Midland unemployment rises to 2.6 percent

Workforce Solutions reports rise in unemployment filings

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

Midland rang in the new year by remaining at the top of the state's labor market.

The Texas Workforce Commission said Friday the Midland metropolitan statistical area had an unemployment rate of 2.6 percent, up from 2.2 percent in December — revised slightly from the 2.1 percent originally reported. A year ago, Midland had an unemployment rate of 3.2 percent.

Odessa and Amarillo tied for second lowest unemployment at 3.3 percent.

Willie Taylor, chief executive officer of Workforce Solutions Permian Basin, said Midland's labor force has fallen by about 3,000 from its peak of about 100,230 last November.

Oil prices that have fallen by more than 50 percent are having an impact, he said. "What we're seeing in our centers is that, (with) the numbers increasing, more folks (are) filing unemployment claims," he said.

He said his office has been receiving weekly notices from companies planning layoffs of more than 100 people.

"Everyone's saying we have such a large supply of oil and no place to put it and prices may fall. But we still have the state's lowest unemployment," he said.

One reason is the number of new businesses that were drawn to the booming area in recent years, Taylor said.

Permian Basin idles 22 rigs this week

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the Permian Basin tumbled this week as 22 rigs were idled, bringing the rig count to 333.

This week's count marked the 13th consecutive decrease for the Permian Basin. The last time Baker Hughes reported a positive rig-count change was Dec. 5, 2014, when 568 rigs were reported. Since then, the Permian Basin has shed 235 rigs, a decrease of 41.37 percent.

For the year, the Permian Basin has idled 197 rigs, or 37.17 percent.

In District 8, which includes Midland and Ector counties, the rig count fell 12 this week after gaining two the previous week. In total, there were 213 rigs in the West Texas district. District 8 has shed 101 rigs this year, a decrease of 32.17 percent.

Texas

Texas' count was down 32 this week, leaving 538 rigs statewide.

In other major Texas Basins, there were 149 rigs in the Eagle Ford, down eight; 38 in the Haynesville, down two; 32 in the Granite Wash, down two; and 9 in the Barnett, unchanged.

The Barnett Shale has seen the steepest decline of all major Texas plays, idling 62.50 percent of its rigs after starting the year with 24.

At this time last year, there were 506 rigs in the Permian Basin and 864 in Texas.

United States

The U.S. rig count fell 75 this week, all on land, leaving 1,192 rigs nationwide. The last time the U.S. rig count fell below 1,200 was the week ending Dec. 31, 2009, when 1,189 rigs were reported. Most of the idled rigs were exploring for oil. The count dropped 64, bringing the oil rig count to 922. There were 268 natural gas rigs in the U.S., down 12. Rigs listed as miscellaneous increased one for a total of two.

By trajectory, there 177 vertical rigs, down 17; 895 horizontal rigs, down 51; and 120 directional rigs, down seven. The last time horizontal rig count fell below 900 was the week ending Aug. 20, 2010, when 895 rigs were reported.

There were 1,133 rigs on land, down 75; eight in inland waters, unchanged; and 51 offshore, unchanged. The Gulf of Mexico count was unchanged at 49.

The U.S. had 1,792 rigs a year ago this week.

Bill to ban texting while driving could hit a wall at Abbott's desk

By Madlin Mekelburg
Houston Chronicle

State Rep. Tom Craddick is optimistic his third attempt to pass a statewide ban on texting while driving will pass its first legislative hurdle next week, but a far higher bar may await at the governor's desk.

On the campaign trail last summer, Gov. Greg Abbott said he would not support such a ban, which a spokesman described as "micromanaging adult driving behavior." The language was similar to that used by former Gov. Rick Perry in 2011, when he vetoed the same bill. Perry acknowledge the dangers of distracted driving but said he preferred information and education campaigns to dissuade motorists from texting while driving.

A similar bill failed to make it out of committee in 2013.

Craddick, R-Midland, on Thursday said he is optimistic Abbott will sign the bill if it makes it to the governor's desk.

"We've talked to him, and his people have been very active, coming to hearings, to the rally we had and talking to people whose loved ones were killed," Craddick said.

Abbott spokesman John Wittman declined to comment on whether the States say Obama administration misled judge on immigration

By Juan A. Lozano
Associated Press

HOUSTON.— A coalition of states suing to stop President Barack Obama's executive action on immigration alleges the government misled a judge about not implementing part of the plan before the judge temporarily halted it.

The allegation comes after the Justice Department said in court documents this week that federal officials had given 100,000 people three-year reprieves from deportation and granted them work permits under a program that protects young immigrants from deportation if they were brought to the U.S. illegally as children.

Justice Department attorneys had previously said federal officials wouldn't accept requests under an expansion of the 2012 Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program, known as DACA, until Feb. 18.

The federal government's immigration actions regarding DACA as well as a program that would extend deportation protections to parents of U.S. citizens and permanent residents who have been in the country for some years, were put on hold on Feb. 16 by U.S. District Judge Andrew Hanen in Brownsville, Texas. Justice Department attorneys have asked Hanen to lift his hold while they appeal the ruling to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. Hanen has not made a decision on that request.

Obama's action, first proposed in November, could spare from deportation as many as 5 million people who are in the U.S. illegally. Many Republicans strongly oppose his action and 26 states, most of them led by Republicans, sought to block the Obama orders as unconstitutional.

"News that tens of thousands of expanded work permits have already been issued to illegal immigrants while President Obama's executive action, which we believe is illegal, is being contested in the courts is both outrageous and unacceptable," Texas Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick said in a statement.

In court documents filed Tuesday, the Justice Department said that between Nov. 24 and Feb. 16, federal immigration officials granted the three-year reprieves to 100,000 individuals who were already eligible under the original 2012 guidelines of DACA.

The Justice Department said the federal government recognizes that its identification of Feb. 18 as the date when requests under the new and expanded eligibility would be accepted "may have led to confusion."

Justice Department attorneys said they don't believe the preliminary injunction requires federal officials to take any steps to reverse the three-year reprieves already granted.

In court documents filed Thursday, the states said they don't understand why the U.S. government doesn't consider the approval of the 100,000 reprieves to have been done under the new and expanded guidelines of DACA.

The 2012 DACA guidelines provided two-year deportation reprieves and work permits. Obama's new immigration action would expand that to three years.

"This newly disclosed conduct is difficult to square with (the federal government's) prior representation to the Court that 'nothing is going to happen' until weeks after" a Jan. 15 court hearing on the preliminary injunction request, the states said in court documents.

The states, led by Texas, asked Hanen to allow them to request additional information from the federal government about how it approved the DACA requests while the lawsuit was going through the courts.

In his Feb. 16 decision on the injunction, Hanen wrote the federal government had indicated that Feb. 18 would be the date it planned to accept requests under the expansion of DACA. Hanen also wrote that while his injunction did not affect the 2012 DACA program, it did put on hold its expansions and additions proposed by Obama's action.

The other major part of Obama's immigration action extending deportation protections to parents of U.S. citizens and permanent residents who have been in the country for some years, had not been expected to begin until May 19.

Ethics reviews come amid report on ties between police chiefs, Taser

By Ryan J. Foley
Associated Press

Two big cities are reviewing their ethics policies after The Associated Press reported on how their police chiefs were closely linked to a company that won contracts to supply officers with body cameras.

Officials in Salt Lake City and Fort Worth said their chiefs' relationships with Taser International didn't violate current policies, but that they highlight potential shortcomings. The Texas Police Chiefs Association also will look into such relationships, saying they likely violate its ethics code.

The reviews come after the AP reported Tuesday that Taser International was building financial ties to current and former police chiefs who promote the company's body cameras and video storage system. The company is paying for airfare and hotels for chiefs who travel to speak at technology summits and appear in company materials praising its products. Some chiefs have become Taser consultants after retiring.

"It's caused a lot of entities to rethink this," said Tom Cowan, chairman of the Texas chiefs association's ethics committee. "It's extremely important for us to have public confidence and respect, and to be transparent when dealing with public funds."

Salt Lake City Mayor Ralph Becker directed staff to review whether the rules on relationships with city vendors should be updated after facing questions about Chief Chris Burbank's speeches at Taser-sponsored events and online promotional video.

"He recognizes that in retrospect some of that participation maybe wasn't the best decision to make," Becker spokesman Art Raymond said of Burbank.

Fort Worth City Manager David Cooke said the city is reviewing whether its code should be strengthened to address perception problems, including vendor-funded travel and product endorsements. He noted that many professional groups have stricter rules.

Records show that Fort Worth's then-police chief, Jeffrey Halstead, worked last year to complete a contract worth $2.7 million for 400 cameras and storage before a quarterly deadline, telling Taser "someone should give me a raise." Halstead later accepted Taser-funded trips to Boston, Miami and Phoenix. After retiring in January, he said he planned to become an "official consultant" before traveling to Australia and Abu Dhabi for Taser events.

Cowan said Halstead likely violated the Texas association's ethics code, which says chiefs and subordinates shouldn't endorse products or accept perks intended to influence or reward.

The decision by Memorial Villages, Texas, police chief J.D. Sanders to allow his newly hired assistant Ray Schultz to work on the side as a Taser consultant also "runs counter to the code," Cowan said. The ethics committee will discuss the matter April 1 and may issue guidance reminding members about the provisions, Cowan said.

Schultz is the former chief in Albuquerque, where the inspector general and internal auditor are reviewing a $1.95 million no-bid contract he backed for Taser body cameras in 2013 before stepping down. Their reports should be completed in April, the city said Thursday.

Sanders, whose city is surrounded by Houston, dismissed the Albuquerque questions as "old news" in an AP interview and said Schultz had done nothing wrong. He said Schultz would take vacation time when he travels overseas this month for Taser events.

"We're not going to keep him from that, and it's silly for anybody to even think we would," he said.

He said Taser was lucky to get someone as smart and experienced with body cameras as Schultz. "It's just like they get Peyton Manning to sell these energy drinks."

National groups, some of which have their own relationships with Taser, said they would leave ethics and purchasing questions to existing municipal regulations.

"It's just difficult to control appearances at times," said Darrel Stephens, executive director of the Major Cities Chiefs Association, which Taser gives $25,000 annually in exchange for recognition and access at meetings.

However, Donny Youngblood, president of the Major County Sheriffs' Association said he wouldn't accept vendor-funded travel, calling it "a slippery slope."

"You have to be careful you don't become a salesman," he said.

School votes for communism as prom theme

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Seniors at a New Mexico high school have voted to hold a prom with a communism theme, which they've dubbed "prom-munism."

KRQE-TV in Albuquerque reported that Cottonwood Classical Preparatory School students voted online this week for the theme.

Senior Sarah Zachary said many of her classmates are jokesters and they wanted the prom to be funny. But she said lots of students are also intense about politics.

Cottonwood executive director Sam Obenshain said the school's students are in the International Baccalaureate program and are very academically focused.

Obenshain said he plans to talk to students to make sure that the communism theme is something they want to embrace.

The prom is scheduled at the Albuquerque Aquarium on April 25.

UNEMPLOYMENT

From 1A

Still, "the longer low oil prices go on, we'll see more and more unemployment claims filed," he said.

The booming economy has created a number of jobs, and some openings could absorb many of those laid off from the oil fields, Taylor said. But those jobs aren't the high-paying jobs seen in the oil fields, he said.

Those filing claims might have been making six-digit figures in the oil field, but most want to draw unemployment, he said. "They draw down to one or two months left, and then they decide they'd better find a job. I think they're holding out hope that jobs with the six-digit paycheck will come back," he said.

Those who "are responsible will do the math and figure it's better to work several low-paying jobs than stay unemployed," he said.

"But we still have openings for truck drivers, automotive workers, diesel mechanics, electricians. I was talking to the Ector County Independent School District superintendent, and he said he's seeing more applications coming in."

Ryder Warren, superintendent at Midland Independent School District, said the district has seen more applicants since oil companies began laying off workers.

"We're short 200 support staff — maintenance, custodians, food service, bus drivers," Warren said, adding, "We'll consider one and all."

Warren said the district has been running help-wanted ads that target those "in the unfortunate situation of being laid off."

Taylor said employers are also telling him they're not seeing workers jumping from job to job.

