Violence seems to characterize truckers' strike

By The Associated Press

Related story, Page 2A

Violence spread today in a strike by independent truckers that has left one Teamsters Union driver dead, 27 people injured, and more than 260 trucks damaged by bullets, rocks and firebombs.

As the shutdown called by the Independent Truckers Association entered its third day, gunfire crackled again in several areas, with four truckers wounded by snipers during the night in Ohio and one driver beaten in Connecticut.

Marvin Hickman, the leader of Ohio's striking owner-operators, blamed the violence on "sickos" and "perverts."

At least 124 trucks have been hit by gunfire and 143 have been damaged by rocks, bricks or other objects in at least 29 states. The vandalism has been the heaviest in Pennsylvania, Michigan and Ohio.

Police in Pennsylvania say there have been more than 147 strike-related incidents, with 36 trucks hit by gunfire, 87 damaged by rocks and two cases of arson.

A 14-year-old girl who suffered a fractured skull when a brick bounced off a truck into the family car was one of eight people injured in the Pennsylvania violence.

In Michigan, 13 trucks have been damaged in about 40 incidents of vandalism sabotage and arson. Police said the violence has been the worst along a stretch of Interstate 75 between Toledo and Detroit.

At least 35 trucks have been damaged by rocks and bricks in Ohio.

A group of about 300 truckers jammed a union hall in Fremont, Ohio, today with many claiming the violence was not the work of strikers.

"If it's drivers, it's less than 10 percent of them," said Luther Whitaker, 43, of Oak Harbor. "What happens is, people get drunked up or smoked up and it makes them feel like a big man to shoot at somebody."

In Connecticut, police in Southington said a trucker who had pulled onto a shoulder of Interstate 84 to rest was treated at a hospital after he was beaten by two men early today.

In Cheshire, Conn., four people were arrested after a volley of shots was fired at a tractor-trailer on Route 7 in Norwalk. There were no injuries, police said, but the truck was heavily damaged.

Oil price cuts could spread worldwide

By The Associated Press

A price cut of $1 a barrel is spreading through the American oil industry, and four OPEC members have threatened to slash their crude by $4 a barrel unless the cartel settles a dispute over production and prices.

The reductions, along with decreased demand for fuel, could mean that gasoline prices at the pump will continue dropping, along with the cost of heating oil, analysts say.

Eight major U.S. refiners reduced the price they pay for domestic crude on Tuesday, to $31 a barrel, and sources said the Soviet Union dropped its price by $2.15 to $2.35 a barrel on a long-term contract with an Italian oil company.

The official Kuwait news agency reported that Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates — all members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — would cut their prices by $4 a barrel "within one week" unless the cartel settles its dispute.

But today senior oil officials in Kuwait said the news agency report was wrong, insisting the gulf producers would not reduce their prices without formal agreement among all OPEC members.

"A warm winter winter has tended to develop an oversupply not only of gasoline, but of heating oil," said industry analyst Dan Lundberg.

"With there being plentiful heating oil and soft prices throughout the whole range of petroleum products, the falling crude prices can only cause a continuation of this decline cycle."

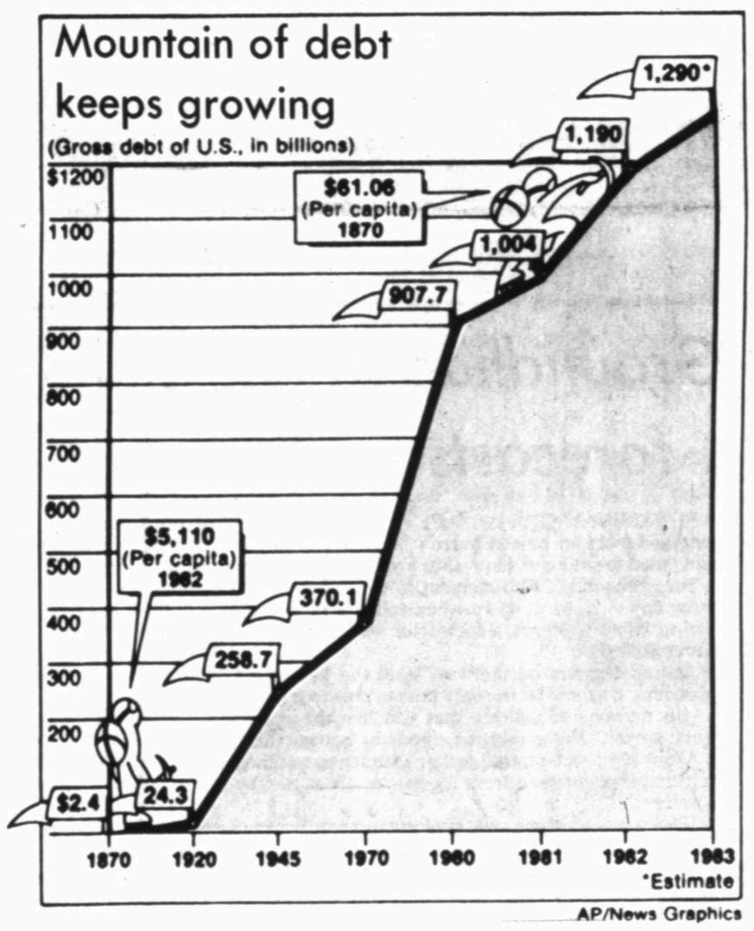
He estimated Tuesday that gas prices would fall 5 to 7 cents a gallon by April 1.

In Oregon, for example, a price war escalated Tuesday when Portland-area service stations began offering regular gasoline for 88.9 cents a gallon. Lundberg said that was the lowest price he knew of anywhere.

The collapse of an emergency OPEC meeting last Monday in Geneva, Switzerland, triggered speculation that Persian Gulf producers have decided they must cut their price to regain lost sales in the glutted world market.

An unconfirmed report by the Iraqi news agency said OPEC would hold another meeting in Vienna, Austria, next week.

The belief has become widespread in the oil industry that Saudi Arabia and its allies on the Arabian Peninsula are striving for an orderly reduction in prices.



Administration may bend on tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan indicated today the Reagan administration might be willing to compromise with Democrats seeking repeal or delay of a 10 percent tax cut scheduled to show up in pay checks this summer.

"If you show us your cards, we will show your ours," Regan said under hostile questioning from Democrats on the House Budget Committee.

The reduction in withholding scheduled for July is the third under President Reagan's broad tax-reduction measure enacted in 1981. Many Democrats have said they will seek to delay or kill it to reduce the $208 billion deficit expected this year.

Regan said the tax cut will reduce revenues by $27 billion, but is needed to encourage both saving and spending by consumers that will sustain the economic recovery now just beginning.

Democrats say the cut is applied unevenly. And they say the reduction in federal deficits that would result from repeal would do more for economic growth because interest rates would come down, encouraging investments in new business.

Testifying two days after the president sent his fiscal 1984 budget plan to Capitol Hill, Regan was asked repeatedly why the administration refuses to budge on the income tax cut, tax indexing due to take effect in 1985 and proposals for a standby tax to take hold in 1986 if the federal deficit continues to shoot upward.

"Why can't you put it (the tax issues) on the table?" Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the budget panel, asked Regan.

"This is day two of the budget and already you want suggestions that we change it," said Regan.

But he added: "This might be possible when we see what you want to compromise to."

The Treasury official urged Democrats to prepare a tax proposal of their own which might be negotiated for a compromise solution.

The administration also opposes any new big jobs bill, but Republican and Democratic leaders are going ahead with plans for a public works bill to lower the nation's 10.8 percent unemployment rate.

"With 14 million people out of work — the highest number in history — it is time for a combined program of relief, recovery and reconstruction," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., said Tuesday.

Similar efforts were under way in the Republican-controlled Senate.

Confusion may reign in courthouse renovation project

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

It won't be a tower of Babel, but the proposed addition to and renovation of the half-century-old downtown Midland County Courthouse may be bogged in some confusion before the county commissioners agree on its architectural scheme.

Commissioners, who last week decided to call a $10.76 million bond election on April 23 to finance an enlarged courthouse, on Tuesday gathered in the offices of Pate-McLaughlin Architects to hone out plans for courtrooms, offices, coffee bars, jail cells and toilets. They mixed some levity with their serious planning.

The northside addition to the five-story courthouse would increase square footage from the existing 74,000 square feet to more than 155,000. The number of county and district courtrooms would be increased from four to seven, and each of the four commissioners likely would get offices.

"I think it would be advisable if we went for four," said Commissioner Win Brown, "but keep in mind that's the first place that would be whacked."

"OK, four it is," affirmed County Judge Bill Ahders.

In that regard, Commissioner DeWayne Davis said the commissioners need "a little bit of privacy...once in awhile."

"Durward and I once got in a broom closet and got entangled in the wiring" in seeking privacy, Davis said of his fellow commissioner, Durward Wright.

"(Yet), I haven't seen a place where I couldn't hang my hat," Davis allowed.

Commissioners agreed on having one room serve as a County Courtroom and as a Commissioners' Courtroom. Briefly, they got into the hierarchy of the Commissioners' Courtroom and into the positioning of members of the court. Brown, who's quick to jest, said the courtroom arrangement would be fine "just as long as you (Ahders) are elevated about a foot higher than we are."

"At least," quipped the judge.

Architect Walter Pate asked the commissioners if they wanted a "more formal setting," which might include a lectern such as the one in the City Council Chambers.

"The decision-makers are elevated," noted Davis.

"It has to be elevated," said the judge.

The commissioners opted for seven courtrooms, not including the Justice of the Peaces' Courtroom, on four floors but couldn't decide on a bar — a rail — to separate the spectators' gallery from the court in each courtroom.

"In England," said Ahders, "they draw a (imaginary) line on the floor."

Commissioners apparently nixed a Jury Selection Room, although the three state district judges initially had recommended one.

"The judges seem to be changing their minds about having a common jury selection room," said Pate.

"Well," Davis told his fellow commissioners, "before you get dogmatic about it, the (Midland County) Bar ought to be involved in this."

Ahders duly noted that under the present set-up, prospective jurors are "packing the halls with nowhere to sit."

County Court-at-Law Judge Willie DuBose, who had dropped in on the meeting, took a standoffish approach to the proposed jury selection room.

"I feel like I'll work with whatever you give me," said DuBose, who noted that handling prospective jurors is more of a problem for the three state district courts than it is for the two county courts.

The architects are designing the courthouse in a "spirit of cooperation," Pate observed. "We'll work with anybody on anything. But we need the direction of the commissioners."

DuBose noted that a jury selection room would be "very convenient" to

HRC staffer named executive director

Agency to continue providing variety of services

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

The Midland Human Relations Council board of directors has selected HRC staff member Gloria Ellis to replace recently-resigned executive director Marion Clee, according to the organization's president.

Dan O'Grady, HRC president, said Ms. Ellis will be officially presented to the HRC at its annual meeting Feb. 24.

O'Grady said Ms. Ellis has performed exceptionally for the HRC as a staff member and project leader, and he added that he expects the HRC to continue providing a variety of services for Midland residents.

Ms. Ellis, 24, a December 1981 graduate of North Texas State University in Denton, served as a social worker with the HRC since March 1982. She has a bachelor's degree in social work.

Ms. Clee resigned from the executive director position effective Jan. 17. She indicated then that the HRC had fulfilled its original purpose and its work was rapidly being assumed or duplicated by other agencies.

The HRC was formed in 1970 to promote communication and cooperation among the racial and ethnic groups residing in Midland County.

Both O'Grady and Ms. Ellis disagree with Ms. Clee's assessment, and add that the HRC is planning to continue some current programs, including an information and referral service, a tenant/landlord relations service, neighborhood beautification and a food bank project.

He said the HRC also will continue screening applicants for the city's Community Development Block Grant housing rehabilitation program. O'Grady said he expects the screening process to begin again about March 1.

O'Grady added that although some HRC programs have stalled in recent months with the director change, office relocation and shortage of staff, "momentum will start to build and we'll be very active as we go through the rebuilding process."

The HRC and its board of directors are in the process of re-defining the agency's goals, O'Grady said. He added that the council and board will likely be expanded during the annual meeting.

Ms. Ellis, who along with a part-time secretary is staffing the HRC's new office at 410 N. Weatherford St., said the HRC will probably hire another staff person around the time housing rehabilitation applications begin flowing in.

"I feel we are needed in the community," said Ms. Ellis. "I think people still look at us as a vital agency.

"I think this is a great challenge for me," she said. "We're going to let the public know that we're still here and they can still use us."

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Snow is forecast for Thursday from the Midwest into the Great Lakes and New England, according to the National Weather Service. Rain is predicted for the northern Atlantic states, with rain and snow expected in California and Nevada. Most areas of the nation will be cold.

More cold nights, mild days forecast

While the nation waited today for Punxsutawney's famed groundhog to emerge from his burrow, Texas had a little something for everyone — winter snowstorms in Amarillo, summer sun in Brownsville and a spring tornado in Beaumont.

Here? Well, West Texans should expect cold nights and mild days.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it is expected to be sunny and cool through Thursday. Tonight's fair and cold temperatures should send the mercury sliding down to the mid-20s, but clambering to reach near 50 Thursday. Winds are expected to be light and variable tonight, becoming west to northwesterly 5-15 mph Thursday.

Wednesday's high of 48 wasn't the record high 80-degree heatwave that settled in the Permian Basin in 1963, and the overnight low of 32 wasn't as nippy as the record low of zero set in 1951.

Snow slows down life in Panhandle

By The Associated Press

Schools, businesses and highways were closed today across the Texas Panhandle in the wake of a winter storm that created snow drifts of up to 10 feet, hampering road cleaning efforts and prompting warnings for residents to stay indoors.

Scattered snow continued to fall across the Panhandle and South Plains early today and the National Weather Service warned that another winter storm could arrive in the Panhandle on Friday or Saturday.

Snow showers were falling before dawn in the Permian Basin, near Midland, and east of Longview in far East Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Temperatures dipped into the 20s and 30s over most of the state before dawn as northwesterly winds at 15 to 25 mph buffeted all but South Texas, where readings were in the 50s before dawn. Wichita Falls endured wind chill readings below zero.

"Travel is practically non-existent in the northern parts of the Panhandle, and is extremely hazardous in the southern areas," an NWS spokesman said.

Law officers asked residents of the Panhandle and South Plains to avoid travel for the third straight day.

Charles Ball, executive vice president of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, said the two storms that have hit the Panhandle were as severe as the storms during the winter of 1972-73, which proved to be disastrous to the cattle industry.

The U.S. Postal Service in Amarillo canceled mail deliveries Tuesday and the Amarillo International Airport remained closed throughout the day because of snow-covered runways.

"They just can't plow it. It's too windy," said airport tower secretary June Beardon.

Drifts up to 10 feet deep were reported in many Panhandle communities, and winds gusting up to 25 mph blew the dry, powdery snow back on the roads behind snow plows. Five deaths in traffic accidents were blamed on the storm.

Volunteers in Amarillo, used four-wheel-drive vehicles to take nurses and medical workers to the city's hospitals. The city's emergency medical service helicopter was grounded.

Workers at the nearby Pantex nuclear weapons assembly plant were told to stay home for the first time in nine years, and all the schools were closed.

Potter County Sheriff T.L. Baker said there had been "a good many wrecks" and stranded vehicles, but that no injuries had been reported in the county since the storm began Monday.

"We have weather like this two or three times a year, but it does seem like it's a little worse this time," he said. "We have 10 inches on the ground and it hasn't let up all day.

"You could definitely ski Amarillo if you wanted to."

One auto supply dealer said finding tire chains in Amarillo was next to impossible, and estimated he could sell tire chains Tuesday for $250 per set.

Lynne Holt of the Dalhart Police Department in the far north Panhandle said major highways in and out of town were closed by the drifting snow.

"It's just real bad," she said. "People's cattle have been walking over fences and getting out, and several were killed by the train before snow shut it down. All the schools in Dalhart, Stratford and surrounding areas are closed."

Authorities in Dumas reported eight inches of snow with drifts to eight feet. The storm stranded about 25 people there, including a group of Fort Worth students on a ski trip.

Meanwhile, residents in the Southeast Texas city of Beaumont began totaling the damage from a tornado Monday.

One woman was injured when a tornado ripped through an apartment complex, felled power lines and damaged more than 15 units.

"It's really a miracle that no one was seriously injured," said Beaumont Fire Department spokesman Tommy May. "It was lucky that most people were at work when the tornado hit."

A shelter for displaced residents was established at the Red Cross headquarters downtown, but few people went there, officials said. Most of the evacuees took shelter at area motels or with friends and relatives.

David Hassel, Beaumont civil defense coordinator, said 75 to 100 people had to be evacuated from their flooded homes.

Gulf States Utilities spokeswoman Sharon Englade said power outages were numerous but scattered, with most areas restored to power by Tuesday morning.

An Orange County ambulance transporting a cardiac arrest patient to St. Elizabeth Hospital in Beaumont flooded out, he said, and had to be rescued by two teams from the Beaumont Emergency Medical Service.

Groundhog stands alone, forecasts early spring

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) — Punxsutawney Phil the groundhog emerged from his heated burrow on Gobbler's Knob in a downpour today and failed to see his shadow, thus predicting an early spring for the nation.

The groundhog's 97th moment in the sun — or out of it on this dreary, rainy day — came at dawn when folklore says he "whispered" his prediction to James H. Means, a contractor who is president of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club.

"Better days are on the way," said the 59-year-old Means, who, as club president, is said to be the only human able to translate for the woodchuck.

"His movements indicate that just like the economy of the nation, the worst is over," Means said at a ceremony outside this mountain town.

About 300 people, mostly college students, watched as the wriggling and sniffling Phil emerged from his hole and was met by a wet 36-degree temperature.

"Phil wants all of his loyal subjects to know we have weathered the storm this winter.... Spring is on the way," said Means, who wore the traditional top hat and tails.

Punxsutawney's groundhog has failed to see his shadow only five times since the tradition began in 1887. He most recently predicted an early spring in 1975.

Folklore dictates that if he saw his shadow — even through miserable winter weather — then six more weeks of cold weather would follow.

The ceremony is all in fun, of course. The prediction was secretly decided by the club's 12-member "Inner Circle" well in advance.

For the record, the National Weather Service issued a 90-day forecast last week calling for unusually cold, wet weather for much of the nation through April.

And a snake called Agua Fria Freddie, billed as "Arizona's answer to Punxsutawney Phil," went on record today with a forecast of six more weeks of winter.

"Don't blame me," the rattlesnake was quoted in the Arizona Republic as saying after he spotted his shadow in the desert west of Phoenix. "I don't cause it, I just predict it."

The Punxsutawney ceremony is traditionally led by the Inner Circle, top-hatted, tuxedoed businessmen who carry on the tradition. One said privately they predict an early spring every decade or two just to keep up interest.

Phil actually is a 10-pound male borrowed from the local zoo, where he was donated by a farmer four years ago.

These days, Gobbler's Knob, site of Phil's burrow, is a flood-lit, wired-for-sound wooded knoll.

"Anything can happen. You never know with a groundhog," said Malcolm Dunkel Jr., the club's official handler. "One year he got out and took off on us and the whole crowd went running after him."

The club refused to confirm a rumor that an unnamed handler once accidentally broke a woodchuck's neck taking him out of its hole.

The groundhog, naturally, would rather sleep.

the courts but might not be justified. "It's really not a practical thing to do."

Said Ahders: "I think it's common agreement that we don't need a common jury room."

Commissioners are recommending additional courtrooms to handlefuture growth of the courts.

Pate said that 318th State District Court Judge Barbara Culver has suggested that commissioners give consideration to "facilities for telecasting trials" in the years ahead.

"We'd like to handle it in such a way it won't be disruptive to the courts," the architect said.

Among other considerations, the commissioners discussed common coffee-snack bars for use by courthouse employees, jurors and visitors.

"It (a common eatery) brings cohesiveness to the county group," said Brown. Otherwise, each department would tend develop its own snobbery: "You don't like to talk to 'those other people.' They are not as good as we are." The commissioner said common snack bars would tend to break down such barriers.

Commissioners gave some consideration to the need of public and private toilets within the courthouse.

"I think we can understand why the judges have separate toilets," said Pate. "Certainly, you wouldn't want (a judge) to go in the same toilet where the guy you just sentenced is."

"I think it's a status symbol," Brown said of separate toilets.

Weinberger says defense can't wait

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of a Senate committee are telling Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger that Congress will have to cut the Pentagon's spending request to make a dent in soaring deficits.

But Weinberger, who appeared before the Senate Armed Services Committee Tuesday, said: "I am reluctant to concede on day one" that the budget has to be reduced.

"We simply cannot reduce defense spending any further without endangering the security of the United States," said Weinberger, who was to testify today before the House Armed Services Committee.

"The rapid and continuous growth of Soviet offensive military power does not allow us the option of waiting until after the economy fully recovers, or waiting until an emergency develops," the defense chief said.

"We simply cannot wait to restore our military strength — we must do it now, this year, in this budget."

Weinberger's appearance Tuesday before the Senate panel was his first chance on Capitol Hill to defend the $238.6 billion Pentagon budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The proposed budget increases defense spending by $29.7 billion while most non-defense programs are either frozen or cut. The spending plan for fiscal year 1984 projects a deficit of $189 billion.

There have been numerous calls in Congress to trim the Pentagon budget. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., for example, has proposed cutting $15 billion.

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., predicted that defense reductions will be made and asked for guidance from the Pentagon about how to achieve cuts without hurting the national security.

Reports on traffic at truck terminals in Midland area 'mixed'

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Reports on traffic at several local truck terminals were mixed this morning as the nation's independent truckers entered the third full day of a nationwide strike to protest highway user fees and other taxes.

A report that gunmen shot about nine tires on a truck near Bakersfield, Texas, Monday went unconfirmed after calls to several area truck stops and law enforcement offices.

Violence reportedly spread to about 22 states on Tuesday, with rock throwing and gunfire reported in several instances. A driver traveling through North Carolina was shot and killed Monday.

A survey of several West Texas truck stops this morning revealed no confirmed attacks on trucks or truckers, and traffic at several stops was near normal.

Richard Broussard, manager of Midland's National Truck Stop, said truck traffic was "pretty stable" Tuesday and this morning. Broussard said indications are that some truckers may be avoiding large truck stops and choosing to remain on back roads and visit smaller stops.

Robert Robinson, manager of the Angelo Plaza Truck Stop in San Angelo, said truck traffic at night is down considerably, apparently because drivers choose to operate in the relative safety of daylight.

An employee at the Amarillo 76 Truck Stop said traffic was near a standstill this morning, not because of the strike but because of about 10 inches of snow that choked surrounding highways Tuesday.

An El Paso truck stop manager said business "was a lot quieter than Tuesday.

"I think it's because of all the people getting shot lately," he said, referring to violence in other parts of the nation.

A Fort Stockton truck stop employee said truckers seemed to be moving in four- and five-vehicle convoys for safety.

A survey of several Midland supermarkets Tuesday indicated that local grocers have not been affected by the strike thus far and expect no serious disruption in shipments of produce and other goods.

Hoot Leonard, manager of the Midland Farmer's Co-op, said the trucking strike will likely not create any serious problems for local farmers and ranchers.

"We haven't felt anything yet," said Leonard. "I'm sure it'll depend on just how serious they get about it and how long it lasts."

Leonard said if the strike persists and grabs support in this area, shipments of fuel, seed and fertilizer could be affected.

Gov. Mark White signs the new Legislature's first bill into law Tuesday. The bill closes a loophole in the state's oil and gas leasing law which allowed the anyone to buy prospecting permits for $100 instead of competing for bids.

White vows to continue 'War on Drugs'

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he wants the state's "War on Drugs" program stepped up this year, but a Senate panel heard complaints that narcotics agents may be illegally tapping phones because the program's wiretap law only partially restricts listening devices.

White's Republican predecessor, former Gov. Bill Clements, counted the War on Drugs legislative package of wiretap laws and tougher drug penalties as one of the hallmarks of his four years in office. He lost a bitter campaign to Democratic then-Attorney General White Nov. 2.

White told reporters Tuesday that he would ask the Legislature to pay for more state narcotics agents and make penalties tougher when drug dealers are convicted of selling drugs at schools.

"My predecessor and I disagreed on many issues, but one of the things we did agree on...is the War on Drugs," White told reporters after addressing the Youth Leadership Conference on Drug Abuse.

Later Tuesday, state senators argued whether to include "pen registers" under the War on Drugs wiretap bill so the devices would be subject to the same restrictions wiretaps are.

Pen registers, which are used by law enforcement agents to decide when a wiretap is needed, are hooked up to phones the same way listening devices are, but instead of hearing conversations, they read the clicks or tones when a phone is dialed and print out a ticker-tape of the phone numbers called.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, sponsor of a bill that would restrict the pen registers, said he believed in 1981 that they were covered by the wiretap legislation. He said the law needed to be corrected because at present there are no restrictions on police use of the devices.

John Duncan, head of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, complained pen registers are themselves a violation of privacy and easily can be converted to wiretaps by simply hooking a listening device onto them.

"You're placing police officers on their honor not to listen in," Duncan told the Senate Jurisprudence Committee. "In the long haul, you're asking them to do the impossible."

Duncan said the number of wiretaps obtained through the courts that resulted in arrests indicated agents had listened in using the pen register device before the legal wiretap was obtained.

If pen registers are placed under the wiretap law, law enforcement officers would have to obtain permission to use them from one of nine judges after showing there is reason to believe a crime is being committed.

Senate offers appointments solution

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas senators have sent to the House their solution to the recent bitter controversy over former Gov. Bill Clements making appointments that incoming Gov. Mark White thought he should make.

"No one has ever found any way to take politics out of politics," said Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, sponsor of the legislation. "I think most of us have agreed to this."

Doggett said his bill, which passed 27-1 Tuesday, would provide that all appointments to state commissions and boards end on Feb. 1, not between Nov. 1 and Jan. 16 as they do now. A governor who lost the November general election would be prohibited from making most appointments after Nov. 1.

Only Sen. John Leedon, R-Dallas, voted against the proposal.

"This bill is like whistling in the wind," Leedom said. "If we put appointments into the political arena like this, we are going to lose a group of people who would like to serve the state."

An amendment was adopted, by unanimous vote, to expand the bill by prohibiting any governor who got defeated in a party primary in May or June from making appointments.

A special provision in the bill said a lame-duck governor could make a temporary appointment if a vacancy occurred in a state or district office between Oct. 1 and Nov. 1 because of the death of an officeholder. The appointment could last only until Feb. 1.

Leedom said many qualified people who would like to serve the state would not accept such an appointment that might last only 2½ months.

Doggett made another amendment, also approved unanimously, that the special provision would not apply to state judges who, according to another section of state law, are appointed to serve until the next election.

Tuesday's Senate debate, which lasted less than half an hour, followed hot arguments between a group of Democratic senators and Clements over the right of the outgoing governor to make appointments after he was defeated in the Nov. 2 election.

The Democrats, backed by White, said the appointments should be saved for the incoming governor.

After his inauguration, White asked the Senate to return 102 appointments made by Clements for his review. The Senate sent back 59 names, keeping 43 for Senate study. Most of the appointments the Senate retained still are in the Nominations Subcommittee.

White picks Labor leader

AUSTIN (AP) —Allen R. Parker Sr., a labor leader in Houston, was named Tuesday by Gov. Mark White to be commissioner of the Texas Department of Labor and Standards, subject to Senate confirmation.

He is the first black to serve in the labor commissioner's post.

Parker, 41, currently is business representative for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Local 15 AFL-CIO, in Houston.

Parker was named to the vacancy created by the resignation of Lias "Bubba" Steen, appointed to the Texas Employment Commission.

First bill closes hole in leasing law

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill closing a legal loophole which one state official complained 25 companiies tried to "squeeze through at the last minute" has become the first law signed by incoming Gov. Mark White.

The bill corrects a 44-year-old mistake in the state's oil and gas leasing law.

Mauro last week sought emergency legislation to correct the technicality — an overlooked statute that let anyone buy a "prospecting permit" for $100 instead of competing through bids for oil and gas leases on state-owned lands.

A Fort Worth lawyer discovered the loophole and bought up 10 permits last fall. He later agreed to withdraw nine of his permits and to give the state 30 percent in royalties from any oil he found from the 10th lease.

Mauro threatened Tuesday to release the names of 25 firms that took out prospecting permits over the weekend in attempts to "squeeze through the loophole" before White closed it by signing the bill.

"I am notifying all of these firms they have until 5 p.m. Friday to withdraw their prospecting permits," said Mauro. "If they do not meet the deadline, I will publicly release their names and make sure their home communities know of these attempts to cheat the school children of Texas."

Revenues from oil and gas leases on state lands go into funds for public schools and universities.

All-white jury clears white officials of violating blacks' civil rights

DUBLIN, Ga. (AP) — An all-white jury that cleared 16 officials of violating the civil rights of blacks during a string of riots in 1980 was "preplanned and racist," says the chief plaintiff in three multimillion-dollar lawsuits.

The U.S. District Court jury deliberated 6½ hours Tuesday before ruling in favor of white officials from Wrightsville and Johnson County named as defendants in the suits.

"We will appeal because of the all-white jury," said John Martin, the chief plaintiff, who is black. "The all-white jury was preplanned and racist. The verdict let the people know that nothing comes easy."

Johnson County Sheriff Roland Attaway, a key defendant in all three suits, wept as he heard the verdict.

"I feel great," the 67-year-old sheriff said later, emerging from the courthouse. "I felt law and right would preserve in the end. As I said, we never did anything wrong and I say again, we never did anything wrong...I do believe the jury vindicated me."

In the 3-week trial, dozens of witnesses accused Attaway of allowing armed whites to attack black demonstrators at the county courthouse on April 8, 1980, and of ordering the unlawful arrest of 41 blacks on May 19, 1980.

Attaway, in more than six hours on the witness stand last week, denied his actions were racially motivated and said he intended to preserve law and order in the east-central Georgia city.

Attaway's 15 co-defendants included Wrightsville Mayor Willis Wombles, members of the City Council and county commission and five present or former law enforcement officers.

At stake in the trial was a $21.3 million damage claim by 48 blacks who accused the officials of conspiring to deprive them of civil rights by brutalizing and arresting them in riot-torn Wrightsville during the spring of 1980. All the defendants were white.

A fourth lawsuit seeking to block the prosecution of blacks on riot-related charges handed down by a Johnson County grand jury apparently was settled out of court. After Tuesday's verdict, a lawyer for the plaintiffs, Don Keenan, said the charges were being dropped.

U.S. District Judge Dudley Bowen Jr. declined to confirm or deny that an out-of-court settlement had been reached. But Keenan said the state had agreed to drop the charges in return for his agreement not to seek reimbursement of his expenses in that suit.

Don Keenan, who headed the team of six lawyers for the blacks, said the jury's ruling "has the shadows of the late 1950s and early '60s when blacks couldn't get justice."

"I can't help but think this case was decided on the 10th day of January when the jury was chosen," said Keenan, who is white. "We've had to stare at 12 white faces from the middle class of the South who have no idea what it's like to be black in the South.

"It's like trying to explain to someone who's never been on the moon what it feels like, what it smells like," Keenan said.

Witnesses testifying for the plaintiffs said Attaway and officers under his command joined an angry crowd of armed whites in an assault on the black demonstrators April 8.

