MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By H. N. F.

M. M. Harris is the brilliant editor of the San Antonio Express. Editor Harris is very angry. He says a slam directed at Bexar county is seen in the new senatorial redistricting bill. Senatorial districts are apportioned according to qualified voters and not according to population. A study of the number of qualified voters in the new districts as allotted by the senate discloses that the discrepency is even greater than that suggested on the population basis. The most glaring discrepancy of all applies to Bexar county, which has 29,816 qualified voters for 1920. Not willing to give Bexar a senator alone, although according one each to Harris, Dallas and Tarrant counties, the senate tacked Bandera, Kendall, Kerr and Medina to the 26th District (Bexar), raising the total number of qualified voters in the district to 33,962. The proposed 14th District, containing Bastrop, Lee, Robertson, Burleson, Washington and Brazos counties, has only 15,874 poltax payers, and the proposed 19th District, composed of Blanco, Comal, Hays, Guadalupe and Gonzales counties, has only 13,718. The prize district, however, under the new bill, is No. 1, composed of Titus, Bowie, Marion, Cass and Morris, which has only 10,554 voters, or practically one-third as many as Bexar county alone. There was no senatorial redistricting following the census of 1910 and the districts have stood as they were arranged in 1901. Complications show that West Texas was entitled to four more senators. The new bill would give West Texas only two additional senators and the act is not to take effect until 1924. As carved out the contents of the new district, in inhabitants, range all the way from 90,932 to 228,397 and in polltax payers from 10,554 to 33,962. This is the constitutional provision: "The state shall be divided into senatorial districts of contiguous territory, according to the number of qualified electors, as nearly as maybe, and each district shall be entitled to elect one senator and no single county shall be entitled to more than one senator." West Texas was entitled to four new districts. She is given two new districts. The free conference resulted in the house committee agreeing to concur with the majority of the senate committee in the provision that the redistricting shall not go into effect until April 1, 1924. Senator Bledsoe says the proviso is unconstitutional and he hopes for a veto. This is what Bledsoe said: "In my opinion the governor will veto this bill and by doing so he will make himself the greatest man in the state of Texas. He will veto it on the ground that the Wood amendment sets up a proviso that is unconstitutional. I know it is true that the attorney general's office has ruled this proviso is constitutional, but the governor does his thinking for himself and I believe that he will disagree with the attorney general as to the constitutionality of this measure. He is too good a lawyer not to." There are 31 state senators. All 31 are democrats. They claim to be proud of their state and their party but the senatorial redistricting bill is an insult to the intelligence of the people and a reflection on the sense of justice of those who are responsible for the glaring inequalities and rank injustice which this bill reflects.

George W. Hewitt of Dallas is chairman of the committee representing the Dallas contractors in the wage controversy with the bricklayers' union of that city. Contractors ask for a wage scale of ten dollars per day; bricklayers have been receiving $12 per day. They are willing to compromise on $11. Hewitt says there is no reason why the Dallas contractors should keep the scale at $12 when it is lower in all other states. Twenty-three Dallas contractors signed an agreement that they would enter into no more contracts or understandings with labor until conditions become more settled. It is estimated that work on proposed buildings in Dallas costing well above a million dollars is being held up until the wage controversy is settled. Regardless of all this, war time wage schedules must come down with war time prices for foods and clothing and all building materials. This is the logic of the situation. Facts are brutal things but they must be given to the public. In the city of Chicago alone work on proposed buildings costing $300,000 is being held up. It is suicide to kill the goose that is laying the golden egg.

Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham of Galveston has been appointed acting chairman of the woman's committee on the Sheppard-Towner bill. Mrs. Cunningham is a native Texan. She was president of the Texas Equal Suffrage association. First the primary ballot for the women was put over in the city of Austin. Then the Nineteenth amendment was ratified by the Texas legislature. Mrs. Cunningham had able assistance. They canvassed the state for the funds. They stormed legislative halls. They won the fight for women. There is one woman in the American congress. Her name is Alice M. Robertson and she hails from Oklahoma. Suffrage was thrust upon her. She did not want the ballot. Now she has a sharp knife for the Sheppard-Towner bill which has the backing of the feminine organizations of political workers in America. This isn't all. "The lady from Oklahoma" isn't backward in telling her political sisters that they are on the wrong trial. Miss Rob-

HOUSE CUTS BUDGETS TO STOP SESSION

All Appropriations Made by Finance Committee Is Whacked Blindly to Obviate Another Meeting.

Measure Goes to Free Conference Committee to Adjust Differences In Allowances of Departments.

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Aug. 13.—The house engrossed and passed finally late today the departmental appropriation bill, after amendments had been added to every department reducing the budgets as prepared by the finance committees.

The house worked in a feverish rush today amid excitement and turmoil in an effort to dispose of the bill and get it in a free conference committee to adjust the diference between the senate and house. Disposition of the bill was necessary today in order to avoid another called session to pass the bill. This caused the haste and hurry.

After cutting the budgets of the board of control, the state treasurer's office, the educational department and the banking and insurance department by consideration of each budget separately the remainder of the budgets were amended blindly, the reading of the amendments being dispens-

REDS AGREE TO MEASURE FOR RELIEF

American Control of Food Distribution in Russia Accepted.

By Associated Press.

RIGA, Aug. 13.—Control by the American relief administration of food distribution in the famine districts of Russia was agreed to in principle this afternoon by Maxim Litvinoff, representative of the soviet famine relief committee.

The agreement was reached in negotiations with Walter Lyman Brown, European director of the American relief which began here Wednesday.

Methods of applying American control, local administration and other details were not taken up today but are to be considered at a conference to be held next week.

Following the conclusion of today's meeting there appeared to be no insurmountable obstacle to keep the American relief administration from working in harmony with the soviet government and a Russian non-partisan committee on foreign relief.

M. Litinoff also accepted the proposal that the American relief administration be given sanitary control in the famine districts in order to guard against cholera, in case such authority is asked.

CULLEN THOMAS SHIES POLITICAL HAT INTO SENATORSHIP CONTEST

CULLEN F. THOMAS

Special to the Record News.

DALLAS, Aug. 13.—Cullen F. Thomas, of this city, leader in the state fight for prohibition and a well known lawyer, today announced his candidacy for the United States senate in the following statement:

To the Men and Women of Texas:

When in the course of a man's life he offers for high office, the people have a right to know why. It is fitting therefore that he should search his own heart and lay bare his inmost motives.

I am a candidate for the United States senate because of the good I hope to do. I think of a sent in the senate not as an easy chair; it is a workshop. I am not attracted by its emoluments; the gains are far greater in private pursuit. I have no illusions about public honors while living; these may please for a season but never satisfied. I cannot expect to be long remembered when dead; one of the most gifted sons of Texas ever elected to the senate sleeps in an unmarked grave.

Desires to Serve Mankind.

The only motive big enough in any man's life to justify the toil and outlay, the hardships and heartaches, of seeking and holding public office is an abiding desire to serve one's generation.

I cannot claim the prestige of other honors as stepping stones. I am a candiate from the ranks. I trust this is no bar to preferment. For nearly twenty years, I have given unstintedly of time and energies to champion these men and causes that stood, as I believed, for progress and good government.

My participation in public affairs has not been for official reward. I have not been a place hunter. Oftimes urged to offer for office, I have been happy for others to wear the epaulets while I fought as a common soldier.

Not for Personal Gain.

My part in politics has not been for personal gain. I have found much of skepticism and cynicism, within the state and out, as to the motives of men active in politics. My activities hafe meant financial loss. I have sacrificed personal affairs. From border to border I have borne my own expenses. Of course, I never made a political speech for pay. Of course, I never got a penny for any sort of campaign service. I have not made a business of politics. I have not made commerce of political acquaintance—neither as pardon broker, nor as stock

RECOMMEND DISMISSAL OF GUARDS

They found that the killing was unjustifiable and that the guards could have overtaken the escaping men if they had tried.

The committee recommends that the case be called to the attention of the grand jury by the prison commision and that the guards be prosecuted if indictments are found.

The committee further recommends that guards be instructed not to shoot convicts until all other means of recapturing them have been exhausted. The committee also recommends that a sufficient number of blood hounds be kept for the purpose of overtaking escaping convicts.

It is also shown by text of the letter that Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, has refused to negotiate with Mr. DeValera and that Ulster is standing firm for retaining her present government.

TEXAS CONGRESSMAN THINKS FARMERS' FINANCING BILL STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Representative Eugene Black of Texas, member of the house banking and currency committee, which reported the senate bill for the financing of farm exports, believes the measure is a step in the right direction, he told the house today.

Representative Buchanan, of Texas, takes a similar belief, but believes that two steps might as well be taken as one while congress is at it and today notified the house that he has prepared an amendment which will broaden the market opportunities for American trade abroad.

Buchanan explained to the house that the essence of his amendments was to grant credit facilities not only to the American exporter, but to the foreign purchaser as well, be it a government or an individual.

Opposition was expressed by members of the committee against extending credit to the foreign purchaser on the ground that this future could be as equally arranged by the domestic exporter, but indications are that many house members are inclined to support Buchanan.

Buchanan Not in Accord

Buchanan contends that the war finance corporation already is extending credit to the domestic exporters and, in the case of Europeans who want Texas cotton, these transactions might not be completed, unless the government proposed to give financial facilities at both ends of the line.

The exporter who is anxions to send Texas cotton abroad, he said, to the house, does not have the facilities at his command equal to those of the governments. I will ask the house to adopt a provision adding the secretary of state, the secretray of agriculture, and the treasury thus giving the services of a force of three-thousand government employes which may investigate the credit offerings of the foreign purchase, and advise this government of their standing.

If the security is good then it may be negotiated through the war finance corporation, acording to the terms of the act, but the function of the government at that point would become the function of the war finance corporation.

Representative Black, in a speech, supporting the bill, pointed out that the staple agricultural crops including livestock are in no condition to stand further disaster or decline in prices.

Furnish Own Capital

The only reason the farmers have been able to stand the recent rapid and deflation, taken as a whole, he said, was because they furnished out of their own savings, eighty-five per cent of their capital and depend upon the banks for only fifteen per cent.

Some hesitate to support this bill, said Black, upon the ground that it is paternalistic, and the paternalism must be admitted to the extent that the capital stock of the war finance corporation is owned by the government.

But if the government can aid the industry agriculture and livestock, to reach a stable footing by a method no more paternalistic than this, we had better undertake it than to risk the dangers of paternalistic and socialistic legislation which might follow as a consequence of letting the situation drift from bad to worse.

Farm prices will never again go to the heights they did during the war, Black declared. The bill was designed to correct that situation and under proper administration, should go a long way toward accomplishing that purpose, he said, with broad powers extended to the war finance corporation to extend relief for orderly marketing.

Council Agrees to Cancel Economic Restrictions Against Rhineland.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—The lifting of the economic barrier of the Rhineland on September 15, providing Germany pays up the amount she undertook to pay under the London ultimatum and agrees to remove the boycott against French goods, was decided upon at the final session of the allied supreme council today. It was decided however, to maintain the occupation of Ruhrot, Duisburg and Duesseldorf until the next meeting of the council, which, it is understood will be held previous to the Washington disarmament conference. At that time Premier Briand consented the question of the occupation of the right bank of the Rhine would be reconsidered.

With the question of the disposition of Upper Silesia out of its hands, the council went to work today on the other matters which it had to take under advisement. The decisions were reached after M. Briand as president of the council replied to attacks made by Lord Curzon, the British foreign secretary, and Sir Robert Stevenson, Horne, chancellor of the British Exchequer, against what was termed the present expensive system of administering the treaty especially as concerned occupation of the Ruhr region

This, Lord Curzon said, "is very costly and also irritating to German national sentiment and pride."

HEARING ON BOUNDARY IS ENDED HERE

Tyler Will Resume Taking Testimony at Hollis, Ok., Monday and Later Goes To County Seats.

Special Commissioner of Supreme Court Seeking to Fix Southern Bank of Shifting Red River.

With the preliminaries, consisting of hearings here during the week with regard to claims against funds held by Frederick Delano, federal receiver, out of the way, the scene in the boundary dispute changes to Hollis, Oklahoma, where Frederick S. Tyler, special commissioner Monday, will begin taking testimony as to where the south bank of Red River really is. This testimony will govern the supreme court in rendering their final decision on the final phase of the case—namely the definite location of the south bank, which has already been decided upon the the boundary.

After the conclusion of the hearings at Hollis, which are expected to last several days, they will be resumed in Oklahoma City, where the expert testimony for the state of Oklahoma and the United States government will be heard. Following that hearings will be held in each county seat of Oklahoma bordering on Red River to the eastern boundary of the state.

Hearings on the Texas side will open in Texarkana, after which hearings will be conducted in every county seat in Texas where the counties border on Red River. The hearings will conclude in Austin, where the expert testimony for the state of Texas will be introduced.

To Take Several Weeks.

It is expected that the various hearings will extend over a period of several weeks. The testimony introduced at that time will vary from the opinions of experts as to the real bed of the river, through conclusions based on geological formations and of evidence from existing and former vegetation to the recollection of oldtimers as to the channel of the river. Should the supreme court, from the evidence introduced, uphold the contention of the state of Oklahoma and of the federal government that the south bank is the bluff line from a mile to over two miles away from the waters edge at average flow, it will result in the state of Texas not only losing title to the oil pool on what Receiver Delano designates at the "flood plain," but the losing of title to several thousand acres of rich bottom farming lands, extending from Childress county to Texarkana, which have been considered by all parties as part of the state of Texas from that time that "the mind of man runneth not to the contrary."

Valuable Lands at Stake.

Should the supreme court uphold the contention of the Texans that the south bank is at the edge of the stream at its mean average flow, there will be little change except in the custom of officers of both states in arresting people to the middle of the river, the Texas officers giving up the fight at the waters edge, and the Oklahomans having the right to nab them at any time before they strike dry land on the Texas side.

In case the supreme court should also decide this part of the case against Texas, it is not expected that, with the possible exception of sections where the federal government is setting up claims in "behalf of the Indians" that the question of individual ownerships will be very much affected. This belief is based on what happened following the Greer county case—that famous case containing the decision that the south bank of the Red River was the boundary, a decision which most all Texans thought was "obiter dicta" but which the supreme court, having the final think, thought not.

After decision of the supreme court had given title to this section to the state of Oklahoma, individual titles held under the state of Texas were confirmed under that of the new sovereignty.

Attorney General C. M. Cureton, who has been in Wichita Falls during the past several days in connection with this matter, with his assistants, will go to Hollis for the opening of the hearings, and for the gathering of further evidence, his assertion continuing at all the hearings on the north side of the river.

WEBB ASSERTS LAW WILL NOT BE ENFORCED

DALLAS, Aug. 13.—Dr. Atticus Webb gave out the following today:

The defeat of the Burkett Quo Warranto bill in the state senate means that the state of Texas will not at present seriously undertake to enforce her state prohibition laws.

An emergency exists in the enforcement of the laws of Texas, and especially the prohibition laws. A very large per cent, by far, the majority, of local officers are making no serious efforts to enforce the prohibition laws. This is due to several facts: Defects in the law makes it difficult to enforce; also there are no funds to meet the extra expenses necessary to run down these offenders; then again since the adoption of National prohibition many officers have thrown up their hands and said it is no longer their job, that the Federal government had taken over the enforcement of prohibition.

It was never the purpose of those who asked for national prohibition to leave it to the Federal government to enforce, but merely to remove the protection of the Federal government from the liquor traffic, and to receive its aid only when the state officers could not handle the situation. It seriously touches our personal pride when officers from Washington City have to keep order in our local communities and strikes a severe blow to our local self government, of which we are all jealous.

Local Officers Fail

Because of the utter failure of our local officers in enforcing this law, a strong demand has gone to Washington City for sufficient Federal agents to handle the situation. The people cannot be blamed for turning to the Federal government when their local government fails. This is producing a serious situation.

In response to this demand the Federal government is assigning more agents to Texas for the coming year than they had last year. Also to relieve the crowded court dockets, announcement was recently made at Washington that two additional Federal judges would be appointed for Texas. This means nothing less than that it is now up to Texas to say whether the doctrine of state rights in the enforcement of its laws shall be maintained. The Federal government would gladly cut their forces down to practically none, if only Texas would seriously undertake to enforce the Eighteenth amendment. If Texas will not do so, Washington must; and this action will meet the hearty approval of every man that stands for good government.

Must Remove Officers

In order to avoid these undesirable results, the Texas legislature should have corrected the Dean act to make it more enforcible, and passed an adequate law for the removal of officers who neglect or refuse to enforce the law. At present, officers fear no trouble, however lax or corrupt they may be in the enforcement of this or any other law. No law, in my opinion will give sufficient relief unless it is provided that the derelict officer may be brought to trial in some other than his own county. In four counties out of five justice may be had in county where the officer lives. But where the law is needed worst as effort to bring to justice in his own county a corrupt official who has built up a machine around him for his protection will become a farce.

This law is needed not only in behalf of the prohibition laws, but in behalf of all laws looking to preserving the morals of the state. Throughout Texas gambling is rampant and very little serious effort is being made to check it, except to catch a batch of negro crap-shooters occasionally. We have a law against prize fights, at great expense written at a session of the legislature called for that specific purpose, and yet prize fights are pulled off under the name of "boxing matches" with little or no interference of the officers. Recently at Galveston a young man was killed at such a prize fight but little notice was taken of it.

But the Quo Warrento bill is not dead—just sleeping.

Word that John Beer, passenger train engineer for the Fort Worth and Denver railroad, is in a critical condition and not expected to live at his home in Fort Worth, was received late Saturday afternoon by Patrolman W. P. Belcher.

INCREASED RENTS PREVAIL IN CHICAGO

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Increased rents and shortage of housing accommodations are driving Chicagoans to the suburbs, officials of the Rock Island railroad said today in announcing that in the past three years suburban traffic on their lines had more than doubled. Similar increases were reported at the offices of other railroads.

FINAL ACT ON HONAKER FADING OUT

The curtain of the final act in connection with drilling activities of the East Wichita Oil company test three miles east of this city on the Honaker farm, is being lowered.

The county's most famous unsuccessful wildcat is being plugged. Occupants of the skyscrapers in the down-town section for several days have noticed smoke and some expressed the opinion that the hole as of old "was to be drilled a few feet deeper." But the steam and smoke was for the purpose of cleaning out the hole preparatory to plugging.

The depth of the hole is 2605½ feet. The depth is official the measurement being made by local representatives of the oil and gas division of the state railroad commission before the plugging process started.

In connection with the drilling of the widely known test three officials of the company and one other driller are now under indictment for swindling and will probably be tried during the fall months.

CULLEN THOMAS ENTERS RACE FOR U. S. SENATE

promoter, nor as legislative lobbyist. With these standards set for myself in private life, if called to public service, I shall have one client—that client my country.

Texas has suffered much from party schism and partisan rancor. I would stir no ashes of other years. It is better to bury than to burrow in the past. I accord to good men of every faith and faction the same patriotism I claim for myself. Brave men honor an open foeman more than an artful fence rider. The pussyfooter wins no battles in the march of progress. The problems of tomorrow summon the sons and daughters of Texas to their best.

Oppose Mudslinging

I hope to help lift and keep the coming contest out of the mud. I clasp hands with all my competitors in generous rivalry in the discussion of great principles and policies of government. Whatever the fortunes of the campaign, at its close, I want life for me to be richer in friendship and good will among men.

Again, I want to go to the senate not to peddle patronage; not to be a department factotum; not to promote some pet project, but to devote my riper years to those problems that mean so much for human advancement. The foundations of civilization have been shaken. The world is being remade. The republic is on trial. Old faiths are challenged. Strange voices are heard in the land. The jarring elements in our national life demand consecration and courage—the courage that dares to be in the minority. How the times call for a new baptism of patriotism.

To Battle For Weak

I want to go to the senate to give battle for the weak against the strong—for the rights of men against arrogant privilege—not as a beggar for special favors for selfish interests, but as a voice for the hard-pressed every day men and women of Texas.

In due season I shall submit with candor and courage my views on every vital question now pending before the American people, and make a vigorous campaign from Plains to Gulf.

Having determined to become a candidate, I want to win. I am ready to fight to win. I invite to my support every man and woman in Texas who think me worthy to win. Should I win, I pledge to all the people single hearted fidelity to their service.

All of us are debtors to God and country. Looking backward, I feel that I have done so little; looking forward, I want to do more. With me the sun of life has touched high noon. I want to do something worth while before the sunset.

Paving on Eighth from Bluff to Brook streets was recommended the latter part of the week and should the contractors experience no further difficulty in obtaining material shipments, should be ready for traffic within the month, according to members of the city engineer's department.

Workmen also began laying the base for the concrete pavement on the north end of Ohio the latter part of the week.

HABEAS CORPUS WRIT FILED FOR OTTO MOHLER

A writ of habeas corpus was filed late Saturday afternoon in the 78th District court against Mohler, the plaintiff alleging that Sheriff Smith by August Otto he is being restrained of his liberty by being confined at the county jail without cause.

Mohler has been held at the jail on an insanity charge having been brought here by the sheriff of Archer county about a week ago. The local sheriff's department had nothing to do with his arrest. The hearing will be held Monday before Judge Ed Napier.

TWO WIVES OF YOUNG BIGAMIST LIVE HAPPILY WITH HIS MOTHER

Eleanor Gaschwend (left) and Frances Zollner, two of the three wives of George Smith, photographed in Pittsburg morals court.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 13.—"I shall protect my son's wives, provide for them like a good mother and give them a home in my own household and see that they want for nothing."

Weeping, Mrs. John Smith of 2929 Howard street, sitting in an outer room of morals court, made this statement after her son, George Smith, twenty-one, was held on a charge of bigamy.

Smith is alleged to have three wives, all of whom are living, and he is said not to have been divorced from any of them. His arrest was caused by his mother.

Sitting by the side of Mrs. Smith were wives Nos. 2 and 3, her husband, and other relatives, all trying to comfort her.

Wife No. 2, formerly Miss Eleanor Gaschwend, sixteen, this city, and wife No. 3, formerly Miss Frances Zolner, sixteen, of Altoona, Pa., unknown to each other until a few days ago, now are the greatest of friends, determined to remain so until the end, in spite of what may have happened to their joint husband.

Mrs. Smith has taken into her home wives Nos. 2 and 3. The latter, small and dainty, formerly was a wire walker in a carnival.

Smith, it is said, took his first bride in El Paso, Tex., taking as wife No. 1 a Mexican girl. The Gaschwend girl was next, having been married to him at Wellsburg, W. Va., on April 17, 1920, it is charged.

Wife No. 3 on the witness stand said she and Smith were married by an alderman here June 9.

HOUSE CUTS BUDGETS TO STOP SESSION

ed with by unanimous consent. There were approximately twenty amendments cutting salaries and appropriations submitted together by Representative Quaid and each one with one or two exceptions was voted on after reading had been dispensed with

Reductions Total Million

The total cut in the bill was unobtainable late today on account of the rush to get the bill engrossed but Representative Curtis, joint leader of the reduction move, estimated the total cut at $1,000,000 for the two years.

The bill now goes to the senate. In considering the bill the house took the supposition that the senate would refuse to concur in the amendments.

The senate passed finally the Morris House bill amending the Dean prohibition law. A majority report substituting the Hall senate bill duplicating the federal Vostead act, was defeated and the bill passed as passed by the house.

The house adopted the free conference report on the eleemosynary institution appropriations bill today. As adopted the senate accepts the Pope amendment to the bill which provides that all funds shall be expended only as appropriated. The Fly amendment was rejected. This provided that all funds received by state institutions shall be paid into the state treasury and appropriated out. The report also provided for an additional appropriation of $537,000 for the next two years to be operated as a contingent fund for the institutions. This institution heads by consent of the board of control can expend this fund for emergency needs.

Pass Johnson's Truck Bill

The Johnson house bill amending the motor truck tax bill of the regular session was passed finally by the senate. This bill has already passed the house. Two amendments were added. The maximum tonnage of the trucks was reduced from five to four tons and the speed limit was reduced slightly.

The house engrossed and passed finally the bill matching the federal appropriation for federal vocational training. It carries $50,000 for the first year and $65,000 for the second year.

The house also passed finally the emergency appropriation bill carrying $575,375.

TAX REVISION COMPLETED BY G.O.P. LEADERS

lises, traveling bags, suitcases, hatboxes used by travelers and filled toilet cases $15 each; purses, pocket books, shopping and hand bags $4 each; portable lighting fixtures, including lamps of all kinds and shades $10 each; fans $1 each and house or smoking coats or jackets and bath or lounging robes $3 each.

These taxes also would become effective upon enactment of the bill. Announcing completion of their work, members of the committee said they believed the bill as a group, would produce the three billion dollar total which Secretary Mellon estimated at the White House conference last Tuesday, it would be necessary to raise from internal revenue next year. Not all of this sum would be collected on this year's business, however, as the total included $300,000,000 which treasury officials estimate can be collected on back taxes. The bill was finally drafted by the committee will be presented to the house Monday, under present plans of Republican leaders and will be passed next Saturday after two days of general debate and two days consideration of amendments under the five minute rule. From the house it will go to the senate where the finance committee will consider it during the proposed congressional recess with a view to reporting it to the senate when congress reconvenes, probably late in September.

Change Transportation Tax

With the removal of the express and oil pipe line taxes, the committee eliminated all transportation tax. No change was made however, in levies of telegraph, telephone and radio messages, this section of the old law remaining in force.

The manufacturers' tax of five per cent on carpets, trunks and other articles is designed to replace the so-called luxury levies now in force, including those of wearing apparel, but the plan now is to continue these taxes, collected and protected to the government by the retailers, until next January 1, despite the fact that the manufacturers' tax would become effective upon enactment of the bill.

The license taxes of vendors of soft drinks is a new levy, exclusive of the manufacturers' tax on syrups used at fountains and on unfermented beverages, carbonated waters or beverages or other soft drinks sold in containers.

FILE MOTION FOR RE-TRIAL OF TOUSSAINT

demned man should be given a new trial. The principal causes alleged center around the conduct the jury and the impeachment of the testimony of Lee Huff, who as chief of police, conducted the investigation that led to the confession of the condemned man and who was one of the principal witnesses for the state in the recent trial.

Police Officers Affidavits.

In the motion defendant's attorneys offer the testimony of Will Lay and B. M. Newton, city police officers at the time the accused was first arrested in February. Both officers declare in their affidavits that the accused man on the day following the murder of his father showed no remorse for the crime while they were with him. By their testimony the defense seeks to impeach the damaging testimony of Lee Huff at the trial to the effect that the accused cried and by his statements indicated that for a brief period he regretted the killing of his father. According to Lay the only time he saw the accused show any emotion was when Huff asked him if "he had no love for his wife and mother."

The witness was not with the accused all the time that he was talking to Huff, according to his statement.

Allege Jury Misconduct

According to the motion Sam Ashmore, one of the jurors, expressed the opinion in the office of J. B. Marlow within thirty days before the trial that "they ought not to give Toussaint a trial at all. They ought to take him out and hang him to a telephone pole whether he is crazy or not." W. A. Soule, another juror, living in this city, immediately after the verdict expressed great satisfaction at the verdict. According to the petition he called his wife on the telephone within a half hour after the verdict was announced and told witnesses that his wife was happy over what he had done. John Andree, living as neighbor to the Soule family, stated that Mrs. Soule immediately after her husband's telephone call expressed great happiness and said that she knew "her husband would do it."

Other irregularities on the part of the jury are alleged. According to motion they frequently violated the rule as to keeping together at all times after they had been accepted as jurors. One juror, according to the petition, took his grandchild out to an automobile several hundred feet from the remainder of the jury. Another juror climbed out on the fire escape and talked to some women confined in the jail on the third floor of the court house, the petition alleges.

"Hard to Handle."

According to petition counsel for the defense protested the actions of the jury to Deputy Sheriff Hall in charge and was told by him that "they were the hardest bunch he ever had to handle." The petition further alleges that the jurors purchased newspapers in which there were accounts of the trials. The newspapers it is alleged, had matter concerning the case which was not brought out in the trial.

The mob that gathered around the county jail one night while search was being made for the alleged assailant of a white woman is alleged to have influenced the decision of the jury which at that time were confined in their jury room but within hearing distance. The speeches made to the mob by E. L. Fulton, county attorney, and Sheriff Fred Smith are referred to.

