DOT workers slice into Third Street

Texas Department of Transportation workers watch as a saw cuts into the pavement on Third Street Tuesday. The work is part of an ongoing project which will see 3rd and Fourth streets slurry-sealed and coincides with city paving efforts.

Summer reading

Jessica Ray gets her book card at the Howard County Library Tuesday as she signs up for the Summer Reading Program. Children can sign-up for the program from now through July 10.

Get them involved

Now that your kids are out of school, get them involved in reading, an activity that can boost creativity and enrich life, experts say. See story, page 1B.

Young drivers

Summer means more young drivers on the road as beginners take to the streets during drivers education class. For a while, though, they're on the BSHS parking lot.

Election judge admits several vote problems

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

An election judge says "quite a few" people allowed to vote in the May 1 District 3 Big Spring City Council race were not allowed to vote in the May 25 runoff and vice versa.

"Quite a few. I can't really tell you a number," said Adelino "Rocky" Vieira, who worked as election judge for the Southwest district on both dates. "I've been a judge doing this for 20 years and it's not been this bad."

Vieira's comment follows reports of voting irregularities in the District 1 race on the city's northwest side, including two votes cast in behalf of one woman and a man denied the chance to vote while his wife, who's lived in the same house with him 30 years, was allowed.

Former District 1 city councilwoman Pat DeAnda, who lost to Stephanie Horton 118-117, filed suit in state court last week asking that she be declared the winner or a new election be held. The suit charges violations in seven areas of the Texas Election Code, including not keeping a poll list, which prevents accurate verification of qualified voters.

Problems in District 3 stem from bugs being worked out of newly-implemented six single-member districts, described as meticulous by county tax office workers who handle voter registration. The last changes in city district lines went into effect in 1985.

"We're just re-evaluating each time to make it correct," said Tax Assessor/Collector Kathy Sayles. "And it's so difficult because the lines haven't been touched for so long."

dividing districts, where tax office workers had to determine what houses were on what side of the street, Sayles said. There was some confusion on what side odd and even numbers are located.

The number of voter realignments between May 1 and May 25 is unknown, as well as the number of new registrants, Sayles said. But an increase of 13 registered voters in District 3 - to 1,358 - is a third of 38 new registrations countywide - to 15,874 - during a similar time period, indicating several realignments, she said. Qualified voters in the district is less than a tenth of the county.

A statewide runoff for a U.S. Senate seat concludes Saturday.

"I can't imagine them changing districts in the middle. It does seem strange," said Tom Guess, a resident of Dixon Street dividing districts 3 and 4, who wasn't allowed to vote in the runoff after voting there May 1.

"Between then and the runoff they sent me a new card," a card that put him in District 4.

Actor gets ranch workout for film

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

Texas-born actor Thomas Hayden Church always wanted to be a rancher.

So the star of TV's "Wings" felt at home in the saddle recently, working as a hand on several Vealmoor-area ranches. He sought the help of area residents to prepare for a role in the upcoming movie, "Tombstone."

Church, who plays mechanic Lowell on "Wings," spent two weeks in the local area, working cattle on Rich and Barbara Anderson's Muleshoe Ranch, as well as those owned by Aubrey Stokes and Frank Beavers.

"It's been great," Church said. "They gave me a horse and a saddle and pointed me in the right direction."

After leaving the Big Spring area Saturday, Church headed for Arizona to begin filming on "Tombstone," in which he plays a "very dangerous gunfighter." Directed by Keith Jarre, who wrote "Glory," the movie will star Kurt Russell, Val Kilmer and Dana Delaney.

During his time as a "ranch hand," Church wore a pair of boots made for him to use in the movie. They were created from a picture in an 1880s catalog.

After growing up in Fort Worth, El Paso and Laredo, Church said he "accidentally" became an actor. As a child, he wanted to be a rancher. But after a couple of independent films, including one in Germany, he moved to California and launched his career.

He did guest spots on several TV shows, including "Cheers." Lowell, the dopey mechanic in "Wings," was loosely based on his "Cheers" character.

West Texas brought a few surprises for the actor. On his first day at the ranch, his horse stepped on a rattlesnake. Then another day, a horse fell on him.

But how did he compare to the veterans who surrounded him?

"I had done some riding, but not the kind these guys do," Church said. "I was definitely less of a cowboy, but more of an actor."

"There are some excellent cowboys out there." West Texas cowboys taught Church to throw rope, flank calves and brand.

They spent six to eight hours in the saddle each day, leading Church to describe his work as "experience by function, not by form." In other words, he learned by doing the real, necessary tasks on a working ranch.

Church decided to come to the local area after getting acquainted with attorney Troyce Wolf through a mutual friend. He stayed with Troyce and his wife, Scenic Mountain Medical Center marketing director Julie Wolf.

"I was looking for a place to spend some time in the saddle," Church said. "I got a hatful from the very first day."

Father held in beating of 3-month-old baby

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

A local three-month-old baby was transported to a Lubbock hospital's intensive care unit in critical condition May 22, sparking a police criminal investigation.

Mark McGrew, 36, of Big Spring was arrested and charged with injury to a child, a first degree felony.

"The investigation was begun into the injuries as soon as we received the report," said Big Spring Police Department Detective Sgt. Scott Griffin.

"We are restrained from detailed comment on sexual-type offenses or offenses against children out of respect for the victim's family or the very sensitive nature of the investigation," he added. "We can not comment any further pending the outcome of the suspect's trial."

Near 11 a.m., police and American Medical Transport were dispatched to a Kentwood addition residence in reference to an infant having breathing difficulty, the police report stated.

First transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center, the infant was then transferred to St. Mary of the Plains Hospital in Lubbock.

"Medical personnel advised officers the injuries to the child were inconsistent with accidental-type injuries," according to the press release.

Officers arrested McGrew on May 28. He was arraigned by Municipal Judge Arnold Marshall and released on a $10,000 bond.

The infant is reportedly in stable condition at the Lubbock hospital.

School savings possible

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — A state audit identifying $185 million in cost-savings for school districts is off-base and unspecified, says a spokesman for the Texas Association of School Boards.

"School districts are always looking for ways to run the most efficient programs possible, especially in these times of fiscal constraint," said Olga Garza, assistant director of governmental relations for association.

"We would hope that the auditor would turn his focus to figuring out how school districts can get more state dollars instead of shifting the focus away from the state, which is underfunding education to local districts," she said.

The report, released Tuesday, says school districts could save at least $185 million a year by improving management outside the classroom.

The audit examined 17 school districts across the state. It cites excessive staff sizes, generous fringe benefits and "serious" weaknesses in purchasing decisions.

"The current public education system does not ensure that tax dollars are spent efficiently," said State Auditor Lawrence F. Alwin.

According to the report, school districts could save an additional $45 million by controlling textbook costs, reducing tax collection costs, and forming statewide insurance purchasing pools.

Release of the audit came just hours after the state presented its latest school funding reform plan to a state district judge for review.

Ironically, Edgewood school district, which brought the original court challenge to equalize school funding, was one of 17 districts reviewed in the report and scrutinized for not cutting costs.

Auditors said Edgewood could save $1.2 million by downsizing its police department and spending less to maintain its facilities.

Two other school districts — Benavides and LaPorte — were singled out in the report as having "serious" management problems. In addition, auditors identified Sundown school district as having an "extravagant" spending system. The report said that district could save $500,000 annually by cutting travel expenses.

"These districts do not have sufficient controls to prevent questionable and inefficient use of tax dollars," the audit states.

Lawyers for poor school districts, Rick Gray (left) and Al Kauffman, confer before the start of a hearing on the latest school funding plan, which was presented to State District Judge Scott McCown in Austin Monday. The lawyers plan to challenge the measure.

Poor districts vowing lawsuit over new plan

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — State officials had expected a court challenge to the latest school funding reform plan, and it wasn't long in coming.

Lawyers for the state no sooner presented the measure to a judge Tuesday than attorneys for property-poor school districts announced problems with it and said they intended to continue their court fight.

"We represent ... districts that have never had what they needed to put on a good education for their kids. And this is not a battle that we can likely leave until we feel that we have brought about real long-term equality for all of our students," said lawyer Al Kauffman of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

State District Judge E. Scott McCown of Austin said he would presume the new law is constitutional until challenges are filed, then set a hearing. He is allowing state aid to flow to school districts this summer.

If lawmakers hadn't come up with a plan by Tuesday's court deadline, they faced a cutoff of state education aid to schools, which rely on state money and local property tax funds. That would have started the process of school closings, leaders had warned.

The Texas Supreme Court ordered lawmakers to find a way to even out funding available to school districts with differing property wealth. The new plan gives property-rich school districts several options for sharing some wealth with poorer ones.

McCown, who oversees the long-running school finance case, said it is likely that schools will operate under the new plan over the next school year because of the time needed for courts — and if necessary, lawmakers — to act. He said challenges should be filed by July 15.

But lawyers for property-poor school districts want quicker action.

Kauffman said he planned to file his challenge June 9 and hopes that a hearing will be scheduled promptly.

He and other lawyers for poor districts cited as a top concern the way state funds are to be distributed beginning next school year.

Under the measure, richer districts could keep their current per-student spending level with a small local property tax increase or even a decrease, Kauffman and lawyer Rick Gray said. Meanwhile, many poor districts would face large increases to stay even.

They also criticized the law for not providing funds for classroom construction, and said that it would allow a gap of at least $600 per student in funding between rich and poor school districts.

Their complaints came even though they acknowledged that the new plan, which aims to ensure that none of Texas' 1,048 school districts has per-student wealth of more than $280,000.

"This is the best foot forward on the road to equity that the Legislature has ever passed," said Gray.

Assistant Attorney General Toni Hunter, representing the state, said that's a key point.

"They're not attacking the basic equity structure ... They're basically attacking little things that they would like adjustments to," said Ms. Hunter. She said such adjustments could be pursued through the Legislature.

Under the new law, districts that exceed the maximum wealth level can choose among several options for giving away some wealth: Merging tax bases with one or more poorer districts; sending money to the state; contracting to educate students in other districts; consolidating voluntarily with one or more districts; or moving some property to another district's tax rolls.

Governor promises fight to death over San Antonio base

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Gov. Ann Richards says she is joining city leaders and Air Force employees "to fight to the death" to keep Kelly Air Force Base alive.

That ghastly duel commences Sunday when the Base Realignment and Closure Commission holds a public hearing in Corpus Christi on military base closures.

"I am telling you, we are in a fight for our lives with Kelly Air Force Base. This is as serious as a heart attack," Richards told several hundred Kelly workers Tuesday in a huge base airplane hangar.

"You are going to have to talk to your neighbors, to your friends, to your fellow workers and tell them that we are going to fight to the death to save Kelly Air Force Base," Richards declared, as though she were leading an election-eve pep rally rather than an afternoon government union meeting.

The San Antonio Air Logistics Center, Kelly's main function and its biggest employer with about 12,600 civilian workers, was added last month to the list of bases under consideration for closure by the realignment commission.

City and business leaders previously had not shown much worry that Kelly would be closed but immediately formed a group called the "Case For Kelly Task Force" to promote the base.

"I think we'll state our case in a very dramatic way," said Mayor Nelson Wolff, whose father worked at Kelly in the 1940s.

The logistics center oversees parts and maintenance for a number of aircraft, including the large C-5 cargo planes.

"I think they have singled out the wrong base, because Kelly is ready to take on all comers and win the competition hands down," Richards said. "The bad news is that we have to fight for the commission to see what we think is patently obvious, and that is it would be crazy to close Kelly Air Force Base."

Richards said more than half of all Hispanics employed by the Air Force work at Kelly, and that the base has been selected to work on the new C-17 aircraft as well as computer data for the Base Realignment and Closure Commission.

Richards' staff distributed letters for Kelly workers to sign and asked the employees to attach photographs of themselves to send to commission members.

"We want them to see the human beings that are going to be affected if they make the wrong decision," the governor said.

Richards said she would attend the commission's public hearing Sunday in Corpus Christi along with San Antonio city leaders and Kelly workers and lobby for Kelly next week in Washington.

Maj. Gen. Lewis E. Curtis III, commander of the air logistics center at Kelly, praised the workers. But, he said, the threat to the air logistics center is real.

"Regardless of what you have heard, regardless of what you are seeing, Kelly Air Force Base, the San Antonio Air Logistics Center, is a serious candidate for closure," Curtis said.

The realignment commission also is considering three other of the nation's five logistics centers for closure: McClellan Air Force Base in Sacramento, Calif.; Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma City; and Robins Air Force Base in Warner Robins, Ga.

The only logistics center spared from closure consideration is at Hill Air Force Base in Ogden, Utah.

Woman leaves lucrative job for law enforcement

The Associated Press

CORPUS CHRISTI — Anita Dickason was 45 years old when she left a $45,000-a-year job as a telecommunications project manager to attempt a career in law enforcement.

She said her friends thought she was crazy to leave Electronic Data Systems, a corporation founded by Texas billionaire Ross Perot. But in 1988, six months after she made her decision, Mrs. Dickason became the oldest woman to graduate from the Dallas Police Academy.

"There is nothing that prohibits a woman from being an effective officer," the five-year veteran of the Dallas Police Department said. "It is a matter of training, it is a matter of mindset, and those are learnable skills."

The 49-year-old grandmother taught some of those skills in Corpus Christi recently as an instructor in the Texas Women in Law Enforcement's fifth annual training conference, attended by 103 female law enforcement officers from around the state.

Mrs. Dickason said she was a reserve deputy for five years with the Collin County Sheriff's Department, where her husband works as a deputy, when she realized that she wanted to make it a full-time job.

"It's going to sound pretty hokey, but it's true. All my life, I believed police officers made a difference," Mrs. Dickason said. "I had a chance to experience that as a reserve deputy with the sheriff's department."

Since making the switch to the police department, Mrs. Dickason has excelled in her chosen profession. Her work earned her the Officer of the Month honor last month in the 3,000-member department and she was named the Officer of the Year at both the Texas Women in Law Enforcement and the International Association of Women in Law Enforcement conferences last year.

Parole board considers Graham death row case

The Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — Attorneys continued efforts today to prevent the execution of convicted killer Gary Graham, whose supporters have mounted a high-profile campaign to prove his innocence.

A petition before the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals would keep Graham from being executed early Thursday.

