Alabama KKK leader begins sentence at Big Spring prison

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

Ku Klux Klan leader Steven Donald Black arrived at Big Spring Federal Prison Camp yesterday afternoon to begin serving a three-year prison term, prison Superintendent John Allman said.

Black, 29, of Birmingham, Ala., and Klansman Danny Hawkins of Jackson, Miss., were convicted in New Orleans federal court last year of plotting to overthrow Dominica, a tiny Caribbean island.

The new inmate, grand wizard of the Tusculumbased Federated KKK, claimed officials initially assigned him to La Tuna Correctional Institute in El Paso, where more than 50 percent of the prison population is Mexican or Mexican-American.

Black said he feared for his life if forced to serve at La Tuna because he recently organized a demonstration in Washington to protest the presence of Mexican aliens in the United States.

Allman said that although 30 percent of the inmates at the Big Spring prison are Mexican or

Mexican-American, Black will be "safe."

"They're non-violent Hispanics," he said. "They wouldn't get involved in the kind of thing he's in; that's why he's safe here."

Bill Garrison, spokesman for the south-central region of the federal Bureau of Prisons in Dallas, said Big Spring was the only "official" assignment made for Black.

"He had another designation to Tucson prior to that, but Tucson is more of an administrative (pre-trial) institution, so we changed, Garrison said."

Garrison said Black and his co-defendants were assigned to prisons arbitrarily.

"We try to spread them (codefendants) out," Garrison said. "He was just picked for that one."

Hawkins was assigned to a Wisconsin prison.

Black was "voluntarily committed" by driving himself to the prison, Allman said. The U.S. Marshall may allow a prisoner to commit himself rather than the government "going to the trouble and expense of transporting him," Garrison said.

Texas convict executed by injection

Many gather outside unit; protests held

Huntsville News Service
HUNTSVILLE — By midnight Monday before the execution of Charlie Brooks Jr. Texas Department of Corrections officials in the public affairs office near the Huntsville "Walls" Unit said they were tired of getting crank calls.

A California woman called and offered $1,000 to anyone who could stop the execution that happened as scheduled early Tuesday. A man told TDC officials he could prove the execution was illegal and that Bill Clements was not the real governor of the state, officials said.

Most of the calls came from religious people opposed to the death penalty. One woman from Sweeney — her voice sounded strained as though she was trying to control tears — phoned to inquire if Brooks had had access to a Christian chaplain. He had, TDC officials said. She said she was praying for his salvation.

Most of the people who gathered on the outside between the TDC Administration Building and the Walls were not protesting the execution, however.

Students, probably more accustomed to being the spectators of football games and their own antics, clogged the street and lawn in front of the Walls boisterously waiting for the execution.

Scores of reporters, carrying pads or hoisting cameras over their shoulders, and a few local residents weaved through the crowds of young people in front of the prison steps.

Charlie Brooks Jr. loses the final appeal

By CHARLES C. HILL
Associated Press Writer

HUNTSVILLE — Convicted murderer Charlie Brooks Jr., commending his soul to Allah and urging his girlfriend to "be strong," today became the first U.S. prisoner executed by lethal injection.

Seven minutes after the fatal dose of sodium Pentothal was administered at 12:09 a.m., the 40-year-old Brooks was pronounced dead.

Brooks' body was moved from the Huntsville Funeral Home to the Harris County Medical Examiners Office in Houston. An autopsy, performed by Chief Medical Examiner Joseph Jachimczyk, began at 6:30 a.m., said spokesman Cecil Wingo.

Wingo said a final report detailing the cause of death "probably won't be completed for several days."

Brooks' lawyers tried repeatedly Monday to delay his execution for the 1976 murder of a Fort Worth used car salesman.

He was only the second prisoner to be executed while still pursuing appeals since the U.S. Supreme Court allowed reinstitution of the death penalty in 1974 after a seven-year hiatus.

He was the sixth person to die since the reinstitution, and the first black. Texas' last execution was in 1964.

Brooks' final plea to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was turned down at 11:54 p.m., and at 12:01 a.m. authorities at the Texas Department of Corrections Walls Unit got permission from Gov. Bill Clements to proceed.

Wearing gold pants and a brown shirt open down the front, Brooks was strapped to a medical cart with an intravenous needle in his right arm. The tubes snaked behind a curtain where an unseen prison employee was ready to start the flow of the drugs.

When asked if he had any last words, the Fort Worth man replied, "Yes, I do."

Brooks, who converted to the Islamic faith while in prison, then prayed, "There is no god but Allah. Verily do we belong and verily unto him do we return."

As the drugs entered his system the condemned man raised his head and looked at Vanessa Sapp, a 27-year-old Fort Worth nurse whom he had met as a pen-pal while in prison. The couple last week committed themselves to each other for the next life, although they were not married.

Action/reaction:

Q. Is the county supposed to charge individuals when called for a fire?

A. Howard County Judge Bill Tune says no one, to his knowledge, has ever been charged by the county for putting out a fire at his home. The various county units are strictly volunteer with the county furnishing the equipment and insurance, Tune said. Some persons have made donations to individual units, he added.

Calendar: Ladies' night out

TODAY

- The Howard County Sheriff's Posse will have its regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. at the posse arena clubhouse on the Andrews Highway.
- The Downtown Lions Club will hold its Christmas Dinner and Ladies Night at the Howard College meeting room. Hors d'oeuvres will be at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m.

- Big Spring students and parents are encouraged to watch "EPIDEMIC! Why Your Kid is on Drugs," at 8 p.m. on KTPX, Cable Channel 13.

- Bonanza will give a free drink to each person who donates a canned good to the Salvation Army at the restaurant's F.M. 700 location. The Christmas drive ends Dec. 19.

WEDNESDAY

Tops on TV: More football

Singers Johnny Cash and Andy Williams greet the holiday season with Christmas specials tonight on Channel 7. "A Merry Memphis Christmas" with Cash and family begins at 8 p.m., and Williams and his special guests travel to New England at 9 p.m.

Outside: Cool

Cooler temperatures today are expected to turn cold tonight under overcast skies. Chance of precipitation—possibly freezing—on Wednesday night. Temperatures will plunge to the upper 20s tonight as December's first cold front settles in.

Schools schedule holiday

The arrival of the holiday season brings with it a favored gift for students everywhere: the Christmas break.

For area students, the holidays will begin either on the afternoon of Dec. 16 or Dec. 22.

In the Big Spring Independent School District the holiday begins the afternoon of Dec. 16 and continues until classes resume Jan. 3, 1983.

The Howard County Junior College District also will adjourn classes on the same schedule.

Forsan ISD will dismiss classes from Dec. 21 through Jan. 3. Students will return on Jan. 4, although teachers will have a work day on Jan. 3.

Coahoma ISD will hold classes until Dec. 22 at 2:30 p.m. The holiday concludes Jan. 4 when students return. Coahoma teacher also will have a work day on Jan. 3.

Sands ISD will follow the same schedule, dismissing early on Dec. 22 with students returning Jan. 4, 1983.

COMPUTER EQUIPMENT ARRIVES AT HERALD — Big Spring Herald Production Manager Bob Rogers shows assistant foreman employee Yolanda Bailon some of the finer points of the Compugraphic MCS-20 ad-composing computer which was recently installed in the office. The computer, along with two new typesetting machines, will provide for faster and more efficient ad layouts.

Herald installs new typesetters

Readers may have noticed a larger size type in the Big Spring Herald recently. It is the product of new typesetting equipment that is part of the Herald's modernization of production facilities.

The Herald two weeks ago installed two Compugraphic 8400 Typesetters and a MCS 20 ad composing machine. This completes the Herald's transition to electronics that began in May with the installation of a Mycro-Tek electronic text management system consisting of visual display terminals in the newsroom.

According to Herald Production Manager Bob Rogers, the new equipment will allow for more versatility in the paper's production.

"The new typesetters hold 16 different typefaces (styles of type), each of which can be increased in

School board sets '83 property tax

An ad valorem tax rate of 87½¢ per $100 property valuation was set for the 1982-83 school year by the Big Spring Independent School District Board of Trustees yesterday.

The board set the tax rate after granting a 40 percent homestead exemption in a special meeting last week. The new tax rate, coupled with the exemption, will produce about $5,048,332 in revenue for the district, Assistant Superintendent Don Crockett said.

Under board policy, the district will exempt 40 percent of the appraised market value of a person's home and subtract that figure plus $5,000 more for a homestead exemption law already in effect. The remainder will be taxed at 87½¢ per $100 of market value.

For example, the owner of a $50,000 home will pay $218.75 this year in school taxes with the 40 percent exemption. The owner of a similar home paid about $148.74 last year, Crockett said during last week's exemption meeting.

Superintendent Lynn Hise said the district may possibly have the tax statements prepared and mailed by "the middle or latter part of next week."

"We are hoping that we can get them mailed out by the middle of next week," Hise said. "But we're not promising that because we are tied into a data processing center in Midland and it's tied to a master computer in San Antonio. You could have a slip between cup and lip when dealing with computers."

Execution

It was 11:20 p.m. Convicted killer Brooks, the favored son of an affluent black family, was waiting to die in a death house that hadn't been used in 18 years.

Some of the students said they had gathered in front of the Civil War-era prison out of interest in the historical event — the first lethal injection and the first execution in Texas since the year some of them were born.

Others, having heard that anti-death penalty groups such as Amnesty International had planned to protest the execution, said they came because they back the death penalty.

"(I'm) just watching the justice system," one young man in a white sweatshirt said when questioned about his interest in the vigil.

A group of young men waved rectangular yellow signs bearing drawings of syringes reading "Justice finally prevails" and "Kill him in vein." They waved Confederate flags and the signs into the view of television cameras.

One long-time Huntsville resident, George Russell, surveyed the crowd critically. "It's like high-tech Middle Ages," he said.

Russell, who was looking for a journalist friend he expected to be covering the execution, recalled previous executions at the Walls as being perhaps more humanely managed and less formal.

He said as a boy in Huntsville he remembered condemned inmates calling the local radio station and requesting their favorite songs played.

"It was a long-term tradition that a man about to die (at TDC) was granted a lot more freedom," Russell said of the condemned's traditional choices for his own comfort on his last day.

Brooks was not allowed some of the traditional and causal pleasures of the condemned of two decades before. He received a last meal he requested, but his request was limited to what TDC had on hand. He ate T-bone steak, but prison officials said he requested seafood.

In the past, some shared a cigar and last meal on Death Row, which used to be located at the Walls, with the late Don Reid, the publisher of The Huntsville ITEM. Reid witnessed 189 executions between 1937 and 1964. Joseph Johnson, convicted in 1959 for the death of a boy left to suffocate in an abandoned refrigerator, was executed in 1964 in the now no-longer used electric chair.

Russell said that if he were condemned to die he would prefer a firing squad to lethal injection, the new method which is intended to be more humane.

Death by firing squad "is more dying with dignity in the old tradition," he said.

Coahoma board sets tax rate, exemptions

COAHOMA—The Coahoma Independent School District Board of Trustees set homestead exemptions for school taxes at 40 percent last night, said Superintendent Richard Souter.

At the same time, the board voted to leave the tax rate at 72 cents per $100 valuation, he said, to avoid the need for another meeting to set a new tax rate.

"It'll get us by this year," said Souter.

Trustees voted not to allow tax discounts for early payment, Souter said, because "we usually do that for those who pay in November and December, but we can't this year because we won't get them (tax statements) mailed out until the end of December."

"I love you," he said. "Be strong."

Brooks closed his eyes and appeared still, then started gasping and wheezing.