On August 10th, seven days after the verdict was announced, Dr. George F. Powell, said to be an eminent alienist, examined Toussaint at the county jail and after a two-hour examination declared that he was suffering from paranoia, the form of insanity claimed by the defense at the recent trial. Dr. Powell is connected with the North Texas Hospital for the Insane at Terrell. This expert testimony can be introduced at another trial should it be granted, according to the petition. The testimony of several additional non-expert witnesses is also given.

Funds Lacking, Say.

The defense was handicapped in the former trial due to a lack of funds to make proper investigation the petition alleges. According to an affidavit made by C. C. McDonald, one of the defendant's attorneys, the attorneys have not only received any remuneration for their efforts but have borne all the expense incident to the handling of the case. This fact is given as one of the reasons why testimony could not be obtained at the previous trial.

In addition to the above causes the petition sets out that the verdict was contrary to the preponderance of the evidence, citing the fact that three experts testified to the insanity of the accused while only one testified that he believed him sane. Exception is taken as to the court's refusal to make a requested charge to the jury regarding what constituted burden of proof in the insanity plea.

The petition again contends that the defendant attorneys should have been given the right of opening and closing the arguments due to the fact that there only plea in the case was insanity.

DODSON KILLING USE OF CALOMEL

Says Drug Is Mercury and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Dodson is making a hard fight against calomel in the South. Every druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place. "Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no billiousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

Reid Expects Early Starting of Irrigation Work To Play Part In Bringing About Better Conditions

Positive assurance that the actual work on the Wichita Falls irrigation project will begin early in September was expressed in a letter from J. A. Kemp, received Saturday by C. W. Reid, which stated that every indication points toward little difficulty in disposing of the $4,500,000 bond issue to bond brokers in the east with whom Kemp is in touch.

Mr. Kemp will leave Colorado Springs where he is now spending a vacation with his family in two weeks, the letter says, and will go to the east for a final conference with the representatives of the bond investors.

That the disposal of the bonds, necessary to start actual construction work, will take place soon was expressed by Mr. Reid.

Mr. Reid is very optimistic regarding the financial outlook of the coming fall in Wichita Falls.

"With work started on the irrigation project, the magnitude of which is difficult to comprehend right at this time, it will mean and era of better times for this section and new money being introduced into the building of this city," he added.

What was contained in Mr. De Valera's letter to the premier still remains a mystery.

General Smuts Letter

General Smut's letter said.

"I believe it is in the interests of Ulster to come in and that the force of the community of interest will, over a period of years, become so great and compelling that Ulster will, herself, decide to join the Irish state. Not only will she not consent now to come in, but even if she does the Irish state will, I fear, start under such a handicap of internal friction and discordance that the result may well be a failure once more.

"The humble acceptance of facts is often the only way of finally overcoming them. It proved so in the case of South America, where ultimate unity was only realised through several stages and the process of years and where the Republic was an ideal for which we made unheard of sacrifices, had ultimately to give way to another form of freedom. My belief is that Ireland is travelling the same painful road as South Africa, and, with wisdom and moderation in leadership, is destined to achieve no less success.

Offer Freedom

"You say the Republic is the true expression of national self-determination but it is not the only expression and it means your final and irreparable serverance from the British league. To this the parliament and people of this country will not agree. The prime minister has made you the offer of another form of freedom, of dominion status, which is working with complete success in all parts of the British league.

"What is good enough for these nations surely ought to be good enough for Ireland too. For Irishmen to say to the world that they cannot be satisfied with the status of the great British dominions would be to alienate all that sympathy which has so been the main support of the Irish cause. Such an offer by the British prime minister, who unlike his predecessors is in a position to deliver the goods, is an event of unique importance.

BEGIN WORK ON HIGHWAY

Work has started on the construction of the concrete road from the Wilbarger county east line according to J. M. Isbell, county engineer. This work is being done under the sub-contract recently let to the H. C. McCollom Construction company of Fort Worth. The company will construct the road from the Wilbarger line through Electra to connect with the pavement now in the process of construction between Iowa Park and Electra by Potts & Prentice.

The latter firm completed about 4,000 feet of pavement with its two mixers during the last week, making a total of two and a half miles between Iowa Park and Electra.

The Zimmerman Construction company has not as yet started work on their sub-contract for the construction of the road through Iowa Park to connect with the Potts & Prentice paving.

ORDER BONDS TO COLORADO FOR SIGNING

In a special session Saturday afternoon the county commissioner's court authorized W. W. Murphy, county auditor, to go to Colorado Springs with 1,000 of the 1,500 bonds of the $1,500,000 road bond issue as soon as they arrive here and have them signed by W. T. Harris, who is in that city on a vacation. Already 500 of the bonds are here and it is expected the remaining 500 will arrive here today or Monday. The first 500 were signd by Mr. Harris before he left here last week.

After the bonds are signed by the proper local officials on their return, Mr. Murphy will take them to Austin for final approval and signature by the attorney general's department. From there they will be taken to St. Louis by E. L. Fulton, county attorney, and Mr. Murphy and turned over to the purchasers.

The county, according to Tom McHam, county treasurer, has already borrowed $60,000 from local banks to carry on the road improvement work until money is available from the bonds. It is thought that by placing the bonds under the personal care of an official until they are turned over to the purchasers that several days will be saved and the road work can continue until additional funds are availble.

The court will not convene Mondy. The usual bills were approved Saturday and it is not expected that any additional meetings will be held until a week from Monday.

SPUDDERS WILL PLAY ELECTRICALLY

The installation of a newly invented type of baseball score board, at the Palace Theatre, which according to the announcement designates the players of opposing clubs by means of different colored electric lights, was announced Saturday by the local management of the Dye, Ford and Rogers enterprises. The new board will be in operation for all games of the Spudders while they are absent on road trips during the remainder of the season and for the world's series.

The new score board is a "Smiley's Electric Score Board" and, according to the announcement of the theatre management, shows every play as it is made on the diamond. The management also announce that big typhoon fans will be in constant operation to keep the building clear of smoke and the spectators will be permitted to smoke.

Mr. Ford of the Olympic theatre also announces that the big Marvel baseball board, which was used last year, will again be put in operation during the coming world's series.

Twice Jailed on Grave Charge, Woman Acquitted and Liberated

Mrs. Rose Emma Gooding, photo graphed with her husband and children after her release. In set shows another view of Mrs. Gooding.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—All England is indignant over the wrongful imprisonment of Mrs. Rose Emma Gooding of Littlehampton, who was twice sent to jail for sending scandalous letters to a neighbor woman, Miss Edith Swann, and who has just been released. She is now at home again with her husband and two children, while measures to secure compensation for her from the government are being considered.

About the first of last October Mrs. Gooding was arrested and thrown into jail, where she lay awaiting her trial, which took place December 13, at Lewes, in Sussex, before Justice Roche. It was charged that the letters accused Miss Swann of going about with a married man while his wife was in a hospital. Some of the letters were signed "R. G." and some "With Mrs. Gooding's compliments.' ' They were sent ot a number of friends and neighbors of Miss Swann.

At the first trial a witness testified he had seen Mrs. Gooding's daughter posting a letter bearing the name Swann. Mrs. Gooding denied ever having sent any of the letters, and the child said she had not posted any of them, but the jury accepted the circumstantial evidence offered and found the defendant guilty. Justice Roche sentenced her to ten days in jail.

Again Arrested.

The scurrilous letters did not end, and after a number of additional ones had been sent out, Mrs. Gooding was again arrested for criminal libel on March 3. At her trial a short time thereafter, Miss Swann testified that Mrs. Gooding had thrown one of the letters into her house as she passed.

Counsel for Mrs. Gooding called the attention of the court to the fact that some time before the second arrest Mrs. Gooding had left home for a time to go to Lewes, and that during her absence letters purporting to have been written by her were delivered under Littlehampton postmarks. Ex-Police Sergeant Blackman testified that he had seen Mrs. Gooding in Lewes on day when others testified she had mailed scurrilous letters in Littlehampton.

In spite of such favorable testimony, Mrs. Gooding was again convicted on circumstantial evidence, and in sentencing her to a year in prison Justice Roche expressed the opinion that he had been too lenient with her before.

The whole case against Mrs. Gooding collapsed when it was found that the scandalous letters, in exactly the same handwriting, continued going out after Mrs. Gooding had been put in prison. Detective Inspector Nicholls of Scotland Yard was given the case to investigate, and a few days ago the home office caused the court of criminal appeals to quash both convictions against Mrs. Gooding and exonerate her completely.

Public Indignant at Police.

Much indignation has been expressed at the zeal of the police and the courts in sending to prison twice, on circumstantial evidence, a sweet-faced, innocent woman, and a wife and mother.

Interviewed after her release, Mrs. Gooding said: "What I have been through, heaven only can tell. Every moment in prison was felt with the greatest concern as regards my husband and children. The greatest trouble I had was to send out to procure evidence to prove my innocence.

"Each night I knelt upon the board that was my bed and repeated this prayer, that I made before I was sentenced: 'Oh, God, let my appeal be granted, so that I may safely get home.'

"Were it not for my people—ym dear husband, my family, and my dear husband, my family, and my mother," she went on, "I should be content to leave matters where they are. But I am not content to leave them where they are."

Mrs. Gooding's husband was a soldier in the late war and was decorated for bravery. He is helping her in the effort to find out who really wrote the letters and sought to fasten the blame upon Mrs. Gooding.

WANTS HER MAIDEN NAME RESTORED

How can a woman get her maiden name back after her husband has obtained a divorce?

That was the query put to A. F. Kerr, district clerk, in a letter received from a woman resident of Cheyenne, Wyoming. In the letter the woman stated that she had just been informed that her husband had secured a divorce from her in a local court. She said that it was satisactory with her, provided her maiden name was restored.

"I know of no way to change your present name without you find some one with whom you are ready to take another chance," wrote the veteran district official after an extensive investigation into the law of the question asked. The official added that he wished the best of luck should she again embark on the sea of matrimony.

AMERICAN BANKERS AND THE SALES TAX.

A very enterprising American paper, The New York Times, asked the financiers of twenty-one cities to express their views as to the best method of meeting the fiscal situation confronting congress should the excess profits tax be repealed.

A majority held the sales tax to be the best and fairest means of raising an equivalent revenue; some few declared for three cent postage and a stamp on bank checks and a levy of $10 on pleasure cars were advocated by the majority.

All declared for reduction of government expenses, particularly in the army and navy and even in one instance the immediate ratification of the treaty of Versailles to help American trade.

In Boston no banker could be found, who would undertake to answer the questions at all, and Times correspondents in several cities reported considerable reluctance on the part of bankers to discuss taxes or to suggest new measures on the ground that the experts in Washington best knew the government's needs and also were as well qualified to decide how best those needs should be met.

Dallas is the home city of the Federal Reserve Bank of this southwestern district and only Dallas bankers were interviewed by Times correspondents. This is what they said:

E. M. Reardon ,president of the American Exchange National Bank—"The excess profits tax should be repealed because it is stifling business enterprise. I suggest raising required revenue through the tariff and by permitting the sale of light wines and beer under high license."

J. A. Pondrom, president of the City National Bank—"Substitute a sales tax."

R. W. Higginbotham, president of the Southwest National Bank—"Quit building battleships and making preparations for war and less revenue will be needed. I am in favor of a sales tax as a partial substitute for the excess profits tax, but more in favor of cutting down expenses."

Bankers as a rule are for the Mellon program, that is, the program the secretary submitted and the Fordneyites of the ways and means committee of the house rejected.

Seven bankers were of the opinion that it might be best to retain the excess profits tax but they represented a hopeless minority.

All demanded quick action by congress; all demanded small appropriations for military purposes; all demanded sweeping reductions in all departments of government and against the creation of additional jobs by the congress.

OCTOBER CLOTHING DEMAND.

Close observers of conditions in the clothing trade are now willing to wager that the manufacturing branch will not be able to handle comfortably the demand that will appear in October, says the New York Times. This prediction is based on several factors. One is the conservative buying of retailers and the consequent low condition of their stocks. Another takes in the caution that has been exercised by the manufacturers to prevent overproduction, as well as the difficulties connected with getting an adequate supply of woolens now, even though the business is subnormal. But beyond these considerations, the kind of merchandise that has been sold in past months is understood to have a strong bearing on the situation. The purchase of lightweight clothing and the typical sport garments will create, it is believed, an active call for the more regular lines.

Congressman Lucian W. Parrish declared in a speech in legislative halls that the overshadowing national question for the next half a century would be that of economy and the gathering of revenues to meet the cost of government. There are eight hundred thousand federal employes and an additional two hundred thousand who do odd jobs for the government. Every tenth man in the United States is on the federal payroll. Why not longer hours of work and fewer public servants?

Secretary Mellon says back taxes collections are to be rushed. Who is going to rush them? If a big individual or corporation is ordered to produce litigation ensues. If a little fellow is threatened—well, it is impossible to get blood out of a turnip.

New York state has a population of 10,385,227. There are 198,623 negroes. Whites increased 19.4 while the negroes increased 47.9. There are more negroes in Gotham than in any other American city.

CROP AND BUSINESS CONDITIONS MOST ENCOURAGING.

In its weekly review of crop and business conditions throughout the Southwest the Dallas News furnishes information of a most encouraging nature. Most grain crops and feed crops are out of harm's way and the yields have generally been good.

Farmers everywhere are feeling more confident and planning ofr resumption of production on normal lines. Labor conditions are more settled and demands more stable.

Industries are increasing their output. More people are being employed in shops and factories. Range conditions are still good in West Texas. Wholesalers and jobbers report better business and more liberal buying.

Heads of large establishments are somewhat optimistic. Manufacturers are not manifesting any symptoms of depression. Texas cotton mills are doing a normal business and a large mill at Waco is operated twenty-four hours per day.

Bountiful feed crops have been produced almost in every section. Rain is needed to make cotton in the bottom land. In East Texas the farmers have raised a diversified crop and received fine returns. A heavy sweet potato crop is promised.

At Marshall the Texas and Pacific railway has reopened its big repair shop and is working 400 men in all departments. Business is reported to be looking much better in the Panhandle cities of Texas and in the tier of counties along the Arkansas border labor is reported not so high, farming is better and there has been no marked falling off of business in the mercantile lines.

In the blackland counties business men see signs of better times ahead and local merchants returning from the eastern markets report the purchase of large stocks for the fall and winter trade. This is taken as an indication that they have the utmost confidence in the early return of normal conditions.

The Dallas News is a conservative newspaper. Its policy has ever been a conservative one. It has an army of correspondents in all the cities and towns of the Southwest and the tone of its crop conditions and business review is most encouraging to say the least.

There is nothing the matter with Texas. Normalcy is returning to Texas. Adjustment has almost taken place. Those who paid war time prices for war time goods and fought against taking their losses when the slump came are the men who are more depressed than their fellows and they refuse to see the brighter side of the situation.

Texas is a producer of all the raw materials as well as the food staples and Texas is in better shape today than many of the more populous and wealthier states of the sisterhood.

These are some of the signs of the times and readers of The Record News should be able to interpret them without the aid of experts.

Crawling back to normalcy in this old world of ours after its frightful plunge into the bloodiest and most costly war manhind has ever known.

FORD AS A RAIL OPERATOR.

Henry Ford's ownership of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad has turned a consistent deficit into an operating profit of more than $500,000 in the first six months of 1921, one of the managing officials said to a Detroit news editor. "We are doing a whale of a business and it is growing along with our vast improvements every day," said the official. "Aside from doing with the road's financial condition what railroad men all over the country said was impossible, Henry Ford is working other wonders. Mr. Ford has cut two hours from the running schedule between this city and Bainbridge, Ohio, 280 miles. The trip is made in 10 hours, with twenty-eight scheduled stops. He has confiscated four steel private cars belonging to operating officials and explained that they can ride with the public from now on. The cars are now being prepared for general use. Ford freight is so heavy that some other business offered the line is being refused. As many as 1,200 cars have been handled in twelve hours. The old D. T. & I. rate was 200 in twenty-four hours." The new owner has broken the rail unions' influence by paying more than the union scale, the official declared. It is said the brotherhoods took a proposed working agreement to Mr. Ford a short time ago. He tore it up and then offered his employes, not as union men, pay scales providing for a maximum of eight hours' work each day in a six-day week with a minimum of $6 a day. Monthly pay schedules are: Engineers and conductors, $375; firemen, $275, and brakemen, $235. There is no overtime. When a man completes his 208-hour month he is laid off until the first of the next month.

WHY PORTER WEPT.

General Manager Porter A. Whaley of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce awoke the other day and found himself famous. He read where he had purchased the Sweetwater Daily Reporter and would be its editor. Then he unbusomed to the press representative and let flow his tale of woe. He said he was horrified to read in the newspapers the report that he would leave the West Texas Chamber of Commerce to take charge of the Sweetwater Reporter; that there was not a vestige of truth in the report and he was at a loss to know where the report had originated. This is to inform the friends of the horror stricken general manager that he hasn't purchased a newspaper, that he isn't going to edit a newspaper and that he has been the victim of cruel hoax. However, he should be told that there is a Balm in Gilead and all that happens is for the best. Maybe Homer D. Wade invented the roorback.

Maryland has 66,000 persons over 10 years of age who can neither read nor write and a large majority of the 66,000 are too lazy or indifferent to attend night school. The truth of the matter is there are more opportunities in America for obtaining an education than anywhere under the sun and it is criminal for a young man not to avail himself of some of the opportunities.

And now the king of Hadjaz has proclaimed a holy war to assist the Turks. Some day the Greeks will occupy Constantinople and this will be the beginning of the end for the Turk. They should be hustled out of Europe and driven to the mountains of Asia Minor where they be-

LANDIS AND LABOR

Federal Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis of Chicago has handed down his decision in the labor dispute. On account of the long drawn-out contest between capital and labor in that city three hundred million dollars worth of building contracts have been tied up.

Judge Landis was made the arbiter by the contending forces. It is to be hoped that the contractors, the building trades and the material men will let reason be their guide.

This is no time for strikes.

This is not time for bickering.

There must be a readjustment.

Water seeks its level.

War wage scales must go with war prices for materials.

There is said to be a shortage of 5,000,000 houses in America and high rentals is one of the causes given for the slowness of wage earners to agree to a revision of war wage scales.

If the contractors and material men are ready to resume building activities there is no reason why the mechanics and laborers of the country should not do their part toward ending the blockade and doing something that will solve the acute shortage of houses in all cities and towns of America.

There is only one way to bring down the high cost of rent.

Build more houses.

It is impossible to do this with a tieup of building contracts like that that has prevailed in the city of Chicago for more than a year.

TAMPICO A CITY OF DECAY

Tampico is said to be a city of stagnated industries and slow decay. Gone are its glories, its spendthrifts and high wages. Deacon John D. Rockefeller is blamed for having brought it about when he refused to pay the Obregon export tax.

Only four million barrels of oil have been exported this month. In the month of June 17 million barrels were exported.

Have the American oil kings placed an embargo on exports? There are thousands of idle men in the Tampico district and later along these idle men may be armed revolutionaries.

Oil has raised more hell in Mexico in ten years than Cortez raised in twenty years in his wars with the ancient Aztec kings.

A republican congress kept Mexican crude on the free list. American oil kings appear to have placed the Tampico wells on the morgue list.

Great is the power of the almighty dollar when an individual or a company owns a billion or two and is always able to get quick action on the money.

FIGURES FOR SENATOR DOROUGH.

Senator Dorough's new district has a population of 108,818. It is District No. 1. District No. 23 is the Wichita district. This district has a population of 157,021.

District No. 2 is another East Texas preserve. It has a population of 141,241. District No. 24 is a West Texas district. It has a population of 193,305.

District No. 3 is in West Texas. It has a population of 152,593. District 29 is the El Paso district. It has a population of 186,997.

Senator Dorough, who referred to West Texas as a wild waste of droughts and jack rabbits, should travel about a bit.

Before traveling about a bit he should be told certain West Texas districts had four or five times as many inhabitants as some of the East Texas districts and the rank injustice of it had appealed to all fair-minded men for a new deal.

WHY NOT ALL NATIONS?

Five nations have been invited to send representatives to the disarmament conference. Why not invite all nations to send representatives? Why not invite Germany? The Germans should know something of the brutality of war, the cost of war and the curse of war. They have an indemnity of 33 billions to pay in 40 years.

To make it easy for them the victors decided that Germany should disarm and remain disarmed for 40 years.

Of course, all Germans will be compelled to work long hours, to practice thrift, to make a display of inventive genius and at the end of 40 years on account of these things the Germans may be the economic masters of the world if the powerful nations of the earth continue the policy of maintaining large armies and navies and heaping heavy tax burdens upon their peoples.

WORK OF THE BIG STICK.

President Harding and Secretary Mellon swung the big sticks over senators and representatives of the administration. Now tax cuts approximating $555,000,000 have been agreed upon by the republican members of the house ways and means committee. This is the relief program promised the large family of Jones, the man who pays the freight: Repeal of the excess profits tax; repeal of the higher surtaxes; repeal of all of the freight, passenger and Pullman taxes. It is also decided to increase the exemption to heads of families having dependents from $200 to $400 for each dependent. If a republican congress puts over the program and grants the relief demanded by the taxpayer there will be another republican congress elected in 1922. Failure to give the people the relief they seek will result in a republican rout in November, 1922. This is the way it is written in the big book of destiny and this is the handwriting on the wall.

JUNK THE PLANTS—SELL THE FARMS.

Governor Neff asked for an appropriation of eight hundred and seventy thousand dollars to operate the penitentiary until September 1, 1922, and the senate finance committee voted him one hundred and seventy-five thousand. Lieutenant Governor Lynch Davidson would junk the penitentiary plants and sell the prison farms. He would utilize the labor of three thousand convicts in the building of public highways. Some day the Davidson plan will be adopted, the vast tracts of land owned by the penitentiary system will be sold, the convicts will be made self-sustaining and Texas will have a system of roads that will be the pride of its people. Of course, the politicians will fight its coming as long as possible, but the politicians are not the masters. They will be compelled to dismount in the long run.

ertson says that woman's place is in the home. There are thousands of women voters in her district. They are certain to terminate her political career in 1922.

Congressman Hatten W. Sumners of Texas is chairman of the subcommittee on cotton of the congressional agriculture commission. Mr. Sumners is of the opinion that "the retreat of cotton prices" has ended and that when the new crop comes on in volume it will find a market prepared by adequate financial support and support of public confidence to receive it. Hanged if H. N. F. knows what Sumners means but it sounds all right. Governor Harding told the Texas congressman some days ago that the outlook for cotton was "much better than a year ago." Governor Harding was willing to extend relief to the cattleman. He was horned off by the Morgan pool makers. If southern cotton growers are given the same kind of relief they will be compelled to fall back on their old reliable local bankers who carried the load last year. Congressman Sumners should know all about cotton. He picked cotton in the Garland neighborhood in his boyhood but he admitted that the picking was rotten or that he was a rotten picker. He ran away from the cotton patch, began the pursuit of law and ever since has been a lawyer and an office holder. He has visited Europe many times, made a study of cotton conditions over there both before and since the war and when it comes to cotton statistics he is the last word.

Representative Leon Brady of Galveston is the gentleman who made the onslaught on the state rangers. He succeeded in having the force cut from 70 to 50 men and their appropriations trimmed. This resulted in a total cut for Adjutant General Barton's department of more than $150,000 each year. All the newspapers clamored for the lawmakers "to cut to the bone;" business organizations made the same demand; farmers' associations yelled lustily for sweeping tax reduction and Governor Neff made a fight from start to finish for economy in all departments. Now that the lawmakers have "cut to the bone" are the people going to back them up or cast them out should they offer for re-election next year.

President W. B. Bizzell of the Agricultural & Mechanical college at Bryan mournfully declares that many of his teachers will resign if their salaries are cut. The A. & M. is a school for boys; President Bizzell might save money if he would cut out "croshaying, canning and cooking." Let the girls do it. There is a state school for girls at Denton and the home extension work should be directed by and from the College of Industrial Arts. This is a free country. Whenever a salary worker can do better it is his privilege to hop along. There are no strings on him. H. N. F. knows that teachers are poorly paid. He knows that the salaries paid to the public school teachers of the state is a lasting disgrace to the people of the state. He also knows that while the laborer is worthy his hire he should give in return a legitimate day's work for an honest day's pay. There are lots of fads and fancies and frills that should be eliminated and schools for boys should not be permitted to direct home extension work while Jones is compelled to pay the freight.

Representative Frank Johnson put over his truck bill in the house where he secured its final passage. It has been sent to the senate, received a favorable report and it is to be hoped that final action will be given the measure before adjournment. The measure amends an act of the regular session so as to eliminate the mileage tax and provide for a tax according to carrying capacity and tire equipment. As the bill passed the house it carries an amendment exempting trucks used for agricultural purposes. An amendment adopted designates the road supervisor instead of the road overseer as the official permitted to limit use of certain roads being worked or so wet as to be subject to damage by heavy traffic. The amendment was introduced by James I. Perkins of Cherokee, but was adopted in the form of a substitute by Frank Burmeister of McMullen. Perkins opposed the substitute on the ground that it did not sufficiently provide for counties where there was no road supervisor. Later this bill was given a favorable committee report in the senate.

WEST TEXAS TO BE—AND NEVER A DESERT.

(From the Abilene Reporter)

West Texas is not and never has been a desert, or anything like it. Generally the country in spring and summer is covered with green grass and many-colored flowers. Drouths are occasional, they are exceptional, they are unusual. The trouble is that West Texas' infrequent drouths have been widely heralded, until a great many people who have never visited West Texas get the idea that it is a sort of lesser Sahara.

There is a man, or when, writing editorials for the Dallas News who has or have never been in West Texas. He is a brilliant performer on the typewriter, a builder of smooth sentences and a user of excellent grammar. But he has never been in West Texas, or if he has, it was during one of our occasional "dry spells" and he still harbors the delusion that West Texas is a desert place.

But we shall not quarrel with the News editorial writer. He admires the unbeatable spirit of the West and is generous in his praise. We reproduce below a News editorial full of compliments and uplifting sentiment. The only feature of it that we do not admire is the fact that the writer looks on West Texas as a dry place indeed, and in earlier years a desert. But the bones of cattle have not bleached on the Plains of West Texas except in far-apart years; no oftener, we should say, than they have rotten in the East Texas swamplands from various murrain. The cowboy never "cussed" West Texas, except in sheer admiration; he loves it and stands by it through lean years and fat. The News editorial follows:

The old-time cowboy used to have a way of comparing West Texas to a place where not even cowboys cared about going. The aridness of its waste places was immortalized in verse that was rude, perhaps, but satisfactorily lilting and profane. But the "nesters" who came after the cowboys and the descendants of those "nesters," have changed things somewhat. Significant of the changes which are being brought about the accounts of bond issues for the construction of artificial lakes, such as have been decided upon at Cisco, Colorado and other places. With these lakes, wherever they are estaglished with a reasonable amount of wisdom and engineering skill, come trees, parks, flowers and municipal beautification in general.

Projects of this kind are worthy of every encouragement. Could it be possible to dot all of West Texas with these lakes, the results are beyond computation. It is not out of reason to predict that the presence of a large number of artificial bodies of water, wherever the conformation of the ground and the possibilities of supply permit, would have a material influence upon the climate of large portions of the state, to say nothing of the great acreage which it would render tillable. At least equal to the coinable advantages which might ensue would the increased comforts of human existence and the finer things that go with them.

Somehow man doesn't manage refinement without trees. Trees are a part of civilization and without them it is incomplete. Wide sweeps of landscape are inspiring, and unhindered breezes are refreshing and invigorating, but about his home man wants a clump of friendly trees. If he is denied them, either by the niggardliness of the clouds, or by the encroachments of the city, he has a feeling that he has somehow lost something to which he had a right. And these lakes mean trees. If they meant nothing more, they would be a boon beyond valuing to West Texas.

But they mean more than that. They mean co-operative public spirit. They mean that West Texas believes in West Texas. They mean that the desert is being driven back farther and farther, just as the savages of the desert were driven. They mean peopled places where once the coyote and the jack rabbit dwelt in want and solitude. They mean pleasure resorts where once were only sparse dead grass and whitened bones. They mean the fulfillment to the old and weatherbeaten pioneers of the hopes and dreams of years long, long past, when they dared to come out into a Godforsaken country and make it their home. They mean, too, the passing of an epoch in the history of the Lone Star State, an epoch filled with red-blooded romance, brave deeds and conquerable grit. But with is passing comes a new era and a pleasanter one, an era of progress and development, an era of prosperous farms, thriving towns, comfortable homes and sturdy, happy, virile citizenship. And who shall say that the new is not better than the old?

COTTON GOODS PRODUCTION IN TEXAS.

