Absentee ballot begins for primaries

Absentee voting for the upcoming Democratic and Republican Party primaries begins Monday.

Registered voters for both parties may cast their ballots at the county clerk's office on the third floor of the Scurry County Courthouse.

Absentee voting for the May 3 primaries will end April 29. Ten political posts in Scurry County are on the ballot — seven of these contested races.

As the filing deadline passed Feb. 3, 23 local candidates — 18 Democrats and five Republicans — were announced.

These candidates are seeking expiring terms for county judge, county attorney, district clerk, county clerk, county treasurer, three county commissioners and two justices of the peace. Each serve four-year terms.

Police raid

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Police raided the homes of dozens of criminals in the Dublin area today to search for clues in the kidnapping of socialite Jennifer Guinness, police sources said.

Police spokesman Pat Kiely confirmed police had "visited a number of houses, both occupied and unoccupied," in the nationwide hunt for the 48-year-old mother of three, but refused to give any details.

Police sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said no arrests were made.

On Tuesday evening, three gunmen dragged Mrs. Guinness from her mansion and told her husband to pay a ransom worth $2.6 million. Her whereabouts are unknown, and the abductors have not contacted the family.

Cutbacks in WIC gain new reprieve

From local, wire reports

The termination of approximately 35 Scurry County clients from the special supplemental food program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC) will not be instituted as planned this month.

In addition, Mary Ward, RN and head of the county WIC program, said previously planned reductions in the types and amounts of food each person receives will not be made at this time.

The loss of food supplements for the Scurry County residents was to be part of cutbacks in the WIC program across the state. It was estimated 26,000 mothers and children would be affected.

State officials have said the expected cutbacks were not due to curbs in government spending, but rather a "shortfall that occurred in the allocation on the part of the Department of Agriculture."

After intervention by U.S. Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Mission, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, and Republican Sens. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., and Bob Dole, R.-Kan., the Agriculture Department is expected to release $1.5 million shortly for the Texas program.

Appraiser contends lawsuit would not abolish districts

By VICKI BROWN
SDN Staff Writer

A lawsuit expected to be heard by the Texas Supreme Court has challenged the existence of Texas appraisal districts, but local Chief Appraiser Ray Peveler says he believes entities like the Scurry County Appraisal District would continue to exist even if the court ruled for abolishment.

"I think it would be real bad if they won. But even if (the court) did away with the districts, more than 50 percent of the jurisdictions would continue to operate with one," he said.

Peveler explained that the State Board of Education's insistence for equality in taxation among individual school districts led to the establishment of appraisal districts.

Because of this, he said, "I believe we would continue to exist to appraise for school districts. The state board of education would want it because they demanded equal evaluations."

The lawsuit challenging the district's existence has been initiated by Galveston County Tax Assessor-Collector Chuck Wilson.

He and other elected tax officials throughout the state have appealed to the state's highest court, claiming the statute which created appraisal districts takes away authority given them by the state constitution.

In effect, they are attempting to have declared unconstitutional the 1981 amendment that brought counties under a single county-wide appraisal district.

If successful, the action would make the county tax assessor-collector the chief appraiser for all governmental units, including school districts and special districts such as the one which formed Western Texas College.

Arguing in support of the amendment is the Galveston County Central Appraisal District, aided by the state attorney general.

The lawsuit was filed against the Galveston appraisal district after the entity canceled a contract with the county official to do

Shooting case ends with plea

The shooting death of 43-year-old Alberto Rodriquez Jan. 17 resulted in a guilty plea here Friday and a 14-year prison sentence.

Domingo Miramontez Trejo, 46, pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in 132nd District Court.

Rodriquez, of 1605 College Ave., was pronounced dead at the scene after being shot once in the chest with a .22 cal. rifle.

Trejo was arrested that same night by Snyder police and has since remained in the Scurry County Jail. He was indicted for one count of voluntary manslaughter by a Scurry County grand jury in February.

The SDN Column

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The bride that has her husband eating out of her hand has convinced him it beats washing dishes."

A few weeks ago, we came across a study done by a group at Yale University. Researchers have concluded that if a woman isn't married by the age of 30, there is very little chance that she will ever walk down the aisle.

By this time next week, the long-time secretary of the East Side Church of Christ will be Mrs. Jim Hance.

Judy Lockhart, a 1961 graduate of Snyder High School, will be leaving her 24-year career as church secretary to become the wife of the minister of the Edgemere Church of Christ in Wichita Falls.

When Judy decided to take the marital plunge, she is doing it up right. Not only is she going to become a wife–she will become a mother, grandmother, aunt and daughter-in-law.

Judy met Jim Hance a few months ago at a singles retreat hosted by Richland Hills in Fort Worth. Hance's wife had died some two years ago.

Hance has three grown children and four grandchildren, and the couple plans to live in Wichita Falls.

The transition to wife is normally a big adjustment, but the added roles of mother and grandmother make it an unique occasion.

During her 24 years as secretary at East Side, she has "trained" several ministers. So friends suspect that Judy will again be able to "break-in" another preacher.

Incidently, the wedding is planned at 2 p.m. next Saturday at the East Side building.

It might be best if all folks waited until maturity to repeat marriage vows.

It occurred a few months ago when we overheard two young girls exchanging marriage notes.

Panned one, "Marriage is such a grind. You wash dishes, make beds. Then a month later, you have to do it all over again."

Ask any woman her age, and nine times out of 10 she'll guess wrong.

Downing campaign underway

Delbert Downing, Scurry County's candidate for the state's first ever Silver Haired Legislature (SHL), is "off and running" for the post, scheduling a full round of campaign activities for April.

Downing faces six candidates in District 3 of the West Central Texas Council of Governments area. Almost 22,000 individuals over 60 years old reside in the 12 counties contained in the district.

Already heard by seniors in Cisco and Baird, he plans to appear in Knox City on Monday and in Rotan on May 1.

Plans include speaking engagements in at least four other counties, although dates

Federal judge lifts the order against interior secretary

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A federal judge's ruling cementing a settlement between the federal government and Texas involving offshore oil and gas revenues will put $424 million in Texas coffers, officials said.

U.S. District Judge Howell Cobb signed the order Friday lifting a preliminary injunction against the Secretary of the Interior.

The injunction had prohibited federal officials from removing any funds from a special U.S. Treasury account where millions of dollars from offshore oil and gas leases have been sitting.

Cobb's ruling signals the end of a seven-year bitter legal and political fight between several coastal states, including Texas, and the federal government over $1.5 billion in offshore oil and gas revenues.

"It's conceivable that we could have gotten more money, but not likely," Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said Friday. "It would have been litigation on every single tract...It not only springs the $424 million it also gives us the (27 percent) share of future revenues. That we were not entirely assured of."

Texas filed suit in 1979 in Beaumont federal court claiming some of the money the federal government collects from oil leases off Texas shores.

The dispute involved the division of bonuses, royalties and interest collected from offshore oil leases. Other coastal states filed similar suits against the federal government.

U.S. ponders next move against Libya

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is sending an emissary to Western Europe next week and will confer here with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher to rally support for his anti-terrorism policy against Libya.

In the meantime, two U.S. aircraft carriers are taking position in the Mediterranean from where they could attack Libya. Donald T. Regan, the White House chief of staff, said Friday the administration was "coming close" to a conclusion linking Libya to the West Berlin nightclub attack.

That could set the stage for a decision by Reagan to order an attack on Libyan installations. An American soldier and a Turkish woman died in the discotheque explosion last weekend.

Rozanne L. Ridgway, the assistant secretary of state for European affairs, will meet in Paris in midweek with the allied representatives to plan for Reagan's economic summit in Tokyo in mid-May.

A U.S. official said the session would focus on terrorism, an agenda item for Reagan's meeting with the leaders of Japan, Britain, Canada, France, Italy and West Germany.

"Most of the Europeans are very reluctant to do anything," said the official, who demanded anonymity. France has expressed caution even about issuing a statement at the summit denouncing terrorism.

The Bonn government last week expelled two Libyan diplomats suspected of being implicated in the discotheque attack. But West Germany has resisted U.S. appeals to close the Libyan embassy.

The carriers Coral Sea and America, outbound from Spain and Italy, were expected to rendezvous near Sicily.

"They might not form up until they're in the central Med," said one Pentagon source, who declined to be named publicly. A second, also speaking on ground of anonymity, said, "There doesn't seem to be anything imminent at this point."

Reagan, having denounced Col. Moammar Khadafy Wednesday night as "the mad dog of the Middle East," besitated over whether to order a retaliatory strike against Libya.

Reagan's hesitation was not explained by administration officials. Potential military operations are almost never divulged in advance.

But one reason the president could be holding off is the lack of enthusiasm from the U.S. allies in Western Europe about launching an attack on Libya.

Another could be the presence of Vice President George Bush and Richard Murphy, an assistant secretary of state, in the Middle East. Bush is due back Saturday night from his talks with Arab leaders in Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Oman and North Yemen.

Murphy was in Syria Friday, his subsequent travel plans undisclosed.

Author against all censorship

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Novelist Kurt Vonnegut lashed out against censorship, saying "it usually happens in isolated rural areas."

"They're trying to get elected to the school committee never having read a book," Vonnegut, whose works include "Slaughterhouse Five," told students Wednesday at North Lake College.

GYULA POLGAR

Con artist sought by police

HOUSTON--Gyula Gyorgy Polgar, or "Georges" as he is known to investigators, is wanted by police departments in three counties on a variety of fraud and theft charges. Houston detectives say Polgar, 45, is a slick con artist who preys on impressionable women and runs a variety of scams.

This week he has been added to the Texas Most Wanted list. A reward of up to $1,000 is offered for information leading to his capture.

Anyone with information concering Polgar's possible whereabouts is asked to call toll-free 1-800-252-8477 or their local Crime Stoppers Program. In all cases, callers do not have to reveal their identities.

The Hungarian born Polgar is described as a white male, 5-8, 150 pounds with brown hair and blue eyes.

Gubernatorial candidates stump state

By The Associated Press

A group of gubernatorial candidates challenged Gov. Mark White's education reforms before a teachers' group, and former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance also blasted White's policies on energy and economics.

Hance, saying the issues constituted the "three Es" that dominated state politics this year, urged policies to simplify teaching, support state oil production and rejuvenate slumbering industries in a speech Friday to the Panhandle Press Association in Amarillo.

Hance also attended a political forum at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport's Amfac Hotel on Friday, sponsored by the Association of Texas Professional Educators.

Hance, a Republican hopeful in May's gubernatorial primary, told the Amarillo audience White's economic policy lacked the vision and intensity required to sell Texas to the nation and world a move Hance said would cushion the effects of falling oil and farm prices.

"We have been lazy in looking for other markets," said Hance, a featured speaker at the three-day PPA convention. "There are 20 states with economic development offices overseas and Texas isn't one of them."

He said eastern and midwestern cities should supplement overseas campaigns to promote state industries.

Hance, a Dimmitt native, advocated an oil-import fee and delaying or abolishing severance taxes on new drilling to prop up the sagging energy industry.

"If we ignore what's happening in the oil industry and the price drops to $5 a barrel, we'll see a severe drop in domestic production," said Hance, who switched parties after a narrow loss to Lloyd Doggett in the 1984 Democratic U.S. Senate primary.

"If the Saudis regain control of 40 or 50 percent of the world market, then it becomes more than a state issue it becomes a national security issue," said Hance, rejecting Reagan administration policies of allowing the free market to dictate oil prices.

Hance, joining many teachers across the state, offered a less than enthusiastic appraisal of White's school reform package.

"The program will double school district taxes in the next six to eight years," said Hance. "When that happens don't blame your superintendent, blame Mark White."

Hance, touching upon reforms that have irritated area administrators and teachers, urged more local control over taxing, disciplinary policy and classroom procedures.

"Principals should be able to discipline students at their school and not ask the state for permission," said Hance, protesting state disciplinary regulations. "And teachers should not fill out forms, they should be teaching."

Also attending the forum at DFW Airport were Democrat Andrew Briscoe III, a relative of former Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Democratic candidate A. Don Crowder and Republicans U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler and former Gov. Bill Clements.

Crowder exhibited a clear piece of plastic he said was an X-ray of White's brain.

Storms generate softball-size hail

DALLAS (AP) — A fast-moving line of thunderstorms spawned suddenly by a low-pressure system in North Central Texas dumped heavy rains and softball-size hail and authorities said a plane crash during the storm killed one person.

The National Severe Storms Forecast Center posted a tornado watch for a large part of Northeast Texas until 8 a.m. CST Saturday.

The watch area was along and 70 statute miles either side of a line from 100 miles west southwest of Tyler to 60 miles east-northeast of Alexandria, La.

Dallas police said a single-engine plane went out of control on approach to an airport in Addison, a suburb, during a hailstorm. The plane then hit a house and crashed in a private driveway shortly before 1 a.m. Saturday, said police Lt. John Sullivan.

High winds from the thunderstorms downed trees and power lines in Dallas and in Northeast Texas, and rains flooded freeway underpasses, causing numerous accidents, authorities said.

A tree was blown down during a severe thunderstorm in northern Smith County about 2:30 a.m. The National Weather Service said softball-size hail pounded the Oak Cliff area of South Dallas and Prosper and Frisco, Texas.

Health reps attend meeting on AIDS

CHICAGO (AP) — Cooperation between municipal health authorities is a neccessity in the fight against AIDS, say delegates from the 13 cities that account for 70 percent of the nation's AIDS cases.

The delegates, representing municipal health agencies from the cities concerned, agreed Friday at a 6½-hour meeting to share strategies in the fight against the deadly disease.

"We at the local level are especially tuned in to the fact that control of this epidemic must be guided by the very best of our wisdom," said Chicago Health Commissioner Lonnie Edwards, who arranged the session.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, "raises the most profound public health and legal questions since the Supreme Court approved compulsory immunization in 1905," Edwards said.

"We found that meeting face-to-face and discussing our mutual concerns was therapeutic," said Deputy Health Commissioner Richard M. Krieg, who applauded the delegates' decision to make the meeting the inaugural session of further conferences on the AIDS problem.

Krieg said that sharing the experience of authorities in such cities as New York and San Francisco would help those in cities where the disease is less prevalent to avoid "reinventing the wheel" in dealing with the problem.