Two prison doctors examined him with stethoscopes, and, after several minutes, Dr. Ralph Gray said, "I pronounce this man dead."

Brooks' former wife, Joyce, and his two sons, Adrian and Derek, were denied permission to witness the execution and waited angrily in the prison's foyer. Brooks was allowed to choose only three witnesses. He selected Miss Sapp and two Islamic chaplains.

size from 5½ point to 72 point," Rogers said. "The composing machine is capable of automatic ruling, which means we can set a complete ad on the machine instead of having to paste it together from separate parts."

"We can now set 150 lines of type per minute, three times faster as we could on our old equipment," he said.

"In addition to the larger, easier to read type," said Managing Editor Linda Adams, "the new equipment will eventually allow us to be more versatile in our layouts."

"This is just an indication that Harte-Hanks Communications believes in Big Spring, too," said Publisher Tom Watson. "The new typesetters along with a new computer system in the business office indicate that Harte-Hanks expects a lot of good things from Big Spring."

"All the improvements will help us meet the needs of readers and advertisers and the expected growth of the community," he said.

Watson estimated that total improvements at the Herald this year amount to a third of a million dollars. He said a satellite receiving dish would be installed in the next few weeks which will allow the Herald to receive Associated Press transmissions faster via satellite.

"In March we plan to expand coverage of our Window Shopper and direct mail program on advertising," he said. "We will be constantly looking for ways to update and meet the needs of the community for information and marketing services."

"1982 has been the best year in the history of the Herald," Watson said. "We certainly do believe in Big Spring."

Readers with comments on the new type style are invited to contact the editor. The Herald is located at 710 Scurry. The phone number is 263-7331.

Police Beat

Third man arrested in drug case

Police said they arrested a third suspect yesterday in connection with delivering 8 pounds of marijuana to an undercover officer last Thursday night.

Howard J. Smith, 27, of 509 Owens was arrested yesterday morning on suspicion of delivery of marijuana. Two other men were arrested Thursday night after one suspect offered to sell marijuana to a police officer on the Quality Transport parking lot on Snyder Highway, police said.

Police Lt. Alvis Jeffcoat said Smith was arrested three days later than the others because the arresting officer "had to build his case as to whether he was involved in the delivery."

Police reports also showed the following:

• Two male juveniles were arrested last night on suspicion of stealing several items from 7-Eleven at Birdwell and F.M. 700. The 14- and 15-year-old boys, accused of stealing BBs, batteries, hot sauce and chips, jumped into a car parked at 1618 E. 16th and sped away from police officers, police said.

A store clerk verified the two as the culprits after police officers apprehended them. The 15-year-old was released to his father and the 14-year-old referred to the Howard County probation officer.

• Joe Porras Jr. of 511 S. Johnson told police someone entered his house through an unlocked door yesterday and stole assorted Christmas presents worth $500, a $149 Atari video game set, 10 $35 Atari games, a $129 cassette player, three .22-caliber rifles, two Remington rifles and other items.

• Someone stole two $125 Christmas wreaths from the doors of St. Mary's Episcopal School at 118 Cedar Sunday night, police said.

• Someone broke into Western Auto at 504 Johnson Sunday night and stole about 20 Timex watches and a backpacker knife.

• Willie A. Burdette of 1407 Stadium told police someone forced entry into her kitchen Sunday night and stole jewelry, a shotgun and shoes worth a total of $2,589.

• Larry Redding of 407½ Bell told police someone broke through his bedroom window last night and stole $350 cash and a .22-caliber Ruger pistol.

• Mrs. Ann Cooper of 4007 Dixon told police someone stole two unmounted tires and wheels from her residence in the past three weeks.

• M.M. Williams of 1310 Donley said someone stole an outdoor motor from his boat parked at his residence last week.

• Alfred Ray Miears, 21, no address, was released yesterday morning having served his sentence for theft of service at Herman's Restaurant at 1601 Gregg on Dec. 2.

• Alice Vargas of 1405 State told police several black males stole a male basket hound from 311 N.E. Eighth.

• Billy Lawhon, 54, of Sweetwater was arrested last night on suspicion of driving while intoxicated after the Ford Ranger he was driving struck a light pole on the 600 block of F.M. 700. Police also cited Lawhon for failure to maintain financial responsibility.

• Vehicles driven by Dwight G. Isbell of 303 E. Fifth and Rosa L. Alvarez of 704 N. Goliad collided at North Benton and N.E. Sixth about 5 p.m. yesterday. Police cited Isbell for disregarding a stop sign.

• Vehicles driven by Lesia T. Sturm of 2703 E. 24th and Zeldia Bond of 2001 Alabama collided at South Birdwell and East Fifth about 4:45 p.m. yesterday. Sturm was cited for driving over a double yellow line and Bond for failure to yield right-of-way.

• Vehicles driven by Daniel C. Johnson of 2 Glenwick Cove and Jerry L. Campbell of Clearfield, Iowa, collided at South Gregg and West Second about 9:50 a.m. yesterday. Police cited Johnson for running a red light.

• Vehicles driven by James Brackett of 4119 Parkway and Barbara W. Walling of 2705 Central collided at Wasson and Parkway about 8:15 a.m. yesterday. Brackett was cited for failure to yield right-of-way.

Yule parade has floats, dignitaries

The Big Spring Area "We Believe" Christmas Parade Saturday may rival 1981's mammoth Centennial Parade, according to Bill Nehls, parade coordinator for the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce.

"We have more bands than any parade in the history of the city," Nehls said. "This parade will be comparable to the Centennial Parade."

The breakdown of the 86 parade entries includes 44 floats, five bands, 17 beauty queens, 15 dignitaries, the Civil Air Patrol, the Salvation Army and the Shriner motor patrol, Nehls said.

"We expect more entries," he said. "We're looking for 90 units."

Nehls said one highlight of the parade will be the appearance by Miss Texas USA 1983, Lisa Allred. The Fort Worth resident won the state title in August and will compete this spring in the nationally televised Miss U.S.A. Pageant.

An additional feature will be the Hardin-Simmons University Cowboy Band, Nehls said. Another band will be the 2nd Armored Division military band, he added.

International visitors include military attaches from the Philippines and Indonesia.

Nehls said preparations are under way to feed all of the members of the various bands which will be performing in the parade.

"Funds are still needed at the Chamber of Commerce office for the parade to cover the bands' meals

MISSOURI CITY, Texas (AP) — A television tower collapsed this morning, killing at least five people and injuring three others in this southwestern suburb of Houston, officials said.

"Five people have been confirmed dead," said Fort Bend County sheriff's Sgt. Joe Jeffrey. He said three others were injured.

Jeffrey said some workers were on the 2,000-foot-tall tower when it collapsed about 10:45 a.m. and crushed a transmitter building. Jeffrey said other people were hit when it fell. He was not sure how many workers were on the tower.

Jeffrey said ambulances rushed two of the injured to Southwest Memorial Hospital in Houston and one was taken by LifeFlight Helicopter to Hermann Hospital.

and prizes," Nehls said. The largest parade category — floats — will range from pickup trucks to semi-truck trailers, Nehls said.

"Some of these floats are knocking themselves out," he said.

Nehls said that float entries should report to the parade on Saturday at Main Street from 15th Street. There they will be placed into formation, he said.

The Saturday parade will begin at 10 a.m. at the intersection of 5th and Main and proceed to 3rd Street where it will turn west, Nehls said. After reaching Gregg Street, it will go south until reaching Highland Mall, he said.

Man arrested for theft held in jail

Larry Willis, 26, of 104 W. 8th remains in Howard County jail in lieu of $10,000 bond following his arrest by sheriff's deputies for suspicion of theft. Willis was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin who set bond.

• Felipe Martinez, 32, of Brownsville pleaded guilty in 118th District Court to possession of marijuana over four ounces. District Judge Jim Gregg sentenced Martinez to a seven-year probation term.

• Daniel Garcia, 39, of Abilene was released under $1,500 bond after his arrest by city police for driving with a suspended license. Bond was set by Municipal Judge Melvin Daratt.

• Billy James Lawhon, 54, of Sweetwater posted $1,000 bond after his arrest by city police for suspicion of driving while intoxicated. Bond was set by Daratt.

• Sheriff's deputies arrested Jose Gonzales Flores of 508 N.E. 8th in connection with public intoxication. Records show Flores was transferred to the Big Spring State Hospital today.

• Herman Lee Rickman, 34, of 409 Owens, was released under bonds totalling $1,050 after his arrest by Texas Department of Public Safety troopers in connection with DWI and a traffic warrant. Bond was set by Howard County Judge Bill Tune.

More cold weather in store

By The Associated Press
Clear skies and cool temperatures covered Texas early today, but forecasters promised another bout of cold winds and rain were in the making. Temperatures before dawn were mostly in the 30s and 40s statewide. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 27 at Marfa to 55 at Brownsville. Winds were variable at speeds ranging from 5 to 10 mph.

The forecast called for increasing cloudiness and colder temperatures in the Panhandle later today. Rain and freezing rain was possible in the Panhandle Wednesday and colder temperatures were expected to spread across North Texas.

Snow and cold Canadian air swept across the northern Plains early today, dropping temperatures into the 20s and single-digit range from the Continental Divide eastward through northern Wisconsin.

Further south, the watery residue of last week's storms continued to affect thousands of people in the Mississippi Valley and central Illinois, where volunteers topped dikes to battle the still-rising floodwaters.

More than 26,000 people in three states have been forced to flee their homes and damage estimates were approaching $250 million because of the unseasonal flooding, officials said.

Elsewhere today, snow flurries were scattered from northeast Nevada through the northern half of the Great Plains to Upper Michigan. Up to 2 inches of snow fell in Rapid City, S.D.

A cold front off the East Coast spread clouds over the Atlantic states and brought a few showers to northern Florida.

Skies were mostly clear through the southern Rockies and the lower Mississippi Valley to the Great Lakes.

Fog blanketed portions of the Southern California coast while skies were partly cloudy from the Pacific Northwest to the northern Rockies.

FORECAST
West Texas — Mostly fair with increasing cloudiness through tonight. Cooler north today and over entire region tonight. Cloudy all sections with a chance of rain and freezing rain north on Wednesday. Colder north and central tonight and much colder east of mountains Wednesday. High 48 Panhandle to 65 south and 75 Big Bend. Low 30s south rising to middle 20s south and near 40 Big Bend. High Wednesday 28 Panhandle to 38 southeast and 58 Big Bend.

EXTENDED FORECAST
West Texas — Thursday cloudy and very cold with occasional snow or rain and freezing rain mixed with snow. Partly cloudy with precipitation ending Friday, partly cloudy Saturday. Not so cold Friday and Saturday. Low Thursday 20s Panhandle to low 30s south rising to middle 20s Panhandle to low 30s south Saturday. High Thursday lower 20s Panhandle to near 50 north rising to near 50 north to middle 60s south Saturday.

Mississippi River rising

26,000 evacuated in three states; death toll at 18

By JUDY GIBBS
Associated Press Writer

Missouri National Guardsmen helped build levees today as the Mississippi River continued rising in floods that have forced more than 26,000 people in three states to flee their homes.

Storms in the Mississippi Valley since late last week have bloated rivers to record high levels, leaving at least $250 million in damage and 18 people dead.

Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson, saying "the worst is not over," announced today he would declare six counties in the northern part of the state as disaster areas, but he did not specify which counties.

Thompson, appearing on ABC's "Good Morning America" show, estimated that several thousands residents of Illinois were homeless and damage would run "into the millions."

