Plans for nuclear 'warning shot' denied

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger denied today that there is a NATO contingency plan to fire a demonstration nuclear shot in the event a conventional war breaks out in Europe, as reported by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

"There is absolutely nothing in any plan that I know of that contains anything remotely resembling that, nor should it," Weinberger told the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"It was a suggestion, as I understand it, in the 60s of some of the military planners," Weinberger said.

"It was reported as a suggestion and in fact Secretary Haig reported it as a suggestion."

Weinberger made his statement in response to question by Sen. John Warner, R-Va., who suggested that the so-called plan "might have been a fragment of a very early plan" that had never been developed further.

Haig described a contingency plan for a nuclear warning shot in testimony Wednesday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The former NATO commander said such a demonstration would be intended to forestall escalation of the war into a full-scale nuclear exchange. Although he did not elaborate, Haig said NATO's goal has always been to "maintain violence at the lowest level."

Haig's remarks prompted a statement today by Radio Moscow that he had confirmed the United States has a plan for limited nuclear warfare in Europe.

Weinberger ran into stiff criticism from senators of both parties when defended the Reagan administration's bomber and missile program before the Armed Services Committee.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., termed "a shambles" the administration's plan to build 100 B-1 bombers and put MX mobile missiles into existing missile silos.

Levin told Weinberger the administration had underestimated the cost of the B-1 "for no other apparent reason than to sell it."

The original estimate of the B-1s was $19.7 billion. Weinberger said today the current estimate is $20.5 billion. Levin said a new internal Air Force audit says the airplanes will cost $22 billion to $28 billion.

Weinberger said this was "incorrect and misleading" but did not give any details of the audit.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the committee, said previous hearings on the strategic arms package have failed to allay "uncertainties and doubts" and have "raised additional concerns" about the program.

Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., criticized short-term reductions in defense spending which the administration has proposed as part of its drive to reduce the federal budget deficit.

"What it looks to me to be is an apparent stepdown in the willingness to meet the cost of survival," Denton said. Weinberger denied that the administration is "stinting defense."

The sharpest exchange occurred between Levin and Weinberger, who accused the Michigan senator of displaying "a substantial ignorance to a degree that I think can only be designed to be misleading."

Haig testified Wednesday that congressional action on the administration's B-1 bomber and MX missile proposals "will make or break" efforts to negotiate a new nuclear arms reduction treaty with the Soviets. He said treaty talks "can begin as early as next spring."

Hussein sees 'open door'

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jordan's King Hussein, ending three days of talks with U.S. officials, says he is encouraged that the door is open to a Middle East peace settlement based on a Saudi Arabian proposal rejected by Israel.

"The United States has not shut the door firmly," Hussein said.

At the same time, the 45-year-old monarch denied reports that Jordan might get $800 million worth of new anti-aircraft missiles from the United States but said the Arab country will buy some Soviet defensive weaponry.

In an interview with reporters Wednesday, Hussein said he will tell a summit of Arab nations that his impressions of Mideast peace prospects "are extremely favorable and encouraging" after talks with President Reagan and other administration officials, as well as Senate and House leaders.

"The United States will hopefully be able to make its contribution" to a settlement based on the Saudi plan, Hussein said. "I feel there is leadership, there is determination to make a contribution."

Reagan and other U.S. officials said last week that while they have sharp reservations about most of the eight-point Saudi plan, they are encouraged by a segment that they interpret as confirming the rights of all states in the region, including Israel, to exist. They said they hope it can become a vehicle for involving the Arab states in a peace process.

Israel strongly condemns the plan, which says any Middle East peace must include total Israeli withdrawal from all territories occupied during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, including Jerusalem.

The plan also includes a call for the recognition of the right of all Palestinians to return to their homeland inside Israel, the removal of Israeli settlements from occupied territories and creation of a Palestinian state in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Hussein, who was to fly to Los Angeles today after a farewell lunch with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., said he remains highly skeptical of success for current autonomy talks on the future of the occupied territories since they are based on the Camp David formula.

If the talks fail, all sides must seek corrective steps immediately "before an inevitable disaster occurs and overtakes all of us," the king said.

Hussein said arms aid for Jordan was not an issue in his talks here and "I did not come with any shopping list."

Reagan, GOP allies moving apart

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of cooperation, President Reagan and some of his GOP Senate allies are moving in opposite directions — the president ruling out big tax increases and Republicans ruling them in — to balance the 1984 budget.

"It's certainly not our decision to add new taxes" to the $22 billion, three-year request Reagan already has made, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Wednesday.

Speakes made his comments as several administration sources reported that the president has told his economic advisers he opposes major new tax increases even if that means the budget can't be balanced by 1984. Administration officials and private economists concede a deficit is inevitable without new revenues.

But while Reagan was making his feelings known, sources said majority Republicans on the Senate Budget Committee agreed on a three-year plan to balance the budget in 1984 that includes more than $80 billion in new taxes.

Sources also said the Republicans, meeting privately, had specifically rejected implementing Reagan's plan for $115 xillion in budget savings over three years because it won't result in a balanced budget. The $22 billion in higher taxes Reagan is asking for is part of that plan, which he unveiled on Sept. 24 but never formally submitted to Congress.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker told reporters today that despite the apparent differences, "I have high confidence that Sen. Domenici, Sen. Dole and the White House will coordinate their views." Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., is chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee.

Baker said he would go to the White House later in the day for a discussion of economic matters, but said he did not know whether he would see Reagan. He said Domenici also had been invited to a White House meeting.

The proposal embraced by the committee's GOP majority called for about $100 billion in spending cuts, including about $45 billion from benefit programs such as food stamps, Medicare and Medicaid. In addition to the $80 billion in tax increases, the plan also anticipates savings of $15 billion from lower costs of servicing the national debt.

The panel helped give Reagan momentum for his economic program very early this year, crafting a nonbinding budget outline tailored to his plan of spending and tax cuts.

And Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said that despite the reports of Reagan's view, it was incorrect to say the administration has rejected his proposal.

It's "wrong to say they're sending out signals clearly on anything," he said. "We need some serious and official position" from the White House on "where they intend this budget to go.... Until we hear from the president, we will hear differing views," he said.

The conflicting views resulted in a delay in the Senate Budget Committee's public drafting sessions on a new budget. Domenici said the session, scheduled to begin today, would be put off until next week to give congressional Republicans an opportunity to consult with Reagan.

The House Budget Committee, meanwhile, began its own budget deliberations, but majority Democrats there said they will postpone voting until they receive word on Reagan's wishes.

The chairman, Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., said, "I don't have any intention of providing a committee alternative" to the president's September request.

The committee began its work, however, with a look at "worst case" projections from its staff that the budget deficit could be $88.1 billion in 1982, $119.4 billion in 1983 and $133.3 billion in 1984 without additional action.

Administration sources said Reagan had been presented with staff forecasts that are even worse — a deficit swelled by the recession to $90 billion in 1982 and $150 billion in 1984.

Administration officials have conceded in recent weeks that it is unlikely that they will be able to accomplish everything Reagan has promised — keeping the large tax cut intact, building up the nation's strategic defenses and balancing the budget by 1984.

IRS won't withhold some tax relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many of the 65 million Americans who see too much federal tax withheld from their paychecks next year can expect some relief if they have a working spouse or contribute to an individual retirement plan.

Starting Jan. 1, the Internal Revenue Service will permit extra withholding allowances to reflect two provisions of the tax cuts enacted by Congress in August. Some taxpayers also will be able to reduce their withholding to account for certain moving and employee business expenses, anticipated tax savings from income averaging and various business losses.

To take advantage of the change in withholding, affected taxpayers will have to file a new W-4 form with their employers as early as possible next year.

Reducing withholding will not cut a worker's tax liability; it simply will make the money available for the entire year instead of letting the government keep it until a tax refund is issued.

The new withholding rules could significantly increase some workers' take-home pay. A married man earning $500 a week and claiming one withholding allowance each for himself, his wife and their two children now has $74.40 withheld weekly for federal income taxes. If he can increase the number of withholding allowances to seven, he will take home an extra $14.40 a week.

Housing board fears 'flooded market'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Although bond issues for three apartment complexes have been closed and three more are in the works and expected to be completed within a month, the Midland Housing Finance Corporation board is concerned that too many apartments will be opening at the same time and "flooding the market," according to Fred Kester.

Kester, who is secretary of the Midland Housing Authority and also serves on the corporation board, advised the Housing Authority Wednesday during its regular meeting in City Hall Council Chambers of progress on the apartment complexes.

These developments are being funded through the Multi-Family Mortgage Revenue Bond program in which the developers can obtain lower-interest loans.

The first three complexes should bring 708 new units into the housing market and the bond issue was for $20.655 million, according to Kester.

The almost completed three should add 936 units and the bond issue is expected to be $19.85 million, he said. These will hit the 1,650-unit limit set by the corporation board.

Kester went on to say that another three applications have been accepted by the board for 674 more apartments that would mean a $19.2 million bond issue.

"If we get past the first six, we would probably need to put a time limitation on them so we won't flood the market with a bunch of apartments opening at the same time," he said.

Kester later explained that the board didn't think it was a good idea to have so many apartments opening up at once, and possibly could see some using "gimmicks" to attract renters, such as giving the first month's rent for free.

When the media questioned him about the prospects of an overabundance leading to stabilizing or dropping rents, Kester said, "You're right. It probably would help to keep rental rates more in line."

And he admitted that a study has shown the demand for housing units to be far in excess of the 1,644 units that will be developed under the low-interest bond program.

The program, overall, "is good news for those on waiting lists at these apartments. They should rent for $300 to more than $500 a month, depending upon their size," he said.

Even though the program was set up to get apartment builders moving by letting them obtain money for cheaper interest rates, Kester said the 13 or more percent rates are still keeping the rents fairly high.

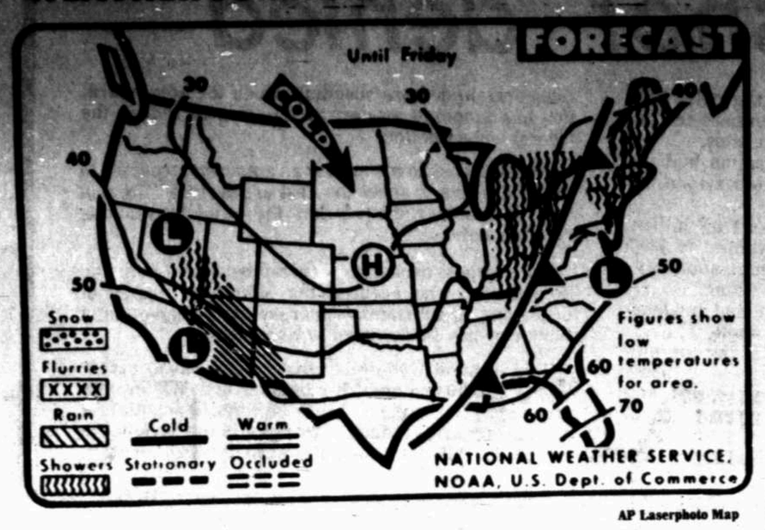

In other action, the Housing Authority authorized the vice chairman to sign checks and savings account withdrawals at The First National Bank of Midland.

This will give signing authority to Chairman Gene Abbott, Vice Chairman Doug Henson — who was elected to that spot earlier in the meeting — and Kester.

Abbott explained that his business is located 10 miles out of town while Henson and Kester are in Midland and it would be more convenient to allow Henson to have authority to sign the checks.

In going over the bills, Kester pointed out that the water bill had been unusually high last month and was already over the amount that had been budgeted.

Federal jury finds Proctors innocent

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A federal jury in Midland has found a divorced Midland couple innocent of charges that they made false statements and concealed $14,600 in assets while undergoing bankruptcy proceedings.

Freed by the jurors after 3½ hours of deliberations were Leo Proctor, 37, and his ex-wife, Juanita.

The couple was charged under a four-count indictment of conspiracy, making false oaths and statements and concealing assets from their trustee-attorney, Robert Truitt Jr., who reported what he interpreted as criminal acts by the Proctors to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and to the U.S. Attorney.

The coupled filed for bankrupty in 1978 after their house-construction business got into financial straits. And the government claimed that the Proctors concealed from Truitt the income from two promissory notes, which the Proctors, however, maintained belonged to Mrs. Proctor's father, Clyde C. White, a building contractor, and therefore was unreportable. The Proctors held that White gave proceeds from the notes to them.

"I believe he (Truitt) did that in good faith, just as the Proctors did what they did in good faith," said Barry Hart, attorney for Mrs. Proctor. "It was just a dispute which was resolved.

ON THE WITNESS stand, Truitt said that he, as an attorney specializing in bankruptcy, was bound by law to report any discrepancy and violation to the government.

Had the jury voted for guilty verdicts against the Proctors, that "dispute" could have netted Leo and Juanita Proctor each a five-year prison sentence and $5,000 fine on each count in the indictment. Hart said he was "very pleased" with the jury's decision.

David Greenhaw, attorney for Proctor, said he felt "very fortunate" over the outcome of the trial.

"I think they (the jurors) did what should have been done," said Greenhaw, who suggested that the case "should have been a civil suit."

The Proctors were indicted twice. The first indictment was dismissed by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton due to lack of specific accusations against the couple. The couple was re-indicted after Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Bock presented additional information to the jury grand.

The case was prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike McDonald.

Friend says drowning victim pushed back into water

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A long-time friend of a Marine who drowned during a water survival test last August told investigators a Marine water safety instructor pushed the struggling victim back into the water.

Pvt. Gregory Washington, 19, of Dallas, told the three-man investigating board Wednesday the instructor used his foot to push Pvt. Randall Christian away from the edge of the swimming pool minutes before Christian drowned.

Washington, Christian's high school pal, said Christian, also of Dallas, was crying for help and swallowing a lot of water at the time.

Christian, 18, drowned Aug. 27 during a swimming qualification test at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot.

Meanwhile, an MCRD spokesman refused to comment on statements made by former recruit William Donaldson to U.S. Rep. Jim Mattox of Texas, alleging he was forced to make a false statement about Christian's death.

AN MCRD SPOKESMAN said Donaldson is scheduled to testify Friday in the probe ordered by Marine Corps commandant Gen. Robert Barrow, who acted on urgings by two Texas congressman to reopen the investigation after disclosure of new evidence of possible Marine negligence.

An initial investigation ruled Christian's death accidental and exonerated water safety instructors of negligence.

Washington testified Christian "was attempting to grab the edge of the pool with his hand when the instructor, Staff Sgt. Rudy Rodriguez, who was standing by the edge, used his foot to kick or push Christian's hand away."

His testimony in the three-week inquiry came a day after three recruits testified they saw Christian sink to the bottom of the pool before swimming instructors retrieved him.

Washington, whose letter to Christian's family sparked the controversy, said he's convinced the instructor "didn't kick Christian to hurt him. He put his foot on his arm and pushed the arm away from the pool."

After being pushed away, Christian flailed helplessly and started going under, Washington said.

DESCRIBED IN previous testimony as an outstanding swimmer and former lifeguard, Christian was leading most of the recruits in qualifying for the grueling water test at the time he drowned. The test called for the recruits to swim six lengths of the indoor pool using three different strokes, then tread water for 10 minutes in camouflage uniforms.

Fellow recruits have characterized Christian as one of the best physical specimens in the platoon, the type who "tried to excel, always volunteered; he wanted to be the best." He was petrified."

Daily Texan staffers walk out

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The editor and managing editor of The Daily Texan were reprimanded Wednesday after 20 staff members of the student newspaper walked out in protest.

Don Puffer, elected editor of the paper, and Paula Angerstein, managing editor, were sent a letter of "due notice" by the executive committee of the Texas Student Publications Board.

"A group of students came to us and asked very frankly to fire the editor," said Dr. Martin "Red" Gibson, chairman of the committee. "They were dissatisfied with the leadership of Don Puffer."

Gibson said the committee passed a resolution giving the two "due notice" that they had violated the handbook and if they were to do that again their dismissal would be considered."

Some of the staffers walking out said they resigned for what they called "lack of professionalism and credibility."

Gibson said the committee was told that Puffer had interfered with newsroom operations by authorizing changes in copy that should have been authorized only by the news editor.

Gibson said the paper was published Thursday morning "and we hope it will continue to be a quality product."

Pleasant weather to continue

Pleasant weather conditions are expected to continue throughout the Permian Basin through Friday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Fair skies should prevail tonight as the temperature is expected to drop into the mid-40s, while partly cloudy skies will accompany slightly cooler temperatures on Friday. The expected afternoon high Friday of 70 will be slightly cooler than the 81 recorded Wednesday, which was only a little below the all-time record for the date of 84 established in 1934.

The low Wednesday of 45 did not threaten the record 27 set in 1936.

Winds should be northerly at 5-10 mph tonight and Friday.

Burglar gets 4 airline tickets

In theft and burglary complaints to police during the past 24 hours, Mark Butler of 2700 N. Midland Drive told officers four airline tickets, assorted camera equipment and a $7,400 gold watch were taken in a burglary of his apartment Wednesday. Total loss was placed at $8,435. There was no sign of forced entry.

An employee of "The Great Cookie" store in Midland Park Mall said four bank bags were removed from his car while it was parked at a super market in the 2200 block of North Big Spring Street late Wednesday night. The bags contained $2,150 in cash. The car had been left unlocked.

Police Roundup

'Cowboy' in jail, not Mexico

James Monroe "Cowboy" Crosson, who escaped from federal quarters of Midland City Jail after cutting through bars with hacksaw blades last June, again is in jail and not in Mexico.

The Reporter-Telegram incorrectly said in a story in Tuesday's edition that Crosson, 37, was still at large. That story reported the sentencing of Glenn Eugene Stewart, 38, a co-escapee, and of Crosson's cousin, Tom Crosson, 26, who aided in the escape out of kinship loyalty by furnishing the hacksaw blades.

Two others who broke out of the City Jail last June 11 are at large.

Crosson, who was arrested in Tulsa, Okla., after reportedly hiding out in Mexico, was awaiting transfer to a federal prison to serve a 10-year sentence on a drug violation when he escaped from jail.

Crosson is in City Jail awaiting trial.

Weather expert wants different flood warnings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A weather expert, calling for a new approach to flood warnings, says people would react more quickly — and lives would be saved — if details about the threat are made available.

Traditionally civil defense and law enforcement personnel and meteorologists have assumed people respond directly to warnings: "I give a warning, they ought to jump," Dr. Mike Carter of Colorado State University said Wednesday.

Instead, he said, people consider the warning just one piece of information and then try to confirm it before reacting. If they can't confirm the danger, they don't react.

Carter, who studies response to warnings for the university's Cooperative Institute for Research in the Atmosphere, is in Washington for a week-long symposium on flash floods sponsored by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Curtis B. Barrett, who heads the NOAA flash flood program, noted that flash floods, often sudden and isolated, are the nation's biggest weather-related killer, claiming more than 200 lives a year in the United States.

MORE THAN 75 percent of all presidential disaster declarations are related to floods, Barrett said, and he noted that as the population expands more and more people move into flood-prone areas.

Reacting to a flood warning by seeking confirmation of the threat is logical, but it also could prove dangerous, Carter said.

What is needed, he said, is a warning message that is much more specific than has been the case in the past, detailing when and where the danger is.

The typical warning, for example, might say there is a danger in low-lying areas. But the urban resident doesn't know what a low-lying area is, Carter said, adding, "You've got to tell them where the danger is in terms of where they're located."

Barrett said NOAA officials were working to make that kind of accuracy possible. He said the agency is trying to contact community leaders in flood-prone areas to help them set up self-help flood warning systems.

A sophisticated, computerized and automated system is being prepared for testing in portions of the Appalachian mountains.

Using such equipment, as well as satellites and traditional forecasting tools, the meteorologist should be able to warn a community that a particular creek will flood out of its banks, Barrett said..

Carter added that it is also important for the community have an advance plan so people will know what to do once a warning is issued or that information be provided when the warning is issued.

Attorney says Bonin prowled highways in 'death van'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Young men who hitched a ride in William Bonin's van were doomed to sodomy, torture and death "the instant" they climbed in, a prosecutor said as the sex offender's trial in the Freeway Killings case got under way.

"We will prove that when he (Bonin) got into his van and drove down Southern California freeways, he was driving a death van for many young men and boys," Deputy District Attorney Sterling Norris told the Superior Court jury Wednesday.

"The instant that young man got into the van he was dead. Mr. Bonin had decided they all would die, so there would be no one to go to the police."

Norris said he intended to show that Bonin planned to pick up hitchhikers in his van, sodomize and torture them, then kill them.

Bonin, who has twice been paroled after serving time on sex-crime convictions, is accused of 12 of the 44 Freeway Killings. The victims — all but one nude — have been found dumped along Southern California freeways since 1972. Police say all of the slayings may not be related.

TWO OTHERS charged in the case — James Michael Munro and Gregory Matthew Miley, both 19 — pleaded guilty and agreed to testify against Bonin after learning that he had given prosecutors information implicating them.

Norris said both Munro and Miley were at different times Bonin's homosexual lovers and had participated in some of the killings.

Norris said Bonin, a Downey truck driver, "enjoyed killing ... He seemed to get a thrill from torturing his victims."

He said Bonin "tied his victims up like hogs," gagged them, then "choked the life out of them."

Defense Attorney William Charvet told the jury that the prosecutor "told you things that were repulsive, repugnant to everyone in this room."

"No one here doesn't have sympathy for everyone of the parents and the children involved. The question isn't whether they were murdered, but can the district attorney prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Bonin actually killed them."

Norris said Bonin would grab and twist the testicles of his victims to increase their pain as they were gasping their last breaths. A number of victims had their sexual organs sliced off and thrown several feet away.

Cody investigation extends to Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bank records of three people — including Cardinal John Cody of Chicago — have been subpoenaed by a federal grand jury investigating alleged transfers of church funds for personal use, it was reported today.

The Kansas City Times reported in a copyright story that bank records for Cody, 73, his long-time friend Helen Dolan Wilson, and her son, David, were subpoenaed.

An agent of the Internal Revenue Service served the subpoena on the Commerce Bank of Kansas City Wednesday morning, an unidentified bank source told the Times.

The newspaper said it was believed the IRS and the grand jury in Chicago, which issued the subpoena, are looking into whether church funds were diverted into the Kansas City bank account and used in the acquisition of homes by Mrs. Wilson and her son.

The subpoena, the Times said, asked for all records of any accounts held — jointly or separately — by Cody, Mrs. Wilson or her son.

Cody has held an account at the Kansas City bank since the late 1950s when he served as bishop of the Kansas City-St. Joseph, Mo., diocese, the bank source said.

Leonard Ring, a lawyer representing Mrs. Wilson, said his client received a $21,000 loan in 1969 from Cody through a personal Kansas City bank account. The money was to help her buy a winter home in Florida, but Ring refused to identify the bank.

Ring said part of the $21,000 loan was repaid by Mrs. Wilson, but the bulk was "forgiven" by Cody. He said Mrs. Wilson spent $100,000 to build the Florida home. Mrs. Wilson also keeps a St. Louis home.

Earlier this week, the Chicago Sun-Times reported that a federal grand jury has subpoenaed financial records from five banks.

Shuttle to wait a week

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia, a crippled bird confined to its nest, was undergoing intense examination today with its second flight postponed at least a week.

Shuttle officials were to meet later today to assess a problem with a crucial hydraulic system that grounded Columbia just 31 seconds before Wednesday's scheduled takeoff. They will determine how soon it can be booked again as the first spaceship to make a return trip to orbit.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly, who have waited so long to fly into orbit, must regroup, return to the simulators and climb again into Columbia's cabin when the signal comes.

Their first attempt fell victim to a clogged filter in a power unit. NASA said repairs would take a week, perhaps more.

The problem went almost undetected. And, ironically, if it had not been discovered, NASA officials said the spacecraft probably could have been launched on a successful test flight.

WHILE correcting a late fuel tank pressure problem during a hold at T-minus 31 seconds, launch control monitors detected high pressure in the lubricating oil systems of two of Columbia's three auxiliary power units — devices crucial to the ship's guidance on ascent and landing.

Specialists were not sure what the problem was. With a rainstorm approaching the launch pad and the astronauts tiring after five hours in Columbia's cockpit, they decided to postpone the shot.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced later that either water or hydrazine fuel had leaked into the lubricant, forming a waxy substance that may have clogged filters in the system.

The two problem units performed well on Columbia's first flight in April and their enclosed filters have been untouched since. A third had to be shut down because of trouble on that mission, and was replaced by a backup that caused no difficulty Wednesday.

Officials said the experience will cause them to take a closer look at APU servicing procedures after future flights. The units drive hydraulic systems to swivel the main engines on liftoff and to move the wing surfaces on takeoff and landing.

FOR NOW, officials were considering two courses: Remove the filters, flush the system and reservice it, or replace the APUs with backups. Either course would take several days.

When that job is done, launch teams will have to start the four-day, four-hour countdown all over again, a count that had been perfect until the final minutes on Wednesday.

The count began to unravel nine minutes before the planned 7:30 a.m. EST launch. Instruments spotted dropping pressures in three onboard tanks that supply liquid oxygen to the electricity-producing fuel cells. At 31 seconds before launch, when the ground computer shifts control to Columbia's computers, launch rules calls for each tank to be pressurized to 800 pounds per square inch.

"We were satisfied that we could accept 775 psi at 31 seconds," said flight director Neil Hutchinson. He said manual commands were sent to the ship's computers to accept the lower limits at that point in the count. The orders were received on two of the tanks but just missed on the third.

Leak caused too high pressure

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Auxiliary Power Units that forced NASA to postpone the second launch of the Columbia perform on the space shuttle much like the power steering pump on your car.

The three, turbine-driven power units are started five minutes before liftoff, generating mechanical power to a pump that produces pressure for the orbiter's hydraulic system.

That hydraulic pressure is responsible for swiveling the shuttle's three main engines, helping it reach orbit. Once the shuttle has exhausted its ascent fuel, the APUs are turned off, then restarted when it comes out of orbit. Then the APUs help move the control surfaces on the craft's wings and rudder as the ship descends, and operate the landing gear. Without the APUs, the shuttle cannot land safely.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration decided to scrub Wednesday's launch during the final countdown when it was discovered that either water or hydrazine fuel had leaked into two of the APU gear boxes, mixed with oil lubricant, and created higher-than-normal pressure readings.

THE APUS' ball-shaped fuel tanks are mounted inside the rear fuselage of the shuttle. Each of the units is 20 inches wide, 21 inches high and 18 inches deep. Each APU has a horsepower of 135 and weighs 88 pounds.

Each power unit is fueled by a volatile liquid called hydrazine and powered by turbines, which are connected to a shaft that turns a pump which produces pressure for the hydraulic system.

One of the APUs malfunctioned on the first flight of the Columbia last April and was removed in refurbishing. Ironically, its replacement was the one APU that did not develop overpressure in Wednesday's launch attempt.