(From the Temple Mirror)

Ranking first in production of raw cotton, Texas drops into fifteenth place as a manufacturer of cotton goods, barely making a place with the seventeen states in the union which produce ninety-eight per cent of the cotton goods output of the United States.

This is an anomaly that should be remedied as quickly as possible and at this juncture when co-operation is the slogan, when the organization of a corporation for the handling of a minimum of 600,000 bales of cotton a year of the Texas crop for the next five years has been completed, the movement for more factories in Texas should receive added impetus. The figures of the federal census bureau as given out a few days ago show that in 1919 the production of cotton mills in Texas was valued at $13,920,000, which gives this state rank as fifteenth in the list of cotton goods producings states.

When it is taken into consideration that the average value of the raw cotton yield in Texas is around $250,000,000, more often in excess than below that figure, it is easy to compute what an insignificant proportion of the crop goes into the finished product turned out by Texas mills.

Based on calculations that raw cotton made into sob rings somewhere in the neighborhood of $1,500 or $2,000 a bale, and figuring the price of the cotton at fifteen cents a pound or $75.00 a bale, the actual consumption of raw cotton by Texas mills shrinks almost to nothing. Recent statistics have shown that the value of a finished product from a bale of cotton is never less than $1,000 and frequently a single bale produces goods that, even at so-called bargain prices, sell far above $7,000.

If the value of the manufactured product from a single bale is placed at the mamum of $1,000 and we compare that with the total valuation of $13,920,000 placed by the census upon the production of Texas cotton mills, we find that these mills consume just 13,920 bales of cotton, not half a cargo for one of the giant freighters that ply between Galveston and Liverpool carrying the cotton from the fields of Texas to the great factories of England, whence we buy much of it back, after paying freight both ways across the Atlantic ocean and then from New York or Boston to the Texas store from which the ultimate consumer buys the finished product.

The portion of the Texas cotton crop consumed by Texas cotton mills, acording to these statistics, is barely one-third of one per cent of the crop. Texas should have factories capable of taking not less than ten or fifteen per cent of its raw cotton production, and when this happy condition is reached, and it will be reached some day, the trouble of the Texas farmer will vanish, bright-faced, happy children, smiling women and jovial men will be found on the farms; they will have a market for their crops at their own door ,towns will multiply, communities will spring up all over the state, schools will be reared at every crossroad and churches will lift their spires heavenward from multiplied thousands of little villages and settlements.

The first step toward protection against cormorant greed and plunder has been taken in the organization of the farm bureau cotton marketing association, which will control the marketing for five years of a minimum of 600,000 bales of Texas cotton and the next logical step that suggests itself is one that will invite and encourage more cotton factories within the limits of the state, providing an easily accessible market for thousands of bales of cotton minus the burden of freight charges to the mills of New England and the heavy return freight tolls upon the finished product.

Let the farmers and the promoters of the farm bureau activities in this state give serious thought to these figures and set about the task of making a home market for their co-operative handling of the cotton from their farms. Better prices will result, new population will be added to the state, wider markets will be created for other products of the farms including corn, wheat, feed, vegetables, poultry and hogs.

The census report of the insignificant amount of Texas cotton consumed by Texas cotton mills ought to inspire active and prompt action toward making that consumption grow to a thousand fold its present size. It can be done. Some day it will be done.

WHY NOT NOW?

THIS AMERICA OF OURS.

(From the Waco Times-Herald)

At the laying of the corner stone for the Karem Israel synagogue in Kansas City last Sunday, Senator James A. Reed was one of the speakers.

"The ceremony," says the Kansas City Times, "was proceeding along lines that were anything but dramatic when a tall man, in a loose but well-fitting blue suit, walked down the center aisle of the tent where the addresses were being made. The audience recognized him at once and applauded. It was not the same man who talked to a vast multitude in Convention hall, which he had hired for the purpose of making his own campaign speech here last fall. Then the limitations that hedged him about were expressed in his manner. A lack of faith in his party's standard bearer and his admiration for the Democratic candidate for governor combined to put a brake on his eloquence. Yesterday it was the 'Jim' Reed of old times. His slow, sure enunciation of every word carried his crisp sentences to every listener. The senator had dropped in upon a group of his friends, and the effect of his words was greatest, perhaps, than on occasions more historic."

And here are some of the things said by Senator "Jim" Reed on the occasion of the laying of the corner stone for this synagogue in Kansas City:

"Why did men and women come to this country with its rocky coast and expanse of forest. The French came here because they were burned at the stake. Catholics came because they were persecuted in some countries. Puritans came because they were expelled from their native land. Quakers came because the kindly doctrine of William Penn was execrated where he lived. The Irish came because they were persecuted then as they are now. Political systems denied men religious freedom, Gentiles came here because they preferred the hardships of forests and the dangers from wild beasts and savage tribes to persecution. The Jews came for exactly the same reason.

"The persecution they endured was a part of the system that at one time dominated all Europe. One man said 'I believe in this form of government; those who believe in any other kind shall be dragged to prison.' Another man said, 'I believe in this religion; those who believe in any other shall be burned at the stake.' Upon these narrow lines the civilization of the world was built.

"Our fathers came here and made a discovery. They saw that there was no divine right of kings. They struck off their shackles and out of this act sprung the principle that all men are created equal. And what has been the result? Our country has made more progress in 150 years than the Roman empire in its 1,500 years of existence.

"From the English we obtained the kind of government that we believed to be the soundest; from the French we received art and song; from Germany science; from the Irish enthusiasm and from the Jews the ten commandments. In them we find every moral principle that has stood the test of the ages.

"Their shackles having been struck off, no avenue of life has been closed to the Jews. There is no height of glory which they have not attained. In art, music, jurisprudence, as in all other lines of endeavor, they stand in the foremost rank.

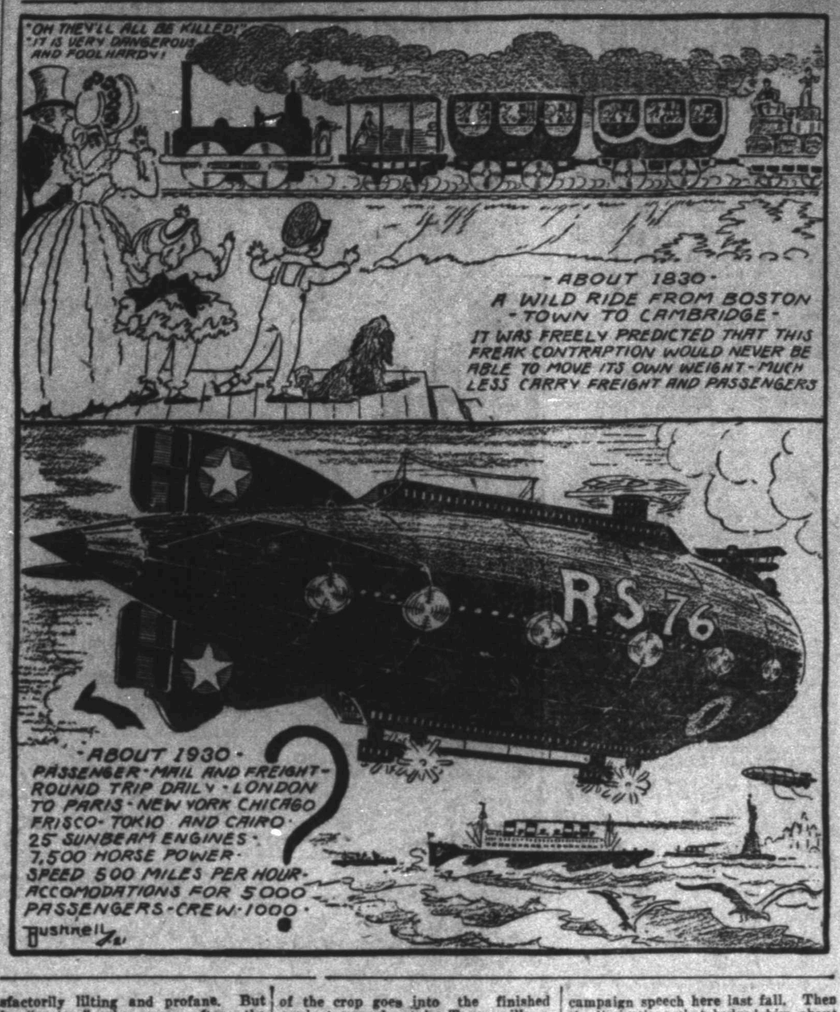

"We find in the Jew the same elements of success as in other races. But in the Jew there is no divided allegiance. He has no other country to love except America."

America is the land of individual liberty. America is the land of religious freedom. America is the land of political tolerance. America is the land of business opportunity. America is the foremost nation of all the ages, and why? Because here each is a sovereign in his own right, with none to molest or make afraid. Whoever finds himself against the American sense of fair play is sure to be ground to powder. Senator "Jim" Reed spoke the spirit of the founders of the American Republic in the words printed above, and we do well, good people, to occasionally remind ourselves of the intestimable good that crowns our lives by reason of our free institutions.

Ability to resist the most potent cutting tool so far known, the acetylene torch, is the the remarkable characteristic of a burglar-proof alloy now being used for lining bank vaults and safes, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. In an official test, a four-inch plate of the material showed only a small hole, two and one-eighth inches deep, after nearly four hours' work with a cutting flame.

AMERICAN CLUB BOOKS FILM FOR SUNDAY PROGRAM

"A Daughter of the Law," which shows today at the Palace under the auspices of the American club, is the best Universal in which Carmel Myers has appeared. This does not mean that the star does any better work than in previous productions but that the story in itself is out of the ordinary. This together with a rather exceptional cast which carries the bulk of the action, and good direction, place the feature in the "above the average class."

The plot runs the gamut of the saloons, dance halls, dives, homes of the elite, etc., but does not linger long in any particular place. The story is decidedly strong in action and suspense, twisting and wriggling itself in and around the spectator's mind when he believes he has solved its object.

It is not until the final reel that the plot unfolds itself and this is in the nature of a surprise, for it appears evident that the villains are to make their escape over the border unmolested.

They are apprehended by the heroine and her father, who is aided by the detectives. All this taking place on a fast moving train.

This story is a good illustration of the fact that no matter how overworked a certain kind of plot may be it can be revived with good results, provided it is well told, is mixed with suspense and action and has the thrills to give it impetus.

And we must not forget the supporting cast of which none better could have been selected to portrary the leading roles. They are Jack O'Brien, the eluding man, Fred Kohler, who is particularly convincing as the heavy, Charles Arling, as the police inspector and father of the heroine, Dick Lareno and Joe Bennett.

The story tells of a criminal gang, operating on a big scale which is run down by the police after a sister attempts to save her erring brother. He is killed by the gang leader for which the latter is sent to jail. Making his escape the crook is pursued by the sister and her father and finally captured.—Frank Leonard.

"PASSION FLOWER" AT OLYMPIC MONDAY

In "The Passion Flower" Norma Talmadge will be seen at the Olympic Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in what is declared to be the most interesting starring vehicle that has yet been given her. The story is the work of Jacinto Benavente, who is acclaimed as the greatest living dramatist of Spain today. "The Passion Flower" was tremendously popular in New York last season with Nance O'Neil in the role of "Balmunda," the mother. Norma Talmadge, however, will be seen as "Acacia," the daughter, in the picture version. She is said dto have created one of the finest roles of her screen career. "The Passion Flower" is a tale of Spanish peasant life, in which love, hatred, jealously and tragedy figure. It offers Norma Talmadge her long-waited first opportunity to play in a Spanish role. Herbert Brenon is the director of this ambitious photodrama in which Courtnay Foote and Harrison Ford appear as Miss Talmadge's leading men. Others in the cast include Eulalie Jensen, Charles Stevenson, Alice May, Robert Agnew, Natalie Talmadge and Robert Payton Gibb. Many of the exterior scenes for "The Passion Flower" were filmed by Miss Talmadge in Florida.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday the Olympic will show Thomas Meighan in "The Conquest of Canaan."

There's a "Main Street" that runs through "Canaan," the mythical city which Booth Tarkington wrote about in "The Conquest of Canaan." In Canaan were some who were respectable and others who were not. Once you were placed in the latter class, it was next to impossible to live down the disgrace.

Here, the respectables looked up to Judge Pike as their leader. His word was law. The unrespectable accepted him because they knew that he owned their homes, their saloons and had their lives in the hollow of his hand.

As the title suggests, Main Street in Canaan was conquered and by two of the unrespectables, Joe Louden and Ariel Tabor. Ariel was fortunate enough to inherit money which took her to Paris. Joe could not bring himself to conform with the Main Street conventions which aroused such prjudice within him that he was forced to leave town to carve out a better career.

The development of this interesting plot, which brings out the bigness as well as the pettiness of a middle-size town, is illustrated in the Paramount picturization of "The Conquest of Canaan."

"SCRAMBLED WIVES" SELECTED AS MARGUERITE CLARK'S FIRST FILM

Miss Marguerite Clark has selected for her first independent film production the comedy, "Scrambled Wives," one of the Broadway successes of last season. In this vehicle, which is released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., she comes to the Strand Theater Thursday for an engagement of three days. Miss Clark plays the part of Mary Lucile Smith, a young girl who thinks she has a "dark and terrible past" to hide. The secret in her life is that as a result of a perfectly innocent boarding school escapade, she had been rushed into a marriage with a boy whom she scarcely knew. Luckily she was rescued from this embarassing situation almost before the ceremony was completed. The marriage was quietly annulled, and Mary Lucile packed off to Europe to forget her mad prank. Coming back, she falls in love with Larry McLeod. It is a desperate case of love at first sight on both sides. Mary Lucile conceals her past from Larry and accepts an invitation to a house party at his sister's house. Who should turn up among the guests, but her ex-husband, now more or less happily married to a pretty and jealous young woman. Complications begin the moment Mary Lucile crosses the threshold of the country house, and the tangle of misunderstanding goes on from one laughable scene to another, ending in a climax of rapid fire comedy. Incidentally, there are settings of great beauty throughout the picture, including a ballroom scene in a country house, and no little opportunity for the display of Miss Clark's skill as an actress in delineating the emotions through which Mary Lucile passes on her way to happiness. It is the kind of part in which Miss Clark has made her greatest successes and endeared herself to millions of devotees of the screen.

Pauline Frederick in "Salvage" is the name of the attraction at the Strand the first part of the week.

MAYO PRESENTS STIRRING FILM AT GEM MONDAY

Frank Mayo, the vigorous star of "The Brute Breaker," and other big Universal features, will be the principal attraction at the Gem theater on Monday in his newest fast action picture drama, "The Magnificent Brute."

Presented against an awe-inspiring scenic background of the mighty Yosemite, the story deals with Victor Raoul, a fur trapper of the Canadian North who visits the haunts of civilization but once a year. He falls in love with the daughter of his partner, Yvonne, a Parisian bred girl who is strangely out of place in the wilderness and who toys with the big fellow for sheer amusement. How he is accused of murder and escapes in the trackless forest, later to be saved by the girl, is just one of the incidents which leads to the whirlwind climax.

A furious man hunt, a fight that dwarfs the famous battle of "The Brute Breaker" for action, and a love story that stars with a spark and develops into an inferno, are additional situations which will keep the spectators in doubt as to the story's outcome until the last scene.

Frank Mayo is said to be at his very best in the role of Victor Raoul, the giant of the north woods, whose passions are elemental and whose code of honor is primitive.

Dorothy Devere, formerly a popular comedy star, proves that she can interpret drama understandingly as Mayo's leading woman. The cast was well selected by Robert Thornby, who Percy Challenger, Alberta Lee, J. J. Lanoe, William Eagle-Eye, the Indian actor; Charles Euler, Dick Sutherland, Ely Stanton, Buck Moulton and Lillian Ortez.

HOOSIER SAND DUNES MOVING TOWARD IWOA

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Indiana's famous sand dunes are moving inland several hundred miles a year.

This startling, though scientific, information was revealed in the Lake County Circuit Court at Crown Point, Ind. It was said that within the last two weeks several carloads of the dunes had moved inland as far as Davenport, Ia., where they were incorporated in new cement sidewalks.

A temporary order restraining the Great Lakes Sand Company, of Chicago, from removing any more sand from the dunes was asked by the State of Indiana, whose complaint charges the company with taking 1,000,000 cubic yards of sand from the drifts in Lake, Porter and LaPorte counties, hindering the natural action of the sand and destroying the beauty of the dunes.

SHIP'S MENAGERIE RUNS AMUCK ON TRIP.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The Elder Dempster steamship Elmina was berthed at Liverpool this week with a distracting sideshow in full swing.

On board was an interesting collection of beasts sent by the governor of Gambia, West Africa, as a present to the London "Zoo."

Two hyenas formed part of the consignment. These had already been loose once during the passage, and they repeated the escapade in the Mersey. The theory is that some youthful spirits enjoyed the first incident so much that they arranged for a repetition before they left the ship.

Pitchforks were employed to urge the beasts back to their den. The officers never had a dull moment while the dual operation of berthing ship and big game hunting was in progress.

Some regrets were expressed (not among the ship's officers) that the porcupines and ostriches were not given an airing at the same time.

In addition to this, the passengers took great interest during the voyage in the menagerie, and several still bore souvenirs in the shape of scratches when the vessel docked.

DRUNKNESS INCREASES

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Drunkness showed an increase of 65 per cent in Britain during 1920, according to recently published statistics.

The decrease in the licensing hours of saloons and the inferior grade of the beer, strangely enough, is given as the chief reasons for this increase.

"THE WHISTLE" BILL HART'S BEST

William S Hart in the Paramount Picture "The Whistle"

It shrills its blast in the early morn
When the cold gray dawn is breaking;
And a myriad souls from slumber torn,
Their humble cots forsaking—
Flare forth to toil through the glowing day
Nor reck of the rest of the world at play
For these are the men of the factories gray
Where "the things of the world are making."
Yet those who strive not with stone or steel
Nor feel the ache of a day of toiling,
Must labor still for the common weal
To keep the common pot a-boiling!
But their's is the labor of heart and mind
And each must strive through the steady grind
Giving and taking, as days unwind—
The springs of life uncoiling.
Labor is blessed! From the natal hour
Of one who came to a humble calling,
The world has felt its sweeping power
'Twill last till the final dim star's falling!
Yet side by side the two must stand—
The man who worked and the man who planned—
At the judgment bar, where all rank is banned,
To hear the word appalling!

A Drawbridge tender asleep at his post; an open bridge and a motor crashing into the inky waters below; a child's scream and a man's brave plunge to the rescue!

This is one of the smashing scenes in "The Whistle"—a picture produced by William S. Hart and written by Lambert Hillyer who also directed it. The original story is by May Wilmoth and Olin Lyman.

In this new Paramount offering, which will be shown at the Empress theatre, Mr. Hart has a new role—that of a factory worker, a man accustomed to jump to the sound of the whistle.

His attempt to mete out justice to a man whose selfishness has resulted in the death of the worker's beloved child, develops a series of situations that come as a completely satisfying train of events which round out to a conclusion that is distinctly compelling.

In every way this is a powerful drama and one that should satisfy the most exacting. Three famous juvenile players appear in the cast. Frank Brownlee has the "heavy" role.

Of the stories told by Sir Henry Lucy, the veteran journalist, whose parliamentary sketches over the nom de plume of "Toby, M. P." are so widely known, perhaps the most amusing is that of the device invented by Herbert Spencer to escape boredom. The famous philosopher liked going out to dinner, but hated the inanity of the ordinary conversation at table. In order to overcome this difficulty he invented a pair of ear clips. When he found himself between two commonplace persons "whose chattering heared his soul," he adjusted his ear clips and ate his dinner amid grateful silence.

White pine trees once infested with blister rust have never been known to recover.

Poor "Bush League" Spuds, Poor "Lucky Stiffs"—ATeam Just Filled With "Buts and If's" —They Cannot Hit, They Cannot Bunt—and Yet Somehow They're Out in Front!

SPUD "BUSH LEAGUERS," AS FORT WORTH CALLS 'EM, POUR IT ON DALLAS "CHAMPIONS" 9 TO 3

By C. F. CARTER

The Dallas Marines, "champions" according to their adudrers, and the Wichita Falls Spudders, "bush leaguers" and "lucky stiffs," according to their Fort Worth knockers, hooked up in another terrific struggle at Athletic park yesterday afternoon—and the "bush leaguers" won, 9 to 3. All that there was "terrific" about the game was the terrific ease with which the "bush leaguers" romped all over Ham Patterson's good ball club.

Some day, some of our jealous, envious and unsportsmanlike Tarrant county neighbors will learn that the Spudders may be beaten with kind words, but never with verbal abuse. Every man on the Spudder club is resentful of some of the knocks in recent circulation—and the result has been simply to arouse the fighting spirit of the team to a pitch where it is the most dangerous ball club in Texas today. The Spudders are determined to FIGHT for every ball game between now and the close of the season; there isn't a quitter on the club, and the boys are going to show Fort Worth that a clean, hustling, fighting ball club claims Wichita Falls as its native city—and if there are championships to be won, the team that gets them away from the Spudders will know it has been in a battle.

Start Scoring Early

The Slugging Spudders started to wreck yesterday's ball game in the opening frame, when they tore into Tipple's offerings savagely, Tanner, McDonald, Clark and Miller hitting vicious singles to the outfield, and Griggs following with a wicked three-bagger down the first base line. Tipple fled to the bench, and Cliff Hill succeeded him. Five runs, however, crossed the platter before the attack ended in that first inning.

The Spuds made another in the second on a two-bagger by Leland McElwee, who returned to the local line up to relieve Bob Bescher after being away from the club several weeks. Tanner sacrificed Mac to third and Tex McDonald brought him home with a sacrifice fly to Munson.

A home run, a two-bagger and a single made misery for the soul of Cliff Hill in the third, when the Spudders hammered in three more tallies and brought their total to 9. Jake Miller led the onslaught with a mighty wallop over the left field fence. Griggs singled over Stow's head, and Works brought him home with a two- ply wallop to right center. Caddy went to third while Kitchens was being thrown out, and scored when Munson dropped McElwee's fly.

The locals made no more; they needed no more, and it wouldn't have been fair to our guests to have made any more.

Rube Takes Life Easy

We would like to say that Rube Marshall hurled a wonderful game against the Marines, but truth forces us to state that Rube just sorter tossed the pill in there and let the Marines hit it back. Kitchens had to plead with Rube every now and then to "show 'em something," but the goodnatured Marshall, having the game on ice behind the terrific batting of his team-mates simply pulled a Christy Mathewson and saved his arm. The Marines hit Rube freely, and 13 hits were collected by each team. The Hampats were unable to score, however, except in the fourth and fifth cantos when they bunched enough bingles to gather 2 runs and 1 respectively.

It was just a walk-over, gang, just a runaway match. But today the final battle of the series here is on—and we look to see the Marines fight to the last drop of sweat. Patterson has a fine ball club, and a fine bunch of good fellows on it. We like 'em all—but the Spudders might as well kick 'em for a gool again, and leave town with a good, generous lead.

Come out today, every mother's son of you, and give the boys a big send-off. Remember they have a tough road trip ahead. Come out, and wish 'em God-speed.

PRESS BOX PATTER

You'll be a doddering old idiot living on milk toast before you ever see again two crazy plays such as were pulled on Frank Kitchens and Tex McDonald by the Marines yesterday.

In the third inning Kitch hit a wicked smash at Bobby Stow's feet. The marine shortstop went into the dirt to trap the pill, but it was coming so fast it caromed like a shot out of his glove thirty feet to the left and smack into the glove of Eddie Palmer, Dallas second sacker—and Eddie promptly threw Frank out at first.

In the seventh Tex McDonald almost lifted Jim Galloway off his feet. Jim struck his big first baseman's mitt in the way, but the ball kited out of it and went singing in the direction of second base—and there was Eddie Palmer again running up the line—into Eddie's glove shot the ball, Pitcher Cliff Hill covered first, and Palmer tossed Tex out!

A long, long time will pass before you'll ever see two plays in the same game like those.

Tipple was simply slaughtered in the first frame. That fast ball of his was duck soup for the Spudders, and Buddy, Tex, Danny and Jake piled into it for four hot singles in succession—then Cecil Griggs pounded it to right for three bases—and Ham Patterson gave Dan Tipple the beckoning thumb.

Eddie Palmer fell fast asleep on first base in the second, and was picked off the bag by Rube before Eddie even realized Marshall had made the peg. George Harper, coaching at first, was sorter asleep at the switch also, it seemed.

Rube and Buddy likewise nipped Segrist off the second sack in the third, after a two-bagger had placed him in position to score.

Jake Miller collected a single, a double, and a circuit blow out of four trips to the rubber, and shot his batting average well above the .300 mark for the season. On this Dallas series Jake thus far has hit safely 8 times out of 15 at bat.

In the fifth Bobby Stow pulled a pretty double play unassisted, gathering in Cecil Griggs' hot line smash and strolling to second before Jake Miller could return to the sack.

Cliff Hill and Rube Marshall staged a laughing duel in the eighth over Rube's wild attempts to hit one of Cliff's teasing slow ones. Rube done like ter bust his back swinging at it!

After having nothing to do all afternoon, McElwee retired the entire side in the last of the ninth, Hill, Falk and Munson all flying out to Mac in left field.

GAS ATTACK AGAIN BESTS PANTHERMEN

GOVERNOR'S THREE SONS PLAY ON SAME MINOR TEAM

The three Taylor brothers and their positions. Alfred (left), pitcher and outfielder; David H., catcher and manager (center), and Robert Taylor, third baseman.

Gov. Alf A. Taylor of Tennessee is perhaps the only chief executive in the world and one of the few dads in the country who may boast three sons in organized baseball and all on the same club.

"The Taylor boys," as they are familiarly known over the Appalachian league circuit, form the backbone of the Johnson City, Tenn. league leaders. All three began their baseball careers at Milligan college, upper East Tennessee.

WISDOM and WORSE

By C. F. C.

Roy E. Carter, a railroad man of this city and a Spudder fan from the crown of his bean to the soles of his shoes, has taken Billy Bee, sporting editor of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, to task for Billy's recent reflections on the Spudders—and as Roy seems to have covered the subject quite thoroughly and capably, guess we'll reprint the entire epistle. Here she goes:

"Mr. Billy Bee-a-sport
"Fort Worth, Texas.
"Dear Sir:

"To a person who has been reared in the Lone Star State not far from either Fort Worth or Dallas, it is interesting to note in view of the keen rivalry that has always existed between the two cities that the Fort Worth fans are now pulling for Dallas to win in the present series being played at Wichita Falls, but for anyone that knows anything about baseball, it is not at all hard to understand their actions for the fans must know as does Jake Atz, Paul LaGrove and every player on the Fort Worth team, that the Panthers won't have a chance with the Spudders in the finals and they have reason to think they have a chance with Dallas so naturally want them to win.

"I am quite amused to notice that you are now quoting Billy Smith's opinion of the Spudders and there comes to my mind the old adage that 'Misery loves company' and you are no doubt glad to find some one manager in the Texas League that doesn't like Wichita Falls any better than our estimable friend Atz. I really can't blame Mr. Smith for not feeling kindly toward us for no doubt he considered we were not at all nice hosts when he visited us last, but I fail to see where he lost any one of the games here on breaks, for scores of 12 to 6, 6 to 0, 5 to 3 and 7 to 2 do not indicate even a close contest.

"I also notice that Flaherty, who lost his game here by the score of 6 to 0, the Spudders collecting ten safeties from his delivery, held the Panthers to three lonely hits today and might add incidentally that one Spudder player, viz, Tex McDonald, our third-sacker, collected more hits today off three Dallas pitchers than the entire Fort Worth team did off Flaherty and none of them were of the scratch variety, being two doubles, one triple and one home run and was hit by a pitched ball one time.

"All of the fans at Wichita Falls are making their plans to attend the Dixie-Champion games played at Memphis for we all know that the final series between Fort Worth and Wichita Fals will be only a mere formality, as we are sure to win. The Fort Worth fans are going to have to console themselves with taking about the 1920 season and the games the Panthers won in the first half of the 1921 season, but to see another pennant it will be necessary for them to pay our fair city a visit.

"While I cannot attempt to speak for Walter Salm, there is certainly nothing surprising about the fact that he believes we are going to win the pennant for you can pay Athletic Park a visit most any day and find from fifteen hundred to twenty-five hundred people with that same idea and I know ONE of them is "sincere" and have reason to believe that a large number of the others are. When we consider the standing of the Gassers in the league it is not in the least discouraging to us to learn that Billy Smith thinks the Spudders are a weak road team.