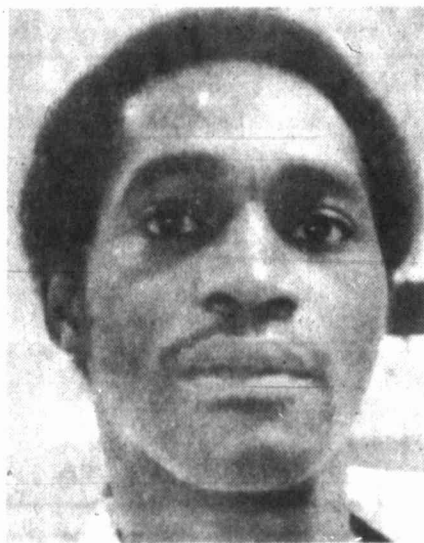

Meanwhile, the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles was considering requests from supporters of Graham that the panel halt the execution.

Graham, 29, would be the sixth Texas inmate this year to receive lethal injection. His claims of innocence in the murder of an Arizona man during a robbery in Houston 12 years ago have been accompanied by a high-profile publicity campaign that has included Hollywood celebrities such as actor Danny Glover and actor-singer Kenny Rogers.

Jack Kyle, chairman of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles, said Tuesday he hoped board members would not be influenced by the publicity.

"Once we succumb to something of that nature, you might as well take out the judicial process," Kyle said.

The 17-member board could convene a hearing to listen to testimony, although one of Graham's attorneys, Anthony Haughton, said Tuesday he was not optimistic that would hap-

GRAHAM

"We've been told indirectly by the board chairman that in his own opinion, he doesn't think the board should be in the business of making fact-finding," Haughton said. "He said we should be looking at the courts."

In the courts, a petition was pending before the Texas Court of Appeals, asking for a rehearing on Graham's claims of innocence and that his original trial attorneys were incompetent. The court, the state's highest criminal appeals court, five weeks ago rejected the petition.

Haughton said he would file appeals in the federal courts if the state appeal was rejected.

Graham supporters gathered in Austin for a candlelight vigil Tuesday evening outside the governor's mansion. On April 28, Gov. Ann Richards issued a 30-day reprieve just hours before Graham was to have been put to death. By law, Richards was allowed to issue one such reprieve.

Graham's claims of innocence are similar to those involving another death row inmate, Leonel Herrera, who was executed last month for killing a police officer in South Texas. Many of the attorneys and participants in the Graham campaign also were involved in the Herrera effort.

Graham, who was 17 at the time of his arrest, was convicted and sentenced to death largely on the testimony of one woman who watched the holdup and identified him as the assailant. Graham earlier had pleaded guilty to 10 similar robberies where a victim was approached in the parking lot of a supermarket. In two of the robberies, the victims were shot. In a third, a woman was raped.

Defense attorneys recently have produced witnesses who insisted Graham was not the man who killed Bobby Lambert, 53, of Tucson, Ariz., and robbed him of less than $100 outside a Houston supermarket on May 13, 1981.

Prosecutors have termed the witnesses' statements inconsistent and not credible.

Oklahoma City police chief withdraws from Dallas field

The Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — Sam Gonzales says he has withdrawn as a candidate for chief of the Dallas Police Department and likely will retire after finishing his tour of duty in the same post here.

"I'm going to have 30 years by the time I've finished three years here," Gonzales said Tuesday. "I anticipate that when I leave here I will probably retire."

Gonzales sent Dallas officials a letter saying he had decided to remain in Oklahoma City for a number of reasons, including the commitment he made to the department when he was hired 18 months ago.

"I'm very happy here, the department is running very well and I didn't want to upset that," Gonzales said.

Officer Jessica Cummins, a police spokeswoman, said Gonzales had said when he first came to the city that he would remain with the department for at least three to five years.

Gonzales said it was important for him to fulfill that commitment.

"I'm not going to leave here before my three to five years are up," Gonzales said.

Gonzales formerly was with the Dallas Police Department, once serving as acting chief.

The city is looking for a replacement for Police Chief William Rathburn, who resigned in January to oversee security for the 1996 Olympic Games in Atlanta.

Dallas narrowed its search in May to 14 men, including Gonzales.

Acting Police Chief Robert L. Jackson is on the city's short list as is Terrell D. Bolton, assistant chief for the Dallas department's Northwest Operations Bureau, and William Lowell Cannaday, who heads the Southeast Operations Bureau.

Dallas City Manager Jan Hart commended Gonzales for his decision to stay.

"Oklahoma City is fortunate to have a man of your professionalism and principles to serve as police chief," Hart said in a letter to Gonzales.

"I know that the Dallas position was attractive to you for a number of reasons and recognize this was not an easy decision to make. However, I also understand and commend your decision to keep your commitment to Oklahoma City."

Army compares Hillary to socialist Karl Marx

PLANO (AP) — U.S. Rep. Dick Arme says he believes first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton has the same political ideals as socialist philosopher Karl Marx.

"Hillary Clinton bothers me a lot," Arme, R-Lewisville, told about 150 Collin County real estate agents Tuesday.

"I realized the other day that her thoughts sound a lot like Karl Marx. She hangs around a lot of Marxists. All her friends are Marxists."

Arme also criticized Mrs. Clinton's leadership in a federal health care task force.

"My thought is that she will take her program to Bill and he's going to say, 'Honey, I can't live with this politically.' And she is going to say, 'Don't call me honey,'" Arme said.

When asked about his statements, Arme told the Plano Star Courier that "there is a similarity in what Mrs. Clinton is saying and Marxist writings."

"I am not making a big deal out of this," he said. "I just think it is kind of interesting. ... She certainly understands Marx."

Arme's press aide Pat Shortridge followed the Congressman's remarks by saying, "I hope this doesn't turn out to be an 'Arme calls president's wife a Marxist' story."

Kroger plans to build on old Dr Pepper site

DALLAS (AP) — After a prolonged debate between developers and preservationists, Dal-Mac Investment Corp. has completed its purchase of the historic Dr Pepper building.

Dal-Mac officials say they will explore various options for the 45-year-old, art deco style soft-drink company building. But they have not promised preservationists to keep the structure.

The Richardson developer already has resold two-thirds of the property to Kroger Co., which will build a 65,000- to 70,000-square-foot supermarket on the east side of the site.

"We intend to participate with the landmark commission to come up with a plan for an economically adaptable reuse for the building," Dal-Mac spokeswoman Karen Bradshaw said Tuesday. "We're willing, and have been willing, to explore all options. If it can be saved, great."

But if no economical reuse plan can be developed, Dal-Mac may decide to go ahead and knock down the former Dr Pepper headquarters to make way for further commercial construction, company officials confirm.

Child rescued from 50-foot deep well

LIBERTY CITY (AP) — A 6-year-old girl has escaped with only a bump on the head and a few scratches and bruises following her plunge into a 50-foot deep water well.

Chelsey Jordan of Cleburne sang "Jesus Loves Me" with her mother as rescue workers tried to free her from the well late Monday at her great-grandmother's home.

"She's doing fine," said Chelsey's mother Regina Jordan.

Chelsey and her 9-year-old sister, Jessica, were playing outside her great-grandmother's home when the accident occurred.

Ms. Jordan said her daughter was jumping up and down on a piece of plywood when it broke, plunging her down the well into 3 feet of water.

Jordan ran to the well's edge and saw her child standing at the bottom of it.

"We said a little prayer and starting singing, 'Jesus Loves Me,'" she said.

The song calmed the child, so mom and daughter kept singing off and on during the rescue.

T.H. Anderson of Kilgore Rescue Services, said rescue crews rigged a rope and pulley system to raise the child from the well. To protect Chelsey from falling debris, crews lowered a firefighter's helmet and a life jacket to keep her head above water.

Two pets succumb to swarm of bees

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — An aggressive swarm of bees have stung to death two dogs, but officials are uncertain whether the bees were Africanized.

Carlos Garcia said "millions" of bees attacked Ivy, his 1-year-old German Shepherd, outside his house Monday morning.

"They covered him up. ... I couldn't see the dog. I had never seen so many (bees). The dog ran (under a storage shed) ... and they still went after him," Garcia said.

"They're so wild they killed the dog in 20 minutes," he said. "They could have killed me too."

Garcia said he was stung about 20 times on his head, arms and body as he tried to let the dog loose from its chain. The bees attacked him as he tried to throw water on the dog.

Jose de la Luz Valdez also was stung when he tried to help his terrier, Daisy, who was killed by the bees, police said.

Ruben Esparza, a pest control officer with the city Health Department, said the insects "were very aggressive" but he did not know if they were Africanized bees. He said the city would not send the bees to be tested because enough were not recovered.

Legendary neon sign getting new address

DALLAS (AP) — For 35 years, Dallas highway drivers have gotten a view of the 38-foot-high neon icon "Tex," of State Fair fame.

In a few weeks, passersby will need a new route to get a glimpse of the red-white-and-blue cowboy who became a state landmark in 1952.

Tex — the younger sibling of "Big Tex," who still stands proudly at Fair Park — is being forced from the Centennial Liquor Store it has stood above since 1958 because of a highway renovation project.

A mass-transit plan for North Central Expressway near Lovers Lane means that the store and its sign must hit the road.

When the shop shuts its doors July 3, Tex will already be on its second week at a new home — the Centennial location at Stemmons Freeway and Walnut Hill Lane.

"He's still going to greet people," said Centennial vice president Jay Hutheson. "He's just going to do it from a different location."

Tex is expected to be dismantled June 14, then relit five days later at its new location. The move is expected to cost $30,000.

Abandoned newborn in stable condition

ALICE (AP) — A newborn girl was in stable condition at Driscoll Children's Hospital in Corpus Christi after a traveler found her abandoned along a highway in Jim Wells County.

The child, believed born Saturday, was discovered near State Highway 358 about 1 p.m. Sunday, said Chief Deputy Ruben Torres of the Jim Wells County Sheriff's Department.

Torres said the baby was believed to have been abandoned by her 17-year-old mother Saturday after the woman gave birth at a nearby ranch.

The woman lived at the ranch with her common-law husband, a ranch hand who reported the incident to the sheriff's department, Torres said.

No arrests were made, Torres said. The mother was taken to Physicians & Surgeons Hospital in Alice on Sunday for observation.

Lawsuits are pending already against school finance plan

It didn't take long for legal action to be contemplated against the new state school finance plan.

The plan, now before Judge F. Scott McCown of Austin for approval, already has one lawsuit planned to be filed against it. The suit is coming from property-poor school districts who feel the plan does not adequately compensate the poorer school districts.

The plan allows property-rich districts to maintain its per student expenditures with the possibility of a small tax increase or a tax decrease. Property-poor districts would face a tax increase to try and stay even.

The plan also does not allow funding for classroom construction and, according to critics of the plan, would allow a $600 funding gap per student in the rich and poor districts.

McCown said it is likely the schools will operate under the new plan for the next school year because of the time it takes for a lawsuit to move through the courts. Suits can be filed up to July 15 but opponents are already planning to file by June 9.

So far now, the schools remain open for the summer and are likely to remain open for another school session.

But what happens after the plan is reviewed and McCown finds it is unconstitutional? The state legislators have had the roughest time coming up with these two plans; will they have enough ideas to find another solution?

There is a solution. Maybe the legislators need to step away from it for a while, coming back to it with fresh minds instead of minds bent on beating a deadline.

Case of the missing lights

It was a dark, stormy night, one where the lightning flashes across the sky like neon.

I was alone again in my office, business had been bad. Seems no one wanted anything found. I watched the lightning play in the sky.

Since no one was coming my way, I decided to head on to my apartment. Just when my hand reached for the door it opened.

And there was a passing customer. I decided to stay, have to pay the rent somehow, and here what she wanted.

"She was pooling water on my floor and said she couldn't find her lights. I hadn't been looking confused. And she wanted a light for her cigarette, a Bud light or a Bud light?"

"I've lost the lights in my dashboard and I don't know where to find them," she said.

"Leave them alone and they'll come home a flashing," I thought. But I said, "Maybe I can help."

She started to tell me all about it. How she had left her office, she had been working late and then waited for the storm to abate, and got into her car only to find it dark inside.

"She explained how everything else seemed to work, the interior lights, the headlights but nothing else."

"No lights for the speedometer, the radio, the air conditioner, nothing but darkness."

"It makes me nervous. A car is so dark at night without all those little lights penetrating the gloom. It's hard to tell what speed I am going or even if I have enough gas," she explained.

I figured she would be alright during the day. There is usually enough sunlight to light up the interior of almost anything. There are a few places, though, even the sunlight can't penetrate or won't.

I asked her if she had any idea of what might have caused the lights to go out.

"She said the car hadn't been broken into so no one stole the lights. She didn't think she had been alone to her car to make the lights want to leave."

I told her car abuse is subjective and it is usually the car that decides when it has had enough. You can always tell when a car has had enough abuse because something goes wrong. The engine quits, a tire goes flat, a rod blows its top, the A/C decides to heat up or a zillion other things.

Sometimes it is the fuses. They decide they have had enough and blow their tops, taking everything connected with them. It's not a pretty picture when the fuses decide to blow.

"She said she really didn't think she had done anything to the fuses that would cause them to blow. 'It doesn't take much, they have short fuses,' I told her."

So I decided to look around. It was not work because, as usual, I had left the umbrella anywhere but where I needed it.

We got to her car and I began to look around. First, I got out the instruction book — a helpful tool when checking out a car. Then I found the fuses.

She was right about the fuses. They looked very happy in their little container, seemed like they were being treated right and weren't about to blow.

So, where did the lights go then? That was a question seemingly hard to solve. If it wasn't the fuses, could there be a bad electrical connection?

I decided to try one more thing before tearing the car apart to find a bad connection. It was right there in the book — light rheostat. I wasn't familiar with the word so I decided to give the little knob the book said it was a try.

Turned it slowly around. At first, nothing seemed to be happening. I guess it wasn't the answer at all. But, the more I turned, the brighter the car seemed to get.

Ok, I thought, maybe this is the key to the solution of this little mystery. I kept turning the knob and soon the dashboard was all lit up like a Christmas tree with bright green, red and orange colors.

I had solved the mystery of the missing dashboard lights for the woman. Now, she would like me to find out who could have done such a dastardly deed.

What I figure, but didn't have the heart to tell her, is she probably did the dastardly deed herself. I noticed she had a penchant for playing with knobs while I was trying to work.

When Mr. Bill, the president, first took office, he wanted, of course, to lift the ban on gays in the military immediately.

But wiser (though perhaps not as excellently coiffed) heads prevailed, and it was suggested perhaps there should be some debate before the ban was lifted.