Chuck Jones of the state Emergency and Disaster Agency in Illinois said Monday, "Even if there isn't more precipitation, the next few days will be crucial."

"In the next two days, the Grafton area will be hard hit as the Illinois mixes with the Mississippi," Jones said Monday, adding that the Illinois River was expected to go over retaining walls when it crests Wednesday at Peoria.

The homeless were being sheltered at Red Cross facilities or community shelters, Jones said.

At least 10 people in Illinois, three in Missouri and five in Arkansas have died because of storms and flooding that began late last week.

Residents of water-soaked areas stretching from north of St. Louis to near the Arkansas border in Missouri began to move back home today. But in Arnold, just south of St. Louis, residents were keeping a wary eye on the cresting Meramec River.

"We've done all we can," said Dee Dupree a spokesman for Arnold Mayor Alfred Ems. "If everything holds, we should have it under control."

The Meramec crested today at about 20 feet over flood stage after rising waters forced residents of about 200 homes and 100 mobile homes to evacuate.

The Missouri National Guard said troops and equipment had been dispatched to Herculaneum and Ste. Genevieve to beef up levees against the rising Mississippi.

A spokesman said 140 guardsmen were on duty early today with others held in reserve and still others on alert for possible duty in southern Missouri.

Rising waters Monday surprised some residents southeast of St. Louis, where an estimated 18,000 people were plucked from rooftops by helicopter or evacuated by boat.

"They all thought nothing was going to happen," said Patrolman Mark Walker of Pacific, Mo. "One guy told me he'd worked on the river for 40 years and that he didn't believe us. There's water above his window sills right now."

The Missouri Emergency Management Agency estimated the floods have driven 24,000 people from their homes since Friday.

"There's no telling at this point how many were out at any given time."

Sixteen killed, 66 hurt in Irish bomb blast

BALLYKELLY, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish National Liberation Army claimed responsibility today for the bomb blast that sent a concrete roof crashing onto the dance floor of a disco packed with British soldiers, killing 16 people and wounding 66 others.

The claim was made in a call to a Belfast TV station.

Belfast Police Chief Inspector Herbert Norris listed the dead as 12 men and four women and said 10 of the fatalities were soldiers.

"It's a horrific scene," Police Superintendent Bill Wilson said, as rescuers used cranes and pneumatic drills to probe tons of rubble which nurtured onto the crowded dance floor Monday night. Police said a gelignite bomb was planted by the side of a main pillar supporting the ballroom.

Police and witnesses said the roof collapsed "like a deck of cards," creating pandemonium among the estimated 150 people at the disco-dance frequented by soldiers from a nearby British army base.

"The roof just caved in — just chopping up everybody," said Peter Cook, 29, who was serving drinks when the bomb went off. "I tried pulling bodies out but it was hopeless. Girls were running around screaming their heads off."

"I saw people being carried out but they were so badly mutilated I couldn't look," said Mirad Peoples, owner of a nearby hotel. Jackie McMichael, a customer in the bar at the time of the blast, described the scene as "absolute carnage."

Surgeons arriving from nearby Londonderry worked frantically to save the most mutilated victims, in some cases performing amputations on the roadside, police and witnesses said. "It was a massacre without mercy," said Britain's Northern Ireland secretary, James Prior, who went to Ballykelly to see the devastation.

"It must rank among the most cold-blooded acts of savagery carried out in Northern Ireland throughout all the years of violence here," he said.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was "appalled" by the bombing, aides said.

It was the worst disaster in Northern Ireland since August 1979, when 18 British soldiers were killed in a terrorist bombing at Warrenpoint on the border with the Irish Republic.

Gasoline tax proposal clears House

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Nursed along by administration concessions, President Reagan's call for a nickel hike in the federal gasoline tax cleared the House early today and is moving toward expected approval by the full Senate.

In addition to raising the gasoline tax to 9 cents a gallon to finance $5.5 billion worth of highway, bridge and mass transit repairs, the measure would force the owners of bigger trucks to pay more highway user taxes in exchange for liberalized rules on truck sizes and weights.

The measure, which has become one of the primary items in this lame duck session of Congress, passed the House on a 262-143 vote after more than 10 hours of debate that stretched past midnight.

However, the critical vote was a 236-169 tally on which 140 Democrats joined with 96 Republicans in agreeing to the tax provisions of the measure and indicated that final passage was assured. Eighty-two Democrats and 87 Republicans voted against the tax provisions.

Supporters of the gas tax increase said it was needed to repair the nation's roads and provide jobs at the same time.

But Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., said the measure "takes jobs away, no doubt about it. It drains $5.5 billion from the economy, which will not be spent on food, clothing or shelter."

On the controversial increased heavy use tax for trucks, Rep. William Frenzel, R-Minn., said he was "positively aghast" at an increase of over 800 percent for the largest trucks. A rig of 80,000 pounds would pay an annual heavy use tax of $2,000 under the proposal, compared with $240 currently, he said.

But Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., said the package was balanced by benefits the truckers would receive. "In addition to the tax, they get wider trucks and bigger trucks," he said.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said the full Senate likely will consider the legislation Thursday. Passage also is expected in the Senate.

Bipartisan support from leaders in both houses of Congress along with administration agreement on adjustments in the original proposal have apparently overcome opposition to the legislation. Those complaints came from the trucking industry and the Teamsters union — both upset over higher excise taxes on large rigs — combined with concern from legislators unhappy with raising taxes.

Administration officials began working last week to make changes in their original proposals in order to ensure victory.

"Although differences remain over certain provisions, we are pleased that the bill has successfully moved through the House," Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said after the bill passed.

Just hours before the House began its consideration of the bill Monday, Lewis told legislators he would support a provision guaranteeing that every state gets back in federal highway money at least 85 percent of the amount its motorists pay in federal gasoline taxes.

Such an amendment was included in the legislation passed by the the House.

Tonight's drug show a 'must-see'

We encourage you to watch a special program about teenagers and drugs tonight at 8 on KTPX, Cable Channel 13.

"Epidemic! Why Your Kid is on Drugs" is a shocking report about how horrifying numbers of today's teen-agers are ruining their lives through drugs and alcohol.

The show is a grabber, right from the opening: "More kids are dying today than ever before... a whole generation with potential is in peril." Some of the statistics: Three million American teen-agers are confirmed alcoholics. One third of all grader schoolers have tried marijuana, and one in 10 high school seniors smoke it every day. The impact is serious. It is a multi-billion dollar illegal business with millions of victims.

The show has hit a nerve with local educators, who are offering bonus points to students for watching the show.

Percentage-wise, there may not be many Big Spring youths on drugs, said Lynn Hise, superintendent of schools. "But if it helps just a few kids, it's worth it," he said.

The one-hour documentary will be followed by a one-hour "hotline," hosted live at KTPX and featuring a panel of local experts.

Channel 13 is to be commended for presenting the program. Don't miss it.

Around the Rim

By RICHARD HORN

The last tour

"I only smash a guitar when it's at its peak."

— Peter Townshend, 1966

A guitar reached its peak Saturday at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas. The Who played there in front of about 57,000 shivering people on a cloudy, windy, 40-degree night.

I was there, along with Herald sports man Greg Jakiewicz and two innocents from Fort Worth. This was a new experience for me. I had been to concerts before, but never one of these big outdoor festival-type productions.

I probably didn't fit in too well. I felt this right away when we arrived at noon and got in the huge line that slithered all around the stadium. The first person I noticed was one of those green army jackets, torn blue jeans, a headband and walked along the line with his open palm outstretched. He solicited: "Acid? Quaaludes? Acid? Quaaludes?"

Yes, this was the kind of thing my parents always warned me not to attend. But I didn't care. The crowd was quite mild and friendly and helpful. There were no Molotov cocktails thrown, no hangings, no human sacrifices — at least in our part of the stands.

"We don't have much in common with you lot."

— Peter Townshend, 1979

The Who's highly quotable guitarist reportedly said that to a concert audience of screaming fans, most of whom were not even born when the Who started playing "My Generation" in the early '60s.

There's no telling how much they had in common with the audience Saturday night. Townsend and Roger Daltrey are both 37. The crowd seemed to all be in their late teens and early 20s, which means the band wasn't really playing to its generation.

But you couldn't tell by looking. That song was the opening number when the band finally came out onto the stage. (The stage by the way, was located under the crossbar of a huge H, the middle letter of the WHO stretched across the endzone. Above the crossbar was a giant screen which flashed closed-circuit television of the band playing; this helped you feel less like you were stuck far from the action.)

The Who are justly famous for their concerts. They played all their famous songs, including tunes from their new album. I think the band enjoyed playing these the best, but it was the old hits that we went wild over: "I Can See For Miles," "Pinball Wizard," "See Me, Feel Me" and "Magic Bus."

The band ended with "Won't Get Fooled Again." During a haunting synthesizer solo, pictures of the band in action over the years were flashed on the screen. It sounds pretty hokey, but it was effective. When Keith Moon's likeness appeared on the screen, the crowd gave a loud ovation.

"We've been parodying ourselves for a long, long time."

— Townshend, again, 1982

I love the Who's music, but it's watching them on stage that is the most fun. They have to be seen to be believed. Roger Daltrey runs and marches in place and twirls his microphone like a lariat. Peter Townshend leaps and jumps and strikes furious chords with a windmill-like motion.

John Entwistle and Kenny Jones are sedate by comparison, but they anchor the band; you get the feeling Townshend and Daltrey would jump off the stage and start breaking things except they knew the rest of the band wouldn't come along.

Finally after "Twist and Shout," the last encore, Townshend, invigorated by the cold night air and the thought of all the big bucks they're making on this tour, took his guitar off and with a big ax swing smashed onto the stage floor. Then, as if disgusted by the guitar's inability to withstand that move, he picked up what was left and hurled it at the microphone stand.

Of course all of this is nostalgia. When the Who did all their destruction in the 1960s, it was all part of the show of youthful frustration. There's little reason to do all that now, just as it's a little flakey for 37-year-olds to sing "Hope I die before I get old."

For which reasons the Who say they are calling it quits after this tour. Almost 20 years of disgusting acts, loud, loud music and tragic events comes to an end. The Who may have little impact on history, but I feel very satisfied for having seen them.

Far from being "silly," the goose is said to be one of the most intelligent of all birds.

Naming weapons

You may have noted that the new name for the MX missile is "The Peacekeeper." As much thought went into what to call the missile as to where to put it. You can say what you want about our military planners, but when it comes to naming mega-death weapons they know their business.

An entire military establishment is involved in thinking up new names for weapons. It is one of the most important divisions in the Pentagon, because when Defense is acquiring new hardware it doesn't want to tip off the taxpayer that it is buying a weapon that can obliterate millions of people.

Digby Trident, who is in charge of market research at Defense, told me: "We spend a lot of time and money thinking up names for our new weapons. The more innocent the name, the better chance we have of the public accepting it."

"How do you work?"

"Let's take the 'Cruise Missile.' The name was selected over others after a great deal of market research in on-the-street interviews. The pollsters asked people first how they felt about a new, improved 'Hiroshima Plus Missile' and received an overwhelmingly negative reaction. Then they were questioned how they'd like one called 'Sudden Death.' The male respondents said the name appealed to them because it reminded them of professional football. But most females said the first thing that came to their minds was a lot of families being wasted."

"Women always tend to be more squeamish when it comes to war," I agreed.

"Finally we asked what came to mind when they saw the words 'Cruise Missile.' The majority of those questioned said it made them think of a nice boat on a smooth sea. Eighty percent said they would buy a ticket on a cruise missile, even if they didn't know where it was going."