Flight director Neil Hutchinson said in Houston that the original two pumps had not been serviced in the interval.

When asked why, a NASA spokesman replied, "Those are the questions our top management is asking now."

The one good APU can service all three systems, but at a much lower efficiency.

U.S. scientists surprised by Pioneer findings on Venus

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Nearly three years after the Pioneer spacecraft began orbiting cloud-enshrouded Venus, scientists have announced discoveries of giant mountains, earthquakes and lava pouring from violent volcanoes.

Speaking to reporters at what may be the final international conference on the Pioneer mission, a panel of scientists said Wednesday that while Venus has mountains and plateaus similar to those found on Earth, its interior workings seem very different from those of this planet.

Earth and Venus are frequently compared by scientists because they are similar in size, mass and distance from the sun.

"We have some beautiful new ideas that we think explain the formation of Earth," said Dr. Harold Masursky, a scientist with the U.S. Geological Survey. "But we only have one body to work on. Venus gives us one that's almost exactly like it, slightly different. But the results are very different."

He said Pioneer found great plateaus that are 3,000 feet higher than the Tibetan plateau and twice as large.

"There's a great mountain on one plateau, we call it Maxwell Mountain, and that's higher than Mount Everest."

Masursky and the three other experts on the panel drew their conclusions from some of the 40 billion bits of information Pioneer has transmitted back to Earth since it reached Venus on Dec. 4, 1978.

Much of the information is new, such as Masursky's assertion that "great streams" of lava flow from two major volcanoes as lightning bolts shower overhead.

Carl Bowin, of Woods Hall Oceanographic Institution, said markings previously thought to be craters may actually be ancient volcanoes.

The evidence that the markings are volcanic "also tends to give evidence that Maxwell itself is volcanic," he said.

Bowin said variations in gravity over Venus suggested that the planet's crust is about 30 to 36 miles deep.

Keji Osano leaves Tokyo District Court Thursday after receiving a one-year sentence for his part in the Lockheed payoffs scandal which rocked Japan five years ago. Osano, a powerful businessman and friend of politicians, was found guilty of perjury.

Life on the ward is often hard

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Huntington State Hospital's Ward Three is a tiny world apart, a colorless place where some two dozen potentially violent men spend most of their time aimlessly roaming a stark, empty hallway.

The bare walls are a pale, faded blue. The floor is grey terrazzo. The somber colors seem to reflect the mood of the pacing men who live on Ward Three.

Resignation reigns in this place. The purposeless pacing, the puddles of urine, the undertone of suppressed violence are evocative of scenes and smells at an urban zoo — in the section where the big cats are caged.

And like the lions and leopards in the zoo, the men on Ward Three have very little to do but pace.

"Ward Three is a locked ward; it's where we keep our patients who are likely to hurt themselves or others," said Margaret Myers, a registered nurse who supervises the building that houses the ward.

"It's also where we keep our male court-orders, those men who have been charged with crimes and who are being given psychiatric evaluations prior to standing trial."

Most states have their equivalents to Ward Three, society's answer to the dilemma of dealing with people whom the courts consider dangerous and the doctors consider mentally ill.

Two months ago, when a group of legislators visited the hospital, Mrs. Myers told them a dangerous situation existed on the ward. She said courts were sending too many young, violent men who were threatening the aides and constantly plotting escapes.

Now, she said, the ward is safer, at least for the time being.

"We're down to seven or eight court-orders now," she said. "The central office at Charleston intervened and the judges quit sending us court-orders there for a while."

But Mrs. Myers has no illusions that the improvement is permanent. She said the situation fluctuates depending on the ward's population, which includes mentally retarded patients, others with psychiatric problems and the court-orders.

"It's a matter of degrees," said Max Knickerbocker, the hospital superintendent. "You can't operate this type of facility a hundred percent free of assaultive attempts. When you get too many of these types together, they're quite a challenge to manage."

Juanita Smith, who supervises the night shift aides, was more outspoken.

"It's pure hell most of the time, because we don't have the staff," she said. "We really need four men on each shift and most of the time there are no more than three of us, just me and two male aides to look after 40 of these patients."

Vincent Perego, an aide assigned to the ward, nodded in agreement.

"That's right," he said. "Half the time you can't even take your break. We have to feed some of these men, give them showers, break up fights and see that they don't hurt themselves.

"Some of these court-orders are in here for rape, breaking and entering, attempted murder, sexual assault. It sometimes takes a minimum of four aides to hold one of them when they blow up."

Japanese billionaire is first convicted in Lockheed trial

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — The Tokyo District Court has returned its first convictions in the 5-year-old Lockheed payoff case. It found billonaire businessman Keji Osano guilty of perjury and sentenced him to one year in prison.

The 64-year-old Osano was expected to appeal Wednesday's verdict.

Osano, whose assets have been estimated at $4.35 billion by Japan's Kyodo News Service, owns real estate in Hawaii and is an executive or major stockholder in about 70 companies in Japan and the United States.

Judge Kyoichi Hanya ruled that Osano lied to a parliamentary hearing in 1976 when he denied acting as an agent for the Burbank, Calif., aircraft company. He was accused of receiving $200,000 from Lockheed to promote the sale of its TriStar jets to All-Nippon Airways. He is one of the airline's major stockholders.

The court also gave a four-month sentence to Tsuneo Tachikawa, a 44-year-old secretary to reclusive power broker Toshio Kodama, who is alleged to have been a central figure in Lockheed's $12-million-campaign to sell TriStars in Japan.

Tachikawa was found guilty of violating the foreign exchange control law by collaborating with Kodama in setting up a dummy company in Hong Kong with $350,000 received from Lockheed in 1976.

Kodama, 70, is charged with evading taxes on $5.5 million he allegedly received from Lockheed. The court postponed a verdict in Kodama's case because a long illness prevented his appearance.

Fourteen other top goverment and business officials, including former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, are being prosecuted, and their trials are expected to continue for as long as a year. Tanaka is accused of accepting $2.5 million in bribes from Lockheed.

The verdicts were the first since U.S. congressional hearings in 1976 on Lockheed payoffs exploded into Japan's worst postwar scandal.

The prosecution in the Osana case said that while still prime minister Tanaka met with then-president Nixon in 1972 and later told Osano that Nixon wanted Japanese airlines to buy the TriStar. They said Osano conveyed that message to officials of the airline.

Congressional bills bothering Japanese

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese Foreign Ministry expressed "grave concern" today over several bills in Congress calling on Japan to increase its defense spending.

Asked by Japanese reporters about the flurry of bills in Washington, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said "the government's policy will not be influenced" (by the U.S. resolutions).

The Foreign Ministry said it doubted the Reagan administration would be swayed by hawkish members in the Senate and House, and reiterated it is "pursuing its determined policy on defense."

A resolution, later withdrawn, made by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., called for a revision of the U.S.-Japan Security Treaty. Another bill by Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., would ask Japan to pay a "security tax" equal to 2 percent of its gross national product, or about $20 billion.

The proposals triggered a full-scale debate in the Diet, or Parliament, this week after rumors began circulating that hawkish Japanese lawmakers and lobbyists recommended the ideas to the senators.

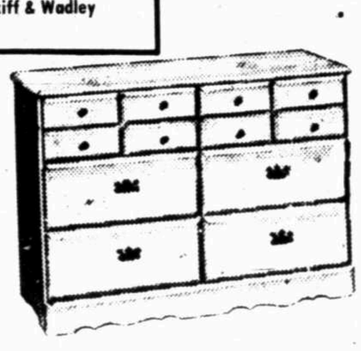

The latest proposal, submitted Wednesday, by Rep. Clement Zablocki, House Foreign Affairs Committee chairman, called on Japan to spend at least one percent of its GNP on defense.

The resolution argued that Japan, with its economic strength, spends less on defense than other countries with a comparable economic base. The United States spends 5.2 percent of its GNP on defense and contributes to Japan's defense with 48,000 troops stationed on the Pacific island.

The Foreign Ministry, meanwhile, said it had "not been officially informed" by the U.S. government of the congressional debate, but nevertheless "will continue to watch developments closely."

An estimated 20,000 books, magazines, records and puzzles will be up for grabs when the sale opens at 6 p.m. Friday.

Paperback books will be selling for 25 cents each while most hardback books will go for 35 cents each or three for $1.

"There are some really good buys," surmised Mary Hughes, a Friends member who has been toiling with Mary Mann in classifying the volumes.

"We have a lot of books that are in excellent condition but aren't famous," she said. "We have a lot of coffee-table books."

And there are thousands of volumes of books by well-known authors — Zane Grey to Kahlil Gibran — and hundreds of magazines, including the Reader's Digest, National Geographic, the new Life and the new Saturday Evening Post and comic books.

Also for sale are better books, including late 19th century publications and first-edition books, which sell for under a dollar to several dollars, self-help and stamp books, and books on the Southwest by J. Frank Dobie.

The Midland Genealogical Society also will hold a flea-market sale.

Admission to the Friday night early-bird sale is $2. Admission is free thereafter. Sale hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday.

On Sunday, better books will be sold at half price; other books will be $1 a yard.

After 3 p.m. Sunday, books will be given away to bona fide charitable organizations cleared through the sale's beneficiary, the Midland County Public Library.

Study shows raising drinking age helps lower car wrecks

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Higher legal drinking ages in Michigan and Maine have effectively reduced the number of car accidents involving young people in those states, a University of Michigan researcher says.

In the first 12 months after December 1978, when the Michigan drinking age was raised from 18 to 21, the state had a 17 percent decline in non-injury road accidents involving drivers aged 18 to 20, said Alexander Wagenaar of Michigan's Highway Safety Research Institute.

The higher legal drinking ages "are an effective countermeasure" against alcohol-related auto accidents, which he called "the leading cause of death among youth."

Accidents resulting in death or injury in Michigan involving young people fell 28 percent after the drinking age was increased, and single-car crashes by men in the age group affected by the law declined 22 percent, according to the report.

The decline was calculated using the accident rate trends for that age group before the law took effect.

Wagenaar estimated that more than 1,600 Michigan drivers aged 18 to 20 years escaped injury or death in 1979 because of the new law.

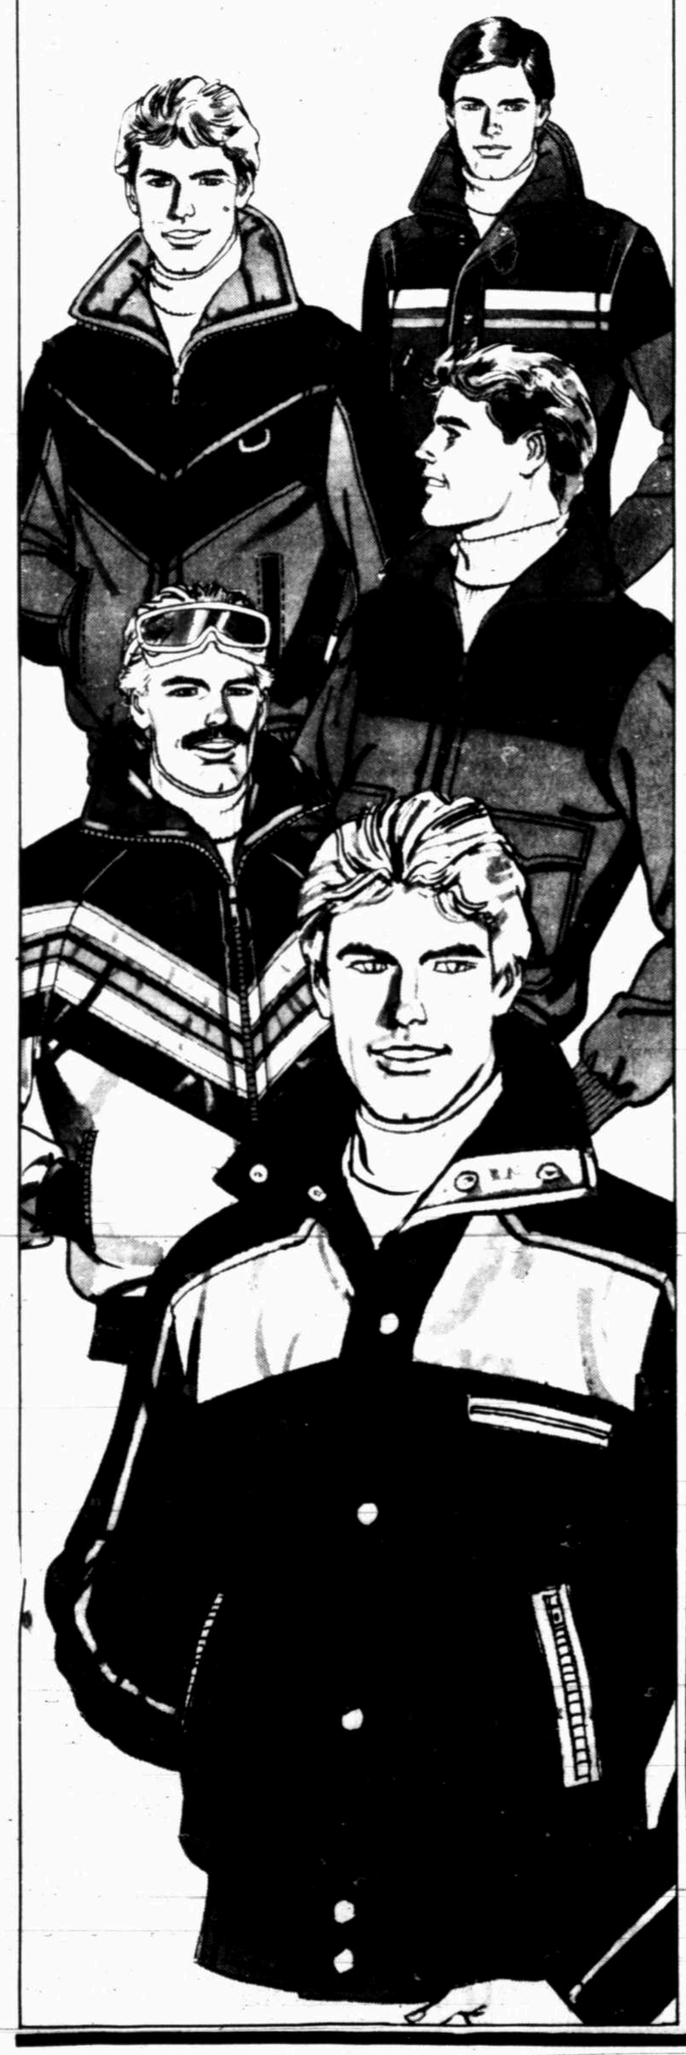

Non-injury, alcohol-related crashes in Maine declined nearly 17 percent after the minimum drinking age was raised to 20 from 18 in 1977, the study said.

Farm state Democrats to seek higher supports

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm-state Democrats, refusing to budge on federal subsidies for dairy products, say the threat of a presidential veto will not intimidate them from seeking commodity support prices higher than those sought by President Reagan.

"I don't feel we should have this presidential gun held at the head of this conference," said Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb. "You can take bluffs for what they are until they're carried out. ... It's my hope we will be able to resolve our differences in a way that strengthens our badly weakened farm economy."

Congressional negotiators on Wednesday began trying to iron out differences between House and Senate versions of the multibillion dollar farm bill. The House version costs some $6 billion more than the Senate version over the next five years, according to Agriculture Department estimates.

Even though the Senate version of the bill costs $2 billion to $3 billion more than Reagan wanted to spend, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block has said it is acceptable and anything straying to far from it would be a veto target.

Only hours before the conferees met, Reagan called key House and Senate members to the White House to reiterate his argument that the House bill is too expensive.

"He (Reagan) didn't threaten a veto," said Rep. William Wampler of Virginia, the ranking Republican on the House Agriculture Committee. "He just said that was it. ... I got the message that anything too far from the Senate bill is not going to be accepted."

On the other hand, Wampler said, a bill with major concessions to the Senate could be difficult to get through the full House, which took strong stands on several issues including the more expensive dairy provisions.

Democrats on the conference committee, joined by several House Republicans, stood their ground against the threat of a veto during the initial session Wednesday, refusing to budge on price support proposals for dairy products. There was even a deadlock over wool and mohair supports, which are almost insignificant when compared to the other commodities.

While Block considers adoption of the Senate dairy support program a key to an acceptable farm bill, he also is pushing for major cuts in House support plans for major grains and fibers like wheat, corn and cotton.

The government supports farm prices through a complex system of loans, purchases and direct payments with the intention of providing minimum income protection keeping farmers in business during bad years while insuring consumers an adequate supply of quality food.

The Wednesday deadlock on dairy supports saw Democrats not only refuse to accept the Senate plan, which effectively freezes supports at the current $13.10 per hundred pound level for several years, but also the rejection of a proposed compromise that would have increased the support level by at least 25 cents next year.

The House plan calls for an increase of an estimated $1.45 per hundred pounds in the support price next Oct. 1 and adjustments in the following years, pushing its cost $500 million over Reagan's target.

Federal orders may have increased commodity costs

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal marketing orders for at least some commodities have increased consumer costs and caused the misuse of resources, a five-month Agriculture Department study says.

"The orders for hops and spearmint oil, California-Arizona navel oranges, valencia oranges and lemons, and perhaps the walnut and filbert orders, seem to have been sed in ways that result in significant resource misallocations," the five-man study team concludes.

"Consumers' costs for foods and beverages containing spearmint oil and hops are probably slightly increased in the short run," the team said.

But it also says that the production, marketing and quality controls covering the 47 fruits, vegetables, nuts and specialty crops under marketing orders have the potential for improving economic efficiency by stabilizing grower income, providing consumers with quality assurances and boosting yield-increasing and cost-reducing research.

"Because many of these effects cannot be quantified, the net effect of marketing orders on efficiency or welfare remains uncertain," the review says. "In most cases of quantity control, efficiency losses are offset to varying degrees by stabilization gains."

In releasing the 180-page document, Block said he would announce new guidelines soon for existing and future marketing orders and then evaluate each of the 47 orders individually.

Block said he was specifically concerned about the effect of marketing order provisions that restrict entry of new producers, limit the quantities of a commodity that can be marketed, require portions of some commodities to be diverted to secondary markets or put to non-food uses and possibly impose non-tariff trade barriers through quality requirements.

Although critical of restrictions on production and quantities marketed, the review said infrequent use of those provisions could be justified because they could protect growers from severely low prices.

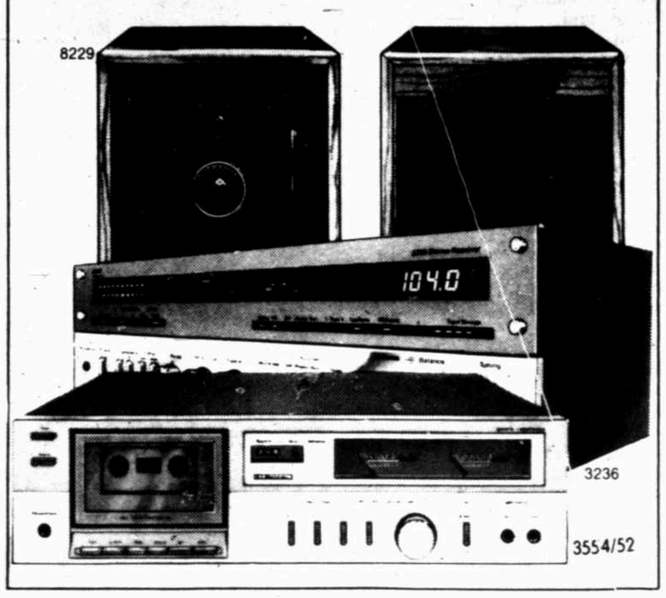

The review, while making no formal recommendations, said that without changes the system will just continue with the same problems it has today, including restrictions that can and have increased consumer prices.

New Jersey election may be delayed by recount

By JIM MANION
Associated Press Writer

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — With voting machines impounded and state police guarding the ballots today after the contest went into overtime, there was little rest for the weary candidates in New Jersey's gubernatorial election.

"An election is nerve-wracking enough, but to have this tacked on to the end is doubly so," said Republican candidate Thomas H. Kean, who held a small, unofficial lead over Democrat James J. Florio in Tuesday's election.

Aides said Florio may initiate proceedings today for a recount, which could delay the outcome for several weeks.

Since it was unclear which candidate had won, outgoing Democratic Gov. Brendan T. Byrne said each should be treated like a governor-elect and ordered state police protection for both.

The News Election Service's final but unofficial count, released Wednesday, showed Kean having 1,142,174 votes to 1,141,016 for Florio. The tally by the vote-counting service for news organizations had shown the lead passing back and forth early Wednesday.

That gave Kean an unofficial margin of 1,158 votes, the narrowest in a New Jersey gubernatorial election since Democrat George C. Ludlow defeated Republican Frederic A. Potts by 651 votes in 1880, according to state records. But only about 245,000 ballots were cast that year.

"It's fair to speculate that we'll go for a recount," a Florio aide who asked not to be identified said late Wednesday. "You're talking about over 2 million votes and the difference is a fraction of 1 percent."

On a request from a lawyer who said he had authorization from both Kean and Florio, a judge Wednesday ordered state police to oversee security of all absentee ballot records and of voting machines impounded by county officials.

Lawyer Irwin Kimmelman, who works for Kean, said "both candidates would feel better with a uniformed state trooper standing out there rather than some political appointee."

Mark Sullivan, a retired state Supreme Court justice acting as a Superior Court judge, said the state police takeover was warranted to "secure the integrity of the voting records."

Although both candidates said the voting results left them unsettled, each expressed confidence that he would emerge the winner.

Florio, a congressman from Camden County, said he telephoned Kean early Wednesday and they agreed on ensuring the integrity of the vote-counting process so the winner could assume office "with no cloud over (his) election."

During the tense morning after his election-night party, Kean said he "went for a walk in the woods" and played with his children to pass the time.

"It's nerve-wracking, but it's nice to be at home with my family," said Kean, 46, who had proposed reductions in business taxes.

Florio, 44, who had called the Reagan economic plans "mean-spirited," spent most of Wednesday at his offices, waiting, taking phone calls and meeting with aides and officials. By dinnertime he said he wanted to go see a movie to break the monotony of waiting, news secretary Fred Hillman said.

Secretary of State Donald Lan sent officials from his department to county election offices Wednesday and from the county figures he compiled his own unofficial tally, which he would not reveal.

Aides to Kean were given the tally but would not disclose it.

Florio aides said they expected to see the figures today. Lan served as Florio's deputy campaign manager.

Essex County, the state's most populous, has already conducted a recount because officials discovered they may have left out a district and counted another twice. After the recount, Florio had 1,664 fewer votes fewer, and Kean had 771 fewer votes. That adjustment was included in the final NES figures.

County election officials must certify their vote totals by Monday and, barring delays from a recount, the state Board of Elections has until Dec. 1 to declare an official winner.

State law says if there is to be a recount, it must be requested within 10 days of the election. State records show no other recount for a gubernatorial election.

A recount, which would cost the candidate who requests it an estimated $141,000, could delay the final outcome of the election "at least until December," said Byrne spokesman John Farmer.

ERA supporters played key role in electing Virginia's governor

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women, angry about President Reagan's opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment, played a key role in electing a Democrat as governor of Virginia and improved the ERA's chances in that state, leaders of the women's movement say.

"We would like to respectfully report to you that the women of this nation are sending you a message in the Virginia elections," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, and Kathy Wilson, president of the National Women's Political Caucus, in a telegram to Reagan.

"We are determined to organize women politically and to withdraw female support from Republican leadership when it turns its back on constitutional equality for women," they said.

The ERA, barring discrimination based on sex, needs the approval of 38 states by June 30, 1982 to become part of the Constitution. So far, 35 states have ratified the amendment. Five have voted to rescind their ratifications, but the validity of such efforts is in question.

Democrat Charles S. Robb defeated Republican J. Marshall Coleman in Tuesday's voting in Virginia. A Washington Post poll taken last week said women voters in Virginia favored Robb by a margin of 56 percent to 39 percent with the rest undecided. Coleman led among male voters, 49 percent to 46 percent with the rest undecided.

Both candidates endorsed the ERA, but women's leaders considered Robb was more likely to press the legislature to ratify it. His wife, Lynda Bird, and mother-in-law, Lady Bird Johnson, are enthusiastic ERA backers.

Ms. Smeal said a number of legislators who oppose ERA were defeated in Virginia. Even though Republicans picked up eight seats, she said ERA's chances of winning ratification had improved.

But she stopped short of predicting victory. The Virginia Legislature for eight years has refused to pass the ERA. During most of that time, the proposal has not even emerged from committee, so NOW does not know where many members stand on the issue.

Last February, knowing they were beaten, ERA proponents in the Virginia House of Delegates did not even press for committee hearings or debate of the issue.

Yet Virginia is usually listed among the four or five states where ERA supporters think they have a chance of winning. Last month, answering reporters' questions in Phoenix, Ariz., Ms. Wilson said, "We feel we stand a chance in Virginia and are taking close looks at Georgia and Florida."

Tribunal readying to settle claims

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Two years after the seizure of the American hostages in Tehran, American and Iranian legal experts are quietly preparing to settle billions of dollars in claims resulting from the 14-month crisis.

Arthur Rovine, the U.S. government's agent, said 17 American companies have filed claims since the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal opened for business Oct. 20. He said he expects 600 to 700 by the deadline Jan. 19, with the first hearings in the spring.

As Rovine was meeting Wednesday with reporters at the American Embassy in The Hague, demonstrations were held in Iran to mark the second anniversary of the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Tehran residents said in contrast to the thousands that used to mass in front of the embassy and perform for the TV cameras, only a few hundred turned out in the capital despite a weeklong publicity campaign.

The Algiers agreements that ended the hostage crisis last Jan. 19 provided for a nine-member tribunal — three Americans, three Iranians and three from other countries — to make "final and binding" decisions on financial claims resulting from the takeover. A billion dollars of the Iranian assets the U.S. government froze were deposited in the Dutch Central Bank to pay settlements.

Iranian companies and individuals as well as Americans can file claims, but so far only Americans have done so. They allege expropriation by the Iranian revolutionary regime, breach of contract or failure to pay debts.

The hostages are made ineligible by the Algiers agreements.

"It's one of the largest and most significant arbitration processes in history," said Rovine. "It will help develop the rules of international law, and there will certainly be a great deal learned about the whole process of international arbitration."

With Gunnar Lagergren of Sweden as chairman, the tribunal is clearing up procedural matters before it begins hearing claims. The nine arbitrators and the Iranian and American agents are methodically modifying the 41 rules of the U.N. Commission on International Trade Law to fit the tribunal's needs. They have 17 rules to go, including whether the hearings and decisions will be public.

Another dispute, to be decided by mid-January, is over the disposition of the interest on the billion-dollar "security account." At 15 percent, it would come to $150 million a year until payment of claims begins to reduce the fund.

Also at issue are the Dutch bank's fees and immunity and whether out-of-court settlements can be paid from the fund.