"At the same time," Krieg added, "some of the smaller cities have seen a slower onset of AIDS and have had more time to develop careful plans for dealing with it."

The delegates also agreed that more public and private dollars should be spent to combat the disease and that AIDS patients who cannot afford expert treatment should be provided such care at public expense.

Special attention was paid to the need to alert women that the disease can be spread to them by high-risk males, Krieg said, as well as to the need for expanding public education on AIDS to include psychological factors.

While the conference did not act on Edwards' proposal for a computerized AIDS information network, he said that plan would be discussed at future sessions.

Health officials attended from New York; San Francisco; Philadelphia; Miami; Los Angeles; Baltimore; Denver; Minneapolis; Dallas; Newark, N.J.; Santa Ana, Calif.; and Washington.

Edwards said about 70 percent of U.S. AIDS cases have been reported from those cities.

Other issues took precedence over his proposal for computerized, intercity exchange of AIDS information, he said.

Paul Kawata of the National AIDS Network, a Washington-based alliance of AIDS service and education groups, had said earlier Friday that the proposal would needlessly duplicate a state-funded computer network that has been operating in California for more than a year.

Kawata said the California Health Services Department's computerized AIDS information network, or CAIN, provides subscribers nationwide with access to newspaper and magazine articles, scientific and medical research reports, and other information.

He said in a telephone interview from Washington that individuals and organizations can subscribe to CAIN and that he believed some city health agencies departments also use the service.

AIDS devastates the body's defenses against disease, leaving a person prey to other life-threatening infections and certain cancers.

AIDS is caused by a virus believed to be passed through blood and semen. Groups at highest risk for getting AIDS are male homosexuals, intravenous drug abusers and recipients of contaminated blood products.

WTC homecoming events scheduled

Western Texas College will be welcoming ex-students to the campus and college rodeo next weekend with a series of homecoming events.

A special feature of the Saturday night rodeo will be the introduction of a homecoming queen selected from ex-students. A homecoming queen has been chosen by students on campus for past homecomings, so the ex-student selection will be a first for WTC.

The 1986 rodeo queen will be introduced at the opening rodeo performance on Thursday night.

Response to letters sent to exes with known mailing addresses has been good, Mickey Baird, student activities director, said. Registration and a reception are planned from 8:30 to noon on Saturday (April 19) in the Student Center. Special receptions hosted by departments and campus organizations will be held at various locations from 9:45-10:30.

At 10:30, exes are invited to a meeting in the Fine Arts theatre for the election of officers for the ex-student association. A barbecue dinner in the student center cafeteria will begin at 11:30, with serving to continue until 1 p.m. Tickets will be $4 for adults and $2 for children. Faculty and staff members are also invited to attend.

Qualified and Experienced

To the voters of Scurry County:

On May 3rd, you will be going to the polls to elect a county judge for the next four years.

The County Judge is one of many important positions in the county. A County Judge has many duties under our laws. There are four different courts in which he has responsibilities. He is presiding officer over the Commissioner's Court, and as the fiscal officer of the county, is responsible for all budgeting of County funds. In Criminal Court, he handles Class A and B misdemeanors (crimes which are punishable by fine and/or jail time). In Civil Court, the County Judge has jurisdiction in civil suits which involve amounts of up to $3000. He serves as Judge of the Probate Court, probating all wills and presiding over guardianships and commitments of the mentally ill and alcoholic to the State Hospital. The County Judge also sits on the Hospital, Airport, Library and Welfare Boards as a representative of the Commissioner's Court.

Because of my experience as Snyder's Police Chief, Justice of the Peace of Precinct 1, and as a Scurry County Deputy Sheriff, I have many hours of classroom instruction in current laws. As Justice of the Peace, I attended an initial 40-hour course of instruction, with an additional 20 hours each year thereafter. I also attended the National Academy for Judges at the University of Colorado. This is a training academy for judges of all levels. A County Judge must be knowledgeable in procedures for each of the courts over which he presides. Training is continual. After each Legislative Session, new laws become effective and even more schooling is required to become familiar with these new laws. The County Judge's office is an involved job. Not only does he deal with the various courts, but also the day to day operations of the county and the problems of many citizens. All of these make this one of the most exciting and challenging positions of any elected official.

I graduated cum laude from Western Texas College with an Associate Degree in Mid-Management, and am a member of the WTC chapter of Phi Theta Kappa. In 1974, I was selected as an Outstanding Texas Government student.

I have been asked why I left the office of Justice of the Peace. While I was working in the Courthouse, I saw several areas of county government in which I felt qualified to work. My term as Justice of the Peace was to expire and I decided to announce my intention to seek the office of County Judge. I was not successful then, but I am qualified to serve you in that capacity and at this time, I earnestly solicit your vote and support.

Highest official resigns post

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Beaumont businessman Jim Yarbrough has given up his post on the 14-member John Gray Institute Advisory Board, becoming the third top official in the Lamar University hierarchy to resign.

Chancellor C. Robert Kemble retired under pressure Monday. Regents appointed vice chancellor George McLaughlin to replace him.

On Thursday, Chamber of Commerce President Larry Beaumont submitted his resignation as a member of the Lamar Alumni Association in response to the regents' actions. Beaumont's resignation will go before the alumni executive board in a closed meeting Tuesday. Regents' Chairman H.D. Pate expressed concern about the resignations.

Yarbrough said his resignation, handed in Friday, will give Lamar regents a free hand to appoint a member of the advisory board who will be more in keeping with the new direction regents say they are seeking for the institute and the university.

Yarbrough said he was disappointed that regents did not tell him that the executive director of the institute, Philip Johnson, would resign from his post until the day after it happened.

"It's not an upbeat situation to be on an advisory board and to not be advised," Yarbrough said. "I believed Johnson did a good job and I was unaware that there were problems. I didn't always agree with everything he did, but I maintained a good working relationship with him."

Regents elect members of the board each January. Yarbrough, however, said he was appointed by Kemble, then Lamar president and chairman of the advisory board.

"I can't say that my resignation is a show of support for Kemble or a condemnation of the regents because I don't know what direction they are trying to take the university," Yarbrough said.

"I'm not privy to all the facts. I don't want to become engaged in controversy over the Kemble issue but I think it could have been handled differently. I do know that from an economic development standpoint, we had the total support of Dr. Kemble and Philip Johnson."

Yarbrough professed no bitterness toward the regents but said their actions will have a negative effect on the institute's economic development efforts.

Yarbrough, president of American Valve and Hydrant Manufacturing Co. and chairman of the Beaumont Chamber of Commerce's Economic Commission, had been a member of the institute advisory board since its inception in 1982. The advisory board's function is to define goals and programs and to monitor and review progress of the institute.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Violinist Isaac Stern is giving his son David an early graduation present Saturday. The father and son will perform on stage together for the first time.

"I'm not sure who will be more nervous, David or I," the 65-year-old Stern said recently. "But I know the most nervous ones will be Mrs. Stern and the rest of the family."

With his son conducting, Stern will play Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto.

French hostage found by hunters safe at embassy

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A French teacher kidnapped in west Beirut was handed over to the French Embassy in Syria after a trio of rabbit hunters rescued him from his captors in a shootout in eastern Lebanon.

Michel Brian, 42, was freed Friday by the three clansmen who were on a nighttime hunt in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley.

Hours after the rescue, an Irish teacher was reported missing and feared kidnapped in west Beirut, where militia battles, robberies and kidnappings are a part of daily life. He would be the 50th foreigner abducted in Lebanon since January 1984.

Brian, who teaches French at the College Protestant Francais, was seized Tuesday night.

His captors apparently were moving him when three hunters from the Dandash family came across a parked car at about 2:30 a.m. in scrubland near their village of Ras Baalbek, 10 miles from the Syrian border.

Brian, blindfolded and his hands bound behind his back, was pushed from the car after his kidnappers fired on the clansmen, who cast aside their hunting guns and blazed away in return with AK-47 assault rifles, standard equipment in the war-torn region.

"I didn't know what was happening. I was in the ditch. Then these three men came up and took off the blindfold and released my hands," said the Frenchman in an interview at the Dandash home after his rescue.

"They didn't talk English or French. But I understood they were there by accident while they were hunting," he said. "I said, 'You've got yourself a big rabbit then.'"

Describing his abduction, Brian said he was walking near a florist's on a Beirut street when a gunman told him not to make a sound and pushed him into the trunk of a car.

WTC announces computer winners

Teams from Austin, Sweetwater, Colorado City, Grady and Stanton competed in computer contests held Thursday at Western Texas College.

Austin's Westlake High School and Sweetwater High School made up Division I, with the remaining schools placed in Division II. Divisions were made according to enrollment.

Westlake took first and second place in Division I, with third going to a single-member team from Sweetwater. A single-member team from Grady High School took first place in Division II, with second place going to Colorado City High School and third to another Grady High School team.

Britt Canada, assistant professor of computer science at WTC, served as contest director and was assisted by Dr. Frank Williams, professor of mathematics. WTC students assisting were Heath Blassingame, Larry Hartley and Karen Joiner.

Contestants were given nine problems to work and ranked on the number of problems solved correctly. In case of a tie, the time required to complete the problems was considered.

Virginia jury acquits former intelligence officer of spying

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Richard Craig Smith, the former Army counterintelligence officer who swore his sale of information about U.S. double agents to a Soviet KGB officer was part of a CIA operation, has been acquitted of all charges in his espionage trial.

A federal jury of nine women and three men found Smith innocent Friday night on five counts — one of conspiracy, two of espionage and two of passing classified information to the Soviet Union. If convicted, he could have faced life imprisonment.

"I am a free man tonight," declared an exuberant Smith as his wife, Susan — still in tears — his parents and several other relatives cheered the verdict after leaving the courtroom. "I am so very grateful to the jurors, who did what they thought was right."

Smith's defense rested on his claim that he had been recruited by a renegade CIA team, headed by Charles Richardson, and that the agency disavowed him when the FBI learned of his dealings with the Soviets.

Chief defense attorney Brent Carruth said the verdict was "a victory for our country and our Constitution. And thank God for one of the most courageous judges ever seen."

Carruth referred to U.S. District Judge Richard L. Williams, who compelled Richardson to testify at the trail after a legal battle in which the government sought to keep that from happening, and tried, as well, to prevent certain documents from being aired.

Smith, 42, was asked by reporters if he were bitter at the intelligence community, which he claimed during the trail had left him "out to dry."

"We need them," he said. "But my faith in the judicial system has been even more reaffirmed. Now I can get back to my wife and family."

The prosecution team, led by Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Aronica, quickly marched out of the courthouse without commenting to reporters after the verdict was returned following 5½ hours of deliberations.

The jury got the case after Carruth led the panel once again through the defendant's complex account of recruitment and ultimate betrayal by purported subordinates of Richardson.

But Aronica said the betrayal was strictly Smith's. He recounted that the defendant fell deeper and deeper into debt after resigning from the Army in 1980, and said he resorted "to the one salable item he had," his knowledge about U.S. counterspy operations.

"And he sold it to the Soviet Union for $11,000," Aronica declared.

As to Smith's claim that he was authorized by two CIA agents to disclose six double-agent operations to a KGB official in Tokyo, Aronica asked: "Do you really believe that your government would do something like that?"

Carruth said it did, in hopes that Smith, as a fledgling Salt Lake City businessman in need of capital, could successfully infiltrate the KGB apparatus in Tokyo.

Both sides acknowledged that Smith met several times with a top KGB official, Victor Okunev, in late 1982 and early 1983, and was paid $11,000.

According to the defense, Smith was victimized by the CIA team headed by Richardson, who was responsible for "foreign resources" in the Far East and sometimes used the alias Richard P. Cavannaugh.

Richardson confirmed during the trial that he left the agency under a cloud — he called it "involuntary retirement" — in 1984 of "poor judgment" in his dealings with a now-defunct Honolulu investment firm owned by Ronald Rewald.

Rewald recently was sentenced to 80 years in prison for allegedly swindling millions of dollars from 400 investor .

Richardson also acknowledged, under questioning limited by Williams, that he had lied to his superiors about his dealings with Rewald, which included the establishment of a CIA front called CMI Investment Corp., a subsidiary of Rewald's firm.

It was Richardson, according to the government, who alerted the FBI to Smith's involvement with the Soviets after Smith contacted Richardson at the CIA's San Francisco office.

The defense argued that Richardson and CIA headquarters chose to disown the defendant to avoid further embarrassment over the CMI operation.

2 FBI agents die in shootout

MIAMI (AP) — The bloodiest shootout in FBI history, a hail of bullets that went "on and on and on," killed two agents and two robbery suspects known for coming out shooting, and left five agents wounded, authorities say.

"This is just a devastating day for the FBI in Miami. This is the first time we've had as many agents killed and wounded in one particular incident," Joseph V. Corless, head of the Miami FBI office, said Friday.

The gunbattle broke out in a quiet, middle-class neighborhood in unincorporated Dade County south of Miami after the agents radioed for help as they spotted a car believed stolen by suspects in several bank robberies and armored car holdups, Corless said.

"Apparently when they believed they had sufficient assistance, an attempt was made to pull this vehicle over," he said. "At that point, a confrontation ensued, shots were fired."

At least one agent was hit as he struggled to put on a bulletproof vest, witnesses said.

The slain agents were identified as Benjamin T. Grogan, 53, a 25-year veteran, and Jerry Dove, 30, an agent since 1982. It was the first time since 1979 that two FBI agents were killed in one incident, and the most casualties in a single action in the agency's 79-year history.

"I thought it was a drug deal that went bad, because that's what everyone does down here," said Duane Parker, 24. "Then I thought it was a 'Miami Vice' episode, but then I saw the blood and dead guys and thought: 'No way.'"

The hail of bullets and shotgun blasts behind the Suniland Shopping Center went "on and on and on," said one witness.

Other witnesses said the FBI agents halted their gunfire when drivers, unaware of what was happening, drove through the confrontation.

"Those idiots kept going on through," said Billie Holloway. "But the agents knew they were civilians and halted their gunfire."

FBI Director William H. Webster identified the dead suspects as Michael Platt, 32, and William R. Matix. Webster said at a Washington news conference that the suspects "were two particularly violent individuals who did not shoot out of excitement or fear but ... it was part of their modus operandi."

He said the FBI had no other information about the pair but that they were armed with "at least one automatic weapon capable of firing at least 30 rounds in a single container and one shotgun that appears to have been modified to carry additional shells."