Additionally, women who had stayed home while their husbands brought home those big paychecks are now entering the workforce.

"I feel we'll have lots of job openings and increased traffic to our centers," he said.

Midland lost 100 jobs from December to January, as a 400-job loss in trade, transportation and utilities and a 100-job loss in education and health services offset a 200-job gain in leisure and hospitality and a 100-job gain in mining, logging and construction.

For the 12 months between January 2014 and January 2015, Midland added 8,400 jobs, for a 9.3 percent growth rate. In the dominant mining, logging and construction sector, Midland added 3,600 jobs for a 13.7 percent growth rate. That growth rate was just barely beaten by the 13.8 percent growth rate in leisure and hospitality, which added 1,100 jobs during the year. Trade, transportation and utilities added 2,400 jobs for a growth rate of 13.2 percent.

Statewide, the unemployment rate fell to 4.4 percent from 4.6 percent in December and is the fifth consecutive monthly decline, the commission said.

The commission said the state added 20,100 seasonally adjusted nonfarm jobs in January for a total increase of 392,900 jobs over the year.

"This latest labor market data indicates that our state is approaching the 12 million jobs milestone, with 11,769,600 jobs now in Texas," said Hope Andrade, a commission member who represents employers.

In a statement released by his office, Gov. Greg Abbott said that, "while the January job numbers are a testament of the strength of Texas' economy, there is more we must do to boost our job market beyond our borders and compete on the global stage.

"By diversifying investments, streamlining regulations and reducing the business franchise tax, we will cultivate an even stronger, more effective economy where all Texans are afforded the opportunity to innovate and to prosper," he said.

While Midland had the lowest unemployment, the highest was reported in McAllen-Edinburg-Mission at 8.3 percent.

BILL

From 1A

governor would veto the bill like his predecessor but said his boss would consider any bill "with the goal of making Texas better."

Texas is one of six states that has not banned texting while driving, although 40 cities and towns in Texas have enacted local bans on using handheld phones while driving, including Galveston, Austin and Denton.

The bill is expected to be voted on by the House Transportation Committee next week.

Craddick said four members of the panel were "on the fence" about the legislation but changed their minds after hearing testimony from advocates of the ban on Thursday.

90 deaths a year

"This bill is about saving lives," Craddick said at a Thursday's hearing before the committee. "We want drivers to choose life instead of texting."

The bill would make texting while driving a class C misdemeanor unless an individual has pulled over to the side of the road. Violators would face a fine of up to $99 for a first-time offense and up to $200 for repeat offenses.

Current state law bans drivers under 18 from using their cellphones while driving, and texting while driving is prohibited in school zones.

Alva Ferdinand, an associate professor in the Health and Policy Management Department at Texas A&M Health Science Center, shared results of research she has done on distracted driving with the panel and said a statewide ban on texting while driving could help the state avoid 90 deaths a year.

"I have met so many people who have lost someone because they were so attached to their phone and there was no one to stop them on the highway from using that phone in a distracting manner," said Jeanne Brown, whose daughter, Alex, was killed after texting while driving. The bill is named after her daughter

6-year-old's story

"She went off the road and rolled her truck and died later that day because of her choice to pull her phone out and text in that car," Brown said. "It's been over five years. She's not coming back."

Troy Abrams shared the story of the death of his 6-year-old son Brandon, who was struck by a car while waiting for the ice cream truck after the car's driver reached for his dropped cellphone.

"You know why I'm here today, and you have heard all the glaring statistics associated with distracted driving," Abrams said. "But let me paint you a picture because this devilish work of art is painted in my head forever."

Beaman Floyd, who spoke on behalf of the Texas Coalition for Affordable Insurance Solutions, said the bill would allow insurance companies to factor in texting while driving when setting their rates, which he said could deter people from texting while driving.

"When you institute a law that is a basic safety law, that is a change-in-behavior type law, it takes a while for it to become common practice — seat belts, safety restraints for children. There are many things on that list," Floyd said. "We think it's absolutely critical that you get started."

Today in history

Today is Saturday, March 7, the 66th day of 2015. There are 299 days left in the year.

Today's highlight:

On March 7, 1965, a march by civil rights demonstrators was violently broken up at the Edmund Pettus Bridge in Selma, Alabama, by state troopers and a sheriff's posse in what came to be known as "Bloody Sunday."

On this date:

In 1876, Alexander Graham Bell received a patent for his telephone.

In 1936, Adolf Hitler ordered his troops to march into the Rhineland, thereby breaking the Treaty of Versailles and the Locarno Pact.

In 1975, the U.S. Senate revised its filibuster rule, allowing 60 senators to limit debate in most cases, instead of the previously required two-thirds of senators present.

In 1983, the original version of The Nashville Network (now Spike) made its debut.

Ferguson police chief stays on the job after federal report

By Jim Salter
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Ferguson Police Chief Tom Jackson was still on the job Friday, two days after a government report blasted his beleaguered department for years of racial profiling, and the mayor refused to speculate about the chief's future, saying his role was not to "just chop heads."

Meanwhile, three Ferguson employees implicated in racist emails exposed by that report are now gone from their jobs, the mayor said. One was identified as a city court clerk.

Calls for Jackson's removal were renewed again this week after the Justice Department cleared Darren Wilson, the white former Ferguson officer who shot Michael Brown, of federal civil rights charges in the death of the 18-year-old, who was black and unarmed.

A second report released simultaneously found patterns of racial profiling, bigotry and profit-driven law enforcement and court practices in the St. Louis suburb that has come to represent the tension between minorities and American police nationwide.

Attorney General Eric Holder told reporters Friday that the federal government will "use all the power that we have to change the situation" in Ferguson, including possibly dismantling the police force.

"If that's what's necessary, we're prepared to do that," Holder said while accompanying President Barack Obama on a trip to South Carolina.

Asked about Jackson in an interview with The Associated Press, Mayor James Knowles III said only, "He's still the chief."

Knowles said city leaders are evaluating the Justice Department report "line by line" before deciding on reforms. His focus now is on understanding the report, then moving forward with whatever changes are needed.

"I'm not here to just chop heads," Knowles said. "We have to evaluate everything in the report, pick out what are the systemic issues and what are the things we can fix."

Jackson did not respond to interview requests on Friday but has repeatedly said he would not step down.

Ferguson city leaders will meet with Justice Department officials in about two weeks and provide a plan for improving the police force and the municipal court system, Knowles said.

"They want to hear what we will do," Knowles said. "We're going to hopefully work out some sort of agreement and we'll move forward.

"We've got to come up with solutions now," Knowles said.

Some experts believe the first step toward a solution is change at the top.

Larry Cunningham, professor and associate dean at St. John's University School of Law in Queens, New York, said the removal of the chief is key to healing the racial wounds in the suburb.

"He should absolutely not stay in office and should step down," said Cunningham, a former prosecutor in Virginia and the Bronx. "The report details a widespread pattern and practice of abuse and discrimination and dysfunction. Because it is widespread and systemic throughout the entire police department, the buck stops at the top — the person in charge — and that's the chief."

The report uncovered racist emails from several city employees, including some that belittled black residents or President Barack Obama. Knowles said three employees responsible for the emails ended their employment with the city on Thursday. He declined to say if they were fired or resigned and would not provide their names or titles.

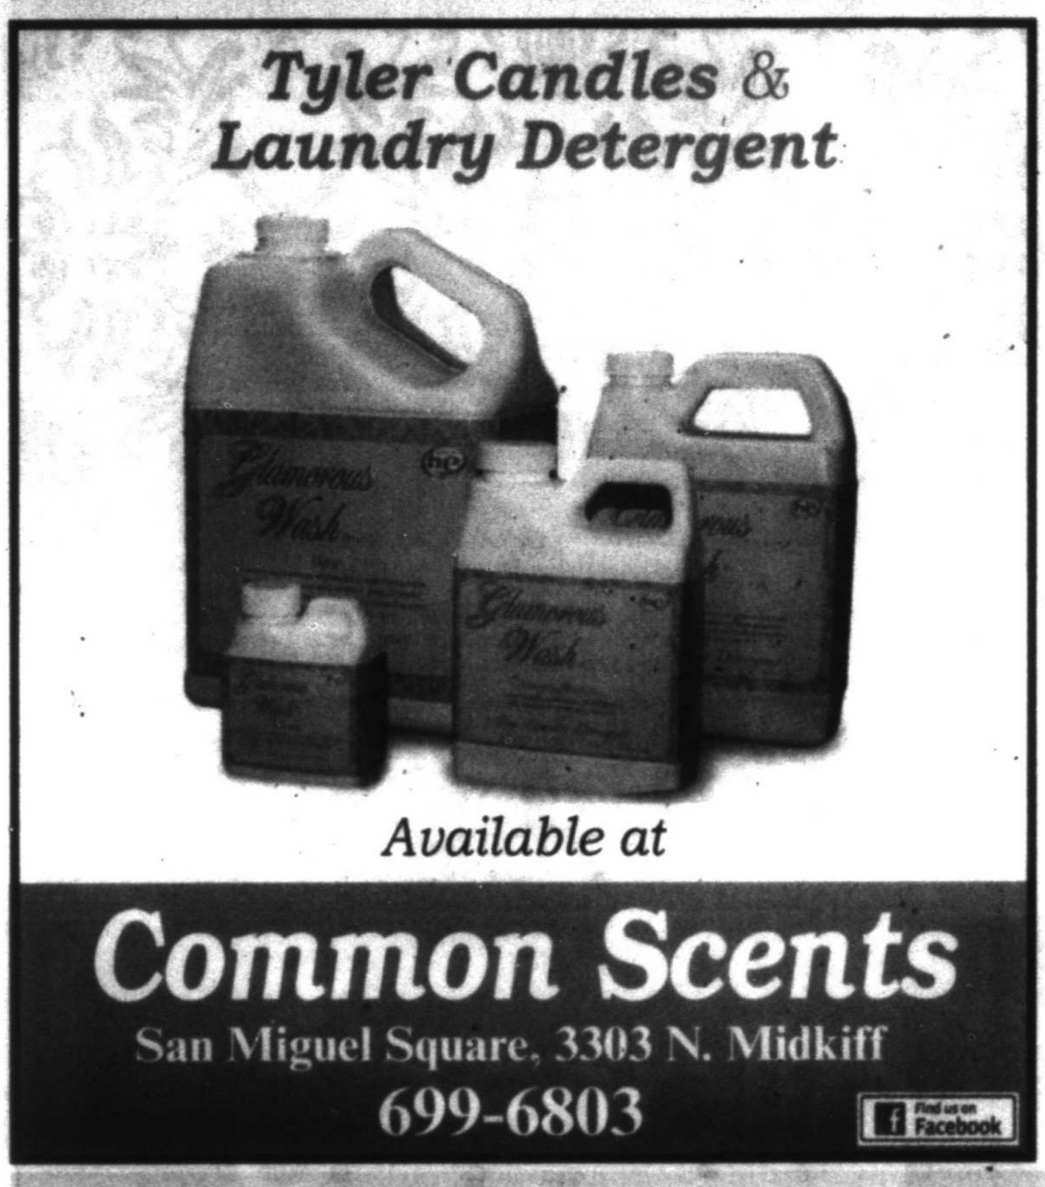
But Ferguson city spokesman Jeff Small identified one of the employees as court clerk Mary Ann Twitty, who was fired. He said the other two employees worked for the police department, but he did not name them. A message left for Twitty was not returned.