"How did you come up with the name 'Trident' for the new nuclear submarine?"

"We had originally named it 'Killer Shark.' But it turned out that several dovish senators on the Armed Services Committee had seen the film 'Jaws' and decided to withhold appropriations for it. Since we didn't have another name ready for it and were fighting a deadline, the Admirals said, 'We don't care what you call it, Trident. We've got to have it.'"

"The Admiral who was scheduled to testify on the submarine in front of the committee is hard of hearing, and thought we had named it 'Trident.' So that's what he called it when he made his case before the senators, and they loved it. There are a lot of people around here who thought I fixed it so I could have a class of submarines named after me, but I'm completely innocent."

"Where did you find the name 'Peacekeeper' for an MX missile?"

"A couple of months ago we got a call from the White House saying the President planned to make a decision on the MX basing system, and go public with it on television. He was leaning toward the Air Force theory that if you packed 100 missiles in a 20-mile strip, and the Soviets attacked them, the explosion of the first Soviet missile would destroy the other incoming Russian missiles. Then we could fire our MX missiles at the U.S.S.R. with impunity."

"We first thought of calling the MX the 'Fratricide' missile, but when we test marketed that name we found people thought it meant killing your brother. Then the White House called back and said the President wanted to use the MX missiles as a chip in disarmament talks in Geneva, and he would like a name that would not only alleviate the fears of American Catholic Bishops, but also give a message to the Soviets that we were serious about wanting to cut down on the arms race. So we came up with 'Peacekeeper' which is probably the greatest brand name for a nuclear weapon that we ever thought of."

"It makes you want to buy one for a baby," I said.

"It tells the whole story, as far as we're concerned. It's got the carrot AND the stick."

"What's the carrot?"

"The name 'Peacekeeper.'"

"And what's the stick?"

"The missile itself. With 10 nuclear warheads on each, we've got the greatest sabre-rattler in the business."

Billy Graham

My husband is alcoholic

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am convinced my husband is an alcoholic although he will not admit it. We had an argument about it last night and he left home. He'll probably be back, but I'm reaching the end of my rope. Please help me somehow. — Mrs. S.B.O.

DEAR S.B.O.: This is such a widespread problem today, and one that takes so many different forms, that I frankly sometimes hesitate to deal with it in the scope of a few paragraphs. Nevertheless, something needs to be done before your husband destroys himself (and hurts many other lives as well). I pray that God will give you wisdom to know exactly what to do in your situation, for every situation is different.

I know this is a very difficult situation for you and your family, but your husband needs your love perhaps more than at any time in his life. Arguing will not help in all likelihood. Those I have talked to who deal with this problem frequently tell me that an alcoholic needs to face the fact that he cannot control his problem and he needs help. Let your husband know of your love and concern, and that you want what is best for him and are willing to help him. At the same time I know that sometimes a person will not face his need unless those who love him can shock him into realizing how serious his problem is. "Do not let any unwholesome talk come out of your mouths, but only what is helpful for building others up according to their needs... Get rid of all bitterness, rage and anger, brawling and slander" (Ephesians 4:29,31).

Then talk with someone who has had experience dealing with people who are alcoholics, such as your pastor. Don't be ashamed to share your problem with them and seek their advice on what may be available in your community. Ultimately I believe the answer to your husband's problem is spiritual. There are many reasons why people drink — to escape from their responsibilities, to take away their feelings of inadequacy, and so forth. But Christ can help us deal with these as we begin to see ourselves as he sees us. And if you have never given your own life to Christ, turn to him right now and ask him to help you be the loving and wise wife that your husband needs.

Jack Anderson

Ending a war before it starts

WASHINGTON — A forbidding new destructive force, known in the backrooms of the Pentagon by the stark letters EMP, could end World War III before it started. EMP stands for "electromagnetic pulse," an awesome force that has precipitated some hushed and worried discussion behind closed doors. It's still no more than a scientific theory mercifully untested.

In language only a scientist would understand, a high-altitude nuclear explosion causes gamma rays to collide with electrons in the air molecules. This sets up a transverse electric current that creates electromagnetic pulses radiating down toward the earth.

But what EMP means to the rest of us is simply this: If nuclear weapons were to be detonated 200 miles above the United States, the electromagnetic pulses from the explosion would almost instantaneously knock out all electrical power in North America. No television, radio, lighting, hospital equipment, computers, telephones. Total blackout of the entire continent.

All this might be passed off as survivable discomfort. Back to the pioneer days; we'd muddle through.

What worries our strategic thinkers, though, is that EMP might be used to knock out America's top-level "C-cubed" system — command, control and communications — which is supposed to respond to a nuclear strike with a retaliatory attack.

Some Pentagon analysts have speculated that the Soviet Union might force the United States to surrender simply by exploding nuclear bombs in space and robbing us of our strategic retaliation. Our missiles, after all, depend on electricity to put them in motion.

Before we run up the white flag, however, I should point out that other experts consider a Russian EMP threat to be a little less awesome than the Henny Penny-types suggest. They point out, correctly, that the Kremlin would still have to worry about U.S. nuclear-armed submarines, which would be unaffected by any electrical power failure in the continental United States.

Meanwhile, top-secret CIA reports make it clear that the Soviets have been performing EMP tests since at least 1974. So, of course, have our scientists. NO one has the slightest idea who is ahead in the EMP race, but it's obvious that no one wants to take the chance that the other side has gained a commanding lead.

The obvious answer to an EMP attack by the Russians would be to "harden" the C-cubed facilities so that they could withstand the threat. But a top-secret Joint Chiefs of Staff report, obtained by my associate Dale Van Atta, shows that this hasn't been done.

"The ground-based facilities and attendant communications of the National Military Command System probably would be destroyed in the early stages of a nuclear attack, or degraded by EMPs and jamming attacks," the report warns. In other words, the control center at which a president would push the button to retaliate against an enemy attack might not work.

In fact, the report notes, the president's control center could be so badly disrupted by an EMP attack that its "ability to execute a coordinated strategic nuclear response to attack could become questionable."

The Joint Chiefs are also worried that, without equipment hardened against EMP effects, the ability to inform headquarters of a nuclear attack by Russian submarine missiles might not come "in sufficient time to respond before missile impact on Washington, D.C."

Defense contractors are now working on electrical systems that will be immune to electromagnetic pulse effects. The Pentagon just hopes they'll find a solution in time.

HEALTH HYPE: Perhaps hoping to distract public attention from its cuts in social programs, the Health and Human Services Department is planning an extravaganza for "Health Promotion Day" some time next year.

The great event will provide no medicine, hospital rooms or medical care for the needy. It will merely provide health tips. In the words of a department flack, the promotion "will tell people to eat their vegetables in a new way." HHS, of course, has already spent millions telling the public how and why to eat vegetables.

The draft memorandum on "Health Promotion Day" suggests hooking up regional offices to HHS Secretary Richard Schweiker's televised press conference in New York City — possibly by means of closed-circuit televisions. But this would cost an estimated $25,000, and the memo points out that "the Department could be in for severe criticism of an extravagant, 'show biz' staging about the same time the HHS FY 1984 budget is being presented with more budget limitations."

The HHS press person described the internal memo as "a very low level staff paper" with some "wild-eyed ideas (and) an inappropriate use of judgment." She added: "Nothing like that is going to happen" on Health Promotion Day.

SMALL IS CAREFUL: Small businesses have been hit hard by the recession. They've been hurt by price-cutting among the big boys, who can afford it better, and by high interest rates that can drive a small businessman to the wall. Now interest rates have been falling, but small businesses are proving reluctant to use the cheaper cost of credit to accumulate inventory. An industry survey says this is because small businessmen are still doubtful about the economy's recovery. They don't want to get stuck with packed warehouses, no customers and loans coming due — at whatever interest rate.

Family survives

25 days at sea

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — An American family weathered 25 days at sea in a life boat frequently capsized by waves as high as 50 feet and survived by eating flying fish and killing a large sea bird and sucking its insides for moisture, the son said today.

He also said at times they wished for death, and that they lived on birds' eggs after being washed up on a deserted sandbank near a remote Fiji island.

The son, 17-year-old Christian Aros of Long Beach, Calif., said by telephone from his hospital bed in Suva he believed his 53-year-old father, Robert, reported in serious condition, could have survived only another two days.

He said he and his mother, Margaret, could have survived five days more when they were rescued by villagers from a sandbank near the island of Cikobia-Lau nearly a month after their 29-foot ketch Vamanos hit a reef and sank Nov. 6 en route from Raritonga to New Zealand.

A local doctor who treated them on the island said they were in a "generally OK condition, although very exhausted and suffering dehydration and skin sores caused by sunburn." The Fiji government brought them to Suva by helicopter.

The U.S. Embassy spelled the family's last name Arrows, but relatives quoted by The Register newspaper in California said the name was spelled Aros.

Shultz says Soviets willing to negotiate

By R. GREGORY NOKES

Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says the new Soviet leadership has expressed a willingness to negotiate its differences with the West, but hasn't yet signaled a change in policy that could lead to improved U.S. relations with Moscow.

"Nobody's substantive positions have shifted," Shultz told reporters during a flight here today.

But he said he was encouraged there has been "a little more emphasis" in Soviet expressions that negotiations with the United States on arms control and other issues will succeed.

Shultz said that in Moscow's communications to Washington since Yuri Andropov took over the reins of the Soviet government, "there has been a tendency to underline" Soviet hopes that differences with Washington can be resolved.

Shultz arrived here early today following a 7-hour flight from Washington to begin a two-week trip to Europe. He will attend a meeting of NATO foreign ministers in Brussels on Thursday and Friday and later will travel to The Hague, Rome, Paris, Madrid and London.

He planned to meet later today with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher.

In a departure from airplane news conferences given by recent secretaries of state, Shultz allowed himself to be quoted by name instead of insisting on attribution to a senior official. He seemed to think the U.S. attitude toward the possibility of improved relations with a new Soviet government had been misconstrued.

He said Washington was not waiting for Moscow to take a dramatic first step before relations could be improved.

"I don't think that's the way things happen," he said. "They happen as the result of a process and you get a gradual shift."

Union hails success of Argentine strike

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentine union leaders hailed their successful 24-hour general strike — the first since the military took power six years ago — as a clear message from the people that the ruling generals must alter their economic policy and get out of government as soon as possible.

This nation of 28 million people was virtually paralyzed Monday as workers stayed home to demand higher wages, assistance for the unemployed and free union activity. One union group that called for the strike also demanded the freedom of political prisoners and information on Argentina's "disappeared" people.

Labor organizations said more than 95 percent of the nation's estimated 10 million workers heeded the strike call. Undersecretary of Labor Humberto Capelli said the strike was 80 to 85 percent effective.

The walkout was called by the two branches of the Peronist-dominated General Confederation of Labor and independent unions. The Brasil Street branch of the labor federation, the most militant of the organization's two groups, said in a communique: "The Argentine community has expressed itself. The government has one option: to get out."

Ricardo Perez, the press secretary of the organization, said the current military authorities should be replaced "immediately, by a pluralist, multi-sectorial government of transition."

The regime of President Gen. Reynaldo Bignone has promised to hold elections during the last three months of 1983 and return power to civilians before March of 1984.

The more moderate branch of the labor organization at Azopardo Street said in a communique the strike showed "the Argentine people in its totality does not support systems of government that infringe on its rights and subjugate the vital energies of the nation."

The union members were protesting constantly declining real wages and an unemployment rate of 12-15 percent, the highest in 50 years. Argentina's inflation, the world's highest, is 193 percent over the past 12 months.

