed success monitoring the territory's 50,000 factories, most of which are small and medium-sized.

The World

Bush reassures Gorbachev's role

MADRID, Spain (NYT) — In what American officials described as an effort to counter the forces pulling apart the beleaguered Soviet central government, President Bush offered praise to his "friend" President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Tuesday and urged the restive Soviet republics to give him power to negotiate foreign aid programs.

"I sense no difference in how we talk and the frankness with which we exchange views — no difference in, certainly from my standpoint, the respect level for President Gorbachev," Bush said at a news conference with the Soviet president on the eve of the opening of the Middle East peace conference.

As the two leaders left the stage where they held the news conference in the Soviet Embassy, Bush put his hand on Gorbachev's back and said quietly, 'You're a master."

But at the same time, in a tacit recognition of the shifting balance of power in the Soviet Union, Bush took pains to say that he wanted to foster individual relations with the 12 republics. And he failed to offer Gorbachev new financial assistance or any other concrete agreement that the Soviet president could take back to Moscow to bolster his political position.

Indeed, after meeting over lunch and for a 90-minute private session with only their top advisers, Bush and Gorbachev did not announce any new agreements or indicate any significant progress on arms control, foreign aid to the Soviet Union or any other issue.

Instead, the leaders' remarks focused on what appeared to be a joint attempt to counter the notion that Gorbachev's influence is waning as the 12 remaining Soviet republics take more and more powers onto themselves. They also seemed to try to present the Soviet leader both as a strong partner in Soviet-American relations and as an important player in global affairs, including the peace conference that is to open here on Wednesday.

"I can express my gratitude to President Gorbachev for the very constructive role that the Soviet Union has played in the actions leading up to this conference," Bush said, smiling warmly at the Soviet president, who stood beside him on the stage. Bush added, "We're grateful to him for that."

Despite Bush's words, however, the news conference seemed only to underscore the way in which this meeting of the two presidents was subtly but significantly different from their six other encounters and from all other Soviet-American summit-level meetings.

After talks that seemed more symbolic than substantive, the news conference saw as many questions about Soviet internal politics as about foreign policy from both Soviet and Western journalists. The Soviet reporters did not ask a single question about the peace conference.

Administration officials said Bush had given Gorbachev his personal endorsement as part of a policy of holding as long as possible to the practice of doing business between Washington and the central government in Moscow.

"Bush is committed to Gorbachev and to the center, and he is not going to be budged from that until absolutely necessary," one official said.

At the same time, however, administration officials said they are aware that the rapid changes in the Soviet Union were starting to alter in basic ways the manner in which the two countries do business. They said a point was rapidly approaching at which it may simply no longer be practical to focus so hard on Gorbachev because he may lose his power to negotiate on behalf of all 12 republics.

That left Bush trying to stake out a clearly uncomfortable position here, giving Gorbachev a show of support while at the same time trying not to alienate the republic leaders, especially President Boris N. Yeltsin of the Russian federated republic. So he reiterated his desire to maintain contacts with them as well.

Britain, Vietnam sign agreement on repatriation

LONDON (NYT) — Britain and Vietnam signed an agreement Tuesday opening the way for the forcible repatriation of tens of thousands of Vietnamese refugees now being detained in Hong Kong.

The agreement comes one week after Hanoi agreed to accept the return of 222 Vietnamese "double-backers," people who had come to Hong Kong once before, been paid a cash incentive to return to Vietnam and then re-entered Hong Kong illegally a second time.

Officials said the first of those people would be returned to Vietnam sometime next month. They will be flown from Hong Kong on chartered planes under armed guard.

Under the terms of Tuesday's accord, the authorities in Hong Kong will begin proceedings immediately to tun back any new illegal immigrants who arrive there from Vietnam.

Later, the two governments say they will extend the plan to deport many of the 63,500 Vietnamese who are confined in detention centers in Hong Kong and cannot prove they are entitled to asylum as refugees from political persecution.

The agreement, reached after months of negotiations, seeks to resolve the fate of people whose plight has become one of the more enduring legacies of the Vietnam War.

The Vietnamese who ended up in Hong Kong in recent years are among the final wave of the so-called "boat people," the more than 1 million who fled Vietnam's Communist government by raft and boat after the war ended in 1975.

But in signing the agreement, London appears to have put itself at odds with the United States, which continues to oppose forced repatriations to Vietnam for any reason.

Officials in London said they had consulted closely with Washington during recent weeks, but refused to discuss what, if any, agreements or understanding had been reached prior to signing the agreement with Hanoi.

Earlier this year, President Bush and Prime Minister John Major exchanged letters on the boat people, and the British foreign secretary, Douglas Hurd, said earlier this month he was hoping to convince the Bush administration to acquiese in the matter.

Officials in London have argued that most of the boat people are not fleeing political repression in Vietnam, but rather are economic refugees who left Vietnam because they are seeking a better life in Hong Kong, the British colony that will revert to China in 1997.

Opposition parties in Britain have also said they would oppose any agreement that would require people to be repatriated against their will.

George Foulkes, a member of Parliament and spokesman for Britain's Labor Party, expressed fears that the agreement will mean that Vietnamese will be repatriated "at the point of the gun."

Radicals fire rocket at U.S. embassy

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Arab radicals opposed to the Mideast peace conference fired a rocket at the U.S. embassy compound in east Beirut on Tuesday.

The missile struck a wall but caused no injuries or serious damage to the building in the Christian suburb of Aukur, said Defense Minister Michel Murr.

An anonymous caller to a Western news agency later claimed responsibility on behalf of the Arab Revolutionary Brigades, a previously unknown group.

The caller said the rocket was "a demonstration of rejection of the sellout by Arab regimes of the Palestinian cause at the Madrid conference."

Iranian and Arab radicals have promised to attack targets of the United States and others involved in Wednesday's conference, which they oppose because it could lead to Arab recognition for Israel.

Lebanese army troops and police threw a cordon around the embassy minutes after the blast and turned away reporters and photographers, said Associated Press technician Elie Ghattas, who lives about 100 yards from the compound.

No embassy officials were available for comment. Ambassador Ryan Crocker was in Madrid with the U.S. delegation sponsoring the peace conference.

All U.S. Embassy functions were moved to the building in east Beirut after the embassy compound in Moslem west Beirut was destroyed.

Walesa seeks top two Polish posts

WARSAW, Poland (NYT) — After a parliamentary election that showed both rising apathy and widespread voter dissatisfaction, President Lech Walesa offered Tuesday night to serve as his own prime minister over a fragmented legislature.

The move, if accepted, would give the former shipyard electrician and Solidarity leader, control over the country's two most powerful offices and was immediately condemned by some as a step toward one-man rule.

As he did so often during Solidarity's decadelong struggle against Communism, Walesa is again offering to take Poland's troubles on his broad back. But it is not immediately clear whether the political parties that have sprung up in two years of democracy would submit to his rough-and-tumble style of leadership.

Returns announced Tuesday onight showed that the seats in the Parliament have been divided among more than 25 parties, none holding more than 12 percent.

With 98 percent of the votes counted, the Democratic Union, the center-left party that is a direct descendent of Solidarity and is led by former Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki and other Solidarity intellectuals, was running even with the party of former Communists, which calls itself the Democratic Left Alliance.

Both had 12 percent of the votes and 48 seats in the 460-seat lower house, or Sejm. Closely behind with around 8 percent each were the Polish Peasants Party, once allied with the Communists; Church-backed parties, like the Catholic Electoral Action, which supports a ban on abortion; the Center Alliance, the right-wing heirs of the Solidarity movement; and the Confederation for Independent Poland, which predates Solidarity and has also called for bringing Communists to account.

The Liberal Democratic Congress Party of Jan Krzysztof, the outgoing prime minister, who supports a doctrinaire free market approach to the economy, also polled about 7 percent.

Costa Rica bans Halloween in schools

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — The Costa Rican government announced Tuesday it was forbidding the celebration of Halloween in public schools to preserve Costa Rican traditions.

The Education Ministry said in an announcement that the celebration of Halloween in Costa Rica was an imitation of a U.S. custom that could "silently undermine" national traditions.

Catholic Latin American nations traditionally celebrate All Saints' Day on Nov. 1 and the All-Souls' Day or Day of the Dead on Nov. 2, when families visit the graves of relatives.

For the past 30 years, American schools established here have been celebrating Halloween on Oct. 31, and Costa Ricans have picked up the custom, especially in the public schools of the capital.

But this year, Halloween festivities will have to be held in private.

Iraqis find 44 soldiers buried alive

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The bodies of 44 Iraqi soldiers buried alive in their trenches by American tanks were discovered Tuesday near the Saudi-Iraqi border, the Iraqi News Agency reported.

The agency said the bodies were found in two groups in an area where American troops used tanks equipped with plows to crush bunkers as they crossed the border and plunged into Iraq in the last stage of the war.

The news agency report, monitored in Nicosia, said a medical expert determined the Iraqis died of suffocation.

"Foreign Minister Ahmed Hussein sent a letter to the Arab League secretery-general, Ismat Abdul-Majeed, to inform him of this ugly crime by the American forces," the report said.

Reports in American newspapers last month quoted U.S. Army officers as saying M1-A1 tanks from the Army's First Infantry Division overran Iraqi trenches and bunkers, plowing them under with soldiers still inside.

The assault took place Feb. 24 along a 10-mile front north of the border. The officers said most of the Iraqis saw the tanks coming and surrendered, although thousands might have perished.

The officers said overrunning the Iraqis was preferable to going in with ground forces to take the trenches in close combat, which could have taken days and resulted in many American casualties.

Warning signs call for action

Congress has taken a hefty share of grief since the hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee on Clarence Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court. What's more, the collective body of 535 representatives fully deserved the harsh criticism.

President Bush unleashed a searing attack on Congress late last week, calling members of the legislative branch "a privileged class of rulers" and berating them for the injustices dished out during the Thomas hearings.

"I would wager," Bush said during his attack, "that the American people do not know that Congress has exempted itself from the sexual harassment laws private employers and the executive branch must obey. And they have.

"This practice creates the appearance and reality of a privileged class of rulers who stand above the law," noted the President.

He's correct. What's more, while most people have assumed that the government has been operated in a wise and efficient manner, that may not have been the case.

The excesses and abuses carried out by Congress during the recent Thomas hearings are, in fact, symptomatic of an attitude that has become pervasive in recent times. There also are many other factors contributing to what appears to be a building rage at those in positions of power in the government. The fact that Congress grants its members staggering salary increases in an economic period when those in the private sector are struggling to make ends meet is part of the problem. So are the scandals that regularly rock the halls of Congress, along with the fact that once in office most elected representatives can serve for years unless they choose to leave for some other reason.

"Throwing the rascals out" on Election Day seems to be a popular vision of how the system should work, but rarely is put into practice.

Another part of the overall problem is the bloated bureaucracy that has added thousands of government workers and millions of dollars to the federal budget in recent years. Bush addressed that aspect of the dilemma in his attack last week, calling on Congress to eliminate some of its 300 committees and 40,000 staffers.

Government is not inherently bad or counterproductive, but if the electorate fails to oversee the function of government it can spin out of control and become a growing, self-perpetuating monstrosity. At that point, the voters must retake control of government.

That point may have been reached in this country, judging from some of the warning signs now being seen. Those signals should alert concerned Americans that the "machine" called government needs serious attention now.

Price's column was 'slap in face'

The column written for the sports page by Bill Price on Thursday, Oct. 10, was disgusting. Price showed his total disregard for the students, teachers and supporters of Midland High School. Instead of backing a Midland team at their homecoming, he wrote them off as losers and suggested that their game was not worth going to. He said in his column that those who could not go see the almighty Lee team play, but still wanted to see a "good" game should go out of town.

Price could obviously care less about the MHS homecoming game, the MHS football team or the kids involved. He showed a lousy attitude and a complete lack of consideration for the supporters of MHS, the alumni, the coaches, the parents of students, the players, band members, cheerleaders, pep squad members, twirlers and all of the many others involved with these kids. His article was a slap in the face that MHS did not deserve.

Price evidently has the idea that MHS is somehow second rate when compared to Lee. I must say that he is wrong. Midland which is a very fine school with a very fine staff and an excellent group of teachers. The kids going to MHS are second to none. Price owes MHS an apology, although I do not expect to see one. It makes me wonder, though, if your paper has the same attitude as he does.

By the way, the blowout that night was seen in Odessa by Permian against Lee. Those who went to see MHS play saw a good game, especially in the fourth quarter. In fact, if not for a few mental errors and bad breaks, the game would have gone down to the wire. It was, I am sure, a much more exciting game that the lopsided one in Odessa.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 30, the 303rd day of 1991. There are 62 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on Oct. 30, 1941, the U.S. Navy destroyer "Reuben James" was torpedoed by a German vessel off the coast of Iceland, even though the United States had not yet entered World War II.

On this date:

In 1735, the second president of the United States, John Adams, was born in Braintree, Mass.

In 1938, the radio play "The War of the Worlds," starring Orson Welles, aired on CBS, sparking panic with its portrayal of a Martian invasion.

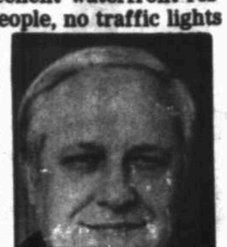

In 1953, Gen. George C. Marshall was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. Dr. Albert Schweitzer also received the Peace Prize for 1952.

In 1961, 30 years ago, the Soviet Union tested a hydrogen bomb with a force estimated at 58 megatons.

EPA finds it easy to harass little fish

WASHINGTON — The folks in Little Creek, Del., don't have much use for the federal bureaucracy. The quaint town, known for its excellent waterfront restaurants, has only 167 people, no traffic lights and a mayor who jumps into a truck to plow the town's three roads when it snows.

Anderson

But for the last three years, the federal government has been hounding one of Little Creek's own. The miscreant is Ernest Martusus, and his offense was to sell incense without registering it with the Environmental Protection Agency. Forget your Superfund cleanups, your toxic dump sites, your barrels brimming with nuclear waste. The EPA has big fish to fry in Little Creek.

Martusus crossed over the EPA's line a few years ago when he mixed up a batch of alcohol, water, garlic and citronella oil in a plastic tub in the back of his 1986 Ford pickup. Then he soaked incense sticks in the solution and packaged it with a label. He called it "Good Ol' Boy Insect Repellent" because burning incense sometimes has the effect of shooing bugs away.

Among Martusus' mistakes is that he didn't read carefully — didn't read at all, he says — the 1988 Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act. It says that "any substance or mixture of substances intended for preventing, destroying, repelling or mitigating any pest" must be registered with the EPA.

The incense was a big hit at a New Jersey flea market where Martusus sold large quantities to several distributors. They then sold it elsewhere, and therein lies Ernest Martusus' downfall. An alert EPA official vacationing in Frontier Town, Md. — a busman's holiday, as it turned out — bought a package of the incense and examined the label. Horrors! There was no EPA registration indicated.

The alert public servant took the incense sticks back to the EPA's regional office in Philadelphia, and Martusus' fate was sealed. The EPA filed a complaint and Martusus stopped selling his sticks. But that wasn't enough. The EPA now wants him to pay a $5,000 fine — $2,500 for holding an unregistered pesticide for sale, and $2,500 for holding a misbranded pesticide for sale.

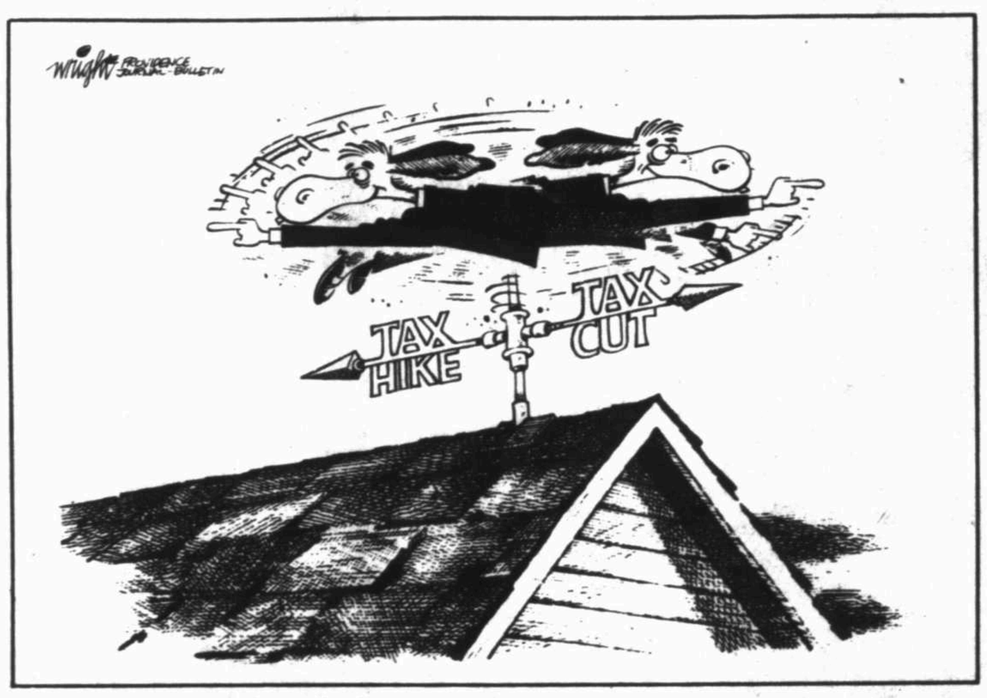

These EPA guys are tough. Our reporter Ed Henry asked them if they go after big corporations with as much gusto as they did Ernest Martusus. Of course, they said, citing Imperial Chemical Industries as an example. The company was recently fined $6,300 for advertising an unregistered pesticide.