One reason for this was Mr. Bill himself, who has had no previous military experience save watching episodes of the late Vic Morrow in the TV series "Combat," as a boy in Arkansas.

It appears now the debate that followed has been a fruitful one, and certain compromises will be reached.

But I like my debates to be completely fair, and I'm not certain this one has been, for the basic reason that it's a conservative vs. liberal thing, and conservatives usually don't get that good a haircut from liberally minded large newspapers and television networks.

There were a couple of trials recently in Jacksonville, Fla., that weren't exactly anybody's top story, and I don't understand that, what with the debate over gays in the military. The trials had to do with gay rape involving naval personnel.

Lewis Grizzard

So what I'd like to do here, in the name of fairness, is offer a portion of an Associated Press report filed during the two trials that received its own burial-at-sea.

Let's simply see where this takes us:

"JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Two sailors are on trial in separate cases charged with homosexual sexual assault on other Navy men."

"A state jury is hearing testimony against Petty Officer 2nd Class Albert Ruggiero, accused of raping an 18-year-old sailor from his unit following a drunken party a week before Christmas. In the other case, Airman Apprentice Michael A. Thompson, 21, faces court martial on charges of assaulting a 20-year-old shipmate aboard the U.S.S. Saratoga on Feb. 5 while the aircraft carrier was at Mayport Naval Station."

"Ruggiero is charged with two counts of sexual battery. ...Thompson is charged with forcible sodomy, indecent assault, committing an indecent act and being drunk and disorderly."

"The names of the alleged victims are being withheld."

"Prosecutors charge that Ruggiero, 32, and the 18-year-old apprentice...were at a party and left to go walking."

"The apprentice told police that both he and Ruggiero were drunk. He said Ruggiero kept trying to get him to drink more, then slapped him, bent his arm behind him and removed his trousers."

"The victim said he screamed. 'You're going to like this,' he quoted Ruggiero as saying."

"The sailor said Ruggiero later returned and threatened to hurt him if he told anyone."

"Doctors found rectal lacerations and other evidence of anal intercourse, police said."

Assistant State Attorney Marc Hardesty, who, at the time, was prosecuting the case, said, according to the AP report, the issue of gays in the military is not germane, as far as he was concerned.

"I am basing my case on the fact that one man raped another man. Period," the article quoted him.

That was Assistant State Attorney Hardesty's opinion, but it sounds pretty germane to me. As far as the media is concerned, how could such an incident basically be ignored what with the gays-in-the-military debate?

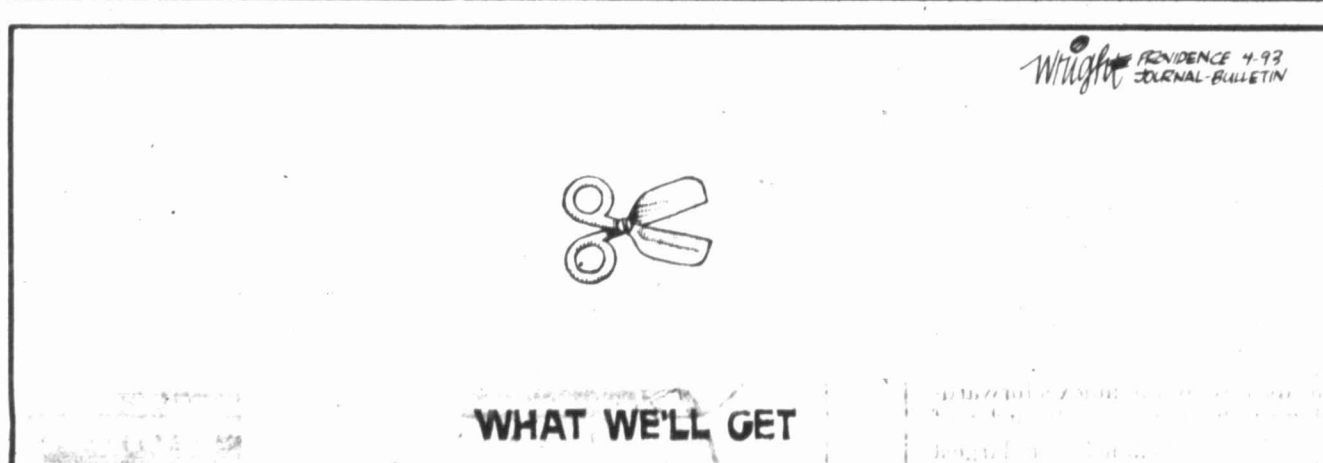

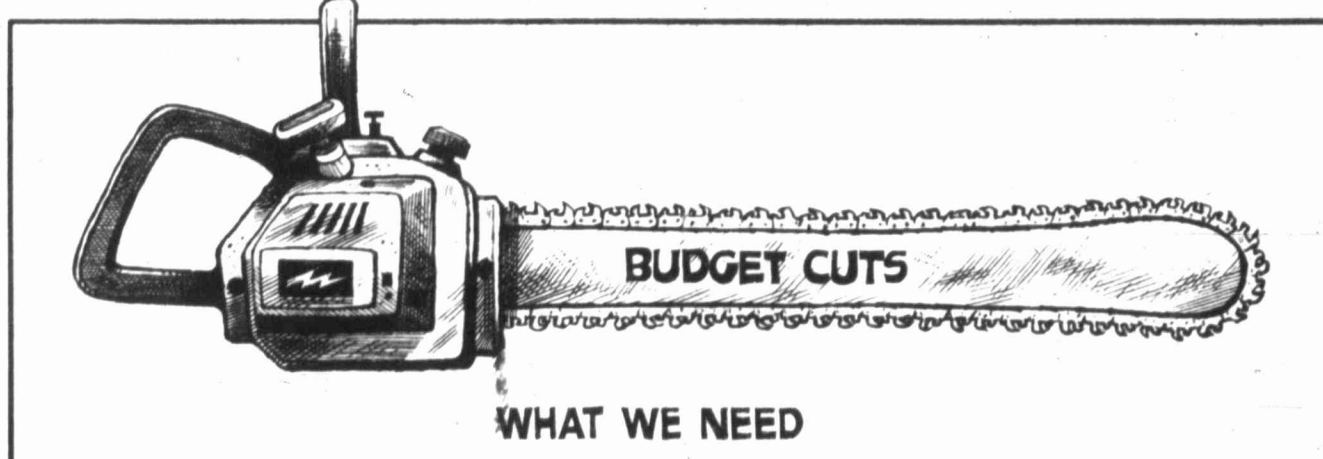

Wouldn't that be like ignoring the Tailhook Scandal in light of the issues concerning sexual harassment of women and women in the military?

I'm not trying to say, "Look what can happen if you allow gays in the military."

What I am trying to say is, "Look, there's a pretty good news story that's a natural tie-in with the gays-in-the-military debate and why wasn't it given bigger coverage?"

I can ask that. I used to be an editor. LBJ was president. I think Lady Bird cut his hair.

(Ed. note: Ruggiero was convicted. Sentencing is June 8. Thompson was sentenced to 30 months in military prison and will be dishonorably discharged.)

Covering the courts

How to nominate a justice

WASHINGTON — Professor Frank Askin of Rutgers recently gave Bill Clinton some remarkably frank advice. The professor is general counsel to the American Civil Liberties Union. He told the president what to look for in naming a successor to Justice Byron White. Writing in the National Law Journal, the gentleman committed truth. Professors should be better behaved. Listen to him:

"The court needs a justice who can articulate a judicial and constitutional vision that is faithful to our democratic heritage, yet creative enough to meet the requirements of a changing society in the nation's third century."

Translation into English: Give us an activist, Bill.

To continue: "His or her constitutional compass must be calibrated to promote equality in a society increasingly polarized along racial and ethnic lines; defend freedom of expression and communication in an age of media monopoly; support the pursuit of happiness amidst the despair spread by diminishing economic opportunity..."

Still more: White's successor should "advocate educational equity for the children of the poor and powerless." A new visionary should "recognize a fundamental right to a habitable dwelling." The nominee should rule that welfare benefits are a property right. He or she should argue for affirmative action programs "to assist members of minority groups to achieve real equality."

That is quite an agenda, but it undermines a cherished American myth. The myth is premised upon the transparent fiction that ours is a government of laws, not of men. In the field of jurisprudence, as the papers of Justice Thurgood Marshall make clear, the truth is something else entirely. Ours is a government of very mortal men who hid for their colleagues' votes as if they were trading horses.

At the highest level we are governed by a judicial oligarchy, unelected and untouchable. Justices have no right, in theory, to "support the pursuit of happiness." In theory, they should not advocate or promote any particular social program. Professors should not give the game away.

The gentleman's honesty does him credit. Presidents should nominate justices whose political, philosophical and judicial convictions are in line with their own. This has been the guiding rule since George Washington packed the first Supreme Court with 11 stouthearted Federalists who could be relied upon to vote the Washington line.

As it turned out, Washington's court had so few cases that it shaped nothing much of anything. John Adams had better luck. He made John Marshall chief justice, and there went the old ball game. Every succeeding president has tried to impose his own stamp upon the court. This is the way the system is supposed to work. Presidents depart; justices remain.

If Clinton follows the rules, he will begin by praising his nominee as the finest judicial timber in the nation.

Horsefeathers! That is what they all say. If Professor Askin were to name his 10 best choices, and I were to name my 10 best choices, we would have a fine list of 20 best choices.

Three considerations historically have governed the nomination of a Supreme Court justice. They are politics, politics, and politics. Sometimes the political consideration has been geographical. Religion has been a factor — the Catholic seat, the Jewish seat. Thurgood Marshall and Clarence Thomas owe their nominations to race. Sandra Day O'Connor is a fine justice — a fine woman justice. So it has gone for 200 years.

At this writing, Clinton has yet to name his nominee. Because he is absolutely pledged to "diversity," Anglo-Saxon males need not apply. The Hispanic National Bar Association is swooping it up for the president to name the first Hispanic to the court. Women's organizations want another woman. Blacks want a real black, as distinguished from a Republican black.

My own advice: To be true to tradition, Clinton should name a relatively young, Jewish woman, someone with solid judicial experience, a liberal Democratic nominee who will not incite a riot in the Senate. The Jewish seat has been empty since the resignation of Abe Fortas in 1969.

Judge Ruth Bader Ginsburg has served on the federal appellate bench for 13 years. She is 60, a bit old but not too old. Her judicial credentials are impeccable. Her expansive view of the law is not my view, but it's Clinton's view. If it isn't Ginsburg, it will be someone just as politically correct.

Sailor's maximum sentence strengthens military principals

Scripps Howard News Service

The military trial of sailor Terry Helvey, who admitted beating to death a homosexual shipmate, has ended with the killer drawing a life sentence. This punishment is not a whit too heavy for the crime.

Allen Schindler's murder was not a case of a fair fistfight gone awry. Rather, Helvey, a stocky 21-year-old who built muscles with steroids and studied martial arts, while on a drinking jag pummeled and stomped the weaker man in a Japanese park. Helvey performed so thorough a job that authorities recognized Schindler only through tattoos. Such sadistic homicide merits the law's untempered wrath wherever, and against whomever, it occurs.

Helvey and Schindler had had words before the latter announced his homosexuality to the commander of the USS Belleau Wood, so the degree to which Helvey's blatant detestation of gays fueled the crime is muddled. Helvey at first confessed to killing Schindler out of "disgust" for homosexuals but recanted that explanation under oath. Actually, the name of the slayer's personal demon — homophobia, alcohol abuse, rage induced by childhood abuse — is only marginally relevant.

What is much more important is that men and women who wear the nation's uniform, whatever their sexual or other leanings, be free from the fear of mayhem at the hands of peers; and that a military culture specializing in controlled violence not be weakened by the lawless and undisciplined exercise of violence.

Helvey's maximum term strengthens those principles, offsetting, for example, the ill-conceived testimony before Congress of Marine Col. Fred Peck that homosexuals who "come out" in uniform do so at their own peril. The good colonel notwithstanding, levels of assault and all other crimes in the services compare favorably with those of the larger society. This is true because the services manage to screen out most sociopaths, and because military laws are clear and enforced.

Homosexual activists are right to say that openly gay comrades aren't welcomed by most soldiers and sailors — just one reason why Gadarene calls for flat dropping the present ban are misguided. But anyone who suggests that the Schindler murder "represents" homosexuals' lot in uniform should be challenged.

Economic rise after

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's chief economic gauge rebounded 1.1 percent in April after plunging in two years before, the Commerce Department said today.

The barely perceptible rise in the Index of Leading Indicators, a 1 percent plus, fits with the views of many economists that the little chance the economy has of breaking out of its recession.

Few analysts see a recovery in the economy is on the horizon. At the same time, the nation's unemployment rate has risen to 7 percent since February, up during the recession.

"It's certainly no situation," said Reaser of First Interstate in Los Angeles. "Continuing to add payroll jobs is a challenge." In advance, economists predicted the index of 0.3 percent.

The leading indicator predicts economic growth in advance of the monthly direction, up or down.

Study finds widespread

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — To assault, sexual harassment, four out of every schools nationwide report it, said a study by the U.S. Department of Education.

Conduct ranges from sexual harassment to physical assault, 1,600 eighth-through 12th graders reported being harassed by teachers, employees or students.

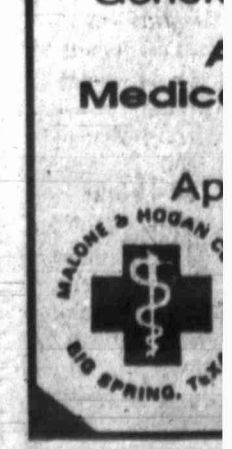

Just 7 percent of the schools about sexual harassment. And while one in five schools reported sexual harassment, more than one in five schools reported sexual harassment.

"Ignoring sexual harassment is a failure," said the study. "Schools must take action to prevent and respond to sexual harassment."

Five years ago, the publishers of Consumer Reports magazine called for a ban on the Suzuki Samurai, a popular sport utility vehicle that the magazine said tended to roll over in sudden turns. American Suzuki Motor Corp. defended the vehicle as safe.

President Clinton reaches out to greet well-wishers outside Milwaukee's Jack Langer Pharmacy Tuesday. Clinton made a stop in Milwaukee to promote his economic program.