The FBI agents had been using handguns and one shotgun, Webster said.

Asked about other incidents involving these suspects, Webster said the owner of a car used in one of the robberies has disappeared and is believed to be dead.

WPLG-TV reported that the two were suspects in a rash of brutal attacks on people who drove alone into the Everglades. One man was shot several times and left for dead. Several others disappeared, but autos linked to them were used in a series of bank robberies and armored car attacks here.

The robbers killed one armored-car guard during a robbery, also firing without warning, WPLG reported.

Walking club, softball added to senior center

A Friday morning walking club and softball have been added to the activities at the Senior Center, members of the center's Advisory Council were told at their meeting Wednesday.

Fifteen senior citizens took part in the softball workout on Tuesday, Gloria Shaw, Senior Center director, said, and it is hoped that two teams can be formed. Players can be either men or women. The local men's softball association has invited senior citizens to play an exhibition game during the tournament being planned and a portion of the proceeds from the tournament will be donated to the center.

Clubs or church groups which would like to know more about the center are invited to contact Mrs. Shaw to arrange to see a slide show put together by the center. The show was presented at a recent meeting of the Kiwaniannes and was well received, she commented. There is no charge for the program.

In other business, council members voted to raise the cost of meals served at noon in the center for persons under 60 years of age. The charge will go from $2 to $3.50, and it applies only to those under senior citizens age.

Council members were reminded that May Day, the center's biggest single fund raiser of the year, is set for May 17. Tickets for the May Day barbecue will again be limited to 1,000 and will go on sale April 21. All tickets must be purchased in advance.

A real transfer of income from countries in Latin America to industrialized countries, averaging some $35 billion a year, has been required between 1981 and 1984 just to pay interest on their foreign debt. According to the Inter-American Development Bank, the need to pay foreign debt obligations has required a large swing in the Latin countries' current account — from a deficit of $40 billion in 1981 to virtual equilibrium in 1984.

Robbins collaboratesonbook

Ray Robbins, professor of criminal justice at Western Texas College, has collaborated with two colleagues to produce a new textbook for Texas law enforcement personnel.

Titled "The Texas Peace Officer," the book contains 561 pages and is divided into four parts.

As the preface states, "This textbook is a comprehensive resource for study of the major aspects of Texas law enforcement. Virtually all of the common day-to-day functions of peace officers are presented in detail in nontechnical language...The format of this book makes it a valuable resource for reference, for review of some of the main concerns in police work, for use in police academies, and for police officers' self-education. "The Texas Peace Officer" is expressly designed as a teaching instrument for use in the new 400-hour Basic Peace Officer Course. The materials in this text have been drawn from a broad range of sources and follow the mandates of the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education...."

Collaborating with Robbins on "The Texas Peace Officer" were Larry D. Nichols, assistant professor of law enforcement at South Plains College in Levelland, and Donald B. Harrelson, recently retired as professor of criminal justice at Southwest Texas State University. Harrelson received the Wallace D. Beasley Award for outstanding criminal justice educator in Texas in 1984.

Robbins, who was one of the original faculty members at WTC, holds a masters degree in criminal justice from the University of Oklahoma and is a graduate of the FBI National Academy. His law enforcement experience includes three years service in the United States Army Military Police Corps, nine years as a patrol officer and detective in the Midland Police Department and four years as a chief of police in Andrews.

A study guide prepared by Robbins to accompany the textbook, now widely used in criminal justice courses, was published in 1984. Robbins is currently revising that textbook.

Robbins is well pleased with the book, and the number of orders which have been received since sample copies were made available indicated that potential buyers like it as well. It will sell for just under $25, so it can economically replace handouts prepared for class use. It is letter size so it can fit into a brief case or be carried for reference should the need arise. The pages have wide margins which will be convenient for taking notes.

With "The Texas Peace Officer" completed, Robbins and Nichols are already making plans for another textbook dealing with traffic law enforcement.

The decision by Queen Mother Elizabeth followed a visit to London's Smithfield meat market last month.

Snyder netters reach finals; cop birth to region tourney

ODESSA -- Snyder's Michael Risenhoover and Michael Rodriguez have qualified for the regional competition after reaching the finals of the District 2-4A Tennis Tournament here Saturday.

Risenhoover and Rodriguez were the only Snyder entries left competing in the varsity division after the first two rounds Friday. They earned a berth to region Saturday morning by defeating Nguyen and Young of Lake View, 7-6, 6-3, and were to play Andrews' Holliday and Redwine in the championship match at 11:30 a.m.

The champion and runnerup in each division advance to regional competition.

"It was a mild surprise," grinned Snyder Coach Charlie Chrane, of his doubles team's success. "I knew they were capable but I also knew they would have to play very well. They did."

The Snyder doubles team opened the tournament with a 6-3, 6-3 win over Eric Crowell and Arthur Garcia of Fort Stockton, then clipped Andrews' Langley and Patrick 6-0, 6-0.

Snyder's other boy's doubles team, Toby Hinshaw and Heath Forbis, defeated Charlie Day and Abel Sarabia of Fort Stockton in the first round, 6-3, 6-2, but lost to Mosbee and Rubio of Lake View in the quarterfinals, 6-1, 6-3.

Most Snyder competitors survived the first round here Friday, but lost in the second. Michelle Osborn defeated Debra Downing of Andrews, 6-0, 6-0 before losing to Jennifer Smith of Lamesa, 6-1, 6-3. Terri Holley clipped Amy Shields from Pecos, 6-0, 6-0, but then fell to defending runnerup Debbie Marlett of Sweetwater, 6-2, 6-1.

At deadline Saturday morning, Marlett had reached the finals by defeating Nguyen but Smith and Rachel Mulanax of Sweetwater were still playing in the other semifinal.

In girl's doubles, Shawna Chrane and Deone Farmer blasted Lamesa's Laura Stephens and Linda Rodriquez, 6-0, 6-0, but fell to Kreidel and Gesis of Sweetwater, 6-4, 6-0 in the quarterfinals. Snyder's other girl's doubles team, Meredith Reed and Andrea Veazey, fell 6-2, 6-0 in the first round to defending state champions Mindy Kniffen and Martha Barrera of Andrews.

In semifinal action Saturday morning, Kniffen and Barrerra defeated Hogg and Moore 6-0, 6-1 and Manda and Janda Lopez of Lake View defeated Kreidel and Gesin.

In boy's singles, Alfred Brice lost to Eric Prather of Sweetwater, 7-6, 6-3, in the first round.

Sweetwater's Chris Harris, district runnerup a year ago, reached the finals Saturday by defeating Mike Maxwell of Lake View, 6-3 6-2. There was no word early Saturday as to the outcome of the other semifinal between Hinson and Lake View's Chris Goodman.

"I thought overall the kids played well," said Coach Chrane. "We had some that I was hoping would do better, but no one is more disappointed than them. Overall, though, I thought we played well."

Freshmen netters stand out at district tourney Friday

Lori McFarland, Stetson Merritt and Dan Scannicchio have already earned championships and Kevin Winter was to aim for another Saturday morning.

McFarland won first place in girl's singles by defeating Amy Bishop of Monahans, 6-1, 6-2 in the finals. Earlier, she had erased Barbie Talamantez of Pecos, 6-2, 6-0, and Joy Rasco of Sweetwater, 6-3, 0-6, 6-0.

Merritt and Scannicchio teamed to win boy's doubles. They defeated Villareal and Kite of Lamesa, 6-0, 6-0, then Elliott and Hargrove of Lake View, 6-4, 6-3, and finished off Dominques and Milam of Monahans, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, to take the title.

Winter was scheduled in the boy's singles final against Robert Alzaro of Fort Stockton Saturday. The Snyder youngster reached the finals by winning three matches on Friday. He defeated Barry Noll of Monahans, 6-2, 6-3, Phan Pong of Lake View, 6-4, 7-5, and Stacy Taylor of Pecos, 6-4, 6-1.

Snyder's other boy's singles entry, Steve Freeman, lost to Alzaro after defeating Eric Musquiz of Lamesa, 6-4, 6-0.

The Tigers' only other competitors in the freshman division, Rebecca Vestal and Rhonda Echols, lost in the first round to Kinnemer and Koening of Andrews, 7-6, 6-7, 6-3.

Go 3-0 in district play...

Tigers clip high-flying Eagles, 9-2

By BILL McCLELLAN
SDN Sports Editor

Snyder's Tigers gunned down their third straight state-ranked opponent here Friday night but Coach Albert Lewis isn't demanding that his squad be put in the limelight because of it.

"No, no. We want to be able to slip up on people," he grinned, tongue in cheek. "And we don't need the pressure."

It's doubtful the Tigers are going to sneak up on anyone, at least not after their 9-2 victory over sixth-ranked Pecos.

The win leaves Snyder atop the District 2-4A baseball standings with a 3-0 record. Pecos and Andrews, an 8-5 winner over Lamesa Friday, are tied at 2-1.

The Tigers will take a 12-7 season record into next Tuesday's game at Monahans.

Snyder combined good pitching with timely hitting to come from behind for the victory Friday. Don Osborn, who pitched three-hit ball over five innings, earned the win in his first start of the season. Jimmy Velasquez took over in the sixth and went the final two stanzas.

"Don did an excellent job. Pecos is a real good hitting team and he kept them under control real well," said Lewis.

It's becoming almost blase to say it, but Ricky Hunter again sparked the offense. Coach Lewis had moved him to the lead-off position in the batting order, and he responded well. The Tiger senior went to the plate four times, drew two walks and cracked a single and a double.

"That (the lead off position) is where we've been weak at and Ricky got on base four times," said Lewis. "He has really been doing a good job lately. That's what we've been looking for."

Give credit also to courtesy runner Joey Felan. He took over for Hunter on the basepaths and scored all four times.

Snyder opened a 1-0 lead in the first inning after Hunter drew his first walk off of pitcher Oscar Mariscal. Felan came in to run and went to second and third on a pair of wild pitches. He scored on a single from Chris Fryar.

Pecos produced its two runs in the bottom of the second inning. Javier Solis started the action with a two-out single. Mariscal then cracked a hard shot to short stop Brad Holcomb, whose throw was off the mark to first baseman Kenneth Pickering. Solis scored on the error. Mariscal later came in on a single from Ponchito Bafidis.

But Snyder was just getting warmed up offensively. The Tigers tied the game at 2-2 in the second when Mike McWilliams reached on a fielder's choice and scored on a single from Michael Long. The Tigers then went ahead in the third when Justin Webb singled in Felan after Hunter had walked a second time. The lead grew to 4-2 on a Kenneth Pickering basehit that drove Webb home.

Snyder added another run in the fifth after Hunter doubled and Felan - the courtesy runner, remember - went to third on a routine ground out. Felan scored on a sacrifice fly from Velasquez.

Four runs in the sixth ended the scoring. The key hits included a bunt single by McWilliams, who eventually scored on Hunter's second basehit of the game, and a two-run single from Webb. Michael Carter also scored in the inning. He came in as a pinch runner for Holcomb and scored on a sacrifice bunt and an error.

The Tigers committed a couple of errors defensively, but made up for them with some heady fielding that excited the large crowd.

In the fourth, for example, Snyder got a double play from what could have been disaster. David Vejil had led Pecos off with a walk but Osborn struck out next-up Tony Urquidi. Solis followed with a sharp hit to the left-side gap. Holcomb was able to backhand the ball but his desparation throw went wild past Pickering and rolled to the fence.

(see Tigers, page 11A)

Locals claim 1st in bodybuilding

Roger Cloe and Alan Anderson, both from Snyder, won first place honors in the Permian Basin Bodybuilding Competition, held recently in Odessa.

Cloe won first place in the middle weight and Anderson in heavyweight. They competed in four rounds of judging, which included symetry, muscularity, definition and presentation.

All contestants went through a series of mandatory poses, then presented an individual routine, choreographed to 90 seconds of music.

Cloe and Anderson have been working out together for seven months at Family Fitness in Snyder. This was their first meet.

They plan to compete in the Lubbock Bodybuilding Championships April 19 at Lindsey Theatre.

Masters update

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) - The Masters seems to be turning into a foreign affair.

Seve Ballesteros, the confident Spaniard who already has won this major golf event twice, moved into a 1-shot lead Friday with a 4-under-par 68, but four other foreigners were nipping at his heels.

Ben Crenshaw, one of only three Americans in the top eight, said it was possible the foreign players were dominating because the European and Japanese tours are played under demanding and difficult conditions.

"You play against the elements more," Crenshaw said. "Maybe that has something to do with it. They learn how to score under less favorable conditions."

The only problems most golfers face on the 6,905-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club course are lightning-fast greens and swirling winds.

Ballesteros, out of competition most of the season because of his one-year suspension from the PGA Tour, had a 36-hole score of 139, 5 under par.

Bill Kratzert, the American who shared the first-day lead at 68 with Ken Green, had a 72-140.

Tommy Nakajima of Japan was alone in third place at 71-141.

Five were deadlocked at 142 - defending champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany, Greg Norman of Australia, T. C. Chen of Taiwan and two Americans, 1984 champion Ben Crenshaw and Danny Edwards.

Langer had a 68, Edwards and Crenshaw 71s, Norman 72 and Chen 73.

Ballesteros, who highlighted his day by sinking a 25-foot putt for an eagle 3 on the 500-yard 15th, also had no explanation for the foreign success.

Clown act highlight for rodeo

Quail Dobbs, a rodeo clown for some 20 years, has achieved a near-legend status with rodeo fans.

He will be among the features of the NIRA rodeo to be hosted by Western Texas College April 17-20 in the Scurry County Coliseum, entertaining the crowds by doing the work he loves.

"I've always loved entertaining people," says Quail. "When I started clowning many years ago, I fought bulls; but I always tried to inject comedy into part of it, too. Sometimes it's pretty hard to think about being funny when you have 1,600 to 2,000 pounds of enraged beast zeroing in on you."

In the last few years Quail has left the cowboy-saving chores to others. He works the barrel now and was the barrel clown for the National Finals Rodeo in 1978.

Dobbs appears at the Cheyenne Frontier Days Rodeo every year and in 1983 was made an honorary member of the Frontier Days "Heels Club." He is also an honorary member of the Breeders Greeters for the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo. He was chosen to work at the College National Finals Rodeo in 1984 and appeared at the Canadian National Finals Rodeo in 1982.