The government has decreed wage increases in each of the past three months, but the last two applied to minimum wages and organized labor demands that they be extended across the board.

Dear Abby

Wife enjoyed football strike

DEAR ABBY: I would like to express a big "thank you" for the football strike!

Wasn't it wonderful to have our men free to be with us this fall? Not to mention the money saved from the bets at the office?

I certainly enjoyed it while it lasted.

MINNESOTA WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Welcome to a very large club of women whose men returned to them during the football strike. It's been said, "We never appreciate what we've lost until after it's gone." To which can be added, "Nor realize how little we needed it in the first place."

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, John (fake name), rents a house from his parents. They own several, and John pays rent like everyone else.

Last Sunday while I was there, John's mother dropped in. The instant John stepped outside to look at something, she started opening his closets and drawers. I couldn't believe my eyes! John is 25, independent and honest.

After she left, I told John about it and he said, "She probably thinks we're living together." (We aren't.)

Then I told John that since other tenants get a 24-hour notice of inspection, he should demand it, too. He disagreed.

Please give John some advice on how to nip this in the bud before it gets worse.

JOHN'S GIRL

DEAR GIRL: John didn't ask for any advice, but since you wrote, I assume you need some. John's mother was not making an "inspection tour" as a homeowner, so the 24-hour notice rule doesn't apply here.

I agree that John's mother was out of line to snoop in John's closets and drawers, but now that he's aware of it, if he doesn't call her on it, let it go.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a partner in a very successful company. He runs the field work, and the other three run the office. They have a well-paid secretary-receptionist.

The problem: If someone tries to contact the office between 12 and 1 p.m., there is no one there — everyone is out to lunch! I get a lot of phone calls (we are the only ones with a listed phone) when customers can't reach the office.

I contend that a business should have someone there to answer the phone at all times during the business day. It would be different if this were an occasional occurrence, but it happens almost every day. I think that with four people in the office, lunchtime should be staggered so that someone is always there. Your comments, please.

ANNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: I agree, lunchtime should be staggered so you wouldn't be bothered at home. However, a "very successful business" should be able to afford an answering machine to take calls 24 hours a day. You don't mention the name (or size) of the town, but it must be a very small town with no competition.

Lisa Riley honored at shower

Lisa Riley, bride-elect of Jim Muncy of Oklahoma, was honored with a miscellaneous bridal shower Thursday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Texas Electric Reddy Room.

Miss Riley and her mother, Mrs. W.A. Riley, were presented carnation corsages in royal blue and white accent colors.

Guests were served hot spiced punch and coffee from a table covered in shades of blue. A silver candleabra and silver coffee service accented the table.

Hostesses were Mrs. Moden Wyatt, Mrs. Peggy McWhirter, Mrs. Benny Porter, Mrs. Lester Arnold, Mrs. Alan Bailey and Mrs. Dalton Johnston.

Others were Mrs. Ross Callihan, Mrs. J.W. Tipton, Mrs. J.W. Cowan, Mrs. J.E. Parker, Mrs. Doyal

Grice, Mrs. George Walker, Mrs. Kenneth Orr, and Mrs. Gene Gresham.

The hostesses presented the honoree with a sunbeam mixer and a set of royal blue towels.

Jim Muncy and Dr. W.A. Riley joined the group later in the evening.

The wedding will be in the First Baptist Church chapel Dec. 30, at 7 p.m., with Dr. James Puckett performing the ceremony.

Child born to couple

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gary Jr., St. Louis, Mo., and formerly of Big Spring, announce the birth of their second child, a daughter, Hillery Hope, on Nov. 24.

The baby was born in St. Luke's Medical Center and weighed 7 pounds, 14 ounces at birth. She was 21 inches long.

Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Don Womack, Virginia, formerly of Big Spring. Mr. Womack was at one time the president of Texas Electric Service Company.

Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gary Sr., Big Spring.

Hillery Hope was welcomed home by her brother, Grayson, who will be two-years-old Feb. 20, 1983.

Typewriter, needle compared

NEW YORK (AP) — To promote the first typewriters in the 1870s, a manufacturer claimed in its advertising, "The writing machine is to the pen what the sewing machine is to the needle."

A typewriter was mounted and decorated like a contemporary sewing machine, with a foot treadle for the carriage return.

Checklist may aid in purchase

If a home computer is on your holiday shopping list, it's extremely important to know what you want the computer to do before you invest your money.

It's not unheard of for a person to spend thousands of dollars on a computer only to find the software they need is not available.

"They all have different features, and most people don't know that the computer is not very useful unless you have a specific purpose for it. So I would not buy a computer unless I knew why I was buying it — whether it was for entertainment or for education or both," says a computer applications professor from Texas Christian University.

"Since it is a first-time purchase for most people, you are going to have to be educated as to what kind of questions to ask. Basically most consumers are going to have to do a little bit of reading. In most libraries you can read something like the 'Computer Texas,' 'Educational Computing,' or 'Creative Computing.'

"You have to start asking basic questions of the salesman, remembering that sometimes they don't know a whole lot more than you do. One of your best bets is not to go to a dealer who only handles a particular machine," the professor added.

When purchasing a computer to be used by children, it is often advisable to make sure it uses the language LOGO, which is designed for children.

The basic central processing unit, the machine, the keyboard and the memory will run from a few hundred dollars to $1,500 depending on the machine and how much memory it has. The professor said he believes a disc drive is mandatory for most people, even though it is and extra $500 to $600.

Dr. Donohue

Breast bruise not cancer cause

Dear Dr. Donohue: I'd like to ask a question concerning bruising and cancer. I've heard that if someone is hit or injured hard enough, in the breast area, especially, that cancer could develop later on. Is there any truth to this? I recently fell and bruised the area between the armpit and breast. I would greatly appreciate an answer. I have been a nervous wreck about it! Thanks. I'm 31 and relatively healthy, a female. — W.C.

There's no truth to this. There has never been proof of any link between a bruise and cancer. But the idea is a persistent one.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is hydrochloric acid constantly in the stomach, or does it only appear when we are digesting proteins and fats? Is there a normal amount? How much hydrochloric acid should a stomach produce? — R.V.

Hydrochloric acid is in the stomach all the time, not just when food is present. Frankly, it's amazing how such a strong chemical doesn't burn a hole in the lining. Only the wonders of biological chemistry prevent it.

It's difficult to answer your question. The amount of the acid varies. It does increase with eating, and protein does increase the amount made. So does coffee. Fats, on the other hand, decrease the quantity produced.

I can tell you how much acid is made every hour when the stomach isn't being stimulated by food to make more, although the numbers will probably not be terribly helpful. That figure is 2.3 millequivalents. If you want to know how much stomach juice is made every hour, I can give you that in ounces — between one and two ounces.

That's total juices, including the acid. That juice contains a lot of other substances in addition to hydrochloric acid. The subject is discussed in greater detail in the booklet "Stomach and Other Abdominal Pains: A Checklist," which other readers may order by writing me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What is orchitis? What causes it, and is it serious? My prescribed medicine being taken for this is Vibramycin. Will this clear it up for good? — F.B.

Orchitis is the Greek word meaning testes. Orchitis is inflammation of the testes. Often, orchitis is caused by the mumps virus, occurring in some (not all, by any means) who have mumps after puberty.

Orchitis is serious because it can cause some shrinkage of the glands. But fortunately, it rarely leads to sterility, which is the common fear expressed by law people. Other germs may cause orchitis, too. One is called Chlamydia, and that kind of orchitis is treated with medicine like your Vibramycin, a broad-spectrum antibiotic. It's also known as doxycycline, and it usually cures the orchitis permanently.

Home furnishings change with times

Rooms, like furniture styles, have a way of going in and out of fashion.

Years ago, breakfast nooks and guest rooms were common in the better middle-class homes. Nowadays, these rooms are not in as much demand. But the family room with its convertible sofa and extension game table may fulfill the same functions.

Yet another room we are beginning to hear more about is the home office. Statistics indicate that desks for use in the home represent one of the fastest growing segments of furniture demand.

Add to this the explosive growth in home computers, whose sales are increasing at a rate of about 40 percent each year, and it is clear many Americans are going to need a room in which to put all these things. Furthermore, studies show Americans are doing an increasing amount of paperwork at home and this trend is expected to continue and even accelerate in coming years.

According to a recent survey commissioned by a desk manufacturer, there are 70 million home desks in use today. About two-thirds of American households own at least one desk and three out of 10 families own more than one desk. Most of these are working desks — not merely there for decorative purposes. In fact, the use of a desk as mainly a decorative object is limited to one in about 17 households.

With these facts all pointing to an increase in demand for home office furniture, it's not surprising that at the recent national furniture market in North Carolina a number of manufacturers initiated or added substantially to the desks, file cabinets, office chairs and related products they offer.

Some retailers at the market said desk sales were one bright spot in a generally lackluster year for furniture sales. As a result, many were shopping for more desks to sell.

A national trend appears to be the addition of desk galleries and even entire home office departments in furniture stores. Although desks selling for $400 or less are most popular with consumers, retailers said higher priced desks — up to $1,000 or more — also were enjoying increased sales.

One company that has phased out its dining room and upholstered furniture production in order to concentrate on making desks is now offering more than 50 different desks for the home. The company commissioned a study of the home desk market recently. Based on interviews with about 7,700 households, the company has concluded that about 1.8 million new desks will be purchased for home use over the next year, mainly by middle-income families of four or more. The company learned that white-collar, college-educated families are the most likely owners and buyers of new desks.

Among the most popular features in a home desk are locking drawers, pencil trays, electric outlets so that typewriters, calculators and computers can be plugged in, and heavy-duty file drawers.

Detect school problems early

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The best way to deal with school adjustment problems is to detect and prevent them early in the school years.

That's the philosophy behind the Primary Mental Health Project based at the University of Rochester.

The project, which now serves as the basis for similar programs in more than 100 school districts across the United States, identifies young children with a high risk of failure early in their school careers.

A significant feature is the one-to-one attention paid to these children by trained, nonprofessional child aides — mostly housewives — who work under professional supervision.

What the economy needs is reconstruction

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Maybe the old economy just can't get around any more.

Slowly, the message from aching bones is sinking in to consciousness. This, it says, isn't just one of those complaints that money cures. No, the old zip is gone. Be happy now for small things, like being able to get around at all.

Recovery? There's a lot of talk about it. But when you sit down and read between the lines you begin to recognize that the word is being used a bit loosely. Maybe "improvement" better describes what the future holds.

But improvement, even a little, is slow to develop. In spite of year-long forecasts that the economy has turned the corner the latest reports on retail sales, the job markets, factory orders and more fail to provide confirmation.

Without confirmation it's hard to remain a believer. The president's political opponents can be expected, therefore, to stress the point harder. Promises don't buy groceries, jobs do. And there are now more people without jobs or working shortened hours than there are AFL-CIO members.

UAW balks at contract

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s latest contract proposal doesn't give the United Auto Workers enough money, but provides "a base on which to work," the union's leader says.

And although the UAW rejected Monday the No. 3 automaker's latest offer to settle a 10-week strike in Canada and give U.S. autoworkers a new contract, talks were to continue today in hopes of reaching Chrysler's mid-week deadline for a settlement.

Talks are being held simultaneously in both countries. UAW President Douglas A. Fraser said Monday's offer "doesn't meet our objectives, otherwise we'd have an agreement." But, he said, "it gives us a base on which to work."

The offer included a "substantial," immediate pay raise, according to William Fisher, Chrysler's chief negotiator in Canada. It also had a cost-of-living provision, Fraser said. He would not elaborate.