Clinton reminds audience he's cutting spending too

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Standing on an old fire truck in a middle-class Milwaukee neighborhood, his polished size-13 shoes hanging far over the running board, President Clinton shook his finger like an angry school marm and fired back at protesters. "I see all the signs that say, 'More spending cuts.' Where were you when the cuts were made?" Again and again Clinton is reminding audiences that his $500 billion deficit reduction package would do more than raise taxes: It cuts spending too. "I dare say that most of you've heard about the fight or fights over taxes but didn't know how much spending was cut," Clinton told a crowd at a Milwaukee civic center Tuesday before heading to the blue-collar neighborhood to visit a pharmacy.

Clinton promised to accept deeper budget cuts and less tax increases to get his package through the Senate, although he urged restraint. "The initiative has to come from the Senate," said spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers. "They'll come to us and we'll work with them." While the Milwaukee appearances underscored Clinton's willingness to compromise on the budget, they also were part of a renewed effort to define himself as a moderate Democrat in touch with the middle class. He harped on the themes of his presidential campaign: welfare reform, family leave, community service and health care reform. He even dug up a broken campaign pledge, saying he intends to propose middle-class tax cuts "before I'm done." In an interview with the Cincinnati Enquirer published in today's editions, Clinton said "I cannot recommend this year, although I expect to recommend in this term, tax relief for middle-income families, especially those with children." In his 45-minute civic center speech, Clinton used the phrase "middle class" at least 10 times. "This is, in my mind, the president getting back to the vision and values of the campaign," said political strategist Paul Begala, who traveled with Clinton. The president and his advisers are trying to reverse the damage a Hollywood haircut and charges of cynicism did to his populist image. "I was sent to the White House, I think, to take on brain dead politics from either party, or from both," Clinton said in the civic center speech.

Economy registers feeble rise after plunge in March

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge rebounded only a feeble 0.1 percent in April after taking its worst plunge in two years the month before, the Commerce Department said today. The barely perceptible rise in the Index of Leading Indicators, following a 1 percent plummet in March, fits with the views of the more pessimistic economic analysts who see little chance the economy will soon break out of its lethargic growth pattern. Few analysts see any chance the economy is on the brink of another recession. At the same time, growth has been so painfully slow that the nation's unemployment rate, stuck at 7 percent since February, may even tick up during the summer, they warn. "It's certainly not any kind of boom situation," said economist Lynn Reaser of First Interstate Bancorp of Los Angeles. "Companies are still remaining very cautious about adding to payrolls." In advance, economists were looking for a somewhat stronger gain in the index of 0.3 percent or 0.4 percent. The leading index is designed to predict economic activity six to nine months in advance. Three consecutive monthly movements in one direction, up or down, are considered a good, but far from certain, sign of whether the economy will be expanding or contracting. So far this year, the index has fallen in January and March and risen in February and April. The March decline was the worst since November 1990, signaling a continuation of the sharp slowdown from the economy's end-of-the-year growth rate. The economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, soared at a 4.7 percent annual rate in the fourth quarter but advanced at only a 0.9 percent rate in the first. Economists said the growth rate would be further depressed by a rise in interest rates that could occur if Congress fails to follow through on President Clinton's plan to reduce the budget deficit. "We think the second half will look stronger ... but a lot of it depends on what happens in Congress. The bond market is very nervous. There's a strong suspicion that Congress will end up watering down the deficit reduction," said economist David Wyss of DRI-McGraw Hill, a Lexington, Mass., forecasting firm. In April, six of the index's forward-looking indicators rose. In order of their effect on the index, from largest to smallest, the positive indicators were: —An increase in the average factory workweek to 41.5 hours from 41.2 hours in March. —A rise in building permits. —A slowdown in business delivery times, signaling rising demand.

Study finds sexual harassment widespread in nation's schools

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — From voyeurism to assault, sexual harassment affects four out of every five teen-agers in schools nationwide, but few victims report it, said a study released today. Conduct ranges from being spied on while dressing or showering to physical assault, said the survey of 1,600 eighth- through 11th-graders. Thirteen percent of the girls reported being forced by fellow students, teachers or other school employees to engage in sexual conduct beyond kissing. Just 7 percent of the victims told the school about sexual harassment. And while one in five victims told a family member, 23 percent kept quiet. More than half didn't even know if their school had a policy on sexual harassment. "Ignoring sexual harassment in schools in effect condones it," Sharon Schuster, president of the American Association of University Women, said in a statement accompanying the study results. The AAUW's educational foundation commissioned the study, in which Louis Harris and Associates distributed questionnaires in 79 classrooms across the country in February and March. Thirty-nine percent of the victimized girls said they were afraid in school; 8 percent of the boys said they were. Twenty-eight percent of the victimized girls said it was harder to pay attention in school, and 18 percent of the girls said the harassment made them think about changing schools. "Sexual harassment takes a toll on all students, but the impact on girls is devastating," said Anne Bryant, executive director of the educational foundation.

Opposition takes lead in Cambodia

The Associated Press

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — The pro-West opposition took a strong lead over the government today on the basis of 80 percent of the ballots counted from Cambodia's U.N.-organized election.

The Vietnamese-installed government, which currently controls four-fifths of the country, again hinted it may contest the results of the six-day election.

Government party agents have withdrawn from at least three of the 21 provinces, U.N. spokesman Eric Falt said. Representatives of all parties observed the counting of ballots to ensure against irregularities.

The government, citing alleged irregularities in last week's election, has demanded a new vote in four provinces.

If these problems are not corrected, "we cannot recognize the result of the election," said senior government party official Sok An. Government spokesman Khieu Kanharith said the government would recognize the results, but warned that soldiers would "riot" when hearing them.

U.N. peacekeepers stepped up security around ballot-counting places and other areas in response to "rumors and talk," said the U.N. mission's military spokesman Lt. Col. Dick Palk.

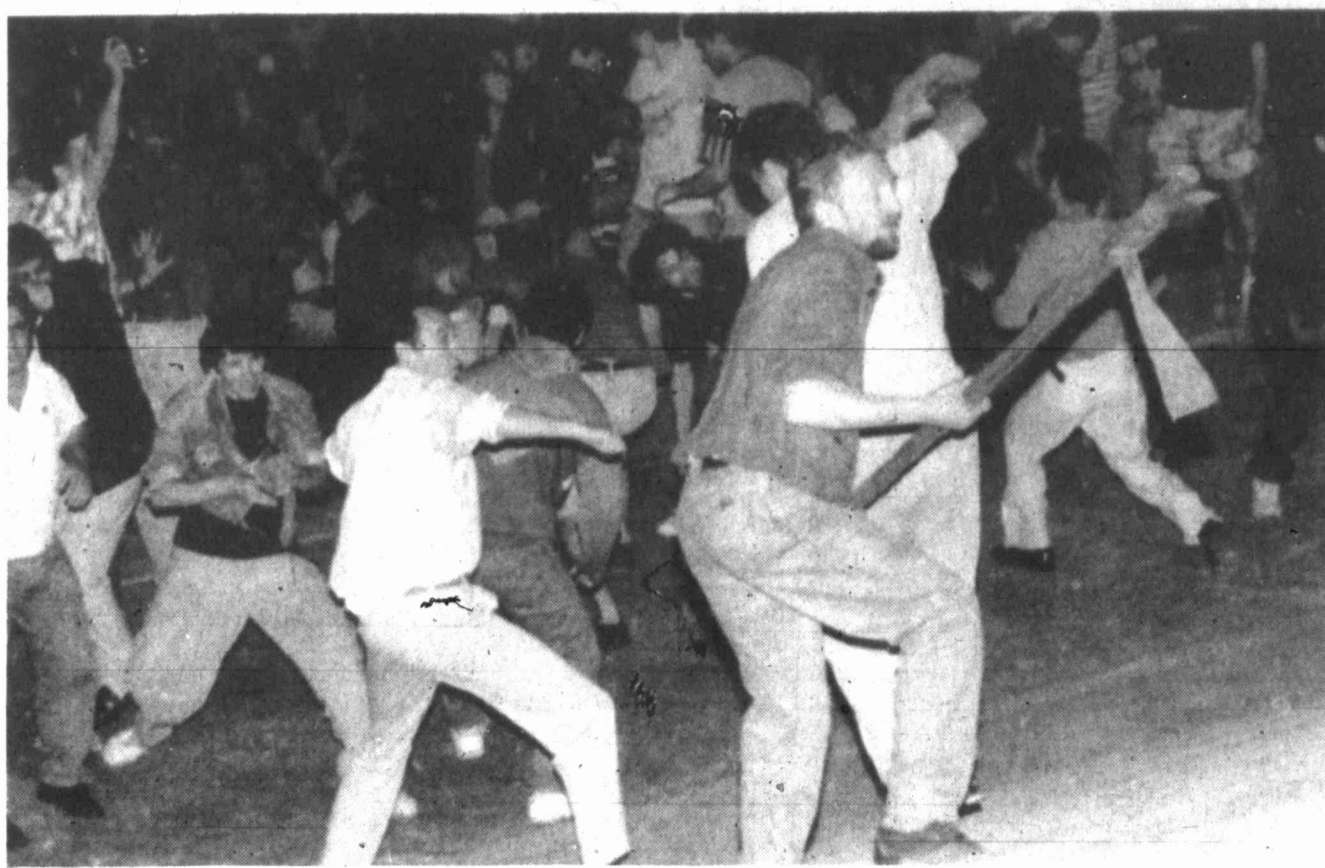

"We are taking prudent precautions, making a show of force," Palk said. "But it's not based on anything substantive. There have been no reports of troop movements." He said security was increased around the mission's radio station Tuesday night in Phnom Penh.

Falt said about 3.87 million ballots had been counted from the election, which concluded Friday.

He said the royalist FUNCINPEC party had received about 1.45 million, or 45.4 percent, while the government CPP party received about 1.22 million, or 38.4 percent. The opposition Buddhist Liberal Democratic Party received about 120,000 votes, or 3.7 percent.

The election was for a 120-member constituent assembly that is to adopt a democratic constitution within three months, then form a government.

The government has some 100,000 troops; the opposition parties have virtually no forces.

Demonstrators clash with police in front of the Yugoslav Federal Parliament building in Belgrade Tuesday evening. Riots erupted in protest against the ouster of Yugoslav President Dobrica Cosic.

Yugoslav opposition leader severely beaten in custody

The Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — The main opposition leader was severely beaten in police custody today and a policeman died of injuries suffered in the worst violence to grip Belgrade in more than two years.

Thousands of people poured into the streets late Tuesday to protest President Dobrica Cosic's ouster by ultranationalist lawmakers and the economic ruin brought on by supporting ethnic Serbs warring in breakaway Croatia and Bosnia.

The beaten opposition chief, Vuk Draskovic, was arrested while leading a protest outside parliament. The unrest remarkable both for its intensity and the fact it happened at all in a country where public opposition to authority has been sporadic.

The protests left Yugoslavia's most powerful man, President Slobodan Milosevic of the Serbian republic, juggling contradictory aims: to appease powerful extremists who support continued warfare in Bosnia, while quelling protests against the economic damage of the war and trying to persuade the world community to lift sanctions.

The sanctions were imposed to punish Belgrade for inciting the Bosnian war, which broke out 14 months ago when Serbs there took up arms against Muslims and Croats who voted to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

Central Belgrade appeared to be mostly calm this morning, but there was a heavy police presence. Riot police took up positions around the federal parliament, and a crowd that gathered there was forced to disperse. There was no violence.

Draskovic, head of the Serbian Renewal Movement, was attacked by a group of officers in Belgrade's police headquarters, said his wife Danica, who also was detained. She managed a phone call to her sister who passed the information on to Belgrade's independent Studio B television.

"They dragged him around the courtyard, beating him like an animal," said her sister, Radmila Davidovic.

When brought to an emergency clinic this morning, Draskovic had multiple fractures to facial bones, said a doctor, who declined to be identified.

Another doctor, Zivorad Nikolic, said Draskovic fainted several times while being treated. Nikolic said the opposition leader had injuries all over his body and that his condition was serious. A medical student who refused to be identified later said Draskovic had been taken back to police headquarters.

The official Tanjug news agency said policeman Milorad Nikolic, 24, died at the Belgrade Emergency Clinic of injuries suffered in the protests.

It did not say what injuries Nikolic had suffered. Tanjug quoted clinic official Rade Vasilic as saying 32 people, half of them police, were treated for injuries from the protest.

The demonstrators, supporters of the weak opposition to Milosevic and Serb hard-liners, gathered outside parliament in the early evening after an ultranationalist deputy knocked unconscious a lawmaker from the democratic opposition.

"Belgrade! Wake up tonight! Tomorrow it may be too late," shouted Draskovic, who led huge opposition demonstrations against Milosevic in March 1991 that dispersed only after the army sent tanks into Belgrade streets.

A police statement carried by Tanjug accused Draskovic of attacking a policeman and seriously injuring him. It said 121 protesters had been arrested.

German prosecutors say arson suspect may have been lone

The Associated Press

BONN, Germany — A young extremist in custody may have been the lone arsonist in a firebombing that killed five Turks and set off nightly riots, federal authorities said today.

ARD TV network said the 16-year-old suspect bragged to friends two weeks before Saturday's attack that the house where the Turkish family lived would be torched. The friends turned him in after the attack, ARD said.

The Federal Prosecutor's Office said the investigation is now focusing on whether anyone else participated in the firebombing in the central German city of Solingen.

A day earlier the prosecutor's office called off a nationwide manhunt after discovering the suspect, a right-winger, had lied about four others who were supposedly involved in the attack. Security sources said the four skinheads exist but are not suspects in the firebombing.

Rioting to protest the Solingen killings flared for a third consecutive night and into the early morning hours.

About 2,000 demonstrators chanting "Nazis out!" marched Tuesday night through Solingen. Riot police swinging batons clashed with protesters, most of them Turks.

A car that witnesses said was driven by right-wing skinheads struck and injured a Turkish girl while trying to drive through a crowd of 200 Turkish demonstrators. Police pulled out the two occupants before Turks began smashing the car with sticks.

At nearby Bielefeld, where 5,000 people protested the Solingen killings, about 15 masked Turks stormed a local newspaper office. Police later dislodged them. About 60 demonstrators blocked a busy intersection for an hour.

Some 300 Turks and Germans demonstrated in the north German city of Flensburg late Tuesday, some hurling bottles and firecrackers. Early today, about 50 masked protesters smashed store windows and cars with baseball bats.

The Solingen firebombing is the deadliest attack since neo-Nazi outrages erupted after Germany's 1990 unification. It has shattered Germany's image abroad and set off an intense bout of soul-searching.