Rovine said a number of claims have already been resolved in talks between Iranian and American representatives in several European cities. Although every out-of-court settlement reduces the tribunal's workload, officials say its work is still likely to continue for years.

Only claims above $250,000 may be submitted directly to the tribunal by lawyers for the claimants. Lesser claims must be handled by the agents for the two governments, and Rovine said he is negotiating a lump-sum settlement covering about 2,800 of these.

The tribunal has been making its headquarters in the Peace Palace, the home of the World Court, but moves in December to rented premises in a commercial office building in the city.

An official who asked not to be identified said the organizing sessions have been "very friendly and constructive. They have gone more slowly than we would have hoped, but we have made progress."

Former embassy employee remembers takeover

EDITOR'S NOTE: Fereshteh Emami was an employee of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran when Iranian militants seized the compound Nov. 4, 1979. This is her account of that day's events.

By FERESHTEH EMAMI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Nov. 4, 1979 was students' day in Iran, marking the one-year anniversary of the killing of university students by soldiers of the shah.

It was also the day some 400 militants seized the U.S. Embassy, the diplomatic staff, and the attention of the rest of the world. And it was the first of 444 days of anguish and frustration for the United States and the families of 52 American hostages who were released Jan. 20, 1981 after a complicated financial settlement involving millions of dollars.

Islamic revolutionaries who had helped topple Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi months before were commemorating the day the shah's troops stormed Tehran University and shot several students to death.

Soon after the embassy opened at 7:30 a.m. groups of militants, most of them in their late teens and early 20s, began marching past the embassy in groups of several hundred. A larger, more vocal, group arrived about 10:30 a.m. and refused to leave.

Fifteen minutes later I looked at the front gates of the embassy through the windows of my office in the red brick chancellory building and saw the militants had opened the black iron gates and entered the compound.

I rushed out of the office and alerted the Marine guards, who were watching the beginnings of the siege on closed-circuit television.

The Marines instructed the employees to go to the basement — a minimum security area — but quickly changed their plans and told us to go to the second floor — a maximum security area. We climbed upstairs and sat on the red carpet in the corridor, where about 50 to 60 American and Iranian staffers gathered.

Two Iranian-speaking staff members were talking with the students outside through megaphones. The militants said they would leave soon and they just wanted to stage a sit-in to protest the U.S. government's decision to allow the deposed shah to enter the United States for medical treatment.

We were assured by one Marine that all was well and the students would soon leave. We could hear the shouting of the mob which by then — about 12:30 p.m. — had swelled to several thousand.

A siren — the signal that someone had forced his way into the embassy building —sounded.

Minutes later, the Marines fired tear gas canisters into the crowd outside but most of the gas drifted back and we all began crying and coughing.

The Marines distributed gas masks but it was impossible to talk with them on. I took mine off. Some employees dashed into their offices.

Orders were shouted. There was confusion but no panic.

Marines returned to the second floor and told us we were going to evacuate the embassy. Minutes later the orders were changed: we were to sit tight because the students would leave the building.

Embassy staffers began barricading the door with desks and chairs.

Through the door, the militants said they would leave after they had asked some questions and looked at some papers.

Three Marines then removed the barricades and opened the door for the militants, who immediately told everyone in the corridor to line up and put their hands on their heads.

They marched us down the stairs. We were blindfolded, with our hands tied behind our backs.

A secretary in the finance department started crying when the militants began to tie up and blindfold her boss — a white-haired American. "Please don't hurt him! He is a good man."

We were marched into the open compound. I could feel the rain and hear the cameras clicking but we were blindfolded. We Iranians were separated from the Americans and taken to a house on the compound, where they untied our hands and removed the blindfolds.

We heard the 2 p.m. news on Tehran Radio and learned that the militants identified themselves as "in the Imam's (Khomeini) line"— an indication they had the blessing of the clergy — and that they demanded the extradition of the shah.

We were questioned as a group, about 15 Iranian employes in all. Several Iranian employes engaged the militants in an argument and were threatened.

After the questioning, one of the militants said he thought I should be held since I had been a journalist before and might have access to information about the files in the embassy. Finally they agreed that since I had only worked at the embassy for 35 days I could go.

About two hours later we were escorted into the grounds by unarmed teen-agers. I was taken to my car, which was searched.

We drove to the back gate and the car was searched again.

Then the gates opened and I was free.

Taking positive action

Parking holds the key to the future of Midland's downtown business district. Without it we will suffer; with it we will continue to have a viable downtown.

It was the recognition of that fact that prompted Midland city and county officials to go before the Texas Industrial Commission in Austin last week to urge that the commission favorably view an application from Midland Development Corp. for some $13 million in tax-exempt industrial revenue bonds to finance construction of a major downtown parking garage.

The commission members hedged, noting that industrial revenue bonds really were not intended for use in such a project and that the area in which the project is to be located would have to be designated a blighted area before a formal application can be filed.

Those concerns are justified to a degree. But the commission members should take the time to carefully consider Midland's unusual situation. The Tall City is experiencing unprecedented growth, not only in population but also in the business and corporate community.

Predictions indicate the growth trend will bring more people and buildings to Midland in future years. Those additional vehicles will overburden already strained parking facilities and downtown thoroughfares.

The likely impact in the absence of additional parking will be stagnation of Midland's vibrant downtown business district. Numerous cities throughout Texas are now experiencing serious problems with their downtown business districts because steps were not taken years ago to prevent problems from developing. TIC now has the opportunity to take action in anticipation of an industrial problem, instead of adhering to the old policy of closing the gate after the cows have already left.

Whether the commission approves the Midland Development Corp.'s request will have tremendous impact on the future of Midland's downtown area.

It truly is time for this type of positive action. We hope the members of the Texas Industrial Commission will recognize the fact that Midland's situation is not like those of other Texas cities and that the industrial revenue bond program can be the vehicle for preventing the problems other cities are encountering.

Credit is to go to all of the city and county officials taking an active role in trying to solve one of Midland's growing headaches.

OPEC stability eroding

Saudi Arabia appears to have re-established its commanding position in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The Saudis have persuaded the other 12 OPEC members to adopt a uniform price schedule for oil, and are reducing their own production by nearly a million barrels a day to help make the new prices stick.

The recent agreement in Geneva on a $34 a barrel benchmark price for oil was perhaps less significant than the announcement later that Saudi production was being cut to 8.5 million barrels a day. At that rate, the Saudis calculate that the current surplus of crude oil on the world market will be dried up by the middle of next year. That, in turn, would assure that OPEC producers can get the prices they want.

Sheik Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, wants OPEC to stabilize the oil price and then "index" it upward to the degree that inflation lowers the purchasing power of the U.S. dollars used to reckon prices on the world market. Although Mr. Yamani insists this is a reasonable policy, it is reasonable only if we accept the premise that OPEC should be fixing prices in the first place.

OPEC began losing its grip on the market when its own steep price increases made petroleum dear enough to send the world scurrying in search of new sources, substitutes and ways to get along with less. The resulting decline in demand created the crisis within OPEC which Saudi Arabia is now attempting to resolve.

Although the cartel has restored some unity in its ranks, its ability to control prices and supplies has diminished. In its heyday, OPEC was supplying 60 percent of the oil reaching the world market. Today is it supplying only 45 percent. That is the result of the intense exploration for oil outside the OPEC sphere, and the more this continues, the more problems the OPEC ministers are going to have.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Russians finding Paktians fierce fighters

WASHINGTON — The leader of Afghanistan's famed and feared Mujahidin guerrilla force, Mullah Jallalludin, cannot be interviewed by dialing a telephone or hailing a taxi to his headquarters.

Jack Anderson

To talk to him, my roving correspondent, Peter Grant, had to hike for several days over five rugged mountain ranges, disguised as a guerrilla, dodging Soviet patrols and armed helicopters.

It was an arduous experience that gave my reporter an insight into the character of the fierce men who are fighting the Russian invaders with meager weapons, pitted against tanks and helicopters.

"We would start walking at 5 in the morning and often keep going until dark," wrote Grant. "Breakfast consisted of bread and tea. For lunch maybe we would have a little fruit. Sometimes we were lucky and would find eggs or meat for supper.

"Some of my Mujahidin escorts were old men, 60 or 70 years of age. They bounded up and down the mountains without even breathing hard. They took delight in watching me collapse in exhaustion at every rest stop.

"For these rugged people, a 12-hour march over mountainous terrain is an afternoon nature stroll. They can live for weeks on bread, tea and cooking oil. Of course, many die under these harsh conditions. But the survivors are some of the sturdiest, most durable people on earth. The Russians have learned the hard way what fierce fighters they can be."

Fighting is second nature to the man of Paktia province who guided Grant through their craggy corner of the earth. The homes in the province were grim fortress-like outposts, often with watchtowers and rifle slits.

Before the Russians came, the central government in Afghanistan always exempted the men of Paktia from military service. They needed no training to fight if they were disposed to do so, and any effort to conscript them might have riled them and caused them to fight against the government.

The Russian invaders have discovered the war-like nature of the people of Paktia. "The province is almost completely in the hands of the Mujahidin," Grant reported. "The Soviet and Afghan communist forces control only the largest cities and a few reinforced garrisons." Later, Grant's ferocious companions attacked one of the garrisons.

"My hosts," he wrote, "were completely unconcerned about the real danger of an air attack. We walked out in the open in broad daylight. We passed dozens of destroyed Russian-made tanks and personnel carriers, mute testimony to the determination of the Paktians to preserve their freedom."

Around the campfire at night, the guerrillas regaled each other with tales of their battle exploits. They spit out frequent "rat-tat-tats" to dramatize the firepower of the Soviet machine guns. When Grant tried to snap pictures, the men insisted on strapping on their bandoleers and grasping their rifles in death-defying poses.

The account from my reporter added: "One 'feast' — which meant meat was served — was attended by about 20 rebel officers. The presiding mullah announced that Allah protects the faithful in battle and every prayer offered during the fighting is repeated 7,000 times. Any fighter who dies, of course, is shaheed — or martyred — with a guaranteed place in Paradise."

Yet Grant found these remarkable people, for all their aggressiveness, to be warm, generous and nature-loving. He saw a mean, bristling Paktian warrior pluck a flower and pin it to his turban during a long trek. "Often we would be physically dragged into homes for tea by the local inhabitants," Grant reported.

My bone-weary correspondent despaired that he would ever reach his objective. "I was beginning to wonder if I was ever going to meet the rebel leader. Then we entered a deserted mud village overlooking the Zurmat Plain. I was led to a thickly carpeted room and told to wait. About an hour later, the terrible Jallalludin and his entourage entered the room. The smell of gun powder clung to them.

"That night, several of his men led me to a cliff overlooking the plain. Below in the darkness, I saw the vivid streams of tracer bullets being fired back and forth and heard the thunder of shelling. There lay Tamir, my next stop."

WHAT'S NEXT? Peter Grant has a ringside seat to the battle of Tamir.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES — It wasn't just the nation's kiddies who were out trick-or-treating on the eve of Halloween. A good portion of the Defense Communications Agency, which oversees world communications among our armed forces, decided to get in on the fun. To celebrate something called "DCA partnership day," the agency chiefs decided to operate on a "minimum manning level." Many of the 2,000-member staff then donned costumes and danced to band music.

The Republicans have set up a political hotline that has Democrats worried about next year's campaign for control of Congress. A new computer system links GOP national headquarters in Washington to party campaign headquarters in every state. Daily feeds will inform the grass-roots candidates on a variety of topics — the latest polling data, voter trends and advance looks at President Reagan's reports to Congress.

— Industry representatives have infested state boards that are supposed to safeguard the American consumers from agricultural pesticide hazards, according to federal auditors. They reviewed nearly 3,000 pesticide safety cases in 11 states and found nearly one-fourth of them had been improperly investigated. They found "questionable" remedial action was taken in more than one-sixth of the cases. In Arkansas, the auditors' report notes, all but two members of the state's two pesticide safety committees have ties to pesticide interests.

ART BUCHWALD

Bubbling brew may be only bitter stew

During the election campaign, President Reagan's Republican opponent, George Bush, described Mr. Reagan's economic plans as "Voodoo Economics." I thought this was all political hyperbole, until I walked behind the White House on Halloween night, and found a witch doctor stirring up a broth in a large black kettle.

Art Buchwald

"What's cooking?" I asked him.

"A little recession," he said mournfully. "I think I made a mistake in my recipe."

"Let me taste it," I said. He handed me a wooden spoon. "Ughghgh," I spit it out. "It's much worse than I thought. What did you put in it?"

"I know it's bitter, but I thought that's what was needed. I took all the fat off the bone and then I cut up the bone. Then I added a dose of interest rates and the pot boiled over. I have to start all over again."

"What are you doing now?"

"I'm throwing out the baby with the bath water."

"What for?"

"If I don't, the recession will thicken and we'll be in a worse stew than we are now. I have to start from scratch."

"You Voodoo Economic witch doctors can really cook up a storm."

"Don't talk. Let's see. I have to throw in a little of this and a little of that."

"What did you put in the pot?"

"Sugar supports, peanuts, butter and an Air Force base President Reagan promised a Boll Weevil congressman in Florida."

"The stew is starting to boil over again," I said.

"Well, it's not my fault," the witch doctor said angrily. "They told me if I cut out all the waste and chopped up large cuts of taxes, there would be more pie for everyone."

"I thought you were making stew."

"It started out to be a glorious economic pie. Now I don't know what the hell it is."

"Maybe it needs more tax seasoning than you thought," I suggested.

"We don't call them taxes. We call them revenue enhancers. They're additives that I'm going to have to put in whether I want to or not."

"What are you dumping in now?"

"I'm peppering it with blame. When the people finally realize what a mess we've cooked up, we're going to show them where the blame is."

"What kind of blame are you putting in?"

"Congressional Blame No. 1. You sprinkle it on everything, and people don't know what they're eating."

"That's some recipe for an economic stew."

"It might not be stew after it's finished. It could turn out to be gruel."

"I don't understand it. The way Reagan and his people described this dish, it was going to be tasty and delicious and there would be enough to go around for everyone."

"A Voodoo Economist can do just so much," the witch doctor said. "They promised me all the ingredients and couldn't deliver. I'll be grateful if this mess doesn't turn into a heavy recession hash."

He tasted it. "I think it needs some more working poor."

You're not going to put more working poor into the pot?" I pleaded.

"Well, you don't expect me to throw in tobacco crops, do you?"

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Nov. 5, the 309th day of 1981. There are 56 days remaining in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 5, 1950, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported the massing of Chinese communists in North Korea.

On this date:

In 1605, the so-called "Gunpowder Plot" by Guy Fawkes to blow up Britain's Houses of Parliament was uncovered.

In 1962, Saudi Arabia severed relations with the United Arab Republic.

In 1970, the Vatican reformed the Roman Catholic mass.

Five years ago: A potential strike was averted when the United Auto Workers reached tentative contract agreement with Chrysler Corp.

One year ago: Ronald Reagan became the 40th president of the United States with an Election Day victory over incumbent Jimmy Carter.

GEORGE F. WILL

Abortion controversy has overlooked one aspect — pain!

WASHINGTON — In the eight years since the Supreme Court nationalized the abortion controversy, one facet of that subject has been neglected: pain. Abortion is painful for the aborted.

George F. Will

The neglect is explainable. To opponents of abortion, death, not pain, is the paramount issue. And proponents of abortion need (emotionally or logically, or both) to deny the possibility of fetal pain.

In its 1973 decision legislating abortion on demand, the Supreme Court announced that fetal life is not alive. At least that is what the Court seems to have meant (if it can be said to have meant anything) when it described the fetus as "potential life." Those who support the 1973 decision are committed to the idea that a fetus, being only "potential" life, cannot feel pain, pain being an attribute of actual life.

Thus does a legal absurdity breed a biological falsehood. This intellectual trainwreck is the subject of an essay in "The Human Life Review" by Professor John Noonan of the University of California (Berkeley) Law School. There are, he notes, four principal means of abortion.

Sharp curettage involves a knife killing the fetus (if the amateur embryologists on the Court will allow us to speak of "killing" life that is merely "potential"). In suction curettage, a vacuum pump sucks out the fetus in bits (and a knife cleans out any remnants). In second trimester and later abortions, saline solution is injected into the amniotic fluid. The salt seems to act as a poison; the skin of the fetus, when delivered, resembles skin soaked in acid. If by accident the solution leaks into the body of the mother, she experiences pain that is described as "severe." The fetus can be in this solution for two hours before its heart (a stubborn bit of "potential" life) stops beating. Alternatively, the mother can be given a dosage of a chemical sufficient to impair the circulation and cardiac functioning of the fetus, which will be delivered dead or dying.

A fetus, like an infant or an animal, has no language in which to express pain. But we infer, and empathize with, the pain of creatures, such as baby seals, which lack language to express pain.

There are uncertainties about the precise points in fetal development at which particular kinds of sensations are experienced. But observations of development and behavior indicate that by the 56th day, a fetus can move. Discomfort may occasion the movement. Tactile stimulation of the mouth produces reflex action about day 59 or 60. By day 77 the fetus develops sensitivity to touch on hands, feet, genital and anal areas, and begins to swallow. Noonan believes that the physiological literature teaches that "beginning with the presence of sense receptors and spinal responses, there is as much reason to believe that the unborn are capable of pain as that they are capable of sensation."

Americans are proud of their humane feelings and are moved by empathy. Thus, we regulate the ways animals can be killed. Certain kinds of traps are banned. Cattle cannot be slaughtered in ways deemed careless about pain. Stray dogs and cats must be killed in certain humane ways.

But no laws regulate the suffering of the aborted. Indeed, Planned Parenthood, the most extreme pro-abortion lobby, won a Supreme Court ruling that it is unconstitutional to ban the saline abortion technique. That's right: The Court discovered that the "privacy" right to abortion, which right the framers of the Constitution neglected to mention, even confers a right to particular abortion techniques.

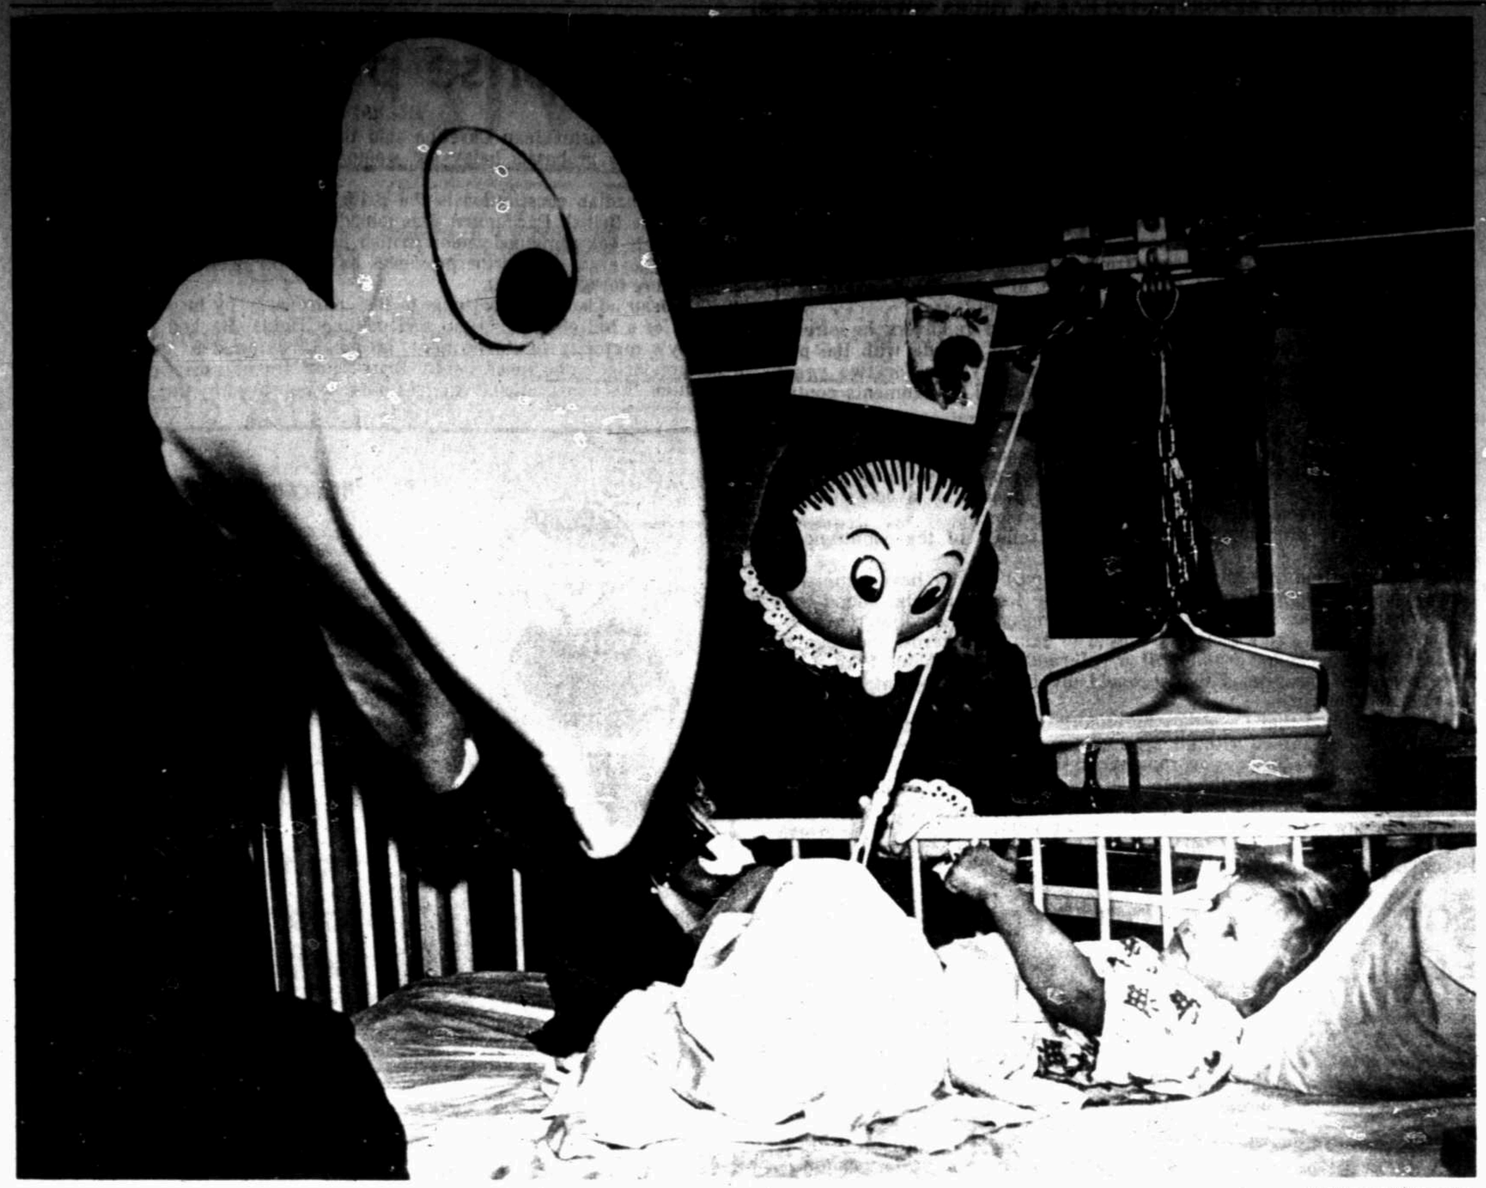

Most pro-abortion persons have a deeply felt and understandable need to keep the discussion of abortion as abstract as possible. They become bitter when opponents use photographs to document early fetal development. The sight of something that looks so much like a child complicates the task of trying to believe that there is nothing there but "potential" life. And if fetal pain is acknowledged, America has a problem: Its easy conscience about 1.6 million abortions a year depends on the supposition that such pain is impossible.

Magda Denes, in her book, "In Necessity and Sorrow: Life and Death in an Abortion Hospital," brought to her subject not anti-abortion convictions but a reporter's eye for concrete detail. Examining the body of an aborted child, she described the face as showing "the agonized tautness of one forced to die too soon." That is a description to bear in mind this day, as many thousands of abortions occur.

Jury selection in Harrelson trial to begin Monday

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge says FBI agents did not violate the constitutional rights of Jo Ann Starr Harrelson and he denied motions to reopen a pretrial hearing and to suppress evidence in her weapons violation trial.

The rulings Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders cleared the way for jury selection to begin Monday.

Mrs. Harrelson is the wife of Charles V. Harrelson, a man authorities have identified as the prime target of a massive federal investigation into the assassination of U.S. Distrtict Judge John H. Wood Jr.

She is accused of using a false name to buy a hunting rifle agents said may be linked to the Wood slaying.

Prosecutors contend Mrs. Harrelson used a fictitious name to purchase a high-powered rifle — capable of firing the same type bullet that killed Wood — just 12 days before the judge was shot outside his San Antonio townhouse on May 29, 1979.

However, Mrs. Harrelson, who was granted immunity for her testimony before a federal grand jury investigating the Wood slaying, contends the evidence against her was obtained in violation of her constitutional rights and should be suppressed.

SANDERS, IN A four-page order, rejected Mrs. Harrelson's arguments and ruled FBI agents did not violate her constitutional rights.

Sanders also denied her claim that the government's evidence violated her confidential relationships with El Paso attorney Joe Chagra and with her husband.

The motions were filed Oct. 22 by two Dallas defense attorneys. Co-counsel Ed Mason said Sanders' order did not not surprise him.

"As far as I know, the case will proceed to trial Monday morning," Mason said.

Jury selection is expected to begin at 9 a.m., said a law clerk in Sanders' office.

Government prosecutors filed arguments against the motions Oct. 30. Assistant U.S. Attorney Jay Effington said the motions, and a third discovery motion not yet ruled upon, are without merit.

Investigators used a map found in attorney Chagra's home in a fruitless search of a wooded area east of Dallas for the murder weapon, an FBI agent has testified.

Martin's lawyers to ask for trial delay

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for indicted Rep. Mike Martin planned to ask a state judge today to delay the lawmaker's aggravated perjury trial, scheduled for Monday.

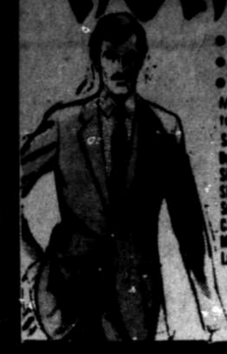

District Judge Mace Thurman scheduled a pretrial hearing for today to sort out various motions filed in the case. The defense wants a delay in the trial because lead counsel Frank Maloney is busy in a federal case in Brownsville.

Martin, R-Longview, was indicted in September for allegedly lying to the grand jury that investigated Martin's July 31 shooting. The grand jurors charged that Martin lied to them when he said he did not set up the shotgun attack that left him with a wounded elbow.

Charles Goff, Martin's cousin, said Martin hired him to be the gunman in a plot aimed at winning publicity for Martin.

Defense motions filed by Maloney include a request to dismiss the indictment because Martin was not properly sworn in when he testified to the grand jury.