They also said the sheriff unlawfully arrested blacks on May 19 and held some of them for days without informing them of the charges against them or allowing them to speak with an attorney.

Attaway, one of only three defense witnesses, said there was some "pushing and shoving" at the courthouse April 8, but nothing that warranted arrests. He said the events of May 19 posed an "extreme emergency" that required the arrests of blacks he suspected of forming "conspiracy to kill somebody."

California fishermen catch 500-pound WW II bomb

PORT HUENEME, Calif. (AP) — Fishermen off Santa Cruz Island pulled up a rare catch from the ocean floor — a 500-pound bomb from World War II, the Coast Guard said.

An explosives team boarded the fishing boat late Tuesday to retrieve the bomb and return it to the Seabee base at Port Hueneme, said Lt. Noris Turner.

"They indicated they believe the chances of detonation are remote," he said. "However, they are using the usual precautions as if it might detonate."

Turner said the bomb was hauled aboard the 57-foot Karen Marie at 6 p.m. in Chinese Cove, on the northeast side of Santa Cruz Island.

More than $1 million donated to California senator's campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Freshman Republican Sen. Pete Wilson is the nation's first PAC millionaire, Common Cause, the self-described citizens' lobby, says.

The organization said Tuesday that political action committees, so-called PACs, gave at least $1,101,951 to Wilson's campaign in California last year against former Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

"It doesn't surprise me," said Otto Bos, a spokesman for Wilson. "We were second nationally in spending for the U.S. Senate. I believe Brown was third. It's an expensive state."

Bos said Wilson's campaign cost about $5.1 million. Figures for Democrat Brown were not immediately available from the Federal Election Commission.

Common Cause said that overall, PACs representing business, labor and ideologies contributed at least $55,311,588 to the men and women who won House and Senate seats in 1982.

All told, the winners in 33 Senate races received a total of $14,870,631 from PACs. Of this total, $8,526,541 was credited to business PACs, $3,140,262 to labor PACs and the balance to various single-issue and ideological groups.

Overall, House members got $40,434,957 from PACs. Business provided $20,948,667 and labor, $10,663,346. Common Cause said at least 167 representatives received more than $100,000 each from PACs for their 1982 campaigns.

Common Cause said the PAC spending totals may go higher because it based its figures on reports filed with the Federal Election Commission through Nov. 22. Updated reports were due from candidates on Tuesday.

The organization said that besides Wilson, three other senators got more PAC money in 1982 than the previous high of $722,211 Common Cause credited to Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, for his 1980 race.

They were David Durenberger, R-Minn., $975,140; Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, $877,782; and Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, $769,325.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., received no PAC money, while Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., with $9,958, was the only other senator under six figures, according to Common Cause.

Tom Horner, a spokesman for Durenberger, said he expected the Minnesotan's PAC total to exceed $1 million once the campaign books are closed out. Durenberger defeated Democrat Mark Dayton, who spent about $7 million of his own money.

Wilderness area to be reviewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is starting over in the review of how much national forest land should be protected as wilderness, saying a California court decision has left millions of acres in a legal limbo.

The U.S. Forest Service announced Tuesday it would begin a new study costing at least $15 million to determine whether undeveloped areas in the national forests should be preserved as wilderness or released for other uses, such as timber and mining.

A landmark 1979 study recommended releasing 36 million acres for development while protecting 15.1 million acres as wilderness. It suggested that 10.8 million acres be reserved for further study.

But Assistant Agriculture Secretary John B. Crowell Jr. said Tuesday that a California court decision has undermined the legal basis for the 1979 recommendations.

He said that means starting over, at least for those areas where Congress has not yet acted. Wilderness areas already established by Congress are not affected.

In addition, he said, the study is not needed in areas where Congress has made state-wide decisions on wilderness: Alaska, Colorado, New Mexico, Missouri, West Virginia and Indiana.

He said the Forest Service will continue for now to follow its existing land management plan, including timber sales on the areas recommended in 1979 for release.

An industry spokesman said he did not expect the government's decision to have any immediate impact on timber companies, even though they would be operating in limbo.

"If anyone wants to seek an injunction, they'd be successful based on the (court) decision," said Jim Riley of the National Forest Products Association.

"The conservation community is recognizing the major impact they would have if they shut down all activity," Riley said. "They don't want that to happen and we don't want that to happen."

The earlier study was challenged by the state of California, which argued that the Forest Service's environmental impact statement did not meet legal standards.

A U.S. district judge agreed in a 1979 ruling, and his decision was affirmed last fall by the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Crowell said the decision leaves the entire review process vulnerable to legal challenge, disrupting the ability of forest managers to plan the best use of government land.

He noted the 9th Circuit decision is binding on all states in the circuit: Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona, Nevada, Montana and Idaho. He said the administration has decided against appealing the case to the Supreme Court.

He said the easiest way around the issue would be for Congress to pass a law declaring the 1979 study to be valid. Bills to do that have stalled in Congress, however.

Peddlers taking over sidewalks of New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — The Port Authority Bus Terminal is encircled by them and the theater district is lined with them. Canal Street has them 24 hours a day and even Park Avenue matrons must dodge them.

Peddlers seem to be taking over the sidewalks of New York, say pedestrians tired of squeezing past them and store owners who don't like the cut-rate competition in front of their own doors.

The peddlers' foes have been pushing their way past the pushcarts to a series of hearings by the city's Consumer Affairs Department, which is considering new restrictions on vendors limiting them to certain areas at certain times.

The open hearings began Monday and are continuing all week around the city. Dominating the testimony have been been private citizens, merchant associations and community groups eager to put a cap on the sidewalk entrepreneurs.

But peddlers interviewed at their stands argued that they should not be made scapegoats for street congestion, and say they just want to make some money.

"Thank God I can come out here," said one 62-year-old vendor who identified herself only as Stella L., as she tried to interest passersby in jewelry laid out on a trash can on Park Avenue in midtown Manhattan.

She said her husband had been out of work since last February and she has to make between $10 and $50 a day to supplement her $320-a-month Social Security check.

At least she is not on welfare, Stella said, adding that police should have better things to do than chase vendors off corners.

Nearby, on Fifth Avenue, a vendor who identified himself as Bob was selling the latest in sidewalk novelties, a soft plastic octopus that crawls down walls.

"They say we clog the sidewalks. What about that?" he said, jerking his thumb toward a construction site that was forcing pedestrians through a narrow passageway.

Joan Ramer, director of the community board for mid-Manhattan, wants the area where Stella was working to be declared off limits to peddlers between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m.

"Park Avenue looks like a bazaar," she testified at the hearings. "The peddlers even regard the street as their personal property."

Last year, one vendor told an architectural tour group to get off his corner, she said.

Lt. Fred Stinner of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey police force described the 42nd Street bus station as besieged by vendors. "We are completely surrounded," he said.

Witnesses said Canal Street is so popular with peddlers that some spend the night at choice locations to hold onto them.

George Wachtel of the League of New York Theaters and Producers said the theater district is congested by peddlers, whom he called "antithetical to the way of life here."

The peddlers attract customers because they offer merchandise such as stereo equipment, clothes or novelty items at competitive prices, usually free of taxes, officials said.

Although they often spill into restricted areas in their quest for customers, most of the vendors "just want to make an honest living," said Leroy Watkins, the Consumer Affairs department's deputy general counsel.

They run afoul of the law in other ways too, police say.

There are 458 non-food vendors with licenses but a greater number are unlicensed, avoiding a requirement to put up a $2,500 bond, buy a $25 license and pay sales taxes, police say.

Before Christmas the city began a crackdown on peddlers in Manhattan, issuing 2,542 summonses. But it seemed to have little impact.

Even when their wares are seized, the peddlers usually have a "second stash" that lets them return to the streets in a few hours, said Officer Ernest Fazio.

Hastings accuses judge of being unfair

MIAMI (AP) — U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings, frustrated in his effort to add a last shred of defense evidence, accused the presiding judge in his bribery-conspiracy trial of being unfair but lost his bid for a mistrial.

Closing arguments in the 2-week-old trial were scheduled to begin today.

U.S. District Judge Edward T. Gignoux refused to declare a mistrial Tuesday after defense attorney Patricia Williams claimed Gignoux's rulings have favored the prosecution throughout Hastings' trial. Hastings is charged with conspiracy to solicit a bribe and obstruction of justice.

"The picture was painted that the government is right when it makes a move and the defense is wrong when it makes a move," Miss Williams said.

Hastings also lost a bid for a directed verdict of acquittal. Gignoux said the evidence was sufficient to send the case to the jury.

Prosecutors Reid Weingarten and Robert Richter have asked jurors to conclude from their admittedly circumstantial case that Hastings, 46, conspired with an attorney friend to grant sentencing favors for a $150,000 bribe.

The friend, William A. Borders Jr. of Washington, D.C., was convicted in March 1982 and sentenced to five years in prison in the case. He collected the "bribe" from an undercover FBI agent posing as a man convicted of racketeering in front of Hastings.

On Tuesday, Gignoux refused to admit as evidence three letters that Hastings claims he wrote Oct. 5, 1981. Weingarten charged that Hastings fabricated the letters.

Hastings wanted his former defense attorney, Joel Hirschhorn, to verify the letters existed when he handled the case early last year.

The prosecution claims that Hastings wrote the letters after learning of important government evidence — an Oct. 5, 1981, telephone call to Borders that was wiretapped.

In the call, Hastings said he had written some letters and would mail them to "Columbia" the next day. Weingarten contends the two were talking in code about the bribe and Hastings' decision to return $845,000 the very next day to the racketeering convicts. Hastings says he was referring to letters for a mutual friend in Columbia, S.C.

Hastings put Hirschhorn on the witness stand outside the jury's presence Tuesday, then ordered him off when Gignoux cautioned that the government might be able to ask about all their discussions in preparation for trial. Those discussions are confidential unless the client waives his attorney-client privilege.

"We brought him in here with a clear understanding that we were talking about these letters and nothing else. It's absolutely absurd to think we would do anything different," Hastings said.

Without Hirschhorn's testimony to authenticate several memos he had written to Hastings in January 1982, Gignoux refused to let jurors see the documents.

Outside the courtroom, Hastings insisted he was not afraid that Hirschhorn's testimony would damage his defense.

"There's not a damn thing that Joel Hirschhorn was going to say that I'm afraid of," Hastings said. "But rather than violate the attorney-client privilege, I chose to rest on it, no matter what happens to me."

Hirschhorn resigned from the Hastings case last March after another attorney representing the judge filed motions without Hirschhorn's knowledge. Hastings, the first federal judge ever tried for crimes allegedly committed from the bench, has since directed his own defense.

Greenspan: Bailout plan needed to help economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is examining the $168 billion Social Security bailout plan, with its chief author warning that failure to approve it could damage economic confidence and stall recovery from the recession.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, said failure to resolve the Social Security problems would send "a terribly negative signal" to the financial markets and confirm uneasiness about federal spending.

Such an impression "will create a reignition of inflationary forces and that, in turn...would push long-term interest rates up from where they are; would abort a nascent recovery," said Greenspan who appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee Tuesday. The panel continues hearings today.

He also said there was no room to alter substantive portions of the package.

Congress, meanwhile, began scrutinizing President Reagan's $848.5 billion budget with both Republican and Democratic leaders eyeing the addition of a public works jobs program. And both Republicans and Democrats suggested further cuts in the Pentagon's budget request.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said that with unemployment at 10.8 percent and 14 million people out of work, "It is time for a combined program of relief, recovery and reconstruction."

Skepticism exists over cleaning building of PCB

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — The State Office Building, once a high-rise symbol of this city's faith in its future, has become an $8 million headache for New York taxpayers since a transformer fire filled it with PCB-laden soot two years ago.

The predawn fire on Feb. 5, 1981, began in an electrical panel and spread to a transformer containing 1,100 gallons of the dangerous coolant, polychlorinated biphenyl.

About 180 gallons of the chemical spilled and some of it vaporized, spreading soot through the nearly empty 18-story building's ventilation system.

Along with the PCB in the soot were dioxin and dibenzofuran, among the deadliest chemicals ever synthesized by man. Because of the ecological damage caused by PCBs, which have been linked to cancer in laboratory animals, they are no longer manufactured in the United States.

A state cleanup, due to end April 1, is costing between $8 million and $12 million, officials said.

If the Health Department certifies the building safe after final tests, it would mark the first case of interior pollution by PCBs in which the structure was cleaned and reused.

But some people in this city of 60,000 are skeptical and don't want the building reused regardless of precautions.

After the fire, some workers were allowed to enter the structure without protective masks. State officials claimed the $17 million building could be reopened in two weeks. Gov. Hugh Carey even offered to drink a glass of PCBs to prove the chemicals weren't harmful.

Aware of eroded public confidence, the Health Department set a pollution limit "500 times below the 'no effect' limit on laboratory animals," said agency spokesman Peter Slocum. He said the state has set a limit of 10 picograms of PCBs, dioxins and furans per cubic meter of air. A picogram is one-trillionth of a gram, and a gram is about one-28th of an ounce.

About 700 workers had to be relocated around the city.

The problem, said Dr. Ellen Silbergeld, chief toxic scientist of the Environmental Defense Fund, is that "there is no accurate and reliable way to establish safe levels for protecting health (against dioxins)."

"Do area residents want to be guinea pigs?" asked Charlotte Moran of the Citizens Committee on the State Office Building Contamination.

The committee has accused the state of having a conflict of interest in testing because it is a defendant in more than $1 billion in lawsuits.

Slocum countered that human health tests are being done under supervision of the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health. "We're doing that first, because they're good at it, and second, because we wanted to get it done out of state," he said.

Lawrence Verbit, a chemistry professor at the State University of New York at Binghamton, said a repeat of the fire could occur in any building built in the United States until this decade.

"Until recently, national fire codes required that buildings with large transformers had to use PCB-cooled transformers because PCBs were considered the best and safest (cooling) material," he said.

Satire about bureaucracy has become best-seller in China

PEKING (AP) — "Parkinson's Law," a satirical look at bureaucracy written by a British historian, has become a best seller in the midst of China's battle against bureaucracy.

The 100-page book by C. Northcote Parkinson sold out in a few days recently in Shanghai, the Shanghai newspaper Wen Hui Bao reports.

The book observes, among other things, "Work expands to fill the time available for its completion."

"Reading this material is beneficial to our doing an even better job of reform," said one young man who didn't even leave the counter before beginning the book, the newspaper reported.

A top Chinese leader, who was not identified, commented, "Although our political system is completely different from Britain's, the bureaucratic organizations and certain work styles satirized in the book are worth our deep thought," Wen Hui Bao added.

A Chinese magazine introduced some of Parkinson's satire to Chinese readers in 1980, and it attracted attention, said the paper's weekend editions.

Boyish Illinois Congressman captures hearts of constituents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Diane Witte is scrambling. Her boss has been invited to a White House dinner two days hence. Afternoon shadows are already falling over Capitol Hill and she has to get his sizes to the tuxedo rental shop fast.

But what sizes does newly elected U.S. Rep. Lane Evans wear? Evans is her boss. And he's new here. A freshman congressman. Just sworn in.

When the businesslike, bespectacled Miss Witte catches up with Evans at a hotel on Capitol Hill, where he is seeing off a busload of Illinois well-wishers, the husky, cherubic-faced, 31-year-old congressman looks baffled. "Let's see," he stammers, "collar, 16½, I think... My mother will know. She's still in there. We can get them from her."

With his mop of brown hair parted roughly in the middle and his boyish zest for basketball and the Beatles, Lane Evans isn't quite ready for Washington's social circuit.

Only a year ago, he was a lawyer laboring in an obscure Rock Island, Ill., legal aid office, far away from the flickering candles and crisp black ties of a White House dinner.

Evans, a Democrat, wanted to run for Congress, but the 17th District of western Illinois seemed the firmly held domain of Republican pro Tom Railsback.

For 16 years, the folksy Railsback had deflated Democrats in the heavily industrial district. But Railsback was caught napping in the GOP primary by state Sen. Kenneth McMillan, and suddenly the Evans campaign came to life.

Labor money, long friendly to Railsback, moved in to help Evans. Political consultants, crafty in the ways of TV advertising, also arrived. This was a chance the Democrats couldn't pass up.

The youthful nominee had a certain flair of his own, a way with words that touched the hearts of union members embittered by widespread layoffs at Caterpillar Tractor Co., International Harvester Co. and Deere & Co.

When Lane Evans likened the race to one "between Jesse Helms and Hubert Humphrey," the blue-collar constituency knew what he meant — and liked it.

When the smoke cleared, the 17th District had a new congressman: an ex-Marine who had never before run for office and whose taste in music — "the Beatles, the Stones, the Who, the Kinks... basically what I'm into" — reflected the tastes of a younger generation.

Can Evans cut it in the big time? Will he catch Potomac Fever and forget the folks back home? Can he balance the interests of unemployed, traditionally Democratic blue-collar voters and conservative, traditionally Republican Illinois farmers?

For the time being, these are honeymoon days for Lane Evans.

Almost as soon as he arrives, he finds he has a seat on the Agriculture Committee. The job is particularly attractive because many of Evans' constituents are hard-pressed farmers. "My first and only choice," he tells a reporter.

Lobbyists dote on him, with unabashed familiarity. "I want you to get back to do a legislative thing with Chuckie," one chortles. Chuckie is Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., who, the lobbyist says, already has been lined up for a hearing back home in Illinois.

And there is time for fun, too.

The upstairs room at The Monocle, a restaurant four blocks from the Capitol, is crammed with well-wishers. Most newly sworn members of Congress are holding receptions in their offices. But Evans is still waiting for other House members to swap space and in the meantime must camp out in a partially deserted annex that once housed the FBI.

"We always talked politics since he was 3 or 4 years old," Joyce Evans, the new congressman's mother, tells a reporter at the Monocle reception. "By the time he was eight, I think he knew he wanted to go into politics."

Mrs. Evans confesses she'd had tears in her eyes a few hours earlier when she had watched from the House gallery as her second oldest of four sons raised his right hand to take the oath of office.

She adds that tears had been freely streaming down the face of her husband, Lee.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

Don't play by rote. You must be alert at every stage of the play if you want to capitalize on your chances.

This hand is from the Swiss Team event at the recent North American Championships in Minneapolis. Once South opened the bidding, North was determined to press on to slam. His wealth of controls made his hand worth considerably more than the 18 points it counted in high cards.

West led the ace of spades and lazily continued with another spade. Declarer, John Herrmann of Franklin, Tenn., made no mistake with the rest of the play. He ruffed and led the jack of hearts. He was dismayed when West sluffed a spade, but he did not give up.

He won the king of trumps, cashed the king of spades and ruffed a spade as East sluffed a diamond. He re-entered dummy with the king of diamonds and led a trump. East followed with the seven, declarer won the eight and crossed back to dummy with a diamond, as East still had to follow suit.

Declarer ruffed a diamond to reduce his trump length to that of East. East shed a club, but it was not enough. Declarer cashed the ace of clubs and entered dummy with a club to the king. He could now lead any card from the table. East had to ruff, but whether he chose to ruff with the nine or the queen was immaterial. Declarer sat behind him with the A-10, and had to make both of his trumps for a well-played slam.

At the other table West did not go out of his way to help declarer at trick two. After cashing the ace of spades, he shifted to a diamond. Now declarer was an entry short for the trump coup, and East eventually scored the queen of hearts.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Author James Michener, golf pro Carol Mann, actress Morgan Fairchild, football's Bob Griese and Cleveland outfielder "Bake" McBride share this birthday with you. Also born on this date: the late artist and illustrator Norman Rockwell. Romance plays a larger role in your life this year. A chance encounter will prove lucky for business. Travel is both pleasant and expensive. Do not expect to obtain a commitment without a struggle. Someone whose backing you need has a lot of questions. A sideline activity increases your cash reserves. Guard against neglecting your friendships. You need critics who are both honest and loyal.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A long-forgotten debt is called to your attention. Make a quick settlement. Children deserve to know the truth about your plans. A divorcee finds it difficult to resume dating.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A good day to enter contests, competitions. A new career beckons. Consider all the costs involved in making a business change. Partner is in earnest. Take romance seriously.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A phone call or letter gives you encouragement. Control your jealousy and help partner do the same. If the boss makes an outrageous demand, start looking for a more pleasant place to work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An offer has strings attached. Refuse to dwell on someone's past misdeeds. Be forgiving and lend a helping hand. If you are uncomfortable with a romantic relationship, break it off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You sometimes have trouble separating fantasy from reality. Keep both feet firmly on the ground. You have a shot at a leadership position. Prove that you have the maturity required.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Bold career moves are favored. Do what you can to stabilize a shaky business situation. Consult experts for the technical information you need. Children have to know what is expected of them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Partnerships and new businesses are in the spotlight. Get an early start today to offset any delays that crop up later on. Creative and artistic efforts are favored. Be a good listener.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Seek advice from financial experts before launching a new project. You need to set priorities and stick to them. Do not finance an underdog. He can easily stand on his own two feet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The business day is fast-paced. Do not take on more than you can handle. Your co-workers are cooperative and thoughtful. Influential people look with favor on your efforts. So does mate!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You could be on the verge of an important discovery. Your popularity is on the rise. Business entertaining can further your career. Romance is more rewarding than in the past.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Influential people begin to show more interest in you and your projects. Follow up all possible job leads. A social gathering could lead to a new romantic connection.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A fine day for starting a new business. Be sure you have sufficient financial backing. Career advancement is possible if you play your cards right. Show your talents to full advantage.

Houston becoming drug distribution point

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal customs agents who have seized ever-larger numbers of marijuana shipments smuggled here from South Texas say this Gulf Coast city is becoming a major distribution point for New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and other urban centers.

Marijuana seizures tripled in South Texas between 1981 and 1982, said Charles Conroy, a spokesman for the Houston district of the U.S. Customs Service.

Donald F. Kelly, regional customs commissioner based in Houston, says marijuana transported here, mostly by plane, is destined for other major cities.

Customs seizures of all types of drugs increased in 1982. But seizures of marijuana increased dramatically, Conroy said, partly because of a federal task force that has forced marijuana traffickers out of Florida.

Customs agents in the Houston district, which extends down the Texas coast to Corpus Christi, seized 41,052 pounds of marijuana in 1982, compared to 13,320 pounds in 1981. Customs officials recorded 136 seizures last year and 130 in 1981.

Officials say that smuggling has become more sophisticated. Much of the drug traffic originates from Mexico, Colombia and Jamaica.

Kelly said determined smugglers will try to land a plane almost anywhere. Private and commercial airplanes full of marijuana have been intercepted at small airports lighted at night, on dirt strips at ranches and even on secondary roads.

Customs agents have become more adept at tracking suspected marijuana-carrying aircraft, Conroy said. He said customs air support units use very sophisticated radar to monitor aircraft in the Gulf of Mexico.

He said if a plane is flying low at night or refusing to communicate, customs pilots will attempt to trail the plane until it lands.

Cocaine smuggling also increased over the two-year period, Conroy said. Officials confiscated 28.9 pounds of cocaine in 27 seizures last year and 22 pounds in 16 seizures in 1981.

Finding the truth

It's a most serious matter that three respected members of the House Appropriations Committee have charged the Navy with manipulating public funds to conceal large cost overruns in the $40 billion FA-18 jet fighter program.

At the request of committee members, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger has properly initiated an audit to determine if money appropriated for the plane's combat equipment was used illegally to pay for increased airframe costs.

If the audit substantiates the charges, there should be certain punishment for responsible civilian officials and military officers.

The accusations have credibility, coming from Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., chairman of the defense appropriations subcommittee, and Rep. Jack Edwards of Alabama, the senior subcommittee Republican.

Committee members are upset and not just because of any overrun coverup. Not obtaining committee permission to switch public funds from one program to another is flouting the authority of Congress.

Moreover, any cost overruns should be a matter for settlement between the Navy and the contractor, McDonnell Douglas. Then, the Navy could make a reasonable argument to Congress for necessary additional funds.

But building planes without fighting equipment only means the Navy would try to whipsaw Congress in the future by saying more money would be required to put the plane in combat condition.

An illegal coverup of cost overruns would be disgrace enough. Unfortunately, the charges come when President Reagan's plans for bolstering the nation's defenses are under increasing attack.

Secretary of Defense Weinberger should move quickly to put the Navy's house in order. An FA-18 scandal must not discredit the overall need for strengthening the national defense spending.

ART BUCHWALD

President's 'bloopers' cry for control!

Just when the White House staff thought it was safe to send the President out to meet the people, Ronald Reagan blew his entire "My Heart Goes Out To The Poor 'State of the Union'" speech by telling hi-tech business executives in Boston that he might be in favor of abolishing the corporate income tax. He said, "I realize there may be a great stirring and I will probably kick myself for having said this. But when are we going to have the courage to point out in our tax structure, (sic) the corporate tax is very hard to justify its existence."

Art Buchwald

White House staffers who stayed behind to see how the President's speech was playing on Capitol Hill were dumbfounded when someone rushed in and said, "He blew it in Boston. Get the damage control team right away."

Sirens rang in the White House and six men dressed in asbestos Brooks Brothers suits with fire extinguishers rushed into the political war room. They gathered around the AP news ticker and read the statement.

"Oh, my God," one of them said. "This is worse than announcing on Thanksgiving Day we were thinking of taxing unemployment benefits."

The chief damage control officer said, "Let's not panic, men. We have to think clearly. Dave, start flooding the media with confusion."

"Should I say he didn't say it, or he didn't mean it?"

"We can't say he didn't say it, because they'll show him making the statement on TV tonight. And we can't say he didn't mean it, because we'll make him look as if he doesn't know what he's talking about."

"So how can we snuff it out?"

"We'll say he was speaking for himself and not as President of the United States."

"That won't fly."

"We'll say it's an idea the President would like to implement at some future time when the country is on the mend."

The phones were ringing in the war room. An aide picked one up and said, "We know all about it. We're trying to get the fire under control ....." He turned to the others, "It's the Treasury Department. They're asking what happened."

"Tell them nothing happened. The President was just having a little fun in Boston with corporate executives about taxes."

The aide repeated the message and then turned to the damage control team. "They say they've just issued a press release that we're planning to tax medical bills and make old people pay more of their hospital costs. The President's remarks are going to blow them out of the water."

"We can't worry about their problems now. We'll call them back when we figure out how we're going to handle it."

An aide on another phone yelled, "It's Larry Speakes in Boston. He says he's under siege by the press traveling with the President."

The head damage control officer grabbed the phone.

"How bad is it Larry? ... Real bad? ... The press is licking their chops and doing back flips over the statement? ... What about the President visiting the job training program in Roxbury or a blue collar bar in Boston? ... I was afraid of that. Look, hold on as long as you can, Larry, until we can come up with something here that can turn the tide ... Stonewall them. That's what you're paid for."

Another aide was on the phone. "It's Howard Baker on the Hill. He says the Democrats are dancing in the aisles."

The chief grabbed the phone. "Cool down, Howard ... No, I haven't spoken to the President yet but I swear to you this is the first time anyone ever heard of this idea. Howard, we know this is making your life tougher, but we'll get it straightened out ... No, Howard, he doesn't have his feet in concrete on this one. At least we don't think he has."

The chief damage control officer hung up. "No more calls."

An aide who was on the phone said, "It's the President in Boston. He wants to know how he's doing."

The Chief took the receiver. "Yes, sir. You're doing just great. The calls on your 'State of the Union' have been phenomenal, and the telegrams are pouring in. Where do we want you to go next? We think you better stay in the White House until your budget is passed. A trip to Boston can be pretty taxing for you. By the way, Mr. President, speaking of taxing...."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Justice probing possible Libyan bribe

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is conducting an extremely sensitive investigation of Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the venerable, 80-year-old chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Jack Anderson

The investigation centers on statements by a man who claims he saw Thurmond accept at least $20,000 in bribes for unknown services. The money was handed over by a middleman acting for renegade CIA agent and convicted arms smuggler Edwin P. Wilson.

In a personal meeting with me, the senator vehemently denied the allegation. He acknowledged that he knew the purported middleman. But he said no bribe offer was ever so much as discussed.

Wilson also denied through his lawyer that he ever bribed any member of Congress. He is now in federal custody. He was brought to trial and convicted on charges of conspiring to ship 20 tons of plastic explosives to Libya.

In fact, a source close to Wilson said that during the ex-CIA agent's plea bargaining, Justice Department officials brought up the allegation of a Thurmond bribe, and indicated things might go easier on Wilson if he agreed to testify in such a case. "If he had known anything, that was the time for him to say it," the source pointed out. But Wilson stuck to his denial.

I first learned in September 1981, that Justice was looking into a related allegation that one man had offered Thurmond's services — for a price — to Frank Terpil, a Wilson associate who is still a fugitive. That investigation hinged on testimony of Kevin Mulcahy, a government witness who died last October.

Before he died, Mulcahy told my associate Dale Van Atta that he had been with the middleman and Terpil in 1976 when the possibility of a bribe to Thurmond was discussed. The purpose of the meetings, Mulcahy said, was to figure out a way to get Libyan dictator Muammar Khadafy the eight C-130 transport planes Libya had purchased. But they were embargoed by the State Department because of the dictator's support of international terrorists.

Terpil had been offered a $1 million commission for each plane delivered. Mulcahy said the middleman suggested getting Thurmond's help, at which Terpil offered the man a commission of $250,000 per plane — and an equal sum for the senator if he cooperated.

When we asked about these charges in September 1981, the middleman denied taking part in any such discussion. "Even if something like that occurred," he said, "I would no more go to somebody like Sen. Thurmond — I wouldn't go to anybody. Number one, I wouldn't know how to, and number two, I'd be out of business in a day."

The man did acknowledge that he had "been approached by probably three or four different people on those C-130s."

In the semi-related case now under investigation, the new witness, in a sworn statement, says a middleman "would regularly come to (the Arlington, Va.) office at Delex International Inc. ... a Wilson-sponsored company."

He has told government officials that on at least two occasions this middleman took $10,000 cash in an envelope to a meeting with Thurmond, and that the envelope was turned over to the senator, "whom I know by sight." The witness added that he did not know what the payment was for.

This particular middleman told Van Atta he was a social, but not a business, acquaintance of Wilson. But a letter he wrote last Aug. 2 to the Judiciary Committee's chief investigator suggests a closer relationship to Wilson than he admitted. In the letter, which Thurmond immediately turned over to the FBI, the middleman wrote of Wilson: "I consider him a friend that I have known for about 10 years."

He wrote that he had received a phone call from Wilson in jail, and that the ex-CIA agent "said he would pay me $25,000 now and $25,000 later if I would talk to Senator Thurmond ... to see if the senator would discuss with Justice the possibility of having his bond lowered." The middleman said he agreed to pass along Wilson's message "as a gesture of friendship."

COAL AS A WEAPON: The Treasury Department must decide which is more in the interests of national security: protecting the U.S. maritime industry or undercutting OPEC and the Soviet Union. The issue is whether to allow American coal to be shipped overseas more cheaply.

Canada Steamship Lines has oversize coal ships that can be loaded only half-full in shallow East Coast ports. If the ships could be filled to capacity, it would shave about $5 off the price of a ton of coal delivered to Europe. This would give American coal a competitive edge over OPEC oil and Soviet natural gas.