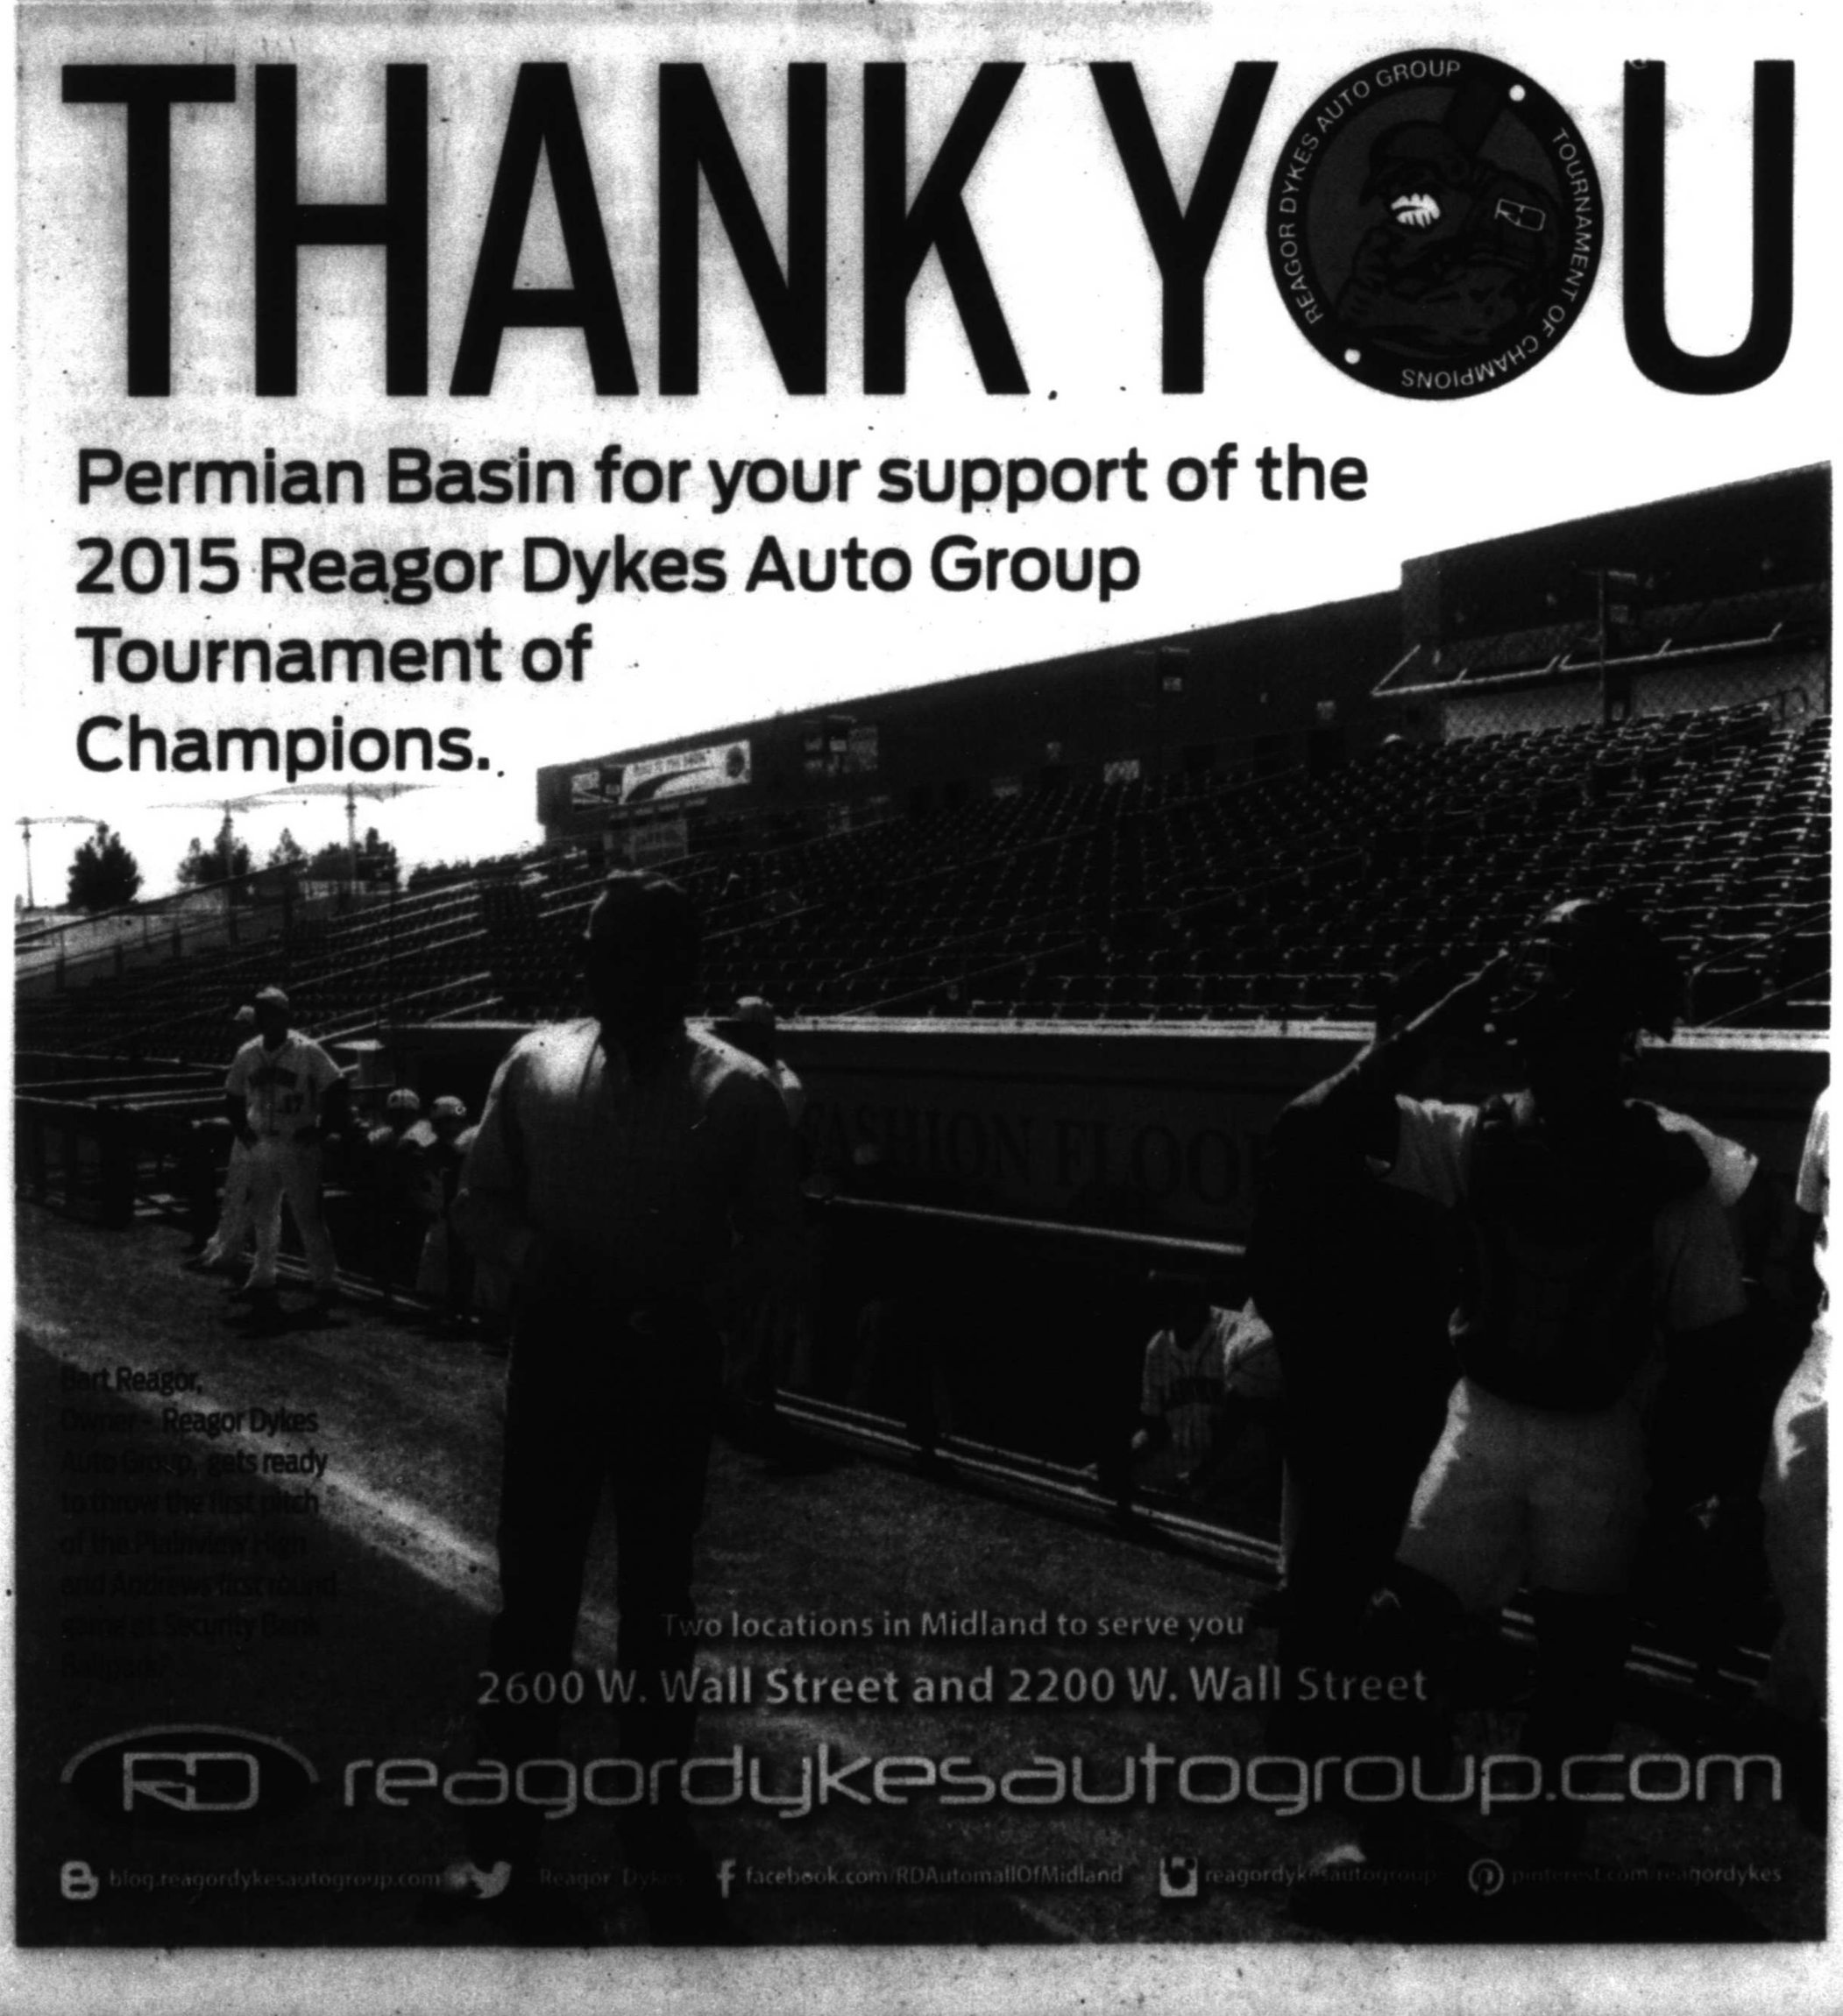
The mayor said he first learned of the emails Wednesday after meeting with Justice Department officials in St. Louis. He said he was so incensed that he ordered the accounts of all three employees disabled while he was in the car returning to Ferguson after the meeting.

Knowles said there was no evidence that Jackson or other police administrators were aware of the emails.

The Justice Department report on the police department found that black drivers were more than twice as likely as others to be searched during routine traffic stops. Minority residents bear the burden of fines and court costs expected to generate $3 million this fiscal year. Black residents were more likely to face excessive force from police, often during unwarranted stops.

Some have called on the city to dissolve the 54-officer police force and allow either St. Louis County or a neighboring municipality to take over patrols. Knowles said there is "zero" percent chance of that happening.





Illinois oil train derailment involved safer tank cars

Associated Press

GALENA, Ill. — The rail cars that split open and burst into flames during a western Illinois oil train derailment this week had been retrofitted with protective shields to meet a higher safety standard than federal law requires, according to railroad officials.

The fire continued to burn Friday, a day after the derailment in a rural area south of the city of Galena. No injuries were reported, but the accident was the latest in a series of failures for the safer tank-car model that has led some people calling for even tougher requirements.