"I am also at a loss to understand the basis for Mr. Smith's statement that the Spudders have been strengthened since July 1st, for while I am merely one fan and don't have any records to refer to, the only change I can recall since that time is the fact that we lost one of the best outfielders in the Texas league in the person of Harry Rothfuss. It may be that we will lose the services of Bob Bescher the remainder of the season in the field, but he can win ball games for us on the coaching line and we only hope Billy Smith has another "cast-off" we can pick up as Cecil Griggs has proven to be a very valuable man.

"It was my pleasure to read some few of the articles that were written about the home run that Kraft got at Fort Worth on July 4th, as well as to be there and see it and it was a hard hit ball, but should you care to offer a prize or even open your columns for articles on why this same player didn't get a home run at Wichita Falls the last time the Panthers played here, there are a number of us here that could give you more than one reason, one of which was that he struck out too many times, three times the first game.

"We recognize the Dallas Marines as foemen worthy of our steel, but believe when they leave we will at least have the edge on the series. Of course the race isn't over until September 18th, but I can't help but believe that by that time the Spudders will have a more comfortable lead than they have at present and they have no cause to be alarmed now. One of the characteristics of a real ball team is to be glorious in defeat and that is something the Panthers have never learned.

"Personally I appreciate the fact that Fort Worth brought to our state the 1920 Dixie Pennant, but feel that she should be given a little co-operation and not expected to do everything so the Slugging Spudders will bring it home for 1921.

"Yours truly,
'ROY E. CARTER."

Which, according to the most popular expression is Wichita Falls, is what is known as "pouring it on 'em." Billy Bee better lay off'n the Spudders, 'cause we not only got a championship ball club in this man's city but we've got some citizens also who shake a wicked flow of sarcasm!

All of us Carters is more of less clever, huh? Thanks for the applause!

Billy Smith thinks the Spudders have a "weak road team." Makes us yawn wearily. Is a team weak when it balances up on the latest batting averages, as follows:

Bescher leading the league with .362; Jake Miller in center field .296; Griggs in right .296. Kitchens and Bischoff, catchers, .313 and .326 respectively; Works at first .286; Clark at second .323; Tanner and Gross, shortstops, respectively .244 and .263; McDonald on third well over .300—is that team so weak, brothers?

And there isn't a twirler on the club who isn't going good right now, which is, pretty keen dope coupled with the fact the club has acquired Knadler, who showed plenty of stuff his first start, and Ramsey, whose Western league record is a mighty good one.

Yes, the Spudders are weak—and so is Jack Dempsey and Wladek Zybzsko.

Pop Boone still calls the Fort Worth club the "Rampagers"—but most of the "rampaging" is being done by the boys who are seeking alibis for the slump the Cats are in.

"Horseshoe Hurlers To Meet For Title"—Dallas News headline. Kindly enter Billy Smith's name in the event.

You don't see any hard-luck stories being hurled out of San Antonio by Johnny Nee, do you, or out of Beaumont by Pat Newnam? And yet there are two ball clubs that, we honestly believe, have suffered more genuine tough luck than any in the loop—but Johnny Nee and Pat Newnam are not the whining kind. There's the difference.

Nor did you hear Skipper Salm moaning about the tough "breaks" when the Spudders lost some badly-umpired games in Fort Worth, or when Froggy Rothfuss had to quit the game, or when Bob Bescher strained his leg before the opening of an important series.

Here endeth the first lesson.

DANNY FRUSH LAID ASIDE LATHER BRUSH TO WIN A CHANCE AT FEATHER CHAMPION

Two glimpses of Challenger Danny Frush.

A year or so ago Danny Frush was earning most of his living as a barber. Fighting was a side line. Then he decided to give all his time to battling and now is signed up to fight Johnny Kilbane, featherweight king, in a twelve-round decision battle in Johnny's home town of Cleveland next month. Tommy McGinty and Sam Deutsch, Cleveland promoters, are pulling off the bout, the first decision affair Kilbane has been in in five years.

Don't Be Alarmed Monday When Bedlam Apparently Breaks Loose; Here's What's Goin To Happen

Just a little tip to the citizens of Wichita Falls when the hour of 11 a. m. rolls around next Monday. If there is anything unusual in the nature of the sounds do not become alarmed and seek shelter in a convenient "dug out" nor become panic stricken.

There will be no repetition of the San Francisco earthquake (which no Frisco citizen will call anything but a fire), neither are the Germans invading Texas, not the 18th amendment annulled, nor the price of oil gone to $3.50 a barrel, nor anything else funny happening.

It is this—and as Poe solemnly remarked, "and "nothing more." Starting Monday there will be shown at the Empress Theater "The Whistle," William S. Hart's latest feature. Fearing that someone might not see the billboards and the newspaper ads announcing the picture, Manager Will T. Page, an ingenious cus, hit on the scheme of arranging for every whistle in Wichita Falls, that could raise up enough steam to make a noise," from the ear-splitting fire whistle at the round house to the puny peanut roaster whistle next door to the empress, to cut it loose at 11 a. m. Monday.

To secure permission from the various businesses, including the fire department, laundries, factories, and every known whistle existing in Wichita Falls, Mr. Page says he waded through enough red tape to do credit to the insurance and compensation division, but finally was able to put it over.

VON ELM WINS GOLF CLASSIC OVER BROMFIELD

By Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 13.—George Von Elm, 20-year-old Salt Lake City golfer, completed his phenomenal rise from caddy to trans-Mississippi Golf association champion this afternoon on the thirteenth green of the Denver Country club course, where he won the championship by defeating Dr. L. D. Bromfield of Denver, Colorado state champion, 8 up and 6 to go.

ALL-AMERICAN END MAY NOT BE ABLE TO PLAY THIS FALL

By Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., Aug. 13.—Coach Robert Zuppke of the University of Illinois football team is in a quandary. Carney, all-American end, who injured his knee in the Ohio State battle last year, may not be able to play again.

Physicians who have been administering to Carney's wrenched leg say that even with an operation he will not be in shape for football, and that his chances to compete in basketball are slim. Carney is next year's basketball leader.

Dick Reichle, former end on the Great Lakes Naval Training Station team, is being groomed for the job, to pair with Hellstrom who played the other wing last season.

WHAT SWORD GAINS, SWORD MUST LOSE

By Associated Press.

HONOLULU, Aug. 13.—Dr. David Starr Jordan, chancellor of Stanford University in an address here last night before the Pan-Pacific educational conference of nations bordering on the Pacific declared that no nation ever gained anything by the sword which did not later lose by the sword. He cited as examples Prussia and France during the time of Napoleon.

Who's Getting the "Butter and Egg Money" Now?

—When eggs were 12 cents a dozen and print butter 18 cents a pound the farmer's wife received the "butter and egg money" FOR PIN MONEY.

—Those were the days when shaves cost a dime—gasoline brought 9 cents a gallon—ice cream sodas, any flavor, were 5 cents each—cooks received $4 a week and a respectable suit of men's clothes sold for $18.00.

—Today, that same respectable suit, embellished in style, improved in material, refined in manufacture, trade marked, guaranteed, and nationally known is SELLING IN THIS STORE FOR $25.00, $35.00, $50.00 WHILE EIGHT TENTHS OF THE OTHER LIFE NECESSITIES STAY PERCENTAGES HIGHER IN COMPARISON.

—AND STILL THE CLOTHIER IS BEING PANNED HARD AND RAKED OVER THE COALS OFTEN FOR KEEPING UP HIS PRICES.

—Men and Women of Wichita Falls, this homely editorial is being plainly penned to impress upon you the plain truth. THE PRICES OF MEN'S AND WOMEN'S WEAR HAVE DROPPED—NOT BY THE THIMBLEFUL BUT BY THE DIPPERFUL and it only takes a comparative observation of a thousand and one other lines to see that the clothier, retailer and manufacturer, has done and is still doing more than his share to bring back the days when a seat at your favorite movie cost a nickel.

On real estate is what we HAVE MADE. These borrowers are paying 10 per cent interest on this money and repaying the principal $7.50 a month on the $1,000 borrowed. Our saving depositors are the ones who are receiving this 10 per cent interest. Some of them save 50c a month, others save $100 a month, others deposit several thousand dollars at one time, all receive the same interest in proportion to the amount they have deposited. There is no safer security than real estate first mortgages which we have. With pardonable pride, we do not believe a building and loan association in America has a better Board of Directors than this one. Sign the coupon below and learn how to start a savings account.

FIRE DESTROYS FRAME RESIDENCE

Fire destroyed an unoccupied one-story wooden house belonging to the Patton Furniture company at 2309 Seventh street about 12:15 o'clock Saturday night, causing a damage estimated at around $3,000. The house, which was furnished, had been rented until about two weeks ago.

Neighbors said the fire started with flames bursting from the rear roof, spreading very quickly and the whole house was enveloped in a short time. Two lines of hose were put on the fire and it was extinguished soon after the arrival of the fire department, but too late to save anything.

The cause of the fire is unknown.

KANSAS CITY BAKER HAS IMPLICIT FAITH IN THIS CITY AND WILL OPEN SHOP

Complete faith in the future of Wichita Falls, and the decision to locate one of their bakeries in this city, came to the official heads of the Nafziger Baking company, one of the largest in the United States, only after two months of a thorough and exhaustive investigation—an investigation conducted not only in communities expected to be friendly to the city, but in some communities which might have been thought to be unfriendly, R. L. Nafziger, president of the company, declared Saturday to a representative of the Record News.

All reports from both kinds of sources were in agreement, Mr. Nafziger said.

The sources of the investigation were chiefly bankers, not only in Wichita Falls, but in cities nearby and some even further away. Another source was through a large lumber company, whose reports on Wichita Falls were extremely favorable.

Varied Resources

"These inquiries convinced us that Wichita Falls not only has a great resource in it's oil production, but has other resources, such as agriculture and an ideal location in a wonderful territory, which are equally as valuable," Mr. Nafziger said.

"Based on these investigations we closed negotiations for a local plant which was for sale and which we subsequently purchased—the plant of the Wichita Falls Baking company, at 1007 Travis—near Kemp Kort," he said.

"We expect to have the biggest opportunity in this town of any where we have located a plant," he declared.

"We don't expect to accomplish this at the expense of the other baker's of the city," he added. "We expect to increase our trade in Wichita Falls chiefly through the quality of our bread winning housewives who bake their own bread to using baker's bread. That may sound like "laying it on" a little too much, but it is an actual fact that in every place where we have gone into we have not only built up a rapidly growing business, but our business has actually resulted in a growth of business of every other baker in town."

The company, when its travelling organization shall have an opportunity of getting it it's work, expects to do it's part in carrying the name of Wichita Falls abroad through the district, Mr. Nafziger said. "We expect to have our bread hampers, sent out from the Wichita Falls plant, unloaded at practictally every town within a radius of 100 miles of here every morning in the year," he said.

Eight Baking Plants

The Nafziger bakeries now number eight, the parent institution being in Kansas City. Both there and in St. Louis they have the largest business in the places. Other bakeries, in addition to the one in Wichita Falls, are located at Springfield, Mo., Sedalia, Mo., Muskogee, Okla., Burlington, Iowa, and Decatur, Illinois.

The Wichita Falls plant, while one of the most modern and complete in Texas, Mr. Nafziger said, is being completely overhauled. The delivery service is also being reorganized, and the distinctive Nafziger trucks have already made their appearance.

"One of the first principles is to keep our plants as clean as any housekeepers kitchens," he said. "We have a standing invitation to the public to visit our plants at any time so that our customers can see that is so.

"Aside from this we depend for sales volume on the quality of our bread, and intelligent and thorough advertising.

"We have associated with our company, as general superintendent of manufacture, G. H. Martens, recognized throughout the country as the nation's first baker. For years he was in New York City with the General Baking Company. He has been with us for three years.

"A central laboratory, a complete and rather expensive one, is also maintained by our company to maintain the quality of our bread.

Small Beginning

"Although we buy all the materials we are able to in the cities where our bakeries are located every shipment is tested in this laboratory." The president of this company is a youthful business man both in years and appearance—he is only 33 years of age. But he is the founder of the business, and he started it 15 years ago as the driver of a single wagon. Last year the bread sales alone of the company were over $5,000,000.

The head of the local branch will be W. L. Mulligan, formerly of Kansas City. Mr. Mulligan has been connected with the company for a number of years—until taking charge of this plant as the sales manager of the plant in Kansas City.

SHE WANTED HER AD DISCONTINUED

"Sa-ay," a harassed voice came over the telephone at the want ad counter of the Record News.

"I want you to cut that ad of mine out right now. That room's been rented since this morning, when the ad first came out, but I haven't had a bit of peace all day, folks calling up, yes, it's paid up for four times, but that don't make no difference, I've got to have some rest."

This little incident has two morals.

An increased demand for places to live means increased activity and prosperity for the town.

And, incidentally, "the Record News gets results."

Not What You Get But What You Request

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO Aug. 13—Mrs. Lillian Lebello, granted a divorce today from Anthony Lebello, employe of a gasoline filling station, will receive $75 a month alimony because, she said, her husband makes $200 extra a month by cheating motorists.

"How can you expect your husband to pay $75 a month alimony when his salary is only $165 a month?" Judge Samuel Stough asked.

"Oh, he makes about $200 a month extra," the witness answered. "Motorists pay for the amount of gasoline they order, not for the amount the filler puts in their tanks. In this difference is where my husband makes his extra money."

SARA COWEN'S TRAGIC DEATH RECALL WILD CAREERS OF OTHER RICH AMERICAN GIRLS

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—Sara Cowen, thirty-three, daughter of the late John K. Cowen, one-time president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, died in New York a few days ago. An overdose of drugs, of which she was an addict, is believed to have been the immediate cause of her death. Alcoholism was also a contributing cause.

Another young woman of good family, whose life was once full of promise, came to the end of a "gay life but a short one."

The announcement of Sara Cowen's death will recall to many the somewhat similar case of Bettina Gerard and Florence Schenck, who both fell from rather high estate, became victims of fast living, with drink a great factor in their certain moral and physical decay.

Bettina Shocked Even Broadway.

At thirty-six Bettina Gerard died, leaving behind a reputation that shocked even blase Broadway. As Betty Ordway, of Washington, daughter of General Ordway, this girl, who possessed great beauty and charm, found that the life of a society belle did not afford the excitement she craved, so she decided for a stage career.

The beautiful Bettina never needed a press agent. Her own exploits, carried out in a perfectly natural and official manner required no touch of any writer's imagination. But she became a slave of drink and was often arrested on charges of intoxication and disorderly conduct, till finally she died a pitable wreck.

During the years of her mad career her father, it is said, died of a broken heart. Her husband, thr first, since she had seven altogether, was a millionaire. Her wedding to him was a great event; but only three months after the brilliant ceremony the bridegroom asked divorce.

She might have succeeded upon the stage with all her natural charms were it not for her enemy and bad habit, drink.

Florence Schenck's Wild Career.

Florence Schenck was another who, after sad experience, warned girls against drink. The daughter of Dr. Powhatan Schenck, of Norfolk, Va., she ran away from home with a horse trainer, employe of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, had a varied career, finally coming home to die after her father had removed her from a sanitarium. Like many who have followed similar modes of life, sought solace and pleasure in drink, but ended by warning others against it. To a woman who once went to interview her she said:

"Tell girls that in the wine cup lies death and destruction. Once in the toils, no escape. It is the first step, and it is fathomless and pitiless.

"The girl who drinks is lost; she knows not what she does. She is not responsible.

"Oh, those girls who run away from home and take up with strange idols, no human tongue can tell what they suffer.

"Tell them," she begged, "that when they become physically wrecked and can add nothing more to the amusements of the tenuter they will be deserted and humiliated."

This may be a late day to repeat the warnings against drink, yet now we hear a great deal about another pernicious habit, that of drug taking. In another period Sara Cowen, who died a few days ago, might have had the drink habit. In this day she gave herself up to the influence of narcotic drugs.

Clara Ward's Tempestuous Life.

Still another fascinating young American woman, Clara Ward, left her titled husband, Prince de Chimay, when the strains of the gypsy violinist Rigo's music called her. She was the daughter of Eber B. Ward of Detroit, at one time the richest man in Michigan. He himself was eccentric, but his daughter surpassed his oddities. She gave up her education in Europe at seventeen when she was heiress to $4,000,000 and married Prince de Chimay. Many affairs of the heart were credited to her.

One night in a Paris cafe she heard Rigo's alluring notes. Not long after the two dressed as gypsies, eloped and finally married after the Prince obtained a divorce. It was said Rigo stole her from the embraces of kings. But "gypsy love" proved very expensive for Clara Ward.

The American Princess bought Rigo a palace on the Nile, a private menagerie, a prince's wine cellar, Arabian horses and other substantial expressions of love.

Later she left Rigo for a porter she met on a train in Italy, and from then on Rigo felt free to seek other admirers.

Not long ago in an east side restaurant, where he fiddled for sightseers, Rigo was informed of the extravagant Clara Ward's death. He expressed his regret, but was not profoundly sorrowful for the woman who took him up in such luxurious fashion only to leave him later.

To all these young women death seems to come as welcome release from the disillusionment and accumulated worries that have crowded into their short lives.

CAN ENFORCE CHECK LAWS FULTON SAYS

Existing laws governing the giving of bad checks can be enforced, and convictions obtained, should the merchants who have been plagued in this fashion desire it, declared E. L. Fulton, county attorney, Saturday. "We have obtained convictions where the victims of the checks have appeared to prosecute," Mr. Fulton said, "and will continue to do so where we get co-operation from the victims.

"Too often, however, when prosecutions start, the defendants make the checks good and the merchants refuse to appear and give evidence. This is hardly toting fair with us, for it really amounts to their simply using the county attorney's office for a collection agency."

Widely varied luck seems to greet the merchants in this matter of "hot" checks, according to the experience of some of the merchants—one reporting that the business was hardly ever stung with one, while another reports it a matter of concern and really serious loss, with any number of others between these extremes.

All are agreed on one point—that in the case of an unintentional overdraft that the person with the good credit rating doesn't give a bad check.

One merchant says that he gets but few—another that he picks up one frequently, but collects nearly all and never has to prosecute—another gets a good many and collects about 60 per cent, prosecuting sometimes with varying results—while a fourth, as noted above, says that he gets a good many and has not gotten the results that should be gotten through prosecution.

The latter indicates that they are about tired of it, however, and intend to take active steps, with co-operation of county authorities, to break up the practice, where it is apparent that the matter is not one of overdraft unintentionally, or careless writing of the check on the wrong blank.

NEGRESSES VAMP SHERIFF SMITH

Sh-h-h.

With the above exclamation two negresses hailed a passing auto Saturday night with two men in the front seat. The auto drove up to the curb.

"You ain't no law is you?" one of the dusky pair asked as they climbed into the rear seat.

With no answer to the query the auto drove a few blocks and stopped at the county jail. Understanding came to one of the women and she made a dash for liberty. A scare shot from one of the men stopped her.

The two men were Sheriff Smith and Deputy Tanner. The women spent the night in the county bastile.

PLAN TRAIN TO FORMALLY PAY RESPECT

Wichita Falls' celebration of the opening of the railroad connection with Breckenridge, through the extension of the Wichita Falls and Southern, will come on September 15, according to an announcement by J. W. Cantham, Jr., secretary of the Chamber fo Commerce, who is already working on plans for the trip.

The reason for the placing of this date nearly a month behind the actual opening of the railroad service, on August 18, is given by Mr. Chatham as a desire on the part of the organization to have this trip eclipse even the efforts of Wichita Falls on any previous similar occasion. It is believed that this can better be achieved through naming the date in the early part of the fall rather than during the dullest period of the summer. It is expected that a special train with several hundred local business men will make the trip.

"PLANTED" PINTS CAUSES NEGRESS TO BE ARRESTED

Three pint bottles of whisky found "planted" in the garden resulted in the arrest Saturday of Nizzie Brown, negress, living at 311 Pecan street. The arrest was made by Rangers McCormick and Gonzaullas.

The officers noticed the freshly turned up ground, and becoming suspicious, threw back the dirt, revealing the bottles. A charge of having liquor in her possession was filed against the woman.

MEETING OF COUNCIL WILL BE EXCITING

Monday night's meeting of the council, although only a bare quorum is in town, promises more or less fireworks, if present indications hold to the end. Said fireworks are expected to proceed from some of the recent shakeups, which are to come for discussion at that time.

This concerns the request of Police Commissioner Fitts for the resignation of Jules E. Ehlers, assistant corporation clerk and acting day desk sergeant at the police station, and his decision to abolish the post of night travelers aid at the Union station.

The former action was taken several days ago. The latter within the last few days, the night traveler's aid being informed by letter that the position would be discontinued after the fifteenth of the month.

Opposition to these actions on the part of other members of the council, who have acquiesced in every replacement to date of an appointment of Commissioner Bralley by one of Commissioner Fitts', giving the latter a free hand in the police department, is based, according to expressions of a member of the council, on the ground that both positions are outside of Mr. Fitts' proper jurisdiction.

Clerk Handles Money.

The assistant corporation clerk, who handles the money collected by the police court, is appointed by the council under the city charter, it is pointed out, and properly belongs in the city clerk's department, for the charter concentrates the handling of all city funds in this one department. Recently, at the suggestion of Mr. Fitts—withdrawn when reminded that the official did not properly belong to the police department, but immediately favored by every other member of the council—this official was ordered placed under bond, as his chief, the city clerk, has always been.

The night traveller's aid, although giving information and offering help to all travelers, is for the particular purpose of aiding women and young girls travelling alone, it is stated.

As an institution the traveller's aid, at first only part of the day, was originated by the federated Missionary societies of the city, and later, shortly after it's organization, taken over by the Y. W. C. A. Through lack of funds, and on account of the nature of the work being deemed to properly belong to the city, the expense of the night traveller's aid was taken over by the council, on agreement with the women's organizations concerned. In order to confer proper authority, the night traveller's aid was sworn in as city policeman.

Strong for Institution.

"The traveller's aid is an institution which has, as a preventative agency, done more good than all the policemen in Wichita Falls," energetically declared a local woman who has been active in work of womens organizations here.

"Time after time prompt action by one of the other of the traveller's aids has prevented young girls from taking missteps that would have been fatal, or, in less aggravated cases, in preventing them from falling into questionable surroudings. This has not been so in every case, no human agency could be perfect, but any one or two of the actual cases should repay the entire amount the city has expended.

"And this does not take into account the aid that has been extended travellers, both men and old women and children who have been lost, sick, stranded, or in the case of the latter, running away from home."

Commissioner Fitts was reported out of town Saturday, and a Record News representative was unsuccessful in getting in touch with him.

On a former occasion, however, he said that the changes were being made in connection with a policy of retrenchment in the police department. He said that he had cut expenses a considerable amount since going into office, and running expenses were within the budget at this time, but that further retrenchment would be necessary if the department were to be within the budget at the end of the year, as it was over when he assumed charge.

Ehlers was reported planning to call for a public hearing, the right of any city employe under the city charter. Seen Saturday, however, he stated that he did not know whether he would do this or not, as the new angle on the case might make that unnecessary.

RECEIPTS AT FORT WORTH VERY LIGHT

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Aug. 13.—Only 300 head of cattle appeared as fresh receipts today and of that number 156 head were on through billing but several cars of holdover steers and calves were on sale. The cattle market was slow but steady with the week's decline. Calves were disposed of on an active market for the first time this week.

Eight cars of hogs were here, but half the run was held over for Monday's bidding in anticipation of a higher market. Sales were steady, two cars being at $10. The count called for 500 head.

Steady prices were paid for a run of 300 head of sheep. Wethers brought $4.50. Quotations:

SHORTS GIVE STOCKS SOME NEW STRENGTH

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Covering of short contracts gave the stock market an appearance of strength for a time today, but the movement was of short duration and in the last hour operations by the bears were renewed, advancing quotations failed to stimulate buying. Net changes were narrow.

On the decline a few weak spots were uncovered, for the most part among industrials which were soft on the recessions earlier in the week. United States Rubber preferred broke 6½@8¼; Continental Can 2½; Central Leather 2⅝ and Maniti, 2⅜ points, all making new low records for the year. American Can preferred, Central Leather, preferred, and Colorado Fuel also were heavy.

In the exchange market the feature was a decline of six points in marks to a new low price for the movement of 115. This heaviness was ascribed to the statement of the imperial bank of Germany revealing a large increase in paper circulation. Other exchanges were narrow and irregular.

Great stability was shown in the bond market. Representative railroad issues returned in some instances to higher prices and there was a cessation of recent selling of reorganization mortgages.

FROST GIVES WHEAT PRICE FIRMER TONE

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Reports of frost in the northwest put firmness into the otherwise steady wheat market today. Prices closed barely firm 1-4 to 3-4 net higher with September at 1.24 1-4 to 1.24 1-2 and December at 1.26 to 1.26 1-4. Corn closed unchanged to a shade lower with September at 56 5-8 to 56 3-4 while oats lost 1-4 to 1-2c. The wheat market remained comparatively stationary up to the final half hour when there was a little flurry due to short covering. Reports that Germany had purchased 500,000 bushels of corn apparently had little effect on that market as December corn again touched its lowest mark of the season.

Oats lacked support and the market remained dull up to the last hour where then was a brief demand for spot oats and the cash offerings displayed a slightly steadier tone.

Provisions averaged slightly higher and closed steady.

PRODUCTION PARTIALLY RECOVERS

Pipeline runs from the Wichita Falls district this past week experienced a partial recovery over the three thousand barrel loss of the previous week's daily average, the runs showing a daily increase amounting to 1,250 barrels for the weekly period. This can be attributed to more steady operation of leases, the working over and cleaning out of pumpers, and a slight increase in refineries demands. The total is around 76,000 barrels daily.

The amount of new production, through newly completed wells, is negligible, except in the South Bend pool.

MILLING USE SENDS COTTON PRICE FALLING

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Disappointing figures on domestic mill consumption of July led to some scattering liquidation in the cotton market here this morning while there was also southern selling. These offerings were not heavy, but they sent prices off from an opening advance and the close was barely steady, net unchanged to 4 points lower, except for July which was two points higher. December contracts held off from 13.75 to 13.60, closing at the lowest.

The market opened steady at an advance of 8 to 13 points on bullish week-end reviews of the goods trade and continued crop complaints from the southwest.

There was some buying for continental trade account, including a demand from houses with French connections, but it seemed to be pretty readily supplied around 13.35 for October and 13.76 for January. At any rate, prices soon turned easier under scattered liquidation, and offerings became a little more active after the publication of the census report on supply and distribution. This placed domestic consumption for July at only 410,656 bales against 525,489 for the same month last year, and 461,656 for the previous month. The figures were below the forecast and evidently led to liquidation by some of the local longs. Most of the late selling, however, was believed to come from the south and while offerings from that source were not heavy, they found comparatively few buyers around the ring. October sold off to 13.18 and January to 13.63 with active months generally showing net losses of about 2 to 4 points.

Wichita county's new wells amount to only a few hundred barrels.

Production based on pipeline run figures, for each pool follows:

All Car Owners

who want to learn how to compare cars are invited

To Make These Tests

There are 12 vital tests used by automotive engineers in judging cars. Their method is now available to the public—simplified but conclusive.

No man can really make genuine comparisons without employing this method. All other ways are superficial and frequently mislead.

To further introduce this new and approved method of comparison, we announce a second annual

Marmon Demonstration Week
August 15th to 20th

This provides an occasion for every car owner in this city to know the remarkable qualities of the Marmon 34, as Marmon owners know them.

This invitation is open to all—please do not hesitate even though you are not in the market for a car. Our aim is to familiarize all car owners with this new method of comparing cars by score card. Those who accept our invitation will not be importuned to buy. Telephone now and arrange for the appointment. The demonstration will start either from our headquarters or from your home or office, whichever is most convenient for you.

ASK ME

Nosey Frances—You are behind the times not to know that Florence Vidor has been made a star. She is playing in "Hail the Woman." I do not know what has become of the "Thanbouser Kid." Margaret Snow is playing in "Lavender and Old Lace." As for Naomi Childers, I agree with you that she is a splendid actress. Perhaps she will be made a star. I really can give you no reason why she has not yet arrived at stardom.

Bubbles — May Allison's latest picture is "The Last Card," not "The Lost Chord."

Chick—Peggy Hyland is married to Fred Granville. I think I reported to some of my correspondents in this column only a short time ago that Peggy was not married. But then you see this is quite a recent affair, and they never told me a word about their engagement.

Howler—"Little Italy" is the name of Alice Brady's present picture. Oh, yes, Alice has been married quite some time. Her husband is James Crane, son of Dr. Frank Crane.