Opposition greets Trudeau's surprise proposal

OTTAWA (AP) — A surprise proposal by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau for a referendum on the bill of rights he wants to incorporate into a new Canadian constitution found no favor with most of the 10 provincial premiers.

Only Quebec Premier Rene Levesque and Ontario's William Davis were ready to support the proposal, and Levesque hedged. The other eight provincial leaders expressed strong opposition to the plan that dominated the third day of the meeting to try to solve the impasse over Trudeau's attempt to bring the constitution home from Britain.

During a lunch break Wednesday, Trudeau told reporters he offered to transfer the constitution from British control to Canada with the proposed charter of rights attached but held in abeyance for two years while negotiations between the federal and provincial governments continued.

If there was no agreement after two years, "we would put the whole question of a charter to the people of Canada," he said.

Most of the premiers conceded that the proposal took them by surprise, but said they doubted it would produce enough of a consensus to bring about an agreement.

"The odds are probably loaded towards a failure of the conference," Levesque predicted.

Davis emphasized that all the proposals still on the table have some similarity and that common ground could still be found. But he added that a referendum is sometimes necessary when a consensus cannot be reached.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed vowed to campaign across the country against the federal government if a referendum was held. Like most other opponents, he argued that it would divide Canada by infringing on the rights of the provinces.

Trudeau claimed that Levesque, heretofore one of the chief opponents of the bill of rights, agreed with his referendum proposal "so we have a new alliance between the Quebec government and the Canadian government." But Levesque, after embracing the proposal, later said it was so complicated he was not sure he understood it.

Trudeau now has offered to hold a referendum on both contentious issues in his constitutional package, the bill of rights and the formula for amending the constitution.

Justice Minister Jean Chretien said the government did not plan to introduce new proposals today but would wait to hear what the provinces offered.

The Canadian constitution is the British North America Act of 1867, an act of the British Parliament that joined the colonial provinces in confederation. It has remained under British parliamentary control because the federal government and the provinces have never been able to agree on a procedure for amending it.

Trudeau added a new wrinkle to the controversy by insisting on the addition of a bill of social, legal and political rights. Backed by his Liberal Party's majority in Parliament, he has threatened to go ahead without provincial concurrence, but the British Parliament is wary of violating the tradition that constitutional changes must be approved by the provinces.

Baby born in bathroom after mom's 'false' labor

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A 26-year-old woman and her newborn son were reported in good condition following the baby's birth in a hospital bathroom three hours after doctors said her labor pains were false.

Marion Hues and her son Shaun were sent home from Barnes Hospital Tuesday, said hospital spokeswoman Daisy Shepard.

Ms. Hues was apparently in labor when she arrived at the hospital Saturday morning, Mrs. Shepard said, and she was sent to the labor room but was told to go home after about three hours when doctors decided the labor pains were false.

Series brings first place Nielsen finish to ABC

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Series, historically a ratings winner this time of year, helped ABC to a second straight No. 1 finish in the networks' weekly ratings competition, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

The Series finale between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the New York Yankees was the top-rated program in the week ending Nov. 1, with a rating of 37.2. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 37.2 percent saw at least part of the game.

The rating for the sixth and deciding game was well below the 40 recorded for the championship game last year, between Philadelphia and Kansas City, broadcast by NBC.

The networks normally would count on higher ratings for a championship series involving teams from the two largest television markets, but ratings for the Series this year were consistently below those of last season — presumably the result of fan disenchantment because of this summer's strike by the players.

ABC, with five of the week's 10 highest-rated shows, recorded an average rating for the week of 20.4, to 19.7 for CBS and 15.6 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the period, 20.4 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were watching ABC.

ABC's "World News Tonight" beat out CBS' "Evening News" for first place for the first time in a month in the three-way race. "Evening News" finished No. 3, behind the ABC program and NBC's "Nightly News."

Tony Randall's "Love, Sidney," on NBC, was the highest-rated of the season's newly introduced series, in 26th place. "Hill Street Blues," NBC's multiple Emmy-winner that struggled in the ratings last season, scored its highest rating ever — 18.3 — but finished 31st in the week's competition.

ABC's "Maggie," No. 63, and "Fitz and Bones" on NBC, No. 66, were the only new series among the week's five lowest-rated programs. A repeat of the NBC movie "The Brady Girls Get Married," was 64th, with a CBS film, "Hide in Plain Sight" 65th and a rerun special on NBC, "Marriage — Alive and Well," 67th.

World Series, Game 6, Los Angeles vs. New York, with a rating of 37.2 representing 30.3 million homes, ABC; "60 Minutes," 30.5 or 24.8 million; Movie — "Every Which Way But Loose," 29.2 or 23.8 million; "M-A-S-H," 26.4 or 21.5 million; and "Dallas," 24.9 or 20.3 million, all CBS; "Three's Company," 24.4 or 19.9 million; and World Series, Game 6, Pre-Game Show, 23.9 or 19.5 million, both ABC; NFL Football, Post-Game Show, 23.8 or 19.4 million, CBS; and "Too Close for Comfort," 22.6 or 18.4 million; and "NFL Monday Night Football," Houston vs. Pittsburgh," 22.2 or 18.1 million, both ABC.

The next 10 programs:

"Hart to Hart" and "Laverne and Shirley," both ABC, "Little House on the Prairie," NBC, and NFL Football, prime-time carryover, CBS, four-way tie; "Love Boat," ABC; Movie — "Blazing Saddles," and "Dukes of Hazzard," both CBS; "Happy Days," ABC; Movie — "Splendor in the Grass," NBC, and "Magnum, P.I.," CBS.

What's cooking

Betty Hackney

Mrs. John Hackney and her family are long-time residents of Midland, having moved here in 1951.

She and her husband have two daughters, Lynn and Kathryn, who both graduated from Midland High School and went on to graduate from the college of their choice. They now have homes of their own in other cities.

"During the past 30 years, we hve been members of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and I have enjoyed my association there with the Episcopal Church Women," said Mrs. Hackney.

She has been elected to the board at various times and has also been active in many other organizations in Midland. She is currently on the board of directors at High Sky Girls Ranch and of Episcopal Church Women.

She explained that, during the past few years, there has been a growing interest in publishing a church cookbook. In January, 1981, the organization began working toward this goal.

On Oct. 6, "A Simply Divine Cookbook" was introduced to the public. "We are extremely proud of it and it has been graciously received in the community," said Mrs. Hackney.

The book is a collection of recipes for either the gourmet cook or the beginner. It is the effort of many volunteers. Proceeds from the sales will be used in the outreach programs of the church for those in the community who are needy, "regardless of their church affiliation," said Mrs. Hackney.

The book may be purchased at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois, in the bookstore between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. or in the office from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

The book is also available at A La Carte, Upstairs Downstairs, or Butler's Pantry.

Gift-wrapped copies will be available after Nov. 15. For information, or for delivery of three or more copies, telephone 683-8588 or 682-2290. Cost of the book is $8.40, including tax.

CROWN PORK ROAST

10 lb. crown pork roast
salt and pepper

Baste while cooking with:
Apricot preserves (10 or 12 oz.)
1/2 cup dry wine
4 tsp. dry mustard
2 tsp. rosemary

Bake 5 hours at 325 degrees. Keep adding a little water to bottom of roasting pan to keep the liquid from cooking dry.

CRANBERRY STUFFING FOR CROWN ROAST
(For 8-10 lbs)

1 1/2 cup. Pepperidge Farm cornbread stuffing mix
2 ribs celery
1/2 lb. sausage, cooked and crumbled
1 apple, cored and diced
2 tbsp. minced onion
1 cup broth (or orange juice)
1 1/2 cup chopped cranberries
salt and pepper
few dashes of poultry seasoning

Saute celery and onions with sausage. Mix this mixtire, including sausage drippings, with other ingredients. Fill cavity of roast with dressing and cook for the last hour of cooking time.

Settle down for winter with cookbooks

By PHYLLIS C. RICHMAN
The Washington Post

Two cartons of this fall's harvest of cookbooks beg for attention, but a reader grows full just looking at them. Picky eaters we become in the midst of such plenitude. But three stand out, for among those masses they have unique messages. The first simply compels you to cook; the others present cooking techniques and kitchen science — James Beard with the what of cooking, Beverly Cox and Joan Whitman on the how of cooking and Howard Hillman explaining why.

I was happy with the old one, but somebody obviously saw a need for a new James Beard, and so here he is, in this year's and his 19th book: "The New James Beard" (Knopf, $16.95). Another 598 pages of the endless ideas and thoughts on food from the food writer who, at age 78, has slimmed down but outgrown all honorary titles: The Dean of American Cookery, America's Eminent Food Writer, whatever.

So what's new, James Beard? First, the format. While the book is certainly chockablock with recipes, they don't end at the end. Many of them go on to variations. Beef Tongue with Provencal Tomato Sauce evolves to Tongue with Chicken Liver Sauce, with Madeira Sauce, with Spinach, and Tongue Pot-au-Feu. Not really new? Julia Child did it in her first volume, and certainly Beard himself has done it before? True, but it is a crisp and fresh-looking format, and why quibble? Beard himself calls his new approach more flexible and further claims, "Almost every dish in the first six chapters can be served either as an appetizer or as a main course, including most of the soups, the salads and the veget$bles."

Beard deals with new ingredients: green peppercorns, turkey parts and vari-colored pastas. He brings old counterculture ingredients into the mainstream: whole grains, yogurt. He pays serious attention to new and newly respectable equipment: food processors, pasta machines and, being one of the first of the major food figures to do so, microwave ovens. And he incorporates new ideas in health: less salt and fat. (Beard has always had a healthy resp3ct for complex starches, which are enjoying a revived resp3ctability. And though he presents recipe variations that cut down on starches, he also continues — thank goodness — his love affair with the potato.)

You could — and can — always count on Beard to turn tripe and plain old eggs into t3mpting prose. Omelets are hot and cold, layered and rolled. And he still knows how to make fish news: salmon tartare, shrimp kiev, salmon cheeks, plus pages of recipes for salt cod.

This time around Beard flirts with the seasonings of Latin America and the Far East, particularly relegating meat to a seasoning rather than a main ingredient. He watches our calories — with reduced-calorie pesto and a less-rich coquille St. Jacques. He watches our pocketbooks, filling our plates with cheaper cuts of meat and neglected fish.

Still, he is the familiar old Beard, reissuing chili, rack of lamb, tournedos bordelaise. He anchors beginners with a chapter on basic stocks and sauces, finishes the book with a 60-page Concordance, his thoughts and suggestions on ingredients, their purchase, their storage, their use (on beets: "one of the few vegetables that is equally good canned or fresh"). Like the Beard we have always known, he is unflaggingly enthusiast8c; nearly everything is one of his favorites. His recipes compel you with introductory notes and anecdotes. He introduces you to his New York friends (The Coach House restaurant with its black bean soup, the Palace restaurant with its mussel soup) and his predilections (a sprinkle of parmesan on anything that will take it, a dose of garlic with myriad kinds of fish).

And this time around he expresses inordinate sympatny for the harried householder. He has aimed largely for dishes that are quick, that use as few ingredients as possible while retaining their character. And he emphasizes the possibility of substituting ingredients.

This is a cookbook for all seasons, all moods and all combinations of ingredients you might have in your refrigerator.

As you settle in for a long, cold winter, "Cooking Techniques" by Beverly Cox with Joan Whitman, photographed by Steven Mays (Little, Brown; $24.95 until Dec. 31, $29.95 ther3after), can be as useful as a down quilt. Subtitled "How to Do Anything a Recipe Tells You To Do," it is virtually a cooking course at home; and at $25, it costs about what a single lesson would cost from equivalent teachers.

Basically it is a book of black-and-white photographs that show what is often impossible to describe in a recipe: folding wontons or shu mai, carving turnips into flowers, kneading dough (and along the way showing exactly how the dough should look at each stage). There is no prose that could explain as photographs can how to carve an Aztec mushroom. And scooping out a zucchini to leave a scalloped shell is ripe for confusion without photographs.

This is a book for "ah ha!"s. So that's how you skin and bone a fish! So that's the way a quenelle is formed with two spoons! So that's the difference between the soft-ball and hard-crack stage of sugar syrup!

In 570 pages "Cooking Techniques" unlocks the mysteries of cracking a coconut (with hints such as straining the milk through a coffee filter) and halving an egg neatly (with a thread tied around the middle and pulled; you have to see it, of course). It covers a lot of territory that experienced cooks will have left behind: slicing and chopping, washing and drying greens. But the beginners will probably stay behind in those sections, while the advanced cook meanders through shaping, pastry-wrapping and decorating a lamb "duck" or forming a vacherin.

"Cooking Techniques" is a workhorse rather than a frivolous, coffeetable picture book — page after page of hands working. The photographs are, by and large, remarkably clear and detailed. And after a while the hands become familiar and take on a personality as identifiable as any cookbook prose.

It does include a visual dessert, a 32-page section of the techniques of presentation, luscious photographs of a flower bouquet of crudites, stuffed eggs whimsically lined up in their carton, a melon swan and a lacy caramel cage for oeufs a la neige. Decorations are taught most effectively in this book; after all, you can not only see how to carve and shape, but also how lovely will be the results of your labor.

It is a book to instill confidence. If you cannot taste a recipe book to know it is right, at least with this one you can see that you are right.

It is, however, a book to use in concert with other cookbooks. It gives instructions, rather than recipes. In fact, it would have been nice if the authors had included some measurements and ingredients for some of its standard preparations so that readers would not have to flip back and forth from this book to a recipe book. It compensates, however, with ingenious cooking hints: how to make a pastry flower to decorate a pie, how to make brussels sprouts look like flowers, how to raise the rim of a quiche above its pan, how to quickly and accurately cut a paper liner for a ring mold or a paper cone for piping decorations. It explains — shows, rather — how to tell if eggs are fresh or eggs sufficiently beaten or a souffle properly cooked.

Your mother isn't always available to answer the phone. So there's Howard Hillman, with "Kitchen Science, A Compendium of Essential Information for Every Cook" (Houghton Mifflin, $11.95).

This question-and-answer book is more about how things work than a first aid for cooking problems; it won't answer when you ask it why your meat exudes juice in the pan rather than browning properly. But it deepens your understanding of the cooking processes. It takes, for instance, five pages for hollandaise recipe, explaining — perhaps for the first time between two covers — the reasons for every step $nd all that recipe's foibles. It not only explains how to save a failed hollandaise, but suggests what to call it if you can't save it and want to serve it anyway.

The egg lore alone is a solid culinary education. Do you know why you add liquid to scrambled eggs? (The liquid steams as the egg mixture cooks, giving it a lighter texture.) How to add eggs to a hot liquid? How to smooth out a curdled sauce?

Cooking is not the only subject Hillman teaches. Buying, storing, freezing and defrosting are explained in ways that are bound to save some disappointments. He tells how to test a pan for hot spots (caramelize sugar in it, and see if it caramelizes evenly), and warns why brown paper bags are no longer safe for cooking in (they are now frequently made with recycled paper, and heat can cause the inedible chemicals used for recycling to enter the food). He adds that newspaper is safe for wrapping food if the newspapers are at least one week old — thus their ink completely dry and non-transferable — and come in contact with the food for less than an hour (except for the Sunday comics, whose chromatic inks are particularly noxious).

Even if it never occurred to you to ask, Hillman answers which end of fruit is sweeter (the blossom end) and how to make your own baking powder (which, by the way, James Beard does, too).

It can be easy to quarrel with this book: Some answers are incomplete, as when Hillman includes salty and fatty foods as poor candidates for freezing, butneglects to mention hard-cooked egg whites, cooked potatoes and custards. Some answers seem merely showoffs; would anybody really ask whether an animal's state of mind during its final hours affects the storage life of meat? (Yes. But he doesn't explain how you can tell when you buy meat what the animal's mood was.) And crucial to such a book is cross-indexing so extensive that you can readily find the answer to your question without having to resort to reading through whole chapters. Hillman's index, nine pages, is simply too short.

But then again, if you are really fascinated by cooking, you might just read it cover to cover anyway, then already know the answers by the time the questions arise.

Versatile Shish Kebab is a popular dish

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Broiling is believed to be the oldest method of cooking, with a history that dates back to the discovery of fire.

The first crude grills were believed designed to keep meat from getting too close to the flames. But people soon found that it is the fire that gives food a memorable flavor. Today many cooks insist charcoal broiling gives the best taste. Hence the backyard barbecue.

Barbecuing is not uniquely American. During a visit to Finland some years ago, I watched a housewife smoke salmon over a pit for a backyard feast. I'm told that in both India and China food is often cooked barbecue-style. This type of cooking dates back to the Persian empire when soldiers on the march grilled meat over braziers.

Synonymous with the outdoor grill is that delicious meat dish known as shish kebab. The name comes from the Turkish shish, for skewer, and kebab, for roast meat.

Shish kebab was the favorite meal of ancient Asian horsemen who took chunks of mutton from fresh-killed sheep, skewered them on swords and broiled them over a wayside fire.

Kebab cookery has always been popular because of its versatility. Persians roasted whole baby lambs and chickens, stuffing them first with rice blended with raisins, peas and pine nuts.

Our own fondness for the kebab has inspired a whole range of special equipment, from brochettes to special revolving spits capable of cooking a number of food-laden skewers at one time.

One usually thinks of meat as the centerpiece for a barbecue, but fish is gaining favor. Fish with oily flesh like mackerel broil best. Be sure not to overcook seafood lest it fall apart, since fish is much more tender than meat.

A kebab usually consists of lamb or beef cut into 1½-inch cubes and strung on skewers alternating with various vegetables like small whole tomatoes, small parboiled onions, cubes of eggplant and chunks of green pepper. For seasoning, try this hot sauce.

HOT SAUCE

2 cups ketchup
2-3rds cup Worcestershire
½ cup cider vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
2 cloves minced garlic
Dash of cayenne
2 tablespoons cooking oil

Combine ingredients, bring mixture to a boil and simmer 2 minutes. Makes about 3½ cups. Brush meat and vegetables with this sauce before broiling on grill. Add more sauce from time to time to ensure flavor.

Stuffing hamburger is good, economical, and easy to make

By MERLE ELLIS

We traditionally stuff all kinds of stuff to make it stretch. We stuff turkeys, chickens, flank steaks; we stuff vegetables of all kinds from artichokes to zucchini to make them go further and feed more for less money. But we seldom think of stuffing hamburger.

Hamburger (or ground beef) remains the most popular meat in this country if the amount of case space devoted to its display in markets across the country is an accurate indicator of such things. But as you may have noticed, it's not the bargain buy that it once was (what is?) With a little imagination and a good stuffing it is possible to stretch two pounds of hamburger further than even Ronald McDonald can imagine.

The first of the following recipes for stuffed hamburger won honorable mention at the 1981 National Beef Cookoff. It was submitted by Vickie Robinson of Montgomery City, Missouri, and has already become a favorite with my two teenagers.

SURPRISE MINI MEAT LOAVES

2 pounds ground beef
3/4 C. milk
2 eggs, beaten
1 small onion, chopped fine
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1 C. herb-seasoned stuffing mix, finely crushed
2 T. margarine
1/2 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
1 small onion, sliced
1 10-3/4-oz. can mushroom soup
1/2 C. dairy sour cream
Parsley, carrot curls

Combine milk, eggs, chopped onion, salt and pepper in a large bowl. Stir in stuffing mix; let stand 5 minutes. Add ground beef; mix well. Shape mixture into 6 loaves; place in oiled 10-inch-square casserole dish. Make a depression down center of each loaf. Fry mushrooms and sliced onion in margarine for 5 to 8 minutes; remove 1 cup and reserve. Add mushroom soup and sour cream to remaining mushrooms and onions; stir gently. Place 1 tablespoon of mixture in depression of each loaf. Reserve remaining sauce. Seal meat over filling. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 35 minutes. Place loaves on warm deep platter. Spoon heated reserved sauce over each. Place equal portion of reserved mushrooms and onion mixture on top of each loaf. Garnish with parsley and carrot curls. Serves 6.

ZUCCHINI-STUFFED HAMBURGER ROLL

2 T. vegetable oil
3 C. shredded zucchini
1-1/4 C. shredded cheddar cheese
1/3 C. bread crumbs
2 tsp. salt, divided
2 lbs. ground beef
1 tsp. thyme
1/2 tsp. dill
1/2 tsp. pepper
1 8-oz. can seasoned tomato sauce, divided
3 slices bacon

(GRAVY)
3 T. butter
1/2 C. fresh mushrooms, sliced thin
1/4 C. onion, minced
2 T. flour
1-1/4 C. milk
2 T. soy sauce

Saute shredded zucchini in hot oil for about 3 to 4 minutes. Remove zucchini to a large bowl and add cheese, bread crumbs and 1 teaspoon salt. Mix well. In another bowl, mix together ground beef, thyme, dill, pepper, 1 teaspoon salt and 1/2 cup tomato sauce. On a sheet of waxed paper make a 10-inch square of the meat mixture, pressing it out to approximately 3/4 inch thick. Spread the zucchini mixture over the meat, leaving a margin of meat around the edge. Gently roll the meat up jelly-roll fashion, removing the waxed paper as you go. Place the roll seam side down on a rack in a roasting pan. Spread remaining tomato sauce over the meat. Lay bacon slices over the meat roll. Bake uncovered at 350 degrees for 1-1/2 hours. New potatoes or potato quarters can be baked along with the hamburger roll, if you like.

Remove the roast from the oven and let stand for 10 to 15 minutes while you make the gravy. Pour off any fat that has accumulated in the roasting pan and replace it with 3 tablespoons of butter. Saute the mushrooms and onions in the butter over medium heat on top of the stove for 2 to 3 minutes. Add flour and continue cooking for another 3 to 4 minutes. Add milk and soy sauce and cook, stirring until thickened slightly.

Slice hamburger roll and serve with gravy. Serves 8 to 10.

Try these meatless main dishes for variety

By CLARE BARRETT
Copley News Service

Nutritionists applaud the emphasis vegetarians place on the importance of fresh fruits and vegetables in the diet. In fact, we all could benefit from eating more fresh produce.

According to R.A. Seelig, nutrition consultant to the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association, "Fruits and vegetables are not just low in fats and calories, they are also large sources of essential nutrients. You can derive the recommended daily allowances for a good number of those nutrients from a diet adequate in fruits and vegetables."

For example, citrus, potatoes, red and green cabbage and broccoli are all excellent sources of vitamin C. Dark green, leafy vegetables such as spinach, escarole, kale, collards and broccoli rabe contain calcium, iron and riboflavin. Yellow vegetables, including squash, sweet potatoes and carrots are high in vitamin A. Fresh green beans and dry beans are legumes providing protein, B vitamins and iron.

In addition, most fresh fruits and vegetables offer important trace elements, the micronutrients such as iodine, magnesium, manganese, phosporous, potassium and zinc that are essential to good health.

With over 70 different types of fresh fruits and vegetables available at the market at any one time of year, it's easy to bring variety, acquaint yourself with some of the fresh produce that you've seen many times but never tried.

Not all of you may be planning to enlist in the vegetarian way of life, but you still might consider adding some vegetarian main dishes to your cooking repertoire. Not only will they contribute budget-stretching, healthful variety to your menu, but they also are fun to make.

POTATO-ZUCCHINI FRITTERS

1½ cups shredded, pared, potato (about 1 large potato)
1½ cups shredded zucchini (about 2 medium, unpared zucchini), drained
¼ cup chopped fresh onion
2 tbsps. flour
2 tbsps. wheat germ
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. pepper
3 eggs, slightly beaten
2 tbsps. butter or margarine

%Shred potato and zucchini on coarse grater into large bowl, addonion and four, mix well. Stir in remaining ingredients except butter. Melt butter in large skillet over medium heat. Drop zucchini mixture by heaping tablespoons into skill. Fry until golden brown on bottom, turn. Brown second side. Repeat until all mixture is used, adding more butter to skillet if needed. Serve with cheese sauce.

CHEESE SAUCE

¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup flour
⅛ tsp. cayenne
½ tsp. salt
2 cups whole milk
2 cups shredded gruyere cheese

Melt butter in saucepan over medium heat. Stir in flour untilsmooth. Add cyenne and salt. Add milk; cook, and stir, until sauce is thickened. Add cheese, stir until smooth and hot. Makes two cups.

VEGETABLE-STUFFED EGGPLANT

1 large eggplant
2 tbsps. salad oil, divided
Salt
1 clove garlic, cut in half cup chopped, fresh onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
One-fourth cup fresh parsley
1 large tomato, seeded and chopped
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. dried leaf thyme
¼ tsp. pepper
2 tbsps. butter or margarine, melted cup wheat germ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 cup plain yogurt

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Cut eggplant in half lenghtwise, scoop out pul, leaving half the shells; finely chop the scooped-out portion, reserve. Brush insides of eggplant shells with one tablespoon oil; sprinkle lightly with salt. Place shells in baking dish, cover with foil; bake 15 minutes.

Meanwhile, in large skillet, over medium heat, saute garlic and onion in remaining oil, three minutes; remove garlic. Add chopped eggplant, apple, green pepper, parsley, tomato and seasonings; cook five minutes. Spoon half the mixture into each eggplant shell.

Melt butter in small saucepan, stir in wheat germ and cheese; sprinkle mixture over eggplant. Bake 20 to 25 minutes, or until topping is browned. Serve with plain yogurt.

Makes four main dish servings.

Sportswear

NEW YORK (AP) — The average man now has four pair of jeans.

According to Marvin A. Blumfield, president of April-Marcus Inc., a merchandising consulting firm which represents some men's stores, "jeans have become an acceptable mode of dress for many occasions.

"It used to be that jeans were worn only by teen-agers or men while they worked around the house or in their gardens. But that's all changed now. Jeans are worn to parties, to go shopping and many other places that were unthinkable only a few years ago," he says.

Croissant can be basis for many fillings

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

There has been an incredible surge of interest here and abroad in the veteran croissant. It began about three years ago when this pastry suddenly became the "in" thing in Paris.

"Soon the popularity of the croissant spread to the United States," said Jean Paul Picot, who is founder and co-owner of J.P.'s French Bakery in midtown Manhattan, "and it is now being sold in bakeries all over the country."

"I first got the idea of opening my own bakery about two years ago," said Picot, who also owns the French restaurant, la bonne soupe.

This year, Picot went into action after experimenting for several months with various butters and flours, and opened up his place. It carries a full range of breads and pastries, but the centerpiece is the croissant.

If you think the croissant is merely a pastry to be munched at breakfast with a little butter, guess again.

Picot and other bakery owners in America are now serving them hot or cold, stuffed with cheese, ham, pate, spinach and many other fillings. Picot, for instance, offers one filled with Swiss chocolate.

What makes the croissant so special? Some attribute it to the flour or the manner of baking. Picot says it is especially important to use only butter for shortening. He is convinced that the consumer can spot the slightest amount of margarine.

There are several versions of how and where the croissant was created, but it apparently did not take place in France.