"It certainly begs that question when ... those standards failed to prevent leakage and explosions that threaten human safety and environmental contamination," said Steve Barg, director of the Jo Daviess Conservation Foundation, which owns a nature preserve several hundred yards from the derailment site.

BNSF Railway said the train's tank cars were a newer model known as the 1232. It was designed during safety upgrades voluntarily adopted by the industry four years ago in hopes of keeping cars from rupturing during derailments.

But 1232 standard cars have split open in three other accidents in the past year, including one in West Virginia last month. That train was carrying 3 million gallons of North Dakota crude when it derailed, shooting fireballs into the sky, leaking oil into a waterway and burning down a house. The home's owner was treated for smoke inhalation, but no one else was injured.

In Thursday's accident in Illinois, 21 of the train's 105 cars derailed in an area where the Galena River meets the Mississippi. BNSF Railway said a resulting fire spread to five rail cars. Firefighters could only access the derailment site by a bike path, said Galena Assistant Fire Chief Bob Conley.

Emergency personnel were still working to contain the blaze Friday but described the area as "stable." The Federal Railroad Administration was investigating.

The train had 103 cars loaded with crude oil from the Northern Plains' Bakken region, along with two buffer cars loaded with sand, according to company spokesman Andy Williams. The cause of the derailment hasn't been determined.

The accident occurred 3 miles south of Galena in a wooded, hilly area popular with tourists. The area is alongside part of the Upper Mississippi River Wildlife and Fish Refuge, but there was no indication of any oil contamination there so far, said U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service spokeswoman Georgia Parhan.

As of June, BNSF was hauling 32 Bakken oil trains per week through the surrounding Jo Daviess County, according to information disclosed to Illinois emergency officials.

Recent derailments have increased public concern about the safety of shipping crude by train. The Association of American Railroads says oil shipments by rail jumped from 9,500 carloads in 2008, to 500,000 in 2014, driven by the boom in the Bakken oil patch of North Dakota and Montana. Pipeline limitations in the region force 70 percent of the crude to move by rail.

Since 2006, the U.S. and Canada have seen at least 22 oil-train accidents involving a fire, derailment or significant amount of fuel spilled, according to an Associated Press examination of federal accident records.

The wrecks have intensified pressure on President Barack Obama's administration to approve tougher standards for railroads and tank cars, despite industry complaints that it could cost billions and slow freight deliveries.

Oil industry officials had been opposed to further upgrading the 1232 cars because of costs. But late last year they changed their position and joined with the railway industry to support some upgrades, although they asked for time to make the improvements.

U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin released a statement Friday calling on the White House to quickly finalize its rule to strengthen standards, saying the increasing number of train derailments nationwide was unacceptable.

"There is mounting evidence that stricter standards are needed in the handling of Bakken crude, which appears to be particularly volatile," the Illinois Democrat said. "The safety of our communities depends on it."

Associated Press

Smoke and flames erupt from the scene of a train derailment Thursday near Galena, Ill. A BNSF Railway freight train loaded with crude oil derailed at about 1:20 p.m. in a rural area where the Galena River meets the Mississippi, said Jo Daviess County Sheriff's Sgt. Mike Moser.

Pipeline leak causes 10,000-gallon spill in McKenzie County

BISMARCK — The North Dakota Department of Health says a ruptured pipeline led to a 10,000-gallon oil spill in McKenzie County.

The leak occurred after the pipeline owned by Belle Fourche Pipeline Co. was struck by equipment Friday during excavation of the area about 18 miles south of Alexander.

Health department officials said the leak was "mostly confined" to the excavated area and has not impacted any waterway.

Officials said the spill is not a threat to public health at this time.

GUYANA

ExxonMobil subsidiary searches for oil, gas near Guyana

GEORGETOWN — A subsidiary of U.S.-based ExxonMobil Corp. has begun exploratory drilling for oil and gas off Guyana's coast in South America.

The launch of the $300 million project comes amid heavy objection from Venezuela's government, which claims the area being explored belongs to it.

ExxonMobil country manager Jeff Simmons said Friday that drilling will last about 60 days.

Venezuela has long claimed two-thirds of Guyana's territory as its own and has taken action in the past. About two years ago, Venezuela detained a ship conducting a seismic study under a concession from Guyana. It was released after a week.

NEW ORLEANS

BP ends attempt to oust oil spill claims administrator

BP abruptly ended its efforts to remove the administrator of claims arising from the 2010 Gulf of Mexico oil spill, saying Friday that it is satisfied with efforts to improve fraud prevention and detection in the claims program.

The oil giant had long criticized how Patrick Juneau ran the program that arose from a 2012 settlement with businesses claiming economic losses from the spill that followed the explosion of the Deepwater Horizon rig.

U.S. District Judge Carl Barbier in November flatly rejected BP's efforts to remove Juneau. Attorneys for BP, business plaintiffs and Juneau argued the matter before the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in February and a decision was pending.

However, a filing Friday said all parties had agreed to a dismissal of the appeal. BP issued a statement saying that former FBI director Louis Freeh, appointed by the courts as a special master to watch for fraud in the settlement program, aided a review of the program. The review, BP said, demonstrated that improvements have been made, and continue to be made in the program.

"This marks the beginning of a new and more productive relationship between BP and the claims program," John Minge, Chairman and President of BP America, said in a news release.

In its earlier court battles, BP had accused Juneau of mismanagement and spending excessively on administration. It also said Juneau should be ousted because he failed to disclose a conflict of interest — spill-related work for the state of Louisiana before he was hired as claims administrator; and because he improperly expedited some claims over others.

Barbier had ruled that BP clearly knew of Juneau's earlier consulting work, and he found no merit in the argument that some claims were improperly expedited.

Clinton's emails: Secrets, security and the law

By Connie Cass
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Once again, Hillary Rodham Clinton did it her way, and it could cost her.

Clinton's decision to eschew government email and use her own private server as secretary of state is raising questions about secrecy, security and the law — including whether she might have deleted important messages tapped into her ever-present BlackBerry instead of preserving them for public scrutiny and history.

At the least, the controversy is a bump on her unprecedented path from first lady to presumed presidential contender.

What we know so far:

What's different about clinton's email?

She did all her official work as the nation's top diplomat using a personal email account. Federal officials are generally expected to use their agencies' email systems — the kind of addresses that have ".gov" at the end.

Clinton didn't use a commercial email server, like Google operates for Gmail, either. She had her own email server, traced to her hometown in Chappaqua, New York. The address: hdr22@clintonemail.com.

Previous secretaries of state also used nongovernment email for work at times or avoided using email much at all. Indeed, the State Department says the current secretary, John Kerry, is the first to have an official "@state.gov" address like other employees use routinely.

The volume of the Clinton documents — she's turned over 55,000 pages — makes her use of personal email more striking.

Is something wrong with what she did?

It raises two opposing sets of questions:

■ Was Clinton's email too secret?

A private account could have allowed her to withhold or destroy messages that she's legally required to turn over for congressional investigations or lawsuits or to make available to the public, the press and historians under open-records law.

■ Was Clinton's email too exposed?

A private email server may have left her sensitive government communications more vulnerable to people who shouldn't see them, such as hackers and spies, because it lacked the heavy security of government accounts.

The answers are fuzzy.

Clinton says she's turned over all relevant emails to the State Department. The House committee investigating the deadly attack on a diplomatic mission in Benghazi, Libya, has issued subpoenas seeking messages that might not have been divulged.

Clinton hasn't released any information about her email server and its security features. Private email servers are generally not as reliable or secure as those used by the government or in commercial data centers.

Clinton aides and the State Department both say she never received or transmitted classified information on her private account.

Did Clinton break the law?

That's to be determined. Her aides say no.

Her use of private email appears to conflict with the spirit of Barack Obama's pledge to make his presidency the most open ever. She stands out even in an administration that has been criticized as failing to live up to that promise.

However, Obama didn't sign a law requiring the archiving of officials' emails, including those on private accounts, until last November. Clinton left the State Department two years ago.

Even back when she was in office, according to the White House, it was administration policy for officials to conduct their work on government email accounts. If their work strayed into personal emails, officials were responsible for making sure those messages were preserved for history.

White House spokesman Josh Earnest says the vast majority of administration staffers work on government accounts, which should assure their emails are preserved automatically.

Clinton spokesman Nick Merrill says much of her messaging was email back and forth with her State Department advisers on their government email, so the correspondence was retained on their end. Still, her emails to or from people outside the U.S. government — foreign officials, for example — would not be captured in that way.

After the new law was signed last year, the State Department asked Clinton and other former secretaries of state for email records that should be preserved. That's when Clinton turned over the 55,000 pages.

Earnest said that if Clinton did in fact collect all of her personal email that was related to her official government work and turn it over, "that would be consistent with the Federal Records Act. And that's the president's expectation."

Yet only Clinton and her aides decided what to turn over.

That leaves congressional investigators and others to wonder if she might be holding back things the public has a right to see about Benghazi or other topics.

Was state department policy clear?

Clinton's own office instructed State Department employees to avoid doing work by personal email.

A June 2011 cable to employees warned that "online adversaries" were targeting personal accounts of department employees.

The department now says those instructions concerned emails containing sensitive but unclassified information, such as personal information about employees or members of the public, business secrets or asylum applications.

The issue came up again in a 2012 inspector general's report.

The report advised that reliance on "unauthorized information systems increases the risk for data loss, phishing and spoofing of email accounts," as well as the loss of public records. The report criticized Scott Gration, then ambassador to Kenya, for using an outside email system, among several other problems under his leadership. He resigned.

What's next?

The State Department will review the mountain of Clinton emails for possible public release and for any security breaches. The process could take months, pushing the matter deeper into the 2016 presidential campaign. In a tweet this week, Clinton said she wanted the department to make her emails public as soon as possible.

Congressional Republicans will keep pressing for emails that might shed light on Benghazi or other controversies, with Clinton's potential presidential rivals surely paying rapt attention.

The State Department is already under pressure to produce information under the nation's open records law. It's juggling nearly 11,000 pending requests for various emails, including more than 75 requests for Clinton material filed from 2009 to 2013 by media organizations and others.

FOIA rules to guide review of Clinton emails for publication

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration said Friday it will apply the legal provisions of the Freedom of Information Act to determine what parts of Hillary Rodham Clinton's official emails when she was secretary of state will be released publicly from her private account. The law contains nine exemptions to censor or withhold parts of records.

The decision means that any finding by State Department reviewers that her private emails included classified or otherwise sensitive data would be indicated, even if the information is marked out. Under that law, reviewers need to specify which of the nine exceptions they're citing to censor a passage.

Clinton's extensive use of her own email account and private server has raised questions in the buildup to her expected presidential campaign about whether she adhered to the letter or spirit of accountability rules. Clinton has asked for the full ledger of her work-related correspondence to be made public, a process the State Department said could take months. The emails comprise 55,000 pages.

On Friday, State Department spokeswoman Marie Harf said the agency was focused solely on facilitating the emails' public release, not on any examination of possible wrongdoing by Clinton.

She said no law prohibited the former first lady from using her own email account while in government, even exclusively for official business. She suggested a 2011 cable sent from Clinton's office offered only a general recommendation to staff about not using private accounts.

The cable read: "Avoid conducting official Department business from your personal e-mail accounts."

Harf said, "This cable, in general, is talking about guidance on best practices, colloquial guidance for people when it came to personal email."

"This is certainly not a regulation or a policy," Harf said, calling the suggestion that Clinton didn't follow her own best practices an "oversimplification of what's going on here."

The issue may be more pertinent to politics than law. The idea of the secretary of state failing to follow recommendations that applied to the rest of her department could reinforce perceptions among some voters that Clinton played by a different set of rules. It could open her to criticism about how she fulfilled a legal requirement to preserve all her emails.

Clinton's private email practices gave her unusually large control over access to her message archives, potentially complicating the State Department's legal responsibilities in finding and turning over official emails in response to any investigations, lawsuits or public records requests.

On Wednesday, Clinton said on Twitter: "I want the public to see my email. I asked State to release them."

Under the Freedom of Information Act, also known as FOIA, the government can censor or withhold emails to protect information that would hurt national security, violate personal privacy or expose business secrets or confidential decision-making in certain areas. It cannot block documents merely on the basis that they are embarrassing or expose government incompetence or malfeasance.