But to do this, the coal would have to be ferried out to CSL's oversize ships in deep water — and this would constitute domestic shipping by a foreign company, which is against U.S. law. So the Canadians have asked for a waiver of the rule.

The Maritime Administration recommends against the waiver, arguing that it would further weaken the U.S. shipping industry, which it says is vital to the nation's security. The Commerce Department says the waiver would be a means of nailing down a solid market for U.S. coal and preventing Europe's dependence on OPEC oil and Soviet gas. It's up to Treasury to decide.

One Commerce official suggested letting the Canadians take the risk; if the coal shuttle works, then U.S. shippers could move in.

Another View:

Disappointed in D.C.

Dear Abby:

I'm in deep trouble. I am a retirement and welfare fund, living in Washington. About 115 million people give me money so I can give it out to another 36 million. Well, I've been paying out $17,000 a minute more than I've been taking in. I'll lose about $20 billion this year, maybe a couple of hundred billion by the decade's end.

I thought about writing to you in November when I started borrowing from my sister, the Disability and Health Fund. I was pretty anxious because having millions of people dependent on me is a big responsibility; I'd hate to go broke and leave those people in the lurch. But I thought: No, why bother Abby? After all, the president of the United States has appointed a special commission to figure out what to do. Well, Abby, the commission announced its remedies this weekend and boy! what a disappointment! I almost didn't believe it.

Here we have this president who's been saying for years that Americans are overtaxed so that government can overspend. And he's been complaining about the lack of incentives to promote personal savings.

All that really makes me a prime candidate for reform, doesn't it? The taxes that go to support me are outrageous. Over the past 30 years, federal income taxes have increased by 570 percent while my taxes went up by, hmm, almost 4,000 percent. In fact, at the moment a lot of people pay more tax dollars for me than they do for federal income taxes. And spending! Dear Abby, Congress has bumped up my beneits by almost 70 percent since the 1950s.

That's not all, either. I also discourage savings — people don't save for their retirement because they assume I'll help 'em out, and goodness knows, I don't save either because I'm so busy sending checks out.

Well, I admit to a bit of concern when the president announced that the reform commission would be bipartisan, but I figured the president must know what he's doing. And I admit to more concern when, a few months ago, the commission started talking about raising taxes — you remember, right after the president signed the tax hike package last August and right before he signed the gas tax this December. But I was reassured by his repeated assurances that not one more tax would be levied while he still drew breath. I was a little concerned, too, when the 1982 figures came out showing that social spending had increased over 10 percent, but I felt better when he declared that unnecessary social spending would be cut from the budget for 1983.

So, you can imagine my disappointment when I read the commission's proposals. Here is a package to increase taxes to preserve the structure of benefits and even sweeten some, and to crease new savings disincentives. Just check it out.

Payroll taxes will rise for employers, employees and the self-employed. Some of the tax money will be temporarily refunded to workers via their federal taxes. But that, along with the direct infusion from the Treasury to cover military personnel, just amounts to general revenue financing. A bit of the windfall gain going to beneficiaries from inflation will be taken back, but the basic inequity will remain and some benefits will be enlarged. Moreover, benefits going to people with income over $20,000 will be taxed at 50 percent, thus penalizing private savings for retirement.

Now I can understand why Claude Pepper and Tip O'Neill are happy with this package. It embodies the familiar Democratic answer to all problems: tax and spend. And I can see why been-around Republicans like Dole and Greenspan are pleased. It embodies the familiar political way out: When imagination and daring are called for, reach instead for the same tired old "solutions."

But, dear Abby, how can the president support such a package? I mean, it even includes general revenue financing — something the Democrats have been in favor of, and Republicans against, for years. Indeed, what kind of bipartisan solution leaves three Republican members of the commission too embarassed to sign off on it?

Disappointed in Washington

Dear Disappointed:

I am disappointed in you. How can you have lived in Washington for so many years without mastering political "reality": The way a president gets an "accord" is to reward his enemies and punish his friends, especially those who thought he'd seek real solutions instead of pretend ones. You obviously would have fared better under a Democratic administration.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Argentines express thanks to 'Maggie'

WASHINGTON — "Thank You Maggie" was the headline the Argentine magazine Conviccion put on its editorial commenting on British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's recent visit to the Malvinas (Falkland) Islands.

William Giandoni

The magazine noted that, since last June when British forces reconquered the South Atlantic archipelago, Argentina has been trying "to forget the bitter taste of defeat and the physical and moral humiliation caused by the surrender of Puerto Argentino and the consequent loss of the islands: our Malvinas."

But the prime minister changed that. "Mrs. Thatcher's trip to the Malvinas is not negative at all," Conviccion said. "It is merely a strong, clear and humiliating slap in the face of a people who want to forget but are not allowed to by this determined British lady."

For a time, at least, Argentines seemed united again in repudiation of British "arrogance."

Their fears that inflation this year may be closed to 250 percent, unemployment of around 16 percent, inability to meet even interest payments on their foreign debt of nearly $40 billion, and even domestic politics stopped dominating conversations in cafes and tea shops for the five days Thatcher spent in the islands.

Disclosure that the Thatcher government plans to spend $4.8 billion on construction of a military, naval and air base on the islands added to Argentine indignation, as did release of the British inquiry absolving Thatcher of responsibility for failing to anticipate the Argentine invasion last April. But then Argentina seemed to slip back into its splintered normalcy.

The five group "Multiparty" political coalition renewed its demands that Gen. Reynaldo Bignone, Argentina's current military president, move up the date for elections he promised for no later than Sunday, Nov. 6.

Talk resumed about a sort of "war crimes" trial for military men considered responsible for the deaths and disappearances of thousands of persons during the period of military rule, since 1976.

Some Argentine commentators began to voice fears that the new crop of civilian politicians would be no more able to maintain order and govern Argentina in the 1980s than they had been in the early 1970s.

In that connection, they pointed to the events of last Dec. 16, when the "Multiparty" group held its "march of civility" in Buenos Aires. Duly authorized by authorities, the demonstration started peacefully enough but after a group of agitators began insulting, then stoning and clubbing police, it ended violently, with the death of a worker.

Some Argentine observers complained that the organizers of the parade had failed to prevent infiltration of their ranks by troublemakers who could, and should, have been expected to try to provoke violence.

Mariano Grondona, a widely read Argentine columnist, has written that no one can predict Argentina's future with certainty.

He is concerned over a number of points, including Peronism, the military, terrorism and the multiplicity of political parties in Argentina.

Two forces are at work within Peronism. One would make it a center-left political party; the other, an authoritarian, charismatic movement, presumably much like it was when its misgovernment of Argentina prompted the armed forces to take over in 1976.

As for the military, the question is whether or not it would subordinate itself to civil authority in the future, or remain politicized.

Grondona suggests that the future of terrorism in Argentina may well depend on decisions taken in Moscow, on whether the Soviet Union wants to keep Argentina an important supplier of the grains Moscow has to import.

The number of national political parties in Argentina is another worrisome variable in the South American nation's future. A two-party system is hard to imagine in Argentina, given the wide spread of political and ideological viewpoints. But five parties, with predictable splinter groups, would seem to be too many, according to some Argentines.

Although Argentines tend to paint a bleak picture of their country's future, it should not be forgotten that a year ago, when Bignone became president, and voiced the hope that he would be Argentina's last military president, they were elated.

Bernardin among 18 archbishops to become cardinals today

VATICAN CITY (AP) — When Pope John Paul II installs 18 new cardinals today he will be drawing on age-old traditions from the Roman Empire and his own sense of political geography.

During today's consistory he will elevate prelates from five Communist states, including a churchman from the Soviet Union for the first time and Archbishop Jozef Glemp of Warsaw, primate of the pontiff's native Poland.

In addition, he will make cardinals of Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin, head of the largest archdiocese in the United States, and Archbishop Jean-Marie Lustiger of Paris, a converted Jew.

A consistory, from the Latin consistorium, originally meant a meeting between the Roman emperors and their major advisers.

Early popes called them as often as three times a week to consult with their bishops. Now they are called only to promulgate, and are much rarer.

This will be John Paul's second consistory in 4½ years and will be broken into three phases.

The first phase is a "secret consistory" of the pope and all cardinals who are able to attend in the frescoed Consistory Hall of the Apostolic Palace. The cardinal-designates are excluded.

During the morning meeting, Pope John Paul will "create," or officially name, the new 18 cardinals and assign them titular churches in Rome.

Later, in a public ceremony at the Paul VI Audience Hall the pope will present each new cardinal with a red zucchetto, or skull cap, and a biretta — the three-cornered pillbox "red hat" for princes of the church.

In the afternoon, there will be a Mass in St. Peter's Basilica concelebrated by the pontiff and the new cardinals. Following that, John Paul will present the new cardinals with a ring, usually a single gold band with a blue sapphire.

The new men raise the number of cardinals to 138, but 18 are over the age of 80 and thus ineligible to elect a pope under rules set down by Pope Paul VI in 1970.

Pope Paul also set the number of voting cardinals at 120, which means no more can be named until one reaches 80 or dies. However, John Paul can change the rules if he wants.

The 18 men who will receive the red hat from John Paul come from 16 countries on five continents, but the roads they followed to becoming cardinals appear to have followed the same map.

"The Inner Elite," a book published in 1978 by Gary MacEoin and the Committee for the Responsible Election of the Pope, analyzed the cardinals that eventually elected John Paul that year.

The book found several common characteristics: they began studying for the priesthood at an early age, attended school in Rome, made a name for themselves as teachers or as administrators, and served in the Curia (the papal administration) or advanced to lead archdioceses traditionally headed by a cardinal.

"There is an element of luck in the process," the book said. "But by and large, it is clear that those who succeed are men of superior ability, hard-working, clear-thinking, good executives and politically sophisticated."

To a large extent the pattern holds true for the new 18 cardinals.

Ten head archdioceses traditionally led by a cardinal and two are Curia members. Twelve of them attended one of Rome's pontifical universities, and generally studied such traditional subjects as philosophy, theology or canon law.

The most notable exception is Lustiger, who earned a degree in letters from the Sorbonne. He is the son of Polish Jews who emigrated to France. He was converted to Catholicism at age 14.

Half of the cardinal-designates taught or headed Catholic schools. Several are noted authors, including the Rev. Henri De Lubac of Paris, who was once banned for his liberal teachings, and Archbishop Julijans Vaivods of Soviet Latvia, who will become the first cardinal living in the Soviet Union.

Along with these similar backgrounds must be added political skill and popularity. Ten of them, including Bernardin, were elected by their peers to head their national bishops' conference or other major Catholic organizations.

Political skill is particularly important for the cardinals who must deal with Communist or Marxist governments. Those cardinals include Glemp; Vaivods; Archbishop Alexandre do Nascimento of Lubango, Angola; Archbishop Franjo Kuharic of Zagreb, Yugoslavia; and Archbishop Joachim Meisner of Berlin.

Morton Grove gun ban has not swept nation

MORTON GROVE, Ill. (AP) — A year ago this week, this sedate Chicago suburb put itself on the map with the nation's strictest gun law, drawing plenty of attention but eventually disappointing handgun opponents who hoped the idea would sweep the country.

Some crime is down, police say, but no one seems to think the nation's first ban on citizen possession of handguns is responsible.

The law exempts only police, on-duty military and law enforcement personnel and licensed antique gun collectors, and the debate over its constitutionality is still going on with the U.S. Supreme Court likely to make the final decision.

"I have to admit, it's been a little disappointing," said Paul Lavrakas, spokesman for the National Coalition to Ban Handguns. "After Morton Grove, we had a dream that this would spark a movement across the country, but in fact it didn't. The reality is that it will be a slow, painful process. It will take time."

There have been only two arrests for violations of the Morton Grove ordinance, with the second just last week. In the first case, the offender was fined $90 and placed on probation, said police spokesman Bob Davis. The second case is still pending.

The number of burglaries in Morton Grove was down 24 percent last year, Davis said, although assault and battery was up 29 percent, mostly because of increases in domestic violence complaints.

The penalty for possessing a handgun in Morton Grove is a fine ranging from $50 to $500 for the first offense, $100 to $500 and six months in jail for subsequent violations.

Morton Grove's moment in history faded fast. ABC television has not picked up an option to tell the story of the town that said "no" to handguns, according to village attorney Martin Ashman.

"How's it going to sell on television?" trustee Neil Cashman asked. "There was no sex — and no violence."

But the waning notoriety is just fine with some residents.

"We have a very nice town here and I very greatly dislike the attention that has been placed on Morton Grove," said Joan Dechart. "You know, three or four years ago, you'd have to explain to people where Morton Grove was. Now the whole world knows where it is."

Mrs. Dechart is one of two village trustees who voted against the ordinance. She argued the town of 24,000 has more important problems that never are resolved, "like flooding and taxes."

The law that took effect on Feb. 1, 1982, began as an attempt to block a business-license application for a gun shop. The trustees first banned handgun sales, then went a step further by passing a proposal to ban possession.

"I've always been against guns, particularly handguns," said Cashman, the proposal's author. "They're responsible for 10,000 deaths a year."

Handgun-related deaths are rare in Morton Grove. The last was a suicide in 1981. In 1979, two teen-age girls were shot and killed in a forest preserve.

The ordinance was upheld last month by a three-judge panel of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, where opponents have filed petition for a rehearing before the full court, according to attorney Gene Wedoff, who represents the village.

If that fails, they will appeal to the Supreme Court, spokesmen for the National Rifle Association and the Second Amendment Foundation said.

The NRA is prepared to spend "whatever it takes" to overturn the law, said spokesman John Aquilino. The powerful gun lobby views the law as a violation of the Second Amendment right to bear arms.

In the past year, neighboring Evanston has enacted a similar law. Chicago followed with an ordinance banning registration of new handguns, although citizens who already own handguns can keep them.

And Broward County, Fla., recently passed laws requiring a stiffer licensing permit system.

However, San Francisco's law making it a misdemeanor for anyone to possess a handgun was tossed out last Thursday when the state Supreme Court refused to review a lower court ruling against the ban.

On Nov. 2, voters in California overwhelmingly rejected the gun-control Proposition 15.

George P. Shultz

Shultz in China to improve relations

Taiwan, texiles, technology among items on agenda

PEKING (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today that he came to Peking to try to improve strained American-Chinese relations in all areas, but he added he is "not here selling arms."

The secretary's first business of the day was a meeting with Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian, who told reporters at the Great Hall of the People, "We hope that through this visit relations between our two countries will make new progress."

To Shultz, Wu said, "We have been waiting for you for a long time."

During four days of talks, Shultz also will meet China's top leader Deng Xiaoping, Premier Zhao Ziyang, Finance Minister Wang Bingqian, and others.

They are expected to discuss a wide range of issues, including U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, the impasse over a Sino-American textile pact, and China's complaints about the slow transfer of U.S. technology.

On the flight to Peking from Tokyo, which had been the first stop on his Asian tour, Shultz said he believed recent Chinese criticism of U.S. policy on Taiwan and other issues were based on misunderstandings.

"To some extent, perhaps, my visit can clear them up," he said. "We can at least talk about what our policies are."

Shultz is expected to explore the subject of strategic cooperation, a topic that has been shelved by the Chinese. But he said the main objective of his visit was not one of enhancing China's military relations with the United States.

"I'm not here selling arms," he said.

Shultz indicated he expects Peking officials to raise concern over the deployment of SS-20 nuclear missiles in Soviet Asia "within range of China."

Previously, U.S. officials have said there were 90 such weapons aimed at Asian targets, but Shultz said the number has been increased to 99.

U.S. officials have been trying to dampen speculation about any major progress resulting from Shultz's visit to Peking.

"The relationship is important," said one official who spoke to reporters on condition he not be identified by name. "But we are going into it realistically ... We are not going there (Peking) asking for things. We're not going to make extravagant commitments."

One area of friction is in trade. Washington recently imposed restrictions to curb the growth of Chinese textiles sales in the United States after the two sides failed to reach agreement on quotas in four rounds of talks.

China retaliated by halting approval of new contracts to buy U.S. cotton, soybeans and chemical fibers — all items for which it had already sharply reduced purchases in 1982.

China also has been complaining that the United States is slow in meeting commitments to provide advanced technology.

Shultz said he has looked into these complaints, but said the process of sifting through technical applications is "laborious. Actually, there has been a lot of activity and a great number of request have been approved."

Bush visits Netherlands to affirm NATO decision

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Declaring that "the peace of Europe is the fruit of our alliance," Vice President George Bush is trying to reassure one of NATO's more jittery members about its role in the West's nuclear weapons strategy.

According to a U.S. spokesman, the primary aim of Bush's 24-hour visit to the Netherlands is to reinforce a 1979 NATO decision calling for deployment of 48 medium-range nuclear missiles on Dutch soil starting next winter.

Bush is on a 12-day tour of six North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations to push for unity on the scheduled deployment of a total of 572 U.S.-built Pershing 2 and cruise missiles within the countries' borders.

The Netherlands has agreed in principle to the modernization of NATO's nuclear arsenal on its soil, but four successive governments have stalled a final decision on whether to accept the missiles.

The current prime minister, Ruud Lubbers, has pledged to continue preparations for deploying the cruise missiles in the Netherlands, and Bush was scheduled to meet with Lubbers and other government leaders today.

The vice president began his Dutch visit Tuesday night by cautioning that the Western military alliance must remain strong if peace is to be maintained.

In a toast to Queen Beatrix at a royal banquet, Bush warned that "our adversaries continue unabated their massive and unprecedented military buildup.

"They persist too, in their strenuous efforts to isolate us from one another," he said. "But they will find that we are not so easily divided, because the past four decades have shown us that the peace of Europe is the fruit of our alliance, not theirs."

Western diplomats in the Hague say that because of the missile issue, the Netherlands is the most sensitive country Bush is visiting after West Germany, his previous stop on the tour.

While in Berlin, Bush announced President Reagan's offer to sign a pact with the Soviet Union that would eliminate medium-range, land-based missiles on both sides.

The proposal was rejected Tuesday by Soviet Communist Party chief Yuri V. Andropov, who said it was merely a restatement of the "zero option" plan already turned down by the Soviet Union.

The "zero option" calls for the Soviet Union to dismantle its missiles aimed at Western Europe in return for NATO's agreement to forgo the planned deployment of Pershing 2 and cruise missiles.

Andropov called Reagan's plan "patently unacceptable" but indicated he was open to a meeting with Reagan to discuss "urgent problems" confronting the two superpowers and the rest of the world.

Reagan, in an interview with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch aboard Air Force One as he flew to a speaking engagement in St. Louis, was asked if he had meant to send a new signal to the Soviets with the "open letter" read by Bush.

"No," he replied. "Frankly, I was simply responding to their vast propaganda effort that would try to discount our legitimate proposal for arms reduction."

Former pro football player Darryl Stingley receives oxygen after being pulled from an apartment fire in Chicago Tuesday night.

Darryl Stingley survives second battle with death

CHICAGO (AP) — For the second time in 4½ years, former New England Patriot wide receiver Darryl Stingley looked death in the eye and lived to talk about it.

Stingley, 31, was one of 13 persons injured when fire struck a 12-story Chicago apartment building Tuesday evening. Two women died in the blaze when they leaped from an upper floor as firefighters prepared to raise a ladder, fire officials said.

"Basically, I'm just glad to be alive — for the second time in my life," Stingley said quietly, his comments punctuated by coughing.

Stingley has been paralyzed since Aug. 12, 1978, when he was hit by Oakland Raider Jack Tatum during a National Football League game.

His words muffled by an oxygen mask, Stingley spoke to a reporter Tuesday night as he lay on a stretcher in the Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center emergency room, awaiting test results. He was released later in the evening.

"After the accident, my family was told I was lucky to be alive," he said. "This is the second time I'm glad to be alive."

STINGLEY, WHO had lived in the building for nearly a decade, was alone, talking on the telephone in his 11th-floor apartment, when the fire broke out.

"The first thing I heard was glass breaking," he said. "There was smoke in the room."

He told the caller to telephone for help, and a friend who lived on the fifth floor arrived within minutes.

"Five minutes later, it was so smoky that we couldn't see," he said. "Everyone in the building knows I live there. They told the firemen."

"I was just worried about blacking out," he said. "I'm a quadriplegic, and I have a slight respiratory problem."

Stingley said he told firefighters how to move him. They carried him down one floor and took the elevator the rest of the way.

"I felt I was going to succumb to the smoke," Stingley said. "Once I was outside and able to breathe, I was all right."

About 10 minutes elapsed between his discovery of the smoke and his rescue, he said.

Thomas O'Connell, spokesman for the Chicago Fire Department, said the Chicago police bomb and arson squad was investigating the blaze.

The two victims were identified as Angelica Sabenacio, 34, and her sister, Mrs. Vicente Salvador, 26. O'Connell said the two, who were badly burned, jumped from upper-story windows as firefighters arrived at the scene and began rescue attempts.

Thirteen people, including a firefighter and a paramedic, were injured in the blaze, which was extinguished about 30 minutes after it was reported. O'Connell said 75 firefighters and 25 pieces of equipment were involved.

Same old story for Lee

Rebs lose another close one, 37-36

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

It would be nice to bring some good news on behalf of the Midland Lee basketball team, but pick up any previous Wednesday or Saturday paper and you can find out what happened again to the Rebels Tuesday night at Chaparral Center when they went up against the playoff hopeful San Angelo Bobcats.

For the fourth straight game, Lee played it close and lost. This time by a 37-36 margin. For the second game in a row, the Rebels needed only one shot to fall to win, but another lid seemed to be on the basket.

SOPHOMORE DEREK Westbrook got off a 20-foot corner jumper with 20 seconds left, but it didn't fall and the Bobcats stay in the thick of the District 4-5A race with a 6-3 record while Lee almost became the first team in district play to be eliminated from the race with a 1-8 mark, but both Abilene High and Odessa High fell in upsets Tuesday.

This story has happened so often to the Rebels that most felt they would break sooner or later under the pressure. They keep coming back for more and losing in heart breaking fashion.

Again the Rebels controlled the tempo of the game and that had San Angelo coach Rob Wylie worried. "Lee controlled the game, not us. We just never got the transition game going and the Rebels did a super job on us," Wylie said.

"Lee is taking their brusies this year, but Paul (Stueckler) is a great coach and he is using his young kids the only way he realistically can. They're getting close. Just look at what they did to us and to Odessa High. They are going to end up helping decide this thing because they are going to win sooner or later and I'm glad it wasn't against us."

The game started with a 10-minute first quarter that had San Angelo leading by a wierd 2-0 score, the only basket coming from Bobcat Jack Carsner with 6:53 left in the period. Lee missed all seven of its shots in the period.

BOBBY DUNN, official scorer at the game, characterized the first quarter as "one time out and and three sleep breaks."

But things heated up as Lee rolled to an 18-17 halftime lead and a 28-27 margin after three quarters. Before it was over, there were 26 lead changes and the game was knotted seven times. Ironically, Lee led 14 different times to San Angelo's 12.

Carsner, who had only four points, had the only two scored in the first period and won the game for the Bobcats with a layup with 1:20 left in the game for the final margin. Lee worked for the last shot, taking a time out with seven seconds left in the game. Westbrook had to rush his long winning basket attempt.

"We keep getting beat, but I swear it doesn't feel like it," noted Lee coach Paul Stueckler after another wire loss. "These kids do everything we ask, but we can't go out there and stretch them. They're doing the best they can with what they have."

One of the bright spots for the Rebels was the fact that San Angelo's Lorand White was held to a season low 13 points. He was coming off games of 35 and 22 points. Sylvester Johnson, Tod Brown and Tim Hill off the bench did the job.

"We know we are not playing for the league title, but we prepare each game as if it were the state championship," Stueckler said. "We used two different defenses that we call a Wings Cover and a collapsing two-zone. We worked on the defense for an hour and 15 minutes before the game. These kids will work."

WHITE WAS the only player to hit in double figures for the Bobcats with 13 points while Lee's Johnson was the only Rebel in double digits with 12.

San Angelo's biggest lead of the game was four points when they held a 4-0 lead with 7:35 left in the half. Lee owned a three-point margin with 3:55 left in the third quarter at 22-19 on a Brown layup.

San Angelo also won the junior varsity outing with a 59-54 win. Brian Ross led the charge with 20 points while Ottoway Perryman added 18 to the winning cause. Lee's Willie Long was the only Rebel in double figures with 12.

Who wants 4-5A playoff berth?

The District 4-5A basketball race is back on schedule, meaning that anyone can beat anyone, and who wants a playoff berth?

It seems like all the 4-5A teams are trying their best to stay out of the playoffs this year. Upsets abound every week and Tuesday's schedule was no different as three of the four league games were won by those who were not supposed to win and the one favorite that did win, did so by one meager point.

Where do you start? Previous league leaders Odessa High and Abilene High fell to Abilene Cooper and Odessa Permian respectively while Big Spring clipped the struggling Midland High Bulldogs. San Angelo survived by one point over 1-8 Midland Lee.

That leaves San Angelo, OHS and AHS tied for the league lead with 6-3 records while MHS is only a step back with a 5-4 mark. Permian and Cooper are both two games off the pace at 4-5 with five games still left to play.

Cooper got 25 points from Bob Estes and 15 from Greg Wilcox to pull its upset over OHS by a 60-55 margin. Cooper won the game on a 22-6 advantage at the free throw line. Joe Terry led OHS with 16 points while Howard Harris had 14.

However, Permian needed no free throws to unseat Abilene High in a 56-53 win. The Panthers didn't hit a free throw all night, but got 20 points from Rodney Hendrix as Permian won its second league outing in a row. Permian also held high scoring Mike Simmons to 11 points and Shannon Daniel to nine.

Hendrix gave Permian a 46-45 lead with 34 seconds left in the third period and the Panthers never trailed again.

The teams will go back to the drawing board to try to devise some more heart wrecking for the fans Friday when league action resumes.

Steers get up to post win over MHS, 68-60

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — When Midland High traveled to Big Spring to take on the Steers, they faced a team that seemed to be down and out. After all the Steers had lost three straight and the Bulldogs had beaten them handily the last time they played.

But, the night belonged to Big Spring as the Steers, led by Jerald Wrightsil's 30 points, turned the tables knocking off the Bulldogs 68-60.

"They were more physical this time," Bulldog coach Jack Stephenson said. "They beat us on the boards bad and we shot poorly from the line."

The charity stripe provided the margin of victory as Big Spring outscored Midland 18-10.

The Bulldogs had their chances but shot a miserable 55 percent from the line and missed the front end of four one-and-one situations. Big Spring hit on 18 of 27, for 67 percent.

MIDLANDS'S POOR shooting didn't stop there as the Bulldogs hit 48 percent of their shots from the field. While most teams might be happy getting that close to the break even point, it just isn't up to par for a team that has hit 60 per cent or better in several games.

"I think Midland has the best shooting club in the district," Steers' coach Archie Meyers said, "Abilene is a good shooting club but Midland has more good shooters."

"We were over confident the first time we played them. We thought it was going to be easy because we had beat they so bad in pre-district," the former Midland College assistant coach said.

"But today the kids just came out here and did it."

One place the Steers 'did it' was on the backboards. According to Stephenson, Big Spring out rebounded Midland 48-28, a disasterous figure for a club that depends on a high shooting percentage. Every missed shot is compounded by the lack of rebounding, and missing free throws makes it even worse.

"Every time you miss a shot from the line it's a turnover," Stephenson said. "Seventeen and 18-year-olds are going to make mistakes and we made them tonight."

AS IS their habit, the Bulldogs started strong, jumping to a 19-8 lead with less than two minutes left in the opening quarter. But the Steers reeled off eigth unanswered points narrowing the margin to three by the end of the period.

Midland's dry spell carried over into the second quarter as the Bulldogs failed to score for a little more than two minutes.

Big Spring was finally able to take

Chiefs get first player in Hall of Fame

Bell, Warfield, Gillman, among NFL five to be honored

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs will have a player in the Pro Football Hall of Fame for the first time with the selection of Bobby Bell, one of five inductees in the shrine's largest class since 1978.

Bell, Paul Warfield and Coach Sid Gillman join Sonny Jurgensen and Bobby Mitchell this summer in the Hall of Fame.

The Outland Trophy winner as the nation's top college lineman with the University of Minnesota, Bell shunned the National Football League to sign with the AFL's Kansas City Chiefs. Coach Hank Stram switched Bell from defensive end to linebacker and he blossomed into an All-Pro for eight straight years.

"I tell you just to be inducted is great. To be the first Chief inducted is even greater. I played with some great, great players. This is a great honor to be the first Chief," Bell said Tuesday.

THE CANTON Repository reported selections of Warfield, Bell and Gillman on Tuesday. Word of Jurgensen and Mitchell joining the shrine leaked to the media Monday. The announcements were to have been made Saturday night in connection with Sunday's Pro Bowl in Honolulu.

Although the 6-foot-4 Bell, who played at 225 pounds, is the first Chiefs' player to be elected to the Hall of Fame, the team's owner, Lamar Hunt, is in the shrine.

Bell, from Shelby, N.C., adapted so well to linebacking that he played in the AFL's last six All-Star games and the first three Pro Bowls. He performed in Super Bowls I and IV. He scored eight touchdowns and intercepted 26 passes in his 12-year pro career.

WARFIELD, THE slender, swift wide receiver who was an All-Pro selection five times with the Cleveland Browns and the Miami Dolphins, was elected to the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility, five seasons after his retirement.

"People told me through the latter stages of my career that I might be headed for the Hall of Fame," Warfield said in Honolulu, where he was playing in a golf tournament. "So, I had given it some thought. Going in on the first try makes it extra special. This really caps my football career."

Gillman, who ended his pro coaching career at 71 a few months ago as a Philadelphia Eagles assistant, guided San Diego to five division championships and the 1963 AFL title in his first six seasons with the Chargers.

"It's fantastic. I can't believe it. I pinch myself every five minutes," Gillman said in a telephone interview from Philadelphia. "But I'm looking for a job. I'm going to coach if I can. I'd like to stay in the NFL, but you go where you can."

SELECTION OF the five lifted the number in the Hall to 119. However, only four persons had been elected by a 29-man panel of selectors in the past four years.

Warfield, from Warren, Ohio, ranks as the biggest play receiver in NFL history on the basis of his 20.2 yards per catch. His 427 career receptions produced 8,565 yards and 85 touchdowns.

The Browns' No. 1 draft choice in 1962 out of Ohio State, Warfield was All-Pro twice with Cleveland before being traded in 1969 to Miami, where he was All-Pro three more times. He played for the 1973 Dolphins, which won an unprecedented 17 straight games.

Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Warfield jumped to the Memphis Southmen of the fledgling World Football League in 1975. After that league folded, Warfield finished his pro career in 1976 and 1977 with the Browns. He now is an executive with the team.

Gillman, from Minneapolis, was successful in college coaching at Miami of Ohio and Cincinnati before his pro career. In 18 seasons in the NFL and AFL, he had a record of 122-99-7.

Gillman's first championship came in his rookie season with the 1955 Los Angeles Rams. When the AFL began in 1960, he built the Chargers into one of the best teams in the league.

After one season with the Dallas Cowboys as an assistant in 1972, Gillman became general manager and head coach of the Houston Oilers. He was selected as the AFL Coach of the Year in 1973 for improving the Oilers from a 1-13 club to a 7-7.

SMU breaks open close game to beat Texas, 73-64

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Longhorns thought they might have their second Southwest Conference basketball victory in sight, but it slipped away.