Tina—"The Lotus Eater" has not been released. And by the way, the name has been changed to "The Hidden Paradise." That word "paradise," seems to be as popular in tiles at the present moment "passion" was a few months ago. I wonder if there is any special significance.

Rogo—You are entirely correct about Mary Pickford's appearance in "The Warrens of Virginia." That wa sone of her very first pictures in the old Biograph days.

Flushing—Pinero wrote a play "The Thunderbolt," which was produced in the New York stage some ten years ago. John Emerson, the well known scenario writer, appeared on the stage before taking up writing as a profession.

Levant—"Virgin Paradise" is Pearl White's present picture. The cast includes Robert Elliott, J. Thornton Baston, Alan Edwards, Henrietta Floyd, Grace Beaumont, Mary Barnelle, Lynn Pratt and Charles Fulton.

Geneva—Yes, Jack Holt has been made a star. His first starring picture will be entitled "The Call of the North," an adaptation of Stewart Edward Whites' novel of Alaska.

Scout—Edmund Gurney is an English actor who has played in the support of such stars as Sir Herbert Beerbohn Tree, Sir Henry Irving, and Mrs. Pat Campbell. His latest role on the stage was in "Deburau." He is to play the parts of David's father in "Tol'able David," Richard Barthelmess forthcoming picture.

The French government is making preparations to sell the greatest collection of stamps which was ever made, valued at $2,000,000. It comprised the collection of Baron Ferrary, who died in 1917, and by the terms of his will the collection was left to the Berlin Postal Museum. The collection was in Paris at the time and it was seized as alien property.

With the Women of Today

Miss Anna I. Baker

Miss Anna I. Baker of Paducah, Ky., occupies a unique position for a woman and demonstrates most clearly that her sex is able to qualify along lines hereto considered mans exclusive domain. In addition to directing the towing of millions of railroad ties annually along the Mississippi, Miss Baker is assistant manager of the transportation department of the Ayer and Lord Tie company, and until recently owned and operated her own steamboat, the Cowling.

Miss Baker knows railroad crossties from forest to right of way and is equally familiar with the marine way and dry docks which the company operates at Paducah. Record time has been made by her on certain distinctive repairs on steamboats and no piece of boat or large building is completed without her O. K.

When Miss Baker first took up the task of making a place for women in this unusual line of work, she entered the services of the Ayer and Lord Tie Company, now reputed to be the largest in the world, under the management of her father, the late Capt, Henry Baker, a veteran of the Civil War.

Miss Baker was only a wee slip of a girl when she went into the office of her father to help out in a stress of work, but the lure of the business held her to such an extent that she quietly absorbed every bit of tie and timber information she could find. One day she startled her father by displaying a lumber acumen that seemed uncanny until he discovered that she had allowed no opportunity to escape of studying the timber field and its resources.

It has also been her province to handle strikes that have occurred.

She purchases all supplies, as well and handles millions of dollars in the course of a year, without an error

LOCAL UNIT STANDS AT HEAD OF ALL LINES OF WORK DONE BY LEGION'S WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Tuesday of this week, at the regular meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Pat Carrigan Post, American Legion, a call was read from the State Hospital Committee of the Woman's Auxiliary for summer pajamas, for the patients in the hospitals, all of them returned soldiers.

Friday evening there were twenty-three suits of hospital garments finished and ready to be sent to the hospital committee, the first installment of the response of the Wichita Falls unit. Monday night, the unit officers state, there will be that many more garments ready for a second shipment.

This immediate response was made possible through the assistance of women not members of the auxiliary because of the limits of eligibility, and members, which has made it possible for the Wichita Falls unit to stand at the head of the Texas units, when ever a call for service came in.

The latest bulletin issued by the State Hospital committee shows the Wichita Falls unit 100 per cent in responding to all calls made for service, and standing at the head of all units in practically every kind of work.

The local contribution to the fund through Memorial Day poppy sales, $130 was exceeded by one unit only, that of the Thomas Dismukes Post, Houston, which sold $150.

The Flower Fund, for placing wreaths on the coffins of all returned soldier dead, distributed from San Antonio, also has the Wichita Falls unit as one of the first, and largest contributors.

The donation of the famous Ma Burdick doughnut and other goodies to the Houston hospital, the adoption of two of the patients in the Houston institution, and the further gifts of fans and money are also recorded in the latest bulletin.

New members are being added each week, it is announced, and the secretary, Mrs. R. C. Thaxton urges that all those eligible who have not already joined, do so immediately, and assist in the very necessary relief work that the women must do at present, in the lack of any government facilities for caring for the incidentals. An invitation is also extended to women who will sew on the hospital garments, to be at the Salvation Army citadel at any time that is convenient on Monday. The work on the second shipment will commence at 8:30 but workers will be appreciated at any time during the day.

Making Americans, Work of Young Missouri Girl Officer

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 13—Making Americans" is the work of Miss Marguerite Zoff, only woman naturalization examiner in the United States, who has charge here of the Federal Bureau of Naturalization. Her appointment to the position was made following her graduation from Washington university in 1918.

With women in possession of the vote and with more women of all nationalities coming to America to take out first and second papers the importance of Miss Zoff's duties is growing.

Through efforts of the St. Louis League of Women voters the foreign-born women are awakening to their responsibilities and privileges as citizens. From St. Louis' melting pot of Russian, Polish, German and Greek women are coming many applications for naturalization papers.

There is pending before congress, Miss Zoff explains, a bill seeking to force foreign-born women coming to the United States to take out papers similar to those required for their husbands.

There are many unmarried foreign women seeking positions in this country, Miss Zoff explains, making the situation complex and more easily handled by women because they are better qualified to unravel the complexities.

Miss Zoff's work is much demanded in Oklahoma, Kansas, Arkansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois, especially where naturalization problems of women are concerned. Women are rapidly advancing to the need of taking out papers to protect themselves as citizens, declares Miss Zoff.

"My work has its humorous side," says Miss Zoff. "Under the fourteenth amendment the right of citizenship descends to all children born here of foreign parents. There is a case pending now awaiting the decision of the father to take out his naturalization papers. Three children of a 'household divided' were born abroad, while three others were born in this country. The question is whether the three foreign-born youths will be forced to take out their papers upon attaining their majority."

GOOD OLD STONE JAR

A stone jar is peculiarly useful for many reasons. Do you keep one about handy? It is just the thing in which to soak overnight, in strong salt water, the new gingham dress before it is washed for the first time. It will make no iron rust spots. Beans are better for being cooked in a stone jar.

If you have a tough piece of meat, sear it first to keep the juices in and then cook it long and slowly with vegetables in a tightly covered stone jar. You will have an inexpensive, delicious and nourishing meal, and the jar, after a good soaking, will wash easily.

The stone jar is ideal for use in canning season; to make pickles in, to drain the jelly bag over, to let any prepared fruit stand overnight for canning the next morning when you feel fresher.

Aluminum and glass have invaded our cupboards and crowded out the other metals, but the stone jar is too good a friend to release. Hank on to two or three sizes of stone jars.

THE RANGER SCOUT

ELEVENTH DO'INS.

"Ricka chicka boom! Ricka chicka boom!
Ricka chicka, rika chicka, boom, boom! boom!
Are we it? Well, I guess!
Eleventh troop, eleventh troop, yes! yes! yes!"

Just look here, and see who has joined the ranks of Courier contributors, the old eleventh troop! I always felt like that troop would wake one of these days and show some of you fellows where to get off. Welcome to our fold, eleventh troopers. Now that we have you, we intend to keep you. Nuf sed.

According to the announcement of Scoutmaster Garrett, the eleventh troop will plunge headlong into one of the momentuous membership contests ever staged in the history of scouting in Wichita Falls. They are planning to have a full troop once in a short while. Of course, the losing side will entertain promiscuously the victors. Ah! When do we eat, boys? Don't forget the Ranger scout. He takes exercise three times daily, also.

Being as the troop has not been meeting regularly during the summer, the scoutmaster did not have any great amount of news for us, but he has promised to whale the "dickens" out of their troop reporter unless he turns up at scout headquarters every Tuesday afternoon with a squib for the Courier. Fine! We'll keep our weather eye pealed for said reporter. Adieu.

Echoes From the Sixth Troop.

Business consumed most of the time at our meeting last Friday night. We decided to send a baseball team to Iowa Park Thursday to play a scout team there. Payton Thurman was appointed captain of the team. He started things going immediately by calling a practice on Saturday morning.

Our scout school was to have taken a trip to the open Monday afternoon but several things intered with our plans so the trip was postponed until Wednesday afternoon.

The scoutmaster sprung some new songs on us. In just a few more weeks we are going to lay claim to being the singing troop of Wichita Falls.

On Friday the nineteenth we will have another mothers' night. This time the mothers' club will be completely organized and their work for the fall and winter explained to them. Every scout of the troop is going to pull for his mother to join the club. Every mother in the club by September fifteenth is our aim.

If some of you dead troops want to learn how to do things watch our smoke! We'll tell 'em!

Troop Four.

Well, here we are at last. We have no apologies to make for not having published reports of our meeting, but we must say that we have been on the job. We have been having our regular meeting each week with at least one-half to three-fourths of a troop present. Several of the boys have been working on their tests, passing points in first class, second class and several passing the tenderfoot tests. We have had several hikes, ice cream suppers, and on last Friday Troop with several Juniors as their guests went to the Downing swimming pool and enjoyed a couple of hours inaquatic sports, and after the swim the mothers of the troop four boys had about two dozen big watermelons all split up and believe me they did not last long. We promise that we will let you hear from us more often so that you know that we are really doing more than you hear about us through the columns. We had the pleasure last night of helping Troop One devour five gallons of ice cream and after eating the cream enjoyed several games, and the spirit which prevailed among the boys was most assuredly convincing that "a scout is a friend to all, and a brother to every other scout." Come, Troop One, we sure did appreciate that treat, and we assure you now that we will reciprocate some time in the future.

We are lacking in news for this week, but we hope to have a good writeup of our "happenings" next week. We just wanted you to know that we were not really "ground hogs" but just had not sent reports of our activities.

JOHN KEEVIL,
Troop Scribe.

Gastronimical Powers of Troop One Scouts Tested By Giant Freezer of Ice Cream.

Friday night the members of Troop One were treated to an old-time ice cream feast. Consumptive powers of the boys were sorely tried. Some boys in their hurry to assimilate the cream forgot how to count so far that they are as high as seven or eight saucers of cream. Troop One lived up to the fourth point of the Scout law, in that they invited Troop Four over to participate in the feast. It did not take long for the cream to go. Aside from officiating in the downfall of the freezer of cream, several games were played by members of both troops. After which the boys adjourned with smiling faces filled to their utmost capacity.

"SITTING BULL,"
Troop One Reporter.

Esqualaw Says:
If you are on your back, roll over.

Scout George Bolin, erstwhile reporter of Troop One and one of the local literary lights, has been appointed official "Bus Boy" for the Courier. In that capacity he will take care of all knocks, kicks, hits or complaints anyone may have to make about the Courier. Call on George, don't bother the Ranger scout. He's always busy.

Let's give three cheers for Mister Ford, manager for the Olympic and Empress theaters. He's going to entertain every mother's son of us at the Empress theater next Thursday afternoon at 2:30 p. m. Come on, fellows, make them loud and lusty. Whoopie!

Where is the scout who doesn't care to see Harry Carey dash in with his trusty steed, rescue the beautiful heroine and lick the stuffins out of the villian?

George Bolin will be there on the front row applauding every scene. Just watch him!

Our scout executive will have to get him a tent next week. Understand he has sold his home and must move out pronto.

Joseph Fallin and a few more scouts who think they are carpenters will have another chance to demonstrate their proficiency along that line as soon as the executive locates his new home.

We treat that scout truck awfully mean. Build it a nice home and then executive has to sell out. Now the poor thing will have to take the weather until another house can be built.

NEARLY A HUNDRED EAGLES IN JULY

From June 18 to July 28, 95 Scouts qualified for Eagle Scout rank. These boys are from all over the country, north, south, east and west. Three of them, Ok Soo Long, Young Kuen Shin and James Shin, are from Honolulu. Knoxville, Tenn., has the largest number of new eagles for the month, 15 boys from that city having registered for that rank at national council headquarters during the period indicated.

Incidentally, possibly the fact that only eagle scouts were allowed to go the July trip to Washington was an added incentive to some of these boys to get in the last of the 21 eagle requirements. There are 32 scouts of this rank in Knoxville and all of them, accompanied by Scout Commissioner Gore and several members of the local court of honor, were in on the great trip which was made by automobile and truck, camping en route.

Scouts, don't forget that big open air meeting, free for all and room for all, that Big Chief Taylor is going to hold with the assistance of the local scouts next Friday evening at Bellevue Park. Every scout will be expected to be present and if possible in uniform. The program for the evening will include games, yells, songs and other things that will put pep into the heart of anyone present. So do not fail to be present.

The scouts will have another summer camp "at home" and Big Chief Taylor wants to tell us all about it while there is yet time, for he is going to hold it the first of next month, just before school begins.

The meeting will begin between 7:45 and 8 p. m. Friday, August 19, everybody welcome and all scouts requested to be present. Scoutmasters, too!

A SCOUT IS FRIENDLY

By Rev. J. W. LOVING

Scout law number four—"A scout is friendly. He is a friend to all and a brother to every other scout." Every association or order of men must have some bond of unity, some intelligent understanding of the relationships inherring in, and growing out of, their union. Without such there can be at best only a mob which will lead to failure and disintegration. We are not now discussing the question as to whether there is a distinct service which needs to be rendered, is not being rendered by another organization and which is being rendered by scouthood. We take that as settled and pass on.

In the amplification of the fourth law of scouthood we discuss the spirit in which the order is to do its work. A scout is friendly. He is a friend to all. Dr. H. Clay Trumbull wrote a number of able and helpful books. One of his best is, "Friendship, the Master of Passion." He goes somewhat into detail in analyzing and treating the elements in friendship. We cannot go into such here. Mr. Emerson wrote one of his charming essays on friendship. Others in song and story have set forth the attractiveness, the advantages, the grip of friendship. It has been said that a friend in a second conscience you are not afraid to think aloud in his presence, you are in no danger of being betrayed. Mr. Trumbull says that friendship is gainful but costly. To be a friend one has to give as well as get. In fact, to be a real friend is a greater thing than to have one. The interests of the friend are to be held sacred as one's own, yea, even more so. Hence, it means much to be a friend to all. The writer of proverbs says that there is a friend "that sticketh closer than a brother." He was not thinking of any particular individual but simply asserting that the bond of friendship is stronger than the tie of blood. Dr. Trumbull gives a number of examples of the most celebrated friendships in history. It were well if our boy scouts could read this great book.

There are many men and women who have been unfortunate, unsuccessful, and who have allowed themselves to become grouchy, soured, resentful. They are looking out for slights, they want to blame someone else for their condition. It is a great thing by a friendly approach and manner to disarm and dissipate such feelings. A gentle word, a gracious smile, a soft answer, a kindly act, however small, may change the whole situation, clear up the atmosphere, disarm prejudice, gladden the heart, revive the courage, win the day, save a life. Let me adopt:

"Many a man is hungry
For something that's better than bread,
And many a heart is starving,
For the word that's never said."

Of course, no one can show or feel the same degree of friendship towards all others; but it is possible to show a friendly bearing towards all, and to do the friendly act. This does not always call for the outlay of money or toilsome effort, but it does call for the friendly spirit, the kindly manner. It is true that there are those who do not so meet us, but it is the iron rule to do unto others as they do unto us, very different from the golden rule. How do YOU want to be treated by others?

A scout is a brother to every other scout. Little needs to be said on this. However, it is inevitable that there should be a bond between the individual members of an order different in degree, if not in kind, from that which binds these members to those not members. Let us see how the spirit of friendship which we have been speaking reinforces the brotherhood. Take brotherhood by blood, those born of the same parents, in the same home. Each has full right to all in the home there is no place for jealousy lest one get the advantage of the other no place for suspicion or fear lest any one be denied his rights; no place for partiality, shielding one and imposing on another. These discordant things have no place, there is no thought of them.

So things run smoothly, harmoniously. Take this into the brotherhood of scouts. It is the joy of each to serve the other. If the needs of one be greater, then each other finds a joy, counts it a privilege to serve the one in need. There is no thought of a return, that it all lost in the joy of serving. The one serving feels a distinct sense of privilege, advantage, if you please, in the ability and privilege to serve the other. To be sure, if the opportunities and needs shall ever be reversed the same spirit will obtain. There is ever a genuine observance of and respect for the rights of each, but this is not with a feeling of restraint or constraint, but in the gladness of voluntary service. If you can imagine those born of the same parents lacking in these qualities of heart you will at once feel that home is a misnomer for the dwelling place unsanctified by such graces.

Take this out into the sphere of scouthood and see how beautifully it fits itself to the relationship. The scout prepared by his training, fortified by the spirit set out in the laws we are studying, may each day do some kindly act, some helpful deed, speak some cheery word, show the friendly spirit and thus set some sad heart singing some merry song that will echo around the world.

REPRESENTATIVE MADDEN'S LIFE RIVALS AN ALGER TALE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—From water boy in a stone quarry to millionaire president of one of the largest contracting corporations in this country marks the upward climb of Representative Martin B. Madden of Illinois, the republican chairman of the house appropriations committee.

Here is Representative Madden's own story of how he started to work when only 10 years old and how he won promotion by doing more than he was obliged to:

Started Working at 10 Years.

"I was 10 years old when I held my first job. I was a water boy in a stone quarry in Lemont, Ill., twenty-five miles out of Chicago. The water had to be carried to the workmen in buckets from the springs which came through the seams of the rocks. My pay for this work was 50 cents a day.

"As I went along with the work I discovered a lack of system of caring for the tools used by the men. I suggested to the superintendent what I thought should be done to improve the system. He commended me for the suggestion and later employed me to do that phase of the work. From time to time I was advanced until after a year my pay increased to $1 a day, later on to $1.50 and finally up to $50 a month. That was a fortune to me.

"At the end of my day I went to school. I studied the technical things that were connected with the business in which I had started. I studied mathematics assiduously and later I became interested in the engineering features of the work. I became chief draftsman of the concern at 16 years old. At 18 I became superintendent of the plant. There were one thousand men employed. They did not pay as high wages then as they do now. As superintendent I got $100 a month, and, by the way, while I was doing all this I went to school every night and became proficient as an engineer.

Always Saved Something.

"When I got $50 a month I saved $25 of it and paid my educational and other expenses with the balance. When my salary became $75 I increased my expenses to $35 a month and my savings to $40. When I was advanced to $100 the expenses went to $40 a month and my savings to $60, and I recall when my salary was made $150 a month I fixed my expenses at $50 and put the other $100 away.

"At 20 years old I was made financial manager of the business and had chief direction of all the details. I studied law about this time during the evenings at a local law school and was admitted to the bar, but never practiced. This continued for several years, and when I was about 27 years old Henry Willard, controlling owner of the Northern Pacific, offered me the vice-presidency of the railroad at a salary of $10,000 a year. I refused it. He asked me what I was receiving and I said $3,500. He wanted to know why I would not accept his offer. I told him that I had hopes of becoming a partner in the business in which I was engaged.

"A little later I was admitted to partnership in the business, which had developed to an enormous size, and was made vice-president and general sales manager. I was later made president, which position I occupied for more than twenty years. I was elected to congress in 1904 and have served continuously since."

MINISTER REBUKES BRITISHERS EFFORT TO PRODUCE RAIN

LONDON, Aug. 13.—An enterprising London newspaper tried to break a long spell of drought by shelling the heavens on two separate evenings with blanks and by dropping bombs from an aeroplane into a few tiny clouds.

The rain didn't come. And now the Rev. E. A. Phillips explains why God, according to the clergymen, was angry at the attempt to interfere with the normal rainstorm that actually was on its way, giving France and certain portions of England bountous showers, but keeping London dry as a bone.

"It is not right or proper to attempt to interfere with nature," said the Rev. Phillips. "I, with others, was horrified at the thought. God will provide us in due time, and He will not fail us in this matter."

The first shelling of the air brought out great crowds. Bombs and the kind of "maroons" used to warn England of air raids during the war were fired into the heavens for more than two hours. The next morning two clouds, apparently about the size of ordinary bedspreads, registered appearance in the blue, but that was all.

The second bombardment brought no better results, though the sky became overcast. Then the Daily Express urged on by a number of readers who advised the newspaper to "shoot the clouds" sent up a plane equipped with small bombs.

The aeroplanes swung up above the clouds with bombs fixed at the end of a fifty-foot cable. The bombs were trailed into the center of the clouds and set off by electricity. The current displaced air resulting from the explosion sent the plane sliding off at an angle of forty-five degrees.

BABY CLINIC PROVING HELP TO MOTHERS

Although yet in its infancy and an innovation that has had little trial in the South, the Wichita Falls Helath Center already is attracting wide attention among mothers who take a real interest in the welfare of their babes, according to the declarations of numerous individuals who have watched the development of this work during the three months since its installation in our city.

To keep well babies well and assist in teaching the mothers of the city and county the proper foods to use in order that their baby may get its full and God given right to a healthy start toward strong and unhampered manhood and womanhood, is announced by the backers of this move as their main aim and purpose.

The work is under the supervision of Misses Quinn and Dorpat, ited Cross nurses. The babes are given examinations at the regular clinic, which is held every Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock and are attended by members of the Wichita County Medical Association. The physicians give their services to this work, taking their turns by weeks. Commenting on the work of the local physicians, Miss Dorpat, who has had considerable experience in this work before coming to Wichita Falls, some four months ago, declared that she had never in her experience seen physicians show more enthusiasm and interest in the work than those of Wichita Falls.

Young mothers caring for their first baby, who so often in times past and present in attempting to provide the proper care for their infant have done the very thing that cost the little one's life, are said to be perhaps receiving the biggest benefit from the health center work.

The workers insist that it be recognized that the health center is in no manner a charity work. "It is for every one, rich and poor and in every walk of life and for the purpose of being of some help to helpless babies," they declare. "The woman in the upholstered limousine is just as likely to have an improperly nourished babe as the woman in the poorest hovel," the workers assert, "and we welcome every mother that comes for any information we may, by grace of the special training and education we have received and the profession we follow, be able to give them.

A health center is scheduled to be held on Saturday, August 20, at Iowa Park, and Misses Quinn and Dorpat ask that any and all mothers having a child they wish examined bring it to their headquarters, which it is expected will be established in a tent in the city park there. It is planned to make the Iowa Park health center a monthly affair, holding it on each monthly trades day according to the announcement.

The local workers also are planning to hold similar clinics monthly at Electra.

Exceptional advantages of location, equipment, organization and experience, enable the City National Bank of Commerce to furnish the highest measure of satisfaction to West Texas people and business institutions in the handling of all phases of their banking.—Adv.

SABLE AND SQUIRREL FAVORED PELTS FOR NEW FALL SCARF SETS

When cooler days come around the well-dressed woman feels the need of something warm and attractive to complete her trotteur frock or new fall suit. She will undoubtedly turn to the new fur scarf sets. If she has not one already, now is the time to purchase, for the August fur sales hold any number of attractive sets at attractive prices. Many of the new suits demand furs, for they are strictly tailored with flat, knotched collars which are trim looking but really not comfortable for chilly, brisk fall days. Then, too, a fur scarf about the neck is always flattering. There is something about the soft pelts which brings out all the color, softness and pretty lines of the face, at the same time concealing all that is not pretty.

Here are three stunning sets showing the tendency of the new fall styles. At the left and right are the costly sables and in the center is the popular squirrel. The sables are both three-skin scarfs which may be worn in two or three different styles. Both sets have mellon muffs with heavy tail trimming. The squirrel is much more youthful than the sable and it also may be worn in several ways. The muff of this set is also mellon shaped, which is good evidence muffs, particularly of the mellon style, are to be worn this year.

SAINTLY MEN NOT POPULAR WITH WOMEN

LOS ANGELES, Apg. 13.—Prof. L. P. Paetow, teacher of a class in medieval history at the summer session of the University of California, has raised what has been characterized as a "burnin' question." The other day he paused long enough in his lecture to remark that "most women do not like saintly men, but they admire smooth, wicked rascals."

The professor plaintively added: "I don't understand it."

The burning question is, Was the professor right, and, if so, will the women admit it? A rapid canvass in Los Angeles indicates that the women regard the professor as all wrong, and that she has merely muddled, as all men do who try to dabble in the psychology of woman.

Likes 'Em "Broadminded."

Mrs. Earle Remington said, "I like a man who has gone, seen and come back. Most women, I think, admire men who have had experience in the world, and who have, through their experience, become big and broadminded. I think that the men who make the best husbands are those who have been in the school of the world long enough to find nothing in married life to surprise them, and to be satisfied with the peaceful pleasures of domesticity. Professor Paetow is right, perhaps, to the extent that most women find a worldly, broadminded man more interesting than a saintly, narrow man."

Wanda Hawley, movie actress, thinks that the professor is both right and wrong, but Bebe Daniels and May McAvoy, also movie actresses, insist that, while the professor may know history, he has lots to learn about women.

Miss Daniels says: "I beg to differ with the professor. It is still water that runs deep, and the women know it."

"Play With Sinners; Marry Saints."

"In some ways," said Wanda Hawley, "Professor Paetow is right; in others wrong. A woman loves the thrill of matching wits with a daring man, but she marries the sober, steady, dependable sort."

"The professor is all wrong," insists May McAvoy. "What a woman prefers most in a man is steadiness and reliability. A man who preserves his dignity can be depended upon."

Mrs. W. E. Mabee thinks that there is sometimes so little in the outward aspect of men to distinguish saint from sinner that women can hardly be blamed for making mistakes in their preferences.

"Many women admire dashing men," she said, "but it is hard to draw the line between what may be captivating dash and mere effrontery. I think as a rule women prefer solid men."

A Haven of Rest for Ex-Royalties — Many Quaint and Beautiful Places Used By These "Men Without a Country".

BY MARIE WIDMER

WHEN ex-King Constantine with family and suite left Lucerne —his home during exile—a few months ago, to once more assume the triumphs and tribulations of a King, there was much speculation among the colony of titled exiles in the land of the Alps as to the possibilities of others to follow suit. Then like a thunderbolt the news spread that ex-Emperor Charles of Austria, who had been leading the life of a dignified, rather secluded country squire at Villa Prangins, on the Lake of Geneva, had left Switzerland without official permission and was making efforts to re-establish his throne in Hungary. But contrary to Constantine's case, where the people were clamoring for their former ruler, the Hungarians had no desire whatsoever to see Charles reinstated as their King and the final outcome was that he had to join his family again in Switzerland and be grateful that the Swiss overlooked his political adventure.

The Castle Of Wartegg
First Swiss Residence Of The Exiled Imperial Family Of Austria

The ex-Imperial family of Austria made their first sojourn on Swiss soil in Castle Wartegg on the Lake of Constance, a chateau which dates back to the year 1534, when it was built by Caspar Blarer, brother of the then powerful Diethelm Blarer, Abbot of St. Gall, and proprietor of a portion of the extensive domains of Wartensee near Staad, on the Lake of Constance.

However, the ancient chateau proved too small and a few months later, in 1919, Charles settled himself comfortably in the palatial Villa Prangins, near Nyon, on the Lake of Geneva. This residence forms a part of one of the finest estates in that part of Switzerland, and has many associations with fallen grandeur. The domain in its entirety is composed of the chateau la Bergerie and Villa Prangins. It belonged to ex-King Joseph Bonaparte of Spain, who took up his residence there after leaving Bordentown, N. J. The next owner was his nephew, Prince Jerome Napoleon, son of King Jerome Bonaparte of Westphalia. He often sojourned at Prangins during the Second Empire, with his Italian wife, Princess Clothilde, daughter of Victor Emanuel II. Spending vast sums of money on the place, he transformed the same into an abode of rare beauty and luxury. Wonderful steam yachts were stationed in the harbor and above the mantlepiece in the principal dining room of the mansion there was and still remains, in lieu of a mirror, an immense, sumptuously framed single pane of glass, permitting of an outlook on the silhouette of the Mont Blanc, rising in the distance directly opposite.

During his two years' sojourn at Prangins Charles of Austria has led the uneventful life of a gentleman farmer. Most of his time was devoted to shooting, fishing and boating. Occasionally he accompanied his wife, ex-Empress Zita on a shopping tour to nearby Geneva, but the Swiss being accustomed to the presence of titled exiles hardly noticed them.