If members of the agency's existing FOIA staff are assigned to Clinton's emails, it could set back a department already overwhelmed by 11,000 pending requests under the open records law. Some have languished unfulfilled for years.

Clinton aides and the State Department say she never received or transmitted classified information on her private email account. However, even alluding to a classified secret in a follow-up email with an aide, for example, would implicate the same classification standard under the government's "derivative" classification rules. And unclassified diplomatic details and internal matters are sometimes considered sensitive and can be targeted by hackers and foreign governments.

Harf on Friday declined to say whether anyone in government examined Clinton's private email server and network before it began operating, or whether it was subsequently reviewed during her tenure. Federal regulations subject the computer systems of some contractors and other organizations to federal oversight when they interact with government systems to ensure they are protected.

"I'm not the spokesperson for her office," Harf said at one point during Friday's questioning over the emails, which lasted more than 35 minutes. "People may have been confused about that this week."

CIA director announces sweeping reorganization of spy agency

By Ken Dilanian
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Director John Brennan has ordered a sweeping reorganization of the CIA, an overhaul designed to make its leaders more accountable and close espionage gaps amid widespread concerns about the spy agency's limited insights into a series of major global developments.

Brennan announced the restructuring to the CIA workforce on Friday, including a new directorate devoted to boosting the CIA's computer hacking skills. He said the move comes after nine outside experts spent three months analyzing the agency's management structure, including what deputy CIA director David Cohen called "pain points," organizational areas where the CIA's bureaucracy does not work efficiently.

Briefing reporters with Cohen at CIA headquarters this week, Brennan said the changes are necessary to address intelligence gaps that the CIA is not covering. He lamented that there is often no single person he can hold accountable for the spying mission in any given part of the world.

"There are a lot of areas that I would like to have better insight to, better information about, better access to," Brennan said. "Safe havens, denied areas. Whether because we don't even have a diplomatic presence in a country, or because there are parts of countries that have been overrun and taken over by terrorist groups and others."

The changes come against a backdrop of evidence that the CIA's focus on hunting and killing terrorists since the Sept. 11 attacks has led to an erosion of the espionage and analytic capabilities the agency built during the Cold War. The CIA, along with other U.S. intelligence agencies, wrongly assessed the presence of weapons of mass destruction in Iraq in 2002 and failed to anticipate the rapid collapse of Middle East governments during the Arab Spring in 2011, among other shortcomings.

The agency's greatest public success of recent years — the 10-year effort to locate and kill Osama bin Laden in 2011 — may have taken longer than it should have, according to evidence made public in the recent Senate report on CIA interrogations. Internal CIA surveys have cited bad management and bureaucratic frustration as factors in driving talent away from the agency.

Under Brennan's reorganization, the CIA would break down the wall between the operations and analytical arms, a system that typically has required the case officers who recruit spies and run covert operations to work for different bosses, in different offices, than analysts who interpret the intelligence and write briefing papers for the president and other policymakers.

The new plan would blend practitioners of those separate disciplines into 10 centers devoted to various subjects or areas of the world. There are a handful of such centers at the moment, including the Counter Terrorism Center.

Doctor helping downed pilot is shocked to find Harrison Ford

By Justin Pritchard
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Dr. Sanjay Khurana was close to finishing a golf game when a vintage plane clipped a tree and "dropped like a rock" onto the next hole's green. He rushed to the crash, finding a pilot bleeding from a deep gash in his head.

When the surgeon got a closer look, he was stunned to see the pilot was Harrison Ford, the actor he grew up watching in the "Star Wars" and "Indiana Jones" movie franchises.

"I'm a child of the '80s," Khurana said Friday. "I'm a big fan."

One of Hollywood's pre-eminent stars, who is also an experienced pilot, crash-landed his World War II-era plane Thursday, but he was conscious and able to talk when witnesses pulled him from the wreckage.

Soon after Ford took off from Santa Monica Municipal Airport near Los Angeles, he radioed that the single engine of his 1942 Ryan Aeronautical ST3KR stopped working and he was going to make an immediate return.

Ford, who received his pilot's license in the 1990s, glided his plane onto a fairway near the airport in what aviation experts characterized as a skillful landing given a total loss of power above a densely populated area.

Ford's publicist, Ina Treciokas, said the actor's injuries were "not life-threatening, and he is expected to make a full recovery." Ford's son Ben tweeted Thursday from the hospital: "Dad is ok. Battered, but ok! He is every bit the man you would think he is. He is an incredibly strong man."

No one on the ground was hurt.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators hoped to speak to Ford but had not done so as of Friday morning.

"We definitely want to know what he knows," investigator Patrick Jones told reporters.

Safety board experts will look at the airplane's engine, flight controls and records, Jones said. A final determination of what happened will take about a year.

What was immediately clear to fellow pilots is that Ford did a remarkable job guiding his crippled plane away from homes and, without enough altitude to reach the airport, onto the golf course's relatively flat ground.

"I would say that this is an absolutely beautifully executed — what we would call — a forced or emergency landing," said Christian Fry of the Santa Monica Airport Association.

The plane, which was called the PT-22 Recruit when it was used as a U.S. Army training aircraft, was intentionally designed to mimic the flight characteristics of larger warplanes, making it a tougher flying challenge, said Larry Lee, 68, of Atlanta.

Lee lost his own PT-22 last summer when the engine failed as he was 130 feet above ground approaching a grass field.

Unlike Cessnas and other small planes, the PT-22 can roll over and plunge straight to the ground unless it is driven down and forward to keep up its speed.

Lee managed to land his plane in a soft area between pine trees although "I left my wings in the trees," he said.

Ford, an experienced pilot, did the right thing in the emergency, Lee said.

"Keeping the plane under control... saved his life and the lives of people on the ground," Lee said.

Ford is not the only Hollywood heavyweight at Santa Monica's airport, which sits amid million-dollar homes near the Pacific Ocean.

A studio executive who pilots his own aircraft and said he saw Ford's flight described the landing as remarkable.

"He made the correct turn that the plane was designed for with an engine out," Relativity Media CEO Ryan Kavanaugh told The Hollywood Reporter. "Ninety-nine percent of pilots would have turned around to go back to the runway and would have crashed."

The fact that a spinal surgeon was playing a round of golf after a morning operation gave the crash-landing its own movie-like quality.

Khurana didn't realize the actor who played Han Solo and Indiana Jones was at the plane's controls until Ford lay about 10 yards from the plane. Fellow golfers who rushed to the pilot's aid helped remove him from the open cockpit, fearing leaking fuel might ignite.

After hitting a tree, the plane "kind of spun a little bit and belly-flopped" with such force it felt like a small earthquake, Khurana said. He estimated it fell "like a rock" about 100 feet.

After dropping his clubs and rushing about 50 yards to the plane, Khurana found a bloodied pilot groaning, complaining of pain below his waist and "trying to get a sense of where he was and what had happened."

It took several golfers to hoist Ford away from the wreckage, Khurana said.

"My initial fear was this was going to be one of those very serious, very tragic injuries right away. Fortunately, he was remarkably intact," Khurana said.

As the doctor checked Ford's breathing, circulation and other vitals, Khurana's optimism grew. Then he realized he was treating the man who brought to life heroic characters of his youth.

It didn't take long for paramedics to arrive and for Khurana to reflect on what had happened.

Ohio terrorism suspect says he would have shot Obama

By Lisa Cornwell and Mitch Stacy
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — An Ohio man accused of plotting to attack the U.S. Capitol called a television station from jail and said if he hadn't been arrested, he would have gone to Washington and put a gun to President Barack Obama's head.

Cornell

WXIX-TV in Cincinnati said Christopher Lee Cornell, 20, called the station from the Kentucky jail where he's being held, confessed to being a supporter of the Islamic State group and said he planned to kill government officials in retaliation for U.S. strikes on the militant organization.

The station aired part of the interview Friday night, hours after Cornell's attorney argued unsuccessfully in court that it could violate the defendant's right to a fair trial.

Asked by the interviewer what he would have done had he not been arrested in January, Cornell said he would have taken one of his guns, "I would have put it to Obama's head, I would have pulled the trigger, then I would unleash more bullets on the Senate and House of Representative members, and I would have attacked the Israeli embassy and various other buildings."

Cornell, who repeatedly identified himself as Muslim, said he wanted to carry out the attack because of "the continued American aggression against our people and the fact that America, specifically President Obama, wants to wage war against Islamic State."

He said: "They might say I'm a terrorist, but you know we see American troops as terrorists as well, coming to our land, stealing our resources and killing our people, raping our women."

Cornell, who grew up in the Cincinnati suburbs and still lived with his parents, said support of the Islamic State group is widespread.

"We're here in Ohio, we're in every state," he said. "We're more organized than you think."

The federal indictment charges Cornell with two counts that carry possible sentences of up to 20 years each upon conviction: attempted murder of government employees and officials and solicitation to commit a crime of violence. He also faces a firearms-related charge. He has pleaded not guilty and awaits trial in Cincinnati.

Cornell was arrested outside a gun shop near his home on Jan. 14 after the FBI said he bought two M-15 assault weapons and 600 rounds of ammunition. The FBI said in court documents that Cornell planned to "wage jihad" by attacking the Capitol with pipe bombs and shooting government officials and employees.

Cornell's father said the young man was coerced and misled by "a snitch" trying to better his own legal situation.

Rangers to send ace Darvish for MRI exam on sore triceps

By Dave Skretta
Associated Press

SURPRISE, Ariz. — The folks in the Rangers front office would be forgiven for feeling a little bit uneasy these days. After an injury-plagued 2014 season, even minor injuries are cause for major concern.

Especially when one of them happens to the staff ace.

Three-time All-Star Yu Darvish was headed for an MRI exam Friday after leaving his spring training debut the previous day with tightness in his right triceps. Darvish experienced the pain while warming up in the bullpen and it did not go away over the course of 12 pitches.

"We had a rough season last year in terms of injuries, but there's no sentiment of 'here we go again,'" assistant general manager Thad Levine said. "We know we're going to have an injury at some point and it's probably going to be a very good player, because we have a lot of them."

Texas set a record last season for active players on a 25-man roster during its snake bitten campaign. Forty different pitchers were used, including three position players. Fourteen different pitchers started a game and nobody in the rotation made more than 25 starts.

Among those who wound up on the disabled list was Darvish, who began the season there with tightness in his neck, then ended it there with inflammation in his right elbow.

Levine said the tightness Darvish experienced Thursday was in a different place than the inflammation he had last season, and does not think they are related. But it won't be until team physician Dr. Kevin Meister can look over the MRI exam results that they will know for sure.

That might not be until late Friday or early Saturday.

"We're going to leave no stone unturned. He's too important to the team," Levine said. "He had an injury last year and we just want to have every piece of information we possibly can have before we make the next decision on him."

'It's just not relevant'

Clark puts team before pro prospects

By Will Korn
wkorn@mrt

As he stepped onto Ernie Johnson Field to play in the Tournament of Champions on Friday, Richland High center fielder Trent Clark wasn't thinking about his place among the best high school baseball prospects in America.

Clark is the nation's fourth best prospect overall, according to Baseball America. He comes in at No. 9 on Perfect Game's top prospect list. There is a good chance he will be drafted in the first or second round of the Major League Baseball's First-Year Player Draft in June.

But Clark said he doesn't let all that hype and recognition go to his head. As he is playing in his final season for Richland, he says he has a greater goal in mind.

"I try my best not to think about it, the draft or the rankings or anything," Clark said. "It's just not relevant to what we're trying to do here. I want to lead this team to a state championship. That's what everyone dreams about."

Added Clark on status as a top prospect, "It's humbling and I love being considered and talking to people about baseball. But I just try to stay away from the rankings, play my game and play hard every time."

He has signed to play at Texas Tech, where he had been verbally committed to for the last two and a half years. Clark expects to play center field for Tech next spring and he added that he's "excited to get out to Lubbock and help the Red Raiders continue their winning traditions."

But no matter how hard Clark tries to steer his own focus away from them, his accolades are rather tough to ignore in conversation.

After completing his junior season at Richland, one which saw him hit .463, belt 10 home runs and earn a first team all-state selection, Clark was invited to play for the Team USA 18 and under team last summer at the Pan American Championships in Mexico.