But the leader of the autoworkers in Canada said the negotiators are "literally miles apart" after Chrysler's offer, which he called "insignificant."

"It is no way comes close at all to what it will take to get a settlement here," said Robert White, UAW director in Canada.

White said he had "no idea" how Fisher "would interpret that proposal as 'substantial.'"

Monday's deadline for workers to be back at work "is beginning to look like a fading date," he said.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca on Friday told the union it must settle by midweek in order to get about 10,000 striking Canadians back on the job by Monday or the company will recess bargaining until January.

"We're going to drive for a settlement by midnight (today) or a few hours after that," Fraser said.

The Canadians walked out Nov. 5 when talks broke off after Chrysler said it could not afford an immediate pay raise. Some 43,200 U.S. workers rejected Chrysler's last proposal in September but voted against striking.

The talks resumed Nov. 22.

Chrysler's offer included an immediate pay raise that was identical for workers in the two nations, although Chrysler has admitted that Canadian workers have been hard hit by high inflation and currency fluctuations, Fraser said.

Chrysler workers in both countries are paid an average $9.07 an hour, but the equivalent for the Canadians is about $7.35 U.S.

Chrysler workers in the United States and Canada made concessions in 1981 to keep the automaker afloat after the company lost $3.27 billion in the previous three years.

In the first nine months of 1982, Chrysler earned $266.6 million.

Though pervasive, the unemployment is also concentrated. Michigan's latest rate is 17.2 percent, Ohio's 14.2. Recalling the dust bowls of the farm belt in the depression of the 1930s, much of the Midwest is now called the rust bowl.

The description is apt. Foundries, forges and plants that produced the metal might of America in the post-World War II boom might not reopen. Steel furnaces have been toppled, and automotive plants worn beyond rehabilitation.

Blue collar jobs are now in the minority. White collar workers, according to the American Productivity Center in Houston account for 53 percent of the adult workforce and are paid 70 percent of industry's annual payroll.

The trend is only beginning. The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates that the white-collar workforce will grow to 65 percent by 1985, and climb to 90 percent of the total wage-earner group by the turn of the century.

The newer jobs are in information, communications, services.

Of the 10 largest industrial states, only Massachusetts and Texas had lower jobless rates in November, with figures of 7.2 percent and 7.7 percent, respectively. Both have concentrations of the newer jobs, mainly in electronic computing.

The switch to these newer industries is not accomplished in a year or two, which is about as long as it takes an ordinary recession to become a recovery. It can take decades, as New England learned when the textile mills moved south.

Workers need to be retrained, bankruptcies must be cleared away, public programs must be organized to encourage entrepreneurs, capital has to be found, real estate must be converted, markets must be found. It could take a decade.

Walter D. Fackler, a University of Chicago economist, began his forecast for 1983 with the words "The United States economy is probably in a recovery of sorts."

Calling his outlook a "bit more optimistic than the standard forecast," with the economy improving at a 3.8 percent rate in the first quarter and 6 percent by the fourth, Fackler nevertheless added this reminder:

"Because the second half of this year has been so depressed, even a recovery of this magnitude will produce an annual real GNP (gross national product minus inflation) only 3.5 percent higher in 1983 than in 1982."

To which he added this observation: "This performance will not restore prosperity but it will put us back on the track. Unemployment will remain high, but will start to come down." It might average 9.5 percent, he said.

This old economy just can't get along like it used to. Even "improvement" rather than "recovery" might not properly describe what may be ahead. What is needed, it seems, is renewal or reconstruction. And that might take a while.

Big Spring Employment puts right person in job

Success in finding a job or in finding the right person to fill a position is better assured by calling a professional employment service such as Big Spring Employment Agency, located in the Coronado Plaza.

Finding the right person for the right job is the duty of Mrs. Sue Brown and Mrs. Rubi Taroni, the experienced personnel counselors at Big Spring Employment.

EACH EMPLOYER has the right to demand the person best qualified for the job, considering the requirements for the work, the salary to be offered and the availability of applicants. With this in mind, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Taroni carefully evaluate each applicant so employers do not waste time interviewing persons not qualified for the job opening. The agency refers only those who measure up to the job's requirements.

Thus, fewer rejections plague the employer or the applicant. The employer sees fewer applicants, and fewer rejections make for better public relations. There is also a smaller personnel turnover, and the efficiency of employees tends to rise. Many highly qualified job applicants prefer to use the services of a private employment agency, thus protecting their own identity.

BIG SPRING EMPLOYMENT carries on an extensive testing program in the area of office skills, exposing applicants to personnel tests in business and industrial situations.

Both the employment counselors and the employers may refer to these tests as an indicator of future possibilities.

All services are handled on a confidential basis.

From the minimum-wage clerk to the highly-paid executive, job applicants come to Big Spring Employment because they know private agencies are specialists in job-hunting and can, because of experience and contacts, place them in desirable jobs sooner than they can locate job themselves.

Applicants desiring employment in other parts of the state or country can be referred for interviews through associated agencies.

A GREAT SELECTION OF CANDIES At Rainbarrel Gifts and Candies at College Park Center

Rainbarrel stocks unique gifts, candies

The Rainbarrel Gift Shop in College Park Shopping Center already has a reputation for offering the most unusual of gifts. They have also become well-known for their candy store.

Owners Steve and Amy Lewis operate an old-fashioned candy store in the gift shop. Now Rainbarrel Gifts carries not only unique gifts, but delicious, hard-to-find candies.

Some of the more famous brands they stock include Lammes Candies from Austin, Sweet Shop candies from Fort Worth and Lee's County Candies, makers of Fudge Loves. They also carry Jelly Bells, the jelly bean made famous by President Reagan. They have homemade gourmet chocolates with no preservatives added. They have fruit-slice candies, mini fruits, rock candy, brandy truffles and grape, lemon and tangerine sours.

In addition they carry thousands of containers perfect for gift-giving. But there's a lot more to the Rainbarrel. They still carry wind chimes, stained glass and a great selection of gag gifts, games and puzzles.

The owners invite you to come by and look at some of their Christmas gift ideas. Leave your name and you will receive a full-color Rainbarrel catalogue.

The store is open from 10-5:30 p.m. daily. They and other stores at College Park are open until 8 p.m. on Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Herschel Walker, Georgia's Heisman Trophy-winning tailback, and Anthony Carter, Michigan's game-breaking wide receiver, were named to The Associated Press All-America college football team today for the third year in a row.

Four other players, including Nebraska center Dave Rimington, two-time winner of the Outland Trophy as the nation's top lineman, made the elite All-America team for the second year in a row. The other repeaters are defensive end Billy Ray Smith of Arkansas and defensive backs Terry Kinard of Clemson and Mike Richardson of Arizona State.

The AP All-America team will be featured Monday, Dec. 20, on "The Merriest of the Merry — Bob Hope's Christmas Show — A Bagful of Comedy" (NBC-TV, 8-9 p.m., EST).

Two players moved up from the second team last year to the first team in 1982 — Southern Methodist running back Eric Dickerson and Southern California middle guard George Achica.

Joining Walker and Dickerson in the backfield is Stanford quarterback John Elway. The rest of the offensive unit consists of tight end Gordon Hudson of Brigham Young, wide receiver Kenny Jackson of Penn State, tackles Bill Fralic of Pitt and Don Mosebar of Southern Cal, guards Steve Korte of Arkansas and Bruce Matthews of Southern Cal and placekicker Chuck Nelson of Washington.

Also named to the defensive unit were outside linebacker Wilber Marshall of Florida, tackles Gary Lewis of Oklahoma State and Gabriel Rivera of Texas Tech, linebackers Ricky Hunley of Arizona, Mark Stewart of Washington and Darryl Talley of West Virginia, back Terry Hoage of Georgia and punter Jim Arnold of Vanderbilt.

Fralic, a 6-foot-5, 270-pounder, is the only sophomore on the All-America first team. Hoage, Hudson, Hunley, Jackson, Marshall and Walker are juniors.

Walker, a 6-1, 220-pounder, has rushed for 5,259 yards in three seasons and ranks third on the all-time NCAA rushing list. He needs 724 yards to pass Pitt's Tony Dorsett, the leader with 6,082 yards.

Elway finished the season with 262 pass completions in 405 attempts for 3,242 yards and a nation-leading 24 touchdowns. His 774 career completions are tops in major college history and he also ranks among the all-time leaders in passing yards, total offense and scoring passes.

SMU's Dickerson alternated at tailback for much of his career but still set a Southwest Conference career rushing mark of 4,450 yards, breaking Earl Campbell's record of 4,443.

Hot-handed Harris, HC Hawks handle Western Texas, 84-67

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Behind the one-two scoring punch of Dwight Harris and Nathan Givens, the Howard College Hawks knocked out the Western Texas College Westerners 84-67 Monday night in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The win lifted the Hawks to 12-1 for season for a second important home date this week Thursday at 8 p.m. against South Plains College.

The Hawks began slowly last night struggling with a scrambling Westerner defense which produced too many Hawk turnovers. At one point midway through the first half, the Hawk turned the ball over four straight times, allowing Western Texas to grab a 20-16 lead.

However, as he has done so often in the past, the Hawk's Nathan Givens — with three buckets and solid inside play — gently guided the Hawks back on track. By halftime Howard College had established a narrow, but firm lead of 43-41.

Coach Harold Wilder regrouped his players into a zone defense for the second half which further hampered the already struggling Westerner offense.

"That was probably the turning point," Wilder said. "When we went into the zone it disrupted their rhythm, and from there we began to pull away."

The Hawks scored nine straight points at the beginning of the second stanza before the Westerners could get on the board. Reggie Childress, who played a tough inside game, canned a couple of baskets along with hot-shooting guard Leon Isaac, who also scored four points in the initial burst.

Then came the Dwight Harris Show with about 15 minutes remaining. Harris hitting from the corner, down under and out front scored 18 second half points over the porous Westerner defense. Harris finished the night with a game high of 26 points.

Western Texas' last gasp came behind a one-man offensive assault by center Jeff Reese who reeled off 14 Westerner points to put his team within 66-62 with 9:23 remaining.

However, it wasn't enough to match the Hawks and Harris who calmly went back on top 72-62 with good defense and shot selections.

From that point the Hawks glided to an impressive 84-67 win which left Coach Wilder elated, but cautiously eyeing the Hawks' next opponent — a powerful South Plains College team.

"South Plains is one of the best teams in the conference," Wilder said. "They beat WTC by 30 points recently. They're really tough, big and quick with good sophomores. This will be a big test for us."

"We had real good team play tonight," Wilder said of the game just past. "Our sophomores did a good job of getting the ball to the open man. Dwight was open a lot in the second half and when he was open, he hit the shots."

Wilder also praised Givens for his inside play which Wilder said provided for much of the Hawk's offensive stability in the second half.

Duster rally overcomes Hawk Queens, 81-80

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Coach Don Stevens sat in his office last night tapping a stat sheet and pointing out all the places — other than the scoreboard — that the Queens beat the Dusters: steals, blocked shots, rebounds. It was all there except for a few crucial spots.

"We lost it at the free throw line," Stevens said after his team had been edged 81-80 by the visiting Western Texas College Dusters.

Stevens' statement was born out by the game stats which showed the Queens hitting 10 of 20 free throws, while the Dusters canned 15 of 21 — enough to provide the scant margin of victory.

The Queens shot almost 52 percent from the field hitting 35 of 68 shots. The Dusters shot a dismal 36 percent with 33 of 91 shots from the floor.

Except for a slow start, the Queens led much of the game. That was until 3:59 remained, however, when Western Texas' Dale Pieper hit a short jumper to put the Dusters up 72-71.