After leading Southern Methodist through most of the first half Tuesday night, Texas fell behind 30-26 at the half. It was still close, 34-30, 3½ minutes into the second half.

Then the bottom fell out.

Jon Koncak and Carl Wright ignited a rally that gave the Mustangs 15 of the next 17 points for a 49-32 lead, and SMU eased in for a 73-64 victory.

SMU improved its record to 12-7 for the season and a 4-4 league record, good for fifth place in the Southwest Conference at the halfway mark. Texas fell to 7-13 and 1-7, eighth place.

Texas is down to four scholarship players and six walk-ons. The Longhorns lost starter James Booker for the season after hand surgery Monday.

First-year coach Bob Weltlich said Texas' problems Tuesday night against SMU were a combination of its thin ranks and its inability to cash in on fast breaks.

"Unfortunately, we're not going to make some plays because we just don't have the guys who know how to make them. And that's tough," Weltlich said.

"Even with all the turnovers we had against their press, we handled it pretty well up to a point. It still came down to us not converting the times we got a 2-on-1 or 3-on-2 break."

SMU coach Dave Bliss, who fields three freshmen on the floor most of the time, complimented Weltlich's young team.

Pitt improves BEC status by upsetting St. John's

By The Associated Press

Since joining the powerful Big East Conference for the first time this season, the Pitt Panthers have been trying to prove they belong there.

It has taken them some time to do it — but Tuesday night's 72-71 basketball victory over fifth-ranked St. John's should give their status a lift.

"You have to prove it on the court and they proved it tonight," St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca said after his Redmen squandered an eight-point first-half lead, then lost when Pitt guard Billy Culbertson sank six free throws in the final 1:57.

Pitt, 10-8, had won only twice in seven previous Big East games, and had been blown out in its only other contests against nationally-ranked teams, Villanova and Syracuse.

Karl Racine sank two free throws with two seconds remaining to give Penn a 41-39 victory over Princeton. The Quakers held the ball the final two minutes until Princeton forward Craig Robinson fouled Racine.

Leonard Mitchell blocked two shots, stole three passes and scored seven points in a 17-4 scoring spurt that sent Louisiana State on its way to a 78-69 victory over Florida. That first-half scoring spurt, which lasted just seven minutes, took LSU from a 10-10 tie to a 27-14 advantage.

LSU used another spurt in the second half to roar out to a 24-point lead, then had to fight off a Florida rally.

Florida Coach Norm Sloan couldn't even find solace in his team's rally in the closing minutes.

"I wasn't happy about anything," he said. "My attitude on the ball game, from our point of view, was just 'Forget it.' It was just one of those games. There's no explanation for it. Those things just happen to you. They played very well."

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

"The victory certainly meant more than any game since I've been at Pitt," said Panther Coach Roy Chipman. "We beat a great team and a great coach in the toughest league in the country.

"We proved tonight that we can beat one of the great teams in the country in our place. Our fans were great. They were worth eight or nine points to us. We had a Big East crowd tonight."

A sellout crowd of 6,180 attended the game at the Pitt Field House.

Clyde Vaughan, the Big East's top scorer, and sophomore Andre Williams each scored 24 points to lead the Panthers, who sank 28 of 35 free throws to 11 of 15 for St. John's. Williams was 10 for 10 and Vaughan was 10 for 11 from the foul line.

Williams had scored only one point in 44 minutes of playing time in Pitt's 59-53, double-overtime victory over Providence last Saturday night.

"We wanted to get him (Williams) involved in the offense more," Chipman said.

Culbertson clinched the victory by sinking the front end of a 1-and-1 with seven seconds to go to lift the Panthers to a 72-69 lead.St. John's, 18-2 overall, lost for the second time in nine Big East games.

ELSEWHERE, TERRY Teachout scored 16 points and Duquesne hit 20 of 30 foul shots to beat Dayton 58-55. While Dayton outscored Duquesne from the floor 24-19, the Flyers only had nine foul shots, hitting seven of them.

"Our kids kept their poise down the stretch," said Duquesne Coach Jim Satalin. "Dayton shot terribly. If they had shot better, you would see a different story."

Dayton Coach Don Donoher: "At the end we tried to go after them but they hit the crucial foul shots."

Vegas book makers miss lots of action in Super Bowl XVII

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Oddsmakers say betting on Sunday's Super Bowl fell millions of dollars below previous seasons and they're looking to the upcoming United States Football League season to offset the drop.

"We didn't have much business at all," said Jackie Gaughan, owner of El Cortez. "I'd say it was about 50 percent less at our place than last year."

Gaughan said that although his sports book won about $15,000 on the Super Bowl, it would have been much more if the action had been heavier.

"We beat the game, but we just didn't have the handle to win big," he said. "It was a tough way to end the season."

"It was a tad less than last year, but we did a lot of business on the game," said Red Sperberg, the Stardust Hotel's assistant book manager. "We would up on the plus side."

Sperberg credited a heavy last-minute surge with putting the Stardust close to what it did in previous years.

But he noted that the Stardust was already looking to the opening of the first USFL season next month.

Lost: One football team near Rose Bowl; If found call...

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Anybody seen the Miami Dolphins? The football team?

They disappeared during halftime of a football game Sunday, a game in which they were comfortably ahead, breathing easy and under the command of a man widely accepted as three times smarter than anyone else in his business and definitely not accustomed to losing things, not teams or games.

They were last seen in the vicinity of the Rose Bowl wearing those funny little blue-green uniforms with the fishes on the helmets.

If anyone knows of their whereabouts, contact Coach Don Shula, who thought they were right behind him leaving the locker room at around 5 o'clock Sunday. Some minutes later, he realized with a shock that the players on the field, whoever they were, were not the ones he brought with him in the first half. They were impostors. Not very clever ones at that.

Now we know the secret of an exciting Super Bowl game. Take two lousy teams who don't belong there, give them the football, wish them luck and close your eyes and pray. Sometimes you get lucky. The NFL did Sunday.

You see, neither of these teams beat anybody to get here. Not since Primo Carnera got a title shot fighting his ghauffeur across the country, andor people who owed his managers money, has a championship featured two principals with more suspect credentials.

The Washington Redskins missed out playing the Dallas Cowboys (the first time), the Pittsburgh Steelers, San Francisco 49ers, Cincinnati Bengals. The Dolphins got to pass on playing the Packers, Chargers (the first time), the Raiders and Bengals. What was left was like playing with your sister.

Still, for XVI years, the NFL has been sending its registered titans to the game and they have been dispensing clinkers, grim defensive outfits so scared of each other they barely needed the air in the football.

THE TWO teams in Super Bowl XVII were so unsure of their skills that they felt they had to shoot the moon. Like a guy$going in with no pair showing and a dollar and a quarter in his pocket, they felt they had to bump and raise.

Miami almost got away with it. With an "attack" that consisted mainly of kickoff returns and a prayer, they set up a 17-10 lead at the half.

They got away with this largely because the opposing Washington Redskins came up with a piece of strategy no one ever thought of before: calling a timeout on the other team's point-after-touchdown. This breathtaking bit of strategy resulted in time running out on the Redskins at the Miami six-yard line as the half ended with them helpless to stop the clock. Using a timeout on a PAT is like giving a diamond ring to a dance hall girl, an admirable extravagance, but it did show a laudable contempt for the opposition.

Miami, which rolled up 17 points and 142 yards in the first half, chipped in with no points and 34 yards in the second half. It was one of the most mysterious disappearances since Edwin Drood. Judge Crater is an open-and-shut case by comparison. Miami completed five passes all day, four to their own people and one to the other guys. If it wasn't for one 98-yard touchdown return and a 76-yard touchdown pass play, Miami might as well not have shown up in the first half.

Washington, an outfit which got its team out of the Yellow Pages and its plays out of an old (1912) Walter Camp manual, kept thinking Miami had some aces up its sleeve. All Miami had in the hole was a trey. Miami scored the second time it got its hands on the ball, a 76-yard pass play to end Jimmy Cefalo, but didn't get the ball enough in the second half to be able to be sure what color it was.

Washington won because it had the six best players on the field, five linemen so fat they look like a team belch; and a running back they probably found in a treehouse in Kansas. The line just kept picking up Miami's defense and moving it around like a piano. John Riggins kept rushing into the vacuums just vacated by the Miami 3-4 defense.

JOHN RIGGINS, who got the game ball, so to speak, is an interesting case study in himself. Lots of people march to a distant drummer or a fife no one else can hear. John Riggins is a guy who probably got out of the flying saucer in Olathe trying not to let the people notice his teeth get pointy in the full moon.

A few years ago, John walked out of the Redskin camp in a financial dispute, then was hurt when the team owner didn't want to pay him for sitting down on a farm in Lawrence, Kansas. Riggins went back to work on the advice of a man he trusted: his banker.

In the fourth quarter Sunday, the Redskins had the ball on the Miami 43-yard line, fourth down and a yard with 11 minutes to play. Miami led, 17-13.

Everyone in the ballpark knew what was going to happen: John Riggins was going to go over left tackle. He did. For 43 yards and a touchdown. Riggins carried the ball 37 other times and made 123 other yards, but that was the sprint that finished Super Seventeen. It only made the score 20-17, but since Miami managed only two first downs in the second half, the rest of the game was just target practice for the Redskins.

IT WAS a game in which Coach Shula was supposed to outsmart the Washington coach, Joe What's-His-Name? But good ole Joe was smart enough to take a trip to Kansas a couple of years ago to make friends with John Riggins. Riggins was out hunting, but Joe had breakfast waiting when he came in. The 1983 Super Bowl was settled somewhere between the first stack of hotcakes and the chocolate doughnuts.

It's the first time a national championship has been won on a "breather" schedule since the days of Pop Warner, or since Dempsey fought Carpentier and Billy Miske. One thing is sure: Washington is better than Miami. Whether that makes them better than anything in football is something for the scholars to mull over. And they've got the best record in the NFL, never mind who they beat. As they say around the race track when they ask, "Yeah, but who'd he ever beat?" the answer comes back, "Everyone who ever showed up."

Thompson 'shocked' by All-Star selection

SEATTLE (AP) — David Thompson, who is having a mediocre season in his first year with the Seattle SuperSonics, says he is "shocked" at being named a starter in the National Basketball Association All-Star game this month.

"I was as shocked as you guys," Thompson said following a practice here Monday.

"I didn't think I had a chance of making it. I definitely didn't think I'd be a starter. There are a lot of guys having better seasons than me. I'm happy it happened, even though I guess this is more or less a popularity contest."

Thompson, who came to Seattle in an off-season trade with Denver, will start in the Western Conference All-Stars' backcourt with Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers in the game, scheduled Feb. 13 in Los Angeles.

The Sonics have lost 13 of their last 15 games and Thompson has been hampered by traumatic arthritis in his right knee.

But Thompson finished ahead of George Gervin of San Antonio in the fans' All-Star voting. Thompson received 387,844 votes to Gervin's 380,778.

"Knowing that the fans think that much of me makes me want to play harder," said Thompson. "It definitely has given me a shot in the arm.

"I think I got a lot of votes from Denver. I still have a lot of fans there. And I probably got some from the East Coast where the fans still remember me."

Senate votes for Alabama park in Bear's honor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted unanimously today to rename a national forest in Alabama after famed University of Alabama football coach Paul "Bear" Bryant, who died last week of a heart attack.

The bill, which now goes to the House, would rename the Talledega National Forest in eastern and southern Alabama the "Bear Bryant National Forest."

Express almost given up on Pitt's Marino

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Because the agent for Dan Marino presented the new Los Angeles Express with "staggering numbers," one of the owners of the United States Football League team has almost given up hope of signing the University of Pittsburgh quarterback.

The Express is now concentrating its efforts on UCLA quarterback Tom Ramsey, says co-owner Alan Harmon.

Only last month, the Express made Marino the first pick in the first USFL draft. Maino was hopeful of signing with the league, saying he felt a National Football League team couldn't match the USFL's financial offer.

"Right now, negotiations are at a stalemate (with Marino)," Harmon told the Pittsburgh Press. "We are zeroing in on trying to sign Tom Ramsey. We are awfully close to signing Ramsey. It's scary how close we are to signing him."

Talks between the USFL team and Marino, a second-team All-American for Pitt in 1981, broke down last Thursday. Marino was represented in the negotiations by former Miami Dolphins' linebacker Nick Buoniconti.

"The ball's in their court," Harmon said. "We are unable to meet their financial demands. I wasn't happy with the numbers they were asking for.

"Those numbers were staggering at best, or at worst."

Express Coach Hugh Campbell said he doesn't rate Marino as a better quarterback than Ramsey.

Chicago laughs way to 53-point win over Rockets

By The Associated Press

With a 16-31 record, the Chicago Bulls have not had much to laugh about this season. Until they beat the Houston Rockets by 53 points.

"Tonight was a laugher. Not only because of the score, but because it was the first time in several weeks that we really had fun," said Orlando Woolridge, who scored 17 points and was one of eight Bulls in double figures in their 129-76 victory Tuesday night.

Only eight games in National Basketball Association history have been decided by more points. With a 61-point lead at 126-65, the Bulls had a chance to match or surpass the NBA record victory margin of 63 held by the Los Angeles Lakers, who beat Golden State 162-99 on March 19, 1972.

They had to settle for handing the Rockets' their worst loss ever. Previously, Houston fell to Baltimore by 42 points on March 1, 1968.

THE NBA

76ers 133, Nuggets 124

Andrew Toney, Julius Erving and Moses Malone all made important contributions as Philadelphia outlasted high-scoring Denver.

Bucks 115, Trail Blazers 99

Sidney Moncrief scored 33 points as Milwaukee handed Portland only its fourth defeat in 23 home games.

Nets 120, Pacers 111

Albert King and Otis Birdsong scored 27 points apiece and Darwin Cook added 22 points while hitting 10 of 13 shots from the field as New Jersey held off Indiana.

Hawks 93, Cavaliers 84

Atlanta's Eddie Johnson defused a late Cleveland rally with 11 of his 19 points in the final three minutes.

Nordiques let everybody score in 12-3 bombardment of Whalers

By The Associated Press

The Quebec Nordiques gave everyone a chance to score against the Hartford Whalers — and score they did.

"All four of our lines contributed, which made it a true team victory," said Quebec Coach Michel Bergeron after Tuesday night's 12-3 National Hockey League laugher over the Whalers.

Michel Goulet and Anton Stastny scored two goals apiece as the Nordiques set a team scoring record. The 12 goals were the most in one game by the Nordiques, breaking the previous mark of 11 against the Washington Capitals on Feb. 22, 1981. The Nordiques also equaled a team record when they scored six first-period goals.

Eight other players shared in the scoring as the Nordiques buried Hartford, which has lost 11 straight games on the road, by grabbing a 6-0 first-period lead.

THE NHL

Capitals 5, Red Wings 2

Alan Haworth scored a pair of goals to lead Washington over Detroit. Haworth, acquired by the Capitals in an off-season deal with Buffalo, now has 14 goals and has scored at least one in each of the last seven games.

He got his first of the night at 13:44 of the opening period, scoring one second before a penalty to the Red Wings' Greg Smith had expired. His second tally came at 19:55 of the second period, 10 seconds after Detroit's Reed Larson left the penalty box.

Bengt Gustafsson, Mike Gartner and Gaetan Duchesne also scored for the Capitals, who stretched their unbeaten streak to five games.

Islanders 2, Flames 2

The Islanders scored two power-play goals, including Brian Trottier's tying shot in the second period, to deadlock Calgary.

The tie left the defending Stanley Cup champions unbeaten on their current road trip through the Smythe Division. Earlier they had skated to victories at Los Angeles, Vancouver and Edmonton. The Islanders are second in the Patrick Division with 65 points, eight fewer than Philadephia.

Calgary skated into a 2-1 lead in the first period on goals by Lanny McDonald and Jim Peplinski before the Islanders tied it in the second on Trottier's goal.

"No question, the checking tonight was playoff style," said New York Coach Al Arbour. "That's why so much of this game really was played between the blue lines."

Black Hawks 5, Blues 0

Al Secord scored twice in less than three minutes and goaltender Murray Bannerman kicked out 33 shots to register his fourth shutout, pacing Chicago's triumph over St. Louis.

Secord, who also had an assist, beat St. Louis goalie Mike Liut at 8:54 and 11:31 of the second period. Previously, the left wing had set up Denis Savard with a pass off the boards to establish a 3-0 advantage for Chicago.

Rangers 5, Kings 5

Anders Hedberg scored the tying goal with 33 seconds left to help the Rangers gain a standoff with Los Angeles.

The Kings had pulled into a 5-4 lead with 6:38 left to play when Marcel Dionne deflected a drive by defenseman Mark Hardy past Rangers goalie Ed Mio. Hedberg then took a pass from Reijo Ruotsalainen on a breakaway to beat Kings rookie goalie Gary Laskoski, who was forced back in the net as far back as possible in an unsuccessful attempt to make a save.

Canadiens 7, Canucks 3

Pierre Mondou and Mark Napier scored two goals each and Montreal's special teams dominated the manpower advantages as the Canadiens skated to an easy victory over Vancouver.

The Canadiens scored three power-play goals and rookie Guy Carbonneau added a shorthanded goal. Montreal also got a brilliant game in goal from Richard Sevigny as Vancouver outshot the Habs 40-39.

Henning to guide Falcons in 1983

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Dan Henning, who helped guide the Washington Redskins to the Super Bowl title as an assistant, was named head coach of the Atlanta Falcons on Tuesday, the sixth coach in the National Football League club's history.

Henning, 40, an assistant head coach and offensive coordinator under Joe Gibbs at Washington, replaced Leeman Bennett, who was fired Jan. 14 by the Falcons.

At a news conference Tuesday, Henning said he agreed to take the job during a meeting in Los Angeles on Monday, the day after the Redskins defeated Miami 27-17 in the Super Bowl in nearby Pasadena. Terms of his multi-year contract were not disclosed.

Eddie LeBaron, the Falcons' executive vice president, said Henning was the team's first choice among four candidates.

"We felt he was our top man ... and he made it simple" by accepting immediately, LeBaron said.

Kansas City and the Los Angeles Rams reportedly were interested in Henning as well.

"I felt like this was the best available job and I had made up my mind that if it was offered to me and the situation was to my liking, that I would accept it, which I did yesterday," he said.

He said he preferred Atlanta "because of the ownership, the management, the available player personnel, the particular facilities ... the area of the country."

THE FALCONS management had to wait until after Sunday's Super Bowl to interview Henning because of an NFL rule that one team cannot recruit another's assistants until its season is over.

Henning said he had always dreamed of being a head coach in the NFL.

"The dream to become a head coach starts when you get into coaching," said Henning. "But in reality, about five or six years ago I took the logical steps to get from there to here."

Henning began his coaching career at Florida State in 1968 as quarterback and receiver coach, and also coached at Virginia Tech. He has been in the NFL for seven years with the New York Jets, Miami Dolphins and Redskins.

He was a quarterback with William and Mary from 1960 to 1963 and played with the Norfolk Neptunes of the Continental League and the San Diego Chargers.

LeBaron also had interviewed Dallas Cowboys' quarterback coach John Mackovic, New York Jets' offensive coordinator Joe Walton and Cincinnati receiver and quarterback coach Lindy Infante for the job.

Bennett, the only winning coach in the Falcons' 17-year history, was fired after the team lost to the Minnesota Vikings in the opening round of the playoffs. The Falcons reached a 5-2 record in the strike-shortened 1982 NFL season but then lost their last three games.

Bennett had a 47-44 record with the Falcons, including a 1-3 mark in playoff games. His best season was in 1980, when the Falcons captured the West Division title with a 12-4 record.

Bills give Stephenson first shot as pro head coach

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Kay Stephenson, the Buffalo Bills' quarterback coach whose only head coaching experience had been at the high school level, was named Tuesday to succeed Chuck Knox as head coach of the National Football League team.

"We're going to be sound; we're going to be a solid team," Stephenson told a news conference at Rich Stadium after his appointment was announced by club owner Ralph Wilson.

Stephenson, 38, a Bills' quarterback in 1968, becomes the youngest head coach in the NFL.

Knox resigned last week to take the head coaching job with the Seattle Seahawks.

Knox had brought Stephenson to the Bills from the Los Angeles Rams' coaching staff in 1978. That was after Knox had left the Rams' head coaching job to come to Buffalo.

Wilson said he had talked with several candidates for the head coaching pmosition, including Tom Catlin, 51, the Bills' defensive coordinator, and Marv Levy, former head coach of the Kansas City Chiefs.

Wilson said he reached his decision at 4 p.m. Monday. He indicated that Stephenson's knowledge of the Bills' system and players proved in his favor.

"It was a tough decision," Wilson said. "The other two men were well qualified."

Wilson said that when he asked Stephenson about his offensive policy, the coach replied, "I do pass, Mr. Wilson, on first downs."

"That was a big plus with me," Wilson said. "A very big plus."

Stephenson said the first thing he wants to do is talk to as many of the Bills' players as possible.

The team has two players — star running back Joe Cribbs and wide receiver Jerry Butler — who were holdouts for much of the 1982 season. Cribbs, his dispute with the front office still unsettled, has said he wants to be traded if the Bills won't renegotiate his contract.

The Bills also have about 15 players who can become free agents this year. That makes them eligible to try to negotiate with other teams, although Buffalo would have first crack at trying to sign them.

Several players also have expressed disappointment that Knox no longer will be their coach.

Bulldogs have problems in third period advantage of the Bulldogs lack of offense and took the lead, 25-24, midway through the second period.

The Steers led by as much as three but Midland came back and took a one-point margin, 31-30, into the dressing room.

"We played a good first half but then the game got away from us," Stephenson said.

Stephenson assigned James Pitts to cover Wrightsil one-on-one and with good results. The high scoring senior managed only four points in the third period.

BUT MIDLAND was jinxed, literally. Center "Jinx" Valenzuela picked up the slack, scoring eight of his 14 points in the deciding quarter as Big Spring outscored Midland 18-11, for a 48-42 lead.

It was the third period that held the turning point of the game.

"We got within one point," Stephenson said. "And then..."

Hixon's 19 points led the Bulldogs' scoring and Johnny Pannell chipped in with ten.

The MHS junior varsity lost 54-52.

Reagan draws petroleum industry's ire

By WILLIAM GARLAND
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has drawn the ire of the oil and gas industry with his proposal this week for a "contingency excise tax" on domestic oil production.

The tax proposal, included in his federal budget plan for 1984, is given little chance for passage. But it is considered a door-opener to other tax proposals that the Texas congressional delegation and the industry oppose.

"Now that Reagan has suggested a new tax on domestic oil, that leaves the field open for other people to come and do it, too," said an aide to a Texas congressman with heavy oil production in his district.

The Texas oil and gas industry, considered vital to the economy of many Texas cities, is in a period of downturn because of lower oil prices, and increased taxes could further weaken the industry, according to the industry.

"We think it's a real bad precedent," said the congressional aide, who did not want to be named.

Reagan's excise tax would fall on domestic and imported oil in October 1985 at a rate of $5 per barrel, but only if three events occur: Congress adopts certain proposed budget cuts, the deficit exceeds a specified level and if, on July 1, 1985, the economy is growing.

The proposed tax on imported oil also was cited by one Senate aide as being potentially harmful to Texas. He said that such an import fee might further damage the economies of Mexico nnd Venezuela and lead to a more steady overflow of illegal aliens from south of the border.

The proposals this week by Reagan came at a time when there are other signals that energy taxes, particularly those on independent producers, will be examined and pursued.

"I hate to cast total gloom on the situation, but I think this is going to be a tough year," said Peter Wellish, a spokesman for the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the oversight subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee, has pledged this year to examine in hearings all tax breaks currently given to the independent sector of the industry.

Among tax provisions that would be examined is the percentage depletion allowance, which no longer is available to major oil and gas produers. Independents are permitted the tax break on the first 1,000 barrels of their production.

Also, independents pay less on the windfall profits tax than majors, and independents are permitted to write off 100 percent of their intangible drilling costs, whereas majors can write off only 85 percent in any given year. Majors can deduct the additional 15 percent over a three-year period.

One reason the independent sector of the industry is coming under scrutiny is that campaign donations during the last elections went almost exclusively to Republican candidates, even if the Democratic candidate supported the industry, according to sources both in Congress and the industry.

The industry's support of the opponent to House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., was cited as being especially irksome to Democrats, along with the fact that opponents to such industry supporters as Oklahoma Democratic Reps. Dave McCurdy and Glenn English were given oil and gas industry funding.

"I think at this point it's a warning signal (because of the Republican funding)," said a Texas congressional aide about the proposed hearings on independents.

Tax breaks for the independent petroleum industry have come under scrutiny before, and members of the Texas House and Senate delegations have been responsible for holding on to them.

It was noted by one observer, however, that Rangel was given little chance last year in his effort to change private pensions for the wealthy. He eventually was successful in limiting the tax-free contributions to pension plans.

Industry leaders wary

Local oilmen are reacting warily to President Reagan's proposal to place a $5 per barrel contingency tax on crude oil by 1985. Some feel the tax has little or no chance of passing Congress.

Such a tax would inhibit drilling at a time when the industry is already suffering from adverse economic conditions which have scared away many potential investors.

"It would be bad for the nation," said Hans Hansen of Hilliard Oil and Gas. "The industry as a whole runs on a pretty narrow profit margin, and I think the $5 a barrel tax would inhibit a great deal of drilling.

"People will not invest as much as if it wasn't hanging over their heads."

Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, also opposes the tax idea.

"We already have an excise tax on production," Thompson said, referring to the so called Windfall Profits Tax.

"Our position is, if they're going to put one on, they ought to put it on imports."

Now is the time to begin taxing imports, Thompson said, as the price of imported crudes is dropping. "Every time they cut the price, increase the tax," he said.

Such a system would have the effect of supporting prices paid for domestic crude.

Thompson said he doubted the contingency tax idea would ever become law. The PBPA is behind a tax on imported crude oil and petroleum products, which now come into the U.S. tax-free.

Referring to the Rangel hearings, which will examine the tax breaks given independents versus major oil companies, Thompson said, "They better include in their hearing the foreign tax credit, exemption from foreign export tax and excise taxes and other goodies that are included in the major company side of the ledger that are not afforded the independent."

Hansen said giving independent producers some special tax breaks was a policy well thought out at the time and it doesn't need to be examined by Congress again. "That battle has been fought," he said.

FAA won't budge on slots

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration said Tuesday it won't expand the number of landing slots at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport in time to accommodate an airline trying to forge a Texas division with some assets of Braniff International.

Although flight restrictions will be lifted entirely at six other airports this spring and summer, an FAA spokesman said the Dallas-Fort Worth facility does not have enough air traffic controllers to handle more airplanes.

"At this time, we see no way additional slots will be made available by May 1," FAA spokesman Dennis Feldman told The Dallas Morning News on Tuesday.

The question of additional slots rose Monday when a federal bankruptcy judge said the FAA might be able to accommodate the planned Texas division of Pacific Southwest Airlines and not recall slots from competing airlines.

The FAA parceled out most of Braniff's 411 landing slots on a temporary basis after the airline grounded flights and filed for protection from its creditors in bankruptcy court last May.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers approved Monday the Braniff-PSA deal to lease 30 planes and hire up to 2,000 former Braniff employees. Flowers also ruled the landing slots were the property of Braniff's estate and necessary to the success of the PSA venture.

The judge ordered the FAA to return the slots to Braniff for transfer to PSA, a move the FAA earlier had said it would not make because it did not believe PSA was a "successor" airline to Braniff.

PUC looks at fuel charge

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission met today to rule on a proposal to bar utility companies from passing increased fuel costs on to customers.

The fuel adjustment charge often is the largest part of a customer's monthly bill. Gov. Mark White, during his successful campaign last year, said the charge is unfair and called for its abolition.

The three-member PUC listened to three hours of testimony from its staff, consumers and utility company officials in January. Several utility company officials said the fuel adjustment charge is needed to reflect the fluctuations in fuel costs.

PUC Chairman Moak Rollins said he was leaning toward dropping the fuel adjustment charge, not because he thought it would reduce bills. Rollins said customers are upset that the charge is calculated at the end of the month.

"The customer objects to being told after they have used the product what the price was going to be," Rollins said after the January hearing.

Utility company witnesses testified the elimination of the automatic passthrough of fuel costs would not lower monthly bills.

G.H. King of West Texas Utilities testified in January that elimination of the fuel adjustment charge is unreasonable because the price of fuel keeps rising.

All-savers deductions can be carried over

Fifth in a series of "tax tip" articles provided by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Q. If I invested in one of the new savings certificates and earned part of the interest in 1981, is my "one-time" deduction limited to that amount?

A. The "one-time" deduction on the special savings certificates applies to the dollar amount of interest. If an individual taxpayer received a quarterly interest payment on Dec. 31, 1982 of less than $1,000 ($2,000 for a joint return filer) he was able to deduct the entire amount of the interest income.

The difference between the 1981 deduction and the limit ($1,000/$2,000) is the ceiling for a 1982 deduction. In other words, if an individual taxpayer received $600 of deductible interest in 1982, he can deduct up to $400 interest in 1982.

If you still do not reach the limit in 1982 and you invest in another one-year certificate before Dec. 31, 1982, you can take the remaining available deduction in 1983.

You should remember if you redeem the certificate prior to maturity, no deduction will be allowed and any amount claimed in a prior year must be reported as income. The certificates also lose their tax benefit if used for collateral, or if the taxpayer has to borrow the money to make the initial investment.

Q. In 1981 I was able to exclude up to $200 of dividends and interest ($400 on a joint return). Will the exclusion be the same for 1982?

A. No, it is true that in 1981 you were able to exclude up to $200 ($400 on a joint return) of both interest and dividends. Congress passed this provision in 1980 along with the Windfall Profit Tax Act. But the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 does away with that same exclusion. Beginning in 1982, the law reverts to its original requirements. You will only be entitled to a dividend exclusion of $100 ($200 on a joint return) and there will be no interest exclusion.

Q. My credit union sends me a year-end statement which lists how much I earned during the past year on my deposits and refers to the earnings as dividends. Should I show this on my tax return the same way I do my stock dividends?

A. No, the income you receive from your credit union on deposits you have with them is not a dividend for tax purposes. It should be reported as interest income along with other interest income you might have.

For more information on this and other income tax questions, attend the"You and Your Income Tax" class sponsored by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants. The class, scheduled for Tuesday, February 8th, from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m. is presented as a public service.

Classes will be held at Midland College in the Allison Fine Arts Building. Send $2.00 with your name and address to Taxpayer Education, P.O. Box 151, Midland, Texas 79702. Pre-registration is encouraged, but walk-in registration will be accepted.

Swedish singers making musical about chess players

Bjorn Ulvaeus

Benny Andersson

MOSCOW (AP) — Singers Bjorn Ulvaeus and Benny Andersson of Sweden's Abba pop group are making a musical about Soviet chess players, and want to make sure everything in the stage production will be authentic.

For that reason, a Moscow newspaper reported Tuesday, the singers spent four days in the Soviet capital last week, observing chess players and meeting with Soviet performers, including a popular singer here, Alla Pugacheva.