Five performances of the rodeo are scheduled, with starting times at 8 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights and 2 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Tickets are $4 for adults, $3 for students and $6 for box seats. Introduction of the 1986 Rodeo Queen will take place during the Thursday night rodeo and the Homecoming king and queen will be introduced Saturday night.

Free tickets for Snyder school students have been made available for the Thursday night performance. The tickets must be picked up in the principals' offices and will not be available at the box office. Students in Hermleigh, Ira, Colorado City and Gail can get free tickets for the Saturday afternoon rodeo in the principals' offices at their schools.

RODEO ACT—Quail Dobbs uses a variety of animals and various other props when he entertains rodeo crowds. A veteran of some 20 years as a rodeo clown, Dobbs will be here for the WTC intercollegiate rodeo April 17-20.

At New Mexico rodeo...

Women doing well for WTC

HOBBS, N.M. -- Western Texas College women were in good standing heading into Saturday's edition of the New Mexico Junior College NIRA Rodeo, being held here.

Finals in the four-day event are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Sunday, New Mexico time.

WTC's Shelly Eldridge flashed a 9.2 and is winning second in the goat tying after Thursday and Friday's performances. She is also fourth in the breakaway roping with a 4.3. Niki Moist is sitting seventh in the breakaway with a 5.5 while Mistri Davis is ninth in the barrel race with a 17.1.

The top 10 competitors in each event qualify for Sunday's short go.

In men's action, Keith Hudson is carrying the Western Texas banner with a 10.5 in the calf roping. His time is currently tied for first.

Also, Jim Smith and Jess Burner are fifth in the team roping, despite a fine 7.5 clocking. Donnie Yorks is eighth in the steer wrestling with a 7.6 while Wes Henderson is first in the saddle bronc with a ride of 72.

Henderson is not on the designated six-man WTC team, but his score should help anyway, said Coach Bob Doty.

"It will help because it will help keep other schools from maybe getting points in that event," the coach pointed out.

Western does not have any team members entered in the saddle bronc. Henderson and Shawn Goemmer, who is also entered in the saddle bronc, are WTC students but not on the designated team.

In other results, Tobin Tate and Chuck Smith, turned a 7.8 in the team roping, currently eighth. Tate and Jim Forbes are also holding down 10th with an 8.7.

Also, Tony Hecksher is fifth in the bareback with a 65 and Goemmer is seventh with a 63.

A couple of former Western Texas cowboys are fairing well. Van Hale, a Snyderite now with Sul Ross State University, is tied for second in the saddle bronc with a 71. Greg Rhodes, also with SRSU, is first in the bull riding with a 75.

TIGERS VICTORIOUS

Seeing the opportunity, Solis took off towards second and Vejil turned the corner at third. Pickering hustled over, got the ball and fired it to Holcomb at second to get Solis. Holcomb then buzzed a strike to Osborn covering at home and he tagged out Vejil to end the inning.

Hunter also got in the act defensively as he threw out two baserunners trying to steal second.

"Sharp. The guys made some heads up plays out there tonight. They were alert," said Lewis, who said the fans played a major role in the victory.

"It was a tremendous crowd and I'll tell you, the kids recognized it. The crowd support pushed them on. They gave an extra effort tonight because of the crowd," said the coach.

Snyder came up with 10 hits, five walks and were helped by three errors. Hunter was two-for-two with the two walks while Webb and McWilliams were both two-for-three.

Mariscal is now 1-1 after taking the loss. He went the distance and struck out six along the way.

Pecos managed just five hits, walked five times and benefitted from two errors. The Eagles, 11-6 now for the season, struck out six times.

Jury convicts man of murder

ZAPATA, Texas (AP) — Jurors convicted a Webb County Jail inmate Friday of capital murder and sentenced him to death by injection in the slaying of a jailer killed during a foiled escape attempt.

Pair take vows

BEDFORD, Texas (AP) — When a sudden hospital stay stalled Victor and Carolyn Molitor's wedding trip, they wrote their own prescription for the ceremony, saying their vows in the hospital foyer.

Molitor, 74, had a red rose pinned to his blue bath robe as he remarried Carolyn, 47 at Northeast Community Hospital Thursday. The guests included doctors and nurses. The reception was held in the intensive care unit waiting room.

The Molitors had planned to be married in Acapulco, but their plans were interrupted when Molitor experienced breathing difficulty during a stopover April 6 at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Don Severino and Bob Seadore, the airport paramedics who treated Molitor were among those watching as the Rev. Michael Young performed the ceremony.

"He sent an invitation over to the airport," Seadore said. "His wife called and asked us to come over, too."

"We answer about 2,500 calls a year," Severino said, "but this is our first wedding."

"If it hadn't been for you, there wouldn't be a wedding," said emergency room nurse Ann Greif.

Molitor said his hospital stay will delay their trip to Acapulco for a few months. He plans to return to Littleton, Colo., to recuperate.

The couple divorced in 1981. But when Molitor had a heart attack, his ex-wife flew to Denver to nurse him to recovery.

Strikers to hold another rally

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — Striking Hormel meatpackers have been allowed to hold another rally despite a demonstration that turned to a riot in which eight police officers were injured when demonstrators hurled rocks and sprayed chemicals at them, authorities said.

Seventeen strikers or supporters were arrested during Friday's demonstration by up to 400 people outside the Geo. A. Hormel & Co. plant here. An arrest warrant accusing a leader of the 8-month-old strike of aiding and abetting a riot also was issued Friday.

Leaders of Local P-9 of the United Food and Commercial Workers union said up to 1,000 people would attend an afternoon rally, which is to feature a telephone linkup with the Rev. Jesse Jackson and an appearance by actor David Soul, a labor activist.

After Friday's demonstration, at which police used tear gas to disperse the crowd, Police Chief Donald Hoffman said he would ask City Council to withdraw its permit for today's rally and parade. Later, however, he said he had changed his mind.

"It's better to have entertainment lined up for them than for them to find their own entertainment," Hoffman said.

During Friday's demonstration, eight police officers were injured when demonstrators threw rocks and sprayed Mace and other chemicals in their faces, said Hoffman, who termed the violence a riot.

The officers suffered head and eye injuries and were treated at a hospital and released. There were no reports of injuries to demonstrators.

Police work disturbance

Police worked a domestic disturbance complaint Friday evening and logged four unrelated misdemeanor arrests.

Officers were called to a local residence around 10:20 p.m. where they found a disturbance between a woman, her husband and father-in-law.

Police took a report for misdemeanor assault from the incident but no arrests were made.

In other action, officers jailed four subjects for public intoxication and one for driving with a suspended license.

One of the public intoxication suspects was also charged with disorderly conduct.

Grass fire noted

Units of the Snyder Fire Department were dispatched to a grass fire north of town at 7:19 p.m. Friday.

According to fire reports, the blaze occurred about 1.5 miles north of th city limits on the Clairemont Highway.

countywide property appraisals.

The district won its case in a Galveston district court, and it was appealed directly to the Supreme Court because it involved the state constitution.

Attorneys attempting to have the amendment overturned say the state constitution of 1854 and state property tax laws of 1954 said the county tax assessor-collector would "do all the assessing and collecting of taxes within a county."

The 1981 constitution change, resulting from passage of the so-called Peveto bill, said a single property appraisal would be made for all taxing units except the county.

Later, voters approved an amendment that allowed the Legislature to include counties.

are still to be confirmed.

Downing will also speak to a local audience at 11:30 a.m. April 25 in the senior center.

The Silver Haired Legislature will meet in Austin from Sept. 29 through Oct. 1. It will be an elected, nonpartisan body of citizens 60 years of age and over. The group will consider and vote on proposed legislation affecting the needs of older Texans.

Downing's campaign has been endorsed by the Scurry County Senior Center Advisory Board.

Youth program on slate

Job opportunities for the county's disadvantaged youth will be discussed when county commissioners convene in regular session Monday.

Funded through the U.S. Department of Labor and the state, the Summer Youth Employment and Training Program will be administered locally by the West Central Texas Council of Governments. The program is designed to provide economically disadvantaged youth, aged 14-21, with practical work experience.

If commissioners accept the proposal, the county will be required to provide job opportunities and to monitor each individual's accumulated hours.

In other action, court members will discuss compliance with the Fair Labor Standards Act imposed by the federal government. "We must be in 100 percent compliance with the law by April 15," County Auditor Bernhard Bartels explained. "We may be considering some county policies in connection with compliance."

The law requires all state and local governments to keep an accurate log of hours worked by their employees. Governmental entities can reimburse overtime hours through compensatory time off or additional pay.

During Monday's session also, commissioners plan to consider a proposed rate increase for housing out-of-county prisoners and will name an alternate election judge in Hermleigh.

County Treasurer Billy Wayne Thompson is also expected to present his quarterly report.

Consul: Americans shot at

HIDALGO, Texas (AP) — Two Americans who fled Mexico after handing over their money to police were shot at and their pickup truck was rammed by Mexican officers who crossed to this side of the border, authorities said Friday.

Customs inspectors watched in astonishment as Reynosa police chased the pickup across the international boundary, and rammed it after one of the tires was blown out on the bridge, U.S. Customs Port Director Herbert Best said.

The inspectors said the Mexican police were shooting wildly and that some people on the U.S. side fell to the ground to avoid stray bullets.

After being rammed, the truck managed to make it to the customs inspection station. Mexican police demanded custody of the men, but agents refused.

U.S. Consul Danny Root of Matamoros said Friday he sent a formal complaint to the mayor of Reynosa, where the incident occurred about 3 a.m. Thursday.

"The boys claim they were beaten up a a little bit," Root said. "The Mexican police on the scene say that one of their officers was injured in the police car where the boys ran into them. The boys, of course, claim the Mexican police car ran into them.

"Mexican police contend the boys were detained for being drunk and disorderly," Root said, "that they resisted arrest and that they ran into a Mexican police car in the process of running away and injuring a Mexican police officer. Mexican police claimed there was probably contraband in the pickup."

Customs officers did not find anything, he said.

Reynosa Mayor Miguel Valdez Revilla told Root during a meeting on Thursday that he also would conduct an investigation.

The incident began after four men left from their restaurant job in McAllen and went to Reynosa.

Francisco Guerrero, 20, of Mercedes drove his car into Mexico and three other men — Alfonso Quinones Jr., 18, of McAllen, Rudolf Martinez, 20, of San Juan, and Juan Ramon Gonzalez, 27, of Mission — followed in a pickup truck. Around 2 a.m., they dropped off Guerrero's car at a place he was staying.

The said a Reynosa police car stopped them and three officers told them to get inside the car. In the vehicle, they were told to hand over their money and they gave the officers about $15, Root said.

After driving a few blocks, police stopped and let three of them out. When they realized that one was still in the police car, Quinones and Martinez ran to the pickup and started for the bridge, Root said.

The chase was joined by other police and the shooting began, he said.

Guerrero and Gonzalez, who had been held by Reynosa police, were released.

Root said the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City and the State Department were notified of the incident.

Bush ends trips

SAN'A, NORTH YEMEN (AP) — Vice President George Bush, who created a political stir with comments on oil prices at the opening of a Middle East tour, is closing his trip with a visit to a new refinery backed by Texas oilmen.

The final event in Bush's 10-day journey was the opening of a 10,000-barrel-a-day refinery near Marib, the ancient city believed to have been the home of the Queen of Sheba.

Afterward, he was to return to San'a, the capital city, to board Air Force 2 for the trip home, with refueling stops in Jidda, Saudi Arabia, and Shannon, Ireland. Bush was to arrive in Washington about midnight Saturday EST at the end of a 25- or 26-hour-long working and flying day.

At a wrapup news conference Friday, Bush said any political damage he suffered by appearing to advocate higher oil prices was repaired by President Reagan at his news conference Wednesday night.

"I think if there had been any damage, the president's strong support for what I said ... would take care of any political fallout," said Bush, the frontrunner for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

Traveling through Persian Gulf states in the last week, Bush opened himself to political criticism back home by expressing concern about plummeting oil prices and warning that U.S. national security interests would be hurt if American energy producers were weakened.

The remarks were read in the United States as an assertion that Americans should pay more for gasoline to heat their homes and drive their cars.

Waldheim U. N. file based on murder charge

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A U.S. diplomat has become the latest envoy to the world body to see a secret file on Kurt Waldheim that sources say is based on Yugoslav charges that the former U.N. chief was involved in Nazi attacks on civilians.

Earlier this week, the file was examined by the Israeli and Austrian ambassadors. On Friday, Deputy U.S. Ambassador Herbert Okun copied the dossier for forwarding to the State and Justice Departments, said Irene Payne, a spokeswoman at the U.S. mission.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, summarized the Yugoslav accusations against Waldheim made 40 years ago, some of which were reported last month by the Belgrade newspaper, Vecernje Novosti.

Earlier this week, the Yugoslav Foreign Ministry tacitly confirmed that the Vecernje Novosti reports came from the documents given the U.N. War Crimes Commission in 1947. "At present we have no new facts," the ministry said.

A translation of three Vecernje Novosti articles, made available here, said the Yugoslav evidence was forwarded in a seven-page report to the U.N. commission's headquarters in London on Dec. 25, 1947, with a request for Waldheim's extradition.

The commission, according to a document published in Belgrade, listed Waldheim as a person sought for "murder, putting to death of hostages." The commission disbanded in 1948 and sent its files to the U.N. archives in New York.

Still unanswered is why the case was not followed up four decades ago. Waldheim has noted that Yugoslavia twice voted for him to be U.N. secretary-general, during his tenure from 1972-81.

Waldheim has acknowledged he was in the German army during World War II but has denied being a Nazi and says he knew nothing about Nazi atrocities or deportations.

Leaks said compromised court cases

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice John Hill said he suspects that "outsiders" have learned of the secret status of cases pending before the court through leaks.

A House panel investigating alleged improprieties by the court pierced the privacy of the judges conference room Friday when it elicited testimony from former court briefing attorneys.

A lawyer for two subpoenaed justices said the ex-briefing attorneys may have violated their oaths of office by testifying about incidents in the judges' private third-floor chamber.

"We have no actual proof (of the culprit's identity), but do suspect that information concerning the deliberative status of certain cases pending before us has been leaked to outsiders," Hill testified Friday.