Let's see. That's a $5,000 fine for Ernest Martusus and his company Jenny Rose Incense of Little Creek, Del., and a $6,300 fine for ICI, an international corporation headquartered in London with 19,000 employees in the United States and $24.9 billion in worldwide sales last year.

The EPA said it set the Martusus fine at $5,000 because he has not given them any income statements so they had to assume he was a big business making at least $1 million a year. He says his income is only about $6,200 a year. The EPA is willing to cut him some slack if he can document that he earns less than $300,000 a year. If that's the case, the EPA will reduce the fine to about $3,000. Not surprisingly, Martusus is unimpressed with the magnanimous gesture.

In April, the GAO said that the EPA was making only limited progress in assessing the extent of groundwater contamination by pesticides a full five years after 16 pesticides had been identified as threats to the water. It's simply easier for the EPA to go after the likes of Ernest Martusus.

BCCI tentacles may reach White House

WASHINGTON — On July 23, acting on a tip from an informant familiar with the political reach of BCCI, I posed this question to White House counsel Boyden Gray: Did John Sununu have any dealings with BCCI or its subsidiaries?

Safire

Gray checked and called back promptly: "No. A flat denial." Accordingly, I wrote nothing; an unequivocal denial relayed through the president's attorney squelches a rumor.

However, we now know from Newhouse Newspapers that at about that time, Ed Rogers — Sununu's right-hand man, political protege and personal press agent — was in the process of being hired by Sheik Kamal Adham, the former chief of Saudi intelligence suspected of being at the heart of the biggest swindle in history.

This same Sununu toady helped organize the May 23 meeting that founded the Arab American Council, an oil-backed elite lobbying group that scorns broader-based Arab-American organizations. Sununu and the Syrian ambassador were stars of the gathering; out of Lebanese contacts made there or later, I presume, came Rogers' huge contract.

Here is a 33-year-old Bush political hatchetman, a 1985 graduate of the Alabama Law School who never practiced law a day in his life, retained by an accused criminal mastermind at the rate of $25,000 per month for two years. Plus expenses, which will be considerable. Plus, logic suggests, the ability to pass other fat fees on to influentials he designates.

The $600,000 initial payment from Kamal could be, as Rogers insists on his foreign agents registration form, for his legal expertise as well as for "duties that could border on political." Mean-spirited types like me suspect that it may be for access to intermediaries who speak to Sununu and to other Bush appointees beholden to the chief of staff, thereby circumventing the ethics law.

Something fishy is behind this government's reluctance to prosecute aggressively the well-connected predators of BCCI. Rogers claimed last summer that his boss was being criticized only because he was of Lebanese extraction; now that the connection has been revealed between BCCI and Sununu's Alabaman right arm, that excuse won't fly.

At first, President Bush said of Sununu's aide: "He is a free citizen to do anything he wants once he leaves the White House." Wrong; we have a law against revolving-door lobbying. Then Bush aides concocted a story that Bush fired Rogers, and that Sununu never talked to his right-hand man about this outsleazying of Mike Deaver; that's Tooth Fairy stuff.

The new attorney general, who was present at Justice's sustained foot-dragging in BCCI and the Bank of Lavoro ripoffs, promptly labeled the concern that Sununu or anyone might have influenced the BCCI probe "utter nonsense"; that prejudgment removes Justice from any investigation of the Sununu connection.

The final White House ploy to avert a close look at possible influence-peddling came when Bush directed Gray to inquire into it. I have seen the extent of such an "inquiry"; Gray will pass along the denials and the White House whitewash will continue.

Did the CIA obstruct the investigation of one of its banking assets? Why did James Baker's Treasury Department fail to act on a CIA tip about BCCI drug-money laundering? Who, in Washington tipped the druglords to a belated crackdown, enabling them to withdraw their money first? Who else at or near the top took BCCI largesse?

The White House and Justice Department cannot investigate themselves; this latest affront tips the scales to a special prosecutor. Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joe Biden, D-Del., could trigger this process today.

Step One is to subpoena Sununu's phone logs and schedules, and to get him under oath on his easy denials. Step Two is to do the same with Attorneys General Thornburgh and Barr and their criminal division chiefs and at least three misfeasant U.S. attorneys. Then grill Rogers and his intermediaries.

If you have information about manipulation of our prosecutors, do not contact posterior-covering Justice or its FBI subsidiary; send your evidence to the uncorrupted Manhattan district attorney, or to Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., or to Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y. They'll pass it to the special prosecutor so urgently needed.

Thomas hearings put Quayle on top court

This is what happened in October, 1994, as a direct result of the Judge Clarence Thomas drama.

Judge Thomas took his seat on the court but refused to make any decisions. He told the other justices that it was nobody's business where he stood on the issues of the day, and he would not divulge his beliefs on Roe vs. Wade or any other subject. His conservative colleagues said that they respected him for this and left him alone.

Buchwald

The women of America, embittered because the men in the Senate would not take them seriously, impeached 98 of the 100 senators (they left the two incumbent women senators in office) and elected an all-women Senate. I know that some people are going to say that this is constitutionally impossible, but you are going to have to take my word for it — it happened.

The Thomas hearings had thrown the country into a tizzy because no one knew what verbal harassment was.

The toughest part of it all was that males stopped talking to women for fear that something they said might cause offense. Offices became silent tombs when the flirting stopped. Anyone who wanted to ask a girl out for a date thought again when he realized that he could wind up facing a hostile jury of female peers.

Married women were not too disturbed with the American male's silence. Most claimed that their husbands never talked to them anyway.

But it was the single women who had mixed feelings about it. As Bertha Bridget wrote to Ann Landers, "I don't want to be harassed, but I would like someone to take notice of me. Is there any way I can indicate to this cute guy in the office that although he doesn't know what to say to a girl, I would still like to have his baby?"

Ann Landers replied, "I'm sorry, but I don't answer questions from strangers."

In 1994 marriages were down, birthrates had hit rock bottom, and the innocent were tarred with the same brush as the guilty. With men afraid of talking to women, women stopped spending money on clothes and cosmetics to make themselves more attractive. This caused a recession on top of a recession. The mating game had turned into a war, and politically correct women had control of all the nuclear weapons.

No one has any idea about how much worse it will get in 1995. There is talk that in order to turn the situation around, anyone who ever flirted with a woman in the workplace may be granted amnesty by President Patti Davis Reagan.

The question that everyone is asking is, how can one decide what is verbal harassment and what isn't?

Miguel Safire, the great linguist, has written, "In the language of love, it is not what is said but who says it. We all know women have been abused by their superiors in an office atmosphere and that must stop. But we can't afford to throw their chances of getting married out with the bathwater."

Mrs. Safire said, "He's been working on that statement for at least six months, and he still hasn't got it right."

One other thing occurred in 1994. Supreme Court Justice Dan Quayle, who had been appointed to the court by George Bush so that the President wouldn't have to run with him in 1992, wrote his first opinion — and everyone in Indiana was proud of him.

Man sentenced to abstinence for spreading AIDS

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A 27-year-old man has been sentenced to sexual abstinence for five years and house arrest for six months for knowingly spreading the AIDS virus by having sex with a girlfriend.

Alberto Gonzalez, who was accused of infecting 22-year-old Bridgett Pederson, pleaded no contest Monday to third-degree assault, a felony, and two misdemeanor counts of recklessly endangering others.

Prosecutors dismissed nine other charges, including a count of first-degree assault that alleged Gonzalez used a dangerous weapon — the AIDS virus — to intentionally inflict serious injury.

David Peters, the deputy district attorney who prosecuted Gonzalez, said Tuesday he would have been able to show that Gonzalez knew he carried the virus when he began his relationship with Pederson.

Pederson remains in good health. Gonzalez told Multnomah County District Judge Janice R. Wilson that he suffers slight symptoms of AIDS.

AT&T won't hang up after customers switch

NEW YORK (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. said Tuesday it has continued to charge some former customers for a discount calling plan for months after they switched long-distance phone companies.

The charges involve AT&T's Reach Out America, Reach Out State and Reach Out World calling plans, which allow customers to buy an hour or half-hour of long-distance calling per month at a reduced rate.

AT&T said in a statement it has continued to charge the monthly fee for the Reach Out plans to some customers even after they switched to MCI Communications Corp., Sprint or another phone company.

The Reach Out America charge, for example, is $7.15 a month for an hour of calling. The charge typically appears as part of a customer's monthly bill from his or her local phone company.

AT&T said that under Federal Communications Commission regulations, it cannot cancel these subscriptions unless instructed to do so by the customer.

However, AT&T spokesman Mark Siegel admitted this requirement was established at AT&T's request. He said the request was filed years ago, before the phone industry was so competitive. "We thought it perfectly reasonable that people who want to cancel an AT&T serivce that they contact us," he said.

He said AT&T has stated in its literature for the Reach Out plans since July 1990 that customers must notify the company to cancel if they wish to do so after changing phone companies.

Judge orders striking nurses back to work

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge Tuesday ordered striking nurses back to work at six county hospitals and 48 clinics where hundreds of pickets marched to protest a benefits and wage proposal. Union officials were considering whether to defy the order.

At the request of Los Angeles County, Superior Court Judge William Huss issued a temporary restraining order against the nurses' union. A similar court order forced striking nurses back to work in January 1988.

The judge said he feared the strike would imperil the public's health and safety. "I'm not concerned about the county. I'm not concerned about the nurses. I'm concerned about sick people," Huss said.

He directed the nurses' union to provide the county with addresses and telephone numbers of its members and ordered the county to send letters to the nurses explaining the court order.

"We anticipate when (the nurses) are called, they'll come back," said county Chief Administrative Officer Richard Dixon. Dixon said he expected nurses to report for the overnight shift at 11 p.m. Tuesday.

But the union's general manager, Gilbert Cedillo, said: "I do not believe the nurses will be back tomorrow, and I do not believe the judge's order will be sufficient to bring them back to work."

Cedillo called Huss' ruling "a tremendous setback to the First Amendment rights of registered nurses." A union spokesman, Dan Savage, said union officials were meeting with lawyers Tuesday night to discuss their options.

The Service Employees International Union Local 660 represents about 37 percent of the county's nurses, or about 4,300 workers. The union called the strike Monday night after contract talks failed.

Forty-one percent of the county's day-shift nurses — 550 out of 1,328 — and 20 percent of the morning shift — 141 nurses out of 698 — participated in the walkout, said county spokesman Jim Ellman.

"It wasn't as successful as the union had hoped, but when nurses participate in a strike action and their service is no longer provided, it is a threat to the health and safety of the public," Ellman said.

A long strike could have forced emergency doctors to transfer patients to private hospitals, where emergency rooms could become overcrowded.

Health and fringe benefits, such as free parking valued up to $80 a month, was the main issue, said Local 660 spokeswoman Loretta Stevens.

At issue was a two-year nursing contract. The county proposed a first-year pay raise of 5.5 percent effective Nov. 1 and a negotiable second-year increase. The nurses asked for a 10 percent raise in November and a 7 percent increase a year later.

The union said nurses in the private sector average salaries 15 percent higher than county workers. County nurses average $37,000 and $38,000 a year.

Eastern states plan to adopt anti-pollution plan

By Matthew L. Wald
N.Y. Times writer

The governors of nine Eastern states and the mayor of Washington agreed Tuesday that they would adopt California's far-reaching program to require cleaner cars in a broad assault against smog in urban America.

Some of the states have already banded together to require less-polluting gasoline, but the move on cars would be the largest joint step against pollution that they have ever taken, proponents say.

Most if not all the states can adopt the standards through administrative procedures, according to experts, although in some cases the legislatures may take action themselves.

After months of study and debate, the governors' representatives met in Philadelphia to approve an agreement in which the states pledge to enforce the program, which requires new equipment on gasoline-powered automobiles purchased late in this decade, and then the sale of growing numbers of cars that run on alternative fuels like natural gas and methanol.

By 1999, 2 percent of the cars sold in areas with the California rules will have to be battery-powered, rising to 5 percent in 2001 and 10 percent in 2003.

Signers of the agreement Tuesday are New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Virginia, the District of Columbia, Maryland, Delaware, New Hampshire and Maine.

Three New England states, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Vermont, asked for more time to consider the measure. But proponents expect Rhode Island and Vermont to follow soon, and they believe that Connecticut, the only state to express significant reluctance Tuesday, will eventually sign on too.

But in Connecticut, officials said they were still studying whether the same benefits could be obtained at lower cost by changes in gasoline formulation, better annual inspection of cars, new equipment in gasoline stations to recapture fumes released in refueling and similar steps.

The states that have pledged to adopt the California standards differ in their progress. New York has completed public hearings and is now in a public comment period.

In Massachusetts, the legislature has instructed environmental officials to adopt the standards, and hearings will be held today in Springfield and tomorrow in Boston.

Environmental officials in New Jersey are preparing a regulation and planning to hold hearings in January.

In Pennsylvania, Gov. Robert P. Casey directed the Department of Transportation and the Department of Environmental Resources to adopt California regulations by the fall of 1995.

Maine plans to issue proposed regulations in January, with public hearings the next month, said Michael Bradley, executive director of the Northeast States for Coordinated Air Use Management.

Turner buys Hanna-Barbera cartoons

ATLANTA (AP) — Fred Flintstone is joining Scarlett O'Hara in the Turner Broadcasting System Inc. stable. The cable television giant paid $320 million to acquire the Hanna-Barbera cartoon library.

Turner announced Tuesday it had signed a definitive agreement to buy the animator, a move that will beef up TBS' warehouse of programming that already includes the $1.3 billion MGM movie library and a growing stock of self-produced titles.

Hollywood-based Hanna-Barbera Productions Inc., formed in 1957, is the creator of such cartoon classics as The Flintstones, The Jetsons, Yogi Bear and Scooby Doo. The deal with Turner includes more than 3,000 half-hours of animated programming and more than 350 TV series, television movies and theatrical releases.

The deal, negotiated since August and still subject to regulatory review, is expected to be completed by year-end, TBS said.

"We are pleased to be one step closer to obtaining the world's finest animation library," said TBS Chairman Ted Turner.

Hanna-Barbera's chief executive officer, David Kirschner, is expected to continue to develop and create programming for Turner.

Diet treatment fails overeaters, researchers say

CHICAGO (AP) — Teaching new skills to overweight people to modify their eating habits is "state of the art" in weight-loss programs but a dismal failure, say researchers who suggest overeating is often like an addiction.

As such, it might be more successfully treated by helping sufferers counter their self-defeating thoughts and emotions surrounding overweight and helping them get into strong social support systems, the researchers said.

"Most persons trained in behavioral self-management of obesity experience relapse to old behaviors and former weight," the researchers wrote in the October issue of the Journal of the American Dietetic Association.

"Only about 5 percent show significant and lasting weight losses," added the authors, Assistant Professor G. Kenneth Goodrick and Professor John P. Foreyt of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Long-term success of very-low-calorie diets combined with behavioral self-management is about 10 percent, the authors wrote in an article also to be presented today at the 74th annual meeting of the American Dietetic Association in Dallas.

"The mystery is that although many persons who successfully complete a behavioral program seem to enjoy exercise and do not report being particularly hungry, they regress to former behavior patterns and regain weight," the article said.

Behavioral self-management involves controlling situations related to eating and exercise: "If you find yourself eating too many high-fat foods ... take them out of your house," Goodrick said.

Such techniques have been used for decades to try to control weight, but they presume a rational model of humans, though research indicates overeaters under stress do not think rationally, the researchers said.

Also, overeaters may be destined for cycles of failure spurred by social pressure to be thin followed by restrictive dieting, which leads to a backlash of hunger. That in turn, leads to more overeating and weight gain, followed by more restrictive dieting and social pressure to be thin, the researchers said.

Don Kirschenbaum, director of the eating disorders program at Northwestern University Medical School, said the weight-loss failure rates cited in the study are overstated, and he does not believe behavior modification is incompatible with treating overeating like an addiction.

"Behavior self-management is a fairly major approach to changing someone's life," he said. "Someone with an addiction is looking for a way to change their life."

Both Northwestern and Baylor use some of the same techniques to treat overweight patients, including emphasis on exercise, healthier foods, long-term follow-up and cognitive behavioral therapy, a system for overcoming negative feelings by countering distorted thought patterns.

Dr. Thomas A. Wadden, associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine and an obesity expert, said the study makes an important contribution. But he cautioned that only a small proportion of overweight people may have the kind of food dependence the study describes.

Woman files lawsuit against City of Midland

■ A woman who was seriously injured in a wreck involving Midland Police officers has filed a lawsuit against the city.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A woman who was seriously injured in a wreck during a 1989 police chase filed a civil lawsuit against the City of Midland on Monday, court records indicate.

But whether the city is liable for such accidents may hinge on a ruling by a Texas Supreme Court case to be argued in November.

Michelle Demaray, in the suit filed in the 238th District Court, claims the city, Midland Police Officers Manny Beltran and Rene Flores; Jimmy Cox, the owner of a stolen pickup truck involved in the wreck; and Robert Steven Dudley, currently serving time in state prison in connection with the truck theft, all were guilty of negligence.

During the early morning of Oct. 28, 1989, police were chasing Dudley, then 17, who was driving a pickup that had been reported stolen.

Ms. Demaray was driving a 1985 Chevrolet pickup on Garfield Street when the stolen truck, heading the wrong way on Michigan Avenue, crashed into her vehicle.

The collision ruptured the fuel tank, causing a fiery explosion. Police pulled Ms. Demaray and her three young children from the burning wreckage.

Ms. Demaray suffered brain damage, severe burns, a broken pelvis and was in coma for two months.