One account says the pastry was first made in Budapest, Hungary, in 1686 to commemorate the withdrawal of the Turks. Bakers working at night in the Hungarian capital heard the Turks tunneling into the city, according to this tale, and spread the alarm which led to the defeat of the invaders.

As a reward for their vigilance, the bakers were commissioned to produce a commemorative pastry, shaped like a crescent, the emblem of Turkey.

Another version is that the pastry was born in Vienna in 1683, made by bakers after Turkish forces were hurled back when they tried to breach the fortifications of the Austrian capital. Years later, the Austrian princess, Marie Antoinette, brought the croissant, or kipfel as it was called by the Viennese, to France when she married Louis XVI, then the crown prince.

DEAR ABBY

Tourists leave L.A. natives restless

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Would you please do all of us Los Angeles folks a favor and tell the people who live in other parts of the country what not to expect when they come out here for a visit?

First, let them know it's a pain-in-the-neck to meet them at the airport. It is under construction now (what airport isn't?), there's no parking, and it would be so much easier if they would jump into a taxi or an airport bus.

Everybody wants to see Disneyland, which is not even in Los Angeles County! It's a 12-hour ordeal to get there, see it all and get back. Then they want to see Beverly Hills, go through the movie studios, and they think they can just pop in to see all the talk shows and game shows without arranging for tickets in advance!

They also want to go to Las Vegas, which is a good six-hour drive. All of this sight-seeing involves tons of traffic, gasoline and time — not to mention money. It's very hard on our nerves as we already have to fight the freeways every day. They seem to forget that THEY are on vacation, WE aren't.

When we Southern Californians visit our relatives back East (or wherever), we are content to sit on the porch and talk or go fishing. Why can't they do the same when they come here?

I, for one, have had it with these glamour-seeking tourists, and from now on I'm simply going to hand them my car keys and a map, and say "Go to it." — EXHAUSTED ANGELENO

DEAR EXHAUSTED: Nobody visits Southern California to sit on the porch and talk or go fishing — there's too much to do and see out here. That's why people come in the first place.

It's not necessary to hand them your car keys and a map; there are guided tours galore. Just write to the TV shows in advance for tickets and everybody will be happy.

DEAR ABBY: I have to chuckle when I hear these young housewives complain about cooking. Abby, they don't even know what cooking is. Everything they put on the table comes out of a can or has already been prepared and frozen, and all they have to do is thaw it out and heat it up.

There are delis and "ready-to-go" carry-out meals that merely have to be picked up. And if they're too lazy to go and get it, it can be delivered to their door! — OLD-FASHIONED COOK

DEAR O.F.: Yes — isn't it wonderful!

DEAR ABBY: Recently I found out that my 10-year-old daughter is smoking. I also found out that she was caught stealing in a drugstore with another child her age. And now to top it off, I was told by her older sister that she has tried pot!

She's basically a good girl, gets good grades in school and is very well-liked by others. My first impulse was to give her a good old-fashioned spanking.

How would you treat this situation? — CAN'T HANDLE IT

DEAR CAN'T: Punishment won't help; it will only make her more careful so as not to get caught. Your daughter needs loving reinforcement and a closer relationship with you. Work on it. And if she continues her anti-social behavior, consult a child psychologist for his/her recommendations. Kids who break all the rules at an early age are usually crying for attention.

(Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

AT WIT'S END

Children are like waffles

By ERMA BOMBECK

Someone who has wisely remained anonymous once said that children are like waffles. The first one should be used to season the grill and then tossed out.

Studies made on first children say they're not all that bad. They are usually shy, serious, sensitive, academically superior and more likely to be an Einstein.

Second children, on the other hand, are relaxed, independent, cheerful, lean toward creativity and are more likely to be a Picasso.

No one has had the courage to find — let alone study — child No. 3 and the ones that follow whom I call "et ceteras."

Is there life after the first two children? What are the et ceteras like?

I have discovered the third child has a few attributes of his own. He has itchy feet and joins other families for three or four months, often without being noticed. He is not intimidated by anyone, has a great sense of humor and is apt to be a game-show host.

Part of their uniqueness is that third children have no history. There are no footprints of him in the baby book, no record of his baptism, no snapshots of his birthdays and no report cards to show he ever was.

Their childhood diseases are uneventful, their first words fall on deaf ears, and toilet training is a lonely affair with no one to applaud their b.m's.

The third child learns early that he is odd man out and has broken the family symmetry. Kitchen chairs come four to a set, breakfast rolls four to a package, milk four cups to a quart. Rides at Disneyland accommodate two to a seat, the family car carries four comfortably and beds come in twos, not threes.

The third child is the one who gets called the other two's names before the mother finally remembers his. He goes through a lifetime of comparisons: "You're not going to be as tall as your brother . . . as smart as your sister . . . as athletic as your father."

I personally feel there's a lot to be said for the "et cetera" children who get a fast shuffle and who thrive on neglect and somehow appear one day all grown up.

They not only know who they are and what they are, but they've dealt very early with the two things that most children fear the most: competition and loneliness.

APRICOT BARS

Always a favorite.

1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour
¼ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
½ cup butter
2 large eggs
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1-3rd cup all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ cup cut or broken walnuts the size of large peas
½ cup dried apricots, finely slivered

In a medium bowl stir together the 1 cup flour and the ¼ cup brown sugar; with a pastry blender cut in the butter until particles are fine; pat over bottom of a buttered 8 by 8 by 2-inch cake pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until golden — about 15 minutes. Leave oven control on. Meanwhile beat the eggs until foamy; add the 1 cup brown sugar, lemon juice, 1-3rd cup flour and baking powder; beat until smooth. Stir in the apricots and walnuts. Spread over hot baked layer and continue to bake until brown — about 25 minutes. Loosen edges while still warm, but cool completely before cutting into bars.

Mrs. George Nichopoulos clasps her husband's hand as they relax at their home shortly after Nichopoulos was acquitted of charges that he over-prescribed dangerous drugs for Elvis Presley and other patients.

Nichopoulos acquitted of drug charges

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jurors who acquitted Dr. George C. Nichopoulos of charges that he overprescribed dangerous drugs for Elvis Presley and other patients say they were convinced he was a good doctor trying to do his job.

"He was working with some very disturbed people," said juror Burdine Redmond after the verdict was returned Wednesday. "I don't think most doctors had the nerve to do that."

The jury took slightly more than three hours to agree on the verdict Wednesday after a five-week trial.

"We had some problems at first," jury foreman Diane Blair said shortly after the verdict was read by Judge Bernie Weinman.

Nichopoulos was charged with 12 counts of prescribing excessive amounts of stimulants, sedatives and narcotics for himself, Presley, singer Jerry Lee Lewis and eight other patients. Two additional counts accused him of prescribing drugs for Presley and Lewis without trying to treat their addiction.

LAST WEEK, Weinman directed a verdict of acquittal on three of the counts, involving Nichopoulos himself and one patient.

The doctor's wife, Edna, crowded into a second-row seat among reporters and family friends, tried to keep her composure as the verdict was announced, but tears trickled down her cheeks. Nichopoulos' daughter, Chrissy, shared a torn tissue with her mother.

"He deserved it," Neal said. "He has been harassed for years."

Several other jurors also said they were convinced that the 54-year-old internist was trying to help his patients, including Presley, end their addiction to amphetamines, barbiturates and narcotics.

The rock 'n' roll singer died Aug. 16, 1977.

Presley's autopsy has not been released, but there was testimony at the trial that massive amounts of drugs were found in his body, some at toxic levels. Nichopoulos was not charged in Presley's death.

Neal had argued that Nichopoulos attempted to gain his patients' confidence, become their sole source of drugs, then gradually reduce their drug intake.

Juror Janis Crutchfield said she voted to acquit the doctor because she didn't believe the prosecutors' arguments that Nichopoulos intended to break the law.

"I thought he acted in good faith," she said.

Katie Edwards, another juror, said, "He was not reckless in prescribing drugs. It was his method of treatment."

Ardell Jones, 62, said he was impressed by Neal's argument that Nichopoulos made progress with most of the patients.

"He did help and bring them down some off the drugs," Jones said. "He did what he could to get them off."

In January 1980 the Tennessee Board of Medical Examiners convicted Nichopoulos on 10 counts of improperly dispensing dangerous drugs. His medical license was suspended for 90 days and he was placed on three years probation.

Manson agrees with panel he's not ready for parole

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — A dozen years after grisly murders by his followers shocked the nation, Charles Manson says he's not ready for parole.

"I ain't got no mind. It's gone, man," Manson told the parole panel that again decided to keep him behind bars.

In denying Manson parole Wednesday for the fourth time in as many years, the state Board of Prison Terms called the 1969 killings "so atrocious, reprehensible and repugnant as to leave the observer incredulous."

The bearded, long-haired Manson punctuated a three-hour hearing with rambling discourses on subjects ranging from prison life to cosmic theology.

"I've been in solitary confinement for 10 years, in the nut ward for almost eight," he said. "I ain't got no mind. It's gone, man. I don't understand half the things you're saying."

Glen DeRonde, Manson's lawyer, didn't even ask the board to parole the 46-year-old convicted killer. Instead, he urged it to grant Manson's request to be moved from protective custody to the prison's main population.

"The man is surviving now in the nut ward," said DeRonde. "If we're going to allow him to survive, we should integrate him into the mainline of this prison."

"If you put me in with insanity I reflect insanity," said Manson. "If you put me in with people who think rationally, I might even get back to thinking rationally and understand what's going on."

Los Angeles Deputy District Attorney Stephen Kay, who argued against the parole, said it was "a waste of taxpayers' money to have a hearing for Charles Manson every year."

"Charles always has to be the center of attention and this is like Christmas to him," Kay said. "The press will report what he says throughout the world. It will be a forum for his gibberish, and other demented people can read it and think he's great."

Manson, serving a life sentence, admitted having been involved in the killings that made his "family" synonymous with evil, but denied helping in the actual murders.

"I knew the people involved and the inner thoughts that came down," he said.

Four of Manson's followers also are serving life terms for the Los Angeles murders.

Manson was convicted of ordering or participating in the murders of actress Sharon Tate, coffee heiress Abigail Folger, hairdresser Jay Sebring, Polish moviemaker Voityk Frykowksi, Stephen Parent, musician Gary Hinman, stuntman Donald "Shorty" Shea and Leno and Rosemary LaBianca.

"He's a bloodthirsty murderer," Kay said. "He was in 1969 and he is today. He's the same old Charlie — volatile, unpredictable, crazy."

Five former Mc Allen policemen indicted on civil rights charges

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Five former McAllen policemen have been indicted on federal civil rights charges in a continuing police brutality investigation authorities said could result in more indictments.

Federal grand jurors Wednesday accused former police Sgt. Roberto Ramos and former officers Jaime Contreras, Alfredo Saldana, Tom Carter and Isidro Ybanez Jr. of beating, kicking and abusing some prisoners arrested between 1977 and 1979.

Ross Kinnealy, one of three U.S. Justice Department lawyers directing the investigation, said the men would be allowed to surrender and would not be arrested.

U.S. Justice Department officials in Washington who asked not to be identified said the McAllen investigation will continue and other indictments are possible.

BUT MCALLEN Mayor Othal Brand said the department had been "cleaned out," and he did not expect any more indictments.

Grand jurors had a visual record of some beatings because McAllen police had videotaped bookings to protect officers against frivolous harrassment suits.

Several tapes were broadcast nationally last spring and created a public outcry for a federal investigation.

The tapes have been seen by two federal grand juries, an assistant attorney general in Washington, Texas legislators, and personnel in the Texas attorney general's office.

One televised tape recorded the Oct. 23, 1978, public drunkeness arrest of Pedro Dennett, who was seen being kicked on the ground, thrown against the wall and pounded against the booking desk. His moans and screams were audible on the tape.

Contreras, Carter and Saldana are accused of violating Dennett's civil rights. Ybanez is charged in a May 20, 1979, incident and Ramos is accused of commanding subordinate officers to beat a prisoner on Sept. 25, 1977.

Contreras told The Associated Press Wednesday afternoon that he was unaware of the indictments.

"I'd like to get a hold of my attorney. I can't tell you anything else. I'd rather talk with my lawyer first," said Contreras, who resigned in September of 1980.

OTHERS CHARGED have moved from McAllen or have unlisted phone numbers and could not be located for comment.

Police Chief Lee Spradlin, who came to McAllen Sept. 1, declined to comment.

However, Brand said he was not surprised at the indictments.

"None of these people are left with us. They have been shipped out," he said. "I had rather hoped some of those men would be indicted."

The videotapes were first shown during a March hearing on a civil suit filed against the City of McAllen and individual officers.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda, who viewed the tapes and allowed them to be copied for broadcast, issued an injunction against future police brutality and ordered the department to improve training and review procedures.

DeAnda also allowed McAllen officials use of the tapes for disciplinary hearings. But he angrily ordered them rushed back to Brownsville this summer when he heard a McAllen city commissioner jokingly had offered a bottle of champagne to anyone who would burn the tapes.

Four of the indicted men — Carter Saldana, Contreras and Ybanez — all worked on the C-shift from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m.

Some C-shift officers wore teeshirts calling themselves "The Animals" and developed a reputation for taking action and asking questions later.

ONE C-SHIFT officer said in an internal police study that he thought "to belong on 'C' Shift an officer would have to be abusive and aggressive."

The alleged victims usually were poor Mexican-Americans. The indicted officers are both Anglo and Hispanic. McAllen's population of 60,000 is approximately 75 percent Hispanic.

After leaving McAllen, Carter became police chief in Bishop but was forced to resign this year after the videotapes were broadcast.

Ybanez was fired in 1979. Ramos, who quit voluntarily last month, was suspended for a week without pay after one alleged incident of misconduct in 1978 and demoted from sergeant to patrolman for more than nine months following a second alleged incident that year.

Allegations of widespread police brutality in McAllen cost the department two police chiefs and kept Brand from receiving Senate confirmation to a state prison board post.

His successor, Roy Eckhardt, resigned this year after disputes with Brand and others over reorganizing the department.

State Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, blocked Brand's Senate confirmation and said the mayor should have known about the brutality earlier.

Final arguments prepared in milk trial

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Lawyers prepared final arguments today in the Mission school milk case before turning their clients' fates over to a federal court jury.

Federal prosecutors and defense lawyers finished presenting evidence and calling witnesses Wednesday in the three-week-old trial.

DeAnda on Wednesday dismisssed all but one of the remaining 35 counts against Assistant Superintendent Robert Wicks. The judge said Assistant U.S. Attorney Eddie Medrano had failed to link Wicks with an alleged scheme to write fake milk delivery tickets.

THE GOVERNMENT contends phony milk invoices were used between 1975 to 1980 to make it appear the district had purchased enough half-pints of milk from the Golden Jersey Creamery in Edinburg to quality $486,000 worth of meals for federal reimbursement.

According to indictments returned this summer, the half-pints of milk never were delivered. One 12-count indictment was dismissed and DeAnda has thrown out other charges of a 51-count indictment.

Others charged with conspiracy and fraud are Michael Jon McCarthy, food services director; Gerardo Cortez, head cook supervisor and Jane Alice Cook, former school secretary.s

Wicks remains charged with one count of misprison, an accusation that he knew of wrongdoing but failed to report it to a federal official.

"I don't condone Mr. Wicks' conduct and I think it's terrible," DeAnda said after dismissing the other counts with the jury outside the courtroom.

"I think everyone ought to be ashamed it went on but even if there were evidence to implicate him, the evidence is so fragile there would be a reasonable doubt as to his guilt on that charge," the judge said of the main conspiracy and supporting fraud charges.

NONE OF THE defendants are accused of pocketing the $486,000 in alleged overpayment, which was deposited in school district accounts.

McCarthy was the only defendant who testified. He said a dairy official told him in March or April 1980 that the school district was receiving credit for milk not being delivered.

Under cross-examination, McCarthy said he did not know until later that year that false milk invoices were being made up by his former secretaries.

Two of McCarthy's former secretaries testified he knew of the phony tickets in 1978. An FBI agent said McCarthy told him he stopped the practice in 1979. McCarthy said he tried to correct his statement to the agent but was not allowed to do so.

School officials have said that any problems with milk supplies stemmed from an enormous waste problem and vague federal rules.

Braniff announces low-cost 'Texas class' fares

DALLAS (AP) — Financially strapped Braniff International is scrapping its traditional first-class and coach service in favor of a "back to basics" approach to simplify the fare structure throughout its route system, airline officials said.

The new low-cost, no-frills "Texas class" fare service, which goes into effect Nov. 24, will simplify Braniff's entire domestic system to single-class service, Chairman John Casey said Wednesday.

Braniff president Howard Putnam said, "We're going back to the basics."

He said the Texas class consists of 15 low-priced fares for a nationwide route system instead of the "hundreds of fares that are now found in airline tariff manuals."

"Our Texas class fares are the simplest and lowest unrestricted fares of any nationwide air carrier, Putnam said. "They are available every day, on every seat of every Braniff flight, with no strings attached and no small print."

Putnam said Braniff plans only two fare types, peak and off-peak, and 15 fare levels. Braniff's larger competitors, he said, has at least 45 types of domestic fares with over 600 fare levels.

"It is no-strings flying that is going to save our customers millions of dollars each year," he said.

Braniff will offer two fares between Dallas-Fort Worth and six other Texas and Oklahoma cities it serves — $39 on weekdays and $24 on weekends, the airline's president said.

The Texas class fares between Dallas-Fort Worth and New York City will be $135 one way compared to the present lowest, off-peak fare of $198, Putnam said.

Braniff announced Texas class service from Dallas-Fort Worth to Hawaii for $300 one way, effective Dec. 1. Putnam said a new world class service to London and Hawaii also is available, with an upgraded business class taking the place of first class service at $800 to London and $550 to Hawaii.

Putnam said Braniff will continue to offer first class service on some of its domestic flights until Dec. 1.

Design error discovered in bunkers

At fault for the leaks was a design error, for which the Navy took responsibility. It will cost $2 million to repair the 41 bunkers, bringing the total cost to $12.8 million, base spokesman Dan Tikalski said Wednesday. Repairs are expected to be completed by June.

Nothing had been stored in the bunkers since their completion earlier this year, Tikalski said.

He declined comment on whether nuclear weapons were to be stored in the bunkers, a concern voiced by local anti-nuclear groups.

The Princess of Wales listens to a speech by her husband, Prince Charles, in London Wednesday night as they jointly opened an exhibit at the Victoria and Albert Museum. Buckingham Palace announced today that Princess Diana, 20, who married the prince in July, is expected her first child next June.

Royal family announces that princess is pregnant

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — In a storybook encore to a storybook romance, Britain's royal family announced today that Princess Diana, the 20-year-old earl's daughter who married Prince Charles three months ago, is expecting a baby next June.

"The queen was personally informed of the news by the prince and princess some days ago," The Buckingham Palace announcement said. "The prince and princess of Wales, the queen and the duke of Edinburgh and members of both families are delighted by the news."

The child will be second in line to the throne after Charles, 32.

Diana, who made her first state appearance Wednesday at the formal opening of the British Parliament, is "in excellent health," a palace spokesman said.

"It is announced from Buckingham Palace that the Princess of Wales is expecting a baby in June next year," the official palace proclamation said.

"The whole family is very happy," said Diana's older sister, Lady Jane Fellowes, herself once linked romantically to Prince Charles.

Looking slim and dazzling, Diana was the center of attention at Wednesday's Parliament opening. She wore a white satin V-neck gown with puff sleeves — and for the first time, a diamond tiara.

Wednesday evening, she donned an off-the-shoulder evening dress to attend — with Charles — the opening of "The Splendors of Gonzaga" exhibit at London's Victoria and Albert Museum.

The princess "hopes to continue to undertake some public engagements but regrets any disappointment which may be caused by any curtailment in her planned program," the spokesman said.

Diana and Charles were lunching today with the Lord Mayor of London following a hectic two weeks that took the royal couple to Wales for a three-day official tour and kept them out late every evening this week.

Just 19 when Charles proposed, the former Lady Diana Spencer turned 20 on July 1. Charles will be 33 on Nov. 14.

Following their glittering wedding at St. Paul's Cathedral in London on July 29, the couple honeymooned aboard the royal yacht Britannia in the Mediterranean and spent two months in seclusion at the royal estate at Balmoral, in Scotland.

During their gruelling, rain-drenched 400-mile tour of Wales, one stop was a maternity ward in the Rhondda valley where Charles gave a hint of today's announcement when he told one new mother it was "a very good thing" for fathers to be present at the birth of their children.

The palace spokesman said it was too early to predict where the baby would be born.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Drugs may be needed

Dear Dr. Solomon: Aside from aspirin, I've always made it a policy to try to avoid drugs. Now my doctor wants to put me on medication for high blood pressure. Do you think this is a good idea? — Hank, Pa.

Dear Hank: Drug therapy to control hypertension is a good idea for some patients; whether it is a good idea in your case is something that has to be determined between you and the doctor treating you.

In my own practice, I first try to control my hypertensive patients' blood pressure by controlling their weight and having them restrict their intake of salt. This, plus exercise, is often sufficient. Some people, however, do require drug therapy for control, particularly if their blood pressure is very high and not responsive to these other efforts.

One physician, Dr. R. Brian Haynes of McMaster University Medical Center in Hamilton, Ontario, believes that drug therapy is not being used as aggressively as it should be. He believes that other forms of treatment waste time and, in the end, are not very successful anyway; however, not all doctors would agree.

It may be that your doctor is recommending a diuretic, which may be sufficient in your case. Or your blood pressure may be so high that drug therapy is essential. These are subjects you should feel free to discuss. The chances of a patient's complying with treatment are much better when he or she understands what is involved and, therefore, is prepared to cooperate with the doctor.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I personally know three people who have had coronary bypass operations. Has the operation become so common, or do I know a lot of sick people? I'd also like to know how successful the operation is today. — Francis, Miami Beach, Fla.

Dear Francis: About 100,000 people in the United States have coronary bypass surgery each year. While the operation is not advisable for all coronary patients, it has been helpful in prolonging life and enhancing the quality of life for many people who did not respond to medical management.

Of course, coronary bypass surgery does not cure the underlying process of atherosclerosis — the deposit of fatty material on the lining of the arteries.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read with a great deal of interest your comments on type A behavior — the aggressive, competitive personality. But what causes it? Why is one person type A and another person isn't? — Luke, Houston

Dear Luke: Dr. Carol W. Bowen of the Pennsylvania State University, suggests that type A behavior may be molded by childhood experiences. She reports that a study she conducted showed that children who are exposed to type A environments have type A responses, regardless of whether they had been classified initially as type A, type B, or intermediate pesonalities.

Many nurses suffer job 'burnout'

By CAROL KRUCOFF
The Washington Post

Pamela Patrick entered intensive-care nursing because it promised the excitement and challenge of helping people through dramatic, life-and-death situations.

She quit for the same reasons.

"Granted, nursing is a stressful job. You're dealing with people in crisis...you see peak emotions — high and low — and it can get very intense. That's one reason people are attracted to the field."

But in addition to the unavoidable stresses inherent in the work, nurses — and other health-care professionals — are subjected to numerous "avoidable" stresses, says Patrick, that make things worse.

"It's common for nurses to work rotating shifts (switching frequently from day to night) and double shifts (16 hours straight), so you're constantly fatigued and your body clock is always mixed up. Usually, nurses get no say in their own scheduling.

"There often aren't enough nurses, so you have more patients than you can reasonably handle. And you wind up running errands, doing paperwork, being pulled away from patient care. Sometimes it seems like you're doing everything but nursing."

Coupled with low pay — "street cleaners earn more than starting nurses" — and "lack of professional respect," these stresses are prompting thousands of nurses to turn in their caps. "Nurses," says Patrick, "are burning out and dropping out in epidemic proportions."

But unlike other victims of "nurse urnout," Patrick didn't leave the health-care field when she quit clinical nursing 10 years ago. She went on to earn a doctorate in psychology and establish "a burnout prevention and treatment" program for staffers at a Midwestern hospital.

She now presents workshops on "health-care worker burnout" throughout the country and has completed a book on the subject for Blue Cross and Blue Shield Associations. The insurance company's interest in the problem stems, she says, from the "billions of dollars" association officials claim it costs the health care industry.

While burnout affects other professions — from teachers to business executives — Patrick says it's particularly severe among health-care workers in general and nurses in particular.

"A hospital is a highly stressful environment. It's like a self-contained city that's working 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. You're constantly dealing with people in crisis...a patient in pain, a family member in emotional distress.

Do you know the way to San Jose?

EDITOR'S NOTE — San Jose has become known as the "feminist capital of the world," with an unusually high proportion of women in its government. Now it's carrying that feminist fight to the pocketbook, with a move to equalize men's and women's pay for "comparable" jobs.

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — In 1968, a tune topping the charts told the story of a disillusioned kid who wanted to leave life in the Los Angeles fast lane to find some peace of mind in San Jose.

It's anyone's guess whether you can find peace now in this boom town, which has gone in the last decade from a sleepy little sister to bustling San Francisco 60 miles up the peninsula to the 17th largest city in America, and getting bigger by the minute.

What you will find, however, are more women in power per square mile than any other spot in the country.

"The feminist capital of the world," Mayor Janet Gray Hayes has called the thriving city of 628,000 she was elected to head in 1974, making her the first woman to hold the reins of power in a major American city. "I opened the door."

Today, Mayor Hayes is one of six female mayors in the county's 15 cities, and she works with a female-dominated city council — seven of 11 members. At one time, she had a female vice-mayor and a woman heading the San Jose Chamber of Commerce.

The superintendent of the San Jose Unified School District, the county's largest, is a woman, as is the president of San Jose State University, the Santa Clara County executive officer, the newest county municipal court judge and the majority on the county board of supervisors.

So it was strangely appropriate — and peculiarly ironic — that San Jose recently was the site of the nation's first strike for pay parity, the issue of equal pay for women in jobs different than but comparable to many jobs being done by men.

"How could it be that in the feminist capital of the world, people were on strike over pay parity?" asks William Callahan, chief negotiator and business agent for Local 101 of the American Federation of State, City and Municipal Employees, which represents 2,000 workers.

The answer: "It is presumptuous to say that a predominantly female city council backs the issue of ERA, pay parity, or any other predominantly female issue," he says. "Gender doesn't determine a position on women's rights."

Having women in high places isn't enough, Callahan says. "I don't think that until the union walked out did the term, 'feminist capital of the world,' have any substance in San Jose."

Ms. Hayes found herself in the paradoxical position of having to oppose, on financial grounds, a proposal she espoused in principle.

After a nine-day strike in July, the city agreed to spend $1.5 million to correct pay disparities over two years. It was the culmination of an effort that began four years ago, Callahan says, when complaints by women about pay inequities came to a head.

"There were enough complaints to form a women's rights committee within the union, which determined to resolve the paternalistic personnel practices of the city of San Jose with respect to women," Callahan recalls.

The union demanded and won a $93,000 city-financed study by an independent San Francisco consulting firm, Hays Associates, to detail disparities in pay.