Ulvaeus and Andersson are collaborating with British song writers Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd-Webber to present characters Andersson describes as "simple people, although quite unusual." They are "not ordinary chess players, but Russian chess players," he said.

"Chess is an interesting part of the culture of human society," said Rice, who also made the trip here.

"Peaceful battles which take place on black and white boards are often full of such tension and psychology and dynamism that one wonders why no one before us thought of writing a musical about it," he said.

Eve Arden

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Eve Arden, the star of the late-1950s television comedy "Our Miss Brooks," has withdrawn from her first Broadway show in 42 years less than a week before it was to open.

The 70-year-old actress decided to leave "Moose Murders," a farce set in New York's Adironack mountains, because of "artistic differences," a spokesman said Tuesday, describing her departure as amicable.

The comedy, written by Arthur Bicknell, had been in previews since Jan. 29 and was due to open Monday.

Tuesday's scheduled preview performance was canceled when Miss Arden's decision was announced. The show will stay closed until Feb. 11 while the producers look for a new star, the spokesman said.

Miss Arden, last on Broadway in 1941 in the hit Cole Porter musical "Let's Face It," was not immediately available for comment. Her husband, actor Brooks West, said she was busy in a meeting.

Steven Spielberg

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steven Spielberg, nominated three times previously for a Directors Guild of America award but never a winner, is hoping this will be his year with "E.T., the Extra-Terrestrial."

He faces strong competition, since other nominees include Taylor Hackford for "An Officer and a Gentleman," Wolfgang Petersen for "Das Boot," Sydney Pollack for "Tootsie" and Richard Attenborough for "Gandhi."

The winner will be named March 12 at awards dinners held simultaneously in Los Angeles and New York. None of the nominees has won the award before.

More than 6,700 guild members are expected to participate in the voting.

The nominations are considered a preview of the Academy Awards. Only twice in 35 years has the Directors Guild winner failed to win the Oscar.

Spielberg, 36, has already been named best director by the National Society of Film Critics and the Los Angeles Film Critics. He has been nominated three times previously by the Directors Guild — in 1975 for "Jaws," 1977 for "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" and last year for "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

Pollack, 48, won the best director award for "Tootsie" from the New York Film Critics.

DENISON, Texas (AP) — Lindell Hill, the first American to receive a "piggy-back" heart transplant, died Tuesday at the age of 42.

Hill went to Grooetschuur Hospital in Cape Town, South Africa, for a seven-hour operation in which a donor organ was implanted next to his own failing heart on Aug. 5, 1977. Hill became the 14th recipient of the experimental operation, developed by South African surgeon Dr. Christiaan Barnard.

Anti-nudity ban threatens Florida's burlesque houses

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A purge sweeping Florida's panhandle is threatening burlesque houses known to sailors and airmen across the nation.

"It's simply that we don't want the wrath of God to take this country down the tubes," says Robert Crete, headmaster at Rocky Bayou Christian School near Fort Walton Beach. "We're no longer going to permit Christians...to sit back and let the pagans take over."

In 1982, four Panhandle counties adopted controversial ordinances banning public nudity. This Gulf Coast resort region includes one of America's largest concentrations of military bases, the source of many customers for the burlesque shows.

In Fort Walton Beach, neighbor to huge Eglin Air Force Base, a city anti-nudity law took effect Jan. 24.

Last Thursday, Pensacola's City Council gave initial approval to a nudity ban that seems likely to be adopted.

Pensacola, next door to a naval air station, is home of several nude bars, such as Trader Jon's. Military men from around the globe, including England's Prince Andrew, have visited the downtown tavern, whose walls are plastered with memorabilia to prove it.

Motives for the keep-it-covered campaign are varied: Some say nude dancing is morally offensive, others argue that sin-and-skin images are bad for tourism and property values.

And local governments now are convinced they can win cover-up cases in court.

After a five-year court battle, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to strike down Lee County's anti-nudity ordinance in 1981. A Florida court had ruled that nude dancing is not constitutionally protected expression, but rather a means to promote liquor sales.

So far, two county ordinances have been challenged in north Florida. A local judge has upheld the constitutionality of Leon County's anti-nudity ordinance and a case is pending in Bay County, home of Tyndall Air Force Base.

Local authorities haven't hesitated to enforce the new morality codes.

A five-member male stripper group called Fast Freddie and the Playboys was arrested last Wednesday in Ocala, south of Gainesville in Marion County.

The same group was ordered to appear in court in Bay County for allegedly showing too much skin during a performance Jan. 10.

In Bay County, a bar manager and three women competing for $100 in a "hot legs" contest were arrested Jan. 17. The manager has pleaded innocent in county court.

In Fort Walton Beach, a downtown bar was busted hours after a municipal anti-nudity ordinance took effect Jan. 24. The local law bans nudity in establishments that serve alcoholic drinks.

Authorities charged bar manager Ken Russell with a misdemeanor violation because they said a hallway to a room where erotic films were shown offered too much access for alcohol-consuming patrons.

Bar owner Bill "Cash" Moore wants a jury trial for his manager, and predicts victory in court.

Moore devised a way to get around Fort Walton Beach's anti-nudity law. Burlesque dancers perform upstairs, where patrons are served non-alcoholic drinks.

"So far, we've been pleased with the crowds," says Moore. "The people aren't coming to drink — they're coming for the shows."

Downstairs, Moore operates a retail liquor outlet and a bar. Last year, his bar and retail liquor enterprise grossed $2 million, money spent mostly by tourists and military personnel from nearby Eglin Air Force Base, Moore says.

In surrounding Okaloosa County, which attracts nearly 2 million tourists a year, exotic dancers perform at two clubs outside the reach of the city ordinance.

City leaders have urged the Okaloosa County Commission to adopt a county-wide nudity ban, but county leaders have refused so far.

Superbowl captures largest audience in game's history

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Washington Redskins weren't the only Super Bowl winners, as NBC drew a record audience for the televised game to hit the top of the ratings for the week ending Jan. 30.

The National Football League championship game was seen in 40,480,000 homes, the biggest audience in the game's 17-year history, NBC said. The Redskins beat the Miami Dolphins 27-17 in the game played Sunday in Pasadena.

For the week, NBC finished ahead of CBS by more than three ratings points. ABC was third.

The game had a rating of 48.6 and a share of 69 percent, according to NBC and ABC. CBS listed the rating as 49.5 and the share as 68 percent.

The audience was the biggest ever, but last year's game had a higher rating of 49.1 and share of 73 percent. The audience was higher in 1983, however, because the number of television homes has increased.

NBC had a rating of 20.7 in the weekly ratings provided by the A.C. Nielsen Co. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 20.7 percent of the homes with television were tuned to NBC. CBS was second with 17.3 and ABC was third with 16.4.

NBC won the weekly ratings twice before this season, both times because of the World Series.

The second-highest rated show of the week was the Super Bowl post-game show. CBS' "Dallas" was third.

Some of the football audience stayed with NBC after the game, giving fourth place to a preview of a new series "The A-Team." The humorous action-adventure show placed fifth last week for the premiere of the two-hour pilot movie. The series begins its regular run on Tuesday, Feb. 8.

ABC's "Dynasty," getting its highest rating ever, was in fifth place. Others in the Top 10 were "Magnum, P.I.," "Simon & Simon" and "Falcon Crest," all CBS, ABC's "The Love Boat" and CBS' "M-A-S-H."

CBS' "60 Minutes," often the top-rated show, was shoved down to 50th place because it was aired opposite the Super Bowl.

Here are the Top 10: Super Bowl XVII, a rating of 48.6 or 40.4 million households, NBC; Super Bowl post-game, 34.0 or 28.3 million, NBC; "Dallas," 26.8 or 22.3 million, CBS; "The A-Team," special, 26.4 or 22.0 million, NBC; "Dynasty," 26.3 or 21.9 million, ABC; "Magnum, P.I.," 24.1 or 20.0 million, CBS; "Simon & Simon," 24.0 or 19.9 million, CBS; "Falcon Crest," 23.8 or 19.8 million, CBS; "The Love Boat," 23.7 or 19.7 million, ABC; "M-A-S-H," 23.0 or 19.1 million, CBS.

Here are the next 10: "Hill Street Blues," 22.2 or 18.4 million, NBC; "That's Incredible," 21.8 or 18.1 million, ABC; ABC Monday Night Movie, "Malibu," Part 2, 21.0 or 17.4 million, ABC; "The Fall Guy," 20.8 or 17.3 million, ABC; "Walt Disney," "The Shaggy D.A.," Part 1, 19.9 or 16.5 million, CBS; "Newhart," 19.9 or 16.3 million, CBS; "Knots Landing," 19.6 or 16.3 million, CBS; "Facts of Life," 19.4 or 16.1 million, NBC; "Real People," 19.1 or 15.9 million, NBC; "Bob Hope's All-Star Super Bowl Party," 18.6 or 15.4 million, NBC.

Here are the five lowest-rated shows: "Bring 'Em Back Alive," CBS; "Taxi," NBC; ABC Monday Night Movie, "The Fog," ABC; "Ripley's Believe It or Not," ABC; Democratic Response Analysis, NBC.

Judge to determine legality of FCC's foreign meetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has directed a district judge to determine whether the Federal Communications Commission acted illegally when it held "consultative meetings" with representatives of foreign governments.

The appeals court said a lower court judge erred in 1980 when he ruled the plaintiffs had no legal standing to raise the issue.

FCC officials reacted with surprise to the 61-page ruling, suggesting it could cripple efforts to spur more competition in international communications.

"My guess is that there is a very serious possibility the commission will want to contest parts of this ruling," said Daniel M. Armstrong, the FCC's associate general counsel. "The idea that Congress doesn't want us to attend meetings where foreign governments want to close a meeting...well, there are a lot of implications to that."

The case centers on the ability of FCC commissioners to lobby foreign officials to permit more competition in the international communication field.

The case was launched by ITT World Communications Inc., one of four carriers that now dominate international telex, telegraph and data transmissions, after FCC officials and foreign rerpresentatives closed a "consultative process meeting" in Dublin, Ireland, in late 1979.

The consultative meetings, begun in 1974, were designed to allow FCC members and officials of American carriers like ITT to meet periodically with their foreign counterparts to discuss such things as technical connections and traffic forecasts.

In 1979, the commission began using the meetings to encourage foreign cooperation with newly authorized carriers, the court said. It convinced foreign officials to discuss the issue "and to exclude representatives of American carriers from this part of the meeting."

Marx's companion calls bank's attorney 'assassin'

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Erin Fleming called a lawyer "an assassin" from the witness stand in the Groucho Marx estate trial before being calmed down enough to discuss her days with the late comedian.

"I was like a Marx sister," Miss Fleming told jurors in the Marx estate trial Tuesday as she described her efforts to put Marx on stage when he was in his 80s.

"I was almost like his stand-in," she said. "What I did was rehearse with Mr. Marx what he was going to do. He'd say, 'Do you think this is funny?' and I'd fall down laughing or I'd say, 'It stinks.'"

But talk of show business came late in a day which featured volatile exchanges between Miss Fleming and attorney J. Brin Schulman, who represents the Bank of America, executors of the Marx estate.

He called Miss Fleming to the stand as a hostile witness, and sought to show she had acted illegally as Marx's agent.

Miss Fleming protested the trial and exploded at the attorney.

"That is an assassin," she shouted. "Mr. Brin Schulman is an assassin and he murdered Groucho Marx."

Superior Court Judge Jacqueline Weiss told Miss Fleming she was out of order, called a recess and had jurors led from the courtroom.

Miss Fleming then resumed her testimony after a warning from the judge in chambers that she would be held in contempt if she did not keep quiet.

The 42-year-old former actress was agitated from the start of the court session. "I'm totally harassed, harangued and ruined by this court case," she said. "My civil rights have been denied me."

The Bank of America is seeking return of $400,000, two houses, cars and other gifts bank officials say Groucho gave Miss Fleming during the seven years she was the late comedian's companion. Miss Fleming has filed her own suit, saying the bank's actions forced her into poverty.

Schulman asked Miss Fleming if she had tried to arrange a TV special for Marx just before he died in 1977 at age 86.

"It was awfully difficult to arrange a TV special when my dear Groucho was screaming and crying for me," she said. "And I couldn't go to him because I was being held in this courthouse."

She then reminded jurors that she had been the subject of a conservatorship case five years ago when Marx was alive.

Writer, friends mourn dog's death

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Friends of Pete, the honorary mayor of Bridgehampton, N.Y., and longtime canine companion of writer Willie Morris, have mourned the dog's death with a funeral and a wake.

Morris and the Labrador retriever found each other when he lived in the Long Island community in the mid-1970s.

"My heart's been cut out because he was my brother," said Morris, a former editor of Harper's magazine and now a journalist-in-residence at the University of Mississippi. "I'm an only child...I'll get a wife before I get another dog."

Morris and a small group of friends held a memorial service Tuesday after Pete died. Friends at Bobby Van's Restaurant in Bridgehampton also planned a wake.

Worker ratio decreasing

In 1950, there were 16 workers paying into the nation's Social Security system for every beneficiary taking something out, according to the American Council of Life Insurance. Today, that ratio is a little more than three workers for every beneficiary, and in 50 years the ratio is expected to be 2 to 1.

NBC takes 'Taxi' off air until March

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — NBC has pulled "Taxi" from its television lineup with a promise that the series, which stars Judd Hirsch, will return in March.

Once a hit on ABC, "Taxi" has not been drawing high ratings on NBC, which saved the show from extinction when ABC dropped it last year.

"Taxi," which started on Thursdays for NBC and was moved to Saturdays, goes "on hiatus" next week, to be replaced by the former NBC situation comedy "Teachers Only," the network announced Tuesday.

Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, said the poor ratings of "Taxi" were "our fault in misplacing it on Saturdays. But we will rectify that with a good time period hopefully by mid-March. This we hope will provide us ample time to give 'Taxi' a shot at making it on NBC before we set our fall schedule."

Former secretary touched by air-traffic controllers' actions

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — When Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis visted the air-traffic control center in Dallas recently, employees there gave him a radio headset, appropriately mounted, with words declaring him an honorary controller.

"When these guys who had just stuck with us through thick and thin and everything presented that to me, I broke down and cried," Lewis said. "I was so embarrassed, I didn't know what to say."

Thus, one of the few times that Drew Lewis lost his cool during his two-year stewardship of the Transportation Department came when he was surrounded by air-traffic controllers. He had fired 11,400 of them when they went on strike in August 1981, and kept the airplanes flying at a somewhat reduced level with those who were left: the ones who gave him the headset.

Lewis' tenure as head of the Department of Transportation officially ended at midnight Monday; Tuesday he became the chief operating officer of Warner Amex, a cable television firm.

HIS ACHIEVEMENTS include much more than keeping the planes flying, although that established him as a star in the Reagan administration. New taxes are in place to finance aviation, highway and transit needs. New legislation makes it possible for the federal government to sell Conrail. And an officially adopted plan imposes some order on the future of Washington National Airport.

But Lewis also will go down as the transportation secretary who oversaw the dismantling of a long-time government effort to require automobile manufacturers to install airbags or other devices that automatically would restrain auto drivers or passengers in a collision, regardless of whether they had buckled up.

The last chapter is not written on that subject, because it now is before the Supreme Court. But the administration's rigid opposition to a device that many are convinced could save thousands of lives also will be part of Lewis' legacy.

He talked last week about airbags, controllers and what he regarded as a major disappointment: the fact that Congress did not pass an administration-backed maritime reform bill, a task that will be high on the priority list of his successor, Elizabeth Hanford Dole.

"OF THE 50,000 people killed on the highways" every year, Lewis said, "25,000 are involved in drunken driving, and a large portion of the balance would be saved if we did something in terms of seat belts...If we just continued to hammer away on this drunk-driving thing and did an effective job, I think you'd find it would save considerably more lives than you would through airbags."

But how many more lives could be saved with airbags?

"I have a legal problem" in answering that, Lewis said. "I can't comment on something before the Supreme Court. The bottom line is, I feel we have an adequate program for safety."

Lewis is, of course, pleased that the air-traffic control system performed as well as it did after the controllers' strike. But he claims to be aware of the human toll that strike took.

"We would have liked to have figured out some way to bring some of those people back," he said, "I would like to think there was a better solution than the one we had, but I don't have a better solution...I've worried about that for two years, because I get letters from people who say they've lost their house and their wife left them because they don't have a job, and I'm not insensitive... "

On the other hand, he added: "I think when we're back to 100 percent capacity, we'll have a safer system than we ever had pre-strike. And that is not in any way being critical of the people who worked before the strike; it's something we learned because of the strike, because we were forced to handle things a little differently."

LEWIS SAID THAT even after the system is fully restored, which he expects will be sometime late this year, controllers will continue holding airplanes on the ground until certain that there is a "slot" for them to land at their destination.

This will eliminate the circling patterns in which jets burn fuel and cockpit tempers fray. Some airlines are concerned, however, that the policy will make it difficult to schedule service so that one flight can connect with many others.

The maritime issue is complex, involving regulation, international competition and how to pay for expanding U.S. harbors to accommodate the enormous ships of the future.

A controversial bill that deals with one part of the puzzle, the regulatory changes for international trade, passed the House last year but died in the Senate.

Gramm raises $491,880 for election

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Former Democratic Rep. Phil Gramm has raised nearly half a million dollars so far to bankroll next month's special election, according to campaign finance records filed with the Federal Election Commission.

From Jan. 1 to Jan. 23, Gramm raised $491,880, all but $58,000 from contributions by private citizens. The remainder was donated by political action committees.

Gramm was re-elected as a Democrat last November, but resigned in January after House Democrats expelled him from the House Budget Committee. He then decided to file as a Republican in the Feb. 12 special election for his old seat in the 6th Congressional District.

Records for Gramm's challengers were due Monday and are not yet available.

It took 876 pages to list the 6,000 contributions Gramm received from individual supporters. Donations ranged from as little as one dollar to the legal maximum of $1,000. Most were in the $10-$100 range.

More than 60 PAC's also helped fill Gramm's campaign chest. The two PAC's giving the maximum $5,000 contribution were Citizens for the Republic, which supports conservative congressional candidates, and Public Service PAC, which opposes the unionization of public employees.

The 1st City Bankcorporation PAC of Houston, First Bank & Trust PAC, of Bryan, and the PepsiCo Concerned Citizens Fund all donated $2,000 or more.

Among those contributing $1,000 were PACs representing the Conservative Victory Fund, Alcoa, King Ranch, Southwestern Bell Employees, the Tennessee Gas Tranmission Employees, Union Oil Political Awareness Fund and the Association of American Physicians and Surgeons.

PACs representing Sears, Getty Oil, Dr. Pepper and International Minerals and Chemicals Corp. all donated $500 to Gramm's campaign.

During the first three weeks of January, Gramm reported campaign expenditures of $140,678. Among the expenses were $60,000 for production and broadcast of commercials, $34,270 for mailings, $11,981 for a mailing list, $7,700 for polling and $5,580 for telephone services.

UN officer discussing refugees

MEXICO CITY (AP) — United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees Poul Hartling is meeting with Mexican officials this week to discuss aid to Guatemalan refugees in the southern part of the country.

Hartling arrived Saturday and is scheduled to hold talks with President Miguel de la Madrid, Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda and Interior Minister Manuel Bartlett before he leaves on Thursday.

The United Nations estimates that 30,000 Guatemalan refugees live in Chiapas, Mexico's southernmost state. Some have told reporters they fled out of fear they would be killed by the Guatemalan army in its offensive against leftist guerrillas.

Four refugees were killed last week and a fifth was kidnapped by an armed band dressed as peasants and "presumably from Guatemala," the interior ministry said during the weekend. The deaths were the latest in a series of border-crossing incidents in the area.

The Guatemalan government has denied press reports that its soldiers were responsible for the killings.

Highway department to take bids

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation will accept bids until 9 a.m. Feb. 16 on an estimated $781,635 of construction along 4.5 miles of U.S 87 and FM 461 in Howard County.

Project engineer is Joe Smoot of Big Spring and the project is scheduled to take 160 working days to complete.

The project involves constructing a left turn lane and grading work on FM 461 between U.S. 87 and FM 821, and on U.S. 87 at FM 461, according to the department.

THFC OKs construction of addition

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission has approved a request from Upton county Convalescent Center of McCamey to amend a certificate of need authorizing the construction of an addition.

The completion deadline is extended from Dec. 1, 1982, to March 1, 1983.

The certificate of need authorizes the construction of a 5,952-square-foot addition fo the existing 13-bed, intermediate nursing home facility for the expansion of support areas and 17 additional intermediate beds.

Where are U.S. troops stationed overseas?

The number of U.S. servicemen stationed outside the country went up 28,800, or 5.6 percent, during 1982.
Naval forces increased by 9,800, or 13 percent, ground forces went up 19,800 or 4.5 percent.

There was an enormous percentage increase in the number of troops in the Mideast, but the total there remained a minute fraction of those in Europe and Asia.
At the end of 1982, (September figures, the latest available) there were 543,400 U.S. military men stationed overseas, 80,300 in naval forces and 463,100 on land.

Rome's hottest boutique specializes in hand-tailored cardinal crimsons

ROME (AP) — The hottest boutique around Rome these days is a tiny, dark shop nestled on a downtown square where a family of tailors is hand sewing flaming red vestments for most of the 18 newly named cardinals.

Chicago Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin buys his clothes from the Gammarelli Brothers, the pope's official tailors, and so do the archbishops of Berlin, Bangkok, Thailand and Abidjan, Ivory Coast.

According to Annibale Gammarelli, orders for scarlet vestments of every size and shape started pouring in as soon as Pope John Paul II named the new cardinals in early January. He said most of the prelates who will be elevated in a consistory on Wednesday have since placed their orders.

"From Caracas to Bangkok, the phone didn't stop ringing," Gammarelli said in an interview. "And from then on we didn't stop working."

Annibale and his brother Francesco, both in their 40s, are backed by a 190-year family tradition of making vestments for priests.

The shop has dressed all popes this century except Pius XII, who brought his own tailor to the Vatican. During a conclave to select a new pope, the Gammarellis prepare three sets of vestments — one for a normal-sized man, one short and stout, and one tall and lean.

When a man is elevated to cardinal — the closest collaborator of the pope and a prince of the Roman Catholic Church — his wardrobe becomes mostly red to symbolize the blood of religious martyrs.

The most important items worn by the cardinal are the zucchetto, or skull cap, and the three-coroned biretta, which the pope personally places on the head of each man during the consistory.

> "From Caracas to Bangkok, the phone didn't stop ringing. And from then on we didn't stop working."

For formal occasions, the cardinal wears a scarlet cassock with the mozzetta or small crimson cape, and crimson moire sash. For daily wear he dons a black cassock and mozzetta trimmed in red with matching red buttons and a red moire sash.

Proper length is below the ankle — just high enough to allow a dash of red sock to peek through. Shoes are basic black.

Gammarelli said the cardinal's cassock, complete with mozzetta, costs "as much as a hand-tailored suit" or between $300 and $400.

Fortunately, the Gammarelli brothers and their six assistants were able to begin work before the cardinals began arriving for fittings late last week. The tailors keep files of the measurements of each customer who comes to their shop.

Most of the newly named cardinals were on the Gammarelli register from their student days here, when benefactors treated them to an exclusive Gammarelli cassock. The only new buyer among the 18 cardinals was Archbishop Michael Michai Kitbunchu of Bangkok.

The pace was hectic at the Gammarelli's shop on Monday as the prelates stopped in for fittings or their secretaries arrived to pick up finished orders.

Bernardin to focus on issues

ROME (AP) — Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago, a leader of the U.S. bishops' antinuclear movement, says he doesn't expect his life to change much as a cardinal and he still intends to concentrate on social issues.

The 54-year-oldBernardin and 17 other men will be elevated to cardinal today at the Vatican. In that position, they will join Pope John Paul II's close advisers, who will choose his eventual successor.

Asked how his role would change when he becomes a prince of the church, Bernardin joked:

"Cardinals traditionally have a special place of respect in the church...You get a bigger chair and you get arms on it."

Bernardin, the only American among the new cardinals, is shy about his new title, and modest when people suggest he has become the most powerful man in the Roman Catholic Church of the United States.

In an 1½-hour chat with reporters earlier this week at Stritch House, a residence for American churchmen in Rome, the head of the largest U.S. archdiocese said his "primary responsibility is to be a good pastor in Chicago. I plan to do a lot of listening."

Bernardin, who has spearheaded a drive by U.S. bishops to condemn nuclear warfare, said he will continue to concentrate on social issues.

"I see a greater need to address social issues facing the church," Bernardin said. "One I'm grappling with now is the question of peace and war, what must be done to promote peace and avoid war."

The archbishop heads a committee that drafted a pastoral letter calling for a nuclear freeze and condemning any intent or threat to use nuclear weapons. It is up for formal adoption by the U.S. National Conference of Catholic Bishops meeting in Chicago in May.

Bernardin, whose parents were Italian immigrants, was born in Columbia, S.C., in 1928.

As archbishop of Cincinnati, he was known for his relaxed style, taking a walk downtown each day and occasionally cooking his own meals. Since his promotion to hea the archdiocese of Chicago last September, he's found administrative tasks take up much more of his time.

"Your phone starts ringing early in the morning and it stops ringing late at night," he said. "It's much more of a struggle to put away time for yourself and time for God. With all I have to do, I don't have time to pray and cook too so I've given up cooking."

At least 30 persons die after refugee expulsion from Nigeria

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Relief agencies say starvation and other hardships have killed at least 30 West Africans among the refugees making an overland trek homeward after Nigeria expelled hundreds of thousands of illegal aliens.

The mass eviction, which took effect Tuesday, was condemned by the opposition party here and by some foreign governments. The Organization of African Unity appealed to Nigerian President Shehu Shagari to allow more time for the exodus to be properly arranged.

Most of those expelled are Ghana nationals. Their homeland, faced with high unemployment and a food shortage, has been hard pressed by the sudden influx of refugees.

The United Nations High Commission for Refugees reported Tuesday that 10 people, apparently Ghanaians, died from starvation during the 400-mile journey home. Spokesman Leon Davico said they were suffering from malnutrition even before setting out on the march and became exhausted walking through Nigeria and neighboring Benin.

Arrest of Americans ordered

'Bo' Gritz

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Police have been ordered to arrest any Americans who try to cross the frontier into Laos to search for alleged U.S. prisoners of war, Thai authorities said today.

The order was issued following newspaper reports that former Green Beret Lt. Col. James G. "Bo" Gritz had returned to Thailand with other Americans on a second mission to rescue U.S. soldiers allegedly held by Communist forces in Indochina.

Thailand's national security council said Gritz could be charged with illegal entry and possession of illegal weapons if caught.

Illegal entry carries a penalty of up to two years in prison and a fine, while illegal possession of battlefield weapons carries a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison.

French Marines in Beirut wounded

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three gunmen riding in a speeding car fired into a group of French Marines who were jogging in Beirut's Moslem sector today and wounded two soldiers, one of them "gravely," a French military spokesman said.

It was the third attack in five days on France's 1,600-man contingent in the multinational peackeeping force here.

Lt. Col. Jean-Claude Marchais, spokesman for the French force, said one of the two injured soldiers was "gravely wounded in the stomach" while the other suffered a minor gunshot wound in the arm.

Nominee apologizes for statement

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's nominee for ambassador to Colombia says he made an "overstatement" when he described some Latin American countries as no more than "a flag, a football team and a seat in the United Nations."

Lewis Arthur Tambs was questioned by members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Tuesday about the statement, made in a paper he wrote for an academic conference in 1975.

Tambs, a consultant to the National Security Council, also wrote that some Latin American countries were "nation states in name only."

Official backs deployment plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top State Department official says any retreat from its decision to deploy nuclear weapons in Western Europe this year would be "the beginning of the end" of NATO as an effective alliance.

Undersecretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger said Tuesday night the NATO countries must resist Soviet political pressures not to install American cruise and Pershing II missiles starting in December.

"If the Soviets learn that we and our allies lack the will in the face of missile rattling to carry out difficult decisions commonly arrived at, then we can look forward to even more aggressive behavior each time we seek to respond to Soviet provocations," Eagleburger said.

Eagleburger, the State Department's third ranking official, spoke to the biennial meeting of the World Jewish Congress Governing Board.

The group, representing Jewish groups from 25 countries, planned to meet today with President Reagan.

U.S.-Soviet arms talks resume

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S.-Soviet strategic arms talks resumed today after a two-month recess, with the chief American negotiator insisting obstacles in the way of a nuclear weapons reduction treaty can be surmounted.

"We're here for an equitable and verifiable agreement," said negotiator Edward L. Rowny. "There is nothing that says any agreement is better than no agreement."

Obstacles to a treaty, he said, "are there. But they are nothing that can't be overcome by people who have seriousness and good will."

The Kremlin has said the talks, which opened in late June, 1982, and recessed in December, are deadlocked.

John Paul II elevates 18 to cardinal

Joseph L. Bernardin

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II elevated 18 men to cardinal today, adding to his circle of close advisers the primate of his native Poland, the leader of the U.S. church's anti-nuclear campaign and, for the first time, a Soviet resident.

The consistory, combining traditions of ancient Rome with solemn Roman Catholic rituals, also put a converted Jew into the College of Cardinals for the first time in modern history — Archbishop Jean-Marie Lustiger of Paris, who converted as a boy during the Nazi occupation of France.

The day's pageantry began with a private ceremony in the Consistory Hall of the Apostolic Palace, where 48 of the 120 incumbent cardinals were present.

While the 18 cardinals-designate waited outside dressed in new scarlet robes, the pontiff announced their names and asked in Latin, "What do you say to these?"

The cardinals then took off their red zucchetti, or skullcaps, and nodded their approval. At that point, the waiting men became princes of the church.

The ceremonies then moved into the modern Paul VI Audience Hall where 10,000 people were expected to watch John Paul bestow on each of the new cardinals a red skullcap and traditional biretta or three-corner hat.

The consistory, like many church ceremonies, has its roots in the Roman empire. From the Latin consortium, consistory once meant a meeting between a Roman emperor and his advisers.

Cardinals elect the pope and serve as his "senate," although they only advise and cannot legislate. Their power comes chiefly from their proximity to the pontiff and their position in the church.

Archbishop Jozef Glemp of Warsaw, for example, will take home solid evidence of papal support that is expected to help him in his dealings with Poland's Communist military government.

Similar prestige goes to Archbishop Julijans Vaivods of Soviet Latvia, a noted author once imprisoned in a labor camp, and to Archbishop Alexandre do Nascimento of Lubango in the Marxist-ruled African nation of Angola.

For 54-year-old Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago, head of the largest archdiocese in the United States, the elevation is seen in part as a gesture of support by John Paul for Bernardin's commitment to secular issues, especially his leadership of the U.S. clerical campaign against nuclear weapons.

Bernardin headed the special committee of U.S. Roman Catholic bishops that drafted a pastoral letter condemning the use or threatened use of nuclear weapons. The document was proposed at a bishops' meeting last November and is expected to be adopted, with minimal revisions, in May.

The new cardinals come from 16 countries and five continents and range in age from 47 to 87. They raise the number of cardinals to 138, but only 120 are under the age of 80 and thus eligible to vote for pope.

John Paul, the first non-Italian pope in more than 450 years, called his last consistory in 1979, when he named 14 new cardinals. He has continued a trend begun by Pope John XXIII to internationalize the church.