The newspaper Bild Zeitung ran a front-page picture of a 3-year-old Turkish girl whose face was horribly disfigured by burns in the attack.

"Look at this, you murderers!" the headline screamed.

Spanish prime minister declared debate winner

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spain's leading dailies have awarded a narrow victory to Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez in his final televised debate with conservative challenger Jose Maria Aznar, but none felt the encounter altered the candidates' neck-and-neck positions as the June 6 parliamentary elections approach.

All papers noted that Gonzalez was in better fighting form and repeatedly took the initiative in Monday's debate, in contrast to the two candidates' first bout last week.

Most opinion polls give Aznar's Popular Party a slight edge over Gonzalez's Socialists.

It is widely assumed that neither party will win a majority of the 350 seats in the lower house and will have to form a coalition, either with smaller parties from Spain's 17 autonomous regions or with the Communist-led United Left coalition.

Human rights group rips Sao Paulo police

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — The Sao Paulo state police force is one of the most violent in the Western world, according to the human rights group Americas Watch.

On Monday, Americas Watch released a report titled "Urban Police Violence in Brazil — Deaths and Torture by the Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro Police Over the Past Five Years (1987-1992)."

Sociologist Paulo Sergio Pinheiro of the University of Sao Paulo's Center for the Study of Violence said police here believe "a bullet is the best way to combat crime."

"The violence of the Sao Paulo police force is not matched anywhere else in the Western democratic world," said Pinheiro, a co-author of the study.

According to official police figures, Sao Paulo police killed 305 criminals or suspects in 1987. In 1992 the figure jumped to 1,407.

WHO gives approval to new contraceptive

GENEVA (AP) — The World Health Organization has given final approval to an injectable female contraceptive, saying it does not increase the risk of breast, cervical or ovarian cancer.

In fact, the U.N. health agency said Tuesday that Depo Provera may protect women against cancer of the uterus.

Depo Provera is used by 9 million women in about 90 countries, mainly in the developing world. It is injected every three months and is 99 percent effective.

Depo Provera became available in the United States in January after the Food and Drug Administration accepted the findings of new trials and reversed a 1978 ruling that it might cause breast cancer.

WHO gave final clearance to the drug after inviting experts from the United States and six other countries to meet last week to examine all available evidence of possible links with cancer.

Unlike the pill, Depo Provera was not associated with cardiovascular risks and might be more suitable for older women or smokers, Meirik said. Negative side effects include weight gain, depression and disruptions to menstrual patterns after the first injection.

Jacqueline Bigar - Horoscope

FOR THURSDAY, JUNE 3, 1993

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take the plunge and move a project forward. You might need to guard against a tendency to be pessimistic. Go with a partner who seems to be self-assured. Open up to a new line of thought. Tonight: Attend a movie, concert or play.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Rely on an associate's input. Recognize you are heading in the right direction, although you might not have all the answers. Lighten up, laugh and recognize the humor in a co-worker's attitude. Tonight: Be a duo.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your sincerity is noted by another, who can add a new perspective to recent rumors. You'll see how many friends you have, especially if you don't push to have things your way. Let your amorous side out. Tonight: Flirt the night away.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be more in tune with what you feel before you handle an emotional situation. Your knowledge is instrumental to another's well-being. Know you have the support of a roommate or family member. Show off your stuff at work. Tonight: Take a walk after dinner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You might be hard pressed to cover all bases as you try to polish off your work-load. Enjoy those around you today and take time for a few words here and there. Remain confident and smile as you go with a creative urge. Tonight: Pretend it's Saturday night.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get down to basics about a matter at home. Finances are at the bottom of the correct decision, be helpful to an associate who is singing the blues. Tonight: Order in.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pace yourself. You are full of ideas and enthusiasm, but the energy might not be there when you have to follow through. Reach out for a friend who may be a little down. Tonight: Breeze around.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Recognize that a loved one who is giving you a hard time might not really mean to. Understand your limits but refuse to be pushed. Your intuition is correct. Just realize how much resilience you have. Be careful with funds. Tonight: Spend little.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Respond to a friend's overtures; the two of you make an unbeatable duo. Understand what motivates you in a domestic rift, as push could come to shove. If you reveal more of yourself, others will find you irresistible. Tonight: As you like it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are intrigued by another's suggestion. A boss chooses you as the one to carry a key idea to fulfillment. Reveal little right now; simply absorb information. Tonight: Do some soul-searching.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A friendship takes a new direction. Watch a tendency to feel limited, both financially and creatively. Loosen up and you'll break down barriers. A risk pays off. Tonight: The more the merrier.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't push so hard ... you'll end up much happier. Focus on wishful thinking and a better sense of who you are. Go with your creativity and be open to a partner. The two of you have great possibilities. Tonight: Burn the midnight oil.

IF JUNE 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your ingenuity will help you meet any challenge this year and allow you many new options. Try to get past the tendency to take yourself too seriously or push yourself beyond normal expectations. If you're single, romance will be hot on your path. If already attached, you are likely to go to the next step in your relationship. Your popularity will be high. SAGITTARIUS shows you another approach.

THE ASTERISKS (*) SHOW THE KIND OF DAY YOU'LL HAVE: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

Dear Abby - Letters...

Always use caution in hotel rooms

DEAR ABBY: I hope this letter alerts your readers to an avoidable danger. I am an airline hostess. I spend a good deal of time in hotels and am usually very safety-conscious. A lapse in caution resulted in a very scary incident that could have cost me my life.

I was in a good hotel at one of our western airports. It was 9:30 in the evening. I was tired, and the phone rang. Someone claiming to be from the front desk said there was a problem with the heater on my floor and they needed to check my thermostat. I should have called the front desk to verify this, but I hurried to put on a pair of jeans and a T-shirt, and then I heard a knock on the door.

A nice-looking man with a toolbox came in and went over to the thermostat, fiddled with it for a few minutes, and then pointed a gun in my face. The toolbox contained duct tape and rope; in a matter of minutes, I was on the floor, bound and gagged, watching this man rummage through my belongings. He did not hurt or assault me, but leaving, he plopped me on the bed and left me hog-tied, making it impossible for me to call for help.

A cleaning woman found me at 9:00 the next morning, and she needed help to untie me.

Abby, a little caution could have prevented this nightmare of fear and helplessness that lasted for nearly 12 hours. I am seeing a psychologist who encouraged me to talk about it — so here I am. I am signing my name, but if you print this, sign me ... BOUND TO BE MORE CAREFUL.

DEAR BOUND: Your "talking about it" is not only good therapy to help you put this nightmarish experience behind you, it is a valuable reminder for women (and men) who spend time in hotels and motels.

DEAR ABBY: Recently your readers gave their opinions on whether an office worker should inform the boss that a colleague was going through the boss's wastebasket. Two of the writers who responded asserted that the courts have held that the police cannot search an individual's trash without a search warrant.

Abby, in a 1988 case, the U.S. Supreme Court held that the police did not need a warrant to search garbage that was placed in opaque bags at the curb for collection. The rationale was that the defendants did not have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the garbage, so a search warrant was not required under the Fourth Amendment.

It is possible that some state constitutions provide greater protection. Moreover, the police certainly cannot search garbage that is inside a person's house, since they normally need a warrant to enter a house. But under the U.S. Constitution, garbage left at curbside is fair game for the police. — DOUGLAS F. CARLSON, WALNUT CREEK, CALIF.

DEAR MR. CARLSON: Thanks for the correction — complete with documentation from the U.S. Supreme Court, no less.

Deaths

Sheila Schielke

Sheila A. Schielke, 77, Alpine, formerly of Big Spring, died Tuesday, June 1, 1993, in the Valley Care Center, Alpine.

Graveside services will be Monday, June 7, 1993, at the Mt. Olivet Cemetery, Chicago, Ill. under the direction of Blake-Lamb Funeral Home in Chicago.

Mrs. Schielke was born Aug. 11, 1915, in Chicago. She married Robert Schielke in Chicago. He preceded her in death in 1978. She came to Big Spring in 1981 from Chicago where she had worked at Carson-Pavie-Scott Department Store for over 25 years.

Survivors include one brother and sister-in-law: Patrick J. and Helen McIntyre, Alpine (formerly of Big Spring); and several nieces and nephews.

She was also preceded in death by two brothers and two sisters.

DeLois Harper

DeLois Harper, 67, Big Spring, died Monday, May 31, 1993, in a Midland hospital.

Services were 2 p.m., today at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Rosewood Chapel with the Rev. Sammy Sims, Crestview Baptist Church officiating. Graveside services were 4:30 p.m. at Sunset Memorial Gardens, Odessa.

Mrs. Harper was born June 21, 1925, in Scurry County. She married Jim Harper on June 14, 1974, in Big Spring. She was a member of Crestview Baptist Church. She had lived in Big Spring since 1968. She worked as a sales clerk for Carter's Furniture for 15 years.

Survivors include her husband, Jim Harper, Big Spring; one son, Ronald W. Sherkey, Lakeland, Fla.; one daughter, Judy Sheppard, Odessa; one step-son, Jimmie Harper, Corpus Christi; one step-daughter, Shirley Froman, Big Spring; two sisters: Justine Bailey, Sundown, and Opal L. Vancil, Garland; three brothers: Sam Hooper, Dallas; Gerald Hooper and Don R. Hooper, both of Odessa; 11 grandchildren, 20 great-grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

Family suggests memorials to the Crestview Baptist Church of the Gideons, PO Box 133, Big Spring, 79721.

Krueger, Hutchison rip each other

The Associated Press

The U.S. Senate runoff candidates are swapping accusations at a furious pace as Saturday's election nears.

Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison says interim Sen. Bob Krueger is slinging mud; Krueger says Mrs. Hutchison is unfit for the office.

Saturday's voting will determine who completes the final 1 1/2 years in the seat vacated by Lloyd Bentsen when he became U.S. Treasury secretary.

Krueger said Tuesday that recent newspaper reports have called into question the performance of Mrs. Hutchison as state treasurer since 1991.

"In the last eight days, respected journalists have raised serious questions on whether or not Mrs. Hutchison violated the Texas Open Records Act, offered a state job for an endorsement, which, if committed, is a felony and covered up the results of her own lie detector test," Krueger said.

"After reading in the last eight days (of) published reports by respected journalists in newspapers across Texas, I believe that Kay Bailey Hutchison is unfit to be our United States senator," he said.

Dave Beckwith, a spokesman for Mrs. Hutchison, called Krueger's barbs outrageous.

"These scurrilous and slimy charges are typical of what Krueger hurls in the closing stages of a losing campaign," Beckwith said.

At an appearance in Lubbock, Mrs. Hutchison attacked Krueger for making last-minute personal attacks as he made in previous losing bids for the Senate.

Robert Duane Edmonds, a senior at Big Spring High School, was recently selected by Principal R. Kent Bowerman to compete in the Academic Excellence Award program conducted by the Texas Association of Secondary School Principals (TASSP).

This is the fifth year TASSP has conducted the program to recognize high school seniors for their outstanding academic achievements. Over 200 students in the state of Texas participated, and Duane was designated as a Commended Scholar.

Selection criteria included scores on the SAT or ACT test, overall academic grade point average, pursuit of advanced diploma, and other evidence of exceptional academic ability. Each student was asked to write a monitored 300-500 word essay to submit with the application.

As a Commended Scholar in the TASSP Academic Excellence Awards program, Duane Edmonds is to be congratulated for his superior scholarship.

Keely Bowerman and Tony Taylor have been awarded the national I DARE YOU LEADERSHIP AWARD in recognition of personal integrity, balanced living and potential for leadership. The honor was presented by Sharon Richardson at ceremonies held at Big Spring High School on Wednesday, May 26, 1993.

The I DARE YOU LEADERSHIP AWARD is made available each year by the American Youth Foundation in cooperation with Principals, Headmasters and 4-H County Agents across the country. The Award was first offered in 1941 by William H. Danforth, founder of the Ralston Purina Company in St. Louis, who dared young people to achieve their highest potential and to influence others through lives of service.

The Award takes its name from the book, I DARE YOU, written by Mr. Danforth, in which he commends the balanced life of mental, physical, social and spiritual development as the backbone of leadership.

In addition to a Certificate of Recognition, Keely and Tony receives a copy of Mr. Danforth's inspirational book, I DARE YOU, and a scholarship opportunity to attend the American Youth Foundation's International Leadership Conference at Minwanica in Michigan or Marrowista in New Hampshire. Over 8,000 schools and 4-H groups participate in the I DARE YOU LEADERSHIP AWARD each year.

Improve your child's chances

Experts say reading gets young people off to good start in life

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Living today

For young readers

Registration continues through July 10 for the Howard County Library's Summer Reading Program.

The theme is "Lions and Tigers and Books... Oh My!"

A child completing 10 books earns a certificate and is eligible to attend a closing party. The program is open to children who have completed first grade.

Activity Day is Thursday from 10-11 a.m. with speakers, arts and crafts and movies.

For younger children, the library is sponsoring the "Animal Cub Club" or Read-to-Me Club with registration through July 10.

Parents may register children to complete the six-week program by reading 10 books independently or read to them by an adult. Storytime will be conducted from 10-10:45 a.m. and will feature stories, movies and activities.

uses the imagination in a different way," Jackson said. "They can visualize in a creative way, instead of someone giving you the setting (in a movie or television show)."

"This inspires a person to think creatively."

Inspiring creativity is one characteristic of regular reading, while the most important may be the ability to maintain day-to-day productivity as an adult.

County Judge Ben Lockhart said most people who come before him in criminal court have a lower level of reading ability, which could have been enhanced by regular reading.

"A big percentage have low reading comprehension," he said. "I think not being able to communicate - read and write - makes them not able to sustain an adequate living, and that has a lot to do with them turning to crime."

"If (youth) can get interested in (reading throughout the year), they can improve learning and improve their chances in life," Lockhart added. "Summer reading is one good step in the right direction."

Parents can encourage year-round reading skills with these tips:

- Recite or sing rhymes from your favorite books.
- Turn off distractions like the television or stereo.
- Have your child select books to read.
- Be an example by letting your child see you read books.
- Keep a wide selection of reading materials at home.

READ

Local kids have for years enjoyed examining the choices at the Howard County Library. Experts say raising a child to enjoy reading is a good idea.

NEW YORK — "Megabites" is a new national food newsletter with information on the hottest restaurants and chefs.

Regular features include Biofeedback, a short biography of a different chef each month; Baby Bites, a list of restaurant openings; and Best Bites, some of the foods not to be missed in a particular city, and where to find them.