The Queens were never able to regain the lead although it looked like they would edge back in front with about a minute remaining when Nell Haskins — who had 37 points for the night — netted a layup to bring Howard within one, 79-78.

Duster LuAnn Kennedy was fouled immediately afterwards and coolly hit two free throws for the winning margin. Haskins scored the final two Queen points, but time ran out ensuring the slim Duster victory.

The game was heartbreaker to be sure, but Stevens was optimistic about his team's play following the game.

"We played pretty good except at the free throw line," Stevens said. "Susan (Cordell) had eight blocks and she played well, and Nell had 37. The Dusters just had a good scoring balance and we had a couple of defensive lapses when we had leads."

The Queens managed to keep this lead over Western Texas most of the night, but the pesky Dusters, aided by a run-oriented offense, stayed with the Queens and never allowed themselves to be blown out of the game.

Howard's patient offense of waiting to find Haskins and Cordell open at the low post worked effectively as the smaller Western Texas College team watched time and again as the two Queens went over and around them for buckets.

The Hawk Queens record still stands at a healthy 12-2 for the season, and Stevens and his crew are eagerly looking forward to a Thursday contest against South Plains College. The Queens will play at 6 p.m. in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Aerial attack soars Jets over Lions

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Richard Todd threw for 384 yards and connected with Wesley Walker for three touchdowns as the New York Jets raced to their fourth straight National Football League victory, a 28-13 triumph over the Detroit Lions Monday night.

After a 31-yard field goal by Eddie Murray gave the Lions an early 3-0 lead, rookie Dwayne Crutchfield circled left from a yard out to give the Jets a 7-3 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Then Todd, who completed 23 of 32 passes, went to work with his speedy wide receiver, working primarily on Detroit cornerback Wayne Smith.

First, operating from his own 44, Todd tossed a short pass to Walker at the Detroit 42. Walker, who caught five passes for 164 yards, spun away from Smith and ran into the end zone for a 56-yard touchdown that put the Jets ahead 14-3.

A few minutes later, Todd hit Walker, wide-open ahead of Smith at the goal line to complete a 41-yard touchdown play and give the Jets a 21-3 halftime lead.

Todd-Walker combination completed the scoring early in the fourth quarter with a 19-yard connection. It came after the Lions had closed a 21-3 halftime deficit to 21-13.

The Lions, who dropped their third successive game since the end of the 57-day players' strike after winning two pre-strike games, got their only touchdown on a 48-yard bomb from Gary Danielson to Mark Nichols in the third quarter. Murray added a 22-yard field goal in the fourth quarter for the other points.

They had a chance to come even closer when Todd was sacked and fumbled and the ball was recovered by Detroit linebacker Stan White on the 1-yard line after a scramble. But two plays later, Detroit's Billy Sims, trying to jump over the pile, fumbled and Ken Schroy recovered for the Jets on the 4.

Detroit held, and after a punt, moved to a first and goal at the Jet 9, but it had to settle for Murray's second field goal.

A crowd of 79,361 was on hand in the Silverdome, which seats 80,636. The Lions said that 80,002 tickets had been sold, meaning there were only 641 no-shows, easily the best attendance here since the end of the strike.

Late in the first quarter, Todd drove the Jets 63 yards in seven plays — keyed by an 18-yard toss to Walker from a third-and-8 situation that carried them from the 31 to the 13 — and Dwayne Crutchfield crashed over from the 1 to give New York a lead it never gave up.

Todd's first bomb to Walker capped a 66-yard, five-play drive. His 41-yard TD toss to Walker was the conclusion of a 57-yard, four-play march.

Danielson, who regained his starting position from Eric Hipple after the Lions' loss to the New York Giants on Thanksgiving Day, completed 14 of 37 passes for 222 yards with three interceptions.

The rushing duel between Detroit's Billy Sims and the Jets Freeman McNeil never developed. Sims carried 12 times for 43 yards while McNeil had 49 yards on 16 carries.

Four SWC standouts gain AP honors

After a slow start, partially due to nagging ailments, Carter caught 28 passes this season for a whopping 628 yards and seven touchdowns. He is Michigan's all-time scoring leader and holds the NCAA record for highest average recorded per play for all-purpose yardage. He also holds the Big Ten record for career touchdown receptions.

Jackson was Penn State's big-play receiver as the Nittany Lions switched to a passing offense in 1982 and finished the regular season ranked No. 2 nationally in The AP poll. Jackson caught 41 passes for 697 yards and seven touchdowns. Hudson was the nation's fourth leading receiver — and second among tight ends — with 67 receptions for 928 yards.

Georgia's Hoage, who missed one game with an injury, led the nation in interceptions, swiping 12 in 10 contests. Nelson of Washington was successful on 25 of 26 field goal tries — he set an NCAA mark of 30 in a row — while Vanderbilt's Arnold had a 45.8-yard punting average and his booming kicks helped the Commodores lead the nation with a 42.1 net average.

Arizona punished by NCAA

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The NCAA has accused the University of Arizona of improper conduct in 18 areas of athletic policies and practices between 1971 and the spring of 1980. President Henry Koffler said the university has been asked to reply to the allegations to the National Collegiate Athletic Association's committee on infractions by April 1, and that, "We will begin immediately to develop procedures for preparation of that response."

Included among the charges were allegations that student-athletes were paid for work not performed and received financial assistance beyond commonly accepted educational expenses; that members of the football coaching staff and university boosters gave extra benefits and improper financial aid to student athletes and that student athletes received financial aid not administered by the university nor permitted by NCAA legislation. The allegations of wrongdoing, if upheld and approved by the NCAA, could result in sanctions against the university ranging from reprimand and censure to probation, ineligibility for championships and postseason events, ineligibility for television appearances and reduction of athletic grants-in-aid.

At a news conference, Koffler said he would "develop appropriate review mechanisms" in the next few days to investigate the allegations and respond to them. He declined to reveal specifics of the letter he received Saturday night. But he provided a 1½-page summary of the 18 categories of charges it included.

Athletic Director Cedric Dempsey said,

"The NCAA has rules and regulations and as a member we're obligated to follow them."

Koffler and Dempsey, who both assumed their posts on July 1, said the university will cooperate fully. Koffler said he "was not shocked," noting he "inherited hundreds of thousands of wonderful things, also inherited troublesome things."

Other areas of alleged violations listed were:

—Members of the university's football coaching staff paid the expenses for student athletes to return home, and they and athletic boosters provided extra benefits and improper financial assistance to student-athletes.

—The university failed to maintain control of the conduct of its intercollegiate athletic department and agencies.

—Student athletes were permitted to earn income during semester or term time without having their full athletic grant-in-aid changed.

—The involvement of a member of both the present football and basketball coaching staffs and numerous former athletic department administrators and former football, basketball and track coaching staff members in violations of NCAA regulations is contrary to the principles of ethical conduct.

—Certain members of the football coaching staff and a representative of the university's athletic interests recruited several prospects with a promise or provision of improper inducements.

—A member of the football coaching staff contacted for recruiting purposes a student athlete at another four-year institution without permission of its athletic director, and a football coach encouraged the student athletes of another four-year institution to transfer to Arizona and arranged for them to receive financial aid after the first institution declined to grant permission to the university to recruit them.

—Members of the football, basketball and track coaching staffs used funds to recruit prospective student athletes that weren't deposited with the member institution.

—Football coaching staff members paid the transportation costs of prospective student athletes to travel to the campus to enroll, provided improper transportation and entertainment to prospects and arranged for the university to pay the meal and lodging expenses of prospective student athletes prior to their enrollment.

—The university's chief executive officer erroneously certified the university's compliance with NCAA legislation, and members of the athletic department staff and the football and basketball coaching staffs erroneously certified on statements filed with the chief executive officer that they had reported their knowledge of and involvement in any violation of NCAA legislation involving the institution.

After its investigation of the charges, the university will send its reply to the NCAA, which will decide whether any infractions actually occurred.

The university had three head football coaches — Bob Weber, Jim Young and Tony Mason — during the period in question.

DENNIS THE MENACE

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, DEC. 6 1982

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is your day to take a good look at your surroundings and then decide whether or not any improvements should be made. Consider the cost involved before making any changes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Come to a better accord with allies. Do not turn a sensitive person against you by some thoughtless word or act.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make sure you keep the promises made to others. Do something about improving your health and appearance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Put a particular talent you have to work now and impress higher-ups. Teamwork is the key to greater success.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take time to cement better relations with family members and make the future brighter. Be poised.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan how to make your possessions more attractive, but don't seek the assistance of others. Think constructively.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good day to plan how to have greater abundance in the future. Consult business expert for advice you need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you cooperate more with allies, you can easily gain your main objective. Take time to improve your appearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have good judgment early in the day, so make important decisions at this time. Use extreme caution in motion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Ideal day to do something thoughtful for your friends and gain their goodwill. Express happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Engage in activities that are more profitable and then show that you are true to your beliefs. Avoid a temptation to splurge.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Making new contacts now can help you advance in your line of endeavor. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make a new plan with a partner and then follow through in a sensible way and gain your aims. Attend the social tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will know how to communicate sensibly with others and upon reaching maturity will do well in civic matters where new ideas are encouraged. Engineering would be a good field here, whether male or female.

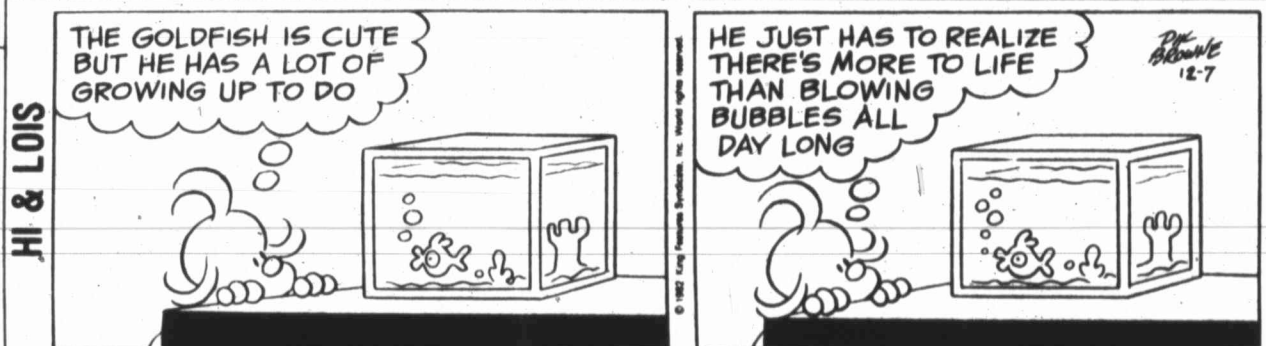

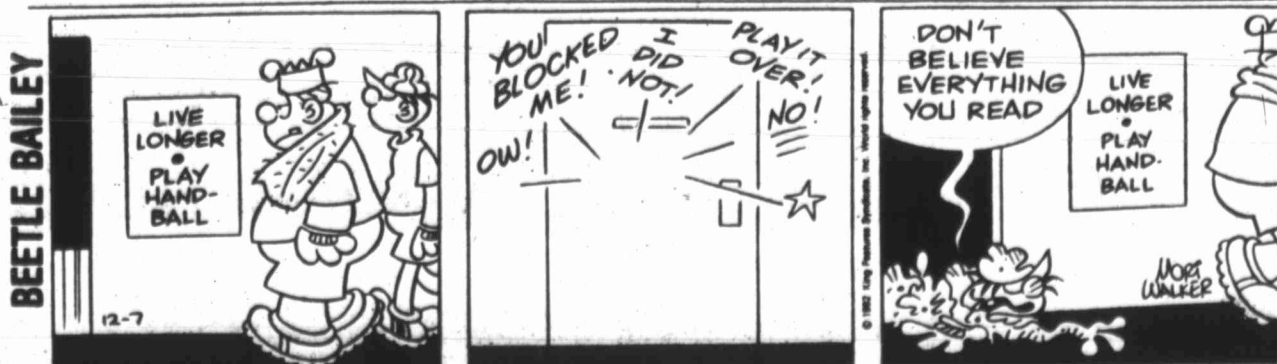

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Hogs improve as they win

Arkansas' Darrell Walker isn't convinced about the Razorbacks ...yet. Southwest Missouri Coach Bob Cleeland is.