His appointments increase Third World representation in the College of Cardinals, put Europe in the minority in the college for the first time, and raise the number of Eastern European cardinals from five to nine.

Turkish man arrested in papal plot

ROME (AP) — Police today arrested a Turkish national they said was suspected of plotting to murder Pope John Paul II during his scheduled trip to Milan next May 6.

Police did not say whether they believed there was any connection between the purported plot and the shooting of John Paul on May 13, 1981, by Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca, who is serving a life sentence for seriously wounding the pontiff.

Police said the Turk, Mustafa Savak, was arrested in Milan today by the carabinieri, Italy's paramilitary police force, but has not yet been formally charged.

Savak was picked up on an arrest warrant issued by an Italian court alleging that he and another person, who was not named, tried to organize an attack on the pope, police said.

Police provided no details on the alleged plot, and no information was immediately available here on Savak's background. Turkish Interpol officials in Akara said they had no record of anyone named Mustafa Isavak.

The Italian news agency ANSA quoted police sources as saying Savak was picked up following accusations by an Italian who was arrested recently in an unrelated case.

ANSA quoted the sources as saying Savak had tried to hire the Italian to kill the pope during the planned visit to Milan. However, ANSA said the investigators were skeptical about the accusation because the money allegedly offered was "very modest" for such a job.

For a year, Agca insisted that he acted alone in shooting John Paul in St. Peter's Square. But last May, he told Italian magistrates that he had accomplices, court officials have said.

Based on Agca's testimony, Italian police arrested three Turks and a Bulgarian and have implicated two other Turks and two other Bulgarians in the attack.

The arrest Nov. 25 of Sergei Ivanov Antonov, an official of the Bulgarian state airline, sparked an international debate about whether the Bulgarian secret police, and by implication the Soviet KGB, might have been behind the shooting of the pope.

Some Western journalists have speculated that the KGB, the Soviet Union's secret police and intelligence agency, might have wanted to kill the pontiff because of his vocal support for the now-outlawed independent Polish trade union Solidarity.

Italian Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio has claimed the attack was an alternative to an invasion of the pope's native Poland.

The Bulgarian and Soviet governments, and the two Bulgarians implicated by Italian authorities, have denied emphatically any advance knowledge of the shooting.

Agca's attack was the first of two directed at John Paul. On May 13, 1982, exactly one year after John Paul was shot, a renegade Spanish priest lunged at the pope with a bayonet during a pilgrimage to Fatima, Portugal.

The pope, who was travelling to the Fatima shrine to give thanks for surviving the earlier shooting, was not hurt. The attacker was described by authorities as a lone fanatic.

Southern Italy trembles, recalls quake of 1980

POTENZA, Italy (AP) — An earthquake today shook the area of southern Italy that was hit by the massive quake of November 1980, sending thousands of people into the streets in panic, officials reported.

The national civil defense office in Rome said it had received no immediate reports of injuries or damage.

It said the tremor measured about 4 on the Richter scale of ground motion. A quake of that magnitude can cause local damage.

The tremor shook Potenza, Avellino and other areas east of Naples at 9:15 a.m. (2:15 a.m. EST). Thousands of residents of the region rushed from their offices, schools and homes into the streets, officials said.

Overturned bus

City firemen examine this 1974 Volkswagen van that overturned after colliding with a car at the intersection of F Street and Kansas Avenue about 3:10 p.m. Tuesday. The driver of the van, identified as 16-year-old Lisa L. Price of 2822 Auburn, and a 16-year-old passenger were released following treatment at Midland Memorial Hospital. The driver of the other vehicle, 16-year-old Terence P. Hannon of 3201 Preston Drive, also was treated and released.

Deadline nears for trailer park

Owner must fix violations in 10 days

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Giving the owner of a mobile home park almost 2½ months to correct a long list of violations, city officials served a final notice Tuesday afternoon that the problems must be fixed within 10 days or he will face a lawsuit in Municipal Court. Additionally, utility meters will be pulled, leaving the residents in the cold.

Chief Sanitarian Don Goodrum, Building Inspector J.B. Keaton and Assistant City Attorney Paul K. Williams held a news conference Tuesday afternoon in City Hall Council Chambers to announce their actions against Cecil Maldonado, owner of the trailer park at 1600 S. Fort Worth St.

Violations were first brought to the city's attention in a Nov. 21, 1982, article published in The Midland Reporter-Telegram. A letter outlining specific city code violations had been mailed to Maldonado on Nov. 19.

Williams cited several other occasions in which Maldonado was instructed to repair and clean up the park.

According to Goodrum, Maldonado verbally agreed to repair the problems and bring the park up to city standards. "The work only lasted a few days. Since Jan. 1, there has been no evidence of any improvements."

After the news conference, Goodrum and Williams hand-delivered copies of the letter to residents in the mobile home park, finding few people in the trailers. One young boy said many of the residents had moved out since late November and his family will be relocating soon to a house.

Signed by Williams, the letter to Maldonado reads:

"The Inspections Office and the City/County Health Department have repeatedly informed Mr. Maldonado that the trailer park at 1600 South Fort Worth Street is in violation of numerous sections of the City Code...Not only has Mr. Maldonado taken no affirmative action, but the situation has actually deteriorated."

Noting that Goodrum has been advised to file charges in Municipal Court against Maldonado, the letter continues: "This notice is to serve as your final notice that all electrical wiring must be up to City Code standards by February 10, 1983, or I will advise J.B. Keaton, building inspector, to request that the electrical meter be disconnected."

Maldonado could not be reached for comment.

The remaining residents already have suffered through an electrical and natural gas cutoff. In November, Texas Electric Service Co. shut off electricity for non-payment of a $1,585 bill. Then the gas company shut off service to repair lines that were in violation of code.

Looking at the length of time since notifying Maldonado before trying to enforce compliance with a heavy hand, Goodrum said the Health Department will give a reasonable time to repair the violations. "But he's not making sufficient effort to remedy the situation." Noting that he had visited the site the previous day, Goodrum added, "There was evidence the sewage disposal system is not being properly maintained. There was some effluent still on top of the ground."

Keaton acknowledged 10 days isn't enough time to repair all the violations that exist at the mobile home park.

Williams added that if Maldonado "shows us significant improvement in the next 10 days, we'll work with him. If not, we're at the end of our rope."

If filed in Municipal Court, action could take up to two months, and maximum fine set by the state is $200, according to the assistant city attorney. Admitting it's not a stiff punishment in relation to the degree of the problem, Williams said there is the option of levying the fine for each day of violation.

Until recently, the Inspections Department didn't regularly check plumbing and electrical aspects of a mobile home park. Because of the condition in which this park was discovered, the city implemented a new policy which calls for regular inspections of mobile home parks, and that means at least once a year, said Keaton.

Violations in the Nov. 19 letter, written by Keaton, included:

—Some homes connected with garden hose for water service lines.
—Plastic sewer lines laid on top of ground.
—Plastic sewer lines improperly installed and leaking — some with air gaps.
—Plastic gas service lines laid on top of ground.
—Three to four homes connected together for gas service with 3/8-inch copper tube.
—Wires illegally and dangerously spliced and wrapped around metal posts for support.
—No wiring above ground is sunlight resistant and insulation is beginning to show cracks.

That letter concluded with the warning that "...all work must be performed by licensed master plumbers and electricians and all work must be permitted by this office."

Williams said park residents wanting assistance in locating alternative housing may contact Frank Castillo with St. Vincent de Paul or Gloria Hinojosa with St. Andrews Presbyterian Mission.

Alternative financing part of hospital facility plans

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital's planning committee is proceeding with caution while considering an alternative financial route for the hospital's state-approved $3.4 million chemical dependency facility.

Bob Wright, representing Crow-Wright, associated with the Dallas-based development company Trammel Crow, expressed an interest in developing the drug/alcohol center in a Jan. 7 presentation to the MMH planning committee.

Sharp curves inherent to financial and operational control stopped the committee from making a concrete decision. According to Martin Neill, MMH trustee, Wright's recommendation was to lease the hospital's proposed site for the facility, construct the center, and then hire a firm to manage the 50-bed unit.

"The advantage of this proposal is that they (Crow-Wright) would assume liability," said Neill, chairman of an ad hoc committee investigating alternatives for the project's development.

"There would be absolutely no liability to the (hospital) district," Neill said.

While several members of the planning committee were hesitant about the proposal, Neill said, "Perhaps I feel a little more enthusiastic than the others. Some don't want any kind of profit operation (connected with MMH). The proposal would give us (MMH) membership on the board with some control in construction and operations, and their (Crow-Wright's) name would not appear on it."

Planning Committee Chairman John Dorn isn't too excited about Wright's sponsorship proposal.

"We could do a better job (operating the facility)," he said. "We do not want to sponsor a facility like this; we'd like to control it."

Dorn said he "wasn't impressed with the proposal, but it is going to get further consideration."

Originally, the drug/alcohol facility was to be financed by general obligation bonds, requiring an election, or revenue bonds, which do not require voter approval. According to Ray Branson, MMH president, the ad hoc committee was formed because MMH has been named in a lawsuit.

American Medical Corp., which owns Parkview Hospital, filed a suit in Travis County court against West Plains Hospital, a private corporation which has received THFC approval and plans to construct a psychiatric hospital near Air Terminal. Parkview has not sued MMH, but the hospital is named in the suit. Both private hospitals, along with MMH, were joined in the state's certificate of need application process.

While MMH and West Plains Hospital received approval from the THFC for their facilities, Parkview was denied. Both West Plains and Parkview offered drug/alcohol abuse services in their certificate of need applications.

"There is concern about the project's viability," Branson said. "It is not anticipated, but there is that possibility that all three could be approved. From a business point of view that has to be evaluated from A to Z."

MMH must consider Parkview suit

By GAIL BURKE

In contesting a legal opinion sought by Midland Memorial Hospital, Parkview Hospital attorneys hope to force MMH to comply with the state's deadline for construction of a drug and alcohol treatment center.

On Dec. 22, MMH requested a "Declaratory Ruling" from the Texas Health Facilities Commission that deadlines established to "commence development" of its drug/alcohol unit be waived until a final decision is reached on the lawsuit in which MMH is named.

Starting fifteen days after the THFC approves a hospital's certificate of need application for a project or equipment, the applicant has 180 days to "commence development," or forfeit its application.

MMH asked the THFC to define whether or not the hospital must begin construction of its state-approved $3.4 million chemical dependency unit.

Parkview, owned by Tennessee-based American Medical Corp., contested the Declaratory Ruling on the grounds that the "clock is running for MMH to be in compliance with the Feb. 9 deadline (to start construction)," according to Dick Liley, Parkview administrator.

MMH, Parkview and West Plains Hospital, owned by an Arlington corporation, were joined in a certificate of need application in April 1982. The THFC approved MMH's Behavorial Health Center and West Plains' psychiatric hospital, but denied Parkview's application to be converted to a psychiatric hospital. All three projects offered alcohol/drug abuse services in their applications.

In Travis County Court, Parkview's owners filed suit against the THFC's approval of West Plains.

"We never contested the approval of MMH's certificate of need," said Liley. "We are contesting West Plains' psychiatric hospital application. The only reason they (MMH) are a party is because we were joined in the certificate of need hearing. We are not suing MMH."

Proposed domestic oil tax doesn't appeal to Loeffler

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Drilling to find a solid core of answers but coming up with a dry hole, U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, on Tuesday questioned Treasury Secretary Donald Regan about the reasoning behind the administration's proposal for a $5-per-barrel tax on domestic oil.

As a member of the House Appropriations Committee, Loeffler focused one part of the day-long 1984 budget hearing on the proposal made by President Reagan in his State of the Union address last week.

In a telephone interview with The Midland Reporter-Telegram, the third-term congressman representing Midland in the 21st District recounted his conversation with Regan and voiced his belief that there is room in the budget for further cutting, and that includes the area of military spending.

Presenting the administration's viewpoint on the budget, besides Regan, were David Stockman, budget director, and Martin Feldstein, chief of economic advisers.

Singling out Regan, Loeffler said he first pointed out the oil industry paid out $58 billion last year in state, local and federal taxes. That's more than what the next six highest-ranking industries paid collectively in taxes.

"WHY IS THE administration considering another punitive tax levied at the oil industry?" Loeffler asked.

The president has called it only a proposal that would be instituted for fiscal year 1986 if revenues aren't up to a projected level. Although Loeffler has seen no support for the tax from either the Senate or House or from Democrats or Republicans, he added, "I'm not willing to take a risk" that it would get through.

However, he added, while it's being called "just a proposal," the budget blueprint inserts it if all the administration's budget proposals are adopted.

Regan told Loeffler that by 1986 the price of crude oil should be lower than it is today and his reasoning followed the line of thinking that the price of gasoline wouldn't be any higher with the additional tax than it is today.

Taking Regan further into a face-off, Loeffler said he asked at which point of production would the tax be levied: on the well-head, on the backs of producers or down the road on the purchasing process.

"He judged that it would probably be imposed at the producers' level," said Loeffler.

Trying to uncover the background which might have led to the idea for such a tax, Loeffler questioned the treasury secretary about studies his department or the Energy Department might have done to reflect the impact of the tax on domestic production and its effect on the nation's program to become energy self-sufficient.

LOEFFLER TURNED Regan's attention to the period a few years ago when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had a "stranglehold" on the U.S., which depended in large part on oil from those countries, and the resulting fuel shortages.

Regan at this point admitted the proposal wasn't based on any study. But when reports are completed that should show long-range effects on the oil industry and economy, Regan said he would get in touch with Loeffler and go over the figures.

"I said that I was delighted," remarked the congressman from Hunt.

But rather than even consider the tax, Loeffler said, "The best thing we could do is to shelve it. It's such an ill-conceived notion. I pointed out the lack of thought and the need for studies."

The tax, he added, doesn't carry out the constitutional stipulation of being fair and equitable.

During the rest of the day, the committee "went 360 degrees on the budget hearings," said Loeffler, who also sits on the House Budget Committee.

Gaining much national attention is the defense portion of the budget, and Loeffler doesn't agree with the proposed figure of $274 billion.

Saying that there's room to pare down the budget further, he objected to the recommendation by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to freeze military wages.

"We had just reached the point where military pay was comparable to civilian pay, and attrition in the services had dropped off," said Loeffler.

WITH INCREASED defense spending, Texas could reap the benefits. The state is the site for several defense installations and numerous companies which operate on government contracts. But this shouldn't play a decisive role in his vote, according to Loeffler.

"I do believe our fiscal policy should be to reduce growth in federal spending and more than what we've done the past two years. I'll look at all items without placing undue burden on any segment of society," he stated.

Even with the proposed reductions in spending by Reagan, the budget calls for a deficit of $184 billion. But if the economy can turn around faster than anticipated, the deficit could be reduced faster, he reasoned.

"If the growth of the Gross National Product (GNP) would be 1.5 percent more on an annual basis between now and 1988 over and above what the administration is projecting, we could have a balanced budget then."

The budget's figures on estimated income and spending are only assumptions, said Loeffler.

Still opposed to a provision passed in the last session of Congress which allows the federal government to automatically take 10 percent of a person's interest and dividend income, Loeffler has introduced legislation to repeal

Budget blues may befall farmers

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Farm programs failed to dodge the budget axe in the Reagan administration's spending propsals for fiscal 1984, which calls for $10 billion in cuts for the commodity price support and rural development programs.

The department, however, does propose a $350 million increase in the Farmers Home Administration's farm operating loan program and some minor increases in funding for agricultural research.

"It's a good budget, a defensible one," Agriculture Secretary John Block said Monday of the $35 billion spending blueprint, down from last year's total of $45 billion. "This budget is tight, is fair and it's realistic."

The administration's budget request officially released Monday is the first chapter of a long process that will unfold throughout the year as Congress tries to work out a compromise with the White House over spending and tax programs for the future.

Central to the administration's plans is a proposal to freeze target prices for wheat, corn and other commodities at the 1983 levels. The Agriculture Department also wants a 10-cent reduction in the per-bushel rate paid to farmers who use their grain as collateral for federal loans.

Target prices require the Agriculture Department to pay the farmer cash if the market price slips below the level set by Congress. For wheat, the 1983 target price was $4.30 per bushel, while corn was set at $2.86 per bushel. Wheat target prices are scheduled to rise by 15 cents this year and another 15 cents the following year. Corn jumps to $3.03 in 1984 and $3.18 in 1985.

"We have not seen the skyrocketing inflationary increases in the cost of operation," Block said in explaining the freeze request. In the absence of a jump in the cost of production, an increase would be "excessive in light of the decline," he said.

Because a lower target price means less government spending when market prices are low, Block's push for the freeze is an acknowledgment that he believes market prices will remain depressed through the next two fiscal years and that the department should protect itself from repeating last year's record-breaking spending of $18 billion on price support programs.

Block said he will use existing legal power and lower commodity loan rates by 10 cents in order to make the program less attractive to farmers. Wheat loans will drop to $3.55 a bushel and corn will slip to $2.55 per bushel.

The lower loan rates will "get these commodities into the marketplace and not into the government's hands," Block said.

"I am not surprised they (Parkview) entered as a party (to the ruling)," Branson added. "By contesting the Declaratory Ruling, Parkview attorneys are suggesting the THFC should not render an opinion about its own ruling."

But, Liley said, MMH was granted a certificate of need and the pending suit "is not sufficient reason to stop the clock."

There has been no time set for the Declaratory Ruling hearing.

Rehearing denied

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals today denied the state's request for a rehearing on the court's earlier decision ordering a new trial for John Hall Jefcoat, convicted in Andrews County of voluntary manslaughter in the death of his estranged wife.

The court had ruled earlier that Jefcoat, who had been sentenced to 11 years in prison, should have a new trial because of a defective charge by the trial court.

Osbourne divides Odessans

ODESSA (AP) — A scheduled concert by British rock singer Ozzy Osbourne here has brewed up a battle between the "Odessans for Decency" and the "Ozz Patrol."

Members of the Ozz Patrol have collected 725 names on petitions advocating individual choice in concert attendance.

On the other side are the Odessans for Decency, about 250 of whom jammed into a Monday night meeting to oppose Osbourne's concert at the Ector County Coliseum.

Spokesmen for the group say they oppose the March 8 scheduled performance because of reports of Satan worship and the singer's antics in other cities, including biting off a bat's head during a Des Moines, Iowa, concert and urinating on the Alamo before a San Antonio performance.

Several city and county officials attended the meeting, where petitions were circulated asking county commissioners to deny Osbourne the use of the coliseum.

About 1,000 people have signed the petitions so far and the anti-Osbourne group hopes to submit them to commissioners at their Feb. 7 meeting.

But County Attorney Steve Groh offered the Odessans for Decency little hope that commissioners could block the concert.

"My feeling right now is that we have a binding contract," he said.

MMH adding administrative spot

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital officials will hire a new vice president of finance and create another administrative position to deal with the effects of a recent nationwide three-year budget and tax package.

Ray Branson, MMH president, announced the personnel change this morning in a news conference.

The tax package, enacted in October 1982, includes a new law — Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 — which has health officials predicting that hospital administrators will be scrambling to work smarter and harder this year to keep a fair share of scarce reimbursement dollars.

According to Branson, Dale Miller, the hospital's current vice president of finance, will change hats to combat an expected $1.2 million loss in Medicare reimbursement for MMH over the next two years.

Medicare reimbursement nationwide is expected to be reduced by $12.5 billion in the next three years with a reduction of $2 billion this year.

Prior to TEFRA, the government program — which pays hospital costs for 26 million aged and 3 million disabled persons in the U.S. — reimbursed hospitals for the cost of services provided to Medicare patients. Medicare does not reimburse actual charges. Although reimbursement to hospitals based on cost will continue under the new system, several limitations will be installed to encourage efficiency and slow down escalating health care costs. About 30 percent of MMH's patients are under Medicare.

Branson said MMH will make up for the expected $500,000 loss this year through increasing productivity, reducing payroll, shortening the patients' length of stay, scrutinizing new services and programs and providing more services on an out-patient basis.

"We're going to have to budget extremely accurately, and that's going to take someone with the time and ability to do this," Branson said, explaining that Miller will no longer be a vice president.

Miller's duties will include managing the hospital's business department, collecting data for the TEFRA impact, conducting the internal audit and overseeing MMH's $15.1 million, 77-bed expansion project.

According to Branson, "This is what Dale wanted and if he didn't head the construction project, we'd have to hire someone else."

Miller said he "worked for years as a county manager for a steel fabricating company."

While Miller's $44,100 salary is not expected to change, the salary of the new vice president of finance will be in the ballpark of $55,000 to $65,000, and he will be hired within the next 90 days, according to Branson.

"Dale's new position is not a vice president position," Branson said. "The new position won't be different. He (new vice president) will just have a higher level of training. I'm hiring him to strengthen the hospital's financial situation. He will have total financial management of the hospital."

Branson said the hospital governing boards agreed with the change in personnel during an executive session of MMH's January board meeting.

MMH's finance department includes a controller, the business manager, collections and materials management. The vice president of finance is responsible for directing and coordinating hospital activities concerned with financial administration, general accounting, payroll, patient business services, financial and statistical reporting and data processing. Miller was director of fiscal services at MMH from November 1980 to March 1981, when he became vice president of finance.

B-1 seen as Abilene economy enhancer

ABILENE (AP) — The arrival of the Air Force's new B-1 bomber here in 1985 will be preceded by a housing and retail boom that will give a "tremendous" boost to the local economy, city officials say.

Basing the B-1 at Dyess Air Force Base here is expected to create jobs for 510 military personnel and 20 civilians and require $8.4 million worth of construction beginning this fall, Pentagon officials said in announcing the basing plan Monday in Washington.

"The economic repercussions will be tremendous," said Abilene Mayor Elbert E. Hall.

"We have already had people in here checking on requirements to construct housing units in that area (near Dyess) based on the announcement," city Building Inspections Director Bob Fowler said Tuesday.

"It has generated a lot of excitement already. I wouldn't be surprised if the announcement would encourage some expanded retail growth," he said.

Congress will receive a request for B-1 funds later this month in the 1984 military construction budget.

Rep. Charles Stenholm, whose district includes Dyess, said he was "elated" by the Pentagon's decision, but added, "We've got to get the damn plane funded first."

Two invited to attend TCU program

FORT WORTH — Two Midland students have been recruited to participate in Texas Christian University's second annual Honor Collegium Thursday through Saturday.

Lee High School senior Cynthia L. Sommers, 4563 Shady Oak Court, and Midland High School senior Jennifer Allyn Jackson, 1203 Lawson, were invited to share in the activities this weekend.

About half the high school seniors who attended last spring's collegium are enrolled in TCU this year, said Dr. Henry Kelly, TCU Honors Program director. High school sneiors who have had some contact with TCU, who have a strong ranking in their high school class and those who have scored 1200 or above in SAT scores are invited to attend.

TCU Vice Chancellor William Koehler, Dean Edward Boehm of admissions and Kelly will welcome the students and 18 TCU professors will serve as group discussion leaders. Dean Michael McCracken of TCU's AddRan College of Arts and Sciences will host a fireside chat.

The prospective students also will join in an "Almost All Nighter" party Friday night, with music, games, movies and tournaments held in Brown-Lupton Student Center.

Six constellations light up winter sky

There are six brilliant constellations in the middle of the winter sky and the brightest of these is Orion, the Hunter. Orion is a giant with his shoulders and knees marked by a rectangle of four bright stars with three stars sloping across the middle to form his belt.

Orion is the brightest constellation in the sky and Betelgeuse, a red giant star at his right shoulder, and Rigel, a hot blue star at his left knee, are the bright stars in the constellation.

Orion is fighting Taurus the Bull, which is charging down on him. Taurus has a triangle for his face with the bright orange star Aldebaran at one eye and a star cluster called the Plieades or the Seven Sisters on his back. His horns extend to single stars at their tips, and one of these stars is shared with Auriga the Charioteer. Auriga, a five-sided figure, passes directly overhead in the evening sky and contains the brilliant yellow star Capella.

The three stars on Orion's belt point down and to the left toward Sirius, the brightest of all stars. Sirius is in the constellation Canis Major, the Big Dog. Canis Major is one of a pair of hunting dogs accompaning Orion. The other dog is Canis Minor, the Little Dog. Canis Minor contains the bright white star Procyon.

North of Procyon are the twin stars Castor and Pollux in the constellation Gemini, the Twin. Orion is the brighest constellation, and he and his five companions contain almost half of the 20 brigthest stars in the sky. This abundance of bright stars makes the winter sky highly recommended to the beginning stargazer.

American carrot cake prized over elaborate French desserts

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Linda Anderson of DeKalb, Ill., is one of my best recipe scouts. Her mother taught her how to bake cakes and cookies when she was in her early teens, and she's been ferreting out recipes for delicious desserts ever since.

Linda majored in home economics in college and taught food and nutrition to high-school classes for about 15 years. Last summer she spent three weeks at France's La Varenne, the prestigious cooking school in Paris. Although Linda learned to make several marvelous French desserts, she still prizes her American recipes. One of them, passed along to her by an Illinois friend, is for a fabulously good carrot cake dessert. Tried at our house, it was a smashing success.

CARROT CAKE WITH RUM SAUCE

8¾-ounce can crushed pineapple in syrup
3 cups all-purpose flour
2 cups sugar
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
3 large eggs
1½ cups corn oil
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 cups coarsely shredded carrots, not packed down
1½ cups broken pecans
Rum Sauce, recipe follows

Grease a 10 by 4-inch angel cake pan. Drain pineapple and reserve syrup.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together flour, sugar, baking soda, baking powder, salt and cinnamon. Make a well in the center and drop the eggs, oil, reserved pineapple syrup and vanilla into it. Beat at medium speed until blended. With a spoon stir in reserved pineapple, carrots and pecans. Turn into prepared pan. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 1½ hours.

Place pan on a wire rack to cool for 10 minutes. Loosen edges; turn out on rack; cool completely. Serve warm or cold with Rum Sauce.

Makes 16 servings.

RUM SAUCE

1 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
½ cup dark corn syrup
½ cup light cream
¼ cup butter
¼ cup light rum
1 teaspoon vanilla

In a 2-quart saucepan over low heat, stir together constantly the sugar, corn syrup, cream and butter until boiling. Cool to warm, stirring occasionally. Stir in rum and vanilla. Serve warm with Carrot Cake. Sauce may be made ahead, stored in the refrigerator and reheated gently. Makes about 2 cups.

Tomatoes color this Oklahoma chili

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

A short time ago I was invited to supper by a friend who was born and raised in Enid, Okla. Lo and behold, she served chili con carne that was rich and red with tomato.

This was a big surprise to me because I had been told in stern tones by another friend who was born and raised in Tulsa, that true Oklahoma chili was made minus tomatoes.

Once again, as is the case so many times, a well-known dish comes a number of ways — even in one state. Here then is an Oklahoma chili for those cooks who belong to the tomato-chili clan.

TOMATO CHILI

2 pounds ground beef
3 medium onions, chopped medium-fine
1 medium green pepper, chopped medium-fine
2 cloves garlic, minced
28-ounce can tomatoes, undrained
6-ounce can tomato paste
4-ounce can hot green chilies, drained (diced if necessary)
3 tablespoons (or to taste) chili powder
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons (or to taste) ground cumin
Sugar to taste, if desired
Two 20-ounce cans red kidney beans, drained
Grated cheddar cheese

In a 5-quart saucepot, over moderate heat, with a long kitchen fork, crumble beef with onion, green pepper and garlic until meat loses its red color. Stir in tomatoes, tomato paste, chilies, chili powder, salt and cumin. Bring to a boil; cover and simmer for 1½ hours, stirring occasionally to prevent sticking. Stir in sugar, if used, and the beans; simmer 15 minutes. Serve with cheese. Makes 2½ to 3 quarts.

THE BUTCHER

Mailbag brings butcher questions

By MERLE ELLIS

We speak of many things this day, or it's mailbag day.

Q: "Why do the chickens I buy, grown in Washington and Oregon, have only partial or no livers? I thought they were cancer infested, and therefore discarded. A friend tells me she thinks they are computer cut and lost. Another friend thinks they are saved and sold separately. Who has the answer? I fear to eat chicken until I know!"

A: Fear not, there is nothing wrong with a chicken missing all or part of its liver. The missing part had nothing to do with the cause of the bird's demise. The reason for the missing part could be any one of a number of things, including those you and your friends considered.

All poultry is inspected by qualified veterinarians both before and after slaughter, so it is possible, although unlikely, that a liver was condemned for some reason that did not affect the rest of the bird.

Your first friend may have come closer to the truth. Chickens are not cut up by computer — not yet — but the work is performed on assembly lines by workers who must feel a little like robots at times. It is possible (and very probable) that any missing parts or additional parts (I've seen chickens with three livers.) are the work of workers too bored to care much about counting.

Q: "I read your article on beef ribs. My question is: Why can't you buy a rib roast and age it in your refrigerator at home? Say you buy a six or seven-rib section and keep it for two or three weeks at home. Will it be the same as one aged in the store cooler?"

A: No! You cannot age meat in your refrigerator. I have kept a rib-eye roast in a vacuum-sealed plastic package in my refrigerator for 30 days and it did not spoil (because of the vacuum packaging), but neither did it "age." True aging requires air circulation and humidity control that you just don't have in your home refrigerator. If you want to try aged beef, and I urge anyone who likes good meat to do so, find a butcher who can and will do it for you. Meat will get bad long before it gets better in your refrigerator.

Q: "My mother used to use a cut of meat (usually as a soup base) eaten as boiled beef with horseradish. I don't seem to be able to find it. Was it called flanken ribs? It didn't look like any beef ribs I see today."

A: Yes, it very likely was a cut called flanken. There are not many butchers anymore who cut short ribs of beef flanken-style, and I don't know why, because it yields a much more manageable cut for the soup pot.

Most short ribs of beef, are cut between the ribs these days so that each piece contains a single long rib bone. When cut flanken-style, the same piece is cut across several ribs — four or five — so that each piece of flanken is about one inch thick and contains a cross-section of four or five rib bones. It's a better way to cut short ribs because the meat is cut across the grain, which gives it a more tender texture when cooked.

Q: "You frequently mention cooking in 'Grandma's old black skillet' in your column. I have one that my grandmother left me, but I have never used it. It looks to be caked wih crud. Can it be cleaned and if so, how? I would like to try frying chicken in it if it would turn out as good as my grandmother's."

A: Salvage it, by all means. You haven't tasted real fried chicken until you've had it cooked in cast iron. Your skillet may be in fine shape. They do turn black with use, but you sound as if you would feel better about cooking in yours if you cleaned it first. That's fine — cast iron skillets will stand generations of use and cleaning.

First, roll up your sleeves, it may take a bit of "elbow grease." Scour and scrape the pan with steel wool, a putty knife, whatever it takes to get the crud off.

Then re-season it: Wash the skillet in hot water, rinse and dry. Then grease the pan inside and out. (I use a piece of fresh pork fat, but salad oil or shortening will work as well.) Spread it over the entire surface of the pan, then add a bit more to cover the inside bottom, or leave the piece of pork fat in the pan. Place in a 200-degree oven for a couple of hours, then turn the oven off and leave the pan in the oven to season overnight. Rub the skillet well with a few paper towels and it's ready to use.