The lawsuit alleges that Cox was guilty of "negligence per se, in that he left his keys in the ignition of the 1988 Ford F-150 pickup."

Dudley's negligence stemmed from his failure to keep a proper lookout, traveling the wrong way on a one-way road, fleeing from police, driving too fast, failure to timely apply brakes, and alcohol consumption, the lawsuit states.

The city was "guilty of negligent entrustment in that they knew or should have known ... Manny Beltran and Rene Flores were negligent and reckless drivers," according to the lawsuit.

The officers named failed to keep a proper lookout for innocent motorists, were driving the wrong way on a one-way street during the course of their chase and at an excessive speed, failed to properly pursue the truck driven by Dudley, and failed to engage the emergency equipment on their patrol car to warn plaintiff of their presence, the lawsuit states.

Last December, Douglas Demaray of Austin, Ms. Demaray's husband at the time of accident, filed a negligence suit against the City of Midland, Dudley, Cox, the two officers and a third Midland police officer, Bobby Welborn.

Demaray, who prior to the accident had separated from his wife and after the wreck, assumed custody of the children, also named his three children as plaintiffs.

Demaray's lawyer, Robert E. White of Odessa, said in December that his client is suing to recover medical expenses and other undetermined damages stemming from the accident.

The lawsuit was scheduled to be heard last week in the 142nd District Court but was postponed pending a Texas Supreme Court ruling of a case in the City of Mesquite, court records show.

The Mesquite case involves the question of whether a city is liable for accidents that occur between fleeing criminals and other people, according to City Attorney David Reagan.

Previously, a city was not liable for such accidents but an initial ruling by the Texas Supreme Court found that a "city could possibly be liable," Reagan said.

The case has been re-scheduled for arguments on Nov. 5, court records show.

Reagan declined comment on the pending Demaray suits.

Ms. Demaray could not be reached for comment.

City ranks third in job growth

■ Among the state's metropolitan areas, Midland ranked third in adding new jobs in the past 12 months.

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland ranked third among the state's 28 metropolitan areas in adding new jobs during the past 12 months, the Comptroller of Public Accounts office has reported.

Midland had 45,600 people employed in September, an increase of 1,600, or a 3.6 percent gain, from the number of people employed in September 1990.

The increase came across the board in construction, manufacturing, wholesale and retail trade, services, government and transportation, a comptroller's spokesman said. The only category that did not show a gain was finance, insurance and real estate.

Victoria, with a 5 percent gain, led the state in new jobs, followed by Beaumont-Port Arthur with a 4.3 percent increase.

Odessa ranked sixth, with a 3 percent gain, from 43,500 to 44,800 workers.

Other areas showing good growth included Houston, Killeen-Temple, El Paso and Brownsville-Harlingen. The latter reflects the growth of the maquiladoras, or "twin plants" on the Texas-Mexico border.

For the first time since 1982, Texas was tops in the nation in creating new jobs, the Comptroller's office reported in its Texas Economic Quarterly publication. For the 12 months ended in June, the state had a 1.2 percent growth in employment, or 87,000 new jobs. Ohio was second, with a .5 percent gain, and Illinois was third at .3 percent.

Because of the 1990-91 recession, only three of the 10 most populous states — Texas, Ohio and Illinois — had increases in employment during the 12 months since June 1990, the report said.

Comptroller John Sharp's economic forecast is for slow to moderate growth to continue in Texas, which still will outpace growth around the nation by about.5 percent a year during the next few years.

"Although oil prices may remain volatile in the short term, the Texas economy is much less affected by oil prices than it was 10 years ago," the report said.

"With oil prices presently below $25 a barrel, an unexpected slip in oil prices would have little effect on an industry that is already downscaled."

Because the forecast assumes the average price of oil will increase only about $1 a year during the next few years, the outlook for the industry is flat, the report said.

Wood may trigger tree disease

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

An increasingly common, deadly oak tree disease could be spread to Midland trees by cut firewood this winter, a Texas A&M pathologist warned.

Oak wilt, a disease spread by beetles and passed from tree to tree through connective root systems, has been affecting oaks throughout central and south Texas, with one recent case reported in Big Spring, said Gerald Johnson, an A&M plant pathology specialist.

Midland County Extension Agent Debbie Benge said there has been only one documented case of the disease in Midland trees during the last two years.

"You might find it out here in the live oak and red oak, but some others are not as susceptible," Benge said. "I'm not going to be concerned about it until I see more confirmed cases."

Meanwhile, cases have been discovered throughout the state.

"I don't know if it's suddenly spreading, or if people are becoming more aware of it," Johnson said. "But we're hearing about more cases every week."

If cases are discovered locally, Johnson said the best action is to remove the affected trees.

"You've got to get them out, because the fungus spreads through the root systems," he explained. "In (the Midland) area, there are a lot of live oaks, for example. They would share a root system with the trees around them."

The best prevention is to avoid tree contact with bark beetles, sap-feeding insects that carry oak wilt spores on their backs. While burrowing into the tree for its sap, carrier beetles can pass the life-threatening disease into the tree veins.

"Now that we're approaching wintertime, it can be brought in by cut firewood," Johnson said. "Beetles are carried in the wood of red oak or blackjack oak that might be brought into Midland from the Hill Country."

Since many people may not know where their firewood came from, Johnson said covering the woodpile with a clear plastic sheet is a good defense. The plastic may cause a greenhouse effect that would suffocate existing beetles, or the covering will at least prevent their escape to the trees.

"It's got to be a clear plastic because they can't sense holes in it, so they can't get out," Johnson said.

Symptoms of oak wilt in live oak trees vary, Johnson said. They may include leaf veins turning dark green with a yellowish tint between veins, or veins that turn reddish brown with light green color between. However, sometimes the main leaf veins will turn red-brown and the leaf tip will turn brown, he said.

Live oak trees will drop their leaves when affected by oak wilt, Johnson said.

In a red or Spanish oak, the tree will actually seem to wilt, and although leaves may turn a dark red or brown, they will remain on the tree, he said.

"The best thing to do if you think you may have a tree with the wilt is to have a sample tested," Johnson said. County extension agents have the forms and information necessary to have a test completed, he said.

"I'd definitely encourage people to find out for sure if theirs is oak wilt before losing a valuable tree," Ms. Benge said.

Treatment is available, but it is expensive and chemicals must be injected into the bark by a professional, she said.

Quartet adds new accents

West Texas hospitality is credited with staffing the Thouvenel String Quartet with two international players.

"When I came to Midland-Odessa to audition in early August, I was also looking at a position in Los Angeles, but after a few days here, I was so touched by the hospitality of the people that I wanted to live here with my family," said Igor Fedotov, the new violist with the Thouvenel and principal violist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Inc.

Fedotov and Eugueni Tcherkassov, first violinist of the quartet and the concertmaster of the MOSC, are originally from Baku, Armenia, in the Soviet Union. Both have performed with the Moscow Chamber Orchestra where Tcherkassov served as concertmaster.

"This is a very special moment for me," Tcherkassov said during a Tuesday press conference. "I'm from a part of the Soviet Union where there's been a great deal of social unrest, civil war. I've had the chance to go to many different countries — Mexico and Germany. For three years I've tried to come to America because of the political freedom you have here."

Tcherkassov was considering a position in Michigan when he found out about the opening with the Thouvenel. He found the possibilities here "exciting" and said, "I am looking forward to a new life with my wife and

Students take caps off to help boy

By Michael Kashgarian

Students at Rusk Elementary School are taking off their caps to help brighten the life of an East Texas boy suffering from leukemia.

"I got one (cap) from Sea World when I was 4 years old. No one wears it anymore so I'm going to give it away," said Allen McGee, 7, a second grader at Rusk.

The cap will eventually become part of a collection of Kevin Randles, a 6-year-old resident of Pottsboro.

Kevin began stacking up the "gimme caps" — now totaling more than 600 — after he began losing his hair from chemotherapy.

"All summer long he didn't go anywhere without one," said the boy's mother, Tammy Randles, from her home in Pottsville.

Allen and his schoolmates at Rusk only know Kevin from a newspaper article, but have decided to contribute to his cause.

"So other people can show love for this boy," Allen said, "... by giving him the hats so he can make it to the Guinness Book of World Records."

The local cap cause originated with Mickey Trimble, a room mother for Rusk Elementary.

Army's helping tradition continues

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one in a series highlighting some of the 17 United Way-funded agencies which will benefit from the agency's current annual campaign.

By Darren J. Waggoner

Continuing a tradition that is as old as the organization itself, the Salvation Army of Midland is planning the annual drive to ensure a happy Christmas for Midlanders.

The program — "Angels in Action," — bears a title conceived by Brenda Turner of the group. The Salvation Army Day Care Center and Casa de Amigos are working together with the Army to coordinate the program.

"We have designed a system where everyone will be helped," said Turner. "We won't turn down anyone who asks for help this Christmas. All they have to do is fill out the application form."

Salvation Army employees estimate they will help about 5,000 individuals this year.

Last year, "Angels in Action" helped 990 families by donating 8,178 toys and 902 food baskets. Based on these statistics, the Salvachildren here."

QUARTET: Members are excited

The third new member is former Odessan Jennifer Leshnower, who is second violinist with the Thouvenel and with the symphony.

"I'm excited to be a new member of the Thouvenel String Quartet," said Miss Leshnower, who began studying violin at age 14 under Odessan Dorothy Croft. "The opportunity to play serious quartet music after years of training is a dream. I look forward to living in Texas again."

A graduate of Permian High School and Rice University, Miss Leshnower has a master's of music degree from the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore. She has been involved with the Peabody Symphony and the Annapolis Opera Orchestra and has performed with the Shepard School Symphony, the Smithsonian Chamber Players and the Aspen Festival Orchestra.

The Thouvenel, a quartet in residence with the MOSC, will perform the opening concert of its 15th season at 8 p.m. Nov. 16 at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium, Midland College campus, and at 3 p.m. Nov. 17 at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin, Odessa. The concert will include works by Rachmaninoff, Dvorak and Mozart.

A special pre-concert lecture will be given by Robert Hunt, chorale director and assistant conductor of the symphony, 30 minutes prior to each performance in commemoration of the 200th anniversary of Mozart.

This season, the quartet will perform five chamber music concert pairs in Midland and Odessa. In addition, the Thouvenel has a group called "The Friends" which support and assist the quartet. Those interested in joining the group and participating in Thouvenel activities may call the symphony office, 563-0921.

This summer, the Thouvenel was down to one member, cellist Rebecca Seiver.

Ms. Seiver spent months working to finding the best available musicians for the positions. It was Emanuel Borok, concertmaster of the Dallas Symphony, who suggested Tcherkassov and Fedotov.

"He said, 'If you don't get these players, somebody else will. They are great.' He didn't know them personally, but he knew their teacher in Moscow," Ms. Seiver said. "He was so sure they would be great here, he helped in the immigration process."

Tcherkassov's background includes studying at the Azerbaijan State Conservatory and the Moscow State Conservatory. He was a member of the Quartet of Modern Music in Baku and a member of the first prize winning string quartet in the Frankfurt Festival.

Fedotov also was trained at the Azerbaijan State Conservatory. He has performed with the "Capriccio" Moscow Chamber Orchestra and recorded with the Holland-based orchestra, Collegium Europea.

Tcherkassov and Fedotov, who have been friends for 20 years, both performed and lived in Mexico this past year. Yet, Tcherkassov never forgot his dream of living in the United States.

"I looked for a country where nationality is not a problem," he said. "Here I think is real freedom. Here our nationality doesn't matter. People from all over the world live here, and they live well."

When asked if he had any thought of returning to the USSR in light of the recent changes there, Tcherkassov said, "No. I hope it will be better, but not for me. Maybe for my children or the children of my children. I couldn't wait. I chose the best country I could."

Halloween carnival with each classroom hosting a different type booth. Tickets will cost 25 cents and proceeds will go back into the school.

Mrs. Trimble's room will be sponsoring a "cap rap," similar to a cake walk but with caps as prizes.

"We'll give the children the option to put them back in the box" to be sent to Kevin, said Mrs. Trimble.

"I just thought of it when I saw the article (about Kevin) in the paper Tuesday morning," she said.

So she decided to ask the children in Corine Martinez' second grade class if they were interested.

"One boy said he had caps at home and asked if he could bring them," Mrs. Trimble said.

"They were excited about helping this boy," she added.

Mrs. Martinez said she discussed the newspaper article with her class.

"They were totally enthused. I have a very giving and sharing class," she said.

"And it relates to our social studies as well. Our first chapter, we talked about the community" and community involvement, Mrs. Martinez said.

If anyone wants to help Kevin get into the record book, they can bring their caps to Rusk Elementary or call Mrs. Trimble at 697-5701.

Guinness has no current record for caps, said Mrs. Randles, who wrote the records' book. Officials with Guinness told Mrs. Randles they were not sure how a record would be established but that it would probably take thousands of caps to make the book.

ARMY: Program will help everyone

(From 1B)

tion Army expects over 2,000 applicants this year.

"Right now we are working together to form a clearinghouse to make sure everyone is helped only once," said Turner.

To help alleviate past problems, the Salvation Army has enlisted the aid of six organizations to help registration run smoother. Each agency will use the same application form and each agency will keep copies of the forms for the families they wish to help.

According to Turner, the participating agencies will then "adopt" those families. The agencies will ensure their adopted families have a Christmas dinner and that each child receives two new toys to unwrap on Christmas morning.

This year, each participating agencies will accept applications for Christmas assistance between Nov. 4-8 at their offices. Hours for applying are 10 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. After that week, anyone seeking assistance will be directed to the Salvation Army at 300 S. Baird St.

But Fred Wakefied, social services director and chaplain at the Salvation Army, hopes everyone will take advantage of the available hours.

"That is the original intent of offering the hours. But, of course, we don't want anyone to go hungry on Christmas and we don't want any children out there to be without toys," said Wakefield.

According to Wakefield, the Salvation Army has operated in Midland for "about 35 years" but this is the first time they have joined forces with other agencies to sponsor the Christmas assistance.

About 33 percent of the Salvation Army's annual budget is provided by the United Way.

"The generosity of Midland residents is greatly appreciated. Whether through their donations to the United Way or through individual contributions, they certainly help make this possible," said Wakefield.

Locations of the participating agencies are:

Salvation Army, 300 S. Baird St., Salvation Army Day Care, 3500 Park Lane, Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane, St. Andrews Mission, 1708 N. Fort Worth, First Baptist Church, 2104 W. Louisiana, Baptist Crisis Center, 1001 S. Main St. and Midland Christian Church, 2608 Neely St.

Group urges patients to know their rights

AUSTIN (AP) — With a Senate committee looking into allegations of abuse in some for-profit psychiatric hospitals, a consumers' group is urging people to get mental health care if they need it — but to protect themselves by being well-informed.

"The main thing that you have to do is educate yourself. Know your rights. If you don't know something, ask. Don't take it for granted. Always let a family member or a friend know that you're in a hospital," said Cindy Hopkins, vice-chairwoman of Texas Mental Health Consumers, on Tuesday.

The non-profit organization's board and voting members are people who either are coping with or have been labeled as having psychiatric disabilities.

The Senate Interim Committee on Health and Human Services heard from former mental patients, their families and health care professionals during hearings last week in Arlington. More hearings are scheduled in other cities around the state.

The panel has heard from some people who defended the industry.

Need for crisis team proven by massacre

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials working to establish a first-response counseling unit say the Killeen cafeteria massacre underscored the need for a team that could be called quickly into action anywhere in the state.

Planning for a multi-agency Community Crisis Response Team began weeks ago, said Karen Kalgeris, director of the state Texas Crime Victim Clearinghouse.

"The need for an emergency response team had already been recognized, but the Killeen situation gave us more of an idea of how it would work and who we should include," Ms. Kalgeris told the Austin American-Statesman.

She said the work involves the Department of Health, the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation and the Department of Public Safety.

Volunteers from across the state went to Killeen after a gunman killed 23 people and himself Oct. 16

The task of coordinating victim's assistance efforts fell on Jill Hargrove, Bell County's victim-witness coordinator, and Michael Bruno Matarazzo, the Killeen Police Department's crime victim assistance officer.

"We had a team to work together, but how can you possibly plan for something that horrible?" asked Ms. Hargrove, who said the worst previous case she had been called to work on was a triple homicide.

"It would have been very helpful to have a crisis response team to call on, but we managed," she said.

Laureen Chernow of the DPS division of emergency management said officials are looking at "a group of state agency people to be trained and available to go immediately to the scene."

The team, which could be functional by the middle of next year, would organize counseling to victims and family members and offer information about financial aid and other available services.

Meeting emotional needs of victims of crimes or disasters is often addressed as an afterthought, said Doug Brodie, administrator for mental health services at the Central Counties Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation in Temple.

"Normally, when you have disasters, agencies like the Red Cross take care of physical needs like food, clothing and shelter and injuries," Brodie said. "But mental health needs are not usually given the same attention. I think this incident, this tragedy, points to the tremendous need for mental health relief in a situation like this."

In addition to responding immediately to major emergencies, the state response team would train community leaders to handle smaller emergencies.

Survey finds school tax rate climbs

AUSTIN (AP) — The average property tax rate in Texas school districts has risen from $1.06 per $100 valuation last school year to $1.20 this year, according to preliminary results of a survey by the state comptroller.

The increase follows a new law designed to meet a court order for the state to equalize school districts' access to education funding.

The study, conducted by the comptroller's property tax division, so far includes all but 17 of the state's 1,052 school districts, agency spokesman Andy Welch told The Associated Press on Tuesday.