An Outing To The Habsburg, The Cradle Of His Ancestors

It was indeed a strange irony of fate which brought the Habsburgs back to Switzerland, the very land they once oppressed. On the Wulpelsberg, above Brugg, in the canton of Argovie stand the insignificant remainders of their first stronghold, the actual cradle of their dynasty, dating back to the year 1020. The tower, with walls eight feet thick, is the only part now standing which belonged to the original structure; in it the room said to have been occupied by Rudolph of Habsburg is still shown. The government of the canton of Aargau, who is the owner of the ancient stronghold had the same renovated a few years ago. The adjoining dwelling house, where refreshments are sold, is rented to a farmer.

District Of Lucerne Future Abode

It is rumored that Charles, on account of his recent ill-calculated venture, will transfer his domicile from the Lake of Geneva to the Lake of Lucerne, where he has already done some "house-hunting." One of the estates under consideration is the beautifully situated Castle Heidegg, built in the Middle Ages by the nobles of Heidegg, and now the property of a Lucerne patrician family Pfyffer-von Heidegg.

Lucerne, ever famous for its perfect scenic beauty, would probably welcome the opportunity of sheltering this interesting family in its vicinity, for Constantine's presence there proved an irresistible lure for many tourists. But Lucerne in summer is so fascinating and offers so many attractions that it is really of no account whether it can feature any ex-notables or not.

As a city it is both modern and quaint. The palatial hotels and smart shops, the spacious lake promenades and attractive villas, form a delightful contrast against the reliques of the past; the picturesque mediaeval wooden bridges spanning the river Reuss. Being situated in the district which is described as "classical ground" for its historic associations, Lucerne is also much frequented by the Swiss themselves and many native singing and gymnastic societies as well as rifle clubs often hold their annual summer festival in this city, thus introducing the native atmosphere so much enjoyed by foreign guests.

At Zurich And Elsewhere

Another fair Swiss city, Zurich, was at the outbreak of the great upheaval in Germany and Austria, in the Fall of 1918, a particular favorite refuge of fallen dignitaries both from the highest ranks of the nobility and the military cast. These more or less illustrious persons have departed long ago, but there are still a goodly number of titled guests who prefer to live on their dwindled income in some moderate priced Swiss pension.

The ancient Castle of Zizers, the homestead of the noble family von Salis, situated near the Grisons capital, Coire, was at one time the retreat of the ex-King Ludwig of Bavaria and his eldest daughter Hildegard. Joined later on by some additional members of his family the former King of the Bavarians now resides at Locarno, a lovely spot in Italian Switzerland, where he devotes the best part of his time to reading and automobiling.

While the ex-Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, the mother of the former Crown Princess Cecilie, has lived quietly on the lake of Geneva ever since the war began, the ex-Grand Duke and ex-Grand Duchess of Hessen, occupying the carefully renovated Castle of Tarasp in the Lower Engadine, are freely intermingling with the outer world.

This chateau, crowning a gracefully formed hill in the vicinity of the well known group of Spas, Tarasp, Schuls, Vulpera, is perhaps the most beautifully situated stronghold in the whole of Switzerland. It is 1,000 years old and was the seat of the Austrian governors up to 1803.

Health and pleasure seekers in Switzerland will thus have opportunities to encounter many personages whose names once carried weight, but who in the little mountain republic have to become converted to the principles which are in harmony with the laws of real Democracy—simplicity and equality—if they want to endear themselves to the natives.

When he returns to Centreville to take over his property, he finds the store greatly run down. He loves Miriam, the beautiful daughter of Silas P. Rogers, his business rival who heads a syndicate which threatens to put Jimmy out of business by opening a fine store opposite.

Jimmy is about to sell when he recalls Miriam's statement to him that she liked only such men as overcame obstacles. He refuses to sell and on reading P. T. Barnum's famous saying "there's a fool born every minute," he decides to put out a patent medicine and advertise it extensively. Thus "Knight's 99" reaches the market and causes a tremendous sensation when several miraculous cures are accomplished.

The syndicate causes Jimmy's arrest for violating the pure food and drug act, and at the trial, Jimmy is his own counsel. The judge is taken suddenly ill and Jimmy gives him a dose or two of "Knight's 99" with the result that the Judge is cured and Jimmy acquitted. The syndicate thereupon begs Jimmy to reveal the fifth ingredient of his decoction, the four others being known to them, and he complies. The citizens of the town, convinced of his greatness as a townsman, elect him mayor and Miriam becomes his bride.

Douglas MacLean takes the part of Jimmy Knight and Marian De Beck plays as Miriam Rogers.

Mr. And Mrs. Buster Keaton

Buster Keaton and Natalie Talmadge-Keaton have settled down into regular old-fashioned domesticity. Buster comes home to dinner every night, and Natalie meets him at the door with a smile—and they are finding out that the good old home stuff of their fathers and mothers is good enough even for the brides and bridegrooms of 1921. Incidentally, Buster is working on "The Playhouse," his latest comedy.

Natalie is perfectly happy to give up the screen and be a good little housewife.

She doesn't want a lot of maids around—because she particularly wants to cook Buster's food herself. Despite the fact that her trousseau was fairly bulging with lovely negligees and soft looking little "breakfast in bed" caps and coats, Natalie gets up early—it has to be early for a film star, you know—puts on a snappy little checkered gingham apron and goes into the kitchen to see that the poached eggs on toast are just right.

"Because the food a comedian eats is most important," announces the young wife seriously enough, "How could he be funny if he had a pain in his 'tummy'?"

"Keeping Up With Lizzie"

Lizzie Henshaw, belle of Pointview, a small country town, is sent to a fashionable school by her ambitious father. His bitter business rival, Pettigrew, the father of Dan, Lizzie's sweetheart, not to be outdone sends Dan to Harvard. And then both of them—the town's two leading grocers—start to boost their prices to pay for their children's schooling. After graduation, Lizzie tours Europe with some wealthy friends and then returns to Pointview with a flock of lofty and expensive ideas, and accompanied by Count Louis Roland, who sees in her an opportunity to marry wealth. She immediately sets a standard of dress and mode of living that starts a period of wild and furious spending on the part of Pointview, which threatens to ruin everybody. Poor Dan, in spite of his Harvard background, plays second fiddle to the Count. Lizzie's father, unable to hold the pace, confesses he is broke—the Count refuses to go on—but upon receiving a dowry of $10,000 agrees to a hasty wedding. On the way to the minister he fakes a breakdown, and when they all get out of the car, the Count jumps in and speds away with the money. Meanwhile, Dan, suspicious of Count Louis, has discovered that he is an imposter, and with "Soc" Potter, the village lawyer and everyone's friend, jumps into a machine to stop the wedding.

As they speed down the road, they come upon the stranded wedding party. Dan explains the situation, and they all continue the pursuit. In his haste to get away, the Count takes a turn at too high a rate of speed, the car leaves the road, and plunges over a bank into a lake. After pulling him to shore, Dan forces him to return the money, and then releases him on his promise to leave the country. After such a rude awakening, the simple life has a stronger appeal for Lizzie, and Dan continues with her to the minister's instead of the Count.

Enid Bennett and Edward Hearn take the principal parts.

Rubye de Remer

"America's Most Beautiful Blonde," as Rubye de Remer is designated by Hollen, will soon be seen in E. Phillips Oppenheim's celebrated story, "Passersby." The name of the picture will be changed upon release as a previous production by another author has already employed the title.

Miss de Remer will be surrounded by an all-star cast, which includes Lewis Stone, Raymond Hatton, Walter McGrail, Kathleen Kirkham, William V. Mong and Frank Leigh.

Alice Calhoun In "Peggy Puts It Over"

In "Peggy Puts It Over," Alice Calhoun plays the part of a young girl who strives to put life into the sleepy town of her birth, where the townspeople were still driving oxen teams and talking in the b'gosh lingo. It was a hard uphill task but "Peggy puts it over," even against the wishes of the man she loves, who would have Oldtown remain as it is and not become modernized. The story is a splendid vehicle, for Miss Calhoun whose beauty and sense of comedy find a grateful outlet in "Peggy Puts It Over." The charming star is now busily at work on her new production, "The Matrimonial Web."

Walter McGrail

Walter McGrail is one of the most popular and most capable leading men in pictures. His first stage appearance was in "Pinafore," in which he sang a bit and walked about the stage but contends that he was of no importance whatever to the production.

After several years in dramatic plays and comic operas Mr. McGrail returned to New York from a one-night tour to find that activities in the thespian line were not all they should be. A chance to play in a picture was offered him, and, in a disinterested sort of way, he accepted it. His screen performance was so satisfactory that he continued and his climb to fame began.

Viora Daniel

Viora Daniel has just graduated from playing leads with male stars in feature pictures to heading the casts in comedies. Her latest are "Let Me Explain" and "In For Life."

Imperious Victoria, Queen and Woman

Lord With A Past Perilously Fascinated Victoria

Published by Arrangement With the McClure Newspaper Syndicate. Copyright by Harcourt, Brace & Co.

Viscount Melbourne, Man of Many Affairs, at Fifty-eight Infatuated Young Queen—She Appeared "Bold and Discontented"—Wanted to Put Off Marrying for Years for Sake of Companionship With Him—Handsome Prince Albert Broke the Spell.

Queen Victoria, the woman, came to a grave moral crisis early in her career on the throne. She became deeply infatuated with Lord Melbourne, the Prime Minister, whose fifty-eight years included a questionable past. Under his complete influence she remained from the time of her accession in June, 1837, when she was eighteen, to her marriage in February, 1840—and even after that.

Mr. Strachey, who has had access to the secret Victorian documents kept by the British Museum, including the Queen's journal and letters, the unpublished memoirs of Mr. Greville, Clerk of the Privy Council, and the diary of Mr. Creevy, the courtier who noted down many frank facts about royalty, reveal in this extract from his book "Queen Victoria" how dangerous this infatuation was. It almost caused her to refuse to marry Prince Albert. How she was conquered by a great love is told.

By LYTTON STRACHEY
(Author of "Eminent Victorians")

William Lamb, Viscount Melbourne, was fifty-eight years of age, and had been for three years Prime Minister of England. In every outward respect he was one of the most fortunate of mankind.

He had been born into the midst of riches, brilliance and power. His mother, fascinating and intelligent, had been a great Whig hostess. Nature had given him beauty and brains; the unexpected death of an elder brother brought him health, a peerage, and the possibility of high advancement.

In society he was a notable talker, a captivating companion, a charming man. If one looked deeper, one saw at once that he was not ordinary, that the piquancies of his conversation and his manner—his free-and-easy vaguenesses, his abrupt questions, his yawnings and loungings, his innumerable oaths — were something more than an amusing ornament, were the outward manifestation of an individuality that was fundamental.

There was an ironical discordance between the inner history of the man and his apparent fortunes. He owed all he had to his birth, and it was known well enough that his mother had passionately loved Lord Egremont, and that Lord Melbourne was not his father.

His marriage, which had seemed to be the crown of his youthful ardours, was a long, mistrable, desperate failure; the incredible Lady Caroline was very nearly the destruction of his life. When at last he emerged from the anguish and confusion of her folly, her extravagance, her rage, her despair, and her devotion, he was left alone with endless memories of intermingled farce and tragedy, and an only son, who was an imbecile.

But there was something else that he owed to Lady Caroline. While she whirled with Byron in a hectic frenzy of love and fashion, he had stayed at home in an indulgence bordering on cynicism, and occupied his solitude with reading. It was thus that he had acquired those habits of that wide and accurate knowledge of ancient and modern literature, which formed so unexpected a part of his mental equipment. His passion for reading never deserted him; even when he was Prime Minister he found time to master every new important book.

Suddenly Turned Into hte Adviser of a Young Queen.

With an incongrousness that was characteristic, his favorite study was theology. To the ladies whom he most liked he would lend some learned work on the Revelation, crammed with marginal notes in his onw hand, or Dr. Larner's "Observation upon the Jewish Errors with respect to the Conversion of Mary Magdalene."

The more pious among them had high hopes that these studies would lead him into the right way; but of this there were no symptoms in his after-dinner conversations.

And now, with old age upon him, his life took a sudden, new, extraordinary turn. He became, in the twinkling of an eye, the intimate adviser of a young girl who had stepped all at once from a nursery to a throne.

His relations with women had been, like everything else about him, ambiguous. Nobody had ever been able quite to gauge the shifting, emotional complexities of his married life; Lady Caroline vanished; but his peculiar susceptibilities remained. Female society of some kind or other was necessary to him, and he did not stint himself; a great part of every day was invariably spent in it.

There were rumors and cimbustions. Lord Melbourne was twice a co-respondent in a divorce action; but on each occasion he won his suit. The lovely Lady Brandon, the unhappy and brilliant Mrs. Norton * * * the law exonerated them both. Beyond that hung an impenetrable veil. But at any rate, it was clear that, with such a record, the Prime Minister's position in Buckingham Palace must be a highly delicate one.

However, he was used to delicacies, and he met the situation with consummate success. His behavior was from the first moment impeccable. His manner toward the young Queen mingled, with perfect facility, the watchfulness and the respect of a statesman and a courtier with the tender solicitude of a parent. He was at once reverential and affectionate, at once the servant and the guide.

Changed His Life to Suit Routine of Court Etiquette.

At the same time the habits of his life underwent a surprising change. Comfortable, unpunctual days became subject to the unaltering routine of a palace; no longer did he sprawl on sofas; not a single "damn" escaped his lips.

The man of the world who had been the friend of Byron and the regent, the talker whose paradoxes had held Holland House enthralled, the cynic whose ribaldries had enlivened so many deep potations, the lover whose soft words had captivated such beauty and such passion and such wit, might now be seen, evening after evening, talking with infinite politeness to a schoolgirl, bolt upright, amid the silence and the rigidity of Court etiquette.

On her side, Victoria was instantaneously fascinated by Lord Melbourne. She found his perfect; and perfect in her sight he remained.

Responsibilities and difficulties she migh have, no doubt, and in heavy measure; but one feeling dominated and absorbed all others—the feeling of joy. Everything pleased her. She was in high spirits from morning till night. Mr. Creevy, grown old now, and very near his end, catching a glimpse of her at Brighton, was much amused, in his sharp fashion, by the ingenuous gaiety of "little Vic."

"A more homely little being you never beheld, when she is at the case, and she is evidently dying to be always more so. She laughs in real earnest, opening her mouth as wide as it can go, showing not very pretty gums. * * She eats quite as heartily as she laughs. I think I may say she gobbles * * * She blushes and laughs every instant in so natural a way as to disarm anybody."

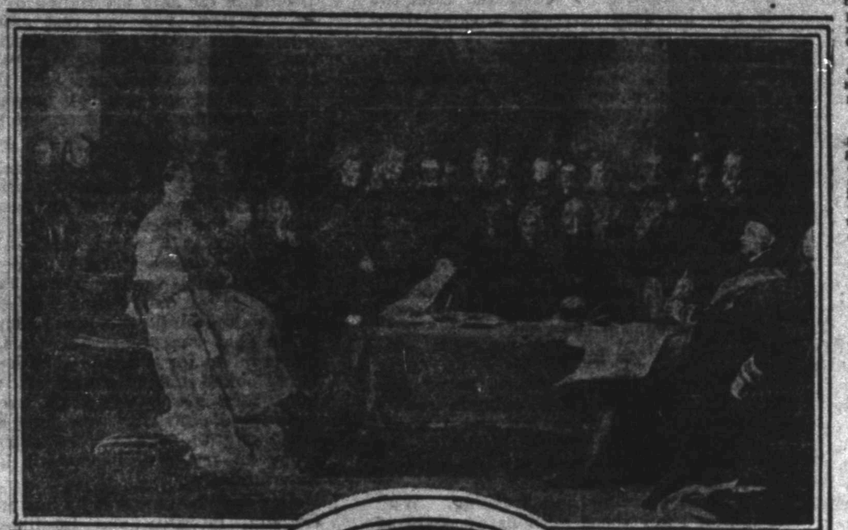

With youth and happiness gilding every hour, the days passed merrily enough. And each day hinged upon Lord Melbourne. He diary shows us, with undiminished clarity, the life of the young sovereign during the early months of her reign—a life satisfactorily regular, full of delightful business, a life of simple pleasures, mostly physical—riding, eating, dancing—a quick, easy, highly unsophisticated life, sufficient unto itself.

The light of the morning, is upon it; and, in the rosy radiance, the figure of "Lord M." emerges, glorified and supreme. If she is the heroine of the story, he is the hero; but indeed they are more than hero and heroine, for there are no other characters at all.

Pages of Lord M. Put in Journal by Young Monarch.

One sees them together still, a curious couple, strangely united in those artless pages, under the magical illumination of that down of eighty years ago: the polished high fine gentleman with the whitening hair and whiskers and the thick dark eyebrows and the mobile lips and the big expressive eyes; and beside him the tiny Queen—fair, slim, elegant, active, in her plain girl's dress and little tippet, looking up at him earnestly, accordingly, with eyes blue and prospecting, and half-open mouth.

So they appear upon every pace of the Journal; upon every page Lord M. is present. Lord M. is speaking, Lord M. is being amusing, instructive, delightful, and affectionate at once, while Victoria drinks in the honied words, laughs till she shows her gums, tries hard to remember, and runs off, as soon as she is left alone to put it all down.

Prince Albert, whose personality and good looks won the Queen's heart.

The day's routine, whether in London or at Windsor, was almost invariable. The morning was devoted to business and Lord M. In the afternoon the whole Court went out riding. Back in the Palace again, there was still time for a little more fun before dinner—a game of battledore and shuttlecock, perhaps, or a romp along the galleries with some children. Dinner came, and the ceremonial decidedly tightened. The gentleman of highest rankes at on the right hand of the Queen; on her left—it soon became an established rule—sat Lord Melbourne.

After the ladies had left the dinnerroom, the gentlemen were not permitted to remain behind for very long) indeed, the shot time allowed them for their wine-drinking formed the subject—so it was rumored—of one of the very few disputes between the Queen and her Prime Minister.

The Duke of Bedford Told Greville he was "sure there was a battle between her and Melbourne. * * * He is sure there was one about the men's sitting after dinner, for he heard her say to him rather angrily, 'It is a horrid custom'—but when the ladies left the room (he dined there) directions were given that the men should remain five minutes longer."

Stiff Routine in Drawing-Room Rigidly Enforced.

Her determination carried the day, and from that moment after-dinner drunkenness began to go out of fashion. When the company was reassembled in the drawing-room the etiquette was stiff. For a few moments the Queen spoke in turn to each one of her guests; and during these short uneasy colluquies the aridity of royevident.

When all the guests had been disposed of the Duchess of Kent sat down to her whist, while everybody else war ranged around the round table. Lord Melbourne sat beside the Queen, and talked pertinaciously—very often, a propose to the contents of one of the large albums of engravings with which the round table was covered—until it was half-past eleven and time to go to bed.

But, undoubtedly, the evenings which the Queen enjoyed most were those on which there was dancing. She was always ready enlugh to seize any excuse—the arrival of cousins—people—to give the command for that.

Then, when the band played, and the figures of the dancers swayed to the music, and she felt her own figure swaying, too, with youthful spirits so close on every side—then her happiness reached its height, her eyes sparkled, she must go on and on into the small hours of the morning. For a moment Lord M. himself was forgotten.

As time passed the less pleasant qualities of the Queen revealed themselves more often and more seriously. There were signs of an imeprious, a peremptry temper, an egotism that was strong and hard. It was noticed that the Palace etiquette, far from relaxing grew ever more and more inflexible.

The slightest infringements of the freezing rules of regularity and deference were invariably and immediately visited by the sharp and haughty glances of the Queen. Yet Her Majesty's eyes, crushing as they could be, were less crushing than her mouth.

The self-will depicted in those small projecting teeth and that small receding chin was of a more dismaying kind than that which a powerful jaw betokens; it was a self-will imperturbable, impenetrable, unintelligent; a self-will dangerously akin to obstinacy. And the obstinacy of monarchs is not as that of other men.

Queen and Mother Were Involved in Bitter Quarrel.

Within two years of her accession, storm-clouds which, from the first, had been dimly visible on the horizon, gathered and burst. Victoria's relations with her mother had not improved. The Duchess of Kent, still surounded by all the galling appearances of filial consideration, remained in Buckingham Palace a discarded figure, powerless and inconsolable.

Sir John Conroy (her mother's Major Domo, whom Victoria had discovered in familiarities with her mother), banished from the presence of the Queen, still presided over the Duchess's household, and the hostilities of Kensington continued unabated in the new surroundings. Lady Flora Hastings (Lady in Waiting to Baronett Lehzen ,the Queen's favorite) still cracked her malicious jokes; the animosity of the Baroness Lehzen was still unappeased.

One day, Lady Flora found the joke was turned against her. Early in 1839, traveling in the suite of the Duchess, she had returned from Scotland in the same carriage with Sir John. A changein her figure became the subject of an unseemly jest; tongues wagged; and the jest grew serious.

She consulted Sir James Clarke, the royal physician, and, after the consultation, Sir James let his tongue wag, too. On this, the scandal flared up sky-high. Everyone was talking; the Baroness was not surprised; the Duchess rallied tumultuously to the support of her lady; the Queen was informed.

At last the extraordinary expedient of a medical examination was resorted to, during which Sir James, according to Lady Flora, behaved with brutal rudeness, while a second doctor was extremely polite. Finally, both physicians signed a certificate entirely exculpating the lady.

But this was by no means the end of the business. The Hastings family, socially a very powerful one, threw itself into the fray with all the fury of outraged pride and injured innocence; Lord Hastings insisted upon an audience of the Queen, wrote to the papers, and demanded the dismissal of Sir James Clark. The Queen expressed her regret to Lady Flora, but Sir James Clark was not dismissed.

The tide of opinion turned violently against the Queen and her advisers; high society was disgusted, the public at large was indignant at the ill-treatment of Lady Flora. By the end of March, the popularity, so radiant and so abundant, with which the young sovereign had begun her reign, had entirely disappeared.

The Hastings were Tories, and Lord Melboure and the Court were attacked by the Tory press in unmeasured language. Early in May, 1839, the Ministers were visibly tottering; on a vital point of policy they could only secure a majority of five in the House of Commons; they determined to resign. When Victoria head the news she burst into tears. Was it possible, then that all was over? Was she, indeed, about to see Lord M. for the last time?

Lord M. came. The conversation was touching and prolonged; but it could only end in one way—the Queen must send for the Duke of Wellington. When, next morning, the Duke came, he advised her Majesty to send for Sir Robert Peel. Se was in "a state of dreadful grief," but she swallowed her tears, and braced herself, with royal resolution, for the odious, odious interview.

Peel had decided that a change would be necessary in the composition of the royal Household; the Queen must no longer be entirely surrounded by the wives and sisters of his opponents. When this matter was touched upon, the Queen had intimated that she wished her Household to remain unchanged.

The question was a complicated and subtle one, and it had never arisen before; but subsequent constitutional practice has determined that a Queen Regnant must accede to the wishes of her Prime Minister as to the personnel of the female part of her Household.

The Queen would not be soothed, and still less would she take advice. When, next morning, Peel appeared again, she was ready for action. He began by detailing the Cabinet appointments, and then he added, "Now, ma'am, about the Ladies"—when the Queen sharply interrupted him.

"I cannot give up any of my Ladies," she said. "What, ma'am!" said Sir Robert, "does your Majesty mean to retain them all?"

"All," said the Queen.

It was in vain that Peel pleaded and argued; in vain that he spoke, growing every moment more pompous and uneasy, of the constitution, and Queens Regnant, and the public interest. She was adamant; but he too, through all his embarrassment, showed no sign of yielding; and when at last he left her nothing had been decided—the whole formation of the government was hanging in the wind.

Sir Robert returned and told her that if she insisted upon retaining all her Ladies he could not form a government. She replied that she would send him her final decision in writing. Next morning the late Whig Cabinetme, Lord Melbourne read to them the Queen's letters, and the group of elderly politicians were overcome by an extraordinary wave of enthusiasm.

The intensity of her determination swept them headlong down the stream of her desire. They unanimously felt that "it was impossible to abandon such a Queen and such a woman." They took the unprecedented course of advising the Queen by letter to put an end to her negotiation with Sir Robert Peel.

"Perfectly Happy" When Melbourne Returned to Her.

She did so; all was over; she had triumphed. That evenings there was a ball at the Palace. Everyone was present. "Peel and the Duke of Wellington came by looking very much put out." She was perfectly happy; Lord M. was Prime Minister once more, and he was by her side.

Happiness had returned with Lord M., but it was happiness in the midst of agitation. The domestic imbroglio continued unabahted, until at last the Duke of Wellington was called in once again in his old capacity as moral physician to the family. Something was accomplished when, at last, he induced Sir Joan Conroy to resign his place about the Duchess of Kent and leave the Palace forever; something more when he persuaded the Queen to write an affectionate letter to her mother. The way seemed open for a reconciliation, but the Duchess was stormy still.

The Duke might perhaps have succeeded, had not all attempts at conciliation been rendered hopeless by a tragical event. Lady Flora, it was discovered, had been suffering from a terrible internal malady, which now grew rapidly worse. There could be little doubt that she was dying.

The Queen's unpopularity reached an extraordinary height. More than once she was publicly insulted. "Mrs. Melbourne," was shouted at her when she appeared at her balcony; and, at Ascot, she was hissed by the Duchess of Montrose and Lady Sarah Ingestre as she passed.

Lady Flora died. The whole scandal burst out again with redoubled vehemence; while, in the Palace, the two parties were henceforth divided by an impassable, a Stygian gulf.

Nevertheless, Lord M. was back, and every trouble faded under the enchantment of his presence and his conversation. On his side, in spite of the dullness and the formality of the Court, his relationship with the Queen had come to be the dominating interest in his life; to have been deprived of it would have been heartrending; that dread eventually had been—somehow—avoided.

Plainly Showed Her Simplicity Had Been Sapped.

Upon Victoria, with all her impermeability, it was inevitable that such a companionship should have produced, eventually, an effect. She was no longer the simple schoolgirl of two years since. The change was visible even in her public demeanor. Her expression, once "ingenuous and serene," now appeared to a shrewd observer to be "bold and disconted."

She had learned something of the pleasures of power and the pains of it; but that was not all. Lord Melbourne had sought to lead her into the paths of wisdom and moderation, but the whole unconscious movement of his character had swayed her in a very different direction.

Humanity and fallibility are infectious things; was it possible that Lehzen's prim pupil had caught them? That she was beginning to listen to siren voices? That the secret impulses of self-expression, of self-indulgence even, were mastering her life? For a moment the child of a new age looked back, wavered toward the eighteenth century. It was the most critical moment of her career. Had those influences lasted, the development of her character, the history of her life, would have been completely changed.

And why should they not last? She, for one, was very anxious that they should. Let them last forever! Any change would be for the worse; and the worst change of all * * no, she would not hear of it; it would be quite intolerable, it would upset everything, if she were to marry.

Naturally, she would marry in the end—but not just yet—not for three or four years. What was tiresome was that her uncle Leopold (the Belgian king) had apparently determined, not only that she ought to marry, but that her cousin Albert ought to be her husband. Albert hardly interested her at all.

In later life the Queen declared she had never for a moment dreamed of marrying anyone but her cousin; her letters and diaries tell a very different story.

"At present," she told Lord Melbourne in April, 1839, "my feeling is quite against every marrying."

When her cousin's Italian tour came to an end, she began to grow nervous; she knew that, according to a long-standing engagement, his next journey would be to england. He would probably come in the autumn, and by July her uneasiness was intense. She determined to write to her uncle, in order to make her position clear.

It must be understood, she said, that "there is no engagement between us."

Wanted to Avoid Meeting with Future Husband.

If she should like Albert, she could "make no final promise this year," for, at the very earliest, any such event could not take place till two or three years hence." She had, she said, "a great repugnance" to change her present position; and, if she should not like him, she was "very anxious that it should be understood that she would not be guilty of any breach of promise, for she never gave any."

To Lord Melbourne she was more explicit. She told him that she "had no great wish to see Albert, as the whole subject was an odious one;" she hated to have to decide about it; and she repeated once again that seeing Albert would be "a disagreeable thing."

Albert, accompanied by his brother, Ernest, arrived at Windsor, October 10, 1837. The whole structure of her existence crumbled into nothingness like a house of cards. He was beautiful—she gasped—she knew no more.

The succeeding hours passed in a rapture. She was able to observe a few more details — the "exquisite nose," the "delicate moustaches, and slight but very slight whiskers," the "beautiful figure, broad in the shoulders and a fine waist." She rode with him, danced with him, talked with him, and it was all perfection.