The 15th-ranked Razorbacks rolled to an 87-66 triumph over Southwest Missouri Monday night in college basketball. Walker scored a career-high 28 points, 22 in the first half as Arkansas jumped to a 49-32 lead.

"I think we still need to be more consistent on offense and defense," said the senior guard. "We'll play good for 15 minutes, then play bad for 10 or 15. We're not a powerhouse right now."

But they are 4-0 and they didn't need to take a shot from beyond 15 feet to subdue Southwest Missouri, which is in its first year of Division I play.

"Arkansas played outstanding defense," said Cleeland, a former assistant at Arkansas. "It was a good learning experience for us."

Alvin Robertson, Walker's running mate at guard, added 20 points.

"They may have the best set of guards in the country," said Cleeland.

"Darrell Walker and Alvin Robertson both put on a clinic," added Razorbacks Coach Eddie Sutton. "I'm proud of the way we played."

It was encouraging. I'm still optimistic. I think we can be a good basketball team."

Some other good basketball teams — five of which are ranked in the Top 20 — were in action Monday.

No. 4 Memphis State improved to 5-0 as it beat Kent State 72-59; eighth-ranked Missouri, 3-0, took Temple 76-68; No. 11 Alabama, 3-0, beat Southern Methodist 74-56; No. 19 Nevada-Las Vegas, 4-0, belted Arizona 88-70, and 20th-ranked Purdue, 5-0, upended Miami, Ohio 71-58.

Memphis State rode 21 points by Bobby Parks and Keith Lee's 12 points and 10 rebounds over Kent State, which had only one free throw in the contest. Memphis State connected on 28 of 34 from the line, but also committed 23 turnovers. Dave Zeigler had 21 points for Kent State, 2-1.

"I'm not going to talk about the refs but we made seven more field goals and were out-rebounded by only three," said Kent State Coach Jim McDonald. "A team with stats like that usually wins."

Steve Stipanovich's 22 points led Missouri, which had five players in double figures. Temple, 2-2, was paced by Granger Hall with 28.

Alabama led by only five at the half but exploded for 16 straight points during a five-minute stretch, led by Bobby Lee Hurt, Ennis Whatley and Mike Davis. Hurt scored 21 points and pulled down seven rebounds.

Whatley didn't start because he missed a team meeting, but he provided the spark for the Crimson Tide.

"I can't remember the last time I didn't start," said the 6-foot-3 guard who had 10 points and four assists in 21 minutes of action. "I heard the fans yelling and I think it helped me out a whole lot."

"I would say we were a little rattled in the first half," Hurt said. "Ennis makes a lot of things happen."

Guard Danny Tarkanian, the coach's son, set a UNLV record with 20 assists and Sidney Green had 28 points for the Rebels. UNLV led by as much as 34 points at one point and Green chipped in with 10 rebounds.

Purdue's Russell Cross hit for 20 points but the Boilermakers couldn't pull away from 0-3 Miami until a 12-4 surge late in the second half. Ron Harper led Miami with 18.

Cavanaugh fired as Army football coach

When Ed Cavanaugh took over as Army's football coach three years ago, he was stuck with a perpetual riddle — how to run a big-time football program at a school that has virtually nothing to offer a blue-chip recruit?

On Monday, two days after the inevitable loss to Navy left Cavanaugh with a 4-7 record this year and a three-season mark of 10-21-2, the inevitable happened to Cavanaugh. He was fired.

Athletic Director Carl Ullrich stated the case in the words of all athletic directors at firing time: "We feel that in the best interests of Army football, it is time to make a change."

"I didn't give them anything to stand up and holler about," said Cavanaugh. "I went into this with my eyes open. I know what happens to coaches who don't win."

Cavanaugh also knew the odds against winning at Army, playing teams such as Pitt, Missouri, North Carolina and Boston College with willing but marginally talented players. For few of the most talented prospects are willing to put up with the discipline — academic and otherwise — of West Point life for four years, then spend five more years in the Army while contemporaries play pro football.

Cavanaugh acknowledged Monday that the recruiting problem exists. But he said it's not as over-riding as most people think.

"Navy's been able to recruit well; Air Force has been able to, Vanderbilt's been able to," he said.

"I thought we had really good recruiting classes the last two years, and I felt we made a lot of progress. We played Pitt tough and Boston College tough. We just didn't get enough wins. You know, when the pressure for wins starts building, the first one they look at is the coach."

Cavanaugh went the way of Lou Saban, Tom Cahill and Homer Smith, who have piloted the Cadets to a 73-101-6 record over the past 16 years. That contrasts with Army's record of 445-162-43 from 1890 to 1966. Even more telling, Saturday's 24-7 loss to Navy, made the Cadets' record 1-8-1 against the Middles in the last decade.

What does a clean filter have to do with saving money?

There are lots of ways to save money. One is to check the filter in your heating and cooling unit once a month.

The filter is there to collect dust and lint. But when it's dirty, your unit has to work longer and harder to heat and cool your home. And that leads to higher electric bills. If your filter is permanent, clean it; if it's disposable, replace it. A clean filter can help you save money all year long.

And those other ways to save? You'll find them in "The Unhandy Person's Guide" from Texas Electric. If you need one, call us — or ask for one on the comments portion of your bill.

BASKETBALL

The Big Spring High Steers are in Snyder to test the Tigers in a non-district basketball game tonight.

The Steers are now 4-2 for the season after crushing Lubbock Coronado Friday night. Forward Jerald Wrightall scored a season-high 32 points in the win. Forward Tony Randle reached double figures for the fifth straight game with 16 while point guard Kevin Watson had his best game with 15.

The BSHS varsity returns to Snyder Thursday for the three-day tournament.

Varsity game begins at 8 p.m. tonight with the junior varsities battling at 6:15 p.m.

The Big Spring Lady Steers travel to Lubbock to battle Dunbar High School tonight at 8 p.m.

BSHS is 3-4 for the season after a 1-2 performance at the Crane Tournament this past weekend. The Lady Steers lost to Midland Greenwood and Pecos — that game by a point, 53-52 — and defeated Stanton 75-52.

Three Lady Steers — Paula Spears, Monette Wise and Sylvia Randle — are averaging in double figures.

PBS' 'Nova' is true and exciting science

By FRED ROTHBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Science has come a long way on television since "Mr. Wizard" wowed us with his audio experiments. Tonight, "Nova" examines gray whales up close and intimately. Next Tuesday, the science program hitches a ride on the world's high-speed trains.

Compared to ABC's competition of "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley," public television's "Nova" is a worthwhile alternative. But it doesn't get an unqualified recommendation — its programs this week and next are spotty.

Devoting a full hour to one subject seems too large an undertaking for "Nova," which has less money to spend than the networks do for hour-long documentaries. Walter Cronkite's "Universe," a 30-minute program, did better, tackling several current science developments on each broadcast.

But CBS gave "Universe" only a summer showcase, so PBS deserves credit for bringing science to viewers year-round. This is the 10th season of "Nova," which has a funding commitment from Johnson & Johnson to continue the series next season.

One wonders why the gray whale — not the most interesting or photogenic whale — is the only star tonight.

The photography of the gray whale in motion is disappointing, not the attractive spectacle offered on other animal programs. In fact, at times it's difficult to see which end of the whale is up.

In repose, however, the docile mammals allow humans to get close enough to touch. The animals have no instinctive fear of man. In Southern California, people pay $10 to spend three hours with the grays. You can even spend $1,000 for a long-term excursion to their homes.

"Nova" notes that these whales, protected by 1937 legislation that prohibits their hunting, are worth more alive than dead because of their popularity with tourists.

Old footage shows the dismantling of the animals by the whaling industry, which once stripped the huge beasts and processed their blubber into oil and used the bones for such things as corsets.

The gray whale, which is 35 feet long and weighs 45 tons, is also seen in a mating scene, a courtship that begins on its annual migration from Alaska to California.

"Nova" is more interesting next week when it returns to land and investigates the high-speed trains of Europe and Japan. But the show bogs down late in the broadcast with cocktail party hand-shaking, when businessmen in Japan and the United States consider deals to bring the supertrains here.

Since 1964, when the Japanese introduced its 130 mph Shinkansen, dubbed The Bullet, it has serviced 2 billion riders without accident or passenger injury. Tracks must be scrupulously maintained, and the program shows night workers enthusiastically scrubbing the equipment for the next day.

America's fastest train, The Metroliner between New York and Washington, averages 80 mph. A Metroliner official maintains that it could go 130 mph if it didn't share the rails with heavier and slower freight trains.

Rockettes form West Coast troupe for Christmas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — 'Tis the season to be kicking — and stepping, and kicking, and stepping and kicking. That's right. It's the Rockettes, or rather, the first West Coast line of Rockettes, and they're starring live in a 90-minute Christmas show that has everything from a rendition of "The Night Before Christmas" to a Nativity scene.

"What we've done is created what you have in your imagination and dreams as you think about Santa Claus and Dickens' 'Christmas Carol' and the Nutcracker and 'The Twelve Days of Christmas,'" says Robert Jani, the show's director-producer.

"Anyone who sees it will have felt they completely celebrated the holiday season wrapped up in 90 minutes," he said.

"The Magnificent Christmas Spectacular," which includes a traditional Rockettes precision chorus line number, is scheduled to run Nov. 30 through Dec. 31 at the Shrine Civic Auditorium.

Some 200 dancers, traveling from as far away as New York and Virginia, auditioned to be one of the 36 new Rockettes.

"We've been pleased with the exceptional talent that we were able to find," said Jani in a telephone interview from New York. "In each of the shows, here in New York and there, they sort of have their own personalities. We're excited about the Los Angeles show because it's going to be unique in its own right."

The move west is part of an expansion program by Radio City Music Hall Productions, Inc., which was formed three years ago to manage the legendary theater in New York and handle other projects.

The company's president and chief executive officer, Richard Evans, said in Los Angeles that its first two years were spent focusing on concerts and shows in New York, along with special events ranging from the "Night of 100 Stars" to private industrial shows.

Now, however, Radio City is expanding. Among its projects is an ABC-TV movie, co-produced with Catalina Productions, called "Legs" — fittingly, about three Rockettes. It's scheduled to air next spring.

The firm is also producing a touring company of "Porgy and Bess" to open in Chicago in February.

"This is the first time there has ever been a second troupe of Rockettes," he said. "This show is being locally produced, locally cast."

"It's our intent that by 1985 we hope to have a Christmas show — not necessarily this same Christmas show; not every market in the show is large enough to warrant the scope and scale of this production — in five major markets," Evans said.

Los Angeles was selected for the new Rockette troupe because of "the size of the market, the demographics of the market, the fact that the Los Angeles market is very entertainment-oriented," and the availability of talent for both performing and technical production, he said.