Houston Independent School District, the state's largest in student enrollment, is among those that has not yet set its rate, he said.

The new law, nicknamed the "Robin Hood" plan, is designed to shift hundreds of millions of local property tax dollars from wealthier to poorer school districts within 188 new taxing regions made up of one or several counties.

In this way, property-rich districts share some benefits of their tax base with their poorer neighbors. Some state aid also is shifted from wealthier to poorer districts.

Each education region must set an effective 72-cent property tax rate per $100 property valuation — based on 1990 property values — and redistribute that revenue among its school districts.

Because of changing property values, new tax exemptions and differing collection rates, actual rates in a number of districts are higher than 72 cents.

School districts also may impose taxes on top of the minimum rate. The state guarantees them a certain amount of money for each extra penny of tax effort, up to 45 cents.

The $1.20 average rate includes 39.8 cents that is due to school district rates, with the remainder made up of the county education district rate.

A higher tax rate does not necessarily mean higher tax bills for homeowners in school districts, because of homestead exemptions approved this year by voters. A number of them may even pay less.

Tax rates in some school districts went down, Welch said, but he did not know the number of districts.

Welch said the tax information would be made available to state lawmakers, the Texas Education Agency and others.

The information is "so we can start a benchmark as to the impact that the countywide tax appraisal concept is having on funding public school education (and) the impact that it's having on local taxpayers, and to determine to whether it's fulfilling its goal of helping equalize funding for public school education across the state," Welch said.

The Texas Supreme Court has set a Nov. 19 hearing on challenges by taxpayers and property-rich school districts to the state's new school funding law.

Voter turnout may be below race track vote

AUSTIN (AP) — Turnout for next Tuesday's constitutional amendment election, where Texans will decide whether to start a lottery, may fall below the 1987 vote on legalizing race track gambling, according to election officials.

Secretary of State John Hannah has forecast a turnout of over 20 percent, which would compare with a 30.6 percent turnout for the pari-mutuel referendum.

In addition, early voting in the state's 10 largest counties has been relatively light, said Tom Harrison, who heads the secretary of state's elections division.

Through Monday night, 71,206 people — just 1.72 percent of the registered voters — had cast early ballots in the 10 largest counties.

A heavier turnout has been expected in Dallas and Harris counties, where hotly contested mayoral races are being held.

But Harris County had recorded only a 0.58 percent turnout by Monday night, and Dallas County was 2.12 percent. Bexar County led the state with 18,826 ballots cast, or 3.57 percent.

Harrison said the early numbers may not reflect a trend for the election.

"It's kind of early to tell. Historically, the last three days are when people turn out the heaviest," he said.

In addition, he noted that Houston's municipal elections have been clouded by a U.S. Justice Department ruling that the city redistricting plan violated the federal Voting Rights Act.

Thirteen proposed constitutional amendments are on the statewide ballot this year.

In addition to lottery, voters will be asked to OK $1.1 billion in bonds for new prisons and mental health facilities, approve $300 million in bonds to provide college loans, and to spend more bond proceeds on water and sewer improvements in colonias.

Although the lottery question has garnered the most publicity, there has been little active campaigning for it.

Harrison said he recalled a much more visible campaign for horse and dog race gambling in 1987.

Some election analysts say lottery backers decided to lay low after looking at opinion polls showing some two-thirds of Texans voters favoring the numbers game.

Lottery opponents have disputed such surveys and say the public deserves a full debate on the gambling question.

Sue Cox, of the Dallas-based anti-gambling group Texans Who Care, said lottery opponents expect any gap shown in polls to close by election day.

She said numerous Texas religious groups have been active in opposing the

First lady visits Dallas GOP fundraiser

ADDISON, Texas (AP) — Barbara Bush bragged on her husband, the Republican Party and "our great state of Texas" Tuesday in a speech at a Dallas County Republican Women's Clubs fundraising luncheon.

"Could anyone have guessed at the changes in our country over the last 10 months? And could anyone imagine anyone better in charge than George Bush and Jim Baker?" she asked.

She noted that her husband and Secretary of State Baker, who is a Texan, are in Spain now in an effort to help achieve peace in the Middle East.

Almost 2,000 people, most of them Republican women, attended the fundraiser at the Grand Kempinski Hotel in this north Dallas suburb. Tickets were $35, $100, $150 and $1,000 a plate.

Several times, the First Lady was interrupted by applause. But when she praised new Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas, the response was less enthusiastic.

In recounting the hectic activity at the White House in the past year, the First Lady noted the recent ceremony at which Thomas was sworn in as a justice on the Supreme Court following a combative confirmation process that included the Senate's investigation of sexual harassment charges.

"It was a very moving ceremony. We should be proud a man of his intellect and integrity is now serving on the Supreme Court," Mrs. Bush said.

Mrs. Bush praised her husband's domestic policy agenda, including improvements in efforts to improve the environment, the rights of the disabled, child care and education.

"There's lots more to come if the Democrats in Congress would spend less time trying to overcome George Bush's vetoes and more time trying to pass this needed domestic policy agenda," she said. "That's why it's important for you to elect more and more Republicans to Congress."

First lady Barbara Bush visited Dallas Tuesday to address a fundraising luncheon of the Dallas County Republican Women's Clubs.

She noted that she and her husband raised their children in Texas and that her eldest son is now raising his children in Texas.

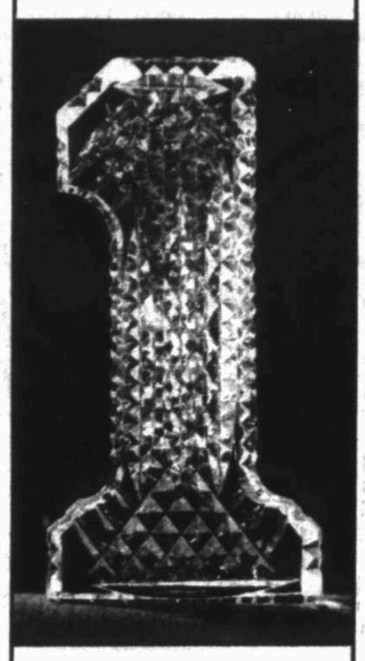

President Bush served as a congressman from Houston from 1967 to 1971, and before that he worked in West Texas as an oilman.

Among those at the head table were her son, George W. Bush; state Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry; state Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison; and Dallas County Judge Lee Jackson.

"When you're Nolan Ryan's boss and Barbara Bush's son, you get invited to lots of places," George W. Bush said after his mother ended her 12-minute speech. Bush is a co-owner of the Texas Rangers baseball franchise.

"Good job, Mom," he added. "This crowd is a real testimony to how much people really love you."

Doctor dies leaving three wives

Lewiston's bigamy came to light when his wife of 31 years, Diana B. Lewiston, and the second woman he married, Katy B. Mayer-Lewiston, both came forward to claim his body after the autopsy.

PALO ALTO, Calif. (NYT) — When Dr. Norman J. Lewiston died suddenly of a heart attack at the age of 52, Stanford University lost a nationally known expert in cystic fibrosis. And three women simultaneously lost their husband.

Now the women are trying to sort out Lewiston's tangled personal and financial affairs. And Stanford University auditors are investigating whether money he controlled may have been improperly used to support his secret life.

The university's investigation has been slowed, however, because some of his financial records are tied up in the wives' dispute.

"What we want to do is to be sure any funds we are responsible for are protected; we hope they were not compromised," said Diarmuid McGuire, director of community affairs for the Lucile Packard Children's Hospital at Stanford.

Lewiston was chief of the Allergy and Pulmonary Division at the hospital and it was there that he did pioneering work in lung transplant techniques for children suffering from cystic fibrosis. "A bunch of kids are alive today because of his work. He was not a guy you would think of in a role of husband to multiple wives."

He has been described by colleagues as a caring and dedicated doctor who worked exceedingly long hours. McGuire told the Associated Press that Lewiston was "very dedicated to his work," adding, "He was a bit shy at times but he was a very warm and loving person."

The university would not reveal how much Lewiston earned, although a spokesman said a professor of pediatrics at his rank would earn $90,000 to $100,000 a year. Lewiston also had income from his research and consulting work.

Lewiston's bigamy came to light when his wife of 31 years, Diana B. Lewiston, and the second woman he married, Katy B. Mayer-Lewiston, both came forward to claim his body after the autopsy.

Lewiston, who first came to Stanford as a resident in pediatrics from Yale New Haven Hospital in 1971, suffered a heart attack on Aug. 6 at the modest Palo Alto home he shared with Diana Lewiston and died later that day at Stanford Medical Center. A third wife in San Diego, Robyn L. Phelps, came forward shortly after.

According to records filed in probate court, he married Mrs. Lewiston in Connecticut in 1960 and made her his sole heir in his 1966 will, which he apparently never updated.

The couple had three children, all of whom are now adults. Mrs. Lewiston, now 51, has been named by the court as executor of the estate. Both she and her lawyer, F. Kingsford Jones, have declined to comment on the matter as did her children.

Mrs. Lewiston has taken legal action under California's community property laws to acquire a half interest in the house that her husband owned with Katy B. Mayer-Lewiston in Los Altos, about 10 miles south of the university and about 15 miles from his house in Palo Alto.

In papers filed with the court, Diana Lewiston said community money from their marriage was apparently diverted by her husband to acquire property in his subsequent marriages and that she would need the property to pay off his debts.

Katy Mayer-Lewiston, 44, was believed by many of Lewiston's colleagues to be his legal wife. They were married in 1985 and attended university functions and fund-raising events as a couple.

Ms. Mayer-Lewiston, who now runs a secretarial service, declined to be interviewed. She worked in the patient registration department at the children's hospital in the early 1980s, and met Lewiston then. Also at that time, she was friends with Ms. Phelps, a nurse at the hospital, said Ms. Phelps' lawyer, E. Gregory Alford.

Ms. Phelps, now 42, is now an administrator for a health agency in San Diego had known Lewiston since the 1970s and dated and married him while he was on a six-month sabbatical in San Diego two years ago. She believed he was divorced, Alford said.

After the marriage, she remained at her job in San Diego because she believed that Lewiston was planning to retire and move to that city, the lawyer said.

Alford said Ms. Phelps became suspicious last June. "She perceived irregularities," he said, and asked him to investigate. He said he quickly discovered that Lewiston had not divorced his other wives. Ms. Phelps was finalizing annulment proceedings when Lewiston died. She is making no claims on the doctor's estate.

Revelations about Lewiston's personal life have led to Stanford's audit of how he handled money donated for cystic fibrosis research. Despite persistent rumors, McGuire said, no evidence has been found to suggest that Lewiston improperly used any research money for personal expenditures.

But auditors have discovered a previously unknown bank account in Lewiston's name into which research money was deposited, McGuire said, and the investigation is continuing.

Thus far, the expenditure of $30,000 of the total of $37,800 that passed into that bank account this last fiscal year has been found to be legitimate, he said.

Auditors and lawyers for the university are considering how to gain access to records of the account for previous years. The account became part of Lewiston's estate when he died.

The audit is an additional embarrassment for Stanford, which already faces the loss of millions of dollars in federal money for improperly using research-related money to buy items like furniture and flowers for the home of its president, Donald Kennedy. Kennedy announced earlier this year that he will retire in 1992.

The research money in question did not come from public tax revenues, McQuire said, but from private donors and from fund-raising events designed to finance Lewiston's work.

He said that while Lewiston had received a salary as a consultant on two projects that were financed by the National Institutes for Health, that money was entirely controlled by the Stanford School of Medicine, where Lewiston was a professor of pediatrics.

Spyros Andreopoulos, the director of communications for Stanford Medical Center, said an audit of those funds had discovered "no irregularities."

It will probably take years for the wives to sort out Lewiston's estate. Alford said Ms. Phelps "wants to walk away with her dignity." She has, however, expressed an interest in assuming Lewiston's frequent-flyer miles, he said.

Cookies made in the shape of ghosts will add a festive touch to any Halloween gathering.

Stir up a batch of treats

Associated Press

For homemade treats, stir up a batch of Goblin's Cinnamon-Sugar Popcorn, Devilish Chocolate-Covered Apples and Pumpkin Spiced and Iced Cookies.

GOBLIN'S CINNAMON-SUGAR POPCORN

1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
3 tablespoons oil
½ cup popcorn kernels

In a small bowl, combine sugars and cinnamon. Set aside. Heat oil in a large saucepan. Add popcorn, cover, and pop completely. Turn popcorn into a large bowl, immediately add cinnamon-sugar mixture; toss. For individual servings wrap in plastic wrap and tie with a ribbon. Makes 5 to 6 cups popcorn.

(Recipe from: The Sugar Association)

DEVILISH CHOCOLATE-COVERED APPLES

6 to 7 apples
6 to 7 wooden craft sticks or chopsticks
16 ounces semisweet chocolate chips
2 teaspoons confectioners' sugar

Cut a 12x12 foot square of aluminum foil and place in the top level of refrigerator. Remove the stems from the apples; insert a stick into each apple.

Place chocolate chips in a small, deep, microwave-safe bowl. (Make sure the bowl is completely dry). Cook in the microwave oven on high (100 percent power) for 1 minute. Stir. Cook on high for another 1 to 2 minutes, or until chocolate is melted. Remove from the microwave and gradually stir in confectioners' sugar.

Twirl each apple in chocolate to cover most of the apple. Use a rubber spatula to smooth and spread the chocolate over the entire apple. Place on aluminum foil in refrigerator to harden chocolate. If serving immediately, put in freezer for about 15 minutes. (If chocolate in bowl begins to harden before all the apples have been dipped, cook again on high for 30 to 40 seconds.) Makes 6 to 7 covered apples.

NOTE: Apples can be covered with chocolate and then sprinkled with crushed walnuts. Place in the refrigerator after the apples have been covered with nuts.

(Recipe from: The Sugar Association)

PUMPKIN SPICED AND ICED COOKIES

2¼ cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
1 cup (2 sticks) butter, softened
1 cup sugar
1 16-ounce can solid pack pumpkin
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 12-ounce package (2 cups) semisweet chocolate morsels
1 cup chopped walnuts
Glaze (recipe follows)

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In a small bowl, combine flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt and pumpkin pie spice. Set aside.

In a large mixer bowl, beat butter and sugar until creamy. Add pumpkin, eggs and vanilla extract. Gradually add flour mixture. Stir in chocolate morsels and nuts. Drop cookies by level measuring tablespoonfuls onto well-greased cookie sheets. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 18 to 20 minutes or until edges are lightly browned. Let stand 5 minutes. Remove from cookie sheets; cool completely. Spread cookies with glaze. Makes about 5½ dozen cookies.

GLAZE

1 cup confectioners' sugar
1 tablespoon milk
½ teaspoon vanilla extract

Combine all ingredients in a medium bowl.

Pop a treat for ghosts, goblins

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Throwing a Halloween party for the kids? Serve these crunchy snacks-on-a-stick to your little band of ghosts and goblins. The only tricks to this recipe are the granola, cinnamon candies and dried apples. The rest is all treat.

CINNAMON-APPLE POPCORN BALLS

10 cups popped popcorn (about ½ cup unpopped)
1½ cups granola
1 cup sugar
⅔ cup water
⅓ cup red cinnamon candies
1 tablespoon vinegar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 6-ounce package dried apples, finely chopped
10 wooden sticks

Remove any unpopped kernels from popped popcorn; discard. Place popcorn in greased 17x12x2-inch baking pan; stir in granola. Place in a 300-degree oven.

For syrup, butter the sides of a 1½-quart heavy saucepan. In the saucepan combine sugar, water, candies, vinegar and salt. Cook, uncovered, over medium-high heat until boiling, stirring constantly to dissolve sugar and candies; about 6 minutes. Avoid splashing syrup on the sides of the pan.

Carefully clip a candy thermometer to the side of the pan. Cook over medium heat until the thermometer registers 270 degrees (soft-crack stage), stirring occasionally. The syrup should boil at a moderate, steady rate over the entire surface. (Reaching soft-crack stage should take 20 to 25 minutes.) Remove the pan from the heat; remove the thermometer.

Stir the dried apples into the popcorn mixture; pour the hot syrup over mixture. Stir gently to coat popcorn. Working quickly, with buttered hands, shape mixture into 10 to 12, 3-inch balls, placing a wooden stick in the center of each. Wrap the balls in clear plastic wrap. Makes 10 popcorn balls.

Frosty the Pumpkin is perfect party treat

Associated Press

Frosty the Pumpkin is sure to bring smiles to the faces of all the little witches and black cats on the prowl at your Halloween party. The cake is made with layers of chocolate and vanilla ice cream, and is topped with a whipped cream frosting. Use candies to give Frosty a happy face.

FROSTY THE PUMPKIN ICE CREAM CAKE

FOR THE CAKE:
1 pint chocolate ice cream, softened
⅔ cup strawberry preserves
1 pint vanilla ice cream, softened
FOR THE WHIPPED CREAM FROSTING:
1 cup heavy whipping cream
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
3 drops green food coloring
12 drops yellow food coloring
6 drops red food coloring
FOR THE DECORATIONS:
1 4x1½-inch golden sponge snack cake with creamy filling
2 dark chocolate wafer thin mints, cut into triangles
1 red licorice shoelace
3 pieces candy corn

In an 8-inch round cake pan, spoon chocolate ice cream. Press to form an even layer. Spread with strawberry preserves. Repeat with vanilla ice cream, cover with foil. Freeze until firm, about 1 hour. Meanwhile, prepared Whipped Cream Frosting.

To prepare Whipped Cream Frosting: In a small bowl using an electric mixer, beat the 1 cup heavy cream, 2 tablespoons sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla until soft peaks form. Remove ½ cup; place in another small bowl. Stir in green food coloring, set aside. To remaining whipped cream, stir in yellow and red food colorings until blended to make orange frosting.