Each issue also includes a recipe from one of the chefs featured in the newsletter. The publisher is food writer Jessie Tirsch of New Orleans, co-author of the cookbook, "Emeril's New Orleans Cooking" (William Morrow).

A subscription costs $30 per year for 12 issues. Send a check to Megabites, Box 13583, New Orleans, La. 70185-3583.

Light butter

NEW YORK — Land O' Lakes has introduced Light Butter, with 40 percent butterfat, compared with 80 percent vegetable fat in margarine. The product is called "light" because it has half the fat, calories and cholesterol, and 25 percent less sodium than regular butter.

Regular butter has 100 calories and 11 grams of fat per tablespoon, deriving 99 percent of its calories from fat. Land O' Lakes Light Butter has only 5.5 grams of fat per tablespoon.

The product can be used as a table spread for rolls, muffins, biscuits, bread, pancakes and waffles, but because it is lower in fat and has a higher moisture content than regular butter, it is not recommended for baking or frying.

Wine book winner

NEW YORK — "The Vintner's Art" by Hugh Johnson and James Halliday has won the annual Cicerone Wine Book of the Year competition. The book, published by Simon & Schuster, was selected by an independent panel of magazine and newspaper wine writers.

Bugs snacks

PARSIPPANY, N.J. — Nabisco Biscuit Co. has introduced Bugs Bunny Graham Snacks in cinnamon and chocolate flavors.

The cookies are baked in the shape of Bugs Bunny and 11 of his Looney Tunes friends including Porky Pig.

June is "bustin' out all over." June gets its name from the Roman goddess, Juno, patroness of marriage and special guardian of women and childbirth. The early Romans loved roses and their banquet couches were covered with delicate rose petals - hence the expression, "bed of roses."

June's flower is the rose and its gem is pearl. Fathers will be honored on the 20th day of this month. Father's Day was first celebrated on June 19, 1910 in Spokane, Wash., under the sponsorship of the local YMCA and Ministerial Association with the idea for a special day coming from a loving wife, Mrs. John Bruce Dodd.

Flag day and the first day of summer occur in June, as do many weddings. With warmer weather, backyard cookouts and family gatherings are plentiful and add an extra dimension in gracious living. Meals get lighter as fresh vegetables come into season.

To name a few interesting events that have occurred in the month of June: Jefferson Davis was born in 1808; Elizabeth II was crowned Queen at Westminster Abbey in 1953; Benjamin Franklin launched his kite in 1752; the first vacuum cleaner, a "sweeping machine," was patented in 1869; Suzanne B. Anthony was fined $100 for trying to vote in Rochester, N.Y. in 1873; "Lady Liberty" arrived from France in 1885; Custer's Last Stand occurred in 1876; and Helen Keller was born in 1880.

If you would like to dress up your typical corn-on-the-cob, try these special "butters" and taste what an entirely different flavor you can achieve. Both butters are also good when used on baked, broiled or grilled fish.

1808; Elizabeth II was crowned Queen at Westminster Abbey in 1953; Benjamin Franklin launched his kite in 1752; the first vacuum cleaner, a "sweeping machine," was patented in 1869; Suzanne B. Anthony was fined $100 for trying to vote in Rochester, N.Y. in 1873; "Lady Liberty" arrived from France in 1885; Custer's Last Stand occurred in 1876; and Helen Keller was born in 1880.

CORN-ON-THE-COB

LIME-CILANTRO BUTTER

1/2 cup butter (or Liquid Butter Buds for Low-Fat)
1/4 cup fresh cilantro, minced
Juice of 1 lime
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. black pepper
Melt butter (or mix 1 packet Butter Buds in 1/2 cup hot water) and add remaining ingredients. Mix well.

SPICED HOT BUTTER

1/2 cup butter (or Liquid Butter Buds for low fat)
1 tsp. chili powder
1 tsp. curry powder
1 tsp. ground oregano
1/2 tsp. ground dill seed
Melt butter (or mix 1 packet Butter Buds in 1/2 cup hot water) and add remaining ingredients. Mix well.

MICROWAVE METHOD

Husk and remove silks from 8 ears of fresh corn. Place each ear on wax paper and brush liberally with butter of choice. Roll corn in waxed paper and twist ends. Place no more than 4 ears in microwave at a time. Since microwave power varies, time adjustments may be necessary.

Cooking time: 1 ear, 4-1/2 minutes; 2 ears, 7 minutes; 3 ears, 10 minutes; and 4 ears, 12 minutes.

Turn and reposition corn halfway through cooking time. Allow at least 2 minutes standing time before serving. Unwrap and brush with more butter mixture.

ROASTED ON GRILL METHOD

Prepare 8 ears of fresh corn by removing the large outer husks; turn back inner husks and remove silk. Spread corn with butter mixture. Pull husks back over ears. Roast on grill 3 inches from hot coals 20 to 30 minutes, turning frequently. Serve brushed with more butter mixture.

Truly southern

Chef remembers food's distinctive style

By The Associated Press

Edna Lewis knows that there aren't many people around who remember how things used to taste in the days before technologically grown food and fast food chains.

Lewis, 77, one of America's foremost chefs and cookbook authors, currently is working on a book on the role of blacks in Southern cooking, and she told Claire Whitcomb in an article in the current issue of Victoria, "Many of the cooks at the White House, in hotels and private homes were black. Blacks were the great creators of Southern cooking."

She mourned the state of that cuisine today, saying, "Southern cooking is in a dreadful state," and adding, "I came along at a time when they didn't have all the chemicals and hybrid seeds."

Lewis is determined that memories of pies baked with home-rendered lard and spring chickens reared in the yard do not fade. She and several distinguished figures in the food world — cookbook author Marie Rudisill (Truman Capote's aunt), John Edgerton, anthropologist Daryl White and Lewis' protégé, chef Scott Peacock — have been hosting workshops on Southern cooking.

Her memories include the suppers of her childhood at the Bethel Baptist Church yard in Unionville, Va. She recalled in her book, "The Taste of Country Cooking":

"My mother would spread out a white linen tablecloth before setting out the baked ham, the half-dozen or more chickens she had fried, a large baking pan of her light, delicate corn pudding, a casserole of sweet potatoes, fresh green beans flavored with crisp bits of pork and biscuits that had been baked at the last minute and were still warm. The dozen or so apple and sweet potato pies she had made were stacked in tiers of three and the caramel and jelly layer cakes placed next to them."

She added:

"All along the 60-foot length of tables, neighbors were busy in the same way setting out their own specialties. There were roasts and casseroles, lemon meringue, custard and Tyler pies, chocolate and coconut layer, lemon cream and pound cakes."

Lewis recalled spring in Virginia, writing:

"Spring would bring our first and just about only fish — shad. It would always be served for breakfast, soaked in salt water for an hour or so, rolled in seasoned cornmeal and fried carefully in home-rendered lard with a slice of smoked shoulder for added flavor."

"A few of the vegetables we planted are seldom seen today," Lewis recalled, "such as cymplings, almost flat, rounded, white squash with scalloped edges that matured early and was usually served fried; butter beans; a leafy green known as rape; black-eyed peas served pureed; parsnips, salsify, and root celery. The common herbs were sage, purple basil, chervil, horseradish root and wild thyme."

Musician sets concert Saturday

Herald Staff Report

Tejano music smash and Grammy winners Little Joe & La Familia will perform in Big Spring Saturday.

The band, one of the most popular Tex-Mex group in the music industry, is also known as a pioneer in the style. In addition to concerts all over the country, the group has performed three times at the Smithsonian Institute and received an award.

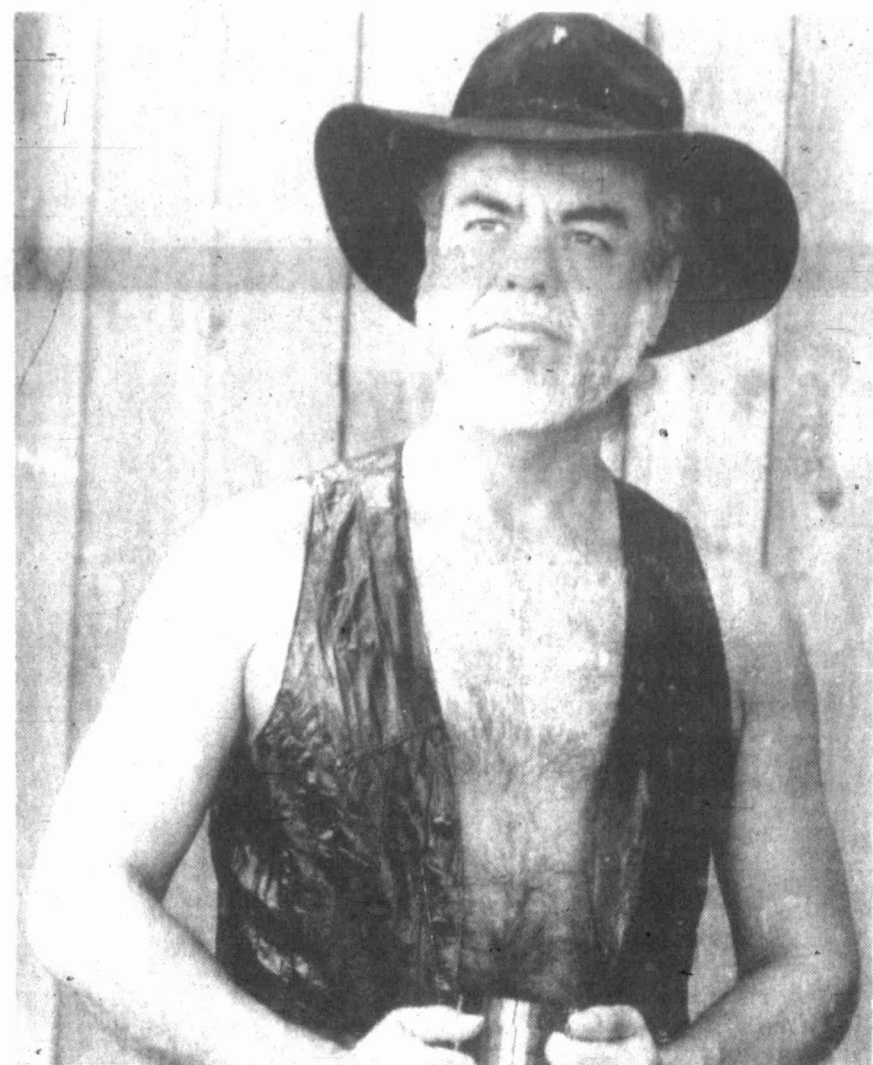

Little Joe recently recorded "Que Paso," his first for his own Tejano Discos label. His album "Diez y Seis de Septiembre" won the Grammy for Best Mexican American Album in 1991.

He has recorded two songs with Willie Nelson and completed more than 40 albums. He has made many live appearances and performed for charitable organizations.

Born in 1940 in Temple, Little Joe Hernandez grew up there and in Lubbock, where his parents worked picking cotton. In 1956 he started his first band with a cousin, David Coronado.

During the early years he was known as an activist for Chicano rights. He recently quit recording for Sony to start his own label.

Saturday's concert begins at 8 p.m. at the Howard County Fairbarns.

Tejano group Little Joe & La Familia plan a concert in Big Spring Saturday at the Howard County Fairbarns. Advance tickets are available at Marquez TV, KBYG and Basin Furniture Depot.

Advance tickets are $10, those at the door are $12 each. For tickets, go to KBYG, Marquez TV or Basin Furniture Depot.

The concert is sponsored by La Favorita radio program.

Ah, silence: Joy of talk-free films

By PAUL CLARK
Scripps Howard News Service

The talkies are old enough for Medicare, but they'll never retire.

Half-a-year has already passed since their 65th birthday. It was in October, 1927, that "The Jazz Singer" premiered at New York's Warner Theater, and audiences heard Al Jolson utter the prophetic ad-lib, "Wait a minute, wait a minute, you ain't heard nothin' yet!"

"The Jazz Singer" was not the first to feature sound. Forty years earlier, Thomas Edison had first tried to synchronize his phonograph with a moving picture.

In 1926, a year before "The Jazz Singer" opened, the John Barrymore picture "Don Juan" was accompanied by a musical score and some sound effects on the Vitaphone disk system.

"The Jazz Singer" also was a mostly silent picture with synchronized music. Yet its few lines of synchronized dialogue enthralled audiences and ignited a revolution in film.

Many filmmakers were reluctant to embrace talkies. They argued that sound would destroy the dream-like aura of the movies, and, not parenthetically, would cost fortunes for new equipment.

Films would be unable to cross national boundaries, they feared, since the silents permitted replacement of title cards.

Shhhh... What they shouldn't have said

Scripps Howard News Service

Some silent-era prophets who should have held their tongues about the future of talkies:

"The talking motion picture will not supplant the regular silent motion picture." — Thomas Alva Edison

"The nicest thing about film so far was that it kept its mouth shut." — George Bernard Shaw

"I'll give talkies three years, that's all." — Charlie Chaplin

"Adding sound to movies would be like putting lipstick on the Venus de Milo." — Mary Pickford

"I have no fear that scraping, screeching, rasping sound film will ever disturb our peaceful motion-picture theaters." — Louella Parsons

Herewith, some arguments for a return of the silents:

SHUT UP, ALREADY:

Neil Diamond's remake of "The Jazz Singer."

Clint Eastwood singing in "Paint Your Wagon."

Lee Marvin singing in "Paint Your Wagon."

The "Saturday Night Fever" sound track.

Vocal characterizations of the "Peanuts" characters.

"Lambada, the Forbidden Dance."

Matthew Broderick's wandering accent in "Glory."