Buzzer-beater ends Lady Chaps' season

Lady Thunderbirds	56
Lady Chaparrals	54

From staff reports

BROWNWOOD — The Midland College women's basketball team has had some tough losses in recent years, but Friday's is one that is going to hurt for a while.

After Marielka Garate tied the game at 54 with 8.61 seconds left with a pair of free throws, No. 5-ranked New Mexico Junior College had one last chance but had to go the length of the court to try to win the game.

The Lady Thunderbirds got the ball to the right person in Kelsey Criner, but she missed her shot from the left wing. However, teammate Nycolle Smith was right there with the rebound and scored on a buzzer-beating put-back to beat the Lady Chaparrals, 56-54, in an NJCAA Region V Tournament semifinal game at the Brownwood Coliseum.

Garate

With the loss, the Lady Chaps end their season at 20-11. NMJC (23-7) moves on face Western Texas College, a 76-66 winner over Hill College, in today's 2 p.m. championship game.

"I'm just proud of how hard they fought," said MC coach Ron Jones of his team. "This was a great effort and New Mexico is a really good team. But this one is probably going to hurt as much or maybe more than some of the losses we've had in the last few years because we played so hard. I thought the girls were in the right frame of mind and ready to compete at this level."

The Lady Chaps, though, couldn't cut down on the turnovers as they had 25 for the game, which Jones said led to 25 points for NMJC.

"Our Achilles heel all year long has been our turnovers and giving up too many easy baskets," Jones said. "That's on me because I didn't do a good enough job of getting that fixed this year."

Some of those turnovers early led to the Lady T-birds jumping out to a 16-8 advantage less than seven minutes into the game.

But MC bounced back, recovered and even took a 27-25 lead at the half when Sierra Dixon (10 points) hit a jumper at the buzzer.

It was a back-and-forth game through much of the second half with the biggest lead being five points (35-30) by NMJC.

NCAA punishes Boeheim, Syracuse for violations

By John Kekis
Associated Press

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The NCAA denounced one of the country's most decorated basketball programs Friday, suspending Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim for nine conference games next year and outlining a decade-long series of violations that included academic misconduct, improper benefits, and drug-policy failures.

The governing body, saying the school lost control of its athletic department, placed Syracuse on probation for five years for breaking with the "most fundamental core values of the NCAA."

The bulk of the violations concerned athletic department officials interfering with academics and making sure star players stayed eligible.

The basketball team must vacate wins in which ineligible players participated. Those players competed during five seasons: 2004-2007 and 2010-2012.

"The behavior in this case, which placed the desire to achieve success on the basketball court over academic integrity, demonstrated clearly misplaced institutional priorities," the NCAA said.

Boeheim, the second-winningest coach in Division I history with 966 victories, has coached at Syracuse for 39 years, having played at the school as well. The 70-year-old coach has been an assistant on the last two U.S. Olympic champion teams.

The punishment includes financial penalties and the reduction of three men's basketball scholarships a year for four years. Recruiting restrictions will be enforced for two years. Boeheim's suspension will sideline him for half of the Atlantic Coast Conference next season.

The four-year investigation also revealed violations by the football program and women's basketball, although most were in men's basketball.

In anticipation of the report, Syracuse chancellor Kent Syverud had announced a postseason ban for this year for the men's basketball team. The NCAA accepted the ban and indicated the school could delay the loss of scholarships for one year. Boeheim has a stellar class coming next fall, rated the best in his long tenure.

Syverud said the school does not agree with certain aspects of the ruling and is considering a possible challenge. Syverud said Boeheim may choose to appeal the part of the decision that affects him personally.

"Should he decide to do so, we

With the West Texas Collegiate Tennis Shootout taking on an international flavor over the next week, two international players on the University of Texas of the Permian Basin women's tennis team are looking forward to competing this week.

Sofia Ochoa Arminana, a sophomore from Mexico City, and freshman Andrea Villalobos, from Chihuahua, are two of the more than 180 international players who will be representing their respective college teams during the weeklong tournament at the Bush Tennis Center.

The tournament, which also features 15 different colleges or universities, begins today and lasts through March 15. It is free to the public.

"Tennis is heavily made up of international players at the D-1 and D-2 level, and we have both," UTPB tennis coach Steve Buck said. "With the help of the West Texas Tennis Association, players will have the opportunity to sit and visit with the kids and adults from this part of the country, and I hope Midland will."

UTPB is the host university, and the Falcons look to build what has been a challenging schedule with every match on the road and against some NCAA Division I competition including U.T. San Antonio, UTEP and New Mexico State University. Despite a 2-6 record, the Falcons are positive of the team's direction.

"We've started out by winning a few matches and losing some others but I feel that this team is strong and we're going to have a good season," Villalobos said. This is my first year here, but I feel real good about how things have progressed this season."

Ochoa Arminana has also seen her team grow since she was a freshman.

"I've been here since last year and I see a lot of improvement in this team and we're a much stronger team," she said. "We won a close match against Tarleton (State) at the beginning of the year, and that helped us a lot to gain confidence. That has also helped us to keep going and to keep fighting to get into the conference tournament this semester."

And like the team, Ochoa Arminana believes her game has improved as well.

"When I first got here I was nervous because it was all brand new to me," said Ochoa Arminana, who has played in major national competition in her home country. "College tennis is so much different than what I was used to because we are team. If you lose, the whole team loses, but if you win the entire team wins. No matter what happens, we have to stay together and keep on working hard. I have been working hard, I've been going to the gym and been doing a lot of conditioning so I can build stamina and play great tennis."

Villalobos, who started playing tennis at age 10, was also used to playing tough national competition in Mexico. She believes that her transition to the college game has gone well.

"This is my first year here, but I feel real good about how things have progressed this season," she said.

UTPB begins tournament play against Western New Mexico and St. Edward's today at 9 and 10 a.m., respectively, and both players feel good about their team's chances this week.

"We want to win the majority of our matches and show the other teams that we've made a lot of improvement and we're here to win in the tournament," Ochoa Arminana said.

Added Villalobos: "What we want to do is to do our best and to leave it all out on the court. If we do our best and come out as champions, that would be excellent. We know we have the talent and the team to finish in the top three. But what we look forward to the most about this tournament is to improve."

CLARK

From 1B

On the field for Team USA, Clark was spectacular. He posted the second highest batting average at the tournament (.565) and an on-base percentage of .694 over eight games with Team USA, as the Americans rolled to their fourth straight gold medal in the event. Clark hit three home runs in the tournament and walked 10 times, while striking out just once. He also stole five bases and picked two outfield assists, as he displayed his well-known speed and strong throwing arm from the outfield.

Clark's physical tools are impressive, per a scouting report on him from Baseball America.

"Clark's swing isn't classic or pretty thanks largely to an unorthodox grip, but it's short and direct, and he showed a feel for barreling the ball throughout last summer," the Baseball America report said. "Clark's large frame could allow him to grow into a power hitter, but for now he's a speedy center fielder who flashes plus run times and plays an excellent center field. His feel for the game and leadership skills impressed scouts last summer."

But the senior center fielder's leadership ability and desire to rise to the occasion could be his calling card as a prospect. Clark doesn't talk about how good he is and his teammates admire him for it.

"I love being a teammate," Clark said. "I love leading and being a captain of this team and showing everybody how I believe the right way to play the game is. Fortunately a lot of people follow me and so it's really humbling and exciting to be able to lead.

"I don't want to really worry about the stats or anything, but just be a positive leader and help the young guys, show them what's it like to be a senior and go about my business."

Clark's Rebels defeated Amarillo Tascosa, 11-8, in eight innings in their opening game of the tournament at Zachery Field. Richland was then slaughtered by Lee, 16-0 at Ernie Johnson Field, as it gave up all 16 runs in the first three innings. Richland bounced back to beat Lubbock High, 15-8, in its Friday afternoon game at Christensen Stadium.

Richland will play El Paso Franklin today at 10 a.m. at Security Bank Ballpark and then Odessa Permian at 4 p.m. at McCanlies Field.

FRIDAY'S NOTES
RANDALL AND GRAPEVINE ROLLING

Canyon Randall and Grapevine appeared to be the two most dominant teams on the tournament's first day. Randall went 3-0 and outscored its opposition 39-9, while the Mustangs went 2-0 and outscored their opponents, 31-2.

CANIS DOMINANT FOR MHS

Behind senior right hander Blake Canis' one-hit shutout, MHS cruised past El Paso Hanks, 5-0 in Friday's 4 p.m. game at Zachery Field. Earlier on Friday, the Bulldogs downed El Paso Montwood, 6-3. MHS is now 2-0 in the tournament and 3-1 overall on the season.

MHS coach Barry Russell was pleased with Canis' effort after the long layoff caused by the weather.

"He threw strikes," Russell said. "Blake's had trouble throwing strikes and he did a great job. When he throws strikes, he's really good. He's got a mid-to-upper 80s fastball and a real plus plus curve and when he's like that, he's tough to hit."

Canis recorded seven strikeouts in the win.

MHS will play three games today, beginning with a matchup against Lubbock High at 10 a.m. at Zachery Field. The Bulldogs will follow that up with a game against El Paso El Dorado at 1 p.m. again at Zachery. They'll cap off their tournament with a game against Andrews at 7 p.m. at Security Bank Ballpark.

SO FAR SO GOOD FOR LEE

Lee also looks strong in the early goings of the tournament. The Rebels hung 16 runs on Richland in just three innings and won, 16-0, by the five-inning run rule in their first game of the tournament at Ernie Johnson Field.

Freshman right hander Bo Blessie threw a one-hit shutout over the five innings to lead Lee to the blowout win. Catcher Hunter Coleman went 3-for-3 with a walk and four RBI. He hit a single, a double and then smoked a three-run homer over the left field wall in the third inning.

In the 4 p.m. game at Ernie Johnson, Lee outlasted Wolfforth Frenship, 7-4.

With the pair of wins, Lee is now 2-0 in the tournament and 4-0 overall.

Lee coach Brian Roper praised his players for playing so well even after being delayed a few days by the weather.

"A lot of credit to the kids as far as being able to deal with the weather and not practicing," Roper said. "I give them the credit for staying hungry, focused and ready to play."

LEE TEAMS HOST ODESSA HIGH

The Lee girls and boys soccer teams host Odessa High in a couple of District 3-6A games at Grande Communications Stadium today. The girls' match kicks off at noon, while the boys face off at 2 p.m.

The Lady Rebels (6-9-0, 0-0-1-6, 1 point) have been struggling as they are coming off a 5-0 loss to San Angelo Central. That was their third shutout loss in the last four games.

OHS (12-9-0, 3-0-0-4, 9 points) is coming off a strong showing with a 4-0 victory at Abilene High.

The Lee boys (6-9-1, 1-1-2-3, 7 point) got a point after a penalty kick loss to San Angelo Central, 2-2 (6-5), on Tuesday but need more points. The Rebels are currently on the outside looking in for a playoff spot with three games remaining as they are a point behind fourth-place Central.

OHS (7-7-1, 1-1-1-4, 6 points) is also looking in for a playoff spot after dropping a 6-2 decision to Abilene High.

MHS SQUADS HEAD TO CENTRAL

The first-place Midland High boys and girls soccer teams travel to Old Bobcat Stadium in San Angelo to face San Angelo Central in some key District 3-6A matches. The girls begin at noon, while the boys teams face off at 2 p.m.

The Lady Bulldogs (14-3-1, 4-3-0-0, 18 points) look to hold on to first place against second-place Central (15-4-0, 5-0-2-0, 17 points).

MHS won the previous meeting, 1-1 (3-1), on penalty kicks as the Lady Bulldogs got an emotional win.

MHS is also coming off an impressive 3-0 win at Odessa Permian to clinch a playoff spot. Central downed Lee 5-0 and is also postseason bound.

SYRACUSE

would support him in this step," Syverud said in a statement.

Boeheim was en route with the team to North Carolina and could not be immediately reached for comment. The exact number of victories Boeheim will lose has not yet been determined, according to Syracuse University spokesman Kevin Quinn.

The NCAA said Boeheim did not promote an atmosphere of compliance and failed to monitor the activities of those who reported to him regarding academics and boosters.