The findings showed how people with jobs mainly held by women — including librarians, clerk-typists and recreation center supervisors — earned thousands of dollars less each year than employees in male-dominated fields, such as engineering, plumbing and gardening.

The issue united men and women, turned the national eye on San Jose and ultimately "broke the shackles the marketplace has held on women, shackles that maintain depressed wages for predominantly female occupations," Callahan says. "We broke in San Jose — and for the country, we believe — that hold in the marketplace."

"We have merely lit the fuse and started the discussion," Mayor Hayes says. "And that discussion is not going to stop."

Yet, the question remains: Why did the discussion start here? Why in San Jose, a basically middle-class, conservative community with a large Hispanic population that saw a reputation built on the region's fertile farms give way in the '50s to computers and electronics manufacturing?

It may be because feminism is more than than office-deep here, as exemplified by policies such as the one that precludes county-paid travel to any state that hasn't ratified the Equal Rights Amendment.

Then there are agencies like Rina Rosenberg's 7-year-old county Commission on the Status of Women, one of the few offices of its kind in the country and probably the only one with enough money to take care of 1,500 complaints a year from area women.

Instances of sexual harassment, job discrimination, denial of promotions, pay inequities — they've heard it and handled it all here, says Ms. Rosenberg, who has directed the commission since its inception in 1974.

And in the last seven years, she has formed her own theory about why feminism thrives in the heart of the Silicon Valley.

CPM most important word in TV

By DAVID CROOK
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Here's a short course in the economics of TV that explains why the big three commercial networks may be in so much trouble today. The explanation is courtesy of John B. Vanderzee, advertising manager of the Ford Motor Co.'s Lincoln-Mercury Division.

"As the price of a car goes up, clearly there are fewer and fewer people who can afford it or aspire to it," Vanderzee said in a recent telephone interview from Detroit.

"As the price of your product goes up, the attractiveness of network advertising goes down," he added.

The three most important letters in television are not ABC, CBS, or NBC. They are CPM. Don't ask why, but they stand for "cost per thousand" — a ratio between the cost to an advertiser of a TV commercial and the number of people who see it. Networks make so much money because their CPMs are generally much lower than newspapers, magazines or other media.

Even with 80 million or more people watching a network broadcast, an advertiser may wind up spending only $4-$5 for every thousand people who see his commercial. A similar advertisement in a magazine with a couple of million readers may cost $15 to $20 per thousand.

For more than 30 years, the networks have used their low CPMs to lure the big bucks of advertisers. Now, some aren't buying.

The old network CPM pitch "doesn't really do me any good at all," said Vanderzee, "because so few of the audience can really consider purchasing the product.

"Cable TV viewers are more likely to be able to purchase."

So Ford, like some other big companies, is taking money away from the commercial networks and spending it in cable. Cable CPMs are higher, but, as Vanderzee explained, "Cable would appear to me a way to reach better new car prospects."

"I don't envision a time when we're not advertising on network television," he said. "But it will be much less important than it is now."

That's enough to send shivers down the back of any network executive. Last year, Ford spent more than $125 million with the networks. Now, some of that money — "not a major percentage," Vanderzee said — that used to go to ABC, CBS or NBC is going to Cable News Network, USA Network, Telefrance USA, ARTS and Black Entertainment Television.

Joining Ford on some of these new cable networks are other leading advertisers like General Motors, IBM, Mercedes-Benz, Porsche-Audi and Volkswagen.

'Remember the Alamo!' — visit the historic mission

By JACK BESSTERFELD
Copley News Service

"Remember the Alamo!" And who can forget. Movies, books and songs have heralded the bravery of the 188 men killed defending the old Spanish mission against the overpowering army of Santa Anna in 1836.

But these are only stories and legends. The best way to gain a full understanding of the sacrifice and significance associated with the battle is to visit the rough stone chapel now located in a lushly landscaped plaza in downtown San Antonio.

Large shade trees provide cooling cover for visitors walking among the flower gardens and neatly trimmed hedges in Alamo Plaza. Horse-drawn carriages wait outside the Alamo's doors to take visitors on a peaceful ride through downtown. Underground sprinklers spring to life during the hot Texas afternoon to keep the Alamo's lawns lush and green.

It was not so pleasant on February 23, 1836, when Col. William R. Travis answered Mexican Gen. Lopez de Santa Anna's demands for surrender with a cannon shot.

For 10 days the brave defenders endured the onslaught of up to 5,000 Mexican soldiers, intent on storming the fortress and crushing Texas' attempts to secede from Mexico.

It is said that Col. Travis unsheathed his sword during a lull in the bombardment and drew a line on the ground. "Those prepared to give their lives in freedom's cause, come over to me," he said.

All but one joined him. Even Col. James Bowie, who was confined to a cot with typhoid, asked to be carried across.

The defenders were of varied backgrounds. Some were Mexican colonists, fed up with Santa Anna's despotic rule. There was Davy Crockett and his Tennessee Boys out to fight freedom's fight wherever they were needed. There were native Texans fighting for independence.

They all stood together on that fateful morning of March 6, when Santa Anna staged a final assault on the embattled and crumbling chapel of the former Spanish mission. Attacks came from the north, south, east and west, and after two unsuccessful assaults, breached the walls and flooded into the Alamo.

All of the defenders were killed. Only 14 women and children huddled in a room of the chapel were spared. Santa Anna suffered 1,600 killed. "Remember the Alamo" became the battle cry for Texas forces seeking independence, and in later battles soundly defeated Santa Anna's forces and set Texas free.

Massive wooden doors, weathered by the Texas sun, lead into the dark chapel. Visitors today enter with a sense of reverence to the heroes who died there long ago.

Other rooms in the chapel hold display cases of memorabilia from Travis, Bowie, Crockett and other defenders; plaques on the walls and in the floor are memorials to those who lost their lives in the fight for freedom.

Visitors leave through the rear of the chapel and come out into a landscaped plaza. A museum on the other side houses old guns, frontier items, relics of Spanish and Mexican colonists and other artifacts from the era. The souvenir shop is also located in this building.

Outside again, past the 12-pound cannons that once defended the Alamo, visitors enter the shaded plaza in front of the barracks, a long, low building that once housed workers at the mission. Inside, a museum has several dioramas of the final hours of battle, as well as costumes worn by soldiers in the battle and short films about the fight.

Across the street from the 6.5 acre Alamo Plaza, history and modern technology have been joined in the Remember the Alamo Theater. In this private attraction, visitors get a vivid look at history using multiple projectors and screens to surround viewers with the sights and sounds of the siege.

With all this history in one place, it is hard not to "Remember the Alamo."

Juarez is velvet-painting capital of world

By MARC LIFSHER
Dallas Times Herald

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico — They seem to be everywhere, those crudely rendered dayglo-on-black-velvet portraits of Elvis Presley that grace the walls of America's truck stops, gift shops and road houses.

Depending on taste, most people either buy and enjoy the ubiquitous examples of mass art or quickly turn up their noses at such superstylized renditions of John Wayne, karate king Bruce Lee, rock group KISS or hundreds of other celebrities, superheroes, animals, nature scenes and religious figures.

Kitsch or not, the black velvet paintings provide a livelihood for thousands of full-time artists who mass-produce the Elvis Presleys, Jimi Hendrixs, John Lennons and Jesus Christs in hundreds of back rooms in Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico, just across the border from El Paso, Texas.

Juarez is the velvet painting capital of the world and a tourist trip down the city's main shopping street will satisfy any fan's desire for an attention-getting portrait of a favorite star.

"I do about 15 paintings per day, all the same in each batch," said Jesus Manuel, a 25-year-old artist who has been painting velvet for 12 years. Manuel's current series features majestic bald eagles and pouncing lions that he originally copied from a tattered textbook called "Marvels and Mysteries Of The Animal World."

"First, I stencil the rough outline to center the picture. Then my sister and I go down the line with one color and then the other," Manuel said. "I make these eagles every week, so I know how to do it. I work fast to get out 75 or 80 per week."

Manuel works on orders from Juarez Exports, a Mexican company that has raised velvet paintings to the level of big business, shipping thousands of portraits to the United States and Canada each month.

Fernando Najera, 27, a business administration graduate of the University of Juarez in charge of the company's marketing strategy, has a keen feel for the U.S. pop culture market and tailors production to the public's whims.

"Our biggest sellers are Christ and Elvis. Three years ago when Elvis died we sold 50,000 of him in one year," Najera said. "He's still a big seller, but we're moving less and less now. Right after John Lennon died, our customers started putting in big orders, just like after the deaths of John Wayne and Steve McQueen. Jimi Hendrix is still a good seller, though."

Najera said his business started six years ago.

LHS band wins again

Members of the Lee High School Rebel Band flag, rifle, twirling and drum lines have once again won honors, this time in Big Spring at the Southwest Auxiliary Championships Saturday.

In competition that included groups from throughout West Texas and the Panhandle area, the drum line took top honors, the rifle line took second place and the color guard third place.

Twirlers Melanie Finley, Julie Gallagher and Suzanne Latch each received first divisions on twirling solos. Ensembles receiving first division ratings were the rifle duets of Sandy Millwee and Lori Brewer and Valerie Hicks and Shelley McCombs.

When you buy your kid a Thrasher or Phantom BMX, your Schwinn dealer will do just about everything but pedal.

Any department store will sell you a BMX. But frankly, BMX bikes aren't always their department.

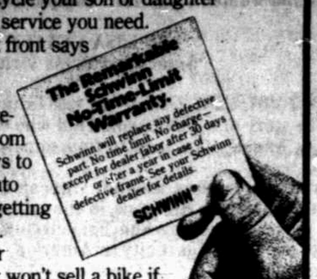

What to ask before you buy a BMX	Schwinn Dealer	Some Discount/ Department Stores
Bicycle carefully fitted?	Yes	Good luck
Expert assembly and adjustment?	Yes	Some charge extra
Free 30-day tune-up?	Yes	Are you kidding?
Parts and accessories available?	Yes	Maybe
No-Time-Limit Warranty?	Yes	In some cases

And you can save a few bucks on a discount store BMX. But there's a chance you might spend a few bucks assembling it, too.

Happily, there's still a place where you can find the bicycle your son or daughter wants with the service you need.

The sign out front says "Schwinn."

So if you're looking for a really good BMX for the money, go to a nearby Schwinn dealer. He'll do everything he can to make your kid's cycling as easy as possible. Except perhaps, pedal.

Thrasher Only $132.95 manufacturer's suggested dealer price

Twelve-year-old Andrew Hopkins, seen hopping over companion choirboy David Morris, 11, recently was named Britain's top chorister. Hopkins is from Norbury in South London while Morris, the runner up, is from Middlesbrough. The two competed in a nationwide contest sponsored by the Royal School of Church Music.

Finances among Adventist missions

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Like their faith, financial matters are part of the mission of the 604,000 Seventh-day Adventists in North America, whose church owns hospitals, schools, food stores, retirement homes and businesses including publishing houses and a lumber mill.

In addition to tithes (10 percent of their income) and offerings on top of that, many members donate their time, businesses, knowledge and expertise in unique ways to help the church and their fellow man.

They employ Adventist students, buy products from fellow Adventists and invest for retirement in regional Adventist trust funds.

AN ADVENTIST businessmen's group in Southern California lends money at low interest rates for church construction; a Mercedes-Benz dealer in Grants Pass, Ore. uses his showroom as a church; and Versitron Industries in Riverside hires students to cook health foods for Adventist college and high school cafeterias.

"The key purpose is to use their business in advancing the work of the Seventh-day Adventist Church," explained Ken Livesay director of Adventist Services Industries in Riverside, Calif.

"Their goal is to witness to all they come in contact with about the great love and salvation of Christ, thus hastening his return."

The church's financial dealings with its members recently have received public attention with the collapse of the $46 million investment empire of a California land developer; 17 church institutions had $17.8 million invested, says spokesman Franklin Hudgins in Washington, D.C.

THE FINANCIAL tangle occurred as the church was dealing with challenges to the authenticity and accuracy of its theology, developed more than 100 years ago to explain why Christ had failed to return then as believers expected.

The bankruptcy was filed early this year by Dr. Donald J. Davenport of Century City, an Adventist who relied on his connections to church leaders to solicit investments for building and leasing post offices and telephone company facilities. In addition to Adventist institutions, more than 200 individuals were listed among his creditors in the preliminary bankruptcy petition.

The Adventist General Conference did not have money invested, but regional conferences did. The North Pacific Union Conference, based in Portland, Ore., had $3 million invested, more than any other regional institution.

In addition, many individual Adventists, such as missionaries and retired pastors, formed into trust associations to invest at promises of 15 percent interest when banks and savings and loans were paying 6 percent to 8 percent.

A SPOKESMAN for the North Pacific conference, who declined to be identified, said some investors had demanded no collateral, and others were given what they thought were first trust deeds on property which turned out to be second and third trust deeds.

The creditors have until Dec. 15 to file reasons why their claims should not be forgiven by the court, and Thomas Long, an attorney for the General Conference in Washington, D.C., said the church may do so.

Grounds for refusing to discharge debts in a bankruptcy proceeding include fraud and misrepresentation.

Attorney Robert Shutan, who represents Davenport, said he had not studied allegations of improper conduct that have been filed. He said Davenport was cooperating with an accountant appointed by the court's trustees, and noted Davenport had packaged real estate deals for 30 years before filing for bankruptcy.

THE CHURCH, meanwhile, has appointed a committee to review its business practices. Adventist officials say church finances remain sound.

"We try to operate in the black; we're a pretty solid business concern," said communications director James Chase. "We do reasonably well, but we're not making a lot of money. We subsidize many of our programs, our mission outreach, schools and hospitals."

In addition to its investments, and income from hospitals, publishing, nursing homes and schools, the church receives $392 million a year worldwide from tithes and offerings of its 7.5 million members, Chase said. Most of that, $243 million, comes from North America.

He said the church, which preaches the imminent return of Jesus Christ and the end of the world, believes there are many "signs of the end times," but that does not conflict wih the heavy involvement in financial dealings.

"We have faith, but we go ahead and do things. Where we make mistakes, we're sorry on that one (the Davenport case) for sure, but we regard ourselves as being stewards of that which God has given. Christ plainly taught the church to 'occupy until I come.' "

The Seventh-day Adventist Church is Protestant, but celebrates the Sabbath on Saturday, and follows many Hebrew dietary laws. Many members are vegetarians; jewelry and cosmetics are frowned upon.

The writings of its founder, Ellen G. White, have come into controversy in recent years.

AN AUSTRALIAN theologian was dismissed from an Adventist seminary in California after he asserted there was no biblical basis for her claim that Christ moved from one section of heaven to another in the late 19th century to begin the Judgment.

And Long Beach, Calif., pastor, Walter Rea, was removed from the ministry after charging that more than half of the revelations Mrs. White claimed had come from angels in fact were copied from other spiritual writers.

The General Conference studied Rea's claims, which will be the subject of a book entitled "The White Lie," agreed Mrs. White had used other writings, but concluded there was no plagiarism.

In addition to tithes and offerings, the Adventist laity have found many ways to contribute to the church's mission to "preach, teach and minister throughout the world."

An Oregon couple gave their multi-million dollar Harris Pine Mills to the church in 1953. Church leaders moved in as company officers, and the profits, after taxes, go to support the ministry.

STUDENTS WHO cannot afford the 3,800 church-run schools — the largest Protestant school system in the world — are subsidized by their congregation. Poor members are given aid locally, and if a new church building is needed, the congregation gathers the money and helps construct it.

The Mission Church Builders, a group of retirees, roams through five states building Seventh-day Adventist churches.

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Copley News Service

LENINGRAD — Thankfully, much of this onetime Russian capital city's charm is indoors.

While Leningrad is hailed as the "Venice of the North" because of its hundreds of canals, eventually dumping into the Gulf of Finland, and the "Poor Man's Vienna" because of its mostly European nature, it is a grim experience most of the year in trying to enjoy these characteristics.

The reason for this is the weather. There are only 80 sunny days in 365. Thus, the chances are 4.5 to 1 that you will have miserably dark, rainy or snowy days for your sight-seeing. The (September) days of this man's visit were uniformly horrible, weather-wise.

But, weather notwithstanding, if a visitor will consider the history that has been Leningrad's and the outstanding collections of art available in centuries-old, magnificent palaces and cathedrals, the otherwise drab nature of the city can be tolerated with ease.

Leningrad was founded in 1703 by Peter the Great, served as the capital of Russia for two centuries, underwent a change of name to Petrograd with the Bolshevik revolution in 1918 and another change to Leningrad when V.I. Lenin died in 1924.

Although hailed as a beautiful reminder of Vienna, Budapest and other European cities to the west, many will find this city of 5 million more like street after street of buildings resembling World War II German army barracks. The city fathers have refused to allow high-rise buildings in order "to preserve the integrity of the city" but they have done little to enhance a beauty that could come from the city's location on the Neva River, with the 620 bridges that span the river and the canals.

Despite all these negative factors, lovers of fine art will thrill to the exhibits scattered among 47 museums, mostly former churches and palaces of the czars — Peter the Great, Catherine and others — and the ladies will find much to "oh" and "ah" about at the Summer Palace and the Yakaterinsky Palace and the Grand Palace in the suburbs. Why the communists enjoy showing visitors these contrasts with Leningrad's life of today is unclear, but they are standard "musts" on all tours.

Standard also is a visit to the Fortress of Peter and Paul (biblical apostles) with its church, and mostly its prison. At the latter, your guide, a completley indoctrinated party advocate named Miss Amina Teleshova, will spin yarn after yarn about how the czars imprisoned and mistreated many of Lenin's revolutionary comrades.

Propaganda and drabness aside, anyone (even one as ignorant of art as this man), will thrill at the opportunity to see 15th century Leonardo da Vinci paintings at the Hermitage, most famous of Leningrad's museums and once a part of the Winter Palace. There also is the Soviet Union's only Michelangelo sculpture. And, Rembrandt's "The Return of the Prodigal Son."

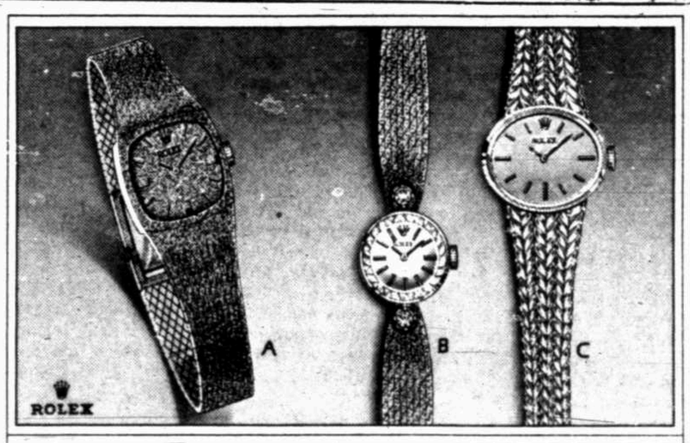

Coming here via air from the subtropical, friendly and fascinating surroundings of Yalta, Black Sea resort, you won't thrill to the cold winds of the Baltic and the north that sweep into the Leningrad plain.

For short time Katie brought sunshine into her parents' lives

NARRAGANSETT, R.I. (AP) — When Katie Jane Maria Champlin was born 2½ years ago, doctors "couldn't even categorize her," the girl's mother recalls.

She was paralyzed from the hips down. She had club feet, spaces in her spinal cord, holes in her heart, poor circulation and a malformed kidney. Her hips were dislocated, her legs broken at birth.

But before Katie died last month — one week after an eight-hour operation to correct the curvature of the spine that was interfering with her breathing — her life blossomed for a time, nurtured by intensive hospital care and the love of her family.

Her father, Gary, made what looked like a broad skateboard that Katie would lie on belly-down to push herself around the floor.

One early spring morning, she scooted around the kitchen floor amid bowls and blenders as her mother, Priscilla, made cupcakes. Many family activities were done on the floor for Katie's benefit.

"Uh-oh, Mom," she said.

"C'mon, Katie, you can do it."

Katie pushed again but instead of going forward spun herself in a circle, one wheel still on the carpet.

Priscilla got up to help, but it was a game to Katie and she whirled herself around, her eyes bright with the joy of discovery.

"She was a gift from God to all of us," said the minister.

Powerful images keep running through the mind even though it is almost a week since Odessa Permian handed the Midland Lee Rebels a 9-7 playoff dream buster defeat last Friday at W. T. Barrett Stadium.

The brain keeps picking up images on a daily basis. Bobby Knott's foot looks like a Halloween pumpkin with 13 digits. That old 13 (as in seconds) is a haunting reminder that Permian coach John Wilkins was born on Halloween. Mojo Magic strikes again, winning in almost unbelieveable fashion year after year after...

Reserve Mike Troglin busting two tackles behind the line of scrimmage to produce a touchdown and reserve end Jay Fuglaar going high to catch an overthrown pass by Coy Brown and coming down with one foot in bounds to set up Knott's dream killer.

Lee holding a 7-6 lead with 18 seconds left as Permian lines up for a 37-yard field goal attempt, followed by a Barrett explosion as the ball sails through the uprights in knuckleball fashion. Only 13 seconds left.

IMAGES even sail through Sunday as Tony Franklin misses a 32-yarder as Philly falls to Dallas and back to Friday as a high schooler hits from 37 with room to spare.

Only 2:18 left in the game and Permian, unbeaten in 25 straight games (now 26), on its own 25-yard line. Brown, criticized mostly this year for his passing, hits two key passes to Fuglaar. Then Permian has a chance and Knott ties the knot.

Again Halloween, spooks, goblins and Permian Panther magic. Always magic, tradition and panicless performers. Will it ever end?

Heartbreak for the Rebels and their coaches. They could have won and didn't. It was so close. It hurt. Lee coach Spike Dykes saying that in all his years of coaching no loss ever hurt worse. Lee's players playing hard — on even terms — against Permian and still losing. Death claims Spike's father-in-law on Sunday. It was not a good weekend for the Dykes family. No time is right for something like that, but somehow we feel worse about it. The heart bleeds for all concerned.

STATEMENTS by everyone not concerned with Panther football that Permian is not as good as last year's state championship team. A tester against El Paso Coronado. 7-0 against Abilene High. Only 24 points against Big Spring. A scare against Midland High. 16-6 against Abilene Cooper. 9-7 against Lee in 13 seconds. Still undefeated. Still Mojo. The beat goes on.

Tossing and turning, can't sleep. Knott kicks again and again, and the mind is the same as instant replay. Referee's arms up. Good. Goodbye Lee. The playoffs were only a dream. The game wasn't a dream. We live with the reality. Permian's inhuman, unbeatable. The feeling is there. Somehow we can't accept it. Images, powerful images.

Someone turn out the lights. We've heard the fat lady sing. We've heard enough. Need sleep. Need a victory over Mojo. Need rest. Will it ever end?

Rebels attempt to bounce back

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ABILENE — Even though the Midland Lee Rebels suffered their second loss of the season and were eliminated from any possible post season playoff activity, head coach Spike Dykes has no doubts that they will bounce back Friday night and play hard against Abilene High in P.E. Shotwell Stadium at 8 p.m.

"They'll snap back," said Coach Dykes. "We've got tremendous leadership on this team, tremendous pride and tremendous heart, so they will be back and ready to play I assure you. It's like we've said from the beginning that the only game that counts is the game that week. This week we have Abilene High and that's the task at hand, what we've got to do."

And that "task" won't be easy because Abilene has been playing some decent football this year. Look at the record and see for yourself. AHS is 4-4 overall this season and 3-2 in 5-5A play while Lee holds a 6-2 overall record and is also 3-2 in the league. The winner of this game, depending on whether Abilene Cooper (5-2-1 overall, 3-1-1 in league) wins or loses could move as high as second in the standings.

COACH DYKES has a lot of respect for his team's opponent this week, especially for the Eagle defense which is fourth in the league overall giving up only 1,277 yards this season and second overall in pass defense allowing only 300 yards. For Lee, defense has been a strong part of the Rebel game plan and this season it has the the second best defense in the league behind Permian. The Rebels have allowed 1,134 yards overall and leads the conference against the pass giving up a mere 266 yards.

"We'll certainly have to move the football against them," said Coach Dykes. "They've played great defense and it's been a real chore for people to move the football against them. The first thing we'll have to do is develop consistency on offense.

"Then on defense, we'll have to face their wide open attack. They have fine speed, good size, a very fine offensive attack. It will take a fine defensive effort to stop them. Leo Parrish is a good running back and the fullback (Scott Hamilton) is a good one also. Their quarterback, Karl Kearney, is back and he's a good one. He played the whole game last week against San Angelo (he was injured in the early going against Midland High three weeks ago)."

ABILENE HEAD coach Louie Spinks, has a few praises for the Rebels also. "Lee has got so much talent," he said. "They've got speed. Their running backs are real fast. (Calvin) Riggs is big but he can move too. (Kenneth) Brown, their split end is tall and can catch the ball. At quarterback (Bart) Ryan is doing a good job this year. Lee's an all around good football team. They should have beaten Permian and they had a bad night against Cooper. I think Lee is as good as or better than Cooper, that night they weren't. They are now."

The two offensive units, though effective enough to win the same number of 5-5A games, aren't quite the same statistically. Lee is the second best offensive team in the league behind Cooper with 2,087 yards and has displayed a balanced attack between run and pass, 1,582 yards rushing and 505 passing.

Riggs has been the big offensive performer for Lee with 659 yards rushing, fourth in the league while Troy Barber and Ryan have come through (419 and 239 yards respectively).

Parrish is the Eagles' workhorse, but he has only 320 yards on the ground but added another 102 through the air.

WALKING wounded a problem for the Eagles this week, players trying to practice while nursing injuries detracts from practice and, too, some starters, may not be ready by game time.

"We sustained a lot of injuries last week against San Angelo, a lot of players haven't been able to practice full speed," said Coach Spinks. "It hurts practices and hurts conentration. A lot of players are playing out of position to make up for the injuries. We are really bunged up. We have two or three players that we won't know about until game time if they'll be full speed or not." Parrish is one of those players hurt last week, but Spinks said "you can count on him playing Friday." He is suffering from a hip pointer, a painful injury that interferes with a players mobility. Hamilton is another starter suffering from injury, also a hip pointer, but like Parrish he is expected to play. Kearney, who suffered an ankle injury against Midland High, is still not 100 percent, but he'll get the nod at quarterback."

One final comment from Coach Spinks shows his respect for Midland Lee this season and it's head football coach Spike Dykes. "Spike has an outstanding football team and he is an excellent coach. He has coached on a lot of different levels, high school and college, and he has done an excellent job at Midland Lee.

WT races near end

Andrews, Plains, McCamey, Wink out in front

Andrews, Plains, McCamey and Wink seem to be wending their way toward inevitable district championships while Districts 6-3A and 9-2A have yet to establish a clear-cut leader.

Unbeaten Andrews, a 1 1/2 game leader over Monahans and Lake View in 2-4A, will continue in first place this week since Coach Bill Shipman's 9-0 Mustangs enjoy an off week.