Remove cake from freezer. Using a metal spatula, loosen edges. Dip pan into warm water for about 10 seconds; unmold onto a serving platter or board. Cut 1 inch from snack cake. Place at the top of the ice cream cake to form a stem. Frost stem with reserved green frosting. Frost pumpkin with reserved orange frosting. With a knife, make four curved lines from stem to center bottom of pumpkin to resemble pumpkin ridges. Use mint triangles for eyes and nose; form mouth with licorice shoelace, use candy corn for teeth. Serve immediately or freeze.

Recent taste test proves 'the more (tasters), the merrier'

By Linda Anderson

This week's taste test turned out to be a little bit more special than usual — a group of women from University Graduate Women Pot Pourri Group volunteered to be taste-testers. Needless to say, I was extremely flattered that they did so. There have been times when I've practically had to bribe my children to do the tasting, so it was a new experience for me to have volunteers.

Anderson

We all got together and actually tasted six or seven different products — many of them with the words "healthy" in their titles — but I can't fit all of them in one column. We tried Nutri-Grain cereal bars (apple filled), Health Valley Apple Bakes fruit bars, Nature Valley granola bars, Health Valley Fat-Free raisin-oatmeal cookies and Pepperidge Farm Wholesome Choice cookies, but the ones that got the most comment were Healthy Choice Breakfast banana nut muffins and Health Valley banana multi-bran muffins.

Healthy Choice is a fairly new brand of "healthy" foods (mostly frozen dinners and entrees), and evidently the company's line of frozen breakfast foods is its newest. Health Valley's "healthy" foods remind me a lot of the foods you can buy in health food stores, even though they are available in supermarkets.

Healthy Choice banana nut muffins are advertised on the label as being "low fat," containing "no cholesterol," having "low sodium" and being a "significant source of fiber" (whatever that means). Each muffin in the 10-ounce, four-muffin box contains 180 calories, 6 grams of fat (that's 54 calories from fat, which is about 30 percent calories from fat), no cholesterol and 80 mg sodium, according to the nutrition label. A diagram on the back of the box shows each muffin contains 1 percent of its calories from saturated fat (the rest of the fat was polyunsaturated) and 4 percent of the recommended maximum daily amount of sodium (2,400 mg per day recommended maximum).

Also, label advertising wants us to know that "Healthy Choice Banana Nut Muffins are a delicious addition to your morning menu that can be used as part of a healthy diet plan."

Health Valley banana muffins have the claim FAT-FREE (in all capital letters even) as part of the name. Each muffin (there are six muffins in each box) contains 130 calories, less than 1 gram of fat and 110 mg sodium, according to nutrition information. But the ingredients label is a health-food fan's dream: organic 100 percent whole wheat flour, 100 percent whole grain and fiber blend (and eight or nine other places on the label where the word "organic" is used), concentrated apple-pineapple juice, pure honey (not just honey, mind you, but pure honey), bananas, dates and a lot of other healthy-sounding stuff.

Health Valley's label advertising goes like this: "Why These Health Valley Muffins Are Better for You" (although they don't specify, better than what) — "These muffins promote good health because they help you fulfill the published Dietary Guidelines of the American Heart Association and the National Cancer Institute. They're made the healthy way, so they're fat-free, cholesterol-free, high in fiber, rich in complex carbohydrates, and they contain no refined sugar or added salt. By following the Dietary Guidelines, you can use these muffins as part of a healthy diet that helps reduce your risk of heart disease and certain forms of cancer."

Well, OK, sounded wonderful — unfortunately, the actual muffins didn't taste as good as they sounded. And what good is something healthy if it tastes bad and people don't want to eat it.

Some of the women said these muffins were OK, but many of them didn't like them at all. One women, after tasting Health Valley muffins and beginning to write down her comments, turned to her friend and said, "How do you spell 'bleech'?"

The Healthy Choice muffins fared better in the taste test. More of the women prefered them, but some said they thought the muffins were too dry and that they wouldn't buy them.

But most of the women, no matter which muffin they liked or didn't like, agreed that both of these low-fat, low-cholesterol muffins would probably taste better with some high-fat, high-cholesterol, real dairy butter melted in them...

New sausage products are 'healthy'

NEW YORK (AP) — Aidells Sausage Co. of San Francisco has two new products: Fresh Chicken and Turkey Sausage and Fresh Duck and Turkey Sausage with Dried Sour Cherries. Both are free of nitrates, chemicals and preservatives.

The chicken and turkey sausage is blended with sun-dried tomatoes, garlic and basil. The sausage is a very lean and chunky-textured link, containing about 10 to 12 percent fat. It is designed to be served with pasta.

The duck and turkey sausage can be served as a main dish, in a salad with roasted walnuts and raspberry vinegar, or with tangy sauerkraut.

Soups are culinary blessing

Associated Press

In this season of feasting and giving thanks, we count soups high among our culinary blessings. A corn-rich bisque with plumped oysters opens our Thanksgiving meal on a note of quiet elegance.

After the feast — these are the soupmakers' glory days — leftovers find their best destiny in such inspired combinations as Turkey, Tortellini and Watercress Soup.

Chase the chill from a winter day with Turkey, Tortellini and Watercress soup, a delicious meal that can be made from turkey leftover and convenient cheese-filled pasta.

CORN AND OYSTER BISQUE

5 ears of fresh or frozen corn
3 cups water
1 bay leaf
18 oysters, shucked, reserving the liquid (method below)
2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon hot pepper sauce, or to taste
Whole or minced fresh parsley leaves for garnish
Paprika for garnish

Cut the corn kernels from the cobs on a work surface, transfer them to a large saucepan, and with the back of a knife, scrape the milk from the cobs into the pan. Cut each cob into three pieces and add them to the pan. Add the water and the bay leaf and simmer the mixture, covered, for 30 minutes. Discard the cobs and the bay leaf.

In a blender, puree the corn mixture in batches. Strain the puree through a fine sieve into a bowl, pressing hard on the solids. Transfer the puree to the saucepan and pour the reserved oyster liquid through a fine sieve into the pan. Add the milk and hot pepper sauce; salt to taste. Heat the mixture over moderate heat, stirring, being careful not to let it boil, until it is hot.

Add the oysters and heat the soup, stirring, being careful not to let it boil, for 3 minutes, or until the edges of the oysters curl. Ladle the soup into heated shallow bowls and garnish each serving with some of the parsley and the paprika. Makes about 7½ cups, serving six as a main course.

NOTE: To shuck oysters, scrub the oysters thoroughly with a stiff brush under cold running water. Hold each oyster flat side up on a work surface with the hinged end away from you. Insert an oyster knife between the shells at the hinged end, twisting the knife to pop open the shell, and slide the blade against the flat upper shell to cut the large muscle and free the upper shell. If the shell crumbles and cannot be opened at the hinge, insert the knife between the shells at the curved end of the oyster, pry the shell open and sever the large muscle. Break off and discard the upper shell and slide the knife under the oyster to release it from the bottom shell.

TURKEY, TORTELLINI AND WATERCRESS SOUP

16 cups (4 quarts) water
Carcass of a turkey, broken into large pieces
1 carrot, sliced
2 ribs of celery
1 bay leaf
1 onion, quartered
½ teaspoon dried thyme
3 parsley sprigs
1 teaspoon fennel seeds
½ pound fresh cheese tortellini
4 cups coarsely chopped rinsed watercress

In a large kettle combine the water, the turkey carcass, carrot, celery, bay leaf, onion, thyme, parsley and fennel seeds. Simmer the mixture, uncovered, for 1½ hours. Strain the stock through a large sieve into a large bowl, transfer the turkey meat to a cutting board, discarding the bones and remaining solids, and chop it fine.

Transfer the strained stock to the kettle, add the turkey meat and bring the liquid to a boil. Add the tortellini; salt and pepper to taste. Simmer the mixture until the tortellini are just tender. Add the watercress and simmer the soup for 1 minute. Makes about 12 cups, serving 6 as a main course or 8 to 10 as a first course.

DEAR ABBY

Couple's wedding video may bring gloom to bridegroom

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently I attended the wedding of a good friend. Because I am a photojournalist by trade, she asked me if I would videotape her wedding, and I gladly agreed.

Van Buren

The wedding was beautiful and the reception went smoothly until the bride's father stopped the band to make an announcement. He said he had "lost" his wallet, which contained $1,500 with which he had intended to pay the band. He said if anyone found the money, it could be returned simply by leaving it in the men's lavatory, and no questions would be asked. No money was turned in.

The following day, I looked over the footage I had taken at the reception and was astonished to see that while filming a couple's conversation, in the background was the GROOM removing a wallet from the evening coat of the bride's father!

Now I don't know what to do. The couple is away for two weeks on their honeymoon. Should I tell my friend? Should I tell her father? Or should I just keep it to myself?

For the bride's sake, please do not use my name or address. — NO NAME, NO ADDRESS

DEAR NO NAME: Call the bride's father and invite him to view the lovely video you took of his daughter's wedding — and you won't have to tell anybody anything.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's brother's wife continuously flirts with my husband. She finds excuses to hug on him or be in his face.

I have spoken to my husband and asked him not to respond to her flirtations. He has backed off a little, but says he can't help it if she is always coming up to him.

Would I be wrong to speak to my sister-in-law about this and ask her to kindly stay out of my husband's face? — JEALOUS IN RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR JEALOUS: Your husband is a grown man and a free agent. If he wanted to discourage the advances of his sister-in-law, he could easily do it with a few well-chosen words spoken in earnest.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I don't know how to solve. Many years ago, my husband and I became good friends with another couple. We have both had families since then, and have exchanged birthday and Christmas gifts.

In recent years we have grown apart, both in friendship and in miles. I would like to stop the exchange of gifts, as our friendship has definitely gone by the wayside, but I don't know how to approach the couple with this suggestion without offending them.

Any help you can give me would be greatly appreciated. — NOT CHEAP, JUST PRACTICAL

DEAR PRACTICAL: Be absolutely up front with this couple. Come Thanksgiving, write a note to say that you are thankful for friends with whom you can be completely honest, then suggest: "From now on, let us exchange only Christmas cards — no gifts." I assure you they will not be offended. Trust me.

UTEP gets probation

EL PASO (AP) — The NCAA on Tuesday placed Texas-El Paso's men's basketball program on three years' probation and limited its scholarships and campus visits after uncovering several wide-ranging rules violations.

The NCAA slashed the number of school-paid visits by recruits to campus from 15 to eight. In 1992-93 and 1993-94, the Miners can give only two new scholarships, but may continue honoring those already awarded.

The Miners weren't, however, banned from any post-season games.

The penalties were relatively lenient because the National Collegiate Athletic Association felt the school took the lead in correcting the violations, it said in a report released Tuesday.

NBA ends preseason

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Scottie Pippen scored 34 points and Michael Jordan had 21 Tuesday night as the Chicago Bulls eased past the Miami Heat 124-118 in the annual Hall of Fame game.

The NBA champions won this year's final exhibition game and finished 8-1 in the preseason. The regular season begins Friday night with Chicago at home against Philadelphia.

Chicago erased a 30-20 deficit in the last 26 seconds of the first quarter on a steal and layup by Cliff Levingston and a steal, rebound and two layups by Jordan.

Magic ails

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Magic Johnson is likely to miss the Los Angeles Lakers' first two games of the season because of an influenza virus, the team said Tuesday.

The Lakers open Friday night at the Houston Rockets and are at the Dallas Mavericks on Saturday night.

"Magic is suffering from dehydration and fatigue caused by an influenza virus," said Lakers' spokesman John Black. "He definitely won't practice all week and is listed as doubtful for Friday night."

Black said Johnson will probalby make his 1991-92 debut in the Lakers' home opener Tuesday against the Los Angeles Clippers.

Johnson missed the Lakers' final two preseason games because of his illness.

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference game Nov. 9 between Arkansas and Texas Tech at Lubbock's Jones Stadium will be regionally televised by Raycom at noon CST.

Parade honors champs

■ Minnesota fans warm in the bask of their world championship by fittingly giving their Twins two parades.

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Enduring wintry weather to cheer their boys of summer, an estimated 240,000 fans lined Twin Cities streets Tuesday as the world champion Minnesota Twins paraded through confetti and streamers to a rally in their home sweet Metrodome.

A cavalcade of pickup trucks escorted by police on foot carried Twins stars Jack Morris, Kirby Puckett, manager Tom Kelly and the rest of the team on two 90-minute parades in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Many in the sidewalk crowds waved the white Homer Hankies that have symbolized the Twins' championship drives. The procession came to a halt at times as fans surged into the streets to exchange handshakes and "high fives" with players.

At the Dome, players got a chance to thank the fans for making the home-field advantage almost insurmountable. The Twins won all four home World Series games — just as they did four years ago when they won their last championship.

"I think that most of us love you guys as much as you love us," said Kent Hrbek, a native of nearby Bloomington and one of seven holdovers from the Twins' 1987 championship team.

Atlantans hail Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Bravesmania exploded on Tuesday as more than half a million fans jammed city streets to welcome home their Braves under an October blue sky split by red tomahawks and white ticker tape.

The dream of winning the World Series died in Minneapolis, but the magic lived on as fans saluted their team with a two-hour parade, featuring 16 marching bands, 3,500 people, floats with baseball motif, tomahawk brigades, tom-tom teams, and a baseball-bat drill team.

"Justice has been served. Somebody had to lose," read one hand-lettered sign.

"Forget the trophy. You won a place in our hearts," read another.

"Need two tickets for Game 8," read a sign held by Jeannie Layson, a governor's office employee watching the parade.

Atlanta police estimated the crowd at more than 500,000.

Tech's Hall nabs SWC honors

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — If Texas Tech backup quarterback Robert Hall keeps it up, coach Spike Dykes will have a quarterback controversy on his hands before the end of the season.

Starting his second consecutive game for injured starter Jamie Gill, Hall led a spectacular air and ground attack in Tech's 40-20 blowout of Rice Saturday.

For his effort, he was named Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week.

Hall hit Rodney Blackshear with a 33-yard touchdown pass on the second play of the game and scrambled 70 yards untouched through the heart of Rice's defense to round out the scoring.

Hall finished with three touchdown passes, two rushing scores and a school-record 453 yards of offense. Hall's production replaced Billy Joe Tolliver's mark of 446 yards set against Oklahoma State in 1988.

Jason Atkinson, a sophomore linebacker at Texas A&M, earned the AP's honor as SWC Defensive Player.

MHS spikers clinch

Staff Report

ABILENE — The Midland High Lady Bulldogs clinched a bi-district volleyball playoff berth Tuesday night, following a three game victory over the Abilene Cooper Lady Cougars.

The Lady 'Dawgs ran their District 4-5A mark to 9-3 with an 11-15, 15-8, 15-5 win over Cooper.

Midland High, runner-up in 4-5A, will take on District 3-5A champion Amarillo Tascosa in the first round of the playoffs. A site, date and time has not been determined, however the bi-district round of the playoffs begins next week.

■ Abilene High drops Midland Lee/2C

Tascosa, with one district game remaining (against 1-8 Lubbock Monterey Saturday), is 24-6 overall, 9-0 in district.

District 4-5A champion Abilene High will meet the 3-5A runner-up. Should Amarillo High win Saturday, the Lady Sandies will be the second-place team in 3-5A.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

4-5A: Sound and fury signify nothing

Wow! That was sweet and quick.

Eight weeks of the football season is in the books and so are all three of the league's playoff berths. In fact, there is so little left to decide that the final two weeks of the season are going to be like a prep playoff tune-up course for Odessa Permian, San Angelo and Midland Lee.

Williamson

Oh yes, there is still a matter of the district championship left to be determined, but the importance of that meager trophy went down the tubes in 1982 when two teams were allowed to go to the playoffs. Now we have three teams, and enrollment — not titles — plays a greater role in determining your playoff fate.

For all practical purposes, the district championship is only a benefit to fall back on if you lose early in the playoffs. After all, there has to be some bragging rights left for the fallen.

But for the record, there is still a slight chance of a three-way tie for the so-called "district championship." San Angelo hosts Permian Friday and the Bobcats then travel to Midland the next week to decide such matters. A San Angelo victory over Permian and a loss to Lee would make all three teams co-champions.

Even if that happens, it won't effect the playoff status of any of the three teams. San Angelo is already penciled into the Big School bracket — because of enrollment — while Permian and Lee will venture into the Small School bracket. Even in a three-way tie, Permian will be the top-seeded 4-5A team in the Small School bracket by virtue of its win over Lee in regular season play.

There will naturally be some high-classed chest beating going on in the next two weeks since all three playoffs teams will be going against each other. But it represents no more than an Antarctic walrus going through its mating ritual of dominance in an effort to rule the herd. Tusk-to-tusk, so to speak.

This three-team to the playoff debacle of the University Interscholastic League was supposed to create more excitement. Well, as far as District 4-5A is concerned, we can't give them that, but we can say they have succeeded in confusing the public. If I get one more call asking me to explain why Permian and Lee have to play in the Small School bracket, my ear drum may explode.

People naturally feel that records should count for something and this enrollment clause has them grasping for answers to questions they don't understand. Please don't tell anyone that the 1990 Big School champion had a smaller enrollment than the Small School champion. There is enough confusion in our lives.

As I see it, there is only one game of importance left in the league. That is this Friday in Memorial Stadium where Midland High will host Abilene Cooper. MHS is 0-8 on the season and this is the final game in which the Bulldogs can avoid becoming the first team in MHS history to lose every game.