The NCAA said several violations involved students and staff. The report added that academic violations stemmed from the director of basketball operations, who was handpicked by Boeheim to address academic matters.

"The rule's pretty clear," said Britton Banowsky, chief hearing officer for the NCAA. "The head coach has a duty to monitor activities in his program. Jim Boeheim did dispute that he should be held accountable. There was controversy over that. It (the charge) was not effectively rebutted at all."

The report said the former director of basketball operations, whose job primarily consisted of monitoring academic performance of basketball student-athletes, became overly involved. He collected and maintained student-athletes' usernames and passwords and provided them to others, including student-athlete support services.

The report said the director and members of the support staff regularly accessed student-athletes' network and email accounts in an effort to monitor academic progress, tracked course responsibilities and scheduling as well as incoming communications from professors regarding course work and class status. As part of the routine, they also accessed and sent emails from student-athletes' accounts and corresponded directly with professors and included attached course work, which was necessary to maintain the required grades for the student-athletes to remain eligible, the report said.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

COLTS ANNOUNCE THEY WON'T BRING BACK REGGIE WAYNE: At Indianapolis, the Colts have announced they will not re-sign veteran wide receiver Reggie Wayne.

Indianapolis' longtime standout has been part of a club-record 143 wins and ranks second in franchise history in receptions (1,070), yards receiving (14,345) and touchdown catches (80). He was Indy's first-round draft pick in 2001 and has never played for another team. But after tearing the ACL in his right knee in October 2013 and injuring his left elbow in October 2014, Wayne didn't look the same.

LYNCH RETURNING TO SEAHAWKS WITH NEW CONTRACT: At Renton, Washington, Marshawn Lynch is coming back to the Seattle Seahawks under a restructured contract for the 2015 season that will pay him $12 million, according to his agent Doug Hendrickson.

Lynch agreed to his new deal Friday after meeting with Seahawks officials. Hendrickson said the deal adds two more years to Lynch's existing contract that went through the 2015 season, but gives him a significant pay increase for next season.

BRONCOS TENDER TOP TACKLER MARSHALL, 2 OTHERS: At Englewood, Colorado, the Denver Broncos have tendered their three exclusive rights free agents, a group led by top tackler Brandon Marshall, who will receive $585,000 in 2015. Tackle Paul Cornick and guard Ben Garland will each receive $510,000.

The Broncos have two more restricted free agents in cornerback Tony Carter and linebacker Steven Johnson, and they must make a decision on them by the start of free agency Tuesday.

8 TO CHALLENGE SMITH FOR NFLPA EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR: At New York, DeMaurice Smith will have eight challengers for his executive director's position with the players' union in the March 15 election.

Smith is concluding his second three-year term and will be opposed by several former NFL players: Sean Gilbert, Jason Belser, Robert Griffith and John Stufflebeem, who only appeared in preseason games and is a former U.S. Navy admiral.

Local forecast

The National Weather Service is calling for a chance of showers Sunday through Monday. The best chance — 30 percent — is expected Sunday. Otherwise, expect a warming trend through the week. High temperatures should rise into the upper 60s by the middle of next week.

The high on Friday reached 56, while the low dropped to 24. The record high for March 6 is 90 set in 1946. The record low is 15 set in 1989.

National forecast

The nation will be free of major storm systems today as the jet stream begins to retreat to the north. A weak Alberta clipper storm will travel along the Canadian border and bring clouds and snow showers to the Great Lakes region. The snow is unlikely to stick to paved surfaces during the middle of the day and will bring a light accumulation.

Clouds are forecast to gather over south and coastal Texas today. A flow of moisture will begin in this area and expand along the Gulf Coast into next week as a storm develops. Clouds and rain are in the offing for South Florida and the Keys due to a stalled front.

School year drags on for girl separated from boy she likes

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 12-year-old girl, and I like a boy named "Chris." We go to different schools now, and I don't know how to get in touch with him to tell him how I feel. At times, for the past two years, we have been flirting on and off. We will be reunited again next year. I can't hold on much longer, and he's at a school with his ex. What should I do? — LOVER GIRL IN ALABAMA

DEAR LOVER GIRL: You have held on this long, so remember the school year is already more than half over. In the fall, you and Chris will be attending the same school again without your having to do anything.

For now, be patient. Stay active and involved with school, and time will pass more quickly. Focus on activities you enjoy and your friendships.

Do not waste your time worrying about the other girl. She and Chris are exes for a reason. If you and Chris are "meant to be," the chances of that happening will be better when you're classmates.

DEAR ABBY: A friend from high school has invited me to her wedding in September. Unfortunately, I won't be able to attend the bachelorette party I was also invited to.

Even though I sent my regrets to the organizer of the party, she has tried to solicit gifts from me twice. This seems extremely tacky, and it has made me feel I was invited only for the gifts I could bring.

Abby, I don't want this to reflect poorly on my friend. Should I tell someone in the wedding party so they can fix this faux pas, or am I wrong about wedding etiquette? — PERPLEXED IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR PERPLEXED: You're not wrong. That the party organizer is trying to extort gifts from you is extremely rude. The person to inform is the mother of the bride. She should be able to put a stop to it before anyone else is embarrassed.

DEAR ABBY: What if someone wants to move away from one parent but not the other? I'm 25 and interviewing for jobs. It would be nice to become independent, but for the right reasons. I am tired of my father's selfish, ignorant attitude, but I would miss seeing my mother. As she gets older, she seems to accommodate my dad's all-for-himself attitude even more.

If I take a job that's out of state, I don't want to feel like I'm "running away." How should I approach leaving the one family member I care about? — MOVING FORWARD IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR MOVING: Continue interviewing for jobs for which you are qualified, regardless of where they are located. If more than one company wants to hire you, select the one that offers the best wages and benefits and seems to be the best fit for you.

If the company is located in your city, you might not have to leave your mother and you may be able to limit the time you must spend with your father. Should you get an enticing offer that bases you in another location, to accept it would not be running away; it would be making an intelligent career choice. Your mom might be able to visit you sans dad periodically if the expense isn't prohibitive, and you would be establishing your independence for the right reason.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, March 7, 2015:

This year you'll want to pace yourself. You easily could overspend, as you will be somewhat impulsive with money. Use caution with communication in general. Your upbeat attitude will draw in many opportunities. If you are single, you are likely to meet someone of significance after August. Relax and be more easygoing while dating. If you are attached, the two of you are likely to make a major purchase that you have talked a lot about. You will notice that you enjoy your day-to-day life together far more than in the past. LIBRA feels connected to you, and vice versa.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You'll feel as if someone finally seems to grasp where you are coming from. You could argue about the details of a plan, but once you get going, you both will have a wonderful time. A loved one might encourage you to tap into your creativity. Tonight: Go with the flow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You might want to understand more of what is going on with a child or loved one. You won't have to make much of an effort to find out — all you'll need to do is listen and observe. This person tends to be an open book. Tonight: Go for a spontaneous get-together.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You don't need to make the first move, though you are likely to. Others will be extremely responsive to your inquiries or requests. Make a point of inviting several good friends to get together at a favorite spot. Tonight: Plan on rolling in the fun.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You might be in a situation where you feel you need to make an extra effort to make others feel comfortable. You could become testy when dealing with a child. Take a walk so you can calm down. Tonight: Be a little less responsible, and let others do what they want.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You seem to have the right way of handling someone who can be a little difficult. You naturally say the right thing. Also, you will find out how important humor is to this person. Avoid a squabble with a friend or associate at all costs. Tonight: Chat the night away.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Be aware of the ramifications of a recent decision. Make it OK to back off, even if someone gives you flak for it. A partner could be a bit feisty. Consider avoiding a conflict right now. Take a step back, and the other party will calm down. Tonight: Dinner for two.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ You naturally beam and draw in others. You might decide to say little right now, as much as you would like to have someone open up. A partner or dear friend could be very touchy and difficult. Stay with your friends who make you happy. Tonight: Be responsive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ You might want to have a long-overdue chat with a friend. Be careful with what you say. You'll want to clear the air without hurting this person's feelings. Use your instincts with someone very important to your life. Tonight: A must appearance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Find a friend whom you can share your thoughts with. It might take just a brief conversation to clear your mind and be relaxed. Whether you're off at the movies or indulging in a favorite hobby, you will be happiest with one or two friends. Tonight: The more, the merrier.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ Stay on top of a meeting or a friendly get-together. Though you might end up taking someone's place in bringing others together, the outcome will be positive. A partner can't seem to compliment you enough. Tonight: Let a loved one treat you to whatever you choose.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Reach out to someone you care about but rarely spend time with. Be spontaneous, make a call, change your plans and take off to be with this special person. Someone might resent your change of plans, so keep your distance for now. Tonight: The only answer is "yes."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Be willing to make an extra effort toward a friend whom you like a lot but rarely make time for. A misunderstanding could affect your plans to meet up with someone. Confirm the place and time. Tonight: Know when you are running out of steam.

Lubbock Trinity's 3-pointers too much for Lady Mustangs

From staff reports

Lady Lions	79
Lady Mustangs	44

MANSFIELD — Midland Christian girls basketball coach Chris Ryburn said that when Lubbock Trinity is shooting the ball as well as it did Friday afternoon, it can be tough to beat.

Midland Christian certainly found that out as Trinity hit 10 3-pointers in a 79-44 TAPPS 4A state semifinal victory at Legacy High School.

"Obviously, Trinity is a good team, but when they play like that, I don't think there's anybody in our classification that can beat them," Ryburn said. "Sometimes you just get beat.

"I thought our girls competed really hard and never quit tonight," Ryburn added.

With the loss, the Lady Mustangs end their season with a 29-12 record.

This was also one of the rare times the Lady Mustangs had allowed more than 60 points in the last three years, as Trinity has been the only team to do so by

From staff reports

Lady Eagles	45
Lady Knights	41

MANSFIELD — An off day of shooting the ball cost the Midland Classical Academy girls basketball team a return trip to the TAPPS 3A state championship game.

MCA co-head coach Carla Cunneen said her team couldn't buy a bucket, especially in the first half, as the Lady Knights lost 45-41 to Lubbock Christian in a TAPPS 3A state semifinal game Friday afternoon at Summit High school.

With the loss, the Lady Knights end their season at 22-8 but made it this far without a senior on the roster.

Lubbock Christian (30-9) advances to play Houston Lutheran North, a 66-52 winner over Marble Falls Faith, in today's 1 p.m. championship game.

MCA was down 20-15 at the half as Cunneen said her team shot only 15 percent in the first half. The Lady Knights shot 27 percent for the game.

Cubs adjust to defeat Wall, head to final

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

Cubs	50
Hawks	33

The Brownfield High boys basketball team entered Friday's Region I-3A semifinal on a roll offensively.

The Cubs had averaged 82 points per game in their three playoff wins and had prevailed by an average margin of 29.3 points per contest.

Also known as the "Runnin' Cubs" as lettered on their jerseys, No. 2 Brownfield is a fast break team that loves to light up the scoreboard with quick possessions. At Chaparral Center, Wall tried to bog down and slow down the Cubs with extended, half-court possessions.

However, the strategy failed as the Hawks couldn't generate enough offense.

Brownfield sailed to a 50-33 win over Wall. The Cubs (29-4) earned a spot in today's regional championship game versus Childress.

"Normally we really like to get out and we like to push the ball," Cubs head coach Dustin Faught said. "There were glimpses of it tonight, especially after a rebound, but when you play a team like that, it just makes it difficult to really kind of get in a rhythm and get any kind of tempo that you want to get when they're so deliberate about slowing the game down and making 10 or 12 passes up at half-court before looking really to score."

The Hawks (24-9) had difficulty creating open shots versus Brownfield's quickness. Wall scored just eight points in the first half, while shooting a dismal 16.7 percent before intermission.

The Cubs forced the Hawks to settle for low-percentage shots. Wall was 3 of 19 from beyond the arc in the loss. The shooting turned out to be the defense as the Hawks only turned the ball over 14 times, a couple more than Brownfield (12).

In the second quarter, Brownfield outscored the Hawks by a 16-4 margin and cruised into halftime with a 25-8 advantage.