Lake View, 5-1, is at Odessa Ector while Monahans, 5-1, hosts Snyder. Lamesa, 0-8 and 0-7, will be at Pecos, 5-4 and 4-3.

IN 5-2A, Stanton's hopes for a title ride on this week's Seagraves at Plains game. Plains is on top, 8-0 and 4-0, by virtue of the Cowboys' 7-3 win over Stanton a couple of weeks ago. Stanton is 4-1 in district and Seagraves 3-1. The Buffs beat Seagraves 22-6 early in the season, so if the Eagles could upset Plains, it would leave all three teams with one defeat. Stanton, 6-3 for the year, is off this week before finishing with 5-3 Ropes next Friday.

District 6-A is over, providing Wink doesn't stub its toe in the final two weeks. The Wildcats, 5-0, have beaten Rankin, 7-3, but after this week's breather against Balmorhea, Wink will finish against Greenwood. The Rangers are tied with Rankin for second at 4-1 after a 21-7 loss to the Red Devils last week. However, Greenwood, in only its second season of UIL football, could throw the race into confusion with an upset next week. This week, however, the Rangers must host Buena Vista. Rankin is at Grandfalls-Royalty and Iraan is at Sanderson.

JUNCTION and Mason are tie at 4-0 in 9-2A and Reagan County is a game back with a chance to do something about it when the Owls host Mason this week. Eldorado is at Junction. Someone else, in any event, would have to do something about Juncition, and that would be Mason when the teams meet next week. If all things go Reagan's way, another three-way tie could develop.

District 6-2A is a Quarter Horse sprint to the wire, only three league games and Clint and McCamey broke from the starting gate with wins last week. McCamey, 7-0-1, looks like the class of the league and will attempt to follow up last week's 38-8 win over Marfa with a win over Van Horn, 14-7 loser to Clint, on the road Friday. Clint, meanwhile, is at Marfa.

District 6-3A is another sprint with Coahoma and Seminole running neck-and-neck in the three-game dash after wins last week. Seminole, 21-0 over Denver City, is at Crane, which led Coahoma 15-14 with a little over a minute to go before losing 29-14. Denver City is at Coahoma.

ANDREWS, which finishes the regular season at Sweetwater next week, doesn't lead 2-4A in team offense or team defense, but it doesn't take much of a detective to discover why the Mustangs are unbeaten. Quarterback Keith Brooks leads the conference in rushing with 1,236 yards for a 5.5 average per carry and his 24 touchdowns and four conversions for 148 points leads the league in scoring. Last week, Brooks accounted for 146 yards and another 125 rushing in a 35-8 romp over Fort Stockton, the kind of performance that makes him the district's total offense leader with 1,816 yards.

Sweetwater shows the best offense with 351.5 yards per game while Andrews is next, averaging 342.3 yards. On defense, Andrews has surrendered 204.1 per game, which trails Lake View's 137.2 and Pecos' 192.1. Top 2-4A passer is M.McGuire, Monahans, how has completed 71 of 128 for 1,227 yards and 12 touchdowns.

In District 6-2A, McCamey's Robert Arana is the leading rusher with 660 yards and a 5.8 average while the Badgers Clay Lindsey is the top receiver with a 32.9 average on 11 calches for 362 yards. McCamey's Jeff Stacy is fourth in passing lwith 24 of 58 for 557 yards, good for five touchdowns.

Stanton's tailback Kevin Newman is having a big season in District 5-2A with 1,290 yards and one game still to go. Last week, Newman gained 181 yards on 31 carries against O'Donnell.

For cage recruiting violation

TCU put on probation

MISSIOP, Kan. (AP) — Texas Christian University has been placed on probation for one year for basketball recruiting violations, the National Collegiate Athletic Association said today.

Under the suspension, an unnamed assistant basketball coach will be prohibited from engaging in any off-campus recruiting activities during the probationary period and will be ineligible for a salary increase during the 1982-83 academic year.

The probation does not affect the teams's eligibility for post-season competition or television appearances, the NCAA said.

"The violations in this case involved the improper recruitment of only one prospective student-athlete by one assistant basketball coach," said Charles Wright, chairman of the NCAA Committee on Infractions. "However, the committee was quite concerned with the nature of the infractions, which appeared to represent a deliberate attempt to circumvent NCAA legislation."

BUT WRIGHT said that the conduct of Texas Christian officials throughout the investigation was exemplary, and he noted that the school never before had received a public penalty from the NCAA or the Southwest Athletic Conference.

"The committee believes," Wright said, "that the university continues to be committed to operating its athletic program in complete compliance with the letter and spirit of NCAA legislation."

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported in today's editions that the prospective player, Darrell Lovett, said he was given clothes, spending money and airplane tickets home by the assistant coach. He also accused the coach of falsifying transcript information so Lovett would appear eligible for enrollment at TCU.

AN OFFICIAL in the TCU athletic department, who told the Star-Telegram he did not want his name used, said Lovett's accusations are total fabrications, devised because he developed a grudge after he was dismissed from the team.

Lovett, reached at his mother's home in LaGrange, Ga., said he told the NCAA of his accusations against TCU after he left the team in 1979, then discovered he was ineligible to enroll at Morris Brown College in Atlanta.

Morris Brown officials advised him to contact the NCAA with his allegations, he said.

"TCU got rid of me ... they were just afraid the NCAA was going to come down on them, so they thought they'd get rid of me before I said anything," said Lovett, who claims he was enrolled illegally.

Barbara Reed, 25, now a registered nurse at a Syracuse hospital, testified Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn at the trial of Kuhn and four others accused of conspiring to shave points during six BC games to give knowledgeable bettors an edge on booking odds.

Miss Reed said Kuhn, who later threatened to kill her if she told what she knew, returned from a November 1978 meeting at which other witnesses have alleged the point-shaving scheme was cemented, with $250 in his pocket and a grin on his face.

"He said these guys had a suite of rooms, drugs for them and girls were available if they wanted," Miss Reed said, adding that he showed her the $250 and said the "big spenders" who gave it to him said there was "more where that money came from."

Earlier witnesses, including key government witness Henry Hill and Jim Sweeney, co-captain that season, have testified that at the November meetng in a Boston hotel Kuhn was given money and cocaine to seal the deal.

Subsequently, Miss Reed said Kuhn, allegedly paid $2,500 for each game in which he shaved points, began uncharacteristically spending money.

Renaldo Snipes offers suspect challenge for Larry Holmes

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — "It's tough making a living on the floor," says Renaldo Snipes of the lesson he learned in his fight against Gerrie Coetzee.

So the 25-year-old Snipes got off the floor twice agaist Coetzee last Aug. 9, won a highly disputed 10-ound split decision. Now he will get $150,000 and a chance at the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship when he fights Larry Holmes Friday night at the 17,000-seat Civic Arena.

Holmes' 11th title defense, as well as a 10-round heavyweight bout between Michael Dokes and George Chaplin, will be televised live by ABC from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m.

"I thought I won that fight," said Snipes of his bout against Coetzee. "I came on strong. I took the last part of the fight."

But it seems most people who watched Snipes' nationally televised performance against the South African felt he lost.

Asked at a news luncheon Wednesday how he would fight Holmes, the challenger — who likes to be called "Mister Snipes" — said he would employ "the moves that got me to 22-0."

Holmes, who did not attend the luncheon, joked to reporters in his hotel suite that he hasn't watched tapes of any Snipes fights because "I don't want to get my spirits down. I don't want to say, 'If he fights like this, why am I training so hard?'"

"Larry's going to come in in the best shape of his life. They know they're fighting the best of the top 10 contenders," said Snipes who is ranked No.7 by the WBC.

Holmes appears to be in excellent shape and, while his training has as a long-range goal his scheduled fight against top-ranked Gerry Cooney next March, he says he has not forgotten about Snipes.

"I'll tell you, Cooney is Snipes and Snipes is Cooney," said Holmes, explaining that a fighter must be ready for any opponent. As for fighting Snipes for $1.1 million, instead of waiting for a $10 million payday against Cooney, he said: "Man, I can't count money I don't have. I got to fight. I got to continue to practice my profession."

The promoters are billing the bout as "Imminent Danger," playing up the facts that Holmes is risking a Cooney fight and that in Pittsburgh's last heavyweight title bout July 18, 1951, Jersey Joe Walcott, a 6-1 underdog, knocked out defending champion Ezzard Charles.

"The way the ticket sales are going, we may get out of imminent danger," cracked a spokesman for the Civic Arena Corp. Arena publicist Tom Rooney said he thought at least 12,000 seats would be sold.

Ticket prices range from $200 down to $20 for the fight, which will be Holmes' first bout in Pennsylvania since he knocked out Joe Gholston in eight rounds his hometown of Easton Jan. 29, 1976.

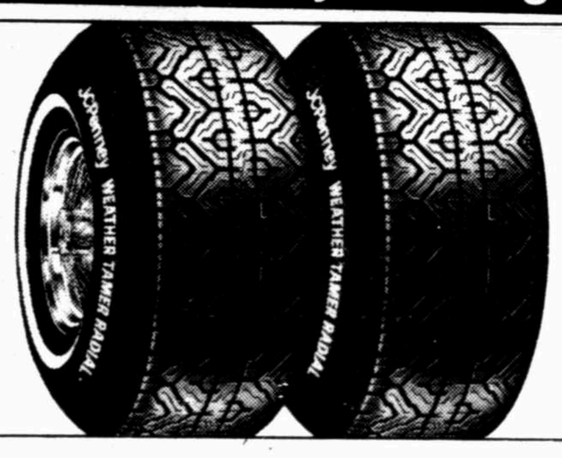

Holmes launched his pro career with a four-round decision over Rodell Dupree at Scranton, Pa., March 21, 1973, and has achieved a 38-0 record with 28 knockouts, nine of them coming in title defenses.

Snipes, who lives in Yonkers, N.Y., knocked out Dupree in the third round Oct. 18, 1980, to make his record 16-0, with nine knockouts.

KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

For Stanley Mitchell, 21-year-old from Georgia fishing in his first Bass Masters Classic, holding a three-pound lead over Mississippi veteran Harold Allen going into the final day was the thrill of a lifetime.

Still, he was also aware that never before had a fishermen led the first day and then gone on to lead the second, let alone remain on top the final day.

Mitchell, who had completed his first regular BASS tournament to qualify, did it all, outfishing 41 of the nation's top pros by locating his fish, whereas the other pros didn't have that many fish located or that many good places to fish.

MITCHELL'S game plan called for eight spots. Most anglers rely on patterns and places to fish, but Mitchell had confidence in his choices and stayed with his basic patterns.

In three days, Mitchell pulled out 15 bass from the Montgomery Lake river system weighing 35 pounds, two ounces, second lowest classic total in the 10-year history of Super Bowl bass fishing.

"I caught 70 per cent of my fish on a crank bait—a Model A Bomber. I caught the other 30 per cent on a Luhr-Jensen Krocodile spoon. I was fishing the old river bank before they flooded it from around five to 20 feet and mostly around the mouths of creeks. Most fish were holding right on the drop. I used a front depthfinder to see when the wind blew me into shallow water and then I'd move back out."

MY BIG fish the final day came at 1:58 p.m. on a Modeal A. It was clear with a black back...and it seemed like it took an hour to land, but I guess it was just two or three minutes. He hit the bait in shallow water. It weighed six pounds, three ounces. I used 10-pound test Stren line on the crank baits and 17 pound line with the spoons."

Mitchell found his four spots in prepractice and during practice found four more. As he came in that final day, Mitchell figured he was beaten. "I was scared I didn't have 12 pounds and thought I might wind up a few ounces short. I heard Harold Allen had about 34 pounds." Actually, Allen wound up with 15-3 the final day.

MOST of the 4,000 spectators at the Montgomery Civic Center thought Allen had won when his weight was posted. Mitchell needed at least 12 pounds to retain his lead and posted 13 pounds two ounces.

Mitchell almost keeled over from the shock. Why not? He was $41,500 richer, the youngest angler ever to win the Classic, and set for life...endorsements from tackle, line and boat companies that will bring more than his prize money.

The second place finisher Allen earned $12,550. "I told everybody before the final day that three pounds was a bunch to try to make up on this pond.

So the 1981 tournament is history and the top-named fishermen like Roland Martin, Tommy Martin, Bo Dowden and Jimmy Houston didn't seem to get the hang of Montgomery river fishing. However, two-time winner Rick Clunn, Montgomery, Texas, managed to finish fourth with 21-11.

Writer, Jets' Todd battle in locker room

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Richard Todd, the quarterback of the New York Jets who has had an on again, off again feud with the New York media, verbally and physically assailed sports writer Steve Serby of the New York Post in the team's training camp locker room Wednesday.

Todd, who had come under heated criticism from Serby and other writers earlier in the season, when the Jets lost their first three games, had been refusing to talk to sports writers after the Jets' games. And on several occasions, he had been unavailable for interviews during the brief period the National Football League team's locker room was open to reporters during the week.

A spokesman for the Post said the newspaper intended to file criminal charges against Todd.

An NFL spokesman said the league was investigating and there would be no comment until those involved had been interviewed.

Jim Kensil, president of the Jets, said he had talked to Todd and that the quarterback had said he was sorry the incident had occured.

Lee JV hosts Eagles; Pups at Cooper

The Midland Lee junior varsity Stonewall Brigade is at home Thursday night against Abilene High at Memorial Stadium at 7 p.m. while the sophomores travel to Odessa to face the Bronchos at 5 p.m.

For Midland High's JV, it's a road trip to Abilene on Saturday for a 1:30 p.m. kickoff against Cooper.

Lee raised its record to 6-2 for the season last week by handing previously unbeaten Odessa Permian, 5-1, a 28-26 setback while Midland slipped to 2-5 after losing to Odessa High JV, 34-0.

MC takes third

KILLEEN — The Midland College Women's golf team finished third here Tuesday in the Temple Junior College Women's Invitational golf tournament with a three-day total of 953, and the Chaparrals recorded a bit of history in the process.

In Tuesday's final round, the Chaps had four women break 80, a first for the school. Rebecca Bradley led the way with a 77 and Ann Coombes produced an 78. Sabra Srader and Jill Himmelman both had 79 rounds. Bradley and Himmelman had three-day total of 239 while Coombs and Wendy Swift had 243. Srader finished with a 248.

The University of Texas won the tournament with a 924 score and Kim Shipman led the way with a 212 for medalist honors. Shipman had rounds of 68 the first two days, but ballooned to 76 the final day. North Texas State University was second with a 935.

Hawks host Panhandle

BIG SPRING — The Howard College Hawks return to action at 8 p.m. tonight against the Panhandle Junior Varsity after opening the season with a 108-61 win over Sul Ross JV Tuesday. Nathan Givens led HC with 31 while James Barnett had 18 and Leon Isaac and Reggie Childers had 11 each.

Goddard Red in 1st

Goddard Red moved into sole possession of first place in the seventh grade football National Conference Tuesday by posting a 20-0 victory over San Jacinto Green. That win, combind with a 0-0 tie between Goddard White and Alamo Scarlet leaves Red one half game ahead of White with one game left to play this season.

Also in the National Conference, San Jacinto White defeated Alamo Grey 24-12.

Pastorini to start for Rams against Saints

(Compiled from R-T wires)

Dan Pastorini was named No. 1 LA Rams quarterback by Coach Ray Malavasi and will play against the Saints Sunday. Even Pastorini was surprised. He had said, "I think Pat Haden should be the No. 1," following the Rams' 20-13 victory over the Detroit Lions last Sunday. Haden had been benched in the second period against Detroit as the Rams trailed 10-7, and Jeff Rutledge took over. But Rutledge suffered a dislocated right thumb in the fourth period and Pastorini took over for the final minutes. Pastorini's statistics were one incomplete pass and one sack in his first-game appearance in a Los Angeles uniform. Haden's detriment appeared to be that he didn't throw long passes with accuracy, and had been intercepted 10 times as the Rams record stands at 5-4 in the National Football Conference West race...

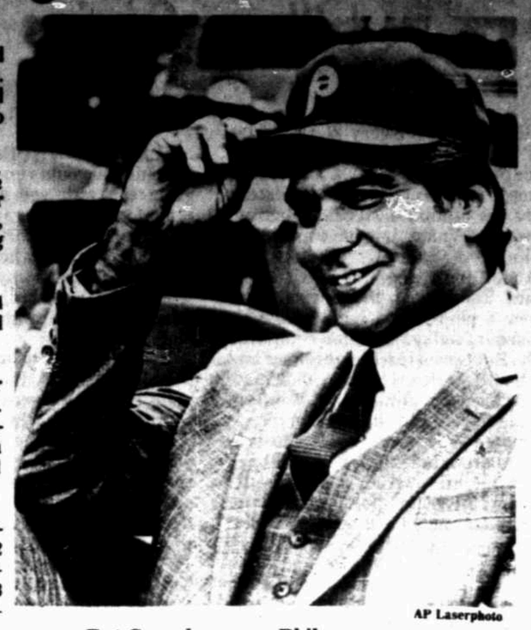

Pat Corrales, 40, is new manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, succeeding his old Phils' roommate Dallas Green. Asked if he was tough enough to handle a team that eats managers for lunch, Corrales said, "I know what I'm getting into. I had a similar situation in Texas. I had a veteran type ballclub and I had no problem over there, so I foresee no problems here in Philadelphia. I'm tough with the rules that I have. And they will be enforced. They know how to play. It's a veteran club. They know how to win. And they know what it takes to win. We just have to get them prepared and be ready to go."...

Inside Sports, a monthly magazine started 1½ years ago by the Washington Post Co., is up for sale. Circulation for the current issue is 750,000, although reports say the magazine is operating at a loss...

Joe Rosado, who led Fort Hays State to a 30-4 record last year, resigned as head basketball coach to enter private business...

Georgia-Florida at 2:45 p.m. will follow four regional telecasts on ABC Saturday with 11 a.m. games scheduled between Clemson-North Carolina, Nebraska-Oklahoma State, Miami-Florida State, Utah-New Mexico, Miami, Ohio-Central Michigan...

The NASL announced Los Angeles and Minnesota will not compete in the upcoming 1981-82 indoor season because the owners of those franchises are trying to sell them. The league said 13 clubs will participate in the third indoor season...

Griffey skirts Reggie Jackson issue

By MIKE HARRIS

But, since Griffey has spent much of his major league career as a right fielder for his former employer, the Cincinnati Reds, the

JIM MURRAY

Steinbrenner fills bill as Series goat

Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK – Every World Series has a hero and a goat. This was no exception. You have a choice of heroes. Cey, Yeager, and Guerrero were the official designees. Garvey, Howe, and Valenzuela have as valid a claim.

About the "goats," there is no doubt. The goat in this Series never threw a pitch, hit a ball, bobbled a grounder, walked a batter or muffed a fly. But George M. Steinbrenner had as bad a Series as you could have. Compared to him, Dave Winfield should have won a watch.

George M. Steinbrenner is a curious case. Born into luxury, he could have spent his life chasing a polo mallet around Long Island or drinking champagne out of a chorine's slipper. But he always hankered to be in or own a jock operation. He even took up, of all things, football coaching. He already owned ore boats and iron foundries. But he bought race tracks and baseball teams. He bought them the way you might buy a set of electric trains or a yacht. They were yours to do with as you pleased.

THE NEW York Yankees are a proud tradition in sport. In New York. An institution, a tourist attraction, a civic asset, a work of art, maybe. The best artists in their line performed there, the Nijinskys of their sport. They were to baseball what Caruso was to the Met. The best. The nonpareil.

Oh, the Yankees were owned. By Col. Jacob Ruppert, originally, a German beer baron who understood so little about baseball that he hired the most competent men he could find to run the ball club while he sold his beer. Ruppert ran the team as a quasi public trust.

He was so successful, he set a trend for succeeding owners. Owners were to be seen and not heard. I mean, why monkey with a good thing?

Managers lasted for decades, general managers for lifetimes. Firings and controversies were distasteful things better left to lesser franchises and leagues. The Yankees looked at the world thro7gh monocles.

None of this made any impression on George M. Steinbrenner. What he bought, he wanted to drive.

GEORGE TOOK over a dilapidated franchise in a rotting, decaying old ball park. He first induced the city of New York, even though broke itself, to put $100 million into refurbishing the stadium.

Next, he turned his attention to the team. Like the stadium, it was a relic of better days. But, a new day had dawned in baseball. No longer did you have to build a pennant winner painstakingly through a tedious farm system process. You could buy Instant Pennant with megabucks. George went out and bought Catfish Hunter, Reggie Jackson, Bucky Dent, and, later, Dave Winfield, Tommy John and others. He took the best players available off the free agent list each year. Price was no object.

George soon had a locker room full of the most expensive and temperamental stars in the business. Nor did he just turn them over to some seasoned front office veteran a la Ruppert. George's general managers had a career span about that of Hitler's generals. One loss, and off came their epaulets. Managers came and went in a dizzying procession.

GEORGE'S TROUBLE was, he thought you could run a baseball program the way you could run Ohio State football. You can't. Baseball is not an emotional sport. Baseball is as cold-blooded as no-limit poker. You can't rah-rah your way to a home run. A pitcher, sobbing, and with the adrenalin pumping, will be wild high.

George didn't believe it. He believed in pep talks, butt-kicking, even press clippings pasted on the bulletin board. I know, one of mine made it.

None of this helped. George ordered players benched. He ran the team by phone from his upper deck tower. He publicly demanded his star right fielder take a physical this spring when Reggie Jackson's stats suggested something terminal was wrong with him. He cussed the team out, and sent his first-string catcher streaking from the locker room in tears one night as they were in the midst of, as it turned out, a successful playoff series.

IT WOULDN'T be fair to say the team didn't hustle for George Steinbrenner. A team plays for its own pride. But I have never seen a drier-eyed loser's dressing room in my life than the Yankees' Wednesday night.

And I have never seen a more astonishingly tasteless owner statement in my life than the one that was distributed to the press shortly after the final out. "I want to apologize to the people of New York and the fans of the New York Yankees everywhere for the performance of the Yankee team in the World Series," George Steinbrenner told the world.

Reggie Jackson, when I went in to bid him good-bye was thunderstruck. "Hey! We didn't lose the World Series! The Dodgers won it! 'Apologize?! Apologize?!' For what?"

The view of most of the baseball world is that if anyone owes the world an apology, it is George M. Steinbrenner, not his team. How can an industrial magnate, an owner of a hallowed American institution, stoop to get in an elevator brawl with beer-swilling youngsters? How can a man of his stature go around boasting he knocked the front teeth out of a drunken heckler and rained punches on a companion? Even assuming it to be true -- which a lot of people don't -- is that the behavior expected of the head of a storied organization, an outfit esteemed for its lofty perfection and class?

THE YANKEES in this World Series were a bunch of fading old gaffers who can't get around on the fastball anymore. Half the starters were in the 36-40 age range. They did well to win two games and get barely nosed out in three others. But they did something Yankee teams never used to do -- beat themselves.

But is that any reason to bust up elevator walls and break your hand and then take a kick at your athletes when they're down?

The Yankees didn't look like Yankees in this World Series. But, then, the owner didn't look like Jacob Ruppert, either. Maybe there's a connection. In any case, George gets the horns for this World Series' worst performance.

Barbers Hill TE, safety gets 7 RBI

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

Tony Irby is a starting free safety and tight end for unbeaten Barbers Hill and in last week's football game he recorded seven "RBI" in a 37-0 shutout of Montgomery.

Translated, that means Irby blocked three punts, intercepted one pass, knocked down three others to earn mention in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

In head coach Bob Edwards' terminology, RBI encompasses all big plays, interceptions, fumble recoveries, etc. And on Edwards' scorecard last week, Irby was the team's leading hitter.

"He doesn't have the blazing speed of some defensive backs but he can jump out of sight," Edwards said of the 6-1, 180-pound senior. "This wasn't an especially outstanding performance for him, he's played like this all season."

On a team that specializes in blocking punts, Irby has four of the team's 12 blocked punts this season.

"We've turned five of those blocked punts into touchdowns," assistant coach John Richey said. "Tony has great leaping ability and he gets his hands up and goes after it. He just has a knack for getting through."

Two of Irby's blocked punts were turned into touchdowns. Defensive tackle Scott Davis pounced on one in the end zone for a touchdown and defensive end Mike Duhon returned the other 15 yards for a touchdown.

In other outstanding performances:

--West Orange Stark cornerback Larnell Thomas intercepted three passes and contributed six tackles to his team's 18-14 victory over Beaumont Forest Park. Thomas also batted down a fourth pass on Forest Park's final drive of the game to protect the slim lead.

--Brownsville Pace quarterback David Bryan had a near perfect performance, completing 13 of 14 passes for 236 yards and five touchdowns passes in a 40-0 victory over Laredo United. Fr

Area producers complete six discoveries, one extender

Six oil and gas discoveries and one extender have been completed by area oilmen in West Texas.

COKE DISCOVERY

Mole Operating Co. Inc., Richardson, has completed the No. 1 Hendry as a Gardner sand gas discovery in Coke County, 2 1/2 miles east of Blackwell in Coke County.

The well flowed 924,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 18/64 inch choke and perforations between 5,439 and 5,444 feet.

Total depth is 5,918 feet with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 5,887 feet.

YOAKUM FIND

Mobil Producing, Texas & New Mexico, Inc., Houston, has completed as a Devonian discovery its No. 1-C Kellar in Yoakum County, three miles southwest of Plains.

The well was finaled to flow 291 barrels of 38.5 gravity oil plus no water through a 10/64 inch choke. The gas to oil ratio was 45 to 1.

Production was gained through perforations between 11,631 and 11,645 feet, which had been acidized with 500 gallons.

It was drilled to a depth of 11,655 feet and plugged back to 11,645 feet, with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,644 feet.

The site is in section 54, block D, John H. Gibson survey.

HOWARD FINDS

PED Oil Corp., Midland, has completed as a Fusselman and Sylvan discovery the No. 1 Flanagan "B" in Howard County, four miles southeast of Big Spring.

The well flowed 210 barrels of 52 gravity oil plus two barrels of water througha 10/64 inch choke. The gas to oil ratio was 595 to 1.

Production was through perforations between 9,531 and 9,540 feet and 9,545 and 9,577 feet, which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons.

Drilled to 9,659 feet, it was plugged back to 9,619 feet, with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,561.

Diamond Shamrock, Inc., has completed its No. 2-14 H.T. Birkhead as a Canyon lime reef discovery in Howard County, four miles north of Coahoma.

Calculated absolute open flow was 1,500,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 5/8 inch choke. The gravity of the dry gas was .610 and the gas to liquid ratio was 154,500 to 1.

Production was gained from perforations between 8,514 and 8,526 feet, which had been acidized with 200 gallons.

GAINES OIL FIND

Forest Oil Corp., Odessa, has completed a Devonian oil discovery in Gaines County, seven miles southwest of Seagraves.