Authentic German Cherry Cake delicious when served warm

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Every once in a while a cook has asked me how to bake a German pound-type cake made with tart red cherries. I was familiar with recipes for Black Forest Cherry Torten, but not with the sought-after cherry cake.

Then recently I tasted it at a friend's house and discovered she had made it from a recipe in "Chef Tell's Quick Cuisine" by Chef Tell Erhardt with Rosalyn T. Badalamenti (Warner Books).

Chef Tell's knowledge of German cooking can be trusted. After working in restaurants in Europe, he became, at 24, the youngest man in West Germany to earn the title of Master Chef. And for a dozen years before he made his home in America and became a television star, he served as the executive chef at a famous hotel in Germany's Black Forest region.

Our adaptation of his Cherry Cake recipe follows. You may want to serve it as is at a brunch or with whipped cream for a dinner dessert. In either case, we agree with Chef Tell that the cake should be offered warm.

CHERRY CAKE

Streusel, recipe follows
2½ cups all-purpose flour
½ cup cornstarch
2 teaspoons baking powder
Two ¼-pound sticks (1 cup) butter
1½ cups sugar
3 large eggs
3 tablespoons kirsch (clear cherry brandy)
1-pound can tart red pitted cherries (packed in water), well drained

Grease and flour a 9-inch springform pan. Prepare Streusel.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer at medium speed cream butter and sugar; beat in eggs, one at a time, until blended. Beat in kirsch. Add flour mixture; fold in with a rubber spatula. Turn into prepared pan.

Cover batter with cherries, leaving a ¼-inch space at the edge. Sprinkle Streusel over top.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 1¼ hours. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges and remove band. Serve warm with whipped cream flavored with vanilla and sweetened to taste. Makes 12 servings.

STREUSEL

In a small bowl stir together ¼ cup all-purpose flour, ¼ cup granulated sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. With a pastry blender cut in ¼ cup butter until coarse crumbs form.

DEAR ABBY

Patient sick of waiting gets on doctor's case

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Why do doctors schedule six patients for the same time, keeping a roomful of patients waiting?

I had a doctor's appointment for 9 a.m. I arrived at 8:45 and was told that the doctor would be tied up "for a little while" and was asked if I would like to go get a cup of coffee.

I went for coffee, returned at 9:15 and found four more people in the waiting room. They all had 9 o'clock appointments! They were also told to get a cup of coffee, and as they walked out the door, another 9 o'clock appointment rushed in — apologizing because she was late!

Abby, I sat there until 11:20, then I heard one nurse say to the other, "He has four more proctoscopes to do, then we can start calling them in." (He has four examination rooms.)

I flipped out and said, "Who is going to pay for my extra parking? I think I'll send this problem to Dear Abby." I was taken within three minutes. (They must have told the doctor I was starting a riot in his waiting room.)

If I go to a doctor who has a first-come, first-serve policy, I will wait patiently without complaining, but I resent having to wait for 2 1/2 hours when I have an appointment. Switching doctors doesn't help.

Does this happen everywhere? Or only in Pittsburgh? — TIRED OF WAITING

DEAR TIRED: It happens almost everywhere. Doctors, what's the Rx for this epidemic?

DEAR ABBY: Please don't throw this away thinking it's only a gag, because I'm serious. I'm a middle-aged man who started dating a woman (my age) a few months ago. I like everything about her, but I can't bring myself to kiss her (beyond a peck on the cheek or a quick one on the lips) because she smells of garlic.

I've offered her breath mints, chewing gum and even kiddingly remarked, "Well, I can tell you've had something with garlic for lunch." She said she usually has a corned beef sandwich or a Caesar's salad because she likes garlic. Once she suggested that I eat garlic, too, so I wouldn't notice it on her. I told her I didn't care for it.

Now what do I do? I really could care for this woman, and I know she likes me. It's not just the garlic on her breath, the smell of garlic seems to come out of her pores. Any suggestions?— TURNED OFF

DEAR TURNED OFF: Yes. Tell her that if she wants to see more of you she will have to "do something" about the garlic. And if she doesn't come up with a solution, she is giving you a message: "I've made my choice, and you're not it."

DEAR ABBY: You once had a little poem in your column about giving flowers to people while they can still smell them. Can you find it and print it again? So many people need to be reminded. Thank you. — NEGLECTED IN PALM COAST, FLA.

DEAR NEGLECTED: Is this it?

"I would rather have a little rose from the garden of a friend,
"Than flowers strewn around my casket when my days on earth must end.
"I would rather have a living smile from one I know is true,
"Than tears shed 'round my casket when this world I bid adieu.
"Bring me all the flowers today whether pink or white or red.
"I would rather have one blossom now than a truckload when I am dead." (Author Unknown)

Making Family Life More Fun

According to travel experts, more families are enjoying split vacations these days, taking one in the summer and one in the winter. Here, then, are some winter vacation tips from the experts:

• Don't let bad weather or holiday traffic upset your travel plans. If you're flying, leave enough time to reach the airport 45 to 60 minutes before the flight. This way you'll be calm and relaxed—with all details in order—when you board the plane.

• If you're changing season, and heading for a warm climate, make sure you and the youngsters limit your first exposure to the sun to twenty minutes or less. Then, you can increase your sunbathing daily to achieve a gradual tan.

• Don't forget to take along a sunscreen. Waterproof sunscreens, such as Sundown from Johnson & Johnson, resist removal by water or perspiration, maintaining their labeled degrees of protection for up to 80 minutes in the water.

• Remember that the weather and time of day affect the sun's strength. You can receive a severe burn even on a foggy or hazy day.

Grapefruit healthy, but has no magic enzymes

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: I have heard that grapefruit contains some special enzymes that burn up fat and that is why they are used in several weight reduction diets. Is that true? Where can I find the grapefruit diet from the Mayo Clinic? How many calories are in grapefruit? — Mrs. K.R.

Dear Mrs. K.R.: There is no scientific evidence that shows grapefruit contains special enzymes that burn up fat. The Mayo Clinic in Minnesota did not put out the "Mayo" grapefruit diet as implied. A lot of people were misled on that fad diet, but I hope you will be wiser than to fall for that one.

Grapefruit is an excellent low-calorie fruit and contains considerable amounts of vitamin C, which is the only reason it should be included in any diet. It contains about 38 calories per half medium-size grapefruit, but no magic enzymes.

Dear Shirley: Can you tell me how to find a dietitian or nutritionist who could help my grandson? He is very restless and hyper and fights so much with his 2-year-old sister.

He is 3½ and we suspect that his behavior may have something to do with certain foods that he eats. Is that possible?

I have tried to find a good nutritionist, but I don't know where they are. Why are they so hard to find? — Mrs. M.W.

Dear Mrs. M.W.: Call you local health department or hospital for referrals to qualified dietitians or nutritionists who can help you. You can also look in the phone book for your local dietetic association or ask the operator to give you the number. They have lists of professional people who specialize in various areas, and are in private practice. They are not really hard to find, if you know where to look. Many children react negatively to certain foods.

'Overweight? If you desire information about Shirley's safe and proven home weight loss program which causes a 10- to 18-pound per month loss, send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Shirley Bright Boody, P.O. Box 1038, Rancho Mirage, CA 92270.

Health care policies needed

By SHARON A. HILLIS

Home Economics

Tougher economic times are causing people to take a closer look at why health care costs are rising faster than any other sector of the economy. Although it is not presently known what approach will be the most effective in containing health care costs, the health consumer and health care system will need to make some difficult policy decisions on this complex issue.

One major point to be considered is that last year the nation's health care bill reached $287 billion — almost a tenth of the gross national product. This amount equals, according to a recent article in Money magazine, more than the total of the entire defense budget, the U.S. sale of all foreign and domestic cars, and the profits of the 41 biggest international oil companies.

Reasons why health care costs have risen faster than other sectors of the economy include in part: general inflation, the expense of sophisticated high techology medical equipment and the soaring cost of malpractice insurance, which is passed on to the health cosumer.

Two additional factors receiving scrutiny include the lack of competition in health care and the third party payment system of financing healthcare. These factors are receiving attention as cost containment mechanisms.

Pro-competition theorists advocate that providers of health care and health services should be forced to compete in the open marketplace and that patients should be given incentives to consider costs. To accomplish this they propose higher deductibles, limitations on tax deductibility of medical expenses and other mechanisms that might force the system to pay out-of-pocket for "excess use."

Opponents of the theory, on the other hand, argue that competition would lower health care standards and would force poor people to defer routine preventive care and postpone treatment until a condition is severe and often more costly to treat.

"Third party payment" is another name for the insurance company, or in the case of Medicare or Medicaid, the gvernment, which pays the doctor (the second party) for the patient's healthcare (the first party.)

Because more than 70 percent of the nearly $300 billion spent on health care is in the form of third party payments, the actual cost of healthcare is somewhat hidden in that consumers do not actually pay their own bills. Therefore, they are insulated from the direct effects of rising costs.

There is also less inhibition about using a system if one does not have to dig into his or her own pocket to pay everytime an individual receives health care. Soon, however, the health consumer and health care system must make difficult policy decisions on the complex issue of what approach will be most effective in containing health costs.

Judge denies accused murderer's arguments

HENDERSON, Texas (AP) — A state district judge has rejected arguments from a Waco man accused of murdering his girlfriend who contends his attorney conspired with another judge to send him to a state mental hospital.

State District Judge Ben Grant of Marshall said Tuesday he saw no reason to disqualify State District Judge Donald Ross of Henderson from the case of David Culverhouse.

Culverhouse, 27, had contended his attorney conspired with Ross to send him to the state hospital for the criminally insane at Rusk.

Culverhouse was arrested Jan. 10 in a Jacksonville motel and charged with the murder of Donna L. Ray, 24, of Grand Prairie. Ms. Ray was shot eight times Jan. 9 in the storeroom of a Henderson grocery store, about 35 miles northeast of Jacksonville.

Culverhouse also is charged with attempted murder in the shooting of Layton Cummings, 30, the assistant manager in the grocery store.

During Culverhouse's first week in the Rusk County Jail, he filed 11 motions, all personally handwritten. He filed seven other motions later, and added seven more on Monday.

Culverhouse has contended he is being held illegally in the Rusk County Jail here, and that his $150,000 bond for first-degree murder is excessive. Another motion asked that noted attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes of Houston be appointed to represent him.

Culverhouse's third attorney, Carl Barber, resigned after his client accused him of collusion with Ross. The Waco man was not represented by a lawyer Tuesday.

A total of four attorneys have been appointed for Culverhouse, but the first two resigned for personal reasons.

The fourth attorney, R.L. Whitehead of Longview, was appointed after Barber quit, but Culverhouse accused him of conspiring against him with other attorneys and he withdrew.

Culverhouse and his girlfriend had been staying at a Henderson motel across the street from the Safeway store on Jan. 9, police said.

Ms. Ray entered the store about 8:30 p.m. and hid in a storeroom at the back. A short time later, store officials said, a man walked into the store "with something in a garbage bag" and then began firing, striking Ms. Ray.

The man wounded the assistant manager and continued to fire as he left the store, and then got into a car, officers said.

Police found car registration and other information in Ms. Ray's wallet and put out an all-points bulletin for the vehicle, which was spotted the next day at a Jacksonville motel.

After Culverhouse was arrested at the motel, officers said they found two AR-15 automatic weapons, numerous clips of ammunition, and other guns.

British arms dealer Ian Smalley, right, and his attorney, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, leave Dallas federal courthouse Tuesday after the first day of testimony in Smalley's trial. The Briton is accused of conspiring to sell arms to Iran and Iraq.

Haynes: Smalley thought arms U.S.-sanctioned

DALLAS (AP) — A defense attorney for British arms dealer Ian Smalley contends his client was duped into believing he was participating in a White House plot to secretly ship arms to Iran during the hostage crisis.

Smalley was indicted last fall on charges he conspired to ship tanks from the United States to Iran and anti-tank missiles to Iraq while the two countries were at war. The indictment also contends Smalley acted as an unregistered foreign agent.

Defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes of Houston said in opening arguments Tuesday that two other arms dealers convinced Smalley the U.S. wanted to secretly ship the arms.

Haynes said the U.S. wanted Iran to have arms to counter a threat from its northern neighbor, the Soviet Union.

He said two other international arms dealers who served as informants against Smalley — Gary Howard and Ronald Tucker — actually set him up for a trap.

"He (Smalley) believed Tucker and Howard were covert agents of the United States," Haynes told the federal court jury.

The government is seeking to prove Smalley offered to provide Howard and Tucker with fraudulent paperwork that would have allowed the shipment of 100 M-48 tanks to Iran and 8,300 anti-tank missiles called to Iraq in 1981 and 1982.

Court records show most of the government's case against Smalley is built around 80 to 85 hours of tape recordings made during a 15-month investigation by U.S. Customs agents.

The government claims Smalley told the informants he could produce phony documents showing the weapons were being purchased by friendly foreign governments and that those governments promised not to transfer the weapons to any other country without the permission of the U.S. State Department.

U.S. Attorney James A. Rolfe said the phony documents showed the tanks were headed for the United Arab Emirates and the missiles were to go to Jordan.

Accused kidnapper's wife tells of his strange dreams

GALVESTON (AP) — A man accused of burying a Southeast Texas resident alive has recurring dreams, accompanied by excruciating headaches, in which hooded figures called "dream-keepers" command him to go with them, the man's wife says.

Phyllis White testified Tuesday that her husband of 20 years, Ronald Floyd White, first did oil paintings of the figures in December 1981.

White is charged with aggravated kidnapping in the abduction of Michael Baucom of Sante Fe, Texas.

Baucom was freed Sept. 29, four days after he was buried in a remote area of Montgomery County. Authorities contend his burial was part of an extortion attempt.

Mrs. White, testifying in her husband's competency hearing, said White told her he has resisted the hooded figures' invitation so far, but will go with them the next time they ask.

The defense entered into evidence three of White's oil paintings and two of his sketches that include the figures.

Americans, Australians big beef, poultry eaters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans and Australians tied in the per capita amount of meat and poultry consumed last year and led the rest of the world, according to the Agriculture Department.

The USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service said that total meat and poultry consumption — based on dressed carcass weights — averaged 233.9 pounds for each person in the two countries.

That was down somewhat from 1981 in the United States and up slightly in Australia.

For beef and veal, Australia led the United States, 118.1 pounds to 105.8 pounds. But Americans ate more pork than the Australians, 61.8 pounds to 33.

Australia came back fast in the consumption of mutton and lamb — 42 pounds to an average of 1.8 pounds for the United States.

However, U.S. poultry consumption outdistanced the Australian effort by 64.2 pounds to 40.7 pounds.

Although the United States and Australia can lay claim to the highest total per capita consumpton of red meat and poultry in 1982, neither was the largest in any individual category, according to the analysis.

Uruguary, for example, led the world last year with per capita beef consumption of 184.4 pounds, followed by Argentina with 161.5 pounds. Normally, Argentina is the leader.

In pork consumption, a number of European countries ate much more pork than Americans or Australians, with Hungary the leader with an average of 174.7 pounds per capita in 1982.

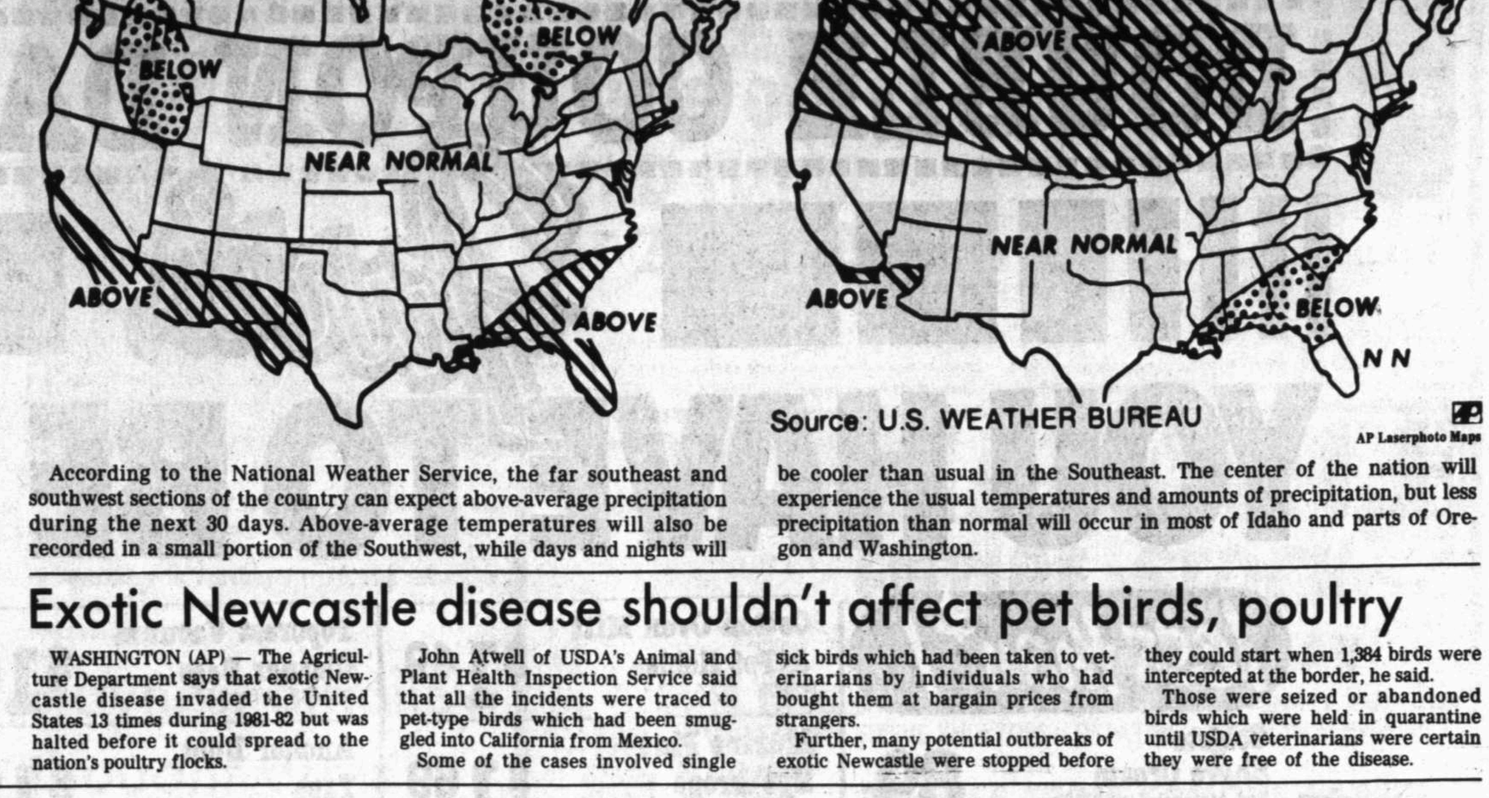
The category of sheep and goat meats was topped by New Zealand's per capita average of 68.2 pounds.

Poultry consumption in 1982 was led by Israel at 82.7 pounds.

Looking at some other big meat and poultry eaters, the report showed that Hungary — the leading pork consumer — was near the top with a total per capita rate of 223.3 pounds in 1982.

Uruguay, the largest beef eater, had a total per capita consumption of 219.1 pounds of meat and poultry, followed by Argentina at 204.8 pounds. New Zealand averaged 202.8 pounds per capita.

Comparatively, the Soviet Union consumped a total per capita average of 130.7 pounds in 1982, about the same as recent years.



According to the National Weather Service, the far southeast and southwest sections of the country can expect above-average precipitation during the next 30 days. Above-average temperatures will also be recorded in a small portion of the Southwest, while days and nights will be cooler than usual in the Southeast. The center of the nation will experience the usual temperatures and amounts of precipitation, but less precipitation than normal will occur in most of Idaho and parts of Oregon and Washington.

Exotic Newcastle disease shouldn't affect pet birds, poultry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that exotic Newcastle disease invaded the United States 13 times during 1981-82 but was halted before it could spread to the nation's poultry flocks.

John Atwell of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said that all the incidents were traced to pet-type birds which had been smuggled into California from Mexico.

Some of the cases involved single sick birds which had been taken to veterinarians by individuals who had bought them at bargain prices from strangers.

Further, many potential outbreaks of exotic Newcastle were stopped before they could start when 1,384 birds were intercepted at the border, he said.

Those were seized or abandoned birds which were held in quarantine until USDA veterinarians were certain they were free of the disease.

Meat prices steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers will see only moderately higher prices at meat counters this year, despite another decline in supplies of beef, veal, pork, lamb and mutton, a meat industry expert says.

Dr. Ewen M. Wilson, director of economics and statistics for the American Meat Institute, said the forecast also depends on the rate of economic recovery.

"Even though red meat supplies will be down again in 1983 as a result of reduced livestock numbers on American farms, meat prices will not rise as much as expected," Wilson said.

Retail pork prices are expected to rise less than they did in 1982, while beef prices "could increase at a rate closer to the overall rate of inflation," he said.

The Agriculture Department has estimated that meat prices this year may go up an average of 3 to 6 percent, compared to a 5 percent gain in 1982. That would include a 2 to 5 percent boost in beef and veal prices, and a 4 to 7 percent rise for pork.

In 1982, meat prices rose an average of 4.9 percent, compared to an overall inflation rate estimated at 6.2 percent, Wilson said. That included a 1.5 percent increase in beef and veal prices, and a 13 percent boost in retail pork prices.

The reason for the big jump in pork prices: Hog farmers cut production sharply.

"Commercial beef production in 1983 will total 22.3 billion pounds, about the same as in 1982," Wilson said in his report.

"Pork production is expected to decline to 13.5 billion pounds, down 4 percent from 1982 and the third consecutive annual decline. In 1980, a record 16.4 billion pounds of pork was produced commercially in the United States."

Veal output this year was projected at 400 million pounds, unchanged from the level of the past three years. Lamb and mutton production also was put at 400 million, the same as last year.

Catfish crop grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commercial catfish production in 1982 jumped to 99.4 million pounds, a 64 percent increase from 60.6 million pounds in 1981, says the Agriculture Department.

The average price paid to catfish producers ranged from 53 cents to 59 cents a pound during the year, down from a range of 56 to 70 cents in 1981, the department's Crop Reporting Board said in a year-end report.

Imports of freshwater catfish in November — the most recent month tabulated — totaled 348,000 pounds, down 26 percent from a year earlier, the report said. Nearly all the imported catfish were from Brazil.

Celestial Seasonings suits America's cups to a T

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Who's going to believe a guy with the moral conviction of Abraham Lincoln, the drive of Lee Iacocca and the whimsy of E.T.?

The man who brought the world Red Zinger, Morning Thunder and Sleepytime herb teas is like a Horatio Alger novel come to life, like the dreams of the 1960s counterculture come true.

There's a good case to be made for calling this slight, 33-year-old man with the squeaky-clean sunstreaked hair America's father of herbal tea.

So Morris J. Siegel, just "Mo" is better, would really like it if people would stop with the hippie references.

"The whole hippie-background label bothers me," says Mo, whose Celestial Seasonings sold 60 million cups of herbal tea last year.

THAT'S THREE a year for everyone in the United States, and it's increasing.

The way Mo sees it, there's serious tea-drinking in the average American's future, and nonsense like "cosmic capitalist" is not doing much to further his goal of one cup per person per day.

"Six hundred million cups," he mutters. "That's not Storage Technology" (a successful computer business in nearby Louisville). He pauses, then his eyes light up as he thinks of $22.5 million in sales in 1981. "But do you know how many more cups of tea you have to sell compared to one of their machines?"

It's true that Celestial Seasonings started out in 1971 as a very laid-back place. Job applicants were asked about their attitudes toward truth, beauty and goodness.

It was the logical progression for a business that started with Mo mixing up a blend of the herbs he grew to know during his childhood exploring the Colorado wilds. He teamed up with partner John Hays, whose wife paired up with Mo's girlfriend to stitch the little cloth bags that held the brew.

Soon, the first blend, Mo's 24, was joined by Red Zinger.

THE BUSINESS got serious when Mo's mother signed so that her 20-year-old son could borrow $5,000. At 26, Mo was a millionaire. Last year's sales were $22.5 million. Mo is looking at $50 million by 1986.

To be sure, he wasn't the first to brew herbal tea, but it was Mo who peddled outside the traditional health-food stores.

His success has been so stellar that the big companies took notice. Thomas J. Lipton Inc. put its energies into herbal tea two years ago.

Lipton's new category has grown 75 to 80 percent a year, says spokeswoman Deborah Allian, and its sales are currently $60 million a year.

"We guesstimate that Lipton has spent and lost more money this year advertising and promoting their new line than we've made since we started," Mo says. "In six months, they went from marketing in 29 percent to 85 percent of the country. It took us five years to get 65 percent of the country."

Today, Celestial Seasonings' corporate hierarchy is filled with names from the giants of the food industry — General Foods, Pepperidge Farm, Coca-Cola.

> Business...started with Mo mixing up a blend of the herbs he grew to know during his childhood exploring the Colorado wilds...The first blend, Mo's 24, was joined by Red Zinger.

"WHAT AN opportunity — to use everything you know in a human-scale company and live next to the foothills of the Rockies," Mo says, explaining his recruiting success.

Mo says he is still getting used to having hired all these experts, letting people do the work instead of jumping in to help. Or, as he puts its, "to sitting on people's shoulders, instead of around their necks."

Once, the plant had 235 employees. Now there are 200. Those who suggest ways to eliminate their jobs are given a portion of their salary and put on a preferential list for re-hiring. Profit-sharing is in effect and Mo expects to grow another 35 percent this year.

"I'm interested in what American business can do for itself," Mo says. "I really believe that our rewards are going to be equal to our service."

Despite the success, not a lot has changed. There are still volleyball breaks and an atmosphere of what one employee described as "coming in and playing with my friends."

In his office at lunchtime, Mo shares sandwiches bristling with sprouts. The company cafeteria is low-cost and organic.

DOWN THE hall is a board room with grass-green chairs among Oriental scrolls and lacquered cabinets.

Here, old glass-fronted oak bookcases have their doors permanently up to accommodate a tangle of reading material heavy on nutrition and managerial power. "Cosmic Cookery" lines up next to volumes like "Managing Through People," "How To Measure Managerial Performance," "Managing In Turbulent Times."

On the walls are originals of the some of the storybook illustrations that adorn Celestial boxes — the bright, folksy art that has made Celestial Seasoning displays the happiest place in the supermarket. On one wall, the laughing bear from the front of Iced Herbal Delight. On another, an idyllic picnic scene from Almond Sunset.

There are 150 blends and 18 single-herb teas in the Celestial Seasonings line, and the growing need for exotic ingredients has helped make Mo a scholar of foreign affairs.

A few years ago, Mo's workers rebelled when it was learned that he had cooked up a recipe that included a South African herb. Affronted by that country's apartheid racial policies, the workers won their fight. The tea that the offending country was intended for, ginseng-laced Emperor's Choice, went on to be a hit.

Carbonation, though — now there's a failure. For years, Mo worked to harness those bubbles.

"OUR CARBONATION attempts were total, complete failures," he says now. In addition to the worries about keeping such a mixture pure and the problem of shelf-life without artificial additives, the big guys of the beverage industry loomed.

"I'm just not interested in a head-on battle with Pepsi," Mo says. "We're having a good success in what we're doing. It always makes good sense for a business man to do what he does best well."

Down the highway is a mammoth warehouse stacked with bales and bundles of exotic ingregients bound for the nation's teacups. Semi-trailer trucks emblazoned with that laughing bear travel the country with their aromatic cargo, spreading the gospel of the little company that got big but tried to stay good.

It's a long way from the days when Mo's 24 came in little hand-stitched parcels.

The old days, though, are not that far away. The boxes still say "Please write, we like to respond," and carry aphorisms, essays and anecdotes. Religion, science, philosophy and humor — all sifted through a teabag.

As in:

"The closer we are to nature, the closer we are to God" — Goethe.

"If you tell the truth you don't have to remember anything" — Mark Twain.

"Gravity has a lot of pull" — Mo Siegel.

SERENDIP analyzes signals

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Astronomers here have reported on a dirt-cheap method of scanning the heavens for signs of other civilizations.

The University of California-Berkeley scientists have spent less than $5,000 on the system, called SERENDIP, which already has examined 10 million radio signals.

SERENDIP will be only one of the tools, but probably the most inexpensive, in a revived national effort to determine if intelligent life exists elsewhere in the universe.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, whose SETI, or Search for Extra-Terrestrial Intelligence, project was tarred with a Golden Fleece Award by Sen. William Proxmire (D. Wis.) in 1977, is to spend $1.5 million this year on development of powerful radio antennas for SETI. Proxmire has since dropped his opposition to the project.

The secret of SERENDIP is that it analyzes radio signals being studied by scientists engaged in astronomical studies. The only equipment needed is an automated signal monitor and tape recorder attached to a radio telescope, which is a large radio antenna.

The only staff needed, aside from the researchers who examine the collected radio signals, is someone to replace the tape on the recorder once a month.

A 35-day test of SERENDIP was described at a meeting in Boston of the American Astronomical Society last month. The scientific team, led by UC-Berkeley astronomy Professor Stuart Bowyer, reported that all but 10 of the 10 million signals examined turned out to be coming from natural sources in the heavens or from man-made devices such as satellites, timekeeping broadcasts or scientific equipment.

Of the remaining 10, "we can't rule out that it's what we're looking for," said Jill Tarter, a research astronomer on the team. But she added that the signals have been detected only once and have to be observed repeatedly before they can even be serious candidates for messages from afar.

"The chance of any given observation being sucessful is small," Bowyer said. "At this stage of the game the odds are tremendous against success. But if you don't do it, the odds are zero."

The scientists tested the equipment on Berkeley's Hat Creek Radio Observatory near Mount Lassen, which has an 85-foot-wide antenna.

What SERENDIP's computerized analyzer was programmed to pick out were radio signals at one particular and constant frequency. That would suggest a deliberate attempt at communication, as opposed to the fuzzier emissions at many wave-lengths that natural objects give off.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Calcium contained in several foods

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't think I have an allergy to milk, I just don't like it. Even the idea of drinking it makes me nauseous, unless I add chocolate or some other flavoring. The trouble is I don't want the added calories I would get from using chocolate. Can I eat cheese to get the calcium I need if I don't drink milk? — Corinne, Raleigh, N.C.

Dear Corinne: You can get the calcium you need from cheese, yogurt or buttermilk. Some people who can't tolerate the taste of milk find the taste of buttermilk more to their liking.

Calcium can also be obtained from leafy vegetables, while dried peas and beans can provide the protein you otherwise would be getting from milk.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it possible to avoid including any fat in the diet? If I stayed away from all dairy products as well as from meat, fish and poultry, would I still be getting any fat? — Tillie, Flint, Micn.

Dear Tillie: Fat is contained in a number of foods besides the ones you mention. For example, fat is found in wheat, corn and coconut, among others.

Your question implies that it would be advisable to eliminate fat from the diet, but this is not the case. Fat provides some vital fatty acids that are necessary for proper growth. Fat is also a carrier for vitamins A, D, E, and K. And, of course, fat provides food energy.

Many people would do well to decrease the amount of fat they consume, just as they would be well advised to reduce their intake of sugar and salt. But completely eliminating fat from the diet is not only impossible but inadvisable as well.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I must have read a thousand articles about the effects of overweight on heart disease, but I'm still not clear about it. Is a person who is overweight more likely to have heart disease? — Cal, Scranton, Pa.