"We are pledged, I assure you, as a court family to redouble our efforts to prevent such leaks, and have made it clear to everyone connected to the court in any capacity that they will be dealt with in the harshest manner if they are proven to have violated this mandate of total court confidentiality," said Hill.

Two former law clerks and Justice C.L. Ray's ex-secretary declined to testify on the recommendation of their attorneys, who said only if the committee threatened their clients with contempt would they testify.

It was only the second hearing by the House Judicial Affairs Committee on the allegations.

Before the briefing attorneys spelled out details of those communications, retired Chief Justice Jack Pope told the committee that the internal workings of the court "must be highly secretive" and leaks "destroy the integrity of the whole court system."

Chairman Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, refused to accept a motion to drop the subpoenas of Ray and Justice William Kilgarlin.

"Many of those allegations were very disturbing, some I found shocking," Tejeda said of the testimony.

Committee member David Patronella, D-Houston, said Tejeda "wants to keep dragging this out."

But Tejeda said, "We're not here to prosecute, punish or indict." He said the committee wanted to find out if laws need to be changed.

The acceptance of a full scholarship to Texas Tech University has brought a local athlete one step closer to reaching a life-long dream — Olympic gold.

A few weeks ago, Snyder High senior Karlene Thompson signed a letter of intent to play women's volleyball for Tech. She will begin her tenure with the squad this fall.

Karlene sees her participation in college athletics as a stepping stone to the Olympics. "I'm shooting for the 1988 Olympic volleyball team," she said, a smile crossing her face. "That's been my goal since I was little."

As a senior, she helped lead SHS to capture the state AAAA volleyball title. For her leadership and skill this season, she was named to the All-District, All-State and All-State Tournament volleyball teams.

Competitors in other high school sports have also felt Karlene's presence. Named to the All-District and All-South Plains basketball teams, she was also included on the Texas High School Girls Coaches Association All-State squad. Members of the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches chose her for that group's All-Region third string.

Although volleyball is her first love, Karlene admits to a deep appreciation for track as well. Across all classes, she currently ranks sixth among high school girls in the triple jump and about twelfth in the long jump.

"I chose volleyball over track because I like volleyball better," she said. "Volleyball is, well, I guess it's more competitive to me. But I might decide to run track in college, too. If I keep getting better as I go, I may try for the Olympics in track, too."

Karlene attributes her athletic success to her family. "I have six brothers and five sisters. Whenever we wanted to play football or basketball, we always had two teams available to play five-on-five or six-on-six," she laughed.

Her parents, Willie and Esther Thompson, set the example for their children. "My dad was in track and played baseball and my mother ran track and played basketball," she said.

She also looks to an older brother and sister for encouragement. A wide receiver for over two years with the St. Louis Cardinals, her brother Ken plans to attend the Houston Oilers training camp this year as a free agent. Her sister Bev ran track for Mason College in California.

Shaw, Sikes unite

FORT SMITH, Ark. — Melissa Brooke Shaw of Fort Smith, Ark. and Dray Kevin Sikes were united in marriage at 4 p.m. on March 22 in Saint John's Episcopal Church in Fort Smith, Ark.

MR. AND MRS. DRAY KEVIN SIKES

Parents of the couple are Mrs. Anne Reichardt and J. Michael Shaw, both of Fort Smith, Ark. and Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sikes of Snyder.

Vows were exchanged before a multi-colored hand embroidered celebration. Included in the decorations were mixed spring flowers.

Musical selections were "Oh, Perfect Love," "The Wedding Prayer," "Saint Anthony Chorale," "Trumpet Voluntary," and the "Final Symphony I." The music was played on an organ.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a pearl satin gown with wide decollete neckline outlined with handrun alencon lace, embroidered with pearls. The sleeves tapered to petal points over the back of the hands. The tightly molded princess bodice flared to a bouffant skirt acccented by bow-topped godet panels of lace sweeping to a wide chapel train. A chapel length French silk illusion veil capped with alencon lace embroidered with pearls, adorned the bride's head. The bride's bouquet was of bridal blush roses and gardenias.

In keeping with tradition the bride's wedding gown, belonging to her mother, served as something old. Something new was her petticoat and the veil was borrowed. The traditional blue garter served as something blue.

Serving as maid of honor was Lynn Karber of Fort Smith, Ark.. Bridesmaids were Lynn Karber of Fort Smith; Cindy Stephens of Gary, Ill., sister of the bride; and Rachel Shaw, of Fort Smith, Ark., sister of the bride.

The bridal attendants wore pearl lace tea-length dresses by Bernelle. The dresses had short lace sleeves with pearl satin tie-back sashes. The bridesmaids' bouquets were fresh mixed spring flowers.

The groom wore a traditional classic full tail tuxedo with a black bow tie. His boutonniere was a white rose.

Serving as best man was Bill Sikes, father of the groom. Groomsmen were Kyle Sikes of Pampa, brother of the groom; Randy McCown of Dallas; and John Parke of Fort Smith, Ark.

The groomsmen wore traditional black full tail tuxedos with white bow ties and mixed spring flowers served as their boutonnieres.

The bride's mother wore a spring green and white ribbon silk day-length dress, by Carlisle, with petal sleeves and a flowing skirt. The dress was accented by a green and white beaded belt. The groom's mother wore a royal blue pleated chiffon day length dress with long sleeves.

The guest book was placed at the reception that was held at Hardscrabble Country Club following the ceremony. The table was covered in white satin, with white feather plume pen used to register the guests. Fresh spring flowers complemented the table arrangement.

Registering the guest were Gina Driscoll and Leigh Randall, both of Fort Smith.

Music for the reception was furnished by George Hunt Jazz Ensemble.

The three-tiered wedding cake was centered on the bride's table. Each layer was a different flavor including carrot, banana nut and lemon. The icing was ivory colored cream cheese. A porcelain bride and groom topped the cake. Fresh spring flowers decorated the individual layers.

Serving at the bride's table were Milissa Driscoll of Sallisaw, Okla. and Fran Milam of Fort Smith.

The groom's table was draped in white with a chocolate sheet cake, frosted with milk chocolate icing, centering the table.

At the groom's table serving were Kim Parke and Cecily Jenkins, both of Fort Smith.

Punch and coffee were served by Lucy Lee of Little Rock and Natalie Devero of Dallas.

Special guests were Syble Bley, aunt of the groom from Snyder; Mary Bley, grandmother of the groom from Snyder; Anna Florence Coy, grandmother of the bride; Bruce H. Shaw, grandfather of the groom.

Graduating from Fort Smith High School and University of Arkansas, the bride has earned a B.S. in Home Economics and is employed as a field representative for the American Cancer Society.

The groom graduated from Snyder High School and Texas Tech University with a B.S. in agricultural engineering. He is employed by Employers Insurance of Texas.

After honeymooning in Banf, Canada, the couple will make their home in Tyler.

ANSEL ADAMS, an Autobiography. His was a world of mountains and woodlands and the vast, timeless reach of the western landscape. If a country as limitless as this can ever be said to have posed for its portrait, certainly the photographer behind the camera was Ansel Adams. And now he has given us this book. Here, completed just prior to his death in 1984, is Adams' testament of a life of dedicated, adventure, plainspoken wisdom, and a concern for man and nature.

Tan without sun

For all those who shouldn't tan and those who don't have hours to waste in the sun, makeup can create the look of a tan, safely and quickly.

Purchase both a dark-tone and a light-tone foundation so you can mix the two for the amount of tan look you want. You can also mix just the dark tone with some moisturizer lotion to thin out the color so it becomes translucent.

Experiment with mixing and start "tanning" with a tone slightly deeper than your natural complexion and gradually deepen your tan until you reach the tone you want.

The first recorded horse race in the United States was held in 1668 at Hempstead, N.Y.

Observe 80th birthdays

A reception honoring the 80th birthdays of Bird Hart Wade and Una Hart Wade was held on March 29 in the First Baptist Church garden room. The celebration was hosted by the children of the honorees. Included were Sally Walton, daughter of Una Wade; Pat Hatter of Clovis, N.M.; Barbara Callaway of Gainesville; and Anita Tedford of Abilene, all daughters of Bird Wade.

The garden room was decorated with fresh pastel spring colored flowers. Serving the cake and punch were Kim Carter of Clovis, N.M. and Lyn Lancaster of Snyder, both granddaughters of Bird Wade.

April 26 deadline for fingerling orders at SCS

The Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District, serving Scurry and Borden Counties, is currently accepting fingerling orders for pond restocking. The District announces the following prices are now in effect per hundred: 4-6 inch channel catfish, $40; 6-8 inch channel catfish, $60; 1-3 inch hybrid bluegill, $40; 3-4 inch hybrid bluegill, $60; 2-3 inch hybrid Florida bass, $70; 4-6 inch hybrid Florida bass, $160; and fathead minnows (approximately 425 per pound), $8 per pound.

Delivery date is set for April 26 from 9-11 a.m. at the Soil Conservation Service office in the Snyder Shopping Center.

Suggested stocking rates for small ponds are 100 channel catfish per surface acre. If you plan to supplementally feed the catfish or fertilize the pond, then 500 catfish per surface acre can be stocked.

The channel catfish can be stocked alone or with fathead minnows to serve as forage. The diet of a catfish is largely made up of aquatic insect larva, but minnows are also eaten if available. The larger 6-8 inch catfish fingerlings are recommended if large bass are present in the pond. Fingerlings of this size are generally fast enough to avoid being eaten by the bass.

In ponds greater than one acre surface area, stocking 100 catfish, 50 bass, 300-400 bluegill and two pounds of fathead minnows provides a balanced stocking program.

The hybrid bluegill can be stocked alone or with bass or catfish. About 10 percent of the bluegill will reproduce and are a good choice for stocking alone in very small ponds.

Plastic bags will be provided for hauling the fish. They can be kept in the bags for up to two hours, but should be placed into ponds as soon as possible.

Payment is due upon placement of the order with checks made payable to the Upper Colorado SWCD. You may preorder fingerlings until noon, April 25. To avoid long delays in picking up fish on April 26th, those who preorder will be given a 30 minute time slot in which they may come and not have to wait over 30 minutes to receive their fish. Ten-15 orders will be filled each 30 minute slot. The earlier you preorder the earlier a time slot you will be given. This system avoids someone having to wait two hours in line to pick up their fingerlings.

Additional information can be obtained by calling 573-1268 or by seeing District Directors and SCS personnel in the SCS field office located 3423 Avenue T.

SCS Notes

BY SAM BUCHANAN
District Conservationist

Bids on only 31,298 acres of land in Texas were accepted by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Reserve Program for 1986. Bids were accepted from 155 farmers.

The state was divided into seven bidding pools. The highest bid accepted for pools 1, 2 and 3 were $35 per acre on 26,251 acres. These three pools made up the western half of the state.

Bids of up to $40 per acre were accepted for pools 4, 5 and 6 on 3,511 acres. This area includes South Texas, the Texas Blacklands and East Texas.

Bids up to $50 per acre were accepted for pool 7 on 1,536 acres; this pool covers the Coastal Prairie and the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Nationally, bids were made by 44,480 farmers on 4.8 million acres. Some 10,307 bids were accepted on 838,356 acres. Accepted bids ranged from $5 to $90.

Cropland that is in Land Capability Class VI, VII and VIII or land that appeared to be eroding at greater that 3.5 times the tolerance level at sign-up time is automatically accepted. Land that appeared to be eroding between 2.5 to 3.5 times the tolerance level was declared questionable; Soil Conservation Service personnel will determine final estimated erosion rates on a field by field visit to this land.

Any questionable land that is determined to be eroding at an estimated rate of more than three times the tolerance level withan acceptable bid will be placed in the reserve.

In determining estimated erosion, SCS personnel use the Universal Soil Loss Equation for water erosion and the Wind Erosion Equation for wind erosion.

SCS conservationists are now in the process of preparing conservation plans on land accepted in CRP. Cropland will be planted to grasses and segumes, wildlife plantings, windbreaks, or trees.

For land accepted into CRP, farmers will receive their per acre bid annually shortly after October 1 for 10 years. They will also receive 50 percent cost-share assistance for establishing permanent vegetation.

The sign-up period for the 1987 reserved is scheduled to begin May 5.

V'ball champ heads for gold

Karlene believes that women athletes are beginning to achieve a larger share of the sport's spotlight. "I think there are more good women athletes. And I think that more professional opportunities will open up for women," she remarked.

For role models, she said she looks to Evelyn Ashford and Flo Hyman. Ashford claimed an Olympic gold medal in the 100-meter race in 1984. In volleyball, Hyman served on the U.S. team placing second in the Olympic contest the same year.

Although sports occupies most of her time, Karlene describes herself as "a person who works at getting along with everybody. I just concentrate on being everybody's friend and I like to have fun."

She plans to continue "having fun and making friends" on her way to the gold.

Bridge court in session

By James Jacoby

A lot of people might say South was unlucky. You be the judge.

North traded on his long suit to invite game in no-trump. With 17 points plus a 10-spot, South automatically bid three. When the dummy was tabled, declarer groaned inwardly. The diamond suit was nice, but certainly no opponent was going to win the ace immediately. Still, South won the king of spades and played a diamond. Wonder of wonders, East took the ace! Back came a spade. Declarer ducked but won the third spade and played a diamond to another honor in dummy. When East showed out, there was no play for nine tricks. So, Your Honor, what is your verdict?

Although diamonds will split 3-2 68 percent of the time, that possibility should be ruled out. Part of the fun of bridge is trying to figure out what your opponents are up to. Usually you have to assume that they are trying to do the right thing. When East won the first diamond, it was certain that he had no small one to play, or he would have ducked. And so declarer should have put in the nine of diamonds the second time the suit was played.

The verdict should be that South is guilty. Call it an error in judgment in the play, if you want to look at it through rose-colored glasses. I call it murdering the hand.

REGULARITY
Too many people believe that a daily laxative must be standard procedure in order to keep regular. An occasional skipped day or even two or three days should be no cause for alarm, states the California Medical Assn. They note that many laxatives produce undesirable side effects. Increase your bulk intake by eating more fresh raw fruits and vegetables. Drink plenty of liquids too - you can enjoy healthful regularity without laxatives.

Plaintiffs tell of asbestosis

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Rudolph Ronsonette once thought breathing difficulties he suffered during the night were only dreams.