Some people may ask, "What is the difference between 0-9 and 1-8." The answer is simple — a victory. It is so much better to have one win than to go winless. Ask Cooper or Abilene High of last year. Each won only one game, but they did avoid the tag of being winless. And no one with a competitive spirit wants to be the first team in the history of the school to go winless.

It's been a long season for the Bulldogs, but MHS could get excited about this game. MHS played Permian to within 25 points last week, the smallest Mojo margin in district this year and scored the first two offensive touchdowns by a district team against Permian.

If there is any bite left in regular season play, it will come from the Bulldogs. The others? Well, it's the playoffs that count now — despite the chest beating.

Terry Williamson is sports editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Lee closes home slate with loss

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Abilene High's mission is almost a fait accompli.

With the grace of a Mack truck, or a Mike Tyson roaring past Michael Spinks, the Lady Eagles have, one by one, set down each and every volleyball team in District 4-5A.

Tuesday night it was Midland Lee's turn.

The Lady Eagles defeated the Lady Rebels, 15-7, 15-3, marking the 10th time in 11 district matches AHS has won a match in just two games. Only once — against San Angelo Central — were the Lady Eagles forced into a third game.

Like a swift kick in the stomach, the Lady Rebs had all the air drained from them in Tuesday's second game. AHS was up 8-0 before the Lady Rebels could even manage a side-out and a chance at a serve of their own. Lee was unable to put a point on the board during the second game until AHS held a 10-0 advantage.

But in the first game, the Lady Rebels played spirited, complete with their very own string of five consecutive points. Down 7-1, Lee climbed back to within one, to trail 7-6. The comeback was made possible by both the offensive and defensive play of juniors Kim Blackburn and Carrie Zamora, ill though she was.

"The Lee girls have improved," AHS coach Debbie Yeager said. "They will with every game as long as they have Coach (Anita) Corder and her staff's experience."

Yeager said her team's offense was not completely untracked in the first game "after stepping off the bus" following a two hour trip.

But, as fate would have it, Tamara Jones and Regina Huddleston, two names certain to receive post-season accolades, came alive. Huddleston, with her trademark spikes, and Jones with her all-around play from net to serving to spiking, are the AHS leaders. Still, as stand-out as those individual efforts were, Yeager said it was the sum of the team's effort that led them to victory.

Corder, Lee's head coach, was not dissatisfied with her team's effort.

"We played well in spurts," Corder said. "I tried to tell them between games that even Abilene High is going to give you an opportunity to score some points. We almost tied it up there at 6-7.

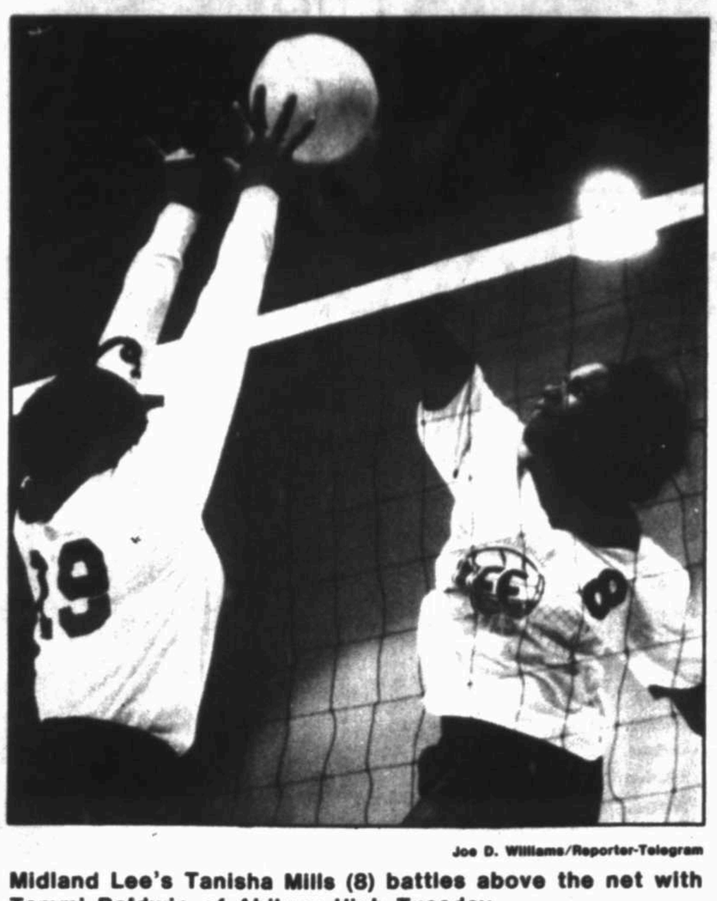

"(Abilene High) is so quick and so smart. My team, they do everything they can do, and you can only go on for so long.

"Kim (Blackburn) did a good job, and that was to get No. 2 (Thelma McDow), and to be a big blocker, and that's what she did."

Lee (12-16 overall, 3-8 in district) ends the season Saturday at San Angelo. Junior varsity action begins at 1:15 p.m. The varsity will follow at approximately 2:30 p.m.

Abilene High, with a home date left Saturday against district doormat Odessa High, is bound for the playoffs. The Lady Eagles will meet the District 3-5A runner-up. With one game left, Amarillo High is is the favorite to grab the second place spot in the Panhandle district.

In junior varsity action Tuesday, the Lee JV defeated AHS 15-13, 17-15.

McKinney's passing game earns accolades

Associated Press

Denison helped inspire McKinney's new pass-oriented offense. Now the Yellowjackets have felt the sting of their creation.

McKinney's Max Knake completed 24 of 40 passes for 490 yards and six touchdowns last week, leading the Lions in a 62-17 whipping of Denison. Phillip Evans caught 11 of Knake's passes, including three for touchdowns, for 232 yards. The effort earned them mention in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

McKinney coach Ron Poe said he decided to change to a one-back offense after losing all-state running back James Thornton. He also was spurred by a late-season loss to Denison, which kept the Lions out of the playoffs despite their 8-2 record.

"I'll tell you what influenced it — and this is a compliment to (Denison coach) Marty Criswell — and that's that we took the best running back in the state up there and we couldn't beat them," Poe said. "So we decided we had to throw the ball."

Poe said the new scheme — similar to a Run-and-Shoot — was built around Knake, a 6-2, 192-pound quarterback who passed for 451 yards last year. Last week's blowout, which included touchdowns of 24, 21, 29, 20, 8 and 6 yards, boosted his season total to 1,756 yards and 20 touchdowns.

"They covered us well and it was a lot of man coverage," Poe said. "Our receivers just got a step on them and Max threw it right to that spot."

Also receiving honor roll mention was Tom Bean quarterback Adam Ball, who completed 24 of 42 passes for 368 yards and three touchdowns in a 34-7 victory over Whitewright. Ball also ran for a 10-yard touchdown.

Tom Bean coach David Horner said Ball is the heart of the Cats' no-huddle Run-and-Shoot.

"He's the hub of it because we do a lot of reading," Horner said. "He's an excellent sprint-out quarterback. He's real accurate on the run when some quarterbacks aren't."

The 6-0, 140-pounder has completed 171 of 339 passes for 2,130 yards and 19 touchdowns. He also has scored 10 of the Cats' 13 rushing touchdowns.

Sweetwater's James Moore did it all in a 35-7 victory over Big Spring. Moore, a reserve tailback starting as a receiver, caught a 21-yard touchdown pass, threw a 30-yard score and returned a punt 61 yards for a touchdown.

In other outstanding performances:

—Jason Ditmore of Gorman rushed for 247 yards on 32 carries in a 27-19 victory over Rising Star.

—San Angelo Central's Shea Morenz completed 17 of 30 passes for 344 yards and three touchdowns in a 34-0 victory over Abilene Cooper. He was intercepted twice.

—Erik Hartman of Odessa completed 22 of 27 passes for 301 yards and a 61-yard touchdown, but the Bronchos lost 39-14 to Midland Lee.

—Mount Pleasant defensive back Robby Hampton intercepted two passes and recovered two fumbles, helping his team to a 30-20 victory over Liberty-Eylau.

—Arturo Aviles carried 28 times for 220 yards and five touchdowns in a 49-0 victory over Hart. Aviles scored on runs of 1, 8, 20, 1 and 32 yards.

—Leo Brown of Hereford carried 33 times for 217 yards and a 2-yard score in a 20-9 victory over Dumas.

—Bernasko Reddic carried 25 times for 201 yards and two scores, but White Oak lost to Rusk, 32-29. Reddic has rushed for 1,557 yards.

—Victor Gray of Palestine completed 16 of 34 passes for 322 yards and a touchdown in a 30-3 victory over Whitehouse.

MC: Injuries hamper both Chaparrals and Wranglers

(From 1C)

Not that these injuries in any form or fashion affect the way MC's promising young prospects continue to bid farewell in short order to their counterparts from Odessa College.

Hurting or not, the MC men's tennis team defeated OC Tuesday afternoon, 9-0, despite the absence of two injured frontline players, and a third who played hurt.

"We've got to fight a little bit more, but that's probably to our advantage," said Williams, before adding the injury situation had never reached this level in his previous eight seasons at MC.

Uncharacteristically, and what had MC fighting a little harder than usual, was the fact that four of the six singles matches went to three sets. Of the four that went the distance, three of the matches saw MC players lose the first set.

Playing the No. 3 spot, Robin van Beveren lost the opening set, 6-7, before returning triumphantly in the last two, 6-2, 6-2, for the win.

In the No. 5 position, Tom Erik Brun lost the opener, 4-6, before winning the closers 6-1, 6-0, and at No. 6, freshman Steve Cox defeated Kevin McCullum, 6-7, 6-0, 6-2.

David Draper, MC's No. 1 player, and Fadel Berthe, at No. 4 and the brother of women's No. 1 player Myriam Berthe, both won in straight sets.

"We've been doing everything right," Williams said of his plethora of mysterious ailments. "We're stretching, working with weights, running, playing tennis and getting hurt. But Rod Laver once said if you're going to play tennis, the best conditioning you can have is to just go out and play it."

Standing on the sidelines watching MC's win was Toby Curtis, who is nursing a sore thigh, and Berhe Serekebrhan who continues to limp on a bad knee.

Cox, at the No. 6 spot, won his match despite having not fully recuperated from a broken racket hand. Cox said after the match that he had difficulty lifting some of his backhand shots over the net.

Curtis was rested mainly for the purpose of going into this weekend's ITCA Rolex National Junior College Championships in Corpus Christi at full strength.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Deep-six certain prejudices and wonderful things will happen. New friendships enrich your life. Watch your career take off like a rocket in December! New professional and personal alliances help you start 1992 on the right foot. Heed your financial instincts in the spring. Travel for both business and pleasure next summer. Follow the example of a successful relative.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: President John Adams, dramatist Richard Sheridan, actor Harry Hamlin, singer Grace Slick.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone could try to stir up trouble at work. Keep a low profile around difficult associates. Romance is worth taking a chance. Secret financial dealings could bring big profits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): People will seek your skill and savvy today; help out wherever possible. A group gathering presents you with an opportunity to shine. Higher-ups are more approachable than in the recent past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are in a powerful phase, busy building a bright future. Listen and learn when influential people do the talking. Be willing to extend yourself to help someone in need.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Gaining the support of influential people will help you pursue your interests. Instant rapport develops between you and someone who works behind the scenes. Do not rock the financial boat.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A favorable time for pinning down things at work — duties, rewards and routines. A long-range financial venture looks very promising. Avoid putting all of your eggs in one basket. Pursue romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Go all out to widen your circle of acquaintances now. You can set a new record in terms of career and social growth. People at a distance play an important role in your finances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Clarify your financial aims. Conservative values will stand you in good stead. Do not be swept away by glamorous notions. A loved one wants to share an important secret. Delightful surprises await you!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The emphasis today is on sharing both possessions and knowledge. Be clear about what you want from other people. A loved one's impetuous actions could threaten your peace of mind. Speak up!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cultivate people of high rank or great wealth — you could be looking at a new world of prosperity. Share the limelight with those who deserve it. A promise will be kept.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If communication lines break down, wait until another day. Take a long look at what you want and where you are going. Loved ones are very supportive when you explain your goals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Positive financial signs prevail as the month ends. Polish your job performance and influential people will see you in a new light. A promotion is possible if you play your cards right.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Focus on recent progress in a partnership; perhaps you can resolve some old grievances. Legal matters could require expert advice. March in unison with your allies. A small gift helps romance along.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	5 ◇	Dbl	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

The one facet of bridge you won't find written about too often is how to bid a highly distributional hand. There's good reason for this—there's no "correct" way to handle a freak! Advice will vary from bid all you can at once to lie in wait and see what develops.

This hand was dealt in the expert game at the YMPL Bridge Group in New York. Sitting West was one of the world's great players, Bob Hamman of Dallas. He chose to open five diamonds, well aware that, as a result, East-West might miss a laydown spade slam. North, Israeli internationalist Sam Lev, doubled and East, New York expert Joel Friedberg, passed. Sitting South was your reporter, who deemed five hearts to be the normal action. North raised to slam with some degree of confidence and East, with reasonable defense because of the two kings behind the strong hand, elected to pass.

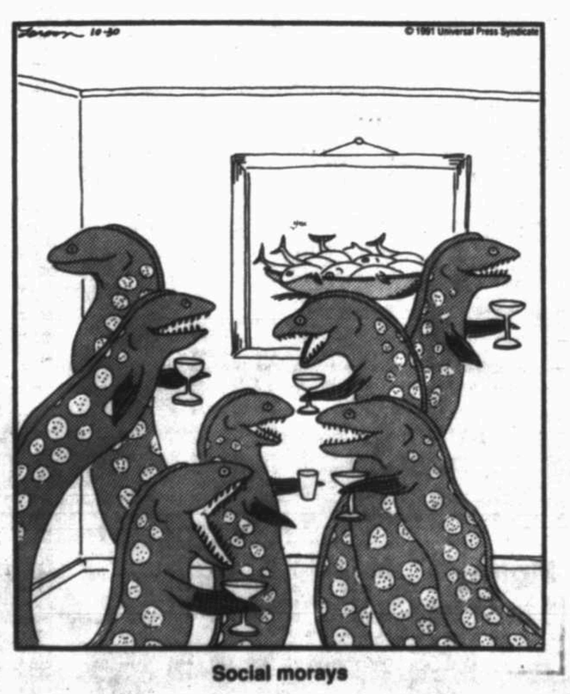

West led the king of diamonds and the play was soon over. There was no way to prevent East from scoring both the king of trumps and the king of clubs—down one. To say that North was sorely disappointed would be an understatement.

The post-mortem revealed the fact the hand actually belonged to East-West. Despite North's plethora of high cards, there was no way to stop West from gathering 12 tricks at a diamond contract!

Even if North is inspired enough to underlead the ace-king of spades, so South can win the first trick and return a trump, West makes the rest. There are still three trumps in dummy for three spade ruffs, and that sets up a long spade in declarer's hand for the 12th trick. Now there's something for point-count addicts to put in their pipes and smoke.

'Mayflower Madam' agrees to pen adult advice column

NEW YORK — Sydney Biddle Barrows, a member of a socialite family who ran an exclusive call-girl service and then wrote a book about it, has turned advice columnist.

Barrows has signed a one-year contract with the Manhattan Spirit, a giveaway weekly, to write a general advice column called "Just Between Us," says executive editor Tom Allon.

"She is a real New York character that many people know and admire in sort of a whimsical way," he said. "And I think a lot of people will pick up our paper (to read) the column."

As for her qualifications to be an advice columnist, Allon says, "We think she has some insights into questions our readers might have. She has written two best-selling books on etiquette and romance."

"Mayflower Manners: Etiquette for Consenting Adults" includes advice on how to ask a date about AIDS and when it's OK to make a pass. "Mayflower Madam: The Secret Life Of Sydney Biddle Barrows" is her story about running the high-class prostitution service.

In 1985, Barrows pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of promoting prostitution and paid a $5,000 fine. She was dubbed the Mayflower Madam because she is the descendant of Pilgrim stock.

Allon says Barrows' first column, which will appear Wednesday, will answer the questions: "Are all women gold diggers? "How safe are swingers' clubs?" and "How to deal with a friend who is constantly late?"

He declined to disclose how much Barrows will be paid.

NEW YORK — When Katey Sagal returns to the set of "Married ... With Children" after recuperating from a miscarriage, her character's pregnancy will be explained away as a dream, a newspaper reported.

Sagal

Sagal's pregnancy had been written into the show before she had a miscarriage Oct. 14.

Fox Broadcasting and Columbia Pictures Television wouldn't comment on the unattributed report in USA Today.

The newspaper said Sagal's next episode will air Nov. 24.

NEW ORLEANS — Gothic met grit when the rock band L.A. Guns showed up at the mansion of vampire chronicler Anne Rice to thank her for her dark inspirations.

The Los Angeles-based band on Monday presented the novelist with a three gold-record set, including their latest album, "Hollywood Vampires," which refers indirectly to Rice's best-selling vampire tales.

"Her books are so intense, you just become part of them," said guitarist Tracii Guns.

Guns said he approaches music with the same darkness and creepiness he finds in Rice's works. Guns founded the band in 1987, after leaving his other band, Guns N' Roses.

So would Rice pop on an L.A. Guns compact disc?

"Oh, they're wonderful," said Rice. "Their music is real stylish with a sinister note."

Rice's fourth vampire novel, tentatively titled "The Body Thief," is scheduled for release next fall. She said a sequel to her latest novel, "The Witching Hour," is in the works.

NEW YORK — Harold Brodkey, a writer best-known for NOT publishing his first novel, has finally delivered.