Dear Cal: It is difficult to consider obesity separately from other risk factors. For example, obesity is generally associated with a sedentary lifestyle as well as with hypertension and high cholesterol levels. All of these are risk factors for coronary artery disease, but how do you separate one from another?

In the opinion of one physician who has studied the question, Dr. H. T. Milhorn Jr. of the University of Mississippi School of Medicine in Jackson, obesity by itself is only a minor factor in the development of coronary artery disease. But when an obese person with high blood pressure who has been leading a sedentary life has a heart attack, it is difficult to determine which risk factors were implicated.

For Mr. I. M., New Orleans: I don't understand what additional motivation you need to lose weight. As a diabetic, you should realize that weight loss may permit you to discontinue or at least reduce your reliance on medication. Weight loss can also decrease the possibility of complications and increase longevity. What other incentives do you need?

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Harvard tuition increases

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The cost of tuition, room and board at Harvard College will hit $13,150 next school year, but officials say they are happy the increase was only $1,000.

The total rose 8.7 percent, up from $12,100.

"After three years of double-digit increases, I am pleased to be able to announce that the increases for 1983-84 will be less than 9 percent," said Henry Rosovsky, dean of the faculty of arts and sciences.

Increases the past three years have been 14.8 percent, 14.9 percent and 12.7 percent, the college said.

Financial aid available to needy students will be 9.9 percent greater than last fall, said L. Fred Jewett, dean of admissions and financial aid.

Jewett said Harvard will continue its "aid-blind policy" of admission, accepting students for entry without reference to their financial need.

Interferon helps, say doctors

HOUSTON (AP) — Human interferon has been used successfully to control, for the first time, the spread and growth of kidney cancer, a highly lethal type of tumor that has not before responded to any kind of therapy.

Doctors at The University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute reported in the February issue of "Cancer Research" magazine that 12 of 19 kidney cancer patients who received massive doses of natural interferon experienced favorable results.

All of the patients had cancer that originated in the kidneys and had spread to the lung, liver or bone, or to all three.

Dr. Jordan U. Gutterman, leader of the team conducting the study, said "a significant number" of the patients in the 12-month study experienced a reduction in the size of tumors or a halt in tumor growth or spread.

The doctor emphasized that the findings do not mean the disease can be cured at this time.

"THIS IS AN important advance for this type of tumor," he said. "We have more work to do, but we now have a foot in the door."

The published study dealt only with the effects of kidney tumors spread to the lungs, but Gutterman said later, unpublished results show that tumors in the liver and bone also respond to the interferon therapy.

Kidney cancer always in the past has been incurable and invariably fatal, Gutterman said. It causes about 8,500 deaths annually and the American Cancer Society estimates there will be 18,200 new cases of this type of cancer in 1983. Most patients die within two years of a diagnosis.

In the normal course of kidney, or renal, cancer the disease starts in one of the kidneys and then metastasizes, or spreads, to other organs, usually to the lung, liver, lymph nodes and bone. The primary site, the kidney, is generally surgically removed early in the treatment. The problem then is to control the cancer colonies in the other organs.

Gutterman said that renal cancer in the other organs generally is highly resistant to chemotherapy, radiation and other traditional types of treatment.

In the study, 19 patients with renal cancer that had spread to the lungs, the bone, the liver or to all three, were given daily doses of three million units of human leukocyte interferon. The researchers then used chest X-rays to monitor the effect on lung tumors.

FIVE PATIENTS experienced a 50 percent or greater reduction in the size of the tumors and no new tumors developed. Two showed a tumor reduction of 25 to 50 percent.

Three patients experienced a 50 percent or greater decrease in the size of some tumors, but growth in some other tumors. The disease in two patients remained stable, with little or no growth in tumor size.

For seven patients, the interferon apparently had no effect on the course of the disease, with tumors continuing to grow or spread.

The interferon injections continued for each patient as long as improvement was shown, and one patient received the injections on each day of the year-long study.

"The importance of this study is that the use of a relatively non-toxic biological agent, interferon, can induce disappearance of a metastic tumor in patients with a tumor that previously was resistant to other methods of treatment," said Gutterman.

"Our data show that even the partially pure leukocyte interferon that we used is a potentially active antitumor agent in patients with metastic renal cell carcinoma (cancer), a tumor for which no effective systemic therapy exists today."

INTERFERON IS a protein that the body naturally produces in response to a virus.

Star shines

Rory Calhoun polishes his 10-year-old Lincoln Continental, a luxurious reminder of the days when movie stars drove the biggest and best gas-guzzlers from Detroit. It is an example of the kind of land yachts that are now being restored in Hollywood.

Land yachts regain popularity in some circles

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

The automobile industry's statement for those times was three little words: Excess. Ostentation. Gimcrack.

That translated to 44 pounds of chrome plate on cars that were the piggiest of Detroit iron. Two tons of fins, tri-tone paint and the erotic symbology of rocketshp ornaments penetrating Saturn's rings. Travel was by sofa inside a pillarless hardtop built for exceeding 100 mph. And at that speed, they were good for exactly two hours, flat out, between fill-ups.

Then the little things. Speedometer needles that were silver wands tipped by red jelly beans. An alarm set to buzz out speed limits because they varied between states. Triangular Civil Defense station markets on Sonophonic radios (with B-U-I-C-K marking its push-buttons) and foot-operated station changers for the terminally indolent. Cigarette lighters that were cigar lighters. Engineering minting new words ending in "matic" and "flite." Torqueflite. Motormatic. Airflyte and Hydramatic.

And, always, advertisements reminding buyers to bless De Soto for making seats that let you step out like a lady... Chevy chic...Pontiac's upholstery with the off-the-shoulder look... Dodge with the magic touch of tomorrow...and dramatic Edsel styling that was here to stay...

MOST OF THESE cars are battered and selling as-is from scruffy lots. Others are piled in junkyards as crunched, rusted and stripped shadows of their former Saturday Evening Post selves.

Yet...some are on their way back.

Actor Rory Calhoun says if they (presumably new-car salesmen or energy lobbyists) want to take away his slab-sided Lincoln Town Car, they'll have to pry it from his dying fingers.

Calhoun's devotion to land yachts is total. On a recent drive, he saw a mid-'60s sister of his own Lincoln and almost bought it. His wife, Australian-born author-writer Sue Rhodes Calhoun, drives a lumbering, four-door Cadillac Fleetwood which she, with fun, down-under disdain, describes as her "Yank tank." And Calhoun is keeping a close eye on a possession of close friend and fellow actor Richard Egan. "Rich owns an old Chrysler LeBaron and if he ever decides to get rid of it, I want first crack."

"I love 'em for the comfort and space," explains Calhoun. "You're not tied in like you're flying an open-cockpit airplane. I like to punch in the cruise control and sit back while the car drives itself. It's that ride — soft, smooth and not, that short, choppy ride that knocks the hell out of you."

After coveting the marque for years, a Studio City, Calif., videotape operator now has a 1959 convertible in her three-Cadillac stable because, she says, it represents an era's final hurrah and maybe Detroit's last laugh.

Says a Venice, Calif., artist of his 1958 Imperial (painted in a most unartistic turquoise, green and white) hardtop: "It's saying, 'Look at me. Aren't I a lot of fun? And when they designed me they didn't stop, they just kept going.' What an abysmal but wonderful excess."

SO THE MOVEMENT — not yet a trend; more of a surge from Southern California, naturally, to Chicago and Miami and New York — is to buying, restoring and the daily driving of land yachts.

"There's definitely an undercurrent, a cult starting to form," says Drew Hardin. He is managing director of the classic-car division of Rick Cole Auctions Inc. In four automobile auctions last year, Hardin has seen Detroit dinosaurs going for as high as $10,000 (a 1957 Chrysler 300E) and as low as $1,675 (a 1965 Cadillac four-door). "What we're finding is that since they are not expensive, they're becoming popular. Also, the cars of the '20s, the '30s and the '40s, everything that could be restored has been restored. So maybe we're looking at a natural progression."

Maybe. But on the other hand, agrees Hardin, this automotive movement is more than just another facet of '50s nostalgia. The hot wheels of the '50s fad are the lighter, shorter '57 Chevrolet Bel-Airs and '56 Ford Fairlanes.

Land yachtsmen, he says, are into the once-expensive, overloaded and totally decadent cars, and those are the beamy, elongated misfits for any modern garage — the fantailed Buick Electras of the late '60s with swing-out, chromium-plated Kleenex boxes as a factory option; the 1959 Chrysler Saratogas and New Yorkers and Crown Imperials; all the Continentals of the early to mid-'60s, and any Cadillac that ever carried a fin.

The investment potential, explain others, is certainly no motive for owning a land yacht. "I don't think they are a good investment," says Beverly Hills, Calif., attorney Bob Gottlieb, owner of a 55-car collection of horseless carriages and classics. "While they will go up with the passage of time, they won't go up fast enough to cover the annual cost of storage, insurance and maintenance. It was my strong opinion that they were not moving well (at a recent auction) because they can't achieve the revenues of the '30s cars. I love to look at them (land yachts) but want the other guy to spend his dollars so I can save mine for a Duesenbeg."

Gottlieb, however, has noticed a renaissance of the land yacht with young adults as buyers, "because they identify with the automobiles they saw then (as youths) but could never afford anything but a Ford, Plymouth or Chevrolet."

AND THAT, SAYS automotive writer Peter Frey, may well be the primary reason for the return. It's cheap chic. It's today's middle-earner assuming the transportation of yesterday's millionaires. "With these cars comes a cachet, an image," says Frey. "In the Beverly Hills environment, they stand out because they're so different from the run of high-visibility Mercedes Benzes and Rolls-Royces. And at today's prices (for a land yacht), it's like being given something we could never afford yesterday.

"Today, $6,000 will buy you a new car that's a tinny, unstyled econobox and a miserable transportation experience. Yet for $6,000 you can also get an immaculate example of an older, big Cadillac with all the space, comfort and luxury of its era. Anyone with some sense of expressing a certain individuality will buy the Cadillac, and have a fine car they can drive to work every day."

Mechanically, land yachts are as honest and as rugged as a stove bolt. Parts are readily available and basic repairs can be performed at service-station level. Insurance is inexpensive. No matter that gas consumption is a slurp because that will be balanced by the low cost of purchasing the car. "And when you look under the hood, you can see spark plugs," says Frey, "not vacuum hoses, chips, widgets and gilhoolies all over the place."

All of which, he says, has convinced him to lead formation of the Great American Land yacht Society.

"I'm quite serious because land yachts are a phenomenon and an awareness that's growing. The people that I've talked to who own that type of car — and over a year I've had sustained conversations with more than two dozen people — are most certainly aware and involved, and like anyone with a particular passion, they want to share and talk to each other. They're aware they're driving something different, they're proud of it, they want to discuss it and a land-yacht society will endorse this individual, personal intimacy."

MEMBERSHIP DRIVES will be by flyer beneath the windshield wipers of parked land yachts. A newsletter is planned. So is the cataloguing of parts centers with particular attention to hard-to-obtain manufacturers' badges, hood ornaments and trim.

Paradoxically, Frey does not own a car, let alone a land yacht. As a free-lance automotive writer, there has been no need, for the carport of his home in the Los Angeles suburb of Sherman Oaks has always been littered with dealer cars, test cars and prototypes to drive.

"I've got eight years of non-vehicle-owning inertia to overcome, but as befitting someone starting this society, I will have to buy a car and it's going to be the premier land yacht," he has decided. "It will be a pre-'60s car between 1955 and 1960, it will be a convertible and have a huge set of fins. So either a Cadillac or a Chrysler."

Whatever his boat, it will carry the burgee of the Great American Land Yacht Society. That logo is being drafted by automotive artist Harold Cleworth. It likely will miniaturize one of Cleworth's photo-paintings — the rear fin and Buck Rogers tail-light assembly of a 1959 Cadillac.

Beneath the logo will be a motto, another set of three little words. "Chrome...Fins...Tonnage."

Former ad executive opens Stevenson museum

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

ST. HELENA, Calif. — Was he born here? Did he die here?

These are the questions most frequently asked by visitors to the Silverado Museum, which is devoted to the life and works of Robert Louis Stevenson.

The answer to both questions is negative.

Stevenson was born in Scotland and died in Samoa. But he did honeymoon in St. Helena.

He and his wife, Fanny, spent two months in 1880 in an abandoned bunkhouse at the old Silverado mine high on the shoulder of Mount St. Helena overlooking this small town 60 miles north of San Francisco.

"This is where a Robert Louis Stevenson museum rightfully should be," says Norman H. Strouse, 74. "It was here the most romantic episode in Stevenson's life occurred, his honeymoon, and the subject of one of his finest works, 'The Silverado Squatters.'

"His copious notes of the enchanting, almost primitive scenery on the mountain, provided descriptive details later for 'Treasure Island' and many other books."

Strouse, retired president and board chairman of J. Walter Thompson advertising agency, has been a lifelong collector of Stevenson material.

The collection includes original Stevenson letters, manuscripts, first editions, paintings, sculptures, photographs and memorabilia.

Three years ago Strouse built the Silverado Museum, a wing to the new St. Helena Public Library, to house his collection.

The museum previously had been located in a picturesque 19th-century stone chicken hatchery in St. Helena.

Strouse began collecting books and memorabilia of the author while in high school in Olympia, Wash., and his interest has never waned.

When he retired, Strouse and his wife, Charlotte, sold their home in New York and moved to California to live in "Stevenson" country.

Curator of the museum is Ellen Shaffer who has followed the writer's footsteps throughout the world.

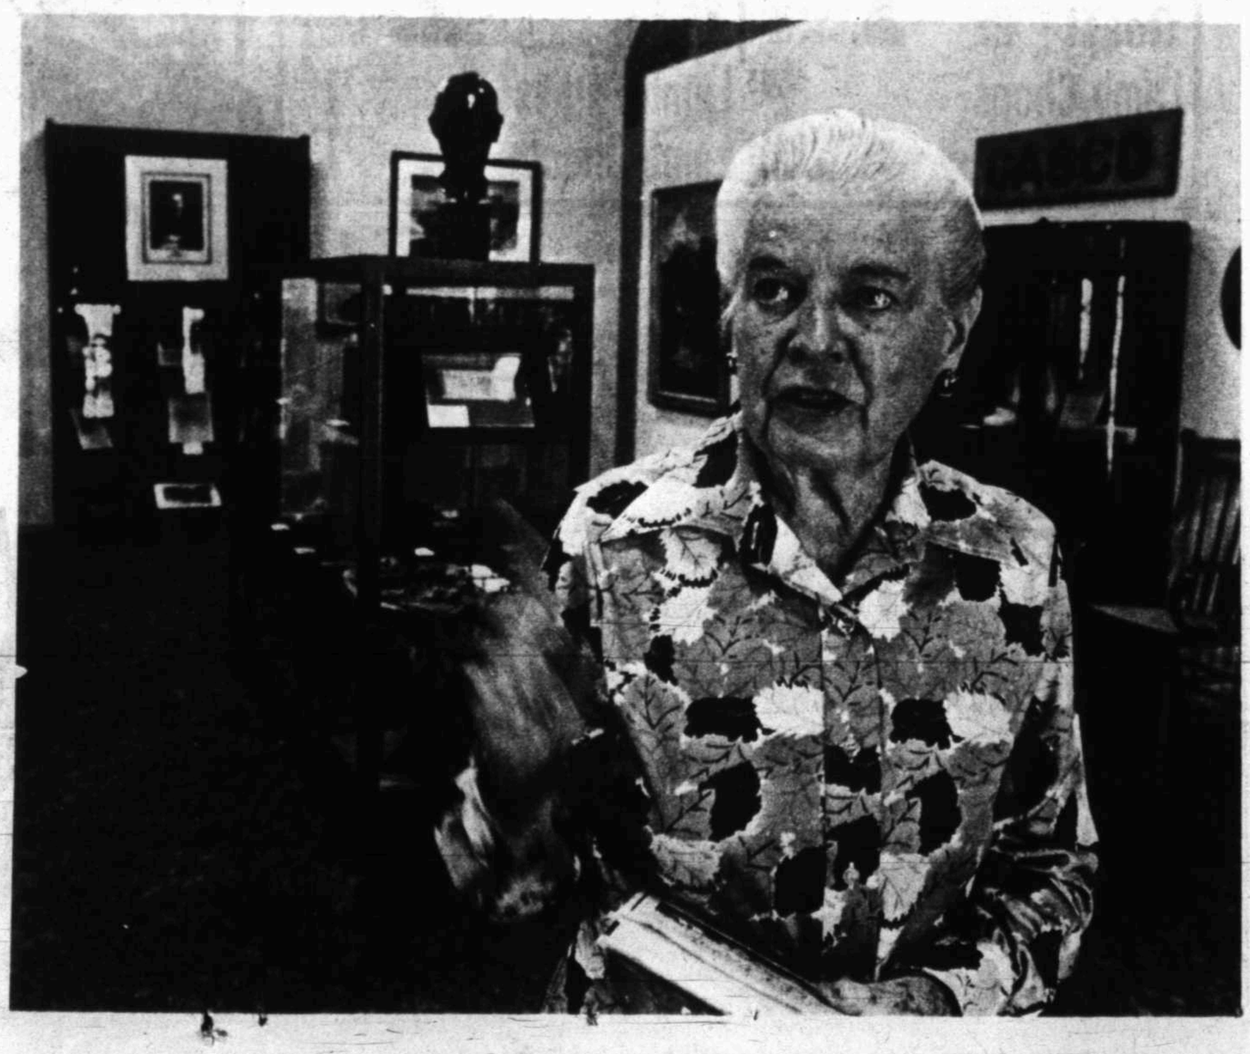
Miss Shaffer was the rare book specialist in Los Angeles from 1929 to 1954, a rare book librarian at the Free Library of Philadelphia from 1954 to 1970 and curator of the Silverado Museum since then.

"More than 100,000 visitors from every state and from 80 foreign nations have visited the museum since it first opened in the hatchery then moved to its new quarters," Miss Shaffer says.

"Writers doing articles about Stevenson use our resources. They have contacted us or come here from Russia, Japan, Italy, Spain, England, Scotland."

Miss Shaffer says the Japanese, in particular, have had a great interest in Stevenson in recent years with several writers coming from Japan to use the Stevenson material.

There are more than 7,500 items in the Strouse collection including the desk where he did all of his writing.



Ellen Shaffer is the curator of the Silverado Museum in St. Helena, Calif., which is devoted to the life and works of Robert Louis Stevenson. In addition to the desk at which he did all of his writing, there are more than 7,500 items on display here. In the last three years, more than 100,000 tourists from every state in the Union and 80 foreign countries have visited the museum.

Waiters, waitresses lose under new law

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Waitress Margaret DeRycke knew that times were tough, but she wasn't expecting a paycheck of zero dollars for a week's work. Now she's complaining, not about her employer, but the federal government.

The 52-year-old waitress owed more in deductions and income tax withholding than she earned in wages last week. She is starting a petition drive against the new federal law that created her problem.

The law that took effect Jan. 1 requires waiters and waitresses to pay withholding taxes as though they were earning tips of at least 8 percent of sales.

Mrs. DeRycke, a waitress for 37 years, said she worked 29½ hours in her most recent pay period at a wage of $2.45 an hour and earned $73.75 (waiters and waitresses are permitted to earn less than the minimum wage). Before the new law, she took home $30 to $40, but last week, her entire paycheck was consumed by withholding taxes along with Social Security, pension, insurance, meals and disability.

Under the new law, it is theoretically possible for a waiter or waitress to bring home zero dollars in paychecks all year and still owe the IRS money — because of high tip income.

Mrs. DeRycke said she is renting a post office box, placing ads and printing 1,000 forms of a petition to "the president of the United States and all government officials."

"I feel like I have to beg these customers to give me a tip now," said Mrs. DeRycke, a waitress at a Denny's Restaurant. "Why am I working if at the end of the week I have nothing to show for it?"

The Internal Revenue Service says the 8 percent tip estimate is "conservative," but Mrs. DeRycke thinks she is losing money on it.

"I had 17 people the other night. They left a $1 tip and one woman walked out without paying," Mrs. DeRycke said Tuesday. "I would say 90 percent of the time I'm coming out short."

In Washington, National Restaurant Association spokesman Jeffrey Prince said the new tip-reporting rule is causing dissension between employers and waiters in "even the most harmonious" restaurants.

The association's board of directors will meet Sunday to discuss how to fight the rule, Prince said.

William Gorman, a Buffalo-based spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service, said the reporting rule "doesn't seem at all callous to me. She's acting as though she got paid no money."

Mrs. DeRycke concedes she took home $120 in cash tips for the week. With that, she is supporting a family of five, including her unemployed truck driver husband.

The IRS found in a study that only 16 percent of all waiters and waitresses were reporting their full tip income, Gorman said. The IRS estimates the new law will bring in an extra $1.3 billion in the next three years.

It requires restaurants to report at least 8 percent of their gross sales as estimated tips. Those figures, matched against employees' claims on their tax forms, allow the government to catch workers who pocket tips without reporting them.

AP Laserphoto

Margaret DeRycke sits at a table in a Rochester, N.Y., Denny's Restaurant with her paycheck for the last week. The check was for zero dollars because of a new IRS regulation which requires withholding to be based on estimated tips. She plans to petition against the regulation which cuts take-home pay for waiters and waitresses.

Chinese lepers live on desolate island

SIAN ISLAND, China (AP) — Chen Huajing, his clothes in patches, his crutches nearby, sits on a grimy cot and stares out the window here on the Banana Palm Island of outcasts where he has lived for 13 years.

"I think I will live here forever," says the 47-year-old leper matter-of-factly. "I am worthless and my family doesn't want me. They are too poor to send money and they never visit me."

In a gray, impoverished room, a few ragged lepers keep him company, listening to shrill Cantonese opera and giggling sadly at questions about the compassion of the outside world. The answers, they say, are obvious.

"Some people understand us," says Chen, a man with a sunken face and ruined legs. "But in remote villages, many people shun us and are afraid. Some throw stones and sticks to drive lepers, even cured ones, away."

The leper chorus nods. Because of years of physical decay and years of treatment ahead they wear the air of inmates and say things like, "I am useless," "I live day by day," "I wait for my next meal."

Chen, who is almost cured, receives 12 yuan ($6) a month to buy food and raises a few chickens for eggs. He lives in a room with three other lepers, off an unlighted corridor.

"I am one of the poorest lepers because I cannot work," he said in an interview.

Chen is one of 310 patients at the Sian Island Leper Hospital. More than 100 others have been cured but have decided to stay at the hospital in Guangdong Province's only leper colony.

Some stay because they are too disabled to earn a living outside, some because they can earn at least 60 yuan ($30) a month growing cash crops like bananas, tangerines and sugar cane. Many also remain because they are rejected by their families and villages.

In China's vast countryside many peasants do not realize that leprosy, or Hansen's Disease, is curable and not easily communicable.

Most of the lepers here are old or middle-aged. A few are teen-agers, the youngest a 15-year-old boy, and they seem out of place on the geriatric island.

The hospital is a huddle of concrete buildings on an island in the Pearl River, 60 miles from Canton. It opened in 1965, taking new patients and older, more pathetic cases from the former French, British and German leprosy hospitals in surrounding Duguan County.

Many received inadequate treatment with a single drug before doctors realized that a combination of drugs worked best. Patients also are treated with acupuncture and traditional Chinese medicine to relieve pain and other problems.

For more than 2,000 years, China was plagued by leprosy, but it has an impressive record of cure and steady eradication since 1949.

The drug treatment is like that of other countries, says Dr. Liu Nuchu, the hospital director who has devoted 30 years to treating lepers. But China is advanced in training rural health workers, "barefoot doctors," to spot symptoms at an early stage. Most new cases are light.

In the 1950s, China had 500,000 known lepers. Today it has 150,000, most in the southern coastal region. Guangdong Province had 70,000 lepers in the late 1950s but now has 6,000. This is the only one of four leprosy hospitals that remains.

In comparison, India has 3.2 million lepers and the United States has 5,000.

For patients here who are active or interested, there is television, ping pong and an occasional film. They pay a few cents for food in a dark, cavernous dining room and rush to eat in their rooms, or they cook over their own stoves.

They can receive visitors twice a year, but not many come. Those whose cases are controlled can pay occasional visits home, but not many make the long river trip.

Dr. Liu concedes it was a mistake to build the hospital on this desolate island, since leprosy is not very communicable. The state spends 300,000 yuan ($150,000) a year to run the hospital.

Young women lepers, symptoms hidden to a casual observer, are afraid that no man will marry them, even after they are cured and present their certificate to his parents.

A 24-year-old woman, Miss Lin, arrived three months ago and expects to stay at least three years.

A peasant from Zhangjiang region, 300 miles north of Canton, she felt shooting pains in her feet and noticed numb, white spots last June. She went to a clinic; she had leprosy.

"I was so unhappy I couldn't sleep," Miss Lin said. "I just hope someday I can find a kind man with a tender family who will accept me when I am cured."

In a Chinese village, it's almost impossible to keep a secret, any secret, let alone leprosy, the patients say.

Somehow, 48-year-old electrician Li's secret was safe.

He was only 14 and living with an uncle in Canton when he contracted the disease.

He was sent to the French hospital in Duguan County. Only his sister knew and she alone visited him in secret. She never told her husband.

Finally Li was pronounced cured in 1967 but decided to stay, since he had learned the electrician's trade and since he rarely had left the world of leprosariums.

"We've never told my sister's husband because he might divorce her," Li said.

In 1981, Li married a cured patient who works as a superintendent of women. They have a cottage, some chickens and together make about 80 yuan ($40) a month.

"Sometimes I want to move away and live on the outside," he said. "But ever since I've been a leper, I have been very pessimistic about life."

96-year-old Odessan outlives insurance policy, collects $2,040

ODESSA (AP) — Henry Howell has outlived most of his friends, and now he has outlived his life insurance.

The 96-year-old Howell received a letter from his insurance company informing him that his longevity earned him the distinction of being able to spend his own life insurance money.

The Southland Insurance Co. said Howell had outlived the mortality rate on his policy. He subsequently received a check for $2,040.

"It never entered my mind that I would outlive the mortality rate," said Howell, who turned 96 on Sept. 9.

"But there's no secret to longevity. You just live one day at a time. If you can get by without being in too big of a hurry and don't let your troubles go to bed with you, you'll do all right," he said.

Agent Don Nelson of Waddell & Blank Insurance Co. said that in his 30 years in the business, he never before had seen anyone outlive a life insurance policy.

Howell took out the policy in 1923 when he lived in Tahoka, Texas. He and his wife moved to Odessa in 1980.

"The company could wait until he dies, but since the money is due at this time, they would rather pay it to him," Nelson said.

Henry B. Howell of Odessa beat the odds by staying alive 96 years and is $2,000 richer.

Seven people die in three separate fires

By The Associated Press

A pregnant woman and her baby grandson died in an apartment fire in New Jersey, while three children were killed in a Chicago blaze and another two youngsters died in a house explosion in Oklahoma.

In Paterson, N.J., 40-year-old Thelma McKinzie and her 1-year-old grandson were found dead late Tuesday in a bedroom of their second-floor apartment, authorities said.

"There wasn't a burn mark on them," said John Mauro, Paterson Fire Department Battalion Chief, adding that the cause of death appeared to be smoke inhalation. "I found the child on the floor alongside the bed," he said.

Firefighters said a mattress apparently caught fire in an adjacent room, but did not know what caused it to ignite.

Three children were killed and four others were injured Tuesday when a fire swept through a run-down apartment on Chicago's Near North Side.

The dead, believed to have been members of the same family, ranged in age from 10 months to 3 years, firefighters said. Three other children were hospitalized — two of them in critical condition.

Cranston announces bid for presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston led the pack into the race for the presidency today, pledging to make ending the nuclear arms race his "dominating goal" if elected.

Cranston, the first candidate to formally announce a presidential bid, said he will outline an economic program during his campaign, but the aim of nuclear disarmament "will take precedence over all others."

"A president must concentrate the powers of his mind and his office on one or two principal purposes, else he will squander his strength and his substance," the California lawmaker said.

"Our aim must be to end the threat of nuclear war; a purpose which will be the dominating goal of my presidency."

Cranston, 68, a senator since 1969, scheduled his announcement in the marble-pillared Senate caucus room in which John F. Kennedy launched his presidential campaign in 1960.

He planned to fly to Manchester, N.H., and to Los Angeles to repeat the announcement later in the day.

"Some have said that my age might be a handicap," Cranston said in a prepared statement.

"I don't believe so.

"Principals and values don't decline with age. They just grow stronger."

Cranston is the oldest candidate known to be contemplating a run for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984. If elected, he would be 70 on June 14, 1984, about a month before the expected date of the Democratic National Convention.

President Reagan, the oldest president yet, reached his 70th birthday a few weeks after inauguration day in 1980.

Although he did not spell out his economic program, Cranston said he disagreed with the "many who tell you that we can restore our economic health while heaping new weapons upon the old."

"In the course of my campaign, I will spell out my vision of full employment and prosperity for America," he said.

"But I am convinced that, in the long run, we can not revive our economy, or save our society, until we end the incredibly dangerous, shamefully expensive arms race."

"I believe in the necessities of defense," Cranston said. "But we have overleaped the bounds of reason."

He said his first step as president would be to propose a mutual and verifiable freeze of nuclear weapons by the Soviet Union and the United States.

"I will propose that we meet again and again and again, until we agree on substantial reductions in our arsenals of megadeath," he said.

Sergio Bendixen, Cranston's campaign manager, said the senator expected to announce the composition of state organizations in seven states.

The states he listed are New Hampshire, which holds the first presidential primary, California, Alabama, Washington, Wisconsin, New York and Oregon.

The Cranston campaign originally set a budget of $2 million for 1983, but Bendixen said the goal now is to raise between $6 million and $10 million and spend about $3 million of it this year.

Cranston aides say the senator has the required amount of small contributions in more than 20 states to qualify for federal matching funds, beginning on Jan. 1, 1984.

Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado has said he will announce for the Democratic presidential nomination on Feb. 17.

Saddle Club Introduces

Polo Park

Polo Park and Saddle Club amenities include: total electric kitchens with ice-makers and self-cleaning ovens, fully carpeted and draped units, individual private storage, fireplaces, microwave ovens, ceiling fans. In addition to your generous interior features the only indoor racquet ball court in an apartment community, combined with lighted tennis court, exercise room and hot tub, complete your recreational needs.

Enjoy this community atmosphere in their luxurious and warm fireplace clubroom.

These one and two bedroom luxury apartments offer the largest square footage in the Midland area. Sloan Bagwell has designed the models in furnishings and accessories.

To reach Polo Park:
Travel west on Loop 250, right on Polo Parkway, or take Garfield north past 250 and follow Polo Park signs. 4700 Polo Park.
For further information, please contact Liz Ohlinger, 687-0511.

To reach Saddle Club:
Take Big Spring Street to Loop 250; travel west and turn right on "A" Avenue and turn into the exclusive Saddle Club. 5101 North Avenue A.
For further information, please contact Lynnette Lasater, 682-8678.

Saddle Club's and Polo Park's landscaping is more beautiful than a park itself.