But what he believed was only a dream turned into a nightmare when a checkup in 1982 revealed he had asbestosis, a progressive and disabling lung disease that can lead to cancer.

Ronsonette contracted the lung disease from breathing fibers and dust from asbestos, a widely used flame-retardant material found in many kinds of insulation.

Shortly after the Port Arthur carpenter learned he had the disease, Ronsonette filed a federal lawsuit against the country's major asbestos manufacturers and distributors. He retired from Texaco in December 1982 after 36 years.

On Tuesday, Ronsonette learned attorneys representing him and 754 other workers who had filed claims against asbestos companies had reached a settlement.

U.S. District Judge Robert Parker approved the settlement after four weeks of testimony in a Marshall federal courtroom. The trial was the nation's first class-action, personal injury trial involving asbestos.

Rex Houston, one of the attorneys representing workers, said the total amount of the settlement was about $145 million. Workers' attorneys will review workers' cases and recommend to Parker a settlement amount each worker should receive.

For Ronsonette, 61, the settlement is a big relief.

"This has been dragged out a long time and I thought for sure it would drag on another two or three years until this class-action thing came about. It's been a blessing for all of us," he said.

Ronsonette was one of 13 workers attorneys chose to represent the entire class of 755 people in the trial.

Phyllis Martinez of Groves and Harriet Corrigan of Vidor also were among the 13.

Ms. Martinez, 48, said she contracted asbestosis from breathing in the asbestos dust that covered her father's work clothes. Doctors told her she had the disease in July 1981.

American yatchsman sets voyage record

ST. GEORGE'S, Bermuda (AP) — Lone yachtsman Dodge Morgan Friday completed a 150-day voyage around the world in his 60-foot cutter American Promise, breaking a world circumnavigation record that stood for 15 years.

His 27,000-mile marathon journey ended at 12:19 p.m. (11:19 EST) as the cutter American Promise crossed the designated finish line five miles off Bermuda's eastern tip.

His time of 150 days, one hour and six minutes for the solo nonstop circumnavigation smashed the 15-year-old record of 292 days set by Chay Blyth of England.

Texas students are learning Russian

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — The school uniform is normal: Blue jeans, rock 'n' roll T-shirts and cowboy boots. But something doesn't sound right here.

"Ahtkooda vwee?" asks teacher Laurie Nesrala.

"Ya eez Grapevine," 18 teenagers respond in unison.

Sure doesn't sound like Grapevine. But here in semirural Texas, students at the town's only high school are learning to speak Russian.

The class, which began last fall, is one of six Russian high school language programs in the state and part of a modest new wave of enthusiasm for Russian studies across the country.

For nearly two decades, the number of students studying Russian in American high schools slipped dramatically. National enrollment between 1965 and 1982 dropped from 26,716 to 5,702.

And yet, as U.S.-Soviet relations have improved during the last three years and the government has provided initiatives to encourage the study of Russian and other "critical" languages, the trend appears to be reversing. Since 1982 experts estimate enrollment in Russian has increased to more than 7,000.

Students in Grapevine, like those taking the course elsewhere, give a variety of reasons for what is considered the most complex of modern languages: Some are preparing for military careers; some are attracted by the mystique of the culture; others believe it could slow the arms race.

"Being aware of their culture is a lot more important for world peace than building bombs," says Nathan Wallace, a 15-year-old sophomore.

Wallace's 17-year-old classmate, Matt Hill, is more pragmatic. "If we ever get in a war, the language will come in handy," said Hill, who plans to enter the Air Force after high school.

Among Texas high school students, Wallace, Hill and their classmates are a distinct minority. About 140 students take Russian in Texas. By contrast, the most popular language in Texas is Spanish, which this year attracted 142,000 high school students.

Educators say the Russian rebound is tied to national and international events, such as the federal government's offer of grants to teachers who will teach the language and the culture or the call by President Reagan for more teacher and student exchange programs with the Soviet Union.

"Russian, more than any other language, follows political change," says Michael Katz, the University of Texas department chairman for Slavic languages. "Since Reagan has been reelected and started changing his tune, the spirit of Geneva is everywhere. There's a new interest in learning Russian."

Richard Bod, director of foreign language programs for the Modern Language Association, said that in recent years Russian studies have "become more prestigious, a little more chic."

Chic? In a town where the culture is rooted in agriculture, rodeo and country music?

You bet.

When she walked into the class for the first time last fall, Ms. Nesrala's roster was full. Her students study Russian culture from cuisine to classical music and it has captured the imaginations of many students, like Jerry Garrett, a 17-year-old senior who says one day he may open a Russian restaurant.

"Right now there's only one Ukranian restaurant in Dallas," said Garrett, who now works part time as a shift manager in a hamburger restaurant. "Russian food is very fancy, very appetizing. I think I could make a lot of money off it."

The enthusiasm shown for the program in Grapevine is not universal among high schools offering Russian. Teachers at Skyline in Dallas, Southwest in Fort Worth and Sam Houston in Arlington all say prejudice has hurt enrollment for years.

"There's been a lot of prejudice and ignorance about studying Russian," says Joel Langvardt, a former Army language specialist in Russian and a Southwest High Russian teacher for the past eight years. "Many of my students tell me they took the class in spite of the fear that they would be labeled pro-communist."

"At my church they talk a lot about how Russia is evil," said Aimee Roebuck, a 15-year-old Skyline sophomore. "But I figured that maybe if I understood the language, I wouldn't be so afraid.

Editorials-Columns-Cartoons-Look Back-Letters

We grew up on the edge of town — a situation which doesn't sound so hot but which was in fact great.

In the size community where we were raised, the three factors which determine real estate value — location, location and location — weren't much of a concern.

In those days, we only had one fancy street — a stretch of pavement called Silk Stocking Ave. Only later did we learn the title wasn't original with our little town.

So we never felt any stigma at living on the outskirts, stuck adjacent to a fairly busy highway and confronted to the front and side by the unhindered view of flat West Texas pastureland.

We gradually came to realize that the edge of town offered an equal share of city living — movie shows, drug store comic books and municipal swimming pools — mixed with the available freedom of lighting out for the country when the urge struck.

The family home was located on the site of a former "tavern," a business voted dry and consequently closed during a reform movement of the 1930s.

The roadhouse was leveled long before our wood framed structure arrived on site, but its former location proved a never-ending source of treasure. We spent most of our childhood digging in the yard at various locations, turning up strange bottles — most of them alcoholic in origin — and bottle caps.

To the west no more than a quarter mile away, the neighborhood enjoyed a caliche pit. The sloped roads which led into it were great for bicycle stunts, while the sheer clifts to the side were handy for mountain climbing practice.

The highway frontage also proved a source of amusement.

On slow summer afternoons, we'd sit on the front porch taking our turn at guessing the year, make and model of the passing cars.

Extra points were given for the finer details — spotting the Starliner option on a 1959 Ford, for example.

On the easy cars to ID — say, a 1961 Chevy — both players could compete to guess first if it would be a Biscayne or a Bel-Air.

As a result, we are 99 percent accurate identifying most American made, four-wheel vehicles dating from 1954 through the mid '60s — a talent that has never earned us a dime.

Beside, anyone who has ever looked at cars twice knows this is not such a large accomplishment, since the automobile really did change every October in those days.

The first indication that civilization was catching up to the neighborhood was when they installed a street light at our corner. Actually, the first sign was when they paved the street to the west, but that change no one minded.

The street light, however, only served to blot out the overhead stars in the summertime sky. Its revealing light also crimped our habit of climbing on the roof at night to watch the world pass in review.

We could still hide out on the roof's dark side, but it was hard to shake the notion that half of the view had been messed up.

Today, at least half of the wide open spaces we knew as a kid have been boxed in with houses. The caliche pit has also been filled and leveled. And we haven't turned up an interesting bottle cap in years.

However, we can still spot a 1959 Buick at 400 yards.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

As the spring and summer wedding season gets into full swing, lots of lovely young brides and serious grooms grace the pages of this newspaper. Since I, too, had a spring wedding, naturally my thoughts turn to memories, but I'm afraid that the chaos that passed for our wedding wouldn't quite make the society pages, not even of MAD Magazine.

It seemed so simple to us. True, we'd dated off and on (mostly off) for six years and, true, he was cowboying out on some ranch in the wilds of West Texas and I was teaching at a college prep school in West Palm Beach, Florida. And true, after almost two years I wrote him one letter, he wrote me back, and the matter was settled. We'd get married.

So what was the big deal?

We couldn't understand why both families went into a tailspin. We had, after all, known each other all our lives. All we wanted was family, a couple of close friends, and a honeymoon. We were college-educated adults, I owed half my life to student loans and car payments, so why get all excited about it? You are just as married, I explained patiently to my future in-laws, whether you have an MGM production or not.

"But so many people will get their feelings hurt if they're not invited," moaned Kent's mother. I was staying with them by then while I worked in Dallas (a decision I lived to regret), and she disappeared into the bedroom every night after that, talking on the phone.

"Mom," asked Kent once, "just how many people are you inviting to this shindig?"

"Oh, you know," she answered with a vague wave of her hand, "Just don't worry about it."

My unorthodox mother didn't want to come. She'd moved to Texarkana after Daddy died and thought the trip would be a bother. "Why don't you just elope?" she begged. "It would be more romantic."

But it was Brother Jack, the Baptist preacher who had served as my surrogate father since Daddy's death, who really hit the roof. He had a spouse all picked out for me at the church. He'd never heard of this Methodist (translated, heathen) cowboy. "It'll never last a year," he predicted gloomily, "and I pray to God," (with a significant look heavenward), "that something happens to end it before it's too late."

Finally, the weekend before the wedding, when I threatened to have a Methodist minister marry us, Brother Jack said, "I'll do it, because I have some heavy things to say." (I should have taken a hint). To Mother, I said something like, I'll never be your daughter again if you don't come to my wedding, and she said, "OK, let's go shopping."

It was the weekend before Easter, and we ransacked that town, searching for a short white dress. By 9 p.m., there was only one store open — a nationwide discount chain. Twenty minutes later I walked out with a $14.99 wedding gown stuffed in a plain brown sack. We decided not to tell Kent's mother. We didn't want her to have a heart attack, what with the wedding and all.

On my wedding day, Brother Jack arrived at the church in funeral black, Mother stuffed a blue Kleenex down my dress so I'd have something blue, and Kent left the rings at home.

When my step-father and I entered the sanctuary, we found that one of the doors was locked, and proceeded to get stuck in the one that was open, amidst gales of giggles and staggering that must have looked like drunkeness to SURPRISE! A church crammed full of Mills' relatives, Aggies and the three friends I'd invited.

Brother Jack then delivered a blistering sermon that caused someone behind me to whisper, "Everyone stay seated. There's going to be a Baptismal after the service."

I had heard that lots of folks choke up when they deliver their vows, or stammer, or whisper. Not so, me. When I looked into my intended's eyes to promise to love, honor, and obey (Brother Jack really emphasized that part), I was stricken with an almost unbearable desire to giggle. Even worse, I could see the same look in Kent's eyes, too. Somehow we got through it, and Kent further endeared Brother Jack to him by saying later that he was "pretty sure" he'd done the right thing.

That night, long after Kent was asleep, I couldn't keep it in any more. I laughed until the bed shook, and woke him up. He was insulted. "What's so funny?"

"Oh, it's not you," I said, "just THINK about it!" He thought, and snorted, and gasped, and we shrieked and howled so hard that somebody beat on the wall.

On Sunday, April 13, we will have spent 12 years together, proving Brother Jack wrong a dozen times.

Not that we haven't had our ups and downs. Just the other night, we had one of those flashfire fights you have when you're both under pressure and tired. I screamed at him, he yelled at me and slammed his fist into the wall. Then I stared at him, he stared at me, and we broke out laughing.

Happens all the time.

I can think of no better way for young people to begin a marriage, and no better way to live a life of joy and love.

Happy Anniversary, Darlin'.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

I am a Scurry County homeowner and taxpayer. I have two children and a son-in-law who attended and greatly profited by their attendance at Western Texas College. I have 26 years experience in community college administration; 16 of these years with Western Texas College. I have 13 years experience as business manager for three community colleges--Howard College of Big Spring, Odessa College and Western Texas College. I have been employed as Director of Occupational Education, Dean of the Evening College, Acting Dean of Occupational Education and Technology, Director of Adult and Continuing Education and currently, Director of Western Texas College Physical Plant.

I feel it is timely and appropriate that constituents of Western Texas College, i.e., Scurry County taxpayers, be reminded of certain operational advantages associated with it.

Prior to 1969, several attempts to secure approval from the state for a community college to be located in Snyder were unsuccessful. Finally, in 1969 approval was secured, and Scurry County taxpayers subsequently approved, overwhelmingly, a bond issue in the amount of $3.5 million for the construction of Western Texas College. Construction began November, 1970, and first classes were held September 1971. I, as business manager, reveled in the accomplishments of our organization. We, the administration, board of trustees, faculty and staff, had successfully initiated what has become a valuable asset to residents of this county and surrounding area.

1972 witnesses passage of a Phase II tax bond issue of $1.5 million to complete construction of the main campus. This issue saw fruition of a dream for this community--a college of their dreams was born and built to operate extremely successfully

Judge thinks Texaco ruling will stand

HOUSTON (AP) — State District Judge Solomon Casseb Jr., who ordered Texaco Inc. to pay $11.1 billion to Pennzoil Co. last year, says he may have misinterpreted the law in his charge to the jury, but he doesn't believe the case will be overturned.

"I feel that there is a good chance that perhaps I may have read the cases wrong and not have applied it correctly," Casseb was quoted Friday by the Houston Chronicle from a transcript of comments he made earlier this month in Los Angeles.

The Texas judge was referring to his interpretation of New York contract law which was the basis for the trial, since the alleged events in the case occurred in New York.

Casseb, reached by the Chronicle at his home in San Antonio, said he "definitely did not say" a good chance existed that the ruling would be overturned because of his error.

"What I said was if the appellate courts wanted to find any way of reversing a judgment of that magnitude, they could interpret the law the way they wanted to," the judge said.

The landmark ruling, the largest in U.S. history, was upheld by Casseb after a jury in his court found Texaco interfered in a planned merger of Pennzoil and Getty Oil Co.