His mammoth 836-page book, "The Runaway Soul," will be published Nov. 14, 27 years after he signed a contract to write a book with the working title "A Party of Animals."

Brodkey, 61, a staff writer at The New Yorker magazine, describes it in a New York Times interview as "a double Bildungsroman involving a brother and sister in a universe of original sin," using the German term for a novel about moral and psychological growth. "It's about what life is like now."

"Everybody has stuff they haven't written about; everybody has an unfinished novel, or a dream they haven't finished interpreting, and it's something on which they put a profound weight. And somehow this got transferred to me," he says.

BOSTON — After their bitter battle to be governor, the talk-show rematch was pretty tame. William F. Weld was courteous and John Silber was low-keyed.

Silber, president of Boston University, invited the Republican governor to be his first guest Monday night on his monthly talk show on WBZ-AM radio. The two had sparred frequently during the 1990 governor's race.

Silber asked Weld about his views on teacher accountability, educational funding and school-based management.

He gently chided Weld for continuing to call him Dr. Silber and threatened to give him an honorary degree so he could call him doctor from now on. Weld responded that it would be "John and Bill then."

Cap Rock Electric switches suppliers

■ For the first time in its history, Cap Rock Electric has agreed to purchase power from a source other than TU Electric.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

For the first time in its history, Cap Rock Electric of Stanton, will purchase power from a supplier other than Texas Utilities Electric Co.

In a press announcement Tuesday, Steven E. Collier, director of power supply, said Cap Rock had signed an agreement with Amarillo-based, Southwestern Public Service Co. to provide wholesale power to half of its system in 1993 and eventually to supply 100 percent of Cap Rock power needs.

Collier said Cap Rock constantly seeks wholesale power from many sources, searching for the best deal for its customers. "Our contact with SPS will result in lower power supply costs and more flexibility for the future," he added.

The agreement comes following a long standing disagreement with TU Electric over wholesale power rates. At a press briefing in 1990, Cap Rock claimed that in some cases it was being charged wholesale rates higher than TU retail rates.

Peggy Luxton, communications advisor for Cap Rock, said TU Electric was not only Cap Rock's only source of wholesale power, but was its major retail competitor as well. TU Electric totally surrounds the Cap Rock system which has its largest concentration of customers in the rural area surrounding Midland, including Greenwood area and at Gardendale in Ector County.

"Cap Rock has been working for sometime to secure an alternative source of power for its customers," said Luxton.

She said SPS will provide power at standard wholesale rates to Cap Rock and has agreed to work with the company on demand-side management options to reduce wholesale power cost by as much as one-third over the next two decades.She noted that the savings will enable Cap Rock to make substantial improvement to transmission services.

Cap Rock's move to SPS comes following a 1990 agreement with TU to withdraw from a rate increase suit involving Comanche Creek if Cap Rock would be allowed to seek power service elsewhere. The 20-year agreement with SPS will permit Cap Rock to terminate service after 20 years or to convert to partial requirements.

"This assures our customers of long-term, stable, competitively priced power into the next century," said David Pruitt, Cap Rock Chief Executive Officer.

At peak loads the Cap Rock system supplies 100 megawatts of power to 20,000 customers in a 2,000 square-mile area of West Texas. Counties served include parts of Midland, Martin, Andrews, Borden, Dawson, Ector, Fisher, Glasscock, Howard, Irion, Mitchell, Nolan, Reagan, Scurry, Sterling, Tom Green and Upton. With the merger of Lone Wolf Electric early this year the Cap Rock service area grew to approximately the size of Maryland.

Upon completion of transmission lines to connect the two systems, Cap Rock will take delivery at two points. One will be located near the community of Vealmoor, north of Big Spring and the other near Midland.

In addition to changing suppliers Cap Rock will also change affiliates, moving from Electric Reliability Council of Texas (ERCOT) to the Southwest Power Pool.

Amarillo-based SPS serves 350,000 customers in the South Plains and Panhandle area of Texas.

Oil spill response unveiled

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and officials from Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida announced plans Tuesday to develop a unified response to major oil spills in the Gulf of Mexico.

Mauro successfully pushed an oil spill response bill for Texas, sponsored by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, in the regular session of the Legislatue this year.

Mauro said at a news conference that plans call for a "memorandum of understanding" by the five states on the "nuts and bolts" of an interstate response system.

He said this would include such things as decisions on a command structure for cleanup operations, what kind of communications to use and a mutual inventory of equipment to determine who has what technology located where.

The plan, under informal dicussion for three years, would be the first of its kind in the nation, he said.

The five states would design compatible laws, training systems and procedures so that a combined effort could be used to combat a spill.

"We're all in this together," Mauro said. "Oil spills do not recognize state boundaries."

Mauro said the five-state effort is a short-term goal, and he hopes that in the long term it could be coordinated with spill response efforts by the Mexican states.

About 70 percent of the hydrocarbons imported into or exported from the United States pass through the Gulf of Mexico, he said, and more than 300,000 tanker movements occur in the Gulf every year.

"The potential for accidents and spills is enormous," Mauro said. "The potential for environmental and economic disaster for each of the five Gulf states boggles the mind."

Mauro cited the Mega Borg spill 60 miles off Galveston Island in 1990. If the burning tanker had ruptured, it would have spilled nearly 40 million gallons of crude oil off the shores of Texas, he said.

Don Duden, of the Florida Department of Natural Resources, said "There is a time and a place for everything. I think this idea was floated a little in the past but never maybe matured enough to come into reality." Duden said "now is the time and the place, and the need is real."

Rita Baur, left, listens, as salesperson Fran Krull shows off the latest stovetop features Tuesday at a Chicago appliance store. Although government figures showed economic growth, plunging consumer confidence has economists fearing the rebound might be short-lived.

Economic signs show growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy started growing for the first time in a year, posting a 2.4 percent advance from July through September, the government said Tuesday in a report hailed by the Bush administration as proof the recession is over.

But private economists worried about more recent signs of sluggishness, including another report Tuesday that showed consumer confidence plummeting in October as Americans grew more concerned about the economy and job prospects.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product, the country's total output of goods and services, climbed at the fastest pace in 2½-years following three consecutive quarterly declines as the country struggled through the recession.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher said the increase was encouraging. They pointed to the strength in consumer spending, residential construction and capital spending in the summer.

But other economists, surveying the GNP report, saw plenty of reason for concern that one or two quarters of growth will be followed by another recession, something that has occurred in five of the last eight downturns.

Analysts were particularly worried about a report from the Conference Board that consumer confidence plunged 12.5 points in October to 60.4, when compared to a base of 100 in 1985. That left the closely watched confidence reading only six points higher than it was in the depths of the 1981-82 recession.

Federal deficit soars to new record

■ Federal fiscal year ends in a record amount of red ink.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal budget deficit soared to a record $268.7 billion in the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, the government said Tuesday. It was the 22nd straight year of spending imbalances, which are projected to continue at least through most of the decade.

The gap between what the government took in and paid out last year swelled beyond the previous record of $221.1 billion set in 1986. The imbalance was $220.4 billion in fiscal 1990.

The growing deficit means the Treasury has to borrow more, driving up interest rates for a shrinking pot of available funds. That in turn spurs inflation and inhibits economic growth.

The Bush administration forecasts the deficit will rise to $348.3 billion this year and $245.7 billion in fiscal 1993 before slowing to $132.1 billion in fiscal 1994, $73.6 billion in fiscal 1995 and $55.5 billion in fiscal 1996.

Last year's deficit was the 25th in 26 years. The government has not operated in the black since posting a $3.2 billion surplus in fiscal 1969.

It attributed the revision to foreign contributions to cover the cost of the Persian Gulf war, to slower than expected payments to bail out failed savings and loans and to a decline in tax collections because of the recession.

But it also said the nearing end of Desert Storm payments and speedier thrift rescue operations would boost this year's deficit.

Revenues totaled $109.3 billion in September, pushing receipts for the year up 2.2 percent to $1.05 trillion. But outlays totaled $116.2 billion last month and $1.32 trillion for the year, up 5.7 percent from fiscal 1990.

Midland Park Mall ready for trick-or-treaters

By Mella McEwen

MIDLAND PARK MALL is ready for Halloween and an invasion of "Terminators", "Bart Simpsons," cowboys, witches, ghosts and goblins.

McEwen

The mall will host its annual trick-or-treat night Thursday beginning at 7 p.m. Trick-or-treaters can make the rounds, getting sweet treats from Mall merchants. Mall marketing director Susan Perkins said the mall has purchased about 200,000 pieces of candy for the night. The night is sponsored by the mall, Westside Optimists Club, the Reporter-Telegram, and radio stations KODM, KNFM and KGEE.

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy futures were mixed Tuesday in slow trading.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December settled at $23.11 per barrel, down 10 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

After the market was closed for the day, the American Petroleum Institute released a weekly report on oil inventories that showed a sharply higher supply of crude oil and a sharply lower supply of gasoline.

The supply of crude rose 9.4 million barrels, to 347.8 million, for the week ending Friday. The supply of gasoline, meanwhile, plunged 6.1 million barrels, to 205.7 million.

The supply of distillates, which include home heating oil, fell 0.6 million barrels, to 134.8 million.

Natural gas prices were mixed Tuesday, with contracts for delivery in December settling at $2.092 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.4 cents.

Dollar plunges

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar plunged in heavy trading on world currency markets Tuesday as an unexpectedly weak report on U.S. consumer confidence sparked a sell-off on the assumption interest rates are headed lower.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.43 yen to a closing 131.85 yen.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7230 from $1.7040 late Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's rates, included: 1.6860 German marks, down from 1.7173; 1.4760 Swiss francs, down from 1.5060; 5.7565 French francs, down from 5.8558; 1,261.00 Italian lire, down from 1,283.25; and 1.1234 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1250.

Time's cash

TOKYO (AP) — Toshiba Corp. and Japan's biggest trading company will invest $1 billion in Time Warner Inc., under a cautious deal announced Tuesday that will mix Japanese electronics and Hollywood creativity without changing owners.

The U.S. media and entertainment giant will spin off three of its five divisions to create a new $20 billion company, Time Warner Entertainment, in which Time Warner will retain an 87.5 percent share. Its magazine and record businesses will not be affected.

Toshiba and C. Itoh are each to contribute $500 million for a 12.5 percent stake in the new company and a combined 50 percent interest in a subsidiary Japanese distribution company, Time Warner Entertainment Japan.

Swaggart portrays a creature of his own culture

By Guy Coates
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. — Jimmy Lee Swaggart would be the first to say that God moves in mysterious ways. In his case, the same demons that drive him to prostitutes may have led him to power as a super televangelist.

Swaggart

"He's been so effective largely because for years he's been preaching against himself," said Quentin Schultz, author of "Televangelism and American Culture" and communications professor at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Mich. "Nobody knows his weakness better. He knows firsthand of the demons he speaks of. That helps make him extremely believable and a powerful preacher against evils of the flesh."

The demons caught up with Swaggart in 1988 and again on Oct. 11. That latest encounter with a prostitute may have completed the toppling of a tax-exempt televangelical empire that once brought in $150 million a year.

Driving in Indio, Calif., near Palm Springs, the 56-year-old Swaggart was pulled over by police for traffic citations. In the car with him was an admitted prostitute. She said Swaggart had picked her up on the side of the road and talked about dirty books.

In 1988, Swaggart was photographed with a prostitute in New Orleans. The picture was made public by the Rev. Marvin Gorman of New Orleans, one of the televangelical competitors attacked by Swaggart weeks before the disclosure.

"God deliver us from these pompadour boys, hair done, nails done, fresh from the beauty shop, preaching the Gospel," Swaggart shouted then.

Earlier this year, Swaggart's insurance companies were hit with a $10 million judgment in favor of Gorman. A state court jury found that Swaggart led a concerted drive to undermine his competitor, spreading gossip about Gorman's sex life.

That Gorman-provided photo ultimately cost Swaggart his Assemblies of God affiliation and most of his viewing audience that financially fed the ministry.

And now the man who was once the nation's most-watched televanglist is losing his international TV ministry. Dennis Brewer Sr., a board member for Jimmy Swaggart Ministries, was quoted Saturday as saying some services might be televised but "as far as an international television ministry, we're not going to try to keep that going at this time."

His audience, 2.1 million strong in 1987, had diminished to just over 300,000 last year. His Bible college lost 70 percent of its students and the $100 million ministries complex was at half staff. He once had 1,500 employees.

Information now is hard to come by. A belt of silence surrounds the Jimmy Swaggart Ministries. The family has told employees and students to avoid the press.

'Nobody knows his weakness better. He knows firsthand of the demons he speaks of. That helps make him extremely believable and a powerful preacher against evils of the flesh.'

— Quentin Schultz

Top aides have quit. An undetermined number of layoffs have been forced on the ministry because contributions are drying up. Television programs have been cancelled.

Five hundred showed up in his 7,000-seat church recently when Swaggart announced he was stepping down temporarily to seek help in fighting a demon spirit.

"It would grip my mind and I would fight it. I would fight it with everything within me. I can't tell you the struggle. I can't tell you the holding, the times, to that fence outside our house, weeping before God, saying 'Lord, You said You would not allow anything to be put on us any harder than we can bear.'

"The pressure of it would become so unbearable, and somebody may ask the question, 'well, why didn't you go for help?'

"And that's the question, that's where I was wrong. But before you judge me, try to put yourself in my shoes.'"

But even as he asks for forgiveness himself, Swaggart's legacy may be based on how harshly he judged others.

Other prominent television ministers from Billy Graham to Jerry Falwell, Jim Bakker and Pat Robertson "almost seemed to have made a decision to play by the rules of the American religious game" by showing a tolerance for differing religious views, said William McKinney, dean of Hartford Seminary.

"Swaggart ... sort of played by his own interpretation of biblical rules," McKinney said.

Not even Mother Teresa escaped his harsh assessment of Catholicism — a "monstrosity of heresy" in Swaggart's terms. Mainline Protestantism was criticized for its "religious monstrosities," and Jews, Mormons, Christian Scientists and other religious groups also were subjects of Swaggart attacks, according to critics who have documented his remarks.

"He's an equal opportunity bigot, and one of the proudest bigots I've ever seen," said David Crane, vice president of People for the American Way, a Washington-based lobbying group.

Not even preachers who shared his faith escaped his wrath. The forgiveness he has sought for himself in recent years is unlike what he offered Jim Bakker. When Bakker's scandal broke, Swaggart suggested Bakker was a "cancer" that needed to be excised from the Body of Christ.

It is not surprising that few are rushing to Swaggart's defense in his time of trouble, according to some observers.

"People recognize a hypocrite," Crane said.

But no one should try to judge Swaggart without knowing something of his roots, his background, warned Schultz.

Cousins Jimmy Lee Swaggart and Jerry Lee Lewis were born to poverty in a Mississippi River Delta area of northeast Louisiana that has known little but poverty. With a natural rhythm and affinity for the piano, both also were born to boogie and raised in a religion that encourages showmanship.

They just took different roads that, ironically, now intersect.

Jerry Lee helped invent rock 'n' roll and took to smoky bars, fast cars, flashy women and booze. Tragedy was a companion.

"Were it not for the grace of God, whatever mistakes Jerry Lee has made, I'd have made the same ones, right down the line," Jimmy Lee once said.

Now, Jimmy Lee travels with the same companion.

"You won't understand Jimmy Swaggart if you come at it as if he's a shyster, huckster. That's not the way to understand him," said Schultz.

"Jimmy Swaggart believes more thoroughly in what he says from the pulpit than most would ever believe. That's because he was raised in a culture that values what he preaches and the way he preaches it."

To understand Swaggart is to know something of his southern Pentecostal Church upbringing, said Schultz.

"It's very emotional, dramatic, personal expression of the Christian faith. While a northern Protestant minister would approach preaching as a lecture, a southern Pentecost would approach it as a story with a dramatic style.

"In front of a crowd he's got to be able to perform in a style that people will warm up to. He's got to be able to turn the tears on and off, tell a story the way that engages people's imagination.

"That's what Jimmy Swaggart does so well. He's a naturally gifted performer, story teller and musician. That's not the sort of thing you pick up at the seminary."

Many condemn Swaggart for his expensive wardrobe, his palatial residence, his expensive jewelry, without understanding his impoverished background or his church, said Schultz.

"I've spent 10 years studying the phenomenon," said Schultz. "In almost every case the ostentatious life style of TV preachers is partly forced upon them by worshipping throngs. Who wants to follow a loser?"

Schultz also says Swaggart's ministry can survive the latest scandal in a lean, scaled-down operation.

"The worst scenario I see would be that he would be limited primarily to a local church, maybe later some non-TV revivals for pastor friends.

Dream of buying home can be paperwork nightmare

By William E. Clayton Jr.
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The American dream of home ownership can be come a nightmare of paperwork and legal maneuvers because home owner protection warranty companies fail to deliver on their promises, witnesses told a House subcommittee.

Linda and Jay Eichhorn of San Antonio testified that it took four years and a jury trial to get a $500,000 settlement on their split-level from the Homeowners Warranty Co. (HOW) because of a dispute over defects in the home.

"The subcommittee has received numerous complaints from home owners who say the warranty they thought they had purchased on their newly constructed homes is not being honored when it comes time for structural defects in their homes to be corrected," said Henry B. Gonzalez, chairman of the Housing and Community Development subcommittee.

The subcommittee heard from legislators, home buyers and warranty industry representatives during the hearing.

Gonzalez, D-Texas, and Juan Acosta, a deputy assistant Housing and Urban Development secretary, laid much of the blame for lax enforcement of home warranties at the feet of Samuel R. Pierce, who was HUD secretary when Ronald Reagan was president. Acosta said he is relatively new at his job, but will work on new regulations.