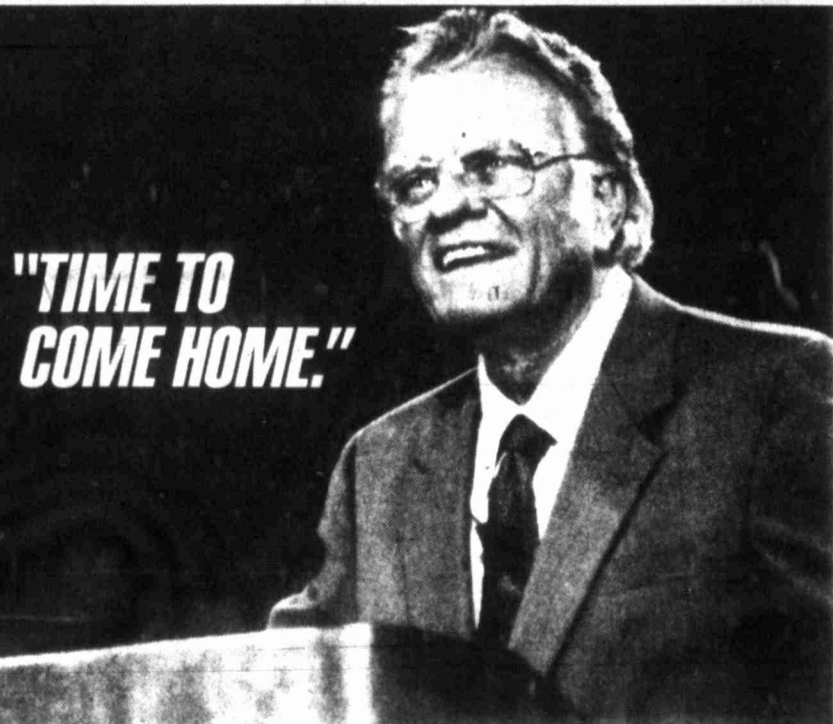

Al Pacino's vocal impression of Mae West in "Bobby Deerfield."

Cast members of "Made in America" from left, Whoopi Goldberg, Will Smith and Ted Danson pose for photographers Thursday as they arrive for the premiere of the movie in Los Angeles.

What's up for 'Late Night'?

By MIKE DREW
The Milwaukee Journal

Question: Where did NBC find Conan O'Brien? You know, the tall unknown who replaces David Letterman as "Late Night" host this summer.

Perhaps by calling Central Casting and asking for a younger Letterman: a lanky, attractive post-collegian with Dave's sense of irony. With grooming and time, maybe this guy could build an even more demographically desirable audience of "Late Night" fans. Maybe.

But will O'Brien get enough time to prove himself? For that matter, with Letterman bailing out for CBS June 25, do O'Brien and producer Lorne Michaels have enough time to prepare a strong replacement hour? Garry Shandling thought not, one reason he turned down the job O'Brien got. (NBC can vamp with Letterman reruns until Michaels deems Conan ready.)

From many standpoints, O'Brien's assignment to "Late Night" seems a high-risk gamble. The guy has logged virtually no on-air time and has done relatively little performing. He's a clever writer, by all accounts, but those skills don't necessarily convert to big ratings as a talk host.

Jay Leno and Letterman, the two masters at this genre, both had lots of experience before they got their present jobs, doing standup and talk shows.

Ryan's year not what fans had hoped for

It may be fair to say that Nolan Ryan's farewell tour isn't going exactly the way he planned.

Ryan, who has a reserved spot in the Baseball Hall of Fame, announced earlier this year that this season, his 27th, would be the Texas Ranger pitcher's last in the major leagues.

As soon as he made the announcement, fans began having visions of Nolan winning 20 games, striking out several hundred helplessness batters and being carried off the field in triumph after winning the final game of the World Series for the Rangers.

So much for visions. This season has been one little catastrophe after another for Ryan. After winning his first game, he injured his left knee in practice. The injury required arthroscopic surgery and put the legend on the sideline for a few weeks.

Things didn't get any better for him when he came off the disabled list. He injured a hip muscle in his first start back, and it was back on the DL for Nolan.

Now has come the (pardon the pun) unkindest cut of all.

While spending the Memorial Day holiday at the Ryan family ranch in South Texas, Ryan stepped on a water ski and gashed his left foot, an injury that required seven stitches.

Needless to say, Ryan will be on the disabled list for a few more weeks.

It wasn't supposed to be this way, folks. People like Ryan, who have given so much to the game of baseball, deserve better than to have the swan song continually interrupted by injuries.

Nolan has defied the onslaught of age for so long, seemed invincible for so many years, that this current menagerie of aches and pains seems downright cruel.

Ryan always said he didn't want baseball fans making a big to-do about his final swing through the big leagues, but this is ridiculous. The man has spent more time in the trainer's room than on the mound, for Pete's sake.

It's depressing is what it is.

Of course, Ryan is no stranger to the disabled list, having made several trips there the past few years. It was that, plus a desire to spend more time with his family, that convinced him to hang up the spikes after the 1993 season.

Well, he's been getting plenty of quality time with his family this year, that's for sure.

The problem with Ryan's physical woes is that a year when he should be the subject of praise and glowing retrospectives has turned instead into a running joke.

Maybe I'm just being paranoid, however. No matter how this year turns out for Ryan, nothing will take away from his many accomplishments. Three hundred-plus wins, more than 5,000 strikeouts, seven no-hitters... Even if the man never throws again, his fame is assured.

Of course, there are a few million folks hoping to see him pitch a few more times before he calls it quits.

Speaking of baseball, the annual City Little League Tournament kicks off Monday. Twenty teams will take part in the two-week, double-elimination event.

For the past few years the tournament has been dominated by the International Little League. For the past three years, the top two finishers in the tournament have come from the IL.

But Randy Gee, coach of the 1992 champion Indians, said that things may be changing.

"It's wide open this year," he said. "The International League is rebuilding big-time... We're playing a lot of 10 and 11-year-olds and not a lot of 12-year-olds."

The tourney begins with two games Monday — all involving third place teams. Tuesday, the rest of the teams get into the action. Pairings will be released later this week.

Pre-tournament favorites include the National League Rangers, the American League Stars and the International League Rebels, along with the Oilers, the first-place team from Coahoma's Little League.

Suns top Sonics

By The Associated Press

PHOENIX — Who had the better game Tuesday night? Charles Barkley or Dan Majerle?

Comparing masterpieces is tricky business, so the Phoenix Suns will leave such debate to others. What's important to them is this: Their 120-114 triumph over the Seattle SuperSonics in Game 5 left them one win from the NBA finals.

Barkley was exquisite, playing the best playoff game of his career like the MVP he is. His night's work produced 43 points, 15 rebounds and 10 assists.

Majerle took to the air and was equally magnificent, setting an NBA playoff record with eight 3-pointers and finishing with 34 points. Majerle, like Barkley, played the almost entire way.

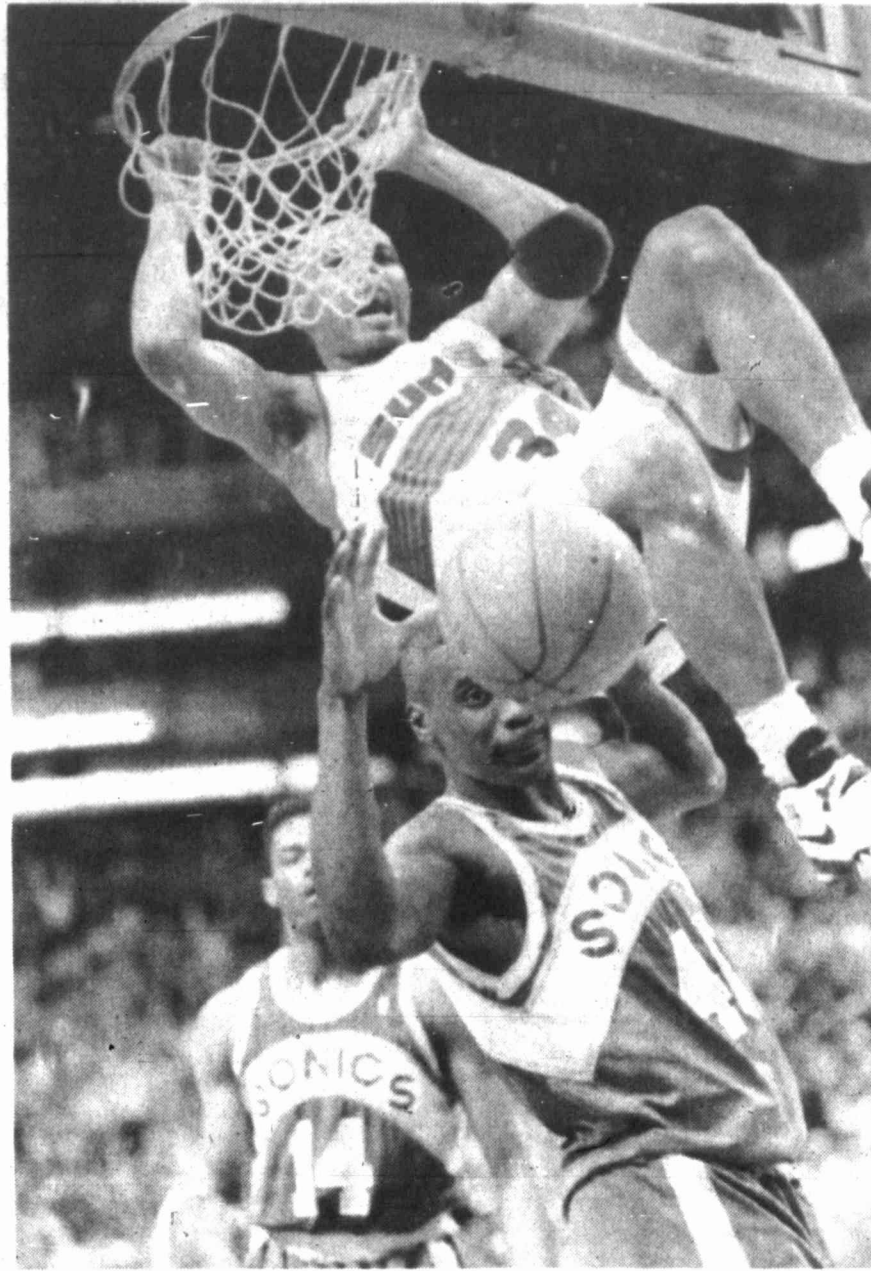

"You can rest when you die," said Barkley, who asked coach Paul Westphal to leave him in. "I told him, 'Don't take me out tonight,' because this is a big game."

Majerle's final 3-pointer with 21 seconds left deflated Seattle's last hope. Now the Sonics must try to stay alive at home Thursday night in Game 6 of the best-of-7 series.

"Tonight, it seemed like I was open," Majerle said.

It is one thing to be open; it is another to hit the shots. And that he did, sinking 8 of 10 from 3-point range. He was 12 of 17 from the floor and broke the record of seven 3-pointers set by Indiana's Chuck Person against Boston on April 28, 1991.

"You don't like getting beat by a guy making '3s,' but he was making them, and he was in a zone," said Seattle coach George Karl, who called the Barkley-Majerle double whammy "fantastic."

"But I thought we were great, too," he said. "We played a great basketball game."

Seattle's Shawn Kemp had 20 of his 33 points in the fourth quarter, and his 15-footer with 34.5 seconds left pulled the Sonics within 111-110. On the next trip up the floor, Majerle sank his climactic 3-pointer, and the Suns were up 114-110.

"He broke our back every time we were able to climb the mountain," Kemp said. "We thought we had a chance to win late in the ballgame, and then he hit the big 3."

Ricky Pierce had 27 points for the Sonics, and Gary Payton added 20. Kevin Johnson had 10 assists for the Suns.

Ex-Canadien gives Kings 1-0 lead in Stanley Cup final

By The Associated Press

MONTREAL — Luc Robitaille, Montreal-born and raised, has put his once-beloved Canadiens in an early hole in the Stanley Cup finals.

Robitaille, who used to tiptoe out of his room after bedtime to sneak a peek at televised Canadiens games, became one of the first heroes of this year's finals by scoring twice to lead the Los Angeles Kings to a 4-1 victory Tuesday night in their first-ever final-round game.

"I was big Canadiens fan. I grew up watching Steve Shutt, Yvan Cournoyer, Guy Lafleur, Jacques Lemaire," Robitaille said. "This morning, I saw Henri Richard and Steve Shutt and I said to myself, 'I don't know what I'm going to do tonight but I'll work hard because I would never want these guys to say 'This guy can't play.'"

"It's fun knowing there's a lot of history, a lot of legends. It certainly was a lot of fun to come in here and win."

Just as the old Canadiens relied on dozens of excellent players to set hockey's highest standards, the Kings didn't rely on Robitaille alone.

Kelly Hrudey made 31 saves, getting beat only when teammate Wayne Gretzky inadvertently steered a Montreal pass into the goal. Gretzky made up for the miscue by assisting on three goals and scoring into an empty net, becoming the top scorer in this year's playoffs with 37 points.

"Gretzky toyed with us. He did what he wanted," said coach Jacques Demers, whose Canadiens lost for the first time in nine home playoff games. "We made more mistakes in that game than in the four games prior to that."

Montreal, playing in its 34th title series and seeking its 24th Stanley Cup, is home for Game 2 Thursday night before the best-of-7 series shifts to Los Angeles for Games 3 and 4.

In their first 25 seasons, the Kings had never advanced beyond the second round of the playoffs. But after finishing with the league's 11th-best record this year, they upset Calgary, Vancouver and Toronto before stunning Montreal in Game 1.

Robitaille, whose 63 regular-season goals were the most ever by an NHL left wing, had scored just once in the Kings' previous eight playoff games.

Against his hometown team, however, he scored two power-play goals — the second at 17:41 of the second period to make it 2-1. Gretzky passed to Rob Blake, who fed Robitaille at the side of the net. Robitaille's quick shot somehow squeezed between goalie Patrick Roy and the post.

"We thought Luc coming here to Montreal would play well," Demers said. "We expected him to get those chances. We knew he had been struggling and if there's a place he could come in and play some good hockey it was his hometown."

Jari Kurri, whose 102 career playoff goals rank second on the all-time list behind Gretzky's 109, scored at 1:51 of the third for a 3-1 lead and Hrudey couldn't be beaten the rest of the way. Gretzky's empty-netter came with 1:58 left.

Robitaille scored his first goal 3:03 into the game. Alexei Zhitnik's shot from the point was deflected by two Kings, including Robitaille, and Roy made one of his 34 saves. But Robitaille chased the puck behind the net and flipped it out front, banking it off Roy's skate and into the net.

Hang gliders return for conditions, hospitality

4th annual event Thursday in Big Spring

By MIKE BUTTS
Sports Editor

Suitable weather conditions have brought hang gliders from all over the country to Big Spring for an annual meet since 1990. The meet comes to Big Spring for a fourth time Thursday through Sunday, and assistant meet director Mark Dodge said the city's friendliness is one reason the event returns.

"It's a wonderful place to fly, everybody's so friendly and helpful," Dodge said.