Cubs guard Sha'Colby Hill spearheaded the second quarter run, scoring eight of his 10 points. Hill sank a pair of 3s during the period. Hill ignited the second-quarter run after getting by a defender with some nifty dribbling and making an easy layup.

"We talked at the end of the first quarter about what we want to do is extend the lead out enough that they're going to have to start playing with more of a sense of urgency, where they can't come down the floor and waste 30 to 45 seconds," Faught said. "We basically

Childress runs past Breckenridge to region final

Bobcats	76
Buckaroos	41

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

For one quarter Friday night, the Childress and Breckenridge high school boys basketball Region I-3A semifinal seemed like it was going to be a hotly contested matchup.

Then the Buckaroos soon discovered the Bobcats had too much athleticism.

Behind a slew of transition points, Childress rolled to a 76-41 win over Breckenridge at Chaparral Center.

The Bobcats (28-4) dominated the final three quarters, outscoring the Buckaroos (21-9) by a 57-25 margin.

Childress advances to the regional final and will face No. 2 Brownfield at 1 p.m. today.

Leading 39-29 at halftime, the Bobcats stormed out of the locker room on a 17-4 run to seal the game. Five of Childress' first six baskets were scored in transition after a rebound or turnover.

Bobcats senior Chazten Brown sparked the third-quarter surge by making a half-court steal after intermission and dribbling across court for an easy layup. Brown shot 11 of 14 from the field for a game-high 25 points in the triumph.

"We feel like we have four or five guys that can handle the ball, so we get a rebound, we can really push," Childress

Grady boys advance to region championship after win over Jayton

From staff reports

Wildcats	58
Jaybirds	41

ABILENE — It's not a secret that the Grady boys basketball team likes to run and play at a fast pace as much as possible.

So when the Wildcats were playing a Jayton team that had to survive for a double-overtime victory the night before, they were more than willing to push the tempo and make Jayton's day a little tougher.

Thanks to that uptempo style, the Wildcats cruised into today's Region II-A championship game with a 58-41 victory over the Jaybirds on Friday afternoon at Moody Coliseum.

"We were able to get them running, and they didn't really want to run," said Grady coach Thomas Clay, whose team defeated Eula 57-55 qualify for the regional tournament. "They played a double-overtime game the night before, and that worked to our advantage. I think they were a little worn down."

The Wildcats (29-4) are now one win away from heading to the state tournament in San Antonio. They will face Menard, a 54-50 winner over Ira in the other Region II-A semifinal game, at noon today at Moody Coliseum.

Grady took control early and had a 29-15 lead at the half.

"I thought we played defense better than we have all year," Clay said. "We had our full court pressure working, and I think we forced 15 turnovers in the first half. Any time you only give up 15 points in the first half, you're doing something right."

Offensively, Beau Lucas led the Wildcats with a game-high 29 points. Cole Avery added nine in winning effort.

"(Lucas) played well and got on a roll," Clay said. "He's somebody who can shoot the ball well and get hot."

Clay said that facing Menard won't be easy, especially going up against its zone defense.

"They're in the regional final, so you know they're pretty good, and they beat a dang-good Ira team," Clay said. "We just have to play great defense and knock down some shots because they're going to pack the zone one us. We've got to be able to make threes, and we're not shy about flying those threes."

wanted to build enough of a lead where they had to start getting up the floor and taking quicker looks, which is beneficial to us because we like more tempo. We like for the game to be up and down. We like more possessions."

Brownfield's Alex McCrary scored a game-high 14 points, shooting 5 of 7 from the field. McCrary also led the Cubs with four steals.

Brownfield used a 1-2-2 zone defense early, but utilized more traps and full-court press looks as the game went on.

Cubs point guard Jordan Demps finished second with 11 points.

Wall sophomore Ryan Walling scored a team-high nine points, which included a pair of 3s.

Brownfield advanced to its second straight regional final. The Hawks face another up-tempo team in Childress today.

"We got our heads in the game," McCrary said. "We are ready for (today). We are not underestimating any team, and we are going to go out there and give it our all and play the best that we can, see what happens (today)."

neen said. "They were good shots, but we just weren't able to knock them down. We able to hit a few shots later ,but we got off to such a slow start."

Meanwhile, Lubbock Christian was able to hit some shots, especially from Lindsey Hearn, who finished with a game-high 16 points. Shelby Blankenship added 11 for LCHS.

MCA did go on a 10-0 run and it was a back and forth game in the second half.

Kristen Johnson led MCA with 14 points, while Alissa Beattie added 12.

This was the fourth time the District 1 foes had met this season, with Lubbock Christian winning three of those contests.

"They're a good team," said Cunneen about the Lady Eagles. "It's always tough playing your own district in the semifinal game. This district should be playing for the championship because I think we're the two best teams here. But that's the way it goes."

Even with the loss, the Lady Knights accomplished a lot for team that lost a few players to graduation from last year's state title team.

"We felt like our team overachieved," Cunneen said. "We lost a lot from last year, including our team leader in Kayla Beattie. But our kids exceeded our expectations, and we're very excited about the team entire team coming back next year, and we like our chances. This leaves a bitter taste in our mouths, but it certainly going to motivate the coaches, and it certainly is going to motivate the girls to get better and get back here next year."

doing it twice this year.

Ryburn said his team played solid defense but that the Lions were just able to hit some tough shots.

"Ashton Thorne hit two 3-pointers that were about six feet behind the line," Ryburn said. "When they're hitting those shots, it's near impossible to beat them."

Trinity (32-10) scored the first eight points of the game, had a 20-12 lead after the first quarter and a 35-20 lead at the half.

"We definitely put ourselves in a hole by turning the ball over quite a bit in the first quarter, and that didn't help," Ryburn said. "When we were able to handle their pressure, we did a good job of getting the ball inside. We just had a hard time with their press early in the game."

Caroline Hammond led the Lady Mustangs with 16 points and 16 rebounds, while Megan Ashton had nine points.

For Trinity, Emma Hardin had 17 points, Ashton Thorne had 15 and Ashton Duncan added 14.

Ryburn said despite the tough loss, he was proud of what his team accomplished.

"This was a really special team and a special group of girls," he said. "I couldn't be more proud of this group of girls and I wouldn't want to coach any other team."

CHILDRESS

From 1C

head coach Brandon Wall said. "You can see our size isn't the greatest, but we have a lot of guys that can run the floor, and we have some guys that finish around the rim. That's definitely one of our strongest attributes."

Childress junior Bryce Bowman was also hot from the field, shooting a robust 8 of 9 for 20 points.

The Bobcats didn't have a true big man, but they boasted a collection of versatile, hybrid players in Brown (6-feet), Bowman (5-11), Kaden Keys (6-0), Austin Gonzalez (5-11) that could score in the post, rebound, dribble in space and defend on the outside.

"We have a lot of athletes," Brown said. "We just play and try to take advantage of the mismatches that we have on the court. Just do the best we can with what we have."

In the first quarter, both Breckenridge and Childress traded blows during a high-tempo, back and forth stanza. The Bobcats led 19-16 after the first quarter.

In the second quarter, Breckenridge's shooting percentage began to wane and the Buckaroos finished with a 33.3 percent shooting percentage compared to 60.8 percent for Childress.

Breckenridge turned over the ball 21 times, compared to 13 for Childress.

"We stepped up our defense, and that's what we normally rely on, our defensive pressure," Bowman said. "We definitely stepped it up in the second quarter and the second half."

The Bobcats also outrebounded the Buckaroos by a 29-24 margin.

"We crash hard," Bowman said. "We have four or five guys crashing the boards as hard as we can every time. I think we just tip balls around, and we just go get them."

In the regional title game, Childress faces a similar Brownfield team that likes to run the fast break and score fast. Wall said that Brownfield likes to use more traps in its defensive strategy, while the Bobcats are strictly a man pressure team.

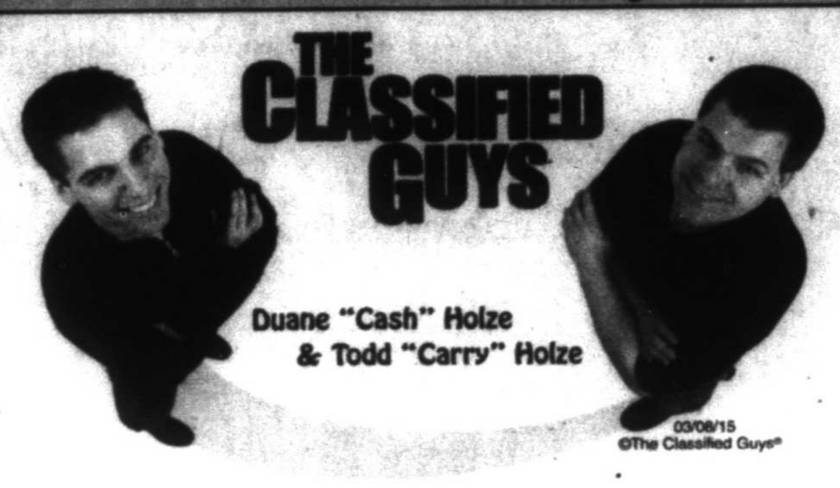
Ask the Guys



Dear Classified Guys,
I love music, but I certainly don't have a musician's ear. When I hum a tune at a red light, the cars next to me roll up their windows! My wife, on the other hand, grew up playing the piano and singing, but didn't play much while raising our three children. The other day we saw a piano in the lobby of a restaurant where we were waiting. It took a little nudging, but I encouraged her to play a tune. She sounded magnificent and those waiting even applauded. Since her birthday is coming and our kids are all grown, I thought I'd surprise her with a piano of her own. I often see "free" pianos listed in our newspaper that say they just need a tuning. I'm all for keeping something out of the landfill, but without knowing much about the instrument, how do I know if they are still good? Can I just pick one and get it tuned or is there more to it than meets the eye?

Cash: You're in luck. Being able to carry a tune is not a requirement for buying a piano, although don't be surprised if no one asks you to sing along!

Carry: Despite a piano's simple appearance, they are very complex instruments. Their internal structure of strings, hammers and sounding boards give them a beautiful sound when they are in tune, but parts can wear out, stretch or warp if not properly maintained.

Cash: It is possible to find an older piano for a reasonable price or even free. The trick is to determine which one is worth having tuned or repaired. And since moving any piano can be quite the task, you want to make sure you only do it once!

Carry: Before you invest too much time and energy hunting for the birthday piano, it may be worth surprising your wife with the idea. Considering she is the one who will be playing, she may have a preference as to which style or type she'd like to play and add to your home.

Cash: There are hundreds of manufacturers, each with a different "feel" and sound so the selection can be quite vast. Her background with playing the instrument can prove very helpful to finding one in good condition.

Carry: Since your wife was adventurous enough to play in a restaurant lobby, your gift idea is sure to be well received. And who knows, maybe one day she'll return the favor and surprise you with singing lessons!

Fast Facts

Black and White

Piano brands like Steinway or Baldwin are two of the original makers of pianos and have been around for a long time. However today, there are over 50 major brand-names of pianos, and in the last 100 years there have been over 5000 different manufacturers. Since about 75% of all piano buyers only purchase one piano in their lifetime, choosing the right one can take some time. There are 13 different size categories of pianos, with names like upright, baby grand or spinet, and each have their own style and sound quality.

Stay Composed

There have been many famous piano players throughout history, but in the 1950's one stood out as a very flamboyant entertainer. Wladziu Valentino Liberace, commonly known as "Liberace", won the hearts of millions. Armed with outrageous outfits, a signature Candelabra and an amazing ability to play the piano, he became the highest paid entertainer in the world from the 1950's through the 1970's. After a lifetime of entertaining, Liberace passed away in 1989 at the age of 67.

Practice Makes Perfect

Years ago, I worked my way through law school by teaching piano lessons. When I passed the bar, I put that job behind me, or so I thought.

Many years later while pleading a client's case to the court, the judge looked at me and asked if I used to teach piano. It turned out that I taught his son during my time in law school.

After hearing my case, he then set judgment on my client. "Despite having no priors, I'm sentencing your client to two years probation," he said.

He must have noticed my disappointment because he continued, "And for the record, that's a far lesser punishment than having to listen to my son practice piano after your lessons!"