"Any time we see a warranty company dragging its feet ... or we see the process out of whack, we are not satisfied," Acosta said.

Gonzalez pressed HUD to tighten its watch on warranties and said legislation may be needed if HUD failed to improve its monitoring.

He said HOW declined an invitation to testify at the hearing. Rep. Sam Johnson, R-Dallas, said he was a home builder for a time in North Texas, dealt with HOW and "had zero problem with them." Johnson said he knew of cases in which the firm made repairs that were not covered by a warranty.

But Eichhorn said his $111,500 split-level was built in 1984, with a HOW contract on it that he thought ensured strict construction standards and protection against costly repairs. When cracks in the basement got so bad Eichhorn feared a total failure of the foundation, he filed a claim. The company told him the defect was not covered because he could not show it rendered the house "unsafe, unsanitary or otherwise unlivable."

The company's attitude sounded nothing like the comforting phrases of the company's brochure, Eichhorn said. He chased HOW, the builder and the savings and loan firm that was the builder's parent company, without satisfaction. So he sued.

A jury found HOW "had engaged in fraudulent practices ... by misrepresenting the degree of protection provided by its warranty," Eichhorn said. "We settled with HOW for $500,000."

Eichhorn recommended rules that would make federal mortgage guarantees available only when certain inspection tests are carried out and when the homeowner is fully aware of the limitations of the warranty.

Rolando Reyes testified that he and 69 other home buyers at Seville Place in Miami face financial ruin because of troubles with their homes, which they thought were fully covered by a HOW warranty.

"We came with our hopes of the American dream," Reyes said. "From the very beginning, the homes leaked and concrete walls were cracking throughout the house." Eventually, the homes were condemned and HOW turned down the homeowners' claims, he said.

"The residents have been in a liability limbo," said Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., "with none of the parties involved in the construction or insurance of their homes accepting responsibility."

Part of the problem is a trend toward turning some HUD functions over to private firms, Graham said.

Rep. Larry Smith, D-Fla., said Dade County once brought an inspector into the development as a consultant, and it turned out he had been the structural engineer on the project.

"He was inspecting his own work," Smith said. "Not a blessed thing has been done by HUD. It's a comedy and nobody takes responsibility."

Suicides point to larger debate on euthanasia

By Fred Bayles
Associated Press Writer

A how-to book on suicide becomes a best seller. Doctors come forward to help patients end their lives. Voters in Washington state are asked to legalize euthanasia of the terminally ill.

While ethicists decry the sensationalism of a Michigan doctor and his suicide machines, they say his actions highlight a growing debate over a patient's — and doctor's — right to choose suicide over a slow, painful wait for death.

"It is a serious public policy matter that is not being led by politicians or health care professionals — it is coming up from the public," said Arthur Caplan, director of the Biomedical Ethics Center at the University of Minnesota.

"People are concerned about dying vulnerable and incompetent amid a bunch of medical machinery."

The issue was raised again Wednesday when retired pathologist Dr. Jack Kevorkian helped two ill middle-age women kill themselves at a campground near Pontiac, Mich.

Kevorkian, 63, gained the national spotlight last year by helping an Alzheimer's patient die by hooking her to a machine that delivers a lethal drug when the patient pushes a button.

A judge dismissed murder charges, ruling that Michigan had no law against physician-assisted suicide. But Kevorkian, who recently published a book arguing in favor of such suicides, could face contempt charges for violating the judge's order prohibiting him from such activities.

Kevorkian's actions drew sharp criticism from experts on medical ethics. Caplan, who testified against Kevorkian in the prior case, accused him of embarking on a "serial euthanasia career."

"It is really unfortunate that Dr. Kevorkian is the person around who the debate is issued," said George Annas, a professor of health law at Boston University.

Caplan and Annas agree the euthanasia debate extends well beyond the sensationalism of the Michigan cases.

"More and more people are realizing that dying slow deaths in hospitals isn't too pleasant," Annas said.

Last month, a federal study showed that between 1980 and 1986 there was a 21 percent increase in suicides among Americans 65 and older, the group most likely to face terminal illness. Updated figures for 1990 show additional increase in the suicide rate among those 75 and older.

And there is the success of the book, "Final Exit," by Derek Humphry, a founder of the National Hemlock Society, which advocates euthanasia.

The how-to primer on suicide lists lethal drug doses and offers other death recipes to patients facing terminal disease and long-term suffering.

The book has been on The New York Times best seller list for 10 weeks, with 509,000 copies in print.

Interest in the subject extends beyond the book stalls. In Washington state, polls indicate voters may endorse Initiative 119, the "Death with Dignity" measure. The ballot referendum would legalize doctor-assisted euthanasia for patients determined to have six months to live.

Such activities by doctors are illegal in Washington and 24 other states. The American Medical Association is opposed to doctor-assisted suicide, as is the Roman Catholic Church and other major religious organizations.

But more than 223,000 Washington residents signed a petition placing the issue on the Nov. 5 ballot. Sixty-one percent of state residents recently polled favored the initiative. An informal survey by the state medical association showed doctors were opposed to the issue, but by a narrow 562-to-543 margin.

The debate over a patient's right to die began 15 years ago when the family of Karen Ann Quinlan, a comatose New Jersey woman, went to court to have her removed form life support systems. It continued this year when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled doctors could remove feeding tubes from Nancy Cruzan, a Missouri woman, if clear and convincing evidence existed that she would not want to continue in a vegetative state. Judges in both cases approved the families' request.

"It is clear people should have the right to refuse treatment," said Annas. "The next question for competent people is: 'Shouldn't doctors help us die even if we don't have any tubes to take away?'"

Caplan said such nagging questions are likely to grow as the nation's population ages and medical technology continues to make strides in keeping the old and ill alive longer.

"There is more technology out there and we're not sure what we want from it and how to use it," he said.

EPA unveils acid rain plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency on Tuesday unveiled its plan to curb acid rain by forcing utilities to cut sulfur dioxide emissions by 40 percent this decade.

EPA Administrator William Reilly estimated that the proposed rules would cost $4 billion annually by the year 2000 and lead to sharp increases in electricity rates in areas of the country that have the dirtiest coal-burning power plants.

The new rates are expected to push up electricity rates about 1.5 percent nationwide, but much higher in some areas, Reilly said. But he maintained the higher cost "will be more than offset" by the environmental benefits from controlling acid rain.

The proposed regulations, which are expected to be made final early next year, implement the Clean Air Act passed by Congress last year.

Acid rain is the name given to the industrial pollution that may carry long distances in the atmosphere before returning to earth as rain, snow or soot, killing aquatic life. Sulfur dioxide emissions, mainly from coal-burning power plants in the Midwest, are a major cause of acid rain.

Under the regulations, utilities must limit sulfur dioxide emissions from 110 of the nation's biggest power plants to no more than 8.9 million tons a year by the end of the decade. In 1980, they were pouring more than twice that amount into the air. The emissions have been reduced to about 15 million tons today.

Utilities account for about 70 percent of the sulfur dioxide emissions that cause acid rain. The rest comes from industrial sources, which are not covered by the proposed rule.

The proposed rules for the first time use a system of "pollution allowances" that permit utilities that reduce emissions below set levels to sell credits to companies not meeting the new standard.

"Today's proposal breaks new ground in harnessing the power of the marketplace to improve the environment," Reilly said.

The trading is expected to reduce the cost of meeting the new emission standards by about $1 billion a year, he said.

Over the last eight months, the EPA has been crafting the hundreds of pages of regulations that will implement that law. Rules governing each section of the bill will go into effect once the entire package is completed.

The acid rain proposal announced Tuesday requires 110 of the nation's most polluting electric power plants — primarily in the Midwest and East — to cut emissions in two phases over nine years.

Utilities may use a variety of methods to meet the new pollution controls including switching from high-sulfur to low-sulfur coal; shifting energy production from older units to more modern ones, and installing "scrubbers" to separate the sulfur dioxide pollutants.

The EPA's estimate of the effect of its rules on utility bills was disputed by utility industry, which has argued all along that the anti-pollution measures to fight acid rain will be costly especially in parts of the country with the dirtiest plants.

"Several key industrial states could experiences (rate) increases of 10 to 15 percent," said the Edison Electric Institute, which represents the electric utility industry.

House approves $7.5 billion emergency bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, defying a presidential veto threat, voted Tuesday to boost spending on child nutrition, immunization and early education programs by nearly $1.4 billion next year.

The House voted 243-180 to add the funds to an emergency money bill that also would provide $2.8 billion in disaster aid to victims of fires, earthquakes and hurricanes and farmers who lost crops to droughts or floods.

After boosting the total price tag to $7.5 billion, the House went on to approve the overall bill by a 252-162 vote.

The bill now goes to the Senate amid predictions that its wealth of largesse for the home districts of individual members would eventually sink it.

Rep. Harris Fawell, R-Ill., grumbled that it included "enough pork to sink a battleship."

The money for children's programs was added under an amendment sponsored by Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo.

"We have more than 12 million children in poverty, and just because you can't see them like you can see a fire, a flood or a hurricane doesn't mean that it isn't an emergency," she said.

Her measure would boost spending in the 1992 fiscal year that began Oct. 1 on Head Start by $1.2 billion, on immunizing children against measles and other diseases by $90 million and on supplemental food for pregnant women and infants by another $100 million.

The bill includes $3.2 billion sought by President Bush to help pay for the Persian Gulf War.

Democrats were hoping that those funds would dissuade Bush from a threatened veto and prompt him to sign the measure, including a wide array of features dear to their hearts.

One such would assure that Democratic presidential aspirants would have access to federal matching funds to use in February and March primary campaigns.

Because only about 19 percent of taxpayers marked the $1 voluntary checkoff in 1990, the Federal Election Commission expects a temporary cash shortage that would prevent qualified candidates from getting all of the matching funds they are entitled to until April.

To assure that the funds would be available in February and March when more than half of the primary fights will be waged, the measure would require the Treasury to match private contributions dollar for dollar beginning Jan. 1. It would be reimbursed with revenues expected later in the year.

Republicans said that feature and the Schroeder amendment would wreck last year's so-called budget summit agreement between the parties. They said a presidential veto was guaranteed if the bill reached Bush's desk.

Included in the measure is $693 million for disaster assistance for victims of Hurricanes Hugo and Bob, the San Francisco earthquake and tornados in the Midwest as well as $250 million for victims of the Oakland, Calif., fire.

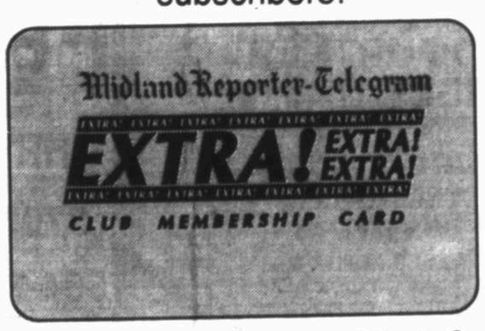

But the bill also includes $1.8 billion inserted by Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., over administration complaints in aid for farmers who lost their crops in 1990 or 1991 to droughts or floods.

"With reductions in employment, production and exports resulting from these disasters, when added to our mistaken policies, it is apparent that the nation must take action," Whitten said, describing the bill as "an effort to head off an all-out depression."

Schroeder said her measure would enable the so-called WIC program to provides supplemental food assistance to pregnant women, infants and children to reach 61 percent of the people eligible instead of just 55 percent covered by the $2.6 billion already appropriate for it next year.

NOTICE OF LAST DAY FOR THE FILING OF PROOFS OF CLAIM OR OTHER INTEREST AND OF PROCEDURE TO FILE PROOFS OF CLAIM OR OTHER INTEREST

TO ALL CREDITORS AND PARTIES IN INTEREST OF THE ABOVE-CAPTIONED DEBTORS:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on April 15, 1991 (the "Filing Date"), each of the above-named debtors (collectively, the "U.S. Home Entities" or "Debtors") filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code"), in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York (the "Bankruptcy Court").

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that the Bankruptcy Court has entered an order dated October 22, 1991 (the "Bar Order") requiring all persons and entities, including individuals, partnerships, corporations (including homeowner associations), estates, trusts, and governmental units, EXCEPT THOSE PERSONS AND ENTITIES DESCRIBED IN PARAGRAPHS A THROUGH G BELOW, which assert a claim or other interest (as defined below) against or interest in any of the above-referenced Debtors, that (i) arose or relates back prior to the Filing Date or (ii) arose from the Debtors' rejection of an executory contract or unexpired lease prior to October 1, 1991, to file a proof of claim or other interest against such particular Debtor or Debtors with:

United States Bankruptcy Court
c/o U.S.H. Corporation of New York
P.O. Box 3774
Church Street Station
New York, New York 10008

or by delivering the same by hand delivery or courier service (but not by U.S. mail), to the Clerk of the Court, United States Bankruptcy Court, Room 614, Alexander Hamilton Custom House, One Bowling Green, New York, New York 10004, in either case so that it is actually received on or before 5:00 p.m. E.S.T. on December 23, 1991 (the "Bar Date"). Such proofs of claim will be deemed filed only when they are actually received.

As used herein, the term "claim" means (a) right to payment, whether or not such right is reduced to judgment, liquidated, unliquidated, fixed, contingent, matured, unmatured, disputed, undisputed, legal, equitable, secured or unsecured; or (b) right to an equitable remedy for breach of performance if such breach gives rise to a right to payment, whether or not such right to an equitable remedy is reduced to judgement, fixed, contingent, matured, unmatured, disputed undisputed, secured or unsecured, including, without limitation, any and all rights arising under land purchase agreements, option agreements, contracts for deed, condominium or other offering plans, stock options, warrants, subscription rights and any other rights and interests not specifically mentioned herein.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN THAT IF YOU ARE REQUIRED TO FILE A PROOF OF CLAIM OR OTHER INTEREST AND FAIL TO DO SO IN THE MANNER PRESCRIBED, YOU WILL BE FOREVER BARRED FROM VOTING UPON, OR RECEIVING DISTRIBUTIONS UNDER, ANY PLAN OR PLANS OF REORGANIZATION FOR ANY OF THE U.S. HOME ENTITIES, AND WILL BE FOREVER BARRED FROM ASSERTING ANY SUCH CLAIM OR OTHER INTEREST AGAINST ANY OF THE U.S. HOME ENTITIES OR THEIR SUCCESSORS OR ASSIGNS.

Pending further order of the Bankruptcy Court, the following persons or entities are NOT required to file a proof of claim or other interest on or before the Bar Date:

A. Any person or entity that has already filed a proof of claim or other interest in accordance with applicable law against the U.S. Home Entities with the Clerk of the Bankruptcy Court.
B. Any person or entity (i) whose claim or other interest is not listed as "disputed," "contingent" or "unliquidated" in the U.S. Home Entities' Schedules of Liabilities (the "Schedules"), filed with the Clerk of the Bankruptcy Court, and (ii) who agrees with the classification and amount set forth therein.
C. Any person or entity having a claim or other interest allowable under section 507 (a)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code as an administrative expense of the Debtors' chapter 11 cases.
D. Any person or entity having a claim or other interest allowed by order of the Court entered on or prior to the Bar Date.
E. Holders of any public debt securities of the Debtors which are traded on any U.S. or foreign securities exchange, with maturity dates after April 15, 1991, need not file a proof of claim arising from their ownership of such securities; provided, however, that any such holder who wishes to assert a claim against any of the Debtors that is not based solely upon such securities must file a proof of claim on or prior to the Bar Date.
F. Any of the Debtors or any affiliate of the Debtors holding a claim or other interest against one or more of the other Debtors need not file a proof of claim or other interest in respect of such claim.
G. Holders of outstanding shares of common stock of U.S. Home Corporation need not file a proof of interest arising from their ownership of such shares; provided, however, that public shareholders of any of the Debtors who wish to assert a claim or other interest against any of the Debtors that is not based solely upon ownership of the Debtors common stock, including, without limitation, claims based on (i) redemption rights, if any, (ii) unpaid dividends declared prior to April 15, 1991, or (iii) any other obligations of the Debtors, must file a proof of claim or other interest on or prior to the Bar Date.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that any person or entity having a claim arising from (i) the rejection of an unexpired lease or executory contract pursuant to any order entered on or after October 1, 1991, or (ii) under the provisions of Bankruptcy Rule 3002(c)(3), shall file proof of such claim on or prior to the date fixed by the Court in connection therewith.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that acts or omissions of any Debtor that occurred prior to the Filing Date may give rise to claims or other interests against such Debtor notwithstanding the fact that such claims or other interests (or the injuries on which they are based) may be contingent or may not have occurred, matured or become fixed or liquidated prior to such date. Therefore, any creditor having a claim or potential claim or other interest against a Debtor, no matter how remote or contingent, must file a proof of claim on or before the Bar Date.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that proofs of claim or other interest shall specifically set forth the name or names of each Debtor against which such claim is asserted, and shall conform substantially to the form approved by the court or the Official Forms as described in the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that copies of the Schedules are available for inspection during regular business hours at (i) the offices of Kaye, Scholer, Fierman, Hays & Handler, Attorneys for the Debtors, 425 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10022, (ii) Poorman-Douglas Corporation, 1325 Southwest Custer Drive, Portland, Oregon 97219, and (iii) the Office of the Clerk, United States Bankruptcy Court, Southern District of New York, 5th Floor, Alexander Hamilton Custom House, One Bowling Green, New York, New York 10004-1408. In the event you have any questions concerning the filing of your proof of claim or other interest, you may telephone (503) 293-5082 between the hours of 6:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., Pacific Time for assistance.

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also? Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