Casseb's comments about the case were made April 2 during an address and question-and-answer period before the trial lawyers section of the Los Angeles County Bar Association. The Chronicle said it had both a recording and transcript of his comments.

Robert Forgone, a Los Angeles attorney who invited Casseb to the meeting, said the only doubt Casseb expressed was how the appeals court would deal with his interpretation of New York law.

"I don't think he had any doubt that the decision would be upheld," Forgone said.

Casseb told the lawyers he expected the Texas Supreme Court would uphold the verdict and the judgment, which he signed Dec. 10.

Although the case was tried in Texas, both Pennzoil and Texaco agreed that New York contract law would be the basis for the trial, since the events alleged in the suit occurred in New York.

"You know, this is my first experience in trying to analyze New York law after I did 46 years in Texas," Casseb told the California attorneys.

Workers being retrained

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Alton Rae said he grew up in Odessa thinking he would spend his life working in the oil fields.

That's before he was laid off from his welding job.

Now, he's in his second year of training at Odessa College for a new career as a medical technician.

A college administrator said he expects many people who lose jobs in the current economic downturn to train in new fields.

"People try to go back to school to get their job skills up," said Roger Coomer, Odessa College vice president for finance. "We're hoping for that, as long as people don't leave the area."

When the economy soured in 1983, "that following semester (Fall 1984) we had our biggest enrollment ever," Coomer said.

Rae, 30, said he was laid off in 1983.

"Back in '83 when the bust hit, the welding shops closed down," he recalled. Rae said his wife encouraged him to train for another type of work.

from its completion to 1986. There is no reason why such an extremely profitable and economically successful operation can not continue on an operational scale comparable to past years.

Western Texas College is one of the most economically viable and valuable assets of Scurry County. I offer the following reference:

Western Texas College has returned the initial investment to Scurry County many years ago. It ranks among top income producing entities within the county and surrounding area. Local taxes to support Western Texas College have decreased more than 2 percent per year since 1981. Total taxes collected from local taxpayers is less in 1986 than in 1981. Total budget requirements for Western Texas College in 1985-86 equals $5,403,332 and total local taxes to support this budget equals $1,637,411. The difference of $3,765,911 in support for operations came from sources outside Scurry County--the State of Texas, the Federal Government, student tuition and fees, sales and services from college operated auxiliary enterprises and gifts and grants.

In summary, Western Texas College has returned $3,765,911 more to Scurry County than it has received in tax support in 1985-86. Let us not lose site of these accomplishments. If individual taxpayers must now assume a greater responsibility for taxes to support Western Texas College, then so be it. The current economic situation being what it is, I should think we taxpayers can ill afford to jeopardize a minimum of 100-200 percent return on tax dollars used in support of Western Texas College.

Med leave act gains support

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 10 years of marriage and 13 years of study to become a cardiologist, Dr. Joann Urquhart decided it was time to have a baby. She took three weeks off after the birth and hastily returned to work.

Barbara Wittig worked for the government for nearly 18 years before she and her husband adopted two young Korean orphans. She took five weeks off to help them adjust to a new country, new family and new schools, then rushed back to the office.

The two women told their stories Thursday at a congressional hearing on Parental and Medical Leave Act of 1986, a bill that would make unpaid leaves for childbirth, adoption and illness standard for all employees.

Ms. Urquhart said she started a prestigious job at the National Institutes of Health when she was five months pregnant, and was told she would not receive resources to do her research until after she had the baby.

"It was obvious that if I did not return quickly I would no longer be considered serious about my career ... and yet, it was extremely painful to leave my daughter at such a young age and return to work full time," said Ms. Urquhart, who no longer works at NIH. "To make a woman choose between healthy, appropriate care for her infant and her career in medicine is inhumane."

Mrs. Wittig said she extended her leave from four to five weeks to juggle educational arrangements for her new daughters, but was discouraged from taking any more time. She says the resulting tension and haste prompted one girl to have an epilepsy-like seizure.

"Had the opportunity been available to make my choices in a more reasonable and less harried time frame, I believe that the pain, anguish and expense attending this emergency would have affected our newly formed family far less," Mrs. Wittig said.

Under the bill, sponsored by Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., male and female employees would be entitled to at least 18 weeks over two years to care for a newborn or newly adopted child and 26 weeks within one year for personal health reasons. Their jobs would be protected. The leaves would be unpaid, but the bill requires a study of the feasibility of a national paid leave policy.

The Schroeder bill is supported by labor, children's and women's groups.

Youth is fighting hair length rule

HOUSTON (AP) — In a legal battle reminiscent of the 1960s, a 14-year-old Houston-area boy has the American Civil Liberties Union helping him fight a school rule that limits the length of his hair.

Geoffrey Rexroth, a seventh-grader at Campbell Junior High School in the Cypress-Fairbanks Independent School District, contends a regulation on hair length is unconstitutional.

"I think it's my right to have my hair the length I want it," he said Thursday.

Rexroth's blond, wavy hair covers his ears and falls over his shirt collar.

ACLU attorney Bruce Griffiths told State District Judge Michael O'Brien that a school rule requiring boys' hair to be above collar level is unconstitutional because no similar rule exists for girls' hair.

Reagan responds to USSR criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan was asked at his news conference this week about the criticism Mikhail Gorbachev, the Soviet leader, has leveled at him through the Moscow media.

Reagan took the question in stride. He said Gorbachev's private communications had been in the "spirit of Geneva." Maybe, the president said, his partner at last November's fireside summit has been reading Pravda and Tass too much.

Perhaps, Reagan added, Gorbachev should try getting his accounts of U.S. policy from American newspapers.

Maybe so. If he read those papers today, Gorbachev would find the Pentagon crediting the Soviet Union with showing more interest in efforts to ban chemical weapons. But he also would find that the Pentagon wants Congress to approve a $1.1 billion request for various chemical weapons.

AP analysis

That is the best way to get the Soviets interested in a treaty banning the weapons, Thomas Welch, a deputy assistant secretary of defense, told a Senate subcommittee.

There is not much there, really, for Gorbachev to cheer about. The theme, sounded so often in the Reagan administration, is that taking a tough stance toward Moscow is the only way to elicit concessions.

Gorbachev's various proposals for nuclear disarmament by the 21st century, to stop all nuclear weapons tests immediately and to freeze the arms race are considered a form of grandstanding.

Looking at his own media, meanwhile, the Soviet leader would be hard pressed to find the spirit of Geneva lurking.

The news agency Tass said the U.S. nuclear test Thursday in Nevada showed "criminal contempt" for world opinion and cast doubt on the Reagan administration's reliability as a partner in arms control negotiations.

Tass said the test and U.S. refusal to hold a special Reagan-Gorbachev summit meeting to discuss a test ban "can be seen as the U.S. crossing of the nuclear Rubicon."

Gorbachev's eight-month moratorium on Soviet tests expired March 31. The Tass statement could mean the Soviet leader now will order a resumption.

He almost certainly would combine it with a verbal blast at the United States and question U.S. intentions about having a productive 1986 summit meeting.

And yet, amid the rhetoric and tensions, former Soviet ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, now a key Communist party official, held quiet talks here this week with Reagan and Shultz.

It led to at least one positive result: a meeting, probably in mid-May, between Shultz and Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

U.S. Senate puts hold on tax overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee is relearning an old truth: It's a lot easier to cut taxes than to raise them.

In seven days of work on a proposal that would mark the biggest change in tax law in more than 30 years, members of the panel have repeatedly declared their support for lower tax rates for businesses and individuals. But the lawmakers flinched every time they were faced with the chore of approving changes to pay for those tax cuts.

As the committee pondered what a new tax system should look like, the Senate declared by a 72-24 vote Thursday that the entire issue should be put on a back burner until Congress and President Reagan agree on a budget for 1987.

That vote was non-binding and is unlikely to delay the panel's work. The vote generally was considered more of a protest to the administration's inflexibility on the budget than an effort to influence the tax bill. Even so, the vote reflected a lack of enthusiasm for tackling the tough tax issue in this election year.

Thirteen of the 20 committee members voted for the resolution. Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., one who did not vote for it, called the measure "a declaration of intention that we would like to kill tax reform."

The committee has been working its way slowly through some of the more complex parts of the tax bill. On Thursday it rejected various proposals to scale down depreciation deductions now allowed businesses and investors. Depreciation is the method by which money spent for plant, equipment and real estate is recovered through the tax system. Instead, the committee approved a substitute that would boost those incentives by more than $14 billion over five years.

Stores stopping sales

DALLAS (AP) — Southland Corp. officials said they decided to stop selling adult magazines at company-owned 7-Eleven stores because of possible links between the magazines and crime, but an analyst said the corporation's motive might have been more pragmatic.

The May issues of Playboy, Penthouse and Forum will be the last sold at Southland's 4,500 company-owned 7-Eleven convenience stores, President Jere W. Thompson said Thursday.

He said Dallas-based Southland will encourage the 3,600 franchise-operated 7-Elevens to adopt the policy.

Thompson said the decision was prompted by testimony during the special hearings conducted by the U.S. Attorney General's Commission on Pornography.

"The testimony before that commission indicates a growing public awareness and concern over a possible connection between adult magazines and crime, violence and child abuse," Thompson said. "Southland is very sensitive to our position as a leadership company and responsible corporate citizen."

Ed Gagnon, a retail analyst with Eppler, Guerin & Turner in Dallas, said he was surprised by Southland's decision. He noted that Southland has been "adamant" in the past in defending the sale of adult magazines.

He said the cessation of sales will have a minor effect on earnings because the magazine sales probably represent less than 1 percent of the gross profits per store.

Gagnon said he could only speculate as to Southland's reasons for the decision.

"They are very much a part of the Dallas community, and it could be something brought to their attention. ... They are an image-conscious company," he said.

On the other hand, he said, "It could be more pragmatic than we realize." Local politics play a big role in getting the right sites for new 7-Eleven locations, he said.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, leader of the Moral Majority, said in a visit to Grand Rapids, Mich.: 'Our goal is to make it that to buy one of Hugh Hefner's magazines you're going to have to go over to Sleazetown."

Last fall in Dallas, Falwell led thousands of protesters in an anti-pornography march and a rally against Southland.

At the time, Southland officials defended their policy of selling the magazines, which were covered and behind the counter, and cited polls showing 7-Eleven customers favored that approach. Customers also had to be at least 18 to buy the magazines.

Southland spokeswoman Jeanne Donovan said Thursday the new policy had nothing to do with the protest rally. The National Federation for Decency "might want to claim a victory, but they're entitled to that, if they want to," she said.

In Chicago, Playboy spokesman David Salyers said he was disappointed with Southland's decision and said it was "absurd" to consider Playboy pornographic.

"Southland apparently believes the Meese commission has concluded that reading Playboy may be harmful," Salyers said. "It's not true. The commission has not issued a report yet."

Robert Guccione, publisher of Penthouse and Forum magazines, took out an advertisement in Thursday's editions of the Austin American-Statesman, urging people to patronize stores that don't bow to "censorship."

Dear Abby

Teens Without Self-Control Need Reliable Birth Control

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading your column since I was 10 years old. I am nearly 15 now and I'm going steady with a boy who is 16. We love each other very much and have been having sex two or three times a week for the last four months.

I have been lucky enough not to get pregnant, but the problem is we don't trust condoms as a method of birth control, and the pill is too expensive.

We want to know if there is some method of birth control that's safe and not too expensive. If you print this, you will be helping many other kids in our situation.

IN LOVE

DEAR IN LOVE: The only method of birth control that is 100 percent safe doesn't cost a dime. It is called self-control. It is used by young men who care so much for a young woman that they would never put her in the position of feeling guilty, having to lie and sneak around or worry about getting pregnant. And it is also used by young women who want no worries about unplanned pregnancies.

However, since the sex drive can be overwhelming in teenagers, it is better to use birth control in case your passions overrule your heads. Young people who are old enough to have sex but not old enough to handle the responsibility of parenthood should be thoroughly briefed in all methods of birth control. Family planning clinics are the place to go. They charge only what you can afford to pay. Some schools now make information as well as contraceptives available to students who want them.

Providing teen-agers with contraceptives does not necessarily mean that premarital sex is OK—it is not OK. But it is preferable to children having children they neither want nor are equipped to care for.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "Worried," who was concerned about getting AIDS, prompts me to take pen in hand: Did you really mean it when you wrote: "The best way to minimize the risk of getting AIDS is to use a condom religiously?"

Abby, how does one use a condom "religiously"? Put it on and pray? Or use it only on Sundays?

AMUSED

DEAR AMUSED: An unfortunate choice of words. Better to have used scrupulously, conscientiously or faithfully.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I'll get right to the point. If a couple have lived together for about a year, are they entitled to a big wedding?

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: They are entitled to any kind of wedding they can afford.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO EVERYBODY: For some good advice on how to live, ask someone who knows he's dying.

* * *

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Actor Patrick Duffy to return to 'Dallas'

AUSTIN (AP) — Actor Patrick Duffy is the spokesman for a new seat belt campaign — an appropriate task, he says, for someone who is about to be resurrected from a traffic death by the miracle of television.

After a year's absence prompted by his character's death, Duffy confirmed Thursday he is returning to the television series "Dallas."

Duffy had played Bobby, badguy J.R. Ewing's nice brother who was killed in a car wreck.

"I guess as a victim of a traffic accident I'm probably most qualified to talk about things like this. I'm the only person to be brought back from an actual death involving a traffic accident," he said of his role in public service ads urging seat belt use.

"Dallas" producers say Duffy will re-appear on the May 16 episode, a season-ender they hope will be a blockbuster for a show that is suffering sagging ratings.

No one involved with the show will say how Duffy will be written back in.

"I know all about it and you don't," Duffy told reporters at a Capitol news conference.

"I'm committed to keep it secret because we need the ratings. I am back and I can't tell you how, when, why and where or what my name will be. I know it, but I can't tell you," he said.

On the final show of last season, Bobby was hit by a car and seemed to die in the hospital when he was taken off a respirator. In this year's shows, he was presumed dead. His grave at Southfork Ranch was occasionally shown.

The Austin news conference was called to introduce Duffy as the spokesman for the new seat belt campaign.

"Now that the resurrection has occurred, I intend to give myself fully to it as long as I possibly can," Duffy said.