For the second year the meet — tabbed the Big Spring Cross Country Championship and Fun Fly-In — will serve as official Region 11 competition. It's sponsored by the North Texas Hang Gliding Association and conducted at the McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark.

Dodge said over 40 rooms at the Motel 6 have been booked by hang gliding pilots for the meet.

"We're expecting a pretty big turnout," he said. "We may have 40, 50, 60 people there just from out of town."

The meet's regional competition consists of cross-country or distance flying and "race to goal" or "out and back" contests. Pilots with a United States Hang Gliding Association rating of III or IV (the highest ratings) compete in the region part of the meet.

The cross country flights average 50 miles. Pilots' two-flight totals from Thursday and Friday determine winners. The race to goal or out and back competitions are Saturday.

The Fun-Fly formats will be spot landing, most improved and most unusual flight.

Big Spring's unstable air and strong ground winds, along with the airpark's ample runway space, make the area ideal for tow-launch hang gliding.

"It's great for flying," Dodge said. "The thermals (rising air currents) are gigantic and the winds are

Gustafson: Aggies CWS team to beat

By The Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Texas coach Cliff Gustafson knows the opposition. The NCAA Division I Baseball Committee agrees.

Arizona State is ranked No. 1 this week by both Collegiate Baseball and Baseball America. But Gustafson said second-ranked Texas A&M is the team to beat at the 1993 College World Series when it opens Friday at Omaha's Rosenblatt Stadium.

The committee agreed Tuesday night in its hour-long conference call, naming A&M to top seed and Arizona State the No. 2 seed.

"If I were to pick a front-runner for the championship, I would pick the Aggies because they have good pitching and deep pitching," said the Longhorn coach, who brings Texas to the CWS for a record 27th time, 17 under Gustafson.

A&M (52-9) will meet eighth-seeded and first-time qualifier Kansas (45-16) at 4:06 p.m. EDT to open the CWS Friday. Fourth-seeded Long Beach State (43-17) faces No. 5 LSU (49-16-1) at 7:36 p.m.

Saturday's Bracket Two pairings match Arizona State (46-18) and No. 7 Wichita State (55-16) at 1:06 p.m., and No. 3 Texas (50-14) with No. 6 Oklahoma State (43-15) at 7:36 p.m.

Both national polls agreed not only on ASU as No. 1, but No. 2 A&M, No.

3 LSU and No. 5 Long Beach State. Texas was ranked fourth by Baseball America and sixth by Collegiate Baseball, while Wichita State was No. 4 in the Collegiate Baseball poll and No. 7 in the Baseball America

Stallings named high school trackster of year

AMARILLO - The accolades keep coming for Stanton half-miler Jeremy Stallings.

Stallings, who recently concluded a sterling high school career by winning his third straight state gold medal in the 800 meters, was named the Texas High School Outstanding Track Athlete for this year by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce.

Past winners of the award include Olympic gold medal shot putter Randy Matson and Olympic sprinter and University of Texas football star Johnny "Lam" Jones.

At the recent state track meet in Austin, Stallings won the 800 meter race in a time of 1:49.2, which tied a 27-year-old state record. He also won a silver medal in the 1,600 meter race.

Stallings will attend the University of Florida on a track scholarship. This summer, he plans to compete in national track meets in Los Angeles, Chicago and Spokane, Wash.

Bass Club's two-day tourney this month

The Big Spring Bass Club will hold its annual two-day tournament June 19-20 at Lake Sweetwater. Fishing times will be 6 a.m.-3 p.m. the 19th and 6 a.m.-noon the 20th.

For more information, contact tournament director Carl Barnes at 293-2066.

Big Striper tourney at Lake Spence

Lake E.A. Spence will be the site for the Big Striper tournament June 19-20.

Entry fee for the tournament is $25 and must be postmarked by June 18. A $5 late registration fee. Entries will be accepted up to starting time.

Cash prizes will be awarded for first through fifth place in the big fish contest, and the top two stringers.

A rules seminar will be held the day before the tournament at 7 p.m. at Wildcat Recreation Area.

Former pros host hoop clinic

Former professional basketball players will share their knowledge of the game local hoops fanatics at the Pro Star Clinic, scheduled for June 18-20 in Big Spring.

Lance Blanks, former all-Southwest Conference performer for the University of Texas and a first-round choice of the Detroit Pistons, will be at the clinic, along with current international players Jerald Wrightsil and Joey Wright.

Clinic organizer Roy Green also said a special surprise guest will make an appearance.

The camp includes fitness examinations, autograph sessions and lessons on fundamentals, shooting, nutritional advice, defense and one-on-one techniques.

For more information, contact Green at 263-5655 or 264-5098.

Little League accepts board nominations

Nominations are being accepted for the 1994 American Little League board of directors. A 10-member board will be elected, with seven of the 10 serving as officers of the league.

The election will be held from June 7-13. Call Robby Wegner at 267-1440 for more information.

Best of the Rest June 11-13

The Best of the Rest Part XI golf tournament, sponsored by radio station KBBT, will be held June 11-13 at Comanche Trail Golf Course.

Prizes will be awarded for the top five finishers in six flights. Also, a new car or truck will be awarded anyone who has a hole-in-one on the course's fourth hole.

Activities begin June 11 with a practice round and cocktail party for contestants. The first round of the two-person scramble takes place June 12, with the final round and presentation of awards the following day.

Registration fee is $150 per team. For more information, contact Al Patterson at 264-2366.

Spain's Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario reacts after winning a point during her quarterfinal match against Czech Jana Novotna at the French Open in Paris Tuesday. Sanchez-Vicario won in straight sets.

No. 1 seed Sampras downed by Bruguera

By The Associated Press

PARIS — Sergi Bruguera capitalized on Pete Sampras' errors and serving troubles to oust the No. 1 seed from the French Open in their quarterfinal match today.

For Bruguera, the No. 10 seed from Spain, the 6-3, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 victory was a moment of glory — his best-ever showing in a Grand Slam tournament. For Sampras, it was another frustration in his attempt to prove he can be a champion on clay.

Sampras made 60 unforced errors, compared to only 24 for Bruguera, and was able to connect on only 49 percent of his booming first serves.

Despite Sampras' higher seeding, the outcome was not a total surprise; Bruguera beat him in straight sets two weeks ago in their only other meeting.

Bruguera moved into the semifinals to play the winner of today's match between third-seeded Stefan

Edberg and No. 11 seed Andrei Medvedev of Ukraine.

The favorites remain No. 2 seed Jim Courier for the men and top-seeded Steffi Graf for the women. Both qualified for the semifinals on Tuesday without offering any new glimmers of hope for their rivals.

Graf, the top seed, put on a display of shotmaking in her quarterfinal that dazzled Jennifer Capriati.

"She just played too good," the sixth-seeded American said after Graf beat her 6-3, 7-5.

Courier advanced less gracefully over unseeded Goran Prpic, but the anger he vented afterwards at tournament officials may bode ill for his future opponents.

The two-time defending champion was irked at having to play his quarterfinal one day after his fourth-round match. His request for a change was rejected.

"I did not want to play today. I didn't need to play today. It's as simple as that," Courier said.

Harper's HR fells Rangers in eighth

By The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Brian Harper hasn't forgotten the fine art of pinch hitting.

Harper's pinch-hit three-run homer in the eighth inning rallied the Minnesota Twins over the Texas Rangers 7-5 on Tuesday night.

"Pinch-hitting is a tough job, and I feel for the guys that have to do it all the time," said Harper, who often pinch hit for Pittsburgh.

Kirby Puckett also drove in three runs for the Twins, who rallied from deficits of 4-0 and 5-1.

Harper hit the second pinch from reliever Brian Bohanon (2-1) over the left-field fence for his fourth homer of the season, making a winner of reliever Pat Mahomes (1-4). For the second time since Saturday, Texas rookie manager Kevin Kennedy was very upset.

His ire this time was directed at the 1-0 fastball Bohanon threw to Harper with runners on second and third with one out.

"You don't come into a guy's strength with the game on the line," Kennedy said. "That's Little League stuff. We've had too many meetings about keeping big guys in the park when the game is on the line."

When Kennedy brought in Bohanon, a lefty, Kelly called on Harper.

"It was an ideal situation to hit in, with two runners in scoring position," Harper said. "I was just trying to drive something up the middle to drive the runs in."

Montreal downs Astros

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — It was Frank Bolick's turn Tuesday night.

Robbed of a hit on the final play the previous night, Bolick singled in the go-ahead run in the ninth inning Tuesday night, leading the Montreal Expos to a 2-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

Ken Caminiti's over-the-head diving catch on Bolick's soft fly ball behind third base ended Monday's game and gave the Astros a 2-1 victory.

Briefs Ryan says injury worst of year

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Nolan Ryan is sidelined again with his third injury of the year and he's calling this one the most severe yet.

"It couldn't be in a worse spot," Ryan said. "I can't walk on it. It's where I land on my foot and put a lot of pressure on it."

Ryan's farewell 27th season has become known more for injuries than innings. He's made only three starts and could be out until July after cutting the bottom of his left foot on a water ski Monday.

Cowboys drop safety Horton

IRVING (AP) — Loaded at the safety position, the world champion Dallas Cowboys have sent Ray Horton shopping for another team.

Dallas opened a five-day quarterback school Tuesday at Valley Ranch without Horton, the 10-year NFL veteran unsigned for 1993.

Coach Jimmy Johnson has approved Horton's decision to have local agent Scott Casterline shop him around.

...HMM, LET'S SEE...3, THAT'S HOW MANY EGGS I HAD IN MY OMELET... 49 IS MOM'S AGE, ALTHOUGH SHE SAYS 39...SCRUFFY IS 4, WHICH IS 28 IN DOG YEARS...OUR ANNIVERSARY IS THE 6TH—OR IS IT THE 9TH?—BETTER SKIP THAT ONE...I HAVE 8 FINGERS, NOT COUNTING MY THUMBS...

NOW THERE ARE TWO WAYS TO PLAY LOTTO TEXAS.

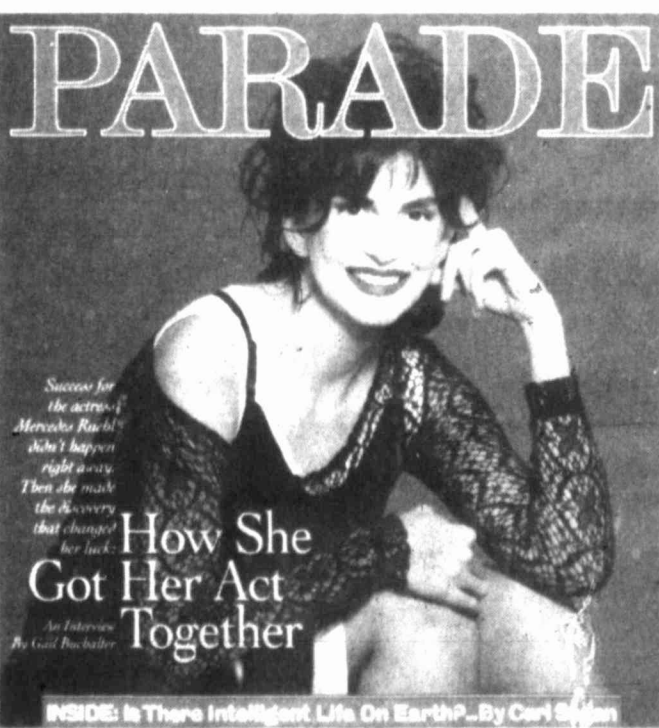

QUICK PICK, PLEASE.

Coming up with six numbers has always been part of the fun and challenge of playing LOTTO Texas. But now you can also let the computer pick your numbers with the fast and easy Quick Pick option. Simply ask the clerk for Quick Pick, or mark the box on your LOTTO Texas play slip.

PUBLIC NOTICE

RAILROAD COMMISSION OF TEXAS OIL AND GAS DIVISION

DISTRICT 08 DATE OF ISSUANCE: April 28, 1993

RULE 37 CASE NO. 0201867

NOTICE OF APPLICATION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT the Applicant, Rangeland Exploration Company, P.O. Box 232, Midland, TX. 79702, has made application for a spacing exception permit under the provision of Railroad Commission Statewide Rule 37 (16 Tex. Admin. Code Section 3.37). Applicant seeks exception to the lease line distance requirement to: drill, Well No. 3, Aco-Books "B" Lease, 320 Acres, Section 8, Block 34, T4S, T&P RR Co. Survey, Garden City, W. (Wolfcamp 7880) Field, Glasscock County, being 4 miles in a west direction from Garden City, Texas.

The location of this well is as follows: 1843' from the north line and 372' from the west line of lease.

1843' from the north line and 2253' from the east line of survey.

Field Rules for the Garden City W. (Wolfcamp 7880) field are 660/1320, 160 acres.

This well is to be drilled to an approximate depth of 8500 feet.

Pursuant to the terms of Rule 37(h)(2)(A), this application may be granted administratively if no protest to the application is received. An affected person is entitled to protest this application. Affected persons include owners of record and the operator or lessee of record of adjacent tracts and tracts nearest to the proposed well than the minimum lease line spacing distance. If a hearing is called, the applicant has the burden to prove the need for an exception. A protestant should be prepared to establish standing as an affected person, and to appear at the hearing either in person or by qualified representative and protest the application with cross-examination or presentation of a direct case. The rules of evidence are applicable in the hearing. If you have questions regarding this application, please contact the Applicant's representative, Terry W. Michael, President, at (915) 695-8983. If you have any questions regarding the hearing procedure, please contact the Commission at (512) 463-6718.

RULE 37 CASE NO. 0201867

IF YOU WISH TO REQUEST A HEARING ON THIS APPLICATION, YOU MUST FILL OUT, SIGN AND MAIL OR DELIVER TO THE AUSTIN OFFICE OF THE RAILROAD COMMISSION OF TEXAS THE ENCLOSED NOTICE OF INTENT TO APPEAR IN PROTEST. A COPY OF THE INTENT TO APPEAR IN PROTEST MUST ALSO BE MAILED OR DELIVERED ON THE SAME DATE TO APPLICANT AT THE ADDRESS SHOWN ABOVE. THIS INTENT TO APPEAR IN PROTEST MUST BE RECEIVED IN THE RAILROAD COMMISSION'S AUSTIN OFFICE BY JUNE 9, 1993. IF NO PROTEST IS RECEIVED WITHIN SUCH TIME, THE REQUESTED PERMIT WILL BE GRANTED ADMINISTRATIVELY. NOTICE REQUIRES PUBLICATION.