She had no shadow of a doubt. He had come on a Thursday evening, and on the following Sunday morning she told Lord Melbourne that she had "a good deal changed ehr opinion as to marrying." Next morning she told him that she had made up her mind to marry Albert.

The mornings after that she sent for her cousin. She received him alone, and "after a few minutes I said to him that I thought he must be aware why I wished them to come here—and that it would make me too happy if he would consent to what I wished (to marry me)." Then "we embraced each other, and he was so kind, so affectionate."

They parted, and she felt "the happiest of human beings," when Lord M. came in. At first she beat about the bush, and talked of the weather, and indifferent subjects. Somehow or other she felt a little nervous with her old friend. At last, summoning up her courage, she said: "I have got well through this with Albert."

"Oh! you have," said Lord M.

Greville's statement (Nov. 27, 1839) that "the Queen settled everything about her marriage herself and without consulting Melbourne at all on the subject, not even "communicating to him her intention," has no foundation in fact. The Queen's journal proves that she consulted Melbourne at every point.

Powers behind the throne of Victoria—one of them a woman—challenged the influence of Prince Albert, her husband. He had a hard fight to conquer Baroness Lehzen—who had been her governess—and Lord Melbourne. He had a power behind him, however, in the person of a shrewd German doctor, Boran Stockmar, and in the end he won. How he did will be told in the extract from Mr. Strachey's book to be printed next Sunday.

The Six "I's" of Success

By ROGER W. BABSON

(Copyright, 1921, Fleming H. Revell Company. First published in this newspaper by arrangement with Associated Editors, Chicago.)

Here are numerous statements relating to "The Way to Wealth;" if there is a new idea in them, help yourself:

"God helps them who help themselves.

"Industry pays debts, while despair increaseth them.

"If you would have your business done, go; if not, send.

"Experience keeps a dear school, but fools will learn in no other way.

"Dost thou love life, then do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of.

"Sloth, like rust, consumes faster than labor wears, while the used key is always bright.

"Lost time is never found again; and what we call time enough always proves little enough.

"He that hath a trade, hath an estate; and he that hath a calling, hath an office of profit and honor.

"Never leave till tomorrow that which you can do today. One today is worth two tomorrows.

"The eye of a master will do more work than both his hands. Keep thy shop and thy shop will keep thee.

"Silks and satins, scarlet and velvets, put out the kitchen fire. Fools make feasts, and wise men eat them.

"Pride breakfasted with plenty, dined with poverty and supped with infamy. Lying rides upon debt's back.

"Constant dripping wears away stones, and by diligence and patience the mouse ate in two the cable; and little strokes fell great oaks.

"A man may, if he knows not how to save as he gets, keep his nose all his life to the grindstone, and die not worth a groat at last. A fat kitchen makes a lean will.

"What maintains one vice would bring up two children.

"Want of care does us more damage than want of knowledge.

"If you would have a faithful servant, and one that you like, serve yourself.

"Many without labor would live by their wits only, but they break for the want of stock.

"The sleeping fox catches no poultry, and there will be sleeping enough in the grave.

"Not to oversee workmen is to leave them your purse open. A little neglect may breed great mischief.

"Industry need not wish, and he that lives upon hope will die fasting. There are no gains without pains.

"If you would be wealthy, think of saving as well as getting. Who dainties love, shall beggars prove.

"Diligence is the mother of good luck, and God gives all things to industry. They plow deep, while sluggards sleep, and you shall have corn to sell and keep.

"Employ thy time well, if thou meanest to gain leisure; and since thou are not sure of a minute, throw not away an hour.

"Creditors have better memories than debtors; creditors are a superstitious sect, great observers of set days and times. Rather go to bed supperless than rise in debt.

"Sloth makes all things difficult, but industry all easy. He that riseth late, must trot all day, and shall scarce overtake his business at night; while laziness travels so slowly, that poverty soon overtakes him. Drive thy business, let not that drive thee; and early to bed and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise."

Success Qualities

Books on success give a multitude of requisites. Some of these qualities are address, appearance, neatness, energy, vitality, speed, concentration, observation, reason, application, diligence, accuracy, punctuality, economy, order, system knowledge, intuition, culture, prudence, grit, tenacity, tact, diplomacy, thoroughness, initiative, adaptability, optimism, cheerfulness, reserve enthusiasm, sincerity, sympathy, self-control, ability as a detailist, ability as a generalizer, obedience to authority, ability to know men, ability to get along with men, self-confidence, etc., ad infinitum.

Careful study, however, shows that all of these may be classified under one of six fundamental principles. Strange enough, the entire six begin with the letter "I." These six I's include all the terms enumerated above. Thus the entire process of making good may be reduced to these six fundamentals. Let us consider them in order.

1. Industry

The greatest universities in America are not Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Princeton, Michigan, Chicago or California. These universities stand high in the development of certain faculties. But the graduates from these institutions have been successful because they also graduated from one of three still more famous institutions, namely, the wood box, the dish pan or the corn field. The greatest universities in America are the wood box, the dish pan and the corn field. These institutions have graduated the men and the women who are making America today. Why? Because the wood box, the dish pan and the corn field have taught young men and women to be industrious.

A chap in the south wrote a merchant of his city complaining about his high prices. The reply this chap received to his inquiry was sent to me for statistical verification. It was as follows:

"There are 365 days in the year. Of these 365 days the great majority of us work only 8 hours per day. This is 1-3 of the time or approximately 121 days. There are 52 Sundays in the year, and 52 Sundays subtracted from 121 working days leave 69 working days. Then the great mass of us get Saturday afternoons off. This is the equivalent to 26 days throughout the year. Twenty-six days subtracted from 69 working days leave 43 working days. Then there are two weeks' vacation in the year. This is 14 days and the 14 vacation days subtracted from the 43 working days leave 29 working days. There are also during a year 12 holidays, and the 12 holidays subtracted from the 29 working days leave 17 working days. We all receive one hour for lunch each day. This is equivalent throughout the year to 13 days. This is, 13 lunch hour days subtracted from the 17 working days leave 4 working days. Now everyone knows that there are 4 Jewish holidays during the year. Four holidays subtracted from the 4 working days leave no days! Then, why the devil do you ask why prices are high and business is rotten"

Eliminating duplications, the fact remains that the great mass of us work only 24 per cent of the time.

2. Integrity

Industry of itself, however, never gets anybody anywhere. Most animals work a good deal harder than you and I work. The inhabitants of the world during the last million years have always worked. They have been compelled to work to keep from starving and freezing. Why is it that after these millions of years of work it is only within the last few centuries that people have got anywhere and become healthier, happier and more prosperous? The reason is that only recently have men learned that with Industry there must go Integrity. The animals are industrious, but they are not honest. They steal, they deceive, they refuse to respect the rights and property of others. They are animals and always will remain animals. Civilization really dates from the time tht people began to respect the rights and property of others. Hence, the second "I" of Success is Integrity. And let me say right here that the real cause of business depressions is the temporary neglect of Industry and Integrity. While our nation's resources are greater than ever and the world's needs for goods is more tha never, factories close down because men forget those common virtues of Industry and Integrity which are the basis of prosperity.

3. Intelligence

But Industry and Integrity alone cannot accomplish much without Intelligence. To make good in business, young people must make good in school and college. Next to fathers and mothers, our best friends are our school teachers and college instructors. The statistical relation of education to success as already enumerated warrants making the third "I" of success, Intelligence.

4. Initiative

When I graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology it was difficult to get a job. I answered many advertisements but got no replies. Most of the advertisements were signed only by postoffice box numbers, so that the advertisers would not be bothered by the applicants. (At this point let me give you a little inside information. Whenever advertisements for help are signed by the postoffice box numbers that is an indicator that business is dull and there are many applicants for each position. When this is true you will not be able to bargain on the wage problem. When advertisements for help are signed by the name of the firm, you can rest assured that business is good and the applicants are few. When advertisements are signed this way you get an interview with the would-be employer and you can bargain on the wage problem to an advantage.)

The advertisement of the position I was seeking was signed by postoffice box number. Finally I got tired of writing letters to which I received no answers, and so went to the postoffice to find out who owned box 1070, which was the signature of an advertisement of a bond house wanting a statistician. The postoffice officials refused to tell me. I then went to the box and waited until someone came. I followed that someone to his office, went in, and applied for the job. The head of the firm looked me over and said: "Young man, here are letters from over a hundred applicants for this job, but I am not going to take any of them. I am going to try you, because I know you have initiative."

One may be happy if he has only Industry and Integrity and Intelligence; but he will never get very far in business unless he also has Initiative. Initiative is to business success what gasoline is to an engine or coal to a locomotive. Men succeed in business because they originate and do things before being told to do them. Initiative is the driving power of life, and the fourth "I" of Success.

5. Intensity

Down in Washington they have a lens about three feet in diameter which concentrates the sun's rays on a point as big as a pencil. The last I heard they had great difficulty to measure the heat at this point because the rays, wehn concentrated, was so hot that it melted every thermometer used to measure it. Just think, this is the only three feet of sunshine such as we have upon our bodies every day and do not feel, but this three feet becomes an all-powerful heat when intensified by concentrating it to a small point.

My start in life began with a lecture which I heard Booker T. Washington give on the subject of Intensity. His point was that he could make the poorest black man prosperous by teaching him to do one thing more intensely than anybody e in the community. Booker Washington went on to show how—for instance—if a man would study only "applies" and know more about apples than anyone else in the country, his success was assured. This suggests that the great trouble with people is that they are being taught too many things and are not specializing enough. Study convinced me that that is absolutely true and from that day on I devoted myself to statistics.

I press my thumb on your cheek, it doesn't hurt you; if I press the point of a lead pencil on your cheek, you feel it keenly; while if I press a needle point on your cheek, it pierces the skin and pains you. In each instance the pressure is the same. In the case of the needle the pressure is concentrated on a small point, while in the case of the pencil or the thumb the pressure is spread over a larger area.

It is the same with succeeding in business. To be successful, young people must specialize in something. It may be apples or bricks or clocks or pencils or clothing or shoes. By the way, if you specialize in shoes be content to take only a part of the shoe, such as the sole, the heel, the counter, the shoestring or the eyelet. It would be very difficult for any person to know all about shoes, but one could very easily become a specialist in counters, heels, soles, eyelets or shoestrings. The fifth "I" of Success is Intensity, concentration or specialization.

6. Inspiration

A half century ago a young newspaper reporter came from the Golden West to establish a news distributing office in New York City. He learned that news getting and news distributing were already pretty much provided for. After a few weeks of struggle this young man gave up in despair. He closed up his office preparatory for the return to California. Before he left New York he visited the East Side. There he saw the evidence of city poverty. The crowded tenements and inconviences of that mode of living made a lasting impression upon the young man. The next day he strolled up Fifth Avenue. There he saw evidences of great wealth, luxury and comfort. An idea came to him: "Why, with this increase in wealth, comfort and luxury for some, is there the increase in poverty and suffering for others?" Why should progress be coupled with poverty in such a manner? That young man decided there and then that he would discover the cause. He returned to his home state, where he devoted six years to the most intensive study of economics. He even sold the carpet out of his living room to complete the work. After the result of this six years of study and investigation was completed no publisher would print it. Eventually he had to put up the necessary amount to guarantee the cost of the plates. But the work was printed and Henry George's book on "Progress and Poverty" has been translated into more languages than any other book with the exception of the Bible.

The point that I want to make is this: Henry George had the various qualities above enumerated that make for success. As he walked up Fifth Avenue revolving th problem of progress and poverty he got an Inspiration. That Inspiration stimulated his Industry, Integrity, Intelligence and carried him through the six years of most intensive work. A great many of us may have the five attributes of success above enumerated. If with those attributes we get Inspiration then our quota is complete. Inspiration stimulates our other faculties, spurs us on to great achievements. It is because of this dynamic influence that I make the sixth and last "I" of Success, Inspiration.

WORKERS IN CANVASS ARE NAMED

Final plans and assignments of territories to workers for the preparing of catalogued lists of families in Wichita Falls in want or about to become in want, will be drafted at a meeting of the welfare council board and workers to be had Monday morning at 10 o'clock at the Chamber of Commerce, it was announced Saturday afternoon.

The work, according to Mrs. C. E. Ousley, as innumerable visits to secil, probably will not begin until Tuesday. Five women are reported to have volunteered their services in helping to complete the survey. Several others will be needed, according to Mrs. Ously, as innumerable visits to sections of the city, where the homes are crowded into almost inconceivable places and positions will be required before the survey is complete.

The survey was ordered last week by the Welfare council board, following a report made before the city council and Chamber of Commerce directors to the effect that hundreds of laborers in Wichita Falls are unable to find employment and are consequently facing starvation. An order also was issued by the Chamber of Commerce directors increasing the budget for the Welfare council, should it be found that a large number of families are needing assistance, as reported.

Walter D. Cline, mayor of Wichita Fall and potentate of Maskat temple, will arrive home by about September 5, according to a communication received Saturday from Mr. Cline by C. O. Fritz, recorder for Wichita Falls Commandery, Knights Templar No. 59.

Mr. Cline will arrive in time to participate in the Labor day festivities at Vernon, according to Mr. Fritz.

TEXAS LEADING IN NEARLY ALL PRINCIPAL CROPS

Special to the Record News.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Owing to the size of the state and the variety of its soil and climate, there are few crops in whose production Texas does not figure as one of the leading states. From cotton, in which it leads by far all other states, down through the entire list of crops Texas is somewhere near the head of the list on almost every crop. And now the census bureau, in figures of the 1920 census given out today, brings the state up to sixth place in the production of both sugar cane and sorghum.

Four crops are listed under the report on sugar crops in the United States—sugar cane, sugar beets, sorghum and maple sugar. Texas is included, if at all, under the heading of "all other states" with respect to both sugar beets and maple sugar. But it is among the leaders in both the other crops.

Louisiana in 1919 produced more than 68 per cent of the entire sugar cane crop of the United States, with a yield of 2,435,683 tons, out of a total of 3,551,129 tons for the United Stated. This was grown on 234,049 acres. Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Florida came next in rank with Texas producing 130,943 tons in 1919 from 18,867 acres. The same states outranked Texas in the amount of cane syrup made on fars, leaving Texas sixth with a production of 1,631,459 gallons, out of a total of 21,240,960 gallons in the United States.

The leading states in the production of sorghum syrup in 1919 were Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, Mississippi, in that order, followed next by Texas with 1,689,205 gallons, ont of a total in the United States of 21,523,025 gallons. The same states led Texas in the yield of sorghum, the latter producing 122,170 tons from 35,589 acres in 1919, out of a total of 1,644,100 tons from 482,043 acres in the entire United States.

WANT FORD TO RUN RAILROADS.

HART, Mich., Aug. 13.—Henry Ford will run the railroads running through Hart if the citizens of this place and vicinity have their way about it.

A petition, signed by 400 fruit growers, has been forwarded to President Harding asking that the railroads of Hart county be turned over to the Detroit automobile manufacturer. The petition was circulated by fruit growers dissatisfied with present freight rates.

After pointing out the 20 per cent reduction in rates on Mr. Ford's Detroit, Toledo and Ironton railroad recently, the petition states the belief of the petitioners that Mr. Ford would operate the roads for he benefit of all and not for personal gain.

AUTO AND OIL SECTION

WICHITA FALLS, TEXAS, SUNDAY, AUGUST 14, 1921.

LIBRARY OF MOTORS AID TO FARMERS

Not so many years ago you heard the argument that the automobile was destined to monopolize people's time, that they would have no more leisure hours for reading and that the nation would consequently degenate below its present standard of culture.

Since then, of course, it has been proved pretty definitely that exactly the reverse is true. The automobile saves such an enormous amount of time that people have more opportunity than ever to read. There is no danger that the motor car and culture will ever conflict.

As a matter of fact, there are a number of librarians in the country today who will tell you that the automobile is helping them introduce traces of culture into communities that would otherwise fail to develop an appetite for books for years to come. These librarians are taking their books to the farms—by automobile. They are introducing the motorized library, and the success which has attended their efforts indicates that it is one of the certain American institutions of the future.

Particular success with the motorized library is found in the case of Noblesville, Ind., a city of about 5,000, situated about 20 miles north of Indianapolis. In an exceedingly interesting article describing the methods and results employed in delivering the library to the farmer's door, Miss Lula M. Miesse, Noblesville's librarian, says:

"We tried both adult and juvenile stations in schoolhouses and homes and found the adult section was not well patronized. The country schools are open only five days a week and only six monthes a year. So the house to house plan of service was determined upon. We visited some other cities, where library autos were in use, and after looking over various chassis and trucks, we decided upon a Dodge Brothers Business Car. In the first place it did not need a great deal of remodeling for our purpose. It was strongly built and highly recommended by people who were using it, for durability under hard service, which we knew our car must receive.

"The seats were already comfortable. We had the wire screens and the entire back removed. The steel sides were bent over seven inches and used for shelves in front of the book cases. Inside the car we built our book cases of oak, with glass doors opening outward on both sides of the truck, so that it advertises its own wares as it travels over the country. The shelves slant slightly back to hold the books away from the glass.

"Our territory now is laid in sixteen runs, but we must add at least five to these in order to cover it. Some of our trips are long. Number one, for instance, is 42 miles long and begins and ends 10 miles from Noblesville. We have driven our car through fresh gravel, mud an dover ice. As we travel four days a week we cannot wait for good roads. The work is very interesting and grows more so as the librarians and the people get better acquainted. The demand for books has been so great that it has been almost impossible to satisfy both the city and the country, as we were not expecting and not well enough prepared for the voracious appetite for reading matter which we created.

"Our library car is called 'Parnassus' after Christopher Morley's book, 'Parnassus on Wheels.' It is a very interesting little book, about book peddling. We use an old-fashioned dinner bell to call our patrons, this being more effective than the horn. One side of the car is used for adult and the other for children's books. We carry about 300 books on the shelves and extra fiction and juvenile books inside. Fiction is in greatest demand, but we also circulate books on farming, travel, history, literature, music, and bible literature. We carry fairy stories and bear stories for the younger children and have introduced many youthful readers to Little Women, Tom Sawyer and Pinochio. One great advantage of our system to the rural patrons is that there are no fines attached to books charged to the library auto cards.

"The people in the country think we made a good choice of a car, as it is a good car, but not the most expensive. They make many comments on the car, especially since we have met the men in the homes.

"The Indiana Library Commission is trying to push the country library idea as are many other states. It much better to have a strong central library, where decent salaries are paid, than so many small libraries, barely alive, and of not much use in the community. The Indiana librarians are very much interested in our work.

"Our car now regularly visits almost 800 homes and has about 1,500 patrons, the circulation running from 100 to 150 per run. We will give more service when the remainder of our territory is organized. It is the most interesting library work we have ever done and we hope all of Indiana may have similar service in the near future."

In several tubercular sanatoriums of the United States there is now being used a little instrument of glass and steel that reflects the sun's rays down the patient's throat and larynx, and so hastens the destruction of the bacilli, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. To use the instrument, the patient faces the sun and places the tube between his lips, lens outward.

BLOW-OUTS FROM AUTO ROW
BY FLAT TIRE

It is refreshing to talk with F. D. Keim, the president of the Excelsior Motor C. F. D. is an optimist and has a pair of eyes in his head that insist on looking straight through the black cloud into the silver lining. "Everything is just right," says F. D. "We unloaded and sold two carloads of Studebakers this past week in addition to getting some out of Dallas. Collections are decidedly better than they have been, and I see nothing to worry about. I look for still further increases in business next month."

"Since we moved into our new location, business has been decidedly better," said J. D. Moulder, of the Wilhelm-Moulder Co. "Lower Indiana avenue is certainly proven territory for automobile salesrooms and we are delighted with the brisk business done since our move."

The C. T. Williams Auto Top Works added a modern, well-equipped painting department to their business recently. All sorts of auto painting will be done and only expert workmen will be employed, according to Mr. Williams. This firm is already favorably known through the splendid auto top and upholstery repair work which they have done here for some years. Mr. Williams reports business good.

Bland Omohondro, the genial salesmanager of the Motor Supply Co., in referring to business says: "It certainly comes in spurts. Sometimes things are quiet for a time and then all of a sudden a rush comes which stampedes you. People are taking very kindly to our term plan under which we are now selling Fords and it has proven to be a wonderful success.

L. D. Fritz, of the Fritz Motor Co., reports the sale of two new jobs this week. R. Brannon, Jr., was presented witha four-passenger four-door job by his father as a surprise, and a coupe was sold to John O'Neil to be delivered in the fall. A renewed Marmon went to J. Hudson of Burkburnett. L. D. is making big preparations for his national demonstration week which opens tomorrow. He is anxious to demonstrate to as many people as possible whether they are a prospect for the purchase of a Marmon or not.

C. L. Hall of the Lloyd Weaver Automobile Co. says that his salesroom has certainly the headquarters for baseball dope. Lloyd Weaver, according to Hall, is dividing his time between selling Hudsons and touring Oklahoma in search of promising young pitchers for the Spuddors. He brought back a winner in Knadler, too, if we are able to judge a ball player.

L. L. Dixon, of the Dixon Motor Co., is expecting the arrival of two carloads of the new Buick fours at an early date. Much interest has been shown, according to Dixon, in the announcement carried in the local papers, and he is expecting the new product to prove a winner from the start.

The Munger Auto Co. announces in this issue of the Record News a reduction of 25 cents an hour in the charges made in the repair shop for mechanical labor. Heretofore the charge was $1.50 per hour; after today it will be $1.25 per hour. Scott Bowers put this cut into effect in order that Cadillac owners might know that it was the disposition of the company to do everything possible to care for them at the smallest possible expense.

We were pleased to learn from a grateful employee of the Munger Auto Co., of this city that Scott Bower had just distributed a nice bonus to every employee on his payroll from the porter up to the highest paid man. This is the kind of treatment which puts "pep" into a force of men and makes them want to bring home the cured pork.

C. C. Randle of the Randle Auto Supply Co., says that there has been a very marked improvement in the tire situation. Popular size tires which could not be gotten from any of the factories are being shipped now and the condition looks much better now.

Al Booth, president of the Dealers association, as well as president of the Overland Motors Co., will soon be "long gone." Al's destination is a cabin owned by his father located in the wild, wild woods of North, Wisconsin. Mrs. Booth, who is now at Colorado Springs, will join Al in Chicago and journey with him to the camp, where they will both try their luck with the bass, trout and muskelonge.

If you get hold of anything else besides the fish, Al, bring some back to Wichita Falls with you.

Brisk business in both the wholesale and retail ends of their company is reported by the Overland Motors Co. In addition to several good deals made with distributors in Oklahoma, a Willys-Knight was sold to A. R. Salmon of this city and an Overland Four to R. G. Fuqua, also of this city.

John M. McDonough, Dallas branch manager of the Firestone Tire Co., was the guest of the city during the last half of the week. "Herb" Dodson, of the Southern Tire and Vulcanizing Co., was host at several parties, S. G. Lyeus, local Firestone representative, was personal chaperone. According to "Herb," Mr. McDonough, in addition to being a 100 per cent tire man, can more than hold his own in the little game played with cubes and has a very keen eye when it comes to watching the "hole card."

Herb, if you have any donations to make in the future remember the "Trade at H" slogan and give the local boys a chance. Don't give these Dallas birds a thing not even a baseball game.

Charles Nolen, the popular secretary of the Dealers' association, and member of the firm of Nolen-Stringer, reports the sale of a 5-passenger Haynes to Dr. Martin of Burkburnett.

STUDENTS GO TO SCHOOL IN OVERLAND CAR

The part played by the automobile in bringing all the benefits of city life to rural Americans can be no better demonstrated, probably, than by the record of an Overland car which was used by four high school students living in McDermott, Ohio.

The four youngsters, Lee Walker, his sister Dorothy, and Violet Higgins and Edwin Duncan, decided last fall that they would attend high school in Portsmouth, Ohio, during the coming year. But the question arose as to how they could be sure of getting to Portsmouth each day, Portsmouth being a 34-mile round trip if they took the long road, which was the better one, or 26-mile round trip by the short road.

As four miles of each road was unimproved and a half-mile of the short road subject to very bad conditions in the event of rain and snow, it was decided that the Overland 4, light, sturdy and economical, was the best car for their purpose.

That their calculations were well founded may be judged from the fact that from last September until June of this year the car carried them to school each day on time, winning them a no-tardy record. Often they were forcer to break the trail which involved breaking the ice in the mud holes. But they travelled 7804 miles, getting a gasoline average of 13 miles to the gallon under the worst conditions of road and weather and 20 miles to the gallon in the dry season.

After the close of the term, the car was in such excellent condition that young Waller took on the job of driving a traveling salesman for a stone company of a tour of several states. On this tour the car covered 1499 miles, averaging 125 miles a day. The gasoline consumption was one gallon to each 22 miles. The total costs of the trip for gasoline, oil and all garage bills was $22.61.

HOW TO APPLY PROPER LUBRICANTS TO MOTOR

Every mechanism must be lubricated if it is to continue long in service. Sewing machines and wheelbarrows may get along after a fashion with a great deal of neglect, but they will last longer and require less power if they are oiled at frequent intervals. If this is true of simple mechanisms how much more important must it be for a complicated structure like an automobile? The man who gives intelligent care to his automobile in the matter of lubrication will find that his car will last longer, require fewer repairs, have a better secondhand value and will require less gasoline consumption to run because of the reduced friction. This brings us to the real purpose of lubrication.

Contrary to the general supposition, the main purpose of lubrication is not to prevent the loss of power. As stated by experts, the main object is to prevent (1) seizing, (2) overheating, (3) wear, (4) loss of power. It will be evident that No. 1 is the most important and No. 4 the least, for an engine which runs, although under reduced power, is of some use, whereas an engine which has a seized bearing and cannot run at all is quite useless for the time being.

This brings us to the different classes of lubricants used on automobiles. They may be classed under five heads, as follows: Cylinder oil, transmission oil, gear-case compound, grease and graphite. Some drivers use an oil called machine oil which is intermediate in body between cylinder and transmission oils. It is cheaper than cylinder oil and is well adapted for use on brake and clutch connections, spark and throttle levers and connections, fan pulleys and all oil holes wherever located, such as the spring shackles, etc. Undoubtedly where a man has a fleet of cars to care for it will mean quite a saving in expenses to use a machine oil for these places, but the average man with one or two cars will hardly find it necessary. Cylinder oil serves the purpose just as well and there is no danger of getting the two mixed. This is important, for if machine oil is placed by mistake in the crank-case of an engine it will cause a heavy coating of carbon, besides cutting down the power. This is because it is not adapted to the high temperature required of a cylinder oil.

As used on a car, cylinder oil is placed in the breathing tube until the gauge shows that there is enough. It is also used in the squirt can to oil the many places just mentioned, such as brake and clutch pedals and connections, etc.

Transmission oil is much heavier than cylinder oil, and is used in the gear set (transmission case) and differential, particularly in winter. In summer it has a tendency to thin out, and so a light grease is used or a special preparation called a gear-case compound. The oil or grease must be fluid at all times or it will squeeze out when the gears mesh and will not run in again.

Cup grease will not flow, and so must be used in the grease cups. These must be turned down one turn every day, forcing the grease into the bearing. As it is heavy and resists squeezing out it lasts throughout the day's run.

Graphite is usually used in combination with oils and greases, although it may be used alone. It is a solid lubricant which fills up the microscopic holes in the bearings, making them smooth and slippery. As it resists pressure it is an excellent substance for this purpose, but must be used with caution. Some manufacturers advise against its use on their cars, as they claim it tends to clog up the small holes through which the oil must flow. Naturally their advice must be followed in such cases.