The No. 1-A-2 ODC pumped 51 barrels of 33 gravity oil plus 152 barrels of water through perforations between 12,904 and 12,912 feet, which had been acidized with 500 gallons.

TERRY DISCOVERY

Mesa Petroleum Co. has completed the No. 1-32 Richardson in Terry County, four miles northeast of Tokio.

The Glorieta oil discovery pumped 37 barrels of 28 gravity oil plus 34 barrels of water through perforations between 8,970 and 8,996 feet, which had been acidized with 22,000 gallons.

Total depth is 12,986 feet, with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,624 feet and plugged back to 10,538 feet.

The site is in section 32, block D-14, C&MRR survey.

CRANE EXTENDER

Black Dome Energy Corp., Golden, Colo., has completed the No. 1 Dawson as an extender to the Bayview (San Andres) field in Crane County, 12 miles south of Crane.

The well pumped five barrels of 38.5 barrels of oil plus 31.6 barrels of water in 24 hours. Gas to oil ratio is 1,540 to 1.

Production was through perforations between 2,122 and 2,130 feet which had been acidized with 5,450 gallons.

The total depth is 3,219 feet and plugged back to 2,190 feet with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 3,219 feet.

Wellsite is 660 feet from the southeast, and 1,980 feet from the northeast line of section 10, block 6, H&TC survey.

REEVES GASSER

The Superior Oil Co., The Woodlands, has plugged back for re-completion as an Atoka gas discovery in Reeves County, five miles wes and three miles south of Orla.

The well flowed 63,500,000 cubic feet of gas through a 1.5 inch choke, and perforations between 13,450 and 13,480 feet. The gravity of the dry gas was .572 feet.

The total depth of the well is 15,720 feet, plugged back to 15,040 feet, with 5 inch casing set at 15,720.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, November 6, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The greatest of all marching band composer-conductors, John Philip Sousa, was born on this date. Also sharing this birthday: actress Sally Field, director Mike Nichols and novelist James Jones. Going back to school could be part of your plan this year. Others may make the decision for you. Overcoming a language barrier could be a prerequisite for an important job change. Travel holds special appeal. Count on romance adding to your sense of well-being. A rare real estate opportunity could be made available to you. The air is cleared at your place of employment and you become more productive. Expect a salary increase.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your relations with your neighbors may be sensitive now. Keep your temper under control! The work day goes better than anticipated, ending the week on a happy note.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make the most of the time you spend with loved ones. Partnerships enjoy highly favorable influences. Give up a personal desire in favor of something that will mean a lot to mate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Business complications can be overcome if you make the right decision today. Heed your instincts and you will do fine! Mate helps you deal with unexpected problems.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You find new opportunities. Person who once seemed indifferent now takes an active interest. Relatives, neighbors play a major role in your personal affairs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may feel pulled into two different directions. Heed your instincts! Go with love—money will follow. Open a dialogue with someone who has been rebellious.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Financial matters are in the spotlight. Accept additional responsibilities and overtime. Older person can pull strings for you now. Your social life accelerates.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Influential person pays you a meaningful compliment. Resist the get-rich-quick scheme of a well-intentioned neighbor or relative. Follow through on a hunch.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Seize an opportunity to learn the truth. What you find out will lift a burden. Your views are sought. Catch up on routine tasks. Your romantic position is stronger than in the past.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Assume a low profile at work and let others take the initiative for a while. It is best to stick to routine chores until you see how the land lies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Energy, drive and luck help you to climb the ladder of success. You are able to handle your responsibilities better as the year draws to a close. Personal relationships grow more rewarding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 20): You now have the power to persuade others to act in your behalf. Do not postpone your Christmas shopping; you could miss the gift you wanted to buy for mate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not go out on a limb today. Someone is just waiting to saw it off! Keep your mind on your regular duties. A happy romantic interlude lifts your spirits this evening.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

Conventions can be taken to extremes. It is hard to believe that several international experts were involved on this deal, from a recent tournament in England.

North-South were using a weak no trump of 12-14 points. Perhaps it was the form of competition that persuaded North to try for the no trump game rather than four hearts, but to us North shattered several canons of bidding.

First, four of a major suit is generally a more satisfactory contract than is three no trump. Second, with an unbalanced hand you should always strive for a suit contract. And finally, North should want to become declarer to protect his king of clubs from possible decapitation at the opening gun. Obviously, it takes a diamond lead to hold North to eleven tricks at a heart contract. It would seem that three hearts at North's second turn was an "automatic" bid.

However, North-South were saved by the fact that East-West were playing one of those modern carding conventions that we both dislike heartily. It requires the opening leader's partner, if he cannot beat any of the first two cards played to the first trick, to play his second-highest card in the suit. As a result, when West led the king of diamonds, East followed with the nine. Now West knew that his partner had either the ten or jack of diamonds, but he didn't know which. He also didn't know whether his partner liked the suit or not. Since in some circumstances giving declarer a diamond trick might be his ninth trick, West chose to shift to the queen of clubs. Declarer ended up with eleven tricks and a top board.

Oh, for good old-fashioned bridge. Partner leads a high diamond and East plays the nine, saying he likes the suit. Partner continues the suit and the defenders take the first five tricks. Very difficult.

Izquierdo and Renteria presented an enchanted evening

It was an enchanting evening with some of those there trying to determine which they had enjoyed more — this concert with concert pianist Angeles Renteria and conductor Luis Izquierdo or the season's opener with Metropolitan opera star Roberta Peters.

That's what it's all about. Presenting programs which make the audience feel and think during each performance, "This one is the best."

Sam Woodward, the symphony and chorale's general manager, once described one of the organization's goals as presenting quality concerts which inspire subscribers to think, even when they are unfamiliar with the music or the guest artists, "I don't know what the symphony's going to do tonight, but whatever it is, it's going to be great."

MISS RENTERIA performed the overture from "Los Esclavos Felices" by J.C. Arriaga and "Concierto Breve para Piano y Orquesta" by X. Montsalvatge during the first half of the concert. She plays quite well technically, demonstrating a man's strength in her style.

Izquierdo conducted the symphony throughout the evening. Following intermission, the symphony performed "Sinfonia Sevillana" by J. Turina and "El Sombrero de Tres Picos," second suite, by M. de Falla.

The musicians played as if they had been inspired. Their performance sounded flawless and their timing was absolutely accurate. The solos were of the same quality.

The musicians showed their enjoyment at working with and respect for Izquierdo when, during the second standing applause following the final number, they would not stand when he motioned for them to do so, but rather sat and applauded him.

Backstage, Dr. Thomas Hohstadt, the symphony's director, congratulated Izquierdo at the evening's close, expressing his pleasure at the performance.

AS IZQUIERDO, who does not speak English, had said in an interview prior to the performance, "Music is a universal language."

When he rehearses with an orchestra which does not share his native tongue he uses the tools at hand to express what he wants.

"The conductor's art is that of mimic, of gesture, another universal language," Izquierdo explained.

Miss Renteria and Izquierdo are married and have six children, ranging in age from 21 to 4. Although both tour extensively, they do not often travel together.

Miss Renteria, a native of Seville, Spain, has appeared as soloist with the Mozarteum Orchestra of Salzburg, the Madrid Symphony, the Lisbon Philharmonic, the municipal orchestras of Valencia and La Coruna and the Seville Philharmonic. She also has given numerous recitals in Spain, Italy, Austria and Portugal.

ENTERTAINMENT

Miss Renteria has received, among other awards in piano and chamber music, the Joaquin Turina "Extraordinario."

HER TEACHERS include pianists Hans Graf of Vienna, Guido Gorini of Venice and Paul Badura-Skoda, Winfried Wolf and Paul von Schilhawsky, all of Austria. Miss Renteria has a diplomate in piano from the Salzburg Mozarteum, as well as the Royal Conservatory in Madrid, where she was awarded the First Prize in Piano Virtuosity.

Izquierdo, a native of La Coruna, Spain, was initially trained as a pianist. He graduated from the Madrid Conservatory, where he was awarded the Royal Academy of Beaux Arts "San Fernando" award, a special piano prize from the Madrid Conservatory, as well as First Prize in Piano Virtuosity.

"I began my career as a pianist and, at one time, I was doing dual pianos," Izquierdo said. "But, I always wanted to be a conductor."

Izquierdo studied conducting in Venice, Vienna and Salzburg, graduating from the Mozarteum in Salzburg with the title of orchestra director. The conductors with whom he has studied or coached include Antal Dorati, Herbert von Karajan, George Szell, Erich Leinsdorf and Swarowsky of the Akademie fur Muski of Vienna.

Besides directing the major orchestras of Spain, Izquierdo has conducted orchestras in Germany, Austria, Portugal, Venezuela, France, Rumania, Algiers, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Poland, Norway and the U.S.

Izquierdo is currently the musical director of the Betica Philharmonic Orchestra in Seville and occupies the chair of the Choral and Instrumental Department of the Superior Conservatory of Music of Seville and the Seville University Choir.

The concert presented in Midland on Tuesday and Odessa on Monday will be repeated in Big Spring at 8:15 p.m. today in the Big Spring High School Auditorium. Tickets, priced at $7.50 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens, may be purchased at the door.

Granger tried to prove himself by fighting

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I've ruined half my life by fighting," says British actor Stewart Granger. "Now people can find out why I was so belligerent."

The secret can be discovered in his just-published autobiography from Putnam, "Sparks Fly Upward" ("Man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward" — Job 5:7). In case you don't have $14.95, here is Granger's own analysis:

"As a boy, I was afraid to admit my cowardice to my father, because he might have disapproved. So throughout my life I have tried to prove myself by being combative. During my Hollywood career, I fought with Louis B. Mayer, I fought with Howard Hughes, I questioned everyone's motives.

"I fought MGM at every turn. My agent tried to tell me, 'Jimmy, just do it and go swim in the pool.' I refused." Note: Granger's real name, James Stewart, was changed early in his film career for an obvious reason.

Granger, still dashingly handsome at 68, discussed his book and new life over coffee at the Bel Air Hotel. He was accompanied by his daughter Tracy, 29, a film editor. Granger is house-guesting here with Tracy's mother, Jean Simmons.

"Jean read my book and discovered what a nice man I was, after all," Granger quipped. "I'm a guest, that's all. Jean has a new boyfriend. In fact, I introduced them."

"Sparks Fly Upward" is a revealing book: an extramarital fling with young Deborah Kerr, an inside look at the Olivier-Leigh split, a global adventure with Ava Gardner. It also is an unsparing self-portrait of a man who became an actor by accident, achieved stardom with little effort and seemed a cause-less rebel through most of his career.

After scoring as a leading man in post-war English films, Granger started his American career with "King Solomon's Mines" in 1950 and immediately became MGM's swashbuckler-in-residence. He starred in such remakes as "Scaramouche," "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Beau Brummell," battled columnists, contended with Howard Hughes over Jean Simmons.

What he did not do, he claimed, was get rich.

"Stars today get astounding amounts of money and pay 50 per cent income tax," he complained. "When I was here, we paid 80 and 90 per cent tax. I never made a bob.

"I came out here on the plane with little Dustin Hoffman, who makes millions. Sean Connery is a millionaire. Even Michael Caine, for God's sake. Clark Gable never made the kind of money they are making. Nor did I. I'm not bitter nor jealous. Just madly envious!"

His marriage to Jean Simmons ended, Granger returned to Europe in 1960 and appeared in Italian costume epics and German westerns. In 1968 he came back to Hollywood for a TV series, "The Men from Shiloh," a reworking of "The Virginian." The experience helped convince Granger to retire.

"I found ways to do nothing," he recalled. "For five years I was building a house in Spain. After a dozen years of inactivity, I realize I made a mistake. When an actor quits acting, he atrophies. Now I'm ready to go back to work, if any producer will have me."

'Jessica Novak' capable of illuminating TV news

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that television news has turned glamorous, it's become suitable as entertainment programming. Already this season, the Smothers Brothers were cast as an investigative TV news team, trying to uncover comedy and drama on NBC's new series "Fitz and Bones." They found neither.

A much more successful effort is "Jessica Novak" on CBS. Based on tonight's pilot episode, the only segment available for pre-screening, "Jessica Novak" looks capable of illuminating the TV news business the way "Lou Grant" portrays newspaper life.

MC offers art class

A beginning drawing class is being offered by the Fine Arts Department of Midland College beginning Nov. 12.

The adult course will be conducted from 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday for four sessions. The only cost for the course will be the expense of the supplies. No textbook is required.

The instructor will be Midland artist Jane Becker Lunson.

Persons interested must register in advance in person, no telephone enrollments will be accepted, with Ellen Gonzales, fine arts division secretary, in room 127 at the Allison Fine Arts Building between 8 a.m. and noon or 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Concert to be at OC

ODESSA — The Odessa College Choir and Community chorus will present a fall concert at 8 p.m. today in the Recital Hall of the Fine Arts Auditorium at OC.

Admission for the concert is $1 for students and $2 for adults, with proceeds going to help defray expenses for the group's spring concert tour.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — They're coming to the end of "Hanky Panky" at Columbia Pictures. That's a new movie starring Gene Wilder and Gilder Radner, directed by Sidney Poitier.

Poitier sets are ordinarily off-limits to visitors, but he allowed this observer to pay a call in the waning days of production. The company had been wandering all over — New York City, Boston, upstate New York, Connecticut, Arizona, weaving the tale of espionage and intrigue, with a nod to the shade of Alfred Hitchcock.

"Hanky Panky" was spending its last days on Stage 15 at the Burbank Studios. It is the process stage, where rear projection can make Wilder and Radner seem to be flying over the Grand Canyon in a light airplane. Suddenly the pilot dies of a heart attack, and...

The first to appear on the set after the long lunch break was Gene Wilder. His blond hair was teased to a frenzy, the cobalt eyes at half-staff. He admitted to fatigue.

"This is the longest movie I've ever been on — going into our 16th week," he said. "I don't know why it has been so tiring, maybe because I've been on the run all the time. Also, we work six days a week when we're on location. The longest film before this one was 'Start the Revolution Without Me,' which lasted 15 weeks. But I wasn't in it all the time. No, that couldn't be true, because I played twins, didn't I?"

He had to think about that. Meanwhile, Gilda Radner appeared on the set, ready for the ordeal in the airplane. ("I get sick up there"). She is smaller than you might expect from seeing her on "Saturday Night Live." She is awed about appearing in what is virtually her first major movie (forget "First Family"; most people have).

Did she ever dream as a Detroit schoolgirl of becoming a movie star?

"That was not one of my goals," said Miss Radner. "I never thought of being a stand-up comic, either. I wouldn't have been able to stand the loneliness, the rejection, the ordeal of trying to make people laugh for 40 minutes, all alone. I've seen Steve Martin perform his act, and I admire him. I can imagine how he endured the years of traveling alone, trying to find things that make people laugh.

"My only ambition was to work with people who were experts at comedy. So far I've been very lucky."

The two stars mounted a ladder to the airplane, and they played a brief scene as the Grand Canyon vista flashed on a screen behind them. Director Poitier stood on an adjacent scaffolding and reacted with delight to Wilder's alarm at finding himself in the cockpit with a dead pilot.

After several takes, Poitier descended and talked genially about his change of career. After directing five moderate successes ("Uptown Saturday Night," "A Piece of the Action," etc.), he scored with "Stir Crazy," last winter's surprise smash. Gross: $85 million.

Why did it score so big?

"It has to do with timing," Poitier reflected. "Timing in getting the right script at the right time, the right producer, a couple of actors who are hot. Timing in when the picture is released, what the competition is. But then, I don't think it pays to try to analyze too much. If you do that you start trying for a sure thing."

Poitier himself hasn't acted in three or four years, and that doesn't bother him:

"The parts I've been offered in the past 10 years haven't thrilled me. I get plenty of creative satisfaction from directing. It's a long day, and I go home tired, but it's a pleasant kind of tiredness. I'm not saying I wouldn't act again. But if I did, it would have to be something that was intriguing, challenging, fascinating — and seductive."

Actress wins Pulitzer Prize for drama

NEW YORK (AP) — For someone who loves to act, Beth Henley sure writes a lot. From now through January, she has three plays opening, two out of town and one on Broadway.

The Broadway piece, opening next Wednesday, is "Crimes of the Heart," the off-Broadway version of which won this year's Pulitzer Prize for drama.

Set in a small Mississippi town, it's about three sisters. One is a singer just in from failure in Hollywood, another's a local spinster and the third is in worse trouble, having just shot her husband.

Getting the Pulitzer and making her Broadway debut as a playwright is quite nice, Miss Henley allows, but acting still gives her the biggest high.

"When people compliment me on 'Crimes of the Heart,' I really can't relate to that," says the author, a tiny, brown-eyed woman of 29 born and raised in Jackson, Miss.

She still speaks in the soft drawl of those parts but now calls Los Angeles home. She moved there in 1976 to make her way as an actress after studying drama in college.

Miss Henley was asked for her first impressions of Los Angeles.

"Terrifying," she said. "I thought, if you can get to like this place, you need psychiatric care."

But that passed and she settled in. Alas, she didn't find much steady work as an actress: "At one point, my agent was reduce .o working in a depar ent store, the umbrella section, making calls for me at lunch hour."

It was at this point the actress began evolving into a writer. She began with a screenplay, "The Moonwatcher," a love story about one woman, two men, and the consequences of triangulating without a permit.

It's going to be filmed now, she says. But back then, forget it. "The old story," she says. "No producers would read it unless I had a (writing) agent, and no agent wanted to take on a new client."

So she put the script in a trunk and wrote a play, figuring, she says, "it'd be easier to get produced."

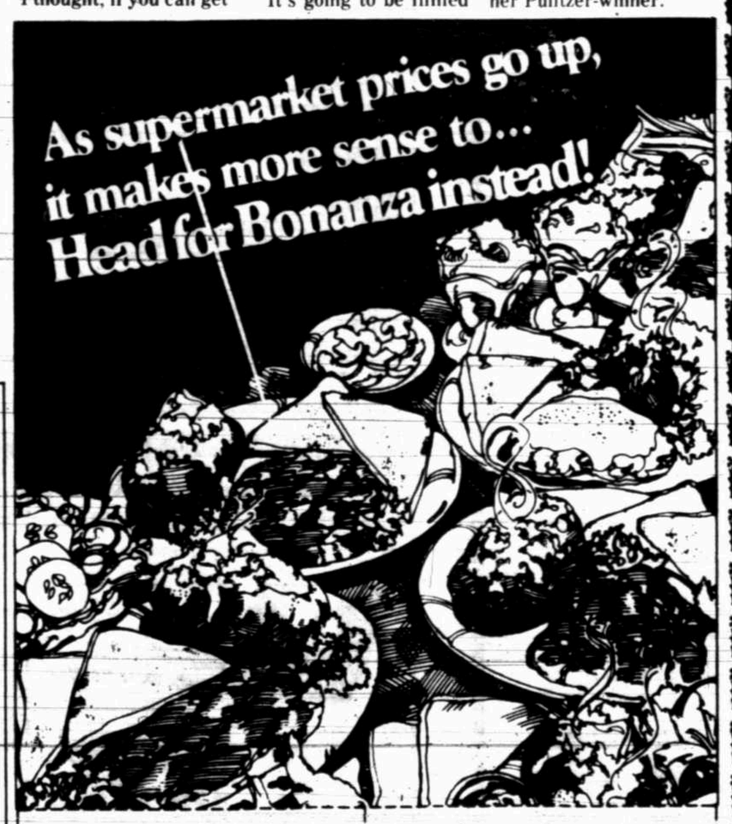

And now, Broadway. No time for acting, though. Not only is she occupied with "Crimes" here, she's tied up with two other plays, both comedies, she wrote after her Pulitzer-winner.

Four years later, the stew's still brewing

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — On this the fourth anniversary of Mulligan's Stew, classical scholars and medievalists are threatening to boil the stew master in his own juices for bobbling the word "matriculation" in a recent column about an Irish castle.

I will have to rise and go now to the lake isle of Innisfree and a round tower of clay and wattles build in a bee-loud glade to hide out, like a hunted Irish monk, until their fury abates, if this column is to survive for another four-year term.

The tempest roared when I mentioned that a guide at Cahir Castle informed us the tiny openings atop the crenelated walls were for matriculation, pouring offal and bubbling oil onto the heads of invaders. Outraged readers were quick to point out that the word I heard was "machicolation." First off the mark was city editor Jay Brushart of the Portsmouth, (Ohio) Daily Times, a medieval buff who knows what splendor falls from castle walls when the correct word is used.

FROM ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Philis Walker calls attention to another boo-boo: "Cook Inlet doesn't freeze solid during winter because of the extremes in tides.... You were probably referring to the Nenana Ice Classic, about 300 miles north, where a tripod is set on the ice to record the exact minute (the ice unfreezes) by pulling a line attached to a clock."

Counterattacking my column attacking attempts to unsex the language of the Bible, Elsie Hamm, PhD. in Lawton, Okla., suggests that "for all your obvious lilting Irish love of words, you are really a few bricks short of a full load when it comes to defending sexist language. Why is it always a man who pokes fun? If men were referred to in Scripture, sermons and hymns as 'sisters,' would they be comfortable and uncomplaining?"

DESPITE THESE BRICKBATS, which may help us attain a full load again, Mulligan's Stew will continue its policy of letting the readers have their say on each birthday of the column. Behind the barbed wire barricades here at Hardscribble House, comforted by the baying of our ferocious, snaggle-toothed hounds, we dare to be tolerant and understanding with our critics.

On occasion, even a few rose petals are tossed over the fence by the mail carrier. "Thanks for your printed words," writes Leonard W. Leeds from Atlanta, Ga. "You range far and wide as you write. Your Alaskan reports were lyrical in an adventurous way."

"Allow me to thank you before I forget," writes W.O. "Kit" Carson, an M.D. in Bowling Green, Ky. "for making the evening hours of a real Kentucky colonel more pleasant from perusing your columns. I especially liked the one where you compared Hardscribble House to Treetops in Africa. Is there any collection of your works in either hard or softbound?"

No, but literary agents and publishers please take note. The nearest thing would be Bill Beard's scrapbook down in Baton Rouge. Mr. Beard writes that "Ruth and I have certainly enjoyed your column over the past four years, and we have faithfully clipped them so that we probably have at least 479 of the 500 you have written in that period."

No wonder the South will rise again. Splendid people down there.

MAREK POTOCKI, writing all the way from Athens, Greece, "greatly enjoyed" reading my piece in the Paris Trib about the Russian graveyard in Sitka, Alaska, and pointed out that the czar unloaded Alaska "not so much for the money — the sale brought only $7.2 million in gold — but to avoid having the British move in from Canada and most probably from there into Eastern Siberia."

These random scribblings in the Rome Daily American found favor with Mrs. Tietro de Franciscis in Naples, Italy, who was "particularly amused" by my "sly assaults on designer jeans and the new crime of wood-napping."

The parody on Hemingway prose I attempted in celebration of the annual imitation Hemingway contest in Los Angeles inspired a number of replies in Hemingway's earnest style (ugh), including this jibe from Harry Rosenthal on the

Mulligan's Stew

AP's Washington staff: "Until your column, for a long time, I had seen nothing sacred and the things that were glorious had no glory and the sacrifices were like the stockyards at Chicago if nothing was done with the meat except bury it."

THE COLUMN ABOUT Mother Teresa opening a mission in St. Augustine's parish in Newark, N.J., where I first went to school, evoked dozens of nostalgic letters from people in the old neighborhood.

One came from Edward Amend, a retired roofer in Point Pleasant, N.J., whose family has been in the tile and slate business for five generations, going back to 1869. "I put the slate roof on the present church in 1923," wrote reader Amend. "The four other buildings were started by my father previous to that date. The names of my father and relatives are cast on the bells. I recall the struggle of the parishioners to build that church, to buy an organ and the beautiful stained glass windows from Germany. I become very sad when I think of what has become of this and all the other beautiful churches in our inner cities."

Mrs Arthur Zoeckler, "an admiring reader" in Florida thinks my reports from London "on the royal wedding are worth some kind of prize," but she can't stand the picture of me that the Daytona Beach Journal carries alongside the prose: "I really hate and abhor that picture. Can't you do something?"

Well, a face lift might prove beneficial if I can find a plastic surgeon willing to risk a hernia.

MY SUMMER RECOMMENDED reading, an annual fixture now, delighted Rosalee O'Connor of Woodbury, Conn.: "I just had to tell you what terrific choices they were and how they made my summer so memorable. Thank you for introducing me to 'David Copperfield.' It was so wonderful, I never wanted it to end."

Iranians celebrate second anniversary of hostage crisis

Agence France-Presse

TEHRAN, Iran— Drums and cymbals rang out as dangling puppets were paraded in front of the former U.S. Embassy this week to mark the second anniversary of the taking of the American hostages.

Tens of thousands of Iranians converged on the former embassy to celebrate the "second Iranian revolution" aimed at the United States following the toppling of the late shah.

Anti-American slogans were repainted on the compound wall surrounding the embassy buildings, which have been virtually deserted since Jan. 20 when the American hostages' 444-day ordeal came to an end.

Hojatoleslam Mohammad Mussavi Khoeiniha, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's representative to the militants who seized the embassy, reminded the crowd that "this day of God" marked a triple anniversary — the exile of Khomeini in 1963, the massacre of students at Tehran university in 1978 and the seizure of the "nest of spies" in 1979.

In addition to the familiar slogan of "Death to America," the crowd chanted religious slogans inmemory of Hossein, the 7th century Shiite Moslem martyr.

FORD'S UP-FRONT MONEY

Ford and your participating Ford dealers are offering money up-front on some of their best-selling, highest mileage new 1981 and 1982 cars. Money to help finance the new car you need. It means you can lower your monthly payments by applying the savings to your downpayment and borrowing less to begin with. Or get a check directly from Ford, it's your choice.

CASH UP-FRONT. Others make you wait up to four years to get your full money's worth. But Ford can put cash in your pocket sooner.

MAKE YOUR BEST DEAL. Then top it off with hundreds of dollars in savings. Save $700 on America's newest two-seater, front-wheel-drive Ford EXP. Save up to $500 on front-wheel-drive Ford Escort. And save $600 on America's most popular sports car, Ford Mustang. Dealer contribution may affect customer price. Amounts may be lower in Texas. Limit five per customer.

ORDER NOW. To get your share of Ford's Up-Front Money, see your Ford dealer and order between now and November 22.

MORE VALUE NEWS. Remember, if you're looking for a mid-size family car, Ford Fairmont Futura 4-door is actually stickier priced lower than last year.* On top of that, Ford is offering special value packages on many other popular models. So be sure to check out all the value news from Ford for 1982.

44 EST HWY / 28 EPA EST MPG*

33 EST HWY / 22 EPA EST MPG*

46 EST HWY / 29 EPA EST MPG*

You get front wheel drive in America's newest two-seater.

UP-FRONT MONEY ON COURIER, TOO.

36 EST HWY / 26 EPA EST MPG*

*For comparison. Your mileage may differ depending on speed, distance and weather. Actual highway mileage will be lower.