The actor said "Dallas" declining ratings sparked interest in his return.

"I did not ask to come back," he said.

Ruling against Manges has been upheld by one court

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Oilman-rancher Clinton Manges spent more than $1.5 million he owed an oil company on his United States Football League football team and his Duval County ranch, an appeals court has said in upholding a judgment against him.

The 4th Court of Appeals upheld a lower court ruling ordering Manges and his Man-Gas Transmission Co. to pay Aztec Petroleum $1.7 million.

The judgment was for natural gas Man-Gas obtained from Aztec in 1984 but failed to pay for, the court said.

The appeals court decision indicates Man-Gas "paid over the money which it owed to plaintiffs" to South Texas Sports, Manges' parent company for the San Antonio Gunslingers, to the Duval County Ranch Co. and to Manges himself.

More than $1 million was diverted to the Gunslingers, Manges' USFL franchise, according to the opinion.

Manges himself received more than $100,000, the opinion said.

Quentin Keith, a retired justice from Beaumont, was assigned to the case and wrote the opinion.

In the opinion, Keith said he based his findings on a Man-Gas check register.

"This check register makes fascinating reading," the opinion said, "disclosing, as it does a myriad of expenditures which had nothing to do with the affairs of the company, including checks for the purchase of an automobile 'for Clinton'..."

The opinion also said other checks were issued "for Clinton's telephone bills as well as petty cash for Duval County Ranch Co.

"In short, this trust account made up exclusively from money obtained from the sale of plaintiffs' gas, was handled as if it was a private personal bank account..." the opinion said.

Manges' attorney Marynell Maloney was unavailable for comment early today, a receptionist in her office said.

The court's ruling upheld a Maverick County trial court decision for a $1.7 million judgment for Aztec.

Aztec and Man-Gas had signed a gas purchase contract allowing Man-Gas to sell Aztec's gas, with Aztec to be paid by Man-Gas in monthly installments.

But according to the opinion, Man-Gas defaulted and failed to pay for the gas taken, delivered and sold during the spring months of 1984.

In 1951, the Mount Lamington volcano on New Guinea erupted and killed an estimated 40,000 persons.

Burglaries soar in year 1986

AUSTIN (AP) — Home burglaries reported to police have increased from 1,342 in 1985 to 2,136 this year, officials report.

The city Planning Department estimates there are 194,000 households in Austin.

If burglaries of businesses and places other than homes are included, the number is up 41 percent this year compared with the same period in 1985, according to Police Department statistics. Counting all burglaries, there have been 3,426 reported to police so far this year, compared with 2,431 reported during the same period last year.

At the current pace, Austin will record more than 12,000 residential and business burglaries this year, eclipsing the 1985 record of 10,261, said Senior Sgt. Bob Boatright of the burglary detail. The 1985 figure was a 22 percent increase over 1984, according to FBI Uniform Crime Reports.

Boatright attributes the increase in burglaries so far this year to several factors:

An increase in Austin's population.

An increase in the number of burglars in Austin. This includes ex-convicts who have been released on early parole and have returned to burglarize homes in Austin, he said.

The ease in selling stolen merchandise.

The slumping economy and increasing statewide unemployment probably have not been major factors in the increased burglary rate, Boatright said.

Social needs also considered

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Russian Orthodox Church came to Alaska in the 1700s with the first white settlers, Russian fur traders. Today a Russian Orthodox seminary is training young natives as priests to attend to the social needs in their villages as well as spread the faith.

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — Sometimes Simeon Chunak longs to be back in his Eskimo village mushing dogs instead of training for the priesthood in the Russian Orthodox Church.

"It's a real sacrifice," said Chunak, 23, who came to St. Herman's Seminary four years ago from New Stuyahok, population 350. When the going gets tough, he says, "I wish I was home, driving dogs."

Evan Nicolai, 23, who has dreamed of becoming a priest since childhood, also misses the peacefulness of his home, a village of 500 on the Kuskokwim River. "You don't have the cars going back and forth or the chaos you have here."

But when Chunak and Nicolai and other native students enrolled at the Kodiak seminary return to their rural villages, they will help sustain a religion that serves as a comforting link to the past in a rapidly changing world.

Since 1973, the seminary has offered an eclectic curriculum, from theology to computer science. It is molding spiritual leaders for villages where ancient traditions intertwine with new ways, where Chunak's sled dogs must share the trail with snowmobiles.

"They are going to be living in a changing culture," says the Rev. Joseph Kreta, the seminary's dean and founder. "One of our big thoughts is to teach leadership in the villages."

The Russian Orthodox Church came to Alaska in the 1700s with the first white settlers, Russian fur traders. The fur traders enslaved the natives, raping, killing and forcing them to hunt seals and sea otters.

Russian Orthodox missionaries, meanwhile, taught the natives to read. They treated the sick and helped villagers rebel against their masters. They built the first Christian church in Alaska and baptized thousands of natives, spreading their faith to dozens of villages in southwest Alaska and along the territory's southern and western coasts.

As legends have it, the missionaries also performed a few miracles. A priest known only as Father Herman and canonized in 1970 as Alaska's first Orthodox saint, is said to have fed Kodiak Island's fearsome brown bears by hand. When a tidal wave threatened the island, he placed an icon on the beach and said the water would not rise above it.

It's possible for kids to be depressed

EDITOR'S NOTE — Kids depressed? It's possible even in youngsters from 6 to 12 years of age, a psychiatrist says. He's opened a clinic that concentrates on treatment of these little patients who until recently were deemed beyond the reach of such a mental disorder.

By DENNIS CONRAD
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Depression is usually considered an adult or adolescent disease, but very young children can develop the disorder too, and more commonly than was thought.

Until recently, says Dr. Paul J. Ambrosini, "psychiatrists didn't think children could suffer a major depression because of their lack of cognitive development."

Ambrosini is director of the Child Depression Clinic at University Hospitals of Cleveland, one of a handful of such specialty clinics around the country.

The clinic is focusing on youngsters 6 to 12, an age group that may have 2 percent of its members suffering from serious depression, according to studies made in New Zealand and upstate New York. Below age 6, depression is hard to assess, according to Ambrosini.

"In the last 10 to 15 years, we've become more sophisticated in assessment and research techniques that enable us to look at the body's biochemical involvement," says Ambrosini, an assistant professor of psychiatry at Case Western Reserve University. "Psychological illnesses are illnesses in their own right, just like diabetes or arthritis, and some people have a predisposition for developing one of these disorders."

Depression, in fact, can run in the family. Ambrosini opened the clinic here six months ago for the treatment of childhood depression and for research into how such young patients might be identified through blood tests.

The clinic has been dealing with about a dozen children who have been referred for evaluation. Ambrosini expects a lot more once the clinic becomes better known and parents better educated on what to look for as symptoms.

These include a significantly depressed mood or loss of interest. They can also involve behavioral problems, appetite or sleep disturbances, a preoccupation with death and dying, difficulty concentrating, or a fear of going to school.

Should these symptoms persist for at least two weeks in the absence of a major trauma such as a death in the family, the child should be evaluated, Ambrosini said.

He says research has found that when children become depressed subtle hormonal variations are registered in their body chemistry.

Ambrosini says it has also been shown that kids — just like adults troubled by depression — may respond positively to antidepressant medication in the right dosage. But he said fewer data are available to support its value for children.

"The treatment boundaries for children aren't totally clarified," he says. "Yet, with adults, we know that about 70 percent benefit from medication."

Antidepressants for children are the standard drugs that have been used on adults for 30 years. Ambrosini says some had been used previously on children to prevent bed wetting, before it was realized they were also effective as antidepressants.

Reagans' tax bill said at $122,492

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, paid $122,703 in federal income tax on 1985 income of $394,492, according to copies of their tax return released Friday by the White House.

Spokesman Larry Speakes said the payment came to 31.1 per cent of the Reagans' gross income.

Counting state and federal tax payments, he said, they paid 41.2 per cent of their gross income in taxes.

The Reagans claimed $39,795 in state and local tax payments as deductions, including $33,956 for state and local income taxes, a deduction that Reagan has proposed eliminating in his tax revision plan.

Speakes said the Reagans signed their tax return April 2 at their ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif. The return was mailed to the Internal Revenue Service in Philadelphia with a return receipt requested.

The Reagans' income consisted of his $200,000 salary as president, from which $65,765 was withheld for income tax; $782 which Mrs. Reagan received as fees for television performances, which she is required to accept because she is a member of the American Federation of Radio and Television Artists; Reagan's $28,091 pension as a former governor of California; $17,282 in royalties accrued over several years from his 1961 autobiography, "Where's the Rest of Me"; plus dividends, capital gains, rental income and proceeds from a matured life insurance policy.

Calcium deposit and infection

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I was informed that I have a calcium deposit on my lung and that this is normal for the Ohio farm country in which I live. I'm female, 48. Will I get more? Should it be removed?

DEAR READER — A pulmonary calcification usually means that a person has healed a low-grade lung infection which was active many years before. Calcified nodules can result from a variety of lung ailments, including tuberculosis and certain yeast infections common to farmers. Calcium deposits take a long time to form, but they usually reflect burned-out inflammation. You may develop more as you age and continue to be exposed to whatever caused your present deposit.

The nodule need not be removed unless you show signs of active pulmonary infection and the doctor has to determine an exact diagnosis. If you are otherwise healthy, ask your doctor if you should be examined at regular intervals.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a 6-month-old daughter who was born with fluid on the brain. She had a shunt put in at age 3 months. What causes this? How well does the shunt work? I would really appreciate some information on the subject.

DEAR READER — Your daughter may have a form of hydrocephalus, a fluid accumulation around part (or all) of the brain. The type of shunt you mention is usually implanted to relieve pressure caused by fluid buildup. The fluid enters the shunt and is drained off into the general lymph circulation. Ordinarily, such shunts work well, but I am sure your daughter's neurosurgeon will insist on regular checkups to make sure that the shunt remains patent or open.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Could you please discuss over-the-counter diuretic pills? How do they work? Are they harmful?

DEAR READER — As far as I can determine, over-the-counter diuretic pills contain harmless herbs and caffeine. Caffeine is the main ingredient in most, however. In my opinion, these products are not particularly effective, nor are they harmful when taken as directed. The prescription diuretics types are more suitable for treating fluid accumulation.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I feel a crawling in my vagina, pubic hair and anus, but can see nothing except for a white vaginal discharge. The doctor has treated me twice for pinworms, but I stil have this feeling. What should I do?

DEAR READER — Get checked for pinworms again. Pinworms can be recurrent and easily spread from one family member to another. You're probably a candidate for another round of therapy. This time, make sure that the people living with you get checked, too.

Malpractice isn't a game

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

We seem increasingly to be living in the Lottery Generation. State lotteries routinely give away millions of dollars to wonderfully ordinary citizens who plunk down a buck or two and pick a few numbers. Later, on the evening news, we are treated to the spectacle of elevator operators and factory workers who win more money than a corporate raider. These lucky winners are set for life; they can kiss their grimy jobs goodbye, purchase a Rolls and move to air-conditioned splendor in the Sunbelt. We all envy them.

Lotteries are probably harmless. They reward the average person without respect to age, race, sex or religion. They swell state coffers; they provide jobs. More important, they provide hope.

Nevertheless, I'm concerned that the Lottery Mentality — a big payoff on very little investment — may be one explanation for the current malpractice disaster that continues to contaminate the day-by-day service given by doctors. From what I read, and in talking to colleagues, I am beginning to perceive that increasing numbers of patients are viewing medical care as a lottery, with financial rewards — not health — as the goal. To the practicing physician and surgeon, each patient is becoming a liability rather than a person who needs help. Soon, the public is going to realize that this is not the way the system of health care will work most effectively.

A few years ago, while taking a patient's medical history, I asked a routine question about how many children he had. "I had four," he replied, "We lost one at 2 years of age." "How did that happen?" I inquired. "Well," he said, "the doctor gave her a diphtheria shot and she died." "That's awful," I sympathized. "Did you sue?" "Hell, no!" he exclaimed. "The doc did the best he could. It was just one of those things."

I don't want to return to the days when normal 2-year-olds died from immunization injections, nor am I suggesting that patients who are injured by doctors should not attempt to receive legal recompense. However, the pendulum has swung right off the clock. The goose that lays golden malpractice awards is on the way to being cooked.

Some doctors are now required to pay up to $100,000 a year in malpractice premiums. Of course, they pass on the overhead to patients, causing further escalation of medical costs. Many experts predict that, before long, malpractice insurance may simply dry up; it may not be available at any fee. Then doctors will have to make agonizing decisions about whether or not they can afford to practice medicine at all. Society, the consumer and the patient will suffer.

There is truth in my patient's statement that "it was just one of those things." Life itself is brimming with unpredictabilities; medications are risky; surgery is dangerous.

You might be interested in looking at workman's compensation benefits. In my state, loss of a hand is "worth" $78,120; a finger, $8,060—$16,740; one eye, $72,850; hearing in both ears, $48,360. That's what a worker is paid if he or she is seriously injured, in a variety of ways, on the job. However, if the person loses an appendage, or sight, or hearing because of a medical mishap, the damages are likely to be in the millions of dollars.

We need some consistency here. The loss of a leg in a mill accident is just as tragic and disabling as loss of a limb from a surgical mistake, yet it is compensated at far less ($73,780) than its medical counterpart. Doctors may need to "act perfect" and not acknowledge their mistakes because to do otherwise would be to invite calamitous lawsuits.

Some patients — indeed, some judges — see malpractice as a lottery. In our litigious society, ordinary dangers become someone's fault. An unpleasant outcome, even a temporary one, is rarely considered to be "one of those things."

I am not one who whines about the problems doctors have. However, I think the public must realize the extent to which malpractice concerns and frivolous suits are affecting every practicing doctor — the really good ones, too. If patients cannot bring themselves to adopt a less financially-oriented outlook, medical care as we know it will deteriorate into what has already been called "defensive medicine": the preoccupation with protecting one's flanks in preference to treating and healing the sick. Medical care must not degenerate into a lottery. Under such an arrangement, for every winner there are a lot of losers. And it is truly the patients who will lose in a medical-lottery system.

Winner almost thumbed ride

Deborah Carthy-Deu and a traveling companion were stranded Wednesday after their host's new car broke down.

Along came a city employee who picked up the two women and brought them into Lexington.