M'FALL BROTHERS MAKE TRIP OVER NEW TERRITORY

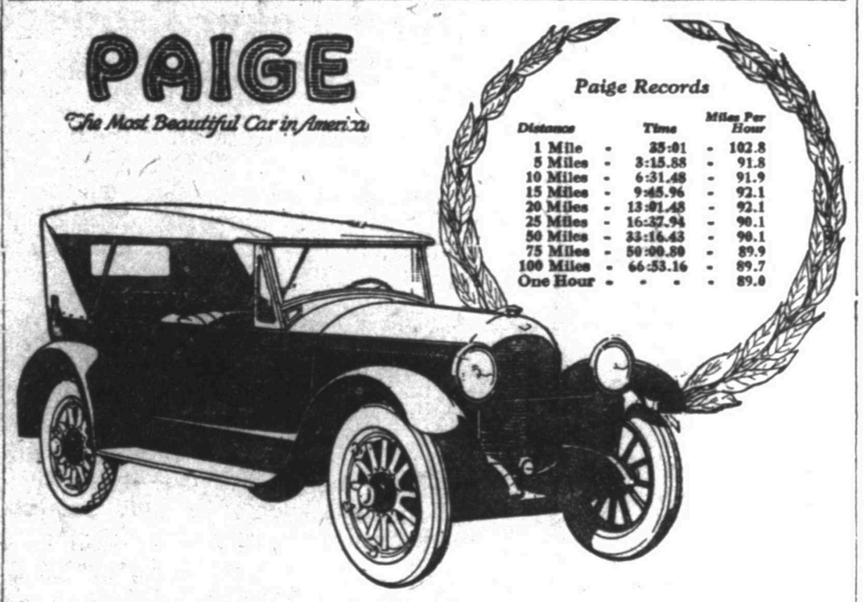

Messrs. J. M. and J. A. McFall, the well known purveyors of Dodge Brothers product, have just returned from a week's trip through Hardeman, Cottle and Foard Counties which they have recently added to their trade territory. Wilbarger County was also added included in their itinerary. They visited Vernon, Quanah, Chillicothe, Paducah and Crowell and report all these towns looking good.

They report cotton and corn looking exceptionally well and wheat and feed stuffs in fair condition, and all farmers are feeling good over the crop prospects.

McFall Brothers are enthusiastic over the fact that they are now in position to add these counties to their trade territory and are well pleased with the prospects for sales in that vicinity.

Championship Form

We are very proud of the world's stock chassis records won by our Daytona 6-66 model. But we are not race "fans" or speed fanatics.

We believe in heroic tests—not because they prove that our cars are fast—but because they prove that our cars are strong, durable, trustworthy.

We are convinced that championship form is the one best guarantee of all 'round efficiency. A car that is capable of 90 miles an hour must be blessed with a sound, robust constitution and immense reserve powers.

If this sounds reasonable, why not take the next logical step. Have a ride in a 6-66 model and compare it with any other car, at any price, on the American market. Then, you will understand what we mean by championship form.

Would this satisfy you today?

There was a time, not so many years ago, when the tallow candle "lighted the world."

In those days people managed to live without time-saving and hurry. "The good old days"—yes, but would you care to go back to them?

Would you be satisfied to do without electricity, telephone, telegraph—to have your mail delivered "once in a while" by pony express, to travel by stage coach, never to see a movie? No!

We have progressed—advanced; and, the automobile has been a potent factor in our progress.

As a means of transportation, the automobile today is as important as the railroad—as a time-saver, as great as the telephone and telegraph—as a necessity, as indispensable as electricity.

The automobile is 10% pleasure, 90% utility, and 100% necessity.

In the every-day life of the average man the automobile can prove its worth.

It is within the means of any man of responsibility to own a motor car.

WILLYS-KNIGHT MAKES RECORD ENDURANCE RUN

Official figures for one of the most unique tests of a motor car ever staged in the United States have just been issued.

The car tested was a stock Willys-Knight, leading exponent of the famous Knight motor in America. The results again give significant emphasis to the frequent efficiency records which the Willys-Knight sleeve-valve motor has established.

This most recent Willys-Knight demonstration recalls the historical statement of the inventor of this most modern of internal combustion engines. In giving to John North Willys the rights for use of the sleeve-valve patents, Knight said, "If I had been designing a lubrication system instead of a motor, I could have produced nothing better than the Knight motor."

Old Sol Co-Operates.

The remarkable test just completed was made upon the speedway track at Fresno, Calif., the run being held to obtain data upon the amount of oil and water needed by this motor in making a long run under almost tropical conditions of climate.

Due to the co-operation of Old Sol, the car was subjected to torrid conditions seldom encountered by any car in any clime. The car was started upon its ten-day run July 4th, ending July 14th. During this period a warm wave held Fresno in its grasp, the temperature ranging from 112 to 142 degrees on the track.

Under these truly torrid conditions the Willys-Knight in 224.14 hours actual running time covered 10,387 miles, a running time hourly average of 46.34 miles.

The car's gasoline consumption in this race against time showed an average of one gallon to 17.54 miles. The car used only a quart of oil to every 311.98 miles and only one gallon of water to each 505 miles.

Attests Designer's Skill.

That a car of the class of the Willys-Knight could pass through a gruelling test of this nature, running almost continuously for ten days under most extreme conditions of temperature, and yet show such a small consumption record in gas, oil and water was pointed out by the official observers as being a revelation in lubrication efficiency.

Friction in any machine results, not only in loss of power delivered, but also in a constant menace, since any slight delay in lubrication will ruin the mechanism. The constant problem of all motor plant designers is to reduce friction. Owing to the small number of moving parts in the Willys-Knight, together with the fact that its lubrication is one of the most simple and sure ever designed, it was possible for the car put to the test on the Fresno track to show a marvelous record, under abnormal conditions, in the consumption of oil and water and gas. At the close of the run the car was running better than at the start.

HINTS FOR MOTORISTS

A relief cock with a handle that is vertical when the valve is closed is apt to work open if the plug loosens through wear. The best way is to throw out the offending cock and buy a new one with the hose set properly, especially one with a spring to hold the plug tight in spite of wear. Another method is to fill the hole in the plug with a piece of brass wire carefully fitted and to drill a new hole in such a position that the valve is closed when the handle is down.

A simple but effective way to take off or put on piston rings is to use broken hack-saw blades a little longer than the piston. They work best with the teeth ground off. Use three, setting one under each end of the ring and one under each end of the ring and one at the middle. The rings can be slid off or on without distortion or breakage. It is best to carry a set of four, so that if one is broken there will still be enough to work with.

Do not under-inflate and do not over-inflate your tires. If too soft they will heat up too much and wear out all the sooner. If they are too hard they make harder riding and require more gasoline consumption, as the soft tire wraps itself round an obstacle, whereas a hard tire does not yield but must be pushed over the obstruction.

When struggling with a balky engine do not overprime. The usual tendency is to pull out the dash adjustment and to put gasoline in the priming cups. Many times the mixture is too rich to fire. Leave the compression cocks open and spin the engine with the starter. This will thin down the mixture and will probably start the engine.

When ball bearings become worn it is not always necessary to have complete new bearings installed. The old ones can be repaired and be almost as good as new. This can be done by turning up the ball races and using larger balls of the proper size.

It is a good plan to start the engine when filling the radiator of a car using a pump system. In some cases there are places which fill with air which only can be dislodged by running the engine. The system may seem full but after the engine has started the level will be found too low. Running the engine while filling will do away with this.

Present-day self-starting and electric lighting systems require efficient batteries. For this reason the battery should receive careful attention. It should be inspected frequently and the plates of the cells kept covered with electrolyte. A little distilled water added at frequent intervals may obviate the necessity of a new mattery.

A little oil and graphite injected between the spring leaves will make the spring more flexible and prevent squeaks, due to rusting. The easy-riding qualities of the car will be much improved as well.

If a motor is subjected to considerable vibration there is danger of the bolts coming loose at the base. A wrench should be applied occasionally to make sure that everything is tight. If this is not attended to almost anything may happen, from oil leakage to a wrecked engine.

A frequent and unsuspected loss of power is due to spark plug leakage. Most plugs leak when run very hot, and for this reason it will prove an advantage to make an occasional test at the end of a trip by packing joints and watching for bubbles. The leakage can usually be dropping a little oil around the stopped by taking up on the packing glands of the plug.

URGED TO TRY MARMON CARS SHOW WEEK

All preliminary plans have been practically completed for the country-wide demonstration week to be held during the week of August 15-20 by Nordyke & Marmon company and its representatives.

When the demonstration week was introduced by them last October its unusual features caught the fancy of the public to such an extent that it was felt that it should be an annual institution. The idea back of such a week is to make a ride in the Marmon 34 an actual experience for any and every one. In conjunction with this ride there was introduced last year the Marmon scorecard, on which the passenger was asked to make his own comparisons of the Marmon and other cars on twelve basic points. It was the beginning of selective buying in the motor car field. No broad claims were made, the comparisons were left entirely to the judgment of the purchaser, the case was in his hands.

The same general scheme will be followed this year. Throughout the entire country Marmon distributors and dealers will be co-operating simultaneously toward the end that during demonstration week the Marmon car will be presented to their community by actual contact. The demonstration week and scorecard idea is one that will mean real change in the methods of automobile salesmen, and the results of this second annual demonstration week will be watched with great interest.

L. D. Fritz, of the Fritz Motor company, who represents the Marmon car in this territory, is enthusiastically co-operating with Nordyke & Marmon company to make this demonstration week a huge success. He is anxious for all interested parties to ride in a Marmon whether they are prospective purchasers of an automobile or not.

Arrangements for a demonstration can be made by calling the Fritz Mortor company and asking for a demonstration.

REDUCTION AIDS OWNER OF CADILLAC

Scott Bowers, the popular manager of the local branch of the Munger Auto Co., announces a cut of 20 cents an hour in the charges made for mechanical labor in the repair department. The labor charge is cut from $1.50 to $1.25 per hour effective Monday, the 15th.

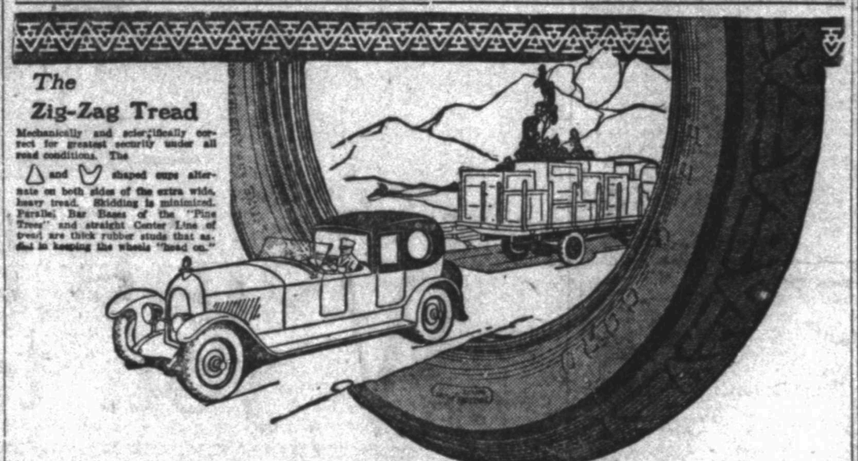

In speaking of this action on the part of his company, Mr. Bowers had the following to say:

"We are not in reality justified in making this cut as our repair department has always been conducted at a decided loss to us. It was never our plan or purpose to make it a revenue producer. It has shown a loss since its inception. But it has enabled us to give excellent service to Cadillac owners in this territory and keep their cars in perfect condition.

"The purchase of a Cadillac car is only the very first step in the long and pleasant relationship which exists between our customers and ourselves. Our organization plans to give the best service possible and with this ambition in mind our service department was established. It is true that we have lost money in its operation, but this loss has been more than offset by the knowledge that we have that a Cadillac owner is getting the very best in the way of service.

"We are making this cut of 20 cents an hour in the charge made for mechanical labor in our repair shop, in order that our car owners might feel that we are doing everything in our power to give them the best possible service at the least possible expense to them."

Puncture-Proof with Every Cord-Quality

LEE Cord Puncture-Proofs are the only cord tires that can win an argument with steel.

Let the thinnest, toughest, sharpest nail or stoutest spike try to pierce the triple thickness of steel discs. They cannot pass. Your tube is safe. The cord construction is uninjured. Not a cord cut or weakened, for the steel discs are placed between the cords and the tread.

For eighteen months Lee Cord Puncture-Proofs were subjected to the severest tests before being offered to the public. They were everything that a cord tire should be—not a single cord quality had been sacrificed to make them puncture-proof.

Let us show you the quality and construction of this remarkable tire.

COMPLETIONS LIMITED IN THIS SECTION

Completions in the Wichita county pools were rather limited in number for the week past, with nothing of a sensational nature developing, though all completions were of fair size.

The second producer in the new 1780-foot sand between Fowlkes station and Electra was completed this week, the No. 1 Fisher of Scott, Gates and Sheegog reported a hundred-barrel well. Three shots of nitro were given the sand, which had been drilled into about ten or twelve feet, according to reports. The discovery well of this southeast extension of the Electra semi-deep sand, the Gloria Oil company's No. 1 Douglas, drilled only a few feet into the sand, and was temporarily completed for a 50-barrel well several weeks ago. Several other tests for this deeper sand are understood to be contemplated around the two producers, but will probably be held up for a time, waiting developments in the oil market.

The west side of the Kemp-Munger-Allen pool contributed two nice wells, the C. W. Wallace No. 1 Lewis, lease A, a 125-barrel pumper, and the Gulf Production's No. 3 Potter Lewis, a 100-barrel pumper. Both wells are in the 1500-foot sand. Drilling is under way in new wells for both Wallace and the Gulf, it is reported.

Just west of the Gulf Production company's Grace-Jennings lease, and only a short distance from the town of Electra, the Acre Arco Oil company has made a small pumper in the thousand-foot sand of their No. 1 Waggoner. The well is reported making about 20 barrels of oil, and to be having water trouble.

Texhoma Pool.

In the Texhoma pool the Laning and Moninger No. 1 Cropper was reported a 50-barrel pumper in the sand at 1330 feet.

The Verschoyle et al No. 1 Rexford, 1,500 feet northwest of the Joses-Light producers in the new north pool, was pulling casing the latter part of the week to abandon, drilling down to 1480 feet. Thirty feet of sand was drilled around the 1,370-foot depth, at which the sand if found here, but tested salt water. This test was in block 6 of the Rexford.

In block 5 Bissonett et al are reported putting down a second test, drilling at the close of the week at around 1,300 feet. This well is just across the rorad from the Magnolia's pump station. A new derrick is reported up on the hill to the northwest, the name of the operator not secured. Another new derrick is reported upon the Weowna Oil company's right-of-way lease, along the M. K. & T. rails. The Weowna is still working with the No. 9, trying to shut off the sand, which was drilled below the 1,370-foot sand.

Other operations in this pool continu about as usual, with no change reported. The testing of the 1,000-foot sand in the Laning and Moninger No. 1 Dodson has not been completed.

Old Burkburnett.

In the old Burkburnett field the Magnolia Petroleum company's No. 60 Reilly is rerported a 30-barrel completion, sand at 1,680 feet, and the same company's No. 7 Anderson is reported making 40 barrels in the 1,800-foot sand. Several shallow wells belonging to this company, in the old Electra pool, are reported as preparing to drill deeper.

In the southeast Electra shallow field the Henry Hobbs No. 8 Burnett is reported a 10-barrel well from the 800-foot sand.

On the A. C. Henson, between the shallow Electra pools, and the Kemp-Munger-Allen, the No. 1 well of Peoples et al is reported making 30 barrels, 1,300-foot sand.

Several completions, all inside wells, are due at any time from the new Texhoma-Arrcher county pool.

Outside tests in this district show little change.

The Rattlesnake Oil company's No. 1 Netherton is reported shut down around 1,600 feet, waiting on six and five-eighths. The No. 1 J. D. Lyles of Fitzpatrick et al is reported drilling around 1450 feet.

The test of J. E. Walsh on the L. F. Wilson, between the new pool and the town of Archer City, is reported drilling again, after a several days' shut-down, now down below 1,300 feet.

In the shallow district, just north of Holliday townsite, the No. 1 Morrison of Carl Parker is reported on an oil sand around 630 feet, and cleaning out. This test is in lot 4, league 3 of the Denton county school lands.

In this same district the No. 1 Nitsche of Woodruff et al is reported temporarily shut down around 800 feet.

The Archer City townsite tests continue operations at the usual rate, according to field reports. The No. 1 is reported standardizing to drill deeper from 1,800 feet, and the No. 2 is reported drilling around 800 feet.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

To the Automobile Editor:

Do you favor the oxygen process for removing carbon or is there a better method? My engine knocks badly on a hill and the carbon can be seen by removing the spark plugs. Would it be advisable to pour water through the carburetor? W. A. R.

Answer—Water would do very little good in this case, as the deposit is too heavy. If the cylinder head is removable and there is time enough, you can scrape it out, which is preferable. But without a removable head, or where time presses, the oxygen process will be found to be satisfactory. It leaves a slight smokiness in the cylinders, but there is no doubt about its removing the carbon.

To the Automobile Editor:

How can I make a paint for motor car rims that will prevent rust?

G. D. S.

Answer—Remove the rust from the rims by scraping and sandpapering. Clean thoroughly and then apply a coat of ordinary shellac mixed with some graphite. When this is dry apply another coat. An aluminum paint will improve the looks of the rim if it is desired and will serve the same purpose.

To the Automobile Editor:

I have always been puzzled as to whether the gas in the cylinder of an automobile explodes or burns rapidly. Please advise me. N. C. H.

Answer—An explosion is a form of combustion so rapid that it seems to be instantaneous. With the proper appartatus the length of the explosion can be measured and some mixtures of gasoline and air are found to burn faster than others. As the burning is practically instantaneous, they are properly called explosions.

To the Automobile Editor:

Will you kindly advise me if there is any value in useing chains on the front as well as the rear wheels? T. P. R.

Answer—A chain should be placed on each wheel for greatest security, but many drivers use them on the rear wheels only as it is a little more difficult to steer with chains on the front wheels. It is best to use at least one on the front to prevent skidding.

To the Automobile Editor:

What is the best way to mend a cracked water jacket? It is not a serious leak but is simply annoying as I have to fill the radiator too often. D. S. G.

Answer—Welding is the best method, but you can do as good a job as necessary with smooth-on cement. This makes what is virtually a cold weld.

To the Automobile Editor:

Do you advise the use of powdered graphite in the crank case of an engine using the splash system? Oil is pumped into the main bearings and throughs into which the cranks dip. Will it have a bad effect on the engine? F. L. H.

Answer—A teaspoonful fed in through the air inlet of the carburetor once a month is advisable, but more is apt to do harm as it has a tendency to clog the oil holes. Used in moderation graphite is serriceable in filling the microscopic holes in the bearings and cylinder walls, making them smooth and slippery, but care must be used not to feed too much.

To the Automobile Editor:

Is it advisable to use ether or picric acid in the gasoline so as to get more power? D. F. S.

Answer—Used in small quatities they certainly give more power, but the writer has seen the head of a piston blown through, and there are cases where the top of the cylinder has blown out. The engine is designed for the exploding of gasoline vapor and any stronger explosion is apt to wreck it.

F. D. Queens, L. I.—The Automobile Club of America, 247 West 54th street, will be able to give you just the information you want.

To the Automobile Editor.

My Ford engine is hard to start and I think the spark is weak but am not sure. I am using six dry cells and wish to know if it will be safe to use eight. N. H. R.

Answer—The induction coils are designed for a voltage of six to seven, which will be given by five dry cells. Any more added will have a tendency to burn out the primary windings of the coils. Possibly your vibrators need adjusting, your spark plug gaps may be too wide, your timer set too late, or the contacts may be dirty. Clean the plugs and set the gaps to the thickness of a hacksaw blade. Adjust the vibrators to give a quarter inch spark. Advance the spark lever a little more than ususal but be careful to pull up on starting handle so as to avoid a back kick. Give the carburetor a slightly richer mixture and the engine should start easily enough.

To the Automobile Editor:

Please advise me whether the oil which arrives at the top of the piston works there gradually by the motion of the piston or is drawn there by the suction of the exhaust?

F. J. D.

Answer—As the piston works up and down in the cylinder it gradually brings the oil to the top. Under normal conditions there is very little and it burns as fast as it reaches the top of the piston. But if the cylinder walls or the rings are worn or scored and particularly if the engine is run without load, the oil is sucked up on the suction stroke and the combustion space fills with carbon. The exhaust leaving the cylinder has no power to draw up the oil.

To the Automobile Editor:

Please tell me how to figure the horse power of a gasoline engine.

T. M.

Answer—A simple way to figure the horse power approximately is to square the bore (multiply the bore by itself), multiply this by the number of cylinders, and divide the product by two and a half.

MEGARGEL WILL HAVE TEST WELL

The J. Richardson rach, about two and a half miles east of Megargel, is to have a 2,500-foot test for oil drilled immediately according to reports this week. The Swastika Oil syndicate is preparing to drill in lot 15 of the South Anderson ranch subdivision.

Several of the larger companies hold acreage around this test and it is understood that some of them are interested in the drilling, and that a thorough test will be given.

Since the stike of the Sun company on the Farmer, the entire southwest corner of Archer county has come in for an increased share of attention from the wild-catters, and though the first well was only a small one, there are indications that this showing will be tested to the futiest possible extent.

Brief Biography Of Elwood Haynes

We realize the amazing age we are living in when we know that the men who invented the three greatest every-day features of civilized progress are still hale and hearty.

Thomas A. Edison invented the electric light, Elexander Graham Bell invented the telephone, Elwood Haynes invented the motor car.

We are so accustomed to all three of these that we must make an effort to realize that a few years ago the electric light, the telephone and the motor car were curiosities. Not many people believed they would ever be practical.

A carriage ran without horses, light came from a vacuum and two men talked to each other at the same time a thousand miles apart.

Yet not one of the three men, mentioned as these inventors, appears to have sat down and tried to do the miraculous. Each of them patiently worked to create something practical—something which would serve humanity. Each of them had foresight—had vision. None of them cared two whoops for ridicule or criticism.

Elwood Haynes saw his invention sweep the world inside of a quarter of a century. His first car stands today in the Smithsonian Institution, where you will also see Edison's first work and Bell's first telephone.

HECTIC MONTHS OF PAST FADE INTO OBLIVION OF MEMORY AS NEW BUNGER WELL PROVES POOL

Not in months, scarcely since the Panhandle's discovery well on the McCluskey was brought in a year ago last July, has there been such excitement and interest in the entire south part of Young county as that inspired this week by the strike of the Ross and Terrell test on the Owens farm, in the Bunger district, about three miles due east of the town of South Bend. Coming in first as a gasser of five million feet capacity, the well was making some oil with the first gas, and after the tools were run a couple of times began flowing by heads.

Tank connections were made Thursday and the well is now reported making regular heads, though not yet cleaned out, and producing through an eight-inch hole. The sand, entered at 1,890 feet, has been drilled less than three feet, according to latest reports from the well. Six and five-eighths casing will probably be set and the well cleaned out and perhaps drilled a little deeper, within the next few days, it is indicated in reports from the field.

New Pool.

Regardless of the ultimate production, which now appears as if it will reach several hundred barrels, the Ross and Tyrell well has definitely established a producing pool six miles west of the righ pool along the Clear Fork of the Brazos, which has been under development for the past year. By reason of various showings in other tests in this general neighborhood operators had high hopes for the Bunger for some time, which now seem in a fair way for realization.

The Union Oil company's test on the Askew is still fishing for the casing, on top of the sand at 1,960 feet.

The Paragon Oil company's No. 1 Vick is reported having trouble with collapsed casing around 1,800 feet.

No. 1 Driver of Hedrick and Spoonts, about two thousand feet to the west of the new well, is reported drilling around 1,100 feet.

The Jackson and Cathcart on the Lisle, south of the Ross and Tyrell, is reported drilling around 800 feet.

There will be four or five new locations made within the next few days around the new well, according to present indications, and considerable activity is expected.

Del Tex Sets.

After some little delay waiting on five and three-sixteenths casing, the Del Tex Oil company's No. 1 Emma West, just east of South Bend townsite, has completed setting the casing, and is now cleaning out. Early in the week the hole was reported standing 1,200 feet in oil, and the amount is reported increasing. This well is in the lime, at 3,265 feet.

This deep showing is, needless to say, attracting much attention from oil men in the district, and the outcome is being anxiously watched. Particularly is it of interest to operators whose tests in the general neighborhood have failed to secure satisfactory production or even showings, at the shallower depths at which oil is found in this district.

Hemphill Test Sensational.

In the Graham-McCluskey pool the week's sensation has been the No. 2 Keller of M. R. Hemphill, a 600-barrel well in the 1,900-foot sand. Around this and the No. 1, completed a couple of weeks ago, flowing at the rate of 700 barrels, after a shot, a number of new locations have been made and new rigs are reported moving in daily. These new operations are on leases belonging to the Plateau Oil company, the Magna Oil company, the Kent Oil company, the North American Oil and Refining company and the Oklahoma Petroleum and Gasoline company.

Three new wells are due for completion in the next few days around the North American-Roxana's No. 3 Ford, on the east side of the pool. These expected completions belong to the Panhandle, the W. E. Conner interests, both of the McCluskey and the North American Oil and Refining company on the Ford.

The Panhandle is also reported due to have a couple more completions, in the older sections of the pool, in the river's bend, the Godley is reported to have two which should be in some time this week, on their Graham lease. The Kent Oil company's No. 8 Keller is also reported ready for completion.

There are no new operations reported to the west of the river bend pool. The New Domain No. 1 Graham, some distance to the west, has not yet shown anything worth while in the 3,300-foot lime, which has been in process of testing for several weeks.

SEES GREAT PERIL IN AMASSED WEALTH

NEW YORK, August 13.—Henry H. Klein, the first deputy to the commissioner of accounts, has just issued a book called "Dynastic America and Those Who Own It," in which he estimates the amounts of about 400 great American fortunes and puts forth the thesis that the constitution should be amended to provide for the limitation of fortunes, especially those fortunes in possession of heirs. He dedicates his work "to those who believe in constitutional government of, by and for the people," and interspersed through the pages and paragraphs are quotations bearing upon his contention, such as the following:

"The Federal Constitution is intended to preserve free institutions in the United States. It was amended for prohibition and woman suffrage. Why not amend it to limit excessive private fortunes?

"The Sherman anti-trust law has failed to check extortion by private monopoly. Why not check the greed of those who control private monopoly?

"This book proves that wealth is concentrated. History records that the decline of civilization in a nation begins with wealth concentration.

"Excessive private fortunes are in the hands of the third, fourth and fifth generations, who exerted little or no effort to obtain them. Why not limit what these individuals can have, and stimulate worthy ambition?"

On the same thesis the author has written books entitled "Bankrupting a Great City" and "Standard Oil or the People." He has been employed by several investigating committees and in public life has taken every opportunity to expound the theories again set forth in his latest book.

New Rockefeller Estimates

The author devotes a section of his book to the Rockefeller and Standard Oil fortunes under the heading, "The Largest Estates Are From Standard Oil."

"In a single lifetime,' he says, 'John D. Rockefeller has amassed a fortune greater than that of any other individual or family. His wealth is estimated at $2,400,000,000, including the holdings in the foundations.

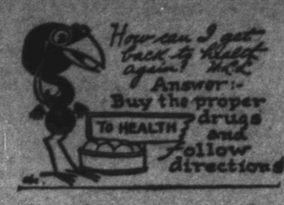

"Mr. Rockefeller is worth $1,000,000,000 in oil alone. His railroad holdings are estimated at $400,000,000. His holdings in industrial corporations outside of Standard Oil are appraised at $400,000,000, and his interest in gas, electric light and traction is fixed a several hundred millions more. He has several hundred m'l'ion dollars in bonds of the United States and other countries and in the bonds of cities and states. He owns many millions in real estate and mortgages. Part of this vast wealth is held in the foundations. When Mr. Rockefeller dies his estate will show far less than he owns because a large share of his fortune has already been transferred to his children.

"More than forty families in the United States have in excess of $100,000,000 each. More than 100 other families have in excess of $50,000,000 each. More than 300 other families have in excess of $20,000,000 each.

"Estimated income tax returns show that John D. Rockefeller's taxable income is about $40,000,000 a year; William Rockefeller and the late Henry C. Frick $10,000,000 each; Morgan, Baker, Harkness, Armour, Ford, Payne, Vanderbilt, Field, Green, Harriman, Guggenheim, Astor, Hill Mellon and Phipps $5,000,000 each; the Stillman family, Ryan, Schwab, du Pont, Clark, Brady and Whitney $3,000,000 each; Schiff, Duke, Eastman, Kahn, Swift, Rosenwald, Blair, Huntington, Flagler, Widener, Stotesbury and Pratt $2500,000 each.

"Others whose taxable incomes are estimated to exceed $2,000,000 a year Penfield, Converse, Gould, Reids, Hearst, Mills, Davison, Bel-, John D. Ryan, Gary, Billings, chran, Pullman, Goelet, Woolworth, Plant, Arbuckle, Rhinelander, James, Morris, Moore, Phelps, Dodge, Lamont and Warburg.

"The gross income of most of these persons far exceeds the taxable amount. The gross income of John D. Rockefeller, for example, is about $140,000,000 a year. His income in 1907, the panic year, was estimated at about the same amount. Prior to that time it was estimated at $6,000,000 a month."
